Speed limit change already in motion

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — As soon as the Senate Thursday overrode the president's veto of a massive highway bill, gears began turning here and in Austin to move workers onto construction sites and to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on some rural interstates.

Texas will receive $847 million for projects in the coming fiscal year. More than $181 million in projects had to be postponed after Congress failed to act on a highway funding bill in the last session.

In job-hungry Texas, estimates of the possible number of highway-building jobs that could have been lost this year ranged from 14,000 to 18,000.

The bill includes $3 million for the Liberty-Laurel overpass in Beaumont, but the state legislature will have to appropriate matching funds of $1.2 million.

The Texas legislature in special sesson last summer voted authority for the highway department to raise the speed limit just as soon as the federal government gave the green light.

Motorists should continue to obey the 55 mph speed limit for the time being, according to Bo McCarver, spokesman for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, interviewed by telephone from Austin.

For trucks, the top speed limit will be 60 under the new bill.

Before the new speed limit signs go up — at a cost of $170,000 or more — officials will conduct public hearings and make feasibility studies. That means that engineers will measure the "line of sight" on stretches of highway and study the accident rate.

The Texas highway department officials are waiting for official word from the U.S. Department of Transportation on regulations. They want to know, for example, the definition of "rural interstate." While the bill specifies areas with population of 50,000 or less, it does not spell out which census figures to use. Some areas that were sparsely populated in 1980 now are urbanized, McCarver said.

At the Capitol, analysts were trying to figure whether the president has suffered permanent political damage by creating, and losing, a confrontation with Congress over the highway bill. He had a stripped-down version waiting to be introduced, but it would have cost only about $6 billion less than the one that finally cleared.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who fought hard for the highway bill containing his amendment guaranteeing a return of 85 percent of gasoline tax paid by Texans, "could care less about the political fallout," according to his spokesman, Jack DeVore.

MISD trustees vow to fight court-ordered restructuring

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District trustees Thursday vowed to go all the way to the nation's highest court if necessary to fight the court-ordered restructuring of elections into seven single-member districts.

After an hour-long closed-door session, the board voted unanimously to request a re-hearing before the entire 15-member U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

A three-judge panel of the Fifth Circuit Court last week upheld the redistricting plan twice ordered by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III.

If the request for a re-hearing is denied, the board voted to petition its case to the U.S. Supreme Court in a motion filed by Trustee K. Michael Conaway.

The action stems from a 1985 voting rights lawsuit filed by blacks and Hispanics living in Midland who complained that the present method of electing school board members is discriminatory because bloc voting by Anglos makes it virtually impossible for a minority candidate to be elected.

Midland voters currently elect all seven school trustees at-large.

School board President Bill R. Jackson said the MISD based its decision to appeal on Judge Patrick Higginbothom's dissenting opinion questioning whether blacks and Hispanics could be grouped as a single minority because their numbers are scattered throughout the district.

"We felt Judge Higginbothom raised some very pertinent questions about the constitutionality of the at-large system," Jackson said.

Jewels draw record bids

GENEVA (AP) — Buyers from around the world bid a record $30 million for the late Duchess of Windsor's jewels on the first night of a glittering two-day auction that evoked the romance of a love affair that King Edward VIII gave up his throne to keep.

With the 10 percent buyer's fee, the 95 lots sold Thursday brought a total of $33.5 million — more than four times the previous record for a single-owner collection of jewelry.

The top lot, a 31-carat diamond ring bought for the duchess in 1950, fetched $2.9 million, almost three times the estimate. It went to Tokyo jeweler Tsuneo Takago who said he would keep it in his personal collection.

Flood losses mount; Snow dips deep into South

Associated Press

Floodwaters remained at rooftop levels in Maine today after destroying bridges and homes, carrying off an 18th century British stockade and driving hundreds from their homes, while a storm over the East produced snow almost to the Gulf of Mexico.

A state of emergency remained in effect in Maine, where state officials said water levels were too high to estimate the damage, but Guilford town manager Robert Littlefield said losses in his community alone were in the millions.

"I think we lost everything," said a weeping Rolande Poirier of Augusta, who clutched her dog and gazed at her flooded home. She vowed to move back "as soon as I can go in and clean it up."

Snow fell early today as far south as Hattiesburg, Miss., about 70 miles from the Gulf, and bridges were being sanded in Jackson. Snow also fell in Michigan's northeastern Lower Peninsula.

The forecast called for heavy snow today over the central and southern Appalachians, with up to 6 inches possible in the mountains of northwestern North Carolina, and up to 4 inches in northeastern Tennessee.

Maine's most destructive flooding in memory began Wednesday when heavy rain and melting snow swelled New England rivers and streams. In Nashua, N.H., witnesses said a person fell into the flooding Nashua River on Wednesday and was believed drowned.

"We're getting tires (for orchard bonfires) from everybody and his brother. There's not a tire left in southern Hinds or Copiah counties. What we don't have those people growing blueberries got."

— Freddy Geiselbreth, Terry, Miss., peach farmer

Maine's Kennebec and Androscoggin rivers ripped out bridges, swept houses downstream and drowned livestock. Hundreds of residents were evacuated from their homes, some taken to shelters by state and National Guard helicopters.

Residents braced for more flooding today along the Penobscot River, which was expected to crest at Eddington at 6 feet above flood stage. The St. John River also continued rising.

In Winslow, the Kennebec tore three homes from their foundations and swept away the Fort Halifax stockade, the oldest wooden fortification in the country. The British built the fort in 1754 to defend the frontier against the French and Indians.

In Augusta, a swollen brook lifted a vacant restaurant the size of a two-car garage off its foundation and carried it about 50 feet down a street, a spokesman for the city's Public Safety Department said.

Gov. John R. McKernan Jr. took a helicopter tour Thursday of areas of central Maine, where water lapped against rooftops.

In Massachusetts, about 20 families evacuated in Northampton were to return home today. Mayor David Musante had declared a state of emergency Thursday along the Connecticut River, which crested 7½ feet above flood stage at Montague.

A storm that caused a near blizzard in Michigan on Thursday dropped more snow today as it made a slow exit.

Snow and sleet from the storm extended as far south Thursday night as northeast Texas and northwest Louisiana.

The wintry blast worried fruit farmers in Mississippi who said they might have to stay in their orchards tonight burning tires and hay as they did earlier this week to protect their crops.

"We're getting tires from everybody and his brother. There's not a tire left in southern Hinds or Copiah counties. What we don't have those people growing blueberries got," said Freddy Geiselbreth of Terry, who owns a 15-acre peach farm that was devastated last year by a winter storm in March.

Tort reform: Unavailability of liability insurance frightening prospect

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth of a seven-part series on tort reform currently being considered in the Texas Legislature. This segment deals with limiting liability for directors of nonprofit organizations and for county and city officials.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Contemplate the prospects of closed social service programs, such as a treatment center for drug addicts. Consider the decreasing number of doctors willing to deliver babies and professional engineers reluctant to take on major projects.

Some people say this is precisely what is happening to these and others who must have professional liability insurance to serve the public and/or simply keep their doors open. Those who need the coverage either cannot find an insurance company willing to write a policy or, if they can find the protection, have to settle for reduced coverage and an increased cost.

Insurers are claiming an "explosion" of lawsuits for malpractice, personal injury, product liability and the like. They want state laws reformed to, among other things, put a ceiling on awards for pain and suffering, to penalize people bringing frivolous lawsuits and to limit lawyers' contingent fees.

Texas' trial lawyers argue that the "reforms" the insurance companies want are merely changes to protect themselves and to keep the public from collecting damages to which they are entitled.

"Unless we attain tort reform with teeth, I will be forced to curtain a substantial amount of my practice consisting of humanitarian and charity work, especially with children, which I so much enjoy," said Dr. Terry Tubb, a plastic surgeon.

Tubb, chairman of Medical-Legal Committee of the Midland County Medical Society, said Odessa ranks number one per capita regarding lawsuits against physicians and Midland doctors provide medical care for a number of Odessa patients, "thus increasing our liability risk."

To illustrate how this affects health care locally, Tubb noted that the Midland County Medical Society abruptly cancelled plans to set up a free clinic to provide health care to the indigent when it discovered that other counties had done the same only to have suits brought against doctors by charity patients.

In addition, he said doctors decided not to donate surplus funds to obtain vaccinations for indigent youth because each physician would have been jointly and severally liable had one of the children reacted adversely to the vaccine.

Tubb said "the people of Texas will the ultimate losers by funding state medical schools, law schools and county hospitals only to see the cost of health care and insurance premiums continue to escalate — all directly related to the liability system out of control."

Tort reformers suggest the Legislature limit liability for directors of nonprofit organizations and for county and city officials.

They say the state also should open up certain insurance regulations to allow more insurers to offer liability insurance and force insurance companies to detail their records to the State Board of Insurance during rate cases.

"There has to be some common sense interpreted into our tort laws," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens. "Otherwise, we'll get to a point where we're afraid to do something for fear of getting sued."

Unterbrink said his organization hasn't had a problem getting volunteers or citizens to serve on it's board, but added that a problem could arise if something isn't done to change the system.

Soviets explode third underground nuclear device

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today exploded a nuclear device underground in Soviet central Asia in its third weapons test since abandoning a 19-month freeze on its testing program.

The official Tass news agency, which announced the early morning blast, said the test was "carried out with a view to perfecting military technology," but gave no specifics.

However, the staging of three nuclear explosions by the Soviets in little more than five weeks appeared to indicate they were making up for time lost during the test moratorium that had been a centerpiece of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's foreign policy.

The Kremlin, citing national security concerns, ended its unilateral halt on nuclear testing after the United States refused to make the test ban mutual.

Tass said the latest test was conducted at 5:20 a.m. Moscow time (8:20 p.m. EST Thursday) at the Semipalatinsk test range in the Soviet republic of Kazakhstan, 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow near the Chinese border.

Tass gave no indication of the yield of the latest blast, unlike the other two tests conducted by the Soviets this year, on Feb. 26 and March 12, which it had reported as having yields of "up to 20 kilotons," the force of the U.S. atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan.

Before the Soviets resuming testing this year, their last blast had been recorded on July 25, 1985.

On Aug. 6, 1985, the 40th anniversary of the U.S. atomic bombing of Hiroshima, the Kremlin announced it was imposing a unilateral moratorium on its weapons testing.

Gorbachev and other Soviet officials called on the United States to follow suit, saying a superpower test ban would be an important step towards achieving other accords on nuclear weapons.

However, the United States refused to follow suit, saying tests were needed to assure that nuclear weapons are reliable and to develop President Reagan's "Star Wars" space-based weapons program.

Soviet officials charged that the U.S. refusal to join in the test halt forced them to resume their testing.

They said, however, that they would stage the minimum number of test blasts necessary and would not conduct a contest with the United States to see which country could explode the greatest number of nuclear devices.

Washington has also cited problems with verifying a test ban, but the Soviets have rejected them as baseless.

To prove their point, the Soviets allowed scientists from a private U.S. environmental group, the Natural Resources Defense council, to set up seismic monitoring stations at Semipalatinsk in cooperation with the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

However, the U.S. scientists were told to shut off their monitoring stations before the Soviet tests resumed. Kremlin officials said the stations had been set up to monitor a test ban and not to measure the yield of tests themselves.

MISD

Higginbothom, a Dallas judge, charged that "Bunton never considered whether the school board's alternative (proposals) might have been in compliance with either the federal Voting Rights Act or Texas Education Code."

In the federal court ruling, Bunton prohibited the school district from holding at-large elections and rejected the school district's compromise for either a 4-3 plan (four single-member and three at-large positions) or a 5-2 plan (two minority districts and one at-large district with five members elected at-large).

The judge said such proposals were unacceptable and "unconstitutional in that it impermissibly dilutes the votes" of minorities represented by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council.

That opinion, which found the court-ordered division of the MISD into seven single-member districts constitutional, was upheld in the 2-1 appellate court decision.

The ruling, drafted by Judge John Minor Wisdom of New Orleans, rejected the MISD's arguments that the needs of minorities could have been met by accepting either of the two alternatives.

Wisdom wrote, "We hold that the district court was not clearly erroneous in its findings and committed no material error of law."

While school officials said they are confident that the Fifth Circuit Court would re-hear the case, spokeswomen for LULAC and the BAC said they are confident that the ruling would stand.

"We feel we have a good case...The Fifth Circuit and the Supreme Court do not move quickly...I just wish they (MISD trsutees) would accept the inevitible," community activist Joanne DeWitt said.

Mrs. DeWitt chastised the school board's refusal to give in to the order and hold elections.

Although the MISD election was scheduled for this year, trustees asked for and received a stay until the appellate court could enter its opinion.

The court, however, did not speak to the question of an election, when it must be scheduled or how many seats on the board are up for grabs.

"We hope in the long run Bunton will lift the injunction and we'll get to hold elections anyway," Ms. DeWitt said.

Former LULAC President Edia Hernandez said "I read the judgment and thought it was very well written...It reflects the history of West Texas as far as what Mexican-Americans and blacks have gone through."

Mrs. Hernandez vowed that LULAC and the BAC are prepared to go on with the legal battle, adding that more and more residents are crossing racial boundaries to join the cause.

"Anything that's worth the fight is worth the wait," she said.

Time change due Sunday

Associated Press

Most of the nation will switch to daylight-saving time by moving clocks forward an hour at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Daylight-saving time goes into effect on the first Sunday of April this year, rather than the last Sunday in the month as in prior years.

Congress ordered the extra three weeks of daylight-saving time at the bidding of people who prefer a later sunset for such activities as sports and cookouts.

Daylight-saving time opponents prefer to keep that hour of light in the morning. Rural residents complain about sending their children to school bus stops in the dark and of being forced to begin farm chores before sunrise.

Proponents of daylight-saving time also wanted it extended in the fall, but Congress left the ending date at the last Sunday in October.

The time change, begun in 1918, was originally designed to reduce the need for lights in the evening, allowing fuel to be diverted to the American effort in World War I.

The Place To Be Because We Care

JEWELS

Elizabeth Taylor picked up a poolside phone in Los Angeles to join mostly anonymous bidders from 24 countries in the sale by Sotheby's, which had estimated the auction would bring in $8 million.

Miss Taylor paid $565,000 for the Prince of Wales feathers brooch, a diamond clip bought in 1935 when the celebrated Windsor romance was still a closely guarded secret.

Sotheby's top jewel expert, John Block, said Miss Taylor and her late former husband, the actor Richard Burton, were friends of the duke and duchess and had admired the brooch for years.

"She also said that this is the most important jewel she ever purchased for herself," Block told about 200 reporters at the end of the four-hour first session early today.

The opening night of the sale, held in a red-and-white striped tent on the banks of Lake Geneva, drew 1,950 people, plus another 450 watching the auction in New York via a satellite hookup.

King Edward VIII abdicated the British throne in December 1936 to marry Wallis Warfield Simpson, a twice-divorced American commoner. They became the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and lived in Paris.

The auction's proceeds go to the Pasteur Institute in Paris, which will use the funds for research into cancer and AIDS.

That arrangement is in accordance with the will of the childless duchess, who died in Paris in April 1986 at age 89.

Seventeen television crews were on hand to film what Sotheby's had dubbed "the most important sale of the century."

Vote concerned roads, not Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats, victorious in a veto battle with the White House, say enactment of an $88 billion bill to build roads and raise the speed limit was not a "make or break" referendum on President Reagan's leadership for the remainder of his term.

"This was not a referendum on the president's popularity," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Thursday as the Senate, on a 67-33 vote, joined the House in enacting the massive authorization measure into law over Reagan's objections.

"President Reagan has nothing to be concerned about in terms of the effect of this vote on his leadership," Kennedy added.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said, "This isn't going to make or break the president of the United States."

The new law permits states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on roughly three-quarters of the nation's 43,000-mile interstate highway system. It also allocates federal highway and mass transit aid for the next five years. The Federal Highway Administration immediately began releasing $11 billion to states.

The measure also provides money for more than 100 "highway demonstration projects" that were tailor-made for individual members of Congress. Reagan called it a budget-buster and staked his prestige in the fight.

There was no dispute that the vote was a stinging defeat for the president, who made an extraordinary, last-ditch appeal for support in a hurried trip to the Capitol a few hours before the vote. But he was unable to enlist the aid of the 13 Republicans who were voting against him.

If Democrats refrained from claiming a major political victory, Republicans sought to shield Reagan from lasting damage.

"I don't think that any president's stature or prestige rides on a single issue or a single vote," said Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., one of 13 Republicans who sided with Democrats in voting to override the veto.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas sought to turn the day's events to the advantage of the president, who had been criticized for a "hands-off" management style that contributed to his difficulties in the Iran-Contra affair.

Dole said Reagan spoke to Republican senators for 20 minutes without notes, adding. "It's money in the bank. ... He came up here, he went into the lion's den and he conducted himself as he should. He made it a little easier for the next time."

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater denied the defeat would be damaging to Reagan's ability to govern for the next 21 months, saying he thought the president would benefit from having demonstrated his willingness to fight.

Fitzwater quoted Reagan as reciting the verse of an old Scottish ballad as he met with Republicans before the vote, 'I am wounded but not slain. I will rest awhile but I will rise and fight again. It's time for all of us to fight again."

In a written statement after the vote, Reagan said, "I am deeply disappointed by today's vote. I knew in advance that the battle would be tough and the odds were long. But we cannot retreat from our commitment to a responsible budget.

"My efforts to control spending are not diminished and I remain firm in my pledge to the American taxpayers to speak out against such budgetary excesses," Reagan added.

The override vote capped a high-stakes political battle in which the Democratic-controlled Senate first voted Wednesday to sustain the veto, 65-35, then reversed itself a little over 24 hours later.

In between, Democratic freshman Terry Sanford of North Carolina announced he would switch his vote from sustaining the veto to overriding, thus tipping the balance against the president. Byrd had switched his vote Wednesday to sustain the veto in order to be allowed to ask for Thursday's reconsideration vote.

In response, Reagan went to the Capitol in an effort to persuade rebellious Republicans to support him.

"He didn't bend any arms, didn't twist any arms, didn't make any deals," Dole said. "He came here as president."

Fitzwater quoted Reagan as telling the senators, "I beg you for your vote. Give us this vote and let us stand for a majority (within the Republican Party) that can run this party."

Dole said that among 12 of the 13 Republicans who had voted against Reagan on Wednesday, six told Dole they would change their vote if others did the same.

On the override vote, all 54 of the Senate's Democrats were joined by the 13 Republicans in overturning the veto. Thirty-three Republicans voted to sustain the president.

The House voted on Tuesday to override the veto on a comfortable margin of 350-73.

Reagan vetoed the bill as a budget-buster, and said the demonstration projects were wasteful pork barrel construction projects.

Democrats countered that the bill was well within budget limits, and said a successful veto would cost 800,000 construction jobs.

About three-fourths of interstate system eligible for change

WASHINGTON (AP) — About three-fourths of the nation's Interstate system is eligible to be posted with the new 65 mph speed limit.

The increase, contained in a highway and mass transit bill that Congress enacted Thursday over President Reagan's veto, would be legal on an estimated 33,910 miles of the 43,291-mile interstate system, according to Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho.

Under the new law, rural stretches in every state except Delaware could be posted for the new speed limit. It would not be used in urban areas with populations of 50,000 or more.

"Urbanized areas" still have to be defined by the Department of Transportation so states will know which portions of their interstates would qualify for the new speed limit.

The 55 mph limit was started in 1974 in the midst of the energy crisis. But during congressional debate, supporters of its retention argued mainly that it would save lives.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said after the House approved the higher limit last month that the lawmakers had "blood on their hands."

The National Safety Council estimated that 20,000 to 36,000 lives have been saved since 1974 because of the lower speed limit.

But those who prevailed argued that Americans in rural areas were in rebellion against driving at 55.

"A child now sits in the back seat and watches his old man drive and put it at 62 mph, because that is where you can get by," said Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo.

TEXAS

Bentsen said, "This is a victory both for Texas and for pay-as-you-go government." The Bentsen amendment, closing a loophole in existing law, will mean an additional $580.2 million for Texas over the five-year life of the bill. Bentsen was apprehensive that measure could not have been included in a new bill if the president's veto had been sustained.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, voted against the highway bill on the floor and voted to sustain the veto because he thought "Texas could get a better deal."

Gramm also strongly opposed a congressional waiver of agreed-upon spending ceilings necessary to enact the giant spending bill.

Reagan's advisers wanted him to show his muscle to prove he had "bounced back" from damaging revelations over the sale of weapons to Iran and diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who defied the Republican president on the veto override, said, "Iran had nothing to do with this. The Senate acted on the merits of the legislation."

Another of the 13 Republican senators who resisted the president's personal appeals to back him, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said the president was not weakened by the veto override but would have been hurt had the veto actually been sustained. "There would have been no highway bill this year, and people in my state would have resented it," Pressler said.

Western Republicans, representing states where motorists are eager to legally drive faster than the current speed limit, provided the one-vote margin of victory for the veto override.

TORT

"Maybe they're just ignorant of the fact that if you do serve and something happens, you can be sued," he said.

To provide "directors and officers"- liability coverage for Texas banks, the American Bankers Association is establishing a captive insurance company.

The company will be based in Bermuda.

The bankers association will provide up to $2 million in liability insurance against mismanagement claims for directors and officers of member banks. It will provide $3 million in coverage for blanket bond insurance.

Frank Anderson, a Dallas banking consultant, told the Dallas Times Herald that mismanagement insurance probably was more difficult to obtain in the Southwest because of the region's troubled reputation.

Maj. Harvey Harwell of Midland's Salvation Army said insurance premiums have increased more than other item in his organization's budget.

"People are taking drastic measures and finding more excuses to sue. When that happens, the premiums are bound to go up," he said.

"The threat of litigation," said Harwell, "jeopardizes the whole volunteer aspect of our service."

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman described lawsuits against the county as "minor," given the number of employees, jail inmates and population.

But with medical-malpractice and product-liability judgments averaging $1 million each these days, it's hard for county officials to feel confident they won't get sued, he said.

Suing has become a national pastime. The courts are jammed and liabilty insurance rates are going through the roof, Dettman said.

Whitehead continues fight, keeps crib set up

RED BANK, N.J. (AP) — Surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead says she will keep a crib set up in her home as she continues to fight to get her baby back and knows that when the girl grows up, "she'll want to be with me."

"We love each other very much," the 29-year-old homemaker said Thursday in her first public comment on a judge's ruling that stripped her of her parental rights and gave custody of the child known as Baby M to biological father William Stern.

"My only goal is to have Sara home," Mrs. Whitehead said. "I'm the real mother. There's just no comparison for the real mother, the real thing."

NATION

The Baby M case brought worldwide attention to the practice of surrogate parenting after Mrs. Whitehead refused to honor the $10,000 contract under which she was artificially inseminated with Stern's sperm.

Sara is the name she gave her year-old daughter, who legally is known as Melissa Elizabeth Stern since Superior Court Judge Harvey R. Sorkow on Tuesday upheld the contract and allowed Stern's wife, Elizabeth, to adopt the child.

"We will not accept the decision of one judge as the final determination," Mrs. Whitehead said haltingly, with tears in her eyes. "I believe that there is something so wrong and so harmfully unnatural about the surrogate practice that our New Jersey appellate courts will return Sara to me."

