Overturned ruling

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The Alaska Court of Appeals on Friday overturned a misdemeanor conviction against the captain of an Exxon tanker that ran aground in the spring of 1989, causing the nation's worst oil spill. The state used tainted evidence against Joseph Hazelwood, who was immune from prosecution under federal law, the court ruled in throwing out his conviction of negligent discharge of oil./6C

Clinton point man

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton on Friday pointedly held out his vice presidential choice of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore as a telling contrast with President Bush's pick of Dan Quayle. "This is my first decision," Clinton said at a joint news conference with Gore. "That was George Bush's first decision. I think if we're evaluated on them, I should be elected president."/5A

New indictments

LUBBOCK — A West Texas pathologist has been indicted on charges of falsifying the autopsy of a 14-year-old hit-and-run victim, The Associated Press learned Friday. A source close to the investigation said two sealed indictments returned by the Dickens County grand jury charge Lubbock doctor Ralph Erdmann with theft and tampering with a government record. The indictments will be unsealed following the doctor's arrest, the source said./7A

Mistaken identity led to incident, police say

■ Mentally ill Midland man's arm is broken following chase.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

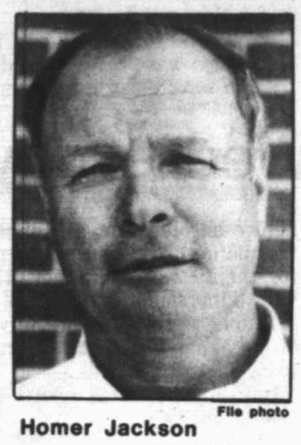

As a result of mistaken identity, a mentally ill Midland man had his arm accidently broken by two police officers Monday evening, Police Chief Richard Czech confirmed.

Family of the injured man, Selistino Jasso, 47, expressed shock while police acknowledged the incident and are conducting an internal investigation prompted by the officers.

"An error was made and immediately the officers turned it (a report) in," Czech said.

"They, the officers, sent the paperwork to me immediately.

Ex-coach, deacon pleads guilty to indecency charge

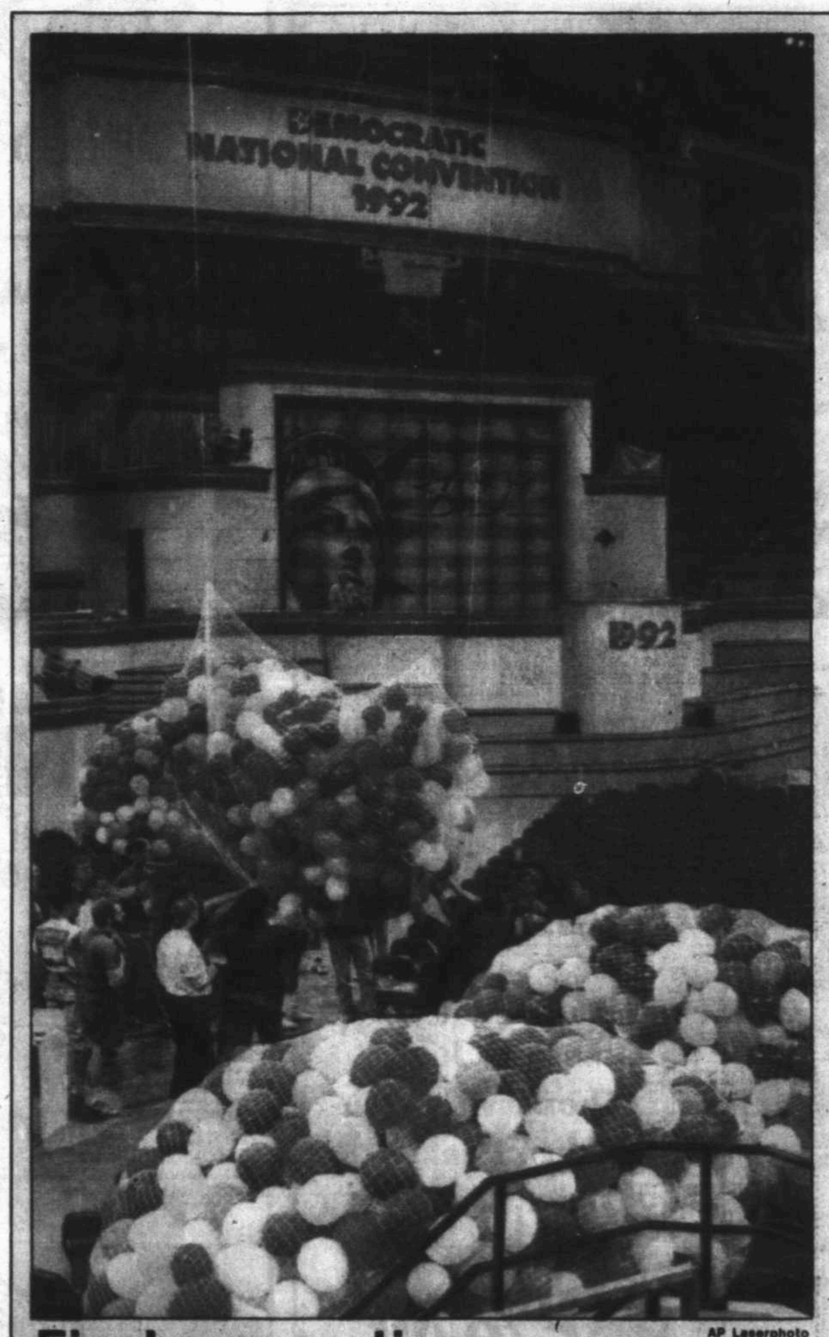

By Michael Kashgarian and Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writers

The former head football coach and athletic director of Midland Christian School and past deacon of North A Street Church of Christ pleaded guilty Friday to a single count of indecency with a child by contact.

William Homer Jackson, 49, was sentenced to eight years probation and ordered to enter the Midland County Sex Offenders Program by 142nd District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

The plea stemmed from an April 30, 1985, incident involving a female family member no longer living at home, said District Attorney Al Schorre.

Pan Am jury finds airline responsible

■ Pan American World Airways is liable in bombing of Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, jurors say.

By Arnold H. Lubasch
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A jury decided Friday that Pan American World Airways was liable for damages because its security procedures failed to protect passengers in the 1988 explosion of Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, a bombing that took 270 lives.

The jury's verdict, in a civil case in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, opened the way for trials on individual claims for damages that authorities said could total about $300 million.

Pan Am is bankrupt, but its insurance companies are responsible for paying damages to the families of the victims in the case.

More than 30 of the family members, several of them weeping, hugged and kissed one another after the jury announced its verdict on the fourth day of deliberations in the 11-week trial.

Eleanor Bright of Brookline, Mass., whose husband was killed in the explosion, described the tense moment just before the verdict. She said, "One of the jurors turned to me and smiled, and then I think I knew what the outcome would be."

Richard Mack of Evanston, Ill., whose brother was killed, said he had felt for three-and-a-half years that the air disaster should not have happened. "And this jury," he said, "just vindicated that through their verdict."

Lawyers for Pan Am and its security subsidiary, which was also found liable, said they would appeal. A Pan Am statement after the verdict said the Lockerbie disaster was still shrouded in mystery.

The Lockerbie explosion, attributed to a terrorist bomb planted in a suitcase, blew up a Boeing 747 jetliner heading from London to New York on Dec. 21, 1988. All 259 people on the plane were killed, along with 11 more on the ground.

> 'One of the jurors turned to me and smiled, and then I think I knew what the outcome would be.'

The issue in dispute at the trial was whether Pan Am could be held liable in the lawsuits filed by the families of more than 200 of the passengers.

In a similar lawsuit last year, a jury awarded $2.7 million to the widow of a passenger killed in the terrorist bombing of a TWA flight from Rome to Athens. The airline was held liable for willful misconduct involving inadequate security in that case, which is still under appeal.

Elite LAPD unit spied on mayor, book claims

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An elite police unit that reported to former Chief Daryl F. Gates spied on the mayor, city councilors and celebrities such as Marilyn Monroe and Frank Sinatra, the authors of an upcoming book said Friday.

Gates strongly denied any improprieties and called one of the authors a disgruntled former member of the unit.

The allegations in "L.A. Secret Police: Inside the LAPD Elite Spy Network" prompted new Chief Willie Williams to padlock the offices of the Organized Crime Intelligence Division and search its files, officials said.

Bush rejects 'sleaze' TV ad about Clinton

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush on Friday repudiated an independent group's advertisement about Gov. Bill Clinton's relationship with Gennifer Flowers as "the kind of sleaze that diminishes the political process."

But the ad, which was to begin appearing Friday night on cable television in New York, was pulled at the last minute by the Time Warner New York City Cable Group.

The advertisement was created by Floyd G. Brown, the Republican who is responsible for the Willie Horton commercial, perhaps the most enduring image of the 1988 campaign.

The ad advises voters, for $4.99 a call, to phone "our Bill Clinton fact line and learn first-hand about Clinton's womanizing, drug use, draft dodging and other lies."

Bush, in an interview broadcast Friday night on the PBS program "The MacNeil-/Lehrer Newshour," said Republican Party lawyers had told Brown to pull the advertisement. Brown heads the Presidential Victory Committee, an independent group that is promoting Bush's re-election.

"We've had our lawyers in touch with him and told him to stop it," Bush said. "And I repudiate it now as the kind of sleaze that diminishes the political process."

But Bush said, "There's nothing we can do about it legally, but I hope what I'm telling you now resonates all across the country."

Brown had said that he would not pull the advertisement, saying that if the Bush campaign was "not willing to engage their enemies, either because of disorganization or fear or whatever, I stand ready and willing to do it."

But a lawyer for Time Warner cable, Robert Jacobs, said, "We made a determination as a general standard that we would accept ads from bona-fide candidates, but not from committees not authorized by the candidates."

Jacobs added that because Bush had condemned the advertisement, "we don't

DEATHS

E. Wayne Roberts

LUBBOCK — Services for former area resident E. Wayne Roberts, 67, of Lubbock, are set for 10 a.m. Monday in the Bowman Chapel of First United Methodist Church of Lubbock with the Rev. Dixie Robertson officiating. Burial is set for 2:30 p.m. Monday in Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors of Lubbock.

Roberts died Friday at a Lubbock hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born in Star and grew up in the Abilene area. He was a Marine veteran of World War II.

He received his bachelor's degree in chemistry from Hardin-Simmons University. He worked as a chemist for Unichem in Hobbs, N.M., and Amerada Hess in Seminole.

He moved to Lubbock in 1983. He was a member of First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include seven sons, Michael Wayne Roberts of Hobbs, N.M., Mike S. Roberts of Canyon, Tim Roberts and Jerry Thomas, both of Lubbock Billy Thomas of Plano and Jim Thomas and Dan Thomas, both of Oklahoma City; one daughter, Luann Pack of Lubbock; one brother, Doyle Roberts of Abilene; one sister, Eileen Zant-Rodriquez of Big Spring; his mother, Katie Grace Roberts of Abilene; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Flossie Sutherland

Services for Flossie Sutherland, 79, are set for 2 p.m. Sunday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Ray E. Johansen, pastor of Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church, officiating. Local arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

Services will be Tuesday at Caldwell & Sons Funeral Home Chapel in Flat River, Mo., with burial to follow in Leadington, Mo.

Mrs. Sutherland died Friday at a local hospital.

She was born Feb. 21, 1913, in Ester, Mo., where she grew up and graduated from high school. She married J.R. Sutherland in the early 1930s in Ester. He preceded her in death in 1976.

The couple lived in Bismarck, Mo., and Farmington, Mo., before moving to St. Louis. She worked as a dietician at Lutheran and Bethesda hospitals in St. Louis until her retirement in 1980.

She moved to Midland in 1984.

She also was preceded in death by two sons, Dean Sutherland in 1936 and Harry Sutherland in 1982.

Survivors include one son, James R. Sutherland of Midland; five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to the American Heart Association, 3525 Andrews Highway, No. 208, Midland, 79703, or to a charity of choice.

Helen VanAtta

Funeral services for former Midlander Helen Ulmer VanAtta of Dallas are set for 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Glass Chapel of First United Methodist Church. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Thursday at her summer home at Fisher Island, N.Y.

Survivors include her son, Barron Kidd of Dallas.

Information also is available by calling 685-4501.

Police thwart robbery attempt

Staff report

ODESSA — A 21-year-old woman was caught red-handed attempting to rob a bank Friday afternoon, police said.

The woman attempted to rob Bank of the West, 1601 W. University, of $10,000 about 1 p.m.

A bank employee pressed a "hold-up button," alerting law enforcement, according to Odessa Police reports.

Police responding to the alarm apprehended the woman as she tried to leave the bank.

She was in custody late Friday evening and was being questioned by Federal Bureau of Investigation officials. The woman could face federal charges because federally insured funds are involved in the incident.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Winds join partly cloudy skies

Staff report

Today's forecast is for partly cloudy skies with a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms, a high in the mid-90s and winds southeast to south 15-20 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's outlook calls for partly cloudy conditions with a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low near 70.

Sunday's forecast is partly cloudy with a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms and a high in the mid 90s, NWS said.

Yesterday's high was 92, compared to the record high of 105, set in 1964. The record low for today's date is 62, set in 1947.

STATE

Clear skies prevailed through most of Texas Friday with only a few scattered showers and thunderstorms in the Panhandle and the high plains.

Temperatures reached a high of 100 in some parts of North Texas while the rest of the state posted temperatures in the 80s and 90s.

North Texas should be fair to partly cloudy through Sunday with the possibility of some isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms in the extreme northwest.

The forecast for South Texas calls for isolated afternoon and early evening showers. Thunderstorms may also hit the coast tonight with otherwise partly cloudy weather through Sunday and continued hot days.

Overnight lows across the state predicted to be in the 70s, highs expected to reach into the 90s through most of the state and over 100 along the Rio Grande Plains.

NATION

Thunderstorms were scattered across the nation Friday, and heat and humidity blanketed the Southeast.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the central Rockies, the Plains, the middle Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and into Michigan, the National Weather Service said.

Hail an inch in diameter fell near Akron, Ohio, and wind gusted to 64 mph during a thunderstorm at Pittsburgh, the weather service said.

Early in the day, hail as big as tennis balls accumulated up to 3 inches deep in parts of southwestern Indiana, smashing car windshields, battering crops and killing small pigs and chickens, authorities reported.

Heavy rain also was scattered over parts of Missouri. During the night, parts of Kansas City got more than 3½ inches of rain and a tornado touched down on the city's north side without causing any damage.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered over southern Arizona and the northern Pacific Coast.

A heat advisory was in effect through today over parts of Georgia, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama and West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle.

The weather service said heat indexes — a measure of discomfort that combines temperature and humidity — would reach 105 to 115 over parts of those states.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

PAN AM: Jury finds airline liable in bombing

(From 1A)

the United States and Britain have been seeking the extradition of two Libyan intelligence officials accused of being behind the bombing.

To decide liability in the case decided Friday, the jury was asked two questions. First, did Pan Am engage in willful misconduct? And if so, was it a substantial factor in causing the disaster? It answered yes to both questions.

Judge Thomas C. Platt, who explained the laws to the jury of eight women and four men, defined the legal terms for the crucial question of whether the airline's actions amounted to "willful misconduct." Under an international treaty covering airlines, damages for each victim are limited to $75,000 unless willful misconduct is found.

"Willful misconduct," the judge said, "is the intentional performance of an act with knowledge that performance of that act will probably result in injury or damage — or it may be the intentional performance of an act in such a manner as to imply disregard of the probable consequences of the performance of the act."

A lawyer for the plaintiffs, Lee S. Kreindler, stressed that Pan Am violated a security regulation that required the "positive matching" of baggage with passengers.

He said Pan Am allowed an unaccompanied suitcase containing the bomb to be transferred from a flight from Malta to a Pan Am flight in Frankfurt, Germany, and then to Flight 103 in London.

"The core of the case, of course, is the abandonment of positive matching," Kreindler said. Observance of proper procedure, he contended, would have kept the bomb off the plane.

He added that the airline's security system was "sick because management determined it was going to cut back on funds."

A lawyer for Pan Am, Clinton H. Coddington, argued that the airline was an innocent victim of the bombing and that it had "spent a lot of money on security." He said the bomb could have slipped through airport security in Frankfurt or London with no fault on the part of Pan Am.

Coddington told the jury that the plaintiffs want "private vengeance" against Pan Am because "the terrorists responsible for the bombing are beyond their reach."

"You heard nothing about who did it," he said, adding that the terrorists must be laughing about the effort to blame Pan Am.

If the jurors returned a verdict against the airline, he suggested, they would be haunted by the "laughter of the terrorists."

The jury, which began deliberating on Tuesday afternoon, informed Judge Platt on Thursday that it was divided and having difficulty. The jurors resumed the deliberations after the judge urged them to try to reach a verdict.

Pan Am issued a statement by its former chairman, Thomas G. Plaskett, moments after the verdict and before the judge reimposed an order prohibiting principals in the case from discussing it. The statement alluded to the trial's focus on security rather than on the terrorists.

"On behalf of the 30,000 former employees of Pan Am, I appreciate the sincerity with which this jury undertook its task," the statement said. "That this trial has failed to solve the mystery that is the Lockerbie disaster is no fault of theirs.

"Indeed, much of what we do know with certainty about Lockerbie was not shared with this jury, and so today's verdict, much like the whole affair, remains clouded by uncertainty. We shall endeavor through the appeals process to shed some light on this uncertainty."

POLICE: Mistake led to incident, chief says

(From 1A)

Nobody's trying to hide anything. They felt very concerned," he said. The officers involved were D. Beatty and A. Navarrete.

Czech added that the family of Jasso had not contacted police.

The city is willing to pay medical bills incurred, Czech said.

Family members said they had not been contacted by city officials Friday afternoon.

A.D. Nunez, a Midland attorney representing Celia Gonzales, legal guardian of Jasso, said he is currently investigating the incident.

"At this time, we are trying to gather information about what occurred," Nunez said.

"We will be requesting the City of Midland and the chief of police for an official explanation of what happened," he added.

Family members said they think police acted hastily when they chased Jasso into his house on Walnut Lane.

Police were searching for an intoxicated man involved in a disturbance in the area, Czech said. That man had fled from police moments earlier, following the arrest of two others, he said.

Jasso, a thinly-built quiet man, said the officers scared him that night.

"I had a cigarette with me ... out in front. It was real spooky," he said of the incident that occurred about 11 p.m.

"He was out there smoking. He's always out there smoking," Ms. Gonzales said.

Jasso said he was near the roadway when he saw a car coming down the street. Apparently frightened, Jasso headed to the house, family members said.

"There was somebody behind me running. I didn't run too much. They wanted to catch me it sounded," Jasso said.

Czech said Jasso fit a description of the suspect. In addition, Jasso's actions and behavior, apparently because of his mental disability, led officers to believe Jasso was the wanted man, Czech said.

"Because he is a mental patient, that contributed to the error," Czech said.

Jasso, who was described as very reserved and passive by family members, has been treated for mental illness the last 26 years. He currently receives treatment from Mental Health & Mental Retardation Center of Midland and is on disability, family members said.

Jasso said that after he entered his home he was involved in "tug of war" with the door and police.

