Heavy rains pelting Texas

■ At least three people killed as heavy rains increase flooding in already-soaked Nortn Central Texas.

Associated Press

Flood-stricken communities in North Central Texas braced for more flooding Wednesday night as new storms developed in the wake of flooding that killed at least three people.

A tornado watch was issued late Wednesday for more than 50 counties in North Central, Northeast, and South Central Texas until 4 a.m. today.

Flash flood watches and warnings were posted for a large part of Northeast Texas. Another flood warning was posted for Irion County in Southwest Texas and Edwards County in South Texas.

In Dallas, emergency authorities were asking people in Rochester Park in south Dallas area to leave their homes because of rising water.

"The shelter is open and we're asking them to evacuate said," said Ed Joyce, emergency preparedness specialist. "No one has showed up yet but that's not unusual because most people will wait until the last minute."

A section of Interstate 30 at Dallas was closed because of high water Wednesday night.

The severe thunderstorms were anticipated by emergency officials.

"They told us there would be about three fronts come through about an hour and a half apart. Two of them have. We're seeing another one form on the other side of Abilene right now," said George Teague of the Parker County Emergency Management office.

Teague said some people who had just returned to their homes after flooding on the Brazos River last week were told to leave again Wednesday after severe storms late Tuesday night and Wednesday morning pushed the Brazos over its banks.

The new storms Wednesday night were expected to push the flood waters even higher.

"That's the primary concern because I know it rained two inches in 30 minutes," Teague said. 'We're afraid it's going to get up like it did last week. The river's risen about 10 feet since last night, which is two feet above bank level."

Numerous roads were reported covered with water, and Route 287 near Wichita Falls was closed, police said.

In Abilene, where almost 4 inches of rain fell by Wednesday afternoon, police were evacuating homes near Dyess Air Force Base and some in southeast Abilene.

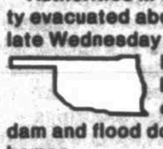

The force of the water was enough to push the parked cars of a train off its tracks in a flooded area of Arlington.

THURSDAY NEWS WATCH

Flood levels

Authorities in Stephens County evacuated about 200 people late Wednesday after rain-swollen Commanche Lake threatened to burst its dam and flood downstream homes.

"It's flaking off on the backside, trying to go through the dam instead of over it," said Alvin Tatum, a disptacher with the sheriff's department. "It's going to flood all those homes. We've contacted everybody. I just hope they all get out."

Ronnie Webb, dispatcher with the Oklahoma Highway Patrol in Lawton, said authorities were evacuating "everybody" in the area, about three miles east of Commanche and southeast of Duncan.

Elsewhere, authorities near Lake Texoma kept a watch on the rising reservoir as water-logged southern Oklahoma continued to be drenched by rain. Forecasters said showers and thunderstorms were expected through Thursday.

A tornado watch was issued by the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., for parts of south central and southeast Oklahoma and parts of north central and northeast Texas late Wednesday.

The tornado watch area was along and 80 statute miles east and west of a line from 35 miles west southwest of Waco, Texas, to 40 miles northeast of Ardmore, the center said.

The National Weather Service said southern Oklahoma received about 2 inches of rain overnight Tuesday.

A new role

McEntire

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music performer Reba McEntire will return to the concert stage Thursday night for the first time in more than four months.

McEntire, who took time off her career to give birth Feb. 23 to her first child, is scheduled to begin a tour in Louisville, Ky., as part of the Kentucky Derby celebration.

The concert will be her first since December and her first of a 115-city tour this year, spokeswoman Jennifer Bohler said Wednesday.

Airline seeking solution

■ Southwest Airlines is working with the Dallas City Council, trying to find a compromise between their concern for growth at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and the firm's interest in expanding service from Love Field.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines has suggested a compromise in its efforts to repeal a federal law restricting flights from a Dallas airport, a newspaper reported.

The compromise, delivered to Dallas City Council members Wednesday, would allow the city to make better use of Love Field while not threatening growth at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

In a memo to the City Council, company chairman Herbert D. Kelleher recommended keeping the Wright Amendment's current ban on nonstop flights beyond Texas and the surrounding states, but suggested that restrictions be lifted on flight connections beyond the region.

His memo was the airline's first formal position on efforts to repeal the Wright Amendment, which restricts flights at Love Field to Texas and four surrounding states.

Southwest, the only scheduled passenger carrier at Dallas' Love Field had not previously taken a public stand on efforts to repeal the amendment.

The Wright amendment forbids airlines serving Love Field to offer connecting service from cities within the five-state service area to destinations beyond.

Last September, the City Council voted 8-2 to back a move in Congress to replace the Wright Amendment with a 650-mile perimeter on non-stop flights from Love Field.

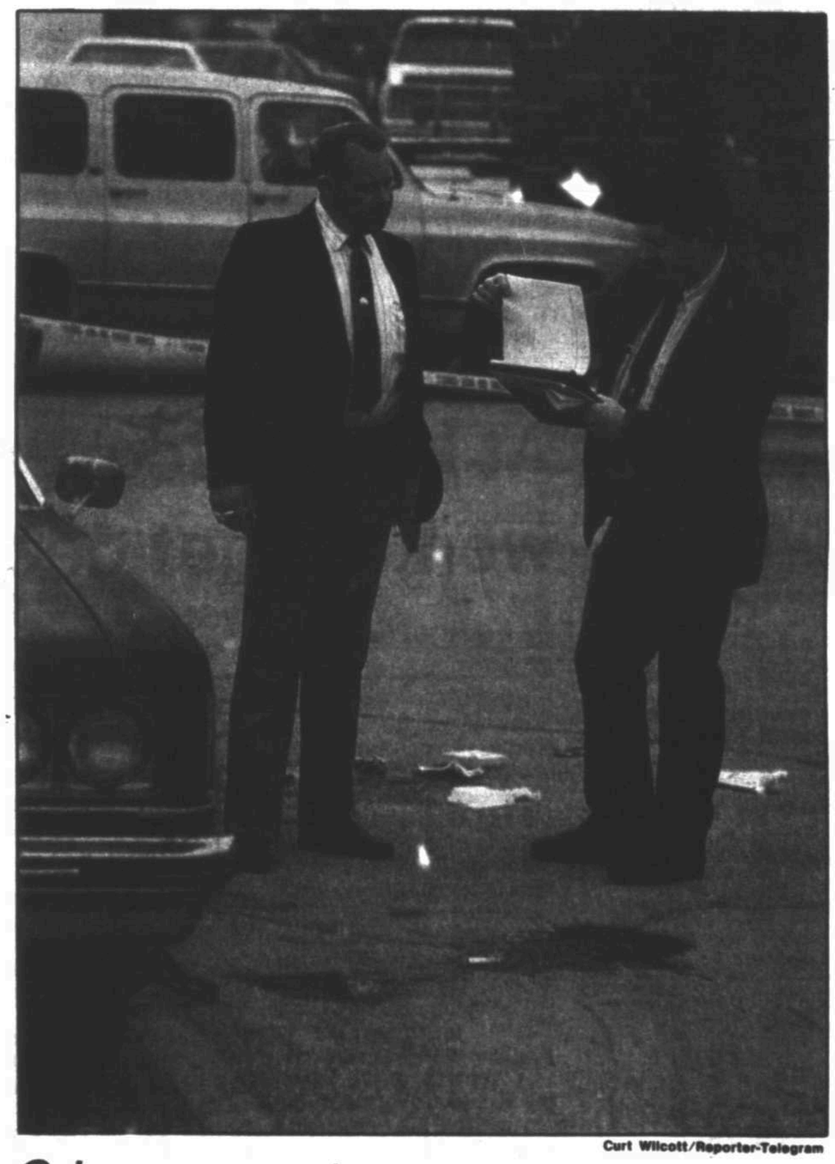

Since then, a debate has raged over whether repeal would foster airline competition and provide lower air fares for local residents or whether it would draw passengers away from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and slow the growth of the region's dominant airport.

Southwest is prohibited from listing in its flight timetables service from Dallas to cities such as Los Angeles and Chicago, which normally could be reached by catching a connecting flight.

The airline also is prohibited from issuing a single ticket for the trip outside the restricted area. A Dallas passenger bound for Chicago must buy two tickets — one from Dallas to Tulsa and a second from Tulsa to Chicago. And the traveler can't check baggage from Dallas all the way to the destination.

James Parker, Southwest's vice president-general counsel, said Tuesday that a compromise along the lines suggested by Kelleher would increase the airline's traffic by about 10 percent a year at Love Field.

At the same time, he said, Southwest believes traffic at DFW would increase as airlines there matched Southwest's lower fares and attracted more passengers.

Two die in domestic dispute

■ An argument witnesses say centered around the title to a car ended in a restaurant parking lot when an Odessa man apparently shot his ex-wife before turning a gun on himself.

ODESSA — An Odessa couple's domestic dispute ended in a murder-suicide in the parking lot of a restaurant here at about 1:50 p.m. Wednesday, said Cpl. John McAhon of the Odessa Police Department.

Leon Traywick, 56, allegedly shot Martha Jean Wyatt, 55, in the head with a .38 caliber revolver outside of Manuel's Crispy Taco restaurant, 1404 E. 2nd St., following a dispute over a car title, McAhon said. Traywick then shot himself, McAhon said.

The couple was standing next to a 1976 Chevrolet Impala with the door open when the shooting occurred, said Sam Gonzalez, owner of the restaurant and a witness to the shootings.

Both were taken to Odessa's Medical Center Hospital by a Fire Department ambulance and both were pronounced dead at 4:05 p.m. by Justice of the Peace J.E. Pressly.

Love of bargain may not boost national energy policy, aide warns

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

America's love for cheap energy may not bode well for the domestic oil and gas industry in the formation of a national energy strategy, Mike McElwrath, deputy assistant secretary for fossil energy at the Deparment of Energy, told a Midland oil and gas gathering Wednesday.

He said President Bush has included some tax incentives for the oil industry in his national energy strategy, but the political reality was that, "people are just real happy buying cheap, foreign oil."

McElwrath was a participant in two energy panels comprised of state and federal officials which met at the Midland Hilton to address the energy concerns of the Permian Basin oil industry.

Most of those concerns centered around components of a natural energy policy and state policy affecting the leasing of school and general lands in Texas.

One panel consisted of Bill Gravenor, University Lands auditor; Bill Humphrey, commissioner of New Mexico Public Lands; Garry Mauro, Commissioner of the Texas General Land Office and McElwrath.

The other panel was comprised of Bill LeMay, director of New Mexico Oil and Gas Conservation Commission, Ron Merritt; director of New Mexico Natural Gas programs and Director of Energy, Federal Natural Resources Department; Jim Nugent, Texas Railroad Commissioner; and John Sharp, Texas Railroad Commissioner.

The energy panels were one of the events sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in conjunction with Energy Appreciation Week.

Mauro, who has been criticized by some in the oil industry for his tough negotiations on royalty leases, defended his policies by saying his intention was to run the General Land Office like a business and make as much money as possible for the schools of Texas. High in 70s anticipated

Staff Report

National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for partly cloudy skies today, and a high in the mid 70s. Winds will be gusting from the west and northwest at 10 to 20 mph.

Tonight will be partly cloudy, with a low in the upper 40s.

Tomorrow will be partly cloudy, with a high in the low 70s.

Wednesday's high was 57 degrees, compared with the record of 96 set in set in 1965. Wednesday's overnight low was 47. The record low for today is 37, set in 1970.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms continued across much of the Panhandle, northern part of the south plains, far west Texas and a part of the Edwards Plateau. A large area of rain, scattered showers and a few thunderstorms covered the western part of the Hill Country and most of North Texas.

The stronger thunderstorms were developing in the western sections of North Texas from near Abilene to Wichita Falls.

Meanwhile, a cold front that moved through the state late last week was moving back to the north as a warm front. This frontal system extended from near Texarkana to Fort Worth to Kerrville to Laredo. A strong upper level storm system was interacting with the very moist and unstable air and frontal system, causing heavy rains.

Winds blew from the north and northeast over the area north of the front. South to southeast winds prevailed over the rest of Texas. Wind speeds were in the 5 to 15 mph range. However, gusty surface winds up to 25 mph swept across the central Brazos River Valley while the Coastal Bend had some wind speeds gusting up to 40 mph.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms extended from New Mexico to Kentucky on Wednesday, producing flooding that killed three people in Texas, and snow continued falling in the southern Rockies.

Temperatures hit record highs in the Southeast, but a record low was reported in Minnesota.

Showers and thunderstorms continued into the afternoon, extending from New Mexico across northern and central Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, northwestern Mississippi, western and central Tennessee into Kentucky, the National Weather Service said.

Heavy rain in north-central Texas flooded streets and highways and forced the evacuations of dozens of people from homes in low-lying areas, authorities said.

Some areas had up to 7 inches of rain in 24 hours.

Downtown Gainsville, about 40 miles north of Dallas, was completely closed due to flooding. Authorities in Fort Worth evacuated more than 70 people from three mobile home parks and other residences. Seventy-six people were taken to shelters in Fort Worth.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT included 1.62 inches at Abilene, Texas; 1.59 inches at Altus, Okla.; 1.32 inches at Oklahoma City; and 1.28 inches at Tulsa, Okla.

Snow continued falling Wednesday over the mountains of southern Colorado, but it was expected to end during the night. Snow also fell at higher elevations of north-central New Mexico.

Temperatures hit record highs in the Southeast, including 94 at Augusta, Ga.; 95 at Charleston, S.C.; and 95 at Savannah, Ga.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

near Fort Worth, police said Wednesday night. There were no injuries.

Forecasters said the heavy rains and flooding would continue through Thursday morning. Some areas had up to seven inches of rain in 24 hours.

Nine people have died in heavy rains and high waters from storms in north-central Texas this spring. Last year, 22 people died in flooding and strong thunderstorms in the area.

Earlier Wednesday, the bodies of two men were found downstream after their truck got stuck trying to cross rushing waters in Fort Worth.

The bodies of Ben. F. Waxler, 65, and his 64-year-old companion were found at 3 a.m. about two miles downstream. Authorities were not releasing the name of the second man until they could locate his relatives.

A crew of street department workers found the body of an unidentified woman at about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday at a park in southeast Fort Worth.

The woman had been reported missing, but Fort Worth Police spokesman Doug Clarke said he did not know the woman's age or who reported her missing.

The flash floods submerged hundreds of cars on streets and highways and forced dozens of evacuations in low-lying areas. Seventy-six people were taken to shelters in Fort Worth.

In Gainsville, about 40 miles north of Dallas, 36 elderly people were evacuated from the Turner Hotel, a five-story apartment complex, when electricity went out as the basement flooded. There were no injuries.

Downtown Gainsville was completely closed due to flooding.

Authorities in Fort Worth evacuated more than 70 people from three mobile home parks and other residences early Wednesday.

The storms snarled traffic throughout the Dallas-Fort Worth area late Tuesday and early Wednesday. Numerous roads were closed and rescue workers and wreckers were used to haul people out of cars that became stranded in deep water.

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers were closely monitoring the rise of Lake Texoma at the Texas-Oklahoma border, which had climbed above 639 feet — a foot below the overflow mark.

Mike McCoy, a park manager, said engineers expected the lake to crest sometime Wednesday evening, marking the only its second spill-over in history.

He said the level is expected to reach 641 feet by Thursday.

and we want you to make as many dollars as possible, so we can make a quarter."

Humphrey agreed with Mauro. "We function in New Mexico like a landlord."

McElrath sounded a less-than-optimistic note on energy prices and tax incentives, but said a concentrated effort was being made in research to produce near-term results that can save many of the rapidly depleting fields.

"If we don't do something quickly to save some of our marginal wells from being plugged, as many as 75 percent will be plugged by the end of the decade," said the former Midland attorney.

He added: "I don't think oil prices over the next few years will go up. They will probably stay in the $20-25 area for the rest of the decade. The Environmental Protection Agency will continue to look at the impact of the oil and gas industry and the restrictions imposed by the Clean Air Act will have a negative impact on the oil industry. But the natural gas situation will have a positive impact on the industry."

McElwrath said 12 major reservoirs in the U.S., in danger of being abandoned, would be studied to determine the most appropriate technology for keeping them flowing. "Possibly three of the top five will be here in the Permian Basin," he added.

LeMay noted, "Looking into the 90's I can pretty much sum it up into three general catagories — gas, environment and an aging infrastructure. All of these will present challenges."

LeMay said he would like to keep the regulating at a state level. "Environmental problems of the 90's will be tough with more and more restrictions in the oil patch."

Merritt said natural gas production in 1989 ranked Texas first, Louisiana second, Oklahoma and New Mexico, third and fourth. "While New Mexico's production was up slightly, prices were down and producers were only slightly better off in gross revenue in 1989 as in 1988."

Merritt said the bright spot for New Mexico was its gas reserves. "The Federal Energy Administration says that our reserves have gone up from 12.6 Tcf to 18.5 Tcf. The good news for New Mexico is that we believe over the next couple of years we can virtually double our reserves to over 30 Tcf with the addition of coal seam gas."

He noted that the future demand for natural gas in the mid and late 1990's is quite healthy. "We, in New Mexico, believe that we'll have to move this additional deliverabilty we have in the San Juan Basin to the east."

Nugent said "total world crude oil production last year hit about 61 million barrels per day, with the U.S. and Russia experiencing the largest production decline. The other Middle East nations had about a 12 percent increase in their production rate."

He added that with U.S. oil production decreasing it can not continue without serious repercussions. "We need a national energy policy. One small bright picture that I see in West Texas, is that West Texas Intermediate crude seems to hold its own in the market and as the supply deminishes I think the price will firm up due to the need for refineries to have more low sulphur crude and I think we may see a shortage of that crude in the forseeable future."

Sharp, addressing the issue of markets, said: "We don't need new markets for natural gas, we need higher prices." He said the low prices in the natural gas market is not due to an over-production flooding the market, but the actions of government.

Energy Appreciation Week continues today with a speech by McElwrath at the Odessa Hilton in Odessa. Saturday will mark the annual Oil & Gas Blow Out festivities.

At last: Discovery lets night workers get decent day's sleep

By Daniel Q. Haney
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Carefully timed doses of bright light and total darkness can help night-shift workers quickly reset their internal clocks so they stay alert on the job and sleep soundly during the day, scientists have discovered.

The approach appears to be the first quick, practical cure for the night-shift blues, the on-the-job sleepiness and daytime insomnia that plague many of the nation's 7 million night workers.

The principal developer, Dr. Charles A. Czeisler of Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, said his team is still simplifying the technique so it can be easily moved from lab to workplace. But if it matches its early promise, it should readjust people's biological rhythms in just two nights so they stay awake when their bodies ordinarily want to sleep.

"It's a tremendous leap forward," commented Dr. Thomas Roth, a sleep researcher at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit.

The technique works this way:

People moving to the night shift reported to work — in this case, a hospital lab — at midnight and spent the next eight hours sitting at a desk. While they worked, a bank of lights 4 feet away shined with 16 cool-white 40-watt bulbs.

Then they drove home, pulled down blackout shades in their bedrooms and stayed in total darkness from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

After just two days, the time on their internal clocks shifted almost 10 hours. So instead of hitting the low point in their daily cycle about 5 a.m., this happened around 3 p.m. when they were still asleep.

"They certainly have made a breakthrough in understanding the effect of light in humans," said Dr. Mary Carskadon of Brown University. "Their evidence is very powerful. There needs to be more trials in the field to determine the efficacy in a broader sense, but I think that what they've done really gives us a guidepost to pursuing this research."

Czeisler described the results of his group's experimental use of the approach in eight young men in a report in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

If the technique can be successfully adapted to the job, it could be important for an estimated 7 million Americans who work nights. Even after years on these schedules, some people complain they never completely adjust.

"It's very important in critical jobs to make sure that people are alert on the night shift," said Czeisler. "We collected data on 4,000 shift workers and found that 56 percent reported nodding off at least once a week. These include people driving front-end loaders, running nuclear power plants, policemen and chemical workers."

Because people don't have clock hands on their tummies, scientists read the time on their internal clocks by checking their temperatures. Ordinarily, people's temperatures hit their lowest ebb in the wee hours, and this is when they are least alert if they happen to be awake.

During the studies, a comparison group worked at night under regular lights and slept with ordinary window shades pulled. After a week, their temperatures continued to reach their low point during the early morning.

In contrast, those who got the light-dark treatment noticed an immediate improvement in their alertness and performance.

"Our subjects said it was startling how much better they felt at night," said Czeisler. "It was no longer an ordeal to stay up all night."

Those getting the treatment were able to sleep two hours longer a day than the comparison group. Tests also showed dramatic shifts in when their bodies made hormones and produced urine.

The work provides new clues about the effect of light signals that travel along nerves from the eyes to the brain's hypothalamus, the metronome that keeps all the body's functions running on time.

SCENE: Dispute 'low-key'

(From 1A)

Ema Madrid, a waitress in the restaurant who served the couple, said, "They were arguing over a title. The lady was nice and the man was grumpy."

Two witnesses, Gonzalez and his secretary, Janette Midkiff, said they didn't notice any loud arguing between the couple prior to the shootings.

"He (Traywick) was real nonchalant about it, like it was no big deal," Ms. Midkiff said.

"It was so surreal," Gonzalez added.

Police reported the last address of the couple as being Route 4, Box 1598, in Odessa, but a check-in card at the Sahara Motel across the street from the restaurant listed Traywick as a guest from Alabama. A clerk said he was staying at the motel with two other men.

Amtrak derails near Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An Amtrak train en route from Chicago to Indianapolis derailed Wednesday night, injuring as many as 30 people, authorities said.

The accident occurred shortly before 9 p.m. EDT on the eastern edge of Crawfordsville, about 60 miles northeast of Indianapolis, state police said.

From 27 to 30 people were being rushed to Culver Union Hospital in Crawfordsville, said hospital spokesman David Callecod.

Callecod said two of those still en route were reported in serious condition, but he did not know the nature of the injuries.

He said seven of the injured had already arrived at the hospital and were treated for minor injuries such as bumps and bruises.

Mrs. Bush unbothered by Wellesley dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush is not bothered by Wellesley College students who protest her selection as this year's commencement speaker, she said in an interview Wednesday.

"They're 21 years old, and they're looking at life from that perspective," Mrs. Bush said in an interview published in Thursday editions of The Washington Post. "I don't disagree with what they're looking at."

Some 150 students passed a petition against the first lady's commencement address, saying that "to honor Barbara Bush as commencement speaker is to honor a woman who has gained recognition through the achievements of her husband, which contradicts what we have been taught over our years at Wellesley."

No signs seen other hostages to be freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said Wednesday it has seen no signs pointing toward release of another American hostage in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush will meet with Frank Reed if the ex-hostage wants to when he returns to the United States.

Questioned about the message Reed reportedly was asked to carry to Washington by his captors, Fitzwater said, "I'm not aware of anything."

Bush administration officials indicated Tuesday there was nothing new in the oral message another freed hostage, Robert Polhill, relayed to Bush in a White House meeting Monday.

Fitzwater, asked Wednesday about reports that Iranian officials were still working to seek freedom for Western hostages, said, "We don't have any other indications of a release."

Reed, recuperating at a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, said Wednesday he was "very, very angry" that Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland were still hostages. Both were kidnapped in 1985.

■ Related story/7E

"Mr. Reed is free to say whatever he wants. I'm sure he was reflecting briefings he has received about the status of events, but he is free to say whatever he likes," said Fitzwater.

Of Reed, the spokesman said, "I'm sure if he wants to come in and see the president, a meeting will be arranged. He certainly has every right to do that. ... He has not indicated to us what his preferences are."

At the State Department, deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said the United States is making indirect contacts with Iran through third parties, including Switzerland, which represents U.S. interests in Tehran.