Mrs. Whitehead's attorneys have asked the Appellate Division of Superior Court for a stay of the historic ruling so she can continue to visit the chubby, blue-eyed girl.

"Right now, we're still in the middle of this. It's not over," Mrs. Whitehead said with her husband, Richard, seated next to her.

In his ruling, the judge called Mrs. Whitehead an exploitive and manipulative woman who has trouble dealing with crises and tries to dominate her family.

Star Wars spending request cut

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "Star Wars" budget request was reduced sharply in the first test vote of the new Congress for his research program to find a shield against Soviet nuclear attack, congresssional sources say.

A House subcommittee voted Thursday to cut $2 billion from Reagan's request for $5.8 billion for Star Wars spending in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, the sources said.

The decision was taken as the subcommittees of the Democratic-controlled House Armed Services Committee met to write a budget authorizing the Pentagon's budget for the next fiscal year.

The Star Wars vote came in the research and development subcommittee, according to the sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The full committee will meet next week to vote on the defense budget before sending it to the House for floor action later in the spring. A similar process will be followed in the Senate, and the differing versions that pass the chambers will be reconciled by a House-Senate conference committee.

Reagan wanted $312 billion for the Pentagon next year, which would be a 3 percent hike beyond inflation. Both Republicans and Democrats agree he is unlikely to win that amount, but the committee is writing its version of the defense budget based on the $312 billion figure.

The president sought $5.8 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is known formally. That would have included $5.2 billion in Pentagon spending and another $600 million in the budget of the Energy Department, which oversees some SDI research.

Currently, the SDI budget is $3.6 billion, a reduction by Congress from the original request of $5.3 billion.

The research subcommittee staff recommended the $2 billion cut, the sources said. Rep. Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., lost 12-6 when he moved to reduce the SDI figure to $2.85 billion, the sources said.

Then, Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J., was beaten, 13-4, on his proposal to approve Reagan's original request, according to the sources. That was followed by 10-8 defeat of a proposal by Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., to provide $4 billion for the program.

The subcommittee then moved on to other areas, the sources said, meaning it had accepted the staff recommendation.

In another decision, the subcommittee voted to give the Air Force more than $300 million the service wants to fix the new B-1B bombers, but rejected a proposal to make the Air Force find that money by cutting other programs.

The panel also voted to eliminate $600 million from the bill for the rail version of the controversial MX nuclear missile. The Pentagon wanted the money to build 50 of the giant missiles and put them on trains.

While the subcommittee was writing the bill, four conservative Republicans were introducing measures in the House and Senate which would direct the Pentagon to create a new and separate "Defense Force" branch and order the deployment of an early version of an SDI system.

The bill was sponsored in the Senate by Sens. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and in the House by Reps. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Courter.

All four have urged Reagan to order deployment of an early, rudimentary SDI system before he leaves office, a proposal which has been opposed by SDI critics who say no effective system can now be built.

"To those people who claim that we have no ready technology to defend the country today," Wallop told a news conference, "let me refer them to the advancements made by the Soviet Union in their SDI program."

Kemp said the bill means "SDI can become a reality."

Meantime, Paul Nitze, one of Reagan's senior advisers on arms control, told a Senate subcommittee he believes the administration is legally justified in moving to a "broad" view of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty which would permit SDI tests.

Nitze, one of the members of the U.S. team which helped negotiate that U.S.-Soviet pact, had previously adhered to the so-called "narrow" ABM view which wouldn't allow SDI tests.

But, Nitze told the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee, while Reagan believes moving to the broad interpretation is justified, he won't actually move the nation to that position without consulting Congress.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

Tuesday, April 3, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Construction work continued in the city this day. The cellar for the new County Court House was being excavated by convicts on the northeast corner of the State House Yard. A crew of 25 convicts chained to wheelbarrows were doing this labor. Under the old laws many of these felons would have been hanged. An Episcopal Academy was begun on the block of Chestnut Street just beyond the State House. Samuel Vaughan was proceeding with the construction of the Philosophical Hall on Fifth Street, along the east side of the State House Yard.

At the regular meeting of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia, a committee was formed to consider the building of hot and cold baths, and to establish a botanic garden in the city.

The Street Commissioners today appointed James Rowan, George Floyd, and Thomas Fisher to collect the street assessments for the ensuing year for the final three wards of the city.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

In Congress today, two petitions were referred to the Board of Treasury.

The New Hampshire Spy optimistically anticipated that as soon as the country adopted a strong central government, New Hampshire would enjoy major commercial and financial improvements:

"With respect to local difficulties in this state, we have little cause to complain. 'Tis true — times are dull — money is scarce, &c. — but these difficulties will certainly be removed as soon as the States become united in ONE HEAD — our commerce will then be regulated — our finances properly disposed — and the great channel of trade will be turned into our different ports — and until this event takes place, we cannot expect to have these difficulties removed."

A candidate for delegate to Congress, Thomas Polk of Charlotte, N.C., wrote Gov. Caswell about a financial difficulty that was fairly common throughout the nation:

"On my Reciving a Commition from you to attend Congrass in November Next it Put me in Mind I should stand in Need of hard Money and I find it is Not easey to be Got. The Law in South Carolina being Stopt for sum time Past Puts it out of My Power to Recover Money in that State, and being so fare from the sea board I Cannot have any Remitances Maid that Way."

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington recorded another morning frost. (Frost had greeted his day since March 23.) The day turned pleasant, calm, and clear.

In a letter of introduction for his nephew to Washington, Benjamin Franklin made clear his respect and admiration for the beleaguered general.

"I have often thought that the Number of people, who by Curiosity and the Admiration of your Character are drawn to call at Mt. Vernon, must be very troublesome to you, and have therefore generally declin'd giving any introductory Letters. But my nephew Mr. Jonathan Williams, who was a faithful and active Agent of the United States during the whole War, in shipping Stores, Arms, Ammunition & c for the Army, being on his Way to Richmond,and desirous of paying his Respects to you, I hope you will excuse my giving this Line of Information concerning him, which at the same time may express my best Wishes for your Health and Happiness, and hopes of seeing you here at the Convention, being persuaded that your Presence will be of the greatest Importance to the Success of the Measure."

LOOKING BACK
Caspar Wistar: Medicine and Botany

Young Dr. Caspar Wistar was elected this month as a junior fellow of Philadelphia's College of Physicians, having just received his M.D. from Edinburgh University in Scotland. In 1789 Wistar became professor of chemistry in the medical school of the College of Philadelphia. When that institution and the State University merged in 1792 to become the University of Pennsylvania, Wistar was appointed to the anatomy department where he remained until his death in 1818.

"The System of Anatomy," which he published in 1811, is America's first anatomy text.

In 1815 he became president of the American Philosophical Society. Through his friendship with the Portuguese ambassador, Abbe' Jose Francisco Correa da Serra, and English botanist Thomas Nuttal — both fellow members of A.P.S. — Wistar gained an interest in botany.

Nuttal named the beautiful vine, wistaria, which he discovered during his botanical explorations in the old Southwest in honor of his friend, Caspar Wistar. The original vine which Nuttal presented him still flourishes in the garden of Wistar's home.

Torture-murder suspect attempts suicide

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man charged with murder after police found half-naked women shackled in his basement and body parts in his freezer was resting in good condition today after trying to hang himself in a jail shower, authorities said.

The suicide attempt Thursday night was one of several Gary Heidnik has made over the years, according to his younger brother, who said in an interview in the Philadelphia Inquirer today that the two were raised in an atmosphere of violence and racism.

The newspaper also reported that a court psychologist who examined Heidnik in connection with a 1978 case said he presented "a high probability for serious or even bizarre offenses against relatively helpless members of the community."

Police have said Heidnik, who has been charged with rape, kidnapping and two murders, preyed on mentally retarded blacks. The two slaying victims were black women, and one was mentally retarded, police said.

Heidnik used his T-shirt to hang himself from a shower pipe Thursday night at the Philadelphia Detention Center, said prison Superintendent David S. Owens.

The 43-year-old Heidnik had an abrasion around his neck but was in good condition, said Dr. James Giuffre, executive medical director of Giuffre Medical Center. He was being kept overnight for observation, a hospital spokesman said.

Owens said an officer assigned to watch the suspect in the shower lost sight of him through the steam. Heidnik was alone in the room, the superintendent said.

State Department recalls embassy's chief officer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, still unsure how many secrets may have been compromised at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, is recalling the mission's chief security officer to answer questions.

It also is taking steps to make sure the Soviets won't be able to eavesdrop on Secretary of State George P. Shultz's confidential conversations when he visits leaders in Moscow later this month.

The department said Thursday that Frederick Mecke, the regional security officer in the embassy since August 1985, was being brought back to Washington. He will consult with security officials on the problems at the embassy, which include allegations that Marine guards were enticed by Soviet women into providing embassy secrets.

A new officer will take his place.

"He is a key person in the chain of command and as a consequence is in a position to know how things developed there," State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said.

"We're going to be talking to everyone at the embassy," Redman said. "Certainly the RSO falls into that category."

In what Redman has called a serious breach of security, Marine Corps guards Sgt. Clayton Lonetree and Cpt. Arnold Bracy have been confined at the marine base in Quantico, Va., and face charges that they allowed Soviets into the most top-secret work places in the embassy.

Among the areas that may have been penetrated are rooms used for secret communications. State Department officials said that for the time being, they have switched to the use of couriers to hand carry communications in and out of Moscow.

Under procedures governing U.S. security operations, marine detachments in embassies provide protection, but are led by sergeants and take their orders from the State Department's civilian security officers.

Meanwhile, the New York Times reported today that President Reagan was warned two years ago by his Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board that the Moscow embassy was vulnerable to Soviet espionage.

The Times, quoting government officials it did not name, said the report helped persuade Reagan to decrease the number of Soviet employees at the embassy, but resulted in few changes in security procedures.

White House spokesman Ben Jarrett and State Department spokeswoman Deborah Cavin had no comment on the story Thursday night. Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, a council member who resigned after the report went to Reagan, said he had no comment on the report, said his spokesman, Bill Wright, by telephone from Dallas.

Military officers, speaking only on condition they not be named, have complained that young Marines have been publicly identified with wrongdoing, but that the State Department's overall responsibility has received less public attention.

The department announced Monday that all 28 Marines in the detachment were being rotated to the United States to help in the security inquiry and that they would be replaced by other marine guards.

NATION IN BRIEF

Unprocessed tax returns fewer than year ago

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service was working its way through a stack of 10.8 million unprocessed tax returns, but it said that was about 18 percent lower than the backlog last year at this time.

Through last Friday, 52.8 million couples and individuals had filed returns, down from the 54 million received during the same period last year. But the IRS has processed 42 million returns this year, up 3 percent.

In March 1986, the IRS had 13.2 million unprocessed returns. During the comparable period of 1985, when computer problems slowed processing to a crawl, the backlog was more than 26 million returns.

Most people who have filed this year have been getting refunds in about five weeks. Those who wait until closer to the April 15 filing deadline may have to wait six weeks or longer, the IRS said Thursday.

NRC asked to keep rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 House members are asking the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to keep its current rules against licensing any nuclear reactor without state and local approval of accident contingency plans.

The House members introduced a non-binding resolution Thursday urging the NRC to abandon a rules change proposed in February that would enable it to license two East Coast nuclear plants, Shoreham and Seabrook, over the objections of New York and Massachusetts authorities.

Lehman bids farewell

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a farewell speech after six years as Navy secretary, John F. Lehman lashed out at New Zealand for its anti-nuclear policies and hinted changes in the training of Marine Corps embassy guards could be expected.

Lehman displayed his characteristic combative style in an address at the National Press Club Thursday. He announced his resignation in February and expects to leave by the end of next week.

Lehman urged steps to reduce trade with the New Zealand, which has banned port calls by Navy ships unless they declare themselves not to be carrying nuclear weapons.

Vote Saturday

If Saturday's voter turnout follows the trend of recent years, the total number of people casting ballots in Midland could be depressingly small. There are a number of factors pointing to an unusually small turnout — there's only one contested race, warm spring weather and clear skies could combine to keep people away from the polls, the absence of major political issues could fail to attract voter interest.

But this election — like all elections — is highly important to the people of this community. Again, they will be electing the officials who will represent them on the City Council and the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Directors. The best way to get the public's voice heard on vital matters is to elect representatives who will take concerns and requests to the boards for action.

Midland voting power has been in a state of transition for a period of years as minority voting blocs have strived for effective representation via the single-member district system of voting. The City Council representatives first elected under the new system are up for re-election for the first time this year and only one of them, Oralia Corrales, is opposed. Ms. Corrales faces opposition from two candidates. The race for that position, the District 2 council seat, has become heated in recent days with charges being made that Ms. Corrales favors Hispanics in her district over the interests of blacks. Ms. Corrales has denied that allegation, and her two-year record seems to substantiate her contention that she has attempted to represent all the residents of her district.

The Reporter-Telegram endorsed Ms. Corrales for re-election and reasserts its belief that she has been an effective spokesperson for Midland's minority population and all the residents of District 2. She has worked for the betterment of the residents of her district in many ways. She has increased public awareness of the district's specific needs and, what's more, has worked diligently to bring about changes to benefit all of Midland, not merely District 2.

As noted in our earlier endorsement, the peculiar problems now existing in District 2 — dilapidated housing, unpaved streets, etc. — did not result overnight and will not be changed overnight. They will be changed over a period of years by the effective, untiring efforts of dedicated public servants such as Oralia Corrales.

But only the residents of District 2 will be voting in that race. All the other candidates in the elections are unopposed. That puts the responsibility for determining the outcome of the District 2 race squarely on the backs of the voters in that district.

JACK ANDERSON

Malaysian students flocking to U.S.

WASHINGTON — Here's a bizarre twist on America's trade war with friendly nations: The United States has actually benefited from one rival government's exclusionary policy.

Jack Anderson

The modest but potentially far-reaching victory in the battle to trim the U.S. trade deficit came when British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher slapped foreign students with a prohibitive increase in the fees they pay to study at British universities. As a result, students from the former British colony of Malaysia, who for generations had gone to Britain for their higher education, have come to the United States instead.

There are now an estimated 25,000 Malaysian students in this country, the largest contingent of students from any foreign country. The money they spend on their American education amounts to some $300 million a year — not a huge amount, to be sure, but still a big help in keeping the $4 billion annual trade between the United States and Malaysia roughly in balance.

More important than the actual cash involved, though, is the long-range significance of having a developing country's future leaders get their training in this country. This is bound to mean closer trade ties when the U.S.-educated Malaysians ultimately begin to run business and government back home.

In fact, the great fear on the part of Malaysian leaders today is that their country could get caught in the crossfire of a retaliatory trade war between the United States and the Asian nations that run up gigantic trade surpluses at U.S. expense. The Malaysians are afraid that penalties imposed on Japan, Taiwan and South Korea, if not constructed with pinpoint accuracy, could punish Malaysia as well.

Malaysia has enough problems of its own to solve without having to worry about broad-brush U.S. protectionist legislation. One almost poignant concern, according to Dr. Mahathir Mohamad, the Malaysian prime minister, is widespread American ignorance about his country. In a recent interview with Dale Van Atta in the capital city of Kuala Lumpur, Mahathir explained:

"People know Thailand, the Philippines and Singapore. But Malaysia is a country that is vaguely around here. People are not sure where it is.

"It is because it was known as British Malaya in the past. Now it is called Malaysia. So people don't link the two — Malaya and Malaysia. You can have the Himalayas in India. You can have Mali and Malawi in Africa. So when people say Malaysia, they can't place it. A lot of people say it is in China. And some people think it is in Africa. So we suffer from his anonymity sometimes."

More serious than its identity problem is Malaysia's economic predicament. For years its commodities exports gave the country a healthy 8 percent annual growth rate. But the world demand has dropped drastically for Malaysia's products: rubber, tin, oil and other raw materials. The rise in synthetics and the drop in petroleum prices have dealt a drastic blow to the Malaysian economy, which grew only 1 percent last year.

Mahathir's solution to the problem has been to push his country into labor-intensive manufacturing. "We want to go into certain areas that we think are no longer economical in developed countries ... because of the high cost of labor," Mahathir explained. "That is why our electronics industry has picked up tremendously. Malaysia is the third biggest exporter of microchips in the world, after the United States and Japan."

Malaysians have another venture that they hope will put their country on the world trade map: a car called the Proton Saga, planned for introduction soon in the U.S. market.

FACT SHEET: Behind all the spirited rhetoric about the war against drug dealers, how tough are the Feds really making it? Congressional investigators have given us some sobering figures. Since the Reagan administration crackdown began in 1982, there have been 1,700 convictions under the federally directed program aimed at drug kingpins. But most of those convicted will spend less than five years in prison. Only 73, or 4 percent, drew sentences of 15 years to life. And 22 percent of the convicted dope dealers have already been set free on probation or suspended sentences.

WHO'S ON FIRST: While it's undeniable that the Iraqis fired the first shot at Iran in September 1980, it's also true that they were the first to seek an end to the war. One Baghdad official told us that his government had filed countless protests over Iranian incursions prior to the outbreak of full-scale war, so it didn't surprise the Iraqis that their peace overtures have been rejected since 1982. The Iraqi official said that Iranians, "whether they sit on the Peacock Throne or on the floor with a turban," firmly believe that Iraq "is part of Iran."

MINI-EDITORIAL: An upcoming anniversary to note: 40 years since Gen. George C. Marshall, distinguished soldier and secretary of state, gave what surely was one of the most far-reaching commencement speeches of all time. On June 5 at Harvard, Marshall proposed that the United States help Europe — both friendly and not-so-friendly countries — recover from the devastation of World War II with vast infusions of economic aid. "Our policy," Marshall said, "is directed not against any country or doctrine but against hunger, poverty, desperation and chaos." Yet it's worth remembering that this noble approach also saved Western Europe from communism.

CHARLEY REESE

Disgraceful action on Contras has risks

I'm beginning to understand why Will Rogers said there is no native American criminal class — except perhaps the Congress.

I'm waiting for the Congress to find an issue that it can settle in an honorable manner, but it looks as if it will be a long wait.

Charley Reese

After handing themselves a pay raise in a disgraceful manner, members of Congress have acted disgracefully in regard to funding the Nicaraguan Contras.

It makes no difference whether you think we should fund them or not fund them. Congress has shown the same dishonesty and cowardice that it showed about the pay raise.

There is one strategic question before the Congress, and it's the same one that has been before it for seven years: Is it in the national interest of the United States to assist armed guerrillas fighting the Sandinista government?

If the answer is no, then not a penny — humanitarian or military — should be spent. If the answer is yes — and that was the answer a majority arrived at last year — then the Iran arms deal has nothing whatsoever to do with it. If the answer is that arming the Contras is in the U.S. national interest, then it is in our interest to do so whether President Reagan makes no mistakes, one mistake or 10 mistakes.

The position that aid to the Contras is in trouble because of the Iran arms deal is stupid and immoral. That's like saying the United States will not buy any more submarines because the contractor overcharged us. It's like saying I'm going to beat up my neighbor's 10-year-old son because I'm mad at the principal of the grade school he attends.

If Congress is mad at President Reagan, then impeach him. The Nicaraguan Contras didn't decide to sell arms to Iran. They had no control over what Reagan or his National Security Council staff did or didn't do. Nor does anything Reagan or his staff did or did not do have any bearing at all on the strategic question of whether the United States should or should not assist the Contras.

If those nabobs oppose the aid for strategic reasons, that's fine. Say so. Vote on the question, up or down. No American can have any problem with that. But to say you won't vote on it because of the Iran arms deal or you want to hold it up for six months until you get an accounting, is dishonest, deceitful and dishonorable.

To try to convince the American people that the Contras are strictly a Reagan project is also deceitful. They belong as much to the Congress as to the executive branch.

The very first bit of covert aid was approved by the Congress. Subsequent overt aid has been approved by the Congress. If Congress had any objections to the Contras, it should have voiced them all seven years ago. The Contras are not Ronald Reagan's responsibility. They are the responsibility of the U.S. government.

To play partisan politics with the lives of 16-year-old Nicaraguan boys up to their armpits in Soviet tanks and helicopters is about as low down and rotten as you can get.

The American people ought to sue the Congress for defamation of character, because it certainly presents to the world a sorry picture of the U.S. government. It has given America the reputation abroad of being a treacherous and unreliable ally. This contributes greatly to the Soviet Union's goal of isolating the United States.

A government that will not keep its word, that routinely breaks faith with people it encourages to engage in life-and-death battles, that routinely crucifies itself, that shows it is incapable of putting the interests of survival and freedom ahead of petty partisan gain is exactly the kind of government that would cause gamblers to put their money on the ultimate victory of the Soviet Union.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On April 3, 1860, the legendary Pony Express began service between St. Joseph, Mo., and Sacramento, Calif. The service would last for only a year and a half, giving way to the transcontinental telegraph.

On this date:

In 1776, George Washington received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Harvard College.

In 1783, author Washington Irving, whose stories would include "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," was born in New York City.

In 1865, Union forces occupied the Confederate capital of Richmond, Va., during the Civil War.

In 1948, President Harry S. Truman signed the Marshall Plan, which allocated more than $5 billion in aid for 16 European countries.

Ten years ago: Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Washington for his first meeting with President Jimmy Carter, in which Sadat was expected to set forth Arab conditions for peace in the Middle East.

Thought for Today: "The men the American people admire most extravagantly are the most daring liars; the men they detest most violently are those who try to tell them the truth." — H.L. Mencken, American author and editor (1880-1956).

LETTERS

Unselfish public servant

On Sunday, March 29th, a letter to the editor by Charlie Jackson made several serious accusations against Mrs. Oralia Corrales and the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. After serious consideration, I decided that not to respond to the accusations would permit Jackson to mislead the community. Next time Jackson should do his homework before slandering others.

The East Side Economic Development Task Force received $161,000 of CDBG funds to establish a revolving loan fund, not the Hispanic Chamber as he stated. The fund will help businesses already located or wanting to locate in Midland's east side. This should benefit anyone regardless of race or color.

The MHCC did receive $25,000, not $100,000 and not from CDBG funds. The $25,000 came from the general fund of the city. In a joint effort, the East Side Economic Development Task Force, the Midland Hispanic Chamber, the city and the county did conduct a cleanup drive. This was conducted in 1986, not in 1982 as Jackson stated. Mrs. Corrales, members of the East Side Economic Development Task Force, the Midland Hispanic Chamber, the city and the county employees participated in the cleanup and removal of trash from vacant lots.

Finally, Mrs. Corrales does not deserve to be treated with such disrespect. She has tried to work with the total community for the benefit of her district, District 2. She is a conscientious and dedicated City Council person. I for one am extremely pleased with her work on the City Council. Win or lose Mrs. Corrales is owed a sincere thanks by all of us for the unselfish giving of her time and talent to the Midland City Council.

No safety benefit

Regarding your March 23 editorial entitled, "Ease air chaos," Sen. Danforth's bill to hire 500 additional air traffic controllers will do absolutely nothing to solve our air traffic control problems. More controllers will reduce overtime and make vacation scheduling easier, that's all. It will not put more controllers on duty at any given time.

