World Traveler Talks To Rotary Club Members

Rev. Ryan, pastor of the Methodist church of Randlett, Okla., and who has visited most of the foreign countries, told of some of his experiences while in China, and other countries where they are now engaged in active fighting, to the Rotarians Tuesday noon.

He was presented by Tom Boyd, who had charge of the program. The following Rotarians from Wichita Falls were present: Russell Morgan, Sam Kruger, Scotty Scott, Floyd Dean, M. E. Conkling, and Roy B. Jones.

Next Tuesday night will be regular directors meeting night and all directors as well as other Rotarians are invited to sit in the meeting. A nominating committee for candidates for next year's officers will be selected.

Truck Tax Does Not Apply To Farm Truck

Responding to numerous queries, Comptroller George H. Sheppard said last week that the State's tax on the intangible assets of trucking companies does not apply to farm trucks and other operating trucks in connection with their other business.

Queries grew out of recent opinions by the Attorney General interpreting the tax which will be collected for the first time this year.

Sheppard explained the tax is levied only against common carrier truck lines, or those operating in direct competition with licensed common carriers although not themselves licensed. As an instance of an exempt trucking operation, he cited the case of the gasoline wholesaler who delivers gasoline to retail stations in his own truck.

Greenbugs Destroy 70 Per Cent Of Texas Oat Crop

Commissioner of Agriculture J. E. McDonald last week estimated that 70 per cent of the Texas oat crop had been destroyed by green bugs, adding that the state is facing "one of the worst grasshopper infestations in history."

Saying the departmental survey showed indications of the greatest number of grasshopper eggs on record, McDonald said the mild weather of the past two winters was largely responsible for the successful hibernation and unusually large emergence of the insects.

Bids On City Sewer Improvements To Be Let April 10th

Bids on installation of Burk Burnett's sewer and water improvement project will be opened Friday, April 10, and if a satisfactory bid is accepted work will start immediately.

The grant calls for $47,900, and will go for the construction of a concrete water reservoir and connections and an extension of the mains and also provide for an 8-inch water line from the city water works to town. The grant will also provide sewer extensions in the south part of town, as well as 200 new meters and thousands of feet of copper pipe and connections.

This grant is an outright gift from the President and there will be no bonds voted or other indebtedness incurred by this grant, according to Lynn Kincaid, city manager, who has worked hard on securing this much needed improvement for Burk Burnett.

No Change April Blue Stamp List

Participants in the food stamp program will be able to purchase the same Blue Stamp Foods during April as they did in March, Wynn S. Goode, area supervisor, Agricultural Marketing Administration, Distribution Branch, said today.

The complete list of blue stamp foods, as issued by the Food Administrator for the period of April 1 through April 30 in all stamp program areas, is as follows: Butter, shell eggs, fresh grapefruit, apples, oranges, and fresh vegetables (including potatoes), corn meal, dried prunes, hominy (corn) grits, dried edible beans, wheat flour, enriched wheat flour, self-rising flour, enriched self-rising flour, and whole wheat (graham) flour.

Wynn S. Goode, commenting on the various programs of the AMA, said the agency is materially helping farmers of this area and the entire nation by creating and maintaining local and national food markets which assure him a fair return on his investment for food and fiber grown under the Food for Freedom program. AMA buys all food for Lend-Lease, Red Cross, School Lunch and Direct Distribution. Distribution of food to needy school children and American families who do not have an adequate diet is serving the dual purpose of helping the American farmer and building a stronger, healthier nation, he said.

Eighth Grade Makes Plans For Banquet

The eighth grade class held their first meeting this week and elected their officers and selected their school flower and song.

The meeting was held in the Hardin grade school auditorium, and the following officers were elected: President, Eugene Cyper; vice president, Denornia Bradshaw; secretary and treasurer, Jane Poteet; reporter, Billie Marie Nolan; pianist, Margaret Chambers. Our seventh grade representatives are Billy Ray Bowman and Mary Ruth Clements.

The date of the banquet has been set for May 8th. It is to be a patriotic one so we have chosen this motto: "United We Stand - Divided We Fall." The flowers are to be rose and lockspur.

We are working to raise funds for this banquet, and Saturday, April 4th, we are going to have a bake sale.

The sale will be held in front of the building housing the Garland and Goble used furniture.

Golfers Invited To Eat Fish Monday

Members of the Burk Burnett golf club are invited to attend a fish fry and get together next Monday night at the City Light plant. The feed is being prepared by Clifford Dodson and his losing team of golfers, and is the outgrowth of a challenge issued by Truman Garland two weeks ago, that he could captain a picked team and beat a team picked by Dodson.

The feed is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock, and all golfers whether they played in the matched tournament or not, are invited to be present.

Soda Beldon will fry the fish but Dodson stated he was not depending upon him to catch them. Arrangements have already been made for the fish and there will be an ample supply.

Texas Electric Co. Appeals To Kite Flyers

An appeal to boys and girls of Burk Burnett to fly their kites in open spaces, away from electric wires, was issued by M. B. Jemison, manager of the Texas Electric Service Company.

"Aside from the danger to the kite flyers, the tangling of kites in the wires and unwise attempts to get them down can cause serious interruptions to electric service that may shut down factories engaged in war production," Mr. Jemison declared. "To safeguard our boys and girls, and at the same time, to prevent interruptions to vital electric power service in war time, we urge that kite flyers observe these safety rules:

"1. Never fly your kite near electric lines.
"2. Use only plain cotton string.
"3. Do not run on or cross highways when flying kites.
"4. Do not climb poles or throw rocks to dislodge entangled kites."