Sixteen Westerners, including six Americans, remain hostages in Lebanon. Polhill was freed April 22 after 39 months in captivity; Reed on Monday after 43 months.

On Tuesday, Fitzwater said all American hostages must be freed before the United States can move beyond the "small gestures" of thanks already shown to Iran.

Error again shuts down telescope

WASHINGTON (AP) — An error by a ground controller put the Hubble Space Telescope to sleep again overnight but the $1.5 billion instrument was re-awakened Wednesday and was functioning normally again.

It was the third time since the telescope was put into open space April 25 that its electronics were powered down to prevent damage.

NASA said the controller at the Goddard Space Flight Center failed to send a signal telling the telescope's lens cover not to close during a testing operation. The 10-foot diameter cover shut and its motion caused the telescope to go into a "safe-mode."

"The spacecraft operated just as it should have," the space agency said in a statement. "The problem was caused by ground controller oversight."

In the safe-mode, the telescope automatically maintains its position, points its solar arrays to the sun to receive power and activates other functions to protect the spacecraft.

The system is designed to safeguard the telescope for 72 hours without ground control.

It happened the first time on Friday when engineers sent commands to open the lens cover, formally known as the aperture door. Cautious engineers had set the software to accommodate only a slight bit of motion and the movement of the door exceeded that limit.

The second time was also Friday, when one of the telescope's two high-gain antennas was put through its movements. A counterweight on the dish antenna brushed against a cable and the efforts by a motor to overcome the resistance again shut the system down.

The biggest impact of Tuesday night's events, NASA said, was that 10 hours in the lengthy start-up and calibration process were lost. But spokesman Jim Elliott said no delay was expected in getting the first picture from the telescope early Saturday.

Barry's lawyer files dismissal motion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The drug possession and perjury case against Mayor Marion Barry should be dropped because prosecutors allowed the mayor to use drugs before arresting him, Barry's attorney argued Wednesday.

In a motion in U.S. District Court seeking dismissal of the eight-count indictment against Barry, attorney R. Kenneth Mundy accused the government of "prosecutorial overreach" for supplying the crack cocaine and cocaine pipe Barry used.

"This over-involvement is unprecedented," Mundy wrote. "There appears to be no case in which such elaborate and dangerous preparations were employed to prove that a suspect was a mere user."

In earlier filings, U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens argued that prosecutors routinely provide illegal drugs to suspects in undercover drug buys.

Mundy had complained that the government's action had been coercive, but Stephens cited a Supreme Court ruling that such procedures were commonly used "in contraband offenses, which are so difficult to detect in the absence of undercover government involvement."

Stephens also argued in the earlier filing that "to require the agent to interrupt the use of the controlled substance likely would compromise the investigation."

But Mundy, noting that medical technicians were present to examine the mayor after he used the cocaine, argued that the government had acted illegally in allowing the mayor to smoke the cocaine.

"The fact that the medical technicians were available does not make the government's conduct any less offensive," Mundy said. "It only corroborates the fact that they knew the plan was potentially life-threatening."

Mundy concluded by referring to previous cases which were dismissed because prosecutors used "coercion, violence or brutality."

Stephens has until Monday to file a response.

Barry, 54, faces five misdemeanor cocaine possession charges and three felony counts of lying to a grand jury about his drug use. The trial is scheduled to start June 4.

One of the possession charges stems from his Jan. 18 arrest in the undercover FBI sting operation.

No one knows what's hidden in bank vault

By Kristi Dempsey

CHIRENO, Texas (AP) — There may be hidden treasure in the small East Texas town of Chireno, if someone could just come up with the right combination.

Permanently ensconced in a wall behind the counter at Chireno Natural Gas offices is a massive black door leading into a shallow bank vault installed in 1910.

According to Willie Thorp, office manager, the day the bank moved the money across the street into new facilities (with local men riding shotgun) someone closed the vault and apparently forgot how to open it again. The transfer was made in the early 1970s.

To make matters worse, says Deannie Meador, billing clerk, a second door inside the vault has yet another combination.

So aside from a stick of dynamite, the antique vault will remain closed until some lucky person hits the right numbers not once, but twice.

"There's a pretty good reward for opening that safe," former City Manager Percy Wilson said jokingly. Chireno, a town of about 400 people, is in southern Nacogdoches County about 36 miles southeast from Nacogdoches and about 140 miles northeast of Houston.

Ms. Meador said there really isn't a reward, but allows "they might give 'em something if they ever opened it."

Ms. Thorp just scoffs saying "it's a bunch of hooey" when people speculate on whether the safe contains anything of true value.

Ms. Meador, however, thinks the safe might contain some missing papers.

Chireno children are mesmerized by the vault, Ms. Thorp noted, and often dream of hitting the right numbers and winning the "treasure."

They spend hours twirling the old dial trying to discover the combination. The younger children also keep the safe dusted, she laughs, as they climb up and down the heavy steel bars that are a part of the manual locking system.

"It's the only way we keep it dusted."

The building was constructed in 1910 to house Chireno State Bank and the doors opened in 1911. The original structure had a corner fireplace, since removed, between two narrow windows so firewood could be passed through the openings.

"That's all they had to heat the building," Ms. Thorp said.

In 1964, she explained, "we got up-town" with the installation of a bathroom and running water.

NATION IN BRIEF

Bush pays extra taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush had to pay an additional $7,497 in federal income taxes Wednesday due to an error in the reporting of his 1989 income, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

The president had to file an amended return because the one he sent to the IRS last month did not include income from deferred compensation he collected last year.

He was eligible for that compensation when he turned 65 last June 12, under an arrangement with Zapata Corp., the now-defunct oil company he once headed, Fitzwater said. The added income was brought to the attention of the tax preparers after they had submitted his tax return last month, according to the explanation on his amended form.

The deferred compensation was received in the form of a paid-up life insurance policy and should have been reported because it had a cash value.

The life insurance policy was valued at $26,250.

Bill amends benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Ways and Means subcommittee voted Wednesday to allow people aged 65 through 69 to earn more money without losing any of their Social Security benefits.

A bill approved by the Social Security subcommittee also includes a provision removing the Social Security Administration from the Department of Health and Human Services and creating it as an independent agency.

The proposed increase in the amount Social Security recipients may earn without losing benefits is considerably less generous than tax-writing committees of the House and Senate approved last year. Congressional Republicans have made outright repeal of the earnings limitation a top goal, contending it reduces incentives for older Americans to work.

Present law allows a person aged 65 through 69 to earn up to $9,360 this year without penalty. Each $3 earned above that amount reduces Social Security benefits by $1.

An automatic inflation adjustment built into the law will raise the limit to $9,960 next year and to $10,440 in 1992. The bill approved without dissent by the subcommittee would raise the figures to $10,200 in 1991 and $10,920 in 1992.

The bill makes no change in the $6,840 earnings limit on people under age 65. Neither does it affect those 70 or older; they could continue to earn an unlimited amount without losing any Social Security benefit.

Crime boss sentenced

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Crime boss Nicodemo Scarfo, already serving a 69-year prison sentence, was formally sentenced Wednesday to life in prison for ordering a 1985 mob hit.

Scarfo, 61, was convicted of first-degree murder in the July 1985 slaying of Frank "Frankie Flowers" D'Alfonso on a south Philadelphia street.

D'Alfonso was a low-level mob figure killed because he did not show proper respect to Scarfo and didn't give the mob a large enough share of a gambling operation, prosecution witnesses said.

Common Pleas Court Judge Eugene Clark rejected a plea from Scarfo's lawyer, Robert Simone, to make the life sentence concurrent with sentences imposed for federal convictions.

Clark ordered that the life term run consecutive to Scarfo's first federal sentence, 14 years for attempting to extort $1 million from a developer. He added additional sentences totaling five to 15 years for conspiracy and weapons offenses.

Bush catches gaffe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander the Great got a posthumous addition to his empire Wednesday courtesy of George Bush.

It came as the president was talking up his "points of light" initiative to a group of 175 youths from the Washington area.

Bush was extolling some of history's early achievers.

"By the age of 32, Alexander the Great's empire stretched from Indiana," said Bush, who caught his own gaffe.

"Indiana? It included Indiana," he laughed, then corrected himself, "From India to the Adriatic."

"Youth is no barrier to great achievements," Bush told the first Presidential Youth Leadership Forum, intended to encourage young Americans to involve themselves in their community.

VA agrees to study of Agent Orange

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Veterans Affairs opened the door Wednesday to independent scrutiny of its effort to determine whether there is a link between exposure to Agent Orange and a variety of diseases.

The offer follows years of challenges to the credibility of the VA, Centers for Disease Control and the Defense Department. Critics have charged the government with ignoring the scientific evidence of a connection between exposure and cancers and other diseases.

The offer came during testimony by VA Deputy Secretary Anthony J. Principi before a House Veterans Affairs subcommittee.

Principi told the subcommittee on compensation, pension and insurance that the department would agree to a review by the National Academy of Sciences, to having its own panel of outside scientific advisers enlarged, or to subjecting its work to outside review.

Two Agent Orange compensation bills pending in Congress call for establishment of a scientific review procedure through the National Academy, an independent group of scientists that advises the government.

"Should Congress conclude that the process would be lent credibility by our consulting with additional outside experts ... we would be pleased to do so if that kind of consultation would not unduly delay our progress," Principi said.

But Principi also asked the subcommittee to put off consideration of a compensation bill. The bill would award service-connected disability payments to Vietnam War veterans who contend they suffer due to exposure from one of four kinds of cancer or from a skin disease known as chloracne.

The bill would also pave the way to compensation for other ailments as the evidence comes in.

Principi asked that the law be held in abeyance until the VA comes up with final regulations Oct. 1 on who should be compensated and for what diseases. Those regulations depend in part on the recommendations of VA's Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards, a 15-member panel of scientists and lay persons.

The committee meets later this month.

Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward J. Derwinski has appointed his personal adviser on the Agent Orange issue, retired Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, to fill a vacancy on the committee. Zumwalt ordered spraying of Agent Orange during Vietnam and also lost a son who served in Vietnam to cancer.

"We have, I believe, more than demonstrated our good faith," Principi said, saying the VA set its course a year ago when it decided against appealing a federal judge's order that it draft new Agent Orange regulations.

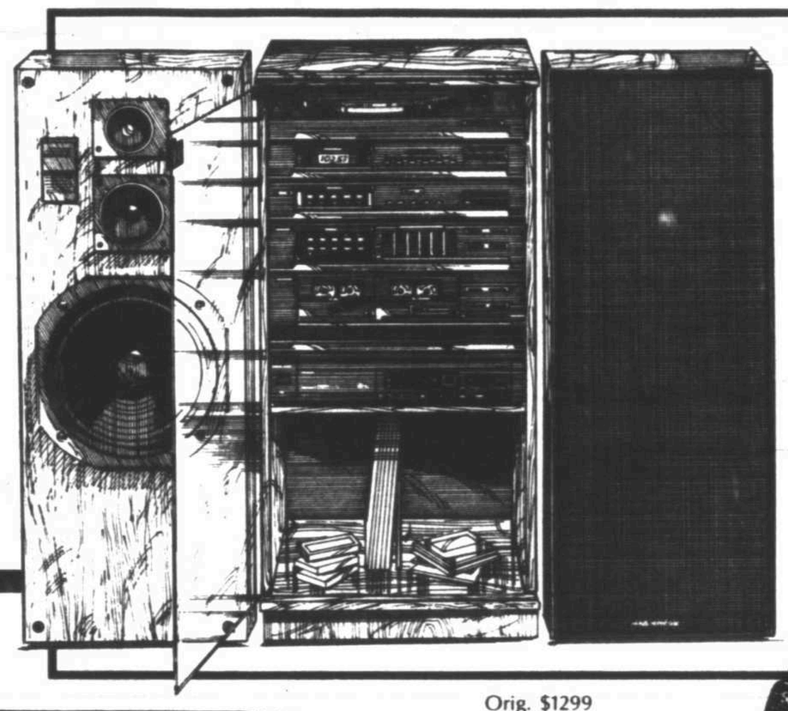

But the House sponsor of the compensation bill, Rep. Lane Evans, D-Ill., suggested the VA was trying to further postpone delivering benefits to veterans. There is no guarantee the department will decide to award compensation in its final rules.

"I think you are proceeding on a good-faith basis, but I believe the veterans who suffer from Agent Orange can't wait," he said.

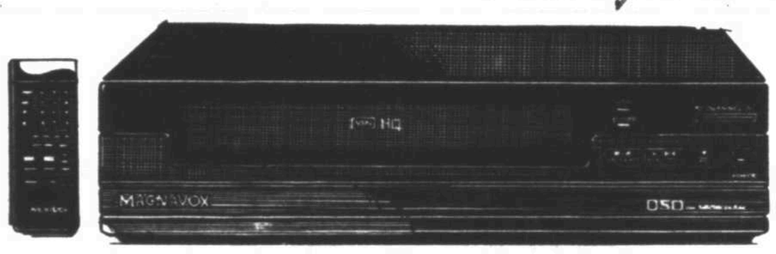

Evans' bill would compensate exposed veterans who suffer from non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, soft-tissue sarcoma, melanoma, and basal cell carcinoma, as well as chloracne. The measure is expected to cost $89 million a year.

About 35,000 veterans have filed claims asserting a connection between exposure to Agent Orange and a host of ailments. Only a handful of benefits have been granted, for those suffering chloracne.

Midland skaters need to organize

When skateboarding became a Class C misdemeanor in three city parks Tuesday, Midland City Council had disappointed a number of the city's young people and their parents who obviously believed the city was being too harsh with the youngsters.

But that isn't the case if you consider the council's — and the taxpayers' — point of view. In fact, council members were justified in passing the ordinance making it a crime to ride a skateboard in Dennis the Menace Park, Centennial Plaza and Volunteer Park. The maximum fine for those violating the ordinance — $500 — acknowledges the seriousness the council attaches to the damage done by skateboarders at the three parks and their harassment of other park users.

As in other similar situations, however, the park visitors who've been "terrorized" by the skateboarders likely have only encountered the bad apples in the skateboarding barrel. Other skateboarders say they enjoy the activity, but have no place to ride their boards if the city parks are off-limits.

Other park users say the boarders they've encountered don't bother them and they feel the boarders should have the right to use the parks.

The council was properly looking out for the best interests of the taxpayers and other park users when it passed the ordinance, but that doesn't resolve the dilemma for the skateboarders.

The situation is not unlike past activities that have found disfavor with the public. Bicycling and motorcycling are two good examples of activities that suffered under an image problem until they were understood and respected. Skateboarding can make the same transition in Midland with a little hard work on the part of those who want a place to ride their boards.

George Logan, parks and recreation director and a former skateboarder himself, notes the city did not ban skateboarding in all city parks and that his staff is actually encouraging skateboarders to use the other city parks.

The city, he noted, only wants to stop the senseless and costly destruction of public property in the three named parks.

A number of parents apparently believe the city should construct a skateboarding park for the youngsters and Logan says the city is willing to talk with the skateboarders about that and other possibilities if they will organize and present their proposal to the city council.

The city certainly should attempt to meet the recreational needs of as many of its citizens as possible, but it has concerns, too — damage done in parks, insurance liability costs, the number of individuals who would be using the facility and so forth. Logan says the city would be happy to discuss an arrangement with a skateboarding organization that would help the city meet costs the way other organizations, such as Little League, do currently.

The skateboarders have an alternative now. They should pursue it to keep their boards rolling.

State colleges offering new tags

The State of Texas has come up with an excellent method providing scholarship money for state-supported universities — selling license plates.

For a mere $30, University of Houston and other state school graduates and supporters can promote their schools as well as fund scholarships at the universities. The new tags, which will start appearing on vehicles this month, will carry the logos and names of state schools on the left side and bottom of the plates.

The University of Houston Alumni Organization is now taking orders for the new red-lettered tags, which will be ready in July. Texas A&M University's maroon-lettered plates will be the first on our highways, starting this month. The availability date of the University of Texas tag, which will carry an orange UT tower on the left side, will be announced when university officials approve the plate design.

Drug assassinations must not be tolerated

A gruesome kind of presidential primary is under way in Colombia that ought not to be endured or tolerated by civilized man. The "voters" are killers out to subvert democracy and insulate their drug-running from control.

The arrogance and the immorality of these people would not be believed but for the fact that they strike again and again, most recently in a Colombian jetliner where a presidential candidate was assassinated in flight. ...

Carlos Pizzaro is the third Colombia presidential candidate to be slain during the campaign leading up to the May 27 election. In nine months the drug thugs also have killed more than 230 judges, politicians, policemen, soldiers, newspaper employees and others in an orgy of intimidation.

Never mind that Pizzaro was the former head of a notorious movement of leftist guerrillas who have done a substantial amount of terrorizing over the years. He was, to some extent, being politically repatriated.

Pizzaro only seven weeks ago had led his leftist followers into the political system, completing a peace settlement with the government on March 8. In a dramatic ceremony, members of his April 19 Movement guerrilla group surrendered their weapons to international observers.

Drug traffickers say candidates from both the conservative and liberal parties in Colombia are marked men.

Officials of the embattled nation say they will not call off the May 27 election. We hope they hold firm. The U.S. must not yield to the demands of terrorists who take hostages. For the sake of democracy, the Colombians deserve all the support we can give them.

Guidelines exist in writing to Chinese

WASHINGTON — Christian teachers in China have developed an elaborate system for protecting their students, converts and themselves since the murderous communist crackdown in Tiananmen Square. Their warnings are a poignant reminder of how something as simple as a letter from a friend can be a precious and dangerous gift.

Last June, the Chinese army killed hundreds of students who were demonstrating for democracy and other reforms in the Beijing dictatorship.

American Christian teachers became especially at risk because both their religion and their national tradition espouse free thought and action, and oppose totalitarianism.

To minimize government religious repression, an organization of 150 Christian teachers in China, the English Language Institute/China, based in San Dimas, Calif., recently circulated guidelines to family and friends of ELIC teachers. The guidelines warn letter writers to steer clear of pitfalls.

With slight modifications, the warnings could apply to anyone with a pen pal in China. For one thing, the guidelines urge that writers do not mention any Chinese friends by name.

For another, "those who teach in China give up many 'rights,' among them the right to privacy in correspondence." Letters should not "criticize the government in any way" lest they endanger the recipient.

Although the ELIC's teachers "are not missionaries in the conventional sense," the instructions warn, the people who write to them should not mention missions, evangelism or passing out Bibles, nor should they send "prayer letters, tracts, church bulletins ... etc."

Letters should not be on church stationery, and if sermon tapes are mailed, they should "be labeled only with the speaker's name," not with a religious title such as reverend. All letters should not be just sealed, but taped shut too.

Because young Chinese Christians have been active among the students seeking democracy, the guidelines warn letter writers not to "in any way identify Chinese people who might be interested in Christianity."

The guidelines go on to urge that, within these limitations, teachers in China need the encouragement of letters. "Mail is cherished. ... Even if you can't say all you'd like to, please do write," the ELIC urges.

Within China itself, teachers have developed a system of having their letters hand carried out to Hong Kong or other free countries. One such letter that came into our hands is labeled, "HAND CARRIED LETTER. Please do not publish or post or make reference to this letter in future correspondence."

We won't endanger the writer by quoting from the letter, other than to say it bears eloquent witness that bravery, ingenuity and idealism are alive and well in China.

ON A BETTER NOTE — Intelligence sources estimate that in the Soviet Union, those who believe in God still vastly outnumber the atheists and agnostics. Yet for 70 years, the believers have been persecuted by the non-believers. Now Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is taking steps to stop the persecution.

The churches are filling up. Half of the babies in rural areas are now baptized. Yet caution is still the byword. Soviet leaders have tolerated religion in the past, only to brutally crush it later.

During our visit to the Soviet Union last year, one young Christian in Leningrad confided that nearly all of his university friends were secret believers. But they didn't go near a church or display any outward signs of their faith. They feared that a tiny cross would be put next to their names in the registration books.

In the past, that system of labeling prevented Christians from getting decent jobs.

Meanwhile, there is one elderly woman in southern Russia who has faithfully attended church for years. She is the mother of Mikhail Gorbachev.

Andrew Young should concentrate on crime

ATLANTA — Andrew Young, the black Democrat trying to become governor, turns a rhetorical corner in his talk to a roomful of Democrats who are shopping for a gubernatorial nominee and comes down hard on an issue he hopes will be salient: pecans. Increased exports of. And carpets, chickens, soybeans, textiles.

Will

As governor, he says, he will expand exports, as he did during two terms as Atlanta's mayor. And he hopes that before Election Day he can bask in the glow of a $4 billion import: the 1996 Olympic Games for Atlanta. Economics, that's what he wants to talk about.

But what he must talk about, because his rivals for the nomination do so incessantly, is crime. They say, for example, that Atlanta has a higher pickpocket rate than New York. Young should reply: Heck, most New Yorkers probably don't even report that crime. If nothing more horrible happens in a day, they sigh with relief.

What Young does say is a lot about punishment, including his support for capital punishment: "The state has got to have the right to put mad dogs to death." As mayor, "I went to too many (six) policemen's funerals."

And court rulings have reduced the likelihood of racially disparate impact of capital punishment. And there is a lot of "black-on-black crime, and a lot of black lawyers, judges and prosecutors saying something must be done." And although he does not think capital punishment deters, it seems to satisfy some desire for "retribution." Eighty percent of Georgians agree.

Young puts a novel wrinkle on the popular pastime of taking credit for victory in the Cold War: "When they come out from behind the Iron Curtain, they are singing 'We shall overcome,' a Georgia Baptist hymn." And he has a crime-related idea for getting special benefits for Georgia from the coming military build-down, just as it especially benefited from the decades of build-up (thanks to the late Sen. Richard Russell and the late Rep. Carl Vinson, chairmen of the armed services committees, and Russell's heir, Sen. Sam Nunn).

A lot of servicemen live in Georgia and are worried about their futures. Young notes that someone drawing both a military pension and a teacher's salary can live well here. An infusion of retired military men into Georgia schools would give a lot of young Georgians what they need most: male role models who are professional disciplinarians. And former military men who do not want to teach could run "boot camps" where youthful offenders could be incarcerated at an annual cost of $5,000 each instead of $30,000 in regular prisons.

Young, the former U.N. ambassador and former congressman, has crowded a lot of political history into his 58 years. He was with Martin Luther King early and at the end (on the motel balcony in Memphis). His endorsement of Jimmy Carter was important to Carter's presidential nomination. Today one senses in him a melancholy longing to change the subject, to talk about pecans, carpets — anything but race.

But crime keeps race on Georgia's mind, as on the minds of many other places. This is not to say that concern about crime is just sublimated racism. Fear is a fact; so is government's frequent failure to secure, most frequently for blacks, domestic tranquility.

Young, the cosmopolitan diplomat and big-city mayor, rose from Georgia's black religious culture, which is primarily rural. Now he must overcome not only resistance based on race but also overlapping, reinforcing resistance deriving from dislike of Atlanta. Georgia, with a population less than one-third black, has not elected a Republican governor in 122 years, since Reconstruction. Young's rivals benefit from the theory that a black Atlantan as nominee would mean a Republican governor.

He continues in the sedate, sometimes plodding vanguard of black America's long march through the institutions of American politics. The point of the heroic period of his life — the protests, the civil disobedience, the voter-registration campaigns and the rest — was to bring about for blacks the blessed politics of banality, the day when blacks and whites could compete in elections that turn on the question of who can best promote pecans.

Funeral held for first of school's three apparent suicide victims

SHERIDAN, Ark. (AP) — Mourners of three teen-agers who killed themselves were told at the first victim's funeral Wednesday that it was too late to bring him back, but going with him was "still our choice."

Thomas Smith, 17, was the first of three suicides among students at Sheridan High School in two days, and counselors for their classmates were on 24-hour call. About 80 students missed classes Wednesday, about 30 more than usual, school officials said.