"They just came in," he said.

The commotion between Jasso and police caused Ms. Gonzales and her 16-year-old son, Lee, to emerge from their bedrooms.

"I looked out the (the bedroom) window and saw a policeman running into here. Things like that scare you," Ms. Gonzales said.

Ms. Gonzales and her son found the two officers restraining Jasso in the hallway inside the front door.

"He (Jasso) wouldn't say anything. He was quiet," Ms. Gonzales said.

"He was sitting on the floor with his hand behind his back. He just looked scared," Lee said.

Lee said he yelled at police several times explaining that Jasso was mentally ill.

When the officers released Jasso, "he had a big bump here, a bone sticking up. It looked real bad," Ms. Gonzales said pointing to her upper arm.

One of the officers called an ambulance, but Jasso, because of his fright, was taken to the hospital by Ms. Gonzales, she said.

Several other police arrived at the scene. After returning from the hospital, neighbors told Ms. Gonzales that some officers were apparently joking about the incident outside, she said.

Jasso spent three days in the hospital and had surgery performed on his right arm.

Ms. Gonzales said the officers apologized but she was never contacted about reimbursement for medical expenses.

JACKSON: Ex-coach pleads guilty to charge

(From 1A)

Charges came about during a recent inquiry into alleged misconduct by Jackson, Schorre said.

A Texas Department of Human Services report, supplied to the Reporter-Telegram by grandparents of two other alleged victims, initiated the inquiry into possible sexual abuse by Jackson. The two other alleged victims, both females, also resided with the Jacksons at one time.

Jackson, and his wife, Regina, have cared for foster children and adopted children for several years. They had seven children in their home, including their two biological children, at the time of the 1985 incident.

They were also named Family of the Year in 1985 in a program sponsored by the Midland Wards of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Jackson was vice principal of Midland Christian School at the time.

He also was head coach of the Midland Christian Mustang team that won the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Six-Man state football championship in 1991.

Jackson is reported to have resigned his posts with the school in May. He was not available for comment Friday.

As a result of recent investigations by DHS, the state of Texas filed a lawsuit in district court on June 3 on behalf of a 2-year-old girl residing with the Jacksons, court records indicate.

"This worker believes there has been a history of sexual abuse in the Jackson home," the affiant, a DHS worker, stated in the lawsuit.

On June 10, 238th District Judge John Hyde ordered the 2-year-old child be removed from the Jackson home and to remain in the custody of Department of Human Services, records show.

The Sex Offenders Program, run by the Midland County Probation Department, psychologically evaluates, counsels and monitors participants. Failure to successfully complete all aspects of the treatment results in discharge from the program and sanctions imposed.

CHAMBER: Program aims to improve math, reading skills skills — featured a demonstration by Los Angeles artist Carole Joyce.

The artist — who creates works in everything from ink, watercolor, pastel and clay — gave a demonstration on fashioning heads and figures from terra cotta clay.

"Now you have to squeeze the clay to get the air bubbles out," Ms. Joyce said, kneading a large lump of moist red terra cotta while children flocked around her.

"This program is giving children reading and math skills as well as art knowledge," said Robbyne Hocker Fuller, founding president of the chamber.

The chamber is offering weekly programs — in one-hour sessions from 3:30-4:30 p.m. — for six consecutive weeks. It will culminate in a celebration Aug. 21.

Ms. Fuller said the chamber educates and trains business people who in turn donate their skills to the chamber.

"I call it creative funding," she said, noting that the chamber offers a Carole Joyce Scholarship to two local high school students each year.

Program coordinator Benita Baker — whose son, Phillip, participated in the program — said she was pleased to see her son learn skills that will benefit him in the first grade next year.

"When school is out, things they learn are just forgotten," she said. "This will get him ready and motivated a bit before school starts."

Three teachers from Midland Independent School District — Karen Menefield, Lois Hillary and Kerry Melroe — volunteered their time to conduct Friday's session.

"It's wonderful," Ms. Menefield said. "It allows the children to learn without having to go summer school — which has a negative connotation. This is all done positively with no competition or pressure."

Carole Joyce will display and sell her artwork from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. today at the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs office, 2707 N. Big Spring. For more information call 682-2864.

Ms. Joyce designed the chamber's Alvin Ailey Dancers poster. Her artwork includes watercolors, sketches, and small and lifesize sculptures.

LAPD: Unit spied on mayor, celebrities, book claims

(From 1A)

Williams said Friday he started the investigation to ensure the integrity of the department, not because he did or didn't believed the allegations.

The book was co-written by a former detective in the unit, Mike Rothmiller, and journalist Ivan G. Goldman. Published by Pocket Books of New York, it is to reach stores July 17 and compete with Gates' own best-selling book.

The authors allege that the 57-member unit, created in 1957, has been spying on politicians, celebrities and other public figures for years, using electronic bugs, an elaborate intelligence network and surveillance operations.

The targets of the investigations, the book alleges, included longtime Gates foe Mayor Tom Bradley, Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team manager Tommy Lasorda, actor Robert Redford and CBS News' Connie Chung, who used to report for the local CBS-TV affiliate.

Other targets over the years included actress Marilyn Monroe, former U.S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, actress Barbra Streisand, singer Frank Sinatra and former Gov. Jerry Brown, the authors alleged.

"I was surprised, I was shocked when I heard about it," Lasorda said at Dodger Stadium on Friday before a game with the St. Louis Cardinals. "I don't know whether it's the truth or not," he said, adding that he hadn't done anything wrong "so to me, it's just a big joke."

Goldman said in an interview that among the intelligence sources for the unit was Bradley's driver, a Police Department member.

Rothmiller said he also felt a moral obligation to expose the alleged improprieties.

"In this country, you have a right to be free," he said at a news conference.

Gates, in a telephone interview with Cable News Network, said the unit was created to gather information on organized crime and had "a very fine record of dealing with organized crime, of dealing with the Mafia in this area."

Gates scoffed at allegations celebrities and politicians were spied upon.

"I think that just makes good reading," he said.

The authors declined to produce for reporters any reports, logs or written material to verify their claims. They also couldn't produce the name of any current or past unit officer to confirm their allegations.

Gates called Rothmiller a disgruntled former employee who was fired after lying about a work-related injury.

Among the book's allegations:

■ OCID leaked adverse information about its perceived enemies, including Bradley, while withholding information about people it considered as friends, including former Gov. George Deukmejian. Bradley unsuccessfully challenged Deukmejian for governor.

■ Six detectives watched a house owned by former Democratic Attorney General John Van de Kamp.

Gates acknowledged police once watched the home but said it was done with Van de Kamp's knowledge and that it "had to do with someone he rented to and I think that's all."

Van de Kamp said Friday that in the early 1980s Gates told him that narcotics officers had picked up a phone conversation between a suspected drug dealer and a caller from Van de Kamp's former beach home. It was never determined who made the call, he said.

■ Two members of the unit, called "Igor and Boris" by other OCID detectives, maintained a storehouse of electronic bugs and wiretaps.

■ OCID detectives were discouraged by LAPD officials from making arrests because it could disrupt the flow of information.

Allegations of police spying are not new. In 1985, the city reached an out-of-court settlement with community groups who claimed they were targets of surveillance by a police unit, since disbanded.

think that it's appropriate to run."

Brown said he would file a "lawsuits" to end all lawsuits" against Time Warner for pulling the commercial. He refused to say if his organization planned to buy air time in other cities.

The Bush campaign, meanwhile, is preparing its own advertisements, to be broadcast between the Democratic and Republican conventions. The advertisements, which are still in production, feature a combination of ordinary and famous Americans, including former President Ronald Reagan and the actor Kevin Costner, offering testimonials to Bush.

They stress the president's accomplishments in areas like foreign policy and education, and portray the president as a man who cares about the average American.

In one of the commercials, Barbara Bush says, "That's the George Bush I know."

Gore will be point man in pushing proposals in Congress, Clinton says

By Karen Ball
Associated Press writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton on Friday pointedly held out his vice presidential choice of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore as a telling contrast with President Bush's pick of Dan Quayle.

"This is my first decision," Clinton said at a joint news conference with Gore. "That was George Bush's first decision. I think if we're evaluated on them, I should be elected president."

The Arkansas governor said Gore, a 16-year veteran of Congress, would be his point man for moving proposals on jobs, health care and education through Congress in the first 100 days of a Clinton White House.

"In short, I don't want Al Gore to be the kind of vice president that sits in the United States Senate waiting to vote to break a tie," Clinton said. "I want him to break the logjam in Washington, to give us a government that works for all the people again."

Gore pledged to take on the assignment with "great relish and enthusiasm." He asked voters skeptical of their promise of change to remember that every Communist government in Eastern Europe had fallen in 100 days.

"Now it's our turn here in the United States of America," Gore said as the two fielded questions in front of a newly minted red-white-and-blue "Clinton-Gore" banner.

The two Democrats took a morning jog Friday and stopped at a McDonalds for coffee before meeting with reporters at a hotel. They dropped by an American Legion gathering in the same hotel before Gore headed home to Carthage, Tenn.

The new Democratic ticket planned a rally today in Gore's hometown, then the two were set to travel to Nashville for an appearance at an NAACP convention.

Clinton was moving on the Democratic National Convention in New York this evening; Gore was scheduled to meet him there Sunday on the eve of the four-day convention, where they will officially claim the presidential and vice presidential nominations.

'That was George Bush's first decision. I think if we're evaluated on them, I should be elected president.'

— Gov. Bill Clinton

At the news conference, Clinton acknowledged that his selection of Gore, a fellow baby boomer and Southerner, defied the traditional logic of offering a ticket with geographical and regional balance.

"I tried to take the political calculations out of this process and ask who would be the best president," Clinton said.

Gore grew up in Washington and spent 16 years in Congress, but Clinton said he thought it unfair to link Gore with Washington's gridlock, especially since Republicans have ruled for the last 12 years.

"There are people in our party who have contributed to the paralysis there," Clinton said. "I don't think you can put that at Al Gore's feet."

He said the Quayle-led Republican argument that Bush was the candidate best suited to protect American family values was "patently absurd."

"They're using it as a wedge. . . . It drips out of their mouth by saying 'We got it and they don't,'" Clinton said. "When they talk about family values, it's a way of letting themselves off the hook for having no vision, no program, and no plan. That's the blank the Clinton-Gore ticket's going to fill in this election.

Clinton, a five-term governor, said the ticket's youth — he is 45 and his running mate 44 — masked the lengthy experience both he and Gore have in government.

"He has an awful lot of experience and a genuine record of achievement that is nationally and internationally recognized," Clinton said. He also laughed off a question about the immediate Republican effort to paint Gore as a liberal.

"That's the same dog they trot out in every election and I don't think it will hunt this time," Clinton said.

Gore chimed in that some critics were calling him too liberal and others too conservative. "I guess we're doing something right."

Clinton said his selection of a white moderate did not mean he was taking the Democratic Party's traditional minority constituencies for granted. "We're going after everybody's vote," he said.

Clinton was nonplussed when asked about Jesse Jackson's ambivalence about the Clinton-Gore ticket, saying, "He'll just have to make up his mind on that — just like every other American." Gore spoke to Jackson on Thursday, but did not comment on the conversation.

Ships en route to Yugoslavia

■ U.S., Western Europe agree that military should monitor coastal waters so sanctions aren't violated.

Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland — The United States and Western Europe agreed Friday to immediately dispatch more than a half-dozen frigates off Yugoslavia to monitor the coastal waters to make sure U.N. sanctions are not violated.

The move, stopping well short of a naval blockade in the Adriatic Sea, was designed to heighten pressure on Serbia and Montenegro to halt the violence that has killed more than 7,500 people in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The crisis in Yugoslavia — and the West's inability to curb it — dominated the two-day summit of the Conference of Security and Cooperation in Europe.

But leaders' failure to take a strong stand against Yugoslavia weakened their efforts. They did issue a statement expressing "dismay" at the worsening situation. It placed prime responsibility on the authorities in Belgrade, the capital of Serbia. Russia blocked stronger language.

In a surprise move, Milan Panic, the prime minister-designate of Yugoslavia, made a visit to Helsinki, where 51 nations gathered for the security conference. Yugoslavia was barred from the talks.

Panic, a Yugoslav-born American, pledged in a round of meetings with Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Russian and other officials to bring peace to the devastated region.

In remarks that appeared to set him on a collision course with Slobodan Milosevic, the Serbian leader blamed for fomenting violence in Bosnia, Panic issued a stern warning: "God help him if he gets in my way."

Baker said Panic had agreed that Serbia needs to withdraw, disarm and disband forces it has been supporting in the newly independent Bosnia.

But, Baker said, "The world still demands deeds from Yugoslavia, not just words."

Leaders sought to put more muscle on the 20-year-old CSCE so it can become a security organization for all of Europe in the post-Cold War era.

The declaration adopted by the leaders allows active peacekeeping and intervention in ethnic disputes. It also calls for streamlining some decision-making so the group, which operates by consensus, can move faster in crisis.

President Bush, winding up a six-day overseas trip, said he was "reluctant to get bogged down" in any military intervention in the Yugoslav war.

He said the United Nations, for now, should take the lead in supplying humanitarian supplies to Bosnia. He spoke in an interview with the PBS television program "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour."

Even so, the United States promised ships for the naval operation mounted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Western European Union, a separate security group.

In Washington, a senior military officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said an American frigate, the USS Jack Williams, would take part.

This would bolster an operation put together by the nine nations of the WEU, which has been targeted as the future defense arm of the European Community, the 12-nation trading bloc.

The WEU nations — Belgium, Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal and Spain — agreed to send five to six ships, backed by aircraft patrols and helicopters, to monitor traffic heading for Serbia and Montenegro.

The 16-nation NATO, heavily influenced by the United States, quickly decided to offer some of its own frigates and destroyers.

The frigates' task will be to try to determine — without stopping and searching ships — whether cargo banned by the United Nations is getting through illegally.

On May 30, the U.N. Security Council imposed a broad economic and trade embargo against Serbia and Montenegro as part of international pressure to end the bloody conflict in Bosnia.

But there have been persistent reports of sanctions-busting.

"Sanctions cannot remain words without deeds," said French President Francois Mitterrand.

It was not clear how many frigates and destroyers in all would sail for the Adriatic.

The only access to the Adriatic now controlled by the truncated Yugoslavia is an 80- to 90-mile stretch from Cavtat, just south of Dubrovnik, to the Albanian border.

There is no way of knowing what, or how much, banned goods have been getting into Montenegro from that coast. Most probably would be unloaded at the main deepwater port of Bar.

The allies did not rule out the possibility of asking the United Nations for permission to take tougher military measures against Serbia.

British Prime Minister John Major said the allies would study the feasibility of sending soldiers and aircraft to open up a land corridor to get relief supplies to the Bosnian capital, Sarajevo.

He promised that his government would consider providing air cover — but no ground troops — for any operation approved by the United Nations to move land convoys into Sarajevo.

Cardinal wishes he could have married

LONDON (AP) — The head of the Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales says he regrets never being married.

Cardinal Basil Hume, 69, talked about marriage in an interview to be broadcast Sunday by British Broadcasting Corp. radio.

"Every time I did a marriage, every time I see people married, I say, 'That could have been me.' So I think a successful celibate has to regret he wasn't married," Hume said, according to a BBC transcript of the interview.

"I think it is very important to realize that people who choose to be celibate do so not because they have any opposition to marriage and all that's involved;" he said.

"Deep down we remain human, very human, and we have all the desires to love and be loved by one other person," the cardinal said.

Dickens County grand jury indicts Erdmann for falsifying autopsy

By Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — A West Texas pathologist has been indicted on charges of falsifying the autopsy of a 14-year-old hit-and-run victim, The Associated Press learned Friday.

A source close to the investigation said two sealed indictments returned by the Dickens County grand jury charge Lubbock doctor Ralph Erdmann with theft and tampering with a government record.

The indictments will be unsealed following the doctor's arrest, the source said. Dickens County sheriff's deputies were still seeking Erdmann's arrest late Friday.

Erdmann was indicted on the same charges by a Hockley County grand jury in February for falsifying the autopsy of a 41-year-old man.

A court of inquiry into the doctor's career produced evidence that will soon go before a Lubbock County grand jury. The evidence included allegations by police that Erdmann faked dozens of autopsies while working as Lubbock County's pathologist, a post he resigned in March.

Several phone calls by the AP to Erdmann's residence went unanswered Friday.

In his autopsy report of 14-year-old Jesse Land of Spur, Erdmann claimed he opened the boy's head and determined that he died instantly of a broken neck after being struck by a pickup truck last October.

After exhuming Land's body in May, Dallas pathologist Linda Norton and newly appointed Ector County pathologist Sparks Veasey concluded the victim's head was never opened.

Erdmann is accused of taking $650 from Dickens County officials for an autopsy only partially completed.

Ms. Norton and Veasey also found Land died of a head injury, not a broken neck, and may have survived had he received timely aid.

"What we basically found was that there wasn't any injury to the neck," Ms. Norton said in a phone interview from Dallas Friday. "The most prominent injury was to the head. It's what we call a closed head injury. It's an injury you suffer when propelled through space and force is imparted on the head when it ultimately comes to rest."

Ms. Norton, who has been a licensed pathologist since 1976, said it appears Erdmann simply felt the victim's head and neck to make his conclusion.

"Dr. Erdmann came to a conclusion about the cause of death without doing a complete autopsy," Ms. Norton said. "And in a case of a pedestrian hit by a motor vehicle, the most common cause of death is head injury.

"I don't condone doing an autopsy on anyone without opening the head. But certainly if you are going to cut corners, this was not the one to do it. In a high-profile case like this one, a pathologist should give extra special attention."

The fact the boy might have lived through the accident was crucial to the trial of the defendant in the case.

Former Dickens County Commissioner Vernon Wright, 75, last week was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in Land's death and sentenced to 10 years probation.

On Friday, Wright was sentenced to five years probation by state District Judge Randy Hollums for failing to stop and render aid to Land. Moments later, Wright was removed from office.

Dickens County District Attorney Becky McPherson says Wright's trial would have been adversely affected without the exhumation to check Erdmann's work.

"I think the jury would have been cheated if we didn't have this second autopsy," Ms. McPherson said Friday.

"It was important to know what (Land) died of and if he didn't die immediately and if he could have gotten help," Ms. McPherson said. "It affects the ability to stop and render aid."

Jury orders Keating, others to pay $3 billion

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A federal jury Friday ordered Charles Keating Jr. and three others to pay at least $3 billion in damages for cheating thousands of people who invested in his savings and loan company.

The judge had already ruled that Keating had conspired to defraud investors — many of them elderly people who put up their life's savings — so the jury's job was to decide how much the defendants owed.

After eight days of deliberations, the jury awarded $600 million in compensatory damages and $1.5 billion in punitive damages against the executive who has come to symbolize the abuses of the S&L industry.

Keating, 68 and already in prison on California criminal charges stemming from the same investments, appeared only once at the trial. He didn't send lawyers, saying he couldn't afford to because of a pending federal criminal case.

The verdict followed a 3½-month trial on lawsuits in which more than 20,000 class-action plaintiffs claimed losses of $288.7 million on investments in Phoenix-based American Continental. Much of the money was spent on American Continental junk bonds sold in the lobbies of the company's Irvine, Calif.-based subsidiary, Lincoln Savings.

