Hopefuls to work together

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson pledged Tuesday to work together to defeat President Reagan in the fall, but a generally conciliatory Jackson said their meeting left "some matters as yet unresolved."

The two Democratic presidential hopefuls met for almost two hours in a hotel here and then told reporters that progress had been made.

"There are times to compete. There are times to challenge. There are times to cooperate," Jackson said at a news conference. "There are still some matters yet unresolved. The picture is becoming clearer each day."

Mondale went through a laundry list of issues — including the economy and foreign policy — on which he and Jackson are in broad agreement. "We are pledged to work together toward these objectives," he said.

"Together, we will prevail in November," Jackson added.

Later, at the annual convention of the National Assocation for the Advancement of Colored People, Mondale said, "The presidential campaign of Jesse Jackson is a victory — not just for black America — but for all of America."

Jackson also was addressing the convention Tuesday.

During the meeting between the two candidates, Jackson appeared to have made several concessions to Mondale on such issues as party rules governing delegate selection, runoff primaries and Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan.

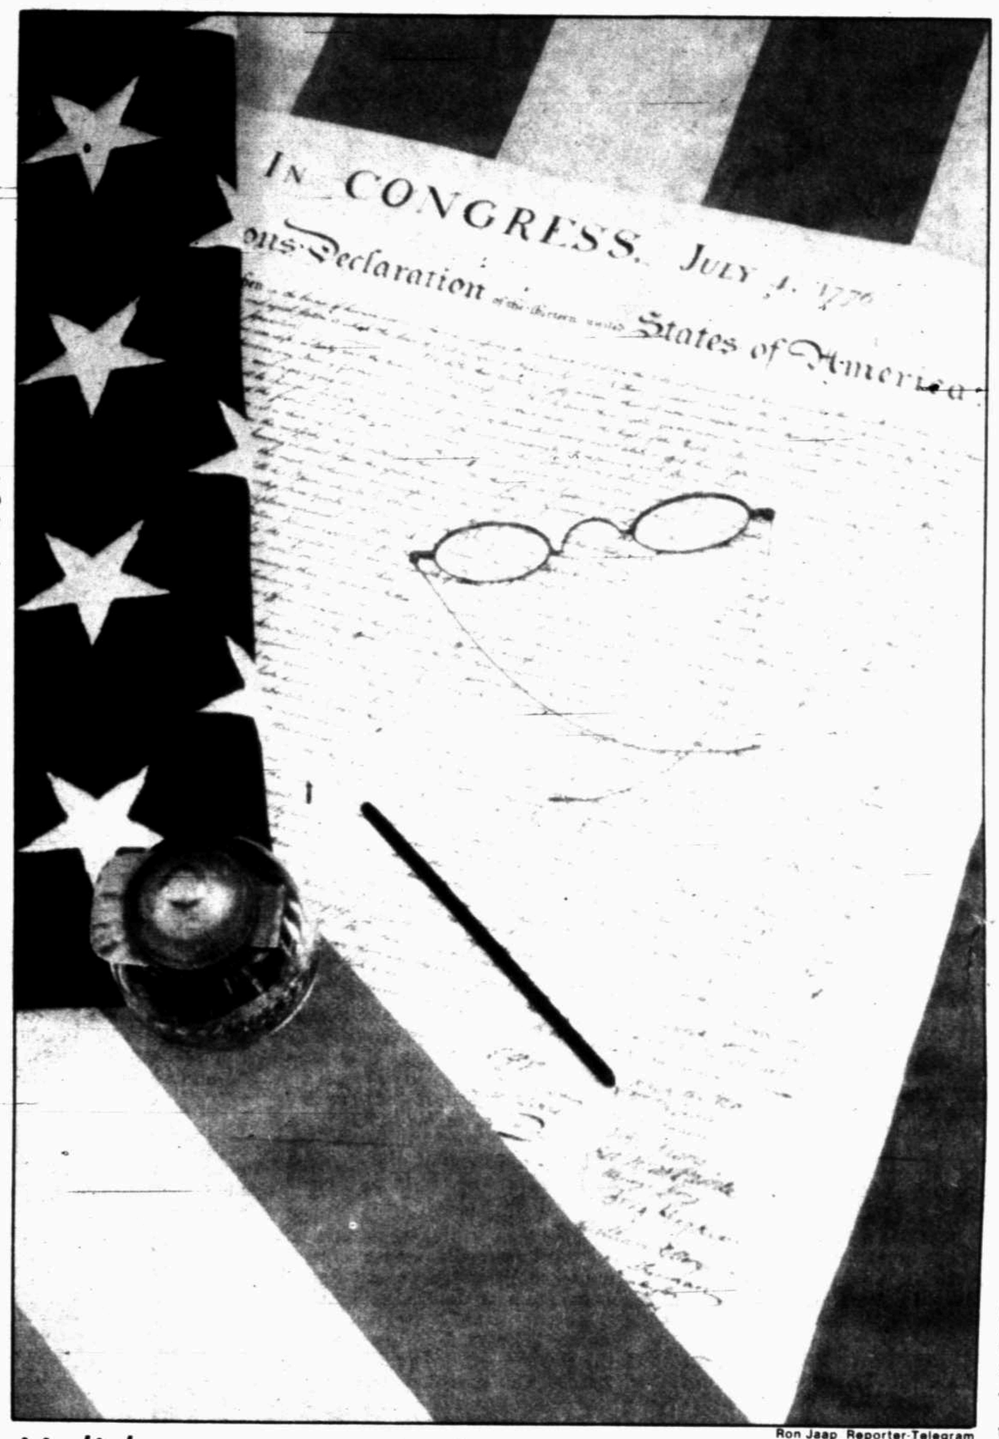

Although he said the fight over party rules is not over, Jackson conceded, "Mr. Mondale won the nomination so far fairly."

"So far it is unresolved but I am satisfied with the process and with the progress," Jackson said of the rules fight.

While pledging to continue to fight second primaries and other southern voting practices that he says are discriminatory, Jackson said, "there will ultimately be common ground on that issue" of runoffs.

And he said there may be instances in which runoff primaries, used primarily in the South, are "all right." Previously, Jackson has said that he flatly opposes runoff primaries and that the issue would be a litmus test to determine whether he would support the eventual Democratic presidential nominee.

Legislature passes tax increase bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Power and persuasion by legislative leaders pushed a $4.8 billion tax increase through the House and Senate on Tuesday to pay for better highways and public school education.

Final Senate approval came 22-9 in mid-afternoon. The House followed Tuesday evening, sending the bill to Gov. Mark White on a 81-65 vote.

Many spectators, including a number of teachers, responded with cheers and applause on the final day of a special legislative session.

"This has got to be one of the greatest days in the history of Texas," White exclaimed. "I feel about as good as I ever have."

The tax hike would be the first major increase since 1971. It was adopted after White insisted that legislators pay for the most extensive school reform in 35 years to reverse what he perceived as declining quality in public education.

White's power was felt in public and behind closed doors as he apparently let it be known that failure to finish the tasks he had listed for the 30-day session would only result in his calling another session.

Legislators chose to approve a tax bill and go home for the Fourth of July holiday.

Celebrations began early as California sparkling wine was delivered to some lawmakers' offices at mid-afternoon, but not all legislators were happy with the tax hike.

"It's going to be difficult to explain a 0.125 sales tax on everybody. I'm sure everybody in here would like a pay increase. The teachers want one. I want one," said Rep. Jimmy Mankins, D-Kilgore.

"The economy is not in shape at this time for this kind of an increase. But there's no particular hurry in this. It's hard on the working people," Mankins said.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said he wasn't happy with every aspect of the final tax bill but believed it would accomplish its purpose.

"When we were going through the last regular (legislative) session, we all made a commitment ... that we would come down here and put together a good, quality education package and fund a highway bill. I think we've done that," Schlueter said.

"This bill will put $400 million new dollars into the highway system in the first year. It will put $800 million into education," Schlueter said, adding that it also would provide money to equalize state aid to poor districts "and that's something we had no choice on."

What may have been he final hurdle was cleared when Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Comptroller Bob Bullock and others persauded Sen. John Leedom to back off from a threatened filibuster that could have tied up the session until time ran out at midnight Tuesday.

What changed Leedom's mind was a Senate vote to transfer $32 million from the state prison system to general revenue. The transfe allowed legislators to cut that same sum out of the overall tax bill.

"It's a small amount in a $5 billion tax bill but there is principle involved," said Leedom, R-Dallas. He said the transfer set a precedent for future Legislatures to look for unspent state agency money before raising taxes.

Ruling may not have local impact

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN

Midland women who feel a recent Supreme Court decision opens the door for them to join the Jaycees may find that door shut in their faces if they attempt to become members.

The local impact of Tuesday's ruling — that states may force some male-only organizations to admit women — was uncertain.

"We take our instructions from our national organization," said Kelly Fish, immediate past president of the Midland Jaycees. "We'll just carry on until we hear something from there.

"I feel the decision should have been left to the Jaycees and that the government has overstepped its authority," he added. "The Constitution provides for freedom of assembly with whom people choose. Had it been left to the Jaycees, they would have allowed women into membership anyway.

"In recent years a trend has been established in votes taken at national conventions and as years went by more and more wanted women as full members," Fish said.

Such a vote taken in 1975 showed about 90 percent of the Jaycees were against admitting women, while in 1981 67 percent were opposed to it, he said.

"I think if a vote were taken today there would be a majority of the men that would want the women in there. It's a professional organization. The guys are open-minded and realize that women have a lot to offer the organization."

Fish admitted, however, that a poll taken during a local meeting last month indicated little, if any, support for admitting female members. "But the reason why is because we have a strong Jaycee chapter and we also have a very strong Jaycee Women chapter and they (the women) are afforded similar opportunities. It's a parallel, mirror organization, practically. It has similar goals and objectives that we have.

Jaycee women "are not really overjoyed about it either," he added. "They're happy with what they're doing separately."

Tami Beck, president of the Jaycee Women, agreed. "We like keeping our organizations separate. We have everything to offer now in our organization that they have. I don't anticipate anyone trying to go and join their organization. Locally, everybody wants to stay the same. I think if the two clubs were combined we couldn't do as much for the community.

"Dallas and Austin both had women try to join the Jaycees and in one case the chapter folded," she said. "After women were allowed to join, membership went from about 700 to nothing. Everybody quit because they didn't want women, but there was nothing they could do about it. I hope we don't have a problem with it here."

If membership is extended to include women, Fish said the men would get used to the idea eventually. "I think it would be like the military academies. At first it would be tough on them (the women)...but I think they would eventually prove themselves."

In the meantime, he said, if a woman approaches the organization seeking to become a member, "I'd tell her she's going to have to wait until we get instructions from our national and state organizations before we can accept them."

White: This one of best days in Texas history

AUSTIN (AP) — A beaming Gov. Mark White, who called the 30-day special legislative session which ended Tuesday with a sweeping school reform plan and a $4.8 billion tax increase, led the cheering as several high-tech companies joined in.

"This has got to be one of the best days in the history of Texas," White said.

The school reforms grew out of a year-long study by the Select Committee on Public Education, headed by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot, who said Tuesday he also was pleased with the reform bill and tax package.

White, who won his 1982 election in part due to the support of teachers, had made school reform and teacher pay raises a top priority of his administration.

Also praising the school reforms were officials of a trio of high-technology companies.

It was "farsighted legislation which takes the Texas public education system a significant step toward becoming one of the finest in the nation," said Bobby R. Inman, president of the Austin-based Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp.

Mostek Corp. of Carrollton, a member of the MCC computer consortium, also praised the Legislature.

"As one of the major high technology companies based in Texas, we feel that a strong public education system is not only vital for the economic growth of Texas, but is also a key factor in our own growth plans for the future," said Mostek president Harold L. Ergott Jr.

The president of Lockheed's Missiles, Space and Electronic Systems group, Robert A. Fuhrman, said the bill would continue the growth of high-tech industry in Texas.

Firemen make money selling firecrackers

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The West Odessa Volunteer Fire Department is selling fireworks to raise money to pay for firefighting equipment.

And several churches should profit from sales of pyrotechnics in this region of Ector County outside the west city limits of Odessa.

The common denominator drawing such unlikely participants, along with private businessmen, to open up roadside fireworks stands is money.

The volunteer firefighters made about $6,000 from last July Fourth's sales, said fireman Mike Foster. "Our county commissioners only allow us so much money," leaving the group to its own devices to make up the rest of the budget, he said.

"Outside of our barbecue, this is probably one of our biggest money-making projects. It's just helping us cover our costs," said Foster, recalling more than 20 grass fires the volunteers extinguished on July 4, 1983.

The group has not been called to a firework-related blaze yet this year, but Foster said he and his fellow firefighters were resting for an expected onslaught.

Foster estimated that three of four persons choosing the fire department's stand over about 20 others in the area (some with cheaper prices) do so to support the group's efforts.

Putting their own profits aside, other firework salesmen supported the volunteers.

"I guess if you can't beat 'em, join 'em," said Millie Harkness, who runs a stand with her husband, Duke.

"They're a volunteer fire department. They've got to make money somehow and it's a good way to make money," said Randy Bowerman, who said his profits benefit the First United Pentecostal Church.

Calling the firefighters his toughest competition, Bowerman said, "People come and buy there because they know they're protecting their homes and families."

A veteran of six years selling to the West Odessa market, Bowerman saw no problem with his and other churches making money off the sale of fireworks, while it was illegal to set them off in Midland or Odessa.

"It's a good profit for the church," he said, recalling that in 1982 he made $10,000 selling the pyrotechnics from June 24-July 4, the time period set (along with Dec. 20-Jan. 1) by the state for legalized sale.

"People get paranoid about it," said Bowerman, "It's a fun thing to celebrate our independence."

"Kids can get on their bikes and use them in the wrong way, too," he said.

"It's a very competitive market out there," said Bowerman. "I've tried to beat everybody's prices." He also has turned to painted signs, flashing lights, flying streamers and incentives for quantity buyers.

Other stands use clowns, free balloons and other extras to attract business.

"It's a lot of fun. I enjoy sitting out here and talking to people," he said. "A lot of Midland people come over here to buy."

The reactions of youth marveling over the merchandise are what Harkness said he enjoyed the most. "Their eyes sure light up," he said.

Admitting he was in the fireworks business for the money, Harkness said roadside salesmen mark the merchandise up 50 percent over wholesale prices, but predicted his profit at $500 after cost for 10 days work.

The exact amount the state collects from its 5 percent sales tax was not available from state offices. Tax revenues from these sales are grouped with others in a single classification, according to a spokesman in the State Comptroller's Office.

Air Florida files for bankruptcy

MIAMI (AP) — Air Florida, which grew almost overnight from a commuter carrier into an international airline, retreated into bankruptcy court Tuesday, grounding its jets, laying off all 1,200 employees and stranding hundreds of travelers.

The airline filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code shortly before noon, about 15 minutes after notifying employees of its decision. In its petition, the Miami-based carrier said it had $145,233,000 in assets and $221,421,000 in liabilities. The airline has a secured debt of $140,316,000.

The airline's grounding marked the third collapse of a major U.S. airline since deregulation took effect in 1978. Braniff International and Continental Airlines previously sought protection under the bankruptcy laws, but both have returned to the air.

Air Florida has "suspended operations on a temporary basis," said Robert P. Silverberg, general counsel and corporate secretary. But he said the company hoped to resume some flights as soon as possible.

Air Florida's 11 jetliners were serving 35 cities in 13 countries, primarily in the Caribbean and Central America, when it stopped operating.

"As far as I'm concerned it's theft," said Doris Aranda of Chicago, who was heading to Belize when she got stuck in Miami.

"Instead of St. Croix, it looks like a weekend in Florida," said Jack Simpson of Baltimore, who was stranded in Miami International Airport.

Dana Bernadel, a young Haitian woman traveling to New York, simply looked bewildered.

"I have no money to buy a new ticket," she said. "I don't know what I'm going to do. They (Air Florida) told me Eastern would accept my ticket, but Eastern says no."

Silverberg did not know how many Air Florida passengers were stranded, but said Pan American World Airways had agreed to accept passengers on a "space available" basis.

Jeff DeKnight, director of Air Florida's Miami station, said Republic Airlines also would fly stranded Air Florida passengers.

At Washington's National Airport, ticket agents told passengers that Air Florida had suspended operations until Friday and that Pan Am would honor Air Florida tickets only on flights to Florida.

Air Florida spokeswoman Robin Cohn said some of the laid-off employees could be brought back to "get us through this time period as needed."

People rushed the Air Florida counter at Miami International Airport shortly after news of the airline's action, trying to cash tickets they had already bought.

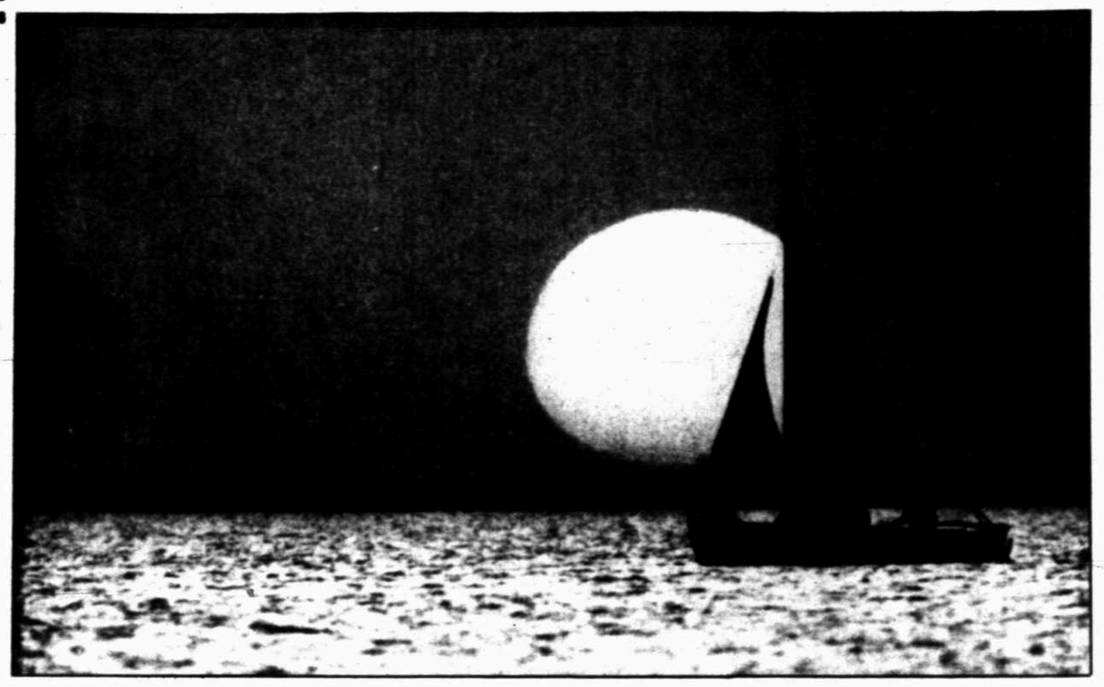

About 200 people bombarded Air Florida ticket agents with questions, but they "seemed pretty calm," said Miami police Sgt. Ray Eggler.

