Mitchell OKs work camp plan

COLORADO CITY — The Mitchell County Commissioners' Court voted Tuesday to participate in a proposal to locate a prison work camp in the county.

The county will join Private Prisons of America, Limited in making an application to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to become the first of six possible counties to build similar work camps. County Judge S.L. "Mac" Morris said he expects the department to award its approval for the 500-bed facility in late May or early June.

If approved, the 7,000 acre, minimum security prison would generate 150-175 jobs in the county.

In other business, commissioners voted to hire a candidate for the Home Economist Agent position in the County Extension Office.

Dana Davenport, currently employed by Kaufman County, will begin work April 16. Her primary responsibilities are organization and maintenance of the Home Economics Committee, Extension Homemakers Club and 4-H groups in the county.

Also approved at the meeting was a proposal to pursue a community action program offering free transportation and a locally operated clothing bank. The new programs will work with existing daycare and nutrition projects to benefit Mitchell County's elderly and needy, Morris said.

The gathering is billed as a last-ditch effort for publicity and contact of volunteer groups. For information about "Christmas in April" or the meeting, call 263-2002.

In other business, the council awarded the Texas Department of Commerce Programs Waterline Project to Underground Utility Contractors. The firm will lay water distribution lines in the city.

Campaign official: Mattox drug claims just 'trashy allegations'

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Jim Mattox's claim of having proof that opponent Ann Richards has used illegal drugs is just another "trashy allegation," says Ms. Richards' campaign press secretary.

"Mattox has a new trashy allegation every day. And it does not deserve Ann's response or attention," said Monte Williams. He refused to comment further about the allegation.

"We're not going to play into his hand on this stuff," Williams said.

During a 30-minute televised "debate" in Dallas Tuesday, Mattox blasted the state treasurer, saying he possesses signed statements from witnesses alleging Ms. Richards has used illegal drugs in the past 10 years.

The attorney general faced three reporters alone, since Ms. Richards declined to attend the debate, citing a previous commitment to appear at an Austin rally.

Mattox said he has "proof from the perspective of individuals that have said to me that Ann Richards has used certain drugs."

But, Mattox refused to say who his informants are.

"Whether they will come forward and agree to have their names released to you is an entirely different subject, and I'm not going to violate their confidence," Mattox said.

Ms. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, has refused to answer directly the question of whether she ever used illegal drugs, saying she has not used any "mood-altering" drugs in 10 years.

"My response has been my message to the people out there that if you need help you can get help," Ms. Richards said in a televised debate with six other Democratic candidates in March.

Did murder defendant know the difference?

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A psychologist testified today that Janice Brown knew that killing her husband was the wrong thing to do.

Ron Cohorn, a clinical psychologist at Malone-Hogan Clinic who performed a District Court-ordered evaluation of Brown on March 2, testified for the state in the Janice Brown murder trial being held in 118th District Court.

District Attorney Rick Hamby brought Cohorn in to bolster his argument that Brown knew the difference between right and wrong at the time she allegedly shot and killed her husband, Lonnie Brown, at their home on May 31, 1989.

First nuclear reaction held at Comanche Peak

GLEN ROSE (AP) — At 5:42 p.m. Tuesday, the $9.1 billion Comanche Peak nuclear plant logged its first nuclear chain reaction.

The low-power start-up at Comanche Peak, 80 miles southwest of Dallas, marked a crucial turning point in the long story of the behind-schedule, over-budget plant.

The start of the reaction — "reaching criticality," in nuclear jargon — came four days after U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White refused to block low-power testing at Comanche Peak.

Nuclear fission — a milestone in the plant's 15-year quest to generate power — began in one of the plant's two reactors, said Sid Underwood, a spokesman for TU Electric, which owns the facility.

"It's eagerly been anticipated by everyone, but I suspect most of all by the actual operators" who run the reactor, Underwood said. "To say the least, it's a very great day for them."

Citizens for Fair Utility Regulation, a Fort Worth-based group, had hoped to halt the early tests, which the Nuclear Regulatory Commission authorized Feb. 9.

With the legal challenge to testing dismissed, operators at the plant worked through the weekend to prepare for the start of the nuclear reaction.

By midnight Monday, TU Electric spokesman Mark Manroe said, the operators had completed a major task for starting the plant: lifting the control rods that regulate the reaction. When the control rods are fully inserted in the reactor, the reaction can't occur.

Longtime Forsan mayor won't seek fourth term

By KATHRYN HOLLINGSHEAD
Forsan Correspondent

FORSAN — Woodrow Scudday, three-term mayor of Forsan, won't be seeking a fourth term in office in the May 5 election this year.

"I'm not in good health," Scudday said. "I think we need some new blood in there. I wish them luck."

Scudday has been a resident of Forsan since 1930. His father, John Scudday, came to the town in late 1929 to work the oil fields. "I was just following the table," remarks Scudday.

Forsan was a different place in 1930. Scudday estimates the population in and around Forsan could have been as many as 12,000 people. The Forsan business district sported a block long boardwalk, running from the U.S. Post Office to the 6 or 8 chair barber shop.

"There were several shot-gun hotels, a theater, hospital, a bank and a lumber yard," says Scudday. "It was Tent City in and all around town."

"People began moving out in 1930, following the boom to Hobbs or East Texas," Scudday said.

Now, 60 years later, Forsan's population has shrunk to about 270. Several oil and well servicing companies still have offices in Forsan, and the high school is the town's focal point. There is only a small grocery and gas store which closes on weekends.

"I miss the oil derricks the most. Every one of these wells used to have a derrick over it," Scudday said.

Court denies claim

AUSTIN (AP) — A woman's attempt to recover workers' compensation benefits for an injury she received while playing softball at a company picnic was denied by the Texas Supreme Court.

The court Wednesday refused to consider an appeal by Cindy Annette Mersch of Irving, who had to undergo three corrective surgeries for fractures and ligament damage she suffered in 1986.

Ms. Mersch, who was 24-years-old at the time of the accident, was injured when someone slid into her at the softball game, according to court documents.

Ms. Mersch said she was entitled to workers' comp benefits because she would not have been at the North American Mortgage Co. picnic had she not worked for the company.

But a state district judge and appeals court in Fort Worth said the softball game was voluntary and refused to allow Ms. Mersch to receive benefits that are awarded to injured workers.

The Supreme Court, by denying Ms. Mersch's appeal, upheld the previous court decisions.

Aliens released

BROOKSHIRE, Texas (AP) — Twelve illegal aliens squeezed into a car were released from custody after Immigration and Naturalization Service authorities told police there was no place to put them.

Nine men and three women from the Mexican state of Puebla were picked up about 5:25 a.m. Sunday after Brookshire police spotted their car weaving on Interstate 10. Brookshire is about 30 miles west of Houston.

The driver was not intoxicated, officers said, but the vehicle was weaving because it was overloaded.

"There were three grown men in the trunk," Brookshire Police Chief Joe Garcia said Tuesday. Four people rode in the front seat and five passengers covered the floor where the back seat had been removed, officers said.

"After talking to them, it was obvious they were all illegal aliens, and they were being smuggled into the Houston area," Garcia said.

UH officials indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston system's former top financial officer and a private consultant were indicted on charges they billed the system $600,000 for work not performed.

George Huxel, 46, who served as vice president for administration and finance at the UH System from 1981 to 1987, was indicted Tuesday on charges of theft by a public servant and commercial bribery, prosecutor Lorraine Parker said.

Huxel was charged in a separate indictment with bribery, official misconduct and misapplication of fiduciary property, she said.

White likens Richards to Gestapo's Himmler

AUSTIN (AP) — Ann Richards is offering no apologies for her campaign tactics after former Gov. Mark White likened her behavior to that of Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler.

Stopping short of endorsing Attorney General Jim Mattox over Ms. Richards in the April 10 Democratic runoff for governor, White on Tuesday said he would vote in that race — but not for Ms. Richards.

"I will never endorse Ann Richards. I will never support Ann Richards. And I will never vote for Ann Richards," said White, whose comeback bid collapsed when he finished a distant third in last month's Democratic primary.

"I've always thought he (Mattox) was one of the toughest campaigners I've ever seen, but what Ann Richards has done would make Himmler blush," White said.

During a campaign stop in San Benito, Ms. Richards said: "Well, that's too bad. ... I really don't think that it's like Mark White to call anyone a Nazi."

The Republican nominee for governor, oilman Clayton Williams, had courted White, hoping to win the ex-governor's endorsement. Williams' press secretary, Bill Kenyon, said:

"We're happy with the governor's statement. We think it illustrates that moderate-to-conservative Democrats have no real choice in this runoff and the general election we believe that they will be attracted to Clayton Williams."

AUSTIN — Former Gov. Mark White accused Ann Richards of dirty politics, likened her behavior to that of a Nazi and said he would never vote for her during a news conference here Tuesday.

White criticized Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, for TV commercials and speeches in which she alleged that he had profited from public service and helped his old law firm obtain state bond business while he was governor.

White said Ms. Richards "willfully and knowingly smeared me with false accusations that she knew at the time to be untrue."

"She didn't do it just once in the heat of an argument. She did it with inexcusable regularity in the last days of the campaign," White said.

Ms. Richards' campaign manager, Glenn Smith, said the campaign stands by its TV commercials critical of White.

"Ann Richards fulfilled the pledge she made when she announced her candidacy — she said she would run a positive campaign until she was attacked — and she was, by both her opponents," Smith said.

"Like all of us, Mr. White should support any candidate he chooses, and I'm sure he'll let his conscience be his guide."

Meanwhile, Mattox charged Tuesday that he has signed statements from witnesses alleging Ms. Richards has used illegal drugs in the past 10 years. He faced three reporters alone because Ms. Richards declined to attend the debate, citing a previous commitment.

Mattox said he has "proof from the perspective of individuals that have said to me that Ann Richards has used certain drugs." Mattox refused to identify his informants.

Senate passes school finance reform bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, challenged by senators to outline his no-new-taxes plan to reform school finance, proposed slicing $269.5 million from other parts of the state budget and dismissed a Senate bill with a $1.2 billion price tag.

"They know that the House will never agree to that, and I won't either," Clements said after senators approved their bill Tuesday, the second day of the second special session on court-ordered school finance reform.

The bill to give schools $1.2 billion in additional state money next school year is the same one the Senate approved in the 30-day special session that ended last week.

The measure now goes to the House, where leaders met privately to write their own $450 million bill and began the search for ways to fund it. If the House passes a bill that differs from the Senate measure, a conference committee can be appointed to work out differences.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said his $1.2 billion measure represents what the Senate "thought ought to be done."

"I for one think that he (Clements) ought to have the opportunity to show his commitment against decent education by vetoing a decent bill," said Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

Mike Toomey, Clements' chief of staff, said the governor would be willing to sign into law an education funding plan that shifts money from such areas as the Parks and Wildlife Department and the Capitol restoration project and increases fees paid the state for information on a driver's record.

Up to another $172 million could be gained by temporarily reducing the state's contribution to the Teacher Retirement System, Toomey told House budget writers, although the governor's office is not proposing that idea.

He said the system is so overfunded that retirement benefits could be increased simultaneously with the reduction.

A list of possible cuts discussed by the House Appropriations Committee also included reductions in higher education spending.

Lawmakers are working to answer a Texas Supreme Court ruling that the school finance system is unconstitutional because of disparities in funding available to property-rich and poor school districts. The court gave lawmakers until May 1 to change the $13.5 billion-a-year finance system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal funds.

Parker's measure had some critics in the 31-member Senate, including Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant. Ratliff unsuccessfully tried to amend the measure, including an attempt to trim its cost to $650 million next school year.

"What we're doing is playing a legislative game of chicken. We ought to send something over there that has some chance of arriving at a compromise with the House," said Ratliff, one of 10 senators who registered "no" votes against the bill after it passed on a voice vote.

The House probably will consider its bill early next week, said House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, who met privately for more than an hour with the heads of his education, tax and budget committees, and with lawmakers who opposed the House education bill in the last session.

Senators grill officials on Human Services' budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators criticized a plan to solve the Department of Human Services' projected $550 million two-year deficit, while health care providers pleaded with officials not to slash aid to the needy.

At a Tuesday news conference, members of the Texas State Employees Union called for state leaders to institute personal and corporate income taxes.

DHS employee Sylvia Meyer said state services — already among the worst-funded in the nation — provided to the growing number of poor can't be cut to reduce the deficit.

"We have seen the effects of our state's refusal to fund and implement the programs and innovations which could help alleviate the problems of our poor," said Ms. Meyer. "It is not the time to hammer down on health and human services with funding cuts."

AUSTIN — Rob Mosbacher, chairman of the Texas Department of Human Services, center, explains to a joint Senate committee why the agency has a projected $550 million budget shortfall.

Tuesday evening, about 45 union employees and representatives of the Texas Alliance for Human needs stood on the steps of the state needs is revenue!" Some held signs with slogans, including, "Income Tax Now" and "We can't turn our backs on elderly Texans, Disabled Texans, Retarded Texans."

At a politically charged joint meeting of the Senate Finance and Health and Human Services committees held Tuesday afternoon, lawmakers criticized a measure proposed by Rob Mosbacher, chairman of the DHS board, to solve the deficit crisis.

Mosbacher is the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor. His Democratic opponent is State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Mosbacher supports a plan to borrow $32 million from 1991 appropriations to pay for the state's portion of the 1990 shortfall.

"What you want to move from 1991 is an impossibility, because we're broke," said Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston.

Dumbo crash lands, hurts teen

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Disneyland's aging Dumbo the Flying Elephant crash landed, slightly injuring a teen-age passenger and grounding the park ride for at least a month of repairs.