Mr. Jemison said that if a kite should become entangled in electric lines and the electric company is notified, a lineman will remove the kite if it is possible to do so.

A PEOPLE WITHOUT A COUNTRY

Japs Come To Burk To Live But F. B. I. Agents Have Different Ideas

Thursday morning eight Japanese in two high-powered automobiles arrived in Burk Burnett to make their home, but local officials and F. B. I. Agents had a different idea.

It seems that the Japs are from San Diego, Calif., and were ordered to leave there and in trying to find a place to land contacted one Lois Hill, who resides there, and who formerly lived here, and he rented them his property here in Burk Burnett. But upon arrival here they were immediately taken into custody by Chief Green and turned over to the provost marshal at Sheppard Field. Their papers were in shape and they had a passport from San Diego to Burk Burnett and cannot go any further until the F. B. I. agents route them to some other town which they will do Friday morning.

They are, indeed, a people without a country.

First-Aid Course To Be Held In Wichita Falls

A course for the training of Red Cross First Aid instructors will be conducted some time during the first two weeks in April, it was announced from the Wichita County Red Cross Headquarters in Wichita Falls, Wednesday.

The dates and list of the class meetings will be announced as soon as possible. A special First Aid Field Representative from the National Red Cross Headquarters will conduct the course, it was reported.

Class members are graded upon their knowledge of First Aid, and their teaching ability. The course consists of 15 hours of practice teaching and a review of First Aid technique.

Those interested in enrolling are requested to register immediately by writing to the Wichita County Red Cross Headquarters, room 5, Memorial auditorium, Wichita Falls, Texas, indicating when they completed their Advanced Course and what groups they plan to instruct.

Governor Proclaims Army Day In Texas

Following Presidential lead, the Governor of Texas last week proclaimed April 6 as "Army Day in Texas."

Governor Coke Stevenson in issuing the proclamation, urged "all citizens of this State to honor our gallant armed forces by participating in any observances that are calculated to signify the deep affection we have for them."

City Tax Collec- tions Increase

Lynn Kincaid, city manager, feels proud of the record the citizens of Burk Burnett made last year when 106.14 per cent of taxes were collected during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1942. This is the best record of any city that we have a record of. The reason for the large per cent of taxes paid was that a number of delinquents were collected.

2 New Candidates For City Officials

Five New Candidates

School Board

More candidates than you can shake a stick at will be campaigning this week-end for election to the school board and places on the city council. Oscar Kemp is seeking re-election. There are two places to be filled on the school board.

The election will be held Saturday, April 4th, at the City Hall. In the race for city commissioners (three to be elected) the present councilmen are seeking re-election, with two new men also in the race. The men whose time expires are W. S. Duvall, W. W. Browning and Joe Majors. The new candidates are Lige Christman and H. D. Smith.

This election will be held at the City Hall Tuesday, April 7th, with W. A. Roberts acting as judge of both elections.

SUGAR SIGN-UP DATES MAY 4-7

Chicago, March 28—National sugar rationing registration dates were fixed Saturday by the Office of Price Administration, for April 28 and 29, and May 4, 5, 6 and 7th.

The announcement was made here at a meeting of the 48 state rationing administrators and regional supervisors by Frank Bane, field chief of OPA.

Industrial consumers, such as confectioners and candy makers, will register for their ration on the two April dates, using their nearest high school.

Individual consumers will register May 4-7 at the public schools.

Sugar Sales To Be Sus- pended April 27th

Suspension of all sugar sales in the United States for a period of approximately one week beginning at midnight April 27, as a preliminary to the rationing program, was announced by John E. Hamm, acting chief of the Office of Price Administration.

Sugar will thus temporarily go off the market as of April 28, when the registration of industrial and commercial consumers is started.

Hamm said sales would probably be resumed about May 5, the second day of the four day registration period for individual consumers.

Plenty For All

In a joint announcement, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Price Administrator Henderson recently said that food stocks in this country are abundant, and that there is no need or justification for hoarding or abnormal buying.

Consumers should remember that "Scare buying" is one of the surest ways to produce price inflation. Temporary shortages are created as demand runs far ahead of supply.

The retail industry has been doing a magnificent job in the consumers' interest. Tens of thousands of stores, operated by both chain systems and independent merchants are pursuing an aggressive, purposeful "price control" program of their own and are saving the public untold millions of dollars by preventing price increases that would otherwise take place.

One of the most important elements in this program is wise buying. Stores are keeping inventories at reasonable levels, instead of rushing in and building up stocks to an abnormal extent. They are buying at the most favorable season, when prices are advantageous. They are doing everything in their power to maintain orderly markets.

What the stores do on a big scale, all consumers should do on a small scale. War will cause us all to forgo many a luxury, but there will be plenty of necessities to go around. An intelligent, calm public is essential to workable price control of any kind.

Synthetic Rubber

The effect of the Axis victories in the Far East is the loss of our rubber supply. In 1940 this country imported 650,000 tons, and almost every pound of it came from countries now blocked off by the Japs. For 25 years chemists have been developing rubber substitute. But production of the product was not pushed so long as there was an abundance of cheaper natural rubber. Now the cost question has gone out the window. The United States must have rubber to win the war. Hence the present pressure on industry to produce a substantial quantity of a rubber substitute. Prior to December 7 plans were under way for producing 10,000 tons per annum of a synthetic rubber out of petroleum. Subsequently the government raised its sights to 40,000 tons, a goal expected to be realized sometime in 1943. Now the program is being further enlarged to 400,000 tons.