Silverberg said the federal bankruptcy court must decide what will happen to people holding Air Florida tickets.

Air Florida was once among the nation's fastest growing airlines, but it had lost $134.8 million in the last three years — $8.4 million in the first quarter of 1984.

The airline also suffered a setback after one of its jetliners crashed into the Potomac River as it flew into Washington, D.C., on Jan. 13, 1982. Seventy-eight people died and five were plucked from the river in a harrowing rescue recorded by television cameras. The accident was blamed on ice building up on wings.

Silverberg would not point to any specific creditor or event that prompted the filing. "I think the history of Air Florida is pretty well known," he said, adding a "period of rapid growth coincided with an economic downturn."

Midlanders should be served hot Fourth of July

Along with hot dogs and hamburgers cooked outside on the grill and cold beer stashed in the cooler, Midlanders should be served up typical fare for a July Fourth holiday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting a mostly sunny sky today, with a 20 percent chance of rain. The high temperature will be in the lower 90s.

The thermometer tonight should drop to the upper 60s. Added to that forecast is a dash of a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Thursday's temperatures will rise to the low 90s, with only a slight chance of thunderstorms.

The record high for Tuesday's date was 106, set in 1983. The record low for today's date was 60, set in 1972.

STATE

Most Texans basked under sunny skies Tuesday but clouds, accompanied by scattered thundershowers, dotted the Gulf Coast and far western sections of the state.

Temperatures hovered in the 90s over most of Texas except the far West and northwest sections, where the mercury steadied in the 80s. Winds were mainly southerly with speeds between 10 and 20 mph.

The forecast for the Fourth of July holiday was a duplicate of Tuesday's weather, with hot and sunny weather expected to prevail statewide.

But there were some exceptions. The National Weather Service predicted a few showers again along the coast but forecast the rains would be scattered.

Regions in northwest Texas, in bad need of water, might also get some relief through Thursday. The weather service said scattered afternoon and evening showers were expected in northwest and southeast parts of North Texas.

Some showers were also not in store for South Texas but were to be mainly confined over the Coastal Plains.

Some rain activity was also predicted for West Texas, where highs would climb to the 90s and near 103 in extreme southern areas.

Highs statewide will be mainly in the 90s, with lows again in the 70s.

NATION

Temperatures broke the 100-degree mark Tuesday over California's inland San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys. At noon, Needles and Palm Springs had readings of 106 degrees, while Imperial reached 105.

The 100-degree temperatures are expected to return today for most of inland California.

A cold front pushed thunderstorms across the central Plains and the uppper Mississippi Valley on Tuesday morning. Thunderstorms developed over the Eastern Seaboard and the Gulf Coast region.

Early afternoon temperatures in the 90s covered the South, while readings in the 70s and 80s prevailed in the Northeast and the Midwest. The Northwestern states had fair weather, with sunny skies and temperatures in the 60s and 70s.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 59 degrees at Bellingham, Wash., and Newport, Ore., to 106 degrees at Needles and Palm Springs.

The forecast for today calls for widely scattered thunderstorms over the eastern half of the country, with showers and thunderstorms more numerous over the Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes region.

A few thunderstorms will linger over the southern Plateau, the central Rockies, and the central Plains. It will be sunny over the Western states and the northern Plains.

Hot weather will continue over the Southwest, with readings over 100 scattered over the southern Plateau and California's inland valleys. In the rest of the South, temperatures will be in the 90s. Temperatures in the northern half of the nation will be in the 80s with a few 70s readings in the upper Mississippi Valley and the coast of Washington.

One town marks Fourth with roach race

The Associated Press

Holiday crowds will cheer the Beach Boys at the Washington Monument, President Reagan at the Daytona International Speedway and racing roaches in a town in Indiana.

July Fourth falls on a Wednesday this year, but that won't stop Americans from celebrating Independence Day in a variety of ways, some zany, some sober.

The central Indiana town of Roachdale, for example, will sponsor its third annual cockroach race. Contestants must bring their own bugs.

In Yorktown, Va., where an American victory over British troops ended the Revolutionary War in 1781, U.S. Navy brass will commission the guided missile destroyer Yorktown.

Near Charlottesville, Va., the home of Thomas Jefferson, Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr. will speak at the annual naturalization ceremony. About 100 people will be sworn in as U.S. citizens.

Reagan plans to be at the Daytona International Speedway for the annual July Fourth Firecracker 400 stock car race. The president is to give the traditional "Gentlemen, start your engines" by radio while flying to Daytona Beach, Fla. He will arrive after the race is under way.

In the nation's capital, the Beach Boys will entertain the crowds at the Washington Monument. The group will be part of an afternoon program also featuring Three Dog Night, Julio Iglesias, America and The O'Jays. George Jones, Roy Clark, Mel Tillis and other country performers will be on an evening bill.

More than a quarter-million people are expected to crowd onto the grassy shores of the Charles River in Boston to hear the Boston Pops.

Metropolitan District Commissioner William J. Geary predicted the concert will draw more than the 250,000 who attended the Bicentennial concert in 1976.

While vessels in New York Harbor join in a salute to the Statue of Liberty, workmen will remove the statue's 21-foot-tall torch as part of the restoration of the statue for its centennial in 1986. A replica of the torch will be lit until a new, gold-plated torch is in place.

An elaborate USA Week birthday salute at the New Orleans fair will be topped by a fireworks and laser display tonight. Fair officials are hoping to draw a crowd of 100,000 for the first time to the financially struggling 184-day-event.

A Pete Fountain Look-a-Like Contest is scheduled at the fair and one contestant has reportedly shaved his head to more closely resemble the bald Fountain, the city's favorite clarinet player.

The First Annual Fourth of July Tube Parade will float down the Chattachoochee River beginning in the north Georgia mountain town of Helen. And in Augusta about 2,000 entrants are expected for the 12th running of the Great Savannah River Raft Race.

Many of the July 4 events in Maryland will have a double significance, since Marylanders are celebrating their state's 350th birthday. A 1,700-shell fireworks extravaganza in Baltimore's rejuvenated Inner Harbor will salute both celebrations.

A huge banana split at Fort George Mead, Md., will use 200 pounds of bananas, 39 gallons of ice cream, 75 jars of sauce and 35 jars of nuts, according to Lt. Susan Gardziola, the fort's spokeswoman. The public is invited to sample the treat for only 25 cents a person.

In another double celebration, a two-hour parade this morning in Honolulu will also commemorate the 25th anniversary of Hawaii's statehood.

The International Association of Lion Clubs, the largest service organization in the world with 1.4 million members, will kick off its 67th convention in San Francisco with a parade. First lady Nancy Reagan will receive on Thursday the Lions' 1984 Humanitarian Award, the highest honor a non-Lion can receive, for her anti-drug crusade among youth.

In Rhode Island, a British brass ensemble will join the 199th Bristol Civic, Military and Firemen's Parade. The town on Narragansett Bay begins its July 4th by ringing church bells at 6 a.m.

Later, Jackson told reporters that he would support a ticket including Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, the other major rival for the presidential nomination, if Mondale wanted Hart as his vice presidential running mate.

"If the final arrangement were Gary Hart, I certainly would support him as opposed to sitting out," Jackson said.

In a syndicated television interview on "The Phil Donahue Show" after his meeting with Mondale, Jackson said there was "some objective basis" to conclude that Hart would be the strongest vice presidential nominee as a running mate for Mondale because of Hart's vote-getting ability.

Both men said comments made by Farrakhan, a Jackson supporter, were raised during the meeting. Mondale said he repeated his call for everyone to repudiate Farrakhan and his statements about Judaism and Israel.

Jackson said Farrakhan should not be Mondale's problem.

"I do not think it is fair to burden Mr. Mondale with the politics of any minister," said Jackson, a Baptist minister.

But later, in his speech to the NAACP, Mondale made a plea for reassembling "the coalition of conscience in America," which he said included blacks and Jews.

"We must not allow our coalition of conscience to divide over racism and anti-Semitism," Mondale said, referring particularly to the Ku Klux Klan and Farrakhan's statements.

Mondale campaign manager Robert Beckel said the former vice president "did not make any deals" during his meeting with Jackson, but that it now appeared disruptive fights could be avoided at the convention. But he did say there would be some arguments about specifics in the party platform at the convention in San Francisco.

"We have crossed a very significant threshhold and we now look forward to a good convention," said Mondale campaign manager Robert Beckel. "I think Rev. Jackson was looking ahead today with a very strong spirit of unity."

Mondale said they also discussed the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco, which begins July 16.

"We are working together now to make the progress that we need to put this convention together, to make a statement about our nation's future, and to beat Mr. Reagan," said Mondale.

"If we pursue the course we have discussed today, our convention will be a livelier convention," added Jackson. "Every debate does not mean division. Debate really means democracy."

He added: "We are working diligently and effectively to build the delicate coalition that is... the Democratic Party. I feel certain we are going to achieve that end."

Despite his concession that Mondale had apparently won the nomination, Jackson said, "My campaign is alive...I expect to speak at the convention."

Jackson said he gave a list of black and Hispanic women to Mondale and asked them to consider them for the vice presidential slot. At the news conference, Mondale did not comment on the list.

Although Mondale has interviewed two women for the vice presidency and is scheduled to meet with a third — Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins — on Friday, none was black or Hispanic.

Mondale insisted that the meeting was not a negotiating session.

"This was not a negotiation," he said. "It was not anything of that kind."

TAX

On Tuesday, however, the $4.8 billion compromise surfaced that would cover $2.8 billion in education reform costs over three years, as well as paying for upgrading Texas' vast hghway system.

The final tax proposal, worked out in Hobby's office by informal teams of negotiators from the House and Senate, would raise the state sales tax from 4 percent to 4.125 percent.

Over half of the additional tax revenue would come from increasing the motor fuels tax from 5 cents to 10 cents a gallon; raising the motor vehicle sales and rental tax from 4 percent to 5 percent; and increasing auto registration fees by switching from a weight to model year system.

Other last-minute compromises built into the tax bill would tax repairs on tangible property, excluding autos; and would levy taxes on diesel fuel for intercity buses; amusement tickets; ready-to-eat food in vending machines; and newspaper and magazine newstand and subscription sales.

Taxes also would go up on liquor, wine, beer, cigarettes, mixed drinks and hotel-motel rooms.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, said the second Senate bill was about $30 million less than the first one, and legislators made up the difference by reducing the highway appropriation.

Left out of the bill was a controversial proposal to place newspaper, radio and television advertising under the sales tax. But lawmakers decided to apply the sales tax to laundry and dry cleaning services.

Voting on a tax bill was a new experience to most legislators. Only four of 31 senators and a few of the 150 House members remained from the 1971 Legislature, which voted the last general tax increase.

Although higher taxes are almost universally unpopular, tying them to the proposal for better public school education blunted much of the criticism.

The joyous scene was a far cry from Monday night when the special session seemed on the brink of ending without a tax bill after House members had rejected Senate amendments to the original House measure.

Hobby was so delighted with passage of the bill that he hand-carried it to the House. A beaming White was at his side, giving the "thumbs-up" signal.

Craddick votes against tax bill

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, voted against the so-called "compromise" tax bill Tuesday night when House members were asked to concur in Senate amendments.

Craddick says he feels the Legislature "did the people of Texas an injustice" in passing the bill without going back to the appropriations bill to attempt to trim spending before raising taxes.

Craddick expressed concern that the Legislature will find itself in the position of needing additional taxes in January, due to increased spending.

The education bill passed by the special session "hurt my district considerably," Craddick said.

The education bill passed by the special session "hurt my district considerably," Craddick said.

While he favors some of the education reforms, he said he feels others were ill-considered, such as the provisions for pre-kindergarten programs for 4-year-olds.

"I think that will turn into an expensive, full-time baby-sitting service," Craddick said.

Combatting terrorism hard, costly

An Analysis

By MARVIN LEIBSTONE
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, Secretary of State George Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger acted recently as global counter-terrorists.

The president convinced other leaders during the London economic summit to join the United States in an international anti-terrorism battle. At a conference sponsored by Israel's Johnathan Institute here this week, Messrs. Shultz and Weinberger discussed ways that could be done.

These men hold high cards, so it is good news when they endorse a policy or plan to erode a problem that is frustrating the community of nations.

The bad news is that terrorists and those who sponsor them pay little attention to what presidents, kings and cabinet officers have to say about them. Not even the Soviet Union keeps a close watch on the west's counter-terror efforts.

Discomforting, too, is that few experts agree that what Reagan, Shultz and Weinberger say should be done to combat terrorism can make the sizeable difference claimed.

REAGAN AND Shultz want to upgrade and bind the shield against terrorist attacks by creating a vast information base any subsriber nation can tap into. Weinberger thinks the United Nations should build a global apparatus for prevention of terrorism and conduct strikes against perpetrators.

All three believe pre-emptive attacks against terrorists should be on the response menu.

But an international data base might not yield sufficient information about terrorism, and the United Nations could never provide the unbiased cooperation that effective anti-terrorism requires.

A misfortune for intelligence analysts is that major international terrorist groups hardly ever send perpetrators on a mission twice. This means there is a scant "rogue's gallery" for them to flip through and find bad guys to follow around before the fact. Nor have experienced terrorists or their leaders established definable patterns since the airline hijacking days of the 1970s. In other words, global intelligence sharing can help — but not much.

AT THE United Nations an argument over what terrorism really is has been going on since 1971. Until its 157 member nations can agree that a Salvadoran right-wing hitman, PLO cross-border demolitionist, Islamic fundamentalist kidnapper and Turkish assassin are equally terrorists, there can be no international anti-terrorism force.

One way that intelligence sharing remains extremely useful, claims the analysis side of the house at CIA headquarters in McLean, Va., is that pieces of data can be used to predict types of perpetrators, targets and when attacks might occur. This helped warn of events in Lebanon, although warnings were not always taken seriously in the field.

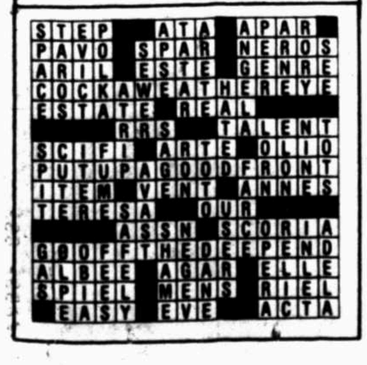

And the United Nations can put a dent in the terrorism problem by dealing with causes and symptoms instead of trying to coordinate an international police action destined to fail. That is, it can seek agreements on standardization of airport and border security measures; it can consider the imposition of trade sanctions.

THE administration's recommendations for combatting terrorism are, on the surface, powerhouse ideas. They suggest the merger of the free world's spy agencies to produce a massive counter-terror intelligence product for an international version of Batman and Robin. In fact, the best that could happen, providing the administration realizes its ideas are too lofty, is modification and then the kind of slow progress that comes from battling almost any other complex disease, be it political or physical.

Terrorism is no one-winged bird easy to blow out of the sky with a sling-shot. Veterans of the terrorism war say that what the Reagan administration has suggested is sound in principle but has to be focused on the possible.

EVEN THE idea of pre-empting terrorism with military or other armed forces is a step in the right direction, if what constitutes a known about-to-happen terrorist act and appropriate preventive measures are first agreed upon by major governments. Dr. Robert Kupperman of Georgetown University's Center for International and Strategic Studies advises that sloppily thought-out pre-emption could lead to superpower confrontation.

Hart adviser takes offense to magazine article

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. Gary Hart has had a spiritual adviser who gave him a prayer robe that hangs in his Senate office and sent him a note that suggested, "Hug a tree," according to an article in Vanity Fair magazine.

Marilyn Youngbird, described as a former aide to New Mexico Republican Sen. Pete Domenici, gave Hart spiritual advice during the 1984 Democratic primary season, according to an article by author Gail Sheehy in the magazine's July issue.

Ms. Youngbird would not return telephone calls last week from a reporter seeking comment on the article.

Kathy Bushkin, press secretary to Hart, contacted Sunday, said, "We think the article has some inaccuracies in it and is a disservice to the senator and to the Indian culture."

She said Ms. Youngbird was an unpaid volunteer adviser to the senator on Indian issues.

Asked why Ms. Youngbird would not speak to reporters about the article, Ms. Bushkin said, "I think she feels she was burned by one journalist and isn't interested in talking to any others."

Ms. Bushkin termed "inaccurate" the article's description of Mrs. Youngbird as "perhaps his closest friend, his soul mate" during the period from 1978 to 1980.

The article quotes Hart as saying he believes Ms. Youngbird, who told him "the Great White spirit...has chosen (Hart) to save nature from destruction and to unite all people."

"She introduced me to Indian religion," the Colorado senator is quoted as saying. "She's a full-blooded American Indian. Marilyn's given me eagle feathers and...other religious artifacts...a beautiful prayer robe."

The article describes Ms. Youngbird as a woman whose parents are both medicine people, "a radiant divorcee, a grandmother three times over though she looks no more than 30."

The article said that when asked about Ms. Youngbird on the campaign trail, Hart produced a note he was carrying in his pocket. According to Ms. Sheehy, the note read:

"It's not to your benefit to win them all. It's okay to have a setback, it keeps your feet on the ground. But you need to take time for you. Get away from everybody. Hug a tree. Come and say prayers with me. Nobody needs to know. It's between you and the Great Spirit."

Texan meets Chicago family 17 years after finding shoe

DENVER (AP) — Nearly two decades after a lost shoe began their long-distance friendship, a Chicago family and a Texas woman finally have met face-to-face.

The friendship between Ruth Shurbet, of Brookshire, Texas, and the Wozniak family began in 1967 when Jim Michael Wozniak, then a year old, lost a shoe — an orthopedic shoe to correct a foot problem — during a family vacation through Colorado and Wyoming.

"My husband was with me when we found the shoe on Snow Range, in Wyoming," Mrs. Shurbet recalled. "We found it by the road. We could tell it was an orthopedic shoe, and a new shoe. My husband put it in a plastic bag and put his business card in it and wrote a note on the back of it."