Our current system of air traffic control is out-dated. We need to plan for the future. The Federal Aviation Administration wants to build its empire by adding more people. The way to solve the problem is to add new computer systems, satellite tracking systems, and collision avoidance equipment in the cockpit. An air traffic controller can only talk to one plane at a time. This is not adequate.

Computerized satellite tracking of aircraft can keep all planes separated without verbal communications of any kind. Increased safety and greatly reduced spending on enroute air traffic controller salaries make this approach much more attractive.

Our present system is a mess. To encourage Congress to throw more money at it won't solve the problem. A well thought out approach by the people that use the system is badly needed.

Information incorrect

I would like to take this opportunity to correct the information offered by Charlie Jackson in his letter of March 26.

Any business located on the east and south sides of Midland may apply for a loan from the Revolving Loan Fund. The Eastside Economic Development Task Force, a committee of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, proposed the idea to the city council. The money was not given to the MHCC, but will be administered by the Midland Economic Development Company, a broad-based committee appointed by the city council. The idea behind the revolving loan fund is to develop businesses so they can create jobs for people living on the east and south sides of Midland. Mrs. Corrales' support and leadership on this project should be commended. This project will help all District 2 residents, be they black, brown, or Anglo.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce received not $100,000 from the city, but $25,000. That money is being used, among other things, to promote the statewide TAMACC convention that will be in Midland in 1988. The convention will bring in an estimated $200,000 in revenue to the city.

Mrs. Corrales has a number of significant accomplishments that have provided direct help to the residents of District 2. They are:

— Workshops on how to bid on City of Midland contracts.

— Appointment of District 2 residents to the Street Commission.

— She attended a number of the community meetings to discuss the Lamesa Road project, and has provided leadership toward getting it under way.

— Removal of dilapidated buildings. This past few months, more than 31 dilapidated houses were removed.

— She participated in and helped promote a general cleanup of the east and south sides.

I've known Mrs. Corrales for many years and she is a good Christian woman dedicated to her family and her community. We should show our appreciation for her hard work and dedication by re-electing her on April 4.

Names alike, goals not

One of the most controversial issues facing the Texas Legislature this year is tort reform, the movement to reform our state's civil justice system. It is interesting to examine the players on either side of the issue and their motivations.

Their names are surprisingly similar. The Texas Civil Justice League, umbrella organization for lawsuit reform, is comprised of 80 trade and professional associations, 110 businesses and more than 300 cities and counties. Together, these groups represent the interests of hundreds of thousands of Texans.

The TCJL probably represents the largest, most diverse coalition ever assembled for purposes of passing legislation in Texas. Its members are concerned about correcting what they call the imbalance in our civil justice system. The president of TCJL is J.P. Word, a former Texas senator and presently executive director of the Consulting Engineers of Texas.

The other side is Texans for Civil Justice. It represents a small, but powerful, organization called the Texas Trial Lawyers Association. The TTLA is comprised of 4,500 attorneys who primarily make a living representing plaintiffs in civil cases, in most cases collecting 30 to 50 percent of the jury award as payment. The executive director of Texans for Civil Justice is Billy Rogers, a political operative who formerly helped run the Walter Mondale campaign in Texas.

Both names sound alike. Their goals and membership could not be more different. This information may help you as you read about the opposing groups now and in the coming weeks and months.

LULAC can't endorse

As a result of many questions concerning LULAC's endorsement of political candidates, I would like to clarify LULAC's position.

LULAC as an organization, and per its constitution, is not allowed to endorse any political candidate. The League of United Latin American Citizens is made up of citizens belonging to different political parties.

LULAC does encourage every citizen to get involved in the American political process by exercising their right to vote. Good luck to all candidates.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin, Howard, Sterling, Coke, Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight, fair and not so cold. Lows near 40. Wind southeast 10 to 15 mph. Saturday, increasing cloudiness with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Highs in the mid 60s. Wind southeast 10 to 15 mph, increasing to 20 to 30 mph by midday. Lake wind advisories will be required afternoon.

Rain possible this weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Increasingly cloudy skies, high winds, and the possibility of rain are in the forecast given by the National Weather Service for Saturday. The NWS, located at Midland Regional Airport, is calling for southeasterly winds at 10-15 mph in the early hours, increasing to 20-30 mph and gusting by midday. There is a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the middle 60s.

Tonight skies should be clear with a low in the upper 30s. Winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 60, recorded shortly after midnight, was 29 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1978. Today's low of 29 tied the previous record low set for this date in 1975.

STATE

A warming trend is forecast for all of Texas Saturday after several days of unseasonably cold temperatures.

The unseasonably cool temperatures remained over the state today as a ridge of high pressure continued to dominate the state's weather after a cold front moved across the state.

Temperatures were well below seasonal normals at dawn today over most of the state.

Patchy dense fog is being reported over portions of Northeast Texas at dawn.

It will be clear and cold again tonight.

Lows tonight will be in the 30s and 40s over most of West Texas, the 20s and 30s in North Texas and in the 30s and 40s in South Texas.

But a warming trend is in store for the entire state Saturday. Forecasts call for mostly clear skies and warmer temperatures tomorrow and Sunday.

Highs Saturday will be in the 60s and 70s statewide.

NATION

Streams gorged with heavy rain and melting snow continued to flood parts of New England today while an Eastern storm dumped snow as far south as Mississippi.

A storm that whipped Michigan with blizzard-like fury on Thursday dropped more snow today. Nine inches of snow had accumulated at Alpena this morning.

Maine's most destructive flooding in memory began Wednesday when heavy rain and melting snow swelled New England rivers and streams. In Nashua, N.H., witnesses said a person fell into the flooding Nashua River on Wednesday and was believed drowned.

Maine's Kennebec and Androscoggin rivers ripped out bridges, swept houses downstream and drowned livestock.

Traffic mishaps drop in '86

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

The Loop 250 and Andrews Highway intersection is the city's most dangerous, according to an annual traffic report, which also showed that Midlanders are driving more safely, recording a 21 percent decrease in total city accidents.

Public Works Director Fred Baker said this morning that the report, a compilation of 1986 city accidents, currently is awaiting consideration by the Streets Commission before presentation to City Council.

Baker said the Loop 250 and Andrews Highway intersection saw 23 accidents during 1986, of which 14 were right-angle broadsides. That means that one driver in each of those 14 accidents likely ran a light, he said.

No fatalities were recorded at the intersection, which saw only nine accidents during 1985, he said.

Of other dangerous intersections, Front and Terrell streets saw 15 accidents and Andrews Highway and Midland Drive saw 11 accidents.

Ten accidents were recorded during 1986 at each of the following intersections: Big Spring Street and Loop 250, Big Spring and Scharbauer Drive, Loop 250 and Midland Drive, and Midkiff Street and Wall Avenue.

Baker added that the 10 accidents recorded at Big Spring and Loop 250 were a substantial drop from 1985's 19 accidents. He attributed the drop to the addition of a second left-turn lane on Big Spring at the intersection.

The decrease is an example of the value of maintaining individual intersection accident counts, Baker said.

He suggested that a solution to the Loop 250-Andrews Highway accident problem may come in the erection of signal warning signs on the loop for drivers approaching the intersection.

The accident report recorded a total of 2,597 accidents in Midland during 1986. That figure for 1985 was 3,299, indicating a 21.3 percent decrease in accidents.

Because traffic counts throughout the city have dropped only 5 percent, the 21 percent decrease indicates safer driving among Midlanders, he said.

Of the total 2,597 accidents, 647 were injury altercations, and 143 of those injury accidents were alcohol-related, he said.

Four accidents resulted in fatalities, and two of those deaths were pedestrians, he said.

A total of 243 accidents were alcohol-related, whether injuries were recorded or not, he added.

He added that of the city 23's accidents that involved pedestrians, 16 occurred mid-block, indicating that those pedestrians were jay-walkers.

Mattox gives green light to red ink shift

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Saying he "wanted to reach another result," Attorney General Jim Mattox Thursday gave lawmakers the official go-ahead to transfer the $1 billion, fiscal 1987 deficit into the 1988-1989 budget.

Gov. Bill Clements and legislative leaders praised the ruling, which eliminates the specter of the massive tax hikes and/or budget cuts that would have been needed to cover the deficit by the Aug. 31 end of the fiscal year. "The attorney general's decision has removed a potential hurdle," Clements said.

Mattox chided the Legislature for trying to circumvent the spirit of the Constitution's "pay-as-you-go" provision but said the Constitution gives neither him nor Comptroller Bob Bullock the tools to enforce the provision at this point in the budget cycle. Bullock had said he believed the Constitution prohibits him from approving the 1988-1989 state budget unless the Legislature covered the deficit by Aug. 31.

"I may be powerless to prevent this deficit financing, but I feel it is my duty not to, in effect, let our constitutional heritage slip away without at least sounding one voice of protest," Mattox said. "I think what's taking place is improper."

The decision means the Legislature must set aside $1 billion of 1988-1989 revenues to cover the deficit. Through a spokesman, Bullock said he will "follow his attorney's advise" and approve the 88-89 budget if lawmakers earmark the necessary funds.

"The attorney general has answered the constitutional question about the deficit," the comptroller said in a written statement. "Now it's time for the rest of the answer, and...that answer can come only from the Legislature."

The deficit came about when lawmakers used the so-called "Band Aid solution" last fall in addressing what was then a $3.5 billion shortfall. Using a combination of budget cuts, temporary taxes and creative accounting techniques in back-to-back special sessions, the Legislature trimmed the deficit to $1.029 billion.

"I think election politics got in the way of balancing this budget back when Mark White was governor," Mattox said. "I think that election politics and political rhetoric is continuing to get in the way of doing what the people of Texas would like to see."

House Speaker Gib Lewis said lawmakers opted for the Band Aid plan hoping that the state's economy would turn around this year. He and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby accused Bullock of trying to "change the rules in the middle of the game" after they felt the comptroller had OK'd their plans during the special sessions.

Mattox said neither his own political aspirations nor the warnings of possible dire consequences persuaded him to rule contrary to Bullock. "If I could have reached Mr. Bullock's desire in this particular opinion and done it within my constitutional responsibilities and my ethics as a lawyer, I would have done so," he said.

The deficit, however, continues to plague budget writers struggling with an estimated $5 billion additional shortfall between available funds and necessary spending for 1988-1989. Clements, however, has pledged to veto any spending plan that makes up any more than $2.7 billion of that shortfall.

The House Appropriations Committee Monday will take a second stab at drafting an 88-89 budget.

Issues may spur good turnout in Odessa city races

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Absentee voting for Saturday's Odessa city elections closed Tuesday with a total of 367 ballots being cast.

City Secretary Jerri Fielding Sullivan said she believes publicity surrounding some of the candidates and the issues involved should produce a good turnout.

Ballots will be counted in the fifth floor Council Chambers rather than on the first floor as in the last city election.

The names of 11 candidates vying for three Odessa City Council seats will be on municipal ballots Saturday.

Of the three council positions up for grabs only one incumbent, attorney Melissa Hirsch, representing District 4, is seeking re-election. At Large Councilman Sherman Cox and District 3 Councilman Vern Foreman, who ran unsuccessfully for mayor in the last municipal election, are not seeking re-election.

Ms. Hirsch, 34, seeking a third term, faces only one challenger, W.A. "Dub" Kennedy, who owns and operates United Industries Inc.

Campaign financial reports show the District 4 incumbent has collected about $7,400 and spent a near equal amount. Kennedy, 48, in his bid to unseat Ms. Hirsch, has raised and spent close to $6,000.

Six candidates are seeking the at large council position being vacated by Cox. They are: Shirley Huffaker, Ralph Conley, Cathalene Brown Martell, Morgan Lindley, Jerry Gentry and Craig Heap.

Mrs. Huffaker, 51, is a former teacher and longtime member of the Ector County Independent School District Board of Trustees.

Conley, 60, is president of Armor Cote Corp. He is a member of the Medical Center Hospital Board of Trustees and helped found the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center.

Ms. Martell, 42, is an AT&T long distance operator who ran unsuccessfully for the council in the last city elections.

Lindley, 23, is a Realtor and member of the National Association of Realtors. Gentry, 42, owns and operates a wall covering business and is a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Heap, 36, is co-owner of Heap Equipment Co. and member of the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

In the District 3 race, there are three candidates, Delton Brazell, 36, James E. "Jim" Perkins, 69, and Richard "Ricky" Jorgensen, 26.

Brazell is a contractor who has lived in Odessa nearly nine years.

Perkins, a former officer with First State Bank and a co-founder of Bank of the West, served on the ECISD Board of Trustees from 1966 to 1972.

Jorgensen is a co-owner of Judy's Bonding Service.

The issues being raised by the various candidates are wide-ranging, from legislating the morals of Odessans to annexation and offering incentives to lure new industry to the area.

During a March 26 League of Women Voters candidate forum, Conley and Brazell both indicated they would support attempts to legislate morals when they were questioned by Joe Seay, president of Odessans for Decency, about their stand on pornography.

Gentry, Huffaker, Lindley and Ms. Hirsch indicated the council should not attempt to legislate morals, although Gentry and Huffaker indicated they would not oppose regulating the location of adult bookstores.

Ms. Hirsch, who has indicated she'd oppose attempts to ban nude dancing, said she doesn't believe it's her place to legislate morals for Odessans.

Heap, responding to Seay's questions, merely said he was against corruption, gambling and drugs.

Jorgensen stated he was "personally against" abortion and pornography but would abide by existing laws.

Kennedy indicated he would support a ban on nude dancing in the city.

Martell's campaign manager and representative, Herbert Sims, expressed the belief morals can be legislated.

Gentry has come out strongly in favor of annexing all land within Loop 338 that is not currently within the city limits.

Perkins indicated he would favor offering tax incentives to lure industry to Odessa.

Clements, Legislature at odds over prison bill

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The governor and the Legislature Thursday were poised for their first major showdown of the session as Gov. Bill Clements considered vetoing a private prison bill that both chambers passed overwhelmingly.

Although Clements said he supports the concept of privately built and operated prisons, the Republican governor wants final oversight of all contracts with private prisons firms — a power the Democrat-controlled Legislature has refused to give him.

Sen. Ray Farabee, the Senate sponsor of the bill, had delayed a vote on the package at the urging of Clement's chief of staff Hilary Doran and the governor's lobbyist, Jim Kaster. Doran and Kaster offered several different amendments to give the governor — and the speaker and lieutenant governor — final review of the contracts, but none were acceptable to Farabee or Rep. Clint Hackney, the House sponsor.

During House debate on the bill — which passed with 122 votes in the 150-member House — Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, offered an amendment to give the governor contract-review powers. House members voted that amendment down by a 2-1 margin.

As Clements continued talk of a veto, lawmakers were talking override. "I think it's just too important not to override," said Hackney, D-Houston. "He's really playing games with something that's too important for games. We delayed it for a while. He should have signed it three weeks ago."

Lawmen arrest eight in separate drug raids

From Staff Reports

Eight people remained in custody this morning after their Thursday arrest for possession of narcotics in separate raids by Midland lawmen.

According to reports from the Midland County Sheriff's office, three people were arrested at the Quinten's Walk Apartments about 10:40 a.m. after authorities received a Crime Stoppers tip and obtained a search warrant from Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Nabbed were a man and two women, and 35 grams of methamphetamine and more than $1,300 cash were confiscated, reports said.

The trio are expected to be charged with possession of methamphetamine, authorities said.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said the bust halted a "fairly large" methamphetamine distribution network.

Midland police narcotics officers, patrol officers, and officers from the Midland County District Attorney's office arrested five people, including a San Antonio resident, following a raid on an east Midland residence.

According to reports, three men and two women were arrested at a residence in the 1800 block of East Hemlock Avenue at 10:15 p.m. A half-ounce of cocaine and a "usable" amount of marijuana were confiscated, reports said.

Police said those arrested, ranging in ages from 21 to 29, would be charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute.

Police also are investigating the burglary of a residence in the 4400 block of Lanham Avenue. According to reports, an AM-FM cassette player with clock valued at $165, two speakers valued at $140, and an graphic equalizer valued at $40 were stolen. Reports said the burglary occurred between 10 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. Thursday.

In other reports, a man's gold watch valued at $350 was reported stolen from a residence in the 300 block of East Pine. Reports said the burglary occurred between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Thursday.

Senate OKs bill requiring school bus seat belts

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill requiring safety belts and sturdier seat backs on public school buses gained approval in the Senate Thursday.

The measure would require all passenger seats in public school buses purchased or leased after Jan. 1, 1988, to have safety belts and padded seat backs at least 28 inches high.

The seats and safety belts would have to comply with standards of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

"Studies show that injuries and lives would be saved with the installation of seat belts and higher seat backs," sponsor Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, said in his analysis of the proposal. "Proponents also feel that because children are required to fasten their seat belts in passenger cars, this should be carried over to the school bus."

The Legislative Budget Board estimated that adding safety belts and sturdier seats would cost about $4,000 per bus, resulting in an annual cost to local school districts of about $7 million to $7.5 million, including maintenance and repairs, over the next five years.

Under an amendment to the bill, local school districts would have the option of adopting and enforcing rules requiring students to wear the belts. But the districts would have to teach students the proper way to use the belts.

The bill also would exempt school bus drivers from liabilities in the event a student not wearing a safety belt is injured. It also stipulates that the use or non-use of safety belts could not be used as admissible evidence in civil trials.

In other action, the Senate approved a bill by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, that would give operators of grain warehouses the authority to dispose of unclaimed grain in a warehouse.

"Under current Texas law, there is no provision for the termination of storage of abandoned or unclaimed grain in a warehouse," Sarpalius said in the bill's analysis. "This deficiency in the law creates bookkeeping irregularities and causes warehousemen to incur certain unnecessary continuing storage expenses."

Another provision of the bill would lower the rate of the bond required of operators of grain warehouses. Since Jan. 1, Sarpalius said, bonding companies have lost more than $600,000 from grain elevator failures, raising costs and making it difficult for elevator owners to obtain bonding.

The Senate also approved a measure that would authorize the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to conduct criminal background checks on contractors' employees who have direct contact with the mentally ill or mentally retarded.

On the local bill calendar, the Senate approved a measure by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, that would require all universities, colleges and junior colleges to report the performance levels of freshmen to the high schools from which they were graduated.

DEATHS

Arlee Pardue

Arlee Pardue, 72, of Midland, died Tuesday at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be Saturday at 11 a.m. at Alexander Temple Church of God in Christ with the Rev. C.S. Johnson officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Mrs. Pardue was born Feb. 20, 1915, in Austin. She had been a Midland resident for the past 55 years. She married John L. Pardue in Midland in 1934.

She was a Sunday school teacher and Bible Band teacher at Alexander Church of God in Christ.

Survivors include her husband; five daughters, Ineasie Lacefield of Park Forest, Ill., Addie Von Siebenhoven, Vashti Hines and Penolia Pardue, all of Midland, and Johnnie Mae Causey of Chicago Heights, Ill.; three sons, Herman L. Honorary pallbearers will be Monty Dedrick, Sherman Dedrick, Shelby Hines, Justin Hines, Jeremy Charles and Wayne Lacefield.

Lillie Walvoord

Services for Lillie Walvoord of Midland were to be today at 11 a.m. in the chapel of First Baptist Church with the Revs. Charles Elliott and W.K. Schmidt officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be David Walvoord, Lee Hudspeth, Timothy Knight, Paul Becker, Michael Stoltz and Smith Ray.

Helen M. Rucker

Helen M. Rucker, 61, of Midland, died suddenly at her home Thursday morning.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Joseph Schley, pastor of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Rucker was born June 20, 1925, in Memphis, Tenn. She was reared in Abilene and attended school there. She graduated from McMurry College in Abilene with a degree in education. She moved to Midland in 1949 and began her teaching career at Midland High School. She also taught at Trinity School and was currently teaching at Permian High School.

She was a member of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

Survivors include two sons, Dean Rucker of Midland and Douglas Rucker of Dallas; two daughters, Carol Jane McCoy of Columbus, Ohio, and Lynne R. Synatschk of Midland; and four grandchildren.

Myra M. Thomas

SLIDELL, La. — Myra M. Thomas, a 44-year-old former Midland resident, died Tuesday at a Slidell, La., hospital.

Services were to be today at 3 p.m. at the Marion United Methodist Church in Marion, La., with the Revs. Leon Sims and Faye Barr-Hartung officiating. Burial was to be at the Roark Cemetery, near Marion, under the direction of Kilpatrick Funeral Home of Farmerville, La.

Mrs. Thomas, a native of Monroe, La., and her family were Midland residents until moving to Slidell in 1986. She was a member of Crestview Baptist Church here.

Survivors include her husband, Gene Thomas of Slidell, La.; three daughters, Tammy Hulme of Plano, and Terri Thomas and Tommie Thomas, both of Slidell; one son, Jim Thomas of Slidell; one grandson; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Henry of Marion, La.; two sisters, Doris Henry of Farmerville, La. and Julia Rhodes of Monroe, La.; and two nieces and one nephew.

Pallbearers were to be first cousins.

Betty Patterson

Betty Patterson, 76, of Midland, died Wednesday evening at a local hospital.

Services will be at 1 p.m. Monday at the McConaty Funeral Home Chapel in Denver, Co., with the Monsignor Jones of the Church of the Risen Christ officiating. Burial will be at Mt. Olivet Cemetery in Denver, Colo., under the direction of McConaty Funeral Home. Local arrangements were handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Patterson was born June 9, 1910, in Leadville, Co. She spent her early life and attended school there. She married George E. Patterson in Leadville in 1935. They continued to reside there until 1941. At that time they moved to Denver, Co., and she became associated with Sears at the Cherry Creek store. She was with them for almost 20 years.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1954. She continued to reside in Denver until 1979, when she moved to Midland.

She was a member of St. Vincent dePaul Church in Denver and of St. Ann's Catholic Church in Midland.

Survivors include one son, George Patterson of Midland and four grandchildren.

Ernell S. Porter

HAMPTON, Ark. — Ernell Smith Porter, 63-year-old mother of Carolyn Strickland Wallum and Ethel Seybert of Midland, died Tuesday in Hampton, Ark.

Services were held Thursday in Hampton, Ark.

Other survivors include one son, William F. Strickland of Lewisville; five grandchildren; and two brothers, Carl F. Smith of Odessa and F.E. Smith of Hampton, Ark.

Cisneros says election will be close

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Henry Cisneros, the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city, says voting in his quest for a fourth term will be closer than expected Saturday because his supporters have been lulled into thinking he'll win by a landslide.

Cisneros, 39, is confident of victory over four other candidates, however, and is concentrating on getting voter approval on a $23.6 million public safety bond package.

One of Cisneros' challengers includes a former city councilman who said the mayor has prospered politically while the city has deteriorated financially.

"The opposition is hard and firm in their view and they will be out and most folks who are supporters of ours will not be out," Cisneros said Thursday.

"They are not as intense about this election. Things are going well and they have no reason to come out, and as a result, the election will be a lot closer than most expect," predicted Cisneros, who was elected to his first mayoral term in 1981.

Cisneros, who political observers say is destined for higher office, said he wants to remain mayor to continue several projects he and the City Council began during the past term.

Mayor Henry Cisneros

Cisneros insists being mayor is tougher than any other elected position he might hold.

"There's no way to get away from this job," Cisneros said. "You get away for an afternoon and you have a train derailment and you got to rush back. You get away for the weekend and you have another crisis. I think mayor is more intense than anything else."

