Briget McAninch braves freezing temperatures while scraping ice and snow from her car's windshield. Although most of the snow melted away by Friday, forecasters warn Midlanders to brace themselves for more winter weather. Please see weather-related photograph on Page 2A.

Freezing rain, snow forecast for weekend

The ½-inch of snow and freezing rain that blanketed Midland Thursday had mostly melted away with Friday's warming temperatures, but forecasters say residents should brace themselves once again.

A winter weather advisory was posted for today for the Permian Basin as a storm stalled over Midland might dump as much as 3 inches of snow by Sunday morning.

Meanwhile, another system currently hovering over the southern California coast could make its way to West Texas by the middle of next week and bring more ice and snow.

Temperatures are supposed to climb to near 40 degrees today, but should drop into the lower 30s this afternoon as winds shift from the west to north at 15 to 25 mph, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

No major wrecks were reported Friday to police, sheriff or highway department officials, who had attended to at least 16 accidents the day before.

Debra McAden, a 26-year-old Odessa woman critically injured in a northwest Midland accident Thursday remained in intensive care at Midland Memorial Hospital late Friday with severe head and chest injuries.

Ms. McAden, a Santa Rita Elementary teacher, collided with a workover rig truck northwest of the intersection of Midland Drive and Northcrest Drive, reports said.

City workers in Midland and Odessa Friday sprayed salt water at railroad crossings, bridges and intersections to melt the ice as best they could. But police warned that the melted ice likely would refreeze and recreate hazardous driving conditions.

Ector County and Greenwood independent school districts canceled school Friday, while Midland schools conducted regularly scheduled classes.

At the airport, runways were clear of ice and snow; and flights were presumed to be running on time, a spokeswoman said.

Lawmakers request probe into Saudi-Texaco deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans by the Saudi Arabian Oil Co. to buy half of Texaco Inc.'s refining and marketing assets could further erode the domestic oil industry and increase reliance on foreign supplies, Rep. John Bryant said Friday in asking the treasury secretary to investigate the proposed deal.

"The enormity of this acquisition causes us to believe a second look should be taken at the matter, because of its possible impact on the domestic oil and gas industry and on our ability to become energy independent," Bryant said.

Bryant, a Dallas Democrat, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, Sen. Jeff Bingamon, D-N.M., and Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., appealed to Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady to investigate the joint venture, named Star Enterprises, on national security grounds.

The Saudi-Texaco deal, announced Nov. 10, would include three refineries, 50 distribution terminals, 1,400 service stations and 10,000 franchised gasoline stations in 23 Eastern and Gulf Coast states.

In their letter, the Democrats said they believe the acquisition falls under the law enabling the government to block mergers involving a foreign interests if there is evidence that national security is threatened.

The acquisition, they wrote, could "seriously increase U.S. dependence on foreign oil, threaten the viability of the domestic oil industry and jeopardize the well-being of American consumers."

"The lessons of the 1973-74 oil embargo and the 1978-79 shortage taught our country all too well the economic and political consequences of reliance on vulnerable oil supplies," the letter said.

"What is particulary noteworthy is that 96 percent of the capacity of the three refineries will be used in refining Saudi Arabian crude oil," Bryant said.

"So you've got a circumstance that Saudi Arabia has guaranteed itself an outlet for crude oil into the American market, giving them the option of lowering crude prices while earning increased prices at the gasoline marketing level. This could amount to an enormous loss to domestic producers and leave us even more dependent on foreigh oil."

Also, he said, foreign countries are immune from our antitrust laws, "so it's not clear we could enforce antitrust laws against this merged entity if needed to do so to protect consumers from market manipulation."

He said Saudi Arabia has announced a concerted effort to expand their dominance in United States oil markets and that their goals is become the 10th largest seller of gasoline in the United States as a first step.

Aid from around the world sent to Armenia

MOSCOW (AP) — A massive worldwide outpouring of sympathy brought London firefighters, French search dogs, tons of tents, and blankets and medicine to the Soviet Union on Friday to help relief for the Armenian earthquake.

More dogs and medical supplies were expected to be en route soon, courtesy of the U.S. government.

Western countries, the Soviet Union's East bloc allies and even groups not recognized by the Kremlin pledged millions of dollars of aid.

"We are awaiting more planes from foreign countries. We badly need them and are grateful for what they are bringing us," said Robert Gastoryan, an assistant to the director of the Yerevan's Zvarnots airport.

About 80,000 people were killed in Tuesday's earthquake, Leonid Zamyatin, the Soviet ambassador to Britain, said in London. Hundreds of thousands were left homeless.

The Soviet reaction to the outpouring of help astonished some observers.

"It's unusual for the Soviet Union to accept assistance from foreign countries, especially the West, but this is a really unusual situation and we're doing the best we can to help out and coordinate our efforts," a Western European diplomat said on condition of anonymity.

Midlander given probation for aggravated assault

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated nearly four hours Friday to find 40-year-old Francisco Lozano guilty of aggravated assault in the shooting death of Geraldo Soto last spring.

Lozano was sentenced to five years probation and a $2,500 fine for his role in the April 30 shooting at the La Bamba Club, 1804 S. Rankin Highway.

The defendant faced up to 10 years in the Texas Department of Corrections on the conviction.

Lozano stood motionless as 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin read the guilty verdict. He was convicted of shooting Soto with a .22-caliber rifle.

Defense attorney Woody Leverett, in closing arguments Friday, told the jury that the defendant "wasn't looking for trouble" when he walked into the bar to use the restroom the evening of the shooting.

"He walked into a hornet's nest," said Leverett, referring to the confrontation that ensued between Lozano, Soto and another man, Juan Rodriquez.

Big Spring officer indicted in shooting death of his wife

From Staff Reports

A 39-year-old Big Spring police officer was indicted Thursday by a Howard County grand jury for voluntary manslaughter in the April 12 shooting death of his wife.

Dennis Dunn, a Big Spring patrolman and former employee of Texaco Inc. in Midland, is accused of killing 26-year-old Carly Dunn at the couple's residence.

Dunn originally had been charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the slaying. However, the grand jury upped the charge to voluntary manslaughter after hearing several days of testimony, according to Assistant District Attorney William Dupree.

The Texas Rangers are investigating the shooting because it involves a police officer, Dupree said.

Dunn, who was arrested soon after the shooting, was released on $90,000 bond, according to Dupree.

No arraignment date has been set, he said.

Dunn was a long-time Texaco drilling foreman, having worked for the company from 1969-87.

His wife also worked for the company as a secretary in the Midland office until July 1987.

Robert McIntosh, who has played Santa for needy Arkansas children since 1962, has quit donning his custom-made red suit because of rampant drug use and shrinking work ethic.

'Black Santa,' discouraged by drug use, hanging up red suit

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Say it ain't so, "Say."

After 26 years of distributing free Christmas gifts and meals to Arkansas' needy, Robert "Say" McIntosh said Friday he is hanging up his Santa Claus suit because of disappointment with rising drug use and a shrinking work ethic.

"I'm just disgusted with the whole thing. I don't have the cheerful mind to be Santa Claus this year," said the 44-year-old McIntosh, who started playing Santa in 1962 by buying $250 in presents for poor kids.

"I've fed thousands and encouraged thousands to feed themselves. I haven't tried to be Jesus, but I do say that if I can feed you, you can feed yourself. But all I see now is poor people on drugs — kids and parents."

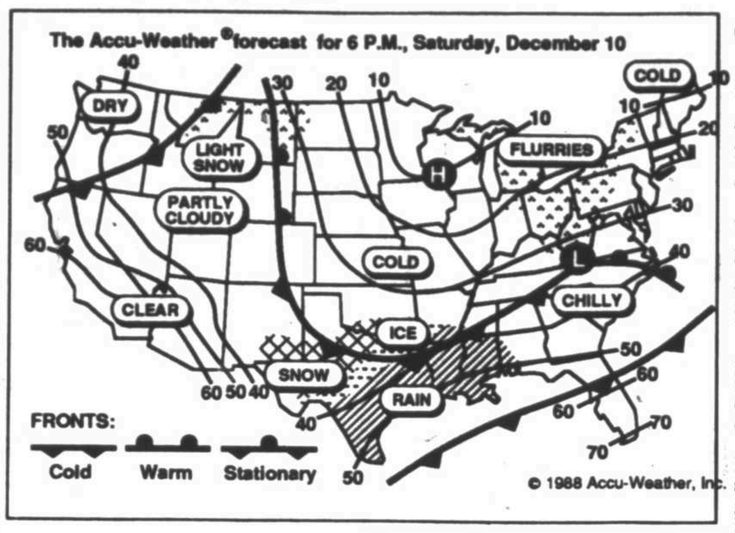
WEATHER SUMMARY



Cold, wet weather forecast

Associated Press

A lingering frontal system kept conditions cold and wet in Texas on Friday, with a snow advisory posted for the western mountains of the Trans-Pecos.

The National Weather Service said the snow advisory included higher elevations of the Guadalupe and Davis mountains. Three inches of snow was expected to fall in the area.

A freezing rain advisory was also in effect for the Permian Basin, the South Plains and western portions of North Texas. The advisory included the region around Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, Abilene, Wichita Falls and Lubbock.

Cloudy skies prevailed over most of the state, while the Panhandle enjoyed partly sunny skies. Winds were from the northeast to north in South Texas and generally from the southwest over West Texas. Wind speeds were around 10 mph.

Rain was expected to return to the state as a strong upper-level storm moved in from Mexico, along with an excess of moisture.

NATION

Heavy snow fell on the central Appalachians during the morning Friday, and high wind blowing out of the desert over southern California fanned brush fires that destroyed homes.

Up to 10 inches of snow fell in West Virginia, over the Mountain State's southern mountains and over the coal fields near the Virginia border. Up to 10 inches also fell across the mountains of southwestern Virginia.

Squalls produced locally heavy snow around the lower Great Lakes and heavy snow warnings were issued for northeastern Ohio and for the eastern Lake Ontario counties of New York state.

For today, snow was forecast from the Great Lakes region and the northern half of the Ohio Valley to northern New England. Rain was forecast from southeastern Arizona through the southern Plains and the lower Mississippi Valley to southern Georgia and northern and central Florida. Snow also was forecast over parts of New Mexico and northwestern Texas. Scattered showers were forecast from the coast of Washington to Montana and western Wyoming, with snow at higher elevations.

In Washington, U.S. and Soviet officials announced Friday that the U.S. government would charter an airplane to carry medical supplies and dog search teams to help. The U.S. government extended an offer of help Thursday.

Cindy Stuart, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Agency for International Aid Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance, said officials were looking for a plane and assembling teams and goods but that no details of the trip were laid out yet.

The Soviet Red Cross said its most pressing needs are antibiotics, syringes and needles, blood collection containers, blood substitutes, surgical thread and food concentrates.

The League of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies in Geneva said at least 12 planeloads of emergency supplies from International Red Cross societies worldwide were expected to arrive in Moscow and Yerevan between Friday night and Saturday afternoon.

The flights are leaving from Norway, Sweden, Hungary, West Germany, Denmark, Finland, Italy, Bulgaria, Britain and Belgium, it said.

In addition, societies from the United States, Austria, Canada, Greece, Iceland, Japan and Switzerland have announced aid, and "at least another 20 national societies are actively fund-raising and are expected to announce donations shortly," it said.

A French team of 180 people, including 22 doctors and 19 rescue teams, brought the first foreign relief workers to Armenia. The group brought 12 search dogs and 20 tons of medical supplies.

"We are very touched to be here and glad that we will be able to help out in Armenia," one of the French relief officers said on television.

The dogs are trained to sniff out people buried under rubble. Soviet television showed rescuers poking through the rubble with metal poles trying to detect signs of life.

Television also showed the arrival of a Swiss plane with more dogs and disaster experts.

A special firefighting unit from London led by Home Office Fire Inspector Norman Roundell arrived in Moscow late Friday. A Soviet television report from London showed the firefighters holding up special heat-sensitive cameras to detect live victims under the rubble.

The four-man team previously participated in quake search efforts in Mexico and El Salvador.

The British government also pledged $9.3 million.

Italy sent medical aid and telecommunications equipment, the International Red Cross dispatched four-wheel drive vehicles, and Britain said a Royal Air Force transport plane was standing by to send earth-moving equipment.

The American Red Cross collected money, antibiotics and supplies, and the Soviet Embassy in Washington said it has been overwhelmed with donations and has set up a bank account for those wishing to help.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration is willing to do whatever it can to help deliver aid and materials collected through private means. But he said the administration probably would not send U.S. government money to the Soviets.

Americans of Armenian descent gathered in shops and churches around the United States to seek news on the quake and donate money and supplies.

In Watertown, Mass., Ara Kalaydjian, editor of the Armenian Mirror Spectator, said despair has "changed into determination to build again and not for decades — for centuries."

Organizations such as the Polish banned trade union Solidarity and Israel's national Red Cross society, neither of which is recognized by the Soviet Union, said they were ready to help.

"Let's remember, Solidarity means also solidarity with other nations and with those who especially need such Solidarity," said an appeal signed by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

Walesa urged Solidarity members to contribute to a Roman Catholic Church fund for Armenia, and the union's health service commission said it was ready to send medicine and a team of doctors and nurses.

The Polish government pledged tents, sleeping bags, bandages and medicine and state-controlled television read a list of factories donating money.

S.O.S. Childrens' Home, an Austrian organization, offered to construct a provisional orphanage for children who lost their parents in the quake.

India said it was sending a 42-member medical team with medicine, blankets and other relief supplies.

Rollover

Icy roads caused an early morning motorist to lose control of his Ford Bronco near the intersection of Loop 250 and U.S. Highway 80, police say. Fortunately, the driver escaped unharmed.

Fuel causes chemical plant explosion

HOUSTON (AP) — An explosion and fire ripped through a section of a Houston area chemical plant Friday afternoon, but authorities said the blaze was quickly brought under control and no injuries were reported.

The explosion occurred around 4:30 near the main entrance to the Lyondell Petrochemical Co.'s Channelview plant, officials said. The company is a subsidiary of Atlantic Richfield Co.

"They had flames shooting about 900 feet in the air when we first got the call," said Sidney Webb, chief of the nearby Sheldon Fire Dept. The fire was brought under control within an hour, he said.

Emergency personnel on the scene reported there were no injuries from the blast or the ensuing fire.

Company spokesman R.C. Lumpkin said the mishap resulted after an outdoor fuel oil spill in one unit of the plant, which produces ethylene, a chemical used in the manufacture of plastics, foam containers and other products.

"No injuries are reported and damage is minimal," Lumpkin said. "The products of combustion of the fuel oil contain no toxic gases and pose no threat to the community."

Lumpkin said he was not yet sure what caused the spill or how the fuel oil ignited. The fire caused no structural damage at the plant, which was expected to restart operations late Friday night.

"We're already in the process of recirculation to bring the unit back up," Lumpkin said. "For all intents and purposes, we are back to normal operations."

Army investigating helicopter crash

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A U.S. Army aviation investigations team arrived in Honduras Friday to look into what caused the crash of a military helicopter that killed five U.S. servicemen, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Embassy spokesman Charles Barclay identified the dead as 1st Lt. Alan C. Urban, Staff Sgt. John P. McConnell, and Pfcs. Jim D. Bendon and Douglas J. Kropp, all based at Fort Bragg, N.C.; and Chief Warrant Officer Randall B. Potter of Fort Stewart, Ga..

Barclay did not release their hometowns.

He said rescue workers continued their search for the body of one of the servicemen, killed Thursday when their CH-47 Chinook helicopter crashed near the Caribbean port of La Ceiba, 235 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

The helicopter was based at Palmerola Air Base, 48 miles north of Tegucigalpa, the capital.

However, a MMH spokesman neither confirmed nor denied the report that Ms. Jones had been released from the hospital. The woman's family had requested that hospital officials withhold information about her condition, he said.

Meanwhile, authorities continued their search Friday evening for the man suspected in the shooting, according to the sheriff's spokesman.

The suspect is wanted for attempted aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the shooting, sheriff's spokeswoman Peggy Miller said Friday morning.

According to reports, the shooting occurred after the suspect flagged down Ms. Jones as she drove near the intersection of Interstate 20 and County Road 1140.

SHOOTING

Leverett, describing the victim as an "angry man" and a "mean drunk," said Soto and Rodriquez provoked the fight with Lozano.

"My client told you that he did not intend to kill a man. He just wanted to get away. He just wanted to stop the beating," he said.

The defense attorney claimed Lozano was sorry for Soto's death.

And for that reason, Leverett told the jury: "Sometimes, life isn't so simple that you can use the old biblical adage, 'An eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth.'"

However, Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams argued that Lozano should have retreated from the fight.

"Mr. Lozano was not entitled to use deadly force (to defend himself) unless deadly force was used against him," she said.

Instead, the prosecutor alleged that Lozano chose to "back-peddle toward the gun" which was hidden in the back seat of his 1986 Mercury.

"He couldn't get any respect out of Geraldo Soto (who was a former employee) and that was bugging him (Lozano).

"He walked into trouble that day and he failed to walk out of it," Ms. Sams said.

SANTA

He said he has been disappointed when parents don't take him up on offers to help youths find jobs, and when he saw people at his free Thanksgiving dinner grabbing at food instead of waiting in line.

But for others, Christmas in Little Rock will not be the same without "Say" McIntosh as Santa.

McIntosh, who called himself "Black Santa," took his gifts to black families in low-income housing projects. He said he reshaped the image of Santa Claus for many black youngsters who have always seen the jolly old elf depicted as a heavy-set, bearded white man.

"If you're wearing that red suit, you're Santa Claus," he said.

The Rev. James Demus, a former Little Rock minister who now preaches in Chicago and works with Operation PUSH there, urged McIntosh not to retire.

"When one like 'Say' McIntosh dons his red suit and gives gifts to the poor, he by example is reflecting Christmas. I would encourage him not to discontinue his efforts. Taking away that image, he would be, in a sense, taking away the hope our world so needs," Demus said.

McIntosh, a restaurateur whose specialties are barbecue and sweet potato pie, estimated he has spent more than $250,000 on Christmas gifts and free food over the years. No donor has kicked in more than about $1,000, and the balance comes from his pocket.

His mother warned him as a youth that, when one gives to others, the recipient always expects more.

But he always wanted to prove his mother wrong: "My whole theme has been to work and to motivate people, to get them to know we could do things and change our community."

His attitude changed with his son's imprisonment last year on drug charges. Tommy F. McIntosh, 23, was sentenced to 50 years in prison for possession of cocaine. The elder McIntosh said he became embittered when few people offered encouragement during his son's costly defense.

Public officials and providers for the needy said Friday that they appreciated McIntosh's work.

"People will tell him he just can't give up," said Mayor Lottie Shackelford. "We don't have enough people who are committed as it is. I just hope he will reconsider. I just know he will."

Dennis Hamilton, director of missions for the Union Rescue Mission in Little Rock, said: "We do love him and we care. I think he's made a bigger impact on people than he possibly can understand."

Pilot-reporters, authorities fight for space in air over news sites

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A helicopter flying in the Persian Gulf last summer only wanted to shoot film for NBC News, but a U.S. destroyer almost blew it out of the sky when the crew failed to respond to repeated warnings.

News helicopters around the world are becoming more aggressive in their quest for the best pictures. Pilots and officials now are taking steps to avoid disaster, to strike a balance between the First Amendment and public safety.

Following last May's $7-million Redondo Beach pier fire near Los Angeles, news pilot Bob Tur was criticized for fanning smoke and flames, endangering firefighters, and hampering radio communications with noise.

"We can be a pain," acknowledged Tur, who is currently appealing a 180-day license suspension for an unrelated infraction.

But he denied he hovered too close, and said that wasn't the real reason for his problems. "People sometimes don't want publicity. But if the media didn't tell you, who would?"

More news choppers are buzzing the skies above big news events, from earthquakes to chemical spills. Often, it's the only way television crews or newspaper photographers can grab pictures of a distant sea rescue or landslide before deadline.

Not too long ago, only the three major television stations in Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Times used helicopters, said Mike Dreesman, whose Helitac Aviation currently flies for The Associated Press and other news organizations. Nowadays, photographers from such publications as the National Enquirer spend hours each week airborne.

"We ask (the news helicopters) to back off and most of them are pretty polite about it," said Sgt. Brent Carey of the police Air Support Division. "Others are pretty persistent. They want to keep taking their pictures and at times it becomes an annoyance."

These days, teamwork among helicopters begins to play a more important role — and that's not the most common trait in such a competitive business.

"There's no problem in and around a major event when pilots communicate," said Bob Pettee, who flies for KNBC-TV. "The only problem is when somebody does something unexpected."

Pettee said experienced news pilots can shoot a chemical spill without stirring up toxic gas, stay far enough away from a hostage situation to avoid exciting a gunman, and cooperate with other pilots on the scene.

Sometimes they even help officials by tracking fires or flying out victims, he said.

Complaints were common before the Federal Aviation Administration limited flights around disasters in 1985, the FAA's Joann Sloan said. The restrictions allow local officials to ask the FAA to declare fires, crashes and other incidents off-limits to aircraft for safety reasons.

News aircraft are permitted only if they file a flight plan, fly above rescue aircraft, obey on-site authorities, and follow other rules.

Los Angeles fire and law enforcement officials said they coordinate coverage with news helicopters as they show up on the scene.

"I think the FAA thinks they have things under control," said Ms. Sloan. "We haven't had any disasters occur with these (news) helicopters that I know of anytime recently."

But last December Jim Burnett, then-Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, cited helicopter problems in asking the FAA to tighten controls around disaster sites.

Burnett cited six incidents since 1974 where news helicopters worsened hazards or hampered rescue efforts. These included stirring up fumes and dust around spills of hazardous materials, a fatal crash over a chemical fire, and distracting ground rescue crews.

"These incidents illustrate how non-rescue aircraft can interfere with rescue and clean-up activities and endanger the lives and health of the occupants of the aircraft, the victims of the accident, and the emergency response personnel responding to the fire or hazardous materials incident," Burnett wrote.

FAA Administrator T. Allan McArtor declined to issue new rules in March, but he pledged the FAA would impose a 180-day license suspension for pilots ignoring flight restrictions.

Tur knows all about such suspensions. The pilot, whose company sells videotape to several television stations, ran into trouble with federal officials in March 1987 over the Air National Guard jet fighter crash that killed Dean Paul Martin, son of entertainer Dean Martin.

Tur was warned away from the area by an Air Force colonel on the scene. But he flew by to shoot late afternoon pictures of searchers combing the steep, brush-filled mountainside for debris and bodies. Other news crews were escorted over the scene at a higher altitude.

Tur contended that flights were restricted only to avoid publicity.