The investments collapsed when American Continental declared bankruptcy and Lincoln was seized by the government in April 1989 in a record $2.6 billion taxpayer bailout.

"When I first heard it, it's great," said plaintiff Marguerite Maire, 74, a retired legal secretary from Hacienda Heights, Calif. But she noted, "These people left, as far as I know, don't have any money."

Terry Adamson, lawyer for one of Keating's co-defendants, Saudi European Investment Corp., said the decision is "a tough message to send to the world and the country not to come to Arizona and invest."

"Charlie Keating is not a very popular person to be a co-defendant with," Adamson said.

The lawsuits originally named 99 people and companies as defendants, including national law and accounting firms accused of helping Keating decieve regulators about the health of his financial empire.

But 90 of the defendants agreed to settle out of court before or during the trial for a total that plaintiffs' lawyers estimated could reach $250 million.

The co-defendants remaining at the end of the trial were Saudi European Investment Corp.; Chandler, Ariz., developer Conley Wolfswinkel; and Continental Southern Inc., an Atlanta developer.

The exact amount of the final damage award was unclear because U.S. District Judge Richard Bilby must use a complicated formula that involves tripling part of the award, under racketeering law, and possibly discounting other parts.

Plaintiffs' lawyers said the final total would range from $3.05 billion to $3.95 billion.

The jury awarded compensatory damages of $300 million against SEIC; $600 million against CSI and $518 million against Wolfswinkel.

Bilby had instructed the jury that it couldn't award punitive damages against any defendant but Keating.

Alleged crime bosses to hear U.S. testimony

ROME (AP) — Four men accused of being Italian Mafia bosses are headed to the United States to hear trial testimony from two Italians safeguarded under the U.S. witness protection program, a judicial source said Friday.

Italian judges and attorneys also will attend the hearing Thursday in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., according to the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

It is not unusual for Italian judges and prosecutors to take testimony from witnesses in the United States, but a new legal code that went into force in Italy last year now allows defendants to attend such sessions too.

The hearing is part of a trial that began in March in Palermo, Sicily. Fourteen men were charged with international drug trafficking and criminal association after a freighter carrying 600 kilograms of Colombian cocaine was intercepted off Sicily in 1988.

The judicial source said at least four defendants have asked to attend the U.S. hearing: cousins Vincenzo and Raffaele Galatolo, Stefano Fontana and Antonio Madonia.

In Washington, the court will take testimony from Joe Cuffaro and Francesco Marino Mannoia, as well as FBI agents. Mannoia, in particular, has been described as a key "repentant" Mafioso who has told authorities about the structure of the Sicilian underworld.

Italy does not have a witness protection program and several former members of the Italian mob are living in the United States under assumed identities.

The case is considered particularly important because slain anti-Mafia judge Giovanni Falcone helped develop evidence. Falcone, his wife and three bodyguards were assassinated when a bomb blew up on a highway outside Palermo in May.

Testimony: Party formed KGB teams

MOSCOW (AP) — Two days after the Soviet Communist Party supposedly gave up its monopoly on power in 1990, it secretly created elite KGB teams to fight its domestic enemies, according to court testimony Friday.

The disclosure came during the fourth day of a politically charged trial in Russia's Constitutional Court, which is considering a challenge to President Boris Yeltsin's ban on the former ruling party.

Yeltsin banned the party and nationalized its property after last August's failed coup by hard-liners in the party, KGB and military.

The Constitutional Court is considering a lawsuit by communists who contend that Yeltsin's decrees exceeded his constitutional authority. The court has combined the main case with a countersuit filed by anti-communist legislators who want the party to be declared unconstitutional.

The trial, which began Tuesday, is expected to continue for at least 10 more days. Russian newspapers have covered it intensively, but it is not being shown live on television.

Each day of the trial has brought disclosures of documents on the party's crimes, including repression of dissidents, assassinations and support of terrorism. Most of the acts have long been known or suspected, but details and proof have been lacking.

The panel of 13 judges asked lawyers to focus their arguments on whether the Communist Party had changed into a law-abiding, "parliamentary-type" party after March 14, 1990, when the constitution was amended to allow a multi-party system.

Andrei Makarov, a lawyer representing anti-communist legislators, argued that the party did not really loosen its grip on power.

As evidence, he read a secret March 16, 1990, decision of the party's Politburo — then headed by former Soviet president and party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev — creating five regional KGB "Alpha" groups.

The document, one of thousands of newly declassified papers from the party's super-secret "Special File," said the men assigned to the elite units had to be communists loyal to the socialist motherland.

The "Alpha" groups each contained 45 men and were trained to fight terrorists and undertake covert missions. They were later accused of participating in the bloody crackdown on the Baltic republics in early 1991.

They were ordered to storm the Russian White House during last August's coup, but they refused.

Makarov argued that the "Alpha" groups were part of a long tradition of secret squads established by the party to carry out so-called "special tasks," including assassinations.

He read excerpts from documents showing that former Premier Nikita Khrushchev ordered the secret police's infamous "Bureau No. 2" to murder the head of the Ukrainian Catholic Church and other political opponents in the 1950s.

Although Yeltsin has said the trial may decide "the fate of Russia," public interest appears to be light, perhaps because the communist faithful is small.

In addition, many Russians are tired of politics after the turbulence of the past year. Their attention is focused on pocketbook issues, and the crimes of the Communist Party ceased to be sensational news after the revelations of Gorbachev's "glasnost," or openness, in the late 1980s.

Questions from the judges, who were appointed late last year for life terms, indicate they may be moving toward a compromise decision that would leave Yeltsin's decrees intact but clear the way for new, pro-communist parties to be established.

Makarov said Friday his side in the lawsuit has no objection to the formation of opposition parties that espouse socialist or Marxist-Leninist ideas. But, he added, the new parties should not be allowed to take over the Communist Party's name or property.

Waite meets woman who sent him inspirational post card

BEDFORD, England (AP) — Former Beirut hostage Terry Waite on Friday met the woman whose postcard inspired him during nearly five years of captivity in Lebanon.

Joy Brodier, a 38-year-old former teacher, had mailed Waite the postcard showing John Bunyan, the 17th century author of "Pilgrim's Progress" who spent more than 12 years in prison for his early English Baptist beliefs.

Mrs. Brodier was later amazed to hear Waite, the former Church of England envoy, kidnapped in Beirut in January 1987, mention the card after he was released in November.

The two met at the Bunyan Meeting House in Bedford, 46 miles north of London, under a stained glass picture of Bunyan.

The meeting was "a chance to combine the past with the future — to see symbolically through a window that there is a future beyond a prison cell," said Waite, 53, who is now working on his memoirs at Cambridge University.

"I looked at this card so often," Waite said. "I was given a Bible and I kept it in the Bible. I thought I must at all cost remember the name of the person who sent it so when I got out I would be able to contact them."

Mrs. Brodier said she was stunned to hear Waite, at a news conference just after his release, mention her inspirational card, which she had sent to him in care of the Hezbollah, or Party of God, in Lebanon.

"I could not believe it. I was not sure at first it was my card that got to him because so many people must have sent them, but there was a small chance, and then it turned out it was," she said.

The postcard arrived as Waite was spending nearly four years in solitary confinement.

Panama rejoices after Noriega is sentenced to 40 years in prison

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians honked horns and banged pots in raucous celebration Friday after Manuel Noriega was sentenced to 40 years in prison. The government said the sentence ended "a painful chapter in our nation's history."

Residents took to the streets and waved white handkerchiefs that symbolized the opposition to Noriega's six-year rule, which ended with the December 1989 U.S. invasion.

President Guillermo Endara, who was sworn into office soon after the invasion began, said Noriega's regime was a "sad experience that should serve as a lesson ... that this tragedy we lived on our soil shall never be repeated."

Even with a 40-year sentence, Endara said, "Noriega, in reality, will never pay for all the bloodshed that occurred in Panama."

Soon after the sentencing in Miami, Noriega opponents waving white flags gathered on Calle 50, a downtown street that was the main site of protests during Noriega's regime.

"Today we can shout out loud, without fear of the gorillas and the dobermans," said 50-year-old Manuel Jaen. "We no longer have to fear rifle shot and tear gas."

A band of musicians struck up songs normally played during the rowdy pre-Lenten Carnival festival, fighting for air time with honking horns.

Those rejoicing were quick to note that the sentencing came the same date in 1987 when thousands of Noriega opponents took to the streets to demand the strongman's ouster — a protest that brought a swift military crackdown.

July 10, 1987, has since been remembered as "Black Friday." Hundreds of people were arrested or injured.

"This is Noriega's Black Friday," said Maria Gonzalez, who waved the white banner of the anti-Noriega Civilian Crusade.

Board of education imposes fines for errors in textbooks

AUSTIN (AP) — Publishers who didn't make required corrections in school textbooks could pay penalties worth nearly $860,000 under Friday action by the State Board of Education.

The 10 publishers of the $35.8 million worth of books, which cover a variety of subjects, do not have to agree to the penalties, said Board Chairwoman Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont.

But if they don't, the board could cancel their book contracts or not allow them to participate the next time Texas buys books, she said.

"I feel like the publishers are going to agree to this," Ms. Crawford said.

A total of 147 mistakes were found in student or teacher editions of more than two dozen textbooks.

That was after publishers signed affidavits saying the errors, which were identified during the textbook adoption process, had been corrected.

They include some of the history textbooks that drew widespread attention after thousands of mistakes were found in sample books. Publishers of history books already have been fined $647,000, with the payment to be made in books.

The books in controversy this time also include pre-algebra, physics, English, geometry and office skills. They are among $131.2 million worth of textbooks adopted for use beginning next school year. Other publishers made required corrections.

The board voted 10-1 to impose fines of $3,000 for each of 49 factual errors, and $1,000 each for 98 technical errors, such as a misplaced comma. These fines would be paid in books.

Publishers also could be required to pay school districts 50 cents per textbook, to cover the expense of affixing correction sheets to the books. More than 1.2 million textbooks have been ordered.

As an alternative, publishers may employ people to put in the correction sheets.

The publishers also must provide the correction sheets, and fix remaining errors at the books' next printing.

Board member Jane Nelson of Double Oak, who voted against the penalties, instead wanted the board to reject the books.

"I think this board's integrity is at stake. We have said time and time again that we are going to get tough" concerning textbook errors, she said.

"I think it's very, very important right now that we make it clear we are not going to spend taxpayers' dollars on textbooks that have errors in them," Ms. Nelson said.

But others expressed concern that students would be hurt if the textbooks weren't available. Ms. Crawford said most of the previously used textbooks already had been shipped out of schools.

And despite the errors, she said, "I think the books are much better than the books that have been out there."

Among remaining factual errors are wrong dates in history books. And a physics book told of a police radar gun measuring speed in kilometers, when such guns are calibrated in miles per hour.

Police sergeant charged with beating offficer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A veteran police sergeant has been charged with the severe beating of a female officer who was working in an undercover drug investigation, authorities said Friday.

Sgt. Victor Cruz Martinez, 45, a 19-year police veteran, was charged Thursday with aggravated assault with serious bodily injury. He was being held Friday in the Bexar County jail in lieu of a $25,000 bond.

Patrolwoman Karen Falks was treated at North Central Baptist Hospital for a broken nose, lacerations and a possible broken left hand, police said.

Falks, who has been with the department three years, was assaulted on a sparsely populated road Thursday after a quarrel erupted when she was talking with Martinez as part of her undercover investigation, police said.

Martinez was off duty at the time, police said.

Police Chief William O. Gibson said the drug investigation was launched by the police department about a month ago and the FBI was brought into it about halfway through the probe.

Gibson said Friday that police "found no evidence of any narcotics activity'" involving Martinez. He will be placed on administrative leave pending the conclusion of the investigation, Gibson said.

The drug investigation began after the department received some allegations of misconduct by Martinez, Gibson said, declining to discuss details of the investigation.

The FBI was asked to join the probe because some of the alleged incidents may have occurred across state lines, he said.

FBI officers and police quickly arrested Martinez as a suspect in the assault.

■ Toby Harrah's term as interim manager for the Texas Rangers may be a short one as a list of possible replacements emerges.

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Even if Toby Harrah keeps his vow to become the best interim manager in baseball, that might not keep him filling out the Texas Rangers' lineup card in the second half of this season.

Not with Davey Johnson, Don Baylor and others available to manage a team loaded with Ruben Sierra, Juan Gonzales, Ivan Rodriguez and Nolan Ryan but toiling in third place in the American League West.

Rangers general manager Tom Grieve was tight-lipped Friday about the names on his list of possible replacements for Bobby Valentine, who was fired Thursday after seven seasons without winning a division title.

"I think that process begins right now," Grieve said Friday. "I'm not going to be talking about individual names and I'm not going to give a day-by-day account."

Grieve, who will have the final word on the hiring, said he had not yet contacted other teams to request permission to interview their personnel.

But, Grieve said "I'm sure that some of the people we would identify as candidates are employed by other teams."

He said he hopes to name a replacement by the end of the All-Star break.

Harrah, who was promoted from dugout coach, got off to a good start Thursday with a 14-4 victory over Cleveland.

Grieve said Harrah is a candidate for the permanent post. Managing general partner George W. Bush said Harrah's tenure will not be considered an audition.

Oiler may retire

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers defensive end Sean Jones plans to retire, but Oilers Coach Jack Pardee still wants him on the team.

The 29-year-old player's agent, Marvin Demoff, informed the Oilers of Jones' plans.

Jones, who missed training camp the last two years because of contract hassles, would be entering the second year of a three-year contract that pays him $2.4 million plus incentives.

Jones could be fined $1,500 per day if he fails to show up for camp beginning July 19, and Pardee speculated the retirement announcement was a ploy for Jones to avoid fines.

"I still want him on the team," Pardee said. "He played well last year. I hope he changes his mind."

Last year, Jones made $700,000 in base salary plus another $100,000 for registering 10½ sacks. He'd make $750,000 this season and $950,000 next year, plus $140,000 in incentives.

Greg LeMond pedals in front of Italy's Claudio Chappucci, left, during the final breakaway in the sixth stage of the Tour de France.

LeMond makes move

Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A well-rested Greg LeMond made a big move up in the standings during the sixth stage of the Tour de France on Friday, sending a message to the other contenders that he'll be there at the end again this year.

LeMond started the day in 14th place but joined Claudio Chiappucci of Italy and two others in a breakaway from the pack with 12 miles to go.

By the time it was over, LeMond had taken a large bite out of Frenchman Pascal Lino's overall lead, pulling himself into fifth place, 4:29 behind.

After a slow start helped along by the fatigue caused by a long trip from his home in Belgium to San Sebastian, Spain, LeMond finally seemed confident following Friday's 105-mile race from Roubaix, France.

"I am feeling better. I have had a couple days to recover in the pack," the three-time champion said. "We knew the route would be dangerous and you have to take your chances when they come. Now we will see what happens in the time trial."

LeMond was poised to make a move from the start. Early in the day, when Chiappucci took off on a mini-break just 14 miles in, LeMond went with him.

LeMond picked up bonus seconds in the sprint before they were caught by Thierry Marie of France, who went on alone until the pack caught him at 62 miles.

With 24 miles to go, rains came and Chiappucci, followed by LeMond, Frenchman Laurent Jalabert and Dane Brian Holm, broke away again, this time leaving the pack for good.

In the final stretch, near the famous Atomium of the Brussels World Fair, Jalabert went on to the victory.

"I didn't really think about victory in this Belgian stage," Jalabert said. "But I welcome it anyway. I did my work with the others but when we were a minute and a half ahead, I started to rest to conserve myself for the sprint."

Chiapucci was second in the finish, Holm was third and LeMond fourth.

Lino's lead actually improved — from 1:54 over ROM teammate Richard Virenque to 3:11 over Canada's Steve Bauer — when Virenque dropped to fourth, 4:02 behind.

Chiapucci climbed into third place, 3:34 behind, world champion Gianni Bugno is seventh, 5:06 back, and defending champion Miguel Indurain held ninth, 5:33 off the pace.

The Tour continues its European swing Saturday when the racers head for Valkenbourg, the Netherlands. It then touches Koblenz, Germany.

Stockton strolls to 3-stroke edge

Youngest senior leads Open

Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Dave Stockton, the youngest player among his fellow seniors, shot a 5-under-par 66 Friday for a record 36-hole and a 3-stroke lead at the U.S. Senior Open.

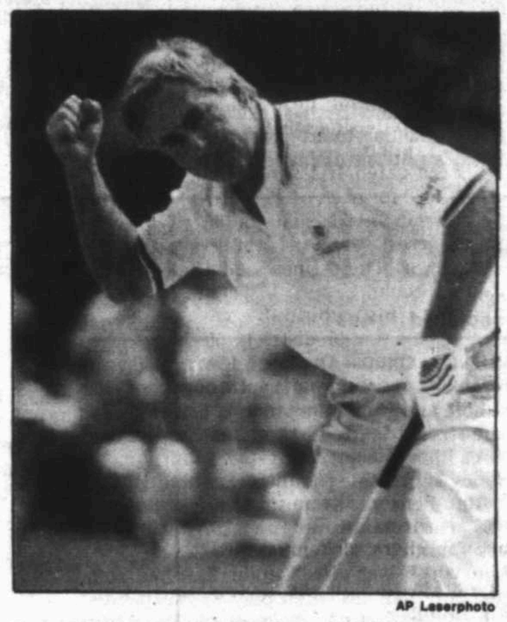

Stockton, a senior rookie at 50 after 27 years on the PGA Tour, had no problem with the fast greens of the 6,700-yard Saucon Valley Country Club course. He rolled in five birdie putts in a bogey-free round that gave him a two-day total of 9-under-par 133.

"It was like a walk in the park," Stockton said.

He added that on the advice of his psychologist, "my goal this week is not to win the U.S. Open but to control my emotions and be a happy camper. I'm a happy camper."

The previous 36-hole Open record was 135 by Lee Trevino in

Angels hold on to share of first

■ Midland gets a three-run home run from Edgar Alfonzo and scores a 9-5 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

Staff report

TULSA — The Midland Angels came from behind here Friday night to pound the Tulsa Drillers 9-5, but still couldn't take over sole possession of first place in the Texas League West.

El Paso defeated Shreveport 4-3 on Friday to maintain a share of first place with the Angels.

Midland trailed the Drillers by a 4-1 margin in the sixth inning when Edgar Alfonzo hit a three-run, two-out homer to knot the game and send the Angels on the way to the victory. It was Alfonzo's first homer as an Angel since joining the club for the second half pennant drive, but he wasn't through.

Alfonzo later hit his second homer, a two-run shot, in Midland's four-run eighth and that put the game on ice. Rod Correia also knocked in two runs. Alfonzo had five RBI on the night.

David Hulse, a former star at San Angelo Central, gave the Drillers a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a leadoff homer off Mark Zappelli. J.R. Phillips hit his 10th homer of the season in the second to tie the game, but Midland then ran into trouble.

Zappelli gave up four of the five Tulsa runs, but went seven innings to pick up his sixth win in seven decisions this year.

Brett Merriman came on in the eighth to pick up his ninth save of the season, but it wasn't a pretty outing. He did give up a ninth inning run.

Tulsa reliever Rob Brown (3-4) took the loss.

