What's your view?

Earlier this month, former Arkansas state worker Paula Corbin Jones filed a lawsuit against President Clinton in U.S. District Court, alleging the chief executive made unwanted sexual advances toward her in 1991, while Clinton was still governor. Should a person be allowed to name a sitting president as a defendant in a lawsuit? Or should the man who occupies the highest office in the land be immune from civil lawsuits? We'd like to know your views. . . . Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400 to register your opinion, then enter category 7655. If you feel a president should be immune from such action, press 1; if you feel a president should be subject to civil litigation just as any other citizen, press 2. The non-scientific poll will remain open until noon Tuesday with results to be published in Wednesday's edition.

Veterans memorial

A groundbreaking for the long-awaited Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial will be at 3 p.m. today. The memorial site is located on Wright Drive near the Confederate Air Force headquarters at Midland Memorial Airport. The public is encouraged to attend.

Deliveries cease

The American Red Cross in Midland has discontinued its delivery of mobile feeding in areas in Midland County affected by last week's storms. All other services remain available.

One ticket wins

One ticket sold in Seymour correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The ticket is worth $17 million. The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 8, 11, 13, 24, 43 and 45. The lottery offices will be closed today for the Memorial Day holiday, so no claim is expected until Tuesday, lottery spokesman Steve Levine said.

SHERIFF RIDES CAUSE INTO COURT

Handgun-law challenger loves Constitution — and limelight

By Arthur H. Rotstein
Associated Press

SAFFORD, Ariz. — Sheriff Richard Mack says he was defending the Constitution, not seeking celebrity, when he rode out of rural Graham County to challenge the Brady handgun-control law three months ago.

But he's become the hero of the gun lobby, appearing on talk shows from Richmond to Fairbanks and even holding a "Donahue" show debate, to be shown Monday, with Sarah Brady about the federal law named for her disabled husband.

"I'm proud of him for doing it," said John Haralson, who owns a tire store in eastern Arizona, where hunting is a way of life and gun control anathema. "I think it's a ridiculous law."

Mack gets his day in court Tuesday in Tucson, when U.S. District Judge John Roll will hear his challenge to the law that requires potential handgun buyers to wait five Al Unser Jr. signals his second Indianapolis 500 win from Victory Circle on Sunday.

Unser Jr. carries on family tradition, wins Indy 500 a 2nd time

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Al Unser Jr. continued a longtime family tradition, winning the Indy 500 for a second time Sunday.

The win was the 9th for his family: Unser's father has won four times and his uncle Bobby has won three.

Rookie Jacques Villeneuve finished a surprising second. Bobby Rahal finishe a lap down in third.

Unser's teammate Emerson Fittipaldi led by more than a lap with 16 to go on the 2½-mile oval, but crashed when his car drifted high out of a turn. Fittipaldi, who was not injured, finished 17th.

Unser credited the victory to team owner Roger Penske, who built a special Mercedes engine for just this one event.

Berlin Wall builder Honecker, 81, dies

SANTIAGO, Chile — Erich Honecker, who built the Berlin Wall and ruled Communist East Germany with an iron fist for 18 years, died Sunday in Chile, unrepentant to the end. He was 81.

Honecker spent his final days in Chile, bitter in self-imposed exile. He suffered from liver cancer, which saved him from a near-certain manslaughter conviction for ordering the shootings of East Germans trying to escape to the West.

In 1987, Honecker said East and West Germany could not be unified because "socialism and capitalism can no more be united than fire and water." Two years later he was ousted from power, and in October 1990 Germany was reunited.

Honecker's lawyer Nicholas Becker, reached by telephone in Berlin, said Honecker had been

Whitewater's investigators trace campaign donations to S&L fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are alleging that Bill Clinton's Whitewater business partner used a web of loans to divert some $12,000 in savings and loan funds to Clinton's gubernatorial campaign a decade ago.

The allegations are contained in a criminal referral — a recommendation by investigators for possible prosecution — written last year and now in the hands of the Whitewater special prosecutor.

The document names Whitewater co-owner James B. McDougal, Arkansas businessman Charles Peacock III and the Clinton campaign fund as suspects. Mention of the campaign in the referral has been reported previously.

All three vehemently deny any wrongdoing. McDougal's lawyer dismissed the allegations as a smear campaign. Peacock said: "I haven't done anything wrong. . . . The transactions as they have

Clinton administration draws heat on vaccination program

By Robert Pear
N.Y. Times News Service

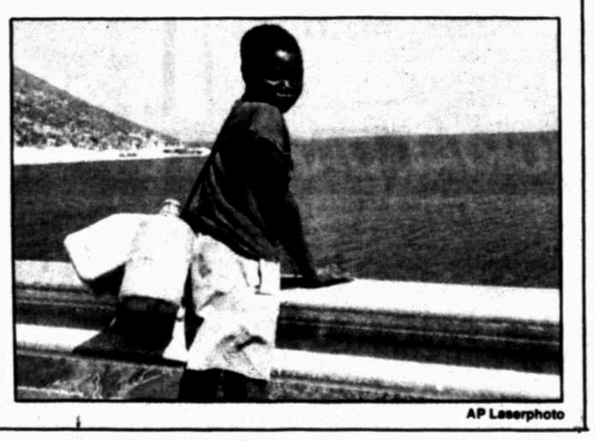

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress and makers of drugs say the Clinton administration has gone far beyond what Congress intended when it passed legislation last year to insure that all children would be vaccinated.

Although Congress did not specify how the vaccine would be distributed, lawmakers say the administration is now planning a much larger role for the federal government than they ever envisioned.

In addition to planning to obtain most of the childhood vaccine used in the United States, the administration is setting up a warehouse to store and distribute it, despite strenuous objections from members of Congress. Distribution is now handled entirely by manufac-

Black gunman wounds controversial former Nation of Islam Farrakhan aide

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A black gunman tried to assassinate controversial former Nation of Islam spokesman Khallid Abdul Muhammad on Sunday, hitting Muhammad and at least two other people.

The gunman was beaten by a crowd that shouted, "He works for the Jews."

An Associated Press photographer said Muhammad was hit in the leg or foot. He was taken in his own car by aides to Riverside Community Hospital.

The hospital referred calls to police, who referred calls to University spokesman Jack Chappell.

Chappell said four people were injured, including the gunman, Muhammad and two people believed to be with the speaker's entourage. He said none was critically injured.

The shooting occurred in the parking lot outside an auditorium at the University of California, Riverside, where Muhammad had given a speech.

Burundi, Rwanda's neighbor, teeters on edge of similar tragedy

■ Diplomats, aid workers, human rights organizations try to maintain calm in this country populated by Hutus, Tutsis.

Associated Press

BUJUMBURA, Burundi — If the sickening slaughter of tens of thousands of innocents in Rwanda was a scene from the Apocalypse, the next scene could be just as terrifying: Burundi, next-door and populated by the same two tribes.

Western diplomats, aid workers and human rights organizations are laboring to maintain calm in Rwanda's southern neighbor, a society they say is equally tortured in its soul from years of loathing, suspicion and butchery between ethnic Hutus and Tutsis.

"You have a situation that could turn a powder keg into a bomb at any moment," said Cecilia Ljungman, spokeswoman in Burundi for the U.N. World Food Program.

Amnesty International said recently: "The almost incomprehensible slaughter in Rwanda followed a long period of inaction by the international community, which might have prevented the killings.

"Similar carnage has sporadically continued in Burundi since last October, without the world paying any attention, and the violence may grow to match what we have seen in Rwanda."

Burundi is the mirror image of Rwanda: a tiny, crowded country of 5.5 million people, mostly subsistence farmers.

As in Rwanda, ethnic Tutsis were long the powerful elite despite making up only 15 percent of the population. Hutus comprise the remaining 85 percent.

Here too, infants have been hacked to death with machetes and knives; neighbors have killed neighbors, butchering, bludgeoning or burning those who belonged to opposing political parties or different ethnic groups.

Like Rwanda's, the history of Burundi since independence from Belgium in 1962 is one of coups, massacres and revenge as Hutus and Tutsis battled for power.

One difference is that the Hutu majority in Rwanda gained control of the government and military years ago. In Burundi, Hutus won an election to lead the government only last year and Tutsis still control the army. The majority won the vote, but the minority still has the guns.

Burundi's most recent slaughter began Oct. 21 when soldiers killed the nation's first Hutu president, Melchior Ndadaye, in a failed coup five months after his election.

The next day, Hutus in the countryside began massacring Tutsi civilians in revenge, according to aid workers and diplomats. The Tutsi army then went into those areas and killed Hutus.

Before it was over, an estimated 100,000 people were dead and 700,000 — one in eight of the population — had fled to neighboring Tanzania, Zaire and Rwanda.

Burundians had made little progress toward reconciliation, and new violence was flaring in some neighborhoods of the capital, when tragedy struck again April 6. Cyprien Ntaryamira, a Hutu elected by the National Assembly to replace Ndadaye, was killed along with the Rwandan president in a plane crash that set off Rwanda's mass killings.

A similar explosion of violence in Burundi was feared, but has not happened.

Sanctions against Serbs fail to produce desired result

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — When imposed two years ago, tough U.N. sanctions against Serbia were designed to weaken its hard-line regime and bring the Bosnian war to an end.

But neither has happened.

Serbia's nationalist president, Slobodan Milosevic, is politically stronger than ever, and the war in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina, which most of the world has accused him of inciting, appears far from over.

And the sanctions are unlikely to force Yugoslavia, now comprised of Serbia and Montenegro, to its knees anytime soon. Serbia is self-sufficient in food, while porous borders and resourceful smugglers have meant fuel and other vital supplies have entered the country regularly over the past two years.

An emergency economic program, meanwhile, has brought hyperinflation to a screeching halt, giving citizens a breather and shoring up support for Milosevic's regime.

The United Nations imposed economic sanctions and an oil embargo on May 30, 1992, with the aim of stopping Serbian military and financial support for the Bosnian Serbs who now control about 70 percent of that republic.

But defiant Serb leaders refused to buckle under pressure. On the contrary, they are trying to blackmail the international community by insisting the sanctions must be lifted before they will consider signing a peace with rival Muslims and Croats in Bosnia.

"We will sign nothing before the sanctions are lifted," said Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic.

Milosevic is equally defiant, saying in an interview picked up by Belgrade media that the "unjust and genocidal" sanctions may hurt Serbia only "in 1,000 years."

The sanctions hurt ordinary people, whose wages are now about one-fifteenth what they were worth in 1991. According to official statistics, the embargo has caused $30 billion losses in trade and production.

But the majority of Serbs, pumped up by state-run propaganda, are willing to endure hardship for what they see as a just cause: the uniting of Serb-held regions in Bosnia and Croatia with Serbia proper.

"In Serbia, the national blindness and a warlike madness are much stronger than hunger or death," said Petar Lukovic, chief editor of the independent weekly Vreme.

An emergency economic scheme introduced in January slashed Serbia's monthly inflation from nearly 31 million percent to zero. It put the Yugoslav dinar at parity with the German mark, backed by $300 million of hard-currency reserves.

It also stopped the wanton printing of money used to cover war costs, which are still unofficially estimated to eat up 10 percent of Serbia's budget. Taxes and utility rates were also hiked sharply.

By preventing economic collapse, at least for now, the program took the heat of sanctions off Milosevic and gave Serb leaders the extra confidence to persevere in their stubborn policies.

Sporadic fighting disrupts evacuation in Rwandan capital

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Sporadic small arms and mortar fire Sunday blocked the evacuation of refugees from Rwanda's capital and destroyed an orphanage, injuring six children.

Two relief flights loaded with badly needed food made it into Kigali's airport, but the fighting made it difficult to distribute the supplies to the thousands of people living under U.N. protection.

Rebel and army officers are to begin U.N.-mediated talks today aimed at achieving a cease-fire in the central African nation. The United Nations also wants better control of the airport, now in rebel hands, said Abdul Kabia, deputy director of the U.N. peacekeeping mission in Kigali.

The United Nations also hopes to use the airport to bring in an additional 5,500 peacekeepers, mainly from other African nations.

A radio broadcast by the rebels on Sunday blamed government forces for a halt of an exchange of refugees who had taken refuge at a hotel and a stadium in Kigali, and said this had put the negotiations at risk. The radio report, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., said the government forced the exchange to stop after it tried to change the terms of an agreement on how many people would be exchanged.

More than 200,000 people have been killed and an estimated 2 million displaced since the ethnic bloodletting began after Rwanda's president was killed in a mysterious plane crash April 6.

Most of the dead were minority Tutsis and Hutu opponents of the government. They were slaughtered by the Hutu presidential guard, some military units and civilian gangs organized by extreme Hutu politicians.

The massacres shattered a cease-fire the government, dominated by the majority Hutus, and the Tutsi-led rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front signed in Tanzania last August.

A mortar shell injured six orphans and destroyed Gitiga orphanage in downtown Kigali overnight, Kabia said.

The Sunday fighting thwarted U.N. plans to evacuate 800 of 4,800 people who have taken refuge for weeks with little food or water in the national stadium.

The World in brief

■ Reports: Bus crash kills 18 students

NAIROBI, Kenya — Eighteen high school students and a teacher were killed when the bus they were traveling in overturned in central Kenya, newspapers said Sunday.

The Sunday Nation said two other people also died in the Friday night accident. The 25-seat bus was carrying more than 70 passengers, officials said.

The driver, who was injured, told the newspaper he swerved to avoid plunging into a river after the brakes failed.

The students were returning from sports competition at a nearby school, the newspaper said.

■ Government troops clash with rivals

KABUL, Afghanistan — The president's troops battled a rival Islamic faction Sunday with machine guns and tanks, killing at least six people and wounding 24, military sources said.

The battle in southwest Kabul between President Burhanuddin Rabbani's forces and soldiers loyal to Hezb-e-Wahadat, a Shiite Muslim faction; lasted several hours. It was the third straight day of heavy fighting in the battered capital after a week of relative calm.

Four Hezb-e-Wahadat soldiers and two government soldiers were killed in the fighting, which injured at least 24 civilians, government sources said.

The president's forces control most of the capital. But they have been under almost constant attack since Jan. 1 from rivals on the edge of the city, including Hezb-e-Wahdat, a small faction with a stronghold in southwest Kabul.

Hezb-e-Wahdat is loosely aligned with Prime Minister Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, who leads the main group trying to oust the president.

The president declared a unilateral cease-fire May 20 to mark the Islamic holiday of Eid-ul-Azha, but the fighting broke out again Friday.

The Islamic factions fought together to overthrow a Communist government in 1992. But they have battled among themselves for the past two years, destroying much of Kabul and killing at least 12,000.

■ Paramedics rescue man from cows

LONDON — Paramedics rescued a man mauled by a herd of cows.

John Hine, 55, was crossing a field while walking his two golden retrievers on Sunday near Tetsworth, about 40 miles northwest of London, when the Jersey cows spotted him.

The cows knocked him to the ground, breaking his leg and badly bruising his chest, according to John Willis of the ambulance service that took Hine to a hospital in Oxford, where he was reported in serious but stable condition.

Hine was unable to move after he was knocked down, and called for help on his cellular phone. His dogs barked to help paramedics locate their master in the boggy, secluded spot.

"There were calves in the field, so I think the cows were being protective," Willis said.

"We called in the police helicopter, and when it arrived all the cows came over to see what was going on," he said.

Colombians go to polls with hopes for peace

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Colombians emerging from a dark era of bombings and assassinations voted for a new president Sunday, splitting their votes between two men who barely survived the violence and setting up a runoff.

Ernesto Samper, an economist of the ruling Liberal Party, and the Conservative Party's Andres Pastrana, a former senator, Bogota mayor and TV newscaster, split most of the vote and will vie for the presidency in a second-round election on June 19.

More than 50 percent of the vote was needed for outright victory.

The architect of much of the mayhem in the past, drug kingpin Pablo Escobar, is now dead, and Colombians hope the next president's term will be relatively peaceful.

President Cesar Gaviria reflected an upbeat feeling among many voters at polling stations in this capital city high in the Andes.

"The elections have begun in total peace," Gaviria declared after voting. The president, limited by the constitution to only one term, urged Colombians to throng the polls to "defeat violence and consolidate democracy."

Three presidential candidates were assassinated in drug-related violence before the last election, held in 1990. Their deaths were part of a decade-long war of terror waged by Escobar's gang to try to dictate government policy.

AP Laserphoto

Two police officers guard the entrance of a polling station as an early voter arrives to cast her ballot in Bogata, Sunday.

Rifle-toting soldiers patrolled parking lots and plazas where voters marked paper ballots and put them into cardboard boxes Sunday. Leftist rebels had threatened to disrupt voting, but no major incidents were reported.

People poured into the streets on foot and in cars in Bogota after the polls closed, waving campaign banners and cheering for their candidates.

"We are celebrating for our candidate and because these elections went off without violence," said Marta Beatriz Medina amid a cacophony of tooting car horns.

With 91 percent of ballots counted, Samper won 45.2 percent, Pastrana 44.9 percent and Antonio Navarro Wolff, a former guerrilla, 3.8 percent. There were 18 candidates, including a self-proclaimed witch. Election officials said it was mathematically impossible for a candidate to surpass 50 percent with the uncounted votes.

Both Samper and Pastrana have firsthand knowledge of the violence wrought by Escobar's Medellin cocaine cartel.

Samper survived an assassination attempt in 1989 — three of the 11 bullets that were fired into him remain lodged in his body — and Pastrana was kidnapped the previous year.

Samper and Pastrana have similar platforms, with the major difference being the pace of economic reform.

Samper says the state should move more slowly in lowering trade barriers and selling off state industries, and cushion the effect on workers with subsidies. Pastrana believes in continuing with Gaviria's accelerated program.

With the death of Escobar in a shootout with security forces on Dec. 2, the government won its war with the Medellin cartel. Other Medellin cartel leaders are dead or in jail.

But the Cali cartel, which clandestinely helped the government fight the rival Medellin gang, has now become the world's biggest supplier of cocaine, and, according to law enforcement officials, has infiltrated and corrupted many levels of Colombia's government.

The government has been negotiating surrender terms with the Cali kingpins in exchange for leniency. The kingpins of the sophisticated gang, which unlike the Medellin cartel has not waged war against the government, remain at large.

Hungary's former communists stage comeback in elections

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungary's former communists, trounced four years ago in a voter backlash against the old, repressive regime, surged back to win a majority in parliamentary elections Sunday.

The Socialist Party, born of the old communist party's reform wing, struck a chord with voters by promising to ease the high unemployment and inflation that accompanied the switch to capitalism.

Hungary now joins Poland and Lithuania as East European countries where voters, missing the economic security of the past, have embraced reformed communists.

Unofficial results released by election officials, with 100 percent of the vote counted, showed the Socialists with 209 seats in the 386-seat parliament.

The liberal Alliance of Free Democrats was second with 70 seats and the governing conservative party, the Hungarian Democratic Forum, had 37. The remainder were spread among 32 smaller parties.

Sounding the theme that propelled the Socialists to victory, party leader Gyula Horn told cheering supporters his government would work for social justice for all Hungarians.

"We want to improve their lives, and we will," said Horn, a former communist foreign minister who is likely to be the next prime minister. "From June on, a new politics will open in Hungary. We want safety, security, for everybody in this country."