Former City Councilman Phil Pyndus, who ran against Cisneros in 1985, is his main challenger again this year.

Pyndus, 65, said spending is up, while city revenues are down and that Cisneros has not been able to attract major companies to San Antonio, the nation's 10th-largest city.

"I think people are sick and tired of Henry, absolutely, positively, from every sector in the city," Pyndus said. "If you ask the question right now, 'Who is better off after six years, San Antonio or Henry?' the city has deteriorated and Cisneros has a brilliant career."

Pyndus also said the mayor should have taken a bigger role in the scandal at the police department that erupted last year after one policeman shot and killed another officer described as a vigilante.

The shooting cost two police chiefs their jobs and sparked a federal investigation.

But Cisneros' advisers predict he will win by a wide margin as he did in 1985 and they dispute claims that the city's in poor financial shape.

Robert Marbut Jr., one of the mayor's campaign assistants, said Cisneros participates in openings of new companies each week and travels nationwide to attract businesses to the city.

He said the mayor is pushing the public safety bond package that calls for a police training facility, a police substation and renovations to police and fire stations.

"The public safety bonds are close to his heart," Marbut said. "He thinks we need them because of the crime situation increasing throughout the country and Texas, and we want to be able to have the best training facilities for police to respond to crimes," Marbut said.

Another Cisneros adviser, George Shipley of Austin, said Cisneros has not been seriously threatened by Pyndus, although he said Pyndus' campaign has received support from the National Republican Comittee.

Water commission director asked to step down, newspaper reports

DALLAS (AP) — The executive director of the Texas Water Commission has been asked to step down after complaints he did not keep the commission informed about his actions and those of his staff.

Ralph Roming, one of the three commission members, wrote a letter to Larry Soward asking for his immediate resignation, the Dallas Morning News reported.

Soward, who has been executive director since September 1985, could not be reached for comment Thursday.

In a letter dated Wednesday, Roming wrote, "You and I have discussed on many occasions the absolute necessity of me being completely informed." He said, "Your refusal to cooperate is nothing less than insubordination. I have been embarrassed and made to look like a fool in the past by your actions along these lines."

But commission chairman Paul Hopkins said he opposes removing Soward, defending him as a "great public servant who deserves better treatment than this."

"He'll do more in 24 hours than Commissioner Roming will do in 10 years," Hopkins said.

The third commissioner, John Houchins, said he is undecided. "I, too, have been dissatisfied at some of the actions taken by the executive director. I share many of Mr. Roming's concerns."

Houchins said the commission likely will decide within two weeks whether to replace the executive director.

Bishop may not get federal aid

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. Education Department officials say they do not think financially troubled Bishop College will be eligible for financial aid by the fall semester as school administrators had hoped.

In order to reclaim its eligibility, the college must show that other colleges will accept its credits in transfer and that its financial status has improved.

"It won't be as early as fall of 1987," an Education Department official said.

Bishop, a small, predominantly black school, lost its entitlement to federal funds, including financial aid to its students, after the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools last week rejected an appeal to reinstate the accreditation it revoked in December.

Dead student's kin await probe of possible hazing

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Relatives of a 25-year-old New Jersey man who collapsed while running laps on a track at Lamar University over the weekend are awaiting the results of an investigation into whether the death was the result of a hazing ritual.

Brenda Thomas of Neptune, N.J., whose brother, Harold A. Thomas, was a student at Lamar University, said Thursday that the family's grief was heightened "by the questionable circumstances by which the exemplary young man was taken from us at such a young age."

Police at the university in Beaumont are trying to determine whether members of a fraternity forced Thomas to run on the university's track in the 75-degree heat last Friday.

Thomas, a junior law enforcement major, died of a cardiac hemorrhage after he collapsed about four miles into the run, university spokesman J. Earl Brickhouse said Thursday.

Thomas' sister said her brother was forced to run as part of a hazing ritual for the Omega Psi Phi fraternity.

Funeral services were scheduled for today at the United Fellowship Baptist Church in Asbury Park, she said.

Brickhouse said the investigation of Thomas' death had not determined whether it involved hazing, which is prohibited by university policy and is a misdemeanor under Texas law.

He said toxicological studies, which would determine if Thomas had taken any drugs or consumed alcohol prior to his death, would not be complete for at least a week.

An attorney for Omega Psi Phi said Thursday that Thomas was not an official pledge of the six-member fraternity. Melvin C. Zeno, a New Orleans lawyer who is legal counsel for the fraternity, said Thomas' application to the fraternity had been rejected, but would not say when or why.

However, Brenda Thomas and her mother, Bertha, said they believe Thomas was actively pledging at the fraternity. The Thomases said he had paid $264 in "pledge dues" and possessed a small necklace charm that identified him as a fraternity pledge.

Zeno said the money Thomas paid to the fraternity was an application fee and not membership dues or pledge dues.

Spring fever infects students at Midland High

By KELLY DODSON

Spring Fever has hit Midland High.

Hope all you Bulldogs had a great spring break. The student body has decided spring break needs to be extended about a month. Everything is in slow motion right now at MHS. However, lots of fun events are happening at the Youth Center.

Today, the freshmen have a lock-in at the MYC. On Sunday, the Boy Scouts will have their meeting from 3-5 p.m. Also, Midland Freshmen is having a dance on Friday, April 10. It will be from 7:30-10:30 p.m. And PDAP will be having a lock in, Saturday, April 11, from 4-7 p.m. Get involved in the Youth Center.

• • •

Seniors, those scholarship deadlines are coming up. Don't forget. Check with your counselor for more information.

• • •

Coming soon to MHS is the "Computer Matching Service." This service will allow a student to fill out a questionnaire that will be compared to all of those of the opposite sex. There will be no charge. A computer printout will let you know who you are most compatible with. Sounds exciting.

• • •

The Student Council is sponsoring the 99th annual "Faculty-Student" basketball game. It will be played the last 30 minutes of 6th period on April 9. You must buy your ticket to get out of class. They are only $1.

• • •

Also, the Student Council is selling ceramic teddy bears and the Bulldog mascot. The bears are $6 and the dogs $7.

• • •

We are really proud of out aqua dogs. They competed in state competition during spring break and really made us proud. Congratulations.

Our track team is doing a great job, too. The next track meet is at our stadium on Saturday, April 11. Don't miss it.

The baseballers have really shown what the Purple Pride is all about. We are currently is second place in the district race.

PRISON

Hackney said he has enough votes to override a Clements veto, but House Speaker Gib Lewis said he was reluctant to challenge the governor this early in the session.

"I don't think we'll have any effort to override," Lewis said. "I just don't think that gives anybody an advantage to get into that fight."

House members, however, said they will push for an override vote if Clements vetoes the bill.

Doran, meanwhile, issued a blistering statement criticizing Hackney for not compromising with the governor. And Clements said he "made every effort possible to bring about some kind of compromise" but Hackney "had a real mindset that (he) didn't want that to happen."

Farabee said he remains confident that Clements will let the bill become law. "I think it would be very unfortunate and poor judgment at this time when the prison doors are closed. He's been a supporter of the private sector and free enterprise," said Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. "I think it (a veto) would be contrary to may of the things he has indicated to the public about the concept of privatization."

The bill clearly has enough support in the Senate, Farabee said, to override a veto.

Some lawmakers have said Clements wants oversight over contracts to avoid former Gov. Mark White and his allies from making money from private prison deals. White visited New York two years ago to meet with officials from Corrections Corporation of America, a leader in the private prison field. Also, White's one-time Secretary of State, John Fainter, once worked for CCA.

Farabee said he asked Clements' staff if the Mark White connection was their real problem with the bill, and "they said it had nothing to do with that. And I believed them."

MATTOX

Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, who Tuesday trashed two weeks worth of committee work, said he still hopes to bring in a spending plan within Clements' bottom line.

"I think that I'm going to have to do some arm twisting to get some people to do some things that maybe their conscience just says they absolutely positively cannot do," Rudd said.

Lewis said he wants the committee only to "objectively" analyze the state's needs and will support more taxes if the committee finds them necessary. Asked if he would lead a fight to override a Clements' veto of any excess spending, Lewis said, "Don't ask me that question, I'm not going to answer you."

Treasurer Ann Richards said Mattox decision does not change the need to borrow $1 billion to cover the state payroll in September.

"If the Legislature is unable to balance the budget through additional revenue or budget cuts and if we do not or cannot issue cash management notes by Sept. 1, our goose will be cooked and the state will be so cash poor that we will bounce hot warrants from El Paso to Beaumont," she said.

Research available firms before hiring termite control service

Minzenmeyer

AGRICULTURE

Termites are commonly found in most areas of Texas, and account for many millions of dollars of damage annually. Subterranean termites live in the soil and are found throughout the state. The probability that wooden structures will be attacked by termites within 10 to 20 years is greater than 70 percent in Texas. Termite attack may even begin within a year after construction. Proper treatment of the soil with termiticidal chemicals before construction (called pretreatment) will eliminate the threat of subterranean termites. Few areas in Texas have pre-treatment ordinances, so few homeowners enjoy such security from termite problems.

If you know or suspect that your home is infested by termites, retain the services of a competent, professional termite control service because termite control requires specialized equipment and knowledge. This article reviews steps which will help you to select a termite control service.

Do not panic. There is no need to become unduly alarmed if you learn that termites are, or may be, attacking your home. Termites work slowly, so your house will not be ruined or collapse overnight.

Take your time. Do not permit anyone to rush you into purchasing termite control services. There is always time to purchase this service wisely at your convenience.

If you are not certain that your home is being attacked by termites, locate reliable pest control firms and discuss their termite control srvices. Arrange a thorough termite inspection, with the knowledge that prices for inspections, estimates and terms can vary significantly between companies. A proper inspection should include a written report which notes the location of areas damaged by either active or inactive termite infestations. An estimated cost for chemical control also should be included. Determine whether the estimate is a firm price and be cautious if it is not. As the consumer you are free to shop, but treat the companies with the same courtesy and respect you hope they will return as pest control professionals.

Purchase services from a reliable firm. Buy termite control services with the same care and discrimination you would use in purchasing any other service for your property. Here are some of the ways that you can investigate before you invest:

— Texas has a pesticide use and applicator law under which all commercial pest control firms must operate. Each firm and each individual will have identification issued by this state agency indicating their certification. Contracts (and certain other documents) must have the following stamped or printed on them: Structural Pest Control Board of Texas, 5555 N. Lamar, Suite 123, Building H. Austin, Texas, 78751, (512) 454-3617.

— If a firm offers references of previous work, take time to check them carefully.

Beware of firms that:

— Quote a price based on the gallonage of material used.

— Profess to have a secret formula or ingredient for termite control.

— Have no listed phone number.

— Show up unexpectedly and use evidence of termites in trees, etc., as an excuse to inspect the house.

— Also want to trim trees and do general foundation repair work as part of the "deal."

— Cater to elderly or inform people who live alone.

— Claim to be endorsed by Texas A&M University.

— Claim to have excess chemical left over from another job and offer a reduced price if they can do the treatment immediately.

Association membership. Membership in the Texas Pest Control Association is evidence that a firm has an established place of business, ascribes to a code of ethics and has access to technical literature for training and consultation.

Know the terms of the contract. Ask your termite control specialist to provide a written statement of the work he proposes to do and an estimate of its cost. He will give you time to consider his estimate. It is customary to guarantee termite control work, either on a year-to-year basis, or for a more extended period. Make sure you know exactly what guarantee the firm offers.

Remember that a guarantee is no better than the person or firm who gives it to you. A guarantee is not evidence that a firm is reliable. Most fraudulent operators use a showy contract and guarantee as part of their sales promotion.

Soil temperature can drastically affect success of vegetable garden

Kiker

Is your green thumb itching to get that vegetable garden planted? Before you start to plant here is something you should be aware of. Soil temperature is more important than you think.

More important than moon signs and more predictable than weather, soil temperature is a variable which drastically affects how seeds and transplants grow. It is a factor which few of us consider important enough to check before planting, yet it is probably the most important factor affecting seed germination and plant growth.

Soil temperatures at which vegetable seed will grow are classified into three categories: the minimum required for seed growth, the optimum temperature and a "realistic" soil temperature.

The realistic temperature is between optimum and minimum temperatures at which gardeners should plant to insure maximum success. For instance, the optimum soil temperature for seed germination of crops such as cucumber, cantaloupe, okra, pumpkin, squash and watermelon is 95 degrees, but the heat of summer will decrease yields and plant vigor. Yet, if a gardener plants when the soil temperature reaches only 60 degrees, the seed will germinate and grow, but not vigorously. Thus, there must be a realistic soil temperature. For the above-mentioned crops, the realistic temperatures for best plant production are (in degrees): cucumber, 64; cantaloupe, 68; okra, 73; pumpkin, 75; squash, 70; and watermelon, 72.

Crops such as beans, cabbage, chard, eggplant, pepper, radishes, tomatoes, turnip and corn have an optimum germination temperature of 85 degrees. Yet the minimum temperature required for certain of these cold-tolerant crops is as low as 40 degrees. The realistic soil temperature for these crops are: beans, 71; beets, 45; cabbage, 54; chard, 54; eggplant, 75; peppers, 64; radishes, 45; tomatoes, 55; turnip, 50; and corn, 55.

As might be expected, those crops which are really cold weather champs such as carrots, parsley, lettuce and spinach have lower optimum temperatures for germination. For instance, the optimum temperature of carrots is 80; parsely and lettuce, 75; and spinach, 70. The minimum temperature for these crops is 35 degrees and the realistic temperature for all of these crops is 45 degrees.

Use of corn sweetener in U.S. expected to rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The per capita use of sweeteners made from corn is expected to exceed U.S. sugar consumption in 1987 for the third straight year, according to Agriculture Department projections.

Back in 1975, Americans were consuming an average of 89.2 pounds of refined sugar, compared with 27.5 pounds of corn sweetener, which then was made up mostly of glucose and dextrose. Only a small part was HFCS — high fructose corn syrup.

But by 1985, per capita sugar consumption dropped to 63.3 pounds while total corn sweeteners climbed to 66.5 pounds per American. Of the corn sweetener total, HFCS accounted for 45 pounds. Glucose and dextrose have been stabilized at 18 and 3.5 pounds, respectively.

"Total U.S. corn sweetener consumption in 1986 is estimated at a record 8.1 million tons, dry weight, up 2 percent from 1985," the department's Economic Research Service says in a new outlook report. "This required 474 million bushels of corn or 6 percent of the 1986 corn crop — about equal to the entire corn production of Ohio, the fifth largest corn producing state."

The total consumption of HFCS rose to 5.53 million tons last year, up only 2.6 percent from 5.39 million tons in 1985. Use of HFCS is projected at 5.65 million tons in 1987, partly from continued displacement of sugar and partly from population and income growth.

"Consumption of glucose and dextrose is expected to rise to 2.7 million tons in 1987, up 100,000 tons (from last year)," the report said. "Growth in dextrose and glucose use is coming mostly from increases in population. Dextrose consumption may face competition in the future from the newly developed crystalline fructose sweetener."

Production of crystalline fructose, Crystar, for the industrial market is expected to begin in midyear, the report said. Initial production is expected to be no more than 50,000 tons, and additional output will depend on market demand.

Estimated consumption of low-calorie sweeteners rose 2.8 percent last year to an average of 18.5 pounds per person, measured on the basis of equivalent sugar.

"Aspartame consumption continues to increase, growing 8 percent in 1986 to 13 pounds per capita," the report said. "Much of this growth was at the expense of saccharin, which fell a half pound on a per capita basis" from six pounds in 1985.

The growth of aspartame, a synthetically produced sweetener, and its substitution for saccharin have been most rapid in soft drinks, particularly diet drinks, the report said.

Australian meat production to increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Australia is expected to produce more meat this year than previously forecast, according to an Agriculture Department report.

Beef production for 1987 may be 1.436 million metric tons, up 2 percent from a forecast last November, the report said. Total cattle slaughter is expected to be about 7.6 million head, an increase of 200,000 head from the November forecast.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

"Very dry pasture conditions in Queensland and favorable market prices are the reasons for the projected rise in slaughter," the report said. "High interest rates may also limit herd expansion if weather conditions improve. Cattle herd growth is currently projected to be about 1 percent this year."

Larger beef output will mean more pressure for Australia to boost exports. And that will mean more low-grade processing beef aimed at the United States and more competition for U.S. exports in some international markets, particularly in the Far East.

Australian livestock numbers are also watched for signs that an expansion might cut into grain production, or that a reduction in animals might mean some increase in grain plantings.

The report, included in a weekly trade review by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, said Australia's sheep inventory began in 1987 at an estimated 159.5 million head, an increase of about one million head from the November forecast due to reduced slaughter and smaller death loss in 1986.

For 1987, production of mutton may total 643,000 tons, up 3 percent from the November estimate and almost 12 percent more than last year's output, the report said. The sharp rise was attributed in part to greater slaughter for export.

"The favorable market for sheep meat and wool caused some expansion of sheep flocks in cereal crop areas last year," the report said.

Easter chicks sometimes have short lives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Easter season always brings out the fuzzy, soft baby chicks for children to see and get as gifts, often to the dismay of humane societies and other animal welfare groups who advise parents on proper ways to handle the young birds.

As a matter of record, the Agriculture Department offers some general statistics on baby chicks: last year's total hatch was a record of 5.01 billion chicks.

Of the total chicks hatched, 424 million were egg-laying types. That left nearly 4.59 billion broiler-type chicks, the kind that are fed, slaughtered and sold a few weeks after hatching, winding up fried or barbecued in backyards and fast-food restaurants.

The egg layers survive a while longer than broilers, but they also are consumed as roasters and ingredients for soups and other processed items.

• • •

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to new foods, the Agriculture Department says researchers at agricultural experiment stations always seem to have something cooking.

Take blueberry raisins, for example. Scientists at the University of Maine came up with vacuum-dried blueberries "with a chewy texture, strong blueberry flavor and a shelf-life of up to one year," a report said last week. That makes them just right for use in breakfast cereals and fruit roll-ups.

Or, chips made from buffalo meat by researchers at South Dakota State University. They're made with unsmoked eye-of-round and "won the praises of sensory evaluation panels after extensive nutrition and cooking studies by university food scientists."

The report also cited soy-based yogurt developed by the University of Illinois, smoked catfish loaf by Mississippi State University, and cheese made from sheep's milk by the University of Minnesota.

Stone leaves MC like an Old Soldier

UTA pledge to excellence wins Jerry

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Jerry Stone paid his last respects to Midland College Thursday, but like General Douglas MacArthur, claimed he would return.

Stone, who accepted the head coaching position at Texas-Arlington this week, cleaned out the remnants of his ultra successful 10-year tenure at MC and held a parting press conference, vowing to "never forget Midland College."

"I've had a great time for 10 years in Midland and I've got some great friends here," Stone said. "I'm not leaving saying 'see you sometime.' I'll be back here and Arlington is not all that far away. It doesn't take much to get a boarding pass and fly in to DFW airport."

BUT RATHER than look back on his success at Midland College — his 80 percent winning percentage, his 1982 national junior college title, his six 30-win seasons, his fourth place finish in 1985 and his runner-up year in 1987, Stone preferred to look to the future of the UTA program.

"I'm going to try and not get emotional like I usually do at times like this, because I know going to UTA is right for me," Stone said. "I feel fortunate to go to UTA because I wanted to stay in Texas and I wanted to stay close to my two daughters, and I can do that from Arlington. It's a break for me.

"(UTA) acted like they really wanted me, they put in a lot of effort, the president came down to meet me, it's a Division I program. And more than that, I feel like it's a school that's sitting with all the potential in the world. They have a commitment to building a winning program."

OFFICIALS at UTA have stated that basketball will become the "showcase" sport at the 23,000 student school located between Dallas and Fort Worth. In 1985 after shrinking attendance and student interest and ballooning athletic budget deficits, UTA dropped football and was expelled from the Southland Conference.

Under Bob "Snake" LeGrand, the Mavericks finished 10-18 last season as an independent. UTA declined to renew LeGrand's contract after 11 years at the school.

So Stone, 45, takes over a program that has nowhere to go but up. Next season, the Mavericks will return to the Southland Conference after a one year absence, and with the SLC affiliation comes an automatic NCAA bid to the winner of the conference tournament.

"We're going to make a great effort to win that tournament next year," Stone said. "I know we can go in there and turn it around pretty quick. And once you get into the final 64, things can happen."

UTA RETURNS all but two players from last year's team, and Stone is certain to look to the junior college ranks to bolster his roster. Though NCAA regulations prohibit him from commenting on particular players during the recruiting process, it is known that Stone would like to bring a couple of Midland College players to UTA with him. The NCAA's national signing period begins April 8.

But Stone's memories of building the Chaparral program are many and he couldn't resist recounting some of his most memorable teams and personalities.

"Of course I'll always remember the 1982 championship team with Spud (Webb), but there are so many good memories. I remember the '85 team that really overachieved and finished fourth, with Vernon Coleman who may not have belonged on a major college team but worked so hard.

"And this year's team. This year was probably the most interesting team I ever coached. We had one of the strongest freshman classes I've ever had and they would just come in there and make us go. And Todd Duncan, he improved more than any player I've ever coached. If someone would have told me last year he'd be recruited by some major colleges, I would have laughed.

"That San Jac game was probably the most emotional game I ever coached because they mistreated us so many times. Beating them in the second round in Hutchinson (Kan.) meant so much to me, to the players, and probably even more to our fans. It was a sweet victory because we were always No. 2 in Texas.

"THEN there are some players who really helped develop this program who would have fit right into what we've been doing the last few years. The first real name I ever recruited, Cullen Mayfield from South Oak Cliff. Charles Johnson from Midland High and Robert Tate.

"I'm proud of everything we do here and all the people who have helped me along the way, from Dr. (Jess) Parrish on down. And now I am getting emotional like I said I wouldn't. But I'll never forget Midland College, never."

Hagler out to open some eyes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler hopes to open some eyes in Monday's middleweight title bout against Sugar Ray Leonard.

"Just because he won a gold medal and became America's sweetheart, doesn't mean I'm a bum," said the champion.

Leonard, a gold medal winner in the Olympics 12 years ago, has had two fights in 62 months, the last a ninth round KO of Kevin Howard in May 1984.

Hagler says, "I don't believe he has any business in there with me right now. He's been sitting on the other side of the ring and thinking he has the tools to do it.

"That's great. It makes me a lot of money."

Hagler is guaranteed $12 million, and promoter Bob Arum said that Hagler, who also has a percentage deal, should get at least $15 million. Leonard is guaranteed $11 million.

Hagler likes the challenge. "I need a new breath of air, like something to motivate me." Leonard underwent retinal surgery that prompted him to retired in 1982.

"I'm not thinking about his eye," Hagler said. "He's the one that made the choice. I'm going in there to do a job. My job is to defend the world middleweight championship."

Both fighters were given physical examinations conducted by the Nevada State Athletic Commission Tuesday night.

Hagler was a 2½-1 favorite for the bout at a soldout 15,300-seat outdoor stadium. It is being sanctioned as title fight by the World Boxing Council.

Leonard also said he will retired again, win or lose.