NBA stars tone down 'no mercy' strategy

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

For nearly two weeks, the U.S. Olympic basketball team said that it wouldn't worry whether it was running up the score, regardless of the quality of the competition.

If the margin was 8 points or 80, the players said, they were going all out. Let the opposition worry about being embarrassed.

But the reality of the situation at last week's Tournament of the Americas was that these NBA stars wouldn't really enjoy winning by 100 points, although it appears obvious they could have. If the pattern continues when Team USA meets Angola in their Olympic opener on July 26, the lead could very well be 40 at halftime and 50 when it's over.

The "no mercy" strategy was alive in the U.S. team's first three games against Cuba, Canada and Panama, who shot a combined 34.4 percent in the first half and 34.0 percent in the second, indicating the Americans' kept up their defensive intensity throughout.

In the next three games, however, Argentina, Puerto Rico and Venezuela combined to shoot 30.8 percent in the first half and 52.1 percent in the second half. None of these games were closer than 38 points at the end, but the willingness to run up the score clearly was absent.

"I think our defense is strong enough to take away anything the other team can try to do," said Larry Bird, who watched most of the tournament from the sidelines with a stiff back.

Bird might have added that the defense plays that well only as long as a challenge is there.

Michael Jordan, a six-time scoring champion and an acknowledged defensive stopper, admitted that he wasn't highly motivated in Portland. Despite a 24-point outing, Jordan averaged just 12.7 points in six games.

"There will be times in Barcelona when Michael gets challenged and he will have to show the world 'who I am,'" Magic Johnson said. "But all of us have such great teammates, we don't have to carry the whole burden."

"You really learn a lot in this kind of situation," Team USA center David Robinson said. "I see Clyde Drexler in a different way, how he helps the team. I see what Magic does in terms of control of the game and bringing the ball up. I see what Michael likes to do. Defensively, I've learned a lot, what I could count on from different guys."

Any hopes by the opposition that U.S. team would be a bunch of ball hogs were quickly dispelled by the six games in Portland, where 74 percent of the U.S. baskets came on assists.

The NBA champion Chicago Bulls had assists on 63 percent of their baskets last season. For the NBA as a whole, the figure was 59 percent.

Charles Barkley said that coach Chuck Daly has the easiest job in the world, but Daly is a pessimist at heart. He's spending the two weeks between the Portland tournament and the pre-Olympic training camp in Monte Carlo fretting about the slightest threat.

"I get a little concerned about the five-foul rule and the potential for fouls, particularly at the point guard position," Daly said.

Hatalsky ups lead with 5-under-par 66

Associated Press

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Morris Hatalsky is in position to set a PGA Tour standard for putting economy — and he couldn't care less.

PGA

Hatalsky increased his lead to three shots with a 5-under-par 66 in Friday's second round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

He was at 11-under 131 after a muggy day when temperatures hovered around 100 degrees at Kingsmill Golf Club.

Hatalsky's 26 putts Friday were six more than he needed in his opening round. But his two-day total put him on track to challenge Kenny Knox's tour record of 93 putts in a one tournament.

"That has no significance at all. It really doesn't," Hatalsky said. "All I want to do is have a good tournament."

It's a realistic goal for someone who missed the cut in 10 of his previous 15 events this season and is 203rd on the money list with winnings of less than $12,000.

"I'm really pleased overall," he said, "and I think the biggest thing that comes to mind on why I'm doing so well is the putting."

Peter Persons, Hatalsky's playing partner for the first two rounds and his closest pursuer, concurred. Persons could do little more than shake his head in amazement after Hatalsky's putting display Friday, which included two birdie putts from 30 feet and one from 40 feet.

"When he gets himself in position, man, he takes care of business," Persons said. "It's almost unbelievable the way he's putting."

Persons was one shot off the lead before bogeying his final two holes. He wound up with a 3-under 68 that featured seven birdies and four bogeys.

"It's kind of discouraging to make that many birdies and finish that way," Persons said. "Bad swings. Bad club selection. You name it. I'm pretty upset to finish that way because I really did play so well."

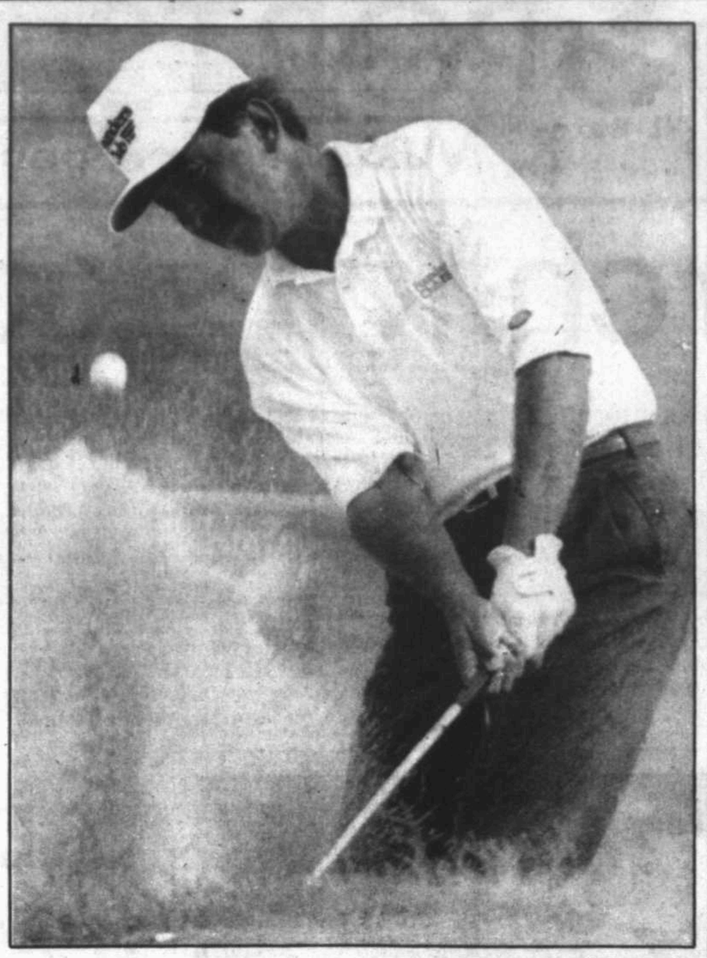

Leading the pack at 7-under 135 was Bruce Lietzke, who rebounded from a 72 to shoot an 8-under 63, one stroke off the course record.

"Yesterday I played like I had taken six weeks off, which I did," Lietzke said. "Today, no problem. Everything fell back to where it was at Colonial, which was my last tournament."

Also at 135 were Tom Lehman, David Peoples and Ed Dougherty. Lehman had a 68 and Peoples and Dougherty carded 69s.

Jim Gallagher Jr. and Frank Conner were at 6-under 136, Gallagher after a 67 and Conner after a 70.

Kingsmill resident Curtis Strange followed the lead of Lietzke, his playing partner, by shooting a 63. That vaulted Strange into contention at 4-under 138.

AP Laserphoto

Morris Hatalsky increased his lead at the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Among those who didn't make the cut was John Cook, a two-time winner this season who is fourth on the money list. Cook's 75 left him at 6-over 148.

There were no serious heat-related problems reported, but the oppressive conditions slowed the pace of play to a crawl. Each threesome needed about 5 hours to complete 18 holes.

Hatalsky, not surprisingly, said he was not bothered by the constant waits between shots.

"When you're playing well, it's not much of an annoyance at all," he said. "It's easy to be patient when you're knocking in putts."

OPEN: Nicklaus just five strokes off leader's pace

(From 1C)

1990, at Ridgwood (N.J.) Country Club.

Gibby Gilbert, winner of the last two regular Senior Tour events, is second at 6-under 136 after shooting a second-round 4-under 67 with a four-birdie, no-bogey card.

Stockton said he wasn't uncomfortable with the lead.

"I don't usually back up," he said. "I don't look for the others to back up. I suspect we'll continue to make birdies. I like the lead, but it doesn't matter until Sunday. I think a whole lot more people are uncomfortable that I got to 9-under."

He added, "I played like someone who knew what they were doing."

Another stroke back at 137 came South African Simon Hobday, Jim Colbert and Al Geiberger. Hobday shot 3-under 68, and Colbert and Geiberger 5-under 66s.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, with a second-round 68, joined Jack Kiefer and Charles Coody at 138, five strokes off the pace. Gary Player finished with a 68 Friday and and was in contention at 139.

Lee Trevino, playing with a pad protecting an injured left thumb, managed a 4-under 67 and was one of three at 140, seven strokes behind the leader. He really scrambled with eight birdies and four bogeys.

Also at 140 were Lloyd Moody, Richard Rhyan, and Larry Laoretti.

The only others under par after two rounds were Jim Dent, Miller Barber and Harold Henning at 141.

It was an impressive display by Stockton, who ranks second only to Trevino in putting statistics among seniors. He used a 30-year-old putter resurrected from a storeroom for this tournament because he felt the ball came off the blade softer and insured a little more loft.

He overcame tough pin placements and spike pock-marks customarily found during a late afternoon round. He said of the placements, "they have to put them somewhere and I'll find them."

Stockton started the day deadlocked with Kiefer, the little-known club pro from Newton, N.J., each with 4-under 67s in Thursday's first round.

Stockton took the lead on the eighth hole with a 30-foot birdie putt to go 6-under and never was headed. Kiefer shot par 71 for a two-round total of 138, five back.

Stockton played par through four holes before his first birdie of the day, a 16-footer at the 411-yard fifth hole.

On the back nine, Stockton holed birdie putts of 12 and 17 feet and 14 inches to finish his third 66 of the year.

Gilbert's round included a 50-footer at the par 3 11th. He described it as "the putt of the tournament. It had at least a 10-12 foot break. I'd have been happy to get within six feet."

Hobday, 52, the South African who has played most of his career on the European and South African circuits, had five birdies and two bogeys.

Nicklaus expressed satisfaction with his round.

"Obviously I played a pretty decent round of golf. It was solid. The key shots were the second at 16 and the second putt on 17.

At 16, Nicklaus hit his drive into the woods. It appeared to be an improbable shot to the green.

But not for Nicklaus. His five-iron shot hit the cup and rolled about 10 feet past. He holed the putt for a birdie that left him 4-under.

Player said of his 3-under 68, "Anytime you break par on this course you had a good day. I putted extremely well. I've changed my putter and just feel more comfortable. I have a smoother stroke." He had four birdies and one bogey.

Trevino started the second round Friday despite a sprain of a lateral joint on his left thumb. He received a cortisone shot Thursday night and had a "doughnut" type pad placed over the sore spot Friday morning.

Rookie grabs top spot at LPGA Phar-Mor

Associated Press

VIENNA, Ohio — Denise Baldwin, a 30-year-old rookie, overcame a triple bogey on the first hole and shot a 4-under-par 68 Friday for a one-stroke lead in the weather-delayed LPGA's Phar-Mor in Youngstown tournament.

Nancy Lopez, Meg Mallon, Brandie Burton and Amy Benz were one shot back at 3-under-par 69 after rounds over the 6,297-yard Squaw Creek Country Club course.

Ann Walsh was also 3 under but had completed only 13 holes when play was suspended for the day at 7:24 p.m. because of rain. About 50 of the 144 golfers were still on the course at the time.

Playing in her 14th LPGA event, Baldwin bounced back from the disastrous first hole by sinking approach shots for eagles on the par-4 seventh and 10th holes. She used a wedge from 104 yards away on No. 7 and a 6-iron from 163 yards out on No. 10.

They were her sixth and seventh eagles of the year, but her first two on par-4 holes.

Rain interrupted her round for 90 minutes on the third hole, and she used the break wisely after shooting a 7 on the par-4 first hole.

"It was a good time for me to regroup and relax," she said. "After that start, it was just a test of patience. I tried to remind myself that there were still 17 holes left. That's probably the best I've ever done, to come back from that."

Baldwin, of St. Simons Island, Ga., needed seven tries before she finally qualified for the LPGA tour last fall. Her best finish so far was a tie for 11th place in the Lady Keystone Open at Hershey, Pa., last month.

Her career LPGA earnings: $19,419.

"For about the last three years, I've thought about doing different things," she said. "Just nothing ever came along that I really wanted to do."

The 54-hole tournament runs through Sunday.

SKIPPER: Grieve will have final word on new manager

(From 1B)

"Toby doesn't have to go 3-1 or 4-0 in this series," Bush said.

The Rangers likely will have their choice of several candidates. Texas is only 5½ games out of first place in the American League West and has one of baseball's most talented rosters.

Three Rangers will play in next week's All-Star game and two others easily could have been chosen.

But the job has its pratfalls. Management is intent on winning immediately and may have to with Sierra, Rafael Palmeiro, and Jose Guzman unsigned after this season and Ryan nearing retirement.

Yet the front office has shown its commitment to a manager, allowing Valentine to remain in charge without winning a division title for longer than any other manager in history. He lasted 1,186 games with a 581-605 record.

He even signed a contract extension before this season.

There also is the promise of several young stars, a quality minor league system and a new ballpark to be opened in 1994.

If the Rangers are interested in veteran managers who have been in pennant races, Johnson, the former New York Mets manager, is out of work and has Texas ties.

Johnson, a one-time Texas A&M star, won a World Series title in 1986 and guided the Mets to the National League East crown twice between 1984 and 1990. His teams won 58 percent of their games over that time.

A secretary in one of Johnson's Florida offices said he has been out of town for a week. He is expected to return next week.

Baylor has long been rumored to be a manager-in-waiting for some team. Although lacking experience, he played in the 1986, 1987 and 1988 World Series' and had a reputation as a clubhouse leader throughout his career.

Baylor did not immediately return a telephone call to The Associated Press. A message was left at his hotel room in Los Angeles, where the Cardinals are playing.

Another former player building credentials for a major league managing job is Chris Chambliss, who has guided the Class AAA Richmond Braves to first place.

Chambliss said Friday he had not been contacted by the Rangers but said he'd be interested.

"Of course. It's a major league team. I'm sure it's a good opportunity for anybody who wants to manage in the major leagues," said Chambliss, who led Braves' Class AA team to last year's Southern League championship.

Grieve said Harrah, who managed the Rangers' top farm club in Oklahoma City to fourth-place finishes in 1987 and 1988, would be the only current coach considered for the permanent post. Grieve said other members of the organization could be candidates but he wouldn't name them.

Speculation could include Class AAA manager Tommy Thompson, director of player development Marty Scott and assistant general manager and player personnel director Sandy Johnson, who is widely credited with building the club's talented minor league system.

Avoid the Panic of 65
Will you be ready to retire?
Chances are, you'll be more than ready. But will you be financially ready?
Current estimates indicate you'll need 60 to 80% of your annual income at retirement for each year you're retired. Sounds like a lot of money, doesn't it? But Fortis Financial Group can offer you a variety of investment opportunities to help you work toward a secure retirement.
No matter how many years you have to retirement – whether it's 5 or 40 – your financial representative can show you how Fortis retirement plans, mutual funds, variable annuities and variable universal life insurance can help you avoid the panic at age 65.
For more information on how Fortis can help you plan for a retirement you can look forward to, call today:

Paralyzed grid star breaks neck in another car wreck

Associated Press

ASHEVILLE — Former North Carolina football star Steve Streater, who was paralyzed in a car accident in 1981, broke his neck again in a July 4 car wreck and was charged with driving while impaired, authorities said.

Streater's mother, Shirley, said her son sustained a broken neck in virtually the same area where he was hurt in the 1981 accident that left him paralyzed from the chest down. She said the injury has not caused her son any additional paralysis.

Streater, 33, was listed in fair condition Friday at Memorial Mission Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Streater's 1981 accident happened just hours after he signed as a free agent with the Washington Redskins. Following the accident, he served as state coordinator for several years with the North Carolina Students Against Driving Drunk program.

According to records at the state Department of Motor Vehicles, Streater is restricted to operating only vehicles with all hand controls. Records indicate his North Carolina license expired in Dec. 1990 and has not been renewed.

At the time of the accident, Streater was driving a car registered to his mother, according to the police report. Mrs. Streater said she does not know why her son was driving the unequipped vehicle.

The police report said Streater told his brother to get out of the car after leaving a house in Sylva, slid over to the driver's side and put the car in drive. He then tried to get the vehicle to stop by putting it in park when he failed to maneuver a 90-degree curve. The vehicle then traveled over a 21-foot embankment and struck a tree.

Police estimated the vehicle was traveling about 35 mph.

MSL folds after 14 seasons

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Major Soccer League, the only major nationwide professional soccer competition in the United States, folded Friday after 14 seasons.

The league's demise came just two years before the World Cup, soccer's top event, will be played in the United States, and leaves the country without a nationwide professional soccer league of any kind.

The final blow came Thursday evening when efforts to arrange a deal to sell the St. Louis Storm fell through.

"We've been fighting this and working together for months now," MSL commissioner Earl Foreman said. "St. Louis was shaky and we just couldn't bolster it up."

Dallas, Baltimore, San Diego, Wichita and Cleveland all were committed to playing the 1992-93 season, but Foreman said the owners in a conference call Friday decided unanimously that the league shouldn't remain in business following the departure of Tacoma and St. Louis.

"At this time, we probably have the strongest group of owners we've ever had," Foreman said in Baltimore. "Just not enough of them."

