Officials ponder new City Hall location

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Preliminary talks with a real estate broker representing an area investment group have led city officials to consider packing up City Hall and moving three blocks up the street.

But discussions, thus far, remain "mostly hypothetical," said Mayor J.D. Faircloth.

"If it does take place, it would be such a benefit to the city. It's an opportunity to make a move at an unbelievable price," Faircloth said.

Faircloth declined to reveal the total price of the Atrium Centre Building at 110 W. Louisiana Ave. and said the city is not in contact with the owner.

However, early negotiations revealed the city could purchase the building for less than $6 a square foot.

"Effectively, that's a brand-new building for about the price that buildings are being leased for," Faircloth said. He vowed to scrap the plan if the building can't be purchased for that price.

Negotiations began several months ago when the real estate broker, initially representing the Resolution Trust Corporation, approached city officials with a price on the building. City officials countered with a lower offer and the corporation balked.

In mid-December, the RTC packaged the property with several other properties across the nation and sold it to an investment group — whose identity is unknown

CHICAGO — Mike Ditka, the tantrum-prone coach who awakened the long-dormant Chicago Bears and took them on an emotional 11-year roller-coaster ride that peaked with the 1986 Super Bowl championship, was dismissed Tuesday after the team plunged to a 5-11 record, its worst since 1975. The move, which was announced by the team's president, Mike McCaskey, had been expected and the 53-year-old Ditka came to the news conference prepared, almost. "I'll try to do this with class," he said before choking back tears. "All things must pass. This too shall pass."/1D

HUD trial: guilty

WASHINGTON — Fort Worth, Texas, developer Leonard Briscoe was found guilty of two counts of giving a public official an illegal gratuity but was acquitted of 23 more-serious charges in the influence-peddling case involving the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The jury also found Briscoe's co-defendants — Lance Wilson, a former HUD official, and Maurice David Steier, an Omaha attorney — guilty of making gratuities to the same official.

LERWICK, Shetland Islands — Howling winds and rough seas slammed a tanker onto rocks off the Shetland Islands on Tuesday and frustrated efforts to contain oil gushing into waters teeming with marine and bird life.

The accident threatened to become one of world's worst spills and a major environmental catastrophe.

The nearly 25 million gallons of oil on the U.S.-managed tanker was more than double the amount the Exxon Valdez disaster dumped into Alaskan waters in 1989.

All 34 crew members were evacuated by helicopter after the Liberian-registered tanker Braer lost power. The ship ran aground on the chain's largest island, Mainland, about five hours later as several crewmen who returned tried to attach tow lines.

Bomb threat sends Odessa mall shoppers home early

ODESSA — A bomb threat sent Permian Mall shoppers home early after an evacuation of the center early Tuesday evening.

The mall office received a call at 6:54 p.m. stating that a bomb had been placed in the building, said Permain Mall General Manager Allen Underwood. The mall's Crisis Management Team was notified and the shoppers were evacuated 20 minutes later.

The Odessa Police Department, mall security and mall employees then searched the building for any suspicious device, he said.

"Store employees were responsible for searching their own stores," Underwood said. "The Police Department was basically there to assist in the

Cool efficiency marks first legal hanging in U.S. since 1965

By John K. Wiley
Associated Press writer

WALLA WALLA, Wash. — First there was silence. Then a sharp crack as a trapdoor sprang open and the body of Westley Allan Dodd dropped into view at the end of a 7-foot-1-inch rope.

With cool efficiency, the state of Washington executed the child sex killer early Tuesday in America's first legal hanging since Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood" days nearly three decades ago.

Dodd's body, his head and shoulders covered by a black hood, swung gently on the rope for a moment. Then a curtain was drawn across a window between the death chamber and the witnesses, who included the mothers of his three victims.

The condemned man, who had resisted attempts to appeal his sentence, showed no fear, even "in the last second of his life," said his lawyer, Darrell Lee.

After Dodd murmured his last words about a new-found faith, the black hood was placed over his head and shoulders and the noose was placed around his neck.

The trapdoor beneath his feet dropped open at 12:05 a.m. His bound body plunged the length of the rope, a drop prison officials had calculated would be enough to snap his neck.

Dodd, 31, who confessed to murdering three young boys in Vancouver, was pronounced dead at 12:09 a.m.

"There was no squirming, no kicking, no nothing," Lee said. "He was dead instantly."

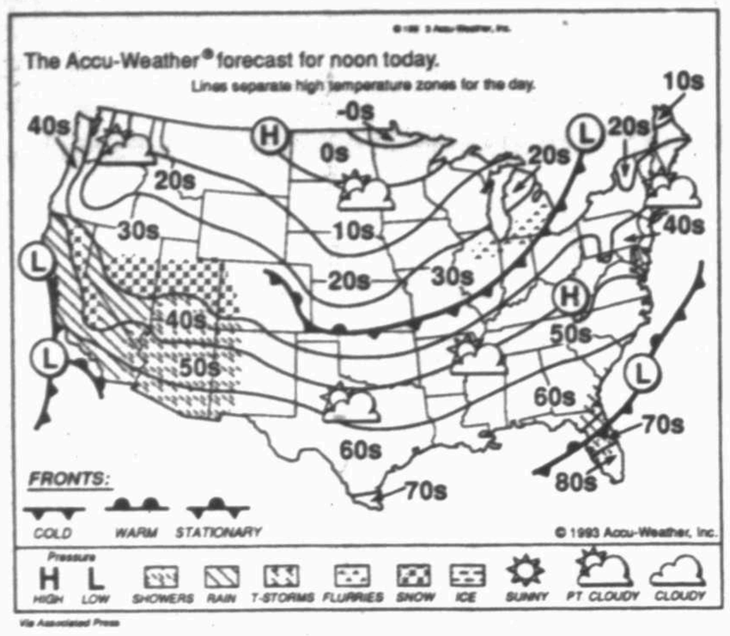

Even in Dodd's hands, slightly crossed in front of the groin, no movement was visible.

The body was transported to Seattle for an autopsy in the King County medical examiner's office.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Look for clouds, 60 today

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high near 60 and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the lower 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 32, Tuesday's high reached 52, compared to the record high for that date of 78 set in 1948. The record low was 13 set in 1970.

STATE

It was a cool, gray day across most of Texas Tuesday, with scattered areas of rain stretching from the Permian Basin to the southern South Plains and eastward to Abilene.

The dreary skies returned to north Texas as a weak low-level southerly flow brought warm, moist air over cool air at the surface. Abilene reported a trace of afternoon rain.

High temperatures in the region ranged from 41 at Abilene to 47 at Waco, Longview, Killeen and Lufkin. Winds were light and variable.

There were clouds and scattered rain across West Texas with little or no accumulation reported. Temperatures were in the 40s and 50s with southeast to southwest winds at 10-20 mph.

Mostly cloudy skies also covered South Texas, but temperatures had climbed into the 60s along the coast and the 50s elsewhere by afternoon. Winds were from the north and east up to 15 mph.

The South Texas forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies through tonight with lows in the 40s and 50s and highs in the 50s and 60s.

North Texas also expected continued gray weather with highs in the upper 40s to mid-50s and lows in the low to mid-30s.

The Panhandle is expected to have clearing skies, but mostly cloudy skies are predicted for the rest of West Texas through Thursday with highs ranging from the upper 30s north to the 60s south and lows ranging from the 20s to the 40s.

NATION

More stormy weather moved into the West on Tuesday, bringing heavy rain and snow, while temperatures in the East rose to record highs.

At midday, snow was falling over the mountains of Idaho, Oregon and northern California, with rain at lower elevations.

Winter storm watches were in effect through Wednesday over the western slopes of California's Sierra Nevada, the higher elevations of northern Arizona, and the higher elevations of central and southern Nevada, the National Weather Service said.

Rain, with snow in the mountains, was forecast for Southern California with two storms approaching the area.

The first storm was expected to arrive by late Tuesday. The second, which was moving along the Washington coast on Tuesday, was expected to hit by Thursday.

Also Tuesday, snow was scattered across the northern Rockies, northern Plains, upper Mississippi Valley, southern Illinois, Michigan and northern Ohio.

Rain over northern New England became mixed with snow over the northern Appalachians.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SPEWS: Disaster threatens North Sea wildlife

tish mainland.

Experts said the spill threatened thousands of puffins, loons, gulls and eider ducks. A resident wildlife expert said six oil-covered seals were sighted.

"It's the saddest night I remember in Shetland," said Jonathan Wills, who lives in the islands.

"Questions must be asked why a single-hulled tanker which is banned around sensitive coastlines in other countries is allowed to be in one of Britain's most vulnerable sites for marine wildlife," said Nancy Harrison of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

Most tankers are now built with double hulls in an attempt to prevent spills.

The Shetland Islands Council said it expected the 18-year-old Braer to break up rapidly because of the stormy weather. Aircraft were standing by, hoping weather would permit spraying of chemical dispersants on the slick early today.

"She's holed in the sterns and in the bows ... you could see the oil beginning to spill out across the sea," said helicopter pilot Tony Brewster, who helped rescue crew members.

The wreck was buffeted by 63 mph winds late Tuesday, with gusts up to 86 mph. The winds blowing from the south threatened to spread oil up the west coast of the island, endangering more bird nesting areas, seal colonies and salmon farms, Wills said.

The nearby waters also are home to common porpoises and killer whales.

The Department of Transport said it expected all of the oil on board to be spilled. But officials said the fact that the crude oil not thick would help minimize the environmental damage.

"Around 40 percent can be expected to evaporate and a further 20 to 30 percent to disperse in the very heavy seas," the department said.

"Some oil will undoubtedly come ashore," it said. "On rock shores oil will be washed off and dispersed by waves. Some will get into coves, bays and beaches, and will need to be cleared up as conditions allow."

Nearly 11 million gallons of oil spilled into Alaska's Prince William Sound after the supertanker Exxon Valdez hit a reef March 24, 1989. That was the worst U.S. oil spill and blackened hundreds of miles of coastline rich in wildlife and fish.

But that disaster dumped thick, heavy oil into a relatively calm, enclosed body of water, while the Braer grounded in open seas.

The 89,700-ton Braer was pounded into the rugged coastline of the Bay of Quendale, 150 miles northeast of the coast of Scotland.

CHELSEA: Clintons choose exclusive private school

based on our changing circumstances."

The tuition at Sidwell Friends is $10,800 a year, Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos said.

The decision was a disappointment to leaders of the city's predominantly black public schools, which have been plagued by violence, poor test scores and budget problems.

District of Columbia officials had hoped Chelsea would be enrolled in a public school, which they would have seen as a signal of confidence in urban education at a time when middle- and upper-class families are seeking alternatives.

"They didn't reject public schools," Stephanopolus said. "The schools in the District of Columbia and across the country are good schools and Governor Clinton supports the public school system, as he has throughout his term as governor and will continue as president. What they did was choose, as a family, Sidwell Friends, and it's a good choice."

He rejected any suggestion that the decision was at odds with Clinton's oft-stated support for public education. "The important point was to make the right choice for Chelsea."

"They wanted to do what is best for their daughter," said spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers. "I think every parent in the country will understand that."

Washington Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly said she understood.

In a written statement, Kelly said, "Although I believe the District of Columbia's public school system is equally challenging, as a mother I understand the family's decision to act in the best interests of their child."

HAITIANS: Clinton gets proposal for new policy

(From 1A)

Caribbean nation, staff members said.

The proposed policy, which is to be announced before his inauguration and would later be made formal in an executive order, would set up an enlarged system to process asylum cases at a number of points inside Haiti, on the American military base at Guantanamo Bay and in third countries in the region.

Over the long term, the Clinton administration would support and bolster efforts by the U.N. and the Organization of American States to resolve Haiti's political crisis, which resulted from the ouster of Haiti's first freely elected president, the Rev. Jean Bertrand Aristide in a military coup in 1991.

But Clinton, who met with his aides Tuesday to discuss the proposed policy, would also emphasize that he will enforce current immigration policy, which prevents Haitians escaping poverty from seeking asylum in the United States and offers protection only to those fleeing political persecution, the aides said.

Clinton does not seem prepared to ease the standards currently applied by the Bush administration to decide whether an applicant has genuine fear of persecution.

"The main goal," one transition official said, "is to keep Haitians in Haiti."

The plan was discussed Tuesday in a meeting in Little Rock that included Clinton; his secretary of state-designate, Warren M. Christopher, the Defense Secretary-designate, Les Aspin; the national security adviser-designate, Anthony Lake; his deputy, Samuel Berger, and Brian Attwood, who is the chief liaison between the Clinton team and the State Department.

Clinton plans to announce the new policy before he takes office — perhaps later this week — in the hope of heading off a flood of Haitian boat people seeking to enter the United States.

Asked at a news briefing in Little Rock Tuesday whether Clinton was poised to announce a plan on Haiti, George Stephanopoulos, his spokesman, said, "Obviously, it's something we have to do relatively soon."

He declined to say whether the Clinton team was drawing up a plan. "The governor's been looking at the issue throughout the transition, as has the entire foreign policy team, and he'll have some announcement to make soon," he said.

During the campaign, Clinton criticized the Bush administration's policy of turning back boat people without determining whether they are eligible for entry into the United States as political refugees.

KRUEGER: Selection sets stage for showdown

(From 1A)

Democrats unite behind Krueger as their only candidate.

"He (Mattox) has got to do well both places," said a liberal activist with ties to both candidates. "We've been (betrayed) by the New Texas time and again. Look at Krueger; he's conservative. But unless Mattox can block him from getting those endorsements, I don't know of too many people who will fall on their sword for him."

Labor leaders are set to vote Monday in Houston. The SDEC will make its decision Tuesday in Austin.

Richards introduced Krueger to hundreds of well-wishers packed into the Texas House chamber shortly after noon in an event clearly set to show Krueger has the backing of the party establishment.

Among those present for Richards' announcement were former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, Comptroller John Sharp, Attorney General Dan Morales, several Texas Supreme Court justices and an assortment of state lawmakers that crossed ethnic and gender lines.

A few feet away in seats usually reserved for reporters, a dozen Texas AFL-CIO officers in white silk union jackets offered solidarity to Krueger, who was opposed by organized labor in his ill-fated 1984 Senate race.

"I hope that when the history is written about what I have done in this office, that history will include my belief in the importance of honesty and integrity in public service. ...," Richards said. "At a time when the public is playing close attention to public servants' behavior, Bob Krueger's character is unassailable."

Jordan, Richards' ethics adviser, responded by lifting two fists into the air and seconding the remarks with a rousing "Here. Here."

Krueger is an Oxford graduate often ribbed by pundits for his knowledge of Shakespeare, but he raised some eyebrows Tuesday when he opened his remarks by quoting Abraham Lincoln.

"I do the very best I can, the very best I know how; and I mean to keep doing so 'til the end," he said.

PONDER: Discussions are 'mostly hypothetical' to local officials.

(From 1A)

The same broker, now representing the investment group, approached city officials again and said the original offer may work.

"We kind of made a ridiculous bid and they said OK," Faircloth said. "But we won't know anything for maybe six months. All we know is this particular investment group believes their bid will be successful. It very well may not be."

Faircloth, who said the city is discussing several transactions to help improve the city's assets, believes there is no better time to seek property holdings.

"We have been approached and the transaction is too good to pass up. It's a timely situation because the economy is so depressed. The market for complete downtown buildings is pretty minimal right now."

The issue has received "about equal support" from City Council members, Faircloth said.

"They've agreed to let us go ahead and find out more but essentially they remain pretty noncommittal," he said.

Any proposed deal would hinge on whether the city could find another occupant for the current City Hall building at 300 N. Loraine St.

"We've been talking to the county about leasing or buying the building," Faircloth said. "If the county can't do it, then it's not such an attractive deal. We will not go ahead with this unless we can find something intelligent to do with this building."

Faircloth said that because the vacant building is ready for occupancy, there would be minimal expense in addition to the purchase price.

"We want to make sure our departments can move in with virtually no renovation costs," he said. "Earlier this year the City Council — with myself and councilman (Buddy) Sipes voting against it — approved spending $150,000 to remodel City Hall. For a little bit more we would get to buy a brand new building while doubling our space."

He said the City Hall building is just large enough to house departmental offices, but the extra space could be needed in the future if there is much growth.

"There are many stumbling blocks that would end this idea. We want to cross the hurdles first," he said.

HANGING: Washington executes child sex killer

(From 1A)

quests to commute Dodd's sentence to life in prison.

A last-ditch move by the American Civil Liberties Union to block the hanging as cruel and unusual punishment was rejected Monday by the state Supreme Court.

Death-penalty foes held prayer meetings, vigils and demonstrations across the state. Prison officials arrested five death-penalty opponents after they climbed a snowy embankment near a guard tower.

About 150 people in favor of Dodd's death gathered outside the prison and cheered his hanging. Some set off firecrackers and sparklers.

Attorneys for triple murderer Charles Rodman Campbell, also on Washington's death row, lost a bid to videotape the hanging to bolster their federal court claim that it's cruel and unusual punishment.

However, a judge let an opponent watch the execution, Washington's first since 1963 and the first hanging in the United States since 1965, when four killers were put to death in Kansas. Among them were Richard Eugene Hickock and Perry Edward Smith, the subjects of Capote's book "In Cold Blood."

Besides Washington, execution by hanging is an option only in Montana, Delaware and New Hampshire.

Dodd said he rejected lethal injection because he had hanged one of his victims and wanted the same treatment. Lee also said his client was afraid of needles.