The note read: "We could tell by the size of the shoe that you're too small to write, but get Mommy and Daddy to write and let us know if you find this shoe."

And then Homer Shurbet tacked the bag to a nearby tree.

Jim Alexander Wozniak, Jim Michael's dad, said he returned to the rest area when he realized the shoe was missing, and found the plastic bag.

They sent the Shurbets a thank you letter, and have "been writing to each other ever since," the elder Wozniak recalled.

"We've been trying to meet all these years. We had planned several times to get together, but circumstances just prevented it," Mrs. Shurbet said. "It was the family's idea that I fly out here to meet them this summer, and they sent me the ticket."

So last week, the Wozniaks met Mrs. Shurbet for the first time, at Stapleton International Airport, to start a week-long stay in Colorado.

"The first time I talked to Mrs. Shurbet was a week ago," said the younger Wozniak, now 18. "I was really excited (about the meeting). I feel as if I know her already."

Mrs. Shurbet agreed. "I felt I had known them. Well, I did, but I just hadn't seen them."

The elder Wozniak said he "was nervous as a kid. I was afraid something was going to go wrong. I was pretty jumpy about thewhole thing.

"I wanted this meeting to take place so bad. I only had one picture of her to go by and when I saw her I was all choked up...It was love."

Perhaps the only sad note to the meeting is that Homer Shurbet died last year and never got a chance to meet the Wozniaks.

Ocean explorers needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Lewis and Clark expedition is needed to explore the largest territorial acquisition in the history of the United States, the expansion of ocean jurisdiction to 200 miles, a government advisory panel says.

This added area may be more important than the Louisiana Purchase, and a 10-year "expedition of research, exploration and survey" is being urged by the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere.

President Reagan's proclamation of the 200-mile Exclusive Economic Zone on March 10, 1983, more than doubled the territory of the United States, said the 18-member citizen committee which advises the government on questions affecting the air and oceans.

"The significance of the (economic zone) to the future of our country may well be greater than the 1803 Louisiana Purchase acquisition — considering the rate of depletion of the Earth's natural resources on land and the potential that the oceans are believed to have for addition to our resource base," the committee said.

But, this acquisition is somewhat like acquiring a sealed trunk, said the committee in calling for the program of exploration and research.

After the Louisiana Purchase, President Jefferson sent out Meriwether Lewis and William Clark to explore the new land.

"Who's Lewis and who's Clark today?," asked Don Walsh, president of International Maritime Inc., of San Pedro, Calif., head of the advisory subcommittee on the economic zone.

"We've got to find out what's out there of value and how can we use it for the welfare of our country," Walsh said in a telephone interview.

"It's not a place we're going to live in the near term, but it does have significant resource value," he added.

Steven N. Anastasion, executive director of the committee, said discussions of possible research work have been under way at meetings this week with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Geological Survey.

But he said it is also necessary to involve other agencies, such as the Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Energy, Navy, National Science Foundation and others.

While the Louisiana purchase nearly doubled the size of the then-young United States by extending its borders west to the Rocky Mountains, the proclamation of the offshore Exclusive Economic Zone added 3.9 billion acres of territory to the U.S. land area of 2.3 billion acres.

Dallas Peck, director of the U.S. Geological Survey, has pointed out that "the EEZ provides the United States with a vast new frontier to study and understand, and an immense new region with potential resources of enormous economic importance to explore and develop."

This added territory is beneath hundreds — sometimes thousands — of feet of water, which complicates its exploration. But preliminary investigations have indicated the potential for oil, geothermal energy and major mineral finds as well as use of the fish and other marine resources in the new territory.

"Beyond the scientific, technical and engineering obstacles, there remains the certainty that meeting the challenge successfully will require a national commitment: the supportive and combined talents of industry, universities and government," Peck stated.

About 3 percent of the U.S. continental shelf has been explored and "lately, we have come to realize that the solid minerals of the ocean floor may be as important to our future as the fisheries, oil and gas resources have become," the advisory report said.

However, efforts to cooperate with other nations where their interests and those of the United States overlap may result in conflict over ocean jurisdiction.

The panel suggested that while this country does not recognize the international Law of the Sea Convention, it would be wise to develop future policies with that proposed international treaty in mind.

Then, if that international agreement takes force after receiving approval of 60 nations, U.S. policies would be consistent with it, even if the United States does not ratify the agreement itself.

Meanwhile, a massive effort to chart the new territory is scheduled to begin this year, combining the resources of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Geological Survey.

According to the Geological Survey, oil and gas finds are considered likely along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts, particularly in such areas as Georges Bank, Baltimore Canyon, Carolina Trough, Southeast Georgia Embayment and Blake Plateau Basin.

Petroleum is also considered likely in the Gulf of Mexico, where oil and gas is already under production in coastal areas.

Monterey Canyon in the Pacific now produces oil and gas and the Juan de Fuca ridge is rich in deposits of sulfides, cadmium and silver.

The giant oil fields off Alaska are well known and minerals of economic interest — including gold — are also deposited by glaciers in that state.

The zone also extends around Puerto Rico, Hawaii and many Pacific island territories where scientists say they may find cobalt, manganese and other minerals.

Plumber is one-man gas company

OGDEN, Ind. (AP) — When gas customers in the tiny town of Ogden have a problem, they go right to the top — they call the president of the gas company.

"I have to be available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year," says Don Miller, president, sole shareholder and only full-time employee of Snow and Ogden Gas Co. Inc. "When people need heat, I'm responsible for giving them all the heat they want."

Miller's company serves 18 residential customers in Ogden, about 40 miles east of Indianapolis. It has two gas wells, one drilled in 1880 and another in 1940, and three miles of pipeline.

"To the best of my knowledge, it's the smallest public utility in the United States," said Miller, 50, a plumber who bought the company in 1973.

Don Engerer, a member of the Indiana Public Service Commission's engineering staff, says Snow and Ogden "is the only small utility drawing gas in the state of Indiana." The only smaller operations are private gas wells used by farmers in some parts of the state, he said.

"I'm governed by the same rules and regulations as Indiana Gas," Miller said last week from his company's offices in Cadiz, 16 miles north of Ogden.

That means that when he applied for a rate increase, which he received earlier this year, he had to buy legal advertising in newspapers to announce the rate request. Then the PSC sent representatives from its accounting and engineering departments to inspect Miller's books and operation, said Greg Crider, a New Castle attorney who represents Miller.

"He has all the problems and headaches of a major utility," said Engerer. "But he's keeping his system in good shape."

Miller does the maintenance, meter reading and most of the bookkeeping for the utility. But at times keeping the system running requires unusual efforts.

Last Christmas Eve, "when the wind chill was 60 to 80 below zero," Miller spent 12 hours thawing out the regulators that control the flow of gas from his wells.

On Christmas Day, he had to replace a frozen gas meter.

"I don't take days off during the winter," said Miller.

Still, he says he enjoys the work, in part because he's his own boss.

"I'm just a plain old country boy," said Miller. "I've gotta be outside where I can see what's going on — the snow, rain and wind — but it took me until I was 40 to realize that."

Miller worked for years as a welding instructor at Westinghouse Corp. in Muncie. He later worked as a maintenance foreman at Chrysler Corp. in New Castle until 1980.

Now he has two businesses, the gas company, which was founded by a man named David Snow, and a plumbing business started by Miller's father.

"You don't own the business, the business owns you," said Miller. But he says he likes the "variety of work," and he's happy that for the past two years he's finally been making money on the utility.

Even though Snow and Ogden is showing a profit, its rates remain low. It charges $5.20 on the first 1,000 cubic feet of gas and $5 per 1,000 cubic feet after that. "It's 38 to 40 percent cheaper than Indiana Gas," said Miller.

But Miller's market is shrinking. He had 32 customers in 1973 when he bought the company. Now, houses have been torn down and customers have moved away, leaving him about 20 customers most of the time, depending on whether they are paying their bills.

Miller is not one of Snow and Ogden's customers, since he lives in Westwood, five miles east of Cadiz.

"It cost me $800 to heat my house with heating oil last winter," Miller said with a laugh. "And I own a gas company."

Small group designs uniforms for Air Force

FAIRBORN, Ohio (AP) — The sprawling Wright Patterson Air Force Base is home to planes, research, museum pieces — and the design center for Air Force military uniforms.

"Many people think that clothing development is not really consistent with the development of major weapons systems like the B-1 (bomber) and the F-15 and F-16 (fighter planes), but this is just where it has been," said Maj. Ken Shedd, chief of the Air Force Clothing Division.

The 17-member department that turns out designs for a well-turned-out Air Force is made up of 16 civilians and Shedd, a textile engineer.

They design everything from ties to hats to band uniforms, including uniforms for the Air Force Honor Guard. They also make jackets for the 89th Airlift Wing, which handles the presidential jet, Air Force One.

"We don't do as much as we used to. In the recent past, we made all the Thunderbird uniforms, the flight uniforms and jackets. Now it's more expedient for them and for us to have a contractor out in the Las Vegas area that makes those. We design it," Shedd said.

His department makes the basic designs and patterns and writes specifications that are used when the work is contracted out by the Defense Personnel Support Center in Philadelphia.

Announcer has seen Pecos' professional rodeo come long way

PECOS (AP) — Buck Jackson was 20 years old when he first held a megaphone to his mouth and shouted out the names of participants in the Pecos Rodeo.

Now, 56 years later, Jackson no longer can be found perched atop a horse yelling into a megaphone. But he still can be heard at every Pecos Rodeo, detailing the show for the thousands of people watching.

"Yeah, when I started, it was a little bit unprofessional," Jackson recalled recently.

Pointing to an old, faded photograph of himself, he said, "I was shouting out everything. I had to repeat everything, say it three times. And I often got hoarse."

Jackson no longer gets a sore throat when he announces what is considered to be the world's oldest professional rodeo.

His megaphone has become a microphone and the rodeo, which first was held in 1883, "is much more professional."

"But, you know, those old days were awfully fun," Jackson said.

Instead of a grandstand, Jackson said, people attending the rodeo in the 1920s and 1930s would park their cars in a circle around the arena and sit and watch.

"We had to keep the stock in some way and that worked partially," he said. "Of course, we still had some finding their way out."

The rodeo also has increased in size and its program has become much more complicated since the early days, Jackson said.

This year's rodeo, which opens today in this small West Texas, will run for four days. More than 20,000 people are expected to attend and more than 500 cowboys and cowgirls have entered the various events.

At Tonight's performance, Jackson will be honored for his contributions to the rodeo.

Along with announcing the rodeo for so many years, he also has served as a Reeves County commissioner and as sheriff.

A native of Fort Worth, Jackson said there were several times when he had to interrupt his rodeo annoucing duties to "do what the sheriff has to do."

"There was always someone in the arena getting drunk that I had to kick out," he said. "And one time I had to stop announcing and go up in the stand to break up a fight. I just collared the drunk and went back to doing the announcing."

Jackson also has announced several other rodeos throughout the country, but said, "I never could horn in on the big time.

"I guess that's OK, since almost all the greats or near-greats have roped here at one time or another," he said.

During his younger years, Jackson said he even tried his hand at bronc riding.

Pecos Rodeo back to basics this year

PECOS (AP) — When the Pecos Rodeo celebrated its 100th anniversary last year, it was a rodeo to end all rodeos. This year, organizers say, they plan to "get back down to having just a rodeo."

"This year, we're doing away with lots of the special events we had last year," said Roger Harrison, president of the Pecos Rodeo Committee,. "We're just back to the basics."

And so, when the 101st Pecos Rodeo opens in this small West Texas town today, it will be back to roping, 'rangling and just plain old rodeoing.

But Harrison said, "We will still be carrying on the tradition of the past. In fact, that's our theme — 'carrying on the tradition.' "

The Pecos Rodeo, considered the world's largest and first professional rodeo, will have all the typical rodeo events — bronc and bull riding, steer roping and wrestling, team and calf roping and barrel racing — and will also include two more unusual events — a wild horse race and a wild cow milking contest.

The rodeo is a community event. "We're a community rodeo," Harrison said, explaining that Pecos, a town of about 13,000 people, is responsible for organizing the event. They plan year-round for the rodeo, and also are the people opening the shoots before the broncs and bulls come storming out with cowboys flying off their backs, Harrison said.

And though the local touch is nice, Harrison said it also can be a hindrance, financially.

"We never know from year to year what funds we've got," he said. "It's all either local money or from the rodeo promoters."

Last year's special rodeo received financial help from several outside interests that wanted to be part of the centennial, Harrison said. But "this year, it's going to be rougher. A lot of those outside folks didn't come back," he said.

Rodeo organizers were forced to "face reality again this year. We're beginning to outgrow ourselves," he said. But that hasn't discouraged Harrison and other organizers too much. The rodeo is one of the events that has put Pecos on the map, they say, and the trouble is worth that.

More than 500 people have entered the rodeo, which will be held in the Pecos Rodeo Arena, a 55-year-old structure that can seat 6,000.

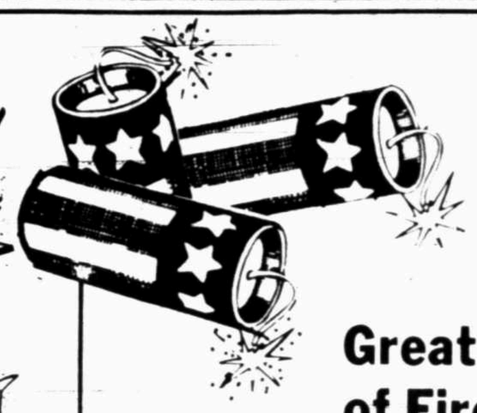

Prize money is estimated to top $130,000, compared to the mere $40 purse in the first Pecos Rodeo.

Along with the rodeo competition, a Golden Girl of the West pageant, an art show featuring works of Southwestern artists, and a pro-rodeo dance are planned.

"We're trying to tie in the new while still catering to the ranch people too," Harrison said. "The rodeo was built by the working cowboy and we want to remember them always."

The celebration of July Fourth — today — holds special meaning. True, the celebration is significant every year because on July 4, 1776, American colonists formally declared their independence from England. In that respect, today is a birthday celebration.

But this year's Independence Day celebration is particularly so because 210 years ago — in 1774 — the Continental Congress had assembled to protest the British government's attempts to impose undue taxes and trade restrictions. A move was begun in the colonies that only would culminate with the drafting and signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Around the nation today Americans will be celebrating in their own way that heroic act. They should because what exists today in America, and has existed the past 200-plus years, is rare indeed.

That topic was addressed recently by Leonard Liggio, president of the Institute for Humane Studies in Menlo Park, Calif., who wrote: "The American Constitution has been copied in philosophy and in form by many other countries for two hundred years. Most have not made a success of their emulation.

"What other nations have failed to understand is that our government and our Constitution are the final stages of a social process, not the beginning," he observed. "A government cannot create a good polity, much less a good economy or a virtuous society; a good government is the result of these things."

The society Americans enjoy today and that millions around the globe strive to create is not a result of our cherished Constitution but of a philosophy of life written into that document.

As Mr. Liggio noted, "America is great, not because of the Constitution, but because of the basic values that the Constitution reflects."

That's an Independence Day message well worth remembering.

Self-imposed burden

Should any of the 11,400 air traffic controllers who were fired after participating in an illegal strike in 1981 be rehired? One's initial response tends to be a compassionate answer, and positive, for many of them are still out of work. But the answer of Donald E. Engen, the administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, is a flat "no."

He has a couple of good reasons. One is that it would take six to eight weeks of retraining to get the former federal employes adjusted to new rules and regulations. Another is that inevitably there would be friction between the controllers who chose to stay on the job and those who chose to strike.

There is a third reason. When applicants for controllers' jobs signed on to guide airplanes in and out of the nation's airports, they took an oath against strikes. It was a solemn promise. After all, human lives are involved as planes carry millions of passengers millions of miles each year, much of the time in friendly skies but also much of the time in not-so-friendly skies. And the controllers, despite the probability of differences of opinion with the government about wages and hours and working conditions, were asked to put those human lives ahead of wages-and-hours problems. They agreed. They took an oath.

Then more than 11,000 of them went back on their agreement and broke their oath. So while compassion prompts us to wish that controllers out of work could be rehired, the FAA's Donald Engen is not lacking in compassion when he puts his foot down.

The air traffic controllers are the ones who brought this burden upon themselves.

Another View:

Who's the leader?

Trying to modernize the world's largest standing army, Peking recently undertook its biggest military reform in nearly 30 years by re-establishing service ranks, instituting a draft and introducing student training.

Invaders will be drowned in a "vast ocean" of soldiers, promised Chief of General Staff Yang Dezhi.

A return to ranks in China's 4.5 million-strong army marks the end of the 1955 law under which insignia denoting rank were discarded as "elitist."

Recognition of human nature thus supercedes a utopian egalitarian view. It's happened throughout history, even in groups not organized for combat.

Many utopian societies established in England and the United States failed because no one wants to wash the dishes or peel the spuds and, with no one authorized to order the chores done, the communes collapsed in dissension.

In any organization, especially those formed to deal with emergencies — armies, hospitals, fire or police departments, etc. — someone must have the final say. And that someone usually carries insignia or credentials so that, in a tight situation, others know who's in command. Otherwise, chaos.

No one can accede to the age-old request, "Take me to your leader," unless there's a leader to whom one can be taken.

Surprising it took the Red Chinese 30 years to reconsider that fact.

— Indianapolis Star

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 4, the 186th day of 1984. There are 180 days left in the year. Today is Independence Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 4, 1776, the Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence.

On this date:

In 1802, the U.S. Military Academy officially opened at West Point, N.Y.

In 1826, in one of the most incredible coincidences of American history, the second and third presidents of the United States — John Adams and Thomas Jefferson — both died, 50 years to the day after the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

In 1831, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, died.

In 1872, the 30th president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge, was born.

In 1900, Louis Armstrong was born.

In 1939, in a farewell speech to fans at Yankee Stadium, baseball great Lou Gehrig called himself "the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

In 1946, the Philippines became independent of United States sovereignty.

In 1966, President Lyndon Johnson signed into law the Freedom of Information Act.

JACK ANDERSON

Declaration given loving care

WASHINGTON — The Declaration of Independence, the symbol of man's most successful effort to subject the function of governing to the will of the governed, is an inspiring sight in its glass case at the National Archives.

Jack Anderson

The noble document is badly faded, thanks to some rough treatment in times past. In 1814, for example, it was feverishly packed and hustled out of Washington as the British were marching in.