He acknowledged that such promises would be tough to keep. And although a parliamentary majority would allow his party to govern alone, he said he wanted to form a broad coalition, preferably with the Free Democrats.

The Socialists have said they don't intend to reverse economic reforms, many of them launched by the communists in the 1980s. But Horn pledged to help those hurt by the changes.

A Socialist government also would be unlikely to veer from Hungary's West-leaning foreign policy. There has been broad consensus on joining the European Union and NATO.

Horn is widely known for helping puncture the Iron Curtain in September 1989, when Hungary opened its border with Austria to tens of thousands of fleeing East Germans.

Triple-digit flirtations begin

Staff Report

Although Memorial Day weekend is not the official start of summer, Sunday's high temperature of 100 made it feel like it.

Another mercury reading of 100 is expected today, with skies remaining sunny for Memorial Day and winds south to southeast at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny with highs reaching into the upper 90s.

Sunday's 100-mark temperature was hot, but not hot enough to break the record high for that date of 104 set in 1938. Sunday's low reached 68, compared to the record low of 46 set in 1937.

STATE

Violent weather disrupted sporting events, damaged property and left a small West Texas town without power Sunday, as thunderstorms and tornadoes were reported throughout the state.

At 8:40 p.m., 75 Texas counties were under a tornado watch, according to the National Weather Service.

Tornadoes in Young County, west of Fort Worth, caused minor damage near the towns of Olney and Graham. More tornadoes were reported "all around" Shackelford County in West Texas.

No injuries were reported in the twisters.

"We've had reports of trees, power lines, roofs and a small barn damaged, but no injuries," Graham County Sheriff Carey Pettus said.

"We had four tornadoes in northern Young County to southwest of Graham, probably about a 30-mile range," he said. "Most of the activity was in rural areas."

The storm continued south into Callahan County, knocking out power in the town of Cross Plains, officials said.

In Fort Worth, showers disrupted the PGA Colonial golf tournament for the second time in three days. First-round play in the Colonial Country Club tournament was suspended on Thursday.

In Dallas, 60 mph winds overturned nearly all 24 boats involved in a race on White Rock Lake. No one was injured.

Tornado warnings were in effect for Stephens County until 7:45 p.m. and Eastland and Palo Pinto counties until 8:15 p.m. Radar spotted a possible tornado just west of Caddo in Stephens County.

Hill County was under a tornado warning until 9:45 p.m., as radar indicated a possible tornado 10 miles north of Hillsboro at 8:35 p.m.

In West Texas, National Weather Service radar spotted a severe thunderstorm over Shackelford County that produced tornadoes near Albany.

"We've had funnel clouds all around us," said Shackelford County dispatcher Joyce Tabor. "As far as we know, we don't have any damage to any property. It was pretty sparse land, ranch land."

The NWS said tornado winds from the Shackelford County storm caused damage in Cross Plains, population 1,900.

Winds knocked down several power lines and trees, and flash flooding was reported on Texas 36 and Texas 279 in Cross Plains.

NATION

Thunderstorms and heavy rains were scattered over the southern Plains and from Texas to Florida on Sunday. Rain also fell in the Northwest with snow in the mountains.

Thunderstorms developed across the Gulf Coast region along a frontal boundary extending from northeastern Texas into central Florida.

Severe thunderstorm watches were posted for parts of central and southern Florida, central and southeastern Texas, and southwestern Louisiana.

In northeastern Texas, winds gusted to 60 mph at Denton, the Colony, between Kaufman and Kemp, and at Emory, causing scattered wind damage to trees and power lines, the National Weather Service said.

A thunderstorm produced almost 2 inches of rain in just three hours at Whiting Field Naval Air Station, about 20 miles northeast of Pensacola, Fla. During the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT, 1.23 inches fell at Dallas, and 0.55 of an inch fell at Orlando, Fla.

Much of Oklahoma also got thunderstorms, with as much as 3 inches of rain in the Tulsa area, the weather service said. Other rainfall amounts included 2.05 inches at Ponca City, 1.93 inches at Oklahoma City, 1.82 inches at Enid and 1.53 inches at McAlester.

Thunderstorms also formed on Saturday across the Gulf Coast region and over the Plains and the weather service said tornadoes formed in Louisiana, Texas, Nebraska and Colorado.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WALL: East German leader Honecker dies

(From 1A)

tremely ill and hadn't left home in four months. Honecker had lived in Chile since early 1993 with his wife, Margot, and their daughter, Sonja.

A spokesman for Chancellor Helmut Kohl, whose aggressive push for unification caused East Germany to disappear a year after Honecker was ousted in October 1989, released a brief, blunt statement.

"The death of Erich Honecker, sick for years, no longer comes as a surprise," Dieter Vogel said.

"Honecker failed in his political goals. His policies brought suffering to countless people in Germany. Out of respect for the dead, it is fitting to say little more about his role in postwar German history."

Alfred Bauer, head of a cultural center in Buenos Aires that promoted cultural relations with the former East Germany, said that in a visit with Honecker last June Honecker described himself as "a fighter for revolution and socialism."

"I struggled for these ideals since I was 16 ... I shall remain loyal to my ideals until my death," Bauer quoted him as saying.

Egon Krenz, who replaced Honecker but lasted only 1½ months in office, described Honecker as a victim of circumstances.

"Work, bread, and peace — that was Honecker's service to East Germany," Krenz said in a statement. "Cold War and loyalty set limits on his room to maneuver that he couldn't escape."

Born on Aug. 25, 1912, in Saarland in western Germany, Honecker joined a Communist youth group at age 14 and spent 10 years in a Nazi prison.

After World War II, Honecker rose in the East German party ranks and became a member of the ruling Politburo in 1958. Beginning in August 1961, he supervised the construction of the Berlin Wall to stem the westward exodus of East Germans.

Honecker took over as party leader in 1971. The peak of his political career came in September 1987, when he visited West Germany and received all the protocol honors of a foreign head of state.

As communist regimes fell across Eastern Europe, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev visited a protest-wracked East Berlin in October 1989 with a pointed warning about the need for reform.

"Life punishes whoever comes late," Gorbachev told Honecker.

Less than two weeks later, as a peaceful revolution swelled around him, Honecker was ousted by his Politburo colleagues.

Popular pressure soon forced the Communists to open the wall, one of the most momentous events of the late 20th century.

Honecker's successors ordered his arrest, accusing him of high treason, corruption and misuse of office. He was taken into custody Jan. 29, 1990, and released the next day on grounds of poor health.

Two months after Germany reunified in October 1990, Berlin authorities charged Honecker with manslaughter for ordering shootings at the Berlin Wall and inner-German border. Authorities say as many as 350 people were killed along the border between 1961 and 1989.

Honecker and his wife took refuge in a Soviet military hospital outside Berlin. On March 13, 1991, they were spirited to Moscow, deeply embarrassing Kohl's government.

The collapse of the Soviet Union put the couple to flight again, this time to the Chilean Embassy in Moscow. There they had friends who had once found refuge in East Germany during the right-wing dictatorship in Chile.

Honecker left the embassy in July 1992 and returned to Berlin for trial.

During the proceedings, Honecker read an hourlong statement calling the trial a "farce" and a "political spectacle." He insisted the Berlin Wall had prevented a possible World War III.

In January 1993, a Berlin court halted the proceedings because of Honecker's spreading liver cancer.

them are not correct." And an aide to Clinton's campaign said she had had no reason to suspect the source of the donations was dubious.

The referral, excerpts of which were obtained by The Associated Press, was written by federal S&L investigators in Kansas City, Mo., who examined Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, an Arkansas thrift owned by McDougal that failed in 1989 at a cost to taxpayers of $47 million.

It cites four checks, totaling $12,000, that were delivered as political donations to Clinton's gubernatorial campaign during an April 4, 1985, fund-raiser hosted by McDougal in Madison's lobby.

Three of the donations were written on Madison cashier's checks. They were in the names of former Sen. J. William Fulbright; Peacock's son, Ken; and Peacock's late business partner, Dean Landrum. A fourth check was drawn from McDougal's personal account at Madison, the referral states.

All were for $3,000 and were deposited in Clinton's campaign account.

The donations first raised suspicion late last year when Ken Peacock contended in an interview he never gave such a donation to Clinton. Later, his father, Charles, said he had put the donation in his son's name and paid with money from his own account.

The referral alleges that the three cashier's checks actually were covered by money from two larger loans to Peacock that Madison approved the morning of the fund-raiser. Peacock never repaid those loans, causing more than $340,000 in losses to the S&L, the referral charges.

Peacock declined to discuss specifics but said the referral's allegations were wrong. "I'll tell the grand jury what happened, but I don't have anything else to say," he said.

McDougal's lawyer, Sam Heuer, dismissed the investigators' findings as a "mission to discredit and disparage a number of people in Arkansas."

"Every allegation and insinuation that's been made in these referrals has not been credible," he said. He, too, declined to discuss specifics.

Betsey Wright, Clinton's chief of staff as governor and the campaign's manager, confirmed the questioned donations were received and cashed by the campaign. But she said the campaign had no reason to suspect them.

"Most of the checks from that fund-raiser were personal checks or corporate checks," Wright said. "There was nothing about the few cashier's checks that would have raised questions on anybody's part."

According to the referral, Peacock was on Madison's board of directors but resigned April 2, 1985, two days before his loans — one for $297,000 and the other for $50,000 — were approved.

The AP has learned that in a memo, dated a week before the fund-raiser, McDougal instructed that Peacock should resign from the S&L board in advance of his loan, presumably to avoid an improper "insider" transaction.

"Have him resign him from the board — and do not fund the $50,000 loan. Tell him I'll call him Friday," the March 27, 1985, memo by McDougal states.

The memo was confirmed by a source involved in Madison's operations, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

On the morning of the fund-raiser, Madison Guaranty approved and funded both loans to Peacock, the referral states.

Documents indicate the $50,000 loan was made to Peacock personally for use in a deal involving air conditioners. The documents state the $297,000 loan was made to a Peacock company, Dixie Continental Inc., for use in purchasing land from a McDougal subdivision called Maple Creek Farms.

Documents indicate the $50,000 air conditioner loan, in fact, was used to make a $38,940 down payment in the land deal.

CAUSE: Sheriff becomes gun lobby's hero days so authorities can run a background check.

Mack was the first of six sheriffs across the country to sue the federal government over Brady. Earlier this month, a federal judge in Montana found part of the law unconstitutional, and two other sheriffs have had hearings but no rulings.

Mack contends the law violates the 10th Amendment, which reserves for the states any power not specifically granted to the federal government. He says the law crosses that line by requiring local authorities to check for felony records, mental problems and other background problems that would disqualify a buyer.

"Who do I work for, the federal government or the people of Graham County?" Mack said.

Dennis Henigan, attorney for Sarah Brady's Washington-based Handgun Control Inc., said the 10th Amendment simply bars the federal government from compelling states to pass legislation. He said Washington is within its rights in requiring states to help carry out regulations like Brady.

The Montana ruling, which turned on the same constitutional amendment, threw out the requirement that local police run the background checks but left the waiting period intact.

Mack's lawsuit contends the law also violates a Fifth Amendment ban on vague criminal laws as well as his 13th Amendment protection from involuntary servitude because the federal government doesn't pay him for duties it requires.

Mack insists he's no pawn of the National Rifle Association, that he's paying his own lawyer, David Hardy of Tucson. But Hardy acknowledges the NRA helped compose the language used in all the Brady challenges and is supplying an attorney to help argue Mack's case.

And Mack, a lean 6-foot-3 with dark hair and Gary Cooper good looks, clearly relishes the role he's landed.

One recent weekday he lectured a high school class on the Constitution and did a 20-minute stint on Pat Buchanan's radio talk show denouncing the Brady law.

"It's unconstitutional, and I've taken an oath of office to uphold the Constitution, to defend the Constitution from all enemies, foreign and domestic, and it appears that our own Washington, D.C., bureaucracy has become one of the domestic enemies," he told the radio audience.

Some of his constituents in this town of 7,500 think he's grandstanding — or gearing up to run for higher office.

Listen to Marie Johnson at the Gemini Barber and Beauty Shop:

"The highlight of Richie Mack's day is going around town asking people, 'Did you know I'm going on the Donahue show? Did you know I'm going to be on the radio today?' "

HEAT: Vaccination distribution draws fire

turers and state and local health departments as well as private doctors.

The vaccination program stems from President Clinton's attack on drug companies 14 months ago, when he said many children went without vaccinations because manufacturers were pursuing "profits at the expense of our children."

Although Clinton proposed that the government distribute free vaccines to all children, Congress adopted a more modest program focusing on low-income children.

But drug companies and members of Congress said that the administration was buying more vaccine than would be needed to immunize all children.

In a letter sent last month to the administration, Senators Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said the administration was creating "a new entitlement unrelated to financial need."

They said, "All high- and middle-income families would be eligible for free vaccine in their private physicians' offices as long as the benefit was not included in their insurance coverage."

In an interview, Danforth was more emphatic. "This program is getting bollixed up," he said in an interview. "The government is taking over the vaccine distribution system. That's crazy."

State officials are also apprehensive about the program. Dr. Michael T. Osterholm, the state epidemiologist in Minnesota, who is also president of the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists, said of the new program: "It's turning into a nightmare for public health officials and private doctors and nurses. We've taken an already complicated system and made it more complicated. We've made it more difficult for physicians to administer and be paid for immunizations."

Administration officials acknowledge that there have been some problems in organizing the program. But they say that private doctors are needed because half of all children receive basic health care from such doctors.

And they say they are buying extra vaccine to catch up on the immunization of hundreds of thousands of children who did not receive their shots on schedule.

Dr. Anthony Robbins, an expert on vaccine policy at the Department of Health and Human Services, said: "The law is very complicated and difficult to carry out. It represents a series of compromises not always compatible with one another."

But he added: "The vaccine companies worry that if they participate in this program, their profits will go down. Some of them hope this law will go away."

WOUNDS: Shooting occurs after speech

(From 1A)

loose," said AP photographer William Wilson Lewis III.

A crowd jumped on the black gunman, beating him before police dragged him away.

Police then held off the crowd with drawn guns before driving the gunman to a hospital, Lewis said.

Two people received minor injuries in the scuffle, Chappell said.

Muhammad's son, 9-year-old Farrakhan Khallid Muhammad, was carried away by aides as he screamed, "Daddy! Daddy! Daddy!" The boy, who frequently appears on stage with Muhammad, did not appear to be injured.

Muhammad, 43, was suspended from his duties as senior aide to Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan after a speech in November in which he called Jews "the bloodsuckers" of the black community and said the pope was a "no-good cracker." He also urged blacks to kill all whites in South Africa, including women, children and the disabled.

That speech was denounced by President Clinton and by black and Jewish leaders.

Farrakhan demoted Muhammad, but defended what he called the "truths" in Muhammad's speech.

Calls to the Nation of Islam office in Chicago were answered by a security guard who said he hadn't heard about the shooting.

Muhammad spoke Saturday night to a crowd of about 1,000 at the Vision Complex theater in the South-Central area of Los Angeles.

He offered no apology for his past remarks, warning the few whites in the audience that his speech would be "a rough ride."

"I don't come to be easy on white people ... everywhere I go I want them to be uncomfortable," he said.

Letters of women in WWII recall D-Day; historian compiles recollections in books

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Half a century ago, Gysella Simon wrote from England to her parents in Cleveland, trying to describe the dramatic departure of allied troops for the treacherous D-Day landings ahead.

"In the dead of night they sailed away and now the world knows the story," Simon, a Red Cross club director, told her parents. "I shiver when I think of the boys who won't come back.

"The port was filled with ships of all descriptions, and to see the boys going aboard, grim and determined, was a sight which will live with me for the rest of my time."

Simon's letters and those of other women recalling the events of the war have been compiled by historian Judy Barrett Litoff of Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I.

Litoff and David C. Smith of the University of Maine have published the letters in two books: "We're in This War Too: World War II Letters From American Women in Uniform," and "Since You Went Away: World War II Letters From American Women on the Home Front."

More than 8,000 members of the Women's Army Corps served in Europe, along with Red Cross club operators and Army nurses.

Pearl Brubeck, another Red Cross club director in England, recalled helping the soldiers fill their time in the tense days before the invasion.

"The men were like caged creatures, and we made every effort to be of service to them," she wrote.

"We shopped in town, picked up their PX rations, brought stamps, mailed packages home, sewed and mended, fed them at all hours, danced when they wanted to dance, sang when they wanted to sing, wrote their families, read to them. ... It was an exhausting business."

Hesper Hutchinson watched the armada's departure from the Red Cross club in Bournemouth:

"Hanging out of a top floor window, just before dawn, we noticed a new sound, the throb of ships' engines; then slowly and deliberately the entire convoy turned south and steamed away. No sirens, no steam whistles — but it was obvious to those of us who witnessed their departure that D-Day had arrived."

Nurses followed the troops to France within days.

"For nine days we never stopped ... 880 patients operated ... gunshot and shrapnel wounds, numerous amputations, fractures galore, perforated guts, livers, spleens, kidneys, lungs etc., everything imaginable. We cared for almost 1,500 patients in those nine days," wrote Army nurse Ruth Hess.

"I have never worked so hard in my life," Army nurse Aileen Hogan wrote, "I can't call it nursing. The boys pour in, get emergency treatment, penicillin and sulfa, and are shot out again. It is beyond words."

On the home front, women's feelings were a muddle — joy at the long-awaited invasion, dreadful fear for loved ones sent to Normandy.

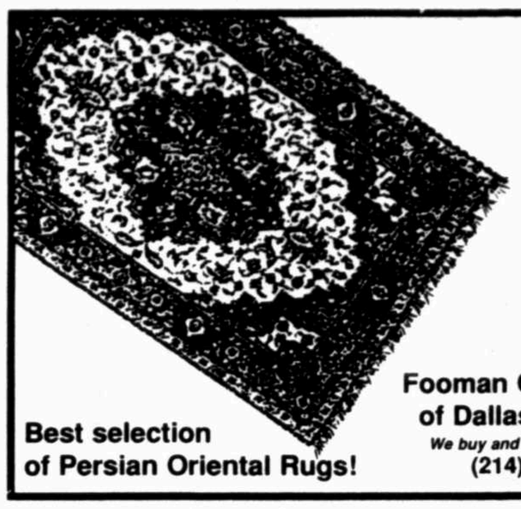

"I can't explain the feeling I had when I first heard of the invasion ... I was stunned. We all knew it was coming and were happy that it has started, so it can all end soon," Barbara Sanz of Valparaiso, Ind., wrote to her future husband, Lester McClannen, who was stationed in England.

"Please don't do anything you don't have to," pleaded Ethel Wiggins of Florence, Ala., to her husband, Herbert, who had already participated in battles in North Africa and Italy.

"You've already done more than your share as it is, darling. Precious, I'm just sitting here holding my breath until you get home." He returned to her in the fall of 1945.

Red Cross club members followed the invasion by only a few weeks, bringing Gysella Simon to the scene of recent battle.

"To have seen what my eyes have seen; destruction and devastation far above and beyond the scope of your comprehension."

MJWA's support helps community!