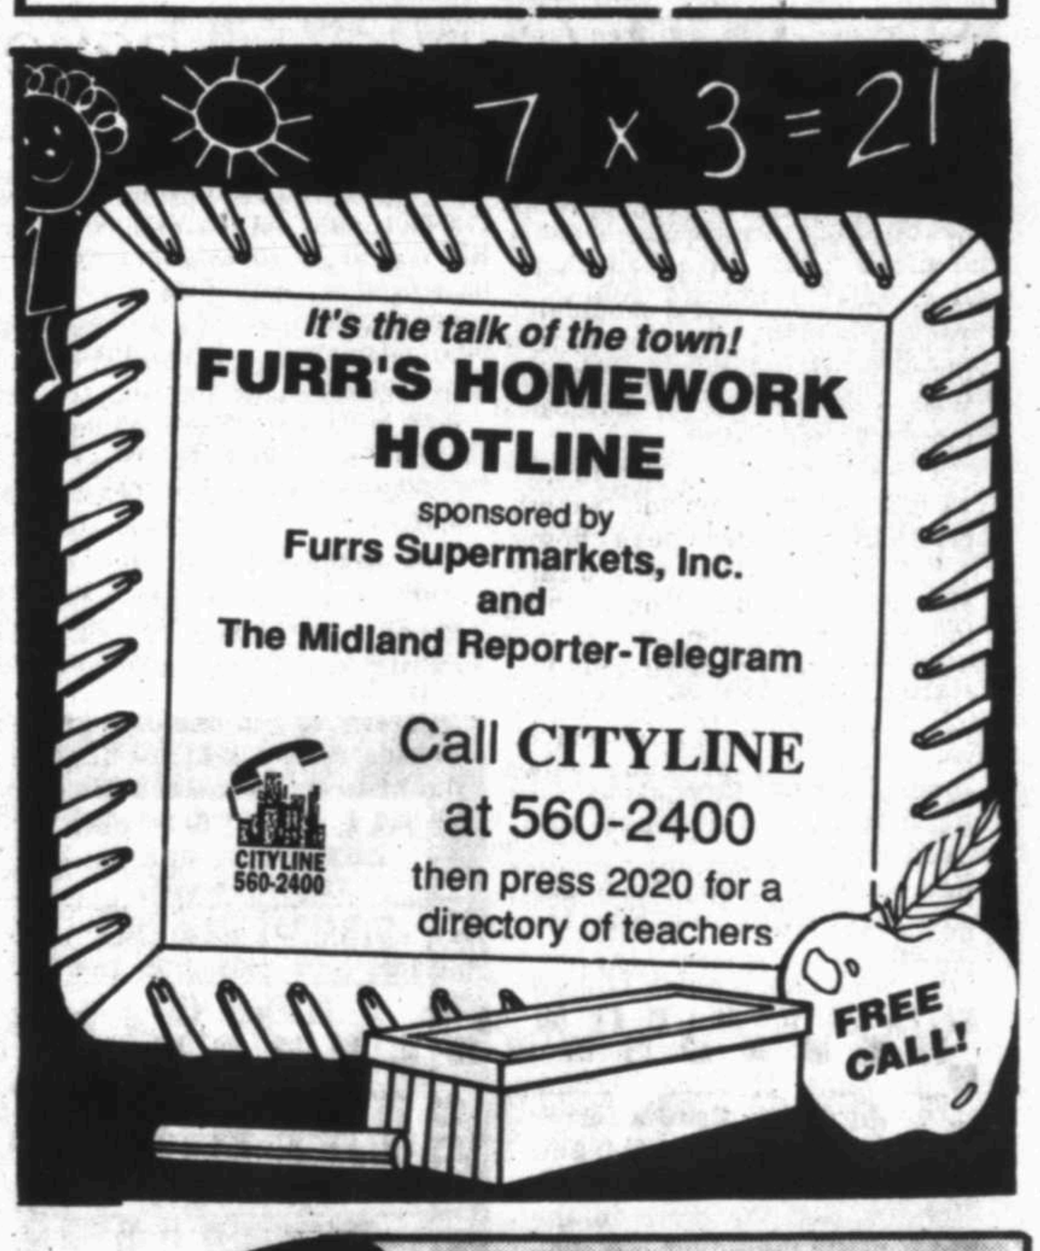

The league's existance has been threatened each year since 1988. The league's salary cap was reduced four times from $1,275,000 to $600,000.

"We did some good things but we just couldn't overcome this cloud," Foreman said.

The folding of the MSL leaves the United States with two minor professional leagues: the five-team American Professional Soccer League and the indoor National Professional Soccer League.

The MSL began as the Major Indoor Soccer League in 1978, when it had six teams. It reached its zenith in 1984, when it started the season with 14 teams in two divisions.

California halts 11-game streak

Associated Press

DETROIT — The California Angels stopped their 11-game losing streak, defeating Detroit 6-1 Friday night and snapping the Tigers' five-game winning string.

The Angels' skid was the longest in the majors this season. Julio Valera (5-8) pitched seven strong innings, allowing six hits and striking out eight.

California took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Buddy Groom (0-3), still seeking his first major league victory.

Luis Polonia led off the game with a single, and Luis Sojo bunted down the third base line for a single, a play that turned into even more when third baseman Scott Livingstone threw the ball past first base. By the time right fielder Mark Carreon chased down the ball, Polonia had scored and Sojo was on third. Junior Felix's grounder scored Sojo.

The Tigers scored in the second when Dave Bergman singled, advanced on a wild pitch and came home on Livingstone's single. After that, Valera did not allow a runner past second base.

Rangers 6, Indians 5

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez hit a three-run homer in the first inning and later had an RBI single as Texas beat Cleveland.

Brian Bohanon (1-0), recalled from Triple-A Oklahoma City for the start, won his first game in his fifth appearance for the Rangers this season. He gave up four runs in seven innings, and Jeff Russell pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 27 chances despite giving up Sandy Alomar Jr.'s RBI single.

Jack Armstrong (2-12) leads the majors in losses, one more than Jim Abbott, Eric Hansen and Kyle Abbott. Armstrong pitched his first complete game of the season, allowing 14 hits.

Thomas Howard led off the game with a walk and scored when shortstop Jeff Huson mishandled Carlos Baerga's single, putting Cleveland ahead 1-0.

American

Royals 3, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Tom Gordon pitched four scoreless innings after starter Mark Gubicza left because of an injury and Kansas City beat Milwaukee.

Gubicza pitched only one inning before leaving because of stiffness in his right forearm. Gordon (2-9) allowed only two hits and Jeff Montgomery went the ninth for his 21st save in 23 chances.

Twins 5, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Kevin Tapani beat Baltimore for the second time in five days, allowing two runs in seven innings.

Tapani (10-5) was on course for his fourth straight complete game, but was pulled after throwing 91 pitches in the 97-degree heat. He is 4-0 with a 0.79 ERA in his last four starts.

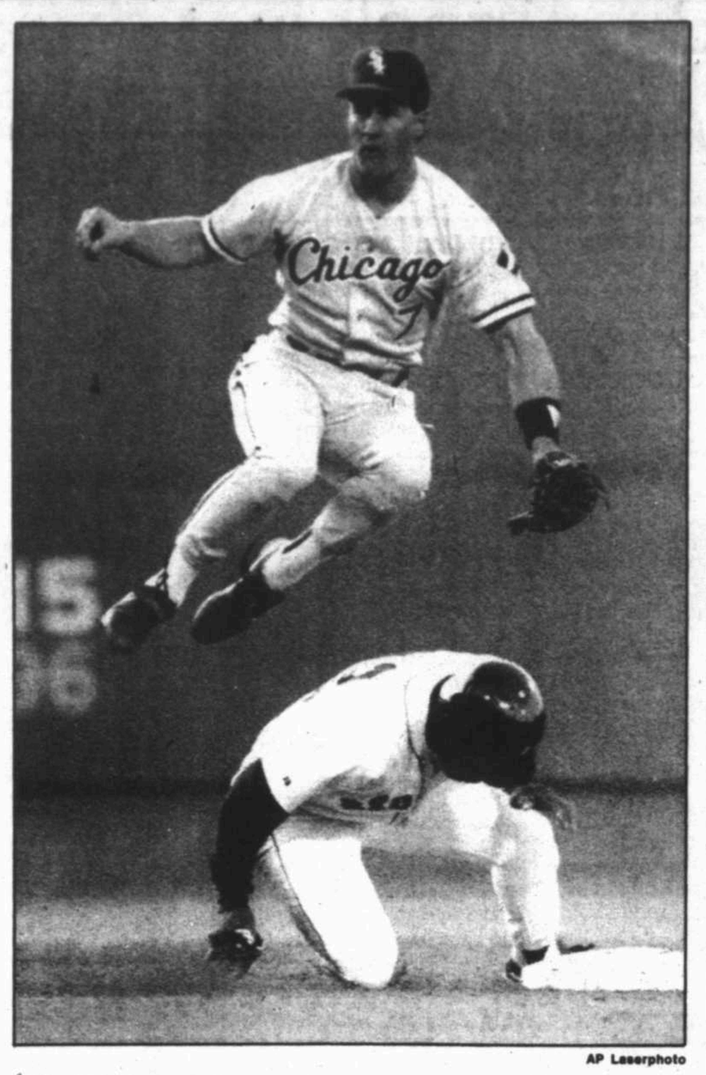

Tapani allowed four hits, walked two and struck out two in a follow-up to his 2-1 victory against the Orioles on Sunday.

Mariners 5, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Jay Buhner hit two home runs against his former team, leading Dave Fleming and Seattle past New York.

Lance Parrish hit his first home run for the Mariners, who ended a five-game losing streak. Danny Tartabull, who began his career with Seattle, homered for the sixth time in eight games for the Yankees.

Fleming (11-3), leading major league rookies in victories, gave up five hits and left after a leadoff single in the ninth inning. He walked one, struck out none and ended a string in which he'd had one loss and two no-decisions.

Billy Hatcher of the Red Sox slides under Chicago's Steve Sax after being forced out at second base, but Boston rebounded to beat the White Sox, 6-5.

Red Sox 6, White Sox 5

BOSTON — Newly acquired Billy Hatcher singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning.

Hatcher, obtained Thursday from Cincinnati in a trade for pitcher Tom Bolton, also began a five-run rally in the eighth inning with an RBI double. Rookie Bob Zupcic's second grand slam of the season capped the burst and put Boston ahead 5-2.

After the White Sox tied it at 5 in the ninth, Mo Vaughn hit his first career triple with two outs against Terry Leach (1-3) and Hatcher hit the next pitch to the base of the left-field wall. Hatcher went 1 for 4 Thursday for the Red Sox.

Athletics 5, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO — Terry Steinbach, Scott Brosius and Randy Ready hit home runs and the Oakland Athletics stopped Toronto's eight-game winning streak.

Toronto's winning string was its longest of the season. Oakland ended its three-game losing streak.

Bob Welch (7-4) gave up one run on four hits in 7⅓ innings.

Florida Marlins might be fish out of water on road

Associated Press

MIAMI — If the Florida Marlins were playing this summer, they'd be swinging in the rain.

South Florida's weather lately hasn't been fit for a spitball. Persistent precipitation reinforces suspicions that the subtropical climate will often prove unsuitable for major league baseball when the expansion Marlins begin play next April.

Last month, Fort Lauderdale was drenched with 24.4 inches of rainfall, a record for June. The Fort Lauderdale Yankees had six home games washed out, and the Florida State League all-star game in West Palm Beach was canceled after two days of rain.

"We don't want to talk about it," said Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski, only half-joking.

"We're certainly aware of the potential of a problem," team president Carl Barger said.

Weather was owner H. Wayne Huizenga's biggest obstacle last year in his bid for a franchise. The millionaire businessman allayed concerns of National League owners by promising to consider a roof or dome for Joe Robbie Stadium if rain becomes a problem.

Huizenga and Barger dislike domes and would prefer a roof, or umbrella, which would allow the stadium to remain open on the sides. Such a structure would be unprecedented in baseball.

"We've had lots of discussions with what I would consider the pros in the business," Barger said. "An umbrella is doable. ... We would prefer not to. Obviously it's a huge expenditure."

Since Huizenga wants to save his money for a rainy day, fans next season will need to bring their own umbrellas. The protection could come in handy.

Barger charts Miami's weather alongside the 1992 home schedules of two National League teams. So far he has marked three rainouts on one schedule, five on the other.

That's a lot at the All-Star break. The entire National League has had just four rainouts this season, and last year no NL team had more than three.

"If we would end up at the end of the year with five, six or even seven, I think it's something we can live with," Barger said. "But you have to be concerned about rainouts and delays."

Joe Robbie Stadium's prescription athletic turf drains well.

"But if you get downpours, there's no system that can eliminate the water instantaneously," Barger said.

Last year's competition for an expansion team included the rain-out-proof Suncoast Dome in St. Petersburg, where assistant city manager Rick Dodge argued that rain would be a problem in South Florida.

"Some protection against the elements would assist in the Marlins' long-term success," Dodge said. "It's not just the games you lose to rainouts. If people don't know whether there's going to be a game, or think there's a probability of a delay, it impacts your walk-up ticket sales."

April and May are typically dry months in Florida, and the rainy season begins in June. Barger would like the National League to give his team as many games as possible at home — two-thirds or more — during the first eight weeks of the season.

"It would be damn stupid if they didn't take advantage of the marvelous weather in April and May and have us heavy at home during those months," he said.

The National League disagrees. NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said Barger's two-thirds ratio is too lopsided.

"The Marlins might have a few more dates at home in April and May," Feeney said. "But we don't make up schedules based on the weather, which we cannot predict or control."

Weather forecasts, scheduling, a stadium roof — all are suitable subjects for rain-delay discussions next season, when the Marlins will let the rain fall where it may.

Marlin make 1st release

MIAMI (AP) — Rusty Bumgardner hit the first home run — sort of — in Florida Marlins history and was the first American ever signed by the expansion team.

That was good.

He was batting .080 with two hits — both singles — and 12 strikeouts in 25 at-bats for the Marlins' rookie-league team.

Murray powers Mets past Astros in ninth

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Eddie Murray continued his mastery with the bases loaded with a three-run ninth-inning double, powering the New York Mets to a 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Trailing 6-4, the Mets loaded the bases on singles by Mackey Sasser and pinch hitter Dave Gallagher and a walk to Howard Johnson against all-star reliever Doug Jones (6-6). Murray then connected for his three-run double, a line drive into right-center.

Murray is hitting .426 lifetime with the bases loaded, with 240 RBIs. He is 7 for 9 this year with the bases full.

Jeff Innis (5-5) won it, pitching three scoreless innings. He gave up one hit, striking out two and walking one. Anthony Young pitched the ninth for his third save.

Jones allowed three runs on four hits in two innings and walked two.

Ken Caminiti equaled his single-game high with four hits for Houston.

New York took a quick 1-0 lead when Patrick Howell singled in his first major league at-bat leading off the game. He stole second, went to third on a throwing error by catcher Scott Servais and scored on Johnson's single.

Houston tied the score in the bottom of the inning on Jeff Bagwell's sacrifice fly.

The Mets moved ahead 3-1 in the third. Howell reached on a fielding error by right fielder Pete Incaviglia, went to second on Dave Magadan's single and scored on a double by Bobby Bonilla. Magadan scored on a wild pitch.

But the Astros stormed back with a four-run third, including a two-run triple by Bagwell and an RBI double by Incaviglia. Incaviglia scored on a fielding error by second baseman Chico Walker, who misplayed a groundball by Luis Gonzalez.

New York got within 5-4 in the fifth when Johnson singled, stole second and scored on a double by Murray.

National

Braves 4, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — John Smoltz pitched a four-hitter and singled in a run, leading Atlanta over Chicago and fellow All-Star Greg Maddux.

It was Atlanta's sixth shutout in 10 games against the Cubs this season. Smoltz (10-6) struck out seven and walked four in his seventh complete game and third shutout, his second against Chicago. It was the fifth shutout of his career.

Maddux (10-8) allowed seven hits in eight innings, struck out six and walked none. He retired the first 11 batters before giving up a pair of hits in the fourth and the two runs in the fifth.

Sid Bream singled opening the fifth, Damon Berryhill doubled, Smoltz singled in a run, and Deion Sanders hit a sacrifice fly.

Rafael Belliard added a two-run single in the ninth off Paul Assenmacher following singles by David Justice and Ron Gant, and a walk to Berryhill.

Smoltz gave up a walk in the first and a single in the second, but both innings ended with double plays.

He gave up a leadoff single to Rick Wilkins in the fifth and Rey Sanchez singled two outs later. But Maddux grounded out, ending the inning.

National juniors take 3-2 victory

Midland National scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning, then held off a rally by Odessa Eastside II in the top of the seventh to stay in the winner's bracket of the Junior League District Baseball Tournament with a 3-2 win Friday night at Redfern Field.

Jason Rogers picked up the pitching win for National while Joey Williams took the loss.

Also in Junior winner's bracket play Friday, Big Spring International defeated West Odessa 10-6 to earn the right to play Midland National at 5:30 p.m. Monday at Redfern.

Today's loser's bracket games feature Midland American vs. West Odessa at 5:30 p.m. and Lamesa against Odessa Eastside II at 8 p.m.

Senior League

The Senior League Tournament Friday at Simons Field saw two loser's bracket games, as Lamesa held off Odessa Floyd Gwinn 4-2 and El Paso downed Odessa Eastside II 15-3.

For Lamesa, left-handed pitcher Alvin Cantu struck out 14 batters on his way to the pitching win. Craig Lunceford received the loss for Gwinn.

In today's Senior games at Simons Field, Big Spring International takes on El Paso at 5:30 p.m. while Lamesa faces West Odessa at 8 p.m. Midland American and Midland National, both still in the winner's bracket, will not play until Monday.

National will play Odessa Eastside I at 5:30 p.m. Monday, then American takes on Big Spring Steers at 8 p.m.

Little League

ODESSA — Two Odessa teams, Jim Parker and Salinas, are the only winner's bracket survivors left in the District 3 Little League tournament at the UTPB complex after play Friday as two Midland teams fell to the loser's bracket.

Jim Parker dealt Midland Northern a 2-0 defeat Friday while Salinas won a tight 6-4 decision over Midland North Central.

In the loser's bracket, Midland Mid City stayed alive with a 4-1 victory over Odessa Floyd Gwinn. Floyd Gwinn fell from the tournament as did El Paso in a 2-0 loss to Big Spring National.

Twenty teams started the tournament and six remain.

Loser's bracket action continues today with two more teams to fall. Mid City will take on North Central in a key game at 6 p.m. today while Northern meets Big Spring National at 8 p.m. Jim Parker and Salinas will meet Monday at 8 p.m. to determine which team gains the championship finals.

Mid City won the championship last year, but if a Midland team is to repeat, it will have to rise from the loser's bracket to do it with five consecutive victories through Wednesday.

UGSA tournament

The United Girls Softball's annual All-Star Tournament will be held in Midland at Ulmer Park today through July 18.

There will be approximately 90 teams from West Texas and New Mexico with girls ranging in age from seven to 19 in four divisions of play.

Class A teams will compete today through Tuesday while Class 2A teams will meet Wednesday through Saturday. Midland will have seven teams competing Wednesday through Saturday.

Tournament tickets are available at the Ulmer Park gate. For further information, contact Gaylon Strickland at 694-8111.

Cramer gets ace

Joyce Cramer used an eight-iron to ace Green Tree Country Club's 107-yard No. 6 West hole Friday. She had a hole-in-one last year also.

She was playing with Fred Stallings, Randy and Susan Brookings.

Bus wreck just the start of Angels' dismal summer skid

Associated Press

DETROIT — The 1992 season can't get much worse for the California Angels.

Six weeks ago, the Angels were involved in a bus crash that sidelined manager Buck Rodgers and shocked the players. Then California careened into the All-Star break with an 11-game losing streak, the worst skid in the major leagues this season.

It ended Friday night when the Angels beat Detroit 6-1, but one victory hardly made up for the tailspin.

"I keep telling the guys that as bad as this is, it could get worse," interim manager John Wathan said. "This will end someday, but it hasn't ended yet."

After Thursday's 5-4 loss at Detroit, the Angels learned Rodgers will be out until mid-August. He had been expected back next week.

"We're disappointed, but Buck has to do whatever he needs to get healthy," outfielder Chad Curtis said. "That's what is most important to all of us right now."

It might seem that the bus crash would put the current slide in perspective. But that's no solace to the players.

"A losing streak is still a losing streak, and it still stinks," Curtis said. "It doesn't matter what else has happened."

The main reason for the Angels' collapse has been a lack of offense. The Angels are last in the American League in batting average and runs scored. As a result, Jim Abbott is 4-11 despite a 2.97 ERA, eighth best in the American League. Mark Langston, the Angels' only All-Star, is 8-7.

"I'm afraid our pitchers are staring to feel like they have to throw a shutout to get a win," third baseman Rene Gonzalez said. "I hope they don't feel that way, but I wouldn't blame them if they did."

Neither would Wathan.

"We can't get three or four runs behind, because then we can't get back into the game," he said. "We aren't going to start hitting three-run homers all of a sudden."

As the streak gets longer, the Angels are trying to avoid pressing. Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman remembers when the Tigers did just that during 1989, when they sank to 59-103.