Some of the absentees were among about 250 people packed into the Bowie Funeral Home chapel to hear the Rev. Dennis Moon urge them to cling to God as they grieved over Smith's death.

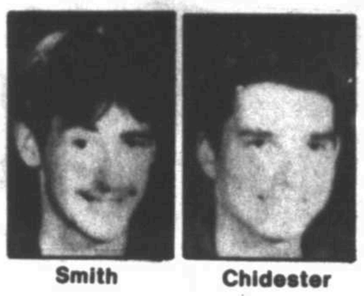

"Bringing back Tommy is beyond our control, but going with him ... is still our choice," said Moon during the 20-minute service.

"I believe we need to begin to stop asking the unanswerable question, 'Why,?' and we need to begin to ask the answerable question, 'What is it God would want us to do?' " said Moon, of the Landmark Baptist Chruch.

On Monday, Smith stood in front of his American history class, told a female classmate, "I love you," pulled a gun out of his pants and shot himself.

Later that day, Thomas Chidester, 19, of the Grapevine community, a friend of Smith's, died of a gunshot wound. He left a note that said "I can't go on any longer," according to police.

On Tuesday, the body of Jerry Paul McCool, a 17-year-old sophomore, was discovered in his home by his father. McCool, who also had been shot, knew Smith and Chidester, but wasn't close with them, officials said.

Smith Chidester

All three deaths were ruled suicides, said Grant County Sheriff Cary Clark.

In addition to those deaths, a 17-year-old classmate shot himself to death March 28. And three other county residents — ages 22, 40, and 82 — have killed themselves since Jan. 23.

Hours after the latest shooting, parents and students packed the school's 1,000-seat auditorium to discuss the suicides. Some held hands. Some cried.

School Superintendent David Robinson said students met with counselors in group sessions and one-on-one Wednesday.

"Obviously school, as such, is not occurring at the moment," Robinson said. "Actually, it's more like a massive counseling session."

Some said the atmosphere was less somber at the school Wednesday than earlier in the week.

Lisa Deal, 18, a senior and president of the student council, said even though the mood had improved, the community had a long way to go to get over the series of deaths.

"It's scary knowing your friends ... would go to these extremes," she said.

Bush, Lithuania prime minister to meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene will plead the cause of Lithuanian independence today to President Bush whose failure to penalize Moscow for an economic blockade was decried by Lithuania's president as a second "Munich."

"The act of independence ... is untouchable," Mrs. Prunskiene said Tuesday as she began her North American swing in Toronto, Canada.

Still, the prime minister's trip comes as Lithuanian leaders signal a willingness to slow the independence drive in exchange for an easing of the Kremlin's punishing economic blockade.

In a letter to West German and French leaders, outlined Wednesday to the parliament in Vilnius, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis proposed that Western countries play a role in proposed negotiations with Moscow.

Landsbergis, in a separate letter released by Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., also said that "the danger of violence or provocations of some sort remains very real" in his republic and that shortages of consumer goods "will eventually lead to unrest in large segments of the population."

■ Related story/8B

Bush could help by heeding Congress' call for diplomatic relations with Lithuania, he wrote. "If this is still not possible at the present moment, when will it become possible? Under what conditions?"

Bush, who has agreed to a low-key, non-official meeting with Mrs. Prunskiene today, has urged the Soviets and the Lithuanians to open a dialogue to resolve their differences.

Bush on Wednesday proposed easing restrictions on sales of sophisticated computers and other high-tech products to the Soviet Union and East Bloc. Just last week Bush decided to let trade talks with the Soviets proceed despite the crackdown on Lithuania.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater defended the timing of the latest move, saying it was dictated by the changes in Eastern Europe as well as the Soviet Union, as well as pressure from America's allies.

He said Bush remains "very concerned" about the Lithuanian crisis. The U.S.-Soviet trade talks "are progressing," Fitzwater said, "but it's still an open question."

On Tuesday Fitzwater said Bush was meeting with Mrs. Prunskiene not as prime minister of an independent Lithuania but rather as "an acknowledged and freely elected representative of the Lithuanian people."

Mrs. Prunskiene, who arrived Wednesday evening in Washington, is also scheduled to meet with congressional leaders and with ranking State Department officials and to testify at a public hearing of the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Helsinki Commission.

Bush has declined to recognize the republic's independence before it achieves control over its territory and institutions.

Bush has also deferred a decision on sanctions against the Kremlin in the Lithuanian dispute in order to avoid both increasing the political pressure on Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and complicating the prospect for talks.

Lithuanian President Landsbergis initially called Bush's decision a political "Munich," a disparaging comparison to the bid by Britain and France in 1938 to appease Nazi Germany at the expense of Czechoslovakia.

Landsbergis told the Lithuanian parliament on Wednesday that he was pleased Bush would meet with Mrs. Prunskiene and added:

"We hope that Mrs. Prunskiene will more completely inform President Bush about the situation in Lithuania in the days of blockade."

Gorbachev has declared the March 11 declaration of independence by Lithuania's parliament invalid and illegal under the Soviet Constitution and has said there can be no dialogue until it is rescinded.

In Toronto on Tuesday, Mrs. Prunskiene said that the cities of Moscow and Leningrad have agreed to help Lithuania ease the pressure of the Soviet embargo.

She did not say exactly what assistance was offered. But Lithuania sent a delegation to Leningrad last week to explore a possible direct exchange of goods either for hard currency or barter.

TRC investigating water wells

The railroad commission is trying to determine if high chloride levels in the wells are due to oil-well contamination.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The Texas Railroad Commission is investigating the possibility that groundwater contamination in south Midland County may be associated with area oil wells, commission officials confirmed Wednesday.

High chloride levels in some water wells, revealed last week by Texas Water Commission tests, may be associated with a 20-year-old contamination problem in the area, officials added.

TWC tests revealed "extremely high" chloride levels in three county wells. TWC District Manager William Lockey said Tuesday that chloride contamination is often associated with oilfield processes.

TWC tests showed that the three wells contained between 1,315 and 2,351 parts per million of chlorides. The state-recommended maximum chloride level for drinking water is 300 parts per million.

The TWC test area is south of Interstate 20 and north of West County Road 125 between Farm to Market Road 1369 and Rankin Highway.

Ronald Strong, railroad commission district director, said his office began sampling wells in the same vicinity in April in response to residents' requests.

Strong said the commission, which regulates Texas' petroleum industry, wants to determine whether area contamination is oilfield related.

The commission investigation does not stem from TWC intervention, Strong said.

He said water wells will be tested for crude oil, chlorides and other chemicals which might indicate oilfield contamination. He said 19 wells have been sampled so far, and test results should be available in five to six weeks.

Strong said if oilfield contamination is found, the commission will try to find the source.

However, he said high chloride levels in some wells might be remnants of contamination initially discovered in the early 1970s.

"There was contamination noted out there at that time" which was oilfield related, Strong said.

Hank Krusekopf, railroad commission assistant district director, said the earlier contamination "plume" has since migrated through the Midland County water table. The contamination may be affecting wells other than those initially affected, he said.

"We've been monitoring that for 18 years," Krusekopf said of south Midland County groundwater. "It was either 1971 or 1972 when we first went down there. It's not any worse now than it ever was. In fact, some of it has gotten better."

Krusekopf said no blame was assigned in the earlier contamination case.

"It's one of those things where you can't identify anybody," he said. "I don't think there was a particular action at that time."

Strong said unless evidence of more recent contamination is found and a responsible party is charged, little can be done to alleviate the problem.

"You've got two choices in a case like that," he said. "You can wait for this saltwater plume to dissipate itself out...or you can drain the entire aquifer at a cost to the taxpayer of lord only knows what kind of money."

Strong said the contamination was probably the result of disposing oilfield brines in open pits, which was legal in Texas prior to 1968.

Strong said his office has not coordinated its testing efforts with those of the TWC. Railroad commission representatives will "compare notes" with TWC officials this week, he said.

TWC officials in charge of Midland County water testing were out of their office Wednesday and could not be reached for comment.

Krusekopf said the only oil companies with wells in the Railroad Commission's test area are Parker & Parsley and MWJ Producing Co. Inc.

John Schlagal, production superintendent for MWJ, said he doubted that his company is responsible for water contamination in Midland County.

"Those (oil) wells have been there for a long time," he said. "We didn't drill those wells, we just purchased them."

Schlagal added that he was not aware of the Railroad Commission investigation.

Parker & Parsley spokesman Danny Kellum said his company has been cooperating with the investigation.

"We've checked our wellheads out there and we haven't discovered any type of problem," said Kellum. "We do take precautions and the necessary steps to see that the fresh water supply is protected."

Kellum said he didn't think his company is responsible for any groundwater contamination. He suggested that TWC officials were "guessing" when they said high chloride levels in some wells might be due to oilfield processes.

"A high chloride count in a private water well — that's West Texas water," Kellum said.

Turnout for local elections likely to be very small

A lack of contested races may have contributed to voter apathy, while turnout in Ector County, which has nine contested races, is expected to be higher.

By Brenda Masengill
Staff Writer

Midland County Election Administrator Bettye Calvert doesn't have a crystal ball, but if the results of absentee balloting are any indication, "I don't think we'll have more than 2,000 voters (at the polls) on May 5."

Two weeks of absentee balloting ended Tuesday, with 343 Midlanders casting a ballot in person and 37 opting for a mail-in ballot, which features candidates for Midland City Council, school board, hospital district and junior college district.

There are only three contested races in Midland. In addition, one contested race will be held for the Greenwood Independent School District board of trustees.

Voting at polling sites throughout the city and in the Greenwood Independent School District will begin at 7 a.m. Saturday and continue until 7 p.m.

Mrs. Calvert reminded voters than some precincts have been combined for Saturday's election, "which may change the polling place that they've become accustomed to." Voters may call Calvert's office at 688-1222 to confirm polling locations.

In Ector County, meanwhile, 3,238 people voted absentee in person by the deadline, while 128 voted absentee by mail. Ector voters also will select candidates for City Council, school board, hospital district and junior college district.

According to Ector election officials, high voter interest can be attributed to nine contested races, including a mayoral race, as well as a sales tax question on Saturday's ballot. Ector County Hospital District residents will be asked to adopt a 1 percent sales tax (or one cent per dollar) for use by the district.

In Midland, all city residents are eligible to cast a ballot for mayor. Incumbent Carroll M. Thomas is the only declared candidate. Robert L. Monaghan is seeking re-election to the District 3 position on the Midland City Council, while Tom Johnston and Mary Kniffen will vie for the District 4 slot on the board.

Minister returns to hometown to spiritually strengthen Stanton

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

STANTON — A bid to build a "spiritually stronger Stanton" is being launched this week "to encourage family Bible reading and family Bible study," said James A. Johnson, a Lubbock minister-professor.

Johnson has returned to Stanton, his hometown, for a year of preaching.

The week's event is being carried out through a Friday night community-wide service and a free 33-page workbook that features inspirational messages from President Bush, radio commentator Paul Harvey and biblical lessons.

The 7 p.m. service in Shelburne City Park will feature free homemade ice cream, gospel singing by The Psalms 4 quartet from Amarillo, devotionals and some "semi-preaching" by Johnson.

Johnson, a 33-year Stanton native and an associate professor, took a sabbatical from Lubbock Christian College to preach to the Stanton Downtown Church of Christ congregation. He is chairman of the college's communications department and has been preaching since age 19.

The "spiritually stronger" project started by Johnson is being promoted by his congregation, Baptist and Methodist church-go-

Lawmakers weigh six school finance plans

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lawmakers Wednesday were sifting through no less than six competing school finance plans, including one from Gov. Bill Clements, as they started a third consecutive special session on the issue with apparent new urgency.

A state district judge Tuesday gave Clements and the Legislature until June 1 to devise a school finance compromise or the problem would be turned over to the court for resolution.

One key House member, Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and Appropriations Committee chairman, acknowledged the threat of court intervention puts pressure on conservative and Republican forces to find compromise.

A court-devised plan would likely take a "Robin Hood" approach, in which money previously in-

Hadacol Corner's no longer with us, but Midkiff's still here

MIDKIFF — For sure, Midkiff isn't exactly what it once was — Hadacol Corner. But it's close.

Todd

In the 1950s, Hadacol Corner was a dusty, booming, bustling spot in the Spraberry Oil Field southeast of Midland.

"They had to call it something," Midkiff businessman Wiley Bob Whisman said of the former name of the Upton County community that almost borders Glasscock, Midland and Reagan counties.

Today, they call Hadacol Corner "Midkiff," the name of a pioneer ranching and farming clan.

And today Midkiff, a community of farmers, ranchers and oilfield hands, is a bit on the weary but somewhat on the bright side. Oil-field traffic is slow, which is not news. But in some quarters, it is picking up.

"Midkiff's booming!" Whisman just about shouted in his comfortably-cluttered old Humble service station.

Well, it's not really boom-booming. Just almost.

Parker & Parsley, the Midland petroleum exploration-production company, has "four rigs running," Whisman said.

So, oil-field traffic is picking up.

"Look at the traffic," he said.

Oil-field trucks and farm-ranch pickups barrel on by the station. Some stop. Caliche for pads for rig locations is being hauled in "fast and furious," Whisman noted. And oil-field pipe is being shipped in just in case the holes aren't dry, and the "black gold" from way more than a mile within the bowels of the Earth starts moving upward and gushing.

Whisman is holding out for hope.

"My business is way down," he lamented.

He and his father, P.A. Whisman, bought the old grocery store here in 1954 and took over the filling station in 1961. Bob Whisman tends the station. And his wife, Sarah, runs the grocery store mostly from her rocking chair because it's a comfortable place from which to wait on folks and to rock a grandchild to sleep.

Back in the mid-century boom days, Whisman "made at least three trips to town (Midland) a week, maybe seven trips, to get supplies." In today's slow times, he comes to town about once "every other week."

The Whisman corner service station dates back to Hadacol days, abounds with old tractor, truck and car tires, sports a rambling pile of ram skulls and horns, and holds assorted things somewhere between usable and discardable.

And it's a friendly place:

"All our visitors bring happiness, some by coming, some by going," proclaims a wall sign in Whisman's office.

Many pass by. Many stop.

The other day, Whisman recalled, an "old boy" who happened by asked T.O. Midkiff where a farm road was "going" from Midkiff.

Midkiff, a hefty rancher-farmer rarely without comment, had a answer: "Wherever you want it to go."

"You can nearly go everywhere in the world from right here," said Midkiff, who, at 55, is not exactly an old-timer.

"Somebody the other day said I was 'over the hill,' " Midkiff said as if priming a joke. "I said, 'How can I be over the hill when I don't recall ever being on the top?' "

But he's considering bailing out of the farming business.

"I'm trying to get rid of the farm," he said. "It takes more money to operate than the ranch, and the cash flow is flowing the wrong way."

Midkiff, the man, seems satisfied to stay put in the community, which is built on more than the hope and faith represented in its three churches.

"Once again," he said, "we hope (the oil boom returns). We just need more money and more rains and more stuff."

SESSION: Clements wants funds diverted tended for wealthy districts would be redirected to poorer ones.

The district judge who made the ruling, Judge Scott McCown of Travis County, said the court even could garnish June, July and August state aid payments and devote them to the school equity cause during the next fiscal year.

Tuesday, Clements vetoed a plan that both houses of the Legislature had approved during the last special session, which ended on Tuesday.

The plan would have sent $555 million to school districts next school year but relied on a half-cent hike in the state sales tax base to go into effect, an idea that Clements opposed.

The plan the governor advanced Wednesday calls for $250 million in additional education spending next school year and relies on a series of monetary diversions in the state budget to realize its end.

The budgetary measures, most of which have been laid out before, include $57 million garnered from money previously intended to pay for Capitol restoration and $40 million from an increase in the fee insurance companies pay for driving record checks.

The plan requires $3.75 billion in new education spending during the four years after its first year in effect, but information provided by Clements' office did not say how that money would be found.

The legislation, which will be filed in the House by Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, also contains accountability measures such as annual campus reports to parents and taxpayers and exemptions from regulations for schools deemed "exemplary."

While the plan has no Senate sponsor as yet, Clements' chief of staff, Mike Toomey, will detail its provisions before the Senate Education Committee this morning.

Other proposals that are coming up for hearings either before the Senate Education Committee or the House Public Education Committee include:

■ Senate Bill 1, the $555 million compromise plan that was approved by House and Senate members at the end of the last session. "It's a bill that every education group in the state has signed off on," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and sponsor of the bill.

■ House Bill 1, the original House measure sponsored this past session by Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice and chairman of the House Public Education Committee. The bill was introduced Wednesday with a couple of modifications from its original state, including a formula alteration in favor of large, urban districts.

■ A plan supported by about 30 Republicans and conservative Democrats in the House. Pegged at about $400 million, the proposal ultimately would do away with special provisions in current law giving more money to large urban school districts, said one proponent, Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City.

■ The Luna-Uribe plan, which originally was advanced prior to the Legislature's first special session on education, which started Feb. 27. Sponsored by Rep. Greg Luna, D-San Antonio, and Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsvillle, the plan calls for consolidation of districts into county-wide tax bases for for taxing purposes only.

■ A plan sponsored by Rep. Robert McFarland, R-Arlington, and developed by Mark Yudoff, the dean of the University of Texas School of Law. Spending $286 million in its first year, the plan attempts to reach equity over a longer, seven-year time span than other bills.

Except for Clements' plan, none of the proposals address the manner in which the state should raise money to pay for additional education expenses.

Four injured in four-car mishap

Staff Report

A four-car accident near the intersection of Highway 191 and Loop 250 sent four people to the hospital Wednesday night, police and hospital officials said.

The accident occurred about 7:30 p.m. Wednesday when a pickup truck and an Oldsmobile sedan collided head-on, witnesses at the scene said.

Witnesses said the truck was headed the wrong direction on eastbound 191 when it collided with the car, which was stopped at the intersection traffic light.

Two cars behind the one initially struck were damaged in the resulting chain reaction, witnesses said.

Celia Glast, 44, the driver of the Oldsmobile, was in fair condition Wednesday night in the intensive care unit at Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesperson said. Her two daughters, passengers in the Oldsmobile, were treated and released, the spokesperson said. The daughters' ages were listed as 10 and 15.

The driver of the truck, whose identity was unknown at press time, also was treated and released, officials said.

Police did not immediately issue any citations in the accident pending an investigation, an officer at the scene said.

Odessa school wins PTA award

AUSTIN (AP) — A reading program at Blanton Elementary School in Odessa has won a monthly award co-sponsored by the Texas PTA.

During the April program, which was built around the 50th anniversary of the "Wizard of Oz" motion picture, students at Blanton read almost 15,000 books.

The county library children's department reported its circulation increased from 350 books a day to 750 a day, the PTA said.

Nearly 100 guest readers participated in the promotion to "Follow the Yellow Brick Road to Reading Fun," including parents, grandparents, school administrators, politicians and media and sports personalities.

Kite-making class for children set for Museum of Southwest

Staff Report

A kite-making class for children age 5 and up will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

At the same time, Dr. Bill Lockhard will give a free lecture for adults on "An Art Form: Kites."

The class for children, entitled "No Strings Attached," will be taught by Lisa Bedford in the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum classroom. The exhibition of kites, "To Catch the Wind," will provide a background for the class.

Fee for the class is $5 for museum members and $7.50 for nonmembers.

Lockhart, professor emeritus from Texas Tech University's art department, has recently returned from a kite festival in China. Numerous foreign and American kite festivals provide background for his lecture. He has won many awards in kite design competitions in such areas as novelty, beauty, flat and bowed.

Cynthia Corley, educator at the museum, calls May 5 an appropriate date for kite programs as kites are traditionally flown on that day in Japan to ensure the success of a male child.

The kite activities at the museum are a part of Celebration of the Arts and of the museum's Member Appreciation Month. Members who bring non-members to special activities during May are admitted free. Non-members who buy a membership also are admitted free. Non-members buying a ticket to these activities may apply the ticket cost to a membership purchased before July 1.

Balloting for the Midland County Hospital District features Richard K. Dulaney seeking the District 4 spot, while Thomas M. Bruner is the only hopeful for the District 7 post. There is no declared candidate for the District 3 position, which could be filled by a write-in.

In Odessa, meanwhile, Lorraine Bonner and Peter A. Figert will challenge for the mayoral post.

Incumbent City Councilman Jaime Salazar Rodriguez will take on Jo Ann Davenport for the District 1 position, while James B. "Jimmy" Goates is unopposed for District 2 on the city panel. In the District 3 race, Fred J. Crawford also is unchallenged.

In Ector County school board races, Nick Fowler and incumbent George E. "Buddy" West will vie for Precinct 2, Position 2, while John Martin Patterson and incumbent Jim Nelson will square off for trustee-at-large, Position 6.

STANTON: Bible center of event

ers, members of the Stanton Fellowship of Christian Athletes, businesses and others.

"My personal soapbox is to encourage families to study the Bible," said Johnson. He cited the "need for Bible study" to help heal a society that is crippled by "disintegrating families" — divorce and family breakups.

Johnson said he prepared the workbook with Stanton in mind. The farming-ranching community has about 500 families. The copyrighted workbook is "not something that has been mass marketed."

The workbook quotes President Bush, who proclaimed 1990 as the International Year of Bible Reading.

"The Bible has had a critical impact upon the development of Western civilization," the president said earlier this year. "Western literature, art, and music are filled with images and ideas that can be traced to its pages. More important, our moral tradition has been shaped by the laws and teachings it contains."

The workbook cites one of Harvey's "favorite scriptures," John 3:16.

In taking a year's leave from teaching, Johnson said he was invited to return to Stanton, where his father, Elimore Johnson, had ministered for 22 years and where James Johnson spent much of his early boyhood.

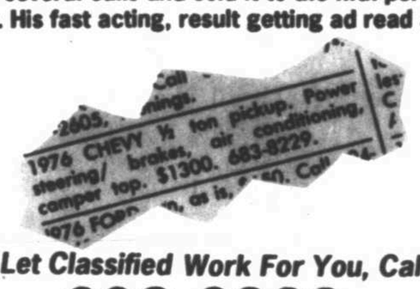

He was invited to serve the church where his father had preached and to live in the church parsonage with his wife, Lesa, and their children, Jonathan, 9, and Angela, 7.

"It was hard to say 'no,'" Johnson reflected, particularly to older church people who had "helped raise me and spank me."

White racists get 4 to 9 years in prison for crimes

DALLAS (AP) — Five white supremacists convicted under a new federal crackdown on hate crimes were sentenced Wednesday to jail terms ranging from four to nine years for conspiring to violate the civil rights of minorities.

The sentences will put other hate groups on notice that racial crimes carry a heavy penalty, said the lead prosecutor in the case against the five members of the Confederate Hammerskins.

"The message today was sent by a federal district court judge in the form of some very substantial sentences," said Barry Kowalski, a prosecutor with the U.S. Justice Department's civil rights division.

An all-white jury found the skinheads guilty March 1 of defacing a synagogue and Jewish community center in 1988 and chasing blacks and Hispanics from Robert E. Lee Park in Dallas that same year.

Former Confederate Hammerskins had testified the group planned to pump cyanide gas into Temple Shalom. Defense attorneys said the group intended only to cut an air-conditioning unit hose, depriving the temple of cool air.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders sentenced Jon Lance Jordan, 19, of Garland, to eight years, five months in prison and Daniel Alvis Wood, 20, of Dallas, to nine years, six months. They were both convicted on two counts of conspiring to violate the civil rights of minorities and one count of firearms violations.

The other three were convicted of two counts of conspiring to violate the civil rights of minorities.

Sean Christian Tarrant, 20, of Dallas, got a nine-year term. Michael Lewis Lawrence, 22, of Tulsa, Okla., was sentenced to four years, nine months while Christopher Barry Greer, 25, of Irving, was sentenced to six years, six months.