There are many groups and organizations in Midland that do an outstanding job of supporting the community year in and year out. It would be impossible to recognize all of them or to note the innumerable ways in which they help the people of Midland. Recently, however, one of these organizations made noteworthy contributions to two medical facilities, and that action should be commended.

The Midland Junior Woman's Association recently held its most successful annual style show and afterwards, made significant monetary contributions to both the Midland Memorial Foundation and the indigent Children's Clinic. The Midland Memorial Foundation received $10,000, to be dispersed through the Chris Davidson Pediatric Fund, while the Children's Clinic received $3,500.

The Midland Junior Woman's Association was organized with the sole purpose of supporting the pediatric wing of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and the Children's Clinic, and through these most recent contributions, it appears that the MJWA is doing a great job! As a result of these contributions, equipment can be purchased to help the children of the Midland community.

It's this type of generous and caring support that makes Midland a very special community in which to live. As noted earlier, there are numerous such orgnizations that continually provide outstanding support for this community. Without their support and assistance, Midland would suffer — the quality of life here would be poorer and more Midlanders would feel despair.

Thanks to the Midland Junior Woman's Association for the support they show for the young people of our community. It's appreciated!

Bush, Morales should forget tent suggestion

Come on, you Texas politicians, quit wasting your breath talking about housing 30,000 state and county prisoners in tents. It's not going to happen. . . .

Under the federal court order that settled the Ruiz prison lawsuit, the Texas prison system is allowed to house prison inmates in tents only for temporary work camps, boot camps or similar special programs. It cannot throw up thousands of tents just to gain capacity. . . .

A lot of people say if tents are good enough for soldiers, they're good enough for criminals. As some officials said, the trouble with that is twofold: Soldiers on the move use tents, but you don't want convicts to be mobile, and the difference between soldiers and convicts is the difference between good and bad.

So give it up, Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush and Democratic Attorney General Dan Morales. Speak to us no more about putting up 30,000 tents.

Find a feasible solution.

Clinton's choice for court picked for ability, not politics

President Clinton's nomination of Judge Stephen Breyer to become a U.S. Supreme Court justice was greeted with political unanimity among senators who would approve him. He is a centrist, not an extremist, in judicial viewpoint.

But so shaky is the president's own standing at this point that almost immediately upon making the nomination, Clinton was criticized for making a choice who could win senatorial approval without much of a fight.

Strange. It appears that Breyer not only projects the image of a centrist, but actually seems highly qualified as an intelligent jurist. That is, Clinton chose a justice not for his political leanings as much so as for his ability to interpret the law.

Now what's so bad about that? Indeed, shouldn't we all be applauding that a Supreme Court jurist who might vote and argue the law, rather than a philosophy, has been chosen?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 30th, the 150th day of 1994. There are 215 days left in the year. This is Memorial Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 30th, 1431, Joan of Arc, condemned as a heretic, was burned at the stake in Rouen, France.

On this date:

In 1539, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto landed in Florida.

In 1854, the territories of Nebraska and Kansas were established.

In 1883, 12 people were trampled to death when a rumor that the recently opened Brooklyn Bridge was in imminent danger of collapsing triggered a stampede.

In 1911, Indianapolis saw its first long-distance auto race; Ray Harroun was the winner.

In 1922, the Lincoln Memorial was dedicated in Washington D.C., by Chief Justice William Howard Taft.

In 1937, ten people were killed when police fired on steelworkers demonstrating near the Republic Steel plant in Chicago.

In 1943, American forces secured the Aleutian island of Attu from the Japanese during World War II.

Ten years ago: An American journalist and three other people were killed when a bomb exploded inside the Nicaraguan jungle headquarters of rebel leader Eden Pastora, who was wounded.

Navy should tell real story of Sullivans

WASHINGTON — The Tailhook scandal may not have been the U.S. Navy's most shameful hour after all.

Anderson

For 52 years, the Navy has suppressed the terrible truth about the sinking of the U.S.S. Juneau. All five of the famous Sullivan brothers of Waterloo, Iowa, were among 700 men aboard the Juneau when it was torpedoed by a Japanese submarine near Guadalcanal.

About 550 men were killed instantly, but another 140 men (including three of the Sullivans) were wounded but still alive. They clung to a handful of rafts and chunks of floating debris, and waited for their comrades to rescue them.

But the Navy didn't mount a serious rescue attempt for seven days.

By then, all but 10 of the men had been eaten alive by sharks or had died from starvation or their wounds, according to a new book by investigative reporter Dan Kurzman, "Left to Die" (Pocket Books). The book reveals how the initial survivors were abandoned due to gross negligence by the Navy, which has covered up the episode all these years.

The Juneau was one of six U.S. ships locked in a fierce battle with the Japanese on Friday, Nov. 13, 1942. It would prove to be an unlucky day for the Juneau survivors. The rest of the ships sped away after the Juneau exploded, out of legitimate fear that another ship would be sunk.

The battle group's commander, the late Capt. Gilbert C. Hoover, refused to break "radio silence" and alert headquarters to search for survivors. Kurzman has documented that a U.S. plane happened to fly over the Juneau wreckage just after the explosion and signaled to Hoover that there were men in the water. A member of the plane crew says Hoover signaled a "Roger" back to the plane, which meant he got the message. Yet Hoover did nothing about it. The pilot of the plane finally told an intelligence officer back at his base about the incident later that evening. But the officer simply put it in his daily log, along with 20 other items, so it never received any special attention.

Meanwhile, sailors were dying in droves. The blood from their wounds started attracting hundreds of sharks, who devoured dozens of men.

But the most heart-wrenching story surrounds the eldest Sullivan brother, George, who survived five days after the explosion. George swam from raft to raft wailing out the names of each of his four brothers, hoping against hope that one of them was still alive. His task was complicated by the fact that all of the survivors had oil caked on their faces from the explosion, making it impossible to recognize anyone.

Heart-broken, sun-burned and woozy from drinking salt water, George swam towards a distant island for relief but was torn to pieces by three sharks.

The Navy trumpeted the heroic death of the five Sullivans for public relations purposes, but never disclosed how they and their shipmates died.

On this Memorial Day, it's time for the government to come clean once and for all.

CHARLEY REESE

It's time to give feminists what they want

Teddy Roosevelt had his great white fleet, and I think it's time for Bill Clinton to launch his great pink fleet. Or, to put it another way, it's time for feminists to put up or shut up.

Reese

As you probably know, feminists are demanding some combat slots in our armed forces. Well, I say give them all the combat slots. Discharge every male in every branch of the armed forces from top to bottom, except for a few to serve as nurses and secretaries. Draft women. Let 'em have the whole shebang.

Feminists never tire of saying they can do anything men can do, and usually better, so I say let 'em. Let's have all-female infantry, armor, artillery and special forces; let's have an all-female Navy and an all-female Air Force.

Although they can have a few men, as I said, to be secretaries and nurses, under no circumstances should there be any men in the combat units to carry the ladies' ammo and packs and lift heavy objects such as artillery shells. Nope. Feminists say we are unessential, so let's see them prove it.

Get rid of battleship gray and paint the ships and planes pink. They can even put little lace-like insignias on them, if they wish. If there's a war, let the gals fight it. Us guys will stay home and work in the defense industries (and do a little hunting, fishing and poker-playing, too).

About 99.9 percent of all the million or more dead veterans buried hither and yon are men, and if that isn't discrimination, I don't know what it is. After 218 years of defending freedom, it's time for the men to take a breather and let the feminists have a go at it.

Who knows? They might pull it off. I know if I walked outside and saw 500 feminists parachuting out of the sky with guns, it would scare the beer out of me. As much damage as my ex used to do with the family car, it's unthinkable what she'd do with an automatic rifle and a bunch of grenades.

It would suit me OK if you guys want to extend the system into the civilian sector. I've always said that if I could find a woman fool enough to do it, I'd be glad to stay home, cook and play with the kids while she worked. Why women think it's more fun to work for some darn corporation than to have a good game of Monopoly or make model airplanes is beyond me. Trouble is, women aren't fools, and feminists find me offensive.

But I think we ought to switch places, because I'm tired of hearing feminists knock the enamel off their teeth complaining all the time. If women worked and we guys stayed home, we could get together once a week to swap stories and play poker. We could nag the wife about being late for supper and not properly appreciating our cooking. On weekends, we could load 'em down with a Honey-Do list: Honey, do wash the car; honey, do cut the grass.

And while they're catching up on the house and yard chores, we could meet at the tavern for a beer and sandwich. All husbands know the drill: "I've been cooped up in this house all week, so it's your turn to watch the kids. Fred and I are going to do a little shopping at the hardware store and then have lunch. I may be late, so you and the kids go ahead and eat supper."

Hey, and wouldn't it be fun to make them wait while we get ready? "Sorry, dear, I can't go to your boss's party tonight. I have nothing to wear. What? I'm not wearing that pin-stripe suit. I wore that at the Christmas party."

The more I think about it, the more I like the idea. We could insure them, and with all the stress of running the world, they'd die before us and then we could buy the condos and take the cruises.

Think about it, guys. If we don't call the bluff of these feminists, they'll never shut up. So let's start with the military.

MIKE ROYKO

With Clinton as client, law becomes asset

"I gotta send a fast letter to the president," Slats Grobnik said, "and give him the phone number of my wife's nephew, Stanley the lawyer."

Why would you do that?

Royko

"It's my patriotic duty."

What does your wife's nephew, Stanley the lawyer, have to do with your patriotism?

"Because I've been reading about the whopper lawyer bills the Clintons are piling up. That Whitewater stink has already cost them over a million."

And that legal meter is running constantly.

"Right. But if that ain't enough, now this Paula Jones is suing because she says Clinton introduced himself to her by dropping his pants in a hotel room.

"So that means he has to pay a lawyer for that too. And that could run into big bucks because the lawyer gets about $400 or $500 an hour."

It just shows that in these sensitive times, a fellow is better off sending flowers to a young lady.

"Anyways, I read where the legal bills are so big that the Clintons got to run a tab, and by the time he's not president, they could be millions of dollars in hock."

Well, that's life in the fast lane, I suppose.

"Maybe. But it's got me worried. How can he concentrate on being president if he knows that every week he's going 20 grand deeper in debt? At that rate, he could be the first president to file for bankruptcy."

I'm sure they will find a way to raise the money. There is already talk about forming a defense fund from kindly contributors. Or if it turns out that Paula Jones is truthful, Clinton could sell his story to Hollywood. If "All the President's Men" was a hit, imagine the potential for "All the President's Women."

"But none of that has to happen. That's why I'm gonna write him about my wife's nephew, Stanley the lawyer.

"He'll handle all of Clinton's legal problems, and he won't charge no $500 an hour. Hey, he'll do it for $500 a week. Or even less if Bill and Hillary give him an autographed picture to hang on his office wall."

But is Stanley qualified?

"What you mean, qualified? He can do anything. Remember how he handled Eddie's divorce? Tony's speeding rap? He got Big Louie off the hook for mopery with intent to gawk, and he wangled a cash settlement for Aunt Erma when the neighbor's pit bull bit her on the bottom. The guy is a legal genius."

Maybe so, but Clinton has big-time legal problems, and Stanley the lawyer is more accustomed to neighborhood problems.

"What's so big-time about what this Paula Jones says? She says Clinton drops his pants, but there ain't no witnesses. I already talked to Stanley about that. He says, no problem. All Clinton's got to say is that his shirttail came out, and he just loosened his belt to tuck it in. That could happen to anybody, right?"

I suppose so. But the Whitewater affair is a very complicated, tangled financial web.

"You think that's tangled? When old Bruno died without a will and all eight of his sons and daughters sued each other for possession of his three-flat with the tavern on the first floor, Stanley handled that OK."

As I recall, there was a near-riot in the courtroom and they all went to jail.

"Yeah, but he got them out on bond."

I know your intentions are good, but I seriously doubt that Stanley is up to so big a challenge.

"Then there's something wrong with the legal system if somebody got to spend $500 an hour to get a fair shake."

Yes, that seems a trifle high, but if you want the best, I guess you have to pay.

"Wait a minute, haven't the Clintons been belly-aching about how much doctors charge?"

Yes, I believe that was one of their complaints about the present medical system.

"Well, I been sick a lot of times, but it didn't cost me no million bucks to get back on my feet. So why should it cost millions to hire some lawyers?"

Well, these are complicated legal matters.

"So's a heart transplant complicated. I figure even taking out a gallbladder is more complicated than this Paula Jones thing. But a gallbladder don't cost no million bucks."

You may have a point, but the Clintons are apparently willing to pay the top price.

"Uh-huh. But what happens if an ordinary stiff gets accused of something? Can he hire a $500-an-hour lawyer?"

That would be unlikely, unless he happened to be a millionaire.

"So when they get done reforming the medical system, are they going to reform the legal system the same way?"

Since both Clintons are lawyers, I'm sure they know the system as well as anyone.

"Maybe that's the problem."

Haitian invasion would be successful, intelligence officials say

■ They warn, however, that such action would not bring quick end to country's turmoil, violence.

By Michael R. Gordon
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. intelligence officials have concluded that an American-led invasion to restore the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power in Haiti would succeed easily.

But they warn that it would not bring a quick end to the turmoil and violence that have swept the country, and that an international force to maintain order could be needed there for years.

The view, which represents a broad consensus among intelligence agencies and some of Aristide's staunchest supporters, comes as the Clinton administration is struggling to develop a plan both to return the deposed president and create conditions so he can govern peacefully.

While President Clinton is relying on economic sanctions to persuade Haiti's military leaders to leave, he has pointedly refused to rule out military force if sanctions fail.

Pentagon officials are confident that Haiti's minimally equipped 7,500-man armed forces could easily be swept aside. And a force of 650 Marines — the kind of force officials said might serve as an invasion vanguard — was sent for training to Guantanamo Bay last week.

Whether Clinton uses diplomacy or force to return the Haitian president to power, he faces the difficult task of trying to rebuild Haiti's military and political institutions while avoiding an open-ended commitment of American troops.

Determined not to repeat the mistakes of Somalia, administration officials say Washington will not launch any military operation in Haiti without a firm plan for disengagement.

"The view of the intelligence community is unambiguous that restoring Aristide through military force would be a simple proposition, but withdrawing international forces quickly after that step would be extremely unlikely," a senior intelligence official said. Even in the case of a diplomatic solution, he said, "maintaining order represents a long-term proposition."

So far, the administration's plan for keeping the peace in Haiti after Aristide's return is sketchy.

Senior administration officials said Washington sees a need for a peacekeeping force of several thousand to help protect Aristide, retrain the Haitian military and keep order through December 1995, the end of Aristide's term.

But the United States and its allies have not yet agreed on the exact size and duties of the peacekeeping force, on the extent of the American role or, how long the force would need to stay.

Since allies are being told that the peacekeeping force would be sent in after a diplomatic solution, it is unclear which countries, if any, would be willing to send troops if Aristide were returned through military action.

In addition, the United States and its allies are struggling to define some of the fundamental tasks they would face after Aristide's return.

At a recent meeting in Ottawa, for example, Defense Secretary William J. Perry told his Canadian counterpart that deep-seated opposition to Aristide extends into the lower ranks of the Haitian military.

But the Canadians said the depth of the problem might not be so bad, suggesting more intelligence on the Haitian military might be needed.

Research team in Nevada starts five-year study of deadly virus

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A team of University of Nevada Medical School researchers has launched a five-year study to unravel the mysteries of a virus that has killed 42 people in the United States over the last year.

The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta is assisting with research into the hantavirus, which is spread through the urine and feces of deer mice.

A $1.5 million grant from the National Institutes of Health will allow researchers to trap, test and perform genetic studies on rodents across the state.

Stuart Nichol, a CDC researcher who will assist in the study, said it's hard to predict how many hantavirus strains exist in the country. Researchers have so far identified four distinct strains, including the one responsible for 42 deaths nationwide.

"As we look harder we'll find additional ones — maybe a half dozen — but it's hard to guess at this point," Nichol said. "The more we know, the more questions we have."

The strain surfaced one year ago in the Four Corners area of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah. It struck young, healthy adults who reported flu-like symptoms and then respiratory failure. At least two cases have been confirmed in Texas.

Nevada researchers said thousands of deer mice living in grasses and shrubs across Nevada will be tested for clues about the virus over the next five years.

Plans call for traps to be set in nearly every mountain range in the state, as well as along the Walker River near Yerington and the Ruby Marshes in northeast Nevada.

Trapped rodents will be tested for the virus and released where they were caught. They'll have microchip identification tags imbedded in them so they can be identified if they're recaptured.

By tracking the same rodents over time, scientists can study how the virus is transmitted from rodent to rodent, and why infection rates vary from one population of deer mice to another, said Stephen St. Jeor, director of the University of Nevada's Cell Molecular Biology Program.

The rodents also will be brushed to see if mites and fleas living on them test positive for the hantavirus, and if mites and fleas are infecting other animals, he added.

Nichol said many questions remain about the hantavirus.

"When does it pass from one rodent to another — and how? How long does the feces stay contaminated and infectious to humans?"

WWII veterans head for Normandy on QE2

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of World War II veterans spent the Memorial Day weekend in style, heading for a D-Day commemoration in Normandy aboard the Queen Elizabeth II ocean liner.

"I thank God I'm able to make this," said Arthur F. Baker of Alameda, Calif. "I was a young buck then. Now, I'm 72."

Stan Karejwa, of Roseburg, Ore., searched for familiar faces as he boarded the ship Sunday in New York City.

"I don't recognize any of them," he said. "They've aged!"

Arches of red, white and blue balloons decorated the passenger ship terminal. Strains of "Mairzy Doats" wafted from the Glenn Miller Orchestra, its musicians resplendent in old service uniforms.

About 700 of the ship's 900 guest rooms were booked by veterans and relatives of late veterans, said Leslie McNair, spokeswoman for the Cunard line. After a five-day crossing to Southampton, England, many will continue to Cherbourg and Le Havre for tours and ceremonies.

Karejwa was too swept up in the excitement to talk about his wartime experiences.

Legislators support economic sanctions against North Korea

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Responding to reports that North Korea continues to remove spent fuel from a nuclear reactor, possibly to build nuclear weapons, leading members of Congress on Sunday endorsed economic sanctions unless the removal stops, or proceeds more slowly and in the presence of international inspectors.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who is the minority whip, said the United States should consider urging Japan and China to cut their economic ties to North Korea.

Much of what North Korea imports comes from China, particularly oil, while North Korean workers in Japan send home large sums of hard currency.

"I would favor really bringing as much persuasion as we can on China to cut off all the goods and on Japan to cut off the money," Gingrich said on the CBS News program "Face the Nation."

Bradley, on the NBC News program "Meet the Press," said, "You have two vises right there that can begin to squeeze, that might indeed take place if there were ever economic sanctions voted at the U.N. against North Korea."

High school grads face future of low-pay jobs

By Peter T. Kilborn
N.Y. Times News Service

MEMPHIS — For hundreds of thousands of people graduating from high school this spring, the diploma is a one-way ticket to low-paying, part-time jobs at best.

Most graduates who are planning to go straight to work are offered the same low wages, the same part-time hours and the same assignments in the restaurants, supermarkets, motels and gasoline stations where they worked in after-school jobs they held as students.