The fiberglass elephant car carrying the girl fell about 5 feet to the ground when a metal support beam snapped, Disneyland spokesman Bob Roth said Tuesday of Saturday's accident.

"Wear and tear is what it amounts to," Roth said. "We'll have to wait to see what work needs to be done but it'll be closed at least a month."

The 13-year-old girl, who was not identified, was treated at Disneyland's first aid station for a bumped nose and minor bruises, Roth said. She was taken to a hospital and returned to the park later in the day.

The Fantasyland attraction, based on an elephant in a Disney animated feature in the 1950s, is among the oldest in the 35-year-old theme park. Fiberglass elephant cars rotate around a pivot and passengers in the cars manipulate a lever to make the cars move up and down.

"It was due for a major rehabilitation in about a month," Roth said.

Census foul-up delays forms

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Some 1.5 million households nationwide received no census forms because the Census Bureau failed to print post office box numbers on the mailings, officials said.

Each form will have to be delivered by census workers to the homes, instead of to the boxes, before the census can be completed, Gail Kremenc, spokeswoman for the regional census office in the Chicago suburb of Westchester, said Tuesday.

Officials were unable to estimate the cost of the foul-up but said they don't expect any significant delay in completing the 1990 census.

About 106 million forms were mailed nationwide in the last week of March. But forms destined for people who have their mail sent to box numbers went out without the numbers, and the Postal Service was unable to deliver them, census officials said.

Water crisis eases in fuel spill

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Threats to water supplies created by a fuel spill in the Allegheny River waned as the slick snaked along the Ohio River toward Ohio and West Virginia.

"In our tests we're seeing a marked dissipation in the amounts of fuel throughout the rivers," said Betsy Mallison, spokeswoman for the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources.

The concentration of petroleum 5 feet deep in the Ohio River at West View dropped from 75 parts per billion at 1 p.m. to 25 parts per billion six hours later, Ms. Mallison said.

The spill, which stretched 14 miles through the river in industrial Beaver County early today, came from at least 75,000 gallons of diesel, gasoline and

Teen AIDS victim remains critical

By BETH HARRIS
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Michael Jackson telephoned, Elton John flew into town and thousands of other who have never even met Ryan White offered prayers and get-well wishes for the teen-age AIDS victim clinging to life today.

President KLEIMAN Bush, who was in Indianapolis for a political fund-raiser Tuesday, planted a tree for White at a ceremony 1 1/2 miles from the hospital where the 18-year-old lay in critical condition on life-support equipment.

"He's been fighting a courageous battle against a deadly disease and also against ignorance and fear. Ryan has helped us understand the truth about AIDS and he's shown all of us the strength and bravery of the human heart," Bush said.

Dr. Martin B. Kleiman said White was heavily sedated so the life-support system would function more efficiently. "We continue to believe that he will survive this. We need to be optimistic, just as Ryan was optimistic," Kleiman said.

White, a hemophiliac who contracted AIDS from contaminated blood products, has waged a five-year battle with the disease during which he grew from an object of scorn in his hometown of Kokomo into an international spokesman for AIDS patients. He fought a successful court battle to attend school and helped reinforce the message that AIDS cannot be spread through casual contact.

Gadhafi: Release the hostages

ROME (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi urged Moslems to celebrate their holy month of Ramadan by releasing foreign hostages held in the Middle East, Libya's official news agency said today.

Col. Gadhafi specifically mentioned Jacqueline Valente, a Frenchwoman captured on a yacht off Cyprus in 1987 by Abu Nidal's Libyan-backed Fatah Revolutionary Council, the JANA news agency report said.

Gadhafi appealed to "Moslems the world over in his capacity as the leader of the international Islamic People's Command calling for releasing the hostages and prisoners of conscience on the advent of the blessed month of Ramadan — the month of love and tolerance," said JANA, monitored in Rome.

Ramadan began in late March. The JANA dispatch said Gadhafi stressed Islamic humanitarian values and called for refraining from detaining innocent people.

"He has called to mind the hostages in the Middle East of various nationalities and religions, in particular the French hostage," Jacqueline Valente. She was captured along with her two daughters and five Belgians.

Cuban leader still confident

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — He was impish, indignant, humorous, uncompromising and, of course, long on words — another typical evening for President Fidel Castro.

And his message was clear: Cuba's revolution, at age 31, is stronger than ever, thanks in no small measure to the patriotic feelings stirred up by TV Marti transmissions by the United States.

The scene was Tuesday night at the Palace of Conventions, where Castro regaled more than 200 foreign and local journalists for more than two hours. He held their attention throughout.

Castro even found good in the collapse of one-party communist rule in Eastern Europe, saying Cuba will be able to benefit from the mistakes committed by the region's ousted Communist leaders.

Cuba chose the right path, Castro said, because capitalism has brought to the rest of Latin America rampant disease, inflation, unemployment and illiteracy.

Negotiations begin with inmates

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — The governor of Strangeways Prison said today he was holding difficult negotiations with a dwindling band of rebellious inmates that still controlled part of the prison.

One prisoner died Tuesday of injuries suffered during a riot at a Sunday chapel service, and prison governor Brendan O'Friel said he feared that another fatality may come to light as guards regain control of the prison.

Fewer than a hundred prisoners still held control of the upper floors of four wings today, following a third night without heat or light in the ravaged cellblocks. Four prisoners appeared today on the snow-covered roof and hung a banner on a gable that said "no peace."

Born (small) in the U.S.A.

For most of the 1980s, public health officials worried that the United States wasn't making swift enough progress in lowering its rate of infant death and low birth-weight. Now those look like the good old days.

According to new data from the federal Centers for Disease Control, the percentage of American babies born weighing less than 5.5 pounds actually increased between 1985 and 1987. So did the rate of newborns with very low birth-weight of less than 3.25 pounds. The gap between white and black newborns continued to grow, with the rate of low birth-weight among black babies nearly twice the overall national rate. Babies born at low birth-weights require hugely expensive medical intervention and are far more likely to die in infancy or suffer physical and mental conditions that handicap their potential to lead full and productive lives.

Federal health officials attribute the increase to all the predictable causes. In the 1980s, the number of babies born to unwed women increased by 40 percent. The crack and AIDS epidemics swept through poor neighborhoods, exposing pregnant women and their fetuses to both damaging pathologies. The percentage of pregnant women receiving late or no prenatal care soared.

In both Congress and the Legislature, lawmakers have recently taken useful steps to reverse this tragedy by expanding eligibility for Medicaid, putting prenatal care, one of medicine's most cost-effective measures, within financial reach of more poor young women. But because Medicaid is underfunded, those changes have yet to produce much improvement in access to care. In rural and inner-city communities where the need is greatest, there is a shortage of obstetricians willing to care for poor pregnant women.

This country is neither rich enough to afford the waste of lives and money caused by having such a high rate of frail and endangered newborns, nor so strapped for resources that it cannot afford to reverse this trend. Much, much more can and must be done: by making prenatal care more affordable and available; by reaching out and intervening in the neighborhoods where the risk of infant mortality is greatest; and by aggressively addressing the pathologies — drugs, ignorance, family decay, unemployment — of the nation's underclass communities.

The thousands of tiny babies in incubators who struggle for life each day at hospitals across the country are the offspring of two decades of maligned neglect in social policy that, for their sakes and the nation's future, must be ended.

Grizzard, presidents have a lot in common

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I've been alive during nine presidents. I don't remember much about the first one, Harry Truman. I was too busy teething. Then, came Ike. He enjoyed playing golf. So do I. After Ike, came Jack Kennedy. He enjoyed playing touch football and fooling around. I used to play a lot of touch football.

Lyndon Johnson was next. He was from Texas. I've been in Texas a lot of times.

After Johnson, came Richard Nixon. He was paranoid. I'm not paranoid, regardless of what all those people who are out to get me say.

Then, there was Gerald Ford. He fell down a lot. I fell down in 1964, entering a botany class at the University of Georgia. Everybody laughed at me, and I made a "C" in botany.

Jimmy Carter succeeded Gerald Ford. Jimmy Carter and I are both from Georgia. Ronald Reagan was a former actor. I once appeared on the television comedy, "Designing Women." Television comedies don't pay that well.

Now, there's George Bush. I didn't think I had anything in common with him. He enjoys vacationing in Maine. Why would anybody vacation in Maine?

It's cold there. When I vacation I go where it's warm. Anybody who goes skiing is an idiot.

But now I find George Bush and I agree on at least one point. He doesn't like broccoli. Neither do I. I'd rather be dipped in horse dung and rolled in cracker crumbs before I would eat broccoli.

People have said to me, "Eat your broccoli. It's good for you." And I always say, "Thanks, but

Lewis Grizzard

I don't eat anything that looks like a brain stem."

That's what broccoli looks like, a brain stem. I've seen pictures of brain stems in magazines. They look exactly like broccoli.

People have tried to make me eat liver, too. I'd rather eat wet cardboard than eat liver. As a matter of fact, have you ever noticed how liver tastes like wet cardboard? In fact, wet cardboard tastes better than liver because there is no blood involved.

The president, say news reports, absolutely detests broccoli. He won't allow it on his airplane, the Song Bird, or is it Air Force One?

This has caused a great stir. American broccoli growers are sending President Bush 10 tons of the stuff in a friendly protest.

What would you do with 10 tons of broccoli if you detested broccoli? You'd send it back with a note saying, "I'm the president of the United States, and if I don't want to eat my broccoli, I don't have to do it."

That's what this country is all about, isn't it?

If an American doesn't want to eat his or her broccoli then an American doesn't have to eat it. God bless America, and I hate Brussels sprouts, too.

Unwanted pets are a national tragedy

By KAREN MCCARTHY Staff Writer

The Humane Society of the United States has designated this month as National Prevent A Litter Month. The focus of the organization will be on the need for pet owners to take responsibility for sexual control of their pets.

More than 70,000 puppies and kittens are born in the United States every day. When you compare this to the 10,000 human births per day in this country, you can begin to understand the extent of the problem.

The national Humane Society says that only one in five of these newborns will find a home. The rest will die of starvation or illness, or will grow up to become a community nuisance.

An estimated 7.5 million dogs and cats were euthanized in the United States last year. This is too often the only solution.

In Big Spring the Animal Control Unit had to kill 1049 animals last year — 656 dogs and 393 cats. Another 956 dead animals were picked up and disposed of by the officers.

The Humane Society takes in hundreds of unwanted animals each year, and their facilities, volunteers and funds are stretched to the limit.

The only solution to such a tremendous problem is for each individual pet owner to take responsibility for his or her share of the problem. This means preventing your animal from having offspring.

All too often I have had people assure me that they found good homes for all their babies. Maybe they did. But those are potential homes that are no longer open to another animal.

The problem is so vast that any litter is too many.

The only way to be absolutely sure your animal will not reproduce is to spay or neuter it.

If cost is a factor, please consider the fact that it costs more to raise a healthy litter than it does to have the initial operation.

Around the rim

There are added benefits to having the operation done. Spayed and neutered animals live longer, healthier lives. Spaying eliminates the possibility of uterine or ovarian cancer and greatly reduces the chances of breast cancer. Neutering a male reduces the risk of prostate enlargement and prostate cancer.

Altered pets tend to be more affectionate. They are less likely to bite, less likely to roam, and less likely to fight.

In my four or five years with the Humane Society I have seen countless dogs that were abandoned by unfeeling owners. The lucky ones are brought to the Humane Society Adoption Center or to the city Animal Shelter. We have had pets dropped off in the street near our shelter. We have had them abandoned in the parking lot and thrown over the fence. Sometimes they're healthy; more often they are not. It's something none of us have ever gotten used to.

Please do your part to help end this very sad situation. Have your dog or cat fixed before it has a chance to breed. If a female is bred accidentally, you can still get the operation done if you do it immediately.

And once you have your own animals taken care of, nag your family and friends to do their part.

All of us at the Big Spring Humane Society would love to see the shelter closed from lack of animals.

FDA in yet another controversy

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration was far from humbled by its recent generic drug scandal. Instead of being more cautious about the approval of drugs and food additives, the FDA looks like an agency bent on self-destruction.

The debacle du jour is the review process for bovine somatotropin (BST) — a synthetic growth hormone injected in cows so they will give more milk. Last fall we exposed the confidential studies from three companies that make BST.

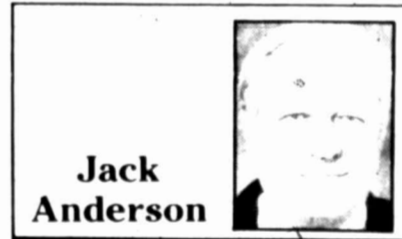

Those studies, submitted to the FDA as part of the approval process, showed that cows injected with BST may lose weight and suffer low fertility rates, anemia and mastitis. And the jury is still out on what effect BST will have on people who drink milk from treated cows.

A senator and two representatives have asked the FDA to scrutinize the way it has handled the BST approval process, and the General Accounting Office has launched its own investigation.

But instead of being dissuaded, the FDA is barreling ahead with plans to approve BST for widespread use. And the chief critic of BST within the agency, Dr. Richard Burroughs, was fired after he raised objections to the rubber-stamp treatment BST was getting.

Five years ago, the FDA approved the use of BST on test cows pending full approval for widespread use. Many Americans have already tasted BST milk because the milk from the test cows has been mingled with the regular supply.

The synthetic hormone is made by Monsanto Agricultural Co., American Cyanamid and Elanco (a joint venture of Dow Chemical, Upjohn and Eli Lilly.) Those companies stand to make an estimated $500 million a year off BST if widely accepted by farmers. The companies have embarked on a massive public relations campaign to win friends in the farming community and to convince consumers that BST milk is safe.