Dodd dropped all appeals and said that unless he were executed, "I will kill and rape again and enjoy every minute of it."

His last words were of a newfound religious faith.

"I was wrong when I said there was no hope, no peace," Dodd said. "I've found both in the Lord, Jesus Christ."

Jewell Cornell, mother of one victim, uttered a sound of disgust.

After the execution, the father of the two other young victims, Clair Neer, shook hands with Dodd's attorney, who argued in court against any delay or appeal.

On Monday, for the first time, Dodd expressed remorse for the killings.

"He was going to ask the children for forgiveness when he saw them in heaven," Lee said.

In his final hours, Dodd amended his will to direct that his body be turned over to family members for cremation and that any proceeds from the sale of his meager estate go to battle child abuse.

Earlier, he had said his remains should go to a woman friend from Tennessee.

Dodd's history of sex crimes began with exposing himself to others at age 9, Lee said. Dodd was arrested repeatedly for molesting children and admitted molesting at least 30.

Lee said that in 1989, Dodd decided to kill his victims to avoid capture.

He raped and stabbed Cole Neer, 11, and stabbed brother William Neer, 10, in a park on Sept. 4, 1989.

Dodd said he abducted 4-year-old Lee Iseli from a school playground in Portland, Ore., took him across the Columbia River to his apartment in Vancouver, then molested and tortured the boy before hanging him the next morning, Oct. 30, 1989.

"He turned killing into sexual enjoyment," Lee said. "He got a double pleasure."

He was caught on Nov. 13, 1989, while trying to kidnap a 6-year-old boy from a movie theater bathroom in Camas, east of Vancouver.

He pleaded guilty to three counts of murder and one of attempted murder.

In prison, Dodd wrote a pamphlet titled "When You Meet a Stranger," warning youngsters to stay away from people like him.

search."

An all-clear was given at 8:25 p.m. and the search was called off. The mail did not reopen Tuesday, but will be open today at its regular times.

The rash of bomb threats in Odessa and Midland prompted the evacuation, Underwood said.

"In lieu of the threatening calls to businesses in Odessa and Midland, we figured it was only a matter of time that we would get a bomb threat," he said. "And, since an actual non-explosive device was found in a Midland business, we made a responsible decision with the customers' safety in mind."

Although numerous bomb threats have been made in the area, the Odessa Police Department does not think Tuesday's call is related to the previous ones.

"This was a totally anonymous call with a threat of a bomb and nothing more," said Sgt. Richard Hirst.

In the previous threats made to Odessa and Midland businesses, the caller demanded money, stating that if they did not receive it, a bomb would go off.

U.S. urges allies to support threat of force against Iraq

By Michael R. Gordon
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States has urged its allies to join in threatening Iraq with military action if Baghdad does not remove newly deployed surface-to-air missiles that menace allied warplanes patrolling southern Iraq, Bush administration officials said Tuesday.

American officials have consulted with British, French and Saudi officials over the proposed ultimatum, which could be issued as early as Wednesday.

Bush administration officials declined comment while Washington and its allies sought to work out the details of the demand. But diplomatic officials said that unless there is a hitch in the consultations, Washington and its allies planned to present the demand in New York to the Iraqi Mission to the United Nations.

The Iraqis would be given a short period to remove the missiles from the air exclusion zone in southern Iraq — perhaps as little as 48 hours — or face the consequences. Diplomatic officials said that if punitive attacks were carried out, they might include Iraqi air bases, which are easier to attack than the surface-to-air missile batteries, which are small and mobile.

Diplomatic officials said the threat to take military action in the ultimatum would be implicit but nonetheless unmistakenly clear to Baghdad.

The American demand was the latest step in a rising confrontation between Baghdad and Washington, which began with the downing on Dec. 27 of an Iraqi MiG-25 that was violating the air exclusion zone imposed by the United States and its allies in August to protect rebellious Shiite Muslims from air attack.

After the downing of the Iraqi plane, Iraqi aircraft continued to skirt the border of the air exclusion zone and to cross into the area when allied patrols were not present.

The United States rushed Navy planes to Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, and moved a Navy aircraft carrier from the waters off the coast of Somalia to the Persian Gulf to beef up its air patrols.

Iraq then took the next step by moving a small number of Soviet-made SA-2 and SA-3 surface-to-air missile batteries just south of the 32nd parallel, which marks the northern boundary of the air exclusion zone.

Providing new details about the deployment of the SAM missiles, American officials said Tuesday that Iraq had begun moving the missile batteries before the air battle with the Iraqi MiG. According to classified intelligence reports, the surface-to-air missile batteries were deployed south of the 32nd parallel on Sunday, southeast of the Al Jarrah air base.

As allies worked on the ultimatum, the White House Tuesday publicly alluded to the prospect of military action.

Bosnian president feels seperate states will end war

GENEVA (AP) — Through three days of grueling negotiations, Alija Izetbegovic's weathered face showed the strain of sitting and making compromises with men he regards as war criminals.

But after the talks ended Tuesday, the soft-spoken Muslim president of Bosnia seemed confident he had done what was needed to make the world throw its support behind his beleaguered government.

Izetbegovic said he broke a personal vow by meeting with the Bosnian Serb leaders, who took up arms nine months ago when Bosnia declared its independence from Yugoslavia. The Serbs have captured two-thirds of Bosnia in a war that killed 17,000 people and made more than 1 million homeless.

"We had to overcome a lot of emotions and to sit at the same table with those we consider murderers," he told The Associated Press.

During the talks that started Saturday, the 66-year-old Izetbegovic often appeared dejected and lost.

Serb leader Radovan Karadzic seemed to have gained the upper hand early on when he accepted a U.N. peace offer in principle and Izetbegovic opposed it.

By Tuesday, their positions had reversed, with Izetbegovic accepting a proposal for a 10-province Bosnian republic, with a much-reduced role for his government.

In exchange, the Serbs must abandon their guns, pull back from much captured territory and allow refugees driven out by Serb terror to return.

Clan leader's conference turns chaotic

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Somalia's warring clan leaders failed Tuesday to agree on ground rules for a proposed national peace conference. Shouting could be heard during the raucous session, held behind closed doors.

The 14 leaders did agree, however, to extend the U.N.-sponsored gathering for another day. It is the largest meeting of Somali leaders since the nation disintegrated into a cycle of clan warfare in early 1991.

Agreement on conference basics was the main goal of the meeting, which hopes to stem the effects of war and drought that killed more than 350,000 people last year. Two million people are believed still at risk of starvation.

Meanwhile in Somalia, violence flared the capital of Mogadishu, nearly a month after U.S. troops arrived to begin restoring order to Somalia.

A U.S. Marine sniper shot a Somali gunman after his patrol came under fire during a skirmish between Somali gangs, an American spokesman said. The Marine believed he killed the man, but no body was recovered.

Another gunman killed Ali Ibrahim Mursal, a Somali driver for The Associated Press, in Mogadishu's main food market Tuesday.

One of the two major clans that control Mogadishu shocked some participants at the Addis Ababa meeting when it accused the United Nations of ignorance about Somali affairs. The clan, led by Mohamed Farah Aidid, charged the United Nations with siding with Aidid's rival, Ali Mahdi Mohamed.

The clan argued the Addis Ababa conference was used by the United Nations to elevate splinter groups to undeserved status.

By late Tuesday, the factions agreed only on chairmanship of the conference — a arrangement of Aidid, Ali Mahdi and Omar Hajji Mohamed, leader of the Somali National Front, a group drawn from the clan of ousted dictator Mohamed Siad Barre.

Still undiscussed — let alone agreed — were questions such as the place, time and participants for a national reconciliation conference.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali played down Tuesday the criticism.

He said what was important was that "we have the first meeting. The mechanism (to bring peace) has been created. For the first time, we have all the Somali leaders around the same table."

Somalia collapsed into clan-based fiefdoms following the January 1991 ouster of Siad Barre, and violence has until recently throttled relief efforts.

Krueger wins favor with many Texans

Texas and the nation no doubt will be well represented by Bob Krueger, the former congressman from West Texas, U.S. ambassador-at-large and coordinator of Mexican Affairs chosen Tuesday by Gov. Ann Richards to fill Lloyd Bentsen's seat in the United States Senate until a replacement can be elected.

Krueger's smooth, low-key style and Oxford education are well known to people in the western part of the state. During a four-year period in the middle 1970's, Krueger served the 21st Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Notably during those years he waged battle against forces in the northeastern United States that sought to penalize the domestic oil industry because of what was termed "excess profits."

Krueger wasn't always successful fighting the interests in the northeast, but his work generally won favor with those in the oil industry. That approval no doubt helped him win a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission in 1990.

During the period from 1979 through 1981, he served as U.S. ambassador-at-large and coordinator of Mexican Affairs under President Jimmy Carter.

In Krueger, Richards selected a replacement for Sen. Bentsen who knows the bureaucratic backroads of Washington, D.C. and Austin, and who thoroughly understands the legislative process. Krueger's name is also well respected in Washington and Austin political circles, and while it may not carry the clout of the Bentsen name still will merit respect.

He's known for finding the middle ground to resolve sticky political questions, possibly his greatest strength and what some would say is his greatest weakness. Nevertheless, he has proven he can be effective in the Congress.

On the political side, republicans can expect a full-fledged fight from Krueger in the special election on May 1 to fill Bentsen's seat. And if history is any indicator, more than a few candidates will be in the race to fill the Senate seat. When a special election was held in 1961 to fill the Senate seat vacated by Lyndon B. Johnson, who moved to the White House, more than 70 candidates ran.

This time around, there could be even more interest in the weighty political plum Lloyd Bentsen left for a post in Bill Clinton's administration.

Bill Clinton mixes it up among ordinary folks

Bill Clinton has invited 50 un-famous, un-rich Americans to lunch in Washington on the eve of his inauguration this month — another sign he means to be a president with an ear for what's on people's minds. But he is not the first to cast a populist image at the outset of his administration. What counts is what he does in the Oval Office.

Jimmy Carter introduced America to the South's easy informality with nicknames; he took the oath of office as "Jimmy," not "James Earl." And then, leaving the inaugural platform at the Capitol, the new president proceeded to walk down Pennsylvania Avenue hand-in-hand with his wife — the very image of a regular fellow. He even took questions on an "Ask President Carter" call-in broadcast with Walter Cronkite, years before Ross Perot teamed up with Larry King.

The best-known example of presidential folksiness was, of course, Andrew Jackson's first inauguration, and quite unintentional. He had planned a dignified White House reception for invited guests. But his popularity as the first common man to be elected president drew thousands of uninvited admirers who raised havoc until they were finally lured outdoors by moving the punch bowls to the lawn. Jackson escaped through a window.

Clinton enters the presidency with a Secret Service entourage that will prevent any such mob manifestations. But he has already popped into McDonald's enough times to make his common touch seem natural — in marked contrast to George Bush's feigned taste for pork rinds.

Now the whole world waits to see how Bill Clinton links the symbolism of mixing it up with ordinary folks at lunch with the reality of being president. The folk of the well-entrenched Washington Establishment — members of Congress, bureaucrats, lobbyists and their bosses, diplomats and their prime ministers — are looking to mix it up with him.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 6, the sixth day of 1993. There are 359 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 6, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered his "Four Freedoms" speech outlining four goals: freedom of speech and expression; the freedom of every person to worship God in his own way; freedom from want; freedom from fear.

On this date:

In 1412, according to tradition, Joan of Arc was born in Domremy.

In 1540, King Henry VIII of England married his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves. (The marriage lasted about six months.)

In 1759, George Washington and Martha Dandridge Custis were married.

In 1838, Samuel Morse publicly demonstrated his telegraph for the first time, in Morristown, N. J.

In 1912, New Mexico became the 47th state.

In 1919, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, died at his home in Oyster Bay, N.Y., at the age of 60.

In 1942, the Pan American Airways "Pacific Clipper" arrived in New York after making the first round-the-world trip by a commercial airplane. (The trip, which required more than 200 hours' flying time, began Dec. 2, 1941.)

Opposition in Mexico seeks democracy

WASHINGTON — Historically tainted by allegations of election fraud and voter irregularities, local elections in the city of Chicago — where the slogan "vote early and vote often" was born — might not seem the best classroom for a foreign observer to watch democracy in action.

Anderson

But for Javier Livas, a prominent Mexican lawyer affiliated with his country's conservative opposition party, the National Action Party (PAN), last November's Chicago elections featured a degree of openness he might wish for Mexico.

"I was granted access all over," he told us. "We visited the board of commissioners. We had access to the voting precincts and talked to the election judges. We could make comments on how things were going. Everything was total transparency. . . . This is a right we don't have in Mexico." Livas points out that the United Nations and Organization of American States (OAS) observers are banned from monitoring Mexican elections.

Less than a week after the ballot in Chicago, Livas was back in Mexico for three state elections that Mexico's ruling party, known in Spanish by the initials PRI, had pledged would sound the death knell for long-standing election fraud south of the border. However, the elections turned out to be a page from Chicago's corrupt past, and were even bad by Mexican standards, Livas told us.

"This was the most blatant fraud in Mexico since 1985," he claimed. As usual, the PRI claimed huge victories in all three states and denied charges of voting irregularities.

Local Mexican elections were once of little concern to average Americans, but today they have important implications. The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) is hailed as 21st-century gold rush. But much of Mexican society, at least politically, is still stuck in 19th-century custom, in which fraud and corruption are the rule rather than the exception. Up to now, any effort to raise the subject of Mexican democracy during the NAFTA debate is shot down as an effort to sabotage the trade pact.

This poses an early test for President-elect Bill Clinton, whose endorsement of NAFTA was belated and half-hearted. Clinton will have to explain how his new emphasis on democracy and human rights squares with Mexico's tawdry track record.

And if he doesn't have enough hot spots to worry about, Clinton may be forced to address the problem soon. After last November's mayoral elections in the quiet border town of Matamoros, a crowd of 2,500 gathered in the town square to protest the PRI victory that the crowd claimed was fraudulent. After violence erupted, the crowd was dispersed with tear gas and rifle-butt blows. Dozens were arrested.

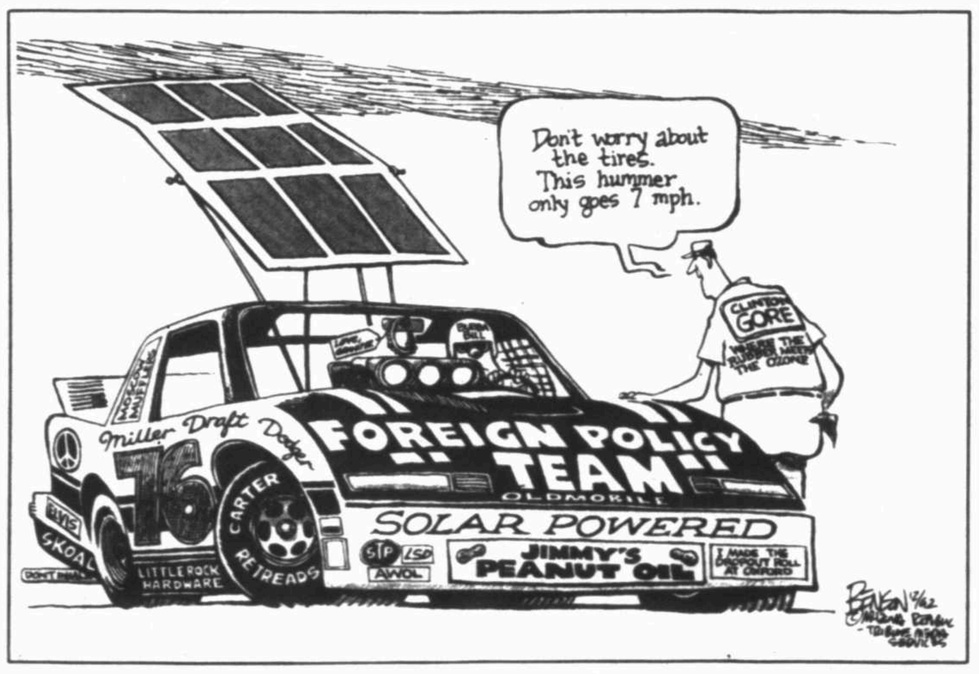

Why is the PRI tightening its grip? Observers say President Carlos Salinas is reacting to a backlash within his own party over a recent pattern of accommodation with the opposition. Since Salinas assumed office in 1988, four of his party's governors have agreed to step down amid charges of election fraud. Prior to 1988, the PRI had not given up a single state governorship to opponents since it came to power in 1929.

As a demonstration, Villa pulled out a huge volume of ballots that he says is evidence of irregularities at 500 voting precincts in the city of Puebla. On several of the ballots there were indeed more votes cast than registered voters, sure-fire proof of ballot-stuffing.

Villa recently presented his 500 complaints to the electoral commission, but they were all rejected. Villa illustrated why with an analogy: "Suppose the electoral commission says, right now it is 12 o'clock when it is really 9 o'clock. You say, 'No, it's nine o'clock.' They say, 'Let's take a vote.' They outnumber you. So it's 12 o'clock."

"We hope that Clinton will be a very principled man who will consider the legal, electoral and human rights problems in Mexico, because a basic political system based on freedom is essential for a free trade agreement," Livas told us.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Peeping Tom lives in electronic technology

WASHINGTON — When President William Jefferson Clinton is briefed by the Secret Service about the security available to him, he will be shown a "secure" scrambler telephone on which he can talk to other heads of government.