And they might consider themselves lucky. In 1993, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports, nearly a quarter of high school graduates who did not go on to college and wanted jobs were still unemployed in October, compared with 21 percent of each year's new graduates in the 1980s and 16 percent in the 1970s. For the first time, unemployment grew among graduates while the economy was growing.

"The market is fraught with dead ends," said Alison Bernstein, the head of the Ford Foundation's education programs. "Unless they have certain kinds of skills, they can get locked on a path that doesn't take them anywhere. They could be among the working poor very early."

Not long ago, a graduate of Craigmont High and Middle School in Memphis could walk from graduation into the factory of International Harvester or Firestone Tire and Rubber and start earning real money.

"If you could hit a nail every time one went by on an assembly line," Ada Jane Walters, the principal, said, "you got a job that in today's market would pay $12 or $13 an hour."

But Harvester and Firestone, like many manufacturers, have flown, leaving behind fast-growing, lower-wage industries. Today, Federal Express, the biggest employer in Memphis, offers high school graduates 20-hour-a-week jobs for $8 an hour.

"We try to be very up front about it," said Chuck W. Thomson, a vice president for personnel at Federal Express. "We tell them they should take this job with the understanding that it will be part time indefinitely."

Kroger supermarkets here offer $4.50 an hour for entry-level jobs like stock clerks. Jack Overbrook, the head of personnel, said promotion to full time and a wage of $7 or $8 "could take three or four years."

So it goes around the nation.

Adjusted for inflation, the starting pay of people with at least four-year college degrees has slipped a bit in two decades, said Lawrence Mishel, an economist at the Economic Policy Institute in Washington. But in the same period, wages have plunged 25 percent to 30 percent for men with only high school diplomas and 15 percent to 18 percent for women in that category.

The economy is producing two million new jobs a year, but they come with wages typically below $8 an hour, or about $16,000 a year, and without benefits.

Rostenkowski's woes won't hurt health-care reform Dem leaders say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's legal problems will not interrupt the march toward health care reform, Democratic leaders said Sunday. But one member of Rostenkowski's Ways and Means Committee stressed that the Illinois Democrat is crucial to winning a consensus.

Rostenkowski understands the political pressures lawmakers are under, "and when he finishes talking with the people, he would know those who cannot vote for a bill, those that can vote for a bill, and what changes have to be made in order to get that vote," said Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., a senior committee member.

But White House senior adviser George Stephanopoulos said health care reform "is bigger than any one person. There is great momentum right now to make sure we get health care reform."

Stephanopoulos said it was premature to talk about replacing Rostenkowski as head of the committee, but added: "We're certain that we're going to be able to work with whoever becomes the chairman of the committee and that health care is going to go through."

Rostenkowski reportedly has until Tuesday to decide whether to accept a plea bargain agreement or face a criminal indictment on several federal corruption charges.

He has denied any wrongdoing and is thought to be ready to fight the charges, which include taking illegal cash payments from the House post office and putting people on his office payroll who did not work.

Under Democratic caucus rules, he would have to give up chairmanship of his committee if indicted.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., appearing with Stephanopoulos on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," also expressed confidence that health care reform would not be a casualty of Rostenkowski's legal battle.

"Ways and Means is going to get a bill out no matter what happens and we're going to have it on the floor in July," he said.

But Rangel said on ABC that Rostenkowski's genius "was being able to fully understand the needs of the different regions, the needs of members who had to vote for it."

Rangel said Rostenkowski's personal problems so far haven't "diminished one bit" his ability to move on health care.

Woman loses money thrown out with trash

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — They say one person's trash is another's treasure, but that wasn't the case for a garbage collector who found a stash of cash.

He got no reward for turning in money lost by a woman who kept $40,000 in a wastebasket that was disposed of by a well-meaning relative helping her clean house.

Joel Forrester pulled the lever on his garbage truck's trash compactor last week, an envelope burst open and $100 bills started floating out.

He telephoned his boss, who asked how much money they were talking about.

Forrester paused, counted a fistful of bills and said, "I've got $2,000 in my hands right now."

Trash haulers picking through the garbage kept coming up with more and more money. Secret Service agents swooped in to see if the bills were counterfeit.

Then a customer called and told them about this wastebasket that she had stuffed with envelopes filled with money.

"We recovered $39,980," Dewey Strauss, president of Valley Garbage Service said Friday. "We were short 20 bucks." The customer, whose name was not made public, got the money back.

KOJ

While the United States has been complaining for years about how hard it is to crack Japanese trade barriers, Kampgrounds of America has landed its first franchise in Japan.

Taking advantage of the growing popularity of Japan as a tourist destination, KOA sold the first franchise to campground operators in Okayama, in southern Japan.

The company, which has more than 500 locations in the United States and other countries, expects to have nearly two dozen set up in Japan in the next few years.

Like its American counterparts, the Okayama version has hot showers and a convenience store. But it also has a few Japanese amenities, including a "Karaoke Kabin" for group sing-ins.

Bad news

A group of financial planners have added their voices to the chorus of analysts warning that most people won't be able to retire as early as they'd like or live as well after retirement as they do now.

The Institute of Certified Financial Planners surveyed members in the Philadelphia area, and found, like in many other parts of the country, that the troubled Social Security system, inflation, low savings rates, poor investment choices and higher medical costs will make it hard for people to reach their retirement goals.

One suggestion from the planners to make saving for retirement easier: Downscale your lifestyle.

MBA spells jobs

It's off to work for an overwhelming number of MBA graduates this summer. Seventy-nine percent of the 600 MBA grads surveyed recently by Duke University's Fuqua School of Business reported that they already have secured jobs.

The job acceptance figure represents a 14 percent increase over findings of a similar survey conducted in 1992. This year's top industries for the graduates include consulting work and investment banking.

Health care prognosis: Cost cuts will count

■ Events on Capitol Hill will dramatically effect actions taken by those who own health stocks.

By Francis Flaherty
N.Y. Times News Service

Do health stocks give you a headache? The cure is simple. Just remember that the future of the industry is all about costs: cutting costs, helping its people learn how to cut costs and — ideally — shielding it from the need to cut costs.

For investors, reform may dominate the news in the short run, but in the long run it is just a me-too. Whatever happens on Capitol Hill, the industry, which will reach $1 trillion in spending in 1994, must slash those expenses considerably.

Indeed, health companies, seriously battered on Wall Street since early 1993 by reform fears, are already going under the knife. In the first quarter, private reforms pushed down inflation in medical costs "to its lowest point in 20 years," said Larry Feinberg, general partner of Oracle Partners, a New York investment firm.

So how should long-term investors proceed if costs are key? Here are some examples, drawing on both large and small health sectors.

INFORMATION SYSTEMS

Many doctors do not use computers for office work. But the potential savings are great. "The average doctor spends 40 to 80 percent of gross revenues on office expense," said Edwin Gordon, an analyst at Morgan Stanley.

Enter the field of medical information, now small, but soon to be larger, Gordon said. The companies hope to make money not by cutting costs directly, but by making a cost-insensitive industry change its ways.

Among the "good ones," he said, is Medic Computer Systems, traded over the counter. The company sells systems for processing insurance claims, a big office expense.

Another is United Healthcare, a health maintenance organization heavily invested in systems that help doctors find effective treatments that are also economical.

PHYSICIAN MANAGEMENT

Lackadaisical about computers, doctors are often lackadaisical about business tasks in general. Enter the physician management companies, which promise to take efficient care of business while doctors do the doctoring.

The market may get big. "Doctors feel very pressured" by the industry's changes, said Eleanor Kerns, an analyst at Alex. Brown. They worry not only about trimming costs as fees decline, but also about doing the new things that industry reforms require, such as negotiating rates with managed care companies.

Ms. Kerns gives a strong buy recommendation to Phycor, the industry leader, which has more than 800 doctors under management. Another buy is Coastal Healthcare Group, a diversified company with a growing interest in physician management, particularly in Government challenges business on environment

By David E. Kalish
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Tell companies they have to cut waste output, and they'll likely squawk about costly mandates that hurt profits and squelch expansion.

But dangle a few carrots in front of them, and see how enthusiastic they get:

■ Forty-six companies large and small touted how they cut a total of 1 billion pounds of garbage since 1990 — about a year's worth of trash at a medium-sized landfill — in a contest organized by seven Northeastern states.

■ The Environmental Protection Agency won voluntary agreements from nearly 100 companies to slash waste output and will crown their achievements at a "WasteWise" ceremony.

■ The winners of another contest in Massachusetts included a company that makes egg cartons from old phone books and another that ships computer parts in boxes made of recycled paper and urges consumers to return the boxes for reuse.

While proposed legislation to reduce trash meets with resistance from businesses, a surprising countertrend is emerging: Green dares, or contests that promise positive publicity can entice companies into making voluntary but substantial reductions in their garbage output.

The idea that businesses are more willing to cut trash output if they're asked rather than told is growing as governments push for waste reduction instead of new incinerators and landfills.

Packaging waste totaled 47 million tons in 1990, about one-third of all waste in the United States, according to the Coalition of Northeastern Governors, the government group whose annual CONEG Challenge drew 46 companies last year.

Procter & Gamble Co., a leading manufacturer of consumer brands, responded to the contest by saying it boosted the average recycled content in its packages to 36 percent. That included using 100 percent plastic trash in containers of Ultra Downey and Lemon Comet and 50 percent in containers of Tide, Bold and Dash.

Another participant, Campbell Soup Co., said it trimmed the weight of its steel soup cans by a total 4 million pounds and its juice cans by 1.1 million pounds.

Baxter Healthcare Corp., the $8.5 billion medical products company, said it cut 11.6 million pounds of packaging since 1990 and plans a 15 percent overall reduction by 1995. It also plans to use more recycled fiber in its corrugated shipping containers, and less chlorine-bleached paper and cardboard in packaging.

"Baxter did more than they might of otherwise," said Sherry Huber, executive director of the Maine Waste Management Agency and a leader of the trash reduction effort. "Their goals are comparable to mandatory legislation."

But support for the companies' efforts is far from unanimous. Some environmentalists and state officials say the voluntary actions can give companies credit for token measures and

Making sense of cash-back card plans

By Sarah Mahoney
N.Y. Times News Service

For some time, credit card issuers have bombarded prospective customers with promises of rebates on everything from cars to groceries to airline miles. So, it should come as no surprise that the issuers would eventually hit on the most valued gift of all — cash.

Last week, Chase Manhattan introduced a Cash Builder Visa card, which rewards card holders by paying them a percentage of their annual charges and finance fees in cash.

Also last week, the GE Rewards Card started giving cash back on purchases. And in January Mellon Bank introduced a Cornerstone Mastercard, which refunds part of the finance charges to card holders. The grandfather of the cash-rebate programs is the Sears Discover card.

The cash-back cards make sense for issuers that are eager to win new clients. They encourage users to charge heavily and stay with one issuer. For consumers, the cards sometimes make sense. But at most, they provide a lagniappe, not a windfall.

Chase's card works this way: Each month you charge $200 or more, you accrue as a rebate 1 percent of your total charges and 10 percent of your monthly finance charges. Someone charging $200 a month, carrying an average balance of $1,500, would earn a rebate of $47.85 at the end of the year.

Unless you earn a rebate of $500, which means charging $50,000 a year, you have to wait three years to receive the cash.

Essentially, the card rewards people who charge heavily. Some consumer groups have criticized such cards, contending that they encourage people to go into debt.

"Saying that credit cards encourage people to run up debt is like saying restaurants encourage people to get fat," countered Michael Auriemma, a managing director of the Auriemma Consulting Group, a company in Westbury, N.Y., that advises credit card companies. "People should be able to control their appetites. These cards are giving them an alternative when they choose to borrow."

Before reaching for one of these cards, you need to analyze your

IRAs and distribution

Q: As beneficiaries of my mother's individual retirement account, my siblings and I decided after she died to let it build tax-deferred interest and take distributions over our life expectancies. Is the rate of disbursement based on the life expectancy of the oldest sibling? Some funds have placed my share in an IRA rollover account in my name. Is this correct?
— Peter Beninato, Portland, Ore.

A: The life expectancy is based on the oldest child. But the mutual fund should not have established a rollover account for you, said Helmut Soika, vice president and director of the retirement plans department at Gruntal & Co. "Only a spouse has the option of rolling over the IRA assets of a decedent into his or her own IRA," he explained. "The mutual fund probably didn't ask the child to establish status."

Designated beneficiaries other than spouses can take a lump-sum distribution or annual withdrawals based on their life expectancies. These distributions are not subject to the 10 percent penalty for withdrawals before age 59½.

The mutual fund should change the account from a rollover to an inherited IRA for two reasons, Soika said. "It could be challenged and disallowed by the IRS, and under the rules for the rollover IRA, the mutual fund would report distributions taken before age 59½ as distributions subject to the 10 percent premature distribution penalty."

Price of a living will

Q: What is a fair professional fee for the preparation and execution of a living will?
— Sid Kaplan, Southold, N.Y.

A: According to lawyers listed with the Legal Referral Service, fees can range from nothing for longtime clients to about $200. Under New York state law, doctors are not required to follow a living will, which describes what medical procedures you want in case of extreme illness. A health care proxy, which designates someone to make health care decisions for you, may be desirable as well.

Lawyers frequently prepare both documents and a power of attorney, which names someone to handle your finances if you cannot, for a few hundred dollars. The New York state Department of Health offers a free proxy form, as do many hospitals.

Rating bank safety

Q: I am concerned that the banks and savings and loans with the best rates are the most unstable and precarious. Where can I find rating information on institutions?
— Carroll H. Walker, Manhattan.

A: The highest yields are not necessarily offered by weak institutions, said Robert K. Heady, publisher of The Bank Rate Monitor in North Palm Beach, Fla.

Veribanc Inc., in Wakefield, Mass., will provide data on the financial soundness of an institution for $10, and $5 for each additional bank, (800) 442-2657.

Some munis offer 2-digit returns

N.Y. Times News Service

The battering of the municipal bond market has obscured some very good news for investors.

Buyers of intermediate-term issues in high-tax states like New York and California may now get after-tax returns of more than 10 percent a year.

Given the uncertainty in the financial markets, these fixed returns look irresistible to some taxpayers.

"People who have been sitting on the sidelines waiting for yields to increase are moving into the market," said George Friedlander, managing director and retail fixed-income strategist for Smith Barney Shearson.

Retail sales of intermediate-term issues, with maturities of 5 to 15 years, have risen since April, Friedlander said. Long-term issues, which he defined as anything longer than 15 years, are less popular.

The incentive to go long is small indeed. For 15-year issues, the average yield is 6 percent before taxes, and for long-term issues, only a fraction of a percentage point higher, Friedlander said.

"The long intermediates probably have the best risk-reward," he said. That is because issues of more than 15 years may erode in value if interest rates keep rising.

Because income from municipals is free from taxes, people in high-tax areas have the most to gain.

For a New Yorker in the 36 percent federal tax bracket, who is paying nearly 44 percent when city and state taxes are included, a New York municipal bond yielding 6 percent produces a tax-equivalent return of 10.7 percent a year — not bad when double-digit returns seem gone with the 1980.

Investors concerned about inflation and rising interest rates can move down the maturity scale to reduce risk. Ten-year municipals are yielding an average of 5.5 percent and 5-year bonds about 5 percent.

When municipal bonds hit bottom last October, 30-year insured issues were yielding only 5.2 percent, according to Municipal Market Data of Boston.

Yields, which move in the opposite direction of prices, began inching up late in the year as the economy grew stronger. The market feared that economic growth would fuel inflation and reduce the value of fixed-income investments.

When the Federal Reserve began nudging up short-term interest rates in February, "the market started going south in earnest," Friedlander said. The ensuing rounds of tightening by the Fed have pushed down prices further.

The price declines were exaggerated by mutual funds, which had been the biggest buyers of long-term municipals in recent years. When their returns turned negative, funds sold shares to weather redemptions.

The Fed's latest action, raising two key interest rates on Tuesday, may stabilize the market. "The market got the 50-basis-point rise they were looking for," Friedlander said. "It may not be the last increase, but it was an important one."

(STORY CAN END HERE. OPTIONAL MATERIAL FOLLOWS)

Now may be the time to buy individual municipal issues. The market is expected to grow much stronger in 1995 and 1996 because of a surge of issues 10 years earlier.

New issues rose from $102 billion in 1984 to $207 billion in 1985 and $151 billion in 1986, before dropping back to $105 billion in 1987. Many of them have 10-year "call protection," meaning issuers cannot cancel the debt until that many years have elapsed.

When the bonds issued in 1985 and 1986 are called, their investors will find themselves with significant amounts of cash. Reinvestments in the municipal market will probably soar, pushing up prices.

Shortages are already cropping up in some states, Friedlander said. He advises investors who have specific requirements — credit quality, state of issuance, maturity or yield — to ease into the market now rather than wait for the absolute best yield.

HEALTH: Pressures have hit home companies the Southeast. Both are traded over the counter.

(From 1B)

MEDICAL DEVICES

Like many inventions, "medical devices often lower costs," said Kurt Kruger of Hambrecht & Quist.

Noninvasive surgical techniques far underprice the old invasive kind, for instance. That's enough to make medical devices attractive in the new cost-conscious world of health. But if a new device has few or no substitutes, it has a second plus: insulation from growing price competition.

Kruger has buy recommendations on Medtronic and Ventritex, respectively a large diversified company and a small specialty firm that make just such a product. Called an implantable defibrillator, the device represents a "new generation" that "doubles patients' survival rates," he said.

Kruger said he expected sales of up to $500 million; $1 billion by 2000.

BIOTECHNOLOGY

Like most health stocks, biotechnology equities have plummeted. "They're down 15 percent so far in '94 — and that's after a 25 percent drop in '93," said Linda Miller of Paine Webber.

But the industry's new cost-cutting ways should benefit biotechnology, for the same reasons they smile on medical devices. Also, in their search for original products, big, rich drug companies are actively courting biotechnology companies.

"Joint ventures and other collaborative partnerships are on the rise" between the two sectors, Ms. Miller said. Besides an expert partner, drug companies gain an arrangement that is much cheaper than in-house research, she said. As for biotechnology companies, they get steady research money and lucrative deals.

One attractive company, traded over the counter, is Athena Neurosciences of San Francisco, she said. Focusing on Alzheimer's, Parkinson's and other neurological illnesses, Athena is a "very collaborative" company with strategic alliances with Eli Lilly, Sandoz and others.

Of course, cost-cutting is just one factor in investing. As cost-cutters, for instance, surgery centers seem like a sharp strategy. Used for simple operations like lumpectomies and lens implants, the centers achieve efficiencies impossible in a hospital, said Gordon of Morgan Stanley.

Most important, "the centers can close at night," he explained, and that means great savings over round-the-clock hospitals.

But cost-cutters were not satisfied. Last year, "HMO's demanded more price breaks from the centers," causing drastic drops in stock prices, said Ira Loss of NatWest Securities.

The same cost pressures have hit "home infusion" companies, which furnish intravenous food and drugs more cheaply than hospitals.

The lesson: Investors must look at the management and industry position of a health company, not just its cost-cutting acumen.

And, given the industry's expected bumpy ride through reform and the risks of an industry in flux, investors should look at mutual funds as well as stocks. The 15 specialty health funds have about $3.8 billion in assets; although a few are restricted to biotechnology, most are diversified.