"It's natural for the guys to start trying to do more than they can, but they can't do that," Bergman said. "This will probably teach them to take one game at time and to always look at the bright side. I remember 1989 as a fun year, because I finally got a chance to play every day."

One thing that keeps the Angels clubhouse from getting too somber is prankster-pitcher Bert Blyleven. Instead of curtailing his hotfoots during the slump, Blyleven has picked up his pace.

"I've always tried to keep things fun, and that's especially important right now," Blyleven said. "You can't keep dwelling on the past. You have to keep things loose or you'll just get frustrated."

Still, the pressure is starting to tell.

"All I can do is keep pushing the buttons, but right now none of the buttons are working," Wathan said. "When this is over, I better go in for an EKG and a stress test and all that other stuff, but right now we're just hanging in there."

Santiago should be back in time for All-Star game

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The Padres plan to activate Benito Santiago either Saturday or Sunday, leading the way for him to start in the All-Star game Tuesday night in San Diego..

Santiago, voted as the National League's starting catcher for the fourth straight year, began a reabilitation assignment Tuesday with Triple-A Las Vegas to complete his recovery from a fractured little finger on his right hand, injured May 30.

"I would think he would play once he's here," Padres manager Greg Riddoch said. "The only question about Saturday is whether he can get here in time (for a rare noon start.)"

Santiago was scheduleld to play Friday night with Las Vegas in Colorado Springs. Entering that game, he had gone 3 for 12 with one home run and two RBIs during his rehabilitation stint.

In his 47 games before the injury, Santiago batted .257 with four homers and 24 RBIs.

Santiago missed the 1990 All-Star game because of a broken left arm suffered June 14 when he was hit by a pitch from the San Francsco Giants' Jeff Brantley.

Bucs swap Buechele for Jackson

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The first place Pittsburgh Pirates made their second trade in a week, sending third baseman Steve Buechele to the Chicago Cubs for pitcher Danny Jackson on Friday night.

The deal came with the Pirates leading the NL East by three games over Montreal, and was announced during Pittsburgh's game in Cincinnati. Buechele started at third base and left the rain-delayed game for a pinch hitter in the second inning.

Last Friday night, the Pirates acquired speedy outfielder Alex Cole from Cleveland for two minor leaguers.

Buechele hit .249 in 79 games with eight homers and 43 RBIs. The Pirates got the Gold Glove third baseman in a trade with Texas last August for pitcher Kurt Miller.

Jackson, 4-9 with a 4.22 ERA in 19 starts, will join the Pirates after the All-Star break. He pitched Thursday in a loss to Atlanta.

The Pirates had been looking recently for a left-handed pitcher to bolster their rotation, while the Cubs have searched several years for a full-time third baseman.

Cowboys get tough with late-rounders

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Late-round draft picks have a tough enough time trying to make it in the National Football League.

And some players taken by the Dallas Cowboys may find their road to NFL stardom made even rockier by the club's take-it-or-leave-it attitude in contract negotiations with late-round long shots.

Agents expressed displeasure over the Cowboys' stance, which has left some 1992 picks over a barrel.

"The situation is simple," said team vice president Stephen Jones. "If they want to be Cowboys, if they want to have a shot, they need to be signed for the start of training camp" on July 16.

The Cowboys already have a verbal agreement with sixth-round pick Fallon Wacasey, a tight end, and are close to a deal with 11th-round pick and receiver Tim Daniel.

Dallas now plans for none of the remaining seven rookies to receive more than an 8-percent raise above players selected in the same spots during last year's draft, sources from both sides of the bargaining table told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The Cowboys are also believed to want to lock players taken earlier than Round 10 into commitments of three years.

Mason Ash, the agent for offensive lineman John Terry, a 10th-round pick, characterized the Cowboys' approach as "rude, abrasive and condescending. They have no regard for the marketplace."

Alan Herman, who represents offensive linemen James Brown (third round) and Rod Milstead in the fifth round, agreed the Cowboys are causing problems.

"What is being offered (the 8-percent increase) does not match up with these players' potential or with their draft position," he said. "We're not at all close."

The team has been generous with some other 1992 draftees, with first-round pick and cornerback Kevin Smith signing a four-year pact worth $3.165 million and middle linebacker Robert Jones getting a four-year, $2.95 million deal.

Players are scheduled to report Sunday for the start of pre-training camp workouts at Valley Ranch in Irving.

Bucky Richardson signs with Houston Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson told a television station Friday that he has signed a two-year contract with the Houston Oilers.

Richardson, an eighth round draft pick, told KRIV-TV in Houston he was pleased with the deal. But he would not release details of his salary.

"The negotiations were actually easy," said Richardson, 23. "It was not like pulling teeth. They're happy with the deal and I am too."

Unidentified sources told KRIV the contract was worth a total of $220,000.

Richardson left Texas A&M with the Southwest Conference record for rushing yards by a quarterback, 2,095. His all-purpose yardage, 5,134, ranks fourth in the school's history.

Richardson is from Baton Rouge, La.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Yugoslav athletes remain neutral

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav athletes will enter the Olympic Games as individuals and compete under the neutral Olympic flag and anthem.

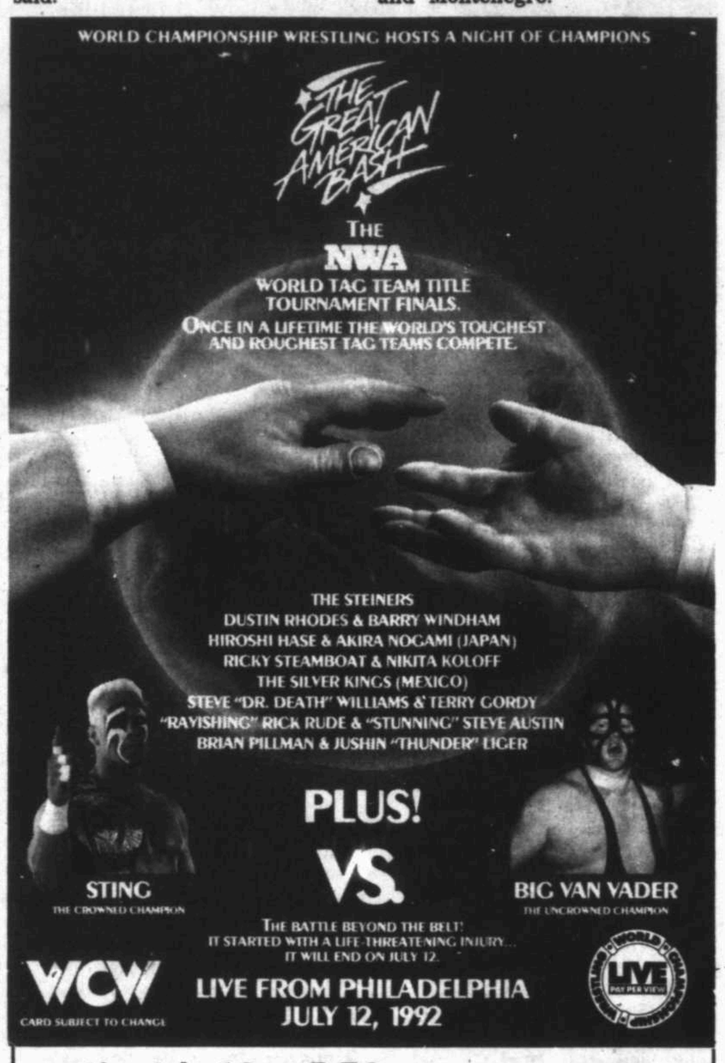

The formula was accepted Friday by the Yugoslav Olympic Committee, the International Olympic Committee, Barcelona organizers and the Spanish government.

"This solution is the victory of the sports and the Olympic spirit over political violence," Aleksandar Bakocevic, president of the Yugoslav Olympic Committee, said.

IOC director-general Francois Carrard said Yugoslav Olympic officials met a Friday deadline for replying to the plan.

"It's confirmed," Carrard said at IOC headquarters at Lausanne, Switzerland. "The Yugoslav athletes will participate at the Barcelona Games."

The arrangement ended weeks of uncertainty caused by United Nations sanctions against Yugoslavia, a former six-republic federation now consisting of only Serbia and Montenegro.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Youth complete camp session

Youth group members and others from Golf Course Road Church of Christ have recently completed a second session of Opportunity Camp at Camp Butman, near Merkel.

Opportunity Camp was designed to give children a church camp experience who would normally not have such a chance.

Robert Parham, youth minister for the church, founded the camp in 1980 as a mission outreach to inner-city youth of the San Francisco area. The same format has been adopted here. To date, more than 120 elementary-age children have participated this summer in the camp that includes recreation, sports, counseling and Bible study.

■ Vacation Bible school slated

Northwestern Baptist Church, 3901 Mockingbird, is holding its vacation bible school Monday through Friday.

Hours are 9 a.m. to noon. The school is for children 5 years old through sixth grade. Refreshments will be served.

For more information call the church, 689-0612.

■ Smith to be guest speaker

The Rev. Steve Smith will be the speaker at the First United Pentecostal Church, 5110 W. Illinois Ave., at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Smith is a graduate of Kent Christian College, Dover, Del. For the past two years, he has been principal of the Accelerated Christian Academy School, Colombia, Mo.

His parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Tony Smith are full time missionaries in Mexico. His grandparents, the Rev. and Mrs. O.G. Stanton of Odessa, are members of the First Pentecostal Church here.

For more information call 697-4007.

■ 'Pickin-n-Grinnin' program set

The Unitarian-Universalist Church, Neely Avenue at Midkiff Road, will present a program entitled "Pickin-n-Grinnin" at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

The program features folk singing and guitar playing. Dick Bowden and Nick Johnson will lead the group in old and new folk song favorites. Those who play a musical instrument are invited to bring theirs to play.

Child care will be provided.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call Bruce McPherson, 570-8118.

■ Hollars earns master degree

Jim Hollars received the master of divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort worth, during commencement ceremonies this month.

Hollars

President Russell H. Dilday awarded 170 degrees in Southwestern's schools of theology, religious education and church music Friday.

Hollars is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Hollars of Midland. He is married to Shirley Hollars.

Southwestern Seminary is one of six seminaries affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention.

■ Gray attends annual meeting

Mike Gray, clerk of Midland Friends Meeting, has recently returned from attending the annual gathering of the Religious Society of Friends, sponsored by Friends General Conference.

Almost 1,800 Friends from across North America attended the gathering held this year at St. Lawrence University, Canton, NY.

Gray coordinated an evening program for the junior high age participants and assisted the high school age Friends in planning their program for the 1993 gathering, set for July 3-10 at Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, Okla.

The news of the hiring of a new general secretary for Friends General Conference was announced at this year's gathering. Bruce Birchard was selected from several applicants to replace outgoing general secretary, Marty Walton. Friends Geneal Conference serves some 32,000 affiliated Friends in North America. Friends from 21 yearly meetings were among attenders at this year's gathering. They represented meetings from Jamaica, Mexico, seven Canadian provinces and 37 states.

■ 'Godspell' to be presented

"Godspell" is being presented at Midland Center, 105 N. Main At., at 8 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

The rock musical is being presented by the youth of First Baptist Church.

Tickets, priced at $2, may be purchased at the door or at First Baptist Church.

■ Clergy golf tournament slated

PLANO — The 11th annual Texas Clergy Invitation Golf Tournament is set for Aug. 3 and 4 at Los Rios Country Club here.

Three trophies will be awarded per flight. A new Oldsmobile will be awarded for a hole in one. Prizes will be given for close to pins and long drives. The 36-hole event begins with a shotgun start Aug. 3.

A new senior division has been added this year.

Cost is $75. For more information call Don Dendy, chairman of Texas Clergy Golf Association and member of Park Cities Baptist Church, Dallas, 1-214-369-8211 at work, or 1-214-241-8351 at home.

The tournament is limited to 140 players.

■ 3-day summer meeting set

DENTON — Texas Women's University here will be the site of a three-day summer meeting Friday through July 19 co-sponsored by area Christian Scientists and The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston.

Based on the theme "The World Needs You," the program includes speakers, panels and small group workshops on subjects such as relationships, sports, school, healing family conflict, sexuality, self-esteem and the environment. The meeting is open to those 12 through 30 years old.

Those interested in attending are asked to call 1-800-827-6408, or 682-8476.

■ Church presents video series

"Loving, Lasting Relationships," a video by Gary Smalley and John Trent, is being shown at 10 a.m. Sundays through Aug. 9 at Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

In this new video series, Smalley and Trent, offer practical advice based on Biblical principles.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Dennis Davis to guest speak

Dennis Davis, pastor of San Antonio Christian Fellowship, will be speaking at Life Unlimited Christian Center at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Davis has spoken locally and in various churches nationally and internationally. The public is invited to hear him speak.

Church remembers 100 years of worship

By Chuck Lindell
Associated Press

HUTTO (AP) — It was a plain wooden church, but it stretched from Texas to Sweden — a clear and significant link to a country most immigrants would never see again.

In 1892, these new Texans had raised "a very simple and unpretentious little building," as a student pastor described it then. "In many ways we were happy."

The descendants and religious heirs of those early Swedes are celebrating the 100th birthday of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church of Hutto.

"This is a time that's critical in the history of the church," said Mike Fowler, who spent the good part of a year researching and writing a book on the congregation. "We certainly appreciate the footsteps before us. At the same time, we want to prepare for a better church to come."

Today it's called, simply, the Hutto Lutheran Church. Though much of its Swedish character has disappeared, it still identifies strongly with its roots.

"Now Swedes are the minority, but tradition continues because they're loyal to traditions," said Carl Stern, a church official.

Hutto's first Lutheran church, victim of a meandering tornado in 1894, didn't see its third birthday. Salvaged material contributed to the second structure, but a fast-growing congregation outgrew it in six years.

Today's building was dedicated in 1902 and contains the original hand-carved pews, stained glass behind the altar and delicate woodwork. The steeple bell still announces Sunday services.

But central heat has replaced the wood-burning stove and a false ceiling has improved the acoustics. Sometimes change works for the best.

And sometimes it doesn't.

Lois Stern, Carl's wife, sometimes wonders if strong ties to the church are a thing of the past.

"I hear people talk of such love for the church they grew up with. I see such deep roots even though the people are not members here anymore," she said. "When our kids get to their age ... will they have that bond older people have for this church?

"I hope they do, but times have changed so much, I really don't know."

A century ago, Hutto was a thriving mercantile and agricultural center, still growing out of the fertile prairie between Round Rock and Taylor. Some say the town still hasn't recovered from the Depression, but back then, it was a sight.

"No one had better get in a hurry in Hutto on a Saturday," an 1892 newspaper said, remarking on the buggies and people gridlocked on the town's gravel and dirt roads.

"I've been in this church all my life, except for few years in Austin. I was baptized, confirmed and married in this church. I'll be buried here too. It's my rock. My security."
— Johanna Wimberley

Cotton and corn were the main crops, and many of the nearby farmers were Swedes drawn to Texas by something all too rare at home — land.

Whole families were sold on Central Texas by countryman Swen Swenson, a shrewd businessman who had purchased more than 100,000 acres in Travis and Williamson counties.

New arrivals raised crops on Swenson's land to pay off their passage. When the bill was settled, he'd offer the Swedes a sweet deal on a few acres. By the 1890s, Austin and nearby towns like Round Rock, Taylor, Manor and New Sweden were the major centers for Swedish immigration, agriculture and commerce.

Well into the 20th century, Austin was a two-day trip away. Church member Carl Lidell, 69, remembers his grandmother riding the 10 miles to Hutto on a horse and buggy to catch a train and visit her doctor. After a night in a hotel, she was ready to begin the return trip.

"Now we run into Austin in 30 minutes and think nothing of it," he said.

All church services were in Swedish until a once-a-month English service was added in 1929. Only 10 years later, things had reversed and Swedish was heard once a month.

By the end of World War II, Swedish-language services were history.

Celebrations still feature tables and tables of food. Santa Lucia Day, marking the shortest day in Sweden, and the Julotta, a candlelight Christmas service, remain important church holidays.

There are two points of pride at Hutto Lutheran Church — its organ and its day care. When the pipe organ was installed 77 years ago, it took two people to play it — one operating the keys and another working a 5-foot-long bellows pump. An electric blower has simplified things.

Watchdog group creates phone line

By Jim Jones
N.Y. Times News Service

A televangelism watchdog group has launched a nationwide, toll-free help line, 1-800-229-VICTIM, for people who believe they have been wronged by television preachers.

Ole Anthony, president of the Dallas-based Trinity Foundation that sponsors the line, said it was jammed by supporters of the Rev. Robert Tilton shortly after the line became operational in June but before it was made public this week.

"Our telephone service is able to confirm that the calls were coming from one telephone number — that was the Word of Faith," Anthony said in a telephone interview, referring to Tilton's church in the Dallas suburb of Farmers Branch. "There will be legal action if it happens again."

Some of the callers personally attacked Anthony, calling him a "foul spirit of Satan," he said.

Dean St. Pierre, a Tilton spokesman, said he had no knowledge of an effort to jam the help line.

Anthony, who helped with an investigation by ABC-TV's "PrimeTime Live" of Tilton and two other TV preachers, said the 800 number will give victims a way to share information for a national database on abuses by televangelists.

If they wish, callers may join support groups with other victims.

"We will help them find other believers in their area to assist them with their needs in the same way we minister to people in our community through the Dallas Project (for the homeless)," Anthony said in a statement announcing the help line.

"By speaking out publicly, these emotionally battered people can rid themselves of the shame they feel after realizing they were conned by alleged men of God," he said.

Tilton's attorney, J.C. Joyce of Tulsa, Okla., called the help line yet another unjust attack on one of the nation's largest TV ministries.

"For every one they find who says they were wronged, we can find 100 who say they were helped by the ministry," Joyce said in a telephone interview.

After "PrimeTime's" program, nine people — three in Oklahoma and six in Texas — filed lawsuits against Tilton, accusing him of fraudulent practices based on assurances that their prayers would be answered if they made cash donations to his ministry.

"It was the worst case of yellow journalism I've ever seen," he said. "Why get on camera with somebody like that? If they would apologize and admit they blew it, we might consider an interview."

Bishops still in quandary over document on women

A question mark hangs over the long struggle of Roman Catholic bishops to formulate their views on the rights of women. Will the resuit ever be acceptable? It seems caught in an odd dilemma.

As some bishops note, if they simply give up and say nothing, they'd appear to be shirking their duty to teach.

But even if they wanted to allow equal ecclesiastical status to women, Vatican policy wouldn't permit that — or what surveys indicate most Catholics favor, women's admission to the priesthood.

"In many ways we're in a no-win situation," said Bishop Michael D. Pfeifer of San Angelo. He said bishops confront an issue "about which we cannot speak and are not ready to speak."

Bishop Pierre DuMaine of San Jose, Calif., in the bishops' first open debate on the long-considered subject at their recent meeting at the University of Notre Dame, put it this way:

"We've gone about as far as we can go."

However, a growing number of bishops would like to go further, as indicated in the new book, "A Church Divided," by Terrance Sweeney, a former Jesuit priest expelled for refusing Vatican orders to suppress his data.