The signatures of many of the Founding Fathers are now illegible. But John Hancock's name, signed with a flamboyant flourish so King George could read it without his spectacles, still stands out.

The precious parchment was placed in a helium-filled glass case in 1952 to stop a steady deterioration. Two years ago, the Archives brought together a panel of experts to determine whether the declaration was indeed withstanding the ravages of time. The committee reported "no evidence of deterioration beyond that which existed at the time of the current encasement."

The committee's chairman, Professor Norbert S. Baer of New York University, told my associate Tony Capaccio: "As far as I can tell, there is nowhere else in the world where so elaborate a system has been devised for the protection of a document."

But as an extra precaution, the committee asked the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to devise some space-age technology to monitor the declaration's condition. This will be done with an electronic imaging system, which should be in operation by 1987 — the 200th anniversary of the Constitution, which is on display in its own helium-filled glass case in front of the Declaration of Independence.

Not all of the nation's written heritage, however, has been so carefully protected. Five years ago, I charged that priceless documents had been allowed to molder because of bureaucratic neglect. Concerned employees took pictures of documents in various stages of decay and smuggled the evidence to me.

Among the deteriorating documents were papers of the Continental Congress, the Treaty of Paris signed by John Adams and Benjamin Franklin, letters with the mutilated signatures of Queen Victoria and King George IV, Abraham Lincoln's wartime telegrams and other irreplaceable records and maps.

A few months later, the Archives' overseer, the General Services Administration, confirmed my charges. As recently as this May, the GSA complained again about "a continuing failure to support preservation efforts ...."

This brought an angry response from Archivist Robert Warner who wrote that "statements about failure to support preservation ... are not supported and in fact (are) contradicted by the report itself."

But GSA's associate administrator, William Clinkscales, stuck to his guns. "It is regrettable and surprising," he wrote, "that the Archives staff was apparently threatened by the deficiencies identified."

Among specific problems, the GSA cited a 1982 review of 2,000 pages of old treaties and other documents which "indicated a buildup of dirt among the treasures, the result of inadequate filtration in the heating and cooling duct outlets and the apparent absence of a routine cleaning program." Another complaint was the lack of special temperature and humidity controls in a main vault where the papers of the Continental Congress and the original Articles of Confederation are stored.

The GSA report also noted that the Declaration of Independence in the Archives rotunda "is inaccessible to disabled persons who use wheelchairs for mobility." The archivist acknowledged that the "problem must be subjected to some creative thinking."

REFLECTIONS: Here are a few thoughts to chew on during your Fourth of July picnic:

— "I know no safe depository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves." — Thomas Jefferson.

— "The history of liberty is a history of limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it." — Woodrow Wilson.

— "He who trades his freedom for the promise of security has lost both." — Anonymous.

— "Secrecy and a free, democratic government don't mix." — Harry Truman.

— "The only sure bulwark of continuing liberty is a government strong enough to protect the interests of the people, and a people strong enough and well enough informed to maintain their sovereignty over their government." — Franklin D. Roosevelt.

— "To suppose that our civil and political liberties are secure because they are defined in written constitutions is to mistake the legal form for the living substance of freedom." — Carl Lotus Becker.

— "History fails to record that any nation has ever shown good prospects of providing abundance and happiness for all, when only a few were doing the thinking or when only a few were making the decisions." — Richard L. Evans.

— "Everything has its price. No one ever gets anything for nothing. People sometimes flatter themselves that they do, but they are deceiving themselves. They always pay in one coin or another. It may be in the coin of the realm, or it may be in the forfeiture of a degree of self-respect, or of honor, or liberty." — Albert E. Bowen.

EDWIN FEULNER

U.N. facing middle-age crisis

Fortieth birthdays usually bring with them varying degrees of panic about one's life. Do I know what I want out of life? Have I fulfilled my goals? Do I have some idea what I want to accomplish in the years ahead?

Edwin Feulner

As the United Nations approaches its 40th birthday, these same quetions had better be asked. At 40, the U.N. is no longer a well-intentioned glimmer in an idealist's eye. It's failings can no longer be shrugged off as youthful enthusiasm. The U.N. is a full-grown organizatin with a real record and history — and not one to be especially proud of either. At 40, the U.N. faces a very real middle-age crisis.

A recently published book, A World Without A U.N., examines the U.N.'s performance in nine key areas — disarmament, economic development, peacekeeping, the environment, health, food and agriculture, education, human rights, and "its role as a kind of safety valve to reduce international tensions." The 12 contributors were asked whether the situation in the world would be better, worse, or unchanged if the U.N. didn't exist.

Their conclusion: the world would be "no worse off" and, in fact, might be better off without the U.N.

Why? Because the U.N.'s track record has become a mixture of failed or broken promises, and its character has undergone an obscene werewolf-like transformation from an organization embodying all of man's noblest goals and aspirations to a ritualistic, even tribal, circus where clubbing the U.S. and western values is considered high art.

The U.N.'s human rights activities, for example, involve mainly passing resolutions, rather than helping end human rights abuses or helping victims, the book explains.

The Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) generally ignores and even is hostile to the one agricultural system which consistently has multiplied the world's food supply — private-sector farming. So while millions go hungry, and the U.N. looks to the U.S. and the West for "emergency" food aid for the drought-stricken of Africa, and the Soviet Union produces another failed harvet, so-called corporate farming in the U.S. is denounced.

The U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organizatin (UNESCO) promotes onon of these things; instead, it promotes the notion that whatever know-how the Western democracies possess they have developed at the expense of the less fortunate of the world and should now 'return' their earnings to their underdeveloped victims.

The U.N. also has done poorly as keeper of the peace, the book shows. In the hundreds of wars and conflicts since the end of World War II, the U.N. has been a significant stabilizing force in only a handful. "The fact is that when it comes to peacekeeping, while the U.N. probably makes the situation no worse, it also makes it no better," says Burton Pines, editor of the new volume.

In the area of disarmament, the U.N. has done literally nothing. Those well-publicized and costly U.N. conferences on disarmament yielded only rhetoric, Pines says.

Ambassador Charles Lichenstein, former number two person at the U.S. Mission in New York, says in the foreword to the book that the U.S. should work for reform at the U.N. or consider withdrawing. First of all, he and Pines suggest, U.N. technical agencies once again must deal exclusively with technical matters. The World Health Organization (WHO) should work on world health; UNESCO should work on science and education. And so forth. Second, the U.N. must stop funding the Palestine Liberation Organization, the South West Africa People's Organization, and similar terrorist groups. The U.S. should not be sending funds to terrorists through the U.N. or any other organization. And finally, the stature of the U.N. General Assembly — a circus within a circus — must be reduced. "So long as the General Assembly refuses to function responsibly, the U.S. should not treat it as if it were responsible," Pines says.

The U.N. at 40 is not the organization its founders intended. Whether it has deteriorated past the point of repair is an open question. Right now, things don't look good for that dream that grew out of World War II.

ART BUCHWALD

All you read here is truth!

There was a bit of a scandal at "The New Yorker" magazine. It appears one of their writers, Alastair Reid, admitted to a Wall Street Journal reporter that he had created composite characters, rearranged scenes and fabricated dialogue for nonfiction pieces he had written over the past 25 years.

Art Buchwald

This surprised many people in the journalistic world because the "New Yorker" has the foremost reputation for meticulously checking facts, even those in poems and short stories.

Mr. Reid justified his method of writing nonfiction by saying that when he played with facts he was creating a reality that was more accurate than what actually took place. Bill Shawn, his editor, defended Mr. Reid.

While not wanting to judge the "New Yorker" one way or the other, I thought the reader might be interested in how this column deals with facts and the standards applied before it gets into print.

My highly paid staff consists of my assistant, Cathy Crary, and an eight-person fact-checking team who work on the floor just below me.

When I write a column it is immediately sent down to the fact-checking office to make sure everything I have said is true.

Last week, for example, I wrote a piece saying that Walter Mondale interviewed me to be his vice president. One of the checkers called Mr. Mondale to verify if it was true. Mr. Mondale, who has interviewed so many people for the job, was afraid to admit he couldn't remember if he had or hadn't. So he told my checker he probably had, and therefore she let the column go through.

On many occasions I have written about private meetings between President Reagan and various members of the White House staff, quoting complete conversations that took place in the Oval Office.

Whenever one of the checkers calls me on this I say, "If you don't believe me why don't you call the White House?"

When the checker does call the president's press secretary, he is invariably told, "I have no comment on that," which is just as good as a confirmation as far as Washington is concerned.

The least of my problems has to do with the CIA, which will never confirm or deny a story no matter how wild it is. Therefore, while I insist every fact in a CIA column is true, and since the Agency won't say otherwise, the fact-checkers have no choice but to permit the piece to stand as it is.

The Pentagon, on the other hand, will deny everything I write. Once I had a fight with one of the fact-checkers because I said that the military was buying $7.50 hammers for $495. A red flag immediately went up, and the checker came charging upstairs yelling, "Who are you trying to kid? Nobody is going to pay $495 for a $7.50 hammer." I calmly dialed A. Ernest Fitzgerald at the Pentagon, who not only confirmed it, but gave me a list of other tools that cost the taxpayer millions of dollars more than they were worth. Since then I've never had a problem with my fact-checkers over any story I've written about waste in the military.

Recently I wrote a column about talking to God, who angrily refuted President Reagan's contention that God has been driven out of the public schools. One of the more skeptical checkers said he doubted I had spoken to God. I told him the next time he went to church to ask Him. The checker came back on the Monday morning and apologized. He said, "I read the column to God and he admitted he did talk to you, and was only disappointed you didn't use the full text of His remarks in the article."

The only reason I am pointing out how vigorous we are in making sure that all the facts in my column are correct is not to gloat over the "New Yorker" embarrassment, but to assure the reader that everything he or she reads in my column is checked and double-checked before it is disseminated to the public.

If I ever had to resort to fabricating dialogue or playing loose with the truth, I would never be able to look at myself in the mirror in the morning again.

Jeff Schnabel, vice president of AMC theater's Texas division, stands in front of a theater which is a testing ground for an automated teller system. The system would allow movie patrons to buy tickets with credit cards.

Moviegoers can buy tickets with credit cards

DALLAS (AP) — Moviegoers short on cash or weary of waiting in line for a cashier now can use credit cards to buy tickets from an automated teller machine in a first-of-its kind experiment at a north Dallas theater.

Between 5 percent and 15 percent of people attending the Prestonwood 5 movie theater are using the machine, which was installed almost three months ago, a manager said.

The system, dubbed "The Agent," resembles an automatic teller machine and works by running a Mastercard or Visa bank credit card through a slot, which in turn lights a screen indicating the movies showing at the theater.

By touching the screen, customers select the movie and number of tickets they want. The tickets are dispensed immediately, the price is billed to the credit card account, and the stub serves as the receipt.

Credit-card users are charged the same price as those paying cash.

"I can't measure if the number of moviegoers has increased. A lot has to do with the movie selection. It's just too early to tell right now," said Jeff Schnabel, vice president of operations for the Texas division of American Multi-Cinema Inc.

Schnabel said the theater is hiring an independent marketing firm to evaluate the experiment, which he said is the first of its kind.

If the system works and proves to be cost-effective, Schnabel said, it will be adapted for other theaters owned by AMC, which is the nation's third-largest theater chain. He hopes the system can be adapted to accept bank teller cards, sell refreshments and allow customers to purchase tickets days in advance.

No matter how successful the system is, he said, "we will never completely do away with cash sales."

Rick King, assistant division operations manager for AMC, estimates that between 5 percent and 15 percent of the Prestonwood 5's customers are using the new system.

"On an average week, that's maybe between 500 and 1,500 people," King said.

Guy Gamble, manager at Prestonwood 5, said he didn't think the system had increased sales."They (customers) are not going to go across town to use the machine," Gamble said. "It's not a draw."

However, Gamble said many customers who are not aware of the machine use it once they get to the theater to avoid standing in long cash lines. It's also balm for an empty wallet.

"It's nice to use your credit card when you're low on cash and won't get billed until next month," said Ronda Dillard, a graduate student at the University of Texas at Dallas who used the machine on a recent night.

Mattox says land leasing proposal like 'fire sale'

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday a federal proposal for leasing lands up to 200 miles off the Texas coast is nothing more than a "fire sale" that would turn over the state's future to huge oil interests.

Mattox told Secretary of the Interior William Clark that federal law requires him to solicit lease nominations for specific offshore tracts rather than conducting an "areawide leasing scheme."

The "helter skeleter...catch as catch can" leasing proposal by the federal government has no basis in law, Mattox said in a letter.

Mattox wrote Clark that he would oppose leasing Outer Continental Shelf lands off the Texas coast unless the federal government changes its proposed method of leasing.

"This is nothing more than a federal give-away of our natural resources designed to help bail out the federal government from its budgetary problems," the attorney general said.

"Nominating individual tracts prevents large oil companies from buying up the whole Texas coast at 'give-away' prices to the deteriment of the smaller companies who have less capital," Mattox said.

"In reality, areawide leasing is much like a 'fire sale' which would convey in perpetuity our future to the huge oil interests," he said.

He said the Interior Department's notice to proposed bidders specified a royalty of one-sixth and one-eighth but Texas has gained royalties averaging 25.2 percent during the past five years.

Mattox also said the department's lease bids call for a bonus of $150 an acre but Texas has achieved bonuses of up to $500 per acre through the nominations system.

Agents seize $6.8 million from drug trafficking

HOUSTON (AP) — In an early Tuesday morning raid, federal agents confiscated $6.8 million from two Houston bank accounts in what a U.S. attorney said was the largest seizure of drug trafficking funds in the history of federal law enforcement.

U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges of Houston said the money was seized in two accounts of the Republic Bank of Houston as part of an investigation into a "very large" multinational drug organization.

Holders of the accounts were identified as European Commodities Ltd. and Continental Resources Ltd.

Hedges said that virtually nothing was known about the companies.

The attorney said there are four names associated with the accounts, including a Los Angeles lawyer whose only apparent connection, said Hedges, is that he once made an inquiry about one of the accounts. The other names are of Mexican citizens.

The seizure was under a federal law that permits assets to be taken by the government if it can be proven that they were used in illegal drug operations or if they were purchased with the profits from drug trafficking. The asset owners may contest the seizure in federal court.

Hedges declined to give many details because he said the seizure was part of a continuing investigation. The seizure was a civil action and that no criminal charges have been filed, he added.

Neither of the companies named on the accounts are Texas corporations and both used the bank's customer pick-up counter as the address of record.

Hedges said the seizure and the investigation shows that some of the drug importing and distribution operations that once headquartered in South Florida have now moved to Texas.

He said a major enforcement effort in Florida put the drug organizations "in the skillet", but he warned: "They're jumping into the fire; we've got waiting for them in Texas."

Hedges said the $6.8 million was held in different instruments in the accounts over the past year. At some point the money was in certificates of deposit, or in other investment devices. When it was seized, he said, the money was being held in a highly liquid "flex fund" which draws interest, but which can quickly be withdrawn.

Enola Gay radar operator dies of heart attack

ROCKDALE (AP) — The radar operator on the Enola Gay, the plane that dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, has died of a heart attack at age 69.

Joseph A. Stiborik, who died at home Saturday, was one of a crew of 12 who took the B-29 bomber on its historic mission on Aug. 6, 1945.

Stiborik seldom talked about his war experiences or about dropping the atomic bomb, said his sister, Cecila Dreyfuss of Ann Arbor, Mich. But he was often asked for his autograph and questioned about the bomb, she said.

"He never considered himself a hero, even though a lot of other people did," Ms. Dreyfuss said. "He was a soldier who had a job to do and he did it."

Stiborik was born in Taylor, Texas. He attended Texas A&M University and studied cotton grading before volunteering for the Army Air Corps in 1942, his sister said.

"He was a super patriotic person," Ms. Dreyfuss said. "Our family is of Czech descent, and after Hitler invaded Czechoslovakia, he felt he had to do something."

Ms. Dreyfuss said her brother and the other crewmen "knew they were on a special mission, because the chaplains were there to see them off," Ms. Dreyfuss told the Austin American-Statesman. "Normally, the chaplains came out only after a mission."

The Enola Gay carried just one 9,000-pound bomb that the crew had nicknamed "Little Boy." It killed or wounded more than half of Hiroshima's population.

After the war, Stiborik left the Air Corps as a sergeant and moved to Rockdale, where he became a superintendent of maintenance at Industrial Generating Co. He retired in 1982.

Woman freed from cage-like room

NATION

"I don't think there's any (charges) you can file, to be honest with you. We don't have a cruelty to human beings statute in this state, even though we have them for cruelty to animals."

— Rex Hall, attorney

DEMING, N.M. (AP) — A woman whose husband kept her locked in a cage-like bedroom was freed after police received a tip that she hadn't been seen for two years, authorities said Tuesday. No charges were filed, and a lawyer said no charges were likely.

Bonnie Misany, 43, was reportedly incoherent when police, who had been turned away once by her husband Frederick, returned to the couple's home with a search warrant last Friday.

She was hospitalized and a psychiatric evaluation was ordered, as her court-appointed lawyer said the case points out the inadequacy of state laws dealing with mental competency and the lack of facilities for mental patients.

"It is a sorry state that cannot take care of those who cannot take care of themselves," said the lawyer, Rex Hall. He and law enforcement officials questioned about the case refused to say whether the woman had had mental problems before the confinement. All cited state privacy laws.

Authorities said Monday charges probably will not be filed against the 50-year-old Misany.

Assistant District Attorney Tom Clark confirmed Monday his office was investigating the case. He said no charges had been filed.

"I don't think there's any you can file, to be honest with you," Hall said. "We don't have a cruelty to human beings statute in this state, even though we have them for cruelty to animals."

He said false imprisonment or other charges were unlikely because "it would take a lot of investigation, and the star witness may not be competent to testify."

Hall said his client's problem is that "she's not capable of medicating herself."

"At some point, they're going to stabilize this gal and they're going to turn her loose," he said.

Police reports show officers used a search warrant to enter the home after Misany turned investigators away Friday. Police originally went to the home in Deming after being alerted by Crime Stoppers, a local group that passes tips to police, that a caller said Mrs. Misany had not been seen in about two years.

Officers said they found Mrs. Misany caged in her room, with heavy metal mesh over the door and windows.

The Deming Headlight reported that the room and bed were filthy and that Mrs. Misany uttered animal-like sounds mixed with some understandable words.

After an examination by a local doctor, Mrs. Misany was taken by ambulance to Mimbres Memorial Hospital here, where she remained Tuesday.