Among the best, said John Rekenthaler of Morningstar, is Vanguard's $600 million Specialized Health Care fund. Or consider general funds; their health holdings range from 4 or 5 percent to nearly 40 percent of the portfolio.

CARDS: Cash-back cards usually make sense charging habits. If you typically carry a balance — and about two-thirds of card users do — the cards are not a good idea.

The rebates are not likely to offset the high interest rates of the cards. The annual rates on the cards are 16 to 20 percent, while 8 percent cards are available without any bells and whistles.

At current rates, someone carrying an average balance of $1,500 would pay $246 in interest a year at Chase. Even after the rebate, the cost would be much higher than for using the cards with the lowest rates on the market, even those that charge annual fees.

Cash-back cards generally make the most sense for people who pay their bills in full each month. A consumer charging $500 a month and then paying it off would earn $60 a year with Chase, and in three years would get a check for $180.

To get the most out of the program, people "need to have the commitment to charge as much as possible every month, and the discipline to pay it off," said Robert McKinley, president of RAM Research in Frederick, Md. "If they're careful, they'll get a free lunch."

help them avoid more meaningful reductions that costs more money.

Indeed, the CONEG Challenge is now boycotted by nearly all the environmentalists initially involved. They dropped out after business refused to support legislation that would have mandated specific reductions and recycled content in packaging.

Lacking support from the environmental community, the governors from New England, New York and Pennsylvania instead challenged businesses to voluntarily report on how they've slashed solid waste.

The companies get free publicity by complying. The latest 140-page CONEG Challenge report, published last fall, commends participants for their "leadership role" and "commitment to reduce packaging waste."

"You could do a good measure of waste reduction by eliminating the report," said Resa Dimino, solid waste specialist at Environmental Action Foundation, an environmental group that withdrew from the CONEG Challenge.

"The idea you can get government and industry and environmentalists around the table and resolve the issue is just fundamentally flawed. The industry has a financial stake in keeping things as they are and in not changing the way they are packaging waste," Dimino said.

Organizers of the challenge were encouraged by one environmental group, the Audubon Society, which recently rejoined the waste reduction campaign.

"From my perspective and also the perspective of a number of people in states, the jury is out on the voluntary method. There has to be a combination of voluntary and legislative method," said Jan Beyea, a senior scientist with the National Audubon Society who sits on the coalition's source reduction task force.

Companies argue that government mandates can cost too much money and hurt their ability to compete. For example, rules that would force manufacturers to include a certain percentage of recycled plastic trash in their packaging can hurt profits if the recycled material costs more than virgin plastic.

Voluntary efforts, on the other hand, allow companies to tailor waste reductions to their own goals. For example, reducing solid wastes from manufacturing will help them save on disposal fees.

But some participants say the recent surge in voluntary initiatives can be confusing and time-consuming.

"When you step back and look at it, you're faced with challenges all over the map ... Some require different accounting and reporting, and it becomes burdensome," said Frank Consoli, director of delivery systems and environmental quality at Scott Paper Co., a participant in the CONEG Challenge.

The green dares are proliferating partly because of the defeat of state regulations that would have forced waste cuts.

Massachusetts started a waste reduction contest after voters rejected a referendum in 1992 to require companies operating in the state to either reduce packaging or use more recycled or reusable materials. The proposed law, beaten back after vigorous opposition by packaging companies, would have been the strictest in the nation.

State officials honored 33 companies that met the recycling goals of the Massachusetts Packaging Challenge at a ceremony early this year. In addition to many regional companies, participants included Colgate-Palmolive Co., General Mills Inc., James River Corp., Coors Brewing Co. and The Clorox Co.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

It's hard for children to buy stock

By Bill Doyle

Q: You state that minor children cannot own stock. Then, how do I go about buying stock for or willing stock to my young relatives?

Doyle

A: Hold on and back up! I never wrote that youngsters cannot own stock. It has been pointed out here that minors are not bound by the same contractual obligations as adults. Because minors can disaffirm contracts, including the purchase and sale of securities, many brokerage firms won't deal with customers under the age of majority, which varies from 18 to 21 in different states.

That makes it difficult for a minor to buy stock. But there is a difference between buying and owning.

You can purchase stock for youngsters by having ownership of the shares registered in the form specified by gift-to-minors acts in force in all 50 states and the District of Columbia or the newer transfer-to-minors legislation already enacted in most states.

Either way, the stock will be registered in the name of an adult, as custodian for the minor. When the minor becomes an adult, the registration should be changed to his or her name alone. That's done through the stock's transfer agent, whose name and address are in the annual shareholder report.

It has always been possible to leave stocks to youngsters in a will. Transfer-to-minors legislation simplifies that process, because it covers not only gifts but also other changes in ownership, including the transfer of securities and other property from estates and trusts.

Q: Is there a yearly limit on the amount that I can place in a mutual fund, certificate of deposit, etc., as a gift to a minor?

A: There is no statutory limit. You can give as much as your generosity allows to each of as many fortunate recipients -- minors or adults -- as you like.

However, when your gifts to any one person exceed $10,000 in a year, you are required to file a federal gift tax return -- Form 709 -- with the Internal Revenue Service.

Q: I plan to start making gifts of stocks, bonds, etc. to my minor children. Will the Internal Revenue Service permit me to take those gifts as deductions on my income tax returns?

A: Not for one minute!

Gifts to charities, schools and other "qualified organizations," designated as such by the IRS, are deductible donations. Not so for gifts to individuals.

Q: Won't I reduce my income tax by placing dividend-paying stocks and interest-paying bonds in my young daughter's gift-to-minors account?

A: That move would cut your personal income tax. But it would not appreciably lower your family's total income tax obligation. Your daughter would be required to pay tax on the dividends and interest she receives.

With a provision that has become known as the "Kiddie Tax," the Tax Reform Act of 1986 put the kibosh on tax savings via the technique of shifting income-producing assets to young family members.

Lightning strikes man outside church at wedding

BRYAN (AP) — A 25-year-old man was in critical condition Sunday after being struck by lightning outside a church where his friends were getting married.

Thomas Varghese was hit Saturday just as he opened his umbrella. Hours after paramedics worked to regain Varghese's pulse, he was in a coma and in critical condition Sunday at Scott & White Hospital in Temple.

Varghese was transported by the Lifeflight helicopter from Bryan's St. Joseph Hospital Saturday evening after officials decided the internal burns he suffered from the lightning could be better treated at the Temple hospital.

Worried friends dressed in tuxedos and dresses loitered around the emergency room throughout the day Saturday and into the night nervously awaiting word on their friend, who was a guest at the wedding.

The freak accident shortly before 4 p.m. delayed the ceremony where 200 to 300 people were in attendance, but the couple ended up exchanging their vows inside the 140-year-old Alexander Methodist Church about six miles northeast of Bryan.

Authorities said Varghese was lucky to have survived the ordeal, but they did not want to speculate on whether he'd regain consciousness.

Bryan Fire Department Deputy Chief Clyde Goen credited the quick action of several paramedics for saving Varghese from dying Saturday inside the church where friends had carried him.

Volunteer firefighter Pat Holland arrived first and began CPR on Varghese — who had burns scorching his neck and chest — until Bryan paramedics Andrew Davis, Bill Huggins, Ricky Van and Bill Donho arrived.

"Pat was doing a good job of working on him when we arrived," Davis said. "The victim had basically died. We all worked together — we shocked him and got the heart going again. By the time we loaded him into the ambulance, his heart rate was back up. He wasn't breathing on his own though.

"We did everything we could and his vital signs went back up. The rest was up to the doctors at the hospital."

The wedding was originally scheduled to be outside, but afternoon thunderstorms tore into town, moving the ceremony inside the church.

Holiday weekend brings seven traffic deaths, DPS says

AUSTIN (AP) — Seven people, including a baby boy, have been killed in traffic-related accidents this Memorial Day weekend, the Texas Department of Public Safety said Sunday.

Eleven-month-old Daniel Snyder of Spicewood died early Sunday when the car in which he was riding ran off Texas 71, hit a tree and caught fire, the DPS reported. The boy was in a child safety seat, but the driver was not wearing a seat belt and was taken to an Austin hospital, officers said.

One of the fatalities occurred about five miles east of Glen Rose on U.S. 67, when a van and a car collided head on, authorities said. The collision occurred shortly after 5 p.m. on a narrow bridge over the Brazos River, but no other details were immediately available.

Paramedics transported the injured to Glen Rose Medical Center in Somervell County, 40 miles southwest of Fort Worth, and to Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center.

In an accident on FM 3135, just north of Henderson, at 12:30 a.m. Sunday, 47-year-old Thomas Wallace was killed after his vehicle left the roadway and overturned, the DPS said. Wallace of Henderson was not wearing a seat belt and was ejected, the agency reported.

Four people were killed in accidents Saturday.

Johnny Julian Jimenez, 18, died after losing control of his car, which skidded and hit a utility pole in Plainview, officials said. A passenger in the car was critically injured.

Seven-year veteran of the standup circuit Brad Tassell checks in at a recent Comedy Night at the Midland Hilton. The amateur talent of the night, Noe Franco, checks his watch at left.

Tassell "works the room," as comics call it, keeping the attention of the audience.

COMEDY AIN'T PRETTY

"Comedy is not pretty," Steve Martin once said.

Of course, that often has a great deal to do with the comedian.

For Martin, comedy was not only pretty, but quite attractive and lucrative as well.

But for road comics like Indiana's Brad Tassell, and aspiring amateurs such as Midlander Randy Skinner, comedy may sometimes seem a little pock-marked before the pretty part sets in.

Tassell, an Indiana native who last Wednesday performed a one-night stand as part of the Midland Hilton's Comedy Club at the Santa Fe Bar, has been performing for six years. He has written two self-published books and has a third one on the way.

Tassell considers himself someone who was born to be a comedian, the way others are born to be lawyers or nurses. With a blend of socially conscious humor and personal growing-up anecdotes, Tassell, who played to a warm reception during his Midland stop last week, says he goes on stage with one thought in mind: "That what I have to say is the most important thing these people need to hear."

Comedy, Tassell says, "Is the perfect blend of theater and sociology."

After working the standing-room-only crowd at the Santa Fe, Tassell took his humor to Lubbock's Froggy Bottoms, and is on a swing through Texas that will include stops in Killeen, College Station, Beaumont and Lufkin.

"Comedy is a business," Tassell said. "There are people working 24 hours a day to bring 30 minutes to an audience. The work they put into it comes through on stage. . . . Some guys kill themselves because they write great stuff but they get on stage and are dead fish. Others guys have a great personality but they don't have anything."

Still striving for that one big break, Tassell feels he may have found it with his third book, dealing with the strangest places people have, well, ever had sex. Tassell passed out forms for his audiences to complete, had about 1,000 returned and put those responses into book form. Working with an artist, he expects a humor book that may sell upwards of 2 million. He has been tentatively scheduled to appear on the CNBC talk show "Real Personal," and has had talks with "Late Night with Conan O'Brien."

And what about Letterman? "You have to be God to get on Letterman," Tassell says, a resigned tone in his voice.

Not taking comedy quite so seriously at this stage is Randy Skinner, a 37-year-old pump operator with a local oil company.

Two weeks ago, at the encouragement of friends and family, Skinner took the stage at the Santa Fe Comedy Club during the Hilton's two-month "Funniest Person in the Permian Basin" series.

Taking the stage before the road professionals each Wednesday at the Santa Fe Comedy Club, the amateur contest continues each Wednesday in June with finals on June 23. So far, the show has been a huge hit with the audiences that pack the room, but the Hilton is still looking for a few people hoping to tell a few jokes for the chance at a cash prize.

"I mainly just did it to see if I had the guts to do it," Skinner said. "I enjoyed it. It takes a great deal of work to do it on a full-time basis, and making a living at it would be tough. I admire anybody who has what it takes to do it for a living. It's not as glamorous on a full-time basis."

Skinner said he realizes performing in front of strangers is "a lot different than being a beer comic, standing around with your buddies making them laugh."

Not unlike other comics, Skinner has a hard time remembering his actual first show, but does recall his feeling before and after. "Really nervous," was about the sum of it.

"My wife asked me if I got it out of my blood after I was finished," Skinner said. Like most amateurs, performing that first time does not magically rid you of wanting to perform again. In many cases, amateurs — Skinner included — can't wait to give it another try.

A passage from Tassell's book "Hell Gig: Enlightening the Road Comic," echoes that sentiment: "How can I not do it? It's like a drug addiction. My huge ego or my overwhelming insecurities, I don't know which, draws me to it. What kind of psyche looks around a room full of people, all talking away, and says, 'I can not only entertain them for 40 minutes, but I can also make them laugh. A lot.' "

PHOTOGRAPHY BY JOE D. WILLIAMS

STORY BY JIMMY PATTERSON

Hilton bellperson Chris Holzgraf listens as Tassell unwinds by playing some ragtime in the lobby. Tassell said he seldom watches other comedians work before he goes on-stage and prefers to unwind before a performance. Tassell said he spends about 200 nights on the road each year.

At left, comedy night regular Sandy Luna registers her approval as Tassell, at right, offers his interpretation of his grandmother.

DEAR ABBY

Conservatives, liberals alike should take note of Clinton's gospel

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: William Safire, Pulitzer Prize-winning author, journalist and staunch Republican, wrote the following in his New York Times column on May 16:

"I read the full transcripts of speeches as delivered and can testify that Bill Clinton is a first-class political evangelist. He's a believer in people taking care of each other: it's a passion, not a pose.

"The president told a rapt audience of teen-agers at Kramer Junior High in Washington, D.C.:

"'Every day you have to decide whether you're going to be here on time with a good attitude, learning as much as you can. Every day you have to decide what you believe, what you care about, and what kind of person you're going to be.'

"To the girls: 'First thing you can do is make up your mind that you're not going to have a baby until you're old enough to take care of it, until you're married.' To the boys: 'This is not a sport; it's a solemn responsibility.'

"In this year's State of the Union address, the president said: 'Let's be honest. Our problems go way beyond the reach of any government program. They are rooted in the loss of values, the disappearance of work, and the breakdown of our families and communities. We cannot renew our country when within a decade more than half of our children will be born into families where there is no marriage.'

"To a black congregation in Memphis, Clinton said: 'There are some changes we're going to have to make from the inside out ... the answers have to come from the values and the stirrings and the voices that speak to us from within.'

"Clinton imagined Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. saying, 'I did not live and die to see the American family destroyed,' and asked: 'Where there are no families, where there is no order, where there is no hope ... who will be there to give structure, discipline and love to these children? YOU must do that.'

"To a National Service gathering in Brooklyn, Clinton recalled the murder 30 years ago of Kitty Genovese, whose cries went unheeded by 38 witnesses who did not want to get involved by calling police. The president said: 'No nation hiding behind closed doors is free, for it is imprisoned by its own fear ... we've got to change the basic attitudes of this country. Not only about crime and violence, but about how we think about ourselves and each other.'"

Safire also noted:

"Conservatives can differ with Clinton's collectivized health care and the redistribution of wealth but should not worry about raising ratings by applauding his eloquent calls for family responsibility and mutual reliance.

"In coming weeks, Clinton will deliver commencement addresses, teach civics classes, observe anniversaries of D-Day and school desegregation. When a president eloquently preaches the American gospel, as Clinton has been doing, we in the media should disseminate it far and wide.

"'There is no such thing as a trouble-free family,' Clinton told the kids at Kramer, drawing on his own experience. He added a homey observation that may be remembered longer than his best-crafted speech:

"'Life is lonely enough as it is. If you have a family and people who are helping you, it makes a huge difference.'"

Legal scramble, paperwork goes on year after pathologist's exit

LUBBOCK (AP) — It's been more than a year and a half since the last of numerous questionable autopsy reports was filed by Dr. Ralph Erdmann. But the legal scramble continues.

Erdmann worked as a pathologist for about 40 West Texas counties before suspicions arose that he had faked some autopsies. He has pleaded no contest to charges he falsified documents and tampered with evidence, and moved from West Texas.

But the controversy surrounding Erdmann has provided fodder for convicted capital murderers seeking to avoid the death penalty.

At least six death row inmates in Texas and Oklahoma have appealed their convictions, claiming that Erdmann made errors in their cases.

Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware said much of the "hullabaloo" over Erdmann has been stirred up by death penalty opponents.

"It does appear to be the case, in terms of Lubbock County homicides, there was much ado about very little," Ware said. "I think the (Texas) Court of Criminal Appeals can see through this kind of stuff."

But criminal defense lawyers remain adamant in their criticism of Erdmann, who they say tailored his "expert" opinions to prosecutors' theories.

"Dr. Erdmann undermined the credibility in every case in which he testified," said Atlanta lawyer Millard Farmer. "What he was doing is taking the worst case scenario that law enforcement officers and prosecutors were giving to him."

Lubbock attorney Floyd Holder said: "The man was a witch doctor. He's not a professional. He's not even competent."

However, Holder said he does not expect the courts to grant the appellants' wishes in their capital murder cases. To preserve the public's confidence in the criminal justice system, Holder predicted, the courts will find that Erdmann's mistakes constituted a "harmless error."

Last week, the criminal appeals court denied a motion for rehearing in the appeal of Damon Richardson, who was given the death penalty for the 1987 slayings of three Lubbock residents following an apparent dispute over drugs.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Utilities Electric Company (TU Electric), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act (PURA), publishes NOTICE of its Statement of Intent to implement proposed Rate WPC1 - Wholesale Power Service - Cap Rock. The only customer that will be affected by the proposed tariff will be Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc. This is not a "major change" in rates within the meaning of the PURA since the charges under the proposed tariff are less than the charges that would otherwise be applicable under TU Electric's existing Rate WP - Wholesale Power Service, the tariff under which Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., presently receives service from TU Electric. The proposed effective date of the proposed tariff is June 10, 1994, or as soon thereafter as permitted by law.

A complete copy of the proposed tariff and TU Electric's application is on file with the Commission and at each of TU Electric's business offices.

Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. A request to intervene or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256, or (512) 458-0221 for text telephone. The deadline for intervention in the proceeding is 45 days after the date the application was filed with the Commission. The application was filed with the Commission on May 6, 1994.

Prime Time trade

ATLANTA — In a bid to add right-handed punch to their lineup, the Atlanta Braves traded left-handed hitting outfielder Deion Sanders to the Cincinnati Reds for two-time All-Star outfielder Roberto Kelly Sunday.

Sanders

The deal apparently was an ideal match for both clubs. The Reds were seeking a leadoff hitter, having used shortstop Barry Larkin there recently.