But some experts remain unconvinced. Dr. Samuel Epstein of the University of Illinois School of Public Health has been a food safety advocate for 30 years. He challenged the beef industry for injecting growth hormones into cattle, and now he has turned his attention to BST.

Epstein recently stepped up his attack after seeing the test data from the BST manufacturers and how the FDA treated that data. Epstein told our associate Tim Warner that the FDA approved the sale of BST milk from the test cows without proof that it was safe for public consumption. Epstein calls the BST approval process the worst example of "suppression and manipulation of data" by the FDA that he has seen in his 30 years as a watchdog.

Burroughs was the inside watchdog until the FDA fired him. He was a target animal safety reviewer at the FDA's Center for Veterinary Medicine. Burroughs won early recognition from the agency for his work on the BST approval process, but after he began to raise objections, he was transferred to a make-work job. Then the FDA fired him for not performing that job satisfactorily. The FDA says Burroughs' firing had nothing to do with his outspoken comments on BST.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. and Reps. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., and

John Conyers, D-Mich., are taking the complaints about BST seriously. They ordered the GAO to investigate the FDA review process. But that investigation may not be finished fast enough to catch the FDA.

Sources at the GAO told us the investigation is just getting off the ground and may be hampered by trade secrets. The highly competitive chemical companies don't want to give the GAO their trade secrets, but the GAO needs that information to do an adequate investigation of BST.

HUMAN BARTER — Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani wants to normalize relations with the West, but he needs to free the hostages to do that. Rafsanjani is not in control of the radicals who hold those hostages, but our intelligence sources say he is making headway in winning their trust. He already has the support of the terrorists' spiritual leader, Sheikh Muhammad Hussein Fadlallah. The Syrian government is also working behind the scenes to dispose of the hostage problem, and the Syrian army is the dominant force in Lebanon where the hostages are held. The Soviets have helped to bring pressure on Syria and Iran to end the hostage crisis.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., has one convenient word for anyone who criticizes him — "racist." If the congressman isn't careful, he'll earn an ugly tag of his own — "anti-Semitic." At a campaign rally in Chicago recently, Savage read a list of the names of Jewish contributors to his opponent's campaign and warned about Jewish influence. Illinois voters of all races and religions should send Savage into retirement. He is dangerously ignorant.

House members and aides toured the world in late 1989

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of every five House members traveled abroad during the last three months of 1989, visiting at least 60 locations at a cost to taxpayers of about $1 million.

Recently released records show that 87 members, including two non-voting delegates, traveled abroad between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, 1989. Well over 100 staff members also went overseas.

The delegations went to some of the finest cities in Europe, to the Third World, and in the case of two House Appropriations Committee staffers, to Antarctica to study research projects.

Staffers who travel with members said the workload on a trip can vary with the delegation leader.

The staff of Rep. Stephen J. Solari, House Foreign Affairs subcommittee works on a rotation schedule because their boss wears them out.

"We have a working breakfast at 7:30 a.m., three meetings before lunch, a working lunch, two or three meetings in the afternoon.

'African-American' gaining in popularity

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

It was last June, when she began work at the Museum of African-American History in Detroit, that Lenda Jackson unconsciously began to change the way she defined herself. Instead of black, she started saying African-American.

"I consider myself a black woman, but African-American just sounds better to me," says Ms. Jackson, the museum's public relations director. "African-American is just more descriptive of what we are. No one is really black, like the color black."

Many black Americans have come to that conclusion in recent years, especially since the Rev. Jesse Jackson proposed a change in terms of reference. African-American appears to be gaining currency as the term of choice for many blacks and shows signs of seeping into the culture at large.

In addition to Jackson, it is used by New York Mayor David Dinkins, Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania, tennis star and author Arthur Ashe and novelist Ishmael Reed. Oprah Winfrey has referred to herself as "a colored girl who became a Negro, then black, then African-American."

President Bush, in mourning the death in December of black choreographer Alvin Ailey, called him "a man committed to weaving his African-American heritage into our nation's cultural tapestry."

It has become the preferred term at some radio stations and black newspapers, including the New York Amsterdam News and The Atlanta Voice, and on college campuses and in scholarly publications.

"It's fashionable now to be known as African-American," Ms. Jackson said, "just as in the '70s it was fashionable to be called Afro-American or black — which was preferable to Negro, just as Negro was preferable to colored."

In one sentence, that more or less sums up a century of linguistic history — one rife with politics, bigotry and deep emotion. Just as one can date a tree from its rings, one can roughly judge the age of a black organization from its title: the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (1909), the United Negro College Fund (1944), the Congressional Black Caucus (1971).

Now add to the list the African American Summit (1989). It was at this conclave of black leaders in New Orleans last April that cocktails with one group and a working dinner with another," said Stanley Roth, staff director of the New York Democrat's subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs. "That's a pretty basic day."

However, one House staff member said staffers refer to some lawmakers as "WCS" or "world class shoppers."

This source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, recalled a member once asking, "Why the hell did you allow the meeting to go after 6 o'clock? The stores are closed."

The House records show the cost of the trips was at least $971,000 from October through December, but reports still not filed could push the total to more than $1 million.

Many members flew in first-class commercial seats, while larger delegations used military jets, maintained at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland for federal executives and members of Congress.

One far-ranging trip last November and December took a House Armed Services Committee

Where Texans traveled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list of trips taken by House members from Texas during the fourth quarter of 1989, according to recently released public records.

—Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas: Nov. 12-14, Switzerland.

—Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas: Dec. 9-12, South Korea, Thailand.

—Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Texas: Nov. 26-Dec. 3, Morocco, Egypt, Jordan, Oman; Dec. 4-15, South Korea, Thailand.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas was one of several House members who traveled to Italy between Oct. 5 and Oct. 10 for one of the twice-a-year meetings of the North Atlantic Assembly, the legislatures of the NATO countries.

Martin Frost, D-Texas was one of a group that attended a meeting of the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which monitors the Helsinki accords on human rights.

delegation to Morocco, Egypt, Jordan, Oman, Bahrain and Portugal in 11 days.

The delegation met a king, a sultan and a president. They ate pigeon, saw the pyramids and cruised the Nile. But these pleasures were mingled with hours of embassy briefings, meetings with foreign officials and banquets.

By the end of the trip, members and staffers "were saying it was like the Bataan death march," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who organized the trip as chairman of the Armed Services subcommittee on military installations.

Schroeder said 18-hour days were the norm on her trip, adding there were "no golf clubs... no tanning clinics. The food was very good, but I don't think we ever sat down to a dinner that was less than three hours long."

Although Schroeder freely discussed the perks along with the workload of her trip, lawmakers generally react defensively about travel.

Rep. Mervyn Dymally, D-Calif., who took three trips from October to December that landed him in Africa, Europe, South America and Asia, responded to an inquiry about his travel by preparing a report on his mission.

Dymally, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on international operations, said he was studying "diplomatic security, anti-terrorism, construction of new buildings, acquisition of sites, and the controversy surrounding the Moscow Embassy," which was never occupied by U.S. diplomats because it was found to be filled with listening devices.

Some members were frequent fliers during the last three months of 1989.

Rep. Em F. H. Falcomavaega, the Democratic non-voting delegate from American Samoa, went to New Zealand in November to discuss fishing issues. He traveled to Jamaica in November to discuss Caribbean economic matters. Then it was on to Panama, Nicaragua and El Salvador in October to assess current events in those countries.

Dymally went to The Gambia, the United Kingdom and France in one October trip, and two weeks later traveled to Venezuela, Suriname, Curacao, Haiti and Guyana. He also went in December to Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

Not all members' experiences are pleasant.

Schroeder said her delegation complained to Moroccan officials about that country's cancellation of a military exercise with the United States and the postponement of parliamentary elections.

The delegation, which included Reps. William L. Dickinson, R-Ala., Andy Ireland, R-Fla., and Solomon P. Ortiz, D-Texas, felt like "the skunks at the garden party," Schroeder said.

Sony apologizes for date picked

PARK RIDGE, N.J. (AP) — The Berlin Wall, the Warsaw Pact and other legacies of World War II are fading fast, but some things live in infamy, as Sony Corp. of America was recently reminded.

The Japanese electronics company acknowledged Monday that it apologized to a customer for using Dec. 7 — the date of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor — as an example in an owners manual explaining how to set the date on its videocassette recorders.

Sony's apology came in response to a complaint by Scott L. Edelheit, a Boca Raton, Fla., man who said his father was killed at Pearl Harbor in 1941.

The date was inadvertently used in the Japanese-printed manual for a VCR Edelheit had bought, said Jason Farrow, a spokesman at Sony's U.S. headquarters in Park Ridge.

"We try to be sensitive on these issues," he said. "It would be irrational for anyone to think that a company that does 25 percent of its business in the United States would ever intentionally do anything like that."

Ken Iwaki, Sony deputy president in Tokyo, told Edelheit in his letter that the company "has told the concerned people in Tokyo to be more careful and not to let this happen again."

Wrong selection

LENEXA, Kan. (AP) — Thieves who allegedly stole 57 pairs of athletic shoes from a delivery truck were slightly ahead of their time: They chose a type of shoe not yet on sale at area stores.

The 57 pairs, worth about $1,300, were taken last week from a truck parked behind the office of the Athlete's Foot store in Lenexa, a city of 18,000 on the perimeter of Kansas City.

About two hours after the theft, two men walked into an Athlete's Foot store in Kansas City, Kan., and asked to exchange a pair of shoes that didn't fit. Store employees, notified of the Lenexa theft, recognized the shoes.

Millionaire wanted

CARNATION, Wash. (AP) — Wanted: One millionaire to help a small, rural district build a new school.

A Riverview School District citizens' group in this town 20 miles from Seattle took out a $175 ad in The Wall Street Journal, asking for someone to donate $1 million-plus for a school the district can't afford to build.

The group has received a few responses, but no big bucks.

A Colorado stockbroker has offered to set up a charitable trust for wealthy people who don't have heirs. A special education professor said he will donate up to a year of his time. And a Virginian gave the group suggestions on how to set up a fund-raising network.

"People do care," said Carol Van Noy, a member of the school committee that placed the ad. "But our millionaire hasn't come forth. I'm hopeful. We really do need $10 million."

That's what Riverview School Superintendent Karen Forsy estimated as the cost to replace the current high school and middle school complex, which is overcrowded.

The ad, which ran Thursday, will be run once more for free on Thursday because the newspaper misspelled the district's name as Riverside.

Smurfette suit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A couple are suing a hospital for $4 million, complaining staff members nicknamed their baby "Smurfette" because her skin was accidentally dyed blue.

The suit claims Kirsten Madsen was "subjected to the callous, distressing remarks ... among which was the reference to her just-delivered daughter as 'Smurfette.'"

Smurfette is a character in "The Smurfs" cartoon show. The Smurfs are elflike creatures with blue skin.

The suit says Mrs. Madsen was injected with blue dye in her womb to test for a urinary tract infection 12 hours before she went into labor at Baptist Hospital year ago.

Hospital spokeswoman Debbie Koch said no one at the hospital has any knowledge about use of the term "Smurfette."

"Today was the first time any of us have heard those words used," she said. "We have no reason to believe that to be true." Koch said the baby was discolored temporarily and was not harmed.

The suit, filed last week, asked damages for negligence and for "extreme, distressing and permanent emotional damage, humiliation and ridicule."

Devilish problem

HOUSTON (AP) — The Deer Park City Council hopes it can persuade county officials to help them with a devilish problem — voters threatening to stay away from polls because their new precinct number symbolizes Satan.

Council members approved a resolution Tuesday night asking the Harris County commissioners court to renumber voting Precinct 666 because many view the number as symbolic of the Antichrist of the Bible.

"I had never heard that the three sixes had any religious connotation," said County Commissioner Jim Fonteno, whose district includes the precinct. "If I would have known then what I know now, I would have just asked the clerk to skip a number."

The number 666 is the sign of the beast in the New Testament book of The Revelation. The beast in those passages of Scripture symbolizes the Antichrist, the final opponent of Christ. "Deer Park is a fairly conservative, religious community, and it's just a stigma they don't want," said Harvey Petree, a Deer Park city councilman who lives in the precinct.

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I rely every day on the security of a GTI vest," says Oliver L. North in a catalogue promoting his own line of body armor — more popularly known as bullet-proof vests.

North, the linchpin of the Iran-Contra affair, has gone into business with another key figure in the scandal, former CIA station chief Joseph Fernandez.

The pair, fired from their government jobs, are the sole proprietors of Guardian Technologies International, which will manufacture lightweight vests.

"There is no other partner," Fernandez said. "It's our idea, our money and our effort. Ollie North is the chairman and I'm the president of the company."