Asked about his plans, Hagler said, "I like to take one step at a time. I'll see what happens. I'm only two fights from breaking Carlos Monzon's record.

Should Hagler beat Leonard, he would need two victories to break Monzon's record of 14 successful middleweight title defenses.

One who thinks Leonard will deny Hagler a chance to make history is Thomas Hearns.

Hearns' only two losses were on a 14th round knockout to Leonard for the undisputed welterweight title Sept. 16, 1981, and on a third-round knockout in a challenge to Hagler April 15, 1985.

Hearns said, "Ray will outbox him. A big factor is the big toll of tough fights Marvin has had."

"I just hope the result will be the same as when I fought Tommy," Hagler said.

Closed Circuit TV scheduled

From Staff Reports

Fight fans take heart, the "SuperFight" between Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Sugar Ray Leonard will be seen on closed circuit television in the Tall City.

Monday night's middleweight title clash between boxing's two biggest names can be viewed at either the Midland Center or the Convention Center at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Tickets can be purchased at both locations, and at the Holiday Inn in Odessa, for $20 general admission and $25 reserved. There are about 3,000 seats available in all so officials advise you purchase tickets in advance.

Also to be seen on the closed circuit broadcast will be middleweight fights between James "The Heat" Kitchen and Juan Roldan, and a junior middleweight title fight between Duane Thomas and Lupe Aquino. The undercard begins at 8 p.m. with the Hagler-Leonard bout beginning approximately 10 p.m.

....arrives for treatment

Mets' star checks into rehab center

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden checked into a New York drug rehabilitation center Thursday to begin treatment for cocaine use while the World Series champion Mets juggled their plans to start the season.

Gooden, dressed in a brown pinstripe suit, walked briskly into the Smithers Alcoholism and Treatment Center accompanied by men who kept reporters from talking with him. A van met Gooden's Delta Air Lines flight from his home in Tampa to LaGuardia Airport on the tarmac and whisked him to the facility on Manhattan's fashionable East Side, a block from Central Park.

It was not known how long Gooden, 22, would remain at the center. The average rehabilitation period at Smithers is 28 days, said Joyce Walker, in charge of community liaision for the center.

Gooden was placed on the 15-day disabled list. His attorney, Charles Ehrlich, said the pitcher "hopefully will be back in four to six weeks" while Mets General Manager Frank Cashen said his "gut feeling" was Gooden would miss at least two months.

"Cocaine is a very serious thing and not easy to conquer," said teammate Keith Hernandez, among 11 players who were conditionally suspended by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth in March 1986 for their connection with cocaine. Gooden checked into Smithers a day after the Mets, in a surprise statement, said a voluntary test revealed their ace had a "drug use problem." Gooden chose to seek treatment rather than face suspension by Ueberroth.

The announcement came less than a week before Gooden was scheduled to start opening day against Pittsburgh at soldout Shea Stadium. Bobby Ojeda, 4-0 with an 0.68 earned run average against the Pirates last season, will pitch Tuesday in place of Gooden, who is 6-0 with a 1.49 ERA in his career versus Pittsburgh.

Gooden's trouble, along with hernia surgery Monday that will put reliever Roger McDowell out of action for two months, took a big chunk out of the best pitching staff in baseball. Rookie Dave Cone, acquired last week in a trade with Kansas City, is expected to join the Mets' starting rotation.

"This whole week has been a shock," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said.

Johnson and his players maintain they had no idea Gooden had any kind of drug problem. Rumors linking Gooden and cocaine began surfacing last summer as the often-brilliant pitcher became inconsistent for the first time in his career.

Often sweating heavily and struggling with control — characteristics he never displayed in the past — his record fell from 24-4 in 1985, when he won the National League Cy Young award, to 17-6 while his ERA rose from 1.53 to 2.84.

Gooden also continued to be involved in a string of off-the-field incidents, capped by a fight with Tampa police Dec. 13 that led to felony charges. Gooden pleaded no contest and was placed on probation.

Oliveras holds breath on lineup

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

With their Texas League opener at Angels Stadium just five days away, Midland Angels manager Max Oliveras and pitching coach Chuck Hernandez know little about the make up of their opening day lineup.

The defending American League West champions and the AAA Edmonton Trappers are still taking their pick of the organization's talent, but Oliveras expects Midland to continue to be the training ground for some of the Angels' finest talent.

"We're still meeting every day, discussing roster moves and additions," Oliveras said from the club's Mesa office in Gene Autry Stadium. "Right now we still expect a lot of changes to be made, but we should have things settled by Saturday."

A potpourri of players, some who will be making the trip to the Tall City for the opener April 7 against the Wichita Pilots and some who won't, has gone a disappointing 2-5 in exhibition play. But Oliveras has been impressed with the talent he has seen.

"We've been playing well but not winning much so far, but we expect some players to be moved down from AAA in the next few days," Oliveras said.

ONE THING that appears set for opening day is that righthander David Martinez will draw the pitching assignment. Martinez was 6-4 at Palm Springs last season but was very impressive in winter instructional league play. A native of Austin's Travis High and Blinn Junior College, Martinez was placed on California's 40-man roster for the first time this spring. He was a first round selection in the 1984 draft.

Joining Martinez in Midland's probable rotation are a pair of holdovers from last season, Phil Venturino and Mike Romanovsky and Marty Reed, making the move from the Carolina League.

Venturino and Romanovsky received mid-season call ups from Class A Palm Springs and were not effective in their half season stints. After a 7-0 start and 3.07 ERA in the California League, Venturino stumbled to a 2-6, 7.21 mark in the Texas League.

Romanovsky experienced a similar up-and-down season. In Palm Springs the lefthander was 9-2, 2.86, but was bounced for a 3-5, 6.12 mark at Midland. Oliveras and pitching coach Hernandez can only hope that the half-year of seasoning has better prepared both pitchers for a full season in Class AA.

Umpires would rather strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league umpires, still far apart in contract talks with baseball, would rather strike the start of the season than work without an agreement, their lawyer said Thursday.

Richie Phillips, attorney for the umpires' union, said "no real progress" was made in an afternoon negotiation with Robert Kheel, who represents the American and National Leagues.

"The mood of the umpires is to withhold services now if that is what it will take to get a fair settlement," Phillips said. "I don't think they want to wait and have a work stoppage later in the season. I think the leagues feel that way, too."

Kheel said Phillips "has never threatened a strike to my face," but acknowledged "it's certainly a possibility we're aware of."

AL President Bobby Brown and NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti have instructed all teams to have substitute umpires ready in case there is a strike. The regular season begins Monday.

Line forms on right for Jerry Stone's successor

At his farewell press conference Thursday, Jerry Stone was reluctant to sever ties with Midland.

UT-Arlington, he reasons, is close enough, so that lines of communication with old friends may be stretched a bit, but certainly not broken. He expects to remain in contact.

And after 10 years in Midland, he leaves a nasty situation for his successor, even though the line forms on the right and may be a mile long by the time Athletic Director Delnor Poss gets back from the NJCAA coaches meeting, where word was expected to spread like wildfire.

And it's probably just as well that most don't realize they are candidates to succeed the John Wooden and Bear Bryant of Midland College basketball.

STONE HAS left behind a winning tradition that will be hard to match, and also the fans who expect it to continue. He also leaves behind a supportive community, hyper active boosters who back the program to the hilt, an envy-inspiring facility and, maybe most important, a reputation that Midland College is something special in juco basketball.

It's hard to begrudge Stone his opportunity. At 45, it was time for a new challenge. "I coached in Richardson and going back to the Dallas-Fort Worth area is like going home."

The Dallas-Fort Worth area also has proven a happy recruiting grounds for MC and, as he points out, he knows the coaches in the area and the junior college coaches. "It's not like going off to a Division I school in New Jersey."

UTA also evinced a commitment to a winning basketball program and the Mavericks also play in the Southland Conference, which gets an automatic invitation to the NCAA Field of 64.

"They really want to build a program," says Jerry and with that kind of attitude he feels with the "right two or three players, I know we can turn the program around pretty quick."

Perhaps the big negative is the gym. "But it's a negative only when you come from a place like Midland. I think we can use it to our advantage. Besides, players don't want to hear promises about something that will be finished after they are gone."

The other negative is that "a lot of people up there question whether I can coach and recruit on a four-year level. I have the confidence that I can."

Possibly another negative was that with the hiring of Stone, a trip to Hawaii was canceled. "They felt with a new coach and all, it would be better to open at home, may be next year we'll go."

UTA, nevertheless, will undertake an ambitious schedule. Included are Idaho, home-and-home, Pepperdine, Fullerton, Texas Tech and Rice.

Stone inadvertently let slip the real reason he took the job, "I get to play in the Colonial Pro-Am."

The thought that MC might become a pipeline for UTA was quickly dissipated, although Stone plans to use the junior colleges as a talent source. He just doesn't plan to try to dictate.

"There's not as much of placing of talent as people think," he said. "In my 10 years here, we had two players placed here and neither lasted through the Christmas break."

As far as the haste with which he accepted the job, especially since an inviting opportunity like Wyoming opened up just as he was interviewing for at UTA. "All the coaches I talked to at the Final Four in New Orleans thought UTA was the place I should go. Wyoming, they said, had a great year, but was losing all its players."

At least, Stone was wise enough not to follow the Dean Smith of Wyoming basketball. Better to rebuild a program that has fallen on hard times than to save one that is burning to the ground.

Every club has its Achilles heel

Associated Press

AL EAST

The American League East, once the most brutal division in baseball, could have its best race ever this season because there are no killer teams — just a lot of good ones.

"Every club has its Achilles' heel," New York Yankees' star Don Mattingly said.

Most AL East teams will shoot themselves in the foot because of pitching.

Defending champion Boston doesn't have AL Most Valuable Player and Cy Young winner Roger Clemens in camp. Toronto's Dave Stieb and Detroit's Dan Petry are coming back from injuries and off-years.

The New York Yankees, waiting for Rick Rhoden's rib muscles to heal, will start Tommy John in the second game of the season.

Managers say their pitching plans are wide open (Read: They're hoping for a small miracle.)

No one is hoping more than the Cleveland Indians.

They scored more runs than anyone else last season, enough to get over .500 for the first time since 1979. Still, the worst pitching in the majors left them 11½ games behind, albeit the closest they'd been to the top since 1959.

In the last 30 years, no team or city has taken as much abuse as Cleveland. But, the joke might be on everyone else in 1987.

"You're only as good as the guys around you, and right now I've got a great supporting cast," said Joe Carter, who led the majors with 121 runs batted in last season.

Can Cleveland's pitching hold up? It may not be great or even good, but it might be enough.

In 1987, let's say Cleveland, New York, Toronto, Boston, Detroit, Milwaukee and Baltimore.

Cleveland Indians

A roster full of hitters enabled the Indians to improve from 60-102 in 1985 to 84-78 last season, only the ninth time in major-league history a team has jumped from 100 losses to over .500 in one year.

Carter, at age 27, (.302, 29 home runs, 29 stolen bases) and 24-year-old Cory Snyder (24 HR, 69 RBI in 103 games) are impact players. Brook Jacoby, Mel Hall, Tony Bernazard and Andre Thornton all hit 17 homers. Pat Tabler, the bases-loaded whiz, batted .326 and Julio Franco hit .306.

The Indians needed a catcher so they signed free agent Rick Dempsey, hoping he can bring a winning attitude, some pop at the plate and help in shoring up Cleveland's 157 errors, second-most in the majors.

Knuckleballers Tom Candiotti (16-12) and 48-year-old Phil Niekro (11-11) can throw forever. Greg Swindell, shelled by Boston in a 24-5 loss in his major-league debut, recovered to go 5-2. Ken Schrom (14-7 despite a 4.54 ERA) and reliever-turned-starter Scott Bailes (10-10) have to pitch well, as does stopper Ernie Camacho (20 saves, 4.08 ERA) and free agent Ed Vande Berg.

New York Yankees

Like the Indians, New York was good-hit, no-so-good pitch in 1986. That made it hard to understand why the Yankees left free agent Jack Morris out in the cold this winter.

Mattingly (.352, 31 HR, 113 RBI) may be one of the best Yankees ever — his numbers after three full seasons are better than Lou Gehrig and Mickey Mantle.

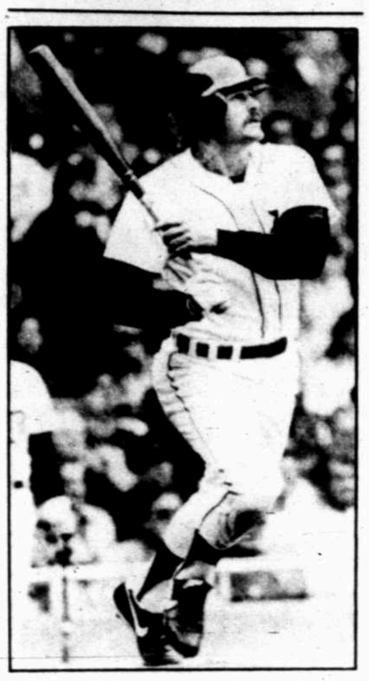
Dave Winfield drove in at least 100 runs for the fifth straight year. But Winfield (.262) and Rickey Henderson (.263, 28 HR, 87 SB) saw their averages drop to career lows. Mike Pagliarulo hit only .238 but had 28 homers, an OK tradeoff. Gary Ward (.316, 51 RBI in 105 games) signed as a free agent.

Rhoden (15-12, 2.84 ERA) may be the needed ace. They got him and pitchers Pat Clements and Cecilio Guante from Pittsburgh for pitchers Doug Drabek, Brian Fisher and Logan Easley. New York also acquired inconsistent Charles Hudson from Philadelphia for DH Mike Easler.

Toronto Blue Jays

The Blue Jays have the best outfield in baseball, but like everyone else, Toronto does not have pitching.

Right fielder Jesse Barfield led the majors with 40 home runs and topped the league with 20 assists. George Bell batted .309 with 31 homers. Each had 108 RBI and both are now millionaires. Center fielder Lloyd Moseby had 21 homers and 86 RBI.



Tigers Kirk Gibson

Shortstop Tony Fernandez (.310, 65 RBI, 25 SB) will be joined by young Kelly Gruber and Manny Lee in the infield. The Blue Jays traded Damaso Garcia to Atlanta for Craig McMurtry (1-6, 4.74 ERA).

Jimmy Key (14-11) is the surest starter while Stieb (7-12) battles elbow pain. Submariner Mark Eichorn (14-6, 10 saves, 1.72 ERA) came from nowhere.

Boston Red Sox

The Red Sox, we all know, were just one strike away from winning the World Series last October. That may as close as Boston gets for a long time.

Without holdout Clemens (24-4, 2.48 ERA), Boston is a .500 team at best. The Red Sox are expecting to get unsigned free agent catcher Rich Gedman on May 1. Free agent Tom Seaver is not coming back.

Wade Boggs (.357, .453 on-base average) wants to bat third, but Manager John McNamara will probably keep him at leadoff. Jim Rice (.324, 20 HR, 110 HR) choked up on the bat and hit the ball toward right field with success. Everyone got to see Bill Buckner (102 RBI) and Calvin Schiraldi (4-2, nine saves, 1.41 ERA) in the postseason.

Detroit Tigers

Jack Morris is back, but Lance Parrish and his bad back are gone. So, too, are the Tigers' chances.

Morris (21-8), the winningest pitcher in the 1980s, is Detroit's only proven starter. Walt Terrell (15-12) and Frank Tanana (12-9) need big years, particularly to compensate for Petry, who went 5-10 in an injury-interrupted season.

Kirk Gibson (28 HR, 86 RBI) and Lou Whitaker (20 HR, 73 RBI) are solid.

Milwaukee Brewers

The Brewers are young and slowly are getting better. In the AL East, though, significant improvement may take awhile.

Teddy Higuera (20-11, 2.79 ERA) needs support from 22-year-old Juan Nieves (11-12) or anyone else. The Brewers traded starter Tim Leary to Los Angeles for inconsistent, but strong Greg Brock (16 HR, 52 RBI).

Robin Yount (.312) is productive wherever he plays. So are young shortstop Earnest Riles and veteran second baseman Jim Gantner, but both suffered off-season injuries and won't start on Opening Day.

New Manager Tom Trebelhorn hopes perennial prospect Brad Komminsk, acquired from Atlanta for Dion James, can help in the oufield.

Baltimore Orioles

The Orioles, once the proudest and best-run team in baseball, hit bottom in 1986 when they finished last for the first time since the sad-sack St. Louis Browns moved to Baltimore in 1954.

Ripken has his son, Cal Jr. (.282, 25 HR, 81) and Eddie Murray (.305, 17 HR, 84 RBI), and a lot of question marks. Maybe Knight, fellow free agent Rick Burleson and Terry Kennedy, acquired from San Diego for Storm Davis, can help.

The Orioles will try to squeeze one more year out of Scott McGregor (11-15) and Mike Flanagan (7-11).

ANGELS

REED, ANOTHER lefthander, rebounded from a 3-11 mark in Redwood in 1985 with a 16-6 record for Kinston in the Class A Carolina League. He was so impressive, California extended Reed a non-roster invitation to the big league camp this spring.

Oliveras mentioned Brian Brady is a good candidate to be in Midland for opening day. Brady spent all of 1986 in Midland, hitting .290 with 11 HRs and 53 RBI and providing a steadying influence in the outfield.

Other players that could be returning to to Midland are catcher Doug Davis, infielder John "Hotchkiss, outfielder David Montanari and pitchers Doug Banning and Vance Lovelace. Newcomers could include pitchers Brian Harvey and Miguel Garcia, third baseman Joe Redfield, infielder Stan Holmes, outfielder Doug Jennings and outfielder Stacey Pettis.

ANGEL NOTES: The Midland Angels season will open with a 10-game homestand April 7 with all games beginning at 7 p.m., except for Sunday April 12 which will begin at 6 p.m. Tickets are still available for all games... Wichita, in its first year after moving from Beaumont, is still the AA franchise of the San Diego Padres. El Paso, which will be in town the for the final five games, has retained its affiliation with the Milwaukee Brewers...

Joe Redfield was obtained in a trade with Atlanta for Stan Cliburn, while Stan Holmes was payment from Minnesota for catcher Steve Liddle... Former Midland Angel Jeff Schaefer was drafted by the Dodgers organization and is currently with Class AAA Albuquerque...

Former Midland manager Joe Maddon will spend the first few days of the season right back in Angels Stadium as the roving hitting instructor. Maddon was moved into his new job after Rick Downs was promoted to a coach for the major league club... Former Midland Angels Mark McLemore (2b) and Devon White (rf) seem to have sewn up starting spots in the California lineup and Mike Cook may make it in the bullpen...

On the flip side, Don Timberlake, a 10-19 pitcher over two seasons with Midland has retired while Randy Harvey and sidearmer Julian Gonzalez have been released...

Celebs sub for Caray on WGN

By RICK WARNER
Associated Press

TV Sports

The Chicago Cubs may be lacking all-stars on the field, but not in the broadcast booth.

WGN will use celebrities to fill in for Harry Caray at the start of the season while the announcer recuperates from a stroke. The scheduled substitutes include CBS sportscaster Brent Musburger, columnist George Will, actor George Wendt of "Cheers," comedian Bill Murray and NBC sportscaster Bob Costas.

Caray may be back in the booth for the Cubs' West Coast trip in early May.

ESPN boxing commentator Al Bernstein can do more with his voice than talk about jabs and uppercuts.

Bernstein will sing at a Las Vegas, Nev., lounge this weekend, the Hagler-Leonard eve of the fight. He will team with Chicago-based vocalist Jill Eisenberg on a variety of jazz, Broadway and contemporary songs.

Bernstein has written several one-woman shows for Eisenberg and appeared in the movie "Streets of Gold."

The closed-circuit telecast of the Hagler-Leonard fight Monday night will include a new twist — super slow-motion.

"I expect some real dramatic things from that camera," says Ross Greenburg, producer of the closed-circuit telecast. "If one of the fighters gets cut, we should be able to show exactly how it happened."

Greenburg says viewers will be pleased by the quality of the super slow-motion replays. "There's no focus problem," he says. "The pictures should be crystal clear."

Greenburg is executive sports producer at HBO, which will telecast a tape of the fight next weekend.

The Aug. 16 preseason game between the Miami Dolphins and Chicago Bears will feature two firsts. It will be the first game played at the Dolphins' new stadium and the first national telecast of an NFL game on cable television.

The game kicks off ESPN's first season of NFL coverage. The cable network will televise three other preseason games and eight Sunday night games over the second half of the regular season.

The other preseason telecasts: Los Angeles Rams at San Diego on Aug. 23, Los Angeles Raiders at Dallas on Aug. 30, and Minnesota at Denver on Sept. 3. All preseason telecasts start at 7 p.m.

Back in Action

Cards' Willie McGee searches for his swing, returning to action just last week after off season surgery.

ESPN's regular-season schedule has not been announced. The network recently signed a three-year contract with the NFL for an estimated $50 million a year.

Reds' Browning ready

Associated Press

Exhibitions

Tom Browning, in his final spring tuneup prior to Opening Day, allowed one run over seven innings as Eric Davis, Terry Francona and Kal Daniels drove in two runs each to give Cincinnati a 6-2 victory over Detroit at Tampa.

Browning is scheduled to open the season for Cincinnati Monday against the Montreal Expos.

White Sox 8, Rangers 5

Chicago right fielder Harold Baines who underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee during the off-season, took himself out of victory after drawing a first-inning walk and scoring from second base.

Kansas City 2, Omaha 1

Mark Gubicza threw seven shutout innings and Willie Wilson had three singles as Kansas City. Wilson singled in the first, stole second, advanced on Kevin Seitzer's ground out and scored on a sacrifice fly by George Brett. Braves 8, Astros 5

Dale Murphy highlighted a four-run seventh inning with a two-run single. Murphy's single came after a single by Jeff Blauser and walks to Andres Thomas and Gary Roenicke.

Twins 8, Yankees 3

Roy Smalley's three-run homer highlighted a 14-hit attack and Minnesota handed New York its seventh straight defeat.

Pirates 3, Mets 2

Bobby Bonilla hit a two-run triple in the seventh inning to lift Pittsburgh over New York. The Mets had taken a 2-0 lead in the fifth on a two-run triple by Kevin McReynolds, who went 4-for-4.

Brewers 3, Cubs 1

Chuck Crim pitched five scoreless innings to lower his spring earned-run average to 1.11 as Milwaukee split squad defeated Chicago. The Brewers, now 6-1 against the Cubs this spring.

Orioles 4, Expos 2

Fred Lynn hit a two-run homer in the top of the 10th inning to lift Baltimore over Montreal.

Red Sox 7, Cardinals 3

A bases-loaded throwing error by newly acquired St. Louis catcher Tony Pena allowed a run to score, breaking a 3-3 tie in the eighth inning.

Phillies 5, Blue Jays 4

Von Hayes hit a three-run homer in the first inning to propel Philadelphia over Toronto.

Brewers 7, Mariners 5

A one-out home run by Charlie O'Brien in the eighth inning snapped a 5-5 tie.

Giants 6, Indians 5

Will Clark's sacrifice fly capped a four-run rally in the sixth and final inning. The game was played with a 2½-hour time limit because of Giants' plans for an afternoon flight to San Francisco. San Francisco shortstop Jose Uribe had a 3-for-3 day and raised his team-leading average to .469.