She was taken to the courthouse on Monday for a competency hearing and was ordered to undergo a 30-day evaluation, an official told the newspaper.

Clark, Luna County Sheriff Jack Coussons and others contacted about the case would not confirm that the hearing was held because records involving the competency cases are not public.

Hall confirmed that the hearing was conducted, but said he had received no word of the evaluation order. He said state officials had performed a preliminary evaluation since Mrs. Misany was hospitalized Friday.

Reagan signs measure adding wilderness lands

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed a bill Tuesday which preserves more than 1 million additional acres of natural land as wilderness in the state of Washington.

The measure increases Washington's inventory of wilderness lands to about 2.5 million acres.

Wilderness areas designated by Congress are to be preserved in their natural state. The lands are open to most forms of nonmotorized recreation, such as hiking, fishing and camping, but are off-limits to motorized travel and development.

In addition, the bill designates 8,600 acres of national forest land in the state as the Mount Baker National Recreation Area, and designates 87,757 acres of national forest land in Washington as the North Cascades Scenic Highway.

The legislation also releases for multiple-use management until the mid-1990s other national forest land that was studied but not designated as wilderness, and it requires a land exchange at the option of the private landowner.

Non-Bell companies ask for fewer increases, survey shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite complaints about rising local telephone rates, a new industry survey shows the 21.5 million customers of the nation's non-Bell System phone companies actually experienced smaller rate increases in 1983 than during any year since 1980.

The survey, performed annually by the United States Telephone Association, found the 1,400 local independent companies that serve 20 percent of the nation's telephone customers were authorized to boost rates by $510 million in 1983.

By comparison, state regulators approved rate increases for the same companies totaling $664 million in 1982 and $703 million in 1981. Those figures compare to increases totaling about $250 million in 1980.

The totals do not reflect any rate hikes won last year by the 22 Bell operating companies. Previous surveys by other groups have shown those companies, which were divided among seven new regional firms on Jan. 1 through the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., have been winning larger local rate increases over the past two years.

That trend of rising local rates for the Bell companies had generally been thought to apply as well to the smaller independents. The USTA survey suggest, however, that is not the case and that in fact, pressure for additional rate hikes is falling.

On Dec. 31, 1981, for example, the USTA found a record $1 billion worth of rate hike requests from independent companies was still pending before state utility commissions, despite the approval of rate hikes totaling $703 million. By Dec. 31, 1982, that figure had actually grown slightly to more than $1 billion.

But by last December, according to the USTA Controller Courtney Snyder, only about $500 million in rate hike requests was still pending following the approval of the increases totaling $510 million.

Snyder, in an interview Tuesday, attributed the slowdown in rate increases to tougher regulatory reviews by state commissions combined with a general move toward requiring customers to pay directly for such things as installation and service visits, instead of subsidizing those expenses through general rates.

Although the USTA's new survey does not include any information on the rate increases won by the Bell companies last year, it does include other information from them as a result of their recent decision to join the association. Before AT&T's breakup, the USTA did not include any Bell companies as members. Now that the local Bell operating companies have been set free by AT&T, they have opted to join.

The new edition of "PhoneFacts," the USTA survey, shows the Bell companies combined intend to spend $13.8 billion this year upgrading and expanding their local networks, compared to $4.4 billion to be spent by the remaining independents. Although comparable figures are not available for the Bell companies, that capital construction spending for the smaller independents represents about the same amount they spent in 1983, Snyder said.

A long-running trend of reduced employment, reflecting increased productivity, was reflected for both Bell and non-Bell companies. The combined work force of the smaller independents dropped from 192,100 in 1982 to 186,800 in 1983, while employment at the Bell companies dropped from 840,675 in 1982 to 739,168 last year.

The survey also found the independent companies posted record operating revenues of $14.9 billion in 1983, up 7.2 percent over the previous year.

As expected, the 1984 ranking by the USTA of the 125 largest independent phone companies shows the seven new Bell companies have taken over the top seven spots, based on the number of access lines serving customers.

On that basis, the industry ranking shows the Bell Atlantic Corp. in first place, followed by Ameritech, BellSouth, Nynex, Pacific Telesis, US West and Southwestern Bell. The GTE Corp. is in eighth place, with United Telephone System Inc. of Kansas City, Mo., in ninth and Continental Telecom Inc. of Atlanta rounding out the top 10.

Remains of eight MIAs to be returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department plans to send a plane to Hanoi on July 17 to pick up the remains of eight men believed by the Vietnamese to be those of American servicemen killed in the Southeast Asia war.

The Pentagon said Tuesday, in response to inquiries, that "the Vietnamese have informed us that they plan to turn over eight remains to the U.S. government on July 17. We are making the necessary arrangements to receive these remains in Hanoi."

The statement carefully avoided describing the remains as those of Americans. It said they will be examined by U.S. experts at a government laboratory in Hawaii "for identification and subsequent return to the next of kin."

So far in the 11 years since the end of U.S. involvement in the Southeast Asia war, the Vietnamese have returned 88 sets of remains. The Pentagon still lists 2,489 men, virtually all pilots and other air crewmen, as unaccounted for.

The slow pace of Vietnam's return of American remains has been a sore point between the two former enemies and is believed to be partly responsible for impeding any normalization of relations.

Early in May, Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong said in a Newsweek magazine interview that his government would turn over the remains of eight Americans later that month. He denied there are any Americans still alive in his country and said that "anyone who believes so is daydreaming."

Earlier this week, a senior Vietnamese official told reporters in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, that continuing U.S. unfriendliness toward Vietnam had hurt Hanoi's efforts to get villagers to cooperate in searching for missing Americans.

This official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, blamed this reluctance on memories of deaths among the civilian population as a result of U.S. bombing.

A team of U.S. technicians had been scheduled to visit Hanoi in mid-April for discussions, after a series of low-key meetings in recent years. But Hanoi abruptly canceled that meeting without public explanation.

Asked whether a new date has been set for such a visit by U.S. technicians, a Pentagon spokesman replied, "not yet." He said the Pentagon suggested a general time and is waiting for the Vietnamese to propose a specific date.

Freed prisoner faces charges of drug smuggling

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Clarence W. Elbourne, one of 22 Americans freed from Cuban jails last week through the efforts of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, now faces arraignment on a drug smuggling charge.

Elbourne, 47, of James City County, appeared in U.S. District Court in Norfolk Tuesday for arraignment on a charge of conspiracy to distribute marijuana, but the hearing was continued until July 11 so he could consult a court-appointed attorney.

Cubs have fireworks show

Midland nips Dodgers 8-6

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs opened a six-game homestand with an 8-6 win over the San Antonio Dodgers before 2,749 Fireworks night fans at Cubs Stadium Tuesday.

There were about as many fans outside the park for the post-game Downtown Optimist Club show as there were inside. Cars parked on loop 250 as far east as the 15th tee box at Hogan Park golf course and lined both sides of Lamesa Road from the loop to Golf Course.

It was quite a homecoming for the Cubs, who were still sleepy-eyed after an 11-hour bus ride from Beaumont, but if Tuesday's game is an indication of how the team responds to an all-night ride, Manager George Enright would have been wise to pile the club into the bus after the game for a West Texas joy ride.

BUT HE didn't. Instead, he called for a morning workout today. "The way we've been playing on the road, we need the work. I plan a workout ever morning while we are home," Enright said.

The Cubs exploded for five runs and a 5-1 lead in the fourth, but then had to hang on for the win. Lefthander Jim Boudreau, 6-7, came on in relief to get the win and Ron Kaufman pitched the ninth inning for the save, his third.

Joe Housey was within one out of pitching the five innings necessary to make him eligible for the win, but a five-hit, four-run rally in the fifth forced Enright to summon Boudreau from the bullpen.

Darrin Jackson doubled home what proved to be the decisive run for the Cubs in the fifth after walks to Paul Noce and Boudreau. Midland added another run in the seventh when Boudreau and Mike Brumley walked, moved up on Jackson's sacrifice and scored on Shawon Dunston's fly to right.

THE CUBS five-run, 10-batter fifth was aided no little when pitcher Carlos Granillo threw wildly to third as he attempted to get a force out on a bunt by Housey. Two runs raced home. Then, with two out, Jackson delivered a run-scoring double. Dunston singled to knock Granillo out of the box and Jeff Jones singled home Jackson.

Granillo was charged with six runs, but only one was earned.

The Cubs scored in the first when Mike Brumley walked, Dunston singled and Jones beat out an infield hit to load the bases. A passed ball let Brumley, playing center now that Ricky Baker has been moved to Iowa, waltz home. It looked like the Cubs would score some more when Dan Norman singled to right. Dunston tagging up, had to hold at third. Then, when Joe Henderson flew to center, Dunston went down the line, then had to tag up and was doubled at the plate.

Lefthander Tandy Charley, 2-1, will go in tonight at 7:30 p.m. in another Fireworks game.

CUBS PAWS— Dunston stretched his current hitting streak to 12 straight with two hits...Pitcher Mike Capel, 1-10, has been farmed out to Lodi, the A California League. The Cubs arenow 16-20 at home....Cecil Espy hit his fifth homer, a solo blow off Housey in the fourth...Larry See tagged his second off Boudreau in the eighth, the lone run given up by the lefty...

Charley lost a 2-0 decision to Beaumont in his most recent start, but didn't allow an earned run...

Shriver ousted in quarterfinals

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Led by Martina Navratilova, three players moved into the semifinals of the Wimbledon tennis championships Tuesday, while Chris Evert Lloyd remained a step behind.

In a mild upset, sixth-seeded Kathy Jordan defeated No. 4 Pam Shriver 2-6, 6-3, 6-4 in an all-American battle and will take on Navratilova in one semifinal. No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia crushed No. 10 Jo Durie of Britain 6-1, 6-4 and now will await the winner of Wednesday's match between Lloyd and qualifier Carina Karlsson of Sweden.

Navratilova, seeking her third consecutive Wimbledon women's singles crown and her fifth straight Grand Slam title, had little trouble getting past seventh-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-3, 6-2.

Lloyd, the tournament's No. 2 seed who is a round behind the others, advanced to the quarterfinals with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over No. 12 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch.

In the men's quarterfinals, scheduled to be played on Wednesday, top-seeded John McEnroe meets fellow American John Sadri, No. 6 Andres Gomez of Ecuador plays Australian Pat Cash, No. 2 Ivan Lendl and No. 13 Tomas Smid clash in a battle of Czechoslovakian Davis Cup teammates, and No. 3 Jimmy Connors faces qualifier Paul Annacone.

Shriver, who with Navratilova has won the last four Grand Slam women's doubles titles, zipped through her first set against Jordan, then moved out to a 3-2, 0-30 lead in the second set.

But Jordan held her service, staving off one break point and, at the same time, breaking Shriver's spirit.

Jordan, a quarterfinalist here at the All-England Championships last year, ripped off five consecutive games, closing out the second set and taking a 1-0 lead in the third. When she pulled off the only service break in the third set, that coming in the 10th game, she had grabbed the victory and moved into the semifinals.

"In the second set, she got really irritated on one game and then didn't like the call on one game and she totally blew the game because she was thinking about it," Jordan said of Shriver.

"I had my chances to win, especially in the third set," Shriver said, "but I did not come up with the big shots. I really gagged it on that last game and did not play tough."

Navratilova had no such problems, needing 61 minutes to dispatch Maleeva.

She raced out to a 3-1 lead in the first set and grabbed a 4-1 advantage in the second.

"Today's match took longer than the score looked, but she only had one break point on me the whole match and I never felt threatened," Navratilova said.

Playing at the top of her game, Mandlikova made her victory over Durie look easy. One of the most graceful players in the game today, her strokes were sheer excellence: slashing cross-court passing shots, rifling down-the-line forehands and backhands, and crisp, accurate volleys.

"It didn't look easy to me on the court," said Mandlikova, who won the Australian Open in 1980 and the French Open in 1981, and was the runner-up here three years ago. "It was a very tough match and I am glad it's over."

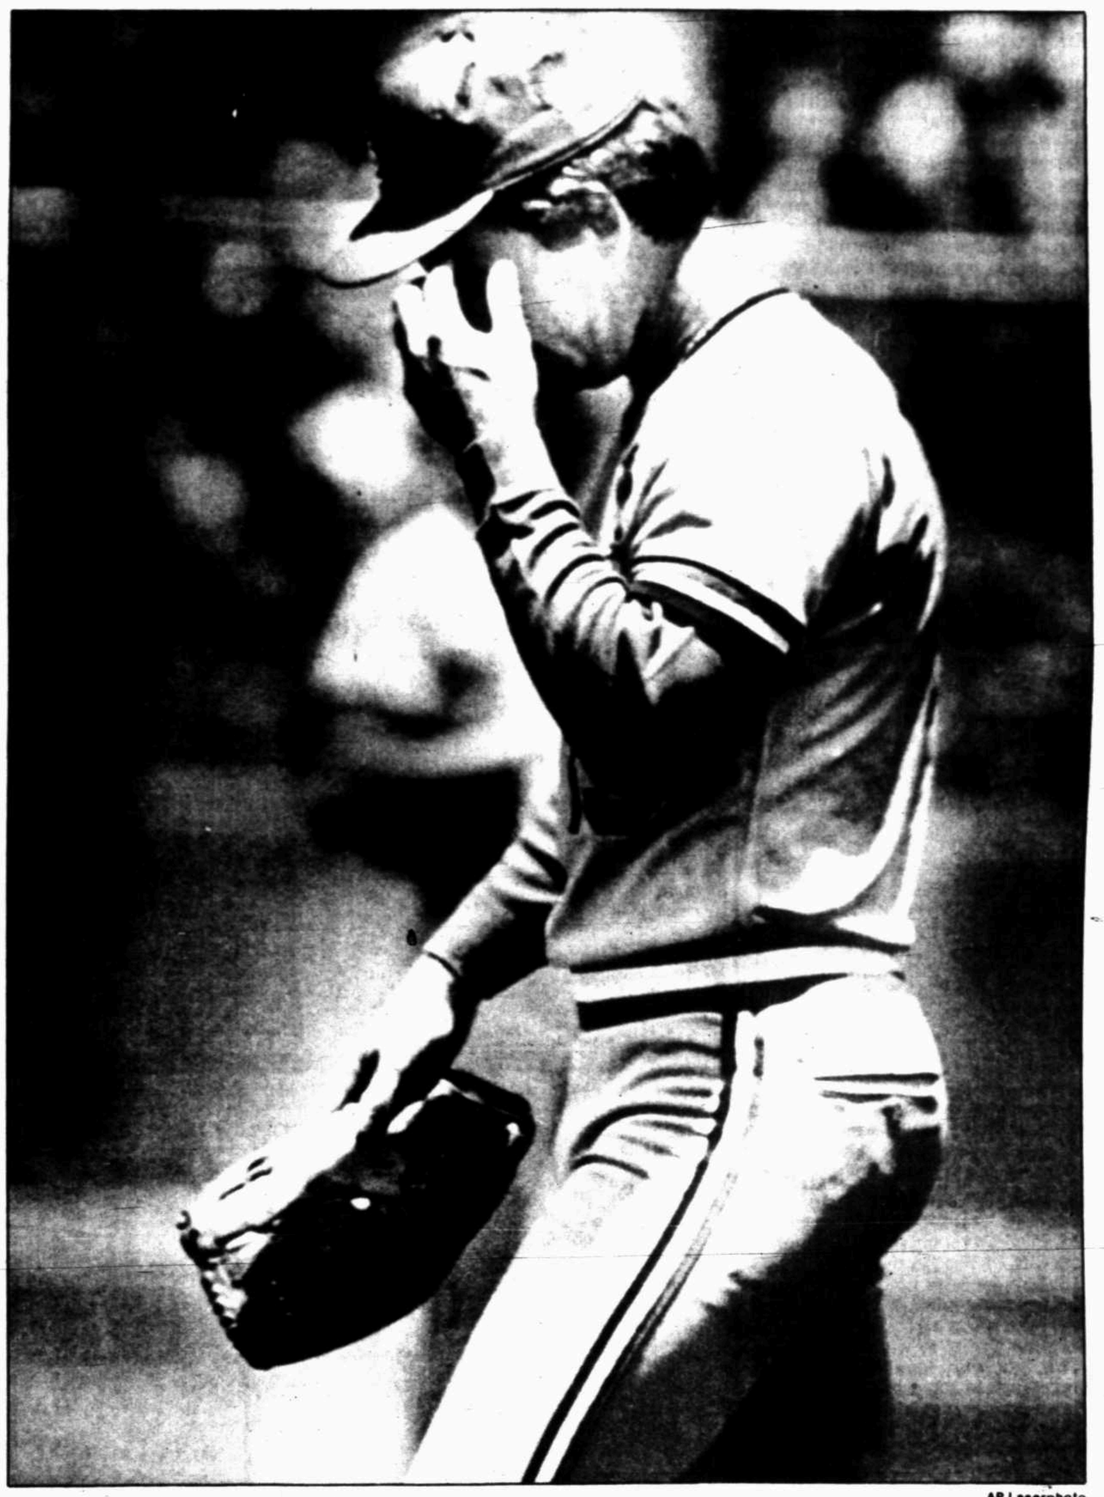

Any problems Mandlikova may have had — and she didn't have many — came from the center court crowd, which was pulling for Durie.

In the second set, the cheers grew as Durie captured four consecutive games to take a 4-2 lead. But it was her last gasp — and Britain's. She was the final British hope in the running for either the men's or women's singles titles.

With machine-like precision, Lloyd deflated Kohde-Kilsch's big serves with her patented baseline game. And when the West German did venture to the net, Lloyd's accurate passing shots piled up the points.

But the No. 2 seed ran into problems closing out the match. Serving at 5-3, Lloyd dropped her serve. But after Kohde-Kilsch held to pull to within 4-5, Lloyd held at 15, advancing to her quarterfinal meeting with Carlsson.

The 20-year-old Carlsson has already made history in this year's tournament, being the first qualifier in the women's singles ever to reach the quarterfinals.

Evert Lloyd relegated to supporting role

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — After years at the top of her sport, Chris Evert Lloyd is emerging as the forgotten woman of Wimbledon.

Winner of 15 grand slam tournament titles, including three Wimbledon singles crowns, the 29-year-old Lloyd dominated the women's circuit for almost a decade but now finds herself a distant second to Martina Navratilova.

As far as the British bookmakers are concerned, Lloyd, with her patient baseline game, hasn't a hope of winning the title on the fast grass courts here. Navratilova is such a hot favorite to defend her title that one bookmaking firm is refusing even to issue odds on the eventual winner.