Panel recommends how state can remain leader of space industry

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — The growing commercialization of outer space is "one of the brightest stars on the economic horizon," but Texas should move quickly to remain a leader in the field, the head of a legislative study committee said Friday.

"There are a couple of states that are already moving ahead in trying to become the 'space state.' We have been that, but we need to really pool our resources," said Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown.

Brown was chairman of the Texas Senate Space Science Industry Commission, which issued recommendations for action to make sure Texas stays out front with the developing space industry.

"Florida and California are giving us real, stiff competition," Brown said in an interview.

"But Texas, as a state government, has not entered into the space industry. What this report does is point out how we can make an impact in a number of areas — education, the business world, government, the bureaucracies — and how we can help make those things work better," he said.

Texas, home to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Johnson Space Center at Houston, has received many benefits from the space business, the report said.

However, it added, "While local leaders have been cognizant of this fact, there has been no concerted effort on the part of state government to recognize and nurture the development of NASA and its attendant industries.

"Texas has the opportunity to lead this nation in the commercialization of space by taking an enterprising role in developing the potential to its fullest," the report said.

"Other states have, to a greater or lesser degree, taken an active stance in promoting the space industry within their borders, and Texas must also recognize the space industry as one of unlimited possibilities for the economy of our state," it said.

With a large number of defense and high-technology industries already located in Texas, as well as oil and gas experts, the study described Texas as "prime territory for nurturing the growth of this almost limitless enterprise."

The commission noted that when the space age dawned in the 1950s, it was difficult to foresee a time when space technology would have many down-to-earth applications.

But today, it "has revolutionized medicine and industry," the report said. "Even everyday items, such as polarized-lens sunglasses and freeze-dried foods, are spinoffs of space technology."

Among the commission's recommendations were:

— Have state government take an active role in promoting space-related activities and support national space policies.

— Create a permanent Texas Space Commission to oversee space industry development.

— Support engineering, math and science education at all levels.

— Providing technical training and retraining opportunities supporting the aerospace industry.

— Encourage a unified effort among major universisites in space research to obtain more federal research money, and creating a state-supported foundation to provide seed money for research and development.

— Support a Texas investor network for space financing.

— Back a lobbying group for production, assembly and operation of launch vehicles, "as it is expected that launch vehicles will be he growth industry of commercial space in the foreseeable future."

34 abortion protesters arrested at two clinics

AUSTIN (AP) — Thirty-four protesters were arrested for criminal trespass at two clinics Friday, after clinic administrators warned them to stop blocking doorways and they declined to move, officials said.

About 20 protesters were carried out of the building that houses Reproductive Services and resumed the demonstration outside, where arrests of those identified by police as leaders began. Still more protesters at The Ladies Center blocked outside doorways for most of the morning before arrests began.

Austin Rescue, which was behind the "rescue missions," previously has conducted protests at both clinics.

"Our presence here is the only statement we have to make," protesters told reporters.

Demonstrators variously sang hymns and Christmas songs; prayed; and read from the Bible.

"You are trespassing today, and for all time. I never want to see any of you on this property again," Ginny Findeisen, administrator of Reproductive Services, told protesters in a warning to leave.

The protesters, who responded by sitting on the floor and singing "Amazing Grace," were carried out.

Reproductive Services shares an office with an adoption agency of which Ms. Findeisen is program director.

"We believe that women should be supported in their choice of handling an unplanned pregnancy, whether it is through adoption, through abortion or through parenthood," Ms. Findeisen said.

Referring to the protesters, she added, "These people don't believe in that. They don't think a woman should have a choice or a couple should have a choice."

Ms. Findeisen said women who had Friday appointments at Reproductive Services were re-scheduled or sent elsewhere. Austin police Lt. John Stewart said The Ladies Center was closed in the morning and was planning to open later.

"They're not stopping abortion. Women will get abortions one way or the other, and it's a shame that the city has to put out this kind of money. Look at the number of police officers involved here today," said Ms. Findeisen.

About 25 officers were at Reproductive Services while protesters were being moved, said Lt. Ernie Hinkle. An equal number later were at The Ladies Center.

Stewart said he thought some protesters were being paid to demonstrate. A woman whose husband was arrested — as she and their young sons watched — said that was not being done.

The woman, who declined to give her name for publication, said she was not concerned that her sons, ages 6 and 8, had seen their father arrested.

"They understand their daddy is doing what he believes is right," said the woman.

The Texas Abortion Rights Action League, Planned Parenthood of Austin, and Austin and Texas chapters of the National Organization for Women issued a statement blasting Operation Rescue.

"These lawless extremists have determined that the women of Austin will have to wait them out or cross their human barriers in order to seek health care services," said the statement distributed by Phyllis Dunham of TARAL.

"These extreme actions are immoral, unethical, dangerous, irresponsible, and costly to our city as well," it said.

"We believe that women should be supported in their choice of handling an unplanned pregnancy, whether it is through adoption, through abortion or through parenthood."

Gramm: State 'in hunt' for new smelter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mitsubishi Metals Corp. is completing a feasibility study on building a $300 million copper smelter in Texas City and company officials in Toyko will see the report next week, Sen. Phil Gramm said Friday.

"I'm very optimistic about our chances, but as we say in Texas, it's not a done deal," Gramm said after meeting in Galveston with Izumi Sukekawa, director and general manager of the company's metallurgy department, and several other engineers.

"The are in the process of completing a feasility study to present to the president of Mitsubishi and should have a final decision around fifth of January," Gramm said, characterizing Texas' bid for the plant as the front-runner.

Gramm said the company was also wrapping up negotiations with the University of Texas over land acquisition and with Union Carbide over the joint use of a pier.

"The company has not made a final decision, they are still putting together all of the cost factors in their feasibility study, which will go to Toyko next week," Gramm said.

"We're talking about a $300 million project that would (create) 1,000 construction jobs in building the smelter, which would employ directly about 300 people," Gramm said.

Dozens of additional jobs would be created through other subsidaries to serve the smelter, including an oxygen plant that would employ 50 people, Gramm said. It is also possible Mitsubishi would also build a $200 million copper refinery.

"We're talking about 1,000 permanent jobs, directly and indirectly, if Mitsubishi ends up building not just the smelter but the refinery as well," Gramm said.

"This is a big project but we don't have it yet. But our dog is in the hunt," Gramm said.

Gramm said Arnold Lincove, secretary of the Louisiana Department of Economic Development, was incorrect when he told a business seminar that the company would locate its copper plant in the Houston area. A site in Uncle Sam, La., is also said to be under consideration.

Lincove complained that the election of adopted-Texan George Bush as president would steer Mitsubishi to Texas.

Gramm said he believes Texas' efforts to secure the plant and Bush's presence in the White House are clearly factors.

"I called the chairman of Mitsubishi in Toyko and he was impressed that we went all out to get it," Gramm said.

Gramm cited the state's recent success in luring Formosa Plastics Corp.-Texas to a site in Calhoun County, where it plans a billion-dollar manufacturing complex that will create 1,700 jobs.

"In the case of Formosa Plastics, when Chairman Y.C. Wang came to Washington to visit me, I called up the vice president and took Chairman Wang over to meet George Bush and our new president told Chairman Wang how supportive he was of my efforts to bring Formosa to Texas. And let me tell you this, it didn't hurt."

Trade office opens

AUSTIN (AP) — An office designed to increase Asian investment and trade with Texas in Tokyo, according to the Texas Department of Commerce.

The office will try to attract foreign investors and increase awareness of Texas among travelers from the booming economies of the Pacific Rim, the department said in a news release Friday.

The Texas Pacific Regional Office will have satellite offices in Taipei, Taiwan and Seoul, Korea.

4 people returning from funeral killed in crash

NORTON, Kan. (AP) — Four members of a family returning from a funeral in Texas were killed Friday when their car ran off the road, struck an embankment and burst into flames, authorities said.

The accident occurred outside the western city limits of Norton on U.S. 36, said William Arehart, Kansas Highway Patrol dispatcher.

"They were on their way back to Omaha (Nebraska) from Dumas, Texas, where they had been attending a funeral," Arehart said.

The victims were identified as Alicia Burns, 59, her daughter Rita Ortega, approximately 35, Ms. Ortega's daughter, also Rita Ortega, 9, and Michael Miranda, 10, who was Mrs. Burns' grandson.

Jennifer Ortega, 12, Ms. Ortega's daughter, was flown by air ambulance to Good Samaritan Hospital in Kearney, Neb. Hospital officials there said she was in serious condition.

Authorities said the accident occurred when the car went off the road at a curve and became airborne across a creekbed. The car then struck the opposite embankment, throwing at least two people out before it burst into flames, Arehart said.

Father sentenced for abuse

AUSTIN (AP) — A former Air Force sergeant was given a life sentence after being convicted of felony child abuse for causing severe brain damage to his 6-week-old son.

Jurors deliberated about 3½ hours before leveling the maximum prison term for William Spang, 26.

Spang was convicted Wednesday of causing serious injury to a child. Doctors testified his son, Jeremy Spang, suffered severe brain injury from being violently shaken.

In a confession prosecutors read in court Wednesday, Spang admitted squeezing the child's head, violently shaking him, and dropping him on a bed and in a bathtub.

Spang said in the confession that the injuries occurred April 1, and that he had been upset by financial problems when the child started crying.

Five doctors have testified this week that Jeremy is blind, severely brain-damaged, suffers seizures and will never be self-sufficient.

Spang cried Wednesday when the child's foster mother, Juanita Craig of Temple, held Jeremy and testified about his disabilities.

Bandit sings while he robs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Victims of a robbery at a McDonald's restaurant were treated to the rhythm of rap music during the holdup — courtesy of the bandit police have dubbed "the happy hijacker."

"The suspect seemed very happy with his actions, and was singing a song the whole time," said a Fort Worth police report about the Wednesday night robbery.

"The happy hijacker," said Fort Worth police Sgt. Ray Clarke, who called the holdup a first. "Singing is not standard. He's happy in his work."

When an employee came out of the McDonald's Wednesday night to empty the trash, the gunman was waiting for him, authorities said. The singing bandit grabbed the employee by the arm and forced him back inside.

The bandit then confronted three other employees in the building and forced them to lie on the floor. Police said the robber proceeded to take an undetermined amount of money from cash drawers, two safes and employees' wallets.

As the bandit held up the restaurant, he sang a song to the rhythm of rap music.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Union Pacific Railroad train derailed Friday, sending several rail cars, including a tanker carrying a potentially toxic chemical, off the tracks, but causing no injuries and little damage, officials said.

No evacuation of the area was immediately called because the tanker carrying the chemical was not punctured, officials said.

The train derailment is the second in the last 30 days. Seven Union Pacific workers were fired last week in the wake of a Nov. 18 accident. Officials said that accident occurred because not enough handbrakes were used while workers tried to hook up a train to go to Laredo.

Firefighters were on standby Friday while railroad workers prepared to place the cars back on the tracks.

Admiral OKs transfer for 'whistleblower'

HOUSTON (AP) — Navy "whistleblower" Bryan Sims, who claims he has received death threats while stationed in Corpus Christi, will be allowed to move here next week, according to a published report.

Vice Adm. John S. Disher, national chief of Naval Education and Training, approved the transfer request and also grounded the rescue helicopters Sims has warned about, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

Sims, a 10-year Navy veteran from Houston, will be able to move with his family next week to work in a recruitment office, the newspaper said, quoting what it said were three people close to his case who did not want to be named.

Saying that superiors had threatened him with death for raising doubts about helicopter maintenance procedures at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station, Sims requested a move to Houston several weeks ago. That request originally was denied by base superiors.

In addition to approving the transfer, Disher said Thursday that the two UH-1N "Huey" helicopters used for rescue missions from the Corpus Christi base are out of operation while a Navy inspection team probes Sim's allegations.

Sims, 27, has said he had been harassed and threatened since 1986, when he refused to transfer untested, crucial parts to the two Hueys from another helicopter that crashed in 1985, killing three crewmen.

Sims, a fellow helicopter crewman and a former helicopter mechanic also said the orders were eventually carried out by other petty officers, posing a danger to the operation of the Hueys.

Disher also disclosed he was ordering further investigations of Sims' allegations about maintenance practices, threats and Sims' court-martial.

Sims, his wife, Debbie and attorney Michael Clayborne on Thursday met with Rear Adm. Vernon C. Smith, Disher's representative, Mrs. Sims said.

"Admiral Smith was letting Bryan know that they are actively involved in his case, that the reports have shown some discrepancies and they want to get to the bottom of it," she said.

Bronco-buster trains wild horses using psychology

By STEFANIE SCOTT

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Roger Thompson is a 20th-century bronco buster, but he's not breaking his wild horses the old cowpoke way.

He's teaching them to obey and respect man with another method — he's gentle on them.

"We don't cowboy them," said the former rodeoman and Hollywood stuntman.

Thompson, a West Texas State University agriculture student, is conducting his master's thesis study by teaching novices how to tame and train wild horses using psychology.

Instead of beating the animal into submission using whips and force, Thompson appeals to the horse's psyche and, using "passive resistance" methods, gently prods the animal into accepting man as his master.

"It becomes their idea to submit," he said.

Thompson, with an $8,000 grant from the Federal Bureau of Land Management and about 20 wild horses from the bureau's Adopt-a-Horse program, is working to teach the animals to overcome their natural fear of humans.

"They're afraid of us, but we had to teach them respect," he said.

The wild horse study, using training methods developed by Ray Hunt, an Oregon teacher and horse trainer, is the only study of its kind in the nation, Thompson said.

As part of his thesis, Thompson will compile a training manual and perhaps a training video tape for the novice wild horse owner.

The Adopt-a-Horse program was initiated to avert overpopulation of wild horses and burros on public lands.

After the public made an outcry against the killing of the horses, Congress passed the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act of 1971 to protect the range horses — and banned killing them for dog food. However, the ranges were still saturated, so the Adopt-a-Horse program was established, which got the problem pretty well under control, Thompson said.

One problem with the federal program was that when families adopted barely tamed horses — with visions of "Black Beauty" — they would get their horse home and would be unable to control it, he said.

Some families hired professional trainers, but consequently fewer horses got adopted and the BLM housed them in retention centers, he said.

The new owners need a horse that is stable, gentle and "not cowboy-broke," he said.

"My thinking is if we can teach the novice people to do this (tame horses) we can open up the market," Thompson said.

"They think and they consider things. We've been amazed at how quickly they respond and remember."
— Roger Thompson, 20th-century bronco buster

He hopes to complete his study by the end of this year and have his 20 experiments — ranging in age from yearlings to 4-year-olds — ready for adoption.

In April, Thompson brought the wild horses, captured from federal lands in Nevada and California, to the West Texas Horse Center.

The psychological method uses "passive resistance" tactics.

Thompson, and his assistant, West Texas student Sheryl Williamson, work daily with the horses. They feed them, and slowly, patiently teach the horses to lose their natural fear of humans using positive and primary re-enforces.

"It builds a trust," he said.

Currently, Thompson and Williamson are breaking the horses to halters. Some have had saddles on their backs.

None have been ridden yet, but Thompson said he hopes to ride some before summer's end.

"I spent 25 years riding broncos in the rodeo, but I don't even want to get on these guys right now."

When the horses were transported to the facility they avoided humans. Now, the horses allow themselves to be near humans — some allowing themselves to be patted.

Thompson and Williamson said the horses learn quickly, possibly because of their wild heritage.

For survival, the horses learned to adapt to their environment — to kick or run from danger.

"I think they learn quicker because if they don't, they die," he said.

"They think and they consider things. We've been amazed at how quickly they respond and remember."

Thompson, 50, has been working with horses all his life. When he was growing up near Dallas, he spent most of his time working with horses on his parents' ranch.

"That's all I've wanted to do all my life."

After graduating from East Texas State University with a vocational agriculture degree, he taught at high schools in New Mexico and Colorado.

He then moved to Hollywood and did riding and stunt work.

"I did mostly cowboy work," he said, playing in "Hang, 'Em High," "The Virginian," "Big Valley," and "Hondo."

Thompson recounted the time he was offered a part as an Indian in the movie "Custer." He said he wore a wig to cover his fair hair and make-up to darken his fair skin. When he faced the camera he had to close his blue eyes.

He was given a tomahawk, which he threw — straight at the camera crew in one scene.

Elmer Walls, horse specialist at the land bureau office in Oklahoma City, said the agency was pleased with Thompson's West Texas study, and it could spin off into related studies at West Texas and other universities.

The study should make great strides in the Adopt-a-Horse program because "Most people who adopt horses aren't horse people."

The psychological training method forges a bond between trained horse and trainer, he explained.

"These horses attach themselves to one person."

Eureka College reaps bonanza from presidential memorabilia

EUREKA, Ill. (AP) — Ronald Reagan's alma mater, tiny Eureka College, is sifting through a bonanza of presidential baubles, including the trademark jellybean jar and a cowboy belt buckle proclaiming "the buckaroo stops here."

"President Reagan has a deep affection for Eureka College and remains consistently in touch with us," said George Hearne, the college's president.

The school of 460 students about 20 miles east of Peoria has received about a dozen boxes of assorted trinkets in the past few weeks. School officials have been notified to expect more presidential odds and ends before the school's most famous graduate leaves office in January.

"It's interesting and exciting and may be just the tip of the iceberg," said Lynn Beer, director of college relations. "He knows we have a display of his memorabilia so he sends anything he feels is suitable."

The boxes are piling up in a small store-room adjacent to Hearne's office. Most are wrapped in old newspapers and appear in no particular order.

One box contains small gifts Reagan regularly gave White House visitors, including the famous jar of jelly beans, the belt buckle and a paperweight made from a piece of cork taken from the Oval Office floor. A note says the cork supported six presidents from 1934-89 before the floor was replaced.

Other items include an inaugural book set, cuff links, a key ring, a yo-yo, golfball, bookmark and a tie bar.

Two of the more unusual items are a pair of cowboy boots emblazoned with the presidential seal and a Plexiglas-enclosed Wheaties box bearing a photo of the 1988 Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

Lynn Beer, director of college relations at Eureka College, displays some of the presidential odds-and-ends donated by President Ronald Reagan to his alma mater. The school plans a display of memorabilia tracing the life of its most famous graduate.

AP Laserphoto

A small library could be created from the books Reagan has shipped.

Personal messages of good will abound in autographed books. Richard Nixon offered greetings "to another great leader." Jimmy Carter, Ted Kennedy and Ferdinand Marcos autographed other books.

Even reporter Sam Donaldson had kind words for Reagan, saying "you have my respect and admiration."

Eureka College officials welcome all contributions. The college is planning a permanent display in a new campus center located near the Reagan Physical Education Center and Reagan Street, Hearne said.

Officials target 1992 for completion of the center and plan to invite Reagan for opening ceremonies to coincide with his 60th class reunion.

Reagan graduated from the private, liberal arts college in 1932 with a degree in social science and economics.

Croquet players, lawn bowlers resolve sticky wicket

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — While the leaders of the two superpowers discussed peace a few miles away in New York City, croquet players and lawn bowlers in Greenwich toasted their new truce.

Ending four months of sometimes negotiations, representatives of the Greenwich Croquet Club and the Greenwich Lawn Bowls Club announced earlier this week that they will share the lawns at the town's Bruce Park.

"They deserve a lot of credit for working it out," Parks and Recreation Director Frank Keegan said. "I'm thrilled that it came to a happy conclusion."

Standing on the bowling green at the park Monday, croquet players Fred Supper, Norman "Topper" Cook, David Caulkins and William Campbell joined lawn bowler leader Charles Morgan at his sport. And Morgan took a few whacks with a mallet.

The lawn bowlers have had exclusive use of the green since the 1940s.

The proposal by the croquet group to share the park began in August, when Supper's wife, Patricia, presented the Board of Selectmen with a petition with about 100 signatures asking for approval to share the field.

Ensuing negotiations led to the settlement. But as recently as October, Morgan said the position of his group was, "there's a possibility that croquet could exist."

As part of the agreement, the lawn bowlers will reserve a 50-foot wide section of the green for two hours every afternoon. The rest of the 70-by-120-foot green will be available for croquet at the same time. Croquet may also be played after 3 p.m. The mornings were aside for maintenance.

Study indicates 680 plants at risk of extinction before turn of century

WASHINGTON (AP) — An accelerating decline in native plant species ranks right up there with the "big global Excedrin headaches" such as the greenhouse effect, acid rain and food shortages, says the director of a conservation group that found 680 plants face extinction by the year 2000.

The private Center for Plant Conservation said 73 percent of the plants facing extinction are in southerly, subtropical regions with intense economic or population growth — Hawaii, California, Texas, Florida and Puerto Rico.

"The causes of extinction are by now quite familiar to us — destruction of habitat, population growth, urban, suburban and industrial sprawl, irresponsible resource extraction, overuse of public land," said Donald Falk, the center's executive director. "As a consequence of that is this tremendously accelerated rate of extinction that we're seeing in these priority regions."

Falk said some of the endangered plants are relatives of important timber products, food groups, or plants used in horticulture and landscaping.

The center's 1½-year study found that 253 species of plants may become extinct within five years and another 427 may vanish by the turn of the century. As many as 52 of the plant species may already be extinct in the wild.

The center is a consortium of 19 botanical gardens and arboreta headquartered in Jamaica Plain, Mass.

"What we're dealing with here is just another sign of a planet in trouble and indeed, a national environment in trouble," said Thomas Lovejoy, an expert on tropical rainforests and assistant secretary for external affairs at the Smithsonian Insitution.

About 200 kinds of plants already have become extinct during the past two centuries, experts generally agree, and conservationists worry the rate may accelerate as population and economic growth jeopardize plant habitat. A 1973 study by the Smithsonian found that 3,000 of the nation's 25,000 species are endangered.

"Working with endangered species means working against the clock," Falk told a news conference at the Smithsonian. "It's kind of like being in the emergency room all the time.

"Every species lost represents an irretrievable loss of biological diversity and potential ecological values and potential human values," Falk said. "Once a species goes extinct, you can't then change your mind. You can't then say ... that species was beautiful, or that might have helped medicine or that species might have been scientifically interesting or might have been ecologically significant. You don't get a second chance with endangered species."

If the center's predictions on extinction are close to being accurate, the United States and the world face "the most catastrophic loss of species that's ever been experienced in evolutionary time," Falk said.

He said it would cost $10 million to $15 million to protect and propagate all 680 of the threatened plants, $6 million to $7 million to target only those in the priority areas, or $3 million to $4 million to save only plants facing extinction within five years.

Falk said almost almost every part of the economy is dependent on the health of the environment or natural resources, from oil and coal to fisheries and timbering to pharmaceuticals.