Gardner works on monologue

By PHIL COLLIER
Copley News Service

Billy Gardner, who has replaced ailing Kansas City Manager Dick Howser, said he is working on a monologue in case he gets invited to go on the "Tonight" Show.

"Did you hear about Bill Buckner trying to commit suicide last winter?" Gardner asked. "He threw himself in front of a car, but it went through his legs."

Meantime, Buckner had this advice for a young writer interested in interviewing him:

"Don't ask me about Roger Clemens," said the hobbling first baseman who lost the sixth game of the 1986 World Series when he booted Mookie Wilson's two-out grounder. "Don't ask me about the World Series. Don't ask me about my ankles."

PITCHING NOTES

Rick Sutcliffe is having problems with his delivery, and it's said the veteran Cubs right-hander hasn't topped 88 mph with his fastball all spring. "All he's throwing is accelerated batting-practice pitches," one scout reported.

The A's are so concerned about their pitching that they may audition Steve Carlton, though he has flunked trials with the Phillies, Giants and White Sox in the past year.

ANGELIC PAST

Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers said he can't believe it has been 27 years since the Angels assembled in Palm Springs for the first workout in club history.

"I was assigned to room with Steve Bilko (the rotund former Pacific Coast League home run king)," Rodgers said. "(Manager) Bill Rigney held a meeting and said: 'I want you guys to dry out for the first two weeks here. No drinking. Maybe we can sneak up on somebody this season.'

"I went back to the (hotel) room after the workout, and Bilko was sitting there, drinking beer with Bob Cerv and a couple of other older players. I had to take all my showers at the ballparks that spring because Bilko filled the bathtub with beer and paid a bellhop to come in every day and keep it iced down."

AROUND THE LEAGUES

San Francisco Manager Roger Craig said he has been asked to serve as a consultant on "The Kid From Tompkinsville," a proposed movie about a pitcher who tries to come back from a back injury suffered in World War II.

Owner Gene Autry said he is tired of running the Angels like a rich man's hobby, but he also said marquees sell the product. "I tend to believe that Reggie (Jackson), more than any of the others (Angels), had an impact on attendance," Autry said recently.

Kansas City center fielder Willie Wilson was talking about the difference a year can make. "Last spring," he said, "I was in the process of getting a divorce. Every time I walked into the clubhouse, there were messages to call this lawyer, call that lawyer. This spring, all I'm worrying about is getting my furniture back."

Two national publications have picked Cleveland to win the tough AL East, but veteran Indians slugger Andre Thornton isn't counting on it. "I'm not a dreamer," he said.

State judge to hear objections to refugee shelter

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A state district judge has rejected arguments that a lawsuit seeking to bar a shelter for Central American refugees from Cameron County should be heard in federal court.

Darrell Hester decided Thursday he will hear arguments in the case, despite claims by defense attorney David Garza the lawsuit belongs in U.S. District Court because it raises a federal issue.

Opponents of Casa Oscar Romero contend the Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, which runs the shelter, is violating federal immigration laws by harboring illegal aliens.

Lee Zieger, one of four Brownsville businessmen who filed the lawsuit, said he would wait to ask for further hearings in the case until after Casa Romero relocates from its home in San Benito to a six-acre site east of here.

The lawsuit alleges the shelter will lower property values and create a nuisance in their neighborhood.

STATE

Public pressure against the shelter prompted the San Benito City Commission last year to order the shelter to leave the city. The church is paying a fine for failing to meet a deadline to move out.

The lawsuit against the diocese, Bishop John Fitzpatrick and the Cameron County Commission claims the shelter "will result in 'people pollution' and will result in harm suffered by the plaintiffs and other persons living at or near the immediate area of the Casa Romero site."

Hester earlier had ruled that the diocese needed to obtain a mobile home park permit to relocate to Brownsville. But to avoid delay, the diocese instead obtained building permits to construct a dormitory and kitchen on the land.

County Attorney Brian Janis said the county, with its limited zoning authority, had no choice but to grant the building permits.

Zieger said his attorney will wait until the shelter moves into its new quarters before requesting an injunction to bar the operation.

Hernan Gonzalez, a spokesman for the diocese, said a moving date has not been set as construction continues at the site east of this border city.

"We still have a lot of work to do," he said.

Zieger, however, said he understands the shelter will open on Easter Sunday, April 19.

"We will request a trial date be set after the Casa opens because at that point they will be a problem in Brownsville and in our neighborhood — that isn't right now," Zieger said.

"It surely will open in Brownsville, no doubt about it," Fitzpatrick said. "Surely some day there will be an end (to the fighting). There are many other things in the Valley to do than fight all the time."

Zieger said keeping the case in state court was a victory for his faction because many more issues could have been raised "and this is what the other side wanted to do."

Steel-shot shells required

AUSTIN (AP) — Mandatory use of non-toxic steel-shot shells will be expanded this hunting season to cover all of five Texas counties, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said Thursday.

Parts of Colorado, Harris, Jefferson, Neuces and Waller counties had been exempt from using the non-toxic shot, but have been added by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's five-year phase-in plan for a nationwide ban on the use of lead shot.

Falling dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against all major currencies in early European trading today.

Currency traders attributed the dollar's decline to renewed speculation that the White House was seeking a lower dollar to narrow the huge U.S. trade deficit.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter was quoted Thursday as telling the Senate Finance Committee that a lower dollar would benefit the nation's trade position.

White House officials said later that Yeutter's comment did not reflect administration thinking, but European traders said today that market sentiment for the dollar remained bearish.

— 1.8158 West German marks, down from 1.8265.

— 1.5140 Swiss francs, down from 1.5240.

— 1.30525 Canadian dollars, down from 1.30855.

The British pound edged back over the $1.60 level, trading at $1.6068, up from $1.5930.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 146.05 Japanese yen, down from 147.05 yen. Traders said the central Bank of Japan bought dollars to support the currency but that the intervention was too small to counter the effects of speculative dollar-selling.

Later today, the dollar was quoted at 146.15 yen in London.

Gold bullion also fell. On the metals market, interest focused on silver bullion, which has been rising steadily in recent weeks on the back of revived industrial demand and speculative trading, and hit a 19-month high of $6.38 in London.

At midmorning, the metal was trading at a bid of $6.38 an ounce in London, up from $6.34 late Thursday. It was silver's highest level here since Aug. 19, 1985, when it closed at $6.39. The morning bid, however, was off from silver's peak of $6.47 in New York late Thursday.

Dow gain small

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices closed modestly higher after an uneventful session on Wall Street Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.40 to 2,320.45.

Advancing issues outpaced decliners by a margin of about 11-to-7, with 940 stocks up, 610 down and 409 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

NYSE volume totaled 182.95 million shares, against 182.63 million the previous session.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 214.23 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index rose .72 to 166.76.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.59 at 335.24. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 432.07, up 3.73.

National joblessness at seven-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment fell slightly to 6.6 percent in March — the lowest rate in seven years — as a decline in the nation's labor force more than made up for a slowing in the rate of new job creation, the government said today.

The number of Americans at work or seeking jobs fell by 127,000 last month, the Labor Department said.

Meanwhile, the number of those listed as unemployed fell 113,000 to 7,854,000. It was the first time that number had sunk below 7.9 million since April 1980.

The jobless rate had been at 6.7 percent for three months, with the number of jobless hovering around 8 million. The rate has not risen since September.

Different Labor Department surveys produced contradictory estimates of job growth in the economy. A survey of households showed employment declining by 14,000 last month, to 111,368,000.

But a survey of industrial payrolls showed 165,000 new jobs were created. Some 35,000 of those jobs were in retail trade; 73,000 were in health and business services.

The explanation for the seeming disparity is this: A person with two jobs is counted only once in the household survey, while each payroll is logged in the other calculation.

"As has been the case during the entire current recovery, the service-producing industries continued to show strong growth ... with about 230,000 over the month," said Janet L. Norwood, the department's commissioner of labor statistics. "The goods-producing sector did not fare so well."

Manufacturing employment declined by 24,000, the payroll survey showed. Construction employment fell by 47,000.

"In March, as winter recedes and good weather sets in, employment generally increases," Ms. Norwood said in testimony to the congressional Joint Economic Committee. "However, the seasonal gains in construction may have been dampened in March because of improvement earlier in the year," which would not normally be true.

The department's calculations are seasonally adjusted in an attempt to remove the effects of routine, periodic factors.

Several private economists had said Thursday that the government's seasonally adjusted job-market figures for the construction industry were skewed because of the unusually mild winter earlier in the year in the Midwest.

While households reported a net loss of 14,000 jobs over the month, the number of married men working grew 187,000, bouncing back from a loss of 189,000 in February.

Employment among wives and unmarried women increased as well, by 78,000 for wives and 27,000 for unmarried female heads of households.

Meanwhile, the number of people working part-time because they could not find full-time jobs fell by 224,000.

The department said that most of the manufacturing job losses last month were in the automobile and electronics and electrical equipment industries. Each of the two has lost about 30,000 jobs over the last year.

Mining employment, which includes the oil and gas industry, stabilized after rapid losses in the first nine months of 1986, when oil prices were plummeting.

In yet another survey, the department said the number of "discouraged workers" — people who want a job but have given up the hunt in the belief they cannot find one — jumped sharply in the first three months of 1987. A total of 1,249,000 people were in the "discouraged" pool, an increase of 89,000 from the last three months of 1986 and a jump of 385,000 over the same period last year.

In the last three months of 1986, 630,000 women and 291,000 blacks said they had given up the hunt for a job out of frustration. Those numbers jumped to 678,000 and 342,000, respectively, in the first three months of this year.

As for March, a separate unemployment calculation, including the 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, also dropped 0.1 percent, to 6.5 percent.

Among various groups, there was little or no month-to-month change in unemployment rates. The department gave this breakdown of March job activity:

—Adult men, 5.8 percent, down from 5.9.

—Adult women, 5.8 percent, unchanged.

—Whites, 5.6, down from 5.7.

—Blacks, 13.9, down from 14.3.

—Teenagers, 18.1, up from 18.0.

—Black teenagers, 37.6, down from 38.9.

Texas job picture improves

DALLAS (AP) — The unemployment rate in Texas continued a downward trend in March, reaching 7.9 percent, as the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics today reported there were 83,000 fewer Texans looking for work last month.

The bureau's regional commissioner, Bryan Richey, described the decline of 0.8 percent as one of the most significant of the last year, when combined with the 0.9 percent drop in February.

"It's been done without any help at all from energy," he said. "On the other hand, there's still underlying weakness in the economy, which is fairly widespread."

The March improvement helped Texas shed the dubious distinction it had held since July 1986 of having the worst unemployment of any of the country's 11 largest states, Richey said.

Michigan's 8.0 percent unemployment rate led the list last month, he added.

However, Richey cautioned that the decline in Texas unemployment could be the result of a shrinking labor force, which totaled just over 8.1 million last month.

Judge: Bankruptcy a viable alternative

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Judge R. Glen Ayers, bankruptcy judge for the Western District of Texas in San Antonio, defended the concept of bankruptcy Thursday, saying it was a necessary legal device in a nation with liberal credit and offered an orderly disposition of creditor assets.

Speaking to the Permian Basin Economics Club at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center, Ayers said bankruptcy filings were down in his district, which includes Midland, but that bankruptcy is still the hottest legal specialty in the state.

He said that if oil prices stabilized immediately, there would still be another three to five years of heavy bankruptcy filings in the state, but not necessarily in the oil industry. He mentioned real estate and other industries as possible bankruptcy candidates.

Ayers said that while some feel the bankruptcy code is flawed, it works well most of the time. He said a discharge to creditors was necessary to get them to tell where the assets are. "It's very simple," said Ayers, "they tell where the assets are and they are discharged of liability. They conceal assets, they go to jail."

He said Chapter 7, which normally involves consumer credit, is the most workable part of the bankruptcy code because it provides an orderly means of identifying assets and liquidating them through a trustee to satisfy debtors.

"It is necessary to have this legal device in a nation which has liberal available credit, because some loans should never have been made and some credit cards never issued," said Ayers. "An orderly liquidation and fresh start makes sense for those taken in by easy credit with no possible way to repay."

Ayers said Chapter 11 is considered by institutions like the Chicago School of Economists to be the most flawed part of the bankruptcy code. He defended the law, however, by pointing out that the orderly provision for reorganization and repayment made more sense than a mad rush to the court house where the first creditors with the resources to pursue a lawsuit win and the rest lose.

"Chapter 11 has been criticized for its delays, which may give a debtor time to reinvest assets, but it takes time to sort out all the assets and get everyone in line. In Chapter 11, everyone sinks or swims together." He added that the law was created during the depression to save companies and to save jobs.

"If you can't get blood from the turnip, it's best to get a slice of the turnip," mused Ayers.

The San Antonio judge told the economics group that Chapter 11 does not work very well when a particular industry is in economic disarray worldwide, because it prevents moving assets from a depressed area to a prosperous areas for liquidation. "When nobody in the world is buying rigs, Chapter 11 and reorganization do not work very well," he said.

He also said Chapter 11 does not work very well when there is no capital. "Many people get in trouble by not filing for bankruptcy soon enough. It is best to file when there is still capital to work with," he explained. He gave as an example an apartment complex owner who waits until a debtor puts a lien on the income from the property, leaving no cash for operations and repairs and forcing the debtor to close the property.

Debtor incompetency is a third reason Chapter 11 sometimes fails, according to Ayres. "You would be surprised how many cases we have involving incompetency," he said. "There are some people in business who could not operate a water stand in the Sahara for a profit."

Ayers also defended Chapter 12 which allows farmers to write down their land to present market value and Chapter 13 which allows debtors to repay debt over a period of five years without interest.

Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Judge R. Glen Ayers, bankruptcy judge for the Western District of Texas in San Antonio, explained and defended the various sections of the bankruptcy code to members of the Permian Basin Economics Club.

Bell, Regal initiate merger talks

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland-based Bell Petroleum Services and Regal International of Houston announced Thursday an agreement to formulate a plan of reorganization in which Bell would become a subsidiary of Regal.

E.E. Runyan, president of Bell, said negotiations on the reorganization are scheduled to begin next week. "We agreed that that there were definite possibilities in our combining," Runyan noted.

He pointed out, however, that Bell is still free to initiate negotiations with an outside party. In fact, after Regal announced its initial interest in Bell in March, a second company immediately expressed interest in merging with Bell.

Runyan said the Fortune 500 company — which he declined to name — sent word last week that it was no longer interested in the firm. "We held talks, they reviewed our company and decided it wouldn't be a good business combination," Runyan said.

Bell Petroleum filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in late November, 1986. In early March, Regal announced it had purchased an option to purchase secured notes on Bell from First City National Bank of Midland. Regal also proposed submitted a plan of reorganization to the U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

GM to pay Perot laywers

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says it will pay the legal expenses of Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot in defending himself against shareholder lawsuits to reverse GM's $700 million buyout of his stock.

GM also revealed that its profits fell $1.5 billion short last year of the U.S. earnings needed to pay profit sharing to its American workers.

Both disclosures came in the No 1 automaker's annuál 10K report filed with the federal Securities and Exchange Commission.

GM's decision to buy out Perot of his stock and related notes in Electronic Data Systems Corp. has prompted 15 state and federal lawsuits, GM said.

GM also repurchased the stock and notes of three other EDS executives for about $50 million, the report said.

Tesoro drops transport fee

From Staff Reports

Keeping pace with other independent crude oil purchasers, Tesoro Crude Oil Co. dropped all transportation and marketing charges in the Permian Basin, effective April 1.

Phil Elliott, Tesoro's western division manager in Midland said that eliminating trucking and marketing charges will affect lease purchases in West Texas and southeast New Mexico.

Tesoro and virtually all other crude oil buyers in the Basin continue to post a $17.50 per barrel price for West Texas Intermediate crude, which they have since mid-March.

IADC not giving up import fee fight

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

"There is no question that there will be another up cycle — maybe even a boom — for the domestic oil and gas industry. The question is: Will that boom be part of a crisis for the rest of our nation?" Ron Tappmeyer, president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors posed that question to members of the group's Permian Basin chapter Thursday night.

"I hope not; it doesn't have to be," he concluded. Tappmeyer's keynote address at Ranchland Hills Country Club included some scathing criticism of the Department of Energy's national security report released last month.

"The conclusions of the DOE report, while offering some long-term benefit to the industry would have no immediate impact on activity. It does a good job of outlining the problems facing us but its recommendations fail to provide the price stability needed to significantly stimulate drilling activity enough to halt our rapidly declining productive capacity," said Tappmeyer, vice chairman of Reading & Bates Drilling Co. in Houston.

The IADC was among the first national petroleum associations to endorse a variable import fee on crude oil and products last year, and Tappmeyer said the group will continue to push for the fee despite the DOE report's repudiation of such a tariff. "It appears to me that the report's main conclusions were pre-determined and politically motivated to focus on the temporary adverse effects of an import fee.

"It doesn't address the impact of $30-, $40- or $50-per barrel oil on consumers while the domestic industry gets our act back together, which is where we could be within three or four years," Tappmeyer said.

He questioned the validity of the evidence on which some of the report findings were based, pointing to the "shocking conflicts with other, competent sources, particularly on estimates of when U.S. crude imports could reach the 50 percent 'danger level'." DOE estimates 1995 as the earliest date for 50 percent import dependence, while the American Petroleum Institute has predicted that the 50 percent threshold could be crossed within three years, in 1990.

"It is vital that some mechanism be instituted this year to ensure oil price stability at a level sufficient to replace reserves and provide economic support for exploration and development of the world's remaining frontier areas," Tappmeyer said.

"Those price levels would obviously support needed exploration and development of more mature oil provinces as well."

Personnel group begins course

The Permian Basin Association of Personnel Consultants will offer certification classes for anyone interested in sitting for their exam to become a certified personnel consultant.

The three-hour classes, scheduled for April 4, 11, 25 and May 2 at 9 a.m., will be conducted by Sandy Hanson, CPS, area training director for the association. She will be assisted by Brenda Hansler, CPC, Snelling & Snelling, Midland; Jane Williams, CPC, Snelling & Snelling, Odessa; Patty Stoltz, CPC, Stoltz Executive Search, Midland; Phyllis Marshall, CPC, Dunhill of Midland; and Alma Byrd, CPC, Jobs Unlimited, Odessa.

Drillers urged to take matters in hand

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

The time has come for drilling contractors and others on the service and supply side of the oil industry to begin taking actions to help themselves, not continue waiting for OPEC or the federal government to make the moves which will improve their business, according to a leading Texas contractor.

Ted Warren, president of FWA Drilling Co., and vice president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors outlined several "dos and don'ts" that contractors need to agree on to get their sector of the industry moving back toward profitability.

DON'T continue to sign any and every contract — with onerous terms and unreasonable provisions — just for the sake of attracting a little business.

DON'T cut rig rates any further; no more than 1 or 2 percent of all contractors are able to meet their full financial obligations at current rates, without further cuts.

DON'T cut wages further; there have been reports of roughneck wages being cut to nearly minimum wage in some areas. The short-term bid advantage from cutting wages isn't worth the sacrifice of competent workers leaving the industry because of depressed pay scales.

DON'T pass through all the benefits of cutbacks and improved efficiency to operators in the form of rock-bottom rig rates.

DON'T keep telling operators that we are making a profit. The 'businessman's ego' that makes contractors downplay the magnitude of their financial problems doesn't compensate for the fact that virtually no contractor is able to cover overhead, depreciation, financial costs and cash operating expenses.

DO realize that contractors are often their own worst enemy and look to fellow contractors for help in improving the overall business outlook.

DO realize that contractors need a 10 percent price increase more than a 10 percent increase in activity — a rate increase will allow a more realistic cash flow on the rigs that are running.

DO move toward 'full-cost' pricing of rig rates to cover all business costs, not just operating expenses.

DO renew efforts to negotiate better operating terms on contracts and in some cases "Just Say No!" to unacceptable risks and rates.

DO make sure that our own house is in order and that operations are working as efficiently as possible.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Amerind records 523 barrel well

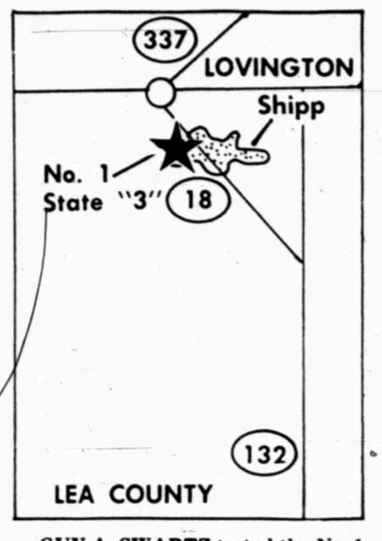
From Staff Reports

AMERIND OIL CO. reports completing a strong new Strawn producer in the Shipp field of Lea County, N.M.

On potential test, the No. 1 State "3" flowed 523 barrels of crude, 597 Mcfd and no water on a 20/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 580 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 11,241 to 11,335 ft. No treatment was reported.

Total depth was 11,373 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and the well was plugged back to 11,348 ft. Pay was topped at 11,241 ft.

Location is 679 ft. from north and 2,130 ft. from east lines of section 3, T17s, R37e.



Lea County producer flows 497 barrels oil

The Casey field of Lea County has gained a new Strawn producer.

UNION TEXAS PETROLEUM CORP. finaled the No. 3 Shipp "34" to flow 497 barrels of crude, 396 Mcfd and no water on a 21/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 365 psi. Production is from perforations 11,271 to 11,374 ft.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 11,516 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 11,474 ft. Pay was topped at 11,174 ft.

Location is 510 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 34, T16s, R37e.

Strawn gas discovery finaled in Schleicher

A San Angelo operator has completed a lower Strawn gas discovery in Schleicher County, south of the Toe Nail field.

GUY A. SWARTZ tested the No. 1 Harkey Ranch for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.07 Mmcfd from perforations 5,530 to 5,532 ft. The interval was acidized with 300 gallons of acid.

The well was drilled to 5,634 ft. and plugged back to 5,536 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,626 ft.

The well topped the Palo Pinto at 4,610 ft., Strawn at 5,388, and the Lower Strawn at 5,530 ft. on ground elevation of 2,437 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 467 ft. from east lines of Section 73, Block H, GH&SA survey, Abst. 1999, 17 miles northeast of Eldorado.

Fusselman producer flows 104 barrels

New Fusselman production has been added to the Luther Southeast (Silurian-Devonian) field of Howard County.

EP OPERATING CO. potentialed the No. 2802 Southeast Luther Fusselman Unit to flow 104 barrels of 44.9 gravity crude, 160 Mcfd and seven barrels of water from perforations 9,868 to 9,896 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,538:1.

Drilled to 9,941 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 9,928 ft.

American Quasar finals plan of reorganization

FORT WORTH (SWN) — American Quasar Petroleum Co. announced the consummation of its previously announced plan of reorganization consisting of the following series of transactions:

Pursuant to its previously announced exchange effers, the company accepted subordinated notes and debentures in the aggregate principal amount of $95,189,150 which were tendered in exchange for 589,683,874 shares of American Quasar Common Stock and Class A Warrants to acquire 234,027,012 additional shares of American Quasar common stock for $0.05 per share. The principal amount of the subordinated debt remaining outstanding is $4,644,080 most of which is now held subject to indentures which were amended in certain respects in connection with the exchange offers.