It is said that it will take a year and a half to get plants erected and in full operation. In the meantime the government has enough reserve rubber stocks to cover war needs and a little more. Owners of automobiles must take care to make their present supply of tires last to the ultimate mile.

Modesty prevents our telling you just how good the advertising columns of The Star are for those who want results, but nothing prevents your finding it out for yourself and to your profit.

History

At a regular meeting of the Rotary club, W. F. Billingslea was elected president.

The old West may be dead but its spirit returns to Burk Burnett on Rodeo and Trades Day each month. Cowboys in red, green, purple, orange, yellow or pink shirts. Ten gallon hats. Clanking spurs. Flashy dressers. Flashy riders. Spry ponies. Restless horses. Admiring spectators lining the street. So it is on Burk Burnett Rodeo and Trades Day—the Old West lives again.

Miss Ethel Louise Webb, Wichita County Home Demonstration agent and G. C. McKown, County agent, were judges of entries in the merchant's prize contest last Saturday.

Under the classification of canned goods, Mrs. Tom Boyd was awarded first prize and Mrs. J. Mackalek second. First prize was displayed by Paragon Tailors and second by Adams Drug Store. Mrs. J. T. Brady took first prize for the best hand-made bedspread, Mrs. K. B. Harman second and Mrs. W. H. Woods, third. Saula and Manhattan exhibited first and second prizes.

The resignation of W. S. Duvall president of the local Chamber of Commerce was accepted at a called meeting of the board of directors Monday night. Paul Browning, vice president, who would automatically become president, announced that he would be unable to serve as president.

New sound equipment has been installed in the Palace Theatre, according to Manager Lester Meyers. The equipment, completely new throughout, is the latest type of movie-tone sound apparatus.

A balance of $118.52 remained April 1 in the school children's charity fund, according to a statement issued Tuesday. The fund is sponsored by the Lions club and the Rotary club members for the local school children. G. A. Reaves is in charge of the fund.

Mrs. F. L. Pilkenton entertained with a shower at 3:30 Thursday afternoon at her home for Miss Marjorie Baker, whose marriage to Marshall Chrestman has been announced for April 17, at the First Methodist church.

Make Your Ideas Work

In 1920 a young man in Omaha, Nebraska, felt the discouragement that comes to all of us at times. Working in a ice cream factory, he felt that he had advanced about as far as he could. He wanted to get into some other kind of business where he could do better. But he could find no opening. So he made a momentous decision: to see if he couldn't give some new twist to the business he was in. He told his friends about it and they frowned him down. They reminded him that George Washington had made the first ice cream in the United States, that thousands of people had experimented with ice cream and that there was absolutely nothing new to be learned about it.

But the young man wasn't convinced. He decided to at least try to work out something new in an old business. The young man's name was Russell Stover.

He experimented, after hours, and on Sundays, but he found nothing new—no novel twists. But not too fast! He did find something new. Something very simple: to cover a bar of ice cream with a coating of milk chocolate in such a way that the ice cream would not melt before it could be carried home by the one who bought it. He showed it to his friends. "Too simple," they said. "People want to eat their ice cream straight without having it dripping on their hands." The same old calamity chorus.

But he worked out the idea anyway and offered it to the public. He called it "Eskimo Pie." You've heard of it. You've eaten it! You've paid money to this very man who was so discouraged.

Was it a success? I'll give you just one example. Ecuador, in South America, was on the point of going bankrupt. Exports had been falling off; money was deflated; people were discontented. One of the principal products of export was cocoa; but there was no call for it. Then suddenly there was a call for it. From Omaha. There were calls—there was cries—for Ecuador's cocoa. It was needed for coating Eskimo Pies, the most spectacular food product success that ever flamed across the headlines of America. Telegrams flooded in. One time there were 14 boys in the outer office waiting to deliver messages. On one day his long distance telephone calls amounted to $1,800.

He did not make the confection himself, but licensed others to manufacture it under his direction. In three months, he licensed 1,400 firms to make Eskimo Pie. He was once offered a million and a half dollars for the business. He did sell it in 1923, and retired from the business.

What had Russell Stover done? The simplest thing in the world. He looked around at a business he was familiar with and gave it a new twist. That was all. Simple. A new twist to an old product. Now why don't you try that in the business you're in? These new twists are being developed every day by someone. Why isn't that someone You?

To Our Customers

An Announcement of Our New Service Plan

Your Gas Company, like all good Americans, is cooperating fully in our government's effort to conserve automobile tires and tubes. The only way this can be done is to reduce the miles of operation of our automobiles.

In carrying out such a plan, the frequency with which calls for service on the part of our customers are taken care of must be restricted.

A plan has been devised whereby calls for service will, in the future, be accumulated and taken care of on a zone basis in order that the maximum number of service calls may be taken care of with the minimum use of automobile equipment.

This may lead to some delay in taking care of your call for service, but we are certain that you will be patient and will bear with us in our effort to conform to the nation-wide program of conserving rubber in this emergency.

Many College Women In Volunteer War Work

Three out of every five American college women are already engaged in some kind of volunteer work, a national student poll released at the University of Texas indicates. Apparently men students have decided that their military service is to be their contribution, for less than three out of every ten men—exclusive of those entering the service—are in defense work.