"So it seems rash at best and insane at worst for us to be tampering with building blocks of ecosystems and communities of entire species of plants and animals," Falk said. "Endangerment represents a rather eloquent message from nature, and it's nature in trouble and we're going to pay the price as a society if we don't listen."

Agency having trouble selling U.N. stamps

By PETER JAMES SPIELMANN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Earnings from the sale of U.N. postage stamps fell two-thirds in the 1980s, a problem the U.N. postal agency blames on unpopular themes and a vanishing generation of collectors.

"Our base group of collectors started in the 1950s and it is dying, to put it bluntly," says Gisela Grunewald, head of the U.N. Postal Administration.

Stamp sales are also hampered by agency reliance on political and social themes: "Our subjects are much more political; we cannot put out a puppy-dog or LOVE stamp," Grunewald adds.

While most political stamps simply fail to attract collectors, some political issues actually repel them.

In 1981, the General Assembly instructed the U.N. postal agency to issue a stamp proclaiming "the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people."

Michael Lawrence, editor and publisher of Linn's Stamp News, the authoritative guide for collectors, says the stamp was a disaster because "many of the stamp dealers in the United States are Jewish."

"I think we answered 20,000 letters on that issue," says Grunewald. "There was a rumor that the U.N. was issuing a stamp to honor the PLO and that revenue from the stamp would be sent to Mr. (Yasser) Arafat. It is very difficult to explain to the public the difference between the PLO and the Palestinian people."

Income from U.N. stamps' sales goes into the general budget, reducing the assessment member nations pay. It does not go to the cause or agency pictured on the stamp.

U.N. stamps vary in their value to collectors. The 1954 Human Rights stamp, one of the most popular, had a face value of 3 cents. It now sells for up to $9.50. A three-stamp block in 1955 that honored the U.N.'s 10th anniversary had a face value of 15 cents; now its value ranges from $190 to $320.

A recent audit of all U.N. agencies noted that net income of the U.N. Postal Administration declined from $13.5 million in 1980 to $4.5 million in 1987. It criticized the agency for lacking a marketing plan and for leaving two of three marketing directors' posts vacant.

Grunewald says a marketing plan will be in place by the end of the year.

The agency has been unable to fill marketing posts under the U.N.'s general hiring freeze, but other employees have been performing most of those duties, she says.

"There is an inherent Catch-22 situation in trying to run a commercial enterprise in an organization with bureaucratic restraints," she adds. "It's not something that comes as a surprise to any of us, although it's sometimes very frustrating."

The real crisis, she says, is that stamp collecting, the hobby that has added tens of millions of dollars to the coffers of the cash-poor United Nations, is in decline worldwide.

Lawrence says that sales by nations such as Andorra, San Marino, Liechtenstein and Monaco, which aggressively market their stamps for collectors, suffered a slump in the 1980s.

In 1979-80 there was a boom in all collectibles because of a high inflation rate that cooled in the 1980s, says Lawrence. Sales of stamps, coins, gold, antiques and other tangible goods peaked in 1980 and tapered off afterward.

The U.N. Postal Administration got an extra lift early in the decade, says Grunewald, because it opened an office in Vienna, joining those in New York and Geneva. It also launched a series of flag stamps.

Stamp collectors generally start the hobby as children, drop out in their teens and take it up again in their late 20s or 30s.

"It is not easy for us to find collectors at the young age because of our topics," says Grunewald. Marketing surveys show political subjects are the least favored by collectors, while stamps featuring butterflies and flowers are the most popular.

Tissue removed from Reagan 'appears benign'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Physicians removed a "small piece of tissue" from President Reagan's colon Friday during a post-cancer-surgery test, but it "appeared to be benign" pending results of a biopsy, the White House said.

It also said that a breast X-ray that first lady Nancy Reagan underwent showed "no evidence of any cancer recurrence."

"The president's physician, Dr. John Hutton, says the president is in excellent health," said the statement released by White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater after the tests at Bethesda Naval Medical Center. "The president is in remarkable physical condition," the statement quoted Hutton as saying.

The statement said the small piece of tissue taken from the president's large intestine was "one to two milimeters in size," and was "removed for biopsy."

The president and his wife both smiled and gave "thumbs-up" signs as they left the hospital in suburban Maryland by helicopter for Camp David, Md., after their four-hour stay.

Hutton, reached by telephone as he accompanied Reagan on the helicopter, told Fitzwater that the piece of tissue "resembled a small adenomatous polyp" and said it was "removed because it was suspicious."

The small amount of tissue that was taken from the 77-year-old president was to be tested over the weekend, Hutton's statement said.

The colonoscopy was performed without sedation of any kind, the statement added. The examination, regarded as uncomfortable, involves the examination of the intestine that uses a long, flexible instrument with fiber-optic technology inserted into the bowel to allow doctors to see inside it.

The statement said the president's chest X-ray was clear and that his urine sample was normal.

"There was no clinically significant change in his pulmonary condition," the statement added.

"The stress test and electrocardiogram showed the president's cardiovascular system is unchanged and normal," it said.

The president has had polyps removed from his intestine in four out of the five past periodic colonoscopic exams he has had since a two-inch cancerous lesion was removed from his colon in July 1985. Two feet of intestine was removed at the same time.

The relatively small polyps such as those taken in the past from Reagan tend to occur more frequently as people grow older, and Reagan's colon has demonstrated a propensity to produce them in recent years.

The growths generally cause no serious symptoms but, if left alone, can grow into cancerous lesions.

There are several kinds of benign growths that can occur in the colon, and the normal procedure is to biopsy it and look at it under the microscope.

They are ususally divided into two types — hyperplastic or adenomatous polyps. Usually the hyperplastic polyps are not thought to be associated with cancers elsewhere in the colon, but the adenomatous polyps are a signal to continue seaching for other possible future growths.

Reagan's doctors have told him that he must endure such tests as he had on Friday for the remainder of his life.

In his statement, Hutton said, "One small piece of tissue was removed for biopsy" during Reagan's colonoscopy.

"It appeared to be benign," the statement added.

The statement added that Reagan's CAT-scan, the computerized three-dimensional X-ray of his internal organs, showed no internal abdominal abnormalities. The test checks against the spread of cancer to any of the other vital organs in that region of the body, such as in the stomach or liver.

Mrs. Reagan, 67, had her second breast X-ray, or mammogram, since her cancerous left breast was removed in October 1987. Hutton said the exam "showed no evidence of cancer of any kind. Physical examination showed her condition was normal."

"The first lady believes strongly in the use of mammography for the early detection of breast cancer. She urges women to be regularly tested," the statement said.

Following their examinations, the president and Mrs. Reagan visited with Supreme Court Justice William Brennan, 82, who is hospitalized at Bethesda with pneumonia.

Hutton said Thursday the couple scheduled the tests as a precaution and that neither had any symptoms of a recurrence of malignancy.

Earlier Friday, Fitzwater said Reagan has received a positive report from his dermatologists, who examined him at the White House on Thursday and pronounced him free of any new skin cancers.

Reagan had skin cancers removed from his face in August 1985 and July 1987.

Fitzwater said three physicians, including Capt. Theodore Parlette, the chief of dermatology at Bethesda, conducted a visual examination of Reagan's skin and "did not detect a change" in his condition.

Physicians involved in Friday's tests include Hutton and a colleague in the White House medical unit, Dr. Martin Bacon; Dr. Bruce Lloyd, a cardiologist; Dr. Thomas Walsh, a specialist in pulmonary disease; Dr. David Hartman, a radiologist; Dr. Rocco Volpe, a specialist in gastroenterology; and Dr. Elsworth Weatherby, a specialist in nuclear medicine. All are on the naval hospital staff.

The Reagans have also turned to some private physicians for the tests, including Dr. Oliver Beahrs, a retired Mayo Clinic surgeon; his son, Dr. John Randolf Beahrs, who is a physician in private practice in St. Paul, Minn.; and Dr. Robert Beart and Dr. David Utz of the Mayo Clinic.

The elder Beahrs is an old friend and associate of Mrs. Reagan's stepfather, the late Dr. Loyal Davis of Chicago.

Reagan to speak at Virginia school

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will make a major foreign policy address next Friday at the University of Virginia, the White House announced.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday that Reagan would travel by helicopter to the UVA campus in Charlottesville, Va., about 125 miles southwest of Washington, and give the speech to some 700 students and faculty in Cabbell Hall.

It will likely be Reagan's last major speech before he and first lady Nancy Reagan fly to Los Angeles on Dec. 23 at the start of a two-week Christmas and New Year's vacation there and in Palm Springs, Calif.

The speech in Charlottesville will be Reagan's second major address of the week. The president will give a talk on domestic policy Tuesday to federal officials and business executives at the Constitution Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution here.

Everyone gone, Mets seek trade

Atlanta's Dale Murphy still on the market

ATLANTA (AP) — Dale Murphy and maybe Mike Greenwell and Ron Darling dangled Friday as a handful of teams tried to make one final trade before finally leaving baseball's winter meetings.

Almost every club checked out by morning, two days after the meetings officially ended. By afternoon, the headquarters hotel had filled up with the NBA's Detroit Pistons, who were here for a game, and All-America college football players in town for a promotional event.

THE NEW YORK METS and Boston, however, were still trying to do big business. There was speculation about a major deal to send Darling to the Red Sox for Greenwell.

"Boy, it's been meaty," Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said, talking about trade possibilities without being specific.

The Red Sox seemed a lot closer to working a deal with Cincinnati. Nick Esasky and Rob Murphy may soon go to Boston for Todd Benzinger and Jeff Sellers.

The main Murphy continued to be Dale and the Atlanta Braves, who did not make a move in their town, met with the Mets Friday.

SAN DIEGO is also interested in Murphy and has offered a package that includes John Kruk and highly regarded catcher Sandy Alomar Jr. and pitcher Greg Harris. The Padres have also made catcher Benito Santiago available, but not in that package.

"If I felt we needed a catcher, I'd be all over San Diego. But we don't," Atlanta general manager Bobby Cox said.

"Obviously, we'd like to do something. We're sitting in our city," Cox said. "But this is no time to panic. Whatever deal we have to make must be the right one."

THE METS have offered Len Dykstra and Howard Johnson, and Atlanta wants them. But the Braves also want a pitcher, prefererably rookie David West, and pitching-rich New York won't trade him.

"Someday they're not going to have three guys at every position," Cox said. "But right now they have so many players to choose from."

San Diego, led by general manager "Trader" Jack McKeon, also was talking to Seattle. The Padres, who have acquired Bruce Hurst, Jack Clark and Walt Terrell in the offseason, want third baseman Jim Presley and reliever Mike Schooler from the Mariners.

McKeon stayed up late Thursday night trying to make a trade. Well into the wee hours, he answered the telephone in his room with a cheerful "Trader Jack's all-night service!"

More than half of the teams made trades during the meetings, which represented one of the busiest weeks in history. There were 11 trades and 12 free-agent signings involving 45 major league players.

AMONG THE clubs that did not deal were American League champion Oakland, St. Louis and Toronto.

The Athletics signed free agent pitcher Mike Moore before the meetings and do not feel compelled to make a major move. The Cardinals are sorting out their injuries and remain uncertain about their future. And Toronto, which has not traded a front-line player since 1984, offered outfielder Lloyd Moseby and Jesse Barfield but could not make a match.

Several years ago, the end of the meetings meant the trading deadline. But that restriction has been eliminated and now teams can trade freely until late into the regular season.

Among the players who might still get moved are Montreal's Tim Wallach and Hubie Brooks, Atlanta shortstops Andres Thomas or Jeff Blauser and shortstop Shawon Dunston of the Chicago Cubs.

Oilers showing wear and tear

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oiler defense and special teams have shown signs of the wear from a long NFL season.

The defense struggled in a 25-17 victory over Dallas on Thanksgiving Day and couldn't keep Pittsburgh from scoring with 20 second to play for a 37-34 victory Sunday.

But don't try to convince Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche the Oilers will be any less aggressive Sunday when the two teams meet in the Astrodome.

"This team is as good as the first time we played them," Wyche said. "The fact that they lost last week doesn't signal anything."

Pittsburgh's Bubby Brister completed touchdowns of 65 and 80 yards to Louis Lipps and Dwight Stone returned a kickoff 92 yards for a touchdown.

The Oilers hadn't given up a kickoff return for a touchdown since 1973.

"THEY STILL have the same good ideas that they had on defense before," Wyche said. "I don't see any difference.

"If you play enough games, somewhere along the way your likely to lose one."

The Oilers suffered a 44-21 loss to the Bengals in Cincinnati on Oct. 23 when the Bengals scored a club record 28 first quarter points.

The Oilers must try to stop the NFL's No. 1 ranked offense after they were unable to stop the Steelers, ranked No. 16 in total offense.

"They're ranked that way and I won't disagree with it," Oiler defense end Ray Childress said.

"We've got to attack Cincinnati. That's what we didn't do the last time and that's what we should do this time, don't hold anything back.

"If we don't control their offense, we're going to have a difficult time winning the game."

Cincinnati has the No. 1 ranked rushing attack in the NFL, led by rookie Ickey Woods and James Brooks.

THE OILER defense ranks seventh overall in the NFL and third against the rush.

"I think it's too early to start saying the defense slacked off," Oiler cornerback Patrick Allen said. "If we win these next two games, everybody will forget about it."

The Bengals, 11-3, could clinch their first AFC Central Division title since 1981 with a victory over the Oilers.

Houston still could win its first AFC divisional crown by beating Cincinnati and Cleveland, if Cincinnati loses its last game against Washington.

"We're all disappointed that we didn't beat Pittsburgh," defensive end William Fuller said. "But we always seem to do things the hard way so now we've got to win these last two games, starting with a great Cincinnati team.'

Blanks fires real bullets for 'Horns

AUSTIN (AP) — Junior transfer Lance Blanks hit for 37 points and pulled down 13 rebounds as the Texas Longhorns coasted to a 96-73 win over Lehigh in the first game of the Longhorn Classic.

Blanks' effort was the most points scored by a Longhorn player since Carlton Cooper, who had 38 against Missouri Southern in 1983.

Blanks, a 6-4 transfer from Virginia, was 15-of-19 from the floor, including 7-of-9 accuracy from the three-point range.

He had 19 points by halftime to lead the 5-1 Longhorns to a 46-36 halftime lead. He came into the contest with a 16-point average.

Although the Longhorns won by 23, they had trouble shaking the 2-3 Brown & White which had only one starter over 6-5.

Texas led by as much as 13 in the first half but Lehigh cut that advantage to two twice.

After the Longhorns had built up a 22-point lead midway through the second half, Lehigh trimmed it to nine after outscoring Texas 15-2 during one stretch.

Alvin Heggs, the Longhorns' top scorer coming into the game with a 21-oint average, followed Blanks with 20. Heggs also swept the boards for 14 rebounds.

Reserve freshman Bob Krizansky came off the bench to lead the brown and white with 24 points, 12 in each half.

Coach claims homosexual charges false

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — A two-time NCAA wrestling champion fired after nine months as assistant wrestling coach at Villanova University charged in court papers that he lost his job because he refused to become the homosexual lover of former head coach John du Pont.

Andre Metzger, 29, is seeking $555,000 in a counterclaim filed Thursday in Delaware County Court to a lawsuit from a firm headed by John du Pont, Villanova's former head wrestling coach and one of the university's major benefactors.

"The allegations are totally false," du Pont's attorney, Taras Wochok, said Friday in responding to the counterclaim, adding that he would move to strike them from the court papers. "They are scandulous and impertinent and have nothing to do with our lawsuit."

Fox Mountain Inc., du Pont's real estate holding company, seeks to evict Metzger and his family from a $300,000 home, and also collect some $15,000 in back rent it claims he owes. Metzger claims the home was to be deeded to him free as part of his wrestling contract, and also is seeking $255,000 in lost income.

"He knew that the house was not going to be given to him, and the statements he is now making are so outrageous and entirely an attempt to put pressure on Mr. du Pont to give him the house," Wochok said. "It is not going to happen. It is just unbelievable."

Wochok said du Pont would have no comment, but the lawyer said, "This muckraking is unfortunate, and it overshadows all the good things he has done."

The 50-year-old du Pont, who pledged $5 million for a new Villanova basketball arena that bears his name, has said he provided funding for the wrestling program, which was begun at his suggestion.

In his counterclaim, which added Villanova as a defendant, Metzger, 29, charges his firing last May "was a direct and proximate result" of his "refusal to submit to homosexual advances" by du Pont.

Villanova spokesman Eugene Ruane said the university would have no comment.

'Famed' imposter arrested

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A man who so convincingly passed himself off as a pro football player that casinos gave him food and drink handouts and gamblers lined up to get his autograph has been arrested by Las Vegas police.

Willis Clyde Thomas, 26, was booked on a fugitive burglary charge out of Orange County, Calif., after being arrested earlier this week by police at Caesars Palace.

At the time, police said, people were in line to ask him for autographs and he had cards giving him complimentary privileges from several resorts in his pocket.

A National Football League official said the 6-foot-5 Thomas, who tips the scale at 285 pounds, has gone around the country impersonating various NFL players since 1986.

"We first became aware of his activities in March of 1986 and since then he has been rather elusive," said Warren R. Welsh, director of security for the NFL.

Police said Thomas has repeatedly passed himself off as a professional athlete to obtain fine hotel accommodations and food. They said he would claim that his wallet had been stolen or he was on the injured reserve list.

His latest impersonation was of Rod Saddler, a defensive end with the Phoenix Cardinals, said a police detective who asked not to be identified. Welsh said he has also passed himself off as Washington Redskins defensive lineman Charles Mann.

Pistons muscle past Atlanta

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Joe Dumars scored 13 of his 24 points as the Detroit Pistons took control in the third quarter and went on to beat Atlanta 92-82 in a bruising game Friday night, ending the Hawks' six-game winning streak.

Dumars set the pace as Detroit came out running to open the second half and extended a one-point halftime lead to a 51-41 advantage 2:11 into the third period.

The lead, which grew to as many as 13 points in the fourth quarter, gave the Pistons a cushion to withstand Atlanta's brief comeback try late in the game.

The victory gave Detroit a 10-3 road record, and it marked the Hawks' first loss in nine games at the Omni this season.

The physical play that often marks games between these two NBA Central Division rivals flared at 8:59 in the third quarter when Atlanta's Glenn Rivers collided with Dumars under Detroit's basket, setting off a fracas that left both players on the floor. Rivers and the Pistons' Bill Laimbeer each were whistled for technical fouls in the incident.

Bulls 118, Bucks 100

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan contributed nine points, including a sensational alley-oop basket, to a 25-13 second-quarter spurt. Jordan, who was held to his season-low 18 points Wednesday against Detroit, finished with 35 points and 11 rebounds. He scored 13 of his 23 first-half points in the second quarter to help the Bulls outscore the Bucks 32-23.

The Bulls shot a sizzling 66 percent in the opening half while the Bucks were limited to 40 percent from the field.

Celtics 121, 76ers 107

BOSTON — Danny Ainge scored a career-high 45 points and the Boston Celtics led for the final 45 minutes as they broke a three-game losing streak.

Ainge had 10 points in the first five minutes of the first quarter and 10 more in the last five minutes of the second quarter, leading Boston to a 64-49 halftime lead. He added seven points in the third quarter as the Celtics took a 93-75 advantage into the final period.

The 76ers, who fell out of a first-place tie with New York for the Atlantic Division lead, came no closer than 99-92 in the fourth quarter. Boston's biggest lead of the game was 18 points three times in the third quarter.

Hornets 96, Nets 95

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kelly Tripucka scored 30 points, and Rex Chapman added 16 of his 24 in the second quarter as Charlotte held off a late New Jersey rally and handed the Nets their sixth straight loss.

The Hornets held a 96-92 lead before guard John Bagley, who scored all of his 12 points in the fourth quarter, hit a 3-pointer with two seconds left.

Tyrone Bogues hit two free throws with 10 seconds left for a 96-92 Hornets edge before Bagley's 3-point jumper.

Pacers 112, Kings 105

INDIANAPOLIS — Hot-shooting Chuck Person and Herb Williams each scored 25 points as the Indiana Pacers led almost the entire game.

Person was 12-for-16 from the field and Williams, who had 10 rebounds, hit 12 of 17 field-goal attempts for the Pacers.

Wayman Tisdale added 20 points as the Pacers hit 48 of 81 field goals for 59 percent, compared to 43 percent (39 of 91) for the Kings. Kenny Smith led Sacramento with 33 points.

Nuggets 121, Heat 110

MIAMI — Miami's rally from a 20-point third-quarter deficit fell short and the winless Heat tied a 39-year-old NBA record with its 15th straight defeat to start the season.

Denver — a different franchise from the current Nuggets — set the league record for the poorest start in 1949. The expansion Cleveland Cavaliers in 1970 and Philadelphia in 1972 also had 0-15 starts.

Miami could break the record Saturday night at Chicago.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Australian Ian Stanley carded a 1-under-par 69—135 Friday for a one-stroke lead at the midway point of the $150,000 Air New Zealand-Shell Open golf tournament.

Countryman Peter Fowler, who also shot a second-round 69, was second at 136. Another Australian, Ossie Moore, was third at 137 after a 69.

Two-time U.S. Open winner Hale Irwin was the leading American. He was tied for fourth place, three strokes back at 138, after a 70.

Bills' best ever proves debatable

Fans say '88, players favor oldtimers

By FRANK BAKER

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Ask almost any fan what Buffalo Bills team is the best ever and many will say this year's 11-3 team. But ask former Bills players and the answer will be quite different.

Whether they are from the 1964 and 1965 American Football League championship teams, the 1974 playoff team or the 1980 and 1981 playoff teams, former Bills remember their team as stronger, faster or tougher.

"We were better," said Booker Edgerson, a cornerback with the Bills from 1962-69 and a member of two league championship teams. "We were as strong or stronger defensively and had better overall depth...without a doubt."

"OUR DEFENSES in '64 and '65 may have been better," said Paul Maguire, a Bills linebacker and punter from 1964-70 and now an NBC-TV commentator. "Our team went 20-something games without giving up a touchdown on the ground."

"Both are great defenses," said Stew Barber, an offensive tackle for the Bills from 1961-69 and a former general manager. "But, I think we had better balance. This year's team has a couple of key people that, if they weren't in there, the whole defense would collapse."

The Bills defense, with standouts such as All-Pro lineman Bruce Smith, linebackers Cornelius Bennett and Shane Conlan and nose tackle Fred Smerlas, is ranked second in the AFC and has allowed the second lowest point total in the NFL next to the Chicago Bears.

It was the defense that led the earliest clinching of an AFC division title since the NFL went to a 16-game schedule in 1978.