Only one problem: Western intelligence agencies were shocked last year to learn that conversations between world leaders had been intercepted and overheard by unauthorized persons. At this moment, it may be that there is no such thing as a 100 percent secure diplomatic or military line.

Safire

On a better-known level of eavesdropping, federal investigators looking into the Bush campaign's penetration of the Clinton passport file discovered a more extensive case of privacy invasion: Foreign Service officers in the State Department Operations Center were routinely, perhaps for years, listening in on their superiors' conversations routed through Op-Center's switchboard.

With neither party to the call giving permission to listen in, that intrusion would violate section 2510 of Title 18 of the U.S. Criminal Code. (That case is being buried at the Public Integrity Section of the Department of Justice, lately the graveyard of power-abuse investigations.)

A third example of the way technology is being used to endanger the privacy of personal communication and records: Six people who worked for the Perot campaign wondered why their detailed personal credit ratings, assembled by Atlanta's Equifax credit-reporting organization, had been obtained by a consumer leasing company for no commercial reason. "A hacker situation," an Equifax man told The Dallas Morning News, but the FBI is now trying to discover who was checking out these political volunteers and why.

Snooping has become a pernicious habit with government officials, a lucrative industry for technocratic compilers of dossiers and a titillating way of life for too many nosy people.

The record of every single telephone call you make is controlled not by you but by companies eager to cooperate with the IRS. Your use of credit cards offers a map to snoopers of where you go and what you spend.

Your mortgage application tells marketers what you own. Your driver's license application reveals your weight to diet clubs and your cable TV contract tells the world of your interests. You have been stripped of the power, once sacred to Americans, to tell the world to mind its own business.

What can we do to defend ourselves against the relentless penetration of our "personhood," in Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's apt word, by government spies routinely listening to our conversations and commercial demons of demography rifling through our records?

We can start by teaching each other that eavesdropping — which always has been a reprehensible act — is all the more wrong now that wearing a wire or planting an FM bug to entrap is so easy. A White House Conference on privacy and fair information practices could place this moral concern in a bully pulpit.

The sneaky business of secret taping, with its potential of embarrassment or extortion, should be outlawed; federal and state legislation is needed to stop any recording when either party is unaware of being taped. Then we should set a thief to catch a thief: the technology of surveillance should be blunted by cheap, portable electronic defense.

Data rape is a sleeper issue; I don't know when Americans will awaken to our personal vulnerability. Canadians already have an example of the national harm that stealing of signals can do: in Canada's recent referendum on federation, an illegally intercepted call on a cordless phone, publicized at the end of the campaign, caused the defeat of the unity proposal.

That's why Prime Minister Brian Mulroney calls eavesdropping "an insidious invasion" and is pressing for fines and jail terms for those who divulge the contents of a cellular call. "In a technologically advanced age, I cannot think of a more lethal threat to civil liberty than electronic snooping," Mulroney tells me. "If one person tapes another without permission, the release of that information should be a crime."

That libertarian attitude up north is what we should adopt here. Never has personal privacy been so vital a component of human liberty. We have been losing to the computer, the recorder and the eavesdropper by default; time to fight back.

Humor Guru nixes politically incorrect satire

Everyone in the satire business must visit the Humor Guru once a year. He is the Grand Iman of Mirth, and he lives in a cave not far from Camp David.

"Master," I said, "what may I write in 1993 that is both funny and politically correct?"

Buchwald

The old man scratched his stomach and said, "It's a free country. Write anything you want."

"Can I make fun of women?"

His eyes narrowed, his lip trembled and fire came out of his nose. "What kind of women?"

"Well, let's say a woman high in the government who goes into someone's passport files to get dirt on him so he'll lose a Presidential election — this at the orders of another woman who is stationed in the White House."

"You can't make fun of them."

"Why not?"

"Because they're women and women don't like to be made fun of by men no matter what dishonest acts a member of their sex commits."

"I know I shouldn't ask, but can I make fun of gays?'

"No one can make fun of gays except other gays, and even that is not considered politically correct."

I said, "Master, I am not in the business of being offensive. Humor comes out of a person's culture, and therefore I never do ethnic jokes."

"Why is that?"

"Because several of my ethnic acquaintances with emotional ties to Poland, Italy and Israel told me if I did they would take turns breaking my legs."

"You're blessed to have friends like that."

"What about President-elect Bill Clinton and his lovely wife, Hillary. Can I make fun of them?"

"Only after the honeymoon is over."

"What about Vice President Al Gore?"

"If you can find anything funny about him, you have my blessing." Then the Master said something very strange. "Do you think Pat Buchanan has fleas?"

"I don't know," I answered honestly. "Why do you ask?"

"It would be funny if he did."

Then I said, "If NBC dumped Jay Leno for David Letterman, would that be a funny story?"

"Not to Jay Leno. You must be very careful when you make fun of funny men because they bruise easily."

I then said, as I gave him a wooden toothpick, "I'm going to name a few people, Master, and I want you to tell me if they are funny or not — George Bush." He moaned. "Dan Quayle?" he moaned again. "Madonna?"

He replied, "She has always been funny about sex."

"Prince Charles and Princess Di."

He said, "Save British royalty for the silly season."

"Woody Allen and Mia Farrow?" I asked desperately.

The Master thought. "You can make fun of Allen — but not Mia."

"Why not Mia?" I asked.

The Master replied, "Because she's a woman."

Spill threatens thousands of Europe's birds, wildlife

LONDON (AP) — The 100 islands that make up the Shetlands chain are sparsely populated by people but teem with birds, seals and fish — many of which are threatened by Tuesday's oil spill.

"We are looking at a horror story," said Jeremy Leggett, Greenpeace science director. "It's one of the most rich and diverse areas for bird and sea life in Europe."

He and other conservationists expressed concern for the wildlife that may be affected by the million gallons of oil spilling from the tanker Braer, which slammed onto the coast of the chain's main island, Mainland.

Mike Everett, spokesman for the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, said thousands of birds could be killed as the oil pollutes breeding and feeding grounds.

"It's too soon to do more than guess, but it could be as great a wildlife disaster as Exxon Valdez," Everett said.

The Exxon Valdez, which went aground on March 24, 1989, spilled almost 11 million gallons of oil — the worst incident in U.S. history. Several hundred thousand sea birds, about 200 harbor seals and about 1,000 otters were killed, according to Alaska state figures.

The Liberian-registered tanker Braer, carrying 25 million gallons of oil, struck rocks near the Bay of Quendale at the southern tip of Mainland Island.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds said at least 3,000 birds were in the bay, which is also home to 20 porpoises.

The Shetland Islands have 61 species of breeding birds, including 500,000 sea birds of 21 species. The sea supports large shoals of mackerel, whiting, coalfish, sprats and sand lance on which the birds feed.

The fact that the accident occurred in winter, when most birds were at warmer latitudes, is "a small mercy to be thankful for," he said.

Jonathan Wills, a wildlife expert who lives on one of the Shetlands, said it was the worst spill ever in the chain.

Burn victims thank U.S. for toys, care

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian children with severe burns smiled weakly from hospital beds Tuesday at American visitors who brought them dolls, toy cars and other Christmas gifts.

But one young patient at Moscow Children's Hospital No. 9 said the best gift he received from members of the Virginia-based medical charity Project Hope was the feeling that someone cared.

"Bill is my friend," said 11-year-old Ruslan Rudetsky, pointing with a bandaged hand to Bill Morris, a red-haired nurse from Galveston, Texas, who sat by his side.

"He's teaching me English," Ruslan added, peering out from big brown eyes. The rest of Ruslan's face was still horribly disfigured from an accident two months ago in which flaming gasoline charred the right side of his body.

The 34-year-old Morris and a few other Western specialists are working to improve Russian health care with gifts of equipment, surgical instruments and — increasingly — their own knowledge and sweat.

Dr. Roscius Doan, the Seattle pediatrician who directs Project Hope's efforts in the former Soviet Union, said the organization's members visit and distribute equipment in hospitals across Russia and the other former Soviet republics.

Russian medical care is woefully out of date in many fields, Doan said. Hospital No. 9, site of Moscow's only burn unit for children, was using techniques "about 20 years behind the West" until Project Hope got involved two years ago, he said.

Doctors at the hospital said the training and skin-grafting devices donated by Project Hope now enable them to start treating burn victims within days of an accident. Before, they waited several weeks for dead tissue to fall away, a delay that sharply raised the risk of infection.

War, winter put elderly on front line

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Ten bodies wrapped in blankets were piled in a spare room of a nursing home on the front line of the Bosnia war Tuesday, elderly victims of war and winter.

A social worker at the home said 10 of his charges had died in the past 36 hours. No autopsies were done. But with temperatures inside the building at 7 degrees Tuesday, cold appeared to be the prime killer.

The social worker, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that in all, 26 residents of the home in a Serb-held section of the capital have died in the past two weeks. Deaths since October have reduced the number of residents from 150 to 108.

Reporters visiting the five-story nursing home saw 10 bodies wrapped in blankets. The home is heated solely by two wood-burning stoves, which also are used for cooking.

The home, under continuous sniper and automatic weapons fire, is about 100 yards from the Bosnian front lines. Since April, at least 20 of the residents have been killed by snipers or direct hits on the building, officials said.

Gen. Philippe Morillon, commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia, promised to help residents of the nursing home.

"Now that I know these people are dying, we cannot continue to do nothing," Morillon told reporters. "You can count on my influence to get something done."

Also Tuesday, there were unconfirmed reports of mass starvation in eastern Bosnia. Croatian radio, quoting Bosnian radio, said more than 40 people died for lack of food in and around Zepa. The city 40 miles east of Sarajevo is home to 40,000 people, most of them refugees from Serb-occupied parts of Bosnia.

Relief officials have predicted thousands of people will die this winter because of cold and hunger in Sarajevo and other parts of war-wracked Bosnia.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees announced Tuesday that it was doubling food shipments to the Bosnian capital to 400 tons a day. But it was unclear whether the agency could make good on the promise — U.N. officials also reported a bridge on a key overland route from Croatia had been damaged by an mine, slowing deliveries.

Aid continued to reach the Bosnia capital by air, and temperatures warmed marginally. That, and a continuing lull in fighting, permitted residents to go out for water, wood and bread.

Temperatures over the past few days have been as low as -1 Fahrenheit inside some homes, left without window glass and with huge holes in the walls after months of Serbian shelling.

The suffering has been aggravated by a lack of electricity and running water for more than a month. Repeated attempts to fix power lines have been hampered by fighting.

The lull in fighting coincided with talks in Geneva on ending the nine-month war. The negotiations were suspended Monday, and international mediators said the Serbs were holding up a compromise peace plan.

The talks brought together for the first time leaders of the three warring factions — Muslims, Serbs and Croats. They negotiations were to resume Sunday.

The war in Bosnia began when Serbs, about a third of the pre-war population of 4.3 million, rebelled against a Muslim-Croat vote in February to secede from Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia.

Federal jury convicts three in HUD trial for offering gratuities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal jury on Tuesday found a one-time top aide to former Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce and two other men guilty of offering gratuities to HUD officials.

But the jurors acquitted Lance Wilson, who was Pierce's executive assistant in the early 1980s; Texas developer Leonard E. Briscoe, and Maurice David Steier, an Omaha, Neb., lawyer, of more serious bribery, mail fraud and conspiracy charges.

The jury delivered the verdicts after eight days of deliberation following 12 weeks of courtroom testimony and arguments. The verdict ended the first trial to come out of the HUD influence-peddling scandal during the Reagan administration.

Wilson was convicted on one count of giving a gratuity to then-deputy assistant HUD Secretary DuBois Gilliam in September 1986. Briscoe, of Fort Worth, and Steier were convicted on two counts each of giving gratuities to Gilliam.

Each count carries a maximum prison term of two years and a fine of up to $250,000. U.S. District Court Judge Stanley Harris set sentencing for all three men in late March but ordered Briscoe immediately to begin serving a two-day sentence for contempt of court over his outbursts during the trial.

Family-leave gets top billing in new Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill guaranteeing many workers time off for a family emergency or the birth of a child was the first bill introduced when the 103rd Congress convened Tuesday.

The bill has been vetoed twice by President Bush but is supported by President-elect Clinton.

The family and medical leave bill won the official designation of House Resolution 1, a symbolic gesture sought by its supporters to demonstrate they consider it an important priority — and a bill likely to become law this year.

"The designation of H.R. 1 speaks to the importance of this legislation," said Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., chairman of the Education and Labor Committee and chief sponsor of the bill.

The first-bill designation was not accidental. It was a deliberate move by the House Democratic leaders.

The next two top designations went to two other priorities of congressional Democrats: the so-called "motor voter" bill, requiring easier voter registration at state motor vehicle offices, became H.R. 2, and a campaign finance reform bill became H.R. 3.

Following Clinton's election last fall, House Speaker Thomas Foley named those three as bills the House likely would move on first — and probably in that order.

The family and medical leave bill is identical to a version passed last year and vetoed by Bush.

It guarantees up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for family members who need time off to care for a newborn infant or ill family member, or for their own disabling illness. To meet the objections of small business groups, it would exempt employers having fewer than 50 employees.

15 people hurt as plane hits heavy turbulence

MIAMI (AP) — A San Francisco-bound airliner hit heavy turbulence shortly after takeoff on Tuesday, sending passengers crashing into the ceiling of its cabin. Fifteen people were injured.

American Airlines Flight 1539 ran into trouble west of Florida's Lake Okeechobee and was forced to return to Miami International Airport, said Anne Eldridge, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

Ten passengers and five crew members were hurt, said American Airlines spokeswoman Patricia San Pedro. The most seriously injured person suffered a broken leg, she said.

Passengers said the plane hit some light bumps, then suddenly plunged. Those not wearing seatbelts were sent crashing into the ceiling, they said.

"When we hit the big jolt, it sent people flying," said Pat Jennings, 30, of San Francisco. "For a few seconds the plane seemed out of control."

The plane was checked after it landed and appeared to be undamaged, Ms. San Pedro said. The passengers would take other flights to San Francisco, she said.

Ector County official to handle Rogers case

■ Former grand jury foreman persuades Midland County attorney to step aside in DWI trial of city sheriff officer.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Ector County Attorney Tracey Bright of Odessa has agreed to be the special prosecutor in any driving-while-intoxicated (DWI) trial in which Midland County Sheriff's Lt. Tim Rogers may face, Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said on Tuesday.

Dettman, who said he recused himself from the case on Monday, said he had asked Ms. Bright, whom he said is "well respected" by the Texas District and County Attorneys Association, to take over the case.

Rogers, 39, was charged with DWI after he was arrested in the early-morning hours of Dec. 31 by a Midland Police Department patrolman. Rogers, who has been suspended with pay while his case is under investigation, is a former Midland city policeman.

Dettman said he had "taken care of" his recusal on Monday by asking Ms. Bright to be the case's special prosecutor.

She agreed.

Dettman, too, said he had informed Midland County Court-at-Law Judges James Fitz-Gerald III and Al Walvoord, either of whom would preside over the case, of his decision.

Then, on Tuesday, Frank Kell Cahoon, former foreman of the September 1991 term of the Midland County Grand Jury, in a letter dated Tuesday, Jan. 5, asked Dettman "to recuse yourself from prosecuting" the Rogers case.

"It has all been said and done," Dettman said of the recusal. "It's ancient history."

Cahoon had sent a copy of the letter to Austin to Texas Assistant Attorney General Shane Phelps, who had worked with the Cahoon grand jury in its "inquiry" and subsequent investigation into Sheriff Gary Painter's reverse-drug sting operations and the handling of drugs used in stings and of the money seized in those stings.

The investigation resulted in perjury indictments against Rogers and former free-lance lawman Ronald Ray Tucker.

The indictment against Rogers was dismissed on a joint motion by Dettman and Ms. Bright because "It was the right thing to do," and "the evidence just wasn't there to support an indictment in this case," said Dettman last June when the indictment was dismissed. "The prosecu-

Annual county livestock show begins four day run

■ A year of hard work comes to a climax for area youngsters with the livestock show.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midland County youngsters who have taken on the responsibility of feeding, grooming and nurturing livestock projects will bring their farm animals to the outskirts of town today for the opening of the 41st annual Midland County Livestock Show sponsored by the Midland County Livestock Association.

Approximately 120 Future Farmers of America (FFA) and 4-H Club boys and girls will be exhibiting between 400 and 450 calves, lambs, pigs, goats, chickens and rabbits in the show in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

"Overall, there is an increase in the number of participants as well as in the quality of livestock," said Earnest Kiker, agricultural agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) for Midland County.

Steers, lambs and swine will be weighed, measured, and sifted between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. today.

Shane Cook, 12, grooms his lamb in readying for the 1993 rendition of the Midland County Livestock Show.

Steers will be judged at 6:30 p.m. Thursday by Bill Bender, vocational-agricultural teacher in Hereford.

Lambs will be judged at 8:30 a.m. on Friday by Preston Farris, TAEX agent in Sonora. Following that will be the judging of goats shown by 6-, 7-, and 8-year-old exhibitors. Afterward, swine will be judged by Ronnie Dennis, vocational-agriculture teacher in Pampa. The judging of fryers will be followed by the 9 a.m. Friday judging of rabbits.

Dr. Bob Berry, retired TAEX plant pathologist and a rabbit expert, will be judging rabbits, fryers and goats.