Two Can Sing

CHAPTER XIII

SYNOPSIS
Despite Leonard Borland's protests that his bank account is ample, though the contracting business in New York is dead, his pretty, opera-struck wife Doris resumes her "career," interrupted by her marriage at 19 and the birth of two children. Borland knows her avowed purpose, to help out the family income, is camouflage. Hugo Lorentz, her teacher, always around, irritates him. Cecil Carver, opera singer, knows Doris through Lorentz. She discovers Borland has a fine baritone voice, tells him Hugo is hopelessly in love with Doris, that Doris tortures every man she gets in her clutches, and that he ought to wake her up by giving a recital. "Go get yourself a triumph," she advises. Cecil demands payment for lessons—kisses. He pays but declares he loves Doris. Cecil, on tour, wires him and he makes a hit singing as Logan Bennett in upstate recitals. She gets him an opera engagement. Again he makes good and Cecil, telling him she loves him, says tearfully he can now bring Doris to his feet. A movie audience gives Doris the "bird." Broken-spirited, she says she's no good. She tells Leonard she loves him. Doris learns about Cecil at Gweny Blair's cocktail party, and knows it wasn't business that had kept him out of the city. There is a scene and Gweny, to smooth matters over, laughingly suggests that Leonard sing. He does and Doris is furious—he is so good. She drives him from home, and drains their joint bank account. He accepts an offer from the Hippodrome opera company. He is a hit until he misses his cue and gets the "bird."

Down on the stage, the bass was doubling for me. He carried the Gilda in, put her on the rock, then picked up a cape, turned around and did my part. They gave him an ovation. After Parma had taken their bows, they showed the bass out there alone, and the audience stood up and gave him a rising vote, in silence, before they started to clap. His name was Woods. Remember it, Woods: the man that had what it takes. But "Rigoletto" didn't know anything about that, yet. He was up there in his dressing-room, blubbering like some kid that saw the boogey man, and looking at himself and his cap and bells. Maybe you think he didn't look sick.

Back in 1921, when Dempsey fought Carpentier in Jersey, some newspaper hired a lady novelist to do a piece on it. She decided that what she wanted to write up was the loser's dressing-room after it was all over. She had been reading all her life about the winner, and thought she would like to know for once what happened to the loser. She found out. What happened to him was nothing. Carpentier was there, and a couple of rubbers were there, working on him, and his manager was there, and that was all. Nobody came in to tell him he had put up a good fight, or that it was a hell of a wallop he hit Dempsey in the second round, or even to borrow a quarter. Outside, you could hear them still yelling for Dempsey, but not one in all that crowd had a minute for Gorgeous Georges, the Orchid Man.

That's how it was with me. There were no autograph hunters that night. There were feet, running past the door, and voices saying "I'll meet you outside," and tenors showing their friends they knew "La Donna e Mobile," and the whistle brigade. The show was over. I got quiet after a while, and the noise outside died away, and I lit a cigarette, and sat there. After a long time there was a tap on the door. I never moved. It came again and still again, and then I heard my first name called. It sounded like Doris, and I went to the door and opened it. She was there, in a little green suit, and a brown felt hat, and brown shoes. She came in without looking at me.

"What happened?"
"Weren't you there?" I said.
Doris looked at me then.
"I had to take the children home after the second act . . . I heard some people talking, on my way back here."

I remembered Lorentz, and his real crime at the Cathedral Theater that day. She was glad there was one person in the world that hadn't seen it. Three, because that meant she had taken the kids out before it happened.
"I got the bird," I told her.
"Damn them."

She walked around, saying what she thought of them. Cecil never talked like that. She might tell you they were a pack of hyenas, but she never got sore at them, never regarded them as anything but so many people to be liked. But Doris had felt their teeth, and besides she had a gift for polishing them off, you might say, on account of her cobra blood. The cobra strain was what I wanted then. She snarled it out, and I wanted all she could give. Down in my heart, I knew Cecil was right—that it's never anybody's fault but your own. But I was still bleeding. What Doris had to say, it hit the spot.

I began to pull off the whiskers. She came over and did it for me. She got the towel and wiped off the make-up. She wiped clean, and patted, and frowned, like it was serious business and said, "Hold still," and I loved it.

"Now you'll do. Stay where you are. I'll put on your shoes."

I guess I don't have to tell you Doris had never put any shoes on for me before. I sat there, and she put them on and tied them, and helped me on with my shirt, my trousers, and my coat. But I still didn't know why she had come. I had never seen her like this, but it wasn't any consolation scene, I could see that, and there was nothing in what had happened that explained it. If she hadn't been there when I dropped, what had she come back to the theater for, anyway? She helped me on with my top-coat, gave my arm a little squeeze, and we went out.

In the cab on the way up to my hotel I kept thinking there was something I had forgotten, something I had intended to do. Then I remembered. I was to sign the contracts. I sat back and watched the el posts go back. That was one thing I didn't have to worry about. When we got into the lobby, I could see something glaring at me from a chair near the elevators, and I didn't tumble at first to what it was. There had been so many glares coming my way lately that one more didn't make much impression. But then I came out of the fog. It was Craig, my partner, whom I hadn't seen since we built the gag chicken coop up in Connecticut, and he had dug in at his place upstate. I blinked, and looked at Doris, and thought maybe that was why she had come around, or anyway had something to do with it. But she seemed as surprised as I was. He still sat there, glaring at us, and then he got up and came over. He didn't shake hands. He started in high, and he was plenty sore.

"Where've you been?"

"And why here? What's the idea of hiding out in this dump? I've been looking for you all night, and it was just by accident I found you. Just by accident."

Doris cut in, meeker than I ever heard her. "Why—one of my partners was threatened with measles and Leonard came down here so he wouldn't be quarantined."
"Couldn't he let somebody know?"
"He—it was only to be for a few days."

That seemed to cool him off a little, and I tried to be friendly. "When did you get to town?" I thought you were up there milking cows."
"Never mind when I got to town, and never mind the cows. And cut the comedy. Get this. You've got just forty minutes to make a train, and pay attention to what I'm telling you."