ON OFFENSE, it is perhaps understandable that former Bills would consider their team superior. After all, Rich Stadium was the first pro home of O.J. Simpson.

"We had an edge because of O.J.," said wide receiver Bob Chandler, 1971-79.

Simpson, now an actor, said from his California office, "Our offense with this year's defense would mean a perennial Super Bowl team.

"I like to think that we had as fine a running game as any team ever in football," he said, noting that the 1975 team averaged over 30 points per game.

"We won high scoring games, this team wins low scoring ones," he said.

Despite their criticisms, the former Bills still love their old team.

"I got chills watching the fans tear down the goalposts after the (division) clinching game against the Jets," Chandler said. "I remember that even when I won the Super Bowl with the Raiders in 1981, I thought about what it would have been like to be in Buffalo."

"I'VE ALWAYS followed the Bills, even when I played for Cleveland," said Joe DeLamielleure, offensive guard from 1973-79 and in 1985. "My heart's still in Buffalo."

"Whenever I pick up the paper, I check to see how the Bills are doing," Simpson said. "They're the team I cheer for."

All the players said they were surprised at how quickly the team turned around from being one of the worst teams in the league a few years ago to being a potential Super Bowl participant this year.

They give much of the credit for the resurgence to Coach Marv Levy.

"You could see the turnaround start when Levy came (in 1985)" said former tight-end Mark Brammer, 1981-84.

Chandler also noted the signing of some top players.

"It really shocked me," he said of the acquistion of star quarterback Jim Kelly and others in multimillion dollar deals. "That wouldn't have happened when I was there."

"Management makes the difference," Simpson said. "If they put the players on the field, the team will win."

Brammer, who played on the 1984 team that went 2-14 and remembers "rock bottom" morale, said he thinks the current Bills could win the Super Bowl.

CHANDLER said the team has the attributes of a great team.

"All they need to do is get momentum going into the playoffs," he said.

"This year's team has learned how to win," Maguire said. "They think, like we did, that nobody can beat them. We went into San Diego for the championship in 1965 as 17-point underdogs. We won 23-0. We never thought we would lose that game."

"I hope this year will be remembered as the year the Bills won the Super Bowl," Edgerson said. "It's their turn for the limelight."

Nine Buffs 'disciplined'

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The nine Colorado football players who missed mandatory conditioning drills will not be suspended from the team and will play in the Freedom Bowl, Coach Bill McCartney said.

McCartney said the players would be disciplined through extra work — varying degrees of early morning running — "for the next couple of weeks."

"They are all very much a part of the team," McCartney said Thursday.

It had been speculated that the nine players, including three starters, might be held out of the Dec. 29 Freedom Bowl against Brigham Young.

McCartney said the players were merely suspended from bowl preparatory work until their reinstatement Thursday, and that he never intended to suspend them from the game.

A&I's Bailey gets second Hill award

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — Texas A&I running back Johnny Bailey won his second straight Harlon Hill Trophy Friday night as the best player in NCAA Division II.

The runner-up was Portland State quarterback Chris Crawford and another quarterback, Earl Harvey of North Carolina Central, finished third in the balloting.

"I wasn't sure I would repeat," Bailey said. "I thought I had a better chance last year."

Bailey said he thought Crawford was the favorite for the award this year.

"He had a great year," Bailey said. "Chris is a great athlete, and he's the best quarterback I ever played against."

Bailey received the 2½-foot, 63-pound trophy at an award ceremony in neighboring Sheffield on the eve of the Division II championship game at Florence's Braly Stadium.

The title game Saturday pits Crawford's Portland State team against unbeaten North Dakota State.

Bailey received 28 first-place votes and 158 total points in balloting by 90 sports information directors at Division II schools. Crawford got 23 first-place votes and 125 total points, while Harvey was a distant third, receiving 11 first-place votes and 55 points.

LAYDEN QUITS JAZZ— Frank Layden, his Utah Jazz, 11-6, leading the NBA's Midwest Division, stepped down as coach because of the intense pressure and fan abuse. Assistant Jerry Sloan will replace Layden.

"We're not in a dugout," Layden said. "The fans are right on top of us. I've had people spit on me. I had a guy come up to me and say, 'Hit me, hit me, I'm a lawyer. I think America takes all sports too seriously, there's no dignity."

Layden will be the team's president, replacing Dave Checketts, who takes over as GM.

DONAHUE RESPECTS HOGS— Arkansas may be a five-point underdog against UCLA in the Jan. 2 Cotton Bowl, but Bruins' coach Terry Donahue says, "I've heard about Arkansas' lack of respect and it worries me. All you had to do to realize Arkansas had a good team was watch the game with Miami. It kind of caught your eye."

The previously undefeated Razorbacks lost the Dec. 3 game 18-16 to Miami.

SOUTH AFRICA VERBOTEN— Top Olympic officials moved to bar from the Games any athlete who competes in South Africa. Tennis and gymnastics received special attention in the anti-apartheid move. The IOC concluded a week of meetings by asking the federations that govern worldwide sports to strip Olympic eligibility from anyone who takes part in South African events.

In addition, the board said athletes should be warned against competing in the Games and then going to South Africa for post-Olympic events. Officials said this was specifically aimed at tennis, which has a Johannesburg tournament late in the year.

NHL TO VISIT USSR— Two NHL teams, tp be chosen by Jan. 15, will visit the Soviet Union in September for exhibition games in Leningrad and Moscow. Eagleson said the NHL teams selected for the trip will train for one week in Sweden, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia or Finland before going to the Soviet Union. Each team will play two games in Leningrad and two in Moscow. The games will count as part of their 11-game preseason schedule.

MUELLER SKI WINNER— Peter Mueller of Switzerland won the first downhill race of the men's World Cup ski season at Val Gardena, Italy, Friday and spoiled Canadian Rob Boyd's hopes of winning for an unprecedented third consecutive year. Mueller, in scoring his 24th World Cup victory, had a time of 2:00.51 minutes. Austrian Armin Assinger was second, 0.18 seconds off the winning time, and Boyd finished third.

No. 1 pick could be surprise bonus for Cowboys

By DAVID GINSBURG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry knew last summer that his team wasn't the stuff Super Bowl contenders are made of. But he hardly expected the Cowboys to be in the running for next year's No. 1 draft pick.

That's the "reward" for owning the worst record in the NFL, and with two weeks left in the season both Dallas and Green Bay are 2-12. Although Landry acknowledged months ago that this was going to be a rebuilding season for the Cowboys, he never envisioned this type of disaster.

"The worst happened of what I expected this year," he said. "It's tough to have a season like we've had, but sometimes you have to go through those to get where you want to go."

Dallas brings a 10-game losing streak into this Sunday's game against the Washington Redskins. The Cowboys almost snapped out of the skid last week in Cleveland, but 17 penalties proved too much to overcome in a 24-21 setback.

It was the fifth game this season the Cowboys have lost by three points or less. Fate, and more than one Dallas columnist, has not been kind to Landry.

After the agonizing loss to Cleveland, Skip Bayless of the Dallas Times-Herald noted, "Thomas Wade Landry is a pitiful shadow of Mt. Landry greatness," and "It's amazing this team hasn't quit on Mt. Senility yet."

More Sports, 9B, 12B

Landry could lash out at his critics by citing his past achievements or passing the blame upstairs. Instead, he conceded that the franchise's past greatness has resulted in unrealistic expectations.

"You get so much criticism when you're a team like we are, that's won so many Super Bowls," he said. "People expect you to do that every year, and that's what makes it so tough."

If anyone can appreciate that position, it's the Redskins. The defending Super Bowl champions are 7-7, with only a mathematical chance of getting back into the playoffs.

That small chance to qualify for post-season play may depend upon on running up the score against the Cowboys, just in case tie-breaking procedures get down to point differential.

"That's a joke," said Redskins coach Joe Gibbs. "We're going for a one-point win, period. My goal is to just try and survive this game."

Washington linebacker Neal Olkewicz, putting the Redskins' season in perspective, added, "We haven't been playing well enough to be cocky. At this point, we'll take any kind of win."

The last time the two teams met, last Oct. 9, Redskins running back kelvin Bryant had 200 total yards in a 35-17 Washington rout. But Bryant hasn't played in a month, and will surely miss his fifth straight game.

His place in the backfield will be taken by rookie Jamie Morris, who has rushed for 158 yards in the past two weeks. Rookie Mike Oliphant will replace Morris on passing downs.

Dallas, on the other hand, will rely on Herschel Walker for most of its yards out of the backfield. Despite the Cowboys' woes, Walker has an NFC-best 1,353 rushing yards and has only six fewer yards from scrimmage than the current NFL leader, San Francisco's Roger Craig.

"Herschel has been remarkable," Landry said. "Playing for a team that's 2-12, he's right up there with the leaders, so you know he's a great player."

Walker, who ran for 134 yards last week, needs only 147 yards from scrimmage Sunday to become the most productive running back in Cowboys' history.

Carter gets court OK

AUSTIN (AP) — A state appeals court Friday cleared the way for Dallas Carter High School to take part in Saturday's Class 5A football playoff game against Odessa Permian.

A ruling by the Austin-based 3rd Court of Appeals, following weeks of legal maneuvering, rejected the University Interscholastic League's bid to block Carter's participation.

The appeals court ruling came about 24 hours before gametime at University of Texas' Memorial Stadium.

"This means Carter plays Saturday," said Shari Nichols, an attorney representing the UIL.

The action was the latest in a legal tangle involving efforts by the Texas Education Agency and the UIL to oust Dallas Carter from the playoffs.

Both agencies have declared Dallas Carter ineligible because a player on the football team, running back Gary Edwards, flunked an algebra class.

Dallas Carter, however, claims Edwards passed. His initial failing grade was due to a miscalculation, according to officials from the school and the Dallas Independent School District.

In a hearing earlier this week, State District Judge Paul Davis ruled in favor of Dallas Carter and ordered the TEA and UIL to stop trying to prevent the team from continuing in the playoffs.

Both agencies appealed that ruling. But the 3rd Court action will allow Dallas Carter to face Odessa Permian, according to officials from the UIL and TEA.

Mike Tyson fires trainer, rips 'witches'

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson has fired Kevin Rooney, his trainer since he turned pro, and called his wife and mother-in-law "witches," according to a published report.

"I don't have a trainer now," Tyson was quoted as saying in the New York Post. "That's the way I look at him. But you can really say that Kevin fired himself. It's over."

Rooney sugested earlier this week that Tyson should start "dating" Robin Givens, his estranged wife.

Tyson and Givens sued each other for divorce and Givens has sued Tyson for libel, charging $125 million in damages. Tyson also has made critical remarks about Ruth Roper, Givens' mother.

"Doesn't Kevin know what I went through with those women?" Tyson was quoted as saying. "Kevin talks like Ruth is a good person. She and Robin are both witches. How may times did I talk to Kevin? How many times did I tell him only to worry about me and him?

"Kevin is out now," Tyson said. "He is out. I'll get another trainer."

Tyson also said he was firing Rooney because the trainer made critical remarks about Don King, who is attempting to sign Tyson to a promoter's contract. Tyson signed the deal but Bill Cayton, his manager, has refused. The contract is invalid without Cayton's signature.

King is said to have said he wants Richie Giachetti, the former trainer of Larry Holmes, to train Tyson.

Hill paces Seniors PGA on record 64

WAIKOLOA, Hawaii (AP) — Dave Hill, who finished third on the money list for the Seniors PGA Tour this year, shot a tournament record 8-under-par 64 Friday to lead after the first round of the 54-hole Mauna Lani Seniors Challenge.

Gay Brewer and Harold Henning were two strokes back at 66 in the $225,000 tournament.

Don Massengale, Bob Brue and Ben Smith were next at 67.

Hill got his first of seven birdies on the par-5 537-yard second hole by two-putting from 35-feet.

"I have been swinging the club well this year," said Hill, who earned $415,594 on the Tour in 1988.

Hill finished his second year on the Senior Tour with three tournament wins and rewarded himself with a two-week hunting trip in Michigan.

Clampett-Glasson lead team golf

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Clampett and Bill Glasson combined for a 63—123 best ball Friday to hold their one-stroke lead after two rounds of the $600,000 PGA Chrysler Team Championship.

Jim Rutledge and Mike Smith were second after shooting a 12-under-par 60 for 36-hole total of 124.

Both teams played the 6,850-yard Wellington Club course, one of three being used in the quest for the $100,000 first prize.

Clampett lifted the team back into a tie for the lead with a birdie at the seventh hole and Glasson regained the lead at the ninth.

Both teams will be playing the new 7,080-yard Cypress Course Saturday in the third round as the field of 70 starting pairs are cut to the 28 low scores and ties.

Two teams are one stroke back of Rutledge-Smith. Mike Hulbert and Bob Tway, the defending champions, shot a 64 at Wellington to tie the 1988 rookie team of Jim Hallet-Brian Tennyson for third place with 125.

Formula One Prix scheduled

PARIS (AP) — The U.S. Grand Prix is on the 1989 calendar for Formula One auto racing, but its location is undecided, the International Federation of Sport Automobiles (FISA) said Friday.

The World Council approved the 1989 list of 16 events with the U.S. Grand Prix set for June 4 at a site to be determined.

In October, FISA refused the application of Detroit, which held the race this year. FISA said the Detroit circuit needed safety improvements.

FISA officials said three sites were being considered for the U.S. race next year, but declined to identify them. However, sources within the association, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Laguna Seco, Calif., was a leading contender, with Road Atlanta another possibility.

The 1989 Formula One Grand Prix season begins in Brazil on March 26 and ends in Australia on Nov. 5.

Ayrton Senna of Brazil won this year's drivers' world championship and McLaren-Honda took the constructors title.

Yankees sell TV rights to cable

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees became the first major league baseball team to sell all of its television rights to a cable network Friday when they announced a 12-year deal with the Madison Square Garden Network.

The MSG Network will show 75 games in each of the 1989 and 1990 seasons. WPIX-TV, which has carried Yankees games for 38 years, will broadcast 75 games each of those two years under an existing contract. Beginning in 1991 and through the 2000 season, MSG has exclusive rights to 150 games a season.

The value of the package was not announced, but a source familiar with the deal said it was worth about $500 million.

Under the contract, MSG could resell its rights to an over-the-air channel. Bob Gutkowski, president of the MSG Network, said he did not know if any games would be resold. If they are, "WPIX has the first option to license such rights," according to Paul Schneider, an MSG spokesman.

Marty Appel, a spokesman for WPIX, said the station intended to try to buy rights to over-the-air games from MSG. But he said no deal was in place.

"It's a long way off, it's a hard to look ahead from 1988 to 1991," he said. "MSG says there's a lot of time."

WPIX had offered to buy a package of 150 games a year directly from the Yankees for about $500 million.

"In the end, there were a number of provisions that we were unwilling to accept," Appel said.

MSG Network reaches 2.3 million households through more than 110 cable systems in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and Gutkowski said it hopes to expand by 700,000 households.

Under Patino, Knicks going for Three Point basket

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Pitino reasons that if a team can make 40 percent of its 3-point shots, it's smart to start firing away.

So when the New York Knicks missed all seven of their long-range attempts on Tuesday night, there was no signal from their coach that they should hold back for awhile until their shooting eyes improved.

"They know I'll be upset if they don't take the threes," Pitino said. "As long as we're shooting near 40 percent, we'll take it the whole year and stay with it."

On Thursday, the Knicks set an NBA record with 11 3-point goals in a 113-109 victory over Milwaukee, and their 11-for-19 performance improved their percentage for the season to 40.2 percent (97-for-241).

"We haven't been that hot lately from (3-point) range, but our big guys did a great job kicking the ball out to us," said Mark Jackson, who had three 3-point baskets. "The thing with that shot is if we keep taking them, sooner or later they're going to fall in. But the best part of our 3-pointers is that coach has confidence in us and encourages us to keep taking them."

"We've been struggling from the 3-point line lately, but Rick keeps prodding us to take them," said Trent Tucker, who also had three 3-pointers. Sometimes he yells at me if I don't take them."

New York now has 291 points on 241 shots from 3-point range. To get more points than that from the same number of 2-point attempts, the Knicks would have to make 60.6 percent of their shots.

The Knicks are averaging 13 3-point attempts and 5.4 conversions per game. Pitino's 1987 Providence team, which made the NCAA Final Four, averaged 8.2 3-point baskets per game.

Jackson, Tucker and Johnny Newman had three 3-pointers apiece and rookie Rod Strickland had two for the Knicks, who broke the record of 10 established three times previously. The Knicks did it on Nov. 18 against Philadelphia, Dallas had 10 in a game in 1987 and Boston tied the record last April.

Newman had 20 points, Patrick Ewing 17 and Tucker, Strickland and Jackson 16 each for the Knicks.

Ewing, who also had seven blocked shots, hasn't had a 3-point attempt this season, but he loves seeing his teammates take the long shots.

"When we're hitting the 3-pointer, it's an easier game for me," Ewing said. "I can make the defense pay by getting the ball out for the three, and I don't get double-teamed as often because no one wants their man to score the easy basket."

Surprisingly, the Knicks were behind when they made the last of their 11 3-pointers.

Led by Jackson, they took the ball inside during an 11-2 spurt that turned a three-point deficit into a 108-102 lead with 1:53 left.

But the Bucks said they had to respect the Knicks both inside and outside, making them vulnerable to both.

"We knew they were capable of hitting the long shots, yet we also had to be aware of their inside game," Milwaukee's Sidney Moncrief said. "We had to try and make them beat us with the outside game. We played tough, but we lost."

"The 11 3-pointers hurt us, but we had a five-point lead when they made their last one," Bucks coach Del Harris said. "We couldn't stretch our defense totally to guard against the threes because they have a good inside game as well. We tried to adjust to the threes, but they still have to make them."

"They were getting three for the price of two all night," Bucks forward Larry Krystkowiak said.

TED BATTLES

A rose by any other name....

Battles

Taking time out from his latest book, "Luv Ya' Dallas Cowboys", Gary Ott recently deplored the fact that sports don't have the colorful characters of the past.

You've got to admit Bobby Layne, Dick Butkus, Ted (Mad Stork) Hendricks, Casey Stengel, Deacon Jones, Tony Lema, of champagne fame; Walter Hagen, Snake Stabler, and the rest, revive special memories.

What's just as bad, sports names and nicknames aren't what they used to be, even back in the days before-anything-goes, back when there was still some taste restraints.

Where are the Dr. Strangegloves, Stonefingers of today? What ever became of Marvelous Marv and, geez, with the where-did-he-go breakaway backs of today, there's not a Galloping Ghost or Squirmin' Herman in the bunch. You'd have thought they could have done better by the Barry Sanders, Walter Paytons, Eric Dickersons, Herschel Walkers of today and Gayle Sayers of not too long ago.

IN FACT, how could you watch Sayers make one of those wonderous runs through a broken field and not have the imagination run wild?

Worse still, Jim Brown was never anything but Jim Brown. Not even Jarrin' Jim. If he hadn't been so good, he'd never made All-America or Hall of Fame with a handicap like "Jim Brown." John Doe is more exciting.

Which stirs the imagination, Wayne "The Great", a feeble effort if ever, Gretzky, or Rocket Richard? Even Pocket Rocket, Maurice's kid brother, conjures up a vision of something out of the ordinary.

There hasn't been a Mr. Zero since Frankie Brimsek of the old Boston Bruins and if the NHL is so tough, how come there has never been another "Man of a thousand stitches," which describes Ching Johnson's career as a New York Ranger defenseman.

WAS THERE ever been a better name for a football coach than Knute Rockne? With a name like that, who needs a nickname.

Angelo Bertelli is a musical enough, but it was the "Golden Wop" tag that gave him his edge in the Heisman Trophy competition, if for no other reason you had to wonder how many fights Angelo had before he took it as the compliment it was meant to be.

Splendid Splinter wasn't all that awesome as a nickname unless you were out on the mound and Ted Williams was taking aim at the right-field seats at Fenway.

TODAY we've got Mike Tyson, Larry Holmes, Michael Spinks mixed in with something a little more imaginative like Sugar Ray and Marvelous Marv and, like a ghost from the past, Boom Boom. But where are the Two-Ton Tonys, 'ammering 'enrys, Brown Bombers, Gunboats, Cruisers, Battling Nelsons, Manassa Maulers, Tiger Jacks of yore?

Jersey Joe becomes a great nickname when you consider the alternative, Arnold Cream.

NAMES like Creepy Crespi, Iron Horse, Yankee Clipper, Mechanical Man, Bananas Bonura, Dizzy and Daffy, Big Oom, Push 'em Up, Babe the Blimp Phelps, Luke Hot Potato Hamlin, Bullfrog Bill Dietrich, Slammin' Sam Snead, Bantam Ben Hogan, the Wee Icemon, King Carl Hubbell, the Mealticket...they were the rule rather than the exception.

Even the legit monickers had a ring to them....how about Van Lingle Mungo, Dario Lodigiani, Jean Beliveau, Yvan Cornoyer, Sammy Snead....

Today instead of names, we get steroids.

Cash to return

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Pat Cash, the 1987 Wimbledon champion who has been sidelined with knee and ankle injuries, said Friday he was fit and ready to return to the tennis tour. Cash will launch his comeback in a low-key round-robin event in Melbourne Monday.

The Australian, whose ranking has slipped from the top 10 to No. 20, has not played in a tournament since August.

Utah's Layden steps up

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Frank Layden, who brought a sense of humor to the pressurized world of NBA coaching, quit Friday with his Utah Jazz leading the Midwest Divison. He said the game had become too serious.

A tearful Jazz owner Larry Miller made the announcement and said assistant Jerry Sloan will replace Layden.

Layden, known as much for his sharp wit and rotund figure as his coaching prowess, became coach seven years ago and compiled a 277-294 record.

Layden's tenure as coach, which began in December 1981, was the third-longest among active coaches in the league, behind Doug Moe of Denver and Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Layden, who signed a 10-year contract with the Jazz in 1983, led Utah to five straight winning seasons, five straight playoff berths, and the Midwest Division championship in the 1983-84 season, when he was named NBA Coach of the Year.

Last season, the Jazz won 47 games, breaking the team's record of 45 victories, set in 1983-84. Utah then took the Lakers to seven games before losing in the Western Conference semifinals.

Along with the pressure, both Layden and Miller mentioned recent incidents by abusive fans as having, in Miller's words, "soured" the coach on his profession.

"After the Seattle game (Nov. 29 at Seattle), fans waited around for an hour to curse at him," Miller said.

Miller said Layden made his wishes known to him after the Jazz' 107-93 home victory over Chicago Nov. 30.

"He shocked me when he said it was time for him to step aside," Miller said.

"The average person doesn't know how good a basketball coach Frank Layden is."