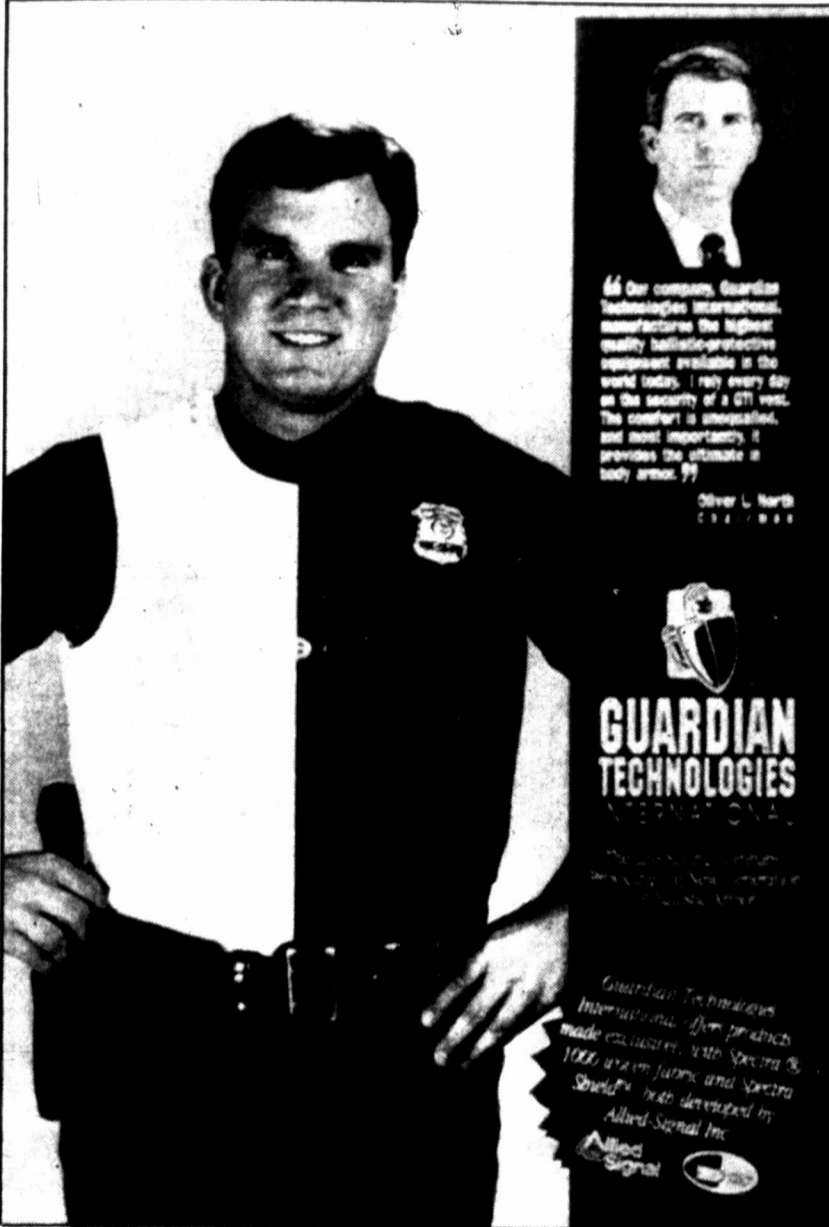

Guardian will use a material called Spectra, made by aerospace manufacturer Allied-Signal Corp. Fernandez contended it is lighter than other material used in vests and therefore more likely to be worn by police officers who don't like body armor because it is too bulky.

"We are looking ahead for our future," Fernandez said. "Obviously, with our experience and background, we feel comfortable dealing with America's law enforcement community."

North, a former Marine lieutenant colonel, was convicted last year of three felony counts stemming from his role as a White House aide helping the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. He was assessed no jail time and has been out on the lecture circuit with speech fees of $25,000.

Fernandez, once CIA station chief in Costa Rica, was charged with obstructing inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair by the CIA inspector general and the Tower Commission. But the indictment was dismissed after Attorney General Dick Thornburgh refused to release classified information.

GTI's eight-page, full-color brochure shows vests worn under shirts, over shirts, as safari jackets and rain coats and the outfits worn by SWAT teams. One of the models was North's bodyguard during his trial last year and on his speechmaking trips around the country.

WASHINGTON — Oliver North, right, and a man who has served as North's bodyguard appear on a sales brochure for North's latest business venture, bullet-proof vests. North is chairman and Joseph Fernandez, a former CIA station chief who, like North, was questioned in the Iran-Contra affair, is president of Guardian Technologies International.

A subcontractor will turn out the garments until the North-Fernandez firm has its own production facilities, Fernandez said. "We have an affinity for officers and whenever Ollie travels around the country, he had the good fortune to meet many of these officers," Fernandez said. "The growing risk we see on the streets today as a result of drug trafficking and violent crimes just made it a natural area we want to work in."

The Pentagon released Tuesday long-classified figures for the super secret F-117S Stealth fighter jet that set the cost of the plane at $106.2 million. The plane reportedly has been operational since 1983, but the Pentagon refused to acknowledge that it existed until November 1988. A previously released photograph of the plane was carefully selected to conceal the real dimensions of the plane's radical sweptback form.

'Vice News' names prostitutes, customers

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — City Council is publishing its own newspaper, a "Who's Who" of names and addresses of alleged prostitutes and their customers in an effort to use shame to cut down on their business.

"We can't print enough copies. There's a great demand for these things. People are looking for their husbands," Council president Henry Martinez said of The Newark City Council Monitor News Supplement.

The quarterly newspaper, which recently published its third issue, is mailed to voters and has a circulation of 60,000. It also lists people arrested for drug offenses.

But an American Civil Liberties Union official says the paper should be discontinued.

Deborah Ellis, legal director of the ACLU in Newark, said printing the names of arrested people treats them as though they have been convicted.

"I would feel differently if they publicized the names if people are convicted," Ms. Ellis said. "Under our system of justice, you're not guilty until you're convicted, not when you're arrested."

Martinez said the publication follows the same practice as most newspapers. A council survey found that 90 percent of New Jersey newspapers publish the names of people who are arrested.

The Star-Ledger of Newark, however, does not publish the names of those arrested for prostitution-related charges. City officials asked the newspaper to include the arrests, but it refused, Martinez said.

Scientist offers one certainty in the global warming debate

NEW YORK (AP) — How fast will global warming raise Earth's temperatures? How much will temperatures rise? Will coastal cities be flooded by rising sea levels?

At the center of the stormy debate over the greenhouse effect, one bright area of calm remains: Charles Keeling's curve.

The curve is a record of the slow, inexorable climb of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere during the past 30 years.

Keeling, a chemist at the University of California at San Diego, has made it his life's work to develop the most detailed and accurate measurements possible of carbon dioxide.

Carbon dioxide traps the sun's heat in the atmosphere, and Keeling's curve charting its rise is at the heart of the debate over how much the Earth's temperature is likely to rise, and how fast.

"Today this ever-lengthening record, Keeling's Curve, provides a sort of time-lapse X-ray movie of the workings of the spheres, a surprising inside view of our planet's metabolism," says writer Jonathan Weiner.

Weiner tells the story of the self-effacing Keeling for the first time in a lucid and compelling book, "The Next One Hundred Years."

Keeling, Weiner says, is measuring "the breathing of the world."

Keeling's findings are sobering. The amount of carbon dioxide in the air has increased by 12 percent just since 1958.

Thanks to Keeling's thoroughness, that figure is ironclad. Researchers debate the effects of that rise, but they don't argue with Keeling's numbers.

For his part, Keeling sticks to his work. He hasn't played a large role in the national debate, which has grown in intensity as the 20th anniversary of Earth Day approaches April 22 and concern over the environment increases.

But he does have words of warning for those who wave off the fuss and argue that the Earth's temperature may not be climbing. "To suppose it isn't going to go up at all would indicate that somehow the Earth just naturally gets this warm and then stops warming," Keeling said in a telephone interview.

"There shouldn't be any reason we know of that the Earth wouldn't continue to warm up," he said. "Furthermore, we know from geological history that it was warmer once upon a time. So logic suggests that the greenhouse warming has to take place. But how much warming? And how soon? What's demanded now by political realities is some fairly hard numbers, and those are not forthcoming."

The average temperature of the Earth is about 60 degrees Fahrenheit, Keeling said. With no carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, it would be 0 degrees, and the Earth would be a frozen wasteland unable to support human life.

The rise in carbon dioxide is due largely to the increasing use of fossil fuels — coal and oil — during the industrial age, Keeling said. As carbon dioxide has risen, the production and burning of fossil fuels also has increased, he said.

"In fact, the shape of the (carbon dioxide) curve looks very much like the shape of the curve for fossil fuel production," Keeling said.

Research also suggests the Earth's temperature is rising, but researchers can't be sure. Despite all the concern about global warming, no one is making an effort to measure temperatures the way Keeling measured carbon dioxide.

"There is no explicit program to measure air temperatures to look for these changes," he said. Airport temperatures are distorted because they are taken close to cities.

"The way around that is to establish some very good stations that are not near cities," he said. A government agricultural weather monitoring network that could be adapted for that purpose is being cut back to save money, Keeling said.

"They're compromising the system we already have just at the time you'd like to know if it's getting warmer," he said.

Keeling now is busy trying to determine how variations in the sun's heat affect carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. As always, he sticks to the data.

"I don't think I'm in a position to make a strong stand on the greenhouse warming effect," he said.

GOP roach may stand a chance

HONOLULU (AP) — Republicans have a hard time winning anything in Hawaii, even a cockroach race.

Undaunted by two previous defeats, President Bush is hoping a kinder, gentler cockroach will reverse his fortunes in the Iolani School's annual roach race.

The White House has lost in the past with entries named the "Yellow Roach of Texas" and "Oval Office Roach," but Bush has high hopes for a bug named "Kinder Gentlerroach."

Bush figures if the slogan was good enough to beat Michael Dukakis, it should be good enough to win the April 20 race.

"I know a lot of thoroughbred roach lovers were disappointed that Oval Office Roach did so badly back in 1988, but lots has happened since then," Bush wrote in a letter to roach race founder Kimo McVay.

Bush challenged the other competitors to submit their roaches to tests for illegal chemicals.

Inner-city residents respond poorly to census

HOUSTON (AP) — Inner-city neighborhoods here with heavy minority populations responded poorly to the 1990 census, officials say.

At an Austin regional office, officials reported receiving far fewer than the expected number of filled-out questionnaires from four urban areas in Houston where the populations are mostly black or Hispanic.

Although officials declined to provide exact figures, the low count has caused city leaders to rethink strategy to encourage response from the inner city.

Councilman Ben Reyes, chairman of the Houston Complete Count Committee, charged with encouraging census response, said he is afraid many blacks and Hispanics never may get counted.

"I knew we'd have troubles in the inner-city neighborhoods but not anything close to the scare we're having now," Reyes said. "There's basically a lack of participation."

The official deadline was Sunday. Many civic leaders are concerned an undercount could wreak political and economic damage for the city's growing Hispanic population.

But the Census Bureau official responsible for Houston's inner city said it may be too early to gauge accurate response from those areas.

"We're not panicking," said Sandra Ellison, Central Houston district manager. "We anticipate the volume to elevate."

Ms. Ellison said Houstonians likely will return more surveys this week. If not, she said, officials may begin calling inner-city households. She also said sermons about the census by Houston's clergy Sunday should increase this week's returns from minority neighborhoods.

An "It's Not Too Late" campaign already is under way to encourage Houstonians who failed to return the surveys by Sunday, the official deadline.

The committee said a weekend random telephone survey indicated 66 percent of census questionnaires received by Houston residents had been returned. The survey also showed that 7 percent of the 571 called did not receive forms.

Sharon L. Mooney, count committee spokeswoman, said the survey showed response has been good outside the inner city. She expects 82 percent of all Houstonians to respond by mid-April, as targeted by the count committee, she said.

Henry Tow, the Census Bureau's Houston-area manager, refused to say whether inner-city response is below expectations. He insisted the Houston area is "in line compared to most areas (of Texas)."

Helmets, education will reduce children's injuries

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A doctor's recommendation that a young patient wear a helmet while skateboarding or bicycling brought a familiar rebuke.

"The mother was appalled by that recommendation," said Stephanie Rifkinson-Mann, a pediatric neurosurgeon at Westchester County Medical Center in Valhalla. "She said wearing a helmet was socially unacceptable among her son's friends because of the peer pressure."

Rifkinson-Mann already was treating the boy for a head injury, which would have been prevented if he'd worn a helmet in the first place, she said.

More parents might consider Rifkinson-Mann's recommendation. Trauma, including head injury, is among the leading causes of death in children under 14, said Samuel Kasoff, neurosurgeon at Westchester County Medical Center.

Many head injuries, such as ones suffered in school bus accidents, could be avoided if the proper precautions are taken, Rifkinson-Mann said.

"School buses don't often load children up appropriately," she said. "Usually they're two-by-two. In some cases they put them three together. The kid in the middle is the least protected."

Making a child wear a helmet for some recreational activities is another way to prevent head injuries. Good-quality helmets can be lightweight and not hamper movement, Rifkinson-Mann said.

Rifkinson-Mann also would like to see better safety education for children in schools. She suggests using a symbol children are comfortable with, such as Big Bird, to educate youngsters on accident prevention.

Parents need education, too, she said. But it often takes a tragedy to make people aware of the high incidence of head injury to children, she said.

"It's the gory part that piques people's interest," she said. "Cancer is a generalized fear we all have. The only way to make people know head injury is to be equally feared is to get the image of how absolutely crippling it can be, especially to a young child."

Children should learn to wash their hands

DEAR ABBY: I teach fifth-grade students. I was told that you once had a column on the importance of washing one's hands after using the bathroom. Please find it and run it again. My colleagues agree it is urgently needed. Thank you. — TACOMA, WASH.

Dear Abby

DEAR TACOMA: Here it is: ***
DEAR ABBY: People come to you with every conceivable problem, so I'm encouraged to present one that is so touchy I've never seen it mentioned in your column. How do you get people to wash their hands after using the bathroom? In our home, the bathroom is right off the kitchen, and when the water is turned on, it can be heard in the next room. Guests have gone into our bathroom, used the toilet (I can hear it being flushed) and then come out without having turned on the faucet, so I know they haven't washed their hands. Then after supper, they offer to help me dry the dishes! (I always say no thank you.) There's no telling what kind of infection could be transferred to my dishes from those unwashed hands. Worse yet, when I work there's a cafeteria, and I've seen some cafeteria employees walk out of a bathroom stall and go straight out to serve the people without having washed their hands. Some of them even wipe and polish dishes as they come out of the dishwasher. Can you imagine the disease risks a diner faces when he uses these "freshly washed" dishes? Abby, please explain how dangerous this is. If you print this, I promise to frame it and hang it above our toilet. Thank you. — PLEASE WASH IN WINONA, MINN.