"Judges look for structural soundness in all species," Kiker said. "And they also look for muscling" to estimate the amount of marketable meat on each head of livestock. "Muscling is what you want."

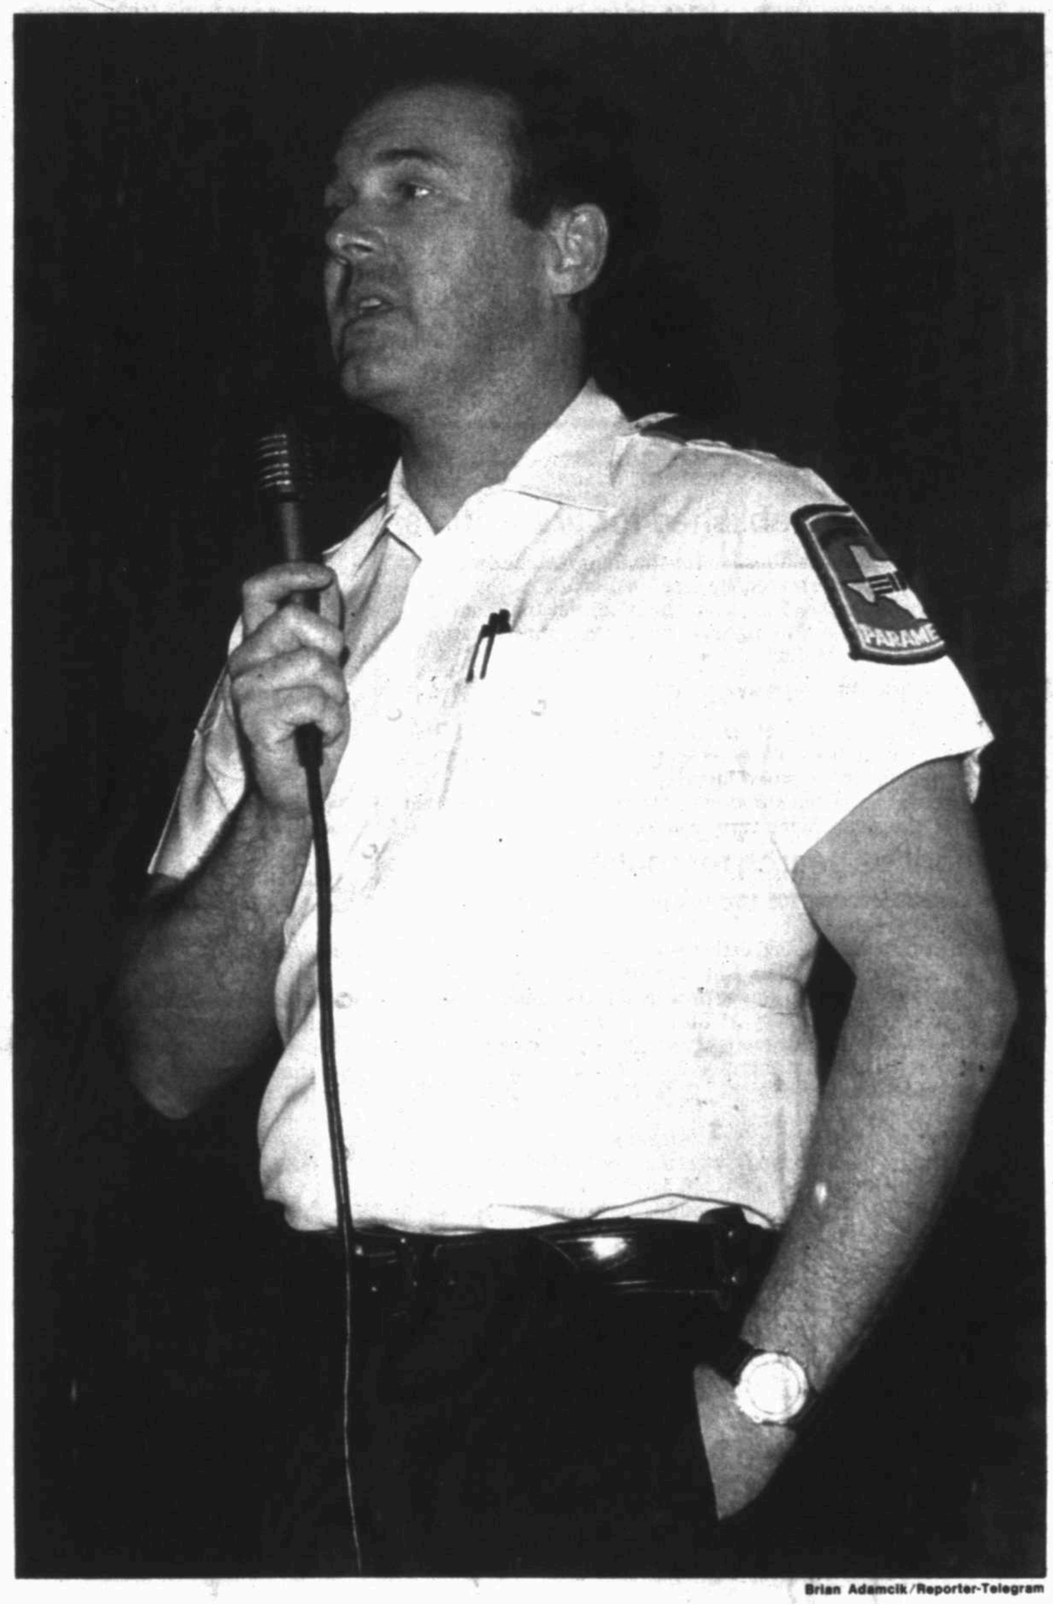

The auction of the 120 premium head of livestock in the show will be held at 1:20 p.m. Saturday by Snyder auctioneer Tommy Marricle. Ring-men (spotters) will be Rusty Jones and Scott Welch.

The 1993 auction grossed the youthful exhibitors more than $52,000.

Prior to the auction will be the 11:30 a.m. Saturday barbecue dinner for bidders on the premium animals, the 12:45 p.m. judging of goats shown by children 5 years old and younger, and the 1 p.m. awards program.

Law adds names to jury pool

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

About 8,000 more Midlanders' names have been thrown into the hat used to select possible jurors. And that number will continue to grow for the next few years since licensed drivers have been added to registered voters in the jury pool.

As a result of a new state law that went into effect Jan. 1, county officials are supplied with a larger list each year by the secretary of state's office.

"I think it is probably a good law because it will involve more people (to choose from to) serve on a jury, and that's a right and duty of citizenship," said Midland County Clerk Vivian Wood.

Previously, about 48,700 registered voters could have possibly received a jury summons, records indicate. That number has increased to approximately 56,700.

The higher number adds only new licensed drivers and renewals in 1992. Each year the list will reflect the previous year's additions as well. Theoretically, the list will top out in four years since licenses are valid for that long.

Identification cards issued by the Department of Public Safety are also added.

The Midland County Clerk's Office has already sent out jury summons from names on the new list. Drivers who didn't register to vote to avoid jury selection are no longer able to hide.

"Next week will be our first jury coming in," Ms. Wood said.

Because of the first-time use, more summons were mailed to test the system.

"The thing I think we'll get is more high schoolers, students and non-citizens," Ms. Wood said.

People under 18 years old and non-citizens are ineligible for jury duty.

"It will just mean we will have more people who will show up and be disqualified," Ms. Wood said.

The percentage of ineligible names added to the list has not been determined.

The clerk's office summoned 160 people for state district court, 20 above normal. Ninety people were called for county court at law, an increase of 10.

"I would just hate for us to get a panel up here and for us not be able to pick a jury," Ms. Wood said.

Judge John Hyde, 238th District Court, said he

Williamson sworn into Commission

Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Just hours after one railroad commissioner was appointed to the U.S. Senate, the newest commissioner was sworn in Tuesday.

Republican Barry Williamson, a former Midland resident, became the 37th person to serve on the three-member Texas Railroad Commission. Earlier, Gov. Ann Richards chose Commissioner Bob Krueger as interim replacement for U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

In a brief speech following the swearing-in ceremony, Williamson thanked his supporters and pledged to work hard in his new post.

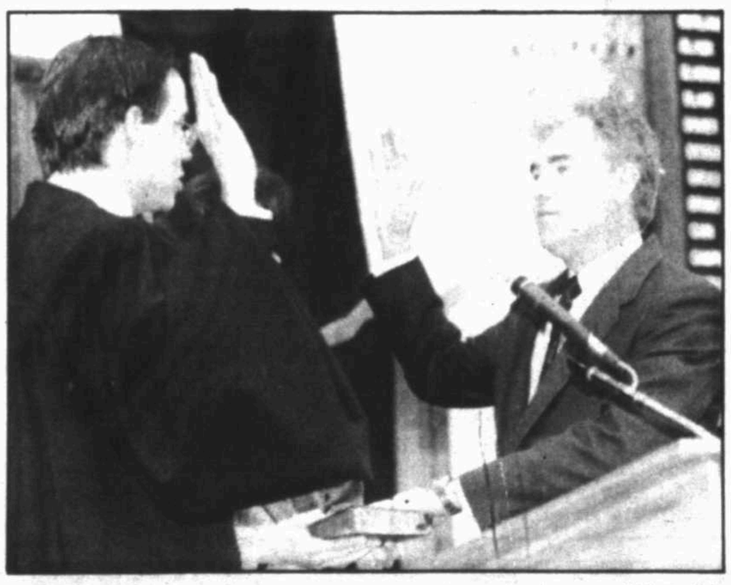

"There's important work ahead," he said. "I'm ready for the job, and I will do all in my power to make Texas proud."

Williamson also renewed his campaign promise to provide the state with more jobs.

"Too many Texans are without work. I know this and I will work to fight for policies and regulations that will create jobs for Texans," he said.

State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, also a Republican, said Williamson would provide the

Pre-trial statements begin court-martial

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press writer

SAN ANGELO — Attorneys for a former Air Force commander opened the colonel's court-martial Tuesday by asking that his charges, which involve homosexual and pornographic electronic mail, be dismissed.

Testimony in the pre-trial stage included explanations of a computer data service and of various electronic-mail printouts sent and received by screen names used by Col. James A. Maxwell Jr. in 1991.

Arguments on the pre-trial motions are scheduled to continue Wednesday.

The 48-year-old former commander of the training center at Goodfellow Air Force Base, is accused of using his home computer to request information on gay bars and child pornography. The 26-year veteran is also charged with conduct "unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" in soliciting and distributing visual images of nude children and adults.

Maxwell has said the charges were brought to smear his reputation.

MC: Spring semster begins next week

(From 1B)

ness training.

From bass fishing techniques to designing window treatments, Midland College is offering a slew of continuing education courses for the spring semester, including all of those mentioned in this article.

Registration began Monday, according to Alice Friedline, MC continuing education coordinator.

"We are offering lots of computer classes, business, health, foreign language, and arts and crafts courses, and skills for living — such as time management and parenting," she said.

"Of course, it's always a good resolution to get all of your pictures out of sacks and shoeboxes," Ms. Friedline said, noting that Narda Poe will conduct "Photos: From Shoebox to Showcase," a course on organizing and safely mounting photographs.

Barbara Porsch, a Midlander certified as a master gardener by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will coordinate the class "How Does Your Garden Grow?" with other local master gardeners.

"We will have several topics on two different nights with different speakers that should benefit everyone from those who have done gardening to those who are newcomers to Midland."

The topics will include: "Starting your own plants from seed," presented by Sam Phillips; "Planting and starting a vegetable garden" by Jane Russell; "Edible plants and herbs in your landscape plan" by Ginger Florence; and "Carving for a West Texas Yard," by Marvin Rathke.

As for the trend of using low-maintenance grasses, shrubs and trees in Midland, Ms. Porsch said, "If someone already has a landscaped yard, it would be hard to change it completely. But there are still places for some natives can be grown and some are quite lovely."

Ms. Porsch noted that maintaining a West Texas lawn is "certainly different than the rest of the state."

Rev. Allen White will teach the course "Dreams & You" which will focus on the teachings of psychiatrist Carl G. Jung.

"We will discuss specific dreams and how you might go about analyzing them," White said. "We will also discuss understanding Jungian categories, and utilizing myths and stories to amplify dream material."

The class will view a videotape of an interview with Jung and learn how to uncover personality types through dream interpretation.

Persons who are tired of having their toes stepped on, can take "Assertiveness Training" from licensed professional counselor Sam Guyton.

"Assertive doesn't mean agressive," Ms. Guyton said. "Being assertive means you attempt to get what you want in life — satisfaction and fulfillment — but not at the expense of other people."

Ms. Guyton, who is also a licensed marriage and family therapist and chemical dependency counselor, said that the course will help people to become more effective in dealing with other people. "Few people are just born naturally assertive," she said. "First they must look at their behavior to understand it, and then practice assertiveness skills to modify it."

As part of the continuing education program, Midland College is gearing up for its third annual bass fishing seminar.

"And we have a really good writing seminar planned," Ms. Freidline said.

An author, Nancy Robinson Masters of Abilene, who has more than 3,000 articles and books published, will lead the Jan. 23 seminar "Taking Off Your Clothes: How to Really Write From the Inside Out." The author is also a pilot and flies CAF (Confederate Air Force) aircraft.

"She has published a book on writing, another on World War II aircraft and a third on her memoirs as a pilot," Ms. Freidline said.

The Abilene author will arrive in Midland a day prior to the seminar to autograph books at Pages & Prints bookstore.

Other continuing education courses offered include classes as diverse as creating works of stained glass to learning how to write grants for non-profit organizations, to "powderpuff" mechanics for women who want to learn simple car maintenance.

Some classes focus on craft projects. Some are available for college credit, and many just afford participants an opportunity to try something different.

For more information on MC courses call 685-4518. Registration is continuing from 8:30 a.m.-8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday during the school year.

Persons may register by phone, mail or FAX.

tor's job is not to convict but to see that justice is done."

Back then, Cahoon, by letter, had requested that the Attorney General of Texas "make an investigation of the facts surrounding the dropping of the indictment against Lt. Rogers."

In a jury trial late in 1992, Tucker was acquitted of perjury charges.

Of his request that Dettman remove himself from the Rogers case, Cahoon on Tuesday said that he feels "very strongly about the integrity of the grand jury.

"Even though our term expired, I just feel like it is very important that the integrity of the grand jury is kept intact. I just felt like the best thing for Midland would be for Mark (Dettman) to recuse himself from handling that case."

Cahoon, an independent Midland oil operator who formerly served in the Texas Legislature and on the Midland City Council, said that "at this point, I'm just a citizen publicly asking him (Dettman) to do that. It's in the best interest of Midland that he recuse himself."

"Our grand jury has been accused of politics," Cahoon said, "but I can guarantee that there was absolutely no politics in any of our decisions" to indict. "The decisions were all unanimous."

Before Cahoon had written the letter, Dettman that he already had taken action on removing himself from the Rogers case.

"I defended the sheriff on civil-rights suits," Dettman said. "And Tim (Rogers as an investigator) has been working on some of them. And that would be a conflict of interest" for him to prosecute Rogers on the DWI case.

"Plus, from an appearance standpoint, I think it's best to have an outside person make an independent determination of the facts," Dettman said.

Dettman said that he and Ms. Bright had "traded cases" earlier.

In the 1990 DWI case against Ector County Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles, Ms. Bright recused herself, and Dettman and First Assistant County Attorney Jane Lundy Belazi tried the case. Valles was convicted of DWI, Dettman said, but the conviction was reversed on appeal, and Valles later pleaded guilty to reckless driving.

Dettman said that Ms. Bright has been selected as "Prosecutor of the Year" by Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD).

for Midland County, cited the work and toil which FFA and 4-H Club youngsters put into nurturing their livestock projects for the annual show.

"Both 4-H and FFA offer many opportunities for young people in leadership and project activities," Green said, "and livestock projects are one of the most popular."

The money which youngsters realized from the auction may be used to pay their animals' feed, equipment and other bills. And any leftover money may be set aside or invested for the youths' higher education in achieving their career goals.

Boys and girls in 4-H and FFA programs "as a rule ... re-invest their returns in livestock each year," Green said, "and by the time they finish high school, they have accumulated enough funds to significantly defray college expenses. It gives them a chance to invest in their future through education."

"The future of this country is the young people."

TRIAL: Court-martial case continues in San Angelo

(From 1B)

The case has drawn attention as a privacy landmark for users of computer bulletin boards such as America Online Inc.

Maxwell's attorneys Tuesday cited the First and Fifth Amendments in arguing Maxwell's privacy was violated by a vague Federal Bureau of Investigation search of America Online computer messages.

Defense counsel Capt. Steve Maxwell argued that anything yielded from the broad search was "fruit of the poisonous tree."

Capt. Maxwell, who is not related to the defendant and co-defense counsel Lt. Col. Frank Spinner scored an early victory Tuesday when military judge Col. Donald Weir granted their request to subpoena a witness from Fremont, Calif. But Weir reprimanded both sides during their argument.

"The only thing I've seen is counsel for both sides continuing to want to spit at each other," Weir said.

Roger Dietz, the witness from California, is expected to testify Wednesday on his role informing the media and Virginia-based America Online of pornography on the computer bulletin board.

Dietz's tip led the FBI to search all messages generated and received by 88 users whose screen names showed they had sent or received pornography, according to a sample Dietz showed Jean Villanueva, America Online's vice president for marketing.