Hana Mandlikova, with her touch play and aggressive all-round game, and the big servers like Pam Shriver and Kathy Jordan are the players considered to have the best chances of upsetting Navratilova, who has lost only two matches since the start of last year.

Lloyd has lost 11 consecutive matches to Navratilova, and has not beaten the Czech-born naturalized American since the final of the 1982 Australian Open.

That, Lloyd believes, is the extent of her problem.

"If it weren't for Navratilova," she said, "I'd still be dominating tennis.

"There is a big gap between No. 1 and No. 2, but there's also a big gap between No. 2 and No. 3."

While Navratilova raced through her first three matches here for the loss of only 15 games, Lloyd twice had to struggle to make it to the last 16. In her second-round match she dropped a set against fellow-American Betsy Nagelsen, then needed four match points to get past 17-year-old British junior Annabel Croft on Saturday.

Lloyd last won Wimbledon in 1981 and suffered a humiliating defeat in the third round last year, when she lost to Kathy Jordan — the first time she had ever failed to reach the semifinals of a grand slam event.

Earlier this year she suffered her first defeat by Navratilova on her favorite surface, clay, and was recently beaten again by the world's No. 1 player in the final of the French Open, also on clay.

Court ruling could spell chaos

By SCOTT OSTLER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Let's hear it for the Supreme Court, which is not to be confused with the artificial playing surface of the same name.

The U.S. Supremes ruled last week that the NCAA's control of college football telecasts violated antitrust laws, and member schools may now sell their football games to the highest TV bidder.

Some analysts predict that this decision will mark the beginning of the end of life on earth as we know it. Others are more pessimistic.

What apparently will happen is that a handful of the major schools will sell their games for a huge amount of money and not split the dough with the other teams in their respective conferences.

That will create an unofficial super-league of elite teams, push mediocre football programs down into obscurity and put some teams out of business.

I happen to think the court's decision is a good one that will result in all kinds of positive changes.

For instance, there will be more games on TV every Saturday. We'll have "Sunrise Kickoff" and the "Late, Late, Late Game."

One TV set will no longer be sufficient. Even the casual fan will need to buy three or four extra sets, stimulating the economy.

All those sets will take up space, providing fans with an excuse to finally get rid of those unsightly bookshelves.

(NCAA calls meeting, page 4B)

Still, education will be served. Many colleges will find it necessary to de-emphasize football. For many athletes, this will reverse the trend of schools de-emphasizing school.

The rich teams will get richer, of course, but that only means better football. Oklahoma, for instance, will use the extra money from its fat TV contract to expand its recruiting network into Eastern Europe and the South Pacific.

The game will become more exciting because college football will become a TV game. Teams that once coasted along on guaranteed money from conference TV packages, offering a bland product, will suddenly be competing for TV viewers and dollars.

The competition to put out a more entertaining TV spectacle should result in headlines like:

"Big Ten Outlaws Helmets; Vows Return to Manly Football"

"Pac-10 Outlaws Defensive Backs"

"SEC Eliminates Game Officials"

Coaches will feel the pressure.

"Sure, we climbed ahead of USC and Alabama in the polls this week," the coach will say, "but we can't ease up now. We're still ranked behind 'Love Boat' and '60 Minutes.'"

The big teams, I believe, will junk the stale, traditional game format and adopt a strategy invented by TV soap operas.

The soaps leave the viewer in suspense at the end of each episode, forcing them to tune in the next day.

Now football teams will do that, too. Let's say USC plays Alabama on opening day. The teams will play only the first three quarters. The following Saturday, USC and 'Bama will play the fourth quarter. Then, after a brief intermission for travel, USC will play Notre Dame for three quarters.

Viewers will get their four quarters of football, and will see the finish of a game every Saturday, but will be left hanging from week to week.

When TV ratings points become as vital as football points, you pull out all your stops. Instead of asking the school's marching band to pay a halftime musical tribute to fast foods, you bring in Willie Nelson and Julio Iglesias to sing a medley of college fight songs.

Certainly, one result of the Supreme Court's decision will be fewer mismatches. Schools that traditionally play eight or nine patsies per season in order to pad the old won-lost record will reassess the scheduling.

College football has always been something like an NBA made up of Boston, L.A., Philadelphia and 20 Clevelands. Mismatches bordering on the criminal have been the rule rather than the exception.

Now, with pressure on the schools to put on a good show every week, competition will seek its own level. The big teams will no longer routinely duck one another. There will be titanic showdowns every week.

The question is not whether college football can survive the Supreme Court's ruling, but whether we the viewers can survive the excitement of this new brand of college football.

IOC has one Olympic product they won't endorse

By MARY LOVE
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Everything connected with the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games, it seems, is "official," from candy bars to airlines.

Now, however, along comes The Unofficial Guide to the 1984 Los Angeles Games, a publication that "will never be endorsed by the International Olympic Committee," its authors say.

The 56-page magazine ("$3.50 or negotiable equivalent in gold, silver or used TV sets") spoofs just about every aspect of the Games, from the city where they will be held to the events themselves. Even the official mascot, Sam the Eagle, is transformed into a beer-quaffing Victor the Vulture.

Olympic gold was not the motive, says Ray Richmond, one of the guide's authors. Richmond, a 26-year-old Los Angeles native, is a self-confessed "hyperactive workaholic."

"If anybody thinks we did this to make a large sum of money, which I don't deny we'd love to, they're crazy," he says. "We did it, as corny as it sounds, simply for the experience and fun of it. I'll be happy if we break even."

A lot of work went into the guide, he points out, noting that it is chock-full of copy, even a glossary designed to help visitors understand the natives.

Seasons in Los Angeles, the glossary warns, are "Fire, Flood, Earthquake and TV. During the Brown administration, it had only two: Manic and Depressive."

Rain, the glossary cautions, is an "unusual climatic condition" in Southern California. "When rain occurs ... all vehicular traffic halts to commemorate the event. Rain plus wind in excess of 5 mph is called a hurricane."

"It's all meant in fun," Richmond explains, "strictly a joke. We didn't try to cast the city of LA in a bad light, we just tried to have fun."

The fun includes Unofficial Olympics events like:

— Airporting Ceremonies, or "The pageantry of the March of Spectators of All Friendly Nations, most of whom will be marching to the airline offices to scream about their lost luggage ... (and) the Ceremonial Lighting of the Traditional Short Fuse as Moonies accost one too many tourists."

— Wait Lifting: "Waiting in line to get in line."

— Hot Tub Swimming: "In this least demanding of water sports, mixed teams of men and women attempt to endure 110-degree temperatures while sipping margaritas ..."

— Marijuana Toss: "The objective is to hurl the goods across an apartment and out an open window before sheriff's deputies can break down the door and claim it for themselves."

—'Zen Archery: "The sport of the true Southern California seeker of esoterica, this event requires no bow, no arrows and no target. Just concentrate, concentrate, BULL'S-EYE!"

"That's the perception people have of LA," Richmond says, "not necessarily ours, you know, hot tubs and Zen."

The official sponsors also come in for their share of ribbing. On shopping at the official Olympic convenience store, the guide promises, "You'll enjoy ordering your considerably overpriced groceries from a smiling clerk who speaks seven Olympic languages, none of which happens to be English."

The Unofficial Committee, the guide continues, "had planned to give the snack food nod to Twinkies, but ... surprise! Twinkies is an official product. This is wonderful news for the spectator who plans on shooting someone during the Games. He'll probably get off with a sentence of 50 push-ups and a few laps around Parker Center."

It took Richmond, co-author Bill MacRae and illustrator Chuck Siler some nine months to put the guide together. "We wrote everything ourselves, we printed it ourselves, we laid it out ourselves," he says. "It's been grass-roots from the word go. We even distribute it ourselves." (It's available at several local outlets, but for a "guaranteed" copy it's best to order it by mail, sending $3.50, plus 75 cents to cover postage, to Unofficial Guide, P.O. Box 6195, Olympic Station, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

They printed up 15,000 copies, although their original goal was much lower. But when a local radio station ordered 5,000 copies that "sort of made it a legitimate product," Richmond says.

Much of the humor (like the Unofficial Arts Festival "featuring the Gridlock Ensemble at the interchange of the San Diego and Santa Monica freeway") can best be appreciated by residents. That, Richmond says, is quite deliberate, explaining that he and his fellow authors felt the guide should be geared toward residents since so much written material on the Olympics is meant for tourists.

Has anyone from the official Olympic Organizing Committee had any reaction to the spoof? Not yet, Richmond says, adding that so far as he knows no one from the official committee has seen the booklet, which only came out in April.

In the guide's letters to the authors section, dubbed Dear Ray & Bill, a jive-talking ticket scalper's letter offering basketball tickets at "a grand three" each is signed P. Ueberroth. ("That's Poncho Ueberroth," not Peter, president of the OOC, says Richmond quickly and a trifle nervously.)

Nor does Richmond think he'll send Ueberroth a copy. "He's not going to be in the best of moods with this Russian thing."

But, Richmond says, the Russian withdrawal from the Games, while a "real disappointment," might help with sales of the spoof. People "will need a laugh," he says.

Hough, a 36-year old knuckleballer and the league's Pitcher of the Month in June of last season, was unbeaten last month, compiling a 4-0 record in six games with four complete games. In 55 innings pitched, he allowed 38 hits, walked 18, struck out 39 and permitted only eight earned runs for an earned run average of 1.31.

U.S. divers top medal candidates

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Divers representing the United States in the Summer Olympics are solid contenders for gold and silver medals in Los Angeles, says Phil Boggs, the president of United States Diving.

"We are the best there are in the world," said Boggs at a luncheon held Tuesday as a preliminary to the opening of the U.S. Diving Olympic Trials. "We have divers who have proven themselves in internation competition countless times. But, the toughest part of these trials will be to eliminate some of the world's best divers from making it to Los Angeles."

The trials at the Indiana University Natatorium begin today with women's springboard preliminaries and concludes Sunday with the men's platform finals.

Only two divers will advance to Los Angeles in each event.

"No matter who makes it, we're going to do well," said Michigan Coach Dick Kimball, who will be assisting Ron O' Brien in coaching the U.S. Olympic team. "There's no doubt we've got outstanding potential. There are several reasons, including that some of our 1980 team continued in the sport after missing the opportunity to compete due to our boycott."

The list of 57 competitors includes three-time world champion Greg Louganis, a gold medal possibility on both the platform and springboard; Megan Neyer, the women's world champion on the springboard; Kelly McCormick, the current national three-meter springboard champion and Wendy Wyland, the current world and national platform champion.

Other hopefuls include two-time national springboard champion Chris Seufert, Bruce Kimball, who defeated Louganis on the platform at this year's national championships; and two-time national one-meter springboard champion Ron Merriott.

Dave Burgering, a member of the U.S. diving team since 1977, admits the boycott of the Moscow Olympics has helped keep him in the sport.

"I'm trying not to think about it (the possibility his career could end here)," said Burgering, who will be 30 on Saturday. "I've stayed in the sport because of our 1980 boycott, but I'm still having fun."

LLOYD

Forty-eight hours before launching the defense of her French title, Lloyd suffered a shock defeat in the final of the Italian Open against Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria.

With those defeats behind her, seasoned tennis correspondents are asking how she can expect to win on a surface unsuited to her style.

"For Chris to be on top again she'll have to be more aggressive," said Navratilova during the first week of Wimbledon.

"She's great at the net, better than most. I don't know why she doesn't come in more often."

As well as trying to keep pace with Navratilova's relentless pursuit of success, Lloyd also has had to cope with a much-publicized separation from her estranged British husband, John Lloyd.

The British press seem fascinated with the subject and report diligently John's reactions when he watches her matches.

Despite being dismissed as a potential champion this year by a large section of the Wimbledon tennis media, Lloyd is still the world's second-ranked woman player and is seeded No. 2 behind the titleholder.

If the seedings hold true, she is scheduled to meet Mandlikova in the semifinals and has no doubt about her ability to win.

The fact that Mandlikova is the only player to have beaten Navratilova this year means little in terms of her own capabilities against the 23-year-old Czech, Lloyd said.

"People tend to ignore my record against Hana. We've probably met about 20 times and she's probably beaten me only about three times. People don't realize that I haven't lost to her in three years. I'm still up there. The Hana Mandlikovas and Pam Shrivers lose all the time."

Lloyd admitted that her concentration at times let her down but said she has no thoughts about giving up the game.

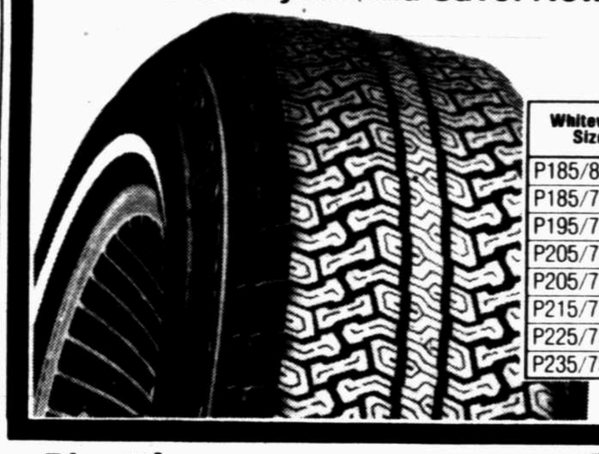

"I'm not even thinking about retiring," she said. "I still love the game and I want to get better."

Yarborough guns for fifth straight

Firecracker 400

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough, sitting on the pole for a Grand National race at Daytona International Speedway for the 11th time, will be gunning for a record-tying fifth victory in today's $387,300 Firecracker 400.

Yarborough, winner of the prestigous Daytona 500 in February, captured the inside position on the front row for the annual July 4 NASCAR race by touring the 2.5-mile, high-banked trioval in a record qualifying speed of 199.743 miles per hour.

It will be the fifth time in seven years that's he has started from that spot, though 1981 was only year the four-time champion won the 400-mile event during that stretch. Yarborough, who'll drive a Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, also won the Firecracker in 1967, 1968 and 1976.

"It's a habit I like," the 44-year-old Timmonsville, N.C. driver said of winning the pole. "For some reason, it's a track I get around well.

"We'll run this race the same as we did the 500 and try to stay up front," he added. "We'll just give it all we've got."

Dale Earnhardt, the second fastest qualifier with a speed of 197.676, will start outside Yarborough on the first row, also in a Monte Carlo SS.

A nine-time Grand National winner, Earnhardt is chasing his first victory in 1984 though he's raced well, finishing second three times.

"I'm happy to be on the outside," the runnerup to Yarborough in the Daytona 500 said. "This is the same engine we qualified here with in February and we are within about a tenth (second) of that time.

"We're hoping to stay close and stay out of trouble," Earnhardt added, "and if we do that, we can win in the end."

Others starting near the front in the 42-car field are Bill Elliott, Terry Labonte, five-time Firecracker winner David Pearson and Richard Petty, who's chasing his 200th career victory.

"We've run real good this year and it's just been the little things that have kept us from winning," said Pearson, who's still looking for his first triumph in 1984.

"I feel confident going into this race but I've felt confident going into all of them," Pearson added. "This race and this track has been good to me in the past, and it would tickle the heck out of me to win this one."

A crowd of about 70,000 plus President Reagan are expected for the 10 a.m. EDT race.

Reagan is to give the traditional "Gentlemen, start your engines," via radio while en route to Daytona Beach aboard Air Force One.

He will arrive well after the race is underway and is expected to join the Motor Racing Network broadcast crew to provide radio commentary for the latter stages of the race.

The final 20 regular spots, plus two provisional berths, in the field were filled during qualifying Tuesday. Joining Monday's qualifiers were:

Dick Brooks, 195.313 mph; Ricky Rudd, 194.439; Dave Marcis, 194.338; Ken Ragan, 194.275; Ronnie Thomas, 194.074; Geoff Bodine, 194.041; Ron Bouchard, 193.970; Mike Alexander, 193.840; Bobby Hillin Jr., 193.511; Sterling Marlin, 193.482.

Greg Sacks, 193.216; Dean Roper, 193.154; D.K. Ulrich, 192.963; Dean Combs, 192.596; Tommy Gale, 192.410; Morgan Shepherd, 192.299; Steve Moore, 192.271; Trevor Boys, 192.250; Jimmy Means, 191.881 and Doug Heveron, 191.571.

Tim Richmond, 191.526, and Buddy Arrington, 191.347, were the 41st and 42nd best qualifiers and were awarded provisional starting berths.

'Great White Shark' hungry for Western

Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Australian Greg Norman is riding golf's best-in-the-game streak as he seeks a fifth victory of the season this week in the $400,000 Western Open.

Norman, known as the "Great White Shark," won twice in Australia early in the year and last Sunday scored his second PGA Tour triumph in the Canadian Open.

That victory was worth $72,000 in American funds and boosted Norman's winnings for his last four starts to $201,000. In that period, in addition to the Canadian triumph, he won the Kemper Open in Bethesda, Md., lost to Fuzzy Zoeller in a playoff for the U.S. Open in Mamaroneck, N.Y., and tied for 10th in the Atlanta Classic.

That recent success story enabled the powerful, white-haired Norman to join Tom Watson, Tom Kite and Gary Koch as the only multiple winners on the Tour this season, confirmed his position among the top rank of golf's leading players and stamped him a prime contender for the British Open title, to be played at St. Andrews, Scotland, in two weeks.

"I can't wait to get there," Norman said. "I'm really looking forward to it.

"I'd like to have a two-week break going into St. Andrews, but I'd committed to play in the Western, so I'll just go ahead and try to win this golf tournament, too."

He'll be facing a strong lineup, which includes Watson and Masters champion Ben Crenshaw in the 156-man field that begins play Thursday on the very difficult Butler National Golf Club course in the old event that has a history dating back to 1899.

Watson, currently the game's leading money-winner and making his last start before the defense of his British Open crown, has a special affection for this tournament. He's won it twice, was a one-shot runnerup last year and scored this first of his 35 career victories in the Western Open 10 years ago.

Among the other leading contenders for the $72,000 first prize are defending champion Mark McCumber, Ray Floyd and PGA champion Hal Sutton, who has been ninth or better in six of his last nine starts.

Also on hand are Andy Bean, Scott Simpson, Fred Couples, Nick Faldo, Cal Peete, Bruce Litzke, Gil Morgan and Nick Price, the South African who led through the first three rounds of the Canadian Open.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

NCAA calls meeting to discuss TV plans

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA announced Tuesday a special meeting of its football-playing schools will be held in Chicago July 10 to discuss a television plan it hopes will meet federal court approval.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled last week that the NCAA's television contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN, violate federal antitrust laws.