The men could have faced up to 10 years in prison and fines of $250,000 on each count.

Sanders emphasized he was not sentencing the so-called "skinheads" for their beliefs, but rather for endangering the community.

Skinheads, characterized by their closely shaven heads, generally espouse a philosophy of intolerance against Jews, blacks, Hispanics and homosexuals.

Only Wood appeared in court Wednesday with his head shaved.

Sanders ordered each to pay restitution to the synagogue and Jewish community center. Each defendant was ordered to pay $877, except for Jordan, who was ordered to pay $4,385.

The judge also ordered three years' supervised probation for each of the five following their release from prison.

Wood was previously sentenced by a state court to 10 years in prison and fined $5,000 for spraying swastikas and anti-Semitic slogans on the synagogue. His federal sentence will run concurrently with the state sentence, Sanders said.

Defense attorneys appealed for leniency, citing the youth of the men and their family backgrounds. Several are married and have children.

"It's a good and a bad day," said Rabbi Kenneth Roseman of Temple Shalom. "It's a bad day we have to do this kind of thing. It's a good day the system worked."

Roseman, who watched the sentencing with a concentration camp survivor, praised Sanders for his "remarkable" handling of the case.

Roseman and Kowalski noted Sanders imposed longer prison terms in each case than recommended by federal sentencing guidelines.

Mark Briskman, who monitored the trial for the Anti-Defamation League, said he was "exceptionally pleased with the sentences."

"Judge Sanders made a very clear and strong statement," he said. "It was a substantial sentence. Don't forget under federal sentencing, the defendants will serve all of the time they have been sentenced to."

Briskman called it a "heartbreaking story" that five young men will spend a portion of their youth in prison.

House OKs 5-year plan for accelerator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to build the $7.4 billion superconducting super collider after first affirming a $5 billion limit on the federal government's share of the giant physics project.

The bill, approved 309-109 and sent to the Senate, allows the Department of Energy to build the particle accelerator. It would be the world's largest scientific instrument, on 17,000 acres at Waxahachie, south of Dallas.

Actual spending on the project would have to be approved later as part of Congress' annual appropriations process.

"That's just absolutely super news," said Waxahachie Mayor James Self.

"I had really thought that it would but you never really know until it's done. I have just always felt that when the real crunch time came that the scientific benefits would outweigh any of the negative aspects of the project."

Under the legislation approved Wednesday, costs above $5 billion would be left to Texas, which has pledged $1 billion, and other sources, including foreign investors. The $5 billion federal limit was amended several times to assure the cap's firmness.

One of the amendments struck a provision to refund Texas' investment if DOE canceled the project before October 1995.

Also added to the bill were provisions that require the DOE to certify the project can be completed without exceeding the cap, and change the effective date of the cap to include federal money already spent on the super collider.

But Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, said, "The main thing is the House by 3-to-1 said 'We want the SSC.' "

One opponent of the measure, Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, said he was glad "tough safeguards" were added to the bill. Eckart said the strong vote Wednesday did not assure Congress would fully fund the project.

The collider is a 54-mile underground ring in which streams of protons guided by electromagnets would be hurled at almost the speed of light until they smash together and break into even smaller particles.

Scientists say the super collider would recreate the physical state in the moment after the Big Bang, which many believe was the beginning of the universe.

Policeman named as Lubbock chief

LUBBOCK (AP) — Lubbock city officials ended a three-month statewide search for a new police chief by hiring a 21-year veteran from their own department.

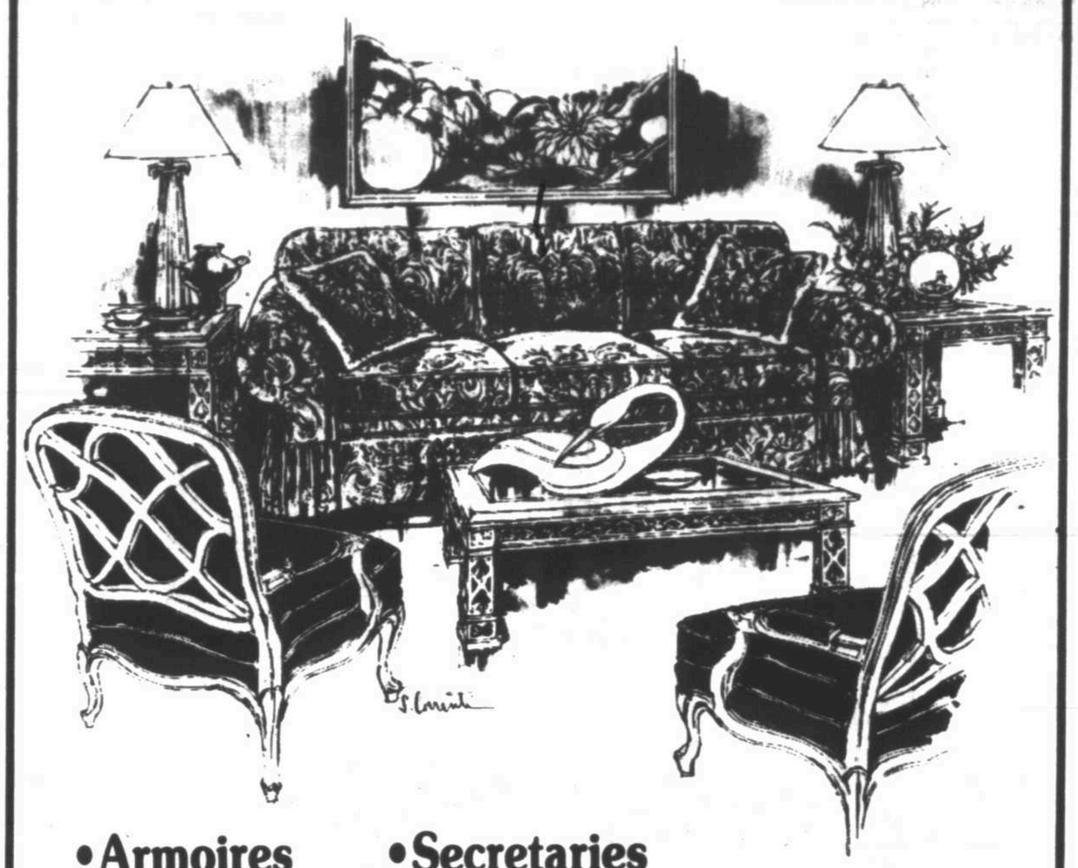

Don Bridgers, who headed a 189-member patrol division of the Lubbock Police Department before the promotion, will begin as chief May 12.

"I'm looking forward to being able to serve the community," said Bridgers. He had also been serving as acting assistant chief of police in since Thomas Nichols' resignation as chief in February.

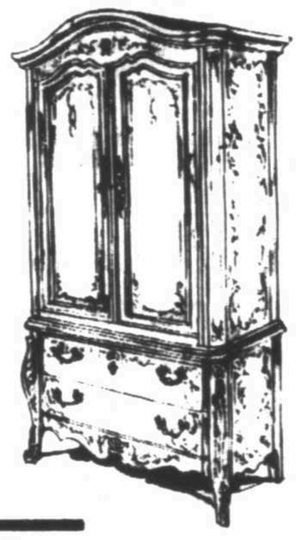

Bridgers was chosen from a pool of nearly 50 applications from across the state.

Bridgers joined the Lubbock police force in October 1968 as a patrolman. He was promoted to corporal in December 1974, sergeant in August 1975, lieutenant in November 1979 and captain in February 1982.

10% pay raise for City Employees	Main Campaign Priority	Economic diversification and sustained growth for Midland

Tom Johnston has been involved in making Midland a better place to live for over 10 years - from one of the original Christmas in April volunteers to Chairman of the City's Planning and Zoning Commission.

* Tom favors raising revenues instead of raising taxes. His opponent is on record as opposed to tax incentives which will attract new jobs and revenues. She even opposed the CAF in Midland!

* Tom favors the City Council's plan to raise all city employees to competitive levels over two years and keep from raising taxes. His opponent is on record as favoring a 10% pay raise now, with no idea of where the $2,000,000 it will take comes from. She says take it out of the pay of managers! Even if she fired all eight managers that wouldn't make a dent. Her only alternative is to raise taxes!

* As he demonstrated in 1986 when he led the fight to prevent drilling in District 4 neighborhoods, Tom Johnston has only one special interest group - the people of District 4.

If you agree we need an experienced, effective voice as District 4 Councilman, then really make your vote count. Vote FOR Tom Johnston on Saturday, May 5, 1990.

He's made a difference -
He'll make a difference for all of us.

They are good for merchandise or services only at Midland Park Mall.

Malls offer variety of gifts for all budgets

By Debra Lee Baldwin
Copley News Service

Mother's Day is right around the corner, and naturally you want to get Mom something special.

The ideal gift should show her you notice — and care about — her hobbies, interests, dreams and desires.

It should be an object of beauty rather than (strictly) utility. She may need a new garbage disposal, but this is no time to give her one!

All department stores and many specialty shops have shelves full of appropriate items. In fact, most have displays just for Mother's Day. All you have to do is browse, keeping Mom in mind.

Here's a sampling of what you'll find.

Cruise the shopping mall for stores that offer unusual, one-of-a-kind gifts — music boxes, for example. If she collects hippos, pigs, mice or carousel horses, shop here for the perfect addition to her collection.

Check out a candle store for wax figurines so lovely you know she'll never burn them, scented wax chips she can simmer in a "hot pot," and carved candles with so many colors in their layers they resemble stained glass.

A housewares store will have shell-shaped bowls for her summer salads and lavish hand-embroidered linens with cutwork details — as well as bright-colored dish towels, and charming china salt-and-pepper shakers, sugar bowls and creamers.

Look in a kitchen specialty store for great gadgets, exotic spices and condiments, and whimsical pot holders that resemble hand puppets (fish, cats, and dogs with floppy ears).

Some stores sell nothing but figurines, such as imported Italian ballerinas, elongated Lladro ladies in muted blue dresses, and adorable Hummel children. These shops often carry gift plates, too.

Stores with handcrafted items are overflowing with one-of-a-kinds: lacy satin teddy bears, tinkling ceramic wind chimes, clay animal figurines, hand-carved picture frames, pine shadowboxes to hold miniatures, needlepoint pillows with velvet piped edges.

Browse a bookstore for that cookbook you know she longs for (perhaps the new one by Julia Child), the latest best-seller/thriller by her favorite author, or light reading by a popular humorist (Erma Bombeck, Andy Rooney, Peg Bracken).

Gift shops are great sources of sentimental items — and often have clever treasures you won't see elsewhere.

New photo frames, for example, have magnetic backs; they stick on any steel surface (ideal for her refrigerator). Specially designed lockets have multiple compartments to hold each grandchild's photos.

Shops that specialize in gifts also stock cards that range from elaborate to funny, as well as Victorian gift wrap, tissuewrap sheets, and glossy gift bags. And you'll find dozens of mugs that say "Mom, I love you" in a multitude of ways.

A bath specialty shop will entice you with fragrances of soaps, bath oils, lotions, bubble bath and more. Why not select a scent you know she'll like, and have a gift basket made up for her?

Buy her a shower curtain strewn with roses, and offer to wallpaper her bathroom to match.

Select a ceramic switchplate, perhaps hand-painted or with a pale pastel border.

Wicker bathroom accessories have beautiful detailing; consider a hamper, shelf or magazine rack. If her tastes run to the contemporary, look for items made of clear Lucite plastic.

Present her with fragrant drawer liners in a floral pattern, plus hexagonal hat boxes (ideal for storage) that match.

Does she have padded hangers in her closet? If not, give her a dozen or so to her to keep knits and other delicate items free of snags and shoulder bumps.

Pamper her: give her a bath pillow to cushion her head and neck while she's in the tub, a loofah sponge and soft terry bathmitts.

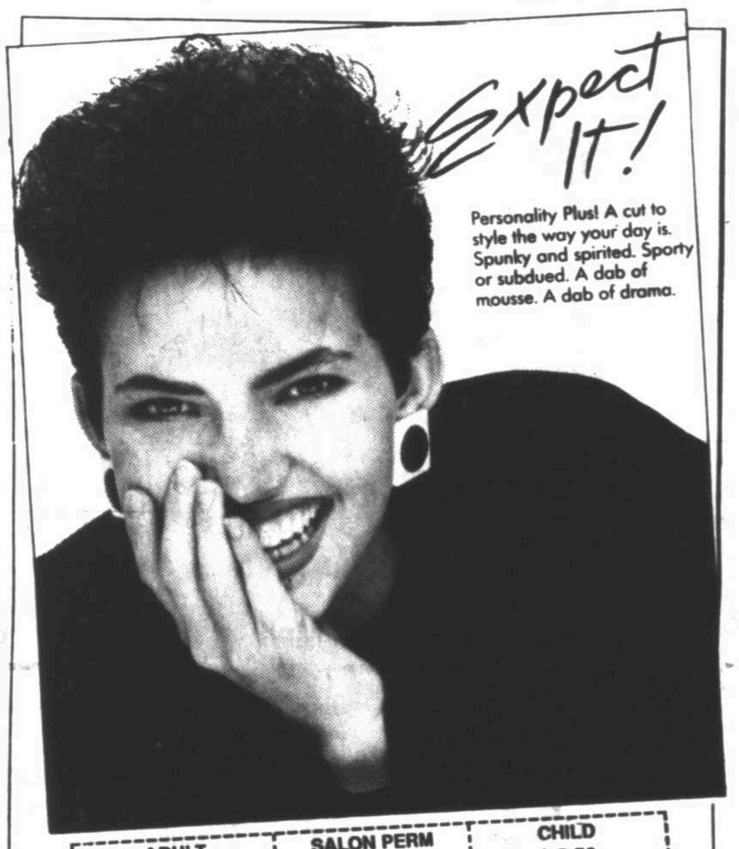

If she loves animals, present her with hand-carved soapstone cat or dog (or one made of some other hefty material) to use as a doorstop or a paperweight.

Vases are always welcome — particularly if you fill them with fresh flowers! Consider her decor and color scheme, then select a container that will match.

Visit a sporting goods store and buy her a cushy exercisemat, a neon-colored volleyball or a pair of high-tech swim goggles. Sign her up for a class in rock climbing or some other activity she's always wanted to try.

Former LBJ aides meet to recall his presidency

AUSTIN (AP) — Some of former President Lyndon Johnson's top aides are gathering in Austin this week to mark the 25th anniversary of Johnson's 1965 inauguration.

Continuing celebrations that began in Washington, D.C., last month, a three-day conference is planned at the University of Texas to discuss: "LBJ — the difference he made."

Johnson, who became president after the 1963 assassination of John F. Kennedy, won the White House on his own in 1964 and served until 1969. He then retired to his ranch west of Austin, where he lived until his death in 1973.

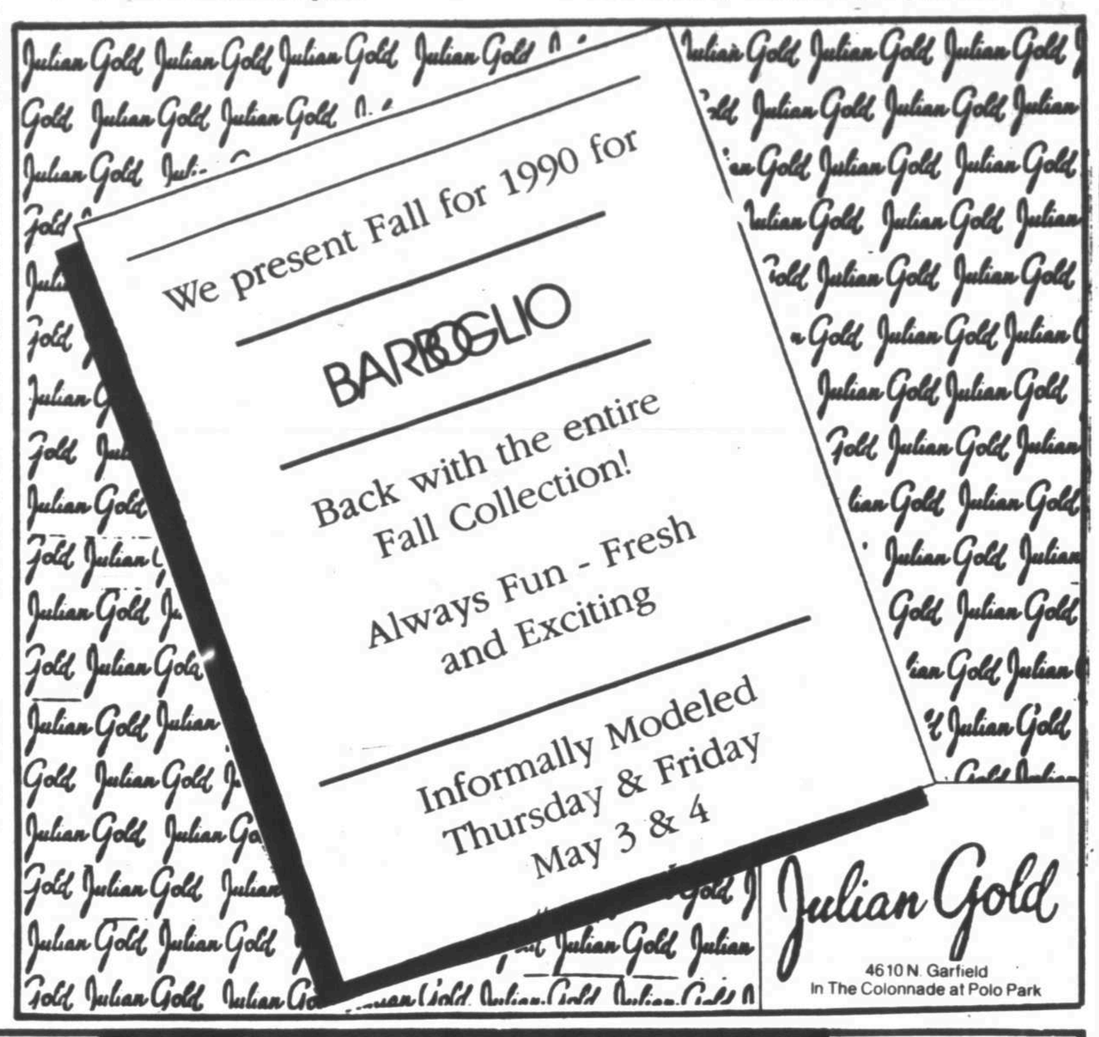

Many people long acquainted with Johnson, either as members of his staff, appointees to federal offices and personal friends, are scheduled to address the symposium.

The keynote address, "America, 1963 — The Way It Was," will be delivered by Tom Wicker, syndicated columnist for The New York Times. Wicker will review the problems that confronted the nation when Johnson was thrust into the presidency.

Also scheduled to speak are:

- Sargent Shriver, former director of the Peace Corps.
- Jack Valenti, a former LBJ assistant who now is president of the Motion Picture Association of America.
- Joseph A. Califano Jr., former White House domestic adviser.
- Lawrence F. O'Brien, former postmaster general.
- Economist James K. Galbraith, who serves on the faculty of the University of Texas' Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Panel discussions will be held both Thursday and Friday and will include such participants as television commentator Bill Moyers, a former Johnson press secretary; Liz Carpenter, press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson; U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle; John W. Gardner, former secretary of health, education and welfare; novelist James Michener; former congresswoman and current UT professor Barbara Jordan, and Vernon Jordan, former National Urban League president.

Police studying gang with business cards

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The gang "Damage Inc." has added a new twist to traditional gang activity — using business cards.

Police working at the city's recent Fiesta celebration made the discovery as they talked to gang members at a downtown carnival last week.

"It was hilarious," one unidentified patrol officer said. "These guys actually had these things printed up somewhere and they were carrying them on their person."

Authorities said several members opened their wallets, pulled out the business cards with the gang name printed on them and proudly displayed them. Officers described the cards as "professional-looking."

San Antonio police Capt. Al Philippus said the police department wants to study local gangs to determine what impact they are having on the city's crime.

The department has applied for a $148,000 federal grant to form a gang unit and should know within 60 days whether it will receive the money.

Members of the gang with business cards range in age from 14 to 16 and mainly prowl the city's west side, officials said.

Woman targets station

FORT WORTH (AP) — The homemaker who took on controversial talk show host Geraldo Rivera and won now has set her sights on a target closer to home — a Dallas-Fort Worth television station.

Lynda Beams has asked the Federal Communications Commission to admonish KDFW-TV for broadcasting "indecent" programming during after-school hours.

Mrs. Beams earned national attention when she persuaded 105 advertisers to pull their spots from the "Geraldo" talk show.

The Meadowbrook housewife claims that by airing "Geraldo" at 4 p.m. KDFW is violating FCC guidelines requiring that programming which panders to vulgar tastes not be aired before 8 p.m.

The station has agreed to change "Geraldo" from its 4 p.m. time slot when the show's contract expires Sept. 1.

'Prayer Day' designated

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has designated today as "Day of Prayer in Texas."

"We are all God's handiwork, and it is appropriate for us as individuals and as a nation to call to Him in prayer," said an official memorandum from the governor.

Man freed after 5 months

HOUSTON (AP) — The shape of a man's ears and nose helped free him after he had been in jail for five months on an armed robbery charge.

Dave Beasley's striking resemblance to a suspect photographed during an August convenience store robbery prompted a caller to Crime Stoppers to accuse him.

Then, using a driver's license photo, the store clerk identified Beasley as one of three men who robbed her that night.

Beasley, 32, who had no prior arrest record, landed in jail in November.

In an informal court hearing Tuesday, Beasley's attorneys presented forensic laboratory evidence that pinpointed physical differences between their client and the robber.

People crowd in a Vilnius shop Wednesday, the first day food was rationed as a result of economic sanctions put on Lithuania by Moscow. The blockage started two weeks ago and the first item rationed was gasoline.

Lithuania willing to negotiate everything but independence

MOSCOW (AP) — Lithuania's president said Wednesday his Baltic republic would consider suspending temporarily some of the pro-independence laws that drove the Kremlin to impose an economic embargo two weeks ago.

President Vytautas Landsbergis agreed to the step in a letter to French and West German leaders who last week proposed that such a compromise would help start negotiations between the republic and Moscow.

"Everything is negotiable which does not question the matter of restored independence of the Lithuanian state on March 11, 1990," Landsbergis said in his letter to French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

The letter was read to Lithuania's parliament, the Supreme Council, which gave its approval without a vote, said Aidas Palubinskas, a spokesman for the parliament.

"Putting our confidence in France and the Federal Republic of Germany, as well as in other Western democracies, and in their support of Lithuanian democracy, we are asking you to transmit to the Soviet authorities our consent to consider a temporary suspension of the effects of the decisions taken by the sovereign parliament of the Lithuanian Republic that could trouble the Soviet authorities," Landsbergis wrote.

The idea behind the proposal from France and West Germany was that if Lithuania temporarily suspended those laws, the Soviet Union, in return, might ease its pressure on the republic and also agree to talks on secession.

Palubinskas stressed that the proposal from Kohl and Mitterrand did not ask for rescinding the declaration itself, but urged the suspension of laws passed to implement the independence.

Lithuania declared independence on March 11, trying to restore the freedom it enjoyed before 1940, when the Soviet Union forcibly annexed it along with Latvia and Estonia. It has since passed laws designed to back the independence drive, including ending conscription of Lithuanians into the Soviet army, issuing identity cards for non-Lithuanians and seizing Communist Party property.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has declared the independence declaration invalid and rejected negotiations with the republic, saying such talks are reserved for foreign countries. He demanded that Lithuania rescind those pro-independence laws.