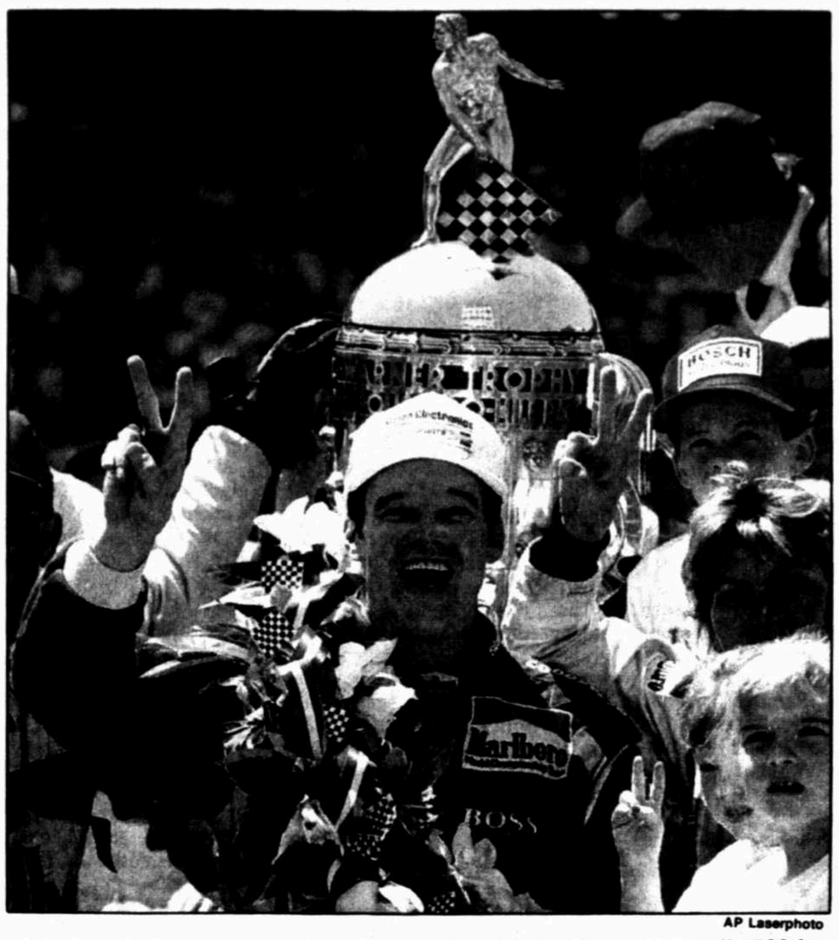

The trade was made moments before both clubs were scheduled to play Sunday and both players were replaced in the starting lineups.

The announcement of the trade during the second inning of the Braves game against the Chicago Cubs was greeted by boos from the fans at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

INDIANAPOLIS — Pure domination.

So overwhelming was Roger Penske's Mercedes engine in Sunday's Indianapolis 500 that even when Emerson Fittipaldi crashed while leading with 16 laps to go, teammate Al Unser Jr. simply moved in for the victory.

Unser, the son of four-time winner Al Unser Sr., inherited a 13.3-second lead and turned the race back into a Penske runaway, pulling steadily away from surprising rookie runner-up Jacques Villeneuve.

Rockets outlast clock, Jazz for road win

■ Kenny Smith's 25 points highlights defensive struggle as Houston takes 3-1 series lead.

By Chris Sheridan
AP Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — The Houston Rockets survived a poor offensive game by Hakeem Olajuwon, a gutsy comeback from the Utah Jazz and a botched job by the Jazz timekeeper to win Game 4 of the Western Conference final 80-78 Sunday.

In a low-scoring game in which Houston led from the first quarter on, the Jazz rallied within two on John Stockton's 3-pointer from the corner with 13.5 seconds left.

Sam Cassell then committed a push-off foul trying to free himself for the inbounds pass, and Utah got the ball back with a chance to tie it or go ahead. Utah inbounded, passed the ball four or five times until Tom Chambers got it in the lane. He lost control, though, missed a 4-footer, and Houston rebounded, running out the clock.

The final 13.5 seconds actually took at least 21 to be played as the Utah timekeeper forgot to start the clock.

"I got caught up in the game," timekeeper Wayne Hicken said.

Until the final 45 seconds, Houston's defense dominated the game.

The Rockets held Utah to 18 points in the first quarter, 13 in the second and 19 in the third.

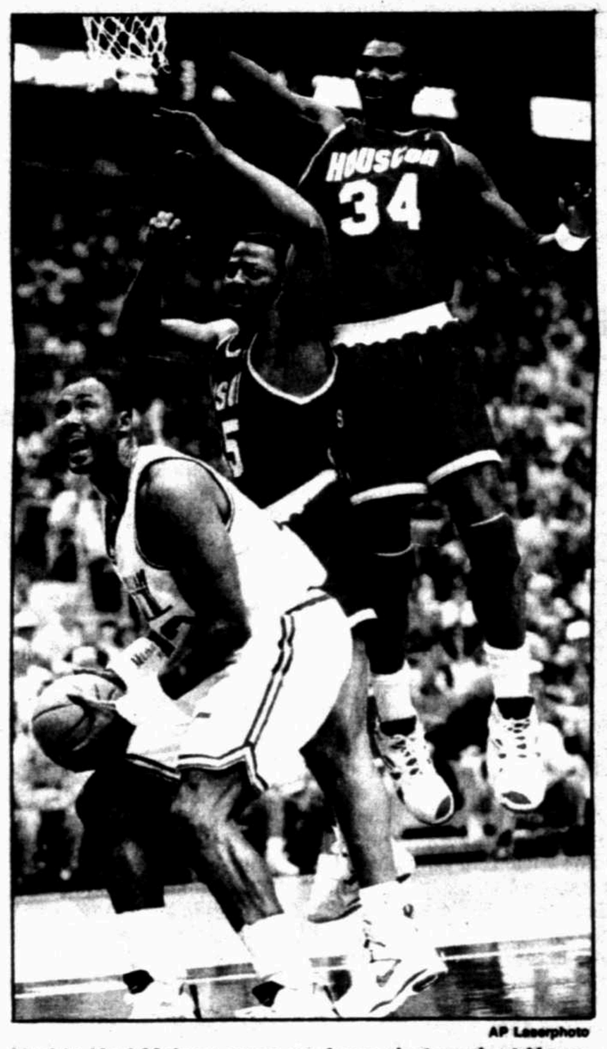

It was a good thing, too, because no one other than Kenny Smith could get going offensively for Houston.

Smith scored 25 points, getting most of them on uncontested jumpers. Olajuwon managed only 16 points on 6-of-18 shooting, but the job he did defensively on Karl Malone more than made up for it. He took over the assignment on Malone for more than half the game, and Malone scored only 4 of his 25 points when guarded by the Houston center.

Robert Horry and Cassell were the only other players in double figures for Houston with 10 each.

"I think the biggest thing I tried to do was be aggressive tonight," Smith said. "When I do that, I think I can be sucessful and help the team. They're sending two, three guys at (Olajuwon), so it's imperative you take your time and be aggressive when get the basketball. Our guys shoot too well

Haney, Hammel hang on for win

■ Duo wins Ranchland Hills Stampede on final hole of regulation.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Like the late golf legend Julius Boros, Steve Hammel didn't waste any time stroking the putt that saved him and partner Doyce Haney's win in the championship flight of Sunday's Ranchland Hills Country Club Stampede Tournament.

With Hammel and Haney one stroke ahead of Bob Herell and Steve Whiteside coming into the last hole of Sunday's third round, Hammel needed the four-footer to avoid a playoff. To make sure he didn't get any more nervous than he already was, Hammel stood over it for no more than about seven seconds before tapping it home.

"Actually it seemed like about 400 (feet)," said Hammel, who shot 68 Sunday in the two-man, low-ball format. "I did not want to stand over it very long."

Hammel-Haney's final round of 67 and three-round 198 total gave them a Stampede win on their second try. The two placed second in last year's competition in their first time to play as a team.

"We mounted a pretty good comeback," said Whiteside, whose team

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram came from six strokes back with 13 holes to play in Saturday's second round to tie Hammel-Haney by the end of 36 holes. "We just couldn't quite do it. We just didn't make many birdies ... they birdied when they had to."

Whiteside-Herell shot 68 Sunday to finish with 199 in the member-guest tournament.

Oklahoma's Kevin Lovingier (7-2) allowed the Longhorns only four runs and two hits in six and one-third innings of work. He struck out three and walked four before giving way to Ken Gajewski, who finished up for the Sooners.

Phils near no-hitter too much for Astros, 4-2

■ David West and Heathcliff Slocumb hold Houston hitless until the ninth inning for the 4-2 win.

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — David West, making only his second start of the season, and Heathcliff Slocumb held Houston hitless until a leadoff single in the ninth inning by Steve Finley, and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Astros 4-2 Sunday.

■ NL Roundup

West (1-4), moved from a relief role into the rotation after injuries deprived the Phillies of three of their starters, pitched six innings. He struck out seven and walked three before being pulled after 102 pitches.

Slocumb relieved to start the seventh inning. He kept the combined no-hitter going until Finley opened the ninth with a clean single up the middle.

There have been only six combined no-hitter in the majors, the last by Atlanta's Kent Mercker, Mark Wohlers and Alejandro Pena on Sept. 11, 1991, against San Diego.

There have been two no-hitters this season, by Mercker and Scott Erickson. There has been only one no-hitter at Veterans Stadium, by Terry Mulholland, on Aug. 15, 1990, against San Francisco. The Astros have been held hitless just twice, the last by Cincinnati's Jim Maloney on April 30, 1969.

Doug Drabek (7-2) lost in his bid for a career-best eight-game winning streak.

Mitch Williams, who has predicted he will be released from the Astros this week, pitched the ninth against his former team. He gave up a run on a leadoff walk and Milt Thompson's two-out single.

Expos 4, Rockies 3, 10 innings

MONTREAL — Larry Walker homered on Bruce Ruffin's first pitch in the 10th inning to give Montreal a win over Colorado.

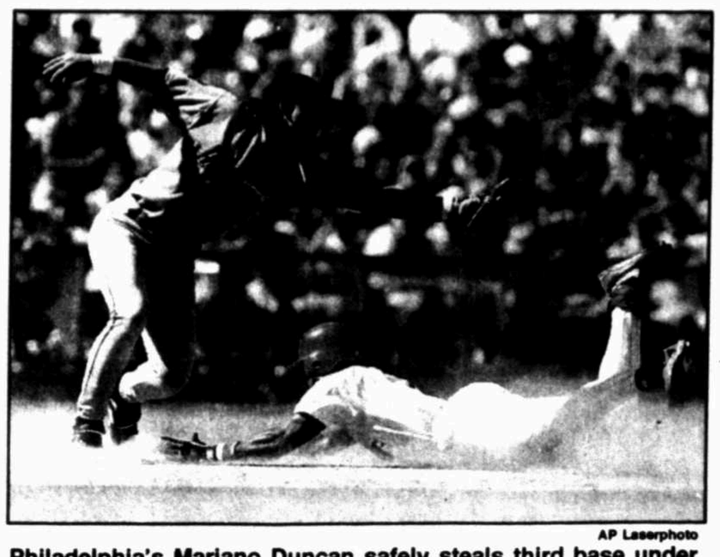

Walker hit his sixth homer of the season over the right-field wall off Ruffin (2-2), who came in to start the 10th.

Tim Scott (2-2) pitched a hitless 10th for the win.

Walker, Marquis Grisson and Moises Alou each had two hits for the Expos, who rallied to tie it 3-3 in the sixth on Darrin Fletcher's sacrifice fly and rookie Cliff Floyd's RBI double.

Montreal threatened in the seventh, loading the bases against Darren Holmes with two outs. But Mike Munoz struck out Walker to end the threat.

The Rockies took a 2-1 lead in the fifth. Howard Johnson doubled — his first batting right-handed this season — went to third on Roberto Mejia's single, and scored on Mike Kingery's sacrifice fly. Mejia scored on Joe Girardi's single to center.

Philadelphia's Mariano Duncan safely steals third base under the tag of Houston's Chris Donnel during the Phillies 4-2 win Sunday at Veterans Stadium.

Colorado's David Nied gave up three runs and eights hits in six innings.

Montreal starter Jeff Fassero gave up seven hits and struck out nine in seven innings.

Cubs 4, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Sammy Sosa hit Tom Glavine's first pitch of the game for a home run and last-minute starter Jim Bullinger gave Chicago six strong innings as the Cubs beat Atlanta.

The Braves, who just before the game announced the trade of outfielder Deion Sanders to Cincinnati for outfielder Roberto Kelly, lost four of six games on the homestand and are 12-11 at home.

The announcement of the trade during the second inning was greeted by boos from the fans at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. Sanders, who was in the starting lineup, immediately left the stadium after learning of the deal.

The Cubs, who have won 10 of their last 12, also took advantage of Glavine's four walks in the first inning to score two more runs after Sosa's 11th homer.

Bullinger (3-0), making his second start and 16th appearance of the year, was given the start when scheduled starter Jose Guzman was scratched with stiffness in his right shoulder.

Mets 8, Reds 5

NEW YORK — Bobby Bonilla set a team record with an RBI in his ninth straight game, and the Mets beat Cincinnati for a three-game sweep.

The first-place Reds lost for the eighth time in nine games.

Bonilla, who drove in two runs, broke the Mets' mark of eight straight games with an RBI set by Keith Hernandez in 1986 and matched by Jeff Kent earlier this season.

Bonilla hit run-scoring singles in the first and fourth innings, extending his hitting streak to 11 games. The Mets scored two runs in each of the first four innings.

Bobby Jones (6-4) scattered eight hits, struck out seven and walked one in eight innings. John Franco pitched the ninth for his 12th save, and his 100th with the Mets.

Giants 3, Marlins 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams doubled home the go-ahead run with two outs in the eighth inning, and San Francisco went on to a victory over Florida.

Richie Lewis (1-2) retired the first two batters before John Patterson singled. Williams followed with a shot to the left field corner.

Rod Beck got three outs for his 11th save. Mike Jackson (3-1) got two outs in relief of Bryan Hickerson for the win.

Dodgers 4, Pirates 3

LOS ANGELES — Carlos Hernandez, filling in at catcher for injured Mike Piazza, got his first two RBIs of the season and Kevin Gross won for the fourth time in five starts as Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh.

Gross (4-2) allowed one run and seven hits in 6 2-3 innings. He lost his shutout bid in the seventh when Al Martin doubled and scored from third on Don Slaught's forceout.

Kevin Young's single chased Gross, before Al Osuna fanned pinch-hitter Brian Hunter with the tying run at the plate. But Dave Clark's two-run single off Osuna in the eighth brought the Pirates to 4-3.

Todd Worrell gave up a single and a walk in the ninth before Darren Dreifort came on to earn his sixth save.

Padres 7, Cardinals 2

SAN DIEGO — Joey Hamilton won his second straight start since being called up from the minors and San Diego beat St. Louis for a three-game sweep.

The Cardinals, who have lost nine straight at San Diego since July 8, 1992, were swept in a series for the first time this season.

Hamilton (2-0), whose contract was purchased Tuesday from Triple-A Las Vegas, allowed one run on six hits in six innings. He struck out five and walked one.

Palmer, 'Pudge' homer to lift Rangers, 8-6

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Dean Palmer hit a long three-run homer and Ivan Rodriguez homered two pitches later, highlighting a five-run rally with two outs in the fifth inning and carrying the Texas Rangers over Boston 8-6 Sunday.

■ AL Roundup

Juan Gonzalez of Texas and Mike Greenwell of Boston were injured on the same play in the third inning. Gonzalez hurt his right knee fielding a double by Greenwell, who hurt his hip running to second. Both stars soon left the game, although neither injury was expected to be serious.

There was a brief, bench-clearing incident in the ninth inning, although there was no brawl. Scott Cooper exchanged words with Rogers after striking out and made a move toward the mound, and Roger Clemens rushed out of the Red Sox dugout to confront Rogers.

Palmer's hit was the first three-run homer by the Rangers at The Ballpark in Arlington and was the second-longest at their new stadium. Detroit's Mickey Tettleton hit a ball 427 feet earlier this season.

Every Ranger had at least one hit by the sixth.

Brewers 9, Mariners 8

MILWAUKEE — Greg Vaughn hit a two-run homer as Milwaukee rallied from a seven-run deficit Sunday to beat the Seattle Mariners 9-8.

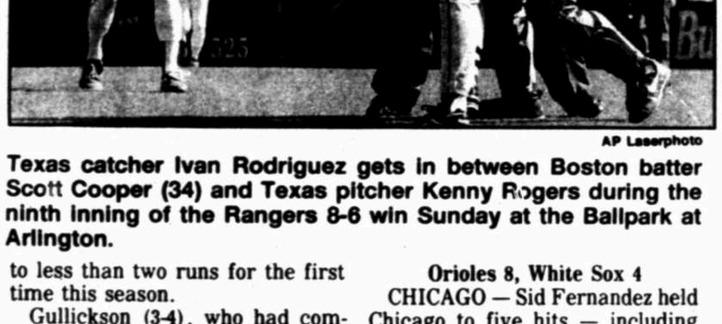

Milwaukee swept the three-game series from the Mariners after losing a club record 14 straight.

Seattle, which had gotten six runs with two outs off Teddy Higuera in the first inning and led 7-0 in the second, lost for the 20th time in 25 road games.

In pre-game ceremonies, the Brewers retired Robin Yount's No. 19.

Tigers 5, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Junior Felix drove in four runs and Bill Gullickson allowed one run over seven innings as Detroit held an opponent to less than two runs for the first time this season.

AP Laserphoto

Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez gets in between Boston batter Scott Cooper (34) and Texas pitcher Kenny Rogers during the ninth inning of the Rangers 8-6 win Sunday at the Ballpark at Arlington.

Gullickson (3-4), who had compiled a 9.82 ERA in losing his previous three starts, gave up eight hits, struck out five and walked one. Mike Gardiner pitched the final two innings.

Twins starter Pat Mahomes (4-2) allowed five runs in three innings.

Royals 10, Yankees 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Vince Coleman tripled twice, singled twice and drove in three runs as Kansas City beat New York, stopping the Yankees' four-game winning streak.

Coleman tied a team record for triples in a game. He has 10 hits in his last 23 at-bats after a 3-for-25 slump.

Umpire Dave Phillips, who sustained a mild concussion Saturday night when he was hit in the head by Jim Leyritz's bat on the backswing, missed the game. A crew of three umpires worked.

Mark Gubicza (3-4) ended his six-game losing streak against the Yankees, beating them for the first time since June 23, 1987.

Orioles 8, White Sox 4

CHICAGO — Sid Fernandez held Chicago to five hits — including Frank Thomas' 20th homer — in seven-plus innings and Baltimore stopped the White Sox winning streak at seven.

Fernandez (3-2) gave up three hits over seven innings before yielding a leadoff single to Ozzie Guillen in the eighth and a home run to Tim Raines, his seventh, that made it 5-3.

Leo Gomez hit a three-run double against Jeff Schwarz in the ninth to put the Orioles up 8-3.

The White Sox loaded the bases in the ninth against Alan Mills and Jim Poole. Lee Smith came on and gave up a one-out sacrifice fly to Raines before getting his major-league leading 20th save.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 0

TORONTO — Todd Stottlemyre pitched a four-hitter and Roberto Alomar hit a two-run homer, lifting Toronto to a victory over California.

Stottlemyre (4-2), who hadn't pitched more than 6 1-3 innings in his six previous starts this season, struck out five and walked three in his first complete game.

Chuck Finley (4-4) gave up five hits and struck out seven in pitching his third complete game this season. He struck out six and walked two in losing for the first time in five starts.

Devon White reached on Damion Easley's throwing error to start the first and Alomar followed with his fourth homer, sending Finley's 1-0 pitch to left for a 2-0 lead.