DEAR PLEASE: I cannot stress too emphatically how important this one specific area of hygiene is to good general health. Children should be taught to wash their hands with soap (preferably a disinfectant type) after using the bathroom, and adults should have made it a lifelong habit.

Last November the Mayo Clinic, the medical mecca of the world, sponsored an "Infection Awareness Week" program. As part of its campaign, prominently displayed along the corridors of the Mayo hospital complex were posters showing a pair of hands under this terse message: "The 10 Most Common Causes of Infection."

To remind doctors, nurses and employees of the Mayo Clinic to wash their hands frequently were other posters bearing this catchy message: "A milligram of hand-washing is worth a kilogram of antibiotics."

One final no-no on this subject: One must never use a napkin from the table as a handkerchief and then carelessly allow it to be mixed with other napkins on the table. Quite often a careless waiter or bus person will use soiled napkins to wipe off the table. This is almost as unforgivable as the aforementioned dirty toilet habits. The solution is to use a napkin as a napkin and a handkerchief as a handkerchief, and be certain each is deposited in its proper place when no longer needed.

***
DEAR ABBY: My parents are disappointed because I do not want to go to college. I want to go to trade school. What should I do? — NOT COLLEGE-MINDED

DEAR NOT COLLEGE-MINDED: Go to a trade school if that's what you want to do. To quote John Gardner: "An excellent plumber is infinitely more admirable than an incompetent philosopher. The society that scorns excellence in plumbing because plumbing is a humble activity and tolerates shoddiness in philosophy because it is an exalted activity will have neither good plumbing nor good philosophy. Neither its pipes nor its theories will hold water."

Classic cars

On March 18, many Big Spring and surrounding area residents gathered to participate in the 19th Annual Big Spring Car Show. It is quite amazing to see late model cars, that are still in show room quality condition, whether they have been restored or just well cared for. Popularity seems to be growing for such cars. Doyle Railsback, of Knott was awarded first place in the Street Car division, for his 1967 Camaro. An eye catcher, with his red, with black interior Camaro, polished with a shine. Stan Smith, of Ackerly entered his 1969 RS-SS Camaro, and was the winner of the Classic Car division. Stan's Chevy, (red with white top), tends to turn heads, with its great looks. Featured at the car show, was a class for model cars. Todd Railsback clinched the overall title and first place in this competition. Congratulations!

Escape to the tropics with the luscious flavors in Kahlua Fresh Coconut Cake.

Kahlua inspires a taste of the tropics

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — Daydreaming of afternoons with palm trees shading a patch of white sand and a tropical picnic spread out just a few feet away from blue water?

Oh, well. At least a taste of paradise can be whipped up at home, with the right combination of two ingredients: Fresh coconut and the delicious flavor of Kahlua. Kahlua Fresh Coconut Cake is four marbled layers, rich with a creamy filling and crowned with fresh coconut, a show-stopping finale of an al fresco event.

Kahula Colada Pie conjures images of sipping a Kahlua Colada while swaying in a hammock under a Tahitian palm.

For those who enjoy the taste of the exotic combined with rich chocolate, try Kahula Coconut Fudge Sauce. And, "Kahluaroons" are a South Pacific version of that classic cookie — the macaroon.

KAHULA FRESH COCONUT CAKE

- 1 (18½-oz.) package yellow cake mix
  - 1½ teaspoons instant coffee powder
  - ½ cup Kahlua
  - 1 medium-sized whole coconut
  - 2 cups milk
  - 1 (4¾-oz.) package vanilla cook-and-serve pudding mix
  - 1½ cups whipping cream
  - 3 tablespoons powdered sugar
- Mix cake according to package directions. Pour into two greased and floured (9-inch) round baking pans. Sprinkle ¾ teaspoon coffee powder over batter in each pan. Using fork, swirl powder through batter to create marbled effect. Bake according to package directions. Cool in pans 10 minutes. Remove from pans and, using wood pick, pierce holes about 1-inch apart all over. Sprinkle with ¼ cup Kahlua. Cool completely.
- Place whole coconut in oven at 325 degrees F for 15 to 20 minutes until cracked. Remove from oven and set aside until cool enough to handle. Crack open with hammer. Pour out liquid. With sharp knife, gently pry meat from shell. Using vegetable peeler or sharp paring knife, remove brown skin. Grate coarsely.

In saucepan, combine milk with pudding mix and remaining teaspoon coffee powder. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from heat and stir in remaining ¼ cup Kahlua. Cover with plastic wrap and cool completely.

To assemble cake, split each layer in half to make a total of four layers. Place one layer on cake plate and spread ½ of pudding in even layer to come within ¼-inch of edge. Repeat layers, ending with cake. In large bowl, whip cream with sugar until stiff. Frost sides and top of cake with cream. Cover cream with coconut by pressing onto sides and top. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

KAHULA COLADA PIE

- 1 (7-ounce) package shredded coconut
- ¼ cup (4 tablespoons) melted unsalted butter
- ½ cup cornstarch
- 1½ cups half and half
- 1 cup canned coconut milk*
- ½ cup sugar
- 6 tablespoons frozen pineapple juice concentrate, thawed
- 6 tablespoons Kahlua
- 2 tablespoons rum
- Whipped cream
- Fresh pineapple slices, leaves and/or flowers

In bowl, combine coconut and melted butter, tossing to blend. Press into bottom and up sides of 9-inch pie pan. Bake at 300 degrees F for 20 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Cool. In top of double boiler, combine cornstarch, half and half, coconut milk and sugar. Set over hot water and cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from heat and stir in pineapple juice concentrate, Kahlua and rum. Cool. To serve, decorate top with fresh pineapple slices, leaves and/or flowers, if desired.

*Canned coconut milk is available in many supermarkets and Asian markets.

KAHULA COCONUT FUDGE SAUCE

- 4 ounces semi-sweet, chocolate, coarsely chopped
- 1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk
- 1 (15-ounce) can coconut cream
- 6 tablespoons Kahlua
- Ice cream, fruit or unfrosted cake
- Freshly grated coconut, toasted (optional)

In saucepan, combine chocolate, condensed milk and coconut cream. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until chocolate melts and mixture is smooth. Remove from heat and stir in Kahlua. Serve chilled or room temperature over ice cream, fruit or unfrosted cake. Sprinkle with toasted coconut, if desired.

KAHLUAROOONS

- 1 (7-ounce) package shredded coconut
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup flour
- ¼ cup Kahlua
- 3 egg whites

In bowl, combine coconut, sugar and flour. Stir in Kahlua. Using two forks, mix with tossing motion until all ingredients are evenly distributed. In small bowl, whisk egg whites until frothy. Stir into coconut mixture. Drop by rounded teaspoons 1½ inches apart on greased baking sheets. Bake at 325 degrees F for 20 to 25 minutes or until firm. Immediately transfer to wire rack and cool completely.

Computer system to aid water district

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — Mark Hoelscher, the manager of the Martin County Underground Water District, has had his nose soaked in the glow of phosphorous lately, feeding information into a new computer system that will greatly expand the capabilities of the district. A recent $9,860 water quality grant from the Water Development Board which was matched by $2,465 in district funds has helped with the purchase of an Arris Computer Aided Design System which will help detail, with maps, underground water tables.

Other equipment purchased with the money includes a plotter to draw the maps, using as many as four colors, a spectrophotometer to measure the amounts of about 100 different substances found in water and a refrigerator to keep water samples cool.

After information on water levels and the measurements of various substances in water samples around the county is entered into the computer, which Hoelscher is doing now, he will be able to churn out in a matter of minutes maps showing changing water levels, underground water flow and contamination plume maps.

"We can do more tests. We can keep better track of it and we can better interpret the problems we find," he said. "We hope it just greatly improves efficiency."

He already has this year's water level map and is trying to predict water flow directions right now.

Trial

are wrong," Hamby said. Hamby has been using a Texas Penal Code definition to challenge Brown's plea of innocent by reason of insanity. The penal code says that to be legally insane a person must have a severe mental disease or defect so that he does not know his actions are wrong at the time of the conduct charged.

When questioned by Hamby, Cohorn said, "I believe she knew killing her husband was the wrong thing to do. She knew it was a wrongful act, but she was so torn by the other possibility (that aliens would torture him) that she went through with it anyway."

"She wasn't suffering from a defect that would render her unable to know her act was wrong."

Defense attorney Robert Miller entered the last page of Cohorn's evaluation of Brown as defense evidence and read from its conclusions as he cross-examined the witness:

"In my opinion she is suffering from a mental disease rendering her incapable of conforming her behavior to the requirements of the law," Miller read to the jury. He also read Cohorn's opinion that Brown would require continued psychiatric treatment.

Cohorn explained the discrepancy between his report and his oral testimony by saying that when he wrote the report he used the language of the old insanity laws. In speaking to the jury, he used the new law's definition of insanity.

"I'm wording things now to be consistent with the new definition," Cohorn said. Miller said the new law had come into effect in 1983.

When asked by the defense attorney to clarify his position on Brown's state of mind, Cohorn said, "I don't think she sat down and had a rational dialogue with herself about right and wrong." He added, "I still think she knew right from wrong, but that's my opinion."

In defense testimony Tuesday afternoon, Debbie Pauley, a friend of Janice Brown, testified that on the morning of the incident Brown was hysterical.

"She said, 'I had to save him but I don't know how to get him back and they didn't tell me how to get him back,'" Pauley said of Brown's conversation. Pauley said she assumed Brown's "they" were the aliens because Brown had talked repeatedly about aliens torturing her family for at least six months before the shooting.

"I think she believed she could get him back," Pauley said. "She said the aliens gave her a choice that the children could be tortured for the rest of eternity. She later said, 'I think I made the wrong choice. It would be better if they weren't tormented forever.'"

After Brown's August 1987 suicide attempt, Pauley testified that she tried to discourage Lonnie Brown from keeping his loaded .22-rifle in the house. Janice Brown had tried to use the weapon to kill herself, Pauley said, and police allege it was the gun used to kill Lonnie Brown.

"He said, 'An unloaded gun doesn't do any good,'" Pauley said.

Another friend of Janice Brown, Julie Barefield, testified that Janice Brown saw aliens all around her.

"I remember thinking she thought I was an alien. She said aliens were going to get all of us and some of us were already taken over," Barefield said. Bobbie Waltenbaugh, another friend, said Brown would call her at night with fears about the aliens. Waltenbaugh, whose house is near Brown's, said sometimes she'd wake up at two or three o'clock in the morning and see lights blazing at the Brown's house. When Waltenbaugh called Brown to see if everything was alright, "she'd say the aliens were with her and she's scared," Waltenbaugh said.

Waltenbaugh said Brown had a mail order catalog for getting books on aliens and encouraged Waltenbaugh to order some.

The morning of the shooting, Waltenbaugh came to the house and found Brown acting strangely. "She was two different people. She'd just sit there looking off into the distance," Waltenbaugh testified. "She wasn't Janice. She'd start talking about bills and then change to crying and saying the aliens were torturing Lonnie and that's why she did it."

Two psychiatrists and a psychologist, all of whom had treated Janice Brown, testified that she was a paranoid schizophrenic suffering from the delusion that aliens are watching her and planning to torture her and her family.

Dr. Richard J. Alexander, a psychiatrist at the Big Spring State

Hospital's acute care unit, describing Brown's state of mind as distracted and delusional when she was admitted to the hospital on the morning of the incident. He compared her mind to an AM radio receiving several stations at once.

"The delusional message reverberated in her mind and she felt she was saving the family from a fate worse than death," Alexander said.

"The most striking thing about paranoid schizophrenia is how much of the person is intact. In spite of Janice's delusional state she could take care of the home, get ready for a camping trip, be concerned about her children and where they were," said Alexander.

Meena Patel, a Midland psychiatrist Brown saw prior to the shooting, said Brown had taken anti-psychotic medication under her care but didn't like its side-effects of sluggishness and weight gain.

Patel said she could only take Brown's word that she was taking the drugs, a fact District Attorney Rick Hamby used in cross examination to assert that psychiatry is a subjective practice colored by the doctor's experiences and dependent on the patient's openness.

Janice Brown called Patel immediately after Lonnie Brown was killed and asked Patel what to do, the doctor testified. Patel said she told her to call the police. "She was scared, histrionic, helpless. She didn't know what to do. I asked her why she did it and she said, 'Aliens were going to torture him so much and I didn't want him to go through that,'" Patel said. "In her mind it was the right thing to do."

Lorie Hsu, a clinical psychologist who worked at the state hospital with Brown after Brown's suicide attempt, testified that Brown had told her several times in psychoanalysis that her family would be better off dead than tortured by the aliens. She said Brown suffered from sleepless nights because of her alien delusions a full year before the shooting.

The defense rested its case this morning after the testimony of Sharon Nabors, a social worker at the state hospital who has counseled Brown. Judge Robert H. Moore III dismissed the court for lunch. He presented his charge to the jury and heard closing arguments this afternoon.

Workers stumble across old ship

FREEMONT, Texas (AP) — A utility company's workers stumbled across the wreck of a sunken wooden ship off Quintana Beach while laying pipeline.

That discovery in January prompted an investigation of the wreck by two marine archaeologists, who say the ship may have dated back to the mid 1800s.

Last winter, Tejas Power Corp. hired a private archaeological firm to survey the area before installing a new pipeline.