Outstanding bank debt of $11,700,000 plus an additional $300,000 borrowings for working capital has been financed with RepublicBank Dallas. This senior debt is secured by liens covering substantially all the company's assets.

The remaining outstanding bank debt of $4,786,313 has been acquired by AQPC Ventures which has cancelled such debt in exchange for the issuance of 877,231,463 shares of American Quasar common stock and Class B warrants to acquire an additional 366,429,183 shares of American Quasar common stock for $0.025 per share.

AQPC Ventures has loaned to American Quasar $3,000,000 evidenced by a 15 year non-interest bearing note secured by liens on the company's properties subordinate to the liens held by RepublicBank Dallas.

American Quasar will issue to its stockholders of record on March 30, 1987, Class A warrants to acquire an additional 293,143,346 shares of the company's common stock for $0.05 per share.

As a result of the foregoing transactions, the total issued and outstanding common stock of the company has been increased from 46,419,199 shares to 1,518,334,536 shares (approximately 58 percent of which is now held by AQPC Ventures) before exercise of any of the warrants described above.

Texas Eastern redeems debentures

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., a subsidiary of Texas Eastern Corporation, announced it will use part of the proceeds from the recent sale of units of Petrolane Partners, L.P., a master limited partnership, for the early redemption of its 13 percent debentures due October 15, 2009 and its 12-3/4 percent debentures due September 15, 2008. Each of the debenture issues currently has $100 million principal amount outstanding.

The debentures will be redeemed April 30, 1987 upon notice of redemption to the debentureholders on March 31, 1987, by the trustee, The Chase Manhattan Bank (National Association). The redemption price for the 13 percent debentures will be 111.70 percent of the principal amount and the redemption price for the 12-3/4 percent debentures will be 110.52 percent of the principal amount, plus interest accrued to the redemption date for each issue.

Texas Eastern is headquartered in Houston, Texas. Its major businesses include natural gas and petroleum products pipelines and international oil and gas exploration and production.

Exxon to buy Australian oil firm for $690 million

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, announced that it will acquire a 25 percent stake in Australia's biggest onshore oil and gas production area by buying Delhi Petroleum Pty. Ltd. for $690 million.

Delhi is currently owned by CSR Ltd., an Australian conglomerate. As part of the deal, CSR and Exxon will split equally any earnings due to hikes in oil prices from Delhi production over the next two years, Exxon said.

The purchase, through Exxon's Australian affiliate, reflects Exxon's policy of intensifying its focus on the energy business while shedding non-related holdings.

Last year, Exxon took several steps to streamline operations, including the sales of its Exxon Nuclear Corp. subsidiary; its share of its Manhattan headquarters building and its Reliance Electric Co. subsidiary. In addition, Exxon undertook a massive corporate restructuring that resulted in the departure of more than 6,000 employees.

In the announcement, Exxon said the purchase will give its affiliate, Esso Exploration and Production Australia Inc., its first onshore oil and gas production in that country.

SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Broaden your horizons in the year ahead, but be careful not to spread yourself too thin. Listen to what others have to say, but do not believe everything you hear. A rigid approach could stand between you and success at times. Be more flexible; go along with changes made necessary by high-tech advances.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Dance king Arthur Murray, actor Anthony Perkins, St. Louis Cardinals infielder Tommy Herr, biographer Kitty Kelley, golf's JoAnne Carner, Louisville manager Jim Fregosi, baseball great Gil Hodges, actress Rosemary Lane, Sen. Richard Lugar, Nancy McKeon of "The Facts of Life."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Resist the temptation to go on a buying spree. You may have to make a tax payment soon. Partnerships enjoy favorable influences. A good time to reach binding agreements. A special relationship deepens.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be feeling unappreciated by your family or friends. Do something fun on your own. See a new movie or work on a creative hobby. A telephone call boosts your spirits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A message from faraway loved ones or an unexpected visitor brightens your day. Be prepared for a sudden change in a financial situation. Spend a quiet evening at home with those closest to your heart.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You and your mate may be at odds over the family finances. Patience and tact will help you avoid a major confrontation. By tonight, one-on-one meetings will be enjoyable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good news from an unexpected source could have you packing your bags for a last-minute trip. Do not be surprised if a former flame reenters your life. You enjoy reminiscing about old times.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not press too hard where sensitive issues are concerned. Tread lightly and keep your opinions to yourself. Exercise will help you shape up while relieving tension. Keep any diet resolutions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's events could bring you new recognition from community groups. Accept praise graciously, sharing the limelight with other deserving people. Do everything you can to discourage squabbles between co-workers or family members.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Yesterday's events are not forgotten. Unless you are sensitive to others' moods, someone could explode. Keep smiling and make the best of a difficult situation. Group activities are favored this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Display your communicative skills to best advantage. Expressing your ideas to people in the know will make them sit up and take notice. A profitable new partnership is possible. Press for a commitment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Try to find just the right moment to talk over a troublesome matter with mate or partner. You will probably feel more romantic later in the day. Set aside time for creative endeavors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A romance or marriage becomes more pleasurable. You and mate enjoy new rapport. Life takes on a rosy hue. If planning a wedding, shop around for the best prices for the reception.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Communications return to normal. You could not be more relieved! Try to hold costs down if you decide to do some entertaining.

Opening lead: King of

When this hand was played in a team match, both sides reached a contract of five clubs from the South seat. Both declarers tried to make their contracts by ruffing losers. Only one succeeded.

In both rooms North-South did well to stay clear of three no trump, at which eight tricks are the maximum. Against five clubs both Wests led the king of hearts. At both tables declarer won the ace of hearts, cashed the king and ace of diamonds and led a third round, West following with the ten. Both declarers realized diamonds were likely to split 4-2, but they put their knowledge to use in different ways.

At one table declarer ruffed with dummy's king and drew two rounds of trumps. Had the suit divided evenly, or had the player with the long trump also held the long diamond, the contract would have succeeded. Unfortunately, that was not the case, and declarer had to concede down one. He could rightly claim that he was a little unlucky.

However, the successful declarer combined his ruffing with a loser-on-loser play which left the defense with no recourse. Instead of ruffing the third diamond, he simply discarded dummy's heart loser.

West did the best he could by shifting to a trump. Declarer won in hand and ruffed a heart with a low trump. He reentered the closed hand with a trump and ruffed a diamond with the king, setting up the long diamond. Eventually declarer was able to get to hand by ruffing a major-suit card to draw the last trump and score his game. He lost only one spade trick and one diamond.

Jazzman Buddy Rich dead at 69

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hard-bitten, hot-tempered jazzman Buddy Rich, a self-taught drummer with "the fastest hands in the world," has died after a career spanning vaudeville, the Big Band era and decades on the road. He was 69.

Rich died Thursday at UCLA Medical Center, where he was undergoing outpatient chemotherapy for a brain tumor.

Rich got his start as a song-and-dance prodigy in curly locks at 1½ years old, was earning $1,000 a week at age 15, and played with Big Band leaders Artie Shaw and Tommy Dorsey before starting his own band after World War II.

He stayed on the road into his late 60s, even after open-heart surgery in 1983.

Asked once who was the best drummer in history, the cocky and gregarious Rich didn't skip a beat.

"I am," he said. "Why go through the humble bit? Look at Ted Williams — straight ahead, no tipping of his cap when he belted one out of the ballpark. He knew the name of the game: Do your job. That's all I do. I play my drums."

Frank Sinatra, who financed Rich's first band and often appeared with Rich on stage, said he "could hardly believe the news of Buddy's death, if only because he was so vital and full of life."

"We were friends for such a long time, beginning as roommates with the Tommy Dorsey orchestra. The music world will miss him and, of course, so will I," Sinatra said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Debra Winger and Timothy Hutton have moved into a new beachside home in time for an expected addition to their new family.

Winger

Miss Winger, 31, and Hutton, 26, were married in March 1986 after a three-month courtship and are expecting their first baby in a few weeks, said Paula Askanas, secretary to Winger's publicist. She would not disclose the location of the couple's new home.

The actress recently said she didn't want to wait until she was 40 to have a baby.

"You can have a child at 40, but you can't start a family," Miss Winger said, adding, "Now that I'm pregnant, I get these highs that are unbelievable."

Miss Winger was nominated for an Oscar in 1984 for her role in "Terms of Endearment" and also starred in "Urban Cowboy," "An Officer and a Gentleman," "Legal Eagles" and most recently "Black Widow."

Hutton's movie credits include "Ordinary People," for which he won a best supporting actor Oscar, "Taps," "Daniel" and "Falcon and the Snowman."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Joan Van Ark, who plays Val Ewing on "Knots Landing," says having a TV reporter for a husband helps her keep her career in perspective.

Van Ark

Miss Van Ark has been married for 20 years to John Harshall, veteran reporter for KNBC-TV in Los Angeles.

"His world is different — he lives with facts. My world is fantasy," she said recently.

The actress said she was complaining one day about a problem she encountered during a "Wonder Woman" episode, after her husband had been covering an airliner crash.

"Well, there I was going nuts over a broken fingernail, and he's been walking through bodies," she said. "It kind of puts things in perspective, and I'm grateful for that."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oliver Stone, whose film "Platoon" won four Oscars and has grossed more than $102 million, plans to write and direct a sequel about the painful homecoming of a Vietnam veteran.

Actor Charlie Sheen has expressed interest in reprising his role, which was patterned after the young Stone, John Daly, president of Hemdale Film Corp., said Thursday. He said the sequel will be called "Second Life."

"Platoon," which was based on Stone's experiences as a soldier in Vietnam during 15 months of combat, won the Academy Award for best picture Monday. It also won Stone an Oscar for best director.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Jerry Mathers, who played buck-toothed Beaver Cleaver on television 30 years ago, named the governor and the state cabinet honorary residents of Mayfield.

The mythical town was the setting for the show "Leave It To Beaver," which ran from 1957 to 1963.

Mathers, who now stars in the cable TV series "The New Leave It To Beaver Show," and a co-star who plays his son on the show, Kipp Marcus, visited the capital Thursday to help promote April as cable TV month.

Mathers presented Gov. Bob Martinez and Cabinet members with blue sweaters, each with a yellow "M" on the pocket for Mayfield. He in turn was honored in a resolution as someone who "served as a role model to millions of children" and "transformed a stage image into a permanent part of American folklore."

NEW YORK (AP) — After two months on the job, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater admits that he worries about his daily grillings by the press corps, so much so that ABC correspondent Sam Donaldson haunts his dreams.

"I dream about the questions. I say, 'Donaldson, get the hell out of my bedroom,'" Fitzwater said in an interview published Thursday in The Wall Street Journal.

Despite his nightmares, Fitzwater says he likes the press.

DEAR COPING: I have been reading your column for some time now and I just wanted to say that my wife has really supported me while I have been out of a job.

As a geologist I have had a very difficult time finding a job. In fact, I have had to change professions. My wife not only had to put up with my problems when I lost my job, she has had to support me financially while I am going back to college.

You seem to receive letters from a number of wives who don't seem to know what they should do or say to their husbands who are out of work. My wife is and was very sympathetic and understanding.

She always seemed to have time to listen to my ideas about finding another job, and was very understanding when I couldn't find anything. After her busy day at the office, she still seems to have time to type my letters and papers.

It was and is a very tough time for us and our children, but my wife's attitude and support have carried us all through it with flying colors.

You may not want to print this since it was not a problem, but I wanted to say it anyway. MR. FG

DEAR MR. FG: Thank you for writing. We are very much interested in "the survivors" and how they survive. You and your wife sound like a real team.

Research is mixed in terms of how supportive the wives of professionals typically are of their unemployed husbands.

Most of the evidence suggests that if the husband makes a real attempt to find a job, pitches in around the house with the chores when he is not looking for a job and generally is a "partner," then the relationship is not impaired — often it is improved.

As you have obviously found, it is a two-way street.

DEAR COPING: I have worked for a number of years as a "professional" accountant even though I do not have a college degree. When the company cut back the accountanting staff, I was let go.

I have been looking for a job in the accounting profession but keep being turned down because I don't have my degree. I also think that I am being eliminated because of my age (54).

I have been very disappointed in the response of business to my lack of a degree, as I have almost 30 years of experience. Is this normal? DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Yes. Being older and not having a degree are major barriers to reemployment. Research proves that those who attain "professional" status primarily through experience are more prone to job loss and have greater difficulty becoming reemployed.

Your suspicions about age may be well-founded, as research also indicates that for non-degreed professionals, age is the most important factor in determining the length of unemployment.

Have you considered looking for positions that may not be so rigidly focused on the necessity of being degreed — bookkeeping for example?

Depending upon your economic situation, you also may consider going to college, perhaps at night, to earn your degree.

If you wish to be an accountant, having your degree is important both in terms of getting a job and in keeping a job.

It is never too late to start, or to return, to college. Every day that you wait simply means that it will be that much longer before you finish.

DEAR READERS: For those hearty souls who completed the "Protestant Work Ethic" questionnaire last week, I would like to share the following:

1. Ignoring questions 9 and 12, draw a line connecting all of your answers from the first to the last.

2. Looking at that line, the more to the right of center the line seems to fall, the more you are in agreement with the Protestant Work Ethic.

3. Those questions (10, 16, 17 and 19) that relate to a willingness to work hard in order to make something of one's self are usually the most highly agreed with.

In general, those that are most in agreement with the questions demonstrate interest patterns in occupations that demand a concrete pragmatic orientation toward work. Such people typically place a high value on role-appropriate behavior and conventional occupations.

So for those of you who fall into this category, you may want to avoid those occupations that place a premium on innovations and creativity.

Did you ask your spouse to complete the questionnaire too? If you did, compare the results.

The more divergent they are, the more indicative it is that the two of you are working under different belief systems relative to the role of work in your lives.

DEAR ABBY

Husband wants wife to be a sparkler, not a dud

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife is the best friend I've ever had. I love her and wouldn't hurt her for the world, but she's a dud in bed. We would never have sex if I didn't ask for it. She "accommodates" me without much enthusiasm — as though she's doing me a favor.

I recently had an affair with a lovely woman. We had a wonderful time, doing everything a man and woman can do together, and she absolutely loved it! I finally experienced something I've wanted all my life — to be touched sexually by someone who knew how.

This leaves me with a difficult choice: continue having affairs with women who enjoy sex, or remain frustrated and bitter toward my wife.

I'm not interested in your opinion of me. I would like to know how I can influence my wife to become a Cleopatra so I can share these feelings with her instead of someone else.

For the sake of thousands of dissatisfied men who really love their wives and would rather stay home, please publish your answer. — WASHINGTONIAN

DEAR WASHINGTONIAN: Tell your wife you love her dearly, but her lack of enthusiasm in the bedroom has left you feeling frustrated and deprived.

A mutually satisfying sexual relationship is the result of a joint effort, and professional help is available. In addition to marriage counseling, there are certified sex therapists who work in teams. Check with your local hospital or the medical college of your nearest university for referrals in your area. Forget "affairs." Adultery is not only immoral and illegal — these days it can be fatal.

DEAR ABBY: Since my grandmother's death, family members have made me feel guilty because I asked for the return of gifts I had given her through the years. They say those things now belong to my mother, who may dispose of them as she sees fit. (My mother took care of Grandma in her declining years.)

I disagree. Many times in the last five years, my grandmother TOLD me that she wanted me to have the gifts I had given to her. Nothing was very expensive, but several things had sentimental value.

My question: Was I wrong to ask for the things I wanted returned to me? I was offered nothing of hers even after I offered to pay for certain items. In case you can't read between the lines, I am the black sheep of the family. — BLACK SHEEP

DEAR BLACK SHEEP: You were not "wrong" to have asked that the gifts you had given your grandmother be returned to you because of their sentimental value. But unless your grandmother made specific provisions in writing for you to have them, your chances for getting them are small.

DEAR ABBY: I am 75 years old. Yesterday I went to the eye doctor for an eye examination.

For the first time in my life I had drops put in my eyes to dilate the pupils, then I had a devil of a time driving home. (I turned the wrong way on a one-way street!) No one warned me in advance that I wouldn't be able to see well enough to drive home.

I believe that people who make an appointment with an eye doctor ought to be told on the phone if they will not be able to drive home, so they can have someone go along to drive home. I could have had a serious accident and killed myself — or somebody else. Please print this. — B.E.H. IN PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR B.E.H.: Most nurse-secretaries warn the patients when they make their appointments. And now that you were kind enough to write to tell your story, those who don't, will. (I hope.)

DEAR ABBY: About gifts and no thank-yous: For years I have sent generous birthday checks to my granddaughter — increasing the amount every year, even though I had to wait until I received the canceled check to be sure she received it.

On her 21st birthday, I figured she was old enough to acknowledge my gifts, so I enclosed a little note with my check, saying, "How about a simple thank-you so I'll know this arrived?"

Do you know what she did? She sent back the check — torn in half. I wonder if this has ever happened to any other grandma? — BEWILDERED GRANDMA

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Magazine tells aspects of coin collecting

Copley News Service

Perhaps no other hobby provides the kind of investment possibilities that coin collecting does. Not only are coins valuable because of their age, but they're valuable because of the precious metals they contain. To learn about both aspects of collectible coins, beginning and advanced collectors look to the monthly magazine Coins.

If you'd like to explore this fascinating hobby, you can obtain a sample copy of Coins right here. In it you'll read historical articles and brief vignettes that describe the origins of ancient and modern coins, and learn about their market values. You'll find about the hobby's development here in the United States and around the world. You'll learn the current retail value of coins you possess.

The 94-page sample issue we reviewed includes a number of regular columns and information exchanges. Special features discuss coin designers, errors in the Roosevelt dime series, the best coin investments for beginners, the popularity of the $5 Statue of Liberty Coin, and several of the important people — such as John F. Kennedy — depicted on the faces of U.S. commemorative coins.

American Association of Retired Persons is a growing giant

By GLENN COLLINS
New York Times News Service

"We used to be a sleeping giant — big in numbers but sleeping like a hibernating bear," said Cyril F. Brickfield, the 68-year-old executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons. "But now the bear is awake."

Indeed, the nonprofit colossus, with its 24 million members and $5 membership fee, has adopted an active new stance in a time of prodigious expansion. In the last year alone, its membership increased by 3 million; almost 40 percent of the 61.8 million Americans over the age of 50 are members.

"They have enormous impact, and it seems to me that they're getting more active every year," said Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who heads the House Rules Committee.

THE GROUP'S lobbying on Capitol Hill and in statehouses is growing. With its budget of $144.6 million, the association has also mounted a new television and radio advertising campaign and has expanded its already vast array of services and programs. These include group health insurance, automobile and homeowners' insurance, mutual funds, reduced-price drugs and discount travel and auto rental. Members also serve as staff in a host of counseling and educational programs.

Many of the organization's critics acknowledge its unique position.

"AARP is the most powerful lobby on Capitol Hill," said Paul S. Hewitt, executive director of Americans for Generational Equity, a 1,000-member research and education organization based in Washington. "What they do affects the whole country."

The sense of mission is palpable among some of the association's leaders as they express the need for urgent action in the face of change.

"We cannot wait for the steamroller to run over us," said 75-year-old John Denning, president of the board of directors. "We have to be out in front."

THE STEAMROLLER is the graying of the nation's population, which will profoundly change America's social landscape. The statistics are becoming familiar: the 65-and-older population grew twice as fast as the rest of the population over the past two decades, and the Census Bureau projects that in 2030, a fifth of all Americans will be over 65 — 64 million people, as against about 26 million now.

The effects of that seismic demographic shift will be seen not only in the economy, the health-care system and the family of the future, but also in the association: its membership may rise to 33 million by 1993, Brickfield said. And that date is three full years before the first of 77 million baby boomers become eligible to join.

Yet its wealth and size also attract increasing scrutiny. "When any organization grows to the size AARP has, it also has a special responsibility," said Lou Glasse, president of the Older Women's League, a national nonprofit organization with 20,000 members.

CRITICS CONTEND that the association has failed to live up to that responsibility by focusing too much on the good of its members instead of the good of society. And the association has been drawn into the debate about intergenerational equity: the question of whether the needs of the older and younger generations can be addressed equitably without provoking conflict. It is a debate of increasing interest to policy-makers and advocacy groups.

"Our concern is that you're going to have two younger generations supporting an older generation of the elderly," Hewitt said. "The AARP is almost totally focused on the well-being of its clients. But they are going to have to address ways to avoid putting unbearable burdens on the baby boomers."

The association counters that it has shown concern for the young by supporting legislation benefiting parents and children, like the Family and Medical Leave Act now before Congress.

BUT EVIDENCE of strife between the generations is visible even within the organization, Hewitt said. In 1983, the association lowered its membership age to 50. "I have been hearing that there is a growing intergenerational tension within the AARP — between the groups in their 50s and their 70s," he said.

Brickfield denied this. "If anything, we've found that greater diversity enables different age groups to better help each other," he said.

But the organization could have problems in the future "trying to satisfy the needs of the young-old and the old-old, which are very different groups," said Dr. Rose Dobrof, executive director of the Brookdale Center on Aging of Hunter College.

Others contend that the association is embroiled in another sort of dissension. The group "is torn from within," said Curt Clinkscales, director of the National Alliance of Senior Citizens. His 2.2 million-member organization was founded in 1974 as a conservative alternative for the elderly, he said.

"One group of people there is primarily interested in profit, and others wish to be more active in politics," Clinkscales said.

THE ASSOCIATION has always been concerned about properly balancing its profitable activities and its service and advocacy role, said James Sullivan, director of its membership division. But it could not exist without its money-making services, he said, and they are a major incentive for many people to join.

"We can't pay for our programs with the $5 membership fee," Sullivan said, adding that the organization will try to keep the fee at that level, "hopefully forever."

Clinkscales also quarreled with the association's political orientation. "They're liberal, no question about it," he said, adding that the group wants "to raise social spending and cut the defense budget."

But the association has also been criticized by those who charge that its policies are inconsistent with the progressive accomplishments of its founder, Dr. Ethel Percy Andrus.

"In her day, Andrus was a prophetic voice," said Maggie Kuhn, founder of the Gray Panthers, a 40,000-member group that she said favors "radical, nonviolent change" for both the elderly and those in younger generations. Members of the association, Kuhn said, are "too conservative in their advocacy."

THE CRITICISM from both ends of the political spectrum is "a good indication we're doing the right thing," said John Rother, the association's director of legislation, research and public policy.

The organization's predominantly middle class and white membership has also given rise to criticism from Kuhn and others over its commitment to representing disadvantaged elderly people and those in minority groups. The association's minority-group membership totals about 3 percent, Brickman said.

Jack Ossofsky, president of the National Council on the Aging, a 6,000-member advocacy group for the elderly, said the association "hasn't been known as a major advocate on behalf of the poor, the vulnerable and the minority aged."

But the group has "taken on new issues in that regard," he acknowledged, "and their public policy staff, at least, believes these are priority issues."