Pat Borders hit his first home run of the season, a solo shot to left in the second to make it 3-0.

The Blue Jays made it 5-0 in the eighth. Devon White singled, and stole second and third. Alomar then walked and when he attempted to steal second, catcher Jorge Fabregas' throw to second went off of Harold Reynolds' glove into left, and both runners scored.

Indians 7, Athletics 5

CLEVELAND — Jack Morris, backed by four home runs, struggled but won his third straight decision as Cleveland beat Oakland 5 for its ninth consecutive home victory.

The streak is the Indians' best at home since they won 13 in a row at Cleveland Stadium in 1965. The current streak was interrupted by a 2-4 road trip.

Oakland, swept in a series for the 10th time this year, has lost four straight and 31 of its last 37 games.

The Sooners blew the game open in the seventh when they sent 10 batters to the plate and six of them scored.

Texas 9, Arkansas State 4

AUSTIN — Texas' Jay Vaught pitched four and 1-3 innings of scoreless relief Sunday night as the Longhorns knocked Arkansas State out of the NCAA Central Regional, 9-4.

The third-seeded Longhorns (43-20) face top-seeded Oklahoma today at 1 p.m. If Texas wins, they'll play again to determine the tournament champion and a berth in the College World Series.

Arkansas State, appearing in its first NCAA tournament since 1970, finished its season at 39-25.

Vaught allowed four hits and struck out three, and also survived a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the ninth for the victory.

Midwest I Regional
Oklahoma St. 10, TCU 8

STILLWATER, Okla. — Jake Benz got the pitch he wanted when he hit a grand slam homer that pushed Oklahoma State to a victory over TCU.

"It was a first-pitch fastball and that is what I was looking for," Benz said after hitting the homer to dead center on the first pitch off losing reliever Tim Grieve (2-3).

"The fact that I hit it out to dead center was kind of a surprise since I don't believe in my whole career I've ever hit a ball out dead center and I still don't believe coach believes that I hit it out to dead center."

Benz's homer capped a six-run inning that followed the Horned Frogs' six-run seventh.

The victory put Oklahoma State (48-16) into Sunday night's 8 p.m. showdown with unbeaten Cal State-Fullerton. TCU ended its season, which included its first regional appearance since 1956, with a 38-22 record.

"The season is over," said TCU coach Lance Brown. "That's about all I can say. It was a great ballgame. Both teams played well. Oklahoma State just did a great job late in the ballgame.

After Benz's 400-foot blast, Bell stopped TCU in the eighth and ninth innings to raise his record to 14-2.

REGISTRATION FORM

CITY OF MIDLAND - POLICE ATHLETIC LEAGUE

MIDNIGHT BASKETBALL LEAGUE

GIRLS LEAGUE - 4th - 12th grade
BOYS LEAGUE - 4th - 12th grade

DEADLINE: Monday June 6

This Summer the City of Midland is offering a "Midnight Basketball League" for the citizens of Midland. The purpose of the league is to promote unity in the community, and to decrease delinquency for the young people of Midland. Thanks to the support of Julius Brooks, Councilman District 2, and the Midland Police Department, this league will be initiated. All games will be monitored by police officers during league play. Volunteer coaches will include off-duty police officers. The league is open to the youth of Midland from 4th to 12th grade, and for young adults. Games will be played from 6pm to 10 pm for 4th through 8th graders at San Jacinto Junior High, and 9 pm to 2 am for 9th through 12th graders and young adults at Washington Gym. The league will run from mid-June through mid-August. Registration fee is $2.00

Merklein wins NCAA singles

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Mark Merklein of Florida defeated top-seeded Wayne Black of Southern Cal 6-2, 6-7 (10-8), 6-4 in the NCAA men's singles finals on Sunday.

■ NCAA Tennis

Black was a loser in the doubles final as well, as Mississippi State's Joc Simmons and Laurent Miquelard scored a 7-6 (7-5), 2-6, 6-3 victory over the third-seed USC team of Black and Jon Leach.

Merklein is the first Florida player to gain a berth in the NCAA singles final.

More Sports/6C

"I didn't capitalize on some mistakes and I made a few stupid errors," Black said. "I didn't attack enough. It was pretty windy and that made me tentative and nervous."

Merklein, whose NCAA title gives him an invitation to the U.S. Open, finished the season with a 38-6 record in singles and 112 singles victories for his career, the most in Florida history.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, MAY 30, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Business contracts are up for grabs; hang on to what cash you have while negotiating a new deal. Those in partnerships or family-owned firms will see sizable financial gains when fall rolls around. Your loss of interest in certain possessions will affect a close relationship in a wonderful way. A business project reaches a critical stage in December or January. The fastest way to get some things done is to slow down a bit.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: country singer Wynonna Judd, actress Meredith McRae, Chicago Bears legend Gayle Sayers, jazz great Benny Goodman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The pace at work accelerates. Look for ways to get a greater return on your money. Diplomacy and tact are tremendous assets when dealing with higher-ups.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Putting down roots is a priority. Careful investigation will yield useful information. Check your insurance coverage, especially if you have a new addition to the family.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will need to find answers to some tough questions this week. Making snap judgments is neither wise nor practical. Examining what feels true to your heart will help you make the right choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to seek support from people of good will. Past differences will be resolved at the bargaining table. A promising alliance will bear fruit if you show a willingness to work harder.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Happily, your warm feelings for someone are reciprocated! Partnership activities receive a welcome boost. In business matters, rely on your ESP — it is right on the money!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are back in the saddle again. A supercharged physical and mental dynamism helps you meet an important work deadline. Shower loved ones with affection.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pending changes in personnel or a work project could be hinted at today. This positive trend may entail an initially difficult transition. A romantic relationship could test your maturity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Certain fiscal or occupational limits could frustrate you. A rearrangement of work priorities or replacement of key personnel could prove helpful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Caution is advised when signing extended-payment contracts for major purchases. Make certain you really need what you are buying. Romantic love begins to creep back into your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A bit of luck seems to follow you around today. You could be the recipient of a gift, prize or award. Your business and financial instincts are right on target.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An important milestone may be reached in a business or personal relationship. You will both benefit from taking the advice of a mutual acquaintance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Well-meaning friends may offer opinions that are out-of-line, or make promises they cannot keep. Seek solitude if distracted from work by your associates' chatter.

TODAY'S CHILDREN quickly adapt to changing circumstances. As long as they feel loved, they will not complain about frequent moves or doing without little luxuries. Money interests these Gemini mainly because it represents security. They are willing to work long hours to provide a comfortable lifestyle for themselves and their loved ones.

GOREN BRIDGE

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K85 ♡AKJ73 ◇AJ6 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dbl	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—What a pleasant surprise—partner has responded in your five-card major rather than the shorter suit. And you have a 16-point hand! But don't get overexcited—partner is already expecting at least four hearts and 13 points from you. Tell him about your extra king in valuation by raising to two hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A65 ♡J73 ◇AQJ5 ♣1073
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a good hand and, if needed, the diamond finesse should be right. However, you have already made a two-over-one response to show your values, so we don't think you can do more than raise to four hearts. Any further move must come from partner.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ10643 ♡AKJ4 ◇A ♣64
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Even though North is a passed hand, chances for slam, perhaps even a grand slam, are bright. However, asking for aces now is not the way to get there! You need to be sure that partner does not have two fast club losers. Start cue-bidding with four diamonds then, over partner's presumed four-spade signoff, continue with five hearts. That should focus partner's attention on the need for a club control.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable with 70 on score, as South you hold:
♠A93 ♡7532 ◇643 ♣QJ5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	3 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—Regardless of the strength of East's jump overcall, there's no reason for you to come galloping to the rescue by raising to three spades. You have a weak hand with no shape. Pass. Partner has another chance to act.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J5 ♡AK3 ◇AK5 ♣K10643
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl

What action do you take?
A.—Thoughtful partners are those who strain to keep the bidding open when we start with one club. Since North could not oblige, we can expect partner to have next-to-nothing, so there's no point in forcing North to act. Pass and see what happens. You might get the chance to back in later.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠109652 ♡AKQ43 ◇75 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—No spade raise is going to come close to doing this hand justice, not even four spades. The correct bid is a jump shift to three hearts. By a passed hand, a jump shift is a one-round force and describes your hand perfectly. Naturally, you will raise to four spades next or cooperate with any slam try partner might make.

Limbaugh travels information superhighway straight to alter

NEW YORK — Rush Limbaugh traveled the information superhighway straight to the altar.

Limbaugh married Marta Fitzgerald, a former aerobics instructor from Florida he met through CompuServe, a computer bulletin board service.

The wedding ceremony took place Friday at the Virginia home of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, who officiated. Former Education Secretary William Bennett and political advisers James Carville and Mary Matalin also attended.

It was the third marriage for both Limbaugh, 43, and Fitzgerald. Kit Carson, Limbaugh's New York-based chief of staff, said he did not know Fitzgerald's age nor where in Florida she had lived.

ITHACA, N.Y. — Mae Jemison was the first black woman in space, but she says she gets more attention for another trip she made to the final frontier.

Mae Jemison gets more attention for Star Trek cameo.

"For all the things I've done and accomplished and think are important, the most 'oohs' and 'aaahs' I get is because I appeared for about 30 seconds on Star Trek," Jemison said Saturday at Cornell University's convocation.

Jemison, a crew member in 1992 on the space shuttle Endeavour, appeared briefly on an episode of "Star Trek: The Next Generation."

"Sometimes, the things you think are important are not necessarily what others think are important," she said.

Jemison earned her M.D. in 1981 from Cornell Medical College in New York City.

NEW YORK — If Eugene McCarthy, the former senator, had been elected president in 1968, as he had hoped when he entered the Democratic primaries, he would have named Mort Sahl his press secretary, he said the other day.

"His principal function would have been to make sure that every morning The Washington Post, The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal were thrown over the fence at the White House and it would have been his duty to read them," McCarthy said. "Then we would throw what we didn't like back over the fence."

That opportunity, of course, never arose, but next week the former senator will join the political satirist and comedian in "Mort Sahl's America," starting Monday, June 6, for a week. The show is playing at Theater Four.

"I will do 15 to 20 minutes of dissertation of some kind," he said. "I will make remarks about the media, I will talk about language and how Truman was the last president to speak decent English, I will talk about language in politics and maybe poetry and politics, and I might talk about the Clinton administration."

McCarthy, who spends most of his time writing and lecturing, says, "The prospect of talking about these things in the context of Mort Sahl is better than going on Phil Donahue. You don't turn into a sideshow."

RADNOR, Pa. — A gray-haired little old lady? Elizabeth Taylor?

Surprise — it didn't happen.

"If I ever thought about being 60, I probably envisioned myself as a very graceful, gray-haired little old lady," Taylor told syndicated columnist Liz Smith in this week's TV Guide. "It didn't work out."

Taylor also denied reports that she's involved in a miniseries on her life, based on an unpublished book by C. David Hayman.

LOS ANGELES — Mary Matalin thinks her marriage to rival spin doctor James Carville is going well. Dr. Ruth thinks it can be better.

Mary Matalin thinks her marriage is going well.

"We just had our six-month anniversary, we're still in that goo-goo, romantic stage and we're having a little mini-honeymoon out here this weekend," Matalin said Sunday at a breakfast meeting of publishers and booksellers at the annual American Booksellers Association convention.

"We're walking down here to the room, feeling kind of cozy and goo-goo, and Dr. Ruth runs up to us and tosses this (sex advice) book in our hands."

Matalin turned to Carville, seated at the dais.

"Honey, we must be projecting."

The couple — the Hepburn and Tracy of the political world — were promoting the fall release of "Love, War & the Art of Politics," a memoir about the 1992 presidential race.

Weather halts Colonial; Sheehan collects skins

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Scott Simpson held a one-stroke lead Sunday when the approach of a thunderstorm forced an overnight suspension of play in the Southwestern Bell Colonial golf tournament.

The tournament is scheduled to be concluded today — the first time a PGA Tour event has gone to an extra day since a playoff in the 1991 Doral Open.

Simpson had seven holes to play and his closest pursuers, Hale Irwin and Nick Price, five each when play was halted at 6:17 p.m., CDT by an approaching thunderstorm. The day's play was declared over 38 minutes later.

Simpson, Irwin, Price and 15 others marked their positions and were scheduled to return at 9 a.m.

Simpson, who set a 54-hole scoring record in taking a four-stroke lead, was 14 under par for the tournament.

Irwin, 48, a winner earlier this season at Hilton Head Island, was 13 under. Price, the 1993 Tour Player of the Year and a winner in Florida early this season, was 12 under.

Final-round play was delayed 2 hours, 31 minutes Sunday morning, long before the leaders' tee times.

LPGA-Corning

CORNING, N.Y. — Beth Daniel drove her final tee shot under a tree, then made a remarkable birdie to win the LPGA Corning Classic by one stroke over three-round leader Nancy Ramsbottom and Stephanie Farwig.

Daniel collected $75,000 for her 28th LPGA victory. She had gone 61 tournaments without a win, the second-longest dry spell of her career.

Daniel drove left on the final hole, then had to skim a 4-iron along the ground to the green from about 100 yards out. She sank a 12-foot putt for a round of 3-under 69 and a 10-under total of 278 at the Corning Country Club.

Her birdie tied Ramsbottom, playing a hole behind her, for the lead. Moments later, on the 17th green, Ramsbottom let a downhill 25-foot birdie putt slide past the hole by about 3 feet. Her comebacker hit the right edge of the cut and spun out.

Ramsbottom finished with a 73, Farwig a 71.

Defending champion Kelly Robbins shot a 67, the second-best round of the day, and was among four players at 281. The others were Colleen Walker, who bogeyed the last two holes for a 72, Martha Nause (72) and Tammie Green (69). Donna Andrews (70) and Deb Richard (70) were two strokes behind them.

LPGA Skins

FRISCO — Patty Sheehan became the biggest single-event money-winner in women's golf history, collecting $285,000 over the two days of the LPGA JCPenney Skins Game.

Sheehan, the 37-year-old LPGA Hall of Fameer, took five skins and $145,000 in Sunday's final nine holes after capturing six skins and $140,000 Saturday.

Defending champion Betsy King finished a productive weekend with five skins worth $165,000.

Nancy Lopez and Brandie Burton were shut out.

Bell Atlantic

MALVERN, Pa. — Lee Trevino battled his way to a 2-under-par 68 on one of the most difficult golf courses on the senior tour Sunday to win the Bell Atlantic Classic for the second time in three years.

Trevino held off two late birdies by Mike Hill to win by two strokes for his fourth victory of the season. His last win was two weeks ago at the PaineWebber Invitational, and he also won the American Express Grandslam.

European PGA

VIRGINIA WATER, England — South African Ernie Els increased his lead to three strokes after three rounds of the European PGA Championship, but a late charge put defending champion Bernhard Langer back in contention.

Langer birdied the 17th and 18th holes to card the best round of the day, a 5-under-par 67, giving the German a 206 total. With one round remaining, he was in a three-way tie for second place with Spaniards Jose Maria Olazabal and Miguel Angel Jimenez.

STAMPEDE: Pair sink putt for tourney title

(From 1C)

The team's started the final round tied at 131. After the lead changed hands twice on the first eight holes, Whiteside birdied 13 to bring the teams even. They were even going to No. 17.

Haney's tee shot on 17 caught the rough where he had to shoot from under a tree. But his 9-iron approach put him three feet from the cup and he birdied to get back the lead and set up Hammel's tournament clincher.

The winning team carded a hot 62 on the first day of play to lead Herell-Whiteside by three strokes.

"The key part of the whole tournament was our start on Friday," Haney said. "We played so good on Friday and basically made everybody play catchup."

Herell-Whiteside may have won the tournament if not for one Ranchland Hills hole: No. 5. The pair bogeyed the hole twice for their only over-par scores of the tournament. Whiteside missed a four-footer today on the hole. Herell found a bunker and couldn't get closer than 12 feet from out of the trap.

"I guess you could say that was the key hole for us," Whiteside said.

"The difference in the whole tournament was they had one bogey today and we didn't," Haney said.

Whiteside-Herell birdied No. 3 Sunday to take an early lead. Their bogey on five put the teams back even. Hammel birdied No. 8 to put his team up and Whiteside birdied 13.

"We kept it close, which is what we wanted to do," Whiteside said. "We just never could get the lead."

Craig Winborn and Tim Peden shot a 67 Sunday to finish third in the championship flight with a 204. Red Townzen and Mike Roye came from two strokes back to win the President's flight with a 72 Sunday for a 217 total.

French Open. With the exception of seventh-seeded Natalya Zvereva, who lost to Julie Halard, all of the favorites fought through to the quarterfinals.

Jim Courier, twice a champion in Paris and seeded seventh this time, saved two set points and then squeaked through a fourth-set tie breaker to beat Olivier Delaitre, 6-1, 6-7 (7-9), 6-1, 7-6 (8-6); fourth-seeded Andrei Medevedev had a four-set workout against Jacco Eltingh, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1, and Sergi Bruguera, last year's champion, did his signature straight-set shuffle past Patrick Rafter, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Top-ranked Pete Sampras, looking for his fourth straight Slam, fended off a hard charge from unsung Mikael Tillstroem of Sweden, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, and secured a quarterfinal clash with Courier.

Steffi Graf, the defending women's champion, required just 40 minutes to dispose of 41st-ranked Irina Spirlea, the Romanian newcomer who reminds the German of herself — but not quite.

"I figured she plays similar to me, and I know what to do against myself, so I just came in a little bit more in the beginning and put pressure on her," Graf said of her 6-0, 6-1 rout.

But of those who remained, the seeded player who has appeared most invincible is Mary Pierce.

"Physically and mentally I feel very good," Pierce said after a 6-1, 6-1 demolition of 18th-ranked Amanda Coetzer, "and it's the first time I've been feeling that way every day, so there's no reason why things should go wrong."

his Chevrolet Lumina up front the rest of the way at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Gordon, the 1993 Winston Cup Rookie of the Year and the pole-sitter for Sunday night's 600-mile event, the longest on the circuit, finished 3.91 seconds ahead of Rusty Wallace. Wallace, who led seven times for 187 laps, was trying to give car owner Roger Penske a unique Memorial Day double. Penske's car driven by Al Unser Jr. won the Indianapolis 500 earlier Sunday.

Geoff Bodine was third, followed by Dale Jarrett and 1994 Winston Cup points leader Ernie Irvan.

Gordon, who arrived in Winston Cup racing after having dominated at each previous level, came to Charlotte on a sophomore slide. He had lost 12 spots in the season driver standings in seven races, leaving him in 18th position.

But Charlotte has been good to him in his brief career. His previous best finish was a second last year on the 1½-mile trioval, and it was even better this time.

Victory No. 1 came in his 42nd Winston Cup start.

"If there's a feeling higher than this, I don't know," Gordon said. "It's got to be afterlife."

Gordon's victory moved him up five spots to 13th in the driver standings and blocked Daytona 500 champion Sterling Marlin and Winston Select 500 winner Dale Earnhardt from capturing the Winston Select Million, a bonus that goes to any driver who can win three of the sport's four crown jewels in one season. All three drivers remain eligible for a $100,000 bonus should they win the Southern 500 on Labor Day at Darlington, S.C.