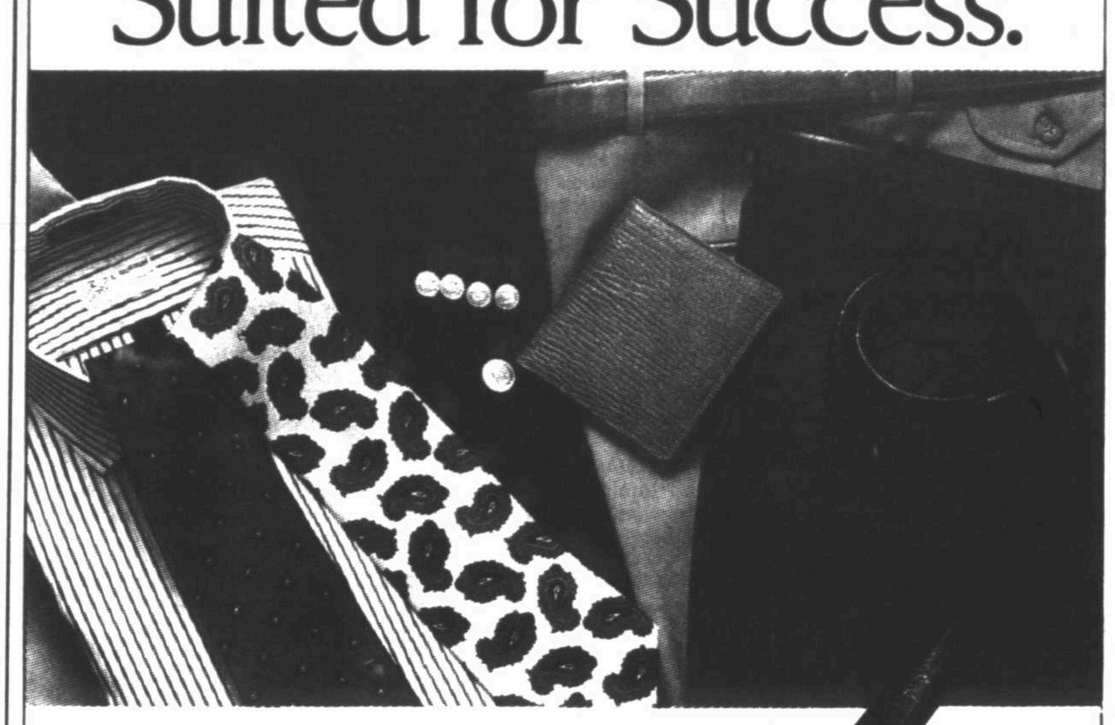

Gorbachev imposed a partial economic blockade, cutting supplies of fuel and other commodities to Lithuania. As of Wednesday night, no resumption of any of the fuel supplies has been reported.

Wednesday was the first workday in Lithuania under the food rationing system. Most stores were closed Tuesday, when the system went into effect, because of the May Day holiday.

Daina Kalendra, a worker at the Supreme Council's information office, said that for May and June, each person is limited to the following: sugar, 4.4 pounds; macaroni, 2.2 pounds; grains, 4.4 pounds; salt, 2.2 pounds; flour, 4.4 pounds; grease or margarine, about a half-pound.

Annual pageant crowns festival

By John Flores

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — As in the past, the theme of the 37th Annual Buccaneer Days Coronation Pageant could be "A Confederacy of Opulence," as Las Donas de la Corte organizers display ardent solidarity in assembling gowns and crowns that replicate the extravagances of monarchy and aristocracy.

The coronation today will climax the 11-day festival that celebrates the discovery of Corpus Christi by Alonzo Alvarez de Pineda in 1519. Buccaneer Days first were celebrated in June 1938.

The pageant will feature 30 young women from across the state, plus a former Corpus Christi resident from Wyoming.

Thirty duchesses were presented last year to a crowd of about 3,000 people in the Bayfront Plaza Convention Center, and this year organizers expect at least that many to attend this year's pageant, also in the convention center.

The gowns and accoutrements — trains, crowns and carries — are ornately jeweled and embellished by seamstresses and designers who spare no effort — or expense — in finding the perfect fabric, then creating the perfect design.

'We're not so secret any more. The only thing that is kept strictly confidential is the royalty (those two young women who will be named queen and princess of the coronation).'

— Alice Ann Fischer
Las Donas wardrobe chairman

MARK TWAIN, on viewing the beautiful, colossal fashions of his age, said, "Their costumes, as to architecture, were the latest fashion intensified; they were rainbow-hued; they were hung with jewels — chiefly diamonds. It would have been plain to any eye that it had cost something to upholster these women."

Sartorial sarcasm aside, it is safe to say that Twain's words could apply to the gowns which the Las Donas duchesses will wear. There'll be but one exception: All that glitters won't be gold or gems. They'll be imitations — costume jewelry.

But in this case, imitation is not cheap. Las Donas organizers say the typical cost of a gown, crown, train and carry can mount into the thousands of dollars.

In addition to monetary expense, the dress designs are a wealth of creativity, patience and ingenuity on the part of the creators — the designers and the dressmakers.

Designing and making the gowns is an art that would be lost were it not for a thimble full of charge d'affairs — people like Ofelia Segura, a dressmaker for the duchesses.

Mrs. Segura, 62, has sewn for 45 years, she said. She has been a dressmaker for Las Donas gowns since 1978. She is a study in patient precision, reflecting a craft that spans the ages.

"I get up at 5:30 or 6 a.m. and work for 10 or 12 hours a day," she said, while stooping to get a closer look at her handiwork, a glittering gown of blue lace reflecting this year's pageant theme, "The Court of Imperial Treasures."

OTHER DESIGNS are based on such themes as the famed jeweled Faberge eggs created by the Russian jeweler Carl Faberge for the Russian czar at the turn of the 20th century.

The excessive wealth and repressive power of the Romanoff regime led to the Bolshevik Revolution in October 1917. The Faberge egg is symbolic of the excessive wealth and power that led to the revolution, and will be celebrated by a young duchess in the pageant this year.

Another duchess will wear a gown based on the French Legion of Honor, a badge of courage originating with Napoleon I in 1802. A Legion of Honor medallion was found in France by a relative of the duchess who'll wear this gown — complete with the badge.

The Las Donas affair was veiled in secrecy until last year, when organization members decided to break tradition and allow photographs and sketchings of gowns to be published prior to the coronation.

"We're not so secret any more," said Las Donas wardrobe chairwoman Alice Ann Fischer. "The only thing that is kept strictly confidential is the royalty (those two young women who will be named queen and princess of the coronation)," she said.

Ms. Fischer's job is perhaps as difficult as the dressmakers and designers. "I am the go-between. I go between the designer and the dressmaker, making sure they have the right design," she said.

MS. FISCHER started by doing research, and sending her ideas to the dress designer. This year's designer is Marty Groos of San Antonio.,

"It usually takes about two years from start to finish," Mrs. Groos said of the design process. "Alice Ann did the initial research, and I try to put on paper what her ideas are. She contacted me in the summer of 1988, and I had my designs completed in June 1989," she said.

When the pageant is over, gowns often are donated to museums, college theater departments and design departments, said Patricia Phillips, president of Las Donas this year.

"Most of the time the in-town duchesses' gowns are displayed in different stores throughout the city," she said. "Parents have donated them to the Corpus Christi Museum through the years.

"My daughter's gown is still wrapped in a sheet under the bed at home. I just couldn't bear to part with it," she said, laughing.

Men's rainwear made with new fiber

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Rainwear for men blends fashion with function in outerwear with a new fiber that is gaining popularity. Called "microfiber" or "peach skin," the blend of 85 percent polyester and 15 percent nylon feels like washed silk, looks like suede and promises to be windproof, waterproof (but not necessarily at the seams) and breathable.

"It's the cutting edge of rainwear," said a spokesman for the Sanyo Fashion House, a manufacturer that is using the material for its new line of raincoats.

CELEBRATION OF THE ARTS

DEAR ABBY

Ring of truth makes for solid engagement

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Lately I have seen women wearing "engagement" rings for a year or two. I always thought that the ring was presented six months to a year before the wedding.

What is the length of time for an engagement? Who should announce it? If the engagement is broken, should the ring be returned? — CALIFORNIA QUERY

Van Buren

DEAR QUERY: An engagement — as I assess it — is simply a public announcement that two people plan to marry. An engagement ring is not essential to make it official, but it helps. A couple can be engaged anywhere from one day to "indefinitely."

It can be announced by the parents of the bride, either or both parties involved, the town gossip, or nobody.

If the engagement is broken, the woman should return the ring (unless, of course, she paid for it).

And by the way, all that is required for a sincere engagement is a meeting of minds. One person asks the other, "Will you marry me?" If the answer is "yes" (assuming both parties are sober and in their right minds), they are as legally engaged as if he had given her the Hope diamond.

DEAR ABBY: I've fallen in love. I am adult and mature and have been living with this man for two years. "Joe" and I have talked about marriage, and I think he is going to ask me soon.

Here's the problem: I am trying to dig my way out of debt. For years I was addicted to credit cards, and I am now in the process of paying all my bills, but it's taking most of my money.

I told Joe I was saving my money to build a nice nest egg, but actually most of it is going to pay off these old debts. He thinks I have a lot of money saved, when actually it's been spent.

Do you think I need to tell him the truth? I plan to keep my financial situation to myself until after we are married and all my bills are paid. What is your best advice, Abby? — BILLS PAID, NO SAVINGS

DEAR BILLS: Tell Joe the truth now. Deception is a rotten foundation for marriage. If he marries you thinking you have a nice nest egg and then learns that you have deceived him, you are apt to find yourself with an empty nest.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is terminally ill, but she enjoys having company on her "good" days. Her friends have been wonderful about visiting her — always calling ahead to see if Mom is up to having visitors, and they never stay very long, which is also most considerate.

Now, the problem: One of Mom's oldest friends always brings her news about who's dying, sparing none of the details. She is also a gossip, but that's not as depressing as the list of people who are dying.

Is there any way I can tell Mom's old friend to please bring only cheerful news? After this woman leaves, Mom is so depressed she can hardly eat. — DEVOTED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Yes. Meet the crepe hanger at the door and ask her to please keep her visits positive and cheerful — no news about who's dying, as "Mom" is very emotional at this time and bad news upsets her.

Jeepers, creepers, here's another beeper

By Erma Bombeck

The future of beepers has the makings of a Gary Larson cartoon. It's only a matter of time before people will be hunted down by animals, shot with a stun gun, outfitted with an electronic collar and become a number and a blip on a screen somewhere.

Bombeck

The animals will say they're doing it so they can study human behavior, observe their eating habits, trace how people mate and where, and what effects they have on the environment.

But who are we kidding here? It's just another invasion of privacy.

The beeper phase started out innocently enough. After all the bears in hibernation had been collared and the migration of the wildebeest monitored, someone said, "Wouldn't it be great if we could track down our doctor or our plumber when an emergency arises?"

Then it went crazy. Everyone wanted to be needed and important, so beepers showed up on ushers at the ballpark, law enforcement officers, florists, bird watchers, truck drivers, sanitation workers, airline agents and car salesmen.

It became such a status thing to be beeped somewhere and have to rush to the nearest phone that beepers for phonies came on the market.

For $32.80 you could clip on a little box, complete with a serial number and a flashing red light, and activate it at your own discretion.

The sermon too long? (beep, beep) You start to lose at poker? (beep, beep) You're wheeled into elective surgery and want to change your vote? (beep, beep) The waiter approaches with the check? (beep, beep) A blind date isn't working out? (beep, beep)

That is not to say there aren't some good things coming out of the beeper experience. School buses in Novi, Mich., are being outfitted with beepers to send signals to students in their homes when the bus is two miles away. This alert will save them from standing out in freezing weather waiting for their ride.

But you don't have to be a genius to see where all of this is taking us. How long will it be before every teen-ager in this country will be tagged and hooked up to a frequency? Do you really want to know where they are every minute?

How many unfaithful husbands and wives will be only a heart-beep away from a divorce?

If we keep close tabs on all of our public officials, who will be left to run the country?

This is America. I want to wake up in the morning and have someone say, "Where have you been?"

I want to see friends who say, "We were unable to reach you," and old acquaintances who gasp, "I thought you were dead."

Don't deprive me of those beautiful words "Get lost!" It's getting tougher and tougher.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Trace chromium is diet-friendly

By Jean Carper

Millions of Americans could save themselves from developing adult-onset diabetes simply by getting enough of the trace mineral chromium, says Dr. Richard A. Anderson, U.S. Department of Agriculture. One of the best sources: broccoli.

Other vegetables, as well as fruits, bran (notably wheat bran) and organ meats also contain the trace mineral.

Carper

Chromium, says Dr. Anderson, stimulates insulin to perform better in 85 percent of people who have a slight glucose intolerance, making them more apt to develop diabetes.

In Dr. Anderson's new study, 17 volunteers went on a low-chromium diet (less than 20 micrograms a day). That's the scant amount now consumed by 25 percent of Americans, he noted. Then half of the group took 200 micrograms of chromium a day for five weeks. The chromium dramatically boosted insulin activity in those with a mild glucose intolerance.

An estimated one-fourth of all Americans have this condition which always precedes adult-onset diabetes. But if everybody got 50 micrograms of chromium a day — from food or a multivitamin-mineral supplement — Dr. Anderson says the number of new cases of adult-onset diabetes would drop dramatically.

Pineapple builds strong bones

Women who already have or who fear developing the crippling bone disease osteoporosis should try drinking a glass of pineapple juice a day. So advises Dr. Jeanne Freeland-Graves, professor of nutrition at University of Texas at Austin.

That's because she has found that such women have low levels of the ultra-trace mineral manganese, which is thought to aggravate the bone disease. And she says, "Pineapple is full of manganese. When we want to up the content of manganese in the diet, we tell women to eat pineapple." Though all pineapple contains manganese, the juice is more readily absorbed by the body, notes Dr. Freeland-Graves.

In a recent study, she found that women with osteoporosis had about one-third less manganese in their blood than healthy women. Further, when given manganese, the diseased women absorbed twice as much, showing that their bodies needed it.

When animals are made deficient in manganese, they develop severe osteoporosis, she added.

Other good sources of manganese are oatmeal, nuts, cereals, beans, whole wheat, spinach and tea. However, the mineral is not absorbed as well from these foods as from pineapple, she noted.

Vitamin B-6 boosts good cholesterol

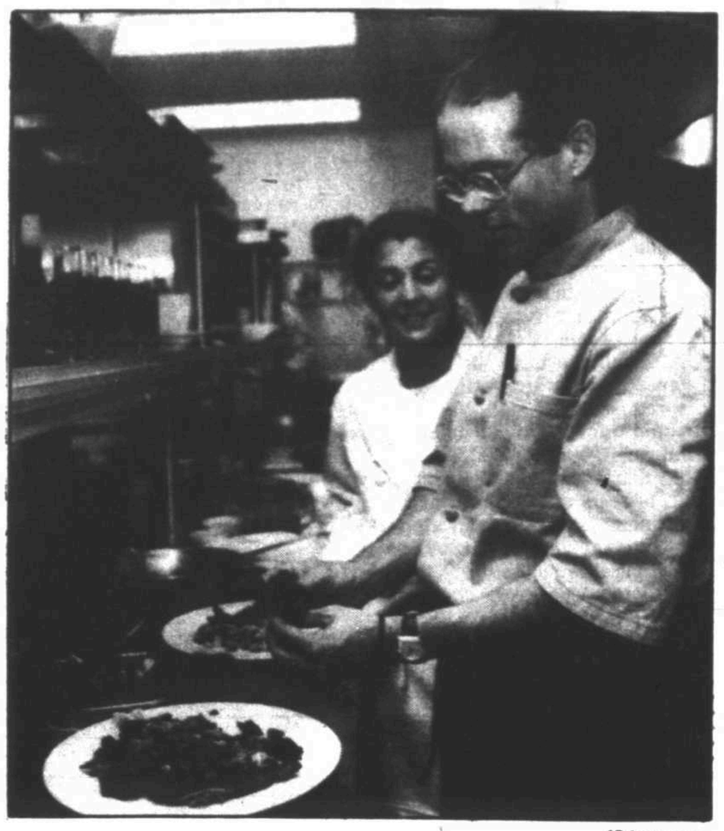

Worried about having too little of the good type HDL-cholesterol that guards against heart disease? Maybe you need more vitamin B-6.

That's what researcher Dr. Richard C. Keniston, William Beaumont Army Medical Center in El Paso, Texas, has found. In his recent study, 600 soldiers, ages 35 to 45, with normal cholesterol levels took vitamin B-6 — usually 50 milligrams a day — for five months. The B-6 did not lower total cholesterol, but it did significantly raise good HDLs. Also the vitamin improved the ratio of beneficial HDL to dangerous LDL-type cholesterol. This ratio is considered one of the best predictors of who develops heart disease.

The vitamin works best "if your HDL is already low — less than 35 — and you have low levels of B-6 to boot." he said. Doses of B-6 were also especially beneficial to smokers. Their HDLs went up just as much as if they had stopped smoking, said Dr. Keniston.

"I'd advise people with low HDLs to take 50 mg a day of vitamin B-6, especially smokers," says Dr. Keniston. "It's a safe dose." High doses of vitamin B-6 can be dangerous.

In wrong hands, buckets can be deadly

Industrial buckets, those plastic, five-gallon containers manufactured for shipping and other uses, often are reused in homes.

Their sturdy construction, large capacity and parallel sidewalls, which make them difficult to tip over even when empty, make for a variety of uses.

Humphreys

However, the same characteristics can make these buckets death traps for toddlers. A recent study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association reported 49 drowned infants and toddlers in Cook County, Ill., between January 1985 and June 1989. Twelve of those deaths resulted from immersion in industrial buckets.

Drowning ranks second to traffic accidents as the most common cause of accidental death in children. Drowning each year claims about five lives per 100,000 children.

In the Cook County study, 19 of the toddlers drowned in bathtubs and 13 in swimming pools. The remaining five, besides the 12 involved in industrial bucket deaths, drowned in a pond, lake, toilet bowl or humidifier.

A variety of factors cause industrial buckets to be for toddlers:

■ The buckets and their contents tempt curious toddlers to peer into them.

■ Because of a large head size relative to body size, toddlers have a high center of gravity and can easily fall into the buckets.

■ The bucket height is more than half the average toddler's height.

■ Since toddlers have poor motor coordination, they are unable to extricate themselves or tip over the bucket if they fall in.

■ The buckets' large capacity makes it possible to drown in them even when they are only 10 percent full.

Common household buckets are hazardous to unattended toddlers also but appear to be less so because of their smaller capacity, more flexible plastic and converging sides which make them easier to tip over.

Another factor necessary for a toddler to drown in a bucket, or elsewhere, is a lack of supervision. Those victims reported in the study had been left unattended from a minute to several hours.

It would be as ludicrous to suggest banning industrial buckets used at home as it would be to outlaw swimming pools, lakes, ponds, toilets and humidifiers. The important points article are these: industrial buckets can be hazardous to toddlers in the home; and unattended infants and toddlers can drown.

Restaurant owner somehow sifts guilt out of haute cuisine

By Laura Tolley

HOUSTON (AP) — Forget granola, bean sprouts and smoothies. A new restaurant called Evan's aims to sell health food as haute cuisine without giving up its mission to serve "food with a conscience."

Customers at Evan's dine in candlelight on starched white tablecloths, but make their guilt-free orders from menus printed on recycled paper.

All cleaners used in the restaurant are biodegradable — aerosols are banned — and "Do it for the trees" signs remind employees to separate trash for recycling.

The atmosphere is decidedly upscale, with valet parking, original works of art and fresh flowers on the tables. And the food is fancier than most people expect from health food, says owner Evan Daily, who opened the restaurant last month in Houston's trendy Montrose neighborhood.

"A lot of people think that if it's healthy, they're not going to like it. Unfortunately, there's a certain stigma that's attached to it (health food)," Daily said.

Flower petals and herbs adorn the entrees, made from organically grown foods whenever possible. The menu includes fresh vegetables, free-range chicken and beef, venison raised on a New Zealand farm, fish and even some deserts billed as healthy.

Daily and chef Kathy Ruiz cook with infusions — the essences of various foods such as red peppers, carrots and roses that are distilled in oil. The results include wok charred tuna with mango, tomato and scallions; drunken shrimp on lime jalapeno pasta and salmon with a citrus vinaigrette. The house salad consists of mixed greens, herbs and flowers.

"This is the restaurant we've been waiting for," said Brian Long, an automobile executive who had dinner with his wife, Martha Butler, a dancer with the Houston Ballet Company. The couple went to the restaurant after a fellow dancer who had lunched there urged Ms. Butler to try it.

"It's good and it's good for you — that's rare," Ms. Butler said.

Opening night drew an unanticipated 175 people to Evan's.

Daily said he hopes the eatery will become a mainstay for people who want to put Earth first even when they're dining out.

But he admits that's not an easy task in a city where barbecue and chicken-fried steak are considered culinary treasures.

Pilgrims seek, find miracles at eye clinic

By Ken Chambers

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Velia Perez, a miner, and Leopoldo Martinez, a house painter, had little in common before they began their arduous pilgrimage to the Jose Eleuterio Gonzalez Hospital.

Now they sit in a crowded waiting room of the Centro de Imagen Diagnostica clinic, relatives at their sides, hoping to regain the same, precious possession.

Doctors say Perez knows that the diabetes attacking his kidneys and clouding his vision could soon kill him. But he undergoes regular laser treatment and retains a simple wish. "I want to see," the slight, weathered man of 62 says through an interpreter. "I want to look." His son helped him travel 250 miles from San Luis Potose to the clinic.

Pragmatism strengthens Martinez' hold on the world of light. "I want to be able to work. That is what I desire most," he says. He sees only shadows and colors since a blood vessel burst in his eye 15 months ago.

He says he has reluctantly accepted money from his children to offset his lost income. His wife helped him travel 400 miles from Guadalajara to attend his first appointment at the clinic.

Though the lengths they must go to for basic eye care may seem extreme by American standards, both men say they feel fortunate; eye disease and poor vision go untreated in many parts of Mexico. Many people in rural areas of the country spend their years in a shadowy world because they have no access to basic treatment or simple surgical procedures.

Lake Jackson, Texas, optometrist Tom Pruett is one of several area Rotarians who have worked to pull back the dark curtain that hangs in front of many of the impoverished people in northern Mexico. They join with Rotarians from other parts of the United States and Mexico to set up temporary "camps" to treat as many people as possible in a short period of time. Rotary's 3-H (Health, Humanity and Hunger) program has funded their expeditions, which began in 1981.

Pruett has treated hundreds of Mexicans who can't afford treatment and often have no easy access to a clinic. For those who have spent their years without a clear picture of the world around them, eye treatment is a miracle.

"One lady ... in her 80s came in with cataracts and surgery was done," Pruett said. "When she came back on Sunday morning to have her bandages removed, it was such an occasion, she wore her lace wedding dress. That was her way of solemnly communicating how deeply she was moved by the treatment."

The experience is so rewarding when ... a patient that was blind has their cataracts removed and the next morning they can see and they have a smile on their face, the volunteers go back and they open up their pocketbook," he said.

However rewarding one miracle might be, the enormity of the task sometimes seems daunting, Pruett said.

"We're talking about a monstrous area and to try and cover it with little camps is almost impossible. Our territory down there has 7 million people. The most we have ever treated in one camp is 548 people. Divide 548 into 7 million, and you can see that it is not a lifetime project, it is a double lifetime project. What we need to do is equip them to treat themselves."

To that end, Pruett and other Rotarians from both Mexico and the United States recently toured the Centro de Imagen Diagnostica, which was established with the help of the Rotary Foundation. They hope to someday create three similar clinics in the rural state of Chihuahua. The centrally located clinics will be designed as surgery centers to treat not only those who live nearby, but also patients from remote rural areas.

for the volunteers they often find other ways to contribute to the program, Brazosport Rotary Club President Water Branson says.