"Shoot."

"Alabama. You've heard of it?"
"Sounds familiar."

"There's a big government-aid railroad bridge going up down there, and you build bridges, this here Craig-Borland Company that we've got, even if you seem to have forgotten it. You get down there, and you get that contract."

"Where is this bridge?"
"I got no time for that. It's all in here, in this briefcase, the whole thing, and you can read it going down. Here's your ticket for the two of you, and remember, you got thirty-nine minutes. When you get there, I'll wire you our bid. I'll put the whole thing on the wire. It's being figured up now. The main thing now is—get there."

"O. K., Chief."

He turned to Doris. And you—"Yes, sir."

"Listen to what I'm telling you. This contract—this is a bunch of well-born South'ners, dat dey granddaddy had slaves befo' de wa', and they've got to be impressed. You hear that? You take a whole floor in that hotel, and you roll out the liquor, and you step on it. You do all the things that your bum, sassy, high-toned, good-for-nothing upbringing has taught you how to do, and then you do it twice."

"Booh. I know you."

"For once in your life, maybe you can be of some use."

"Just once?"
"If you put it across, you'll be back in time for Christmas. If you don't put it across, you needn't come back at all."

"We'll put it across."

So we put it across, and that's what we're doing now. They've got a bird in this business, too, that rides the trusses while the scows are taking them out, and flies around and flaps its wings and crows like hell whenever one of them falls in the river. But his wings haven't got much exercise on this job, and neither has his voice. This is my trade. The river has got pretty tough once or twice, and we've had some close squeaks. But not one of those trusses has taken a dive yet.

But I'm ahead of my story. Craig had a paper stuck in his pocket, and after he had laid the law down he began to get sore again and remembered it. He tapped it with his finger. "And you keep in touch with me. If it hadn't been for this, seeing your name in this paper just by accident, I wouldn't have known where to look for you."

He took it out and opened it, and pointed to a great big picture of me in the whiskers and wig and cap and bells on the theatrical page.

"Is that you?"
Doris let out a cackle that made everybody in the lobby look up. It was just a silvery peal that came from the heart, and did you good to hear it. She wasn't laughing at me. She was laughing at Craig, and when I looked at him I had to laugh too. I had to laugh so hard I folded into one of the lobby chairs, and so did she. The look on the old hard-rock man's face, holding up that picture, was the funniest thing I ever saw in my life, or ever hope to see.

I scrambled up and threw my stuff into a bag, and was so excited over getting back in harness that I kept singing all the time and didn't even feel bad about it, and down in the lobby Doris called the house, and we made the train. We had the drawing-room, but I was out of cigarettes, and I went into the club car to get some. When I got back she was already tucked in, in the upper berth, and all you could see was a tangle of red hair. I undressed, got into the lower. I waited, and she didn't say anything. I turned out my light, and still nothing from her. All you could hear was the wheezy going clickety-click. They kind of beat time, and I started to sing the opening of a duet:

"La ci darem la mano!
La mi dirai di si
Vedi non e lontano
Partiam ben mio da qui."

It was time for her to come in, and I waited. Then: "Did you sing that with her, going clickety-click?"
"No, I never did."

"Are you sure?"
"They were going to have me do 'Don Giovanni.' This last outfit, I mean. So I got the score, and found it in there. I had heard you humming it around, so I learned it."

She came tumbling down the ladder, all floppy in a suit of my pajamas. She slipped in beside me, put her arms around me. "Leonard."

"Yes?"
"I'm glad you flopped. Because I flopped, and—if you could do this one thing I've always wanted to do, and can't—I couldn't stand it. And—"

"Go on. And what?"
"It'll be all mine, now, this that you have in your throat. That's why I came back there. Leonard, when you sang that day at Gweny's cocktail party it almost killed me. I think you wanted it to. Oh, I've been a terrible wife to you, Leonard. I'm jealous, and spiteful, and mean, and nothing will ever change me. But when I get too terrible, just sing to me, and I'll be your slave. I'll come crawling to you, just the way you came crawling to them, in the second act tonight. That woman has given us something that was never there before, and when we get back I'm going to thank her, and win her, and make her my friend. Oh, I can't—I don't care what has gone before. I can win anybody when I really want them. . . . Now I'll say it—something you've never heard me say before: I've fallen in love. With my own husband."

I held her tight. She put her mouth against my throat, and began kissing it. "Now sing, and I'll sing."

"La ci darem la mano!
La mi dirai di si
Vedi non e lontano
Partiam ben mio da qui."

"Vorrei e non vorrei
Mio trema un poco il cor
Felice e ver serei
Ma puo' burlarmi ancor . . .

We sang it together, and it was terrible, and it was the sweetest duet I ever heard.

Better That the Candidate
Spoke Direct From Heart

When Bill O'Dwyer was running for district attorney in Brooklyn he usually appeared on the platform with a piece of paper in his hand ostensibly covered with notes of the address he was about to make. He would look around the audience, say "Hello, Joe," to one listener, "Howya, Harry," to another. Then he'd smile and tell the audience: "I didn't know I would have so many friends here tonight. I don't need notes to talk to you people," and he'd throw away the paper. "To you I can speak from here," indicating his heart.

A curious reporter one night picked up the discarded paper. It was an old laundry bill.

CHUCKLES

—FROM—
Sheppard Field

Sheppard Field, Texas, March 27—Pvt. J. H. Ezell, Weatherford, Texas, is quite willing to share his girl friend with his buddies. In fact, it has been suggested that the wee bit of feminine loveliness be adopted by his outfit as the "Sweetheart of the 62nd Air Base Group."