John Andretti accomplished his goal of being the first to race in both the Indy 500 and the Coca-Cola 600 on the same day. But Andretti, who had hoped to race 1,100 miles, only got in 820.

He finished 10th, four laps down, at Indy, and then flew to Concord, where he was greeted with a rousing ovation when his helicopter landed on the grass in front of the main grandstand minutes before the race.

From there, however, it went downhill.

Andretti was forced to start at the back of the 43-car field because he had missed the drivers' meeting two hours before the race.

He was lapped early and then brought out the first caution when he hit the fourth-turn retaining wall on lap 89.

His team called it quits after discovering a broken crankshaft in his Chevrolet. Andretti was credited with completing 220 of the event's 400 laps. He wound up 34th.

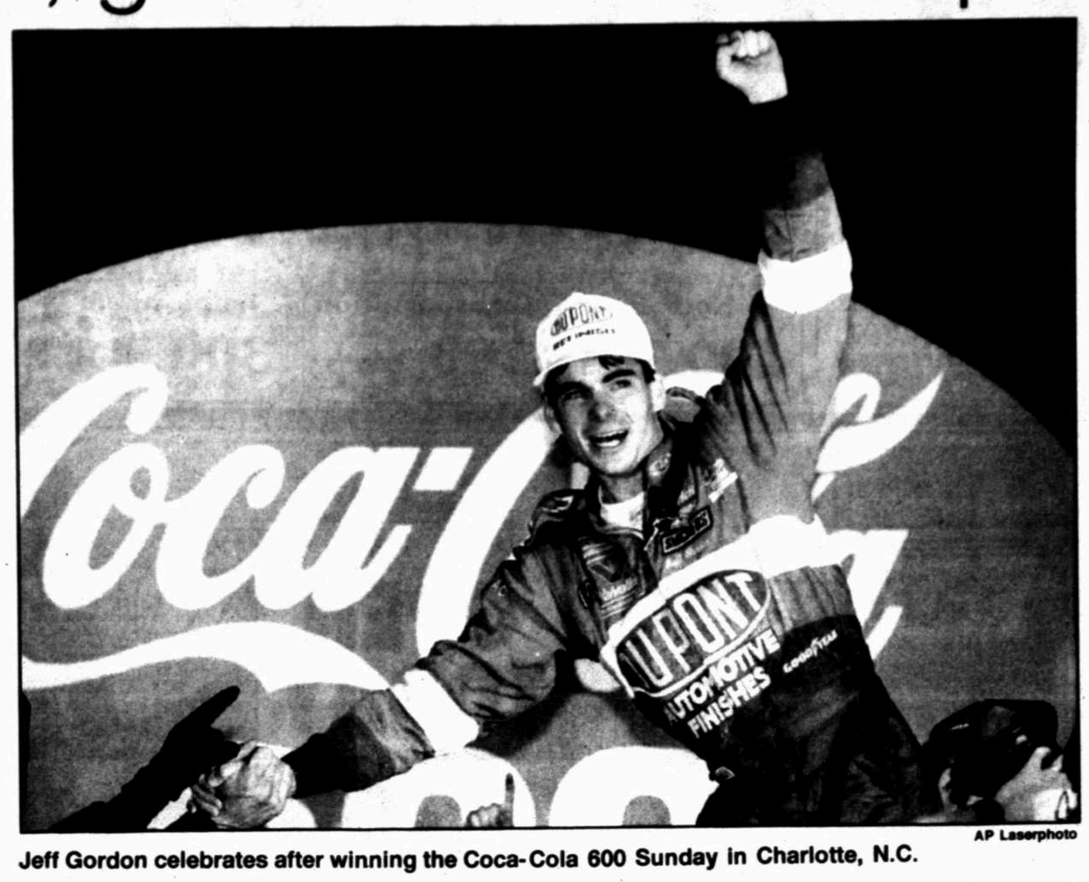

"All in all, I've got no regrets," he said. "I would just like to have finished this race."

Gordon led four times for 16 laps.

One of the strongest drivers early was Rick Mast, who was riding on Hoosiers, but he hit some debris and developed cooling system problems.

A nine-car wreck on lap 191 knocked Mast and several other drivers out of the chase. The wreck occurred when Mark Martin, running with the lead pack, blew a tire going down the backstretch and slowed going into turn three. As the drivers behind him scrambled to slow down and avoid him, Earnhardt ran out of room on the low side of the track and tapped Martin in the rear end, sending him into a spin that collected seven other cars.

Nobody was injured, but the wreck effectively ended Earnhardt's bid for his third consecutive Coca-Cola 600 victory.

John Andretti survives marathon racing day

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — John Andretti held up fine Sunday in his quest to become the first driver to complete an 1,100-mile racing adventure. His cars didn't do as well.

After completing 490 out of a possible 500 miles for a 10th-place finish in the Indianapolis 500, Andretti caught a plane southeast to Concord to compete in the Coca-Cola 600. A broken crankshaft ended his day on lap 220, or 330 miles. That dropped him to 36th place.

In all, he drove 820 miles. A good day for the common motorist, but far short of what Andretti had hoped for.

"Yeah, it was worth it," Andretti said to a mob of reporters in front of the tractor-trailer that soon took his Chevrolet back to the team's headquarters. "There's no question that it was worth it. We didn't run as good as I wanted to down here, and we didn't run as good at Indy as I would have hoped. But it's not from a lack of effort from my guys.

"Physically, I'm fine," he said. "Mentally, you want more. You want to run better. You want to be more up front."

After completing his run at Indy, Andretti caught a helicopter from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway that took him to a chartered jet for Concord, an adventure that got a little anxious because he said he sat in a traffic jam for 20 minutes. Throughout the trip, he received fluids intravenously to keep him hydrated.

Once he landed in North Carolina, he took a helicopter to the track and landed just moments after the rest of the field had been introduced to the huge crowd.

"I'm not tired at all," said Andretti, who started 10th and moved up to as high as third during the Indy 500. "I'm disappointed, but we'll get over that. ... I knew the car was going to run all day. At the beginning, we had a pretty good race car, but we couldn't get it straightened out to go fast all day."

Andretti blamed his problems at Indianapolis on a slick track which hurt the car's handling and moved him back into the pack.

"I'm excited that nothing happened here to detour my plans," said Andretti, whose Indy efforts were watched carefully by his father, Aldo, who worked as the flag man on his pit crew.

"You have to be happy with the results here," said Aldo, the twin brother of Mario Andretti, whose last of 29 Indy 500s ended with another frustrating breakdown early in the race. "John did everything he could, he kept it out of trouble, which was an accomplishment with the way debris was flying around today."

When the Indy 500 ended, there was little time for reviewing what happened. After removing his helmet, answering a few questions and wiping his face with a cold towel handed to him by his wife, Nancy, Andretti boarded a golf cart en route to a helicopter. All the way, he was receiving an IV from a bag hanging overhead and administered by a nurse from Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis.

At 4:48 p.m. EDT about an hour and 40 minutes after he finished at Indianapolis, Andretti landed in a charcoal gray helicopter on the grass inside the first turn at the Charlotte Motor Speedway. In dramatic fashion, Andretti's helicopter appeared from the northeast, swept over the backstretch and swooped down over the crowd in turn one before landing. When he emerged from the aircraft, the crowd, which was already standing, gave him a loud and rousing welcome.

Andretti was half dressed in the colors of his Winston Cup racing team when his helicopter landed. He was greeted almost immediately by Charlotte Motor Speedway president H.A. "Humpy" Wheeler. He made a quick trot to an all-terrain vehicle which sped him to his Chevrolet.

Because Andretti missed the 2 p.m. driver's meeting, which is mandatory, his car was pushed from the ninth spot it earned in qualifying to the 43rd position at the back of the pack. That was the least of his worries by the time he got in, however, as he explained his simple strategy.

"Just try to hang out there and do 600 miles," Andretti said.

He didn't make it.

Andretti's goal for 1994 was lost. His mission for 1995 was clear.

"I'm looking forward to next May and seeing if we can do this all over again," he said.

INDY: Fittipaldi falters down stretch victory to team owner Penske, who took advantage of a loophole in the Indianapolis rules and made a big stakes gamble, putting millions of dollars into the development of the Mercedes engine for just this one event.

(From 1C)

The payoff, worth an estimated $1.2 million, came Sunday as the 32-year-old Unser gave Penske his record 10th Indy win and added this victory to his triumph in 1992 in the closest finish ever.

"Thank you to Mercedes Benz," said Unser. "You know, they made it easy to pass everybody down the straightaway. This is a super car. It went the distance."

The win also added to the Unser family's resume, which includes three wins by Little Al's uncle, Bobby.

"As soon as you got off line just a little bit ... it just sucked you out there like a vacuum cleaner," the younger Unser said, explaining what happened to his teammate.

Fittipaldi held a lead of more than a full lap on the 2½-mile oval when his car suddenly drifted high coming out of turn four, the right rear slapping the wall. Fittipaldi, uninjured, coasted to a stop just 70 yards from the finish line as the more than 400,000 spectators roared.

"The car was flying. I hit an apron," Fittipaldi said.

The two-time winner from Brazil said of his Penske-Mercedes that so dominated the race, "It was beautiful. It should be one and two."

Bobby Rahal, driving a year-old Ilmor-powered Penske racer, finished a lap down in third, followed by Jimmy Vasser, Robby Gordon, Michael Andretti and Teo Fabi.

Fittipaldi, who led 145 laps and combined with Unser to lead 193 of the 200 race laps, wound up 17th, while the third Marlboro Team Penske car, driven by Paul Tracy, went out with a mechanical problem and finished 23rd.

Villeneuve, the youngest driver in the race at 23 and the son of the late Formula One star Gilles Villeneuve, led the other seven laps.

In Victory Lane, Al Unser Sr., celebrating his 55th birthday just a week after announcing his retirement as a driver, said, "This is one I'll never forget.

Asked if he could have caught his teammate, Unser Jr. said, "No. He was running awfully good. Emmo seemed to pull away at will. It was going to be awfully tough."

The runaway by the Penske-Mercedes was reminiscent of 1967, when Parnelli Jones, driving Andy Granatelli's revolutionary turbine car, led 170 laps and had nearly lapped the field before the failure of a $6 part in the gearbox ruined the show.

In the next two years, the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club legislated the turbine right out of the race. Nobody would be surprised if the same thing happens to the stock-type, push-rod Mercedes engines that went from the drawing board to the race track in nine months.

Unser and Fittipaldi shot ahead before reaching the flagstand at the start, with Unser easily leading into the first turn and Raul Boesel, the other front-row starter, falling far behind.

The field strung out by the end of the first lap and there were small battles all over the 2½-mile oval.

On lap seven, rookie Dennis Vitolo pulled off a spectacular feat, doing a 360-degree spin off turn four, getting the car back under control and driving on as the first caution flag came out.

Roberto Guerrero, the holder of the Indianapolis one- and four-lap qualifying records, spun on lap 22 as he drove in a pack of traffic through the short chute straightaway at the south end of the oval. He slid backwards more than 1,000 feet, scrubbing off speed, before tapping the wall. The Colombian-born driver walked away from the accident.

The leaders made their first pit stops during the ensuing caution period, with plenty of trouble popping up.

First, Unser stalled and was slow leaving his pit. Then Mario Andretti, running in his 29th and last Indy race, and then Tracy, made long stops.

Andretti, the 1969 race winner whose ill fortune ever since has reached legendary proportions, sat frustrated in his car while his crew worked frantically on an ignition problem. Finally, they gave up and Andretti, retiring at the end of the season from Indy-car racing, emerged sadly from the car to a huge cheer. He unofficially finish 32nd.

"It's a big letdown, especially when it's something as stupid as this," Andretti told the crowd, which rewarded him with a chant of "Mario! Mario! Mario!"

"The emotion that I felt from the crowd just made all these years worthwhile in every way. It almost overcame all these disappointments," Mario said.

Meanwhile, on lap 30, there was a mean-looking crash in turn one when Dominic Dobson and Mike Groff hooked wheels. Groff's crew said their driver first touched wheels with Lyn St. James. It then appeared Dobson pinched down on Groff.

After the two came together, Dobson's car veered up into the wall, hitting hard, rear first, then slid along the wall. Groff's car spun and came up to the wall, hitting it lightly and sliding into Dobson.

Dobson had minor bruises to both legs, while Groff had an unspecified minor injury to his left foot. Both were checked at the infield hospital, with Dobson released and Groff held temporarily for observation.

By lap 75, Fittipaldi and Unser were the only cars on the lead lap and appeared to have everything totally under control, although Fittipaldi was nearly half a lap ahead of his teammate.

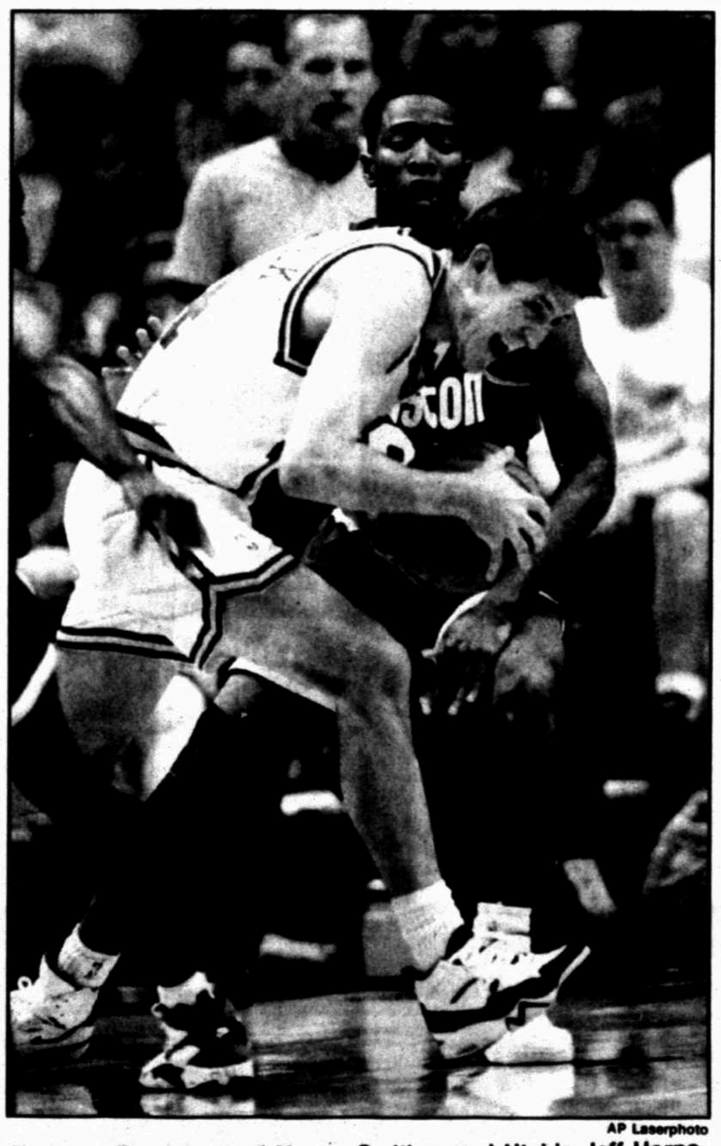

Nigel Mansell, the 1992 Formula One champion who finished third at Indy last year as a rookie, had a stop-and-go penalty early for passing illegally under a caution flag. He fell all the way from fourth to 13th place, but drove like a man on a mission and regained third place, still a lap behind, on lap 87.

Moments later, a weird series of events happened almost simultaneously.

Rookie Hideshi Matsuda, who had been running in the top 10 most of the day, spun into the first-turn wall.

At nearly the same moment, Paul Tracy, the third Penske driver, coasted to the pits with smoke pouring from the rear of the car, through for the day.

for that."

Houston led by at least six in the fourth until the final two minutes, and they were up five with 26.8 seconds left after Horry made a foul shot.

Utah then turned the ball over, and Olajuwon, who should have held on to the ball so Houston could run out the clock, instead opted to try a layup in a 2-on-1 break.

He missed, and Utah got the ball back to set up Stockton's 3-pointer.

The Rockets can win their first conference title since 1986 by winning Game 5 on Tuesday night at the Summit in Houston.

"We feel we have one game to win in three," Smith said. "Right now we feel real comfortable and confident as well. We'll be very, very aggressive in our game on Tuesday."

Utah made several attempts to tie it in he fourth quarter, but the Jazz could never qute get there.

Jay Humphries made a 3-pointer with 5:33 left, cutting the deficit to 70-66. Mario Elie came back with a 3-pointer for Houston 18 seconds later.

Houston led 75-70 with a little less than four minutes left but committed turnovers on three straight possessions. Stockton's steal and layup with 1:59 left made it 75-72, and Olajuwon was fouled when he shot against a triple-team 15 seconds later. He made both to restore the 5-point lead. Stockton missed an open 18-footer and fouled Cassell on Houston's next posession. Cassell made both, making the lead 7 with 1:22 left.

Malone scored on a tip-in with 41 seconds left, and Hornacek made a foul shots with 29.6 seconds left to make it 79-75 before Horry made one from the line.

That set the stage for the final frantic seconds.

Referee Ed Rush said the officials were aware that the clock hadn't started.

"In the back of out heads we were counting. ... We had it as about five seconds. If something had happened, a dead ball or a score, we would have corrected it," Rush said.

"The timer didn't start the clock. We asked him about it and he just didn't start the clock."

With Malone shackled by Olajuwon, Hornacek took over offensively for Utah in the third quarter by making four of his first five shots — all jumpers from at least 15 feet out. But trailing 50-49 and with a chance to go ahead, Malone missed from 22 feet, and Hornacek hit a 17-footer.

Maxwell came back with a 3-pointer for Houston, Malone missed two foul shots and Smith hit a 20-footer to make it 55-49. Utah finally reached 50 points on Felton Spencer's foul shot with 1:11 left in the third.

Smith then made two foul shots, Malone shot an airball from 4 feet away, Smith nailed a 3-pointer with seven seconds left and Humphries launched an airball from 25 feet to send the Rockets into the fourth quarter with a 60-50 lead.

The second quarter, in which Houston outscored Utah 13-10, was the lowest scoring quarter in NBA playoff history.

The Rockets held Utah to just 10 points in the period on 4-for-20 shooting, but their lead never got to more than eight because they shot only 5-for-20 from the field, including 0-for-4 from 3-point range.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

A CHOICE ROUTE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram is seeking a responsible person to fill a motor-route in the rural area southwest of Midland by June 1, 1994. Be an independent contractor with potential average earnings of $200 per week take home money. CALL NOW!

WHAT HOURS?

Papers must be delivered to 4 stores and approx. 340 residents daily. Pick up the papers at 1 a.m. in the morning and you can be done in three hours. That leaves your days virtually open for other daytime activities, such as a part-time or even full-time job.

INTERESTED?

★If you are a person who wants/needs good part time income.

★If you are a person who can't justify day care and a job

★If you are 55 and older wanting regular exercise and neighborhood involvement (with added income).

★Enjoy making lifetime friendships and earn extra income to make use for house payments, car payments, new furniture, etc.

Applicants must be serious, have an economical, dependable car and a $100 REFUNDABLE deposit. For more information and/or an interview appointment, please call Marvin Wooten at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 915/687-8805 (after hours leave message and I'll return your call).