"One thing we find in Texas is that in order to support the camps to send supplies and money these people have to have a hands-on experience, even if it is just escorting someone to surgery. Then,

Tarkanian said he had no intention of seeking the NBA job, and said the report he would meet with Clippers owner Donald Sterling about the vacancy "makes me sick."

■ After being soundly thrashed at the Boston Garden not once, but twice, the New York Knicks return the favor in a garden of their own.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks were playing for pride, and they showed enough Wednesday night to stay in the NBA playoffs.

"We wanted to be able to look ourselves in the mirror in the morning," Coach Stu Jackson said after the Knicks avoided playoff elimination with a 102-99 victory over the Boston Celtics.

Patrick Ewing scored 33 points and led New York's rebounding domination with 19.

Charles Oakley had 13 rebounds. His six offensive rebounds led New York to a 21-5 advantage in that department.

Boston, which score' an NBA record 157 points on 67 percer.. shooting in taking a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series, saw a much more intense defensive effort by the Knicks in Game 3.

The Celtic till managed to outshoot New York 51.4 percent to 39.6 percent, but the Knicks took 27 more shots.

"We didn't shoot well from the field or from the free-throw line, but we took a lot more shots because we got a lot more offensive rebounds," Jackson said. "That 21-5 difference will make the Celtics mad and they will come back hard on the boards on Friday."

The fourth game will be Friday night at Madison Square Garden, and if the Knicks win that, the fifth and deciding game would be Sunday at Boston Garden, where the Celtics have beaten the Knicks 26 consecutive times since Feb. 29, 1984.

Matt Seay takes a healthy dip

■ With success behind him and a bright future ahead of him, this Midland swimmer has earned himself a shot at Olympic gold, not to mention an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

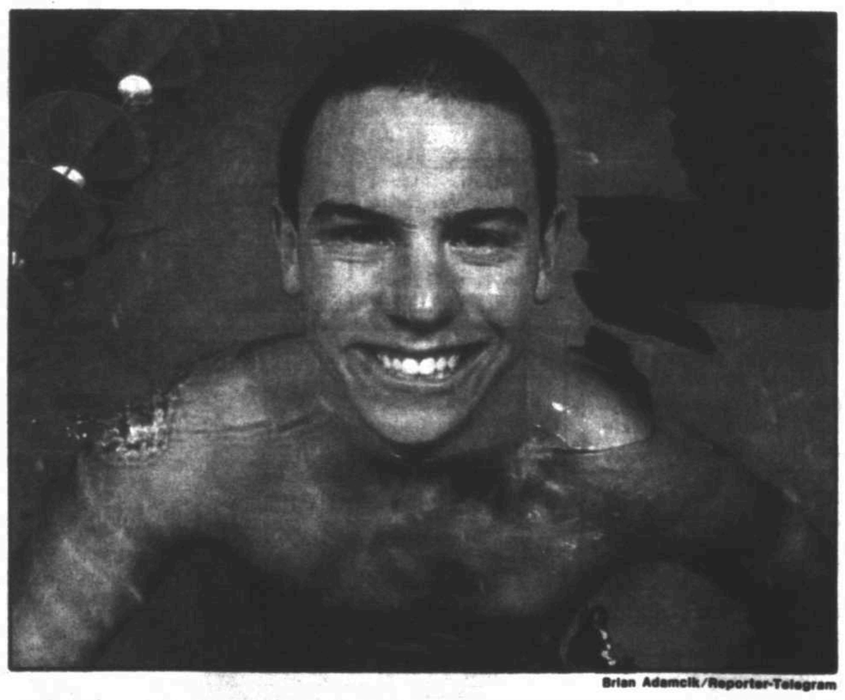

Many high school students are addicted to substances that are generally considered unhealthy.

But while some teens get their kicks from alcohol, cigarettes or various types of illegal drugs, Midland High School senior Matt Seay has settled into a healthier obsession.

"I'm addicted to swimming," Seay says. "I get sick if I stay out of the water a week."

Seay has parlayed his addiction into a roomful of medals, along with some of the highest honors a young swimmer can receive.

He capped his high school career earlier in March with a third-place finish in the 100-yard breaststroke at the state meet, then followed with an upset win in the same event at the Junior National short-course meet in Iowa City, Iowa.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Matt Seay has set his sites on winning the next Olympic Trials.

With a time of 56.83 seconds both in the state meet finals in the Junior National preliminaries, Seay stamped himself as a contender for a berth in the 1992 Olympics, though qualifying standards for the 1992 Olympic Trials have not been set.

And with an attitude characteristic of many top athletes, Seay says he won't be satisfied with being less than the best.

"I'd like to win the next Olympic Trials," Seay says.

And if he can do that, he might be a medal contender in Olympic competition at Barcelona, because the U.S. is traditionally strong in the breaststroke, though the Americans did not earn a medal in the 1988 Games.

The short, powerfully built Seay hasn't always dominated his swimming peers even though he has been swimming competitively since he was six.

"When I first came to COM (in 1984), Matt Seay was a bad swimmer," City of Midland Swim Team coach Brad Swendig says.

"He didn't get where he has on talent," Swendig adds. "He did it with hard work."

Like many top swimmers, Seay was introduced to the water at an early age.

"My parents got my brother into the program, and of course, I wanted to do what he did," Seay says. Mike Seay, six years Matt's senior, finished

America faithfully returns to baseball

Lock out? Anybody remember anything about a baseball lockout?

What about all that talk of how fans would turn away from the major league gates in record droves? That fans were tired of labor disputes in professional sports. That they were mad as heck and they just weren't going to take it any more. What about the supposed boycott people had promised on baseball advertisers?

Patterson

If they can keep us from enjoying the game we love so much, said Joe, the average fan, then we just won't go back once they get around to playing again.

Hrrumpphh, Joe insisted, putting his figurative foot down.

But here we are, three weeks later, and it is evident that America's baseball fans have short memories. Which should be no real surprise to anyone. We're gluttons for punishment. Sports masochists. We'll take anything these spoiled millionaires care to dish out to us.

Desire proof, eh?

Easy. Last Sunday, 313,449 people went through the turnstiles at 13 major league parks, an average of 24,111 per game. Sunday, April 30 was just 21 days after the commencing of the 1990 season.

More proof?

On Sunday, April 16, the first Sunday after the season began, 192,305 fans saw 12 big league games, an average of 16,025.

In just three weekends, 8,000 fans per ballpark have forgotten about the big league lockout.

And I'll venture a little guess here, and say that four Sundays from now, when summer is in full swing, we'll see anywhere from 30,000 to 35,000 at each ballpark.

And if the players and/or owners ever want us to wait faithfully again on the sidelines while they bicker and argue about something else minuscule, we'll do it. Because that's just the kinda guys we are.

Oh, one other thing ... practice up. The current collective bargaining agreement ends in just another couple of seasons.

I don't know about you, but I've had it up to here having to listen to Orel Hershiser's belly-aching.

Mr. Perfect, Mr. Everything, Mr. Boy-Next-Door from a couple of seasons ago, complained a few weeks ago that pitchers should have to throw only three complete innings to get credit for a win (instead of the standard five) for the first month of the season due to the shortened spring training. If they have to pitch the five, he said, they could be risking injury.

Well, sure enough, Orel has torn his rotator cuff and is expected out for a good part of the season. I'm just as sorry as the next guy that Orel's hurt, but he's blaming it all on the shortened season, and the lack of proper preparation time.

Tell that to 43-year-old Nolan Ryan, who has games of five, seven, seven, nine and six innings. And let's not forget Nolan was perfect through five in the first game of the season, and then in his complete game threw a one-hitter.

Didn't take very long for the TV announcers to start referring to them as the "Hapless" Braves did it? The Braves, at 5-13, you would think have the worst Edmonton center Mark Messier tucks the puck under the pads of Chicago goalie Ed Belfour for the first goal of their conference final in Edmonton Wednesday.

Oilers nail down eighth straight playoff victory

Associated Press

EDMONTON, Alberta — Steve Smith scored two goals in a playoff game for the first time in his career as the Edmonton Oilers rolled to their eighth straight victory by beating the Chicago Blackhawks 5-2 Wednesday night in the opener of the Campbell Conference finals.

Smith, who had only seven goals during the regular season and only five career playoff goals, scored what proved to be the winning goal at 8:52 of the second period on a screened slap shot from the left point. He added the Oilers' fourth goal early in the final period when his wrist shot from the right circle hit the post and goaltender Ed Belfour's back before trickling into the net.

Before Wednesday night, Smith's most famous goal was one he accidentally put into his own net in the third period of Game 7 of the 1986 Smythe Division finals against Calgary, ending the Oilers' two-year reign as Stanley Cup champions.

The Oilers, who haven't lost since dropping the fourth game of the Smythe Division semifinals against Winnipeg on April 10, host Game 2 Friday night at the Northlands Coliseum.

Edmonton had not played in eight days since completing a four-game sweep of the Los Angeles Kings in the Smythe finals. But the Oilers looked anything but rusty against a Chicago club that had to go seven games in each of its first two playoff series. The Blackhawks advanced to the Campbell finals with an 8-2 victory over St. Louis in Game 7 of the Norris finals on Monday night.

The Oilers completely dominated the first period, outshooting Chicago 12-3 and scoring the only goal when Mark Messier took Charlie Huddy's breakout pass at center ice, went in alone and beat Belfour at 9:32. It was his sixth goal of the playoffs and 10th in 10 career playoff games against the Blackhawks.

Belfour's counterpart, Bill Ranford, made his best stop late in the period when he foiled Steve Larmer on a solo break-in from the blue line.

The Blackhawks found their skating legs in the second period, but the Oilers got the only two goals.

Mark Lamb stretched his point-scoring streak to nine games when he scored at 3:17. He received credit for his sixth goal of the playoffs when Belfour and his defense were unable to clear the puck after a save and it bounced into the net off a Chicago player.

Smith's first goal made it 3-0 and Ranford kept it that was with several outstanding saves, including two on Larmer and another on a 10-foot wrist shot by Steve Thomas.

The Bottom Three ...

3. Winter Haven, of the Florida State League, at 5-21, is coming along at a .192 pace ...

2. With a record of 4-21, Salinas, of the California League, falls in behind at .160.

And the worst single team in professional baseball at this point in the season ...

1. Portland, of the Pacific Coast League, with three wins, 18 losses. A shimmering .143 percentage.

Just a little observation here, but you've got to pity a creature like Juice the Moose, the new Angel mascot.

The poor guy was tied up and rendered helpless by the Angel players prior to one game last week. During another, when kids were given free plastic bats, he was beaten throughout the evening by numerous armed, little darlings. He's been knocked down repeatedly by overzealous participants in the Dash For Cash, a seventh inning contest where people race the moose to home plate for fabulous cash and prizes.

Give the guy a break, for heaven's sake! Who cares if he's the Permian Panther mascot? He still deserves a little respect.

Summer Squall weathers injury

As recently as February, Derby contender faced threatening fracture

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — First he was called Thunder Bolt, then Stormy Weather, then Storm Cloud. Finally, it was Summer Squall.

By any name, the colt is a leading contender for Saturday's Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

For a time in February it looked as if Summer Squall was going nowhere.

Having recovered from a hairline fracture of the right-front cannon bone that ended his five-race unbeaten campaign as 2-year-old, Summer Squall bled during a workout Feb. 15 at Gulfstream Park.

"It wasn't a trickle," Cot Campbell, president of Dogwood Stable, said of the bleeding. "There had never been any indication of bleeding before. It was a fluky thing."

Campbell and trainer Neil Howard think the bleeding might have been the result of a fungus or bacteria.

"He was one of 35 horses who bled during a 10-day period in Florida, Campbell said.

Veterinarians gave the OK for Summer Squall to start in the seven-furlong Swale March 17 at Gulfstream and the colt finished second, a length behind top sprinter Housebuster. Campbell said it "might have been his best race, given the circumstances."

Two weeks later, Summer Squall won the Jim Beam at Turfway Park and two weeks after that won the Blue Grass at Keeneland. Both races were run at 1⅛ miles on muddy tracks.

"I had a little tight campagin, but I had to grab what was available," Howard said of Summer Squall's three races in six weeks.

Now comes the 1¼-mile Derby, and Summer Squall figures to be no worse than the second betting choice to unbeaten Mister Frisky, winner of all 16 of his starts. His four races this year were spread over 13 weeks.

"Summer Squall is the horse to beat," said Ron McAnally, who trains Arkansas Derby winner Silver Ending.

Seventeen 3-year-olds were expected to be entered Thursday, which would make the 116th Derby worth $786,000, with $611,000 to the winner.

"If we don't have bad luck, I have great confidence he'll run well," Campbell said after the son of Storm Bird put in his final Derby prep Wednesday.

The colt's name is based on that of his sire. Thunder Bolt, Stormy Weather and Storm Cloud were rejected by the Jockey Club because they already were being used.

Pat Day, who will ride Summer Squall, was present but exercise rider Robert Vickers was aboard the colt when he worked five eighths in 1:02 and galloped out three quarters in 1:16 3-5.

It was the first half mile, however, that was the real move. After Summer Squall had gone the half, Vickers stood in the irons after another 50 yards, and the colt galloped out strongly.

"We were looking for anything on the underside of 49 seconds," Howard said. "It got his blood pumping. He looks good. He's eating good. He's training good."

The colt will race on the diuretic Lasix as he did in his first three starts this year. "This isn't the time to take him off Lasix," said Campbell.

Rangers back on winning track

Oakland sweeps Yanks

Associated Press

AL Roundup

Pinch-hitter Geno Petralli's two-run triple snapped a 3-3 tie and gave the Texas Rangers a 6-3 victory over Chicago Wednesday night. The loss snapped a five-game winning streak by the White Sox.

Charlie Hough (2-1) gave up three runs in the first inning, then held Chicago in check the rest of the way. He gave up 10 hits, walked one and struck out two in his first complete game of the year.

The Rangers, who broke a three-game losing streak, chased Greg Hibbard (2-2) in the sixth when he walked Mike Stanley and gave up a single to Scott Coolbaugh. Petralli broke out of a 1-for-10 slump with a one-out liner off reliever Donn Pall that got by Steve Lyons in shallow center field and rolled to the warning track, scoring pinch-runner Thad Bosley and Coolbaugh.

Gary Pettis followed with a single to score Petralli.

Chicago scored three runs in the first inning. Dan Pasqua had an RBI single and Carlos Martinez a two-run single.

Texas got two runs in the fourth when Julio Franco and Ruben Sierra had consecutive doubles and Scott Coolbaugh ended a 1-for-18 drought with an RBI single. The Rangers tied the game 3-3 in the fifth on Jack Daugherty's run-scoring double.

Pettis stole three bases, tying a club record shared by many. It was last accomplished by Cecil Espy on April 18, 1989. Pettis now has seven stolen bases for the season.

Athletics 2, Yankees 0

Scott Sanderson pitched seven impressive innings and Dave Henderson homered as the Oakland Athletics beat the New York Yankees 2-0, completing a three-game sweep.

The Athletics won their fourth straight overall and improved to 12-2 on the road. The Yankees have lost four in a row.

Sanderson (3-1), who had not pitched more than six innings in four starts this season, gave up five singles, struck out five and walked one. He does not have a complete-game shutout since 1986. Todd Burns relieved in the eighth and Rick Honeycutt got the last two outs for his second save.

Mariners 9, Red Sox 2

Consecutive home runs by Pete O'Brien and Edgar Martinez powered Seattle over the Boston Red Sox 9-2 and snapped the Mariners' three-game losing streak.

Erik Hanson (3-0) scattered six hits, struck out four and walked three in seven innings to gain the victory.

O'Brien snapped an 0-22 slump with his second homer to lead off the second inning. Martinez followed with a drive to left for his third homer.

Indians 3, Blue Jays 0

Candy Maldonado homered with one out in the seventh inning, Cleveland's second hit of the game off John Cerutti, as the Indians defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 3-0.

It was only Cleveland's second win in its last 12 games against the Blue Jays, and it prevented a three-game series sweep by Toronto.

Twins 8, Tigers 2

David West pitched a three-hitter and Gary Gaetti hit a pair of three-run homers as the Minnesota Twins defeated Detroit 8-2, extending the Tigers' losing streak to four.

West (2-3), notching his first major league complete game, gave up a solo homer to Tracy Jones in the Detroit first and a fifth-inning double to Ken Williams.

Angels 3, Orioles 0

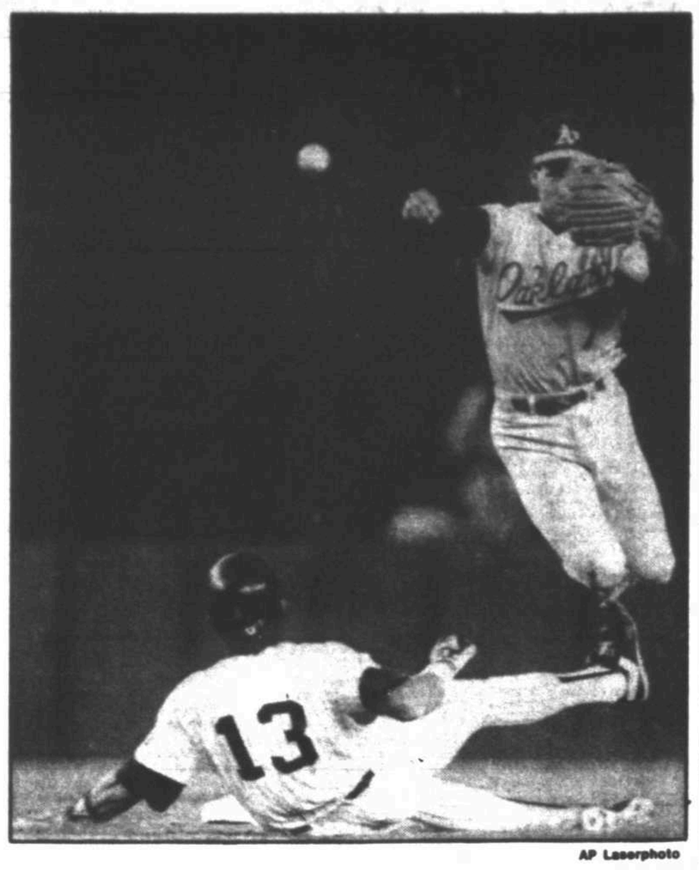

Bert Blyleven moved to fourth on the all-time strikeout list and won for the first time this season as the California Angels beat the struggling Baltimore Orioles 3-0.

Blyleven allowed five hits and one walk in six innings.

Brewers-Royals Rainout

The game between the Milwaukee Brewers and the Kansas City Royals was postponed by rain and will be made up as part of a twi-night doubleheader Aug. 10.

Wednesday's scheduled starting pitchers, Jaime Navarro for the Brewers and Mark Gubicza for Kansas City, will pitch Thursday night.

Mets, Padres end losing skids

Associated Press

NL Roundup

Unbeaten Frank Viola pitched a six-hitter and matched a career high with 11 strikeouts as the New York Mets beat the Cincinnati Reds, 5-0, to end a four-game losing streak and spoil Lou Piniella's return.

Piniella spent 11 seasons playing for the New York Yankees and was a manager and general manager for the club before taking over this season as skipper of the Reds.

Viola (5-0) was masterful for his fifth straight start, mixing the fastball and changeup. In his victory at Houston on Friday, the left-hander had to leave after five innings with back spasms.

It was the first complete game of the season and 12th career shutout for Viola, who walked one. Viola has struck out 11 six times in his career, the last on Aug. 22, 1989 against San Francisco.

Mike Marshall, who had three hits, and Howard Johnson hit solo home runs for the Mets. New York entered the game hitting .214.

Tom Browning (2-2) allowed Marshall's third homer, leading off the second. Johnson hit his sixth to start the third.

Mark Carreon had an RBI double in the fourth, Marshall scored Kevin McReynolds from first base with a two-out double in the fifth and Kevin Elster had a run-scoring fly in the eighth.

The shutout was the fourth of the season for the Mets, the third involving Viola.

The Reds lost for only the second time on the road this season and dropped to 13-5 overall.

New York was coming off a 1-4 road trip, and started an 11-game homestand against Cincinnati.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

Jack Clark and Bip Roberts both homered in the sixth inning and Bruce Hurst earned his first victory of the season as San Diego beat St. Louis to snap a five-game losing streak.

Hurst (1-3), who was making his fifth start of the season, allowed seven hits and two runs in seven innings. He struck out eight and walked one in winning his first game since last Sept. 17 at San Francisco.

Phillies 14, Astros 4

Tom Herr had four of Philadelphia's season-high 20 hits and matched his career high with five RBIs as the Phillies had their biggest inning in four years in a rout of the Houston Astros.

The Phillies, who broke a 4-4 tie against Jim Clancy (1-1) in the fifth inning, sent 13 men to the plate in an eight-run sixth, their biggest inning since they scored eight against Cincinnati on July 6, 1986.

Braves 8, Expos 1

Andres Thomas hit the first grand slam of his career and drove in five runs, and Marty Clary pitched seven strong innings as the Atlanta Braves won their fourth straight game, over the Montreal Expos.

Cubs 9, Giants 6

Andre Dawson extended his hitting streak to 11 games with three hits and three RBIs, powering the Chicago Cubs to over the San Francisco Giants.

The Cubs pounded 16 hits for a two-game total of 31 against the Giants while earning their first series sweep of the season.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 2

Willie Randolph tied a club record with three doubles among his four hits and Fernando Valenzuela pitched his second straight complete game as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2.

BRENT: From 'NFL Today' to Little League World Series

(From 1D)

"I consider him a friend. And I'm hopeful that he'll be at ABC for as long as I am," Musburger said.

Nonetheless, speculation continued in the television industry about a possible Michaels move to CBS. Michaels, who met with CBS last month, has filed an arbitration grievence against ABC because it suspended him for using his daughter as a runner during a skating broadcast.

Michaels, the play-by-play announcer for Monday night football, did not return a telephone message left on his answering machine in Los Angeles.

Musburger and his brother-agent, Todd, both said he was not interested in becoming ABC's lead NFL announcer.

"It has not been discussed — between Dennis and I — anything about Monday night," Brent Musburger said.

Musburger was abruptly dismissed by CBS on April 1 after a decade as the network's top sports broadcaster.

"Five years ago, I came within an eyelash of going to work for them," Musburger said. "I'm thrilled to get another opportunity. I got fired on April 1 and I came back on May Day. That's long enough for me."

Swanson said Musburger would announce college football games with former Philadelphia Eagles coach Dick Vermeil and college basketball games with an analyst to be decided later.

He also will broadcast one of ABC's NFL wild card playoff games, host the Super Bowl pregame show next winter and broadcast the World League of American Football.

Musburger's first appearance will be on a prime time special on June 25. His first sporting event will be the Hambletonian on Aug. 4, followed by the Little League World Series three weeks later.

The 50-year-old Musburger had been host of "The NFL Today" since 1975. He also broadcast college football games and anchored CBS coverage of the Masters golf tournament, the NBA finals, the Pan American Games and U.S. Open tennis highlights shows. He was let go by CBS on the eve of the NCAA championship game, his final appearance on the network.

When Musburger began broadcasting in Chicago in the late 1960's, Swanson was on the air opposite him. They also broadcast against each other in Los Angeles before Swanson got off the air and joined management.

After Musburger was let go by CBS, he accused CBS Sports president Neal Pilson and executive producer Ted Shaker of trying to force him out. Musburger also said they had spread rumors that he was hard to work with.

"It was the one thing that hurt because the one thing I'm not is hard to work with on the field," Musburger said. "It's all past. I can't worry about yesterday. The proof will be what the people at ABC say about me in a couple of years."