Jim Shaffer of the NCAA said the organization's attorneys are seeking clarifications from U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga on the TV contracts matter. Burciaga handed down the original decision against the NCAA's control over college football TV.

Shaffer said a specific plan to present to the Chicago meeting has not yet been worked out. And whatever happens in Chicago has to meet federal court approval.

Eligible for the meeting are schools in Division I-A, made up of 105 major conference members and independents, and 85 Division I-AA schools.

Many of those close to college football fear chaos might result from an absence of centralized controls of football television. Depending on the intrepretation of the opinion, the NCAA might offer a voluntary plan in competition with one by the College Football Association.

And if a new bureaucracy is set up to administer a new national plan, someone must be put in charge.

A majority of the I-A schools and almost all lower-division institutions, fearful of unrestrained appearances by the major powers, wanted the NCAA to prevail. But in a 7-2 vote, the high court struck down the exclusive controls the NCAA has exercised over football telecasts rights for 33 years.

Ruling in an antitrust case brought by Oklahoma and Georgia, the court also voided contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN totaling more than $150 million the next two years, freeing every school to make whatever football deal it wants.

The ruling does not amount to a substantial loss for the NCAA, which derives most of its operating revenue from the basketball tournament.

For the television viewer, it probably means more regional games and roughly the same number of national telecasts will be available for viewing.

"It has been said the NCAA's rules restrain some of the good games from appearing on television," said Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, after the court's ruling.

"The quality of football on television will improve. More of the attractive games will be seen," he said.

ABC and CBS are assured of retaining rights to national telecasts this year under tentative agreements reached earlier by the CFA and Big Ten and Pac-10 schools.

The CFA and the Big Ten-Pac-10 coalition have hammered out a tentative plan along the lines of the NCAA program, with one major exception: An "open window" period will be set aside, probably during the evening, when schools and conferences are allowed to air their own telecasts. The afternoon time slot on Saturdays, under the tantative agreement, will be reserved for national telecasts.

Smoking Jays have HR explosion

From Wire Reports

TORONTO — Damaso Garcia hit his first two home runs of the season and Jesse Barfield hit one, all lead-off shots in the first three innings, and the Toronto Blue Jays went on to defeat the California Angels 4-0 behind Jim Gott's two-hit pitching.

Gott struck out eight and did not walk a batter in winning his fifth game in a row after dropping his first two decisions of the year. It was his first complete game.

The 6-foot-4 right hander retired the first nine California batters and faced only one over the minimum. Rod Carew and Reggie Jackson singled in the fourth and fifth innings, respectively, but neither advanced past first.

Tommy John, 4-7, was the loser as the Angels had their three-game winning streak snapped.

Garcia, back in the lineup after sitting out Monday's game for the first time this year, hit John's first pitch of the game into the left-field seats for his first home run of the season.

Twins 3, Orioles 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota's Mike Smithson checked Baltimore on five hits and Kent Hrbek whacked his third home run in three games as the Twins topped the Orioles 3-1.

Smithson, 9-7, retired the first 11 Orioles before Cal Ripken Jr.'s fourth-inning single.The 6-foot-8 right-hander struck out seven and walked none in his sixth complete game in 19 starts. He yielded a run in the eighth on Jim Dwyer's pinch double and a single by Al Bumbry.

The Twins have won all five home games against the defending world champions in 1984 and are over .500 at 40-39 for the first time this late in the season since 1979. They have won three games in a row, seven of 10 and are second in the American League West, two games behind California, which lost to Toronto.

Hrbek's 10th home run, a 416-foot clout to center field in the first inning, followed Dave Engle's two-out single. Minnesota added a run in the fifth off Mike Flanagan, 8-6, on singles by Kirby Puckett and Mickey Hatcher and Engle's sacrifice fly.

Hrbek also had a double in the third inning. In his last eight games he is batting .500 with 10 runs batted in, five doubles and three homers and his average for the season is .329.

The Orioles lost for the seventh time in their last 10 games.

Indians 15, Royals 3

CLEVELAND — Andre Thornton drove in three runs with three hits, including his 200th career home run, as the Cleveland Indians routed Kansas City 15-3 and snapping the Royals' longest winning streak of the season at five games.

Bert Blyleven, 7-3, earned the victory with a four-hitter despite yielding solo home runs to Steve Balboni in the fifth and seventh innings. Balboni has 14 homers for the season, nine in his last 12 games. Blyleven struck out nine and walked two in pitching his second complete game.

The Indians hammered out 23 hits off four pitchers in ending Kansas City's longest winning streak of the season at five games. Outfielder Leon Roberts pitched the eighth inning, allowing three runs and four hits while walking one and striking out one. Chris Bando tagged him for a two-run homer and Julio Franco had an RBI single.

The Indians jumped on Bud Black, 9-6, for four runs on six hits in the first inning and followed with four runs on six hits in the second off Black and Joe Beckwith.

American League

Yankees 5, Rangers 4

ARLINGTON — Don Baylor hit a two-run homer and Marty Bystrom allowed two runs in six innings in his American League debut as the New York Yankees ended a four-game losing streak by defeating the Texas Rangers 5-4.

Bystrom was making his first appearance since the Yankees acquired him from the Philadelphia Phillies on Saturday. He allowed five hits, including the first of Gary Ward's two homers, while striking out four and walking none.

Ray Fontenot pitched two innings and was tagged for a two-run homer by Ward in the seventh. Dave Righetti worked the ninth for his 10th save.

Loser Frank Tanana, 8-8, gave up three runs on eight hits in six innings.

Dave Winfield had two hits in four at-bats and boosted his league-leading average to .374. He is 6-for-12 since missing four games with a shoulder injury.

White Sox 9, Tigers 5

CHICAGO — Greg Luzinski drove in four runs, three with a towering roof shot home run, and the Chicago White Sox rolled to a 9-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Tom Seaver, 7-6, was the winner despite yielding three home runs while Jack Morris, 12-5, took the loss in his first appearance against the White Sox since he no-hit them on April 7. The setback gave the Tigers a three-game losing streak for only the second time all season and sliced their lead over Toronto in the American League East to eight games.

Seaver, who worked six innings, did not allow another hit until Ruppert Jones and Howard Johnson hit solo homers in the sixth. Jones' was his fifth and landed on the roof in right field, the 29th blast in Comiskey Park history to reach the roof and the first time in the stadium's 74-year history that two homers were hit onto the roof in the same game. Johnson's homer was his seventh.

Red Sox 6, Athletics 5

BOSTON — Gary Allenson lined a run-scoring single off the left-field wall with none out in the ninth inning, lifting Boston to a 6-5 victory over the Oakland Athletics that snapped the Red Sox' four-game losing streak.

Mike Easler, who hit a two-run homer earlier in the game, began the ninth with a single and took second when Bill Buckner singled off shortstop Tony Phillips' glove. Allenson squared away to bunt against the charging infield on the first pitch from reliever Lary Sorensen, 2-9, first pitch and then crossed up the A's with his line shot.

Bob Stanley, 4-6, the fourth Boston pitcher, pitched three hitless innings to pick up the victory.

The Red Sox tied it with three runs in the fifth. Jim Rice broke an 0-for-17 slump with a single and later scored on a single by Armas, who extended his hitting streak to 16 games, a career high. Easler followed with his 15th homer into the screen in left-center.

Brewers 11, Mariners 6

MILWAUKEE — Ted Simmons drove in three runs and Jim Sundberg had a homer and RBI double, powering the Milwaukee Brewers to an 11-6 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Pete Ladd, 2-4, went the last four innings and was credited with the victory.

Surging Giants rap Cardinals

National League

SAN FRANCISCO — The surging San Francisco Giants bunched six of their eight hits in a five-run, second-inning rally that carried right-hander Mike Krukow to a 6-2 victory Tuesday over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Krukow, 4-7, posted his first victory since May 24, and the Giants extended their winning streak to six games, a season high and the longest current streak in the major leagues.

Jeff Leonard opened the second with a walk of loser Neil Allen, 3-2. With two outs, successive singles by Bob Brenly, Brad Wellman, Krukow, Dan Gladden, Johnny LeMaster knocked out Allen and Al Oliver's RBI single off Dave Rucker completed the damage.

The Giants added an unearned run in the sixth after Brenly doubled and scored when Cardinal shortstop Ozzie Smtih threw the ball away attempting to throw him out at third on a fielder's choice by Wellman.

Krukow, who allowed eight hits and walked two, lost his shutout bid in the eighth when Willie McGee singled with one out and Darrell Porter followed with a home run to right, his seventh of the year.

George Hendrick followed with a single and Frank Williams relieved Krukow. Gary Lavelle took over for Williams in the ninth and got the final three outs.

Braves 5, Expos 3

ATLANTA — Right-hander Craig McMurtry, who had not won at home since April 26, pitched a five-hitter over 7 1-3 innings to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory over the Montreal Expos Tuesday night.

McMurtry, 7-8, fell behind early when the Expos scored a run in the second, but the Braves took the lead on a two-run double by Randy Johnson in the third. They added single runs in the fifth, sixth and eighth — the latter on Dale Murphy's 18th home run of the season — to snap a three-game losing streak.

Gary Carter led off the Expos second with a walk, sped to third on Tim Wallach's single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Tony Scott. But the Braves took the lead in the third on Johnson's two-run double off off Bill Gullickson, 4-6.

Hubbard's seventh homer of the year, leading off the fifth, gave the Braves a 3-1 lead. The Braves added a run in the seventh when Benedict reached on a throwing error by third baseman Wallach, advanced to second on a sacrifice and scored on a single by Ramirez.

The Expos closed to 4-3 and chased McMurtry in the eight when Wallach followed a Carter single with his 13th homer of the year. Donnie Moore relieved and picked up his eighth save.

Mets 4, Astros 3

NEW YORK — Keith Hernandez drilled a two-run homer to cap a three-run sixth inning that chased Houston hurler Nolan Ryan and carried the New York Mets past the Astros 4-3 Tuesday night.

Ryan, 7-3, who was activated from the 15-day disabled list earlier in the day, had won his previous six decisions. He breezed through the first four innings, striking out seven and allowing only one baserunner, on a walk to Hernandez in the first.

George Foster belted his 12th home run to lead off the New York fifth, but Ryan took a 3-1 lead into the sixth.

Wally Backman started New York's rally by singling up the middle, taking second on a wild pitch and scoring when Danny Heep lined a single up the middle past Ryan. Heep's hit prompted a visit to the mound by Houston Manager Bob Lillis, but Hernandez followed by blasting an 0-1 pitch over the right-center field wall for his seveneth homer.

The homer finished Ryan, who gave up five hits and struck out eight.

Harry Spilman drove in all three Houston runs. In the fourth, Jose Cruz doubled and scored on Spilman's single. Spilman hit his second homer of the season in the sixth after Jerry Mumphrey's two-out single off Bruce Berenyi, 5-9.

Bereneyi gave up 10 hits in six innings. Tom Gorman pitched the seveneth and Jesse Orosco finished up for his 16th save.

Cruz went 2-for-3 and now has 20 hits in his last 34 at bats.

Reds 6, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Pitcher Charlie Puleo's two-run double triggered a four-run sixth inning and the Cincinnati Reds held on to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 Tuesday night.

Puleo, 1-1, worked seven innings and gave up eight hits, struck out four and walked three. Ted Power worked the final two innings, allowing three runs.

Phillies starter Jerry Koosman, 8-7, was the loser before 63,816 fans, the largest regular-season crowd in Veterans Stadium history. A post-game fireworks display helped draw the big crowd.

The Reds went ahead 2-1 in the third. Tom Lawless hit a one-out single and reached third on a single by Cesar Cedeno, who took second when left fielder Jeff Stone bobbled the ball.

Lawless scored on Dave Parker's infield out and Cedeno came home on a single by Tony Perez. The RBI was No. 1,585 for Perez, moving him past Harmon Killebrew for 15th place on the all-time list.

The Reds boosted their margin to 6-1 in the sixth. Perez opened with a single and advanced to second on a single by Nick Esasky. Dann Bilardello was safe on a fielder's choice, then Puleo doubled home both runners. The pitcher scored on Eric Davis' first major league home run.

The Phillies had taken a 1-0 lead in the second. Glenn Wilson tripled off the right-field wall with one out and scored on Ivan DeJesus' single to right.

The Phillies' second run came in the sixth on Tim Corcoran's fourth home run of the season. Ozzie Virgil hit his 13th homer, a two-run shot in the eighth to make it 6-4. Mike Schmidt's sacrifice fly in the ninth cut the deficit to 6-5.

But Power got Corcoran to fly out to end the game.

Rural life changed by high technology

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Satellite dishes are sprouting up throughout rural Georgia in a high-tech invasion that is bringing news, sports and entertainment from around the globe to isolated farm families.

Nationwide sales of the satellite systems, which cost an average of $3,000 each, jumped from 20,000 in 1981, to 60,000 in 1982 and about 180,000 in 1983, according to Peter Dalton, president of the Society for Private and Commercial Earth Stations, an industry group.

Dalton estimated 560,000 systems would be installed this year, with sales of at least $1.4 billion.

"For people who are out in the boonies, where cable will never be, they don't have any alternative," said Ken Rodd Jr., whose family owns an electronics firm here that installs the systems.

Industry estimates show there are about 37 million homes in the United States that are not hooked up to cable systems, many in the rural South. However, with a dish and related components, these households can receive signals from more than 30 communications satellites located 22,300 miles above the earth.

The major television networks and cable TV companies, such as Home Box Office, Cinemax and Showtime, beam their signals up to the satellites for distribution to affiliates in far-flung areas.

By tuning in the satellite signals, dish owners gain access to 60 to 100 channels with a wide choice of programming, ranging from movies and sports events to news and educational shows.

Some cable companies objected to the use of dishes because viewers could receive their signals free of charge, but "right now, anything in the air is fair game," said Rodd.

This policy was adopted officially in 1983, when the Federal Communications Commission ruled that local and state governments cannot regulate television programming distributed by satellites to private dwellings.

Rodd said the systems are popular with people in remote areas who are not likely to be linked to cable systems.

"We have a lot of people who are interested in sports and there's no way they're going to get it without a dish," Rodd said. "They have unlimited things to watch" with the satellite dish.

Bobby Smith, 52, who lives in a rural area nine miles east of Albany, purchased a dish about five months ago.

"It opened up a whole new field for us as far as TV was concerned," said Smith, who went on long-term disability about 2½ years ago because of heart problems.

Smith said initially he had to stay inside much of the time because of his heart condition, and couldn't find programs he liked on the three major networks.

"It didn't leave you a big variety. I get a big kick out of watching old movies and I love sports," Smith said. "Now I switch from one channel to another to one satellite to another to get what I want."

Rodd noted that a Direct Broadcast Satellite (DBS) system is expected to begin service soon in most parts of the country. Already in use in Indiana, the DBS system enables viewers to receive signals with a smaller and less costly dish.

The DBS signals, available on five channels, will be scrambled, and viewers will pay a monthly fee of about $29 for the service.

Smith said he and his wife, Barbara, enjoy the convenience their dish affords.

"After working all day, we didn't feel like getting dressed and going to the movies," he said.

With a dish, he said, "you don't have to worry about standing in lines. You can kick your shoes off and get a glass of tea and relax."

'Sly' impresses Parton

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the things that most impresses Dolly Parton about "Rhinestone" co-star Sylvester (Sly) Stallone is that he is also a writer.

Stallone wrote the "Rocky" films and is co-author of "Rhinestone" with Phil Alden Robinson.

"I admire someone who does that," said Miss Parton, who wrote the songs and music for the movie, which is based on the song, "Rhinestone Cowboy."

"I do it all the time myself — plays, songs, stories," she said. "Right now I'm writing stuff for a TV series I'm developing for one of the networks, 'Beulah Faye,' about a country girl who comes to live in Hollywood. I won't be in it; I'm producing it and writing the title song.

3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♣.

If you have the choice of winning a trick in one hand with a high card or in the other with a ruff, it is often right to ruff if you can afford to spend a trump. That principle bore unexpected fruit on this deal.

Note North's false preference of three spades on a doubleton honor. This is clearly the correct bid because he needs four-card support to raise South's second suit. When South simply went on to game, North made one more move by showing his diamond feature, and South needed no further encouragement.

West led the top of his club sequence, and it seemed the contract hinged on finding West with the king of diamonds. Indeed, had declarer won the ace of clubs at trick one, that would have been the case. However, declarer wisely played low from the table and ruffed in hand. He drew trumps in four rounds, with West and dummy both sluffing clubs.

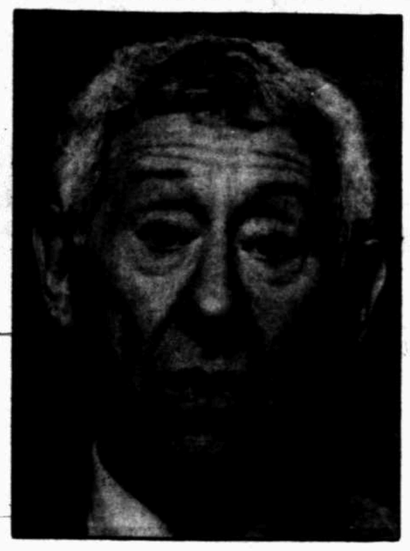

Before committing himself to a diamond lead toward the queen, declarer cashed his three hearts. Both defenders followed, so the board's remaining heart was established. Now declarer cashed the ace of diamonds and continued with a low diamond to the queen and East's king. Declarer's careful groundwork now paid a huge dividend.

East was down to nothing but clubs, so he was forced to throw dummy on lead with the ace of that suit. Declarer discarded his remaining diamonds on the high club and the heart winner, and a slam that seemed doomed came home for handsome profit.

We are not claiming that declarer foresaw all this when he ducked the club at trick one. It is simply a case of good technique earning a just reward.

Russ Morgan's son keeping orchestra alive

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The Russ Morgan Orchestra isn't a big band anymore, and gone are the grand old hotel ballrooms where thousands once danced to it while others listened in on live radio.

But to Jack Morgan, that doesn't matter. He is keeping his late father's "Music in the Morgan Manner" alive.

"There aren't many bands doing this sort of thing anymore," said Morgan in an interview during a recent engagement here. "I think we're the last of our kind still working on a constant basis, and every day that passes we become more rare."