Mrs. Villanueva testified she gave the names to the FBI, which searched 12,000 seized pages of messages involving the 88 users.

Maxwell has said he is the only one of the 88 targeted users to face trial.

If Weir denies the defense's request to suppress the search warrant, Maxwell will face trial by at least five court members, or jurors. Pre-trial motions could last all week, attorneys said.

In June — just before word of the pending charges was announced — Maxwell was abruptly removed from command. His scheduled posting to an ROTC detachment at Baylor University was canceled.

Area journalism, radio pioneer Hubbs dies

PECOS — Barney Hubbs, a West Texas newspaper and radio pioneer, died Tuesday after a lengthy illness. He was 96.

Hubbs' ventures into publishing in the 1920s resulted in West Texas newspapers that thrive today as the Pecos Enterprise and the Odessa American.

From 1937 to 1955, he started radio stations in Pecos, Monahans, Odessa, McCamey, Alpine, Carlsbad, N.M., and Cortez, Colo. In 1950 he purchased KFST in Fort Stockton.

Hubbs was born on July 7, 1896, on a Sterling County ranch about 40 miles north of San Angelo. His family moved to Pecos by covered wagon in 1907 and his father homesteaded four sections of land about 30 miles north of town.

He first ventured into the printing trade in 1910 as an apprentice, working in a print shop before and after school.

Hubbs volunteered for the U.S. Navy in 1917 and spent part of World War I in France.

He returned to West Texas after the war and in 1920 started a printing company and published the Pecos Gusher in competition with the Pecos Enterprise. He purchased the Enterprise in 1925 and combined it with the Gusher.

In 1926 he started the Odessa News, selling it and buying it back several times before selling it in 1936 to a man who renamed it the Odessa American.

Hubbs also started or at one time published the Crane County News; the Pyote Signal, which later moved to Monahans; the Mentone Monitor; the Wink Broadcaster; the Artesia (N.M.) Advocate; the Madera Valley News; the Winkler County News; and the Fort Stockton Pioneer.

He eventually sold all his newspapers except the Pecos Enterprise, which he held until health problems forced him to sell it in 1960.

Hubbs' wife of 55 years, Lucila, died in 1979.

Hubbs is survived by a son, Bill Hubbs of Pecos, three grandsons, three great-grandchildren and a great-great-granddaughter. Funeral arrangements were pending at Pecos Funeral Home.

Report leads to stolen goods

Staff report

A Crime Stopper tip led to the arrest of three Midland teen-agers and the recovery of four stolen credit cards and six stolen checks Monday.

According to a police report, officers received a Crime Stoppers tip at 2 p.m. Monday indicating that several suspects who were staying at 1203 E. Oak had stolen credit cards and checks. Officers stopped a vehicle described in the tip at 3 p.m. and found the suspects.

Officers arrested Billy John Smith and Russell Louis Stuteville, both 17, and a 15-year-old female. All were charged with forgery by possession and credit card abuse. Bond was set at $2,500 for possession and $2,500 for credit card abuse for both Smith and Stuteville. The female was taken to Culver Youth Center.

Stuteville was out on bond Tuesday and Smith remained in jail.

Officers recovered six checks, two bank cards, an American Express Card and a Visa Card.

The State in brief

■ Ex-teacher gets probation for sex tape

BEAUMONT — A former Port Arthur teacher who pleaded guilty to having a student-made videotape depicting teen-agers having sex has said he will petition the Texas Education Agency to keep his teaching certificate.

State District Judge Leonard Giblin on Monday sentenced Kirk Crookshank, 40, to five years deferred probation and a $1,000 fine. Crookshank formerly taught English at Stephen F. Austin Junior-Senior High School.

Crookshank pleaded guilty in November to possessing a videotape depicting a minor having sex with other minors. If he successfully completes the probation he will have no felony record.

The four students who created the videotape face no disciplinary action because the school lacks jurisdiction in the case, Austin principal Eddie Fowler said.

The students also face no criminal charges, a prosecutor said. Sikes said a student in September 1991 gave his client a tape depicting a female student engaged in sex with male students. Crookshank had earlier told students they could receive extra credit if they videotaped a spoof of a television commercial, Sikes said.

School officials suspended Crookshank with pay in March and he resigned in June.

■ Coppell couple wins lotto jackpot

AUSTIN — A Dallas-area couple have claimed a $3.4 million portion of a lotto jackpot, and more.

Bill and Sheila Irvin of Coppell won a share of the Dec. 26 Lotto Texas drawing, officials said Tuesday.

In addition, the Irvin's ticket included three other sets of figures that matched four numbers — each worth $34 — and another set that matched three numbers, worth $3. Players can select up to five sets of numbers on each ticket.

"I'll see if I can do it again, then I'll write a book," said Bill Irvin.

Three convicted in HUD gratuity trial

WASHINGTON — A federal jury on Tuesday found a one-time top aide to former Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce and two other men guilty of offering gratuities to HUD officials.

But the jurors acquitted Lance Wilson, who was Pierce's executive assistant in the early 1980s; Fort Worth developer Leonard E. Briscoe, and Maurice David Steier, an Omaha, Neb., lawyer, of more serious bribery, mail fraud and conspiracy charges.

The jury delivered the verdicts after eight days of deliberation following 12 weeks of courtroom testimony and arguments in the first trial to come out of the HUD influence-peddling scandal during the Reagan administration.

Woman readies for dog fight with hounds

FORT WORTH — An exotic bird raiser wants to put teeth into efforts to round up stray dogs after they attacked her flock.

It's a range war of sorts in the hilly countryside of Parker County, with Carol Morrow now armed with a rifle and guarding her pen. Packs of dogs also threaten other livestock, officials said.

"This is my worst nightmare. This was how I made a living," said Ms. Morrow, mourning the death of one hen that laid 55 eggs last summer and earned her $6,000 from chick sales.

Two mixed-breed shepherds on New Year's Day burrowed beneath two fences and attacked the flock of five rheas, South American cousins of the ostrich.

The flightless birds, standing 5 to 6 feet tall, are valued at up to $3,000 apiece for their leather, feathers and oil, used in skin creams.

The dogs fled after the attack, with Ms. Morrow firing at them. She now monitors the 6-foot-high pen with a .22-caliber rifle.

Another pack of dogs periodically roams the campus of Elkins Elementary near Saginaw in Tarrant County, said Jon Ed Robbins, Precinct 4 administrator.

He said coyotes near Eagle Mountain Lake are also suspected in the disappearance of hundreds of household pets.

"Packs of dogs roam because so many people drop dogs off in the country, thinking some country person will take them in. But these dogs join forces with other dogs and with the coyotes," said Wayne Preston, who raises livestock guard dogs in East Texas.

Preston said that in the last four years, he has placed 83 trained guard dogs at bird farms statewide.

The packs of unleashed dogs are especially worrisome both in Tarrant County and in Parker County to the immediate west, said officials.

"It's a serious problem county-wide and I don't see a solution in the foreseeable future," said Sheriff Ben Whiteman, adding that Parker County has no leash law.

But Tarrant County's health department and district attorney's office are drafting an animal control ordinance, said G.K. Maenius, county administrator in Fort Worth.

Dr. Benji Aldredge, Ms. Morrow's veterinarian, visited her property in Reno, about 20 miles northwest of Fort Worth, on Monday to inspect the birds' remains and sign a death certificate for insurance purposes.

Newly-elected Texans sworn in 103rd Congress

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Four Texans were among the new members of Congress who bustled through the unfamiliar hallways of the Capitol with family and friends in tow Tuesday as the 103rd Congress convened.

The Texans are part of the 110-member freshman class — the largest in 44 years.

The class also includes record numbers of female, black and Hispanic lawmakers. Texas voters helped boost the totals, sending a black woman and two Hispanic men to Washington.

In keeping with tradition, ceremony was the order of the day. But the focus quickly shifted to business.

Freshman Henry Bonilla wasted no time.

Less than an hour after being sworn in, the San Antonio Republican joined with most GOP freshmen and several incoming Democrats in announcing they would introduce a constitutional amendment to limit congressional terms.

"People didn't elect us freshmen to just sit around and wait for things to happen," Bonilla said, breaking away briefly from a reception for family and friends at the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank.

"It's just been a great day," he said.

The first day of Congress also provided a civics lesson for Bonilla's 7-year-old daughter, Alicia, who witnessed the vote to re-elect House Speaker Tom Foley to another term — which was a formality.

"She looks at me and says 'Dad, I think Foley is going to win,'" Bonilla said.

The day's mood moved from the solemn to the upbeat, from the pomp of the swearing-in proceedings to the lightheartedness of dozens of receptions.

Tuesday also was a day for family.

It took her son's swearing-in to get Lillie Tejeda outside of Texas for the first time since the 1940s.

Mrs. Tejeda traveled to Washington to watch her 47-year-old son, Frank, become the first lawmaker to represent the newly-created 28th District in South Texas.

"What a treat for her, because she has never really been out of the state since she was with my father during World War II," Tejeda said.

Tejeda, who is the most senior freshman by virtue of the fact he was the only one who faced neither primary nor general election opposition, mixed business with pleasure. In addition to receptions, he conducted interviews with the media and potential employees.

Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson's schedule was no less packed. The day began with a prayer breakfast hosted by the Congressional Black Caucus, then moved to a Democratic caucus meeting, and swearing-in re-enactments with the black caucus and Rep. Jack Brooks, dean of the Texas delegation. Sprinkled in the Dallas Democrat's schedule were television interviews and a reception at a posh Washington hotel.

Soups, in all their variations and ingredients, can be provide a warming trend on cold winter nights.

Soups warm January meals

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — Enough fancy cooking. Enough fancy eating. By the time the new year begins, it sometimes seems that another meal is just a burden.

"I like things to get simple, really simple. That's the way I really feel," said Marion Cunningham, author of "The Fannie Farmer Cookbook" and the recent "The Supper Book."

By the time she's been to several holiday meals and parties near her Northern California home, Cunningham said, she's ready for simple soups for her suppers.

"Lots of specialness and lots of fanciness and very abundant celebrations —that wanes, and I don't think any of us humans are up for big parties all the time," she said.

People who live in colder climates might find a winter day in the kitchen rather inviting, however.

"The need to nurture is at its peak in January and February, when the notion of spending all day slaving over a hot stove seems preferable to most other activities," Sarah Leah Chase, who lives on the Massachusetts island of Nantucket, writes in "Cold-Weather Cooking."

For her, too, soups are in order, as are stews and casseroles.

Cunningham doesn't follow the crowds to start a diet on Jan. 1. Instead, she returns to normal eating — a plan that likely would benefit many people.

One dish from "The Supper Book" she recommends for after the holidays is posole salad soup, a hominy soup that is topped with avocado, lettuce and cilantro.

Cunningham said she came upon the idea after experimenting with putting chopped greens onto hot pastas.

"You've got it all that way, your soup and salad in one bowl. It's very easy," she said.

POSOLE SALAD SOUP
From "The Supper Book," by Marion Cunningham, Knopf, $22

4 cups chicken broth
2 teaspoons ground cumin
2 cups canned stewed tomatoes, broken up
6 tablespoons masa harina in 1 cup cold water, blended until smooth (Masa harina is corn treated with lime water and ground into a flour. With the addition of water it makes the dough used for tamales and tortillas. It is available in supermarkets.)
Salt and pepper to taste
3 cups canned yellow or white hominy, drained
1 cup coarsely chopped cilantro
2 cups coarsely chopped iceberg lettuce
1 avocado, peeled, pitted and cut into one-inch dice

In a large saucepan, stir together the broth, cumin, tomatoes, masa harina mixture, salt and pepper, and hominy. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat, and simmer for five minutes, stirring occasionally.

Toss together the cilantro and lettuce in a bowl. Add the avocado to the soup just before serving. Serve the soup, and pass the lettuce and cilantro at the table, letting everyone put some on top of their soup. Makes six servings.

White cheddar adds very mild flavor

By Linda Anderson

Have I missed something? What is the deal about white cheddar cheese? All of a sudden it seems that a lot of products that are cheese-flavored are now branching out into white cheddar-flavored. I'm not even entirely sure what that is — all the cheddar I've ever seen has been a rich golden color.

Anderson

I bought a couple of these white cheddar products to see if there was any improvement — or even much difference — between them and their more mundane counterparts. The first was Cheez-It White Cheddar Snack Crackers; the second was Kraft Macaroni and Cheese Dinner with Mild White Cheddar. (See what I mean? Both cheese-flavored products have been around for years and years.)

A 10-ounce box of white cheddar Cheez-Its cost $1.99. (I think it was on sale.) The 5½-ounce box of white cheddar Kraft Macaroni and Cheese cost 76 cents.

Label advertising for the Cheez-Its claimed the product "has a special taste that can't be beat. Sunshine's secret recipe uses the perfect combination of natural white cheddar and other fine ingredients to give Cheez-It White Cheddar a delicious flavor that snackers will love.

"Cheez-It is America's best-selling cheese snack cracker. Cheez-It White Cheddar, loaded with the same goodness as regular Cheez-It has a unique tangy flavor that the whole family will enjoy."

Label advertising for the Macaroni and Cheese dinner went like this: "Now The Cheesiest' macaroni and cheese brand is available in white cheddar! Kraft Mild White Cheddar Macaroni and Cheese Dinner has a thick, creamy sauce made with white cheddar cheese. Serve it as a side dish or main meal that your entire family will love!"

Isn't it interesting that all these companies keep telling us our "whole family will love" something? One of my taste-testers can't stand macaroni and cheese in any shape, form or fashion. No matter what the label says. And she can take or leave cheese-flavored crackers.

The taste-tests also were interesting. As a general rule, white cheeses have milder tastes than darker-colored cheeses, and this did prove to be true with these two products. I kept looking for all this "tangy" flavor and finding it missing.

The white cheddar Cheez-Its, while a little milder than regular Cheez-Its in flavor, were covered with a powder that could only be the white cheddar. Of course, it came off on the fingers and hands — and potentially on clothing and furniture.

The Macaroni and Cheese dinner "doesn't taste any different" according to one tester, and "seems tasteless" to another. Of course the smallest taster wouldn't even try it — she said "Eeeyuuu." She really doesn't like macaroni and cheese, not even homemade.

Results? White cheddar is nice and mild — maybe too mild — but it doesn't taste the same as regular cheddar (OK, cheddar-flavor) in these products. I think I like regular Cheez-Its better. And the older taste-tester is going to have to finish the macaroni and cheese by herself — after she doctors it up with a little more cheese, I'm sure.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Author named 'Person of the Year'

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Cookbook author Julia Child has been named "Person of the Year" by the National Fisheries Institute, a nonprofit trade association of 1,000 seafood companies.

Child, a noted cookbook author, was selected because of her efforts to help the American consumer become more familiar with fish and seafood — and more confident when preparing it, said Bob Brophy, NFI chairman of the board. "In fact, it was Julia Child who helped make monkfish a household word," he said.

The "Person of the Year" award is given to an individual devoted to educating others about fish and-or improving the seafood industry.

DEAR ABBY

Chance of winning leaves woman counting her losses

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior citizen living on a fixed income. I did a very foolish thing — I gave my Visa number over the phone to a person who was calling from Las Vegas about a "contest" I had entered. The prize was $5,000.

Van Buren

I did not ask, nor was I told, what the product was, and how much it was going to cost me to win the $5,000. (To a pensioner, that kind of money looks pretty good, but I should have known better.)

The man told me that the product was a vitamin program that would do much to improve my health. The cost was $800! I immediately asked him to cancel it, as I could not afford that kind of money. He was very insistent, and asked if I was the recipient of the $5,000 award, could I not afford it then?

He harassed me over the phone for a week, after which I handed the phone to my daughter — who told him that I was not interested. He still would not take no for an answer. I then handed the phone to my husband who also told him no. He still insisted.

We tried to stop payment on my Visa, but they could do nothing about it. This person also had a girl telephone our home and ask for me. We recognized her voice from previous phone calls. My family finally told him not to call again, and thank God, he hasn't so far.

Abby, please warn others to find out what they are paying for before they give any numbers over the telephone. I learned the hard way. You may publish my letter, but please do not use my name, as I fear it will cause me further problems with this company. Just sign me ... "HAD" IN TORONTO

DEAR HAD: I am publishing your letter as a warning to other unsuspecting readers. Never give your credit card number to strangers; you are at their mercy. Remember:

(1) It costs no money to enter a legitimate contest.

(2) Never — under any circumstances — give anyone your credit card with whom you have never done business.

(3) Never give your credit card number to anyone over the telephone unless you have done business with that person (or company) and are absolutely certain he or she is legitimate.

DEAR ABBY: Hi! My name is LaCresha Caywood. I am 12 years old. I've got long brown hair, brown eyes, I'm very slim, and I love to read.

My mother sent away for your booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know," and it really helped me.

Someday I'm going to be just like you. I want to help people who have problems and tell them how to get along with their parents, their friends, and everyone they meet in life.

I just wanted to thank you for writing that booklet, Abby. After I read it, I felt good about myself. Love, LACRESHA CAYWOOD, ABILENE, TEXAS

DEAR LACRESHA: Thank you for a lovely letter. It made my day!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reference to the letter concerning the rude and obscene "one-finger salutes" one frequently sees while driving in heavy traffic.