Musburger's 5½-year contract with CBS, which paid him $2 million per year, was to expire in July. Before signing with ABC, he had discussions with Ted Turner about possibly going to his broadcasting group.

"They were very serious. I enjoyed my discussions with Turner," Musburger said. "I think they have a strong operation going in Atlanta. Had it not been for the opportunity presented by Dennis and ABC, I would have had no problem working with those people."

KNICKS: NY has to win again at home — then go back to Boston

the way we've played in this series, said we were quitting," said Ewing, who made 14 of 34 shots, two more attempts than his total in the first two games. "We're not quitters, and I think we showed that."

"They looked for him every time and that's something they didn't do in Boston," Celtics center Robert Parish said of Ewing. "They went to him a lot and he delivered."

"The Knicks played hard and earned the victory," Celtics coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "We didn't take care of the business of boxing out and that killed us."

Ewing had 21 points and 16 rebounds at halftime, but he committed his fourth foul early in the third quarter and left the game with 7:57 left in the period and the score tied 60-60.

At times this season, the Knicks have folded in that situation, but not on this occasion.

With Ewing out of the game, the Knicks outscored Boston 21-19 and took an 81-79 lead into the final quarter.

Ewing then returned and scored the first five points of the fourth quarter, giving New York a seven-point advantage it never lost.

The Knicks expanded the margin to 91-83 with six minutes left, but the Celtics closed to 100-99 on a free throw by Reggie Lewis with 29 seconds remaining.

Backup forward Kenny Walker, in the game because Oakley fouled out with 14 points, then hit a baseline jumper from 15 feet for a three-point lead with 7.6 seconds left.

"Kevin McHale gave me enough space that I was able to spot up and get my feet under me before I shot," said Walker, who scored nine points. "We were discouraged, embarrassed and frustrated coming out of Boston. Our manhood was on the line in this game."

On the Celtics' final possession, Larry Bird missed an uncontested 3-point attempt that would have tied the game.

"I was wide open and I missed it," Bird said. "You don't get those opportunities very often. When I got the ball, I thought it was going to be all net. But once it left my hand, I knew it was a brick."

Bird finished with 31 points, Dennis Johnson 18 and McHale 17 for the Celtics. Gerald Wilkins had 15 points for New York.

Despite the victory, the Knicks still face a formidable task.

Only two teams in NBA history have come back from a 2-0 deficit to win a best-of-5 series. Fort Wayne did it against St. Louis in 1956 and Golden State rallied to defeat Utah in 1987.

New York led 52-48 at halftime, holding the Celtics to 26 points fewer than they had at halftime of Game 2.

The Knicks led 40-34 with 7:41 left in the second quarter, then went 3:48 without scoring. But Boston managed only six points in the same span, five by Bird.

A jumper by Johnson tied the score for the 10th time in the half, 48-48, before Ewing and Walker closed the period with baskets for a four-point lead.

The Celtics made their first four shots of the game for an 8-2 advantage, but New York scored the next eight points for its first lead.

Bird, who scored 10 points in the first quarter, had five during an 11-2 run that gave the Celtics a 19-12 lead. Ewing then scored 10 of his 12 first-period points in the final 5:06, helping the Knicks back to a 28-28 tie.

Suns 120, Jazz 105

Kevin Johnson shook off a lingering case of intestinal flu to score 16 of his 29 points in the third period as the Phoenix Suns beat the Utah Jazz 120-105 for a 2-1 lead in their first-round playoff series.

Phoenix can clinch the best-of-5 Western Conference series with a victory in Game 4 here Friday night. If the Utah wins, Game 5 will be played Sunday in Salt Lake City.

The loss was the 10th straight at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum since March 1986 for the Jazz, who are 3-35 here in their history.

Thurl Bailey paced Utah with 30 points, Karl Malone had 26 and John Stockton 22.

Tom Chambers added 23 points for the Suns — 13 in the fourth quarter — while Mark West tied his career playoff high with 18.

sixth in the 1984 state meet butterfly race, but opted not to swim in college.

Two years later, Matt finally started to realize his potential when he was fourth in both breaststroke events at the Texas Age Group Swimming state meet.

"That's when everything snapped," Seay says. "That's when I realized what I could do."

Since then, Seay has steadily swam 6,000 yards per week, taking two weeks off at each end of the summer season.

Though the routine of numerous laps in the COM pool may sound boring to some, Seay says he e joys it.

"I (swimming) makes me happy — as much as it does hurt," Seay says.

It's not so much the yardage that makes it hurt, either.

"I can swim 10,000 yards a day and not feel a thing," Seay said. "But swim meets hurt, so workouts have to hurt."

As a result of his diligence, Seay showed steady improvement throughout his high school career.

After finishing well back in the pack at the state meet, Seay won the consolation race as a junior before coming within 1/100 of the state record as a senior.

MHS swim coach Larry Ridge only coached Seay in his senior year, but still gives him high marks for competitive attitude.

"Matt has a mental toughness that I've seen in only the great swimmers," Ridge says. "And, a lot of people don't realize how strong Matt Seay is."

It's that strength that makes him a champion breaststroker. In the breaststroke, Seay's lack of height is no hindrance.

"The breaststroke is the one stroke where it (height) doesn't matter," Seay says. "In the other strokes, the bigger you are — the faster you can go."

Seay is confident that the U.S. Naval Academy will allow him to train enough to reach Olympic levels. Seay recently received an appointment to the USNA.

"They'll give me the time (to train)," Seay said. "Maybe I would be better off swimming-wise at another college, but I looked at everything — not just swimming — when I was deciding where to go."

Seay hopes to major in either chemistry or computer science at the Naval Academy, with an eye toward a possible military career. At the least, he faces a five-year commitment to active duty upon graduation.

Nelson Classic threatened by rain

Associated Press

IRVING — Continuing rains, which have flooded large portions of North Texas, threaten Thursday's start of the Byron Nelson Classic.

"I'm trying to figure out if we can play 36 holes on Sunday," Mike Shea, tournament director for the PGA Tour, said Wednesday.

About four inches of rain fell Wednesday on the TPC at Las Colinas in the Dallas suburbs.

The heavy rains followed storms last week which flooded large portions of North Texas, caused millions of dollars in damage, forced thousands from their homes and were blamed for the loss of seven lives.

Most of the area remained under a flash flood watch.

"The forecast is for more storms, more of the same, tonight. Maybe another 3-4 inches," Shea said. "We'll play when we can."

The pro-am was washed out for the second year in a row and gave the 156-man field a day off. For many of them, it was not completely welcome.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Put forth greater effort and your dreams will come true! July will give you more time for yourself. Make research and educational projects a top priority in September. Career advancement could come by October. It may be time to let go of a nonproductive relationship. Be kind but firm. Implementing creative ideas next January will lead to a pay raise. Only hard work will lay the foundation for lasting financial security. Romance looks rosy next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: boxer "Sugar Ray" Robinson, magician Doug Henning, singer James Brown, songwriter Peter Seeger.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Maintain an open mind and you will learn a lot. Be willing to take a risk on a long shot. An older person expresses appreciation in a meaningful way. Keep up on current affairs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Free yourself from time-consuming activities that are not helping you or anyone else. Look for alternatives when you run into roadblocks. Be subtle when approaching a loved one about a sensitive matter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A request for financial help will receive serious consideration. In the meantime, look for other options. Refuse to make a final decision until you receive all the information you are entitled to.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Higher-ups are more receptive to your ideas today. A bonus is possible. Be honest with someone who cares a great deal for you. Pool your financial resources with trustworthy people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Expressions of understanding are not enough. Insist on knowing the truth. You can reverse an unfavorable ruling. Keep financial transactions private. An innovative idea will boost business profits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An unexpected change in plan creates excitement at your place of employment. Review past successes and failures before deciding what to do next in your career. Experts suggest ways to save money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not trade off long-term goals for short-term profits. Long-distance phone calls can save the cost of business trips. You discover hidden depths within yourself. Use your talents wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep pushing yourself to accomplish more. Ease into a new exercise-and-diet program. Philosophical questions will be answered by those who have had more experience. Trust your own instincts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Reaching a secret agreement with someone who works behind the scenes is a big advantage. Postpone travel and tend to health needs. Encourage mate to join you in getting more exercise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends can provide useful information. A long-distance telephone call brightens your day. Give an older person more tender loving care. Use poetry to express your feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use the phone to generate business at a distance. Turn a hobby into a profitable full-time occupation. Be discreet, but find a way to help a friend in need. Romance may be frustrating.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Inspiration comes easily today. Ignore a former friend who is spreading false rumors. A romantic reconciliation makes your spirits soar! Show an older family member understanding.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are loving, complex and often stubborn. Parents should help these Taureans temper their obstinacy. Their keen powers of concentration make them above-average students.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	4 ♠	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

In every field, you come across a situation so simple that everyone is lured into a sense of false security. That is true at the bridge table, too. This easy play problem revealed a blind spot in a host of very good players.

We like North's decision to bid five clubs, suppressing a very good heart suit. With so many major-suit cards accounted for, it was a near certainty that South had a genuine club suit. South had the values to go on to slam, but fell victim to snow-blindness.

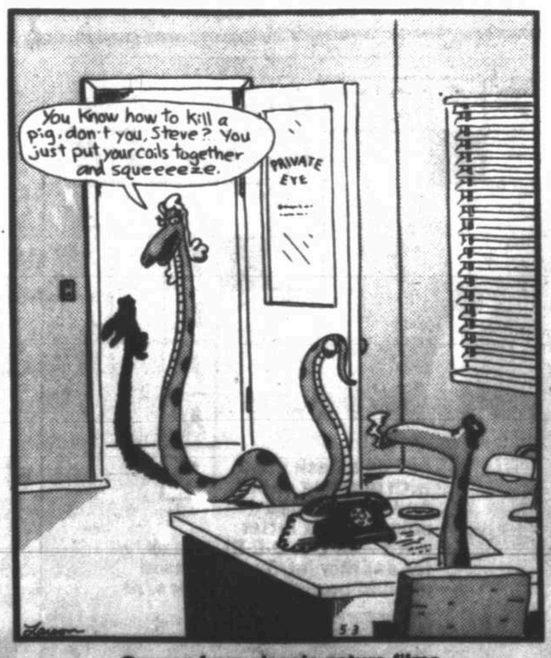

Declarer won the opening spade lead in hand and, in an effort to take the trump finesse, led a diamond toward the king. West ruffed and reverted to spades and East overruffed dummy for a one-trick set. A most unfortunate set of circumstances. Over the years this hand has circulated around the bridge world, and some of the world's great players can be counted among its victims.

Actually, the play of the hand is simplicity itself. All South has to do at trick two is bang down the ace of clubs. If trumps are 2-1, declarer can claim, since he can ruff two losers and discard two on winning hearts.

If trumps are 3-0, it's most unlikely that West holds them. And if he does, there are many combinations of the cards that will still allow declarer to get home; a red-suit squeeze against East, for instance. And if East has the three trumps, declarer has no problem. East surely has at least three diamonds, so declarer will be able to ruff one diamond low, take two discards on the high hearts and then ruff his remaining loser with the ten of trumps, losing only one trick to the king.

Man arrested for sending threats to George Harrison

LONDON (AP) — A man who allegedly sent threatening letters to George Harrison was arrested Wednesday, police said.

The 47-year-old ex-Beatle received the letters at his mansion in Friar Park near Henley, 35 miles west of central London, where he lives with his wife and son.

Harrison

The Daily Mirror reported that Harrison has been haunted by fear of an assassin's bullet ever since another former Beatle, John Lennon, was slain in 1980. Harrison is constantly accompanied by a bodyguard, the paper said.

Thames Valley police swooped on a south London address to detain the man after an examination of the letters' postmarks found they were all sent from that area, a police spokesman said.

"We have traced the person who sent the letters. Papers will be submitted for consideration for prosecution," said a police spokesman, who was not identified in keeping with British custom.

The newspaper reported that Harrison had received five anonymous handwritten letters in recent weeks threatening death.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Pop star Belinda Carlisle has withdrawn from appearing at the Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo, saying livestock at such events are mistreated.

Carlisle

"Watching people roughly rope terrified calves is not my idea of entertainment," Carlisle said in a statement Tuesday.

Frontier Days officials denied animals are mistreated. Terry Bridwell, head of the event's public relations committee, said the singer's views "appear to be based on misinformation."

Carlisle, a spokeswoman for People for Ethical Treatment of Animals, said she was offered $35,000 to appear July 23, but turned it down when she learned events would include a rodeo, chuckwagon racing and bullfighting. Her statement said rodeos involve the use of testicular bucking straps, electric prods, sharp sticks, caustic ointments and other devices.

None of those items can be used in Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association-sanctioned rodeos such as Frontier Days, Bridwell said.

Carlisle has been replaced by Michael Damian of "The Young and the Restless."

NEW YORK (AP) — A lawyer for Johnny Carson said the talk-show host's first wife is hoping negative publicity for her ex-husband will force him to increase her alimony.

"Simply put, this is a baldfaced holdup — a vehicle to generate unfavorable publicity in an attempt to extort money," Carson's lawyer, Stanley Arkin, said in court papers filed Tuesday.

Joan Wolcott "Jody" Carson, 62, is asking the court to order Carson to pay her $120,000 a year. She gets $13,500 yearly.

"For him, that's like paying carfare," she said.

The Carsons were married in 1949 and divorced in 1963. In 1970, Mrs. Carson agreed to the annual amount, which was to be paid even if she remarried. She remarried the same year as the settlement.

Her attorney, Raoul Felder, stressed that he is not asking to nullify the agreement, only to "adjust her income so that she can live adequately."

Arkin said the first Mrs. Carson's "flawed and baseless position" is that Carson owes her because he happened to prosper many years after their divorce.

Carson, 64, and his fourth wife, Alexis Maas, 41, have been married since 1987.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor has improved considerably but doctors wouldn't speculate on how much longer the actress will be hospitalized while she recovers from pneumonia, her publicist said Wednesday.

"She's doing fine. She has improved significantly," said her New York City spokeswoman, Chen Sam. "We don't know how much longer she will be hospitalized."

Twenty-four days earlier, Miss Taylor entered Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital with a sinus infection. But her condition worsened and she was moved to the intensive care unit at St. John's Hospital and Health Center.

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Maverick Soviet politician Boris Yeltsin got up from his hospital bed and walked Wednesday for the first time since undergoing surgery for a slipped disc two days earlier, his doctor said.

The 59-year-old opposition figure recovered "90 percent of the movement in his right foot and is recovering satisfactorily from the operation," said Dr. Josep Llovet Tapies of Barcelona Hospital.

Yeltsin arrived Sunday to appear on a Catalonian regional television talk show. On Monday, he canceled his activities after complaining of back pains and was later taken to the hospital for surgery.

Llovet Tapies indicated Yeltsin was to remain hospitalized for two to three days, but full recuperation after his return to Moscow was expected to extend for a month.

Oil prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices fell Wednesday as OPEC's latest attempt to curb overproduction stalled.

The market moved higher in early trading on anticipation that an agreement to limit output might be reached. But when traders heard reports that ministers meeting in Geneva could not agree on how to allocate production cuts, prices fell back.

The June contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude oil, slipped 13 cents to close at $18.68 a 42-gallon barrel after trading as high as $19.10 early in the session.

Natural gas for June delivery rose to $1.575 per million British thermal units, from $1.565 Tuesday.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended mostly higher Wednesday in quiet trading following a mixed performance overseas. Gold prices fell slightly after rising in Europe and Asia.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $369.50 a troy ounce, down 50 cents from late Tuesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar eased to 158.55 yen from 158.90 yen late Tuesday.

The dollar was mixed against the British pound from late Tuesday. Sterling sold for $1.6435 in London, up from $1.6385, and for $1.6425 in New York, down from $1.6445.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's quotes, included: 1.6848 West German marks, up from 1.6805; 1.4550 Swiss francs, down from 1.4555; 5.6530 French francs, up from 5.6370; 1,234.75 Italian lire, up from 1,231.75; and 1.16715 Canadian dollars, up from 1.16455.

In London, gold closed at $369.25 an ounce, up from $368.50.

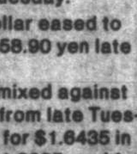

Silver prices were mixed. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.988 a troy ounce, down 2.5 cents from Tuesday.

Taking a loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department plans to borrow $30.5 billion from the public next week in a series of debt auctions to replenish the government's coffers.

The Treasury said Wednesday it plans to sell $10.5 billion in three-year notes, $10 billion in 10-year notes and $10 billion in 30-year bonds next week in one of its regular quarterly auctions to refinance the national debt.

Enron Corp. spin-off still paying off

■ When Enron Corp. realized its stock was undervalued it initiated a unique spinoff of its oil company that has been highly successful and has quickly increased the stock value of both companies.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

When a stock is undervalued, corporations have several options: Hope stockholders and takeover artists do not notice, or come up with a quick plan to improve values before they do notice.

When Enron Corp. realized that its stock was undervalued, it came up with a unique plan that was both quick and successful — it spun off its oil and gas operations, Enron Oil & Gas, as a public company.

"It has been highly successful," said Forrest E. Hoglund, chairman and chief executive officer of Enron Oil & Gas. In Midland for a meeting of Kansas University alumni, Hoglund said that Enron Oil & Gas stock was trading at 18¾ when it went public in October, but is now trading at 22 and has gone as high as 25.

He said that Enron Corp. now owns 84 percent of the stock and that the stock accounts for two-thirds of the value of Enron Corp. stock.

Said Hoglund: "Enron Corp. stock has moved up as Enron Oil & Gas stock has moved up. Their stock went from $36 to $62. It was a unique way to increase value, but it achieved the precise goals we desired."

He said there had been no direct takeover threat to prompt Enron to spin off its oil and gas unit, merely the realization that something needed to be done to increase value to stockholders.

Hoglund, who had a long career with Texas Oil & Gas, said he was excited about the spinoff. "I wanted the opportunity to build one more public company."

He said Enron Oil & Gas, which produces nearly a half billion cubic feet of gas daily, was able to replace 200 percent of its reserves last year because of an aggressive drilling and acquisition program. "We have been able to acquire $50 million in properties in the last three to four months, but we are also very active in drilling, in South Texas, offshore and in the Permian Basin.

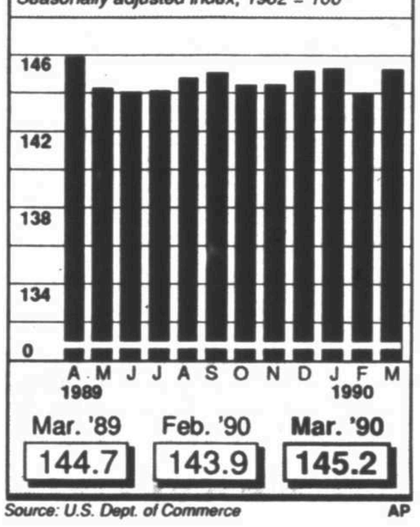

The Kansas University graduate said Midland was Enron Oil & Gas's fourth largest division and one of its most active and that it would become more active in future as the natural gas market expands. He noted that 90 percent of the company's reserves were in natural gas, and that Enron was still actively involved in the Val Verde Basin, Delaware Basin and New Mexico gas plays.

"We feel we are on the edge of greatness for natural gas. The only problem is the edge keeps getting pushed out a little further," he said. Hoglund sees a bad year for natural gas prices in 1990, but added that it was inevitable that natural gas would eventually be priced on a parity with crude oil.

He noted also that compressed natural gas (CNG) as a transportation fuel was slow in coming, but would eventually play a strong role in the energy mix of America. "It will happen," he said.

OPEC meets to halt price slide

■ OPEC ministers agree at Wednesday's emergency meeting that production cuts are needed to halt the slide in oil prices, but squabbling is sure to erupt over who will make the cuts and how much will be made.

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

GENEVA – OPEC oil ministers are gathered here for an emergency session to stop falling oil prices, but none appeared to have a miracle cure for the slumping oil market.

Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agree that production cuts are essential to reverse a 25 percent price fall since the first of the year, but this week's meeting likely will

Economic indicators on upswing

■ Economic reports issued Wednesday by the government indicate the economy is ready for 'takeoff' later in the year, provided the Federal Reserve doesn't lighten the fuel with higher interest rates.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge made its largest gain in more than a year in March, the government said Wednesday.

"Basically, the message is the economy is showing signs the worst is behind it," said Robert G. Dederick, chief economist with the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

Trade talks given sense of urgency

By Martin Crutsinger

Hills

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills tried Wednesday to impart a sense of urgency to stalled trade talks by predicting "gravely diminished prosperity for all" if negotiations fail.

Hills' warning came at the start of three days of negotiations with trade ministers from Japan, the 12-nation European Community and Canada.

The officials gathered at a resort north of here to search for ways to break an impasse in a four-year effort to overhaul the rules governing the world trading system.

The talks, involving almost 100 nations, are designed to lower a variety of barriers to trade in agriculture, textiles and other manufactured goods, and services such as banking and investment.

The positions of opposing parties have become so entrenched that many fear failure for the talks being held under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Such an outcome would deal a blow to the administration's hopes for expanding export opportunities for U.S. farmers and businesses as a way of whittling down America's huge trade deficit, which has topped $100 billion for six years.

Hills, speaking to a group of business writers before the talks opened, called the negotiations "the last, best chance this century to create the trading rules we so sorely need for the next century."

Calling 1990 a "pivotal year for the world economy," Hills painted failure of the talks in stark terms of diminished

Greyhound, union resume bargaining

By Karen Ball

WASHINGTON (AP) — Greyhound and the union representing its striking drivers agreed Wednesday to resume bargaining talks this week, officials said following a meeting with federal mediators.

"We've got some good things happening here. They're hell-bent on getting a contract," Bernard E. DeLury, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said at a news conference following a meeting with top negotiators from each side.

Contract talks, which have been stalled since March 18, will resume Saturday morning at the Mediation Service's office in Washington, DeLury said. The company walked out of negotiations March 18 and refused to bargain until a week passed without violence.

Greyhound Vice President Anthony P. Lannie said the company is "satisfied that the violence is behind us ... we're anxious to move forward with negotiations." He noted it has been 10 days since a shooting or bomb threat occurred.

If a violent incident occurs before Saturday, he said, "We'll take that as it comes."

DeLury said, "I think the parties are satisfied that fruitful negotiations can commence from this point forward."

Escaping taxes difficult under new tax laws

By Scott Burns

Q. I am currently doing research on tax loopholes for my high school government class. What are the most common procedures people use to try to avoid taxes today? Are they successful? Is the IRS trying to cut down on people cutting their taxes? — D.R., Wadsworth, Ohio.

Burns

A. The most common tool people use to reduce their tax bill is the deductibility of home mortgage debt. After the tax reform of 1986, home mortgage interest deductions, some say, are the ONLY "tax shelter." (Unfortunately, as you can see from the next letter, it is often used blindly and may offer no real advantage.)

In recent years the Internal Revenue Service has increased the reporting requirements for all kinds of activity so that it is now much more difficult for income to escape taxation. In addition, there is steady pressure on deductions for expenses such as employee benefits, retirement plans, etc., that makes some people decide that it is better to pay taxes than avoid them.

One problem is that existing exemptions and deductions allow a great deal of income to escape taxation altogether. In 1986, for instance, taxpayers had personal income of $3,531 billion according to Statistics of Income (an IRS publication), but only $1,665 billion of it, or 47.2 percent, was taxable. When you read about congressional efforts to "broaden the tax base," what is being discussed is the 53 percent of all income that escapes taxation.

Most people now pay more in employment taxes than they pay in federal income taxes. One probable consequence is that many people try to escape taxation altogether by earning completely invisible income ("underground" income) rather than looking for "tax shelters."