"They even surveyed right over the wreck," said Gail Celder, an archaeologist with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. "But since there wasn't any metallic materials on the boat it didn't register."

"Her state of preservation is unique," marine archaeologist Steve James said. "She's preserved for all time."

College hoops thrilling

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The college basketball season is finally over and it's been a unforgettable season.

Steve's stuff

It doesn't often happen that the preseason No. 1 pick winds up in the championship game as UNLV did. Or how about Oklahoma knocking off the No. 1 team in consecutive games — like it did to Kansas and Missouri?

The thrills provided by this year's NCAA tournament — inspirational Loyola Marymount, the last second ecstasy and agony of UConn, gummy upstarts Ball State Xavier, the Arkansas-Texas backyard brawl, the stirring upsets, the great number of exciting finishes — will stay in basketball fans' minds for a long time.

The season also provided its unusual share of weird happenings. Here are some of them.
Most Garish Attire — His wardrobe is sometimes as loud as his temper — Alabama coach Wimp Sanderson for his vast closet of loud plaid sportcoats. Lou Carnesecca of St. John's is a close second.

Flasiest Performance by a Mascot — Now this really happened, and I know Herald photographer Tim Appel won't appreciate it since he's an Oregon State fan.

The award goes to University of California mascot, This Golden Bear hit Player of the Year Gary Payton's father, Al, with a frosted double-layer cake during halftime. For his efforts, the mascot was banned from court-side for a month.

Trade of the Year — Purdue coach Gene Keady, whose official-berating and table-pounding antics after his Boilmakers' narrow loss to Texas in the Midwest Regionals.

Keady just nudged out Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski's eight-minute obscenity-laced outburst lambasting the school newspaper's sports staff for a lack of support.

Best Vanishing Act — Highly-touted Dwayne Schintzius, a one-time star center for Florida. The big man abruptly left the team in January because he preferred not to "sail under the authority of Captain Ahab," also known as interim coach Don Devoe.

Best Prize Fighter Impression — LSU coach Dale Brown and Kentucky mentor Rick Pitino. Early in the season, Pitino charged LSU's volatile coach and had to be restrained by an official. Brown acted like he was going to punch Pitino, but was subdued by an assistant coach. He later said Pitino staged the who thing to fire up his team, who was struggling at the time.
I Can Chew Better Than You Award — UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, the man with the most permanent hangdog impression in basketball. He constantly chews on a wet towel to keep from chewing on his players.
Concordes of the Court Award — Loyola Marymount, whose frantic style of play against LSU earlier this season caused the Tigers' play-by-play transcriber to burn up before halftime, and apparently prompted the scorekeeper to put his arm in traction after their tournament rout over defending national champion Michigan.
Five Chairless Years Medal — It's been five years since Indiana coach Bobby Knight's temper tantrum against Purdue. Furious over two big fouls called against his team, The General picked up a folding chair and hurled it across the court. The record books say it traveled 15.5 meters.
The Sleeping Medicine Award — Outspoken Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs, who offered his definition of Big East basketball: "It's hard to play a team up here," said Tubbs. "It's like going through a slow dance. We like to rock and roll. This stuff is like slow waltzing. You need a prescription to watch these games. They prescribe it instead of sleeping pills up here."

Steers batter Chiefs

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — No one would ever compare the Big Spring baseball team to a bride, but the Steers did rely on something old and something new against San Angelo Lakeview here Tuesday.

And the results definitely left the Chiefs feeling blue.
Two new starters and few "old reliables" battered two Lake View pitchers, while Neal Mayfield and Shane Myrick combined to snuff out the Chiefs. The end result was an 8-1 Steer victory.

Mayfield, seeing his first extended action in more than a month, limited Lake View to one run on four hits in his five innings.

NFL may film BSHS

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring High School's football program may be the subject of a National Football League film, a school official said.

Assistant Principal Craig Fisher said he has been contacted by NFL Films about producing a short film, or "clip" honoring Big Spring for producing more professional football players than any other high school in the country.

Since 1924, at least 11 Big Spring High School alumni have been drafted by professional teams. Fisher said he is checking records on two more players claiming to be former pro players.

The players, year of graduation from Big Spring and pro teams they played for are: Melvin "Swede" Titman, 1924, Pittsburgh Steelers in the 1930's; Bob Flowers, 1935, Green Bay Packers 1942-49; Olie Cordill, 1936, Cleveland Rams 1940-45; Harry "H.C." Burrus, 1937, New York Yankees, Chicago Rockets and Brooklyn Dodgers 1946-48; Cliff Patton, 1941, Philadelphia Eagles 1946-50, Chicago Cardinals 1951; Charles Johnson, 1956, St. Louis Cardinals 1961-69, Houston Oilers 1970-71 and Denver Broncos 1972-75; Danny Birdwell, 1958, Oakland Raiders 1962-69; Jimmy Evans, 1958, New York Jets 1964-65; Charley West, 1964, Minnesota Vikings 1968-72; Detroit Lions 1973-79 and Denver

Philly holds Akeem; stop Houston, 133-111

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

Akeem Olajuwon has been held in check about as often lately as the Philadelphia 76ers.

But the 76ers, averaging 141 points in their last three games, did the job against Olajuwon Tuesday night, winning 133-111 over Houston for their eighth consecutive victory.

Philadelphia center Mike Gminski had 16 points and 15 rebounds and limited Olajuwon to 19 points and 13 rebounds. In his previous seven games, Olajuwon averaged 24 points and 15 rebounds.

PHILADELPHIA — Houston Rockets Akeem Olajuwon (34) knocks the ball from the hands of Philadelphia 76ers Kurt Nimphius (40) during first half NBA action Monday.

"I'm not in the top echelon and a lot of people seem to think I'll get demolished by those guys," Gminski said. "No doubt, the incentive is there when I play against them."

Gminski said his strategy against Olajuwon was to try to "get a hand in his face."

"He's very difficult to guard, and he's very effective with his turnaround jumper," Gminski said. Philadelphia's All-Star forward, Charles Barkley, had 26 points and 14 rebounds as the 76ers out-rebounded the Rockets 60-49.

"Our fast break has really been going well, and that's mainly due to the excellent rebounding," Philadelphia coach Jim Lynam said. In other NBA games, it was New York 106, Cleveland 97; Golden State 127, Orlando 126; Detroit 93, Boston 82; Chicago 109, Indiana 102; Minnesota 92, San Antonio 90; Utah 127, Charlotte 104; Los Angeles Clippers 114, Sacramento 105; Seattle 136, Portland 134 in overtime, and Phoenix 117, Dallas 111.

Philadelphia, which hasn't lost a regular-season home game to Houston in 23 games since Jan. 2, 1974, improved its record at the Spectrum this season to 32-5.

"There's no doubt Philadelphia is playing very good basketball. We had an awful first quarter, and that hurt us. I think that was the biggest factor," Houston coach Don Chaney said. "When you're on the road and up against a hot team, you can't play as poorly in the beginning as we did."

Rick Mahorn scored 23 points and Hersey Hawkins 21 for the 76ers. Vernon Maxwell had 19.

Howard women want rodeo title

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — Coach Bobby W. Scott is hoping the women's rodeo team can put a repeat performance at the Howard College Rodeo, which begins Thursday night at the Howard County Rodeo Bowl.

The rodeo will continue through Sunday Thursday, Friday and Saturday performances will start at 7:30 p.m. Sunday's action starts at 1:30 p.m.

In their last rodeo at Odessa two weeks ago, the HC women came away with an impressive win. More importantly, it moved them closer to regional leader Vernon Regional Junior College. With five rodeos remaining, Vernon has 340 points and Howard has 303 points. Third is Western Texas with 510 points. The HC women are currently 14th in the nation.
The top two teams qualify to the National Finals Rodeo June 11-16 in Bozeman, Mont. The top two individuals in each event also qualify for the national finals rodeo.

Scott feels the good finish in Odessa, HC's first rodeo title this season, could be a stepping stone to even brighter things.

"I think they are well on their way now. I have four young ladies, and they all placed," said Scott. "It would be nice to jump out and overtake Vernon. We could have a 300-point rodeo and overtake them. But as long as we stay in there and be consistent, getting to Bozeman, that's the main objective."

The leading point scorer for the Howard women has been freshman Jody Heath from Lorena. Heath is having a fine season. She's leading the 22-team region in barrel racing and is second in the all-around behind WTC's Jackie Parker. Nationally, Heath is eighth in the barrels and tied for 14th in the all-around.

Coahoma Bulldogs win first game ever

LAMESA — The Coahoma Bulldogs reached a milestone when their baseball team won its first-ever game by downing the Lamesa Tornado JV, 4-2, here Tuesday.

Mark Arguello was overpowering on the mound, scattering six hits, striking out seven and walking two while going the distance for his first win against two defeats.

The Bulldogs got their first run in the fourth when Steven New singled, advanced to second on an errant pickoff attempt, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Rusty Ginnetti's sacrifice fly. The Bulldogs then broke the game open with three runs in the fifth. Brent Elmore delivered a single that scored Greg Atkinson, while New added a single that brought Dutch Barr and Elmore home.

The Bulldogs, now 1-5 for the season, return to action Friday when they travel to San Angelo to take on the Lake View JV at 4:30 p.m. Coahoma's next home game will be a rematch with the Lamesa JV Monday at Roy Anderson Park in Big Spring.

UNLV loves a parade

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The UNLV Runnin' Rebels, the newest headliners on the Las Vegas Strip, drew their final full house of the season one night after winning the national basketball championship.

Some 18,000 fans turned out Tuesday night for a rousing rally at the Thomas & Mack Center, after thousands more greeted the team during a parade in downtown's Glitter Gulch and down the glitzy Las Vegas Strip.

UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian received several standing ovations from the noisy, foot-stomping crowd that was still enjoying the Rebels' 103-73 victory over Duke Monday night in the NCAA championship game at Denver.

Tarkanian called it "one of the great basketball games of all times" and said it was a testament to the Rebels that they could dominate two Atlantic Coast Conference teams in 48 hours.

UNLV beat Georgia Tech 90-88 Saturday night in the national semifinals.

The crowd laughed as Tarkanian tried to speak and his players, seated behind him, began to mimic some of his famous antics such as chewing on a towel and slouching in his chair with his hands cupping the back of his head.

Forward Larry Johnson, a junior who has said he would return for his senior season, told the crowd: "The last word I've got to say is repeat."

Guard Greg Anthony asked for a moment of silence from the crowd in memory of Loyola Marymount star Hank Gathers, who died after collapsing during a game March 4.

On the side

New hoop rules

DENVER (AP) — Fouling a shooter attempting a 3-point shot will result in three free throws next season, the NCAA basketball rules committee has decided. There will also be a crackdown on player misconduct.

The 3-point ruling is certain to further popularize long shots by giving a team the possibility of three points even if the shooter misses. But the NCAA decided against moving the 3-point line beyond its current distance of 19 feet, 9 inches.

New rules designed to control the conduct of players on the court call for technical fouls to be assessed for taunting or swearing at opponents. Suspension for his team's next game will be the automatic penalty for taking part in a fight, and a second foul means suspension for the rest of the season.

Coaches or players given two technical fouls will now be ejected from games, and the head coach will be ejected after three bench technicals have been called on his team.

In an effort to speed up the game, players will be given two free throws instead of a 1-and-1 after the opposing team's 10th foul of each half and timeouts will be cut from four to three for each team in televised contests.

The committee also decided to allow conferences to experiment with a "no-foul-out" rule. A player wouldn't be disqualified by a fifth foul, but each subsequent foul would award an opponent three chances to make two free throws.

So happy

POWAY, Calif. — Liselotte Neumann was the big winner in the LPGA Inamori Classic Skins game Tuesday afternoon. Neumann hugs her caddy after winning $42,500 in a chip-off to break a tie.

Valvano buyout

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A financial settlement appears to be the only peaceful way for North Carolina State to end its relationship with basketball coach Jim Valvano, according to his lawyer.

"I don't know that it's fair to say that we've given up," Woody Webb, Valvano's lawyer, said. "It appears that the option of him staying on as coach is no longer available."

Webb met on Tuesday with Raleigh lawyer Howard Manning and chief deputy attorney general Andy Vanore, both representing N.C. State.

Manning and Vanore have declined comment on the negotiations, but Webb said the university board of trustees apparently won't discuss extending Valvano's contract.

Webb said a lawsuit would be "the only way I know of" to keep Valvano's job, but the coach would "rather be on the basketball court than in court."

"He just said, 'If it's impossible for me to stay on here, then I guess we'll have to focus on a financial settlement,'" Webb said. "He's talking with his financial people to come up with figures that might be agreeable."

Player arrested

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Chris Washburn, who was bounced from the NBA because of drug problems, was in a suburban Atlanta jail after his arrest for cocaine and marijuana possession.

Washburn was arrested along with his girlfriend at her apartment Monday when Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents went there to interview the former NBA player on behalf of authorities in North Carolina.

Dickerson to retire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eric Dickerson reiterated his plans to retire from football and said neither a trade from the Indianapolis Colts nor more money would make him change his mind.

Fisher is checking records on: R.E. "Peppy" Blount, 1941, who claims to have been a member of the Chicago Bears for the 1948-49 season and Thurman Randle, a recent graduate who may have been drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles.

A clip about the legacy of former Big Spring players would probably be aired on network television, Fisher said. Film company of officials would most likely come to Big Spring during October homecoming festivities, view the high school's Hall of Fame honoring the players and film some of the celebrator.

The great irony, Fisher said, is Big Spring High School's teams have held a very poor winning record for many years.

"Most of these honored players played on losing teams," he said.

Fisher said he thinks losing may have helped the careers of the future pro players. "Maybe playing on a losing team was a good lesson," he said. "Maybe they didn't give up, and learned how to win."