Well, at least they don't point a pistol at you, which is how some people signal their displeasure in these crazy times. — NOT ONE OF THEM IN OMAHA

What teens need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is in "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Prices rally

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose moderately Tuesday in a rebound from the previous day's selloff.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February, which fell 46 cents Monday, rose 22 cents Tuesday to settle at $19.26 per barrel, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Navajo Refining and Texaco Trading and Transportation raised their posted price 25 cents to $17.75.

The fall on Monday was led by a drop in home heating oil prices, which were responding to unseasonably warm weather in the Northeast, the nation's largest heating oil consumption region.

Rita Beale, energy analyst at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., said the upturn in prices was due mostly to technical pricing factors, rather than any fundamental changes in the amount of oil supplied or demanded.

T-bills fall

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest level since November.

The Treasury Department sold $12.6 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.15 percent, down from 3.22 percent last week. Another $12.6 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.28 percent, down from 3.38 percent.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 3.13 percent on Nov. 16. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 3.27 percent on Nov. 2.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK — The dollar dropped against most major currencies Tuesday in a session dominated by buying interest in the British pound.

Sterling strengthened in New York, with a pound quoted at $1.5500 late in the session compared to $1.5000 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Monday's late quotes included: 1.6255 German marks, down from 1.6395; 1.4720 Swiss francs, down from 1.4800; 5.5475 French francs, down from 5.5950; 1,521.10 Italian lire, down from 1,530.50; and 1.27725 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2816.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK — The stock market appeared to close little changed on Tuesday, but some industry sectors were hit hard while others flourished.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.35 to close at 3,307.87.

But advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by about 5 to 4 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Corporate profit outpaces economy

■ While overall economy probably grew around 2 percent last year, corporate net income increased about 8 percent, economist estimates.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — As corporate number crunchers finish toting up 1992 earnings, it appears many companies will report respectable fourth-quarter results despite lingering economic weakness.

The fate of a few cyclical companies, whose fortunes rise and fall with the economy, improved in the latter days of 1992. Sectors such as retailing are expected to have good news during the next six weeks when they report fourth-quarter earnings.

A rebound in the banking business could be the year's biggest turnaround story.

But some other industries deeply dependent on economic conditions, notably automakers, haven't turned the corner yet. Their fourth-quarter totals are expected to be grim.

Fourth-quarter figures also are expected to show that plant closings, layoffs and other cost cuts associated with recent corporate restructurings have begun to pay off.

That's not true for all companies, particularly some prominent ones. International Business Machines Corp., General Motors Corp. and Sears, Roebuck and Co. still haven't reaped much benefit from their overhauls and again will have disappointing numbers, analysts expect.

Those who track corporate profits say that in general, fourth-quarter results will put the finishing touches on a satisfactory year.

"Corporate profitability ended the year better off than was widely expected at the start of the year and at midyear," said Clare Zempel, chief economist at Robert W. Baird & Co. in Milwaukee.

More than ever, analysts will have to read between the lines to get a complete picture of corporate performance. Operating income rather than after-tax earnings will be the focus of attention because the numbers will be skewed by one-time charges that scores of companies are taking to comply with new accounting rules.

"If I look at operating earnings, I think 1992 will turn out to have been a good year," said Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp. "Earnings are actually doing better than the economy."

While the overall economy probably grew around 2 percent last year, corporate net income increased about 8 percent, Johnson estimated.

Bill Stromberg, a vice president at T. Rowe Price Associates Inc. in Baltimore, said companies relying on operations in Europe and Japan for a large share of their income stream could have less robust balance sheets beause of spotty economic showings in those regions.

The earnings season will deliver few surprises. Conspicuous money-losers such as airlines and automakers continued to perform poorly in the fourth quarter. Many cyclical companies geared to consumers — with the exception of retailers — probably didn't chalk up much earnings growth.

Significant income improvements probably won't come until later in basic industries such as steel and aluminum, chemical producers and paper and forest products firms as well as some makers of heavy machinery, trucking companies, railroads and pollution control companies.

Noncyclical categories of companies, including food and drinks, pharmaceuticals and tobacco, are expected to show further moderate growth in the fourth quarter.

Any positive news from technology will be overshadowed by bleak IBM statistics. The humbled computer maker has warned it will barely break even in the fourth quarter after taking a multibillion-dollar charge to pay for a massive downsizing.

Banks are expected to have one of the happiest tales to tell. Their profitability and capital were gradually restored last year thanks to smaller hikes in loan losses. Also, lower interest rates worked in their favor.

According to IBES Inc., which tracks corporate profits and analysts' predictions, the banking industry's profits more than doubled in 1992's fourth quarter from a year earlier.

UT professor to highlight PBPA meeting

Staff report

Margaret Maxey, director of the Clint Murchison Sr. Chair of Free Enterprise at the University of Texas at Austin will be the guest speaker at a Permian Basin Petroleum Association luncheon on Tuesday.

Maxey

The luncheon will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Maxey will speak on "Environment and Engineering: Shotgun Marriage or Custody Dispute?" She speaks out on hype and scare tactics employed by the environmental movement.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the PBPA, said, "Because the PBPA feels it is critical to set the environmental record straight and into the classroom, we are sponsoring 40 teachers from the Midland and Ector County school districts."

Maxey is a professor of bioethics in the Biomedical Enginering program at the College of Engineering at the Univeristy of Texas. Before coming to Austin, she was assistant director of the Energy Research Institute in Columbia, S.C.

From 1970 to 1979, she was associate professor of bioethics at the University of Detroit. She also taught philosophy, ethics and metaphysics at Barat College, Lake Forest, Ill., at Maryville College in Saint Louis and at the Creighton University in Omaha.

She is also a former consultant for Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, Livermore, Calif., on the question of ethical issues in radioactive waste disposal. Dr. Maxey also has represented invited public testimony in Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Republic of the Philippines and the United States.

She received a bachelor's degree in philosphy at the Creighton University, master's degrees in philosophy from Saint Louis University and in systematic theology at the University of San Francisco and a doctorate in Christian Ethics at Union Theological Seminary.

Cost of the luncheon is $12 and reservations can be made by contacting the PBPA office at 684-6345.

Boeing talks new jumbo jet with European rivals

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co. is holding talks with at least one of its European rivals on the possibility of jointly building a new jumbo jet.

Boeing President Phil Condit confirmed Tuesday that his company and German Aerospace are looking at the feasibility of developing an airplane that could carry between 550 and 800 passengers.

The Wall Street Journal reported Tuesday that British Aerospace PLC has also been party to the talks, but that couldn't immediately be confirmed. Condit said only that other aerospace manufacturers, including Boeing's longtime suppliers in Japan, possibly could become part of the joint study.

The Journal said an agreement among the three parties was expected to be announced this month, but Condit said only that no agreements have been signed to date. Even if a joint study is launched, it won't necessarily lead to joint development of an airplane, he said.

"We want to maintain our position in the international airplane market. That's how we will continue to meet our customers' requirements and provide jobs for our employees," Condit said. "We'll take whatever actions necessary to do that, whether that means making major investments in research and development, or looking at possible international alliances."

In Hamburg, German Aerospace spokesman Peter Kirch declined to comment on the nature of the talks but confirmed talks had taken place.

Any deal is subject to approval by antitrust regulators.

British Aerospace and German Aerospace, a subsidiary of the Daimler-Benz conglomerate in Stuttgart, Germany, are members of the European consortium called Airbus, based in France. Airbus is Boeing's main competitor, but builds planes only up to 320 seats.

The Journal said the giant jets could cost up to $250 million each, and potential buyers would be British Airways, Japan Air Lines, United Airlines and Lufthansa German Airlines.

Midland motel to have new manager, name

By Melia McEwen

Midland's Victorian Inn — formerly Mark Twain Inn and Comfort Inn — is under new management and soon will have a new name.

McEwen

Al Mori, the new manager, said he has had a commitment from Travel Lodge to become a Travel Lodge motel, but he said Days Inn also has expressed an interest; he said he expects to make a decision by the end of the week.

He said the property, built in 1982, "is a very nice, clean property. We've been here three weeks, cleaned it up and done some work on the plumbing and electricity."

The motel offers free shuttle service to the airport, and to restaurants around Midland; a complimentary breakfast consisting of juice, coffee and doughnuts, with coffee available all day long; and fax service.

Mori has been in the industry 16 years, having previously worked for Holiday Inn and Embassy Suites.

"My job is really to promote the motel and to make connections with the people of Midland," he said.

■ Woman receives settlement from Sears

MADISON, Wis. — Sears Roebuck & Co. has settled out of court with a woman who sued the retailer for invasion of privacy when she discovered a reflecting panel above a dressing room allowed strangers to see her undress.

The settlement was reached Monday, as a circuit court jury trial was to begin. The terms weren't disclosed.

Lenora Weber said she heard laughter and other noise outside the dressing room at a Madison Sears as she prepared to try on a dress March 9, 1991. Then, she said, she saw her reflection in a panel above her and bystanders outside the dressing room looking up at the same panel.

Court records filed in Sears' defense said the panel was originally installed to discourage employees from pilfering from cash registers and was unintentionally left behind when checkout areas were moved elsewhere and replaced by dressing rooms.

Sears also said a department manager gave Ms. Weber the $60 dress she was about to try on when the incident occurred.

Ms. Weber's lawyer, Michael Luebke, refused to say if the woman received a financial award as part of the settlement. But he said, "You could infer that."

■ Group preserves Civil War battlefield

HARPERS FERRY, W.Va. — Preservationists have spared part of a Civil War battlefield from future development.

The Civil War Trust is buying the 56-acre parcel where the Battle of School House Ridge took place in 1862. Confederate Gen. Stonewall Jackson's forces captured 12,500 Union soldiers there.

The trust last week gave the Jefferson Security Bank a $4,500 down payment toward its $440,000 purchase of the property, adjacent to Harpers Ferry National Historical Park. Trust Vice President Edgar Andrews III disclosed the purchase Monday.

The land lies between Union and Confederate positions and remains "remarkably as it did during the battle," said Donald Campbell, park superintendent.

■ Governor orders agencies to slice budget

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Gov. Gaston Caperton has ordered state agencies to slice $48 million from the current $2.06 billion budget, blaming the recession for paltry tax revenues.

Revenues fell $14.3 million short of projections in December, the midpoint of the fiscal year, the state auditor reported last week. More than half the shortfall was in business tax revenues.

On Monday, Caperton, a Democrat, ordered education spending cut 1.5 percent and allocations for all other agences reduced 5 percent across the board.

The timing of the cuts means they'll really trim spending plans by 3 percent for education, and 10 percent in everything else.

Secretary of Administration Chuck Polan said reductions probably would hit the state prison system hardest. But the pinch will also be felt hard in social welfare programs like Medicaid and the public defenders' office, he said.

■ Record number dies in pursuit of summit

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A record number of climbers tried to reach the summit of Mount McKinley last year. And a record number — 11, all but one of them foreigners — died trying, the National Park Service reported.

The 1,070 climbers who tackled McKinley, North America's tallest peak at 20,320 feet, were the most since rangers began keeping statistics in 1932, the agency said Monday. About half reached the top.

For the past five years, an average of 986 climbers tried reaching McKinley's summit. Before 1970, McKinley never had attracted 100 climbers in a season.

Climbing rangers blamed storms for a rash of fatalities last spring.

Seven people died during a 10-day storm in May, said J.D. Swed, a ranger for the Denali National Park and Preserve of which McKinley is the centerpiece.

Foreigners got into the most trouble. Two prominent Italian climbers died in a fall. Pulmonary and cerebral edema killed a Swiss climber waiting out bad weather. Four Canadians and three Koreans fell to their deaths.

Rescues cost nearly $500,000 in 1992, Swed said. The Park Service and the military absorbed most of the cost.

■ Board reviews complaints against police

NEW YORK — Mayor David Dinkins on Tuesday signed legislation creating an independent, all-civilian board to review complaints against police, prevailing against initial fierce opposition by the 20,000-member police union.

The City Council passed the legislation 41-9 in December. In September, 10,000 off-duty officers had staged an unruly City Hall rally against the measure.

Debate over the issue has been emotional, with several black and Hispanic council members telling of personal encounters with white police officers that involved racial bias.

The city's present Civilian Complaint Review Board is made up of 12 civilians, half chosen by the police commissioner from among Police Department employees. The mayor names the other six.

The new board will have 13 members, five picked by the mayor, five by the City Council and three by the commissioner, who must choose active or former law enforcement professionals.

EPA: Second-hand smoke causes cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency will release a long-delayed report that says secondhand cigarette smoke is a human carcinogen and kills about 3,000 nonsmokers a year because of lung cancer, agency officials said Tuesday.

The report, to be released Thursday, also concludes that secondhand smoke increases the risk of pneumonia and bronchitis in children.

The EPA has the power to classify a substance as a carcinogen, but it does not have any power to regulate indoor air. The release of the report, however, could trigger an avalanche of federal, state and local regulations limiting smoking in public places, health advocates said.

"Having the EPA's imprimatur on this is extremely important," said Dr. Alfred Munzer, a spokesman for the Coalition on Smoking or Health, which includes the American Lung Association, the American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society.

"We believe this will motivate state governments, local governments to enact further regulations limiting smoking in public places."

The report also could prod the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to regulate smoking in the workplace, health advocates said. Douglas Fuller, an OSHA spokesman, said the agency would weigh the EPA report carefully in its deliberations.

Munzer called on President Bush to use the report to justify an order to restrict smoking in federal buildings. "This is far less controversial than the pardons he has issued and would do a tremendous amount for the public health," Munzer said.

The report concludes that secondhand smoke is a proven human carcinogen, putting it in the same class as asbestos, benzene and radon, EPA officials said.

The report's authors said cigarette smoke causes from 400 to 7,000 lung cancer deaths in American nonsmokers annually, with a "best estimate" of 3,000 cases. That's based on conservative assumptions, they said, so the actual total could be higher.

They also said that cigarette smoke increases the risk of pneumonia, bronchitis, and middle-ear disorders in children. The report also concludes that cigarette smoke increases the severity and frequency of asthma in children, EPA officials said.

The EPA has decided to kill a second report that links secondhand smoke to 37,000 heart-disease deaths annually, said Robert Axelrad, head of the EPA's indoor-air division. The report originally was conceived to be a companion to the lung-cancer report.

The link between cigarette smoke and heart disease is considered even more explosive than the lung-cancer link, because cigarette smoke causes roughly 10 times as many heart-disease as lung-cancer deaths.

The heart association has petitioned the EPA to do its own study of secondhand smoke and heart disease, but the agency hasn't responded. "We have not made a decision to do so at this time," Axelrad said.

Lack of physicians, facilities prevents prenatal care

N.Y. Times News Service

Belkis Rodriguez had no prenatal care when she walked into the emergency room at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York last October in active labor. At 37, with one other child, Ms. Rodriguez said she knew she should have received medical care during her pregnancy.

But again and again, she was put on hold when she tried to schedule appointments at a local clinic in the Bronx, and when an appointment was made it was more than a month away. She missed that appointment, but scheduled another. Then she moved from the Bronx to Upper Manhattan and missed her new appointment, too.

"I tried to get visits, but after a while I guess I got a little bit lazy," she said with a shrug from her hospital bed a day after delivering a healthy baby girl.

Now that almost all states provide public financing for poor pregnant women to get prenatal care, low-income women are running into a new set of obstacles, from long waits at clinics to a lack of qualified doctors and midwives in their neighborhoods.

Although legislators had hoped that the huge infusion of public money would improve this country's poor record on prenatal care and high infant mortality rate — the United States ranks 22d among developed nations — doctors working at public hospitals say they continue to see a steady stream of women who arrive in emergency rooms in labor with no prior care. A newly published study suggests that, at least in some states, the money has not made a great dent in the statistics.

"There is a fair amount of data to suggest that expanded coverage is a good first step but that by itself it will not be successful in improving access to care or infant outcome," said Dr. Jennifer Haas, an instructor in medicine at Harvard University's Brigham and Women's Hospital and an author of the study.

Dr. Haas and her colleagues compared all births in Massachusetts in 1984 with those in 1987, after the state initiated an expanded access program allowing women who earned up to 185 percent of the poverty level to get free prenatal care. To their surprise, researchers found that the percentage of women who had received adequate prenatal care actually dropped and the percentage of infants who were premature or small, the two factors that most commonly lead to infant mortality, was unchanged.

In response, many hospital and health departments are trying to streamline pregnancy care for poor women. In Florida, pregnant

Scientists step closer to dinosaurs' common ancestor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists said Tuesday they had moved a step closer to identifying the common ancestor of all dinosaurs with the discovery of a dog-sized meateater in the barren foothills of the Andes.

"This may be as close as we ever come to that common ancestor," said University of Chicago paleontologist Paul Sereno at a National Geographic Society news conference announcing his findings.

He said the two-legged carnivore, measuring only 40 inches from its nose to the tip of its tail, is structurally the most primitive dinosaur ever discovered, and dates back to the beginnings of the dinosaur age 225 million years ago.

Sereno named the species "Eoraptor," or "dawn stealer," because it lived at the dawn of the dinosaur period and, because of its small size, probably used guile rather than power to take its prey.

"It would have been a crafty hunter, probably eating small animals and snatching the young of larger species," he said. He described the 25-pound reptile as a "fleet-footed animal with hollow bones. . . . It was quite a predator."

"This fills an important blank in the dinosaur family tree," said National Geographic magazine editor William Graves. He noted that half of the 350 known dinosaur species have been identified in the past 20 years.

Sereno said his joint American-Argentinian team dug up the dinosaur in October 1991 during an expedition to Argentina's fossil-rich Ischigualasto Valley in the arid foothills of the Andes Mountains.