But Private Ezell isn't worried about any of the squadron's Don Juan's ("wolves" to the layman) cutting in on him. The girl lives in Scotland.

Though officially the name has been changed to "Special Services Branch" Sheppard Field soldiers refer to it as the morale office .. with one exception.

"Keep 'Em Happy" is the office slogan. Sgt. George Silver, sag writer and chief clerk, and Sgt. Dick Willis, comedian, have been doing just that. When Sergeant Silver answered the phone recently, the slogan was slightly revised.

Over the phone came the query "Is this the Post Mortality Office?" Silver, with customary repartee, replied, "Yep, this is the Post Mortality Office, bud; laughter's our business—we 'Keep 'Em Dyin'."

Pvt. Donald Fortner, the young man from Springfield, Missouri, who received over a thousand letters in an answer to his plea for mail published by a St. Louis newspaper, now is faced with the great problem of answering all of them as he promised!

His squadron commander has consented to let him use the mimeograph machine for the first 200, but after that Private Fortner is on his own. However, he has plenty of time—the duration plus six months.

Pvt. Juan Ramos Aponte, a Puerto Rican enlistee, couldn't speak a word of English three months ago. Pvt. Herman Davis, Philadelphia, now stationed here,

Christian Science Services

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 5, 1942.

The Golden text is: "If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand" (Mark 3:25). Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "But the Lord is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him" (Habakkuk 2:20).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Science deals its chief blow at the supposed material foundations of life and intelligence. It dooms idolatry" (page 535).

UNITED—in Soul Searching Ideals

YOU'RE confused by the cross currents of world affairs, by uncertainty about the future? Sure you are, Mr. Smith. You are going through an experience unlike anything you have known before. And it makes you none too happy. But, frankly, that unhappiness is not without a comforting thought. For years a good many of us, millions of our fellow Americans, had become too indifferent for our real good—and ideals, yes, American ideals were something only vaguely connected with our lives.

Yet now when you find yourself alone and thinking about this world of bleeding hearts, you somehow wish there was something hard and firm a man could cling to—something that wouldn't melt away like riches and false pride, or like that dish of ice cream you had for dessert tonight.

You need something, Mr. Smith. You haven't realized it before, perhaps, because you've had pretty fair security. Never rich, of course, but compared to those poor devils in Poland and France and Greece you were a king. That was before you saw America threatened, before they made a soldier out of Junior and began to get excited about this national defense business. It's a fine thing to be an American, Mr. Smith, but doggone it, there are too many people in your frame of mind nowadays—people who are groping for something to get their hands on—something hard and firm!

Those Pilgrims had it back in 1620. Remember? It took something to sail a rickety little ship across the Atlantic when you knew that your only reception would come from hostile Indians, when you knew that hunger and maybe even death lay in the cards.

Those barefooted, frozen, starving wretches had it at Valley Forge, too, something they could cling to. That "Something" is kind of an American heritage, we guess. It gave Lincoln courage, and it tramped across the western prairies beside pioneer wagon trains.

Know what it is, Mr. Smith?

We call it—Faith.

You see, Faith is what gives strength, without which all the airplanes and soldiers and machine guns in the world are useless. Faith is what makes you get up when they knock you down. Faith in the eternal values. Faith in Divine justice and in the blessings of a UNITED States of America, a nation indivisible, dedicated to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Faith in soul searching ideals.

You can get your hands on Faith. Won't you try it?

Simon Bolivar, Liberator

Simon Bolivar, the George Washington of South America, set up five independent nations in South America during the early part of the Nineteenth century: Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Venezuela. He was born in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1783, of a noble Basque family, and became interested in the cause of freedom as a youth studying in Europe.

In Rome he made a vow to liberate his country from Spain. His country was South America. His ideals were liberty without license and authority without tyranny, and he laid the foundation for those ideals in territory greater than the 13 colonies of 1776 and all the conquered territory of Napoleon.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

U. S. Heartened by Naval Offensive
Against Jap Bases in South Pacific;
Air Attacks on Port Darwin Continue
As Allies Strike Back in New Guinea

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt, left, Australian minister for external affairs, being greeted by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Richard G. Casey, British minister of state in the Middle East, at the Washington airport. The selection of Casey, former Australian minister to Washington, to serve in the British cabinet, raised a controversy between Australian Prime Minister John Curtin and Winston Churchill. The Australian government disavowed Casey as Australian representative.

ATTACK:
Navy Strikes Twice

A double-barreled attack by a navy task force, the same which had struck with devastating force on the Marshall and Gilbert islands, had been delivered on Wake island and Marcus island, the latter only 950 miles from Tokyo.

The latter attack scared Tokyo so badly that the city ordered blackouts for several days afterward, it was announced.

The delay in announcing these attacks apparently occurred because, in the first instance, the navy force was on the way from Wake to Marcus, and didn't want to "telegraph its punch" on the latter island.

As to the second attack, the need for delay was probably one of two factors, either that the navy force was moving on elsewhere, or else it was on its way back to Pearl Harbor for refueling and resupplying, probably the latter, as the dispatches came from there.

Considerable credit for the four attacks, as the latter two must be considered part of the general onslaught which included the Marshall and Gilbert islands, was given to the commander of the force, Vice Admiral W. F. Halsey.

In the first two the navy had lost a number of planes, but in the latter two battles, the only losses were two planes, both shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Surprise had been an important factor in both attacks, because at Wake Island three four-motored seaplanes had been found and destroyed before they got into the air, and at Marcus island no air strength of any kind was found.