Q. I am a 64-year-old single retiree widow with $32,000 of yearly income. This puts me in the 28 percent tax bracket. I have a well diversified portfolio worth $250,000. I recently purchased a condo and borrowed $65,000 with monthly payments of $766. (I did it this way to utilize the interest tax break). Do you consider this a wise move? I could make extra payments on the principal at no penalty and wonder if I did this the first four or five years of the loan would it be a smart move? I would save interest with each payment. My mortgage is an ARM with a current interest rate of 10 percent. — J.C., Rockport, Texas.

A. You need to start from scratch to see exactly what that "tax break" is worth to you. My calculator says that the monthly payments on a 30 year loan of $65,000 at 10 percent are $570; a 15 year mortgage would be $698. So your loan payment must include real estate taxes as well.

Without exact information, I am going to assume that your payment includes your mortgage, real estate taxes, and homeowners insurance. Your interest payments, right now, total about $6,400 a year and your real estate taxes could be another $1,200 a year for total deductions of $7,600 a year.

As a single taxpayer, you get a standard deduction of $3,100. Unless you have deductions from non-real estate sources such as medical expenses, charitable deductions, etc., this means that some of your real estate deductions give you no advantage — about $3,100 worth. Your probable tax savings are 28 percent of $4,500 or $1,260.

To get that "saving," however, you must pay 10 percent interest, about 2 percent more than you would earn on the same amount of money as savings — so, in effect, you pay $1,300 in extra interest to get the tax savings of $1,260.

Another limit is the possible taxability of Social Security income. If your income from other sources is over $25,000, a portion of your Social Security income

ANALYSIS

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Hopes for a respite from the recent rise of interest rates helped the stock market stage a moderate advance Wednesday.

Analysts said some traders apparently were buying on expectations that a forthcoming financing by the government might draw a better response than has been feared.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 20.72 to 2,689.64, stretching its gain since the start of the week to 44.59 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 864 up, 612 down and 478 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 141.61 million shares, against 149.02 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 171.08 million shares.

After the market closed the Treasury spelled out plans for its quarterly sale of bonds and notes next week, saying it would auction a record $30.50 billion in new securities.

The size of the "refunding" and the reception it gets from investors are widely seen as pivotal influences on the near-term course of interest rates.

Rates have been climbing lately, in part because of uneasiness about the Treasury auctions.

In the credit markets Wednesday, prices of long-term government bonds declined slightly in early trading, but then recovered to finish little changed.

American General was the day's most active issue, up 7⅛ at 47⅝ on turnover of more than 7.1 million shares. The company, after asserting that it had won a proxy battle against Torchmark, announced plans to seek other prospective buyers.

Xerox fell 1¼ to 46¾. The company denied rumors that it was considering a cut in its dividend on the heels of its recent report of lower-than-expected quarterly earnings from continuing operations.

Halliburton, which posted higher earnings for the first quarter, gained ⅞ to 44⅛.

Chrysler rose ½ to 15¾ in active trading on top of a ¾-point gain Tuesday, when the company reported an 80 percent decline in first-quarter earnings. Some analysts had expected the profit showing to be worse than it turned out.

Other gainers among the blue chips included Exxon, up ¾ at 45⅝; International Business Machines, up 1⅛ at 109⅛; General Motors, up ½ at 44¾, and Boeing, up ¾ at 73.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $19.45 billion, or 0.61 percent, in value.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Late bond interest payments not normal

By Bill Doyle

Q. The brokerage firm at which we have an account and through which we purchased a number of corporate bonds holds the bonds for us. Some bonds are in "street name" — registered in the brokerage's name — but most are in my name and my wife's name.

Bond interest payments are due on the first of the month but are not deposited to us for anywhere from two to three weeks later. I feel that is too long. Am I out of line for expecting a lag of two or three days, rather than weeks?

Doyle

A. Not at all. There are times when a bank acting as interest-paying agent for a bond issue is late with payments. However, such a delay seldom exceeds a week. The two and three week waits you are experiencing almost certainly are the fault of your brokerage firm.

In this day and age, interest payments on corporate and municipal bonds can be made in a variety of ways.

Many bonds are in "book-entry" form — with ownership recorded on computers and no engraved certificates issued. In that case, interest payments go to brokerage firms by wire and should be received on the due dates.

With "registered bonds" for which certificates are issued, the owner's name appears on the bond and on the issuer's books. Checks are mailed for interest payments and should go out on the due dates.

In the case of an old-fashioned "bearer bond," the owner's name is not on the bond or the record books. A coupon has to be cut off and presented to the interest-paying agent for payment. Your brokerage should do that in advance of the interest due date, so that interest is received on or shortly after the due date.

Assuming your brokerage is handling all this properly, all the interest payments should reach that firm in short order and should be credited to your brokerage account the day they arrive. It's no secret that many brokerages are slow in doing that.

It's past time for you to have a firm talk with your broker. Tell him or her that, if the situation is not corrected, you are going to sign an "automatic account transfer" and move your securities and future business to a more cooperative brokerage firm.

Q. When a bond I own matures and my brokerage firm has that bond in its possession in plenty of time before the maturity date, how long should I expect to wait to get the bond's maturity value?

A. The money should be credited to your brokerage account and available to you on the bond's maturity date. A delay of a couple of days, for the firm to take care of the details and transfer of funds, can be called reasonable — but really unnecessary.

If the brokerage is on the ball, it presents the bond to the trustee of the bond issue in advance of the maturity date. The trustee — usually a bank — is required to pay on the maturity date.

There can be a delay, if the bond issuer has not provided the trustee with the necessary money. Also, some bond trustees have been known to send out maturity checks a bit late.

Q. If I request that money from an interest payment or the maturity value of a bond my brokerage firm held for me be deposited in a money market mutual fund account I have at that firm, what is a reasonable time for that transaction to be completed?

A. The day the interest payment is due and the day the bond matures is reasonable, unless the brokerage has not received the money.

Through use of their computers, some brokerages automatically "sweep" money from each customer's account into that customer's money market fund at the end of every business day, so the customers — not the firm — have the use of the money.

A growing number of firms, however, are sweeping the money into customers' accounts the day after the money arrives at the brokerage.

And some brokerages program their computers to sweep the accounts only once a week or at longer intervals.

TALKS: Failure would diminish prosperity

living standards for both industrial and developing countries.

"Down one path lie open markets, expanded trade, economic growth and prosperity. Down the other lie closed markets, nations turned inward and gravely diminished prosperity for all."

Hills said she hoped the discussions, being held in a wine country resort in Napa, would prvide enough guidance so that lower-level negotiators will be able to reach preliminary agreement in at least some of the 15 broad areas under discussion at a July 23 session in Geneva, Switzerland.

It is expected the talks will be high on the agenda when President Bush is host for the seven-nation economic summit this summer in Houston.

A chief aim of the United States is an elimination of all trade-distorting agricultural subsidies. Hills estimated that ending the costly subsidies could boost U.S. farm exports by $11 billion annually — equal to an extra $3,400 for every American farmer.

However, the European Community is fighting efforts to reform the subsidy program that is politically popular with European farm groups.

The United States has encountered resistance among Third World countries to its demands for strengthened rules to prevent patent and copyright piracy, which costs U.S. businesses an estimated $60 billion annually.

Third World nations, led by India, are fighting a U.S. proposal to expand the GATT market-opening rules to cover trade in services, such as banking, investment and insurance.

U.S. companies excel in the service field, where 90 percent of new American jobs are being created. Developing countries fear their infant service businesses would be no match for huge multinational companies.

Developing nations are pushing for the GATT talks to scrap trade barriers for textile products. But the United States, bowing to pressure from American textile groups, wants a less comprehensive phase-down of existing textile tariffs and quotas.

The current GATT trade talks, launched in Uruguay in 1986, are scheduled to conclude in Brussels on Dec. 3-7.

Railroad Commission enacts new horizontal drilling rule

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission has enacted a statewide rule on horizontal drilling, and officials are saying it will promote the orderly development of oil and gas reservoirs.

The new rule should speed up the permitting process for operators seeking to drill new horizontal drainhole wells, the commission said Wednesday.

Horizontal drilling is a technique used to tap oil reserves that can't be recovered profitably using standard methods. Target reserves typically are found in vertical fractures or crevices in rock.

Previously, operators had to petition the commission for modifications to field rules for each field in which they wanted to drill a horizontal drainhole.

Under the new rule, the amount of oil each horizontal well is permitted to produce is determined by a formula that takes into account the length of the horizontal portion of the wellbore. Generally, the longer the horizontal leg, the more acreage the well can drain, and the greater amount of oil it can produce.

What's the alternative?

Pay off the mortgage. This means reducing your taxable income by the 8 percent you are probably earning on $65,000 or $5,200 a year. Your mortgage expenses, however, will decline by $6,845 a year. Your spendable income will increase.

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of Soviet business leaders is making a two-day tour of Austin in search of local companies interested in cashing in on the Cold War's thaw.

Ravil Burkaev, a member of the delegation and president of the Soviet cooperative INCONT, said the team was touring Texas in an effort to drum up interest in joint Soviet-American business deals.

OPEC: No easy answers

be a tug of war over who will make the sacrifices.

Iraqi minister Issam Abdul Raheem Chalabi said he believes production must come down at least to the cartel's official 22.1-million-barrel ceiling – and says even deeper cuts may be necessary to bring prices back to the $18-a-barrel target.

The average of the OPEC basket of crudes used to calculate the group's prices was $15.37 a barrel for the fourth week in April.

Chalabi pegs current production at 23.7 million barrels to 24 million barrels, although other OPEC sources say it's closer to 23.3 million to 23.6 million barrels a day.

A producer of inexpensive, plentiful sour crude, Iraq is having a hard time selling its oil and is getting less for it than many of its OPEC brethren are getting for theirs.

"It's quite high," Chalabi said of OPEC's production level. "It will have to go down quite a bit, possibly even below 22 million barrels a day. For me, the lower the better. I'm prepared to discuss (cuts) below 22 (million barrels a day)."

To achieve necessary cuts, Chalabi urged all OPEC members to make reductions, "particularly those who are exceeding their quotas."

Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates are the worst offenders, although six others are overproducing to a lesser extent, a delegate from one Gulf nation said. Only Iraq, Iran, Indonesia and Algeria are staying within their share, the delegate said.

OPEC President Sadek Boussena of Algeria, who called the meeting after OPEC crudes fell below the critical $15 mark briefly late last month, said he agreed that everyone should contribute barrels.

"Ideally, they would cut about 1 million barrels from current levels of about 23.5 million," said Paul Miotok, analyst with Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York, who is observing the meeting here. "Near term, they need to help themselves by cutting production."

American General put up for sale

By Ruth Rendon

HOUSTON (AP) — American General Corp., the nation's fourth largest insurance company, surprised shareholders and one suitor Wednesday by putting itself up for sale with an expected $7 billion price tag.

Hook

American General, based in Houston, made the announcement at its annual shareholders meeting where the anticipated event had been a showdown with Torchmark Corp., an Alabama insurance company considering a takeover fight.

American General Chairman Harold S. Hook said the company was vulnerable to possible acquisitions at a discount price and therefore decided to offer itself for sale to realize the maximum value for stockholders.

Company officials and analysts said they expected the bidding for American General to reach about $7 billion, or more than $55 per share. The company's stock was the most actively traded Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange, climbing $7.75 to close at $47.62½ as 5.27 million shares changed hands.

Birmingham, Ala.-Torchmark made an unsolicited $6.34 billion, or $50 per share, cash and stock buyout offer for American General in March, but withdrew the offer, opting instead to wage a proxy fight to elect its own five nominees to the 15-member board.

Since then each company has been vigorously urging shareholders to support their board nominees. Torchmark also asked that shareholders approve two resolutions calling for American General to hire an investment banking firm and appoint a committee of independent directors to evaluate acquisition proposals.

"We are confident we elected our slate of directors," Hook said to a loud applause of the 650 shareholders attending the meeting at the Westin Oaks Galleria.

"I wish that was the end of the story," he added before reading a statement announcing the sale.

Torchmark Chairman Ron Richey said he was pleased with American General's announcement.

"From the outset, our objective has been to negotiate a transaction with American General, and we look forward to sitting down with them to discuss a merger proposal," Richey said. "Based on today's announcement, regardless of the proxy vote, we intend to make another proposal to combine Torchmark with American General."

The decision to sell the company was made about 6 p.m. Tuesday in a meeting with the entire board, Hook said. He would not say if the board's decision was unanimous.

The sale announcement could not be made public until the company's proxy vote had ended, he said.

TALKS: Company feels violence past

(From 1E)

Edward M. Strait, president of the Amalgamated Council of Local Unions, noted that the union has condemned the violence and urged strikers to turn in those responsible.

When the company's 6,300 drivers and 3,000 clerical workers and mechanics walked out March 2, the union cited wages and job security.

However, now there is also the question of whether the 2,500 replacement drivers that have been hired will get to keep their jobs. The union plans to demand that they not be given seniority over striking drivers while the company maintains they will remain on the payroll.

Greyhound spokesman George Gravley said Greyhound's replacement drivers and about 500 union members who had crossed picket lines were providing 83 percent of the bus line's normal service.

"We really challenge those figures as wildly inflated," countered union spokesman Nick Nichols. "Putting a bus on a route once a week when they used to run two or three routes a day is hardly what we consider delivering service."

About 40 shootings have occurred at buses and terminals since the strike began. Four striking drivers have been arrested in some of the shootings.

In addition, dozens of bomb threats and rock-throwing incidents have targeted the company.

UPSWING: Indicator climb highest in year

(From 1E)

The Commerce Department reported that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators rose 0.9 percent in March, nearly offsetting the 1 percent decline in February. It was the steepest increase since a 1.6 percent gain in June 1988.

The index is designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months ahead.

"The LEI is hinting at a takeoff for the economy later this year from an anemic growth pattern of the fourth quarter of 1989 and the first quarter of 1990," said Allen Sinai, chief economist with the Boston Co.

However, Dederick said the economy was "not prepared to suddenly go off on a spree."

Sinai said any progress could be dampened if the Federal Reserve decided to boost interest rates further to curb rising inflation. High rates would slow further what has been sluggishness in the auto, construction and industrial sectors of the economy.

In another report Wednesday, the Commerce Department pointed to other signs of improvement in the industrial sector, saying that orders to factories for manufactured goods rose 3.8 percent in March.

The March gain was the largest in more than a year and, together with February's 1.8 percent advance, offset January's 5.5 percent decline, the steepest fall since a 7 percent decrease in December 1974.

"The increase in the leading indicators was a big one, widespread, solidly based," Sinai said.

Southwest offers Wright compromise

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines was expected today to present its first formal position on efforts to repeal a federal law that restricts flights from a Dallas airport.

Southwest, the only scheduled passenger carrier at Love Field near Dallas, has not taken a public stand on year-long efforts to repeal the Wright Amendment, which restricts flights at Love Field to Texas and four surrounding states.

Southwest was expected to deliver a suggested compromise from company chairman Herbert D. Kelleher to Dallas City Council members this morning. The compromise, according to The Dallas Morning News, would allow the city to make better use of Love Field while not threatening growth at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The Wright amendment forbids airlines serving Love Field to offer connecting service from cities within the five-state service area to destinations beyond.

Last September, the City Council voted 8-2 to back a move in Congress to replace the Wright Amendment with a 650-mile perimeter on non-stop flights from Love Field.

Since then, a debate has raged over whether repeal would foster airline competition and provide lower air fares for local residents or whether it would draw passengers away from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

In his memo to the City Council, Kelleher recommends keeping the Wright Amendment's current ban on nonstop flights beyond Texas and the surrounding states, but proposes that restrictions be lifted on flight connections beyond the region.

Pepsi out, Coca-Cola in at Burger King Corp.

N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Burger King Corp., struggling to find the secret formula that will revive its foundering fast-food business, has flushed its fountains of Pepsi in favor of Coca-Cola.

The decision announced Tuesday means the Coca-Cola Co. now will supply soft drinks to the country's top two fast-food chains, McDonald's Corp. and Burger King, as well as two-thirds of the rest of America's restaurants.

Pepsico Inc. officials figure they're just a victim of Miami-based Burger King's yearlong overhaul under new ownership.

"It really comes as no surprise," said Tod Mackenzie, of Pepsi-Cola. "They are trying to create a new Burger King. It's very much a mentality of out with the old and in with the new."

Since Grand Metropolitan PLC of Britain bought Burger King's parent in January 1989, a rapid-fire reformulation has dispensed with the hamburger chain's ad agency, hundreds of employees, several layers of management and 100 franchisees.

Pepsi had been Burger King's cola of choice since 1983, when the chain dumped Coca-Cola after a 15-year run. But Pepsi's formal contract expired last summer.

Barry Gibbons, Burger King's chief executive officer, said Coca-Cola won "because of its ability to provide a powerful mix of global brand strength, state-of-the-art technological capabilities and distinctive service."

Reed angry hostages still captive in Lebanon

AP Laserphoto

Former U.S. hostage Frank Reed, left, wearing a bathrobe, pats the head of his 9-year-old son Tarek, right, as they stand on the balcony of the U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, Wednesday. Behind them is Reed's wife Fifi.

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Former U.S. hostage Frank Reed revealed Wednesday he was held for months with two other American captives in Lebanon and said he was angry and embarrassed that they have not been freed.

Reed, who was released Monday after 42 months in captivity, said he also was held with two British hostages. Reed was flown Tuesday to Wiesbaden for a battery of medical exams and questioning at the U.S. Air Force hospital.

"I have not seen Tom and Terry for a while and I don't know where they are," Reed said, referring to Terry Anderson, The Associated Press chief Middle East correspondent, and Thomas Sutherland, an American educator.

"For God's sake, it's nearly the sixth year for these men. I'm absolutely embarrassed I'm out before they are."

Reed, in his first comments to reporters since arriving in Wiesbaden, said he spent "the good part of two years with Tom and Terry."

Anderson, the longest-held Western hostage in Lebanon, was kidnapped on March 16, 1985. Sutherland was seized June 9, 1985.

"I tell you, I'm very, very angry that Anderson ... Tom and Terry ... are not free," Reed said from the hospital balcony.

Reed, pale and dressed in his blue hospital bathrobe, said he last saw Sutherland in February 1989. Sutherland on Thursday turns 59, marking his fifth birthday in captivity.

Reed, 57, also said he spent three years in the intermittent company of Briton John McCarthy and Brian Keenan, a dual Anglo-Irish citizen. He said he saw them just before his release and they were "well and alive."

"I have been with John and Brian since last October," Reed said. "I've spent almost three years either with John and Brian or having them somewhere in the house with me."

McCarthy, 33, a journalist for the London-based Worldwide Television News agency, WTN, was kidnapped April 17, 1986. Keenan, 39, disappeared while walking to work six days later.

"Those were the only people" I knew" in captivity, Reed said of the four hostages.

The founder of a private school in Beirut, Reed was the second American hostage freed in nine days. Robert Polhill, freed April 22, went through the same medical tests and debriefing last week.

A special State Department team questioned Reed for a second day Wednesday, seeking clues about the 16 remaining Westerners held hostage by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon. Six of the captives are American.

Reed, who lost 60 pounds in his 3½ years of captivity said he initially had been angry with the U.S. administration that hostages were still being held.

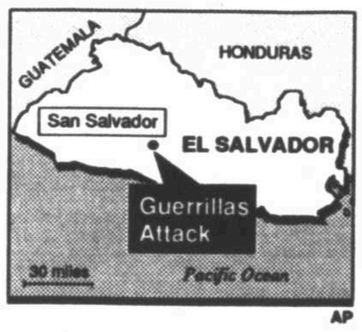

"But I don't think I am now," he said.

The boisterous, lanky Reed was cheered by dozens of journalists as he appeared on the balcony for what was supposed to be a no-questions photo opportunity.

But Reed, in a jocular mood, readily fielded reporters' questions.

Standing on the balcony with his wife, Fahima, and their 9-year-old son, Tarek, Reed smiled and affectionately tousled his child's hair.

AP

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas attacked targets in the capital and dynamited power stations late Tuesday and Wednesday to protest what they called continued human rights violations by the armed forces.

The military said it suffered five dead and six wounded and that 12 civilians were wounded. Rebel casualties were not available.

The attacks began at about 10 p.m., hours after about 40,000 Salvadorans took part in a peaceful May Day parade organized by labor unions and opposition political parties.

Guerrillas and soldiers exchanged fire near the Sheraton Hotel in the wealthy Escalon district, where heavy fighting took place last November in a major guerrilla push.

No sign emerged that the fighting signaled a new offensive in San Salvador, though skirmishes were reported in Ilobasco, 40 miles to the northeast.

Earlier, half this city of 800,000 was blacked out and explosions and automatic weapons fire hit several neighborhoods.

Private radio station YSKL said rebels blasted five high-voltage utility towers on San Salvador volcano, which overlooks the city.

A rebel message protested "the total immunity that exists in this country for members of the armed forces who violate human rights."

It cited "the stalled investigation and evident cover-up of the intellectual authors of the crime against the Jesuits," referring to six priests brutally executed at the Central American University in November.

A colonel, three lieutenants and five soldiers were charged in the killings, which President Alfredo Cristiani admits were done by the military.

Critics complain the investigation should reach higher in the military.

No military officer here has ever been convicted of a rights-related crime, although abuses have been attributed for years to members of the military.

The rebel attacks coincided with May Day and with the scheduled beginning of indirect peace talks between the government and the guerrillas, with a United Nations go-between.

The guerrilla statement said the left wants the talks to proceed.

The 10-year-old civil war has killed an estimated 72,000 people.

The U.S. Congress has been pressuring the Salvadoran government to make progress in investigating the Jesuit deaths and to negotiate in good faith.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bombs wound four policemen

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Bombs exploded Wednesday in two Colombian cities where major cocaine cartels are based, and authorities said four policemen were wounded.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blasts. However, since drug traffickers offered rewards three months ago for each policeman killed, 122 officers have been slain, most of them by bombs.

—The People's Liberation Army, a leftist guerrilla group, kidnapped a federal senator, a radio station said.

—Another guerrilla group, the National Liberation Army, reportedly said it wants former President Jimmy Carter to mediate peace talks with the government. Two bombs were hurled from a speeding car at a police station in the western city of Cali at 5:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

Four policemen were wounded, Lt. Erik Bendec of the national police force in Cali told The Associated Press.

Thatcher has problems

LONDON (AP) — As Margaret Thatcher's troubles pile up, talk about the post-Thatcher era is getting louder.

Nobody has yet written off this most accomplished and tenacious of politicians. She has up to two more years in office — time enough to revive the economy and win an unprecedented fourth election.

But at the moment, things look grim, and nationwide local government elections Thursday are widely expected to underline Mrs. Thatcher's difficulties.

Inflation is heading toward 10 percent. Interest rates, at 15 percent, are devastating the homeowners and business people who until now were Mrs. Thatcher's most loyal voters.

Treasury officials say high interest rates are necessary to fight inflation, and that an improvement should be felt by autumn.

De Klerk, Mandela talk

CAPETOWN, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela on Wednesday urged the swift abolition of apartheid and began historic talks aimed at ending white-minority rule.

The three days of meetings are to remove obstacles to full-scale negotiations on a new constitution that would give the 28-million black majority a voice in national affairs for the first time.

De Klerk and Mandela, standing on the lawn of a Dutch colonial mansion where the talks were held, said South Africans of all races want swift change. All political parties must work toward a peaceful solution to racial and political divisions, they said.

Robbers take jewelry

HONG KONG (AP) — Four robbers held up a shop in one of Hong Kong's best-known hotels Wednesday and escaped with jewelry worth $1.9 million, police reported.

Police said the three men and a woman posed as customers. Two of the men pulled out guns and threatened three women employees of the shop, located in the shopping arcade of the Mandarin Hotel in downtown Hong Kong.

They grabbed several diamond necklaces and bracelets before escaping on foot, police said.