The specimen, discovered by an Argentinian student who saw the glint of its tooth in the rubble, was nearly intact, missing only a small section of the tail and showing a few signs that another animal had nibbled on it.

Sereno said the Eoraptor is an early member of the "theropod" group of dinosaurs, that includes the Herrerasaurus, a more developed but also very ancient dinosaur Sereno's team found in the same area in 1988, and the ferocious Tyrannosaurus that lived in the final days of the dinosaur age some 65 million years ago.

Like the others, the Eoraptor possessed grasping, three-fingered claws designed to rake flesh from its prey. But it lacks the hinge-like jaw joint and the large pelvic bone common to more developed species, Sereno said.

He said the reptile must have lived only 5 to 10 million years after the very first dinosaur, the yet-undiscovered common ancestor with traits generic to all dinosaur species.

Tank fire continues to burn

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Fire officials say it may take several days, possibly even weeks, before a blaze in a 2.3 million gallon fuel storage tank is extinguished.

The fire started Saturday at a Steuart Petroleum Co. tank farm and has continued to burn despite efforts by firefighters to douse it with foam.

The latest plan involves pumping gasoline from the bottom of the tank and replacing it with water, which doesn't mix with the gasoline. The remaining gasoline should then burn out as it is kept near the top, where the fire has been burning, said Glenn Domen, a fire department spokesman.

Another spokesman, John Peavey, said it could take weeks for the fire to burn itself out.

Lee rips MHS, 66-47

Decisive 3rd quarter rally spurs Rebels

■ Midland Lee moves to 2-0 in District 4-5A play by defeating cross-town rival Midland High.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

For what it's worth, the Midland High Bulldogs held the Midland Lee Rebels 18 points under their season average Tuesday night at the Chaparral Center.

It didn't keep Lee from winning by 19 points, however, as the Rebels' 66-47 victory earned them local bragging rights at least until the second District 4-5A meeting of the two teams, Jan. 26.

The Rebels outscored MHS 19-3 in the third quarter to stay unbeaten in the 4-5A boys basketball race at 2-0, and upped their season mark to 19-3. The Bulldogs (12-6) are now 0-1 in district with the league-opening loss. Lee remained tied with Abilene Cooper (an 87-68 winner over Abilene High Tuesday) for the 4-5A lead with the victory.

And while MHS built a 30-24 halftime lead as the Rebels shot under 30 percent from the field (8-of-28), the second half was the undoing of the Bulldogs, who committed nine of their 19 turnovers in the third period.

"We made a few changes on our press at halftime. We wanted to see if (6-8 center Andre) Gill really wanted to dribble the ball, we wanted their sophomores to handle the ball, and we wanted to have constant pressure on (senior guard Mike) Melzer," said Lee head coach Jon House.

It didn't hurt Lee's cause that senior guard Martin Lattibeaudiere also began to find the hole in the third quarter. Lattibeaudiere finished with a game-high 19 points, 16 in the second half, as all four of his three-point shots in the half found nothing but net.

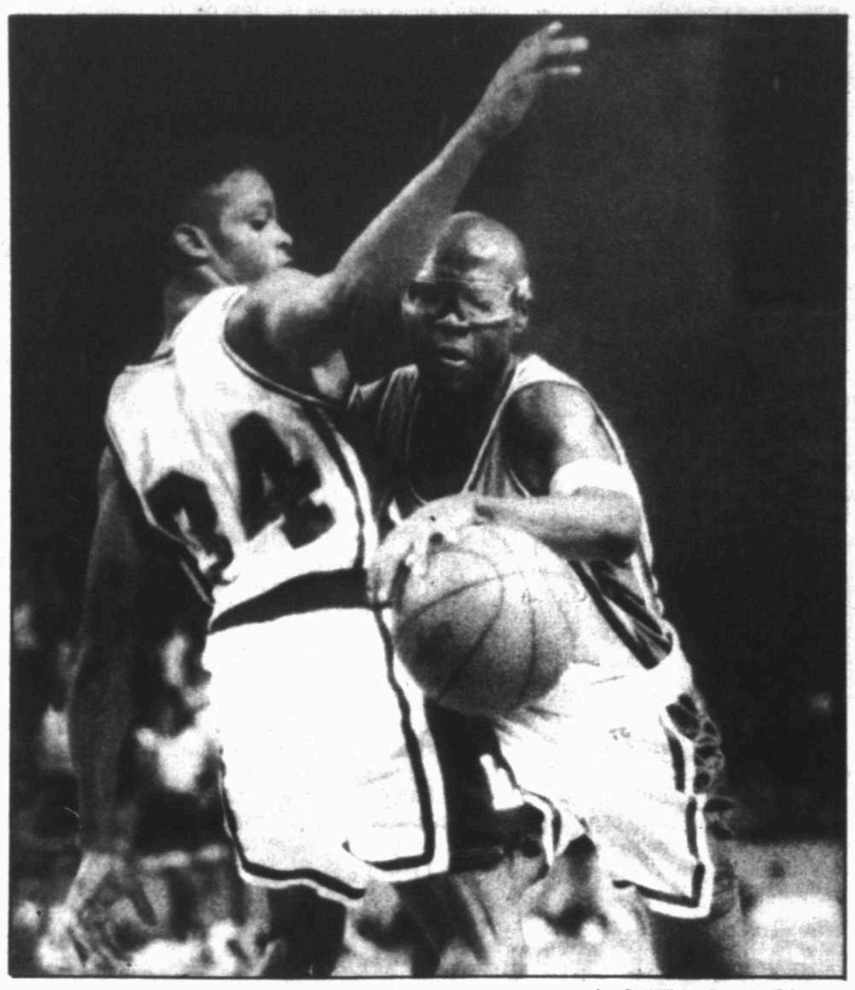

After opening the night with just two attempted shots in the first quarter, Lattibeaudiere said it was just a matter of getting a feel for the game.

"We weren't really warmed up and we really weren't taking our shots on offense. This is a pretty big game and Coach told us not to get too hyped up for it. But we were too calm and had to show a little life," Lattibeaudiere said.

David Wilson, the Rebs' leading scorer with a 22-point-a-game average, found the going rough against the Bulldogs' tenacious defense. He scored 13 points while going 4-for-16 from the field, and credited the low output to MHS' Donald Carter rather than the taller Gill and Philip Warlick (6-5).

"It wasn't really 'Dre (Gill) or Phil, it was mostly Carter. He did a pretty good

It isn't summer at the old swimmin' hole, but Midland High girls basketball coach Jim Raughton hopes his Lady Bulldogs have found the springboard.

Tuesday night at Chaparral Center, the Lady 'Dawgs waited until the fourth quarter, but put away a 55-47 win over cross-town rival Midland Lee to remain the only unbeaten team in District 4-5A play with a 3-0 mark.

But there is no getting around that this game means a lot in any playoff run — maybe more than it should.

"Last year we came into this game with a 15-4 record and Lee was 6-9 and Lee beat us," Raughton said. "We went on to lose our next two games and never really got our intensity back.

"I don't like the idea of placing so much importance on one game this early in the season, but you just can't treat this like any other game because it isn't. Lee used that win last year as a springboard to the playoffs. It changed everything. I hope it means the same for us. This was a huge win."

And this was a huge game for the 2,000 fans, one of the largest crowds to watch a girls game at the Chap. Don't be fooled by the eight-point spread. This one was close.

The teams battled to a 47-47 tie with 2:33 left in the game before MHS pulled away for the victory with an 8-0 run to the buzzer. Julie Chancellor hit two free throws with 1:53 left to break the tie and Lee could never get anything going the rest of the way as MHS cashed in on eight charity tosses down the stretch.

But before that, the teams battled to 11 lead changes and the game was tied eight different times.

"We just freaked out at the end," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "We just didn't execute offensively at the end. Our outside people tried to do things that they've never done before. We can never play to lose, and I think we did that the whole fourth quarter."

Sophomore whiz Amy Alcala led the Bulldog charge with a game high 23 points while Chancellor chipped in with 16 points and a great go-on-the-floor defensive effort.

Lee held a 17-10 lead in the first quarter when post Tekeira Strambler went on an eight-point rampage, but she ended the game with only 12 points, one in the entire second half.

"We knew we had to keep Strambler off the glass going into the game," Raughton said, "but she had a big first half. We talked about it again at the half, but we really didn't change anything but try to get quicker help on her. Then (Krissy) Woodard hurt us some in the second half, but you can't double team everyone."

Woodard, another sophomore of note, led Lee with 15 points.

Kail feels her Lady Rebels can come back from the loss.

"We came back after losing to Abilene Cooper with a win over San Angelo and came back to win consolation in the Caprock tournament," Kail said. "This is a loss to your cross-town rival, but it isn't

Ditka fired in Chicago

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Mike Ditka's 11 years as the bellowing, bullying coach of the Chicago Bears ended Tuesday with a tear in his eye and a quiver in his voice.

Ditka, who led the Bears to a 1986 Super Bowl victory, was fired nine days after the end of a disastrous 5-11 season. He will stay on indefinitely as a consultant.

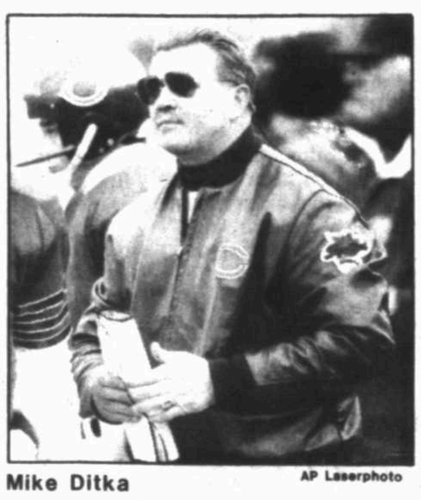

"We're going to have to find some new ways to do some things, ways different than we've done them in the past," Bears president Michael McCaskey said. "There's going to be a premium on fresh ideas, and a new start.

"I've come to the difficult conclusion that it's best to start that process with a new head coach."

The 53-year-old Ditka, who spoke haltingly at a press conference that lasted less than six minutes, said: "Scripture tells you that all things shall pass. This, too, shall pass. Regrets, just a few, but too few to remember. Thirty-two years, and I have a lot of people to thank.

"I want to thank the players most because they make it happen. Thank you, fans of this city.

KOSA to go with Cowboys

■ Local CBS affiliate preempts Odessa church service for NFC playoff game.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

ODESSA — KOSA-TV, the local CBS affiliate, will broadcast this Sunday's NFC divisional playoff game between the Dallas Cowboys and Philadelphia Eagles in its entirety.

Pregame coverage begins at 11 a.m. with the NFL Today, with the kickoff following at 11:30 a.m. on Channel 7, or Channel 8 for viewers on Dimension Cable.

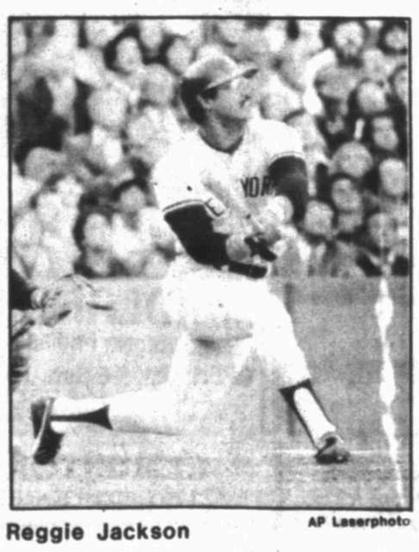

Game coverage will preempt the regularly schedule 11 a.m. services broadcast from Odessa's First Baptist Church.

Sheryl Jonsson, general manager of KOSA, said choosing the Cowboys over the church broadcast was a programming decision.

"It wouldn't have been a good decision (to not show the beginning of the Cowboy-Eagle game) because we would've had to join a network game in progress (at noon)," Jonnson said. "It was a deci-

Jackson baseball's sole electee

Reggie Jackson

N.Y. Times News Service

Reggie Jackson, whose productive and prodigious hits backed his boasts of being "the straw that stirred the drink," was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame Tuesday on his first attempt.

Jackson, who helped three different teams win 10 division championships in a 12-season span, didn't reach the record 98.8 percent vote Tom Seaver received a year ago, but he was named on 93.6 percent of the ballots, the 10th-highest percentage ever gained in the voting, by members of the Baseball Writers Association.

Election to the hall required 318, or 75 percent, of the 423 votes cast. Jackson received 396 as the 29th player elected the first year he was eligible. No other player won election.

Phil Niekro, like Jackson on the ballot for the first time, was second in the voting with 278 votes (65.7 percent). Steve Garvey, also eligible for the first time, was fifth with 176 (41.6 percent).

Orlando Cepeda (252), Tony Perez (233), Tony Oliva (157), Ron Santo (155) and Jim Kaat (125) all gained from their percentages in last year's balloting, but all remained well below the required number. Cepeda has only one year left in his 15-year eligibility period.

Jackson, who retired after the 1987 season, enraged some players with his audacious comments, but he upset opposing pitchers even more. He finished his 21-year career with 563 home runs, No. 6 on the career list, and 1,702 runs batted in, No. 16. He didn't invent clutch hitting, but he epitomized it.

"Reggie was the type of guy who could

Kennedy award

NEW YORK — Cortez Kennedy, the best player on one of the NFL's worst teams, easily won The Associated Press 1992 Defensive Player of the Year Award, announced Tuesday.

The third-year tackle for the Seattle Seahawks had an exemplary season even as his team was going 2-14. Kennedy received 33 votes from a nationwide panel of media members, far ahead of linebacker Junior Seau of San Diego, who had 12.

Hearst declares

ATHENS, Ga. — Georgia running back Garrison Hearst, who finished third in Heisman Trophy balloting this season, said Tuesday he will give up his final year of college eligibility and enter the NFL draft.

"The final decision was made this morning," Hearst said. "I thought about a lot of things last night. It was a hard thing for me to do."

Hearst rushed for 1,547 yards this year as the Bulldogs compiled a 9-2 regular-season record, then added 163 yards and two touchdowns as Georgia beat Ohio State 21-14 in the Citrus Bowl to earn a No. 8 final ranking.

Lemieux injured

PITTSBURGH — Mario Lemieux, the NHL's leading scorer, left the Pittsburgh Penguins' game again the Boston Bruins on Tuesday night complaining again of back problems.

Lemieux played in the first period but did not take the ice in the second. He sat at the end of the bench before finally heading to the locker room with 11:33 left in the period.

Georgetown brushes by Syracuse

Associated Press

■ Top 25 Roundup

LANDOVER, Md. — Robert Churchwell found his shot. The Syracuse Orangemen are still looking for theirs.

Churchwell scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half Tuesday night to lead 17th-ranked Georgetown past No. 21 Syracuse 64-60. It extended the Orangemen's worst-ever Big East Conference start to 0-3.

Georgetown coach John Thompson is "always telling me to look for my shot, and be more aggressive within the context of my game," said Churchwell, who made 10 of 19 shots in helping the Hoyas (8-1 overall, 2-1 Big East) bounce back from last weekend's 80-69 loss to Miami.

"I've been tough on Robert," Thompson said, "but I thought he came through tonight and did some very good things."

Othella Harrington added 18 points for the Hoyas.

The teams combined for 46 turnovers, and neither shot better than 40 percent.

"We're just not shooting particularly well," Syrcause coach Jim Boeheim said. "We haven't for three games now. In this league, if you're not playing well, you're going to lose. There might not be any great teams in this league, but everybody's good."

Syracuse needed 5 minutes, and 11 possessions, before making its first basket of the game. The Orangemen made only 2 of 11 shots in the first 10 minutes and committed 9 turnovers, yet trailed only 13-7.

Georgia Tech 85, Maryland 75

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Tenth-ranked Georgia Tech held Maryland to 30 percent shooting in the decisive first half, and Travis Best scored 25 points as Georgia Tech downed Maryland.

Malcolm Mackey had 17 points, and his 17 rebounds put him atop Georgia Tech's career list. He has 998 rebounds, breaking the record held by Jim Caldwell, who had 993 from 1963-65.

James Forrest scored 20 points for Georgia Tech (8-1) in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams. It was the Yellow Jackets' seventh straight victory this season and eighth win in the last nine at Maryland.

No. 2 Kentucky 74, Georgia 59

ATHENS, Ga. — Jamal Mashburn scored 26 points and Kentucky's pressing defense forced 27 turnovers as the second-ranked Wildcats opened Southeastern Conference play with a victory over Georgia.

Georgia led 13-11 on Shandon Anderson's jump shot with 11:25 left in the half. Mashburn's two free throws gave Kentucky (10-0) the lead for good at 17-15 with 9:02 to play in the half.

Those free throws started a 23-9 Kentucky run that provided a 38-24 halftime lead.

Georgia had 19 of its 27 turnovers in the first half, many on inbounds plays.

The Bulldogs (5-5 overall, 1-1 SEC) came no closer than 12 points in the second half.

Rice beats Texas to open conference play

Associated Press

■ SWC Roundup

AUSTIN, Texas — Brent Scott scored 23 points and David Holmes and Marvin Moore each added 19 as Rice held off Texas 92-87 in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams Tuesday night.

Rice built a 22-point lead (74-52) with 9:30 left to play. But the Longhorns, playing without coach Tom Penders who was ejected with 13:55 left, pressed the Owls, falling just short at the end.