It began to explain the need for censorship—for the Japs had a nearly completed airfield on the island, and certainly would have had planes there if they'd known our forces were on the way.

Ringside View

One reporter, riding on an aircraft carrier, reported that its planes dumped 12 tons of high explosives on Marcus island alone.

His ringside view of the significance of the battle was that it had shattered an important link in Japan's chain of island bases connecting the country with its southwest Pacific theater of war.

Marcus also had been referred to in dispatches as "Japanese Hawaii," being a base not only potentially great for planes, but for ships as well.

The Wake island attack was not completely a surprise, as the navy surface ships encountered a Jap gunboat seven miles off the island, and before she was sunk with one broadside, she was able to flash word to the shore that the "Yanks were coming!"

The Marcus island attack was in the darkness, but the Wake island battle was in full daylight, the shelling starting at 7:05 a. m.

Just how little good a blackout does was shown at Marcus island, where a flight of bombing planes was sent over the island with flares, lighting their objectives, and the first few hits started such huge fires that the other bombing flights needed no flares.

Shortly after the attack on Marcus started the radio station went off the air abruptly. It had been struck by a demolition bomb and shot into the sky.

NYA:

Senators Argue

The press, plus Senators McKellar and Byrd, continued its attacks on the NYA and the GCC, though President Roosevelt said that they both had their places in the war scheme and that he favored their retention.

The senators argued that the primary reason for the creation of the two agencies was to do something for youth during the depression and unemployment years. They are not needed now, they said.

AUSSIES:
See Turning Point

Whether the Japs were going to turn aside from Australia and concentrate on India had remained considerable of a mystery, but certainly their attack on Australia's outposts had been slowed to a point where the Aussies began to see the "turning point right around the corner."

Australian and American airmen were carrying out almost non-stop raids on New Guinea, the Solomons, New Britain and other objectives north of the continent, and their daily reports of planes destroyed showed that they were biting a considerable piece out of the Nipponese strength in the air.

The Japs continued their bombing attacks on Port Darwin, also on Katherine, but the effectiveness was showing a downward curve. Apparently the main Japanese objective was Port Moresby, on the southern end of New Guinea, a perfect hop-off point for air attacks on north-east Australia.

By land, through a big valley on the island, they were approaching the Australians' defense positions around the Port, while through the air, from Salamaua and Lae, they had been raining bombs on the town, attempting to soften it up for attack by land.

It was at these two bases, Salamaua and Lae that the Australian and American bombers had been concentrating their attack. And the results had been favorable.

LABOR:

Co-operates in War

It was felt that organized labor had made an important contribution to winning the war, also to peace in industry during the war effort, by a decision reached simultaneously by the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. to yield their demand for extra pay for holidays.

The executive board of the C. I. O. recommended to all its unions that they forego all overtime pay for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays when such work was done within the boundaries of the 40-hour week.

William Green of the A. F. of L. at the same time issued a statement that his organization had "assured the government that it would waive the double time payment for Sunday and holiday work in all war industries for the duration of the war."

Philip Murray, however, said he wanted it clear that the unions would not relinquish their demand for overtime for work done on the sixth or seventh days of the ordinary 40-hour work week, regardless of what days they fell on.

The request, union men said, had been made by President Roosevelt and War Production Board Chief Donald M. Nelson.

VOLUNTEERS:
Get 40 Planes

The initials AVG, American Volunteer group, or the "Tiger Fliers" of the United States, still held the spotlight of attention when it came to knocking out Japanese planes.

Their latest exploit had been to fly over the main Jap airbase in Thailand, Chongmai, with such a perfectly timed offensive that they were able to shoot to pieces 40 enemy aircraft on the ground, before the Japs could get the motors warmed enough to get into the air.

The victory (like so many) had its tragic side, for the only plane lost to the Americans in this attack had brought death to the squadron leader, Jack Newkirk, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

The pilots returning to their base in Burma from the fray reported that most of the Japanese pilots of the grounded planes were killed, as instead of seeking cover, they ran to their ships and tried to get them started.

The Americans, diving low, machine gunned the planes at close range, destroying most of them.

CHRIST AND LIFE AFTER DEATH (EASTER)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:24-27; 1 Corinthians 15:50-58.
GOLDEN TEXT—But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—1 Corinthians 15:57.

V for Victory! By that sign have many peoples indicated their confidence in a victory to come. It is well to have a victorious outlook, but it is even better to be able to look back to victory already attained. That is just what we are able to do as we consider man's great and final enemy—death. That victory has been won on behalf of all who believe, by the risen Christ of whom we think in a special way on this Easter day.

He is the Lord of the living, not of the dead; those who, even though they may have left this world, have only laid aside the corruptible body for the incorruptible. They are victorious, even as we are, over death.

I. Living, Not Dead (Mark 12:24-27).

The Sadducees, a rationalistic sect of Christ's day, denied the resurrection, and so they were much distressed by His plain teaching of that truth. They therefore devised an intricate hypothetical case (see Mark 12:18-23) and sought to set a trap for Him. But they only caught themselves. For He pointed out to them and to the people that what was wrong with them was that they did not understand the Scriptures nor the power of God.

That is precisely what is wrong with the modernists of our day—they misinterpret God's Word, and they deny His power.

Then Jesus turned to them and in place of their fantastic "supposing" story He spoke of three real characters from the books of Moses which they taught. He said that God still calls Himself the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, because though they had long been in their graves, they were still alive. God's fellowship with His people is not merely for the brief life span of this earth, but for eternity. That fact, of course, carries with it the truth of the resurrection.