"I don't want to happen to me what is happening to Landry and Shula," Layden said, referring to long-time NFL coaches whose teams are suffering this season. "We get dumb in one summer.

"I'm leaving the team when we're at the height of our popularity. You're not going to find a guy who works harder than Jerry Sloan."

Sloan, 46, has been with the Jazz as an assistant since November 1984. He played in the NBA with Washington and Chicago from 1965-76, and is the only Bulls' player to have his number (4) retired.

Sloan also coached the Bulls for 2½ seasons, starting in 1979-80, compiling a 94-121 record.

Checketts said that in Layden's new role, he "will continue to be the Jazz spokesman. He will pick up some of the scouting duties. Frank has the special talent of not having an ego."

Checketts said he wasn't surprised by Layden's decision.

"When we were winning and it didn't taste good to him, I think I saw it coming," he said.

Checketts said when team members were told that Layden was stepping down, "a lot of them bowed their heads. He's been tough on the players, but they respect him."

Guard Darrell Griffith said he was sad to see Layden go.

"Frank is the type of guy that you always have good things to say about," he said.

Layden said he felt the current Jazz lineup is the best he's ever coached. "In my professional life, I've never had a team like this," he said.

But Layden indicated he was confident the team would continue to do well under Sloan.

"Coaches make a mistake when they think they are indispensible," he said.

W. Michigan, Fresno clash in Cal Bowl

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The coaches in Saturday's California Bowl game between Western Michigan and Fresno State are praising their opponent's speed.

"Western Michigan has much more speed than any other MAC (Mid-American Conference) team that has played here," Fresno State coach Jim Sweeney said.

Broncos coach Al Moldy agreed, but hinted that Fresno State might be faster.

"We probably had more quickness than any team in our conference," Moldy said. "I'm not sure how we compare to the Big West teams, but I know Fresno has outstanding speed, and no one that we have played has close to that kind of speed."

Both teams bring 9-2 records into the game at 30,000-seat Bulldog Stadium, which annually features champions of the MAC and Big West Conference, formerly the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

The Broncos are led by quarterback Tony Kimbrough, who was named MAC player of the year after passing for 2,465 yards and 19 touchdowns. Western Michigan, which won its first league title in 22 years, was ninth in the nation in passing offense among NCAA Division I teams.

Another offensive threat for the Broncos is Robert Davis, who rushed for 1,054 yards.

Fresno State's running game amassed 2,598 yards, spread fairly evenly among fullback Myron Jones (677 yards) and tailbacks Kelly Skipper (574) and Darrell Rosette (504). First-year quarterback Mark Barsotti passed for 1,555 yards.

The Bulldogs were fourth nationally in scoring defense and ninth in yards allowed per game. Their key defensive player was linebacker Tracy Rogers, the Big West's player of the year with 87 tackles.

Linebacker Eric Hoffman led Western Michigan on defense, averaging 16 tackles per game.

Fresno State has played in two of the seven California Bowl games, winning both. This will be Western Michigan's first appearance in the game.

Portland St. vows different Stagg result

by PAUL NEWBERRY

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — For the second straight year, Portland State has traveled across the country to play for the Division II championship. But Coach Pokey Allen says this year will be different.

"We're going there to win it," Allen said while preparing for Saturday's game against unbeaten North Dakota State.

A year ago, the Vikings earned a spot in the playoffs for the first time and reached the championship game, before losing to Troy State 31-17.

"I told the players last year that we were going back to (Florence)," Allen said. "We were wide-eyed last year. We'll be more relaxed and ready to play this year."

They better be. North Dakota State, 13-0, has won three Division II championships during the '80s and reached the finals six times in this decade.

"They (Bison fans) don't expect you to compete in the conference and play in the playoffs, they expect you to get to the championship game," Coach Rocky Hager said. "The pressure to win is substantial."

The title game will be at 13,000-seat Braly Stadium, home of the University of North Alabama, for the third consecutive year.

The Bison, led by quarterback Chris Simdorn, is averaging 480.6 yards and 40.2 points per game. The running game has gotten all but 92 of those yards.

Simdorn is the team's leading rusher with 1,483 yards, and has scored 25 touchdowns.

This Christmas, hundreds of hungry people could be eating dinner from one of these cans.

It's up to you which one.

Your contribution to our Holiday Food Drive could make Christmas dinner a lot more appetizing for someone a lot less fortunate.

In addition to canned goods we'll be accepting turkeys, hams and other perishable items. Just about anything, in fact, except home-canned food.

Bring your donation to the 2200 West Illinois entrance of Midland Memorial Hospital, between 3 and 8 p.m. on Tuesday, December 13. We'll see that it gets to the Permian Basin Food Bank.

People who are hungry will do what they have to. Let's make sure that this Christmas, they won't have to.

JIM MURRAY

Roughest, meanest bunch of 'em all

Murray

LAS VEGAS — What would you have to say is the roughest, meanest orneriest all-time lineup you can think of?

The 1940 Chicago Bears — the Monsters of the Midway? The Lombardi Packers? The Lyle Alzado-John Matuszak Raiders? The Philadelphia Flyers' Broad Street Bullies? Hate to have to fight Fritzie Zivic and all those thumbs in your eye, would you?

Well, put them all together and I've got a cast of characters up here that would make them look like altar boys. This bunch could make the crew of a pirate ship jump overboard. They could empty out Central Park at midnight, make the Gestapo hide under the bed.

Look, Dick Butkus was not someone you wanted to meet on a line of scrimmage — or a dark alley. But he didn't have horns. William (the Refrigerator) Perry is big. But he doesn't weigh 2,000 pounds. Lawrence Taylor hits hard. But he doesn't try to kick you to death. Bo Jackson is hard to bring down. But he's only got two legs and you don't have to truss him and tie him in 10 seconds for the tackle to count. Eric Dickerson is tough to catch from behind. But you don't need a horse to do it.

I wouldn't like to have to defend against Larry Bird under a basket. But you're not going to get your neck broke.

THE OUTFIT I'm talking about makes the Super Bowl game look like a prom. Or high tea.

It's well known that some institutions cut academic corners to recruit their athletic squads. But how would you like to go up against an outfit that not only can't read or write, it can't even talk? How'd you like to face a backfield that goes 4 tons on the hoof? Where there are no unnecessary roughness penalties, no offsides? Where holding is not only all right, so is kicking and butting and gouging? Where the officials have to hide in a rubber barrel?

Not since the Christians and the lions has there been an athletic contest quite like the rodeo. Wild animals versus unarmed men.

Americans are squeamish. They won't let a man fight a bull with a sword, but it's all right if the man has nothing but a 10-gallon hat and a pair of spurs. The bull doesn't die in this corrida. You can't always say that of the men. The bull gets the ears in this contest.

Of course, you couldn't exactly call rodeo cowboys wimps. These are not your average 9-to-5 commuter car-pool suburbanites. In fact, they're not terribly different from the cayuses they ride —independent, short-tempered, somewhat violent. Can't stand neckties, fences, or to be told what to do.

Like the animals they get on, they're throwbacks. Born 100 years too late. They're right out of the pages of Louis L'Amour. They belong back in the days of the O.K. Corral, the Chisum Trail, the great cattle drives, Geronimo and all of that. When there was no law west of the Pecos and no God west of the Brazos. Where the cities were named Tombstone and Deadwood and the saloons were named Last Chance and a man's horse was his castle and his gun his best friend.

THESE WERE things cowboys did — rassled steers, roped and tied and branded calves, broke broncs. They didn't really have to ride bulls. They just did that for laughs. It was something to do between hangings.

These are the last of the "High Noon" characters. An arena full of Gary Coopers. The modern versions of Wyatt Earp.

They don't just round up any collection of calves and bulls and broncs for this bunch to ride or rope. They get the biggest roundup of animal sociopaths they can find. If they were human, they'd be Jack the Ripper. They once had a bull they named Himmler.

They comb the countryside to find these homicidal types. It's like getting a team off a post office wall. You know how some coaches will wait outside a poolroom or a dance hall and, when they find a guy cut and bleeding by the roadside, they go in and find the winner and offer him a scholarship? That's what stock contractors in a rodeo do. They find a cowboy on crutches or in traction or with both arms in a sling and a his neck in a brace and they try to find the 4-footed psycho who put him there.

You would think the man to beat up at the National Finals Rodeo would be some sunburned Billy the Kid type with the burr of west Texas in his talk, a chaw of tobacco in his cheek, a hat with a hole in it and a prairie squint in his eyes.

Would you believe instead Crocodile Dundee?

DAVE APPLETON was brought up 8,000 miles from the lone prairies where the deer and the antelope used to roam. Kangaroos roamed the range in his native land.

But he wasn't too far in personality and temperament from the wild young bunkhouse types of the old American West. He arrived in America 8 years ago with $30 Australian in his pocket, a riding glove in his straw suitcase and a dream in his heart.

The only difference was, he didn't hanker to rob stagecoaches or be the quickest draw in the territory, he just wanted to be the best bronc rider in the world. His idol was not Wild Bill Hickok, it was Larry Mahan.

Dave Appleton had been riding rodeo in his native Australia but there, cowboys don't believe in roping steers. They just throw them down by the tail.

"It's easy," assures Dave. "Once you get the hang of it."

This audacious Aussie is second in the all-around cowboy standings as the national finals get under way. This green-card resident alien has won $77,482 so far this year and $550,191 lifetime on horseback.

We're used to Aussies beating us on the tennis courts and golf courses but who ever thought they would start to out-ride or out-rope us?

Geronimo would hang his head. Buffalo Bill would go gunning. John Ford would have to do "How the West Was Lost" if our world champion cowboy is a guy who says "mite" instead of "pards" and the John Wayne part would have to go to Paul Hogan.

No trade better than bad one

By BEN WALKER

ATLANTA (AP) — A lot of teams left baseball's winter meetings without making a deal. Still, no trade is better than a bad one.

"Even my 8-year-old son knows the worst deal I ever made," Kansas City general manager John Schuerholz said. "He asks me, 'Daddy, why did you trade David Cone?'"

That's always the danger. Looking for greener pastures and winding up in the rough. Several years ago, when Cincinnati general manager Murray Cook was with Pittsburgh, he wasn't sure about a young pitcher named Dave Dravecky.

"I liked him, but he couldn't make our Triple-A club. So I traded him to San Diego for Bobby Mitchell," Cook recalled. "Dravecky went on to have a very good career. Mitchell didn't do much."

"I learned one lesson from that," Cook said. "Never trade left-handed pitchers. Especially young left-handed pitchers."

CONE WAS a promising right-hander in Kansas City's minor-league system when Schuerholz sent him to the New York Mets before the 1987 season. The Royals desperately needed a catcher and got Ed Hearn in return.

"When I made it, many people in our organization thought it was a good deal for us," Schuerholz said. "There were some who weren't sure whether Hearn could be a front-line catcher, but just as many thought he could be."

Hearn never got a chance. He tore his rotator cuff and did not make it up to the Royals until late this season. His career is in jeopardy, forcing Kansas City to recently sign free agent catcher Bob Boone.

Cone, meanwhile, has developed into one of the best pitchers in the major leagues. He went 20-3, was second in the National League with a 2.22 earned run average and is only 25 years old.

"That's the risk you take," Baltimore general manager Roland Hemond said. "When you make a lot of deals, some aren't going to work out."

HEMOND is getting some criticism for trading Eddie Murray to the Los Angeles Dodgers this week for pitchers Brian Holton and Ken Howell and shortstop Juan Bell. Many Baltimore fans think the Orioles didn't get enough for their seven-time All-Star.

Hemond said his worst trade came at the winter meetings in 1971 when he was with the Chicago White Sox. He sent minor league power hitter Bill Robinson, the current Mets coach, to Philadelphia for catcher Jerry Rodriguez.

Robinson went on to enjoy a long, successful career in the big leagues. Rodriguez never played a single game in the majors.

"I can never remember whether his name was Jerry Rodriguez or Jerry Martinez," Hemond said, laughing. "I spent a lot of time trying to forget it."

"I tried several times in later years to get Bill back in a trade," Hemond said. "I never could."

Frank Cashen has made plenty of good trades, first with Baltimore and now with the Mets. He helped assemble the Cone-for-Hearn deal, but admits not every move was perfect.

"In all the years we had those great teams in Baltimore, we never had a really good catcher. I thought Earl Williams was our chance to get one," Cashen said.

BEFORE THE 1973 season, Cashen sent Dave Johnson, who wound up as the Mets manager, and former 20-game winner Pat Dobson to Atlanta for Williams, a power hitter with limited defensive skills.

NORTHWESTERN BAPTIST CHURCH

In the Sleep Hollow Cemetery at Concord, Massachusetts, one will find the grave of Ezra Ripley. Who Ripley was or what he did is unknown.

On Ripley's tombstone the following epitaph is cut: "He came of a long line of Pilgrim ancestors and Concord ministers, and he was worthy of his lineage."

Although the epitaph is brief, it says a lot about Ripley's character.

Learn with us how God can improve our characters.

PROPER MAINTENANCE

Sunday Hebrews 12:12-29
Monday James 3:1-12
Tuesday 1 Peter 1:3-12
Wednesday Revelation 7:9-17
Thursday James 1:19-27
Friday James 2:14-26
Saturday 1 Peter 12-19

Have you ever driven along an old country road and out in a distant field noticed an old vintage automobile squatting in the tall grass? And as you passed it by its headlights, like eyes, seemed to follow you. Perhaps, for a moment made you wonder what stories it could tell. Like ourselves, possibly accounts of happy times, distant trips and proud feelings we have experienced.

However, in final neglect, this once magnificent machine, now rusted out, no longer functioning properly has been abandoned. It now lies in lonely and desolate surrounds, wasted and forgotten.

The hard miles and long endless roads we travel in life take its toll. Tired of it all we sometimes end up in disrepair and give up. If we don t want to end up like the car in the field, we must keep ourselves in good condition.

Your church or synagogue can offer you the best satisfied service guaranteed to keep you well tuned, shining and new.

Ground for sanctuary is broken

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., has begun construction on a new sanctuary at its present location. The 9,800 square-foot facility will seat 350 when completed.

Midland Lutheran was established by the board of Home Missions of the former Evangelical Lutheran Church in 1952 and was formally organized with 70 charter members in January 1974. The current facility was dedicated on April 24, 1954.

Congregational president Bernard Lankford anticipates a June completion date with construction by Campbell & Coats Construction, Inc.

For more information about the programs of Midland Lutheran Church, call the Rev. Marvin Koenig or the Rev. Charles Meyer, 694-1373.

RELIGION

First Methodist Church sets lunchtime concerts

The Ministry of Music at First United Methodist Church is presenting its second in the 1988 series of Lunch Hour Concerts for Advent and Christmas Wednesday when Jane Ward, soprano, and Andra Rodden, harpist, will perform at 12:05 p.m. in the sanctuary of the church, Main Street at Ohio Ave.

These 30-minute concerts are free and open to the public.

Mrs. Ward is a graduate of the University of Texas Permian Basin and has been an active member in the Music Ministry of First Methodist for many years. In addition, she is active in the Midland Women's Club and a member of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale. She and her husband, Bob, are the parents of three children and one grandchild.

Ms. Rodden, principal harpist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony, is a graduate of Texas Tech University with further study at Indiana University. She is employed with Dawson Geophysical Company.

A soup and salad lunch will be available at a nominal cost in the basement Recreation Hall of the Church one half hour before and after the performance.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Visitor's message to focus on Christmas

The Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland, Neely at Midkiff streets, will host guest minister Vivian Chapman, former minister of Lubbock's UUC, Sunday.

Her sermon, entitled "Christmas Past and Present: A Modern Tale," describes Christmas as "a time for past traditions, for memories, and for going into our emotional past. It is also a 'here and now' event, a time of year that no one in our country can ignore. How do we connect our emotions of the past and our present holiday expectations?"

Kenneth Lake, congregation member, will lead Dec. 18th's Adult Forum entitled, "Dear God. Are You Real?" Adult Forum is held each Sunday at 10 a.m. and is an informal discussion group.

Dec. 24 at 6:30 p.m. will mark the church's traditional Christmas Eve Candlelight Service.

Adult Forum is held at 10 a.m. each Sunday and childcare is available. Worship services and Children's Religious Education are held at 11 a.m.

Children will perform

Miss America 'religious'

CHICAGO (AP) — The new Miss America, Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson, says she is "a very religious person and faith in God is my No. 1 support system."

In an interview with The Lutheran, monthly magazine of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, she said other media had peppered her with all kinds of questions except about her favorite subject — religion.

"No matter where I am and what I hope to accomplish, I know I have my best friend (God-Jesus) with me," she said.

The blonde Miss Carlson, 22, of Anoka, Minn., a senior at Stanford (Calif.) University, was crowned last Sept. 10 in Atlantic City, N.J., after competing as Miss Minnesota.

She said she regards today's society as "quite immoral" and would like to do her part in improving it. She voiced appreciation for the moral values received from her family and her church, Zion Lutheran in Anoka.

A virtuoso violinist who has often performed at her home church and elsewhere, she said she always said a special prayer before going out to face an audience.

"I always ask God to be with me," she said. "I believe my violin playing is a gift from God."

Jews favored Dukakis

NEW YORK (AP) — A poll commissioned by three Jewish weeklies and conducted by Byron Research & Consulting, Inc., found that a Jewish voting majority of 69 percent supported Michael Dukakis over the presidential winner, George Bush.

Human rights 'needed'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Noting that people cannot practice their faith freely in various parts of the world, the Vatican's permanent observer to the United Nations, Archbishop Renato Martino, told a U.N. committee that implementation of various human rights covenants is "all that is needed" to end such intolerance.

Youth work threatened

DALLAS (AP) — Autocratic pastors are "causing many youths to seek other churches," says Phil Briggs, professor of youth education at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

He told about 250 youth ministers that a trend toward increased pastoral authority and heavy-handed tactics threaten ministry to youth.

'Alternatives' offered

ELLENWOOD, Ga. (AP) — The 1988 "Alternatives" poster shows a sleighing Santa and reindeer flying over the Holy Family and Child in the manger. A caption asks, "Whose Birthday Is It, Anyway?"

"Alternatives," a campaign seeking to recover a Christ-centered Christmas and to protest its commercialization, this year has the backing of more than 100,000 Protestant and Roman Catholic congregations across the country.

Milo Thornberry, director of "Alternatives", founded by various Christian groups in 1973, says it doesn't want people to reject the whole notion of gift-giving and celebration nor send them on a "guilt trip" about it.

Rather, he says, it seeks to help them "restore perspective to a season that often degenerates into a religion-sanctioned orgy of self-indulgence."

Sponsoring agencies for 1988 are Detroit's Catholic Diocese and seven major Protestant denominations.

"Alternatives," which distributes resource materials, rituals and Bible study guides, suggests such alternative activities as these:

- Reducing time spent shopping and watching TV and using the time for Bible study and meditation.
- Replacing the Santa tradition with that of St. Nicholas, patron saint who loved and cared for children.
- More personal, thoughtful and values-center gift-giving instead of money-spending competitions to give "the best".
- Giving a fourth of holiday spending money to the needy, and reaching out to persons who otherwise would be alone at Christmas.

Moderator to address issues facing Presbyterian Church

ODESSA — The Moderator of the 200th General Assembly, the Rev. Dr. Kenneth C. Hall, will speak today at Westminster Presbyterian, addressing current issues facing the Presbyterian Church.

Hall has been the pastor of the Hill United Presbyterian Church in Butler, Pa., for 31 years, and holds a bachelor of science in chemical engineering in addition to his doctor of ministry degrees. He is a sought-after speaker on college campuses, youth conferences, and congregational retreats, and has conducted a weekly radio program for 24 years.

Please contact the church for luncheon reservations and additional details.

The last time a moderator came to Tres Rios was in 1983 when Dottie Bernard spoke to the presbytery in El Paso, according to the release.

Hall was elected moderator of the 200th General Assembly last June in St. Louis. During this Presbyterian Church (USA) Bicentennial year, he will itinerate throughout the United States.

Hall, 64, received his master of divinity at Pittsburgh-Xenia Seminary in 1954 and his doctor of ministry at Pittsburgh Seminary in 1978.

He served as pastor of Jefferson U.P. Church, Gill Hall, Pa., from 1957 to present.

He was moderator of the Synod of Trinity in 1979 to 1980 and moderator of the General Assembly Council in 1984 and 1985. He is currently a member of the General Assembly Council.

Hall and his wife, Rose, have two children, Roger, 30 and Carole, 26.

Handicapped preacher now tends disabled flock

MOUNT OLIVE, N.J. (AP) — Kenneth Young found his peace at 50 mph on a blind curve 12 years ago. He crashed through the windshield, his body left frozen from the neck down.

It was during nearly 1½ years in and out of hospitals that Young became devoutly religious. He later gave up his painting job and took to the pulpit. Now he is head of the largest Assemblies of God ministry for the handicapped in the world.

Young's flock are the blind, the crippled, the immobile. Each year his Hope for the Handicapped Inc. reaches tens of thousands of people in the United States, Canada, South America and Europe, through taped sermons and newsletters. Young also crisscrosses North America preaching to the handicapped and encouraging them to worship.

Come spring, his followers hope to have a home. Construction began in October on the Bethesda Christian Center though the building fund is only half way to its $350,000 goal.

"We're building by faith as we go along," says Young. "We'll just have to trust the lord to provide it."

The word "Bethesda," Young notes, is Hebrew for "God's place of hope." The building is to include a chapel for 400 worshipers, support services and a training center for marketable skills. Saturday services are planned so volunteers can come from other congregations.

"Our real effort," says Young, "is taking the gospel message and introducing disabled people to the hope that Jesus alone can give."

"I know of no one (in the church) who's doing what he's doing," says the Rev. Joseph Beretta, director of missions for the New Jersey District Council of the Assemblies of God. "He's the first."

Young, 34, operates his ministry from the home he shares with his parents, Arthur and Ida Young. It is filled with gadgets, sophisticated recording devices, computers and copying machines, all geared to reach some of the 18 million shut-ins in the United States.

"We want to bring in people who don't normally get out to worship," he says. "What we need to do is create in the people a desire to get out there."

At the age of 22, Young never had much of that desire himself. Raised as a Presbyterian, Young says his faith dwindled.

While hospitalized — he suffered a broken neck, broken jaw and serious internal injuries — Young was visited by a layman from a nearby mission who spoke to him about God and religion. Young became a born-again Christian. His devoutness grew, and he soon felt the call to preach.

"I was 95 percent paralyzed, yet the Lord gave me perfect peace," says Young. "That's not something that comes normally."