Rice (4-4 overall) used the inside-outside attack of Scott and Holmes to wear down Texas (5-4). They lost Penders after he collected his second technical foul for complaining about officials' calls.

Rice methodically wore down the Longhorns, who shot miserably in the first half, hitting only 9 of 32 from the field.

Texas warmed up in the second half, hitting 22 of 45 from the field, but Rice's steady play proved to be too much. Texas never got closer than five in the final three minutes.

Michael Richardson led the Longhorns with 24 points, while Terrence Rencher added 23. Albert Burditt added 10 rebound and five blocks for Texas.

The Longhorns were playing without senior point guard B.J. Tyler, who broke his right foot Sunday in practice.

Rice led 39-26 at halftime.

Texas A&M 92, Brown 52

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Damon Johnson scored a game-high 22 points and grabbed nine rebounds, leading Texas A&M to a victory over Brown.

Texas A&M improved to 5-5 while dropping the Bears to 4-4.

The Aggies, after leading 46-31 at halftime, used a 25-9 run at the start of the second half to put the game away. Texas A&M coach Tony Barone then pulled his starters as the Aggies coasted to victory.

Eric Blackiston, the only Bears player in double figures, scored 11 points to lead Brown, which shot just 36 percent from the field and was outrebounded 37-23.

Brett Murry had 14 points and Lance Broderson added 10 for the Aggies.

Baylor 94, Tulsa 85

WACO, Texas — Aundre Branch scored 30 points, including eight 3-pointers, and Alex Holcombe added 26 points and 10 rebounds, leading Baylor to a 94-85 victory over Tulsa.

The Bears improved to 7-2 while dropping the Golden Hurricane to 4-7.

Baylor's tough second-half defense and Branch's sharpshooting helped break open what had been a close game. A pair of his 3-pointers gave Baylor a 71-63 lead with 11:12 to go.

Lakers down Bulls in Chicago

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

CHICAGO — James Worthy scored 21 points and teamed up with Vlade Divac in the fourth quarter to rally the Los Angeles Lakers 91-88 victory over the Chicago Bulls on Tuesday night.

The loss snapped Chicago's seven-game winning streak, while the Lakers won for just the third time in their last 10 games.

LA outscored the Bulls 9-4 at the outset of the fourth quarter and, when Sam Perkins slammed off a fast break, they were up 79-72 at 9:18.

The Lakers led 81-74 before Trent Tucker and John Paxson hit back-to-back 3-pointers to pull the Bulls within 81-80 with 6:48 remaining.

A driving layup by Michael Jordan tied the contest at 86-all with 2:05 left before Worthy hit a pair of free throws at 1:19 for an 88-86 LA lead.

A.C. Green converted 1 of 2 free throws with 48 seconds remaining to pad the lead to 89-86.

B. J. Armstrong then missed on a 3-point shot, but Horace Grant was fouled going for the loose ball. Grant hit both free throws with 34 seconds left to pull the Bulls within 89-88.

With five seconds left on the shot clock, Divac clicked on an 18-footer for a 91-88 Laker lead.

Heat 89, Pistons 83

MIAMI — Rookie reserve Harold Miner scored 19 points and sparked a fourth-quarter rally as the Miami Heat beat the Detroit Pistons.

The Heat spoiled the return of former coach Ron Rothstein, who now coaches the Pistons, by coming up with their best defensive effort of the season.

Terry Mills' dunk with 6:43 left in the game gave the Pistons a 73-72 lead, their only advantage of the night. But Miner made a layup with 6:07 left for a 74-73 lead, triggering an 11-0 run.

Miner made a layup and two free throws, Glen Rice hit a 3-pointer and Bimbo Coles added two free throws to give the Heat an 83-73 lead with 3:22 remaining.

Consecutive 3-pointers by Detroit's Isiah Thomas, who scored 25 points, got the Pistons as close as 84-81 with 1:21 left.

Celtics 107, Hornets 103

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kevin McHale scored eight of his 18 points in the final four minutes as the Boston Celtics took a victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

The Celtics hit 2 of 12 from the field through the first 7:06 of the fourth quarter as the Hornets moved ahead 93-86, hitting their first seven shots of the period. The one Boston basket was on goal tend on Alonzo Mourning.

Boston charged back and a layup by McHale and 20-foot jumper from Dee Brown put the Celtics ahead 102-98. A Reggie Lewis free throw increased the lead to 103-98 with 24.4 seconds to go.

Pacers 114, Clippers 106

INDIANAPOLIS — Rik Smits matched his season high of 27 points and Detlef Schrempf hit his second triple-double of the season in leading the Indiana Pacers over the Los Angeles Clippers.

The victory broke a six-game losing streak for Indiana, which had lost its last three meetings and eight of 10 to the Clippers.

Smits had five points as the Pacers outscored the Clippers 13-5 to begin the third quarter and take their biggest lead of the night, 79-54 with 8:22 left in the period.

Nets 102, Magic 99

ORLANDO, Fla. — Drazen Petrovic scored 29 points and Derrick Coleman added 28 points and 16 rebounds to lead the New Jersey Nets over the Orlando Magic.

Petrovic scored 17 in the third period as he hit all seven of his attempts from the field, helping New Jersey shoot 76 percent to take a 78-76 lead. He had only four points in the final quarter, but two of them were free throws with 2.7 seconds remaining that ensured the Nets' sixth victory in nine games.

Bucks 114, Timberwolves 100

MILWAUKEE — Frank Brickowski scored 21 points and the Milwaukee Bucks went on a late 10-0 run to beat the Minnesota Timberwolves for their third straight victory.

Anthony Avent added 18 points and Fred Roberts and Danny Schayes had 15 for the Bucks. Doug West scored 28 and Chuck Person 27 for the Timberwolves, who have lost nine of their last 10.

Suns 106, Rockets 104

HOUSTON — Phoenix's Charles Barkley scored 29 points and Danny Ainge hit 12 crucial fourth-quarter points to hold off the Houston Rockets in a Suns victory, their 15th in 16 games.

The Suns, whose 14-game winning streak ended Sunday in a 114-113 overtime loss to San Antonio, had to fight off the Rockets in the closing seconds.

Trail Blazers 109, Mavericks 95

DALLAS — Jerome Kersey led six double-figure scorers with 17 points as the Portland Trail Blazers handed the Dallas Mavericks their ninth consecutive loss.

Rod Strickland and Terry Porter added 16 points each to help the Blazers to their fifth victory in their last nine games.

Jazz 113, Spurs 87

SALT LAKE CITY — Jeff Malone had 22 points and Karl Malone 18 as the Utah Jazz extended their winning streak to six games with a victory over San Antonio.

Larry Krystkowiak chipped in 17 points off the bench, and John Stockton scored 14 points and added 11 assists for the Jazz.

DITKA: 5-11 record in '93 cut coach's future short

(From 1D)

"The Bears will come back," he said. "Mike Ditka will survive. I'll land on my feet. There's no problem about that."

Ditka and McCaskey left the news conference quickly, leaving many unanswered questions.

As for hiring a new coach, McCaskey said, "The quicker, the better. Maybe some of the coaches I want to interview are with playoff teams and we would have to wait until their season ends."

That increased speculation that Richie Petitbon, defensive coordinator of the Washington Redskins and a former Bears player, would be among those considered.

McCaskey also said Bears coordinators, Greg Landry on offense and Vince Tobin on defense, deserve consideration.

The Bears finished with their worst record since 1975, and it was only Ditka's third losing season.

REGGIE: Aug. 1 ceremony marks Jackson's induction turn a game around with one swing of the bat," Frank Robinson, a Hall of Famer, said Tuesday by telephone from his home in Los Angeles. "He also could carry a club by himself. When he got on a roll, he could carry a club and make the players around him better players. He made them believe they couldn't lose."

Jackson divided his glamorous career among the Oakland Athletics, the Yankees, the California Angels and the Baltmore Orioles. Wherever he went, he carried his boasts with him. He talked about "the magnitude of me" and about how having "Reggie Jackson on your ball club is a part of a show of force."

Tuesday, in his crowning moment, he responded modestly.

When Jack Lang, executive secretary of the Baseball Writers Association, called him in Newport Beach, Calif., to inform him of his election and to tell him to fly to New York for a 10 a.m. news conference Tuesday, Jackson said: "I don't have a bag packed. I don't have any clothes."

When Lang said, "You knew you were going to get in," Jackson replied, "Well, I was hoping."

Matt Merola, Jackson's agent, said Jackson had declined to speak with reporters before the vote was counted for fear of jinxing himself.

"He's waited a long time for this day," said Don Baylor, a friend and former teammate, roommate and opponent. "He already has his speech prepared; he probably has from the day he retired. He brought a lot of excitement to the ball park. Fans did not dare leave their seats to get a hot dog or anything else. Either he was going to hit one nine miles or he was going to strike out. But even his strikeouts were exciting."

Jackson, who turned 46 in May, will be inducted into the Hall on Aug. 1 in ceremonies at Cooperstown, N.Y.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Strong feelings of love and an exceptional talent help you rise to the top. Travel brings money, recognition and, for some, an opportunity to change your whole life. March finds you eager to get out of a rut. Keep your feet firmly on the ground but try new things. Self-development activities make next summer a period of enlightenment. Be candid with those who have proven their loyalty. Repay favors promptly.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Loretta Young, golfer Nancy Lopez, actress Bonnie Franklin, football player Howie Long.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Procrastination is a major hazard now. You are savvy about career matters and can forge important alliances. Bring greater order to your work and home environment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Secluded at home, you will limit your potential for success. Reach out to others — when you are seen and heard, exciting things begin to happen.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The gracious way you lend support to a good cause will draw favorable attention. Shopping for household items holds promise. VIPs like your style; your social life accelerates.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A group effort can move mountains. Financial advice from experts merits further study. Far-off friends could have important news to share. Patch up a rocky relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You put your finger on the public's pulse and get a chance to leap over the competition. Hold off on negotiating a settlement until you obtain legal advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There is new harmony in the air. A personal relationship is on an even keel. Keep calm if called on the carpet for something you did not do. Marshal your facts and figures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-distance communications provide timely information today. Guard your resources. Avoid plunging into a domestic project. Travel could be beneficial for career or romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An unexpected delay may be a blessing in disguise. Try to resolve your differences with an associate. The news from your kin should be glorious. Tackle domestic chores.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Career decisions you make now will create future success. You will shine in a fresh locale. Share expenses this evening. A telephone call makes you jump for joy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Handling your own financial affairs today strengthens your fiscal standing. Others' talents may be necessary to advance your business plans. Be a good neighbor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Selfish types continue to dog your path. Avoid them like the plague! Someone very clever may try to butter you up. Luckily, you are able to sense when a person has ulterior motives.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Major transactions can be put through now; papers are signed. Your financial fortunes rise, thanks to your keen business insights. Launch new relationships and visit close friends.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sentimental and imaginative, with a subtle sense of comedy. They are usually very close to their parents and tend to confide only in members of their immediate family. Although they are "joiners" when in elementary school (organized sports and Scouting activities hold special appeal), these Capricorns may be stubbornly independent as adults. They will probably be happiest if self-employed or in business for themselves. Marriage should wait until they have seen something of the world.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South

Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

If we were asked for the one Golden Rule of bridge, we would opt for: "Plan your campaign before playing to the first trick!" This holds true for both declarer and the defenders.

South's jump response to North's overcall shows a near opening bid with a good six-card suit. Thus, North could carry on to game with only two-card support, but a good hand.

West led the king of spades. Although the only immediate losers are a trick in each suit except clubs, there is the matter of how to take care of the third spade in hand.

Suppose declarer were to grab the ace of spades and return a spade, planning to ruff the third spade as soon as possible. West would win and play the ace and another heart and, on winning the ace of diamonds, the defenders would be able to cash another spade for down one. Better is to lead a diamond at trick two, but that might run into other problems.

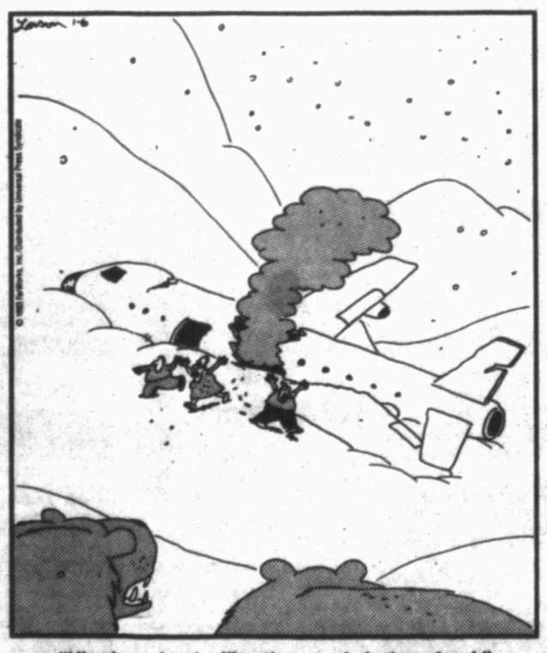

Best is simply to allow the king of spades to hold the first trick. Now the defenders must try to accomplish two things at once—set up another spade winner for themselves and draw dummy's trumps.

If the defenders clear two rounds of trumps, declarer can draw the last trump and force out the ace of diamonds, while the ace of spades is still in the South hand to control the suit. A spade will then go away on a high diamond. And if West perseveres with a spade, declarer simply ruffs a spade, drives out the master trump and coasts home.

Carter to preside over charity auction despite controversy

ATLANTA — Former President Jimmy Carter will preside over a charity auction in Colorado despite the state's new law against gay rights, saying it might help opponents of the measure.

Carter

The auction at Crested Butte, Colo., will highlight a $2,500-a-person celebrity ski trip Jan. 20-24. All proceeds will go to Carter's Atlanta Project, an effort to help poor people in Atlanta.

Carter noted that the state's ski resort areas voted heavily against Colorado's anti-gay referendum.

"I agree with the mayor of Aspen, who said that when we had racial troubles in the South, people didn't boycott us, they came and tried to help. I think this will help the people fighting that law," he said.

Among the items to be auctioned is a chess set and case that Carter made himself. It is his second public offering of his woodworking. The first, a set of four chairs made to raise money for the Carter Center in Atlanta, went for $41,000 at Sotheby's in New York.

LOS ANGELES — Dan Aykroyd, John Fogerty, Jerry Garcia, Huey Lewis, Carlos Santana and Grace Slick will take part an American Music Awards tribute to the late rock promoter Bill Graham.

Graham, who died at age 60 in an Oct. 25, 1991, helicopter crash, becomes the second posthumous recipient of the Award of Merit. Elvis Presley was the first.

The tribute will be presented during the 20th annual American Music Awards ceremonies Jan. 25.

Other recipients have included Bing Crosby, Johnny Cash, Ella Fitzgerald, Benny Goodman, Michael Jackson, Paul McCartney and James Brown.

The inscription on the Graham trophy, which will be accepted by Graham's son, David, will read: "From his early rock concerts at the Fillmore West and East in the 1960s to his all-star presentations benefiting worldwide victims of disease, homelessness and hunger in the 1980s and 1990s, he encouraged and promoted many of the top music stars of the past 25 years."

OMAHA, Neb. — It's been 30 years since the debut of a pioneering television nature series, "Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom," and longtime host Jim Fowler says a lot has changed.

"We weren't sure we could even sustain enough programs of interest for a year in the very beginning," said Fowler. He was a sidekick to original host Marlin Perkins, and took over when Perkins died in 1986.

"Back then we were just beginning to talk about ecology and ecosystems. I don't think anybody foresaw in those days how rapidly the world was going to change and how we'd start losing species and habitat," he said.

The first show was broadcast Jan. 6, 1963; the award-winning series ended production in 1991 after 329 episodes.

"What really is amazing is how 'Wild Kingdom' is such a household word," Fowler said.

He continues his work with wildlife as a correspondent for NBC's "Today" show and as executive director of the newly created Mutual of Omaha's Wildlife Heritage Trust.

HELENA, Mont. — Dorothy Bradley, narrowly defeated last November in her bid to become Montana's first woman governor, has begun work at a small rural school in southeastern Montana.

Bradley, a 45-year-old lawyer and former Democratic legislator from Bozeman, will supervise special projects and substitute teach at the Ashland Elementary School in Rosebud County, which has 120 students in kindergarten through the eighth grade.

"I would like to find some kids and offer them a new vision and new awareness of their potential, just as some of my teachers did with me," Bradley said.

She began work Monday by screening questions for an upcoming "academic olympics" competition among schools. She also will work on the school's science fair, AIDS education, anti-drug programs, the school carnival and safety programs.

Buzz magazine, which reports on what's haute in trendy L.A., describes the party of the season, the oh-so-chic wedding of Jenny Bass and Lance Glover.

The invitations were sent out "in artfully constructed wooden boxes containing bits of paper and leaf, dried flower and stem, seeds and twigs." The couple was registered at a local nursery, where their preferences for "Japanese maple, golden rain bamboo and satsuma plum" were known.

The off-the-beaten-track site of the ceremony was Joshua Tree National Monument, a 160-mile drive for most of the guests. Despite the remote location, valet parking was provided.

The wedding musicians were a bagpiper, a bell player and a dulcimer player, and men in the wedding party wore pale-green raw linen suits.

The readings were from the composer John Cage and an American Indian chief.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly AFTER EXPENSES, and in some cases ... even more!

➥ OK ... but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday - Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 deposit is required.