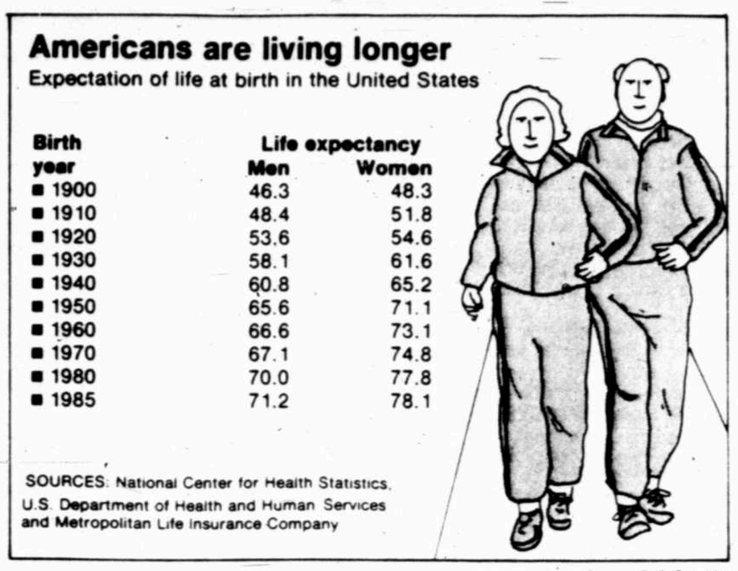
Increasing the number of black, Hispanic and Asian members has been a priority at the association for three years. It has also mounted a campaign to raise awareness about the problems of elderly women, and has been pushing for reforms in nursing-home care.

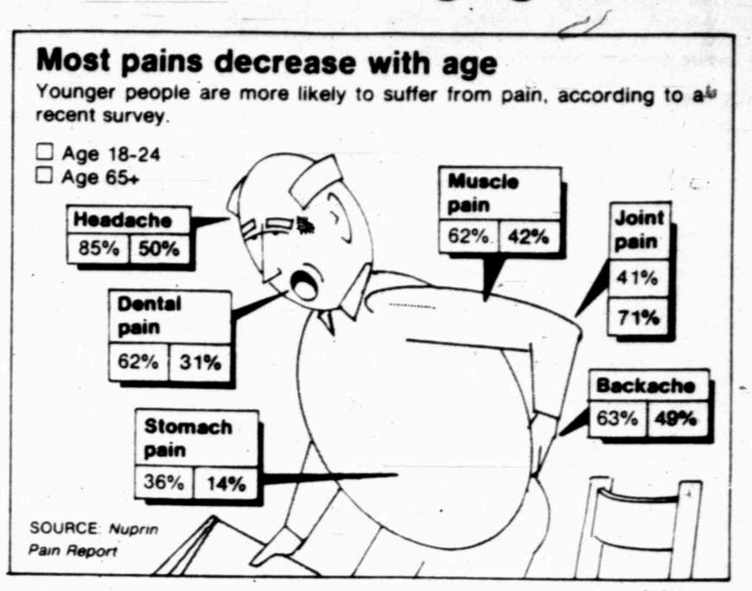
BUT THE association's middle-class orientation has continued to spark criticism of things like its comfortable Washington headquarters with its green-and-buff carpeting, and the treatment accorded volunteers in hotels at the association's leadership meetings and conventions. At such gatherings, volunteers are reimbursed for room, board and travel.

"Some of our volunteers put in more than 20 hours a week for the modest reimbursement they receive," said Anne Harvey, the association's director of program and field services. "We feel the investment is well worth it, especially if you consider what we'd have to pay people to do the same work."

To Brickfield, the rising sound of criticism is simply evidence that the group, like its members, has come of age. How would he rate the present status of the association?

"Things could not be better," he said one recent afternoon, while reminiscing about hard times and deficit budgets the organization survived in the 1970s. He paused, then said, "To take half a quote out of Dickens, 'It is the best of times.'"





Unnecessary medical lab tests discouraged by organization

Associated Press

The nation's largest health insurance provider has prepared guidelines for the appropriate use of diagnostic tests in an effort to reduce health-care spending by billions of dollars, newspapers reported Thursday.

The Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association, insurers for an estimated 75 million Americans, planned to announce the guidelines today at the American College of Physicians' annual meeting in New Orleans, according to The New York Times and the Los Angeles Times.

The Chicago-based association developed the guidelines in conjunction with the American College of Physicians, which represents most internists, but other doctors' groups have reservations, according to the newspapers.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield says the guidelines are initially meant to be educational, but eventually will withhold or limit payments for tests deemed inappropriate, the newspapers said.

The guidelines cover 15 common medical tests that account for $30 billion a year of national health-care spending, the newspapers said.

Even before the announcement, the guidelines were attacked by the College of American Pathologists, a 10,000-member group representing the specialists who direct medical testing laboratories.

The guidelines "are simply too restrictive and not workable," said Dr. Jared Schwartz of Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte, N.C., a spokesman for the organization.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield believes too many physicians indiscriminately order blood tests, chest X-rays, electrocardiograms and other procedures regardless of the patient's age or symptoms.

The nation is "spending $6 billion to $18 billion a year on procedures which do not aid in the diagnosis or treatment of illness," said Bernard R. Tresnowski, the association's president. About 20 percent of present testing is unnecessary, he said.

Cubans to be held indefinitely in Laredo

LAREDO (AP) — Fifteen Cuban convicts released from New York jails but deemed too dangerous to be set free were flown to indefinite detention in Texas.

Federal authorities are detaining the Cubans released from state prisons in the Laredo maximum-security jail because they are too dangerous to set free and Cuba will not accept them, officials said Thursday.

"We dislike this very much," said Benedict J. Ferro, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service chief for New York and Vermont. "It is an incredibly inhumane act for Cuba not to take them back and that leaves us no choice but to detain them."

The group, believed to be the first from New York, was flown in shackles from the Niagara Falls Air Force Reserve Base, the officials said.

The prisoners will join 124 Cubans sent to the Webb County Law Enforcement Center in the last three weeks from various states, according to New York and Texas officials.

With their state releases, they have met their sentencing obligations in New York but are placed in the custody of federal immigration authorities. Though they are no longer charged with crimes, they are being detained because they are in the country illegally, the officials said.

Most of the Cubans were among 129,000 who came in the so-called "Freedom Flotilla" to the United States from Mariel harbor in 1980. Cuban President Fidel Castro said afterwards that the group included the undesirables from his country's jails and hospitals.

The 15 served sentences on convictions for rape, kidnapping, drug sales and armed robbery.

"The immigration has detained me for no cause at all," said one of the 15, 30-year-old Marcos Cardenas. "If they want to take us back to Cuba, that's OK with me. If Cuba won't take us, why keep us?"

The INS contracted with Webb County to fill 200 of the jail's 450 beds with Cuban prisoners in federal custody, Ferro said.

The transfer of prisoners began three weeks ago, said Capt. Tito Tijerina, second-in-command in the Webb County Sheriff's Department.

"It's a new jail. It's supposed to be a state-of-the-art type thing," said Emilio Saenz, Webb County deportation officer. "It's a brand new building. It's got all this high-tech stuff, the electronic doors and the video cameras."

Fate of SMU's '88 football season cloudy

DALLAS (AP) — The fate of Southern Methodist University's 1988 football season, on shaky ground since the NCAA axed its predecessor over a pay-for-players scandal, will be settled in the next few days, interim SMU President William Stallcup says.

"I haven't gotten all the information I need to make a decision," Stallcup said Thursday after the board of trustees' interim executive committee met. "I'm trying to keep an open mind till I get all the facts."

The NCAA stripped the Southwest Conference school of its 1987 season because of $61,000 in payments to 13 Mustang football players. Among other sanctions, it also limited SMU to seven road games in 1988.

But SMU officials have said they are considering not playing at all in 1988 because of an anticipated lack of athletes and the need to take time to evaluate the role of sports at the university.

"I'm trying to talk to different constituencies of the university to get their feelings on (dropping football)," said Stallcup. He noted that interim athletic director Dudley Parker has not yet determined how many players will stay at SMU to play next year.

But even if there are enough players, Stallcup said he might decide to cancel the 1988 season out of safety considerations. Besides, he added, giving up the 1988 season could help create a fresh start for 1989.

Stallcup said the potential loss of football revenue in 1988 was not figuring in his decision, which he said would be a few more days in the making.

SMU officials have discussed scheduling fall events such as Homecoming and Parents' Weekend, which have traditionally centered around football, around soccer. Stallcup said such a decision has not been made, but that he supports the idea.

"I like the idea of playing our sports events on campus," he said. The soccer team plays on Ownby Field on the SMU campus; the Mustangs football team had been playing in Texas Stadium in nearby Irving.

Anson students sidestep rules against dancing

ANSON (AP) — They won't be dancing in Anson tonight, but the Anson High School prom will be held at Abilene where the students can dance.

In fact, no one will be dancing in Anson anytime soon since there's a city ordinance against public dancing.

The students moved their prom to Abilene, 26 miles to the south, so they can evade a 54-year-old ban against dancing and ignore strenuous objections from fundamentalist preachers.

Proms in past years at Anson have been seated banquet affairs with no one permitted to wander out on the dance floor. Last year, the prom was held in Abilene, but when the students started to dance to recorded music, a teacher-chaperone quickly put a stop to it.

This year, an agreement has been worked out so that when the school-organized gathering ends at an Abilene hotel, the students can attend a dance party sponsored by Footloose, an Anson group pushing for an end to the ban. The party will be attended by high school juniors and seniors, said Joan Sandoval, vice president of Footloose.

The dance party will be held in the same banquet room and music will be provided by Bittercreek, a Sweetwater-based band. Bittercreek agreed to reduce its usual rate to provide music for the "renegade ball," Paul Davidson, a Footloose activist said.

One of the tunes that will be played is one called, "There Ain't No Dancin' in Anson," a song composed by Davidson, a member of the high school band.

The Rev. Bob Evans, a local Baptist minister, maintains that close body contact and rhythmic swaying to music arouses emotions and encourages heavy petting and more sinful promiscuous activity.

STATE IN BRIEF

Man held in mail bombing

DALLAS (AP) — A Cleveland, Ohio, man was arrested Thursday following his indictment in connection with a mail bomb that exploded at the Dallas Bulk Mail Center in February, officials said.

U.S. Postal Inspector J.R. Price said Dennis Oliver Fraley, 33, was arrested in Cleveland, where he was being held pending a bond hearing before a federal magistrate.

The bomb exploded Feb. 21 inside a 75-pound sack of mail on an overhead conveyor belt. No serious injuries were reported because employees were taking a break at the time, officials said.

Price said Fraley was arrested in February, but those charges were later dismissed. He said officials presented new evidence and a federal grand jury in Dallas indicted Fraley Tuesday on charges of causing the transportation of a bomb.

Journalists die in sleep

AMARILLO (AP) — Autopsies show that two Amarillo journalists died of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning while sleeping, officials said Thursday.

The bodies of KGNC radio news director Steve Harmel and former Amarillo Globe-News reporter Barbara Barton were discovered in Harmel's garage apartment about 9:45 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

An open-flame heater was burning and the windows were closed when officers entered the apartment, said Royce Bodiford, KGNC general manager.

Results of autopsies in the deaths were ordered Wednesday and released Thursday by Potter County Justice of the Peace Haven Dysart.

Court to hear water dispute

ALBUQUERQUE N.M. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court will hear oral arguments later his month in a dispute between New Mexico and Texas over Pecos River water, a New Mexico spokesman says.

Peter White, chief counsel for the state Engineer's Office, said the high court will hear one hour of oral arguments on April 29. White said he had been told the hearing wouldn't take place until fall, but that another case had been dropped from the Supreme Court's calendar.

A special master appointed by the Supreme Court ruled last July that New Mexico owes Texas more than three decades of Pecos River water, amounting to 340,100 acre-feet.

GENERAL NEWS

Pope rallies Chileans to fight all evil

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Pope John Paul II called on Chileans to fight "evil in all its forms" during a rally of about 80,000 people where student speakers denounced the military rule of President Augusto Pinochet.

Also Thursday, John Paul told a conference of bishops that the Roman Catholic Church favors a return to democracy in Chile. The pope has previously said Pinochet runs a dictatorial government.

In his first full day in Chile, the pope's presence sparked violent anti-government demonstrations by a small number of the hundreds of thousands of people who turned out in the streets and at mass gatherings to greet him.

Police and army troops fired shots to disperse about 300 homeless people who tried to seize a vacant piece of land in northern Santiago. One person suffered gunshot wounds and 14 others also were injured, the government news agency ORBE said without giving details. It said nearly 100 people were arrested.

The national police said that since the pope's arrival, 42 police had been injured, one seriously, in clashes with "delinquents who do not understand the meaning of the papal visit." The police statement did not mention civilian casualties.

The pope's itinerary today called for a visit to a church-run shelter for the poor and sick, meetings with opposition politicians and Mass at a large Santiago park where he was to beatify a young Chilean nun, Sister Teresa, who died in 1920 and is credited with several miracles. Beatification is the last formal step before sainthood.

Protesters throw rocks at policemen guarding the rote of the papal motorcade through Santiago, Chile. Pope John Paul II had departed the area at the time of the incident.

Student orators departed from their prepared addresses at a rally Thursday night at Santiago's national stadium where authorities held thousands of leftists — and allegedly tortured and killed many — after Pinochet seized power in 1973.

"How happy we would be to smash inequality, to smash the repression by death and terror," Freddy Ormeno declared as cheers and applause filled the open-air stadium.

Filamir Landeros said he lived in a country "where they impose on us a culture of death," a twist on a phrase used by Pinochet to describe the threat of communism when he welcomed John Paul to Chile on Wednesday afternoon.

The pontiff said in his address: "Now, in this stadium, a place of sporting events, but also of pain and suffering in past eras, I want to repeat to young Chileans: assume your responsibility."

"Fight boldly against sin, against the forces of evil in all its forms," the pope said, drawing loud cheers. "Fight the good fight for the dignity of man, for the diginity of life, for a noble life."

The state-run television station cut off sound and switched to crowd views when the students addressed the pope.

It did the same when slum-dwellers addressed the pope earlier Thursday at a rally attended by hundreds of thousands of people in the poor neighborhood of La Bandera, south of the capital.

"We lack the freedom to participate and express ourselves," a young woman, Ximena Cornejo, told the pope. "When we do, we are repressed and beaten."

Violent anti-government demonstrations broke out at the start and end of the rally at La Bandera.

When the pope arrived, demonstrators smashed windows on two police buses in his caravan. Police and their vehicles again came under a hail of stones when the pope had departed. Police dispersed the protesters with tear gas.

Several people were seen cut and bleeding after being hit by rocks.

During a meeting with the conference of bishops, John Paul clearly stated the church's pro-democracy stance in Chile.

Survivors of Canadian mine fire sought shelter in sealed lunchrooms

MURDOCHVILLE, Quebec (AP) — Many of the 52 miners who survived a copper mine fire that killed one person found safety in sealed lunchrooms deep underground.

Rescuers found the survivors in three groups Thursday, the last of which was brought to the surface early in the evening. Most of the survivors had taken refuge in the underground lunchrooms that double as emergency shelters.

Ange-Marie Kenney, a 36-year-old driller with two children, died after being overcome by smoke that filled a truck he was driving down a shaft ramp. The survivors, many of them recovering from exhaustion, smoke inhalation and shock, were kept overnight under observation in this town's small hospital and in a local community hall turned into a makeshift ward.

"They were very lucky to get out," said the hospital's Dr. Michel Roy. "There was a lot of carbon monoxide in the mine. If they had been caught in it, it could have been a lot worse."

Officials said there was no indication what caused the fire which broke out during the supper hour Wednesday just as shifts were changing and burned itself out at about noon Thursday.

Some of those rescued said they thought the cry of "Fire!" at the shift change Wednesday evening was an April Fools' Day prank, but then smoke from nearly 2,000 yards of burning conveyor belt began rolling through a 7-4 mile skein of tunnels in the Gaspe Mine.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Steen's release urged

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The university where American hostage Alann Steen taught pleaded with his Moslem captors today to have him hospitalized, after a fellow hostage said in a videotape that Steen was so sick he could die at any moment.

"We plead with the kidnappers to move professor Alann Steen to a hospital immediately so he could be placed under intensive care," the management of Beirut University College said in a statement.

Moslem extremists released videotape Thursday in which captive Jesse Turner said Steen was in "pitiful" health and could die at any moment.

"We feel that his life will be over in a few hours," said Turner in the videotape delivered at 9 p.m. (2 p.m. EST) to the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar. Steen, Turner and two other teachers were kidnapped from BUC Jan. 24.

The university statement called for the release of all four teachers "on religious and humanitarian grounds," and urged "all religious leaders to plead with the kidnappers to release the four professors."

Broker may be indicted

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — U.S. investigators plan to indict a New York stockbroker on charges he knew about Jonathan Jay Pollard's espionage months before he told authorities about it, a newspaper reported today.

The report in the daily Yediot Ahronot also claimed it was the stockbroker who first told investigators of the role of Aviem Sella, an Israeli air force official who was subsequently indicted in the United States for recruiting Pollard.

The newspaper cited no sources for its report and identified the man only as a Jewish stockbroker in New York.

Pollard, a 32-year-old American Jew and former U.S. Navy analyst, was sentenced to life in prison last month for selling Israel classified U.S. military information. His wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, 26, was given a five-year prison term for possessing classified documents.

The Yediot Ahronot report said the broker knew of Pollard's activities but came out with the information only six months after Pollard's arrest.

Soviet talks 'significant'

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said her talks in Moscow with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev helped make the world a "safer place."

"I believe it was a very significant visit at what could be a turning point in history," Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons Thursday, a day after returning from a five-day Soviet trip.

"I firmly believe that it is in our (the West's) interest to welcome and encourage the course on which Mr. Gorbachev has embarked," she said, referring to Gorbachev's policies of openness and his attempts to restructure government operations.

"There has been, for the first time in 70 years since the (Russian) revolution, an understanding that their system, as it is at present, does not work. It must go to a more open society, to a more incentive economy and more distribution of responsibility," she said.

50 hurt in soccer riot

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — At least 50 people were wounded when hundreds of villagers armed with guns and clubs started rioting over a disputed soccer match, police said today.

Five of the wounded were in critical condition following Thursday's riot in Aganagar, near Bhairab, 50 miles north of Dhaka.

The riot erupted a week after the match played by rival teams of the village was abandoned following a fight between the players over a disputed goal, Bhairab police told The Associated Press by telephone.

They said armed police were on guard in the village to head off further violence.

Cultists claim slayings

BUTUAN CITY, Philippines (AP) — Seven people died when a group of religious cultists armed with spears and machetes ambushed and attacked a band of Communist rebels, the military said today.

Five rebels and two cultists died, and five other cultists were wounded in the clash Thursday on the outskirts of Surigao City, 60 miles north of here and 450 miles southeast of Manila.

The cult, known as "Tadtad" (Chop) because members cut up the bodies of their enemies, forms the core of one of several anti-Communist military-backed vigilante groups on the island of Mindanao and in other parts of the country.

A report given to regional military commander Brig. Gen. Mariano Adalem said the cultists ambushed the rebels to avenge last week's killing of a cult member who allegedly was slain by communists.

U.S. jet drops missile

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. military jet fighter dropped an air-to-air Sparrow missile on a mountain near Hiroshima today, but it did not explode, a defense official said.

Setsuko Sakuraba, a spokeswoman of the Defense Facilities Administration Agency, said the missile was dropped from a F-4 Phantom jet on its way to the U.S. Marine base Iwakuni, about 489 miles southwest of Tokyo, at about 10 a.m. It was not immediately known why the missile fell.

U.S. officials said the plane was on a training flight, and said there were no injuries.

Suspension criticized

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Former Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian D. Smith said he had mixed feelings about being suspended from parliament for a year over a speech he made criticizing economic sanctions against South Africa.

"In one sense I am happy to be leaving a scene I have disapproved of for so long," Smith said after Thursday's vote.

By a vote of 38-10, legislators approved a motion condemning Smith for making statements "calculated to give encouragement and succor to a foreign power that is so hostile to Zimbabwe" and ordered his suspension.

France ousts envoys

PARIS (AP) — France has ordered three Soviet diplomats to leave the country for "activities unconnected with their mission and status."

The Foreign Ministry announcement Thursday said Soviet Ambassador Yakov Ryabov was told the three diplomats from the Soviet Embassy in Paris had 10 days to leave France. The names of three were not given, and further details were not provided.

The Soviet Embassy said in a statement it "vigorously protested" the expulsion order which it said was "totally unfounded."

It said France would have to shoulder "the entire responsibility for the consequences" on Franco-Soviet relations, including "future bilateral contacts" — an apparent reference to Premier Jacques Chirac scheduled visit to the Soviet Union in May.

Ex-governor sentenced

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A federal judge Friday sentenced former territorial Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo to nine years in prison for using his office to extort money from businessmen.

Bordallo was convicted Feb. 13 in U.S. District Court on 10 counts of bribery, extortion, witness tampering and conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with his failed 1986 re-election campaign.

U.S. District Judge Cristobal C. Duenas had imposed a 30-year term, but suspended all but nine years of the sentence.

NOTICE OF SECURED PARTY'S INTENDED DISPOSITION OF COLLATERAL

WHEREAS, pursuant to a Security Agreement dated August 20, 1982, WILLIAM E. HENDON, JR. assigned and granted to THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MIDLAND a security interest in 643,284 shares of stock of Cameo Minerals, Inc. more fully described in each of said Security Agreement; and

WHEREAS, on December 17, 1982, Cameo Minerals, Inc. merged into Hendon Exploration, Inc., a Texas corporation, and the shares of Cameo Minerals, Inc. were converted into 55,925,316 shares of Hendon Exploration, Inc. (the "Stock") and subject to said Security Agreement; and

WHEREAS, U.S. Capital Corporation of America, Inc. has succeeded to the rights of the Secured Party under the Security Agreement; and

WHEREAS, the obligation described in the Security Agreement has matured and remains unpaid thereby causing a default under said Security Agreement.

NOW, THEREFORE, know all men by these presents.

That, U.S. Capital Corporation of America, Inc. ("Secured Party") pursuant to the Security Agreement and the provisions of Section 9.504 of the Texas Business & Commerce Code hereby gives notice that Secured Party intends to sell at public sale to the highest bidder for cash all of the Stock, covered by the Security Agreement.

The sale will take place at the office of U.S. Capital Corporation of America, Inc., 200 Crescent Court, Suite 1350, Dallas, Texas 75201, at 10:00 a.m., Central Standard Time on April 13, 1987. Persons requiring additional information regarding the sale may contact Don Harvey, whose phone number is (214) 871-4700.

The Stock will be sold only as a block to a single purchaser who is a resident of Texas solely for his own account, for investment and not with a view to the resale or distribution thereof, and the purchaser will be restricted from reselling the Stock or interests thereon without compliance with the requirements of the Securities Act of 1933 and will be required to sign a statement to that effect. Any purchaser shall be required to demonstrate that he is financially sophisticated and can afford the risk of a highly speculative investment and is a Texas resident.

The stock certificate representing the Stock will bear a legend to the effect that such shares have not been registered under the Act and may not be transferred other than in compliance therewith.

Prospective purchasers at the sale will be furnished, upon request, with such information concerning the financial position of Hendon Exploration, Inc. as may at the time be in the possession of Secured Party.

Secured Party reserves the right to bid for and purchase the Stock.