He took courses at Northeastern Bible School in Essex Fells, N.J., via telephone and graduated from Berean Bible College, a correspondence school in Springfield, Mo.

Young was licensed by the Assemblies of God in April 1981 to preach, and by June had started planning his ministry for the disabled.

Young tapes two 30-minute sermons a week and, with a mouthstick and personal computer, writes a quarterly newsletter. He estimates his sermons and newsletters reach about 3,000 people each week.

His ministry costs more than $60,000 a year and is funded mostly through contributions.

Ima Jean Kidd of the Division of Education and Ministry in the National Council of Churches says there has been a growth in recent years in the number of denominations ministering to the handicapped.

Miltary chaplains often walk 'firing line'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — The military chaplain walks a fine line, upholding religious principles of trust, peace and kindness in organizations geared for the rigors of war.

But leaders of these ministers in uniform say their work is neither inconsistent nor compromised and religious ideals are all the more important on a front of danger to them.

"Cooperation without compromise," reads the Army chaplains' motto.

"We do ministry without compromise and without apology," says Gen. Stuart A. Barstad, retiring this month after three years as Air Force Chief of Chaplains.

"Peace movements should not think they have a corner on the market," he adds. "They are not the only ones interested in peace."

Barstad and three other top U.S. military chaplains commented on their roles in recent interviews with The Lutheran, monthly magazine of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Remarkably, all of them are clergyman of that denomination, as is the nation's fifth top military chaplain, Army Col. Herbert B. Cleveland, director of chaplain services for the Veterans Administration.

Altogether, they oversee work of about 13,000 military chaplains and assistants of various faiths serving families of nearly 3 million members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force and National Guard, besides veterans.

The chaplaincy chiefs say they're carrying out full, undiluted ministry in an environment that keenly needs it.

"The military has never asked me to hold back on my ministry or my preaching," says Barstad, originally from Colfax, Wis.

Maj. Gen. Norris Einertson, Army Chief of Chaplains, calls it a "ministry of presence."

"My parishioners (Army personnel) are contributing to peace in a troubled world," he says. "The military's first function is to keep the peace, not make war."

Einertson, originally of Westbrook, Minn., adds, "We are always faced with alternatives. We are not being Christian if we allow the rights of any to be trampled on by oppressors of the left or right."

He says American churches are not teaching Christians to think critically about war and peace, resulting in their either approving armed conflict indiscriminately or rejecting it as always wrong.

Rear Adm. Alvin B. Koeneman, Navy Chief of Chaplains, concedes the work involves some tensions, but these must be seen in light of what Christianity says about the sinful nature of societies as well as about peace.

"It's tough to talk about the peace of Jesus while working on an ammunition ship," he says. "But sailors live in that situation. Someone needs to be there to live the contradiction with them and wrestle with it."

FBI investigating shooting down of American locust-spraying plane

Rescue team having trouble reaching U.S. plane wreck

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — An American team reported trouble Friday in reaching a U.S. locust-spraying plane shot down in a desert no-man's-land from which guerrillas launch attacks on Morocco's defensive wall.

The investigators told the U.S. Embassy in Rabat by telephone the wreckage of the DC-7 lay in a 25-mile-wide strip between Mauritania and the most forward positions along the 2,000-mile Moroccan wall.

That confirmed earlier U.S. satellite data placing the site in the heart of an area the Marxist-led Polisario independence movement in the Western Sahara uses to group its forces. A surface-to-air missile downed the plane Thursday morning.

"At this point we still don't know who fired the missile," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday. Asked whether U.S. officials thought it was a terrorist incident, he said, "Well, we don't know yet. A lot depends on something we don't know yet, which is who did it."

U.S. military experts said the site was a few miles east of Daddar Lahlou, a deserted outpost halfway between the Mauritanian border and the defensive wall Morocco erected to guard the "useful" part of phosphate-rich territory. The spot is about 650 miles south of Rabat, capital of Morocco.

The plane was chartered by the U.S. Agency for International Development. Reports said it exploded at an altitude of about 10,000 feet and the five occupants, all Americans, were presumed to be dead. The wreckage was scattered over a wide area.

A second DC-7 chartered by AID to help fight the locust plague in northern Africa also was hit by a missile, but limped 250 miles and land safely at Sidi Ifni. It sat at the end of the single runway Friday and the Sidi Ifni airport was closed.

Sergio Tommasoni, 64, co-owner of the Chandler, Ariz., aviation company that owned both planes, was crew chief of the second plane.

The American investigators were experiencing "unusual difficulties" in reaching the site, U.S. military experts said. They did not elaborate.

The Americans aboard the downed plane were identified as Joel Blackmer, 46, and Blackmer's son, Frank Kennedy, 21, both of Phoenix; Ben Rossini, 49, Tempe, Ariz.; Frank Hederman, 47, Cody, Wyo.; and Wes Wilson of Hastings, Neb.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI launched a criminal investigation Friday into the downing of a U.S. locust-spraying plane over the Western Sahara in the heart of an area controlled by the Marxist-led Polisario independence movement.

Meanwhile, an official of the U.S. Agency for International Development said his view is that whoever shot the plane down "make a mistake. These were not military planes."

The FBI is looking for possible violations of federal criminal laws, including one that deals with destruction of U.S. aircraft overseas, FBI spokesman Milt Ahlerich said.

In opening the investigation, the bureau did not specifically invoke a 1986 anti-terrorism law which makes it a crime to kill U.S. nationals outside the United States.

Five Americans aboard the DC-7 were presumed dead when the craft was shot down Thursday by a surface-to-air missile.

Jay Morris, deputy administrator of AID, told reporters the plane, and another craft accompanying it, were in no sense on a mission for the United States.

Morris said the planes had been en route from Senegal, where they had finished work for AID, to Morocco, where they "were going to...seek another job" spraying locusts for AID.

Ahlerich said the downed aircraft had been under contract to AID, but that the contract expired Wednesday. Negotiations were under way to extend the contracts when the aircraft was shot down, Ahlerich added.

Asked if the plane crews had been warned of the risk involved in flying over the area, Morris replied: "I don't think anyone knew they were running a risk."

"My own view is that who ever did it made a mistake," Morris said. "These were not military planes."

Madjid Abdullah, the Polisario's North American representative, told The Associated Press in Washington the front "will do everything possible to shed full light on this tragic and unfortunate incident."

Both aircraft were owned by T&G Aviation of Chandler, Ariz., and were under contract to AID to spray insects, said T&G co-owner Sergio Tomassoni, who was in the other plane that was hit.

Morris said the contracts of the five men presumed dead have been extended to spare their families the expense of transporting the bodies back to the United States for burial.

"We view this as a tragic and deplorable loss of innocent life in an effort, really, to save life," Morris said.

Morris said the men were part of an international effort to stop "one of the most massive insect infestations in decades, a plague really of biblical proportions."

NAACP's Hooks: Bushvowed to name black to Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the NAACP said Friday that President-elect Bush, who has yet to name a black to any high-level position, has pledged to put a black in his Cabinet.

Bush, meantime, reiterated his promise to make the Cabinet representative of women and minorities. "Stay tuned," he told reporters.

The vice president continued his string of meetings with various interest groups. He spent about 30 minutes with Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP before a session with 13 conservatives, including Edwin Feulner Jr., president of the Heritage Foundation, and Paul Weyrich of the Free Congress Foundation.

Feulner said the conservatives urged Bush to place people of their philosophical bent in high positions.

"In effect what we urged was that he make sure that all parts of the (conservative) coalition continue to have a stake in his success once he becomes president," he said.

Bush was also encouraged to make greater use of his veto power to prevent an "erosion of power" from the executive branch. Conservatives do not want to see Congress attain too much power, particularly in foreign affairs, Weyrich said.

Also among the conservatives on Bush's schedule was Robert Woodson, a black businessman from North Carolina who has been mentioned as a possible secretary of housing and urban development. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., is thought to have the inside track for that job.

Hooks, a Democrat, said his meeting with Bush was "very cordial." The two discussed personnel appointments in all levels of government and the judiciary, as well as issues of concern to blacks, he said.

Asked whether Bush had made a commitment to place a black in the Cabinet, Hooks replied: "To the best of my recollection, I think I do remember him saying there would be a black in the Cabinet." Hooks then said he had a "distinct recollection that he said he intends to do that."

Bush has named about a dozen people to top jobs in his administration so far, only one of them female and none of them black.

Hooks, a vocal critic of the Reagan administration's civil rights policies, said he was confident that his group would have better relations with Bush.

"I expect a much better civil rights record from Mr. Bush," he said.

Hooks said he asked Bush to think about convening a White House conference on race and poverty next year, an idea he said Bush promised to consider.

Satellite's solar panels reportedly failed at first

NEW YORK (AP) — The solar panels on the secret spy satellite launched by the shuttle Atlantis failed to swing open the first time ground controllers commanded them to, and Air Force officials briefly feared the mission might fail, an industry magazine reports.

But, with two astronauts standing by to take a spacewalk if necessary, a second set of radio commands freed the panels, and the satellite was successfully deployed high over the Soviet Union, Aviation Week & Space Technology reported in its Dec. 12 issue.

The panels are needed to absorb sunlight which powers the satellite's batteries.

The magazine, citing Defense Department sources, said deployment of the $500 million Martin Marietta radar satellite took place on the shuttle's fifth orbit, or about seven hours after it was launched at 9:30 a.m. EST on Friday, Dec. 2.

After the astronauts used the shuttle's robot arm to release the satellite, they kept their spaceship close enough to watch the deployment, and were able to visually confirm when it was fully open to its 150-foot span.

Had it not, Air Force Lt. Col. Jerry L. Ross and Navy Cmdr. William M. Shepherd were prepared to take a spacewalk to repair or retrieve the satellite.

Animal rights activists fly lobsters to new home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Animal rights activists on Friday spent $240 to buy seven live lobsters from a suburban Maryland restaurant and fly them to a new home off the coast of Maine.

Cam McQueen of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals picked up the lobsters from the House of Chinese Gourmet in Rockville, Md., about 10 a.m., took them to Washington National Airport and boarded a flight to Portland, Maine, a PETA official said.

Members of the U.S. Coast Guard then were expected to escort her and the lobsters to a boat station to release the creatures into their new ocean home, PETA spokeswoman Victoria Thomas said.

The House of Chinese Gourmet is popular among local vegetarians who were offended when owner Jack Sun introduced the lobster tank about a month ago, Ms. Thomas said.

"All of the sudden they put up a 125-gallon tank with live lobsters, and there was a big outcry," she said. "All their vegetarian clientele got very upset."

Sun agreed to get rid of the lobster tank, Ms. Thomas said, provided the animal activists bought the lobsters and arranged for their freedom. The total cost of the lobster rescue was $240 — $40 for the lobsters and $200 for the flight. The Coast Guard donated its services.

Rapist given probation

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A man who confessed earlier this year to raping a woman nearly 18 years ago has been sentenced to three years probation and ordered to pay the victim $10,000.

Phillip Carlock of Redmond, Wash., held hands with his wife Thursday when Circuit Court Judge Patrick Conlin sentenced him. Carlock also is required to seek psychiatric counseling.

Ann Arbor police said Carlock, a computer software specialist, confessed to the rape in April, telling authorities he was undergoing therapy and wanted to clear his conscience.

Conlin said the 39-year-old victim, who now lives in Florida, told Washtenaw County probation officials that Carlock should not have to go to jail, but should be required to continue therapy.

"Mr. Carlock came forward with absolutely no compelling reason to do so other than the very serious remorse that he felt for what he had done," said his lawyer, Marjory Cohen.

Developer gets pacemaker

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Norman Roth did himself a big favor 30 years ago when he helped develop the first heart pacemaker. Now he has one for himself, after emergency surgery.

"It was just the sort of thing that all the work we did a good number of years ago was all about," Roth, 57, said Thursday in his room at St. Joseph's Hospital. "All of a sudden, you're on the other side of the fence."

Roth was suffering from second-degree heart block, a potentially fatal disruption of the heart's electrical system and cardiologists implanted into his upper chest one of Medtronic's latest pacemakers, a double-lead model that stimulates both of the heart's pumping chambers.

"I feel fine," Roth said Thursday. "Things are coming along nicely. Once you get the unit in there it stabilizes quickly. All of a sudden my hands and feet are warm again."

In the late 1950s, Roth, then a biomedical engineer, worked with Samuel Hunter, a St. Paul surgeon, to develop what was called the Hunter-Roth bipolar electrode. They worked with animals in a laboratory at St. Joseph's and in a north Minneapolis garage that was the center of Medtronic Inc. operations in those days.

Reported number of miscarriages concern paper's employees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials and employees of USA Today are concerned about an unusually high number of miscarriages among women working in its newsroom.

Some employees at the newspaper's suburban Washington headquarters fear that a reported 14 miscarriages among 100 women employees over the past 15 months may be partially attributed to several months of construction work in the offices or to prolonged exposure to video terminals.

Editor Peter Prichard said Friday that the company is giving "close attention" to the matter.

Senior Editor Wanda Lloyd, who confirmed only that there have been "some miscarriages," said: "Certainly the company is concerned about anything to do with employees. I'm concerned. I'm very concerned."

But she also said: "This is an internal matter and a very personal matter for the women involved. We're still looking into it and we don't really have any more to say."

The Washington Post on Friday reported that 14 miscarriages had occurred among USA Today employees since September 1987.

Scientists say about one in seven pregnancies ends in a miscarriage and that there have been studies of about a dozen cluster occurrences in the United States and Canada since 1980. A common thread in the incidences was the use of video terminals in the offices, although no direct link has been made between their use and pregnancy problems.

A USA Today reporter, who asked not to be identified, said the company brought in experts on video terminals to discuss any danger they might pose and has been taking an informal survey of employees to determine the extent of the problem.

Management also has sent out a memo telling employees not to talk about the miscarriages, the employee said.

"The sheer magnitude of the construction work caused a lot of concern," the reporter said. "Guys with jackhammers were breaking up walls right next to your head. You'd walk in to find your terminal covered with dust. And there were weird smells, very pungent odors.

Allen J. Wilcox, an epidemiologist who has studied miscarraiges for the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, said he had no personal knowledge of the USA Today cases but they appear to be significant enough to merit study.

He said, however, it was possible the occurrences were only coincidence and it is likely no cause will ever be proved. Extensive epidemiological studies would be required to determine whether there was any common cause, he said, since a number of factors could have contributed to each case.

The Post did not say how many staff members had been pregnant, but one employee said there were no successful pregnancies among women working on the two floors that have been undergoing rennovation since April.

Gannett Co. Inc., which owns the internationally distributed newspaper, recently hired a consultant to test materials being installed during renovation, the Post reported.

"There's a lot of concern in the building about the construction, especially among women who have miscarried," said Peter Johnson, a general assignment reporter interviewed by the Post. He said the company appeared to be "genuinely concerned" about the problem.

"Everyone is real frightened," a women who had a miscarriage and who asked not to be identified, was quoted by the Post as saying. "You don't know what's going on. It's really an ordeal."

$1 million bond set for Jackson's half-brother

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Bond was set at $1 million Friday for the the Rev. Jesse Jackson's half-brother, who is charged in a 1986 slaying.

Noah Robinson has been jailed without bail since September, when he was charged in the death of Leroy "Hambone" Barber. Bail had not been posted by late Friday.

Indictments accuse Robinson, a Greenville native and self-described millionaire, of hiring a group of street gang members to kill Barber, a former employee in one of Robinson's companies.

Robinson, 46, also is charged with conspiring to kill a witness to Barber's killing. Five gang members also are charged.

Company cancels Geraldo Rivera show featuring Paula Parkinson

NEW YORK (AP) — A Geraldo Rivera show with former lobbyist Paula Parkinson talking about a previously reported and denied alleged incident with Vice President-elect Dan Quayle has been yanked by the parent company.

"After a careful review, the Tribune Entertainment Co. has determined that the 'Geraldo' program titled 'Washington Confidential' will not be broadcast," the company said in a statement Friday.

"Tribune is exercising this discretionary right as a matter of programming judgment. Geraldo Rivera did not agree with this decision but he understands it."

"I am very angry," Rivera was quoted as saying in Friday's editions of USA Today about the decision Thursday on the show taped Nov. 3. "It is censorship and it is appalling to me even when it is my friends that are doing it."

The show featured Parkinson talking about what she had previously said about Quayle in "Washingtonian" magazine, Rivera said. The show also featured allegations of affairs by former President Nixon and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

Rivera told the newspaper the decision had less to do with the content than other recent shows, especially one "Geraldo" show with Nazi youth in which Rivera's nose was broken and a special on satanic cults that was panned.

"I think they're running scared because of all the Geraldo bashing," Rivera said. "I think they are reacting to the very negative critical reaction to us."

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Rabbit, President and Mrs. Reagan and the co-stars of "Roseanne" were among the most romantic people of 1988, according to a list released Friday by Korbel champagne.

Jessica Rabbit, the animated femme fatale from Disney's "Roger Rabbit," was chosen because she "risks all to help her man," the sponsor said.

The Reagans "helped set the tone for the return of romance in America during the '80s," it was noted.

Roseanne Barr and John Goodman, stars of the TV series "Roseanne," remind prime-time viewers "that beauty really is in the eye of the beholder and that love and romance can flourish even in non-urban, non-yuppie and non-upscale settings," the sponsor said.

Other winners were George Burns, for "Gracie: A Love Story," a tribute to his late wife, Gracie Allen; Olympic diver Greg Louganis, described as "boyish and irrepressible"; and Charles Kuralt, for his television glimpses into "the real romance of America."

Ben Cohen and Jerry Greenfield, the Ben & Jerry ice cream entrepreneurs, were cited for contributing 7.5 percent of their company's pre-tax profits to charity; AIDS researcher Mathilde Krim, for "showing the world that compassion is as important as science"; John G. Healey, executive director of Amnesty International U.S.A., for organizing the "Human Rights Now!" concert tour; and actress Susan Sarandon, 42, for showing that "it's class, not age, that makes a leading lady romantic and sexy."

TOKYO (AP) — Kicking off the last leg of his world tour, superstar Michael Jackson mesmerized 50,000 Japanese fans Friday with song, footwork and a dazzling laser light show.

Billows of smoke, blinding light and throbbing music set the stage for the first of nine concerts scheduled through Dec. 26 at the mammoth Tokyo Dome — the final stop in a 13-month world tour the rock star has said will be his last.

Jackson, 30, in chains and body-hugging leather, had the crowd dancing, twisting and clapping to 18 numbers, including hits like "Thriller," "Beat It," and "Billy Jean."

Jackson also performed "Bad" from his latest album of the same name, and did "Moondance" by sliding backward but appearing to walk forward.

Jackson started off his international tour here in September 1987 and returned to make Tokyo the finale because "I appreciate the support that my Japanese friends and fans have shown me," he said after his arrival Thursday.

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos suffered congestive heart failure and was hospitalized Friday, a spokesman said.

Marcos, 71, was taken by ambulance to St. Francis Hospital and was admitted upon the recommendation of his physician, Calvin Wong, due to "the acute onset of congestive heart failure" Friday morning, spokesman Gemmo Trnidad said.

Wong said Marcos did not have a heart attack. Congestive heart failure means the heart is unable to pump the amount of blood required by the body.

Neither the admitting office nor the public relations office at St. Francis would confirm or deny that Marcos was there.

Marcos has been monitored for three weeks because of an irregular heartbeat due to heart disease, Trinidad said. Wong ordered complete bed rest, and Marcos will not be permitted to walk around at the hospital, Trinidad said.

He said he did not know how long Marcos would be hospitalized.

A New York cardiologist has told a federal judge in New York that although Marcos suffers various health problems, he is well enough to travel to New York for arraignment on racketeering charges. The arraignment had been postponed after Marcos' doctors said he was not well enough to travel.

Marcos faked pain and other ailments during the three-hour examination, according to the report by the cardiologist, Francis M. Weld.

Weld said he, Wong and other Marcos physicians with whom he consulted are unable to account for Marcos' escalating and widespread pain syndrome, and say that that should not stop him from traveling or appearing in court.

Marcos has lived in Hawaii since he was ousted in February 1986.

TRIESTE, Italy (AP) — The Venezuelan president-elect, Carlos Andres Perez, met with Nobel Prize-winner Abdus Salam on Friday at the Center of Theoretical Physics and Academy of Third World Sciences at Miramare, near Trieste in northeastern Italy.

Perez, who praised Italy's efforts for Third World development, said his visit was a prelude to a conference on developing countries which begins Saturday in Kuwait.

After their meeting, Perez and Salam, director of the two scientific centers at Miramare, left together for Kuwait.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wayne Rogers, a star of the long-running television series "MASH," married Amy Hirsh, a television producer for ABC and a Philadelphia-area native, in a ceremony here.

The 55-year-old Rogers, who played Trapper John in the series, met Hirsh, 36, two years ago while Rogers was guest host on ABC's "Good Morning America."

The couple were wed Thursday at the Locust Club and will live in California.

WORLD

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — West Germans on Friday demanded curbs on NATO military flights over this densely populated country to halt the "terrible toll" from crashes that have killed 100 people this year.

Several NATO members including the United States temporarily suspended training flights after Thursday's fiery crash of a U.S. warplane that killed five people, but there were calls for permanent cuts.

The governor of the state where the A-10 Thunderbolt II crashed said he will take the issue to the federal Parliament. Another governor called on Chancellor Helmut Kohl to negotiate with NATO allies.

On any given day in West Germany, the sky is filled with the screechings and rumbles of hundreds of jets and helicopters, leading to massive opposition fueled by recent tragedies.

Even before Thursday's fatal crash in Remscheid, 12 major accidents of military aircraft had killed 95 people this year alone. They included 70 who died from an air show crash in Ramstein in August.

The resistance took on added urgency after the A-10 plowed into Remscheid, a city of 130,000 about 15 miles east of Duesseldorf.

The pilot, Capt. Michael P. Foster, 34, of Seal Beach, Calif., and four people on the ground were killed and 50 others were injured. Two dozen homes were destroyed.

The exact cause of the crash was under investigation, but West German air force Gen. Horst Jungkurth said the pilot "may have become disoriented when he tried to climb in heavy cloud cover" to get out of bad weather.

U.S. Ambassador Richard Burt and West German Defense Minster Rupert Scholz visited the site Friday. Burt denied the flight was a low-level mission, saying the A-10 was flying between 2,500 feet and 3,300 feet before it began to descend.

In West German military parlance, low-level flights range from 250 to 500 feet above the ground and are restricted to seven rural areas in the country. But the number of overall training accidents in recent years has aroused widespread concern in a country of 61 million people with an area smaller than that of Texas.

Oskar Lafontaine, the popular, leftist governor of Saarland state, called on Kohl, a conservative Christian Democrat, to start to work "immediately" for a ban on low-level training flights and mock air battles over inhabited areas.