II. Incorruptible, Not Corruptible (1 Cor. 15:50-54).

Man knows that his earthly body is marked for decay and death. That fact is written in its very members. He also knows that such a body would be entirely inappropriate for heaven—for eternity. Is he then barred from God's eternal kingdom? No, indeed, for there is to be a glorious change—the corruptible shall put on incorruptibility.

Whether we shall tarry until Jesus comes and be transformed without dying, or whether we shall await His coming for a time among those who sleep, there will come that trumpet sound, and in the twinkling of an eye we shall be clothed upon with incorruptible bodies like unto His glorious resurrection body (Phil. 3:21). There we have an assurance of victory already won on our behalf, which can and does strengthen our souls against the trials and sorrows of life.

III. Victorious, Not Defeated (1 Cor. 15:55-58).

When Satan after a long struggle finally had Christ's body laid away in the tomb, he thought he had the victory, but just then came his great hour of defeat.

"Up from the grave He arose,
With a mighty triumph o'er His foes."

"Death could not hold its prey," for it sought to hold one stronger than itself—the Lord of Life Himself. He had broken the bonds of sin by His sacrifice on Calvary; and since it was sin (the violation of the law) which brought death in the first place (Gen. 2:17; 3:17-19), there was now a complete victory over both sin and death.

The one who knows Christ need no longer fear death. For him it is not a leap into the dark, or going as a trembling wayfarer into an unknown land. President John Quincy Adams was right when, aged and frail, he replied to a question as to his welfare: "Quite well, thank you. The house in which I live is tottering and trembling, and I may soon have to move out, but I am quite well." He was ready for the departure into a better land and a better body.

Such a hope has a splendid practical application, which Paul stresses in verse 58. With victorious assurance the believer stands steadfast and unmovable at the center of life, while all duties abounding in the joys and duties which come at its circumference. Like the wheel which can serve the Lord and enjoy a satisfying life only as he has the steadfastness of which Paul here speaks.

We trust that it is your possession by faith in Christ. If not, make it so on this resurrection Sunday!

I Give You Texas
By Boyce House

Memories of a roving cowboy far away from home: St. Paul with its $3,000,000 city hall and courthouse, 23 stories high—in the lobby a statue supposed to be an Indian god of peace but actually a monstrosity made of 60 tons of Mexican onyx, a beautiful mass of material that has been mutilated at a cost of $125,000 and which revolves almost imperceptibly so that two and a half hours are required for the heavy-featured, night-marish figure to turn entirely around.

San Francisco, where a cafe is quaintly named "the Fable" and there is a cocktail parlor appetizingly called "The Pink Rat."

Mexico City, where our little group were the only tourists in a theatre where the mighty Chang, Chinese magician, presented his feats of magic, the climax being ghosts shrieking through the darkness and brushing against the patron's heads.

Hollywood, where Sid Grauman's Chinese Theatre is a showplace (literally and figuratively) the sidewalk bearing the imprint of the feet of many stars—Douglas Fairbanks, Bill Hart, Edgar Bergen, Janet Gayner (to name a few) as well as the knee-prints of Al Jolson (because of his position as he sings "Mammy" songs) and the outline of Harold Lloyd's glasses.

Small boy: I saw you kiss my sister.
Young man: Here. Keep still. Take this quarter.

Small boy: Here's a dime change. One price to all—that's the way I do business.

Says the Kerrville Times editorially: "Every new day confirms the opinion that Coke Stevenson will again be chosen Governor of the State by an overwhelming majority." . . . Your columnist recently claimed to be the only person in the United States who has neither read the book nor seen the movie, "Gone with the Wind" but Editor A. L. Showalter of Throckmorton and Editor C. C. Hadsell of Donna say they haven't, either. . . . Former District Judge Ralph Yarborough is a profound student of law, literature and history but he likes to drop a nickel in a cafe music box—cowboy tunes are his favorites. . . . Has anybody seen a boxball alley lately? Last one I saw was across the street from the Southern Hotel in Brownwood in 1921.

A customer called to a waiter, "Say, is this an incubator chicken?" The waiter said, "I don't know." The customer said, "It must be; no chicken that had a mother could ever have got so tough as this one."

Happening to land in Hawkins when the oil boom hit, a hitch-hiker bought a lot for $1,000. He didn't have the money but drew a draft on his father in another state. To be on the safe side, the owner of the lot placed a long distance call to the bank. But, as there was only one phone in Hawkins and folks were standing in a long line to get to it, the call wasn't put through until late in the afternoon—and by that time the hitch-hiker had resold the lot for $10,000.

This interesting sidelight was narrated by E. S. Shoaf, publisher of the Wood County Democrat, when he visited Fort Worth not long ago.

Paul Bolton is one of the chief correspondents at the State Capitol. He is clever and brilliant and this writer stands in awe of clever and brilliant people.

Reversing the well-known phrase, Bolton is probably my best critic and severest friend.

"Mirrors of Austin" in that sterling publication, State Observer, is largely his handiwork. Recently, he wrote: "The columnist wrings his friends for the penultimate drop of their knowledge, their wit, their wisdom, if any. No remark is too innocent to be hoarded against the day when material is scarce. The man who is a friend of the columnist never knows when some thoughtless remark will rise up out of the printed page and hit him between the eyes. Even his own family is not safe. The children have to watch what they say or they'll be perpetuated in print for their 'bright sayings'. Even the family dog may make the papers."

"He (the columnist) is starved for affection. He responds to a kind word like a dog to a pat on the head. He lives in constant fear of repeating himself. He specializes in unimportant items about unimportant people."