He says confidential surveys of U.S. bishops found those favoring ordaining women to the diaconate rose from 28 percent in 1985 to 40 percent in 1990, and rose from 8 percent to 14 percent for admitting them as priests.

Also, he says, the findings show bishops favoring optional celibacy for priests — allowing marriage for those who choose it — rose in that period from 24 percent to 32 percent.

Sweeney of Los Angeles said in a telephone interview that "more and more bishops want change and more and more Catholics."

Among U.S. Catholics generally, the latest Gallup Poll finds 67 percent favor ordination of women and 75 percent support optional celibacy for priests.

For the bishops, still striving after nine years of work to produce an equitable document about women, the effort is like trying to "balance a paradox," said Bishop Enrique San Pedro of Brownsville, Texas.

In affirming full equality of women, he said that principle "affirms what cannot be affirmed" in regard to the priesthood.

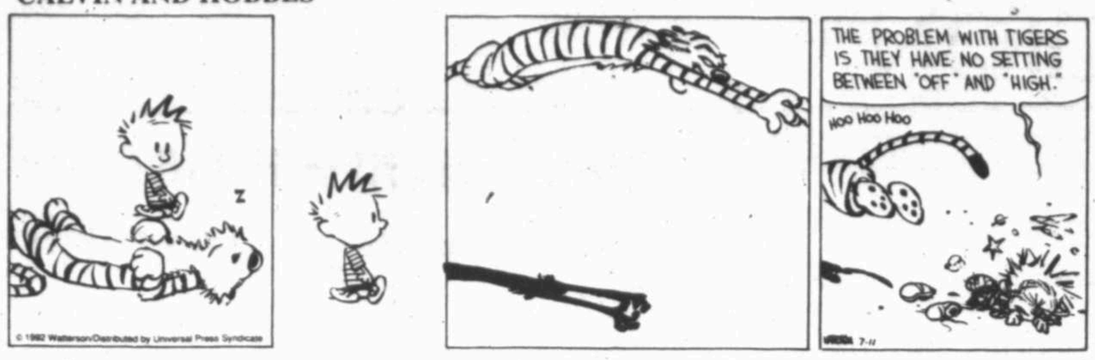

Retired Bishop Charles A. Buswell of Pueblo, Colo., said the bishops by having to deny ordination to women express the "concern of the Vatican rather than the concerns of women."

Some bishops wanted to junk the whole 18,000-word proposal, stitched together over years of consultations, hearings, a Vatican intervention and three revisions. Many women's groups also wanted it scrapped.

However, by a close vote, bishops asked for still another revision, to be considered at a meeting in November.

Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago said "just to walk away" from the project and "drop it" would be a serious mistake, implying "we have nothing to say" or "don't know what to say" and "don't have the courage to be teachers."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Several incidents will reveal where your true interest lies. By late September, your involvement in artistic pursuits will lead to an important new alliance. Learning more about advanced technology could mean a better job. A family enterprise will do especially well after a younger sibling joins the team in early 1993. Make yourself unavailable to those who have taken advantage of you in the past. Domestic happiness should be a top priority all year long.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Tab Hunter, singer Bonnie Pointer, boxer Leon Spinks, author E.B. White.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ask questions before you get too involved in a new romantic relationship. A neighbor only wants to help. Be gracious. Talk with a child about something that is bothering both of you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Business can be mixed with pleasure quite successfully today. Meet with people who are in a position to offer you sound advice. Home study could increase your earning power.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Domestic activities occupy you today. A family member suggests a way to boost household income. Be openminded. Donations to worthy causes should never be regretted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Resist the temptation to call someone who is romantically involved with a close friend. Your motives may not be pure. You could find a better partner by attending a party alone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get together with friends who share your intellectual interests. A personal goal requires a strong commitment. Use your X-ray vision to penetrate a cloud cover in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go ahead and indulge a whim today. There is nothing wrong with an occasional splurge if the bills are paid. An intense encounter leads to personal growth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A family member may extend an unexpected invitation. Accept with pleasure. You grow closer to a neighbor or new friend after sharing your memories. Curb a tendency to criticize your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spiritual growth brings a desire for change. Know your own limits and act accordingly. It may be time to shut down a business operation. Keep a low profile when attending social affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A permanent commitment deserves lots of thought. Think about where you want to go with your life and whether the person in question will fit in. There are no easy answers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A crisis may spring up out of nowhere. Be willing to confront a family member if your relationship has not been a positive one. A search for common ground proves successful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let loved ones go their own way today. Any attempt to dictate their schedule could boomerang. Find projects you can handle on your own. Your social prestige is on the rise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone close to you could provide you with the key to financial success. Listen attentively to one who has done the things you would like to do.

TODAY'S CHILDREN thrive on parental attention and gentle encouragement. Show an interest in their studies and they will become top-ranked scholars. A weekly trip to the local library is a must! These youngsters can be fussy about their clothes. They prefer a natural look to lots of gloss and glitter. Attending an arts camp in the summer will help them develop their strong creative talents.

Holly Hunter to play cheerleader mom in HBO murder-plot movie

HOUSTON — Actress Holly Hunter will star in an HBO movie as a Houston-area mother who was charged with hiring a hitman to secure her daughter's spot on a cheerleading squad.

Hunter, who was nominated for an Oscar for her 1987 performance in "Broadcast News," will play the role of Wanda Holloway.

Last year, Mrs. Holloway was found guilty of trying to arrange the murder of the mother of her daughter's rival for a spot on the cheerleading squad at a school in suburban Channelview.

The trial drew worldwide media attention. The conviction, however, was thrown out because a juror was ruled ineligible. A new trial is pending, but no date has been set.

"Everything that we have in our script is true," Jim Manos, the producer of the movie, told the Houston Chronicle. Among consultants used is Mrs. Holloway's ex-husband, Tony Harper, who along with his brother, Terry, were Mrs. Holloway's chief accusers.

Harper was paid $137,000 for the movie rights. A court is to divide the money among Harper and the two children he had while married to Mrs. Holloway.

The possibility of a movie about the bizarre plot came up in testimony at Mrs. Holloway's trial, when Harper testified he and his brother had quarreled over how they would split the potential profits.

DeLuise

"I'd like to be thin and have lots of hair, but I'm bald and fat" the 58-year-old comedian said. "My tongue weighs 180 pounds."

Now weighing in at 280 pounds, instead of the 380 he was last year, DeLuise also spoke seriously about his compulsive eating habits in an interview published in Thursday's Press-Telegram.

"Humor comes out of pain," said the star of such films as "Blazing Saddles" and "Spaceballs."

"I've gotten much more philosophical as I've gotten older."

He said he attended the Duke Diet and Fitness Center in North Carolina.

"It was wonderful," he said. "We got a lot of support. Talking to compulsive eaters is like talking to drug addicts. To diet, you have to change your whole lifestyle."

The comedian is starring in the Long Beach Civic Light Opera's "Little Shop of Horrors," which opens today.

LA JOLLA, Calif. — Pete Townshend, former guitarist for The Who, has adapted the British rock band's 1969 album "Tommy" for the stage.

"I am keen for people who have never seen the work live to do so," said Townshend, 47. "I want them to appreciate that 'Tommy' is a real drama.

"It is popular because it is full of recognizable relationships and struggles, not because it was an early rock opera or part of Woodstock or a sick joke about child abuse."

The rock opera features Tommy, the "deaf, dumb and blind kid" of the song "Pinball Wizard," who becomes a messiah of sorts. It has been adapted to film and stage before, but the La Jolla Playhouse version that opened Thursday is the first stage version involving Townshend.

PHILADELPHIA — Author James A. Michener has pledged another $500,000 to the art museum that bears his name.

Michener

The James A. Michener Art Museum in suburban Doylestown is seeking the work of 26 artists, primarily landscape painters from earlier in the century. Among Michener's favorites are Daniel Garber, Edward Redfield and M. Elizabeth Price.

"This museum should have been started about 30 years ago," Michener, 85, said Thursday evening from his home in Brunswick, Maine. "We're going to try to lure gifts out of the attic."

The museum opened in 1988 on the site of the old Bucks County Prison and is embraced by its 40-foot stone walls. Construction has just begun on a $1.65 million expansion to double the existing 6,000 square feet of exhibition gallery space.

Michener, Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Centennial," "Chesapeake" and "Hawaii," had already pledged $1 million to help the museum expand its collection.

CLAYTON, Mo. — Lloyd's of London has filed a lawsuit against Axl Rose and his band, Guns N' Roses, over a concert that ended in a riot in suburban St. Louis last July.

Guns N' Roses canceled concerts scheduled for Chicago suburbs and Kansas City, Kan., citing damage to equipment in the July 2, 1991, disturbances at the concert in the Riverport Amphitheater in Maryland Heights.

Judge sentences Noriega to 40 years

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega was sentenced Friday to 40 years in prison by a federal judge who insisted that politics played no part in the ousted Panamanian leader's drug and racketeering conviction.

Noriega, who surrendered to U.S. troops in the 1989 invasion of Panama, had faced a maximum 120-year sentence. Under federal guidelines, he could be eligible for parole after serving about two-thirds of his sentence.

Before he was sentenced, the former general, wearing his full-dress military uniform for the first time since his capture, read a statement to the court for nearly three hours. He maintained his innocence and said the United States persecuted him politically.

"I accuse George Herbert Walker Bush of using his power and authority to influence and subvert the criminal justice system of the United States to condemn me," Noriega told U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler. Noriega spoke in Spanish and paused periodically so interpreters could translate to English.

Hoeveler replied that Noriega failed to understand U.S. criminal justice.

"The health of the system is that it is not subject to politics," the judge said. "Politics were not and should not be part of this case."

Hoeveler ordered Noriega, 58, to continue being held at Metropolitan Correctional Center south of Miami for 60 days until the judge decides on his attorneys' argument that he shouldn't be sent to a regular federal prison because he is a prisoner of war.

A jury convicted Noriega in April of eight of 10 counts charging that he turned Panama into a drug way station, money-laundering center and haven for Colombia's Medellin cartel.

Noriega received maximum 20-year terms on each of two racketeering counts, but they will concurrently. He also received 15 years each on five drug counts, to run concurrently after the racketeering sentence, and another five years on a money-laundering count.

During his sometimes-rambling statement, Noriega quoted the Bible, Socrates, Chinese philosophy and even the wife of Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton. He quoted from a commencement address in which Hillary Clinton criticized the Bush administration for focusing on foreign affairs instead of domestic problems.

Among his accusations were that U.S. agencies under the Reagan adminstration assassinated his predecessor, Omar Torrijos, who died in a mysterious plane crash in 1981, and that Bush, as CIA director in 1976, ordered a terrorist bombing campaign in the U.S.-run Canal Zone area of Panama.

Noriega, who worked for the CIA for years, said his charges should have come out in the trial. Hoeveler sharply restricted testimony concerning politics.

When Noriega was finished, prosecutor Michael Sullivan rose and replied: "Due to his overweening pride and arrogance, he merely vented his spleen. . . . "It is he who subjected so many others to terror and injustice."

In Kennebunkport, Maine, President Bush said the 40-year sentence was "a fitting punishment for drug crimes that have harmed all Americans." He said the Panama invasion had produced the "just punishment of a unrepentant drug criminal."

In Panama, First Vice President Ricardo Arias Calderon said Noriega deserved much more prison time, "but this is quite a lot." Second Vice President Guillermo Ford called the sentence a "vindication" for democracy.

Noriega's lawyer, Frank Rubino, said the sentence wasn't surprising.

"He expected a sentence high enough that he would spend the rest of his life in prison," Rubino told reporters. Under normal practices, Rubino said, Noriega would be in prison until age 83, "if he lives that long."

Court overturns Hazelwood's conviction

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Alaska Court of Appeals on Friday overturned a misdemeanor conviction against the captain of an Exxon tanker that ran aground in the spring of 1989, causing the nation's worst oil spill.

The state used tainted evidence against Joseph Hazelwood, who was immune from prosecution under federal law, the court ruled in throwing out his conviction of negligent discharge of oil.

The state said it will appeal the ruling to Alaska's Supreme Court.

Hazelwood was skipper of the 987-foot Exxon Valdez but not on the bridge when it rammed Bligh Reef in Prince William Sound early on the morning of March 24, 1989, while outbound from Alaska's oil port at Valdez.

The jagged reef ripped the ship's hull open, releasing nearly 11 million gallons of North Slope crude oil into the water. The spill killed birds, fish, otters and other wildlife. The oil coated hundreds of miles of rocky shoreline.

Defense attorneys had said going into Hazelwood's trial in 1990 that he should be immune from any charges stemming from the spill because he had reported to the Coast Guard that the tanker was dead in the water and spilling oil.

The appeals court agreed.

"Congress has barred prosecution in this case because the state obtained its evidence by the exploitation of Hazelwood's report of an oil spill," the court said.

Hazelwood's attorney, Michael Chalos, said Hazelwood radioed him from aboard a vessel at sea on the Atlantic where he's training students from the State University of New York Maritime College.

Chalos said Hazelwood said "I am relieved." He said Hazelwood added that he was delighted with the decision and "feels vindicated."

Chalos and fellow lawyer Thomas Russo of New York called the reversal a tremendous victory for their client.

"He was a scapegoat," Chalos said. "We hope this will make people realize that he was not responsible for the grounding and that this will clear the way for him to regain employment back at sea."

Douglas Baily, an Anchorage lawyer who was state attorney general during the Hazelwood trial, said immunity shouldn't apply in this case.

"This is not an oil spill that would go unreported," Baily said.

"Federal law tends toward people who drop a bucket of oil into the water and then run off because they don't want to report it. That wasn't the case here."

Ann Rothe, Alaska representative for the National Wildlife Federation, said Exxon was more responsible for what occurred than Hazelwood.

"Joe Hazelwood seems to be a minor player now that we can look back at the entire incident. I guess I feel the way Exxon handled it was the greater crime," Rothe said.

The jury that convicted Hazelwood, of Huntington, N.Y., of the misdemeanor in March 1990 acquitted him three more serious counts, including operating a vessel while intoxicated.

Jurors said they rejected the state's claim that Hazelwood was drunk because a blood alcohol test was not performed until 10½ hours after the tanker hit the reef.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone had sentenced Hazelwood to 90 days in jail and a $1,000 fine, suspending both on condition that the fired Exxon captain complete one year of probation, perform 1,000 hours of community work — beach cleanup — and pay $50,000 in restitution.

In July 1990, the Coast Guard dismissed charges of intoxication and misconduct against Hazelwood and the skipper pleaded no contest to two lesser charges.

Female ex-sailor says she was raped in '60s

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The sexual abuse scandal involving Navy pilots prompted a woman to come forward with her own story of rape and harassment by sailors in the 1960s.

Kathleen Brooks said Thursday she routinely endured a gantlet of groping, pinching, slapping sailors in 1967 while studying at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center in Chicago.

Women at the center were regularly chastised by sailors and officers for being "out of formation" because their chests stuck out of line, Brooks said during an interview at her Cheyenne home.

Brooks, who spoke on condition that she use her maiden name, said she was raped by a petty officer while stationed in San Diego.

Brooks, who left the Navy in 1970, said she decided to go public with her story because of allegations that at least 26 women, half of them naval officers, were pushed through a gantlet of drunken pilots while attending the Tailhook Association's annual meeting last year.

The Navy is investigating and the scandal forced the resignation of Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III.

"For the 20 years, at least, that enlisted woman have been making complaints . . . it has always gotten worse after a complaint is made," Brooks said.

Lt. Ken Cronk, public affairs officer at Great Lakes, said it would be virtually impossible to trace Brooks' 25-year-old accusations.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said she has received numerous letters and telephone calls with similar "horror stories." She has called for congressional hearings.

Brooks' story begins in 1967. She said she was 20, a virgin who didn't smoke or drink and attended church every Sunday. Brooks had just left a convent because "being a nun wasn't my calling."

A Laramie native and daughter of a military man, she decided to join the Navy.

After basic training in Maryland, Brooks was sent to the Great Lakes Naval Training Center to study electronics for seven weeks in preparation for her duty as a radioman. She was one of about 10 women among about 3,000 men.

"We were constantly subjected to sexual remarks, groping hands, cut-downs, deliberate sabotage of our school work, being refused entry to the break room or being harassed," Brooks said.

It was during the last several weeks of school that Brooks and the other women were forced to run a gantlet of sailors every day at the end of classes while carrying wastebaskets to a dumpster. On their way down the hallway, the sailors formed lines three deep on either side.

"They would grab at your breasts and your clothes, grab at your legs, whatever," Brooks said.

When Brooks and other women complained to the school director, they were told they were circumventing the "chain of command."

Her next assignment was in San Diego, where she worked as a radioman and was housed at the Naval Training Center. She said she was raped in 1968 by a petty officer who escorted her home from a non-commissioned officers' social club.

A doctor implored her to press charges, but she didn't.

"You have to remember this was 1968. This was the Navy, incredibly hostile to women and incredibly hostile to rape victims," Brooks said. "No way would I go to court as a rape victim. I would have been totally destroyed."

Brooks received an honorable discharge from the Navy. She is undergoing rape counseling.

Pet snakes way into owners' heart

By Marlene Feduris
Associated Press

AMARILLO — Eek, snakes!

Bury the hatchet. Save the shotgun shells. These beautifully marked, serpentine creatures may send shivers down some spines, but their owners love them as much as other pet lovers enjoy dogs or cats.

"Everybody thinks that they are some kind of demons," said Bryan Adams, owner of an 18-foot Burmese python, Little Joe. "All (a snake) is another animal that can be tamed."

Adams fondly calls Little Joe his "big baby." He got the snake about four years ago. It weighs about 100 pounds. In captivity, the snake could grow as long as 30 feet.

Deana Wagner, owner of a Peruvian boa named B.C., has owned various species of snakes for about 10 years and loves watching their graceful movements. She opted for snakes because she was allergic to cats and had trouble training her dog.

However, Wagner's pet cockatiel did not share her fascination with snakes. Her snakes once escaped and found their way to the cockatiel's cage. She heard the bird screeching the word, "help," and thought nothing of it. But when the yelling persisted, she found both snakes curled up around the top of the cage.

Wanda Barnum owns three snakes — Sneaky, Rosy and Pandy — and keeps her doors open to homeless pet snakes. Often she nurses sick serpents back to health when previous owners do not properly care for them.

"I've always gone in for the unusual pets," Barnum said. "I had a ferret before everyone knew what a ferret was. I spent my rent money on Sneaky. I had a heck of a time raking it up, but I don't regret it."

A growing number of area residents who own non-poisonous snakes as pets formed a Snake Club several years ago and started meeting monthly again this summer at parks to socialize and show off their serpents.

Club members trade helpful hints on snake care and health problems including topics such as shedding and feeding, Barnum said. But do not expect to see them outdoors if the temperature is cooler than 70 degrees.

Snakes catch colds easily, and the colds can lead to pneumonia, said Kathy Brown, who bought a ball python, Curly Q, for herself as a Christmas present.

Owners keep snakes' cages heated to about 85 degrees. The cold-blooded animals are cool to the touch, but their skin is dry.

Brown first encountered snakes in the pet shop.

"I went to the library to read books about snakes to try to talk myself out if it," Brown said. Now, her two daughters also enjoy her snake.

Several snake owners said they prefer tropical snakes as pets. Tropical snakes are less apt to wander than non-venomous snakes from the Colubridae family native to this area, Wagner said.