"I am calling for negotiations with the allies, as well as a corresponding decision for the German military, towards the goal of eliminating any danger to the populace," Lafontaine told reporters in the state capital of Saarbruecken.

> "I hope that finally all low-level flights over densely populated areas will be banned, not just until Christmas but permanently."
> — Johannes Rau, governor

Lafontaine is often mentioned as a possible Social Democratic Party candidate for chancellor in the December 1990 federal elections.

Johannes Rau, the Social Democratic governor of North Rhine-Westphalia state where the accident occurred, said he will go to Parliament to seek a reduction of low-level flights over his state.

"I hope that finally all low-level flights over densely populated areas will be banned, not just until Christmas but permanently," Rau told reporters.

Bernd Wilz, a leading Christian Democrat in Parliament, said he and many of his party colleagues are demanding a 30-percent reduction in low-level training missions.

The Greens party repeated its stance shortly after the disaster.

"Military flights as a whole over the Federal Republic (West Germany) must be reduced to a minimum level," said Greens party spokesman Alfred Mechtersheimer.

Seven NATO nations, including West Germany, fly a combined 70,000 low-level training flights in this country each year, more than in any other NATO land, according to the Defense Ministry in Bonn. The other countries are Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and Canada.

The West German Defense Ministry said it will bar training missions below 10,700 feet until the end of the year and called on the nation's allies to observe a similar moratorium.

Defense Ministry spokesman Winfried Dunkel told a news conference in Bonn that the United States had agreed to the temporary suspension.

"However, in January, they are to be resumed," Dunkel said.

U.S. Air Force officials already have announced they are barring all "tactical training missions" in Europe until Tuesday, out of respect for the Remscheid victims.

On Friday, the Dutch Air Force on Friday said it will suspend its low altitude flying program over West German soil until the end of the year.

Plain English Campaign gives eight awards for doubletalk

LONDON (AP) — The Plain English Campaign on Friday bestowed eight Golden Bull Awards for what it regarded as particularly undistinguished examples of doubletalk and obfuscation.

"This year has been a record year for gobbledygook. We could have given out hundreds of bulls without any problem," said Chrissie Maher, who helped start the campaign nine years ago.

She cited the latest regulations for claiming state public assistance for housing, saying they "lengthened many forms by over a half, yet the government minister who introduced them claimed they would simplify the system. The truth is that the forms are now so long they deter people from claiming."

One of the 6-inch-high Golden Bulls went to Sooner Snacks Ltd. for a letter to a customer who complained that her potato chips were purple.

"Potato varieties with pigmented skins owe their color to anthocyanins dissolved in the cell sap of the periderm and cells of the peripheral cortex," the letter said.

When a chip is discolored, the letter added, "It is difficult to say whether this is due to a process of active migration of the anthocyanin from the periderm and cortex or to primary protection within the flesh of the tuber."

The Department of Health and Social Security was cited for its response to a widow's inquiry about her pension.

It explained that "basic retirement pension based wholly or partially upon the contributions of her late husband cannot be paid in full to a widow who is getting such a benefit. She can only be paid the balance of basic retirement pension and increase for putting off retirement which is left after taking off her war widow's pension or, the part of the basic retirement pension which is based purely on her own contributions, plus any increase for putting off her retirement, whichever is the more favorable."

Lloyds Bank won a Bull for a counter indemnity form which said:

"I-we jointly and severally undertake in the event of any claim being made upon you thereunder, or under any increase or decrease thereof or extension or renewal thereof (whether for the same or for a greater or less amount), which you may hereafter make or agree to at my-our request, and in the event of the validity of such claim being disputed by me-us, from time to time..." and so on for more than 100 words before reaching the end of the sentence.

Texas Forest Service branches out into nursery business

By RICHARD STEWART

ALTO (AP) — What will someday be almost 40,000 acres of tall pines, oaks and other trees will soon be harvested as tiny pot plant-sized seedlings from the Texas Forest Service nursery.

Some of the tiny trees look like nothing more than sprigs of grass, others like waist-high bushes. Starting in mid-December workers will be lifting the trees to sale throughout East Texas to landowners who want to plant timber crops, windbreaks or trees to lure wildlife onto their property.

Pine trees are the mainstay of the operation — just as pines are the mainstay of the Texas timber industry. Many of the trees that leave the nursery are the genetic offspring of the tallest, fastest growing and most disease- and drought-resistant trees in the sprawling East Texas piney woods.

The Forest Service uses biological tricks to bring the best trees of the forests together to produce seeds that pass along the superior characteristics of the parent trees.

Big timber companies have their own programs to improve tree characteristics and grow seedlings to replace the millions of trees harvested every year.

The state seedling nursery is growing 4.5 million seedlings for the U.S. Forest Service to use to replant thousands of acres where trees were cut in Texas' four national forests.

The rest of the 29 million trees from the state nursery will be sold to landowners who might want to plant a few acres in pines or Christmas trees as an investment or cover to attract browsing deer.

Loblolly pines have long been king of the East Texas forests and are most in demand at the nursery. It's the loblolly that the forest service has tried to genetically improve the most.

Genetic improvement of trees isn't a new idea. E.J. Schriener pioneered the process in New England almost 65 years ago, said Craig McKinley, head of the service's genetic improvement program. Bruce Zobel, whom McKinley calls "the guru of genetic improvement," set up the first program in Texas in 1951.

The best way to do that is to gather all the superior trees in one place, where they can breed with each other. That's where the tricks come in.

Since it would be impossible to move the superior trees, experts gather branches from their tops. Sometimes the foresters climb up the tall trees using special Swiss scaling ladders. More often, when just a few cuttings are needed, they use rifles to shoot down a few branches.

Then the branches are grafted to the roots of year-old, pot-grown pine trees. Loblollies are most often grafted to slash pine roots, McKinley said.

The tree that results "thinks" it is a mature loblolly, even though it has the roots of a young slash pine. The trees are planted in special orchards and in a few years are sexually mature.

The grafted trees look strangely stunted, with their crowns at the top of stunted stems. Genetically, however, they are identical to the trees the cuttings came from. When they mate with other similar trees it is as if the finest trees in the forest have been gathered to produce the best offspring.

The new trees produce eight to 10 percent more wood than regular trees, McKinley said. The superior loblolly also produces straighter trees with denser wood. The forest service has also developed a drought-resistant loblolly that can stand two or more weeks of drought than other types. It has also produced a slash pine that is resistant to fusiform rust.

Genetic engineering isn't a cure-all for timber problems, McKinley said. He doubts scientists will ever create a pine tree that will grow as fast as bamboo, or be as tough as iron and as straight as a flagpole.

He remembers asking one timber producer what kind of trees he would like to see developed. "Trees that are square with bark that just slips off," the producer answered.

McKinley and other researchers are now investigating trees that have escaped damage in pine bark beetle outbreaks.

"We hope to find some common characteristics between those trees," he said. It may be possible to breed trees that can be resistant to the deadly beetle.

The state's first seed orchards were established near Alto. That site has now become a research facility, and the seed production has been moved to an orchard at Magnolia Springs, near Jasper.

Every October, workers use "cherry picker" trucks to get into the crowns of the parent trees to pull off the new cones while the cones are still closed. Other workers gather cones into bags. Cones are sent to processing centers where they are dried until the seeds fall out.

A big walk-in freezer building holds more than 60 million seeds, enough for three years of planting. Nursery director Al Stauder said the nursery has never experienced a total crop failure but always keeps enough seed on hand to replant any areas wiped out by floods, storms, disease or insects.

When the trees become dormant, usually starting in mid-December, work gets hectic at the nursery. A special machine slices through the loose soil under the 4-foot-wide beds of trees and lifts the trees up. They are gathered in boxes and brought to a building where workers remove damaged, misshapen or stunted trees.

Pine seedlings are packed in big brown paper bags with their roots in a gel that helps keep them from drying out. Most are distributed through the service's field offices throughout East Texas.

Windbreak trees, which tend to be much bigger, are packed in bundles of 50.

WORLD

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — West Germans on Friday demanded curbs on NATO military flights over this densely populated country to halt the "terrible toll" from crashes that have killed 100 people this year.

Several NATO members including the United States temporarily suspended training flights after Thursday's fiery crash of a U.S. warplane that killed five people, but there were calls for permanent cuts.

The governor of the state where the A-10 Thunderbolt II crashed said he will take the issue to the federal Parliament. Another governor called on Chancellor Helmut Kohl to negotiate with NATO allies.

On any given day in West Germany, the sky is filled with the screechings and rumbles of hundreds of jets and helicopters, leading to massive opposition fueled by recent tragedies.

Even before Thursday's fatal crash in Remscheid, 12 major accidents of military aircraft had killed 95 people this year alone. They included 70 who died from an air show crash in Ramstein in August.

The resistance took on added urgency after the A-10 plowed into Remscheid, a city of 130,000 about 15 miles east of Duesseldorf.

The pilot, Capt. Michael P. Foster, 34, of Seal Beach, Calif., and four people on the ground were killed and 50 others were injured. Two dozen homes were destroyed.

The exact cause of the crash was under investigation, but West German air force Gen. Horst Jungkurth said the pilot "may have become disoriented when he tried to climb in heavy cloud cover" to get out of bad weather.

U.S. Ambassador Richard Burt and West German Defense Minster Rupert Scholz visited the site Friday. Burt denied the flight was a low-level mission, saying the A-10 was flying between 2,500 feet and 3,300 feet before it began to descend.

In West German military parlance, low-level flights range from 250 to 500 feet above the ground and are restricted to seven rural areas in the country. But the number of overall training accidents in recent years has aroused widespread concern in a country of 61 million people with an area smaller than that of Texas.

Texas Forest Service branches out into nursery business

By RICHARD STEWART

ALTO (AP) — What will someday be almost 40,000 acres of tall pines, oaks and other trees will soon be harvested as tiny pot plant-sized seedlings from the Texas Forest Service nursery.

Some of the tiny trees look like nothing more than sprigs of grass, others like waist-high bushes. Starting in mid-December workers will be lifting the trees to sale throughout East Texas to landowners who want to plant timber crops, windbreaks or trees to lure wildlife onto their property.

Pine trees are the mainstay of the operation — just as pines are the mainstay of the Texas timber industry. Many of the trees that leave the nursery are the genetic offspring of the tallest, fastest growing and most disease- and drought-resistant trees in the sprawling East Texas piney woods.

The Forest Service uses biological tricks to bring the best trees of the forests together to produce seeds that pass along the superior characteristics of the parent trees.

Big timber companies have their own programs to improve tree characteristics and grow seedlings to replace the millions of trees harvested every year.

The state seedling nursery is growing 4.5 million seedlings for the U.S. Forest Service to use to replant thousands of acres where trees were cut in Texas' four national forests.

The rest of the 29 million trees from the state nursery will be sold to landowners who might want to plant a few acres in pines or Christmas trees as an investment or cover to attract browsing deer.

Loblolly pines have long been king of the East Texas forests and are most in demand at the nursery. It's the loblolly that the forest service has tried to genetically improve the most.

Genetic improvement of trees isn't a new idea. E.J. Schriener pioneered the process in New England almost 65 years ago, said Craig McKinley, head of the service's genetic improvement program. Bruce Zobel, whom McKinley calls "the guru of genetic improvement," set up the first program in Texas in 1951.

The best way to do that is to gather all the superior trees in one place, where they can breed with each other. That's where the tricks come in.

Since it would be impossible to move the superior trees, experts gather branches from their tops. Sometimes the foresters climb up the tall trees using special Swiss scaling ladders. More often, when just a few cuttings are needed, they use rifles to shoot down a few branches.

Then the branches are grafted to the roots of year-old, pot-grown pine trees. Loblollies are most often grafted to slash pine roots, McKinley said.

The tree that results "thinks" it is a mature loblolly, even though it has the roots of a young slash pine. The trees are planted in special orchards and in a few years are sexually mature.

The grafted trees look strangely stunted, with their crowns at the top of stunted stems. Genetically, however, they are identical to the trees the cuttings came from. When they mate with other similar trees it is as if the finest trees in the forest have been gathered to produce the best offspring.

The new trees produce eight to 10 percent more wood than regular trees, McKinley said. The superior loblolly also produces straighter trees with denser wood. The forest service has also developed a drought-resistant loblolly that can stand two or more weeks of drought than other types. It has also produced a slash pine that is resistant to fusiform rust.

Genetic engineering isn't a cure-all for timber problems, McKinley said. He doubts scientists will ever create a pine tree that will grow as fast as bamboo, or be as tough as iron and as straight as a flagpole.

He remembers asking one timber producer what kind of trees he would like to see developed. "Trees that are square with bark that just slips off," the producer answered.

McKinley and other researchers are now investigating trees that have escaped damage in pine bark beetle outbreaks.

"We hope to find some common characteristics between those trees," he said. It may be possible to breed trees that can be resistant to the deadly beetle.

The state's first seed orchards were established near Alto. That site has now become a research facility, and the seed production has been moved to an orchard at Magnolia Springs, near Jasper.

Every October, workers use "cherry picker" trucks to get into the crowns of the parent trees to pull off the new cones while the cones are still closed. Other workers gather cones into bags. Cones are sent to processing centers where they are dried until the seeds fall out.

A big walk-in freezer building holds more than 60 million seeds, enough for three years of planting. Nursery director Al Stauder said the nursery has never experienced a total crop failure but always keeps enough seed on hand to replant any areas wiped out by floods, storms, disease or insects.

When the trees become dormant, usually starting in mid-December, work gets hectic at the nursery. A special machine slices through the loose soil under the 4-foot-wide beds of trees and lifts the trees up. They are gathered in boxes and brought to a building where workers remove damaged, misshapen or stunted trees.

Pine seedlings are packed in big brown paper bags with their roots in a gel that helps keep them from drying out. Most are distributed through the service's field offices throughout East Texas.

Windbreak trees, which tend to be much bigger, are packed in bundles of 50.

The Forest Service offers free forest planning by its experts.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Shanghai has highest cancer rate in China

BEIJING (AP) — Air and water pollution has given Shanghai the highest death rate from cancer in China, a researcher said Friday.

The annual cancer mortality rate in Shanghai is more than 2 per thousand males and 1.4 per thousand females, comparable London and Los Angeles, said Gao Yutang of the Shanghai Tumor Research Institute.

The official People's Daily, which on Friday published the findings of the Tumor Research Institute, said the death rate from cancer in Shanghai rose more than 230 percent in the past 25 years.

It blamed pollution for 80 percent of the deaths in the east coast industrial city and cited a lack of zoning restrictions, permitting construction of air-polluting factories in residential areas.

Gao said heavy smoking is also to blame. About 300 million of China's 1.08 billion people smoke.

The government says cancer is the leading cause of death among urban males and the No. 3 cause among urban women.

19 spelunkers trapped

MUOTATHAL, Switzerland (AP) — Floodwaters trapped 19 cave explorers nearly 2,000 feet underground for five days before they were rescued unharmed, the expedition leader said.

Rescuers used rubber rafts to ferry the 14 youths, aged 11 to 18, and five adult guides to safety Thursday night.

The group entered Hoelloch, one of Europe's largest systems of underground caverns and pools, for a one-day tour Saturday but was cut off when heavy rain flooded part of the cave system.

The spelunkers, well-equipped with food and camping equipment, retreated to a dry spot about 2,000 feet underground.

Expedition leader Max Gubser said no one panicked and that that all members were unhurt after the ordeal.

Factory fire kills one

TOKYO (AP) — A fire at a Honda Motor Co. factory killed one worker and injured three others, a company spokesman said Friday.

The fire Thursday evening destroyed 418 square yards of the bodyworks section of the factory in Sayama, 60 miles northwest of Tokyo, and caused damage estimated at $3.28 million to $4.1 million, said company spokesman Shin Kagawa.

Two workers were seriously injured and one sustained only minor injuries, Kagawa said. There were 20 workers in the immediate area when the fire broke out.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Midland offers high living standard for retirees

By BONNIE COX

With the holidays upon us, and the likelihood that many of us will have family visiting during the next few weeks, it seems appropriate to reflect upon the many amenities that contribute to the high standard of living we enjoy in Midland.

Actually, when visiting with family and friends long distance by phone, we may sometimes come across boastful. While they may shiver in the colder climates, Midland boasts a general climate of warm days and cool evenings.

Our annual average temperature is 61.6 degrees. In 1987, January (our coldest month) had an average high of 56.5 degrees and a low of 28.6 degrees. August, our hot month, had an average high of 95.5 degrees and a 67.1 degree low. But even 95 plus degree temperatures seldom become uncomfortable with our extremely low humidity index.

As we talk to family, particularly if we have recently invested in a new home, we may have to temper remarks concerning the dollar value received in our Midland housing market. Paralleling the downturn of the oil industry came a severe erosion of housing prices.

Although the housing market appears to have stabilized during the past six to eight months, we are too premature to experience any noticeable appreciation in our market. Typically across the country, housing is running 20 to 100 percent higher than comparable homes in Midland.

A recent study, conducted by the University of North Alabama, rated Midland as the best place to live among all U.S. cities in its size range.

Another study ranked Midland's quality of life fourth among Texas' 52 largest cities, only behind Austin, San Antonio and Dallas.

Contributing to the quality of life enjoyed by Midlanders is its many excellent recreational facilities. We enjoy two 18-hole golf courses plus two 27-hole courses, many public as well as club-owned tennis courts, professional baseball, a nationally ranked junior college basketball team, plus rodeo, hunting, a walking park and excellent YMCA facilities which include swimming.

For mental and cultural stimulation, don't to overlook our critically acclaimed community theater, with one of five top volunteer groups in the nation. We also boast a planetarium, the ballet, a world class symphony and chorale, and museums to rival large cities. We can also claim a 153,000 volume county library as well as a 27,000 volume college library.

Spiritually, we enjoy more than 100 churches with 27 denominations represented.

Where do we Midlanders go to spend our discretionary income? With 2 malls and 500 retail stores it's really no problem. And for eating out there are more than 150 restaurants.

But what about our proximity to other places. Just how accessible is Midland, relatives and friends may ask. Midland is strategically located in the heart of West Texas midway between Dallas/Ft. Worth and El Paso along Interstate 20. Five major airlines serve our international airport and our regional airport.

Midland is "home base" for fun day trips to Mexico, the Fort Davis Mountains, Ruidoso and Santa Fe, NM, Big Bend National Park, the McDonald Observatory, Carlsbad Caverns and San Antonio.

Perhaps we do sound boastful, but I'm betting that many of our holiday visitors will turn up on our next census. If our sunbelt doesn't get them, our quality of life and scale of economy will!

Three-Part Menu For Tax Free Investing

Municipal bonds are probably the most common way to receive federally tax-free income from your investments. However, not everyone can, or wants, to place relatively large sums of money into a single investment regardless of how safe it may be and how many tax benefits it offers. If you are such a person, yet still want to benefit from income you don't have to share with the IRS, take heart because there are several ways to benefit from tax-exempt income without accepting all the disadvantages. Each of these choices have separate characteristics, one or more of which may fit your investment objectives and risk parameters.

To begin, consider the individual tax free municipal bond. This is the basic investment that composes your other choices. Municipal bonds are a debt obligation issued by a public body to support a government's long-term financial needs or to fund a special project for the community good. These bonds must be approved by some electoral body or voted by that jurisdiction. The issuer of the bonds makes three promises:

- To return the face amount of the bond.
- To return it at some specific future date.
- To pay a fixed amount of interest until that time.

These payments are usually made semiannually.

Municipal bonds are generally longer-term investments. Some do not mature for 30 years or more. Although this is well suited to many investors who want to lock in safe, regular income, others find the idea of such a long-term commitment unappealing. Of course, there is a very active market in municipal bonds so should you decide to sell before maturity, this can be done at the bond's prevailing market value, not necessarily the face value of the bond. These investments generally require a $5,000 initial investment.

A Unit Investment Trust (UIT) buys municipal bonds and passes the tax free income on to investors. The bonds bought for the trust's portfolio are held at maturity and not actively traded. However, the UIT does offer professional selection and supervision as the bonds are continually monitored as to credit quality.

Also, interest is collected by the trustee and promptly distributed to the UIT holders. The interest is a fixed amount just as with individual bonds, but unlike the rigid six-month interest payment of the individual bonds, UIT's usually offer a choice of monthly, quarterly or semi-annual payments.

When a bond in the portfolio matures, or is "called" prior to maturity, the trust collects the principal and returns it to the investors on a proportional basis. Since the UIT is composed of usually 15 or 20 individual bond issues, there is no specific maturity but rather a specified "average" maturity. Like the individual bond, a UIT may be sold at any time at the current market price. Initial investments are usually in $1,000 increments.

Another option of earning tax-free income without investing directly in individual municipal bonds is by buying tax-exempt municipal bond mutual funds.

Managers continually monitor these investments, buying and selling bonds as new money comes into the fund or as market conditions dictate. For this reason, the income varies with rates available in the marketplace. There is no maturity on tax-free mutual funds.

Your money may stay invested as long as you wish or your share interest can be redeemed on any business day, usually at new asset value. Your payment options are most flexible. Most funds allow for regular withdrawals of specified amounts, monthly distribution or reinvestment of income into additional shares. Reinvestment offers the additional benefit of tax-free compounding and dollar cost averaging.

Finally, the amount you must invest is low enough to place these funds within the limits of most any investor. Most funds will accept deposits as small as $50.00, with slightly more required to open an account.

As you see, each of these three methods of tax-free investing is different and offers separate advantages and disadvantages. A well-diversified portfolio of tax-free investments should contain each.

OVER 65?
THERE'S A NEW MONSTER TAX TO PAY!

When President Reagan signed the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act, benefits were dramatically expanded. BUT...

All taxpayers 65 and over, who are eligible for Social Security benefits, MUST PAY an Annual Supplemental Medicare Premium. It must be reported and paid with your 1989 federal tax return. The premium is based on the amount of tax you owe. In 1989, it will be $22.50 for every $150.00 in tax owed. Thus, $1,500 in tax liability means an additional $225.00 in premium tax.*

AND IT DOESN'T END THERE.

The premium rises each year—from $22.50 in 1989 to $42.00 in 1993. It's capped so the most you and your spouse would pay, filing jointly, is $1,600 in 1989 and $2,100 in 1993.

How can you cope?
Buy Colonial's Tax-Exempt Funds

One way to reduce taxes is to reduce taxable income. Look into Colonial's Tax-Exempt Funds—national tax-free funds for broad diversification or state tax-free funds for double tax exemption.

If you own taxable investments such as CDs, government bonds or bond funds, corporate bonds or bond funds—consider moving some of those assets to suitable tax-exempt investments.