Scott says she has been a pleasant surprise.

"I knew she was good when I recruited her, but to be honest, I didn't feel she would do this well," said Scott. "Freshmen usually have beginning jitters, but that hasn't been a problem for her. She's a pretty special young lady."

Another strong point-scorer is Jana Pierce, a sophomore from Crane. Pierce, as do all of Howard's top female scorers, competes in the barrels, goat tying and breakaway roping.

Last year Pierce just missed a berth in nationals, finishing third in the region in goat tying.

"Jana was a consistent winner for us last year. She got off to a good start last year, but she's started kind of slow this year," said Scott. "She's capable of coming back though. She did real good in Odessa."

The other two HC point scorers are Robin Wardlaw, a sophomore from Del Rio, and Rachel Merck, a sophomore from Sonora.

Scott says he expects Wardlaw to start scoring points heavily in the barrels now that she's got some problems with her horse straightened out. He also added that the barrels are Merck's stongest event.

Scott says the confidence level is high for the HC cowgirls. "Right now, we feel we're going to make it to Bozeman. We're looking forward to making it," said Scott.

The Howard College men are currently ranked fourth in the Southwest Region with 440 points. Western Texas College has a comfortable lead with 1,605 points. Vernon follows with 855 and Odessa College is next with 845 points.

Leading the Howard men is Madisonville sophomore Randall Thornton, who competes in the bareback bronc, saddle bronc, bull riding and streer wrestling events.

Thornton is having a good year: He's currently second in the all-around.

Another strong point-producer for the men is freshman Kaid New of San Antonio. New is a calf roper and team roper and is currently fifth in the region all-around. He team ropes with brother Tray, a sophomore at Howard. Scott says they work well together because they know each other's moves so well.

Also on the team is freshman Trey Wardlaw, Robin's cousin from Del Rio. Wardlaw competes in the steer wrestling, calf roping and team roping.

Rounding out the team are sophomores Kevin Reed of New Braunfels, Breck Beam of Fort Hancock and Mike O'Gorman of Shamrock.

Reed's speciality is bull riding. He was national high school bull riding champ, and won the bull riding competition at Texas Tech this season.

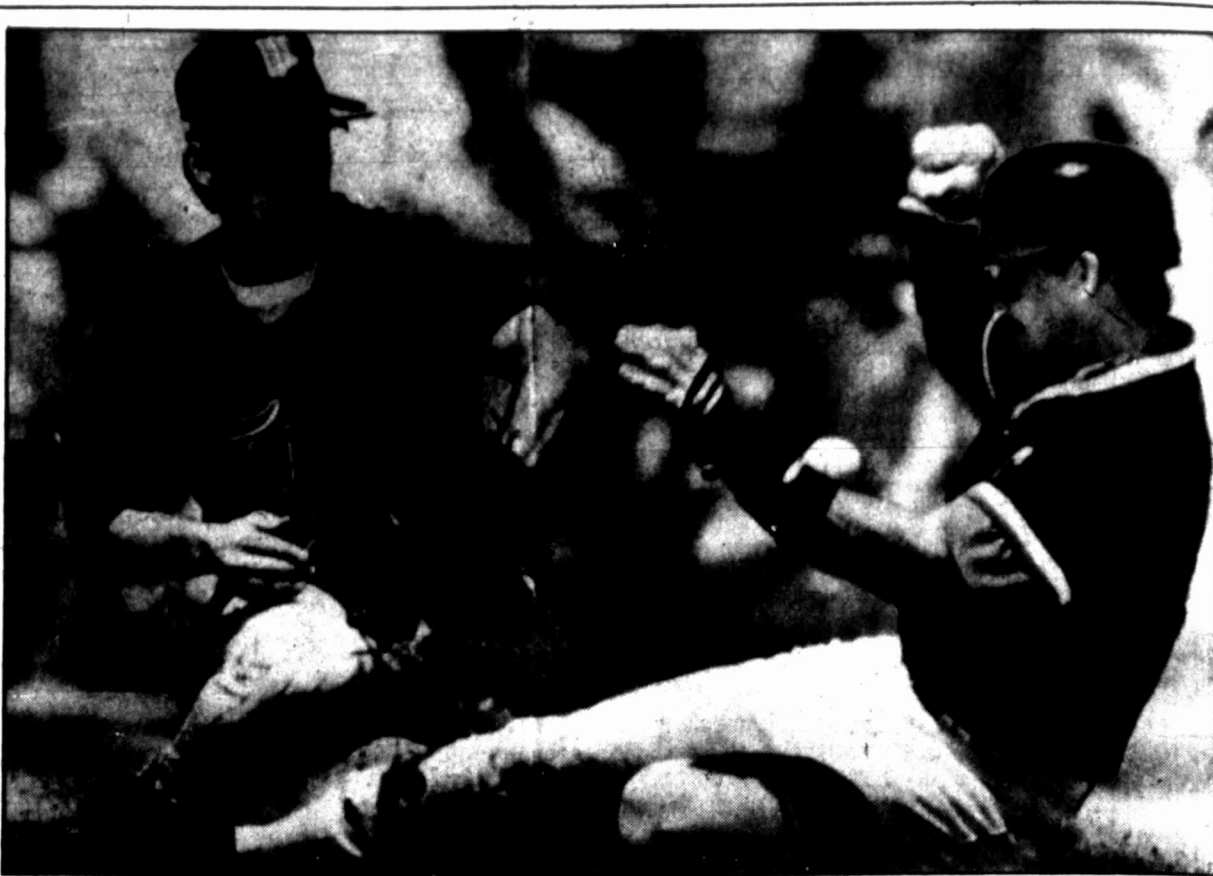

Beam is a team roper and calf roper. He team ropes with Billy Mac Callahan of Fredonia.

O'Gorman is a steer wrestler and team roper. His partners vary between Trey New and Shawn Adams of Big Lake.

Coach Scott says performing in Big Spring just might spur his team to victory.

"I think it helps when they perform in front of their contemporaries," Scott said. "There'll be lots of guys cheering for them from the baseball and basketball teams. I think they'll bear down and try harder."

Harry Vold of Avondale, Colo. is the stock contractor. He is considered one of the top stock contractor's in the nation by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. Price of admission is $3 for adults, and kids under-six get in free.

of work to pick up the win. He received sterling help from Myrick, who retired all six batters he faced in two innings of relief.

The Steers also relied on the old and new offensively. New starters Jon Downey and Shannon Coots combined for three hits and two runs, while regulars Freddy Rodriguez, Mike Hilario, Marvin Rubio and Abel Hilario divided the other six runs among themselves.

Rodriguez in particular was a demon at the plate and on the basepaths. In three official at-bats, he delivered two doubles, stole three bases and scored three runs.

BSSH coach John Velasquez said the win, coming on the heels of consecutive District 4-4A losses, was a relief for his team.

"We played a solid game," Velasquez said. "We needed good defense at third base. We looked at two players (Coots and Michael Ross) and they did a good job."

"Neal did a good job," Velasquez added. "This is going to help him coming back."

Mayfield, who had been sidelined with arm problems, had little trouble in the early going, holding the Chiefs hitless through three innings.

His teammates, meanwhile, made short work of Lake View starter Joe Baquera, touching him for five runs in the first two innings.

Rodriguez started things when he led off the bottom of the first with a double to left centerfield. He then stole third and scored on a passed ball.

Mike Hilario scored the Steers' second run of the inning when he walked, stole second, went to third on the passed ball that scored Rodriguez and came home on Marvin Rubio's sharp single to right field.

Downey reached base on a fielder's choice and went to third on Coots' double to left field. Downey scored on Abel Hilario's groundout and Coots came home on Eric Torres' infield single.

Rodriguez manufactured another run in the second when he walked, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and stole home.

The Steers-increased their lead to 6-0 in the third. Abel Hilario led off by reaching first on an error, went to second on Torres' sacrifice bunt and advanced to third on Robert Perez's single. Hilario eventually came home on Mayfield's sacrifice fly to center.

Lake View counted their only run in the fourth when shortstop Lee Watson's single to right field scored Richard Torres from third base.

Big Spring finished off the scoring with single runs in the fifth and sixth innings. The Steers made the score 7-1 when Coots singled home Marvin Rubio in the fifth, and Rodriguez capped off the scoring when he avoided a run-down between third and home in the sixth.

The Steers, now 12-6 for the season and 2-2 in District 4-4A play, will return to action Friday when they travel to Fort Stockton to take on the Panthers. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Martina eyes No. 1

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) - Martina Navratilova says she needs to win on clay if she's going to wrest the No. 1 women's tennis ranking from Steffi Graf.

But Navratilova, who hasn't won a clay court tournament in almost two years, said she's making predictions about this week's Family Circle tournament, in which she is the top seed.

"I'm not looking down the road too far. I've just got to get back and think about every match," she said after defeating Halle Cioffi 6-2, 6-1 on Tuesday in the second round of the event which the top-seeded Navratilova has won three times.

Third-seeded Zina Garrison advanced with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Beverly Bowes, and fourth-seeded Conchita Martinez eliminated Camille Benjamin 7-6 (7-2), 6-0.

Other seeded players winning Tuesday included Natalia Zvereva, Isabel Cueto, Lelia Meskhi, and Cathy Caverzasio. Claudia Kohde-Kilsch ousted ninth-seeded Sandra Cecchini 6-3, 6-1.

Navratilova drew Cueto, the No. 12 seed, in today's second round. Meanwhile, No. 2 seed Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario had an opening-round match against Mary Lbu Daniels.

Navratilova needed only 55 minutes to win her match at the Sea Pines Racquet Club.

Navratilova, ranked No. 2 in the world, said she played "spottily, but well enough. I had some problems with my serve-and-volley game."

After capturing the first set, she lost her serve to Cioffi in the first game of the second. Navratilova dominated at the net, losing only seven points in running off the next six games to win the match.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas recalled his family's struggle with poverty as he urged congressional support for a program to help the poor pay heating bills.

The 232-pound boxer was the first witness Thursday before a Labor and Human Resources subcommittee. Wearing a starched white shirt and a black suit with a white hankerchief in the lapel, he read a two-page statement and answered questions from panelists.

Douglas did not mention the Bush administration's proposed 25 percent cut for the 1991 fiscal year in the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, which served 5.9 million households last year.

Instead, he gave the Subcommittee on Children, Families, Drugs and Alcoholism a personal account of poverty in his hometown of Columbus, Ohio, and ended with a plea to "do everything you can."

"I was 15 and we had a pretty terrible winter that year and we were behind on our gas bill," he said. A local aid program helped get the family through. "I think that that had a great deal to do with me becoming heavyweight champion of the world," he said. "In hard times, we had support."

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — The Go-Go's reunited in concert for the first time in five years to promote a state ballot initiative, but the performance turned out to be a referendum on the group's future.

"After the show we took a vote," guitarist Jane Wiedlin said backstage amid talk of a fall tour. "Maybe in September. September isn't for sure, but we're going to do something together."

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Gregory Peck and Spencer Tracy, director Roger Corman, actress Bette Davis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not allow people who are prejudiced or limited in scope to influence you. Trust your own judgment about new ideas and people. A mystery will be solved; stay alert.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get household chores out of the way early. Work-related financial questions may be answered by sunset. A phone call could bring an intriguing last-minute invitation. Dress to impress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Now is an opportune time to discuss mutual financial responsibilities with your mate or partner. Keep entertainment expenses within reason. A younger member of the family may need a new sense of direction.

can be made by giving an old idea a new twist! Go over your finances before making any purchases or promises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use your contacts more judiciously; be prepared to give as well as take. Try to find out where you stand with an influential associate. A newcomer could make you a fascinating proposition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's business transactions will bring lasting benefits. Your imagination could be excited by an out-of-towner's observations. Resist the urge to make snap judgments. A relationship goes like clockwork.

Lawmakers treated

AUSTIN (AP) — A lobbyist for Phillip Morris USA treated lawmakers to stretch limousine service Monday night, an expensive dinner and a Cher concert, but the lobbyist and legislators defended their evening out, two newspapers reported Wednesday.

Stan Schlueter, a lobbyist for Phillip Morris and former legislator, said Tuesday that about a dozen people, including lawmakers and their guests, were taken by six limos to dinner at the Green Pastures restaurant in Austin and then to the concert. The Dallas Morning News and the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Top seats at the concert went for $36 and meals at Green Pastures generally run about $50-$100 a person.

The dinner and show were hosted on the opening day of the fourth special session in which legislators are scrambling to find ways to pay for a new school finance system. Among the suggestions is an increase in cigarette taxes.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, who paid for his dinner and concert ticket, said nothing happened that he felt was inappropriate.

"The only thing that shocked my conscience was that (Cher's) second costume change," he said.

Schlueter, the former powerful chairman of the tax writing House Ways and Means Committee and the House Calendars Committee, resigned from the Legislature last year for personal and financial reasons.

Shipwreck found

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — A utility company's workers stumbled across the wreck of a sunken wooden ship off Quintana Beach while laying pipeline.

That discovery in January prompted an investigation of the wreck by two marine archaeologists, who say the ship may have dated back to the mid 1800s.

Last winter, Tejas Power Corp. hired a private archaeological firm to survey the area before installing a new pipeline.

"They even surveyed right over the wreck," said Gail Celmer, an archaeologist with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. "But since there wasn't any metallic materials on the boat it didn't register."

When the workers discovered the ship, which was apparently constructed of rough cedar planks, they contacted the Corps of Engineers, prompting a study of the ship.

"Her state of preservation is unique," marine archaeologist Steve James said. "She's preserved for all time."