"Colubrid snakes are very good escape artists," Wagner said. Each snake she has owned that is native to this area has escaped.

People do not enter into snake ownership lightly. Retail prices for ball pythons average $150, Barnum said. Buyers may pay $350 for a baby Peruvian boa.

But snake owners love the few responsibilities they have as pet owners.

"I like snakes because they're quiet," Barnum said. "They're good, gentle pets. You can hang them around your neck and do housework or whatever."

Barnum even potty trained her snakes.

"My snakes let me know when they need to use the bathroom," Barnum said. "They'll go around their cage in circles and then look up at me. I know it's time to go outside, or I'll have a cage to clean."

Barnum said her pet snakes — all boas — enjoy people and are not aggressive.

Brown said some snakes even appear shy. They will jerk away, particularly if people come near their heads.

"A lot of times you think you've been bitten because he pulls away so fast," Brown said. "I kiss him on the head constantly, so I got him over that."

Feeding was one of the hardest parts of adjusting to snake ownership for Brown. Snakes eat live mice, rats or rabbits, depending on the type of serpent and its size. Snakes eat as much as twice weekly, but can go for months without food.

Many people grow to appreciate the snake's cunning abilities.

"There's no way to describe how fast he can strike," Brown said. "You can't blink your eye that fast."

Adams always finds the feeding process fascinating. His pet, Little Joe, has been eating rabbits for three years.

"I like to watch him strike because he does it differently," Adams said. "He sits in one spot, coiled and reaches across and nails him."

The snake can reach across its 7-foot cage to strike and kill its food, Adams said.

Owners handle pet snakes with caution.

Barnum tells people to avoid picking up snakes they find in the wild. Her snakes were raised in captivity as pets and would likely die in the wild. People approaching any snakes should avoid sudden moves and loud noises.

"Don't even wave your hand in front of a snake's face," Barnum said.

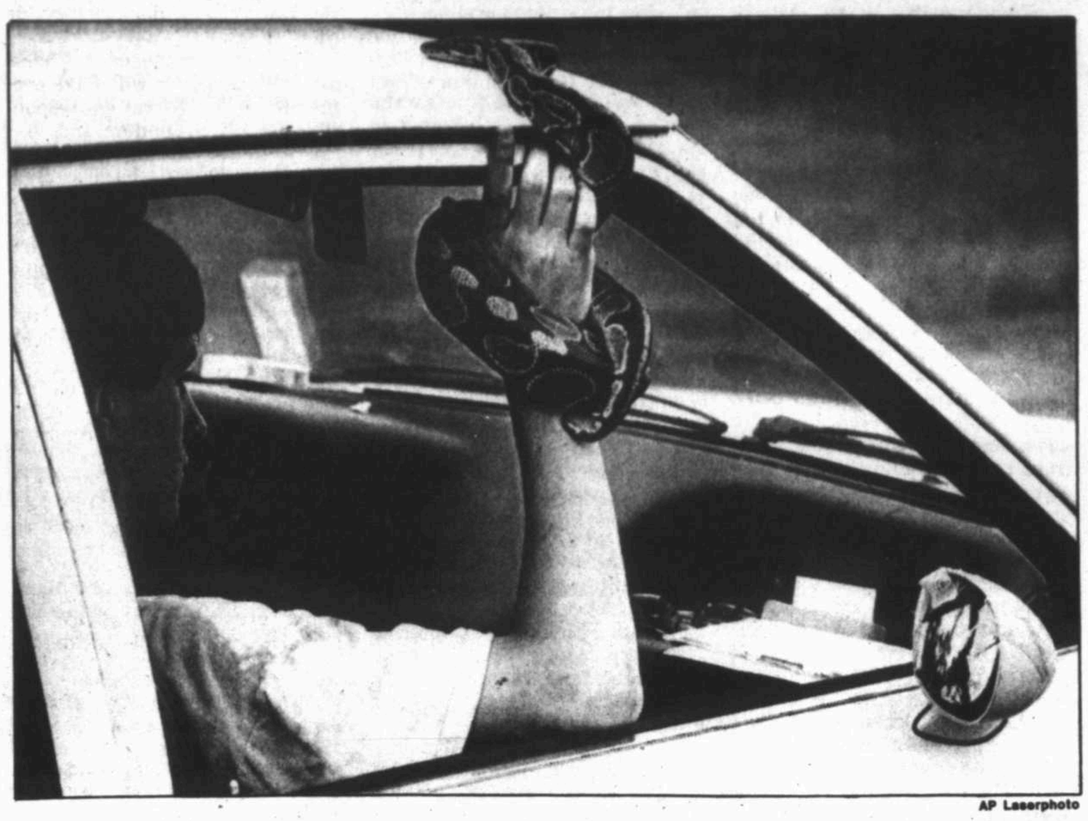

Barnum, who also raises feeder rats, always washes her hands before handling snakes. Snakes have poor eyesight and rely on their sense of smell. They may bite if they are frightened or if they think someone is food, she said.

In general, owners said they found women less afraid of snakes than men.

"I try to do my best to educate people," Wagner said. "I feel like it's my responsibility to make sure my snake is fed. He's not going to bite anybody for anything unless he's hungry."

Wagner said older people also are more afraid of snakes than children.

"People just don't understand," Wagner said. "I've given up on the older generation. I'm working on educating a new generation."

High-tech yo-yo space bound

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts on the next shuttle flight will spin a high-tech yo-yo inside Atlantis to demonstrate a yo-yo-like satellite whirling outside, connected to the spaceship by 12 miles of string.

Spaceman Jeffrey Hoffman plans some stunts with the 1½-ounce yo-yo — called the Silver Bullet-2 — for an educational video about the gravity-free mechanics of the 1,140-pound Tethered Satellite.

The Italian Space Agency satellite will be reeled from the shuttle's cargo bay and fly overhead for 30 hours before being pulled back in. Its lifeline will be an electricity-conducting cord one-tenth of an inch in diameter.

"In the history of shuttle flights, I think this flight is really unique," said Hoffman, the payload commander.

Engineers can't wait to see how easy — or how hard — it is to release, control and retrieve a satellite on a string.

Scientists are more interested in how well the cord generates power as the shuttle and satellite sweep through Earth's magnetic field; such technology could replace fuel tanks in space one day.

Atlantis is scheduled to embark on the seven-day mission — shuttle flight No. 49 — at the end of July or early August. Flight No. 48 ended earlier this month with a Columbia touchdown at Kennedy Space Center; the 14-day laboratory research mission was NASA's longest shuttle flight.

Many NASA officials consider the next mission to be the most complex. NASA Administrator Daniel S. Goldin, in fact, ordered an independent safety review a few months ago to make sure nothing had been overlooked. The reviewers were satisfied with NASA's thoroughness, said space agency spokesman Mark Hess.

The astronauts, for example, can cut the tether if the satellite starts swinging dangerously close to the shuttle. They expect to have plenty of time to act — the tether should move back and forth very slowly in space, much like the pendulum of a clock that needs to be wound.

Enter the yo-yo.

When Hoffman requested a yo-yo for the flight a few months ago, NASA tracked down the safest one it could find. It turned out to be Tom Kuhn's Silver Bullet-2, or SB-2.

The polished aircraft aluminum yo-yo, which costs $75, has a miniature precision ball-bearing axle, similar to the kind used in computer disk drives.

It also is tunable. In yo-yo lingo, that means the gap between the two yo-yo halves can be narrowed or widened.

It comes with a 40-page "flight manual."

"I'm extremely honored," said Kuhn, 49, a San Francisco dentist and yo-yo designer. "To me, this is a very, very exciting thing."

Dispatchers maintain lifesaving network

AUSTIN (AP) — They're a protective bunch who speak in code and are always ready with a weather update.

Former bank tellers and waitresses are now making life and death decisions as police dispatchers — the radio links between the public and police officers on the beat.

"The worst is when it's slow," said Flora Bentura, who dispatched in San Marcos before joining the Austin Police Department in 1976.

"There was no excitement in San Marcos. I never worked a robbery until I came up here," said Bentura, 38.

Emergency calls received by 911 operators are sent to Bentura's computer and she promptly relays the information to officers in the field.

"They went 95 P-O-C-S," she said into her radio headset, telling officers a suspect was arrested for possession of a controlled substance.

"That's our everyday talk. Instead of saying they went out on a collision, you say, 'They've got a 10-50,' " she said.

There isn't much time to socialize over the airwaves as each of the six APD dispatchers on duty is responsible for directing up to 30 officers.

"I know them by voice, but if someone walked in out of uniform, I wouldn't know them," said Bentura, a self-described "mother hen" to officers.

There's a big demand for dispatchers who can handle big-city pressures, said Lt. Paul Looney, APD communications supervisor.

"We have a lot of people who came from smaller agencies, but it's a whole new ball game here," he said.

He said APD received about 58,000 emergency calls in May, 34,000 of which required a dispatch of police, fire or medical personnel.

The pace is slower in Pflugerville — about 500 calls a month — but that's fine with police dispatcher Elaine Colyer.

"You tend to lose a lot of personal contact with the public and officers in the larger departments," she said. "I like being able to take part in everything that's going on."

Pflugerville dispatchers must file police reports, answer phone calls, track lost dogs and handle inquiries at the walk-up window.

Despite the quiet, small-town atmosphere, Colyer is ready for anything.

"Things can change in a split second. It can go from dead calm to hectic," she said.

There's usually enough happening in Pflugerville to keep things interesting, said Colyer, noting, "Last week we had a call of a snake in a toaster."

The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education requires dispatchers to complete 40 hours of training during their first year of work to become certified for the job.

Department of Public Safety Sgt. Ken Pittman coordinates DPS training programs for communications officers, as dispatchers are also known.

He said dispatchers play a crucial role in aiding officers in the field.

"They're the officers' lifeline to help over the airways. They can give you information you need to keep you alive or they can get you hurt," Pittman said.

"They're like mothers. They have to watch over us," said Belton police officer Carlos Davis, 43.

"When we have to pull over a car and we radio in the license plate, a good dispatcher knows to check if it's stolen and to see if the driver is wanted," he said. "We could be going up against a murderer and we wouldn't know it until it's too late."

One of Davis' "mothers" is Sgt. Linda Northam, a former bank teller who is now dispatch supervisor for Belton police.

"You have to be able to handle the stress or you couldn't do the job," she said. "You never know what you're going to get when you answer the phone. It could be something comical — it could tear you up."

Using common sense and remaining cool under pressure are trademarks of good dispatchers.

Burnet County Sheriff Weldon Buck said, "There's an awful lot of responsibility on the dispatchers shoulders — the workload is heavy and the salary is low. You don't have to be crazy, but it helps."

Many law enforcement agencies require dispatchers to remain tight-lipped about events they handle.

Typical responses such as "It's sunny," "It's rainy," or "It's quiet," to media inquiries are no guarantee that news is not occurring.

"Most of the time they won't let us say anything at all unless there's a press release," said Janie Prew, a dispatcher for the Burnet County Sheriff's Department.

Even if they can't talk about criminal activity, there are always other subjects the public is eager to learn about.

'There's an awful lot of responsibility on the dispatchers shoulders — the workload is heavy and the salary is low. You don't have to be crazy, but it helps.'

U.S. sells air base for 15 cents

SONDRESTROM AIR BASE, Greenland (AP) — Fifteen cents usually doesn't buy much, but Greenland is getting a whole U.S. air base, including a hotel, apartments, a nightclub and a dairy.

At the price of one Danish krone, the Greenlanders could hardly pass up Sondrestrom, which would cost $498 million to replace. Now they have to decide what to do with it.

For decades, the base was an arctic lookout in case of a Soviet attack across the North Pole, but the Soviet Union no longer exists.

"It's a ghost town now," said Louis Moller, driving his taxi down deserted, snow-covered Central Street. "I'm going back to Denmark to get in the unemployment line."

Tom Christoffersen, union spokesman for the 275 civilian Danes and Greenlanders whose contracts expire Oct. 1, concluded: "The end of the Cold War has its drawbacks."

About half the civilians expect to lose their jobs when the base is turned over to Greenland on Oct. 1 for the price of a krone. The rest will remain to maintain the buildings and operate services for the adjoining civilian airport.

After the transfer, the United States will be allowed access when needed. During the Gulf War, Sondrestrom served as a refueling station.

The 2.4-mile runway divides the military base from the commercial airport, called Kangerlussuaq. In the mountains around them, where musk oxen and reindeer roam, are five machine-gun bunkers built to repulse enemies who never came.

Since 1954, Kangerlussuaq has been Greenland's main port of entry. Passengers transfer to smaller planes for flights to the island's remote towns, which are not served by roads.

Residents of the area want to turn the base into a tourist and convention center because of its convenient location next to the airport. Some politicians, however, dream of building an international airport near Nuuk, the capital of Greenland, 280 miles south.

There is no money for for either.

"It costs the Air Force $26 million every year to run the base; we'll have a much tighter budget," said William Butler, 50, a retired Air Force colonel from Colorado Springs, Colo., who will manage the base for Greenland.

In the late 1950s, about 1,200 airmen lived at Sondrestrom, which covers 250 square miles on the western edge of the world's largest island. Now, the complement is down to 11.

All non-military functions, including the control tower, dairy, fire department and restaurants, are run by local civilians.

"Thank God, there's still an American cook at Big Al's Pizza," said Master Sgt. David Cox, 40, of Des Moines, Iowa. Cox spends some of his off-duty hours working as a doorman at what was the officers' club and now is a public nightclub.

The housing complex, hotel and chapel will belong to Greenland, and even the kitchen appliances and most of the blue Dodge vans will be left behind.

"It's too expensive to ship everything away," said Maj. Thomas Holkeboer, 39, of Grand Rapids, Mich., deputy commander of the base.

During the Cold War, Sondrestrom supported radar stations across Greenland.

Its own four radars were part of the Distant Early Warning network, known as the DEW Line, built from Alaska to Britain to detect any attack by aircraft or missiles across the top of the world.

Sondrestrom shut down its last radar in September, two months before the Soviet Union formally ceased to exist. Another radar system at the U.S. Air Force base in Thule, northern Greenland, continues to operate.

The flat valley at the end of the 105-mile-long Sondrestrom fiord enjoys a stable climate, although it is 34 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

It is one of a chain of airfields the Allies built during World War II that enabled 20,000 short-range American planes to refuel on the flight across the North Atlantic.

A steel, wire-mat runway was replaced by asphalt during the Korean War so heavy tanker planes could take off and refuel B-52s in flight. There is little traffic now, but a C-141 transport occasionally passes through en route to Thule.

Texan invents storm-warning device

By Enrique J. Gonzales
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — A blown-down birdhouse. A mighty Texas summer storm. A sudden idea.

Inspired by those three things, carpenter David R. Hall built what he said is the first-of-its kind "Severe Thunderstorm Sentry," a device that sounds an alarm when winds surpass 58 mph.

Hall, 36, said he was at his North Austin duplex one night in July 1990 when a power-packed thunderstorm knocked over a birdhouse he kept in the back yard for purple martins. About 25 minutes later, the National Weather Service announced a warning on his weather alert radio.

To Hall, that was 25 minutes too late.

"I figured there's got to be a better way," he said.

His invention, under review for a patent, works on a simple principle. When winds reach more than 58 mph, a weather vane mounted on a spring bends to make contact with a metal ring. The connection sounds a 100-decibel alarm and turns on two flashing red lights inside his home. The entire device is powered by a nine-volt battery.

Hall, a vice president and partner with Dale O. Hall Builder Inc., has made two prototypes:

'Sometimes storms slow down. Sometimes they speed up. It's not a perfect science, but it's getting better.'

— David R. Hall

a crude version that sounds when winds reach 50 mph and the final version that sounds when winds are closer to 60 mph.

He said he was concerned because residents now have to depend on the National Weather Service for severe weather warnings for large regions. But Hall said reports of tornado sightings, for example, can take too long between the time they are sighted and the time reports reach a neighborhood.

"That's what gave me the whole idea," Hall said. "That would be important for people to know. They would have real time warning instead of depending on the National Weather Service."

National Weather Service meteorologist Wendell Hohmann said the service tries its best to pinpoint areas threatened by severe weather, but that change is the nature of weather.

"Sometimes storms slow down," he said. "Sometimes they speed up. It's not a perfect science, but it's getting better."

Hall filed for a patent in March through the Affiliated Inventors Foundation Inc., a firm based in Colorado Springs, Colo., that has filed more than 1,000 patent applications since 1975.

He also arranged for a patent search to find out if any current patents have been awarded for similar items. Hall said searchers found one weather device that was plagued with problems but was basically different from his.

U.S. Patent and Trademark Office spokesman Oscar Mastin said an application for a patent is no guarantee of receiving one. The office in Arlington, Va., received about 170,000 applications for patents last year and granted patents for 102,000. A review takes about 18 months.

Joanne M. Hayes, a spokeswoman for the Affiliated Inventors Foundation, said Hall's application is better than most patent applications handled by her office.

"He's got a prototype that he's really tested. A lot them don't ever do that," Hayes said. "David's got something he really knows works."

Boy finds box filled with $500,000 in counterfeit bills

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — For hours, father and son kept their discovery to themselves: a rusty ammunition box stuffed with what appeared to be $500,000 in crisp $20 bills.

"It was a pretty heady find for an 11-year-old boy. It was a zillion candy bars worth," said Steven Donahue.

His son, Ian, spotted the box in some swampy woods last weekend.

"I opened it up and Ba-BOOM! I shut it twice as quick as I opened it," Donahue said. "We sat down and decided that if it's real, we'll give it to our attorney, and if it's counterfeit, we'll turn it over to the police."

Unfortunately, it was all fake, according to federal agents.

Donahue, who stopped counting after $350,000, said he doubted it was real, especially after he noticed that some of the bills had the same serial numbers.

His lawyer called U.S. Treasury agents, who went back to the Broward County park where the box had been hidden near a small flag and another marker apparently left by the counterfeiter.

The family's vision of easy payments for the boy's college tuition vanished as quickly as it came, but it wasn't a total loss, Donahue said.

"They gave my son a receipt for a half a million dollars (contraband) and gave him an honorary certificate as a junior member of the Secret Service," he said.

Two Broward County men were indicted earlier this year in connection with a counterfeiting operation that printed $10 million in phony twenties.

Secret Service agent Brian Stafford in Miami said he couldn't comment on whether the Donahues' find was related to that scheme, but added that his staff knows the source of the money.

KENT OIL, INC.

KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL MANAGEMENT?

Kent Kwik Convenience Stores (locally-owned and operated by Kent Oil Company) has several openings for experienced managers of service-type businesses to join our team.

CONVENIENCE STORE MANAGEMENT IS NOT NECESSARY

We're looking for people with a proven track record of motivating others, while at the same time achieving above-average operational results.

- You may be a department or grocery store manager who is ready for a new challenge.
- You may be a restaurant or fast food manager who wants to manage a smaller group of people (our crews average 5 employees).
- Or you may be an assistant manager of one of those businesses who has run out of patience waiting for a promotion.

One thing we do know---you're probably employed at the present time. Of course, we would handle your inquiries in the strictest of confidence.....If you think you have what it takes to run a 24 hour a day, fast paced business, give Art Burk, Andy Salcedo or Troy Warford a call at...