Catholic, Protestant school in Northern Ireland may offer hope

By EDITH M. LEDERER

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government has officially endorsed the idea of bringing Roman Catholic and Protestant children together in the classroom as a way of bridging the sectarianism that bloodies Northern Ireland.

The headmaster of one such integrated school told recently of one classroom incident that led him to believe the initiative might at least bring better understanding between the feuding Catholic and Protestant communities in the British province.

The incident involved an Irish Republican Army funeral in March, when two British soldiers were dragged from a car and killed at the cemetery. Catholic and Protestant students came to class in anger afterward.

"Here was your acid test for integrated education," said the headmaster, Terence Flanagan of Lagan College, where Catholic and Protestant children 11 to 17 years old learn together.

"The students talked about it and while they didn't agree...they realized there was a difference of opinion and they didn't feel they had to go for one another."

Historically, education in Northern Ireland has reflected the province's divisions: more than 99 percent of youngsters attend either state schools, which are almost entirely Protestant, or church-run Catholic schools.

But after decades on the sidelines, the government took a landmark decision Oct. 5 to endorse integrated education like that at Lagan. The reason, says the province's education minister, Dr. Brian Mawhinney, was that a growing number of parents — one-third, according to a recent poll — wanted it.

Integrated schools, part of a wider program by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government to encourage cross-community contact, is the key element of the biggest shakeup of Northern Irish education for 40 years.

As a sign of London's official backing for the reforms, Princess Anne visited Lagan College in late November and talked with the students.

The reforms, expected to become law by 1990, will for the first time also require all children to study the same course material in all subjects.

Schools now can develop their own courses. While they are similar because students take the same national exams, Catholic schools tend to focus more on Irish history and writers while Protestant schools favor English history and literature.

Mawhinney said working parties would be set up to chart a common curriculum. But that won't be easy, since key episodes of Irish history are highly contentious.

The Battle of the Boyne in 1688, for instance, is a glorious event in Protestant minds, because it established Protestant hegemony in Ireland. To Catholics, it was a disaster.

But, according to Robin Glendinning, a teacher at a Protestant school, students tend to absorb a neutral version of history while simultaneously continuing to believe myths that directly conflict with the facts.

"The facts and myths that kids hold on to are two entirely separate areas," he said in an interview.

Said Carol Nobel, an 18-year-old student at the Protestant Grosevenor high school: "However much we all pretend that we're objective, it's still in you — you still have a bias. You grew up with it."

Mawhinney stressed that the government had no intention of forcing integration, since Northern Ireland's population distribution makes it impossible to set up integrated schools in some areas.

Only 1,000 of the country's 350,000 students now attend integrated schools. Mawhinney predicted the percentage will increase but said the government wasn't setting any targets.

"Integrated education is not a panacea for Northern Ireland's future," Mawhinney said in an interview.

"Nevertheless, as more children go through the process, it's bound to have an effect on society and we think that effect will be positive and make it easier to tackle the political and security and economic problems that this province faces."

Criticism from both Catholics and Protestants has been muted so far.

Monsignor Colm McCaughan, director of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, said he had no objection to parents voluntarily sending their children to mixed schools, but did not believe integration would solve the province's difficulties.

"I think society itself has to be integrated before there'll be any real change," he added. "Political affiliations play a much stronger role than religious affiliations."

McCaughan said it was impossible to integrate schools in the urban ghettos.

Civilization's cradle now 'Paradise Lost'

By MIMI MANN

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — When it gave birth to Western civilization, the Mediterranean was the world. Ecologists today are calling it a "Paradise Lost."

Ravaged by man over the centuries, the face of the Mediterranean has been scarred — lush forests felled, wildlife silenced, mineral-rich soil long gone, aquamarine currents fouled by oil slicks.

But some of the region's leading thinkers are trying to rediscover a "Mediterranean identity" through the only common bond they can find: a determination to save what's left of the Mediterranean's environment.

It's a region "whose contribution is acknowledged by the world, but whose future lies in doubt," wrote Serge Antoine, international relations adviser for France's Environment Ministry.

Antoine, among 60 delegates who discussed the state of the Mediterranean at a recent international conference in Cairo sponsored by the Rome-based Aspen Institute Italia, called on the region's 18 countries to unite their cultural and political wills to shape a brighter future.

The institute, a branch of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies of Aspen, Colo., brings together political, economic and cultural leaders to discuss current issues.

A clear message emerged from the conference: the only way to solve environmental, social, economic and political ills of the area is to find common ground uniting the diverse cultures tied by geography to the Mediterranean Sea.

"There's only one issue that can join us now, and that's the environment," Gianni De Michelis, Italy's deputy prime minister and president of the Italian institute, said in an interview.

"Despite the vast differences between industrialized countries that border the northern Mediterranean and less-developed countries bordering the south, everybody agrees we have to do something about the environment. It's the only rallying point we have, the one issue public opinion can use to force politicians to act."

Delegates from Europe, North Africa and the United States said the Mediterranean region has greater potential for environmental progress than most because of its manageable size and historical links its countries share.

They agreed, however, that despite the work of numerous local and international agencies, governments aren't doing enough.

A major topic of the conference was the Mediterranean Action Plan, a survey dating from the mid-1970s seeking to balance the area's environmental and development needs through the first quarter of the 21st century.

The Mediterranean basin is among the most developed regions in the world despite its varied cultures, but its population and industry are shifting rapidly toward its fragile coastlines. Tourism is increasing greatly throughout the region, and almost half the millions of annual tourists remain along the coast.

The basin has 29,000 miles of seacoast, only 40 percent of which is flat, usable land.

Additionally, population is growing unevenly, declining slightly along the Mediterranean's richer northern tier and expanding rapidly in the poorer south.

Experts warned of threats from other sources: ships dumping toxic or hazardous wastes, deforestation on both sides of the Mediterranean and the lack of effort to find alternatives to fossil-based fuels that pollute the atmosphere.

One proposal to spur Mediterranean recovery, suggested by Atef M. Ebeid, Egypt's minister of Cabinet affairs, calls for the setting up of a "green belt" along the entire Mediterranean.

But U.S. delegate Peter Thacher of Washington's World Resources Institute, while praising the virtues of the concept, cautioned that national politics can and often do override environmental considerations.

He said the only way to achieve necessary international cooperation for a project of the scale of the "green belt" proposal would be under the flag of the United Nations.

Whatever is done, delegates to the conference agreed that the need to do something is acute.

Conductor splits time between 3 cities

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Conductor Jesus Lopez-Cobos thinks of home as Berlin, Madrid and Cincinnati.

Lopez-Cobos

"I never go to a hotel. Every place, when we arrive, I say, 'We're home,'" said the 48-year-old music director of the Cincinnati Symphony.

Lopez-Cobos also is general music director of the Berlin Opera and music director of the Spanish National Orchestra. He recently was appointed music director of the Lausanne Chamber Orchestra in Switzerland, effective in the fall of 1990, the year his contract ends in Berlin.

This season he conducts more than three months in Cincinnati. In Berlin, he'll conduct nine operas, including Wagner's "Ring" cycle, which he will bring to the Kennedy Center of the Performing Arts in June.

"Seventeen years in Berlin I think is enough," Lopez-Cobos said. "The repertory system is very, very hard work. You have to switch from one opera to the next. You cannot go only to do a new production and then disappear. I have to conduct everything.

"I knew before I accepted Cincinnati that in '90 I would finish Berlin. I knew the first three years would be difficult, then I would have more time. I have decided that's my last opera house to run. It is not like before when singers stayed. They want to guest everywhere. We have terrible problems to make the repertory," he said.

"For a European conductor, it is so pleasant to be with one normal American orchestra. I couldn't say no."

Lopez-Cobos has a doctorate in philosophy from the University of Madrid. The subject has helped his conducting, he says.

"Every composer is a child of his time, of the mentality of his time. Most of them had relationships with philosophers. I think it is good if you have an idea of what was happening at the time of a composer's life.

"I think specializing is a very bad thing. I hear, 'He is a very good Mozart conductor.' I think, 'He is already limited.' The more you know about differences between composers and their orchestral colors, the more you can use it in your work for other things."

Lopez-Cobos, whose second wife died of cancer more than two years ago, is married to Cuba-born, America-educated lawyer Alicia Ferrer, whom he met in Switzerland. He has two sons, Jesus, 19, and Manuel, 8, who live with relatives in Madrid.

The conductor was born in Toro, Spain, in February 1940, during a time of celebration at the end of the Spanish Civil War. His parents named him Jesus, he says, "because they thought I was a gift of heaven. And Jesus is a very common name in Spain.

"I took a long time to decide between philosophy and music. My father was in the Wagner Society when he was in Madrid as a young man. He was interested in German culture, philosophy and music. I heard music at home.

"As a student in Spain I conducted chorales. I was always interested in singing and the 16th and 17th century music of Spain."

After getting his degree he went to Vienna to study conducting. "I'm a little bit fatalistic. There were two well-known conducting competitions, in Copenhagen and Besancon, France."

He entered, won third prize in Copenhagen in 1968 and first in France in 1969. "This encouraged me to try (to become a conductor). We know the chances in Spain are almost zero. I knew I have to try outside Spain, which is always more difficult than in your own country," he said.

The first orchestra he conducted was the Youth Prague Philharmonic. Then, after spending the 1969-70 year at the Juilliard School, Lopez-Cobos went to Italy.

"I knew Peter Maag, a Swiss conductor. I assisted him in some operas. In Venice he got sick and I had to conduct for him," he said. It was "The Magic Flute," his opera-conducting debut, in 1970. Lopez-Cobos was 30.

"That was my chance," he said. "I stayed almost a year in Venice, until I came to Berlin. In 1971, Lorin Maazel resigned from the Berlin Opera to take the Cleveland Orchestra. They decided to take three or four young conductors instead of a music director. I was invited for three performances. At the break (intermission) in the first, they offered me a four-year contract. I was unsure. My friends in Vienna said, 'Go.'" He has been music director since 1981.

His U.S. conducting debut was in 1972 in a performance of "Lucia di Lammermoor," starring Beverly Sills at the San Francisco Opera.

In 1986, Lopez-Cobos followed Michael Gielen, who moved to the Baden-Baden Radio Symphony in Germany, as music director of the Cincinnati Symphony.

Lopez-Cobos also has a recording project with Telarc Records.

"My Cincinnati contract is to 1991," he said. "Probably I will come with my family to America, find a house and from here go to Europe."

New animated feature films draw big crowds

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The best news for fans of animated movies came with last week's box-office report which showed big grosses for "The Land Before Time" and "Oliver and Company."

Revival of animation, the most tedious and expensive kind of filmmaking, has been predicted every few years. Until recently, though, economics made animation features risky. But in their first weekend "The Land Before Time" topped all releases with $7.5 million in 1,395 theaters ($5,395 average), and "Oliver and Company" in a smaller release of 962 theaters scored no. 4 with $4 million ($4,226 average).

Those are big numbers, and they're likely to grow through the holiday season. That's encouraging for the animation trade, which has been hampered not only by the heavy expense of production but the nature of the audience.

"A large number of tickets we sell go for a lower admission price," said Don Bluth, who produced "The Land before Time."

"If we make a boffo with a picture, it's because we sold more tickets." Bluth, who formerly worked for the Disney Co., cautiously predicts a renaissance of animation.

Walt Disney Pictures, which produced "Oliver and Company," has pumped up its animation department and is starting up an additional facility at the Disney-MGM studio tour in Florida. Roy E. Disney, nephew of Walt, is largely responsible for the revival. Four years ago when Roy helped create a new management at Disney, the outlook was dismal.

"Animation was dying around here," he said in an interview at his studio office. "There had been 10 years of a kind of lack of faith in it, and a lack of direction to it. There were an awful lot of discouraged artists working here.

"We were finishing up 'The Black Cauldron,' which had been an enormous seven-year effort, with the kind of strange idea of doing an epic or making a masterpiece and not having any strong sense of what the story was. There were a lot of people who thought we just weren't going forward with the animation department. There was even talk of getting out of the movie business entirely."

Disney was faced with the task of educating new company heads, who were trained in live-action films, to the uniqueness of the animation process.

"First of all, it's a matter of time; 'Oliver,' for example, took four years to complete," he said. His campaign was aided by having "The Great Mouse Detective" in good story form. When the movie proved a hit, all doubts were erased.

"Oliver and Company" resulted from a "Gong Show" session in which 20 film executives appeared with at least three story ideas. Most were shot down, but an updated "Oliver Twist" survived. Members of Fagin's gang became dogs, as was the newcomer, Oliver. But during story development Oliver became a kitten.

The young animators worked at a fast clip, inspired by the casting of the voices, including Bette Midler, Billy Joel, Dom DeLuise and Robert Loggia. Many of the new artists have come from the Disney-endowed California Institute of the Arts, but Disney observed that more schools are teaching animation as an art.

The studio won't reveal the cost of "Oliver and Company," but Disney said it was in the middle range for an animated feature (estimate: $18 million). Computers will increasingly relieve some of the tedium of inking and painting, he said, helping to bring down expenses.

"But the animation of a character, hand-drawn in pencil I think will never change," he said.

Bluth, who produced "The Land Before Time" for $12 million, found a way to reduce animation expense: He moved his entire studio to Ireland because of the labor cost of animation. The Irish government offered a 10-year commitment for tax breaks, grants for Irish artists who would be trained and access to bank loans, he said.

"It was like Moses leading the children of Israel out of Egypt," said Bluth. "The artists had to pull up all their stakes; many of them sold their homes."

Maria Callas' life was high melodrama, on stage or off

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — It is difficult not to view Maria Callas' life as high melodrama or Greek tragedy, says John Ardoin, executive producer of "Maria Callas: an Operatic Biography."

The documentary about the great soprano aired Friday on PBS as part of the "Great Performances" series.

Callas, who died in 1977 at age 53, was famed for her voice and her acting, for reviving the bel canto repertoire in the 20th century, for being a superstar before the word was invented, for her liaison with Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

"No one ever had so much and wound up with so little," said Ardoin. "It's hard not to see it as the gods taking away all they've given."

The TV show includes Callas singing and talking and others talking about her.

Ardoin says public interest in Callas remains high. "A lot of people remember her still. A big number are hooked on her because a friend played them a record which reached out and grabbed their attention and won't let them go."

Ardoin had been a friend of Callas since 1964. His fourth book about her, focusing on her master classes at the Juilliard School, is scheduled to be published this month. He says Maria Callas was two people, Maria the person and Callas the diva.

"It was like two people fighting for some kind of supremacy in this body, one always trying to dominate the other," he said.

"It's not typical. Most singers have a pretty good sense of identity. I've never encountered anyone else who had such a terrible battle between the person and the persona. Maybe Marilyn Monroe.

"Maria spent most of her time away from the stage trying to understand Callas. She knew she had a tremendous effect on people; she never really could understand why.

"It was just chemistry — which she had in spades.

"On stage, when she did something, it was in such perfect sync with the music, it knocked the socks off of you. She physically was the music. Whether you realized what was happening or not, something told you it was right."

Ardoin, music critic for The Dallas Morning News, wrote the script for a 1978 documentary on PBS, "Callas," which emphasized her art.

This new documentary, he says, emphasized her as a woman.

"Director Tony Palmer had an idea which I think was wonderful. He was more interested in the quality of this life. I helped him with interviews and background material. A lot of her voice speaking on the soundtrack came from interviews I had with Maria."

Ardoin went through his 40 hours of taped Callas interviews for a four-hour documentary that will air on National Public Radio in January.

Her best recordings, he believes, are "Lucia di Lammermoor" in Berlin, "Medea" in Dallas, "La Sonnambula" in Cologne and "La Traviata" in London, all live performances. Ardoin says, "She had that extra additive of the audience inspiration of the moment."

The tour of concerts that Callas undertook in 1973 showed a voice past its prime. Ardoin says, "I think part of her reason (for touring) was to show Onassis she was not beaten. She could survive without him. She really couldn't. She truly loved him and wanted to make her life with him.

Women's art part of Texas' 'invasion' of Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political world and the art world aren't known for coordinating their schedules, so it's only coincidence that an exhibit of Texas women's art will hang in the capital as a passel of Texans invades Washington, led by President-elect George Bush.

Organizers of the art exhibit at the National Museum of Women in the Arts hope the national focus on Texans in politics will spill over and shine on the Lone Star State's women artists.

The works of a dozen Texans will be shown for three months at the private, non-profit museum dedicated to promoting women artists, who for centuries have been slighted in text books and museums.

The exhibit opened last month with much fanfare. It included a buffet Friday sponsored by Houston native Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association, for those who paid $750 for a "special-events weekend," and a reception for Texans in Washington, sponsored by the Texas State Society.

The exhibit culminated two years' work and vigorous fund-raising. During some hard economic times in Texas, 600 people were asked to give $100 each.

But it turns out the timing couldn't have been better, as Bush prepares to move into the White House and Texans fill the ranks of government from Cabinet level on down.

"It's incredible timing," says Patricia B. Meadows of Dallas, who rounded up the artists. "The art world and the political world don't coordinate their schedules; it's an exciting happening and it helps our artists get more recognition."

Recognition of women artists has been long in coming, says the museum's president and founder, Wilhelmina Cole Holladay. Five percent or less of all pieces in museum collections nationwide represent the work of women, she said.

Until 1986, the premier art text book, H.W. Janson History of Art, had never mentioned a woman artist, including Mary Cassatt, the American impressionist, she said.

"We've got a long way to go," Mrs. Holladay said, "but it's beginning to work. Fair-minded people have responded in some very nice ways."

Mrs. Holladay, in an attempt to have a national museum, has helped states form committees that then may sponsor exhibits on their own women artists. There are 12 such committees now, and several more in the making. The museum has more than 90,000 individual members.

Have a drink

It was supposed to be a toast to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but because he cut his New York trip short, it didn't happen. But, Deena DeGeorge serves up Pepsi Cola in Soviet Pepsi cups anyway at the Soviet Exports Goods Exhibition at the Jacob Javits Center in New York on Friday. Pepsi was one of the first Western consumer products sold in the Soviet Union.

Casino owner faces $400,000 fine for hosting Hitler parties

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — The owner of the Imperial Palace casino faces a possible $400,00 fine and loss of his gaming license over Adolf Hitler birthday celebrations held at the Las Vegas Strip resort, state officials said Friday.

The owner, Ralph Engelstad, threw the parties at his casino last April and April 1986, according to one count of the state Gaming Control Board complaint.

The incidents "have become public knowledge throughout the United States and in certain foreign countries and reflect or tend to reflect on the repute of the state of Nevada and act as a detriment to its gaming industry," the complaint said.

A second count alleges Engelstad destroyed or concealed evidence relevant to an unrelated civil action stemming from a 1984 rape case at the Imperial Palace.

The complaint seeks a fine of up to $400,000 for the alleged violations, plus the possible revocation, suspension or restriction of Engelstad's gaming license.

No date has been set for a state Gaming Commission hearing on the board's complaint. During the hearing, commission members will act as judges and control board members will act as prosecutors.

There was no immediate comment from Engelstad; he would not take reporters' calls at his casino Friday.

In October, Engelstad issued a public apology for the Hitler parties, saying they were "not only stupid, but insensitive."

The complaint alleges the two Hitler birthday celebrations were held around April 20, Hitler's birthday. It alleges they featured cakes decorated with swastikas, Nazi-era German marching music and German food.

Bartenders at the parties wore T-shirts bearing a picture of Hitler and the message "Adolf Hitler — European Tour 1939-45," according to the complaint.

The complaint claimed the celebrations were held in the Imperial Palace's so-called "War Room," which housed Engelstad's collection of memorabilia from Germany's Third Reich, including a portrait of himself in a Nazi uniform.

Prosecutors contradict North's testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver L. North began using Iranian arms-sale proceeds to arm Nicaraguan rebels two months before he told Congress the diversion had started, Iran-Contra prosecutors said Friday.

"A substantial quantity of weapons" were bought for the Contras in December 1985 from money left over from the aborted sale by Israel of Hawk missiles to Iran in November 1985, Iran-Contra prosececutors said in filing of North's case.

The prosecution evidence contradicts North's congressional testimony last year that the idea of diverting arms-sale profits to the Contras was first suggested to him in January 1986 by Iranian arms dealer Manuchar Ghorbanifar.

The weapons for the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, were purchased from what was left of a $1 million fund that North told Israel to place in a Swiss bank. The money was to cover the expenses that arms dealer Richard V. Secord would incur when selling 80 Hawk missiles to Iran.

The deal broke down after the first shipment of 18 missiles because the Iranians were dissatisfied with the weapons they received.

As a result, "a substantial windfall was left" in the account of Lake Resources, a Panamanian company controlled by Secord, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh said in the filing in U.S. District Court.

"Aided by this infusion" of cash, which the 1987 congressional Iran-Contra report estimated was $800,000, "the enterprise shipped a subststantial quanity of weapons to the Contras" in December of that year, Walsh said.

"Thus, the events of November afforded North his first opportunity to exploit arms sales to Iran in order to support the Contras; the stage wa set for the diversion of 1986," Walsh said.

During his testimony before the House-Senate committee hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, North said the idea of using arms-sale profits to help the Contras was mentioned by Ghorbanifar during discussions held to set up the February 1986 sale of 1,000 TOW missiles to Iran.

Recalling the Jan. 22, 1986, meeting in London, North said Ghorbanifar "suggested several incentives to make that February transaction work, and the attractive incentive for me was...that residuals would flow to support the Nicaraguan resistance."

Ghorbanifar agreed to pay $10,000 for each of the 1,000 TOW missiles, which were to be purchased from the Defense Department through the CIA.

At a meeting in Washington the next day, North — "in a critical misrepresentation" — told two CIA officials and a Pentagon officer that Secord would pay the CIA $6,000 per missile or $6 million in all — "when he well knew that $10 million was the negotiated price."

The CIA eventually set the price at $3,700 per missile — "for reasons unrelated to North's statements," Walsh said.

In his latest summary of evidence in the case, Walsh said prosecutors "will demonstrate at trial that North played a significant role in directing expenditures from the enterprise through witnesses such as Willard Zucker," an American lawyer who operates a Swiss financial company.

North and Secord are charged along with former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealer Albert Hakim with conspiring to divert more than $14 million in arms-for-hostage profits to the Contras. Poindexter, Secord and Hakim are to be tried separately after North.

Walsh's filing was made as U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell concluded seven days of closed hearings to consder North's objections to censoring sensitive information from 395 prosecution exhibits.

The independent prosecutor, in a separate filing, suggested a procedure under which uncensored documents could be shown to jurors, the judge and the witness without revealing the contents to spectators.