For five days James and another underwater archaeologist studied the 100-foot ship, which sits upright, its hull encased in gray clay.

Computer system to aid water district

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — Mark Hoelscher, the manager of the Martin County Underground Water District, has had his nose soaked in the glow of phosphorus lately, feeding information into a new computer system that will greatly expand the capabilities of the district.

A recent $9,860 water quality grant from the Water Development Board which was matched by $2,465 in district funds has helped

"We can do more tests (with the system). We can keep better track of it and we can better interpret the problems we find. We hope it just greatly improves efficiency." — Mark Hoelscher on the underground water district's new computer system.

with the purchase of an Arris Computer Aided Design System which will help detail, with maps, underground water tables.

Other equipment purchased with the money includes a plotter to draw the maps, using as many as four colors, a spectrophotometer to measure the amounts of about 100 different substances found in water and a refrigerator to keep water samples cool.

After information on water levels and the measurements of various substances in water samples around the county is entered into the computer, which Hoelscher is doing now, he will be able to churn out in a matter of minutes maps showing changing water levels, underground water flow and contamination plume maps.

"We can do more tests. We can keep better track of it and we can better interpret the problems we find," he said. "We hope it just greatly improves efficiency."

He already has this year's water level map and is trying to predict water flow directions right now. Next, he will begin measuring areas where particular substances, ● COMPUTER page 10-A

ODESSA — Tracing the past can be like working a complex puzzle. For Muriel "Coco" Noll, the missing piece of the puzzle was a picture in the newspaper.

Mrs. Noll was researching her family roots as a way to gain entry into the Daughters of the American Revolution, a group that requires its members to prove a link to the Revolutionary War.

"I was looking for the name 'Douthit,'" said Mrs. Noll. "I saw a man's picture in the paper who had that name, so I called their home. The woman said she had a whole book on the Douthits I could borrow."

"It turned out my husband had known this man and had done business with him for 30 years, and my getting that book was the missing link."

Mrs. Noll's interest in genealogy, the tracing of family history, began with a gift from her aunt.

"Years ago an aunt sent me my grandmother's family Bible," said Mrs. Noll. "She had said that any of her granddaughters could be members of the DAR if they wished. My aunt urged me to start in, not knowing what I'd be getting into."

Mrs. Noll's research took two years and vast research. "But it ● COMPLEX page 10-A

It's back to school for Claudia Chase

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — Claudia Chase, 33, just cannot seem to stay away from Stanton schools.

A resident of the Greenwood community in Midland County, where she has lived all her life, is currently doing a practicum this semester in counseling, a type of internship for college credit, at Stanton High School.

From 1978-84 she was a teacher at Stanton Elementary School before she decided to stay at home for a while and raise her two babies. In 1974 she graduated from Stanton High School. Now, she says, she would even like to become a counselor for the Stanton Independent School District if a position were open following her certification in counseling this May.

"I had such a good teaching experience here I couldn't think of any other place I'd rather be," she said. "It's like home."

After all, many of the students that Chase is around now are the same students that were in her kindergarten through fourth grade physical education classes at the elementary school.

"I'd much rather do it in an environment I was familiar with, with people I know real well," she said. "All of them know me and I still know them."

It was athletics that originally drew Chase to Stanton. The high school here at the time had a girls basketball team; the high school in Greenwood did not.

She went on to graduate from

After going back to college at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin in 1987 to get her

Mattox attacks Richards during 'debate'

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Jim Mattox's claim of having proof that opponent Ann Richards has used illegal drugs is just another "trashy allegation," says Ms. Richards' campaign press secretary.

"Mattox has a new trashy allegation every day. And it does not deserve Ann's response or attention," said Monte Williams. He refused to comment further about the allegation.

"We're not going to play into his hand on this stuff," Williams said.

During a 30-minute televised "debate" in Dallas Tuesday, Mattox blasted the state treasurer, saying he possesses signed statements from witnesses alleging Ms. Richards has used illegal drugs in the past 10 years.

The attorney general faced three reporters alone, since Ms. Richards declined to attend the debate, citing a previous commitment to appear at an Austin rally.

Mattox said he has "proof from the perspective of individuals that have said to me that Ann Richards has used certain drugs."

But, Mattox refused to say who his informants are.

"Whether they will come forward and agree to have their names released to you is an entirely different subject, and I'm not going to violate their confidence," Mattox said.

Ms. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, has refused to answer directly the question of whether she ever used illegal drugs, saying she has not used any "mood-altering" drugs in 10 years.

"My response has been my message to the people out there that if you need help you can get help," Ms. Richards said in a televised debate with six other Democratic candidates in March.

Ms. Richards faces Mattox in an April 10 runoff for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. She had a slim lead over Mattox in the DALLAS — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jim Mattox makes a point during a televised discussion here Tuesday night. The program was scheduled to be a debate between Mattox and Ann Richards, but Richards declined because of scheduling conflicts.

March 13 primary. "She's not here because she's afraid to discuss these issues."

Mattox said. "When asked during the debate why he hasn't made his income tax returns public, Mattox said he first wants Ms. Richards to release medical documents from the Minnesota clinic that treated her for alcoholism in 1980.

But Williams said Ms. Richards has made public a letter pertaining to her treatment stay.

Likening politics to a chess game, Mattox said, "If you put everything out there, well then you've never got anything to bargain with."

Williams said Ms. Richards wouldn't release any additional medical documents.

"There's only one thing to be released in this campaign and that's Jim Mattox's income tax returns," Williams said.

Questioned by reporters about his acceptance of $200,000 from Danny Faulkner, a Dallas area developer facing retrial on federal fraud charges, Mattox said the money was not a personal gift.

"He did not give me the money," Mattox said. "I was involved in a number of business transactions with him."

Williams said Mattox has changed his position regarding the gift.

"That's certainly in conflict with his earlier statements and with Danny Faulkner's statement about the intent of the gift," Williams said. "But we'll never know."

Mattox hedged when asked if he would campaign for Ms. Richards is she wins the Democratic nomination.

"I said I would campaign for the whole Democratic ticket. I think it would be very difficult for her to win the election ... because of her refusal to answer certain questions."

Organizers of the debate said they were following through on an earlier commitment by allowing Mattox to appear alone.

Debate organizers said they offered to provide a satellite uplink so that Ms. Richards could appear in one city and Mattox in another, and offered several formats, but were turned down.

Comanche Peak has start-up

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) — At 5:42 p.m. Tuesday, the $9.1 billion Comanche Peak nuclear plant logged its first nuclear chain reaction.

The low-power start-up at Comanche Peak, 80 miles southwest of Dallas, marked a crucial turning point in the long story of the behind-schedule, over-budget plant.

The start of the reaction — "reaching criticality," in nuclear jargon — came four days after U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White refused to block low-power testing at Comanche Peak.

Nuclear fission — a milestone in the plant's 15-year quest to generate power — began in one of the plant's two reactors, said Sid Underwood, a spokesman for TU Electric, which owns the facility.

"It's eagerly been anticipated by everyone, but I suspect most of all by the actual operators" who run the reactor, Underwood said. "To say the least, it's a very great day for them."

Citizens for Fair Utility Regulation, a Fort Worth-based group, had hoped to halt the early tests, which the Nuclear Regulatory Commission authorized Feb. 9.

With the legal challenge to testing dismissed, operators at the plant worked through the weekend to prepare for the start of the nuclear reaction.

By midnight Monday, TU Electric spokesman Mark Manroe said, the operators had completed a major task for starting the plant: lifting the control rods that regulate the reaction. ● START-UP page 10-A emphasis of testing. "I worry sometimes that we lose sight of the child," she said.

"With all the testing emphasis going on I'm afraid we forget that they are children and not computers," she said. "I think they have to realize that you can't look at a test score and say that this is that kid."

She said small schools, such as those in Stanton, have their advantages. "They care about the kids. They don't peg them as bad," she said. "I think that's one of the pluses of a small school."

Chase said she eventually wants to get her master's degree in education in school counseling. "That's six hours away!" she said.

But first she wants to begin working. "I'm looking for a position starting next fall," she said. She expects to begin working on her master's degree in a year and thinks that it will take two semesters of work to complete it.

Besides working and going to school, there are other concerns in Chase's life, such as her husband and two children.

Her husband, Tim Chase, is an engineering technician for UNOCAL in Midland. They met at college in San Angelo, she said. Their two children are Jessica, 7, and Megan, 5.

such as chlorides, a substance found with salt, and nitrates which are associated with fertilizers, are concentrated in the county to help predict pollution sources.

He said he will divide the county into nine areas for the contamination plume studies. "Tarzan will be the first study area," he said. "My goal is to study three study areas a year."

"When we get that we'll be taking care of what this district was formed to do. Without the computer you couldn't do it," he said. However, he added, "If I don't get but two a year, because of manpower, that will be acceptable." Hoelscher said he got a good deal on the computer system which cost a total of $8,300. The eight megabyte Unix operating system, which usually runs for about $10,000, cost $1,000, he said.

"It's a brand new program and they were trying to find someone willing to take the time and energy to invest in proving out the program. We've been willing to do that," he said. "In return for that I, in a sense have to train myself or we need to train together in that."

The plotter cost $4,500, he said. A geographic information system package which includes the CAD system provides the commands for the mechanics of map drawing.

The spectrophotometer cost $1,200, he said. With the spectrophotometer shooting certain wavelengths of light through water, substances can be measured according to what wavelengths they absorb and which ones they reflect.

"It's got capabilities far beyond what we plan to use it for right now," Hoelscher said of the possible 100 different substances it can measure. He said he will begin using it to measure chlorides, nitrates and fluoride.

When the control rods are fully inserted in the reactor, the reaction can't occur. Lifting them lets the reaction begin.

That left one more job: reducing the amount of boron in the water inside the reactor. Boron, like the control rods, prevents the reaction from starting.

By gradually adding water containing less boron, the reaction could begin, utility officials said.

"When you start to reduce the boron level, you achieve the start of the chain reaction," Underwood said.

The plant is authorized only for low power testing, up to five percent of the reactor's thermal power. The amount of heat the reactor can generate. By early Tuesday evening, the plant was still below one percent of its power, Underwood said. The plant was to reach two to three percent of its operating power within several hours, said company spokesman Dick Ramsey.

Once the chain reaction started, NRC inspectors were to start monitoring safety and operations 24 hours a day.

No electricity will be generated during testing. The plant works by using the reactor's heat to make steam. The steam turns electricity-generating turbines.

The beginning of low power testing means the utility can now make plans to ask the NRC for a full power, commercial operating license, Manroe said.

The company may make that request this month, but the commissioners set their own timetable for making a decision, he said.

One problem arose March 12 when a tiny electrical component in the plant's control system apparently failed. The NRC classified the incident as an "unusual event," the least serious of four categories of nuclear plant operational problems.

When construction on Comanche Peak began in 1975, TU Electric estimated that it would take five years to build and cost $729 million. The plant has cost $9.1 billion.

The utility has asked the Texas Public Utility Commission for a $442 million, 10.5 percent rate increase to pay for the plant's Unit 1. Its second reactor is not completed.

was great," she said. "The people everywhere that I wrote or called were so gracious. I had a whole shoebox of letters before I was through."

Scaling the family tree is not an easy pastime, but it is rewarding, according to Betty Theda, had of the Southwest History Genealogy Department of the Ector County Library.

"If you're just looking for names, you don't last," she said. "It's the why that's interesting. Why did they move from Tennessee to Oklahoma? It's the curiosity of why they did these things."

Genealogy appeals to a diverse group of people, and men now comprise at least half of the library's visitors, Ms. Theda said.

Norma Baker of Midland, who lectures extensively on genealogy, said genealogy is perceived as an expensive hobby. "But after a while the expense doesn't bother you nearly as much," she said.

Polly Knezek, who runs the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints library in Odessa, said that genealogy can be addictive. "It's kind of like chewing gum," she said.

Ms. Knezek explained that Mormons take an interest in genealogy because of their belief in praying for their ancestors.

A family history begins with a pedigree chart that traces the genealogist's immediate family, according to a booklet supplied by the Mormon Church. Usually this information can be found by talking to relatives and by searching the house for records such as certificates of birth, marriage or death, family Bibles, diaries, letters, photographs, obituaries, wedding and birth announcements, wills, military records, passports and school records, according to the booklet. Once the chart has been filled in as much as possible, it's time to compile the information that will need to be researched. An awareness of available records is valuable at this point.

According to Ms. Theda, the Genealogy Department at the library has a good selection of census records. Those records not found in the library can be ordered. Ms. Baker said census records from 1850 on list all household members, including elderly relatives who lived in the home and might provide an additional link.

The library also has countless books to aid in genealogy, including family histories, heraldry lists, archives, passenger lists and hints for researching in foreign countries.

Extension news

By KATHRYN BURCH

"Thank you" just doesn't seem like enough for First National Bank and the Commissioners' Court.

The bank has given the Extension Service permission to use the old Martin County News office for a meeting room and Commissioners have offered to pay the utilities.

A work day for cleaning up has been scheduled for Friday. Anyone is welcome to help. 4-H parents, Extension Homemakers and their husbands... any Good Samaritan will be welcome.

The building will be used for 4-H club meetings, Extension Homemakers Club meetings, Committee meetings, workshops and seminars. If we can get everything in working order, we hope to start 4-H Clothing classes in the building this April. At last, sewing machines can be set up and left set up throughout the whole 4-H Clothing project.

It would be nice to have a refrigerator and stove in the kitchen for refreshments. If you have an extra one around, we would be glad to keep it for you. The Extension Homemakers are planning a kitchen shower in the future.

We are so thrilled to have this opportunity. Thank you, First National Bank. Thank you, Martin County Commissioners.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.