The orchestra's music today is the same that Russ Morgan developed in 1935 for the ballroom dancing so popular then. It was the type of smooth orchestral sound that soon evolved into swing and left the big bands divided between two styles — swing bands such as Glenn Miller's, and sweet bands like Sammy Kaye's.

Morgan, a trombonist who left jazz for the sweet camp, was best known for his "You're Nobody 'Til Somebody Loves You," and had big hits throughout the 1940s despite the increasing prevalence of swing.

He maintained the sound until his death in 1969. His son also has resisted any inclination to jazz it up and make it contemporary.

"We're probably the most authentic to the original sound of any of the hotel-society bands still around," Morgan said. "A lot of the other bands have gone in different directions and aren't the same."

Morgan grew up constantly listening to his father's music. He joined the orchestra when he was 17.

"I came up through the ranks knowing all the arrangements," he said. "I know how they're supposed to sound, and I insist that that's how they're going to sound."

Keeping a constantly changing group of young musicians true to a musical style from 50 years ago requires tight discipline, and Morgan said he is known for that. His musicians must not smoke or drink on stage, must stand up and sit down on cue, and even their solos are written out note for note by Morgan.

"The musicians say that when you join Morgan, you join the army," he said. "There's no room for individual personalities in this music, and I usually leave hardly anything to chance."

Morgan now plays with nine sidemen, while his father used 17. The reason is purely economic — there aren't enough big band fans anymore to keep big bands on the road.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, July 5, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: French author and artist Jean Cocteau, Admiral David Farragut and legendary showman P. T. Barnum were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: former Massachusetts Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., San Diego Padres relief pitcher Rich Gossage, Julie Nixon Eisenhower and Tampa Bay football coach John McKay. Spending more than you planned will finally work to your advantage. Your intuition keeps you from putting your faith in the wrong person or project. Face important issues head-on and you will emerge a winner. Romance carries you to glorious new heights. A financial situation improves. Check partner's story before making a long-term commitment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You feel great enthusiasm for a new project. Old friends are willing to help. Self-discipline lets you demolish a large pile of work. New improvements show promise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You communicate well with your coworkers and faraway contacts. A potential romantic partner is attracted by your witty repartee. Learn from your mistakes but refuse to dwell on them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find it easy to reach agreements with your loved ones. Creative work deserves top priority. Postpone signing contracts. Refuse to take on new responsibilities until you have time to them over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get an early start on your work. A Pisces offers a helping hand. Catch up on your bookkeeping and letter writing. Travel is best postponed. Do business only with well-known customers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentration may be difficult today. Use the phone to reduce time spent on errands. An argument with loved one could center around money. Revise a budget to accommodate all family members.

Local senior citizens gather for lunch

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Lunch-time programs like this one held in Midland at Casa de Amigos, top, are offered to the elderly of Midland and Odessa. Ollie Ransom, above left, serves her fellow senior citizens during a meal last week at Casa de Amigos. More than 51,000 meals have been served to qualifying elderly since October 1983. ODESSA — More than 51,000 meals have been served since October 1983 to an elderly bunch that meets for lunch at one of four senior centers in Midland and Odessa.

"I just don't know what they were doing before. I don't know how they were existing," said Pat Summers, director of the Ector/Midland Counties Elderly Nutrition Program, which has been feeding senior residents of the Petroplex for the past seven years.

Before the program's inception in 1977, many of these aged residents subsisted on cold cereal and other easy, but not nutritionally sufficient, substitutes for the well-balanced, hot meals they eat courtesy of funding provided by the two counties and the state.

"A lot of them are just physically not able," explained Margaret Varley, who balances the program's books. A survey undertaken by an Odessa College sociology student five years ago revealed that 30-40 percent of those turning to the program ate 10 meals or less each week, with the five free lunches providing at least half the nutrition for almost half of them.

Ector County Commissioners voted recently to continue their support, allocating $8,516 for the coming year. Their Midland County counterparts are scheduled to consider appropriating their portion of the 10 percent the two counties must pick up for the program to survive. The state pays the remainder of the budget; $136,127 of almost $152,000 for 1984-85.

Private donations allow the program to feed more people than the subsidy provides for, with the lunch bunch asked to pay whatever they can afford for their meal. This varies from center to center, depending on the economic make-up of the congregation.

From the first meal in October 1977 which attracted 15, the program has grown to provide almost 300 lunches, Monday through Friday. The decision to start the program came as the number of senior citizens coming to the area continued to grow, said Ms. Summers.

"They never had them before. Then, boom, they were here," she said.

Attempts to get the programs started without both counties involved were not successful, said Ms. Summers, because the necessary funds could not be collected.

"So we combined and we got it," she recalled.

All the meals are prepared in the kitchen at Odessa's Eastside Center. Special containers hold the meals, which are driven to the various spots by volunteers.

MidTran transports many of those from Midland's elderly crowd to either Casa de Amigos or Midland Senior Center, while volunteered vehicles carry aged Odessans to the Eastside and Southside Senior Centers.

"I just don't know what they were doing before (the lunch program). I don't know how they were existing... It's a good program, but we're just skimming the top of it."

— Pat Summers, program director

Ms. Summers said of the Casa de Amigos crowd: "They're the lowest income bracket people we have and they ask for the least amount of stuff. They really know how to save."

Isabel Gonzales, director of senior programs at Casa De Amigos, noted that while the ethnic make-up of the crowd called for a bilingual approach, in many ways "they all speak the same language."

The program has moved into feeding homebound elderly and "Austin is swinging toward the homebound people," said Ms. Summers. "I think it's necessary, but the social is just as important as the food."

The largest crowds are at the Eastside Center in Odessa, with as many as 150 gathering on days also featuring meetings of the American Association of Retired Persons. Before, during and after meals, the county's eldest statesmen and women can be found exercising their jaws by other ways than chewing.

"They just live for this," said Ms. Varley. "They consider it their home," added Ms. Summers.

The same can be said at Midland's Casa de Amigos, said Ms. Gonzales. "For many of them, it's the main event of the day."

Much progress has been made in the program's seven years. "It's a good program, but we're just skimming the top of it," said Ms. Summers.

Plans are to expand the homebound program to Midland where it can "take up the gap" the congregate meal program already has in both counties, she said. While qualifying under Department of Human Resources guidelines can be a long, drawn-out and frustrating task, the joint county nutrition program only requires that participants be at least 60 years old and handicapped.

And there is also a benefit in the program for the volunteers involved.

"This makes you realize this is a good world after all," said Ms. Varley.

Property auction grosses $28,965.51 for county

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The sale of 30 lots and acreage on Midland County's delinquent tax rolls grossed $28,965.51 in a monthly constable's sale Tuesday on the courthouse steps.

The tax judgments against the property, mostly vacant lots, totaled $22,904.74, although the appraised value of the property was $90,760.

Eighteen Midlanders latched onto the property in 1¼ hours of auctioning by Deputy Constable Ron Rice. They bought the lots for investments, speculation, business development or just on the chance the risk would turn out into a bonanza.

"This is my first time (to participate in an auction)," admitted Herbert Marshall. "I thought it would be fun. I've always been interested in land."

Marshall found bargains in four lots ranging from $410 to $680.

"It's my mother's money that I'm investing," he said. "It isn't a bad investment at that."

Win or lose, Marshall should come out ahead.

By state law, the original owner of each piece of property may claim it up until two years after the sale. But to claim it, he must pay the new owner the sale price of the property plus a 25 percent penalty until the end of the first year and a 50 percent penalty until the end of the second period.

"It doesn't make sense to make improvements on the stuff," Marshall said, "until you are sure that you in fact do own it."

At least 16 lots in the sale are on Midland's less affluent east and south sides. Fourteen additional lots and acreages carried legal descriptions but "unknown" addresses.

Another Midlander bought a 300-by-150-foot lot for the starting bid price of $886.41.

"IT'S JUST AN investment," he said and admitted he was unaware of the condition of the lot or of what he was buying.

"It's basically risk, speculation. I win, and I lose."

Another Midlander bought a lot since it adjoined property he already owned. "I couldn't afford not (to buy it)," he said.

He snatched up some lots during the 1980-82 boom, but "I overpaid." He said his bidding on Tuesday "wasn't speculation."

An unsuccessful bidder, William H. Wright, went up to $2,701 on a 2.06-acre tract. He repeatedly raised a competing bidder by a dollar at a time until the property, listed on the bid sheet at $1,390.56, soared up to $2,800. His competition would raise his bid by $4, $9, $49 or $99. He would bid $2,200; Wright would raise the bid by $1 to $2,201; the other bidder would skip to $2,300; Wright would bid $2,301.

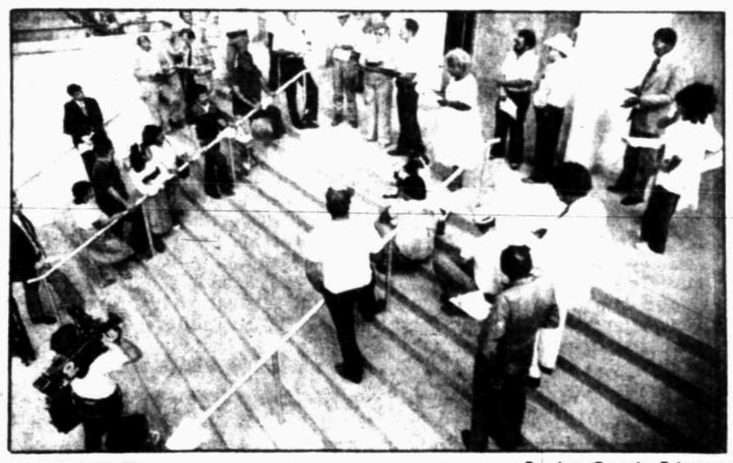

Eventually, he waived his hand in a gesture that said "You can have it, buddy, at $2,800."

"I had a limit," Wright said, "so I stopped at my limit...We had a round (at the bidding). I can't go no farther. Maybe next time I'll get a hold of something."

On the first Tuesday of each month on the courthouse square, the sheriff or constable auctions off property on the delinquent tax rolls under court orders.

"I think it shows the seriousness of trying to collect delinquent taxes," said Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson of the Midland County Appraisal District.

Deer taken from wild habitat for pets die, become dangerous

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

It's a common occurrence this time of year. Dad decides it's time for the family to grow closer, and roughing it under the stars with the scent of pine in the air seems the ideal solution.

The sleeping bags are aired out, the Coleman stove is cleaned up and Mom stocks up on mosquito spray. Then one weekend the station wagon is loaded up with 2.4 children and the dog and the whole family sets out for Big Bend.

On the afternoon of the second day, 5-year old Billy trips over a week-old fawn in the brush. The animal walks over on spindly legs and licks the child's hand.

After pointing to the lack of a doe nearby — and much begging and pleading from the children, whose eyes are as large and irresistible as the deer's — everyone decides the animal must be abandoned and the best thing to do is take it home and raise it as a pet.

Not only is this illegal, game warden Terry Lloyd says, but chances are the fawn was not abandoned in the first place and will probably die under the tender but ignorant administrations of the family.

Midland environmentalist Midge Erskine, who is now caring for a 3-week-old fawn, said three or four times a year this scenario ends with an appeal to her to care for the baby.

"We don't have the facilities to care for them," Lloyd said, "so we try to find somebody, usually Midge, who can. And out of her pocket (the special diet is expensive) she feeds and takes care of them and tries to keep them in a wild state so they can be released."

But half the time it is brought to her too late, and the animal dies. The people who take these wild animals home don't give them a proper diet and don't feed them properly, she said. "They (the deer) are so sick when they're brought in there's literally nothing I can do to save them."

And if the animal doesn't die, it will soon become dangerous. "A couple of policemen and I almost got kicked to death by one," Lloyd said. Last weekend they tried to catch a muledeer that had apparently been kept in someone's yard for the past year until it got loose.

"Two 200-pound men can't handle a 100-pound deer," Lloyd said. "We never did get him where we wanted to release him.

"These things always become a problem. What they (the people) take from the wild and what they raise a year later is totally different," Lloyd said. These fawns are no longer kind and gentle. "They almost always turn vicious."

"Those tiny hooves are lethal," Ms. Erskine agreed. "Even this little animal. I have black-and-blue marks where he's kicked me. During mating season they're dangerous."

Shops for Indian goods in demand

RICHARDSON (AP) — Just as he would do in New Delhi, Calcutta or Bombay, market manager Iqbal Patel carefully weighed and bargained for baskets of leeks and doodhi brought in by a family from the countryside.

He needed the fresh vegetables, including the squash-like doodhi, to stock his depleted shelves before the daily rush of Indian shoppers arrived.

But this small market is not located along a crowded street in a city of India. Instead it is in the shadow of busy North Cental Expressway, where a handful of Indian stores have opened, catering to the steady influx of Indians moving to Richardson.

"It is a limited market here, but here is much demand now for Indian products," said Patel, manager of Tajmahal Imports at Richardson Heights Shopping Plaza. "There was a time when a store like this could not have existed here, and now we have a store."

Patel says about 200 Indian families live in Richardson. Other Indian merchants say that of the 5,000 Indians living in the Dallas and Fort Worth area, more than 3,000 live in the northern Dallas suburbs. Most have moved into the area during the past five years.

Indicative of the growing Indian community in the area is the arrival last week of Satya Devji, an Indian guru who came to the United States to visit with Indians in Richardson and neighboring suburbs.

The small Indian community is much less visible than the Chinese community in Richardson, where scores of Chinese businesses have changed the face of Greenville Avenue. But like the Chinese, members of the Indian community say they are attracted to suburbs such as Richardson because of the availability of engineering and high-tech jobs and good schools.

In India, religious factionalism has divided the country and spurred renewed violence. In Richardson, that strife is not apparent.

"I think maybe it has something do with us being a minority," said Raj Sharma, 41, a Richardson resident and part owner of an Indian clothing store across the street from the Indian market. "When we are outside (of India), we are like one family."

Prompted by the growing numbers of Indians arriving in Richardson, Sharma and his cousin, Rita Sharma, in December opened what they say is the only store that sells nothing but saris, the brightly colored clothing worn by many Indian women. Most of their customers are Indians, although the "Priya Sarees" store sign outside also attracts an occasional Westerner.

"There was a time when it was very difficult to find products from India," said Sharma, who also owns a video store in North Dallas. "The businesses now fit the demand."

The demand by Indians for Indian products is not limited to Richardson. There are two Indian groceries in Mesquite, two in Garland and others in Irving, Arlington and Fort Worth, said Patel, who lives in Garland. The stores offer everything from spices grown in the Himalayas to fresh curry leaves and unrefined palm oil.

Although Indian popular culture is readily available, religious culture is less so. There is no permanent Hindu temple in the area.

That's one reason Mrs. Sharma is paying for the 29-year-old Hindu guru to come to the Dallas suburbs.

"We feel it is very necessary for him to be here because we are so far away from our culture," said Mrs. Sharma, a graduate of Southern Methodist University who also works as a medical technician at Baylor University Medical Center.

"Life is so fast in the West, and everything is money," she said. "There is no time just to sit and contemplate. He will do this for us."

Photographers can't resist subpoena, court says

AUSTIN (AP) — No constitutional right protects news photographers who refuse to comply with court orders to turn over photos taken at crime scenes, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals says.

The ruling came Tuesday in the case of Dallas Morning News photographer Randy Eli Grothe, who had been held in contempt of court by Dallas County Criminal Court Judge Robert Moss.

Court records showed that Grothe had refused to turn over pictures taken at a Sept. 19, 1983, protest at Dallas Power & Light.

Grothe was freed on bond and never spent time in jail, according to court records.

Photographs taken by Grothe were subpoenaed by Mavis Belisle, who was charged with obstructing a public passageway during the demonstration. Grothe testified about what he saw at the protest, but declined to turn over photographs he took that weren't published by the newspaper.

The Court of Criminal Appeals said Grothe had no constitutional right to resist the subpoena.

Burl Osborne, editor and senior vice president of The News, said, "We're obviously disappointed" by the court's ruling.

"We'll be taking it to the attorneys and talking about it some more," Osborne said.

"We are not unmindful of the important place of a free press in our society," said Judge Charles Campbell in writing the appeals court opinion. "Not to be forgotten, however, is the interest in protecting the integrity of the criminal justice system."

The decision came in a 6-0 vote, with three judges not participating.

Campbell said "a citizen accused of crime has the right to confront and fully cross-examine all persons who have testimony relevant to criminal charges."

House passes appropriations bill

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill which adjusts appropriations for health insurance premiums at Midland College and other public junior colleges in the county area has pased the House by a 132-6 vote, and now goes to Gov. Mark White for consideration.

Under the bill, Midland College would receive $7,560 less for fiscal year 1984 and $9,180 less for fiscal year 1985.

Also, Odessa College would receive $3,060 more for fiscal year 1985; Howard County Junior College would receive $2,040 more for fiscal year 1985; and Western Texas College would get $9,240 less in fiscal 1984 and $11,220 less in fiscal year 1985.

The measure, introduced by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, was needed because of an error in the computation of the appropriations by the Legislature for public junior colleges. The readjustments also will result in a savings of more than $3 million to the state, Farabee said.

Of the 47 public junior colleges in Texas, some were overfunded and some were underfunded by the 1983 Legislature with regard to insurance premiums for active and retired employees. Senate Bill 15 passed the Senate on June 27 by a 29-0 vote.

Farabee noted schools which "lose" money under SB 15 could not have spent the overfunded revenue anyway.

DEER

There are other reasons why it's not easy to raise a deer, she added. The young need to be fed every four hours, night and day. For the first few weeks they won't even defecate unless manually stimulated. "You rub their bottom end to make them go to the bathroom," she said. "People don't know this and they don't do it and it (the fawn) dies on them."

Once weaned, after about four months, the animals must be released on a protected ranch. "They cannot go out into the wild," Ms. Erskine said. "They're too used to men."

The same problem exists with raccons, bobcats, birds and all kinds of wild animals, she said. "They don't make pets."

SALE

Starting bids on the property are either pegged to the adjudged (appraised) value or to the amount of taxes owed against the property or whichever is less, said Jimmie D. Oglesby, the district's delinquent-tax attorney. Usually, the lesser amount is the taxes due.

THE "VAST MAJORITY" of people, however, redeem their property before it gets to the auction.

"The great majority will pay if you can just find them," Oglesby said. The owners may have abandoned the property, or due to divorce settlements they may be unaware they own the real property. Or they may have just died. "Sometimes, you cannot locate heirs."

"The property just sits there and grows up in weeds and mesquite."

He noted that it's "very, very rare" that somebody is living on the property.

"So far as I know, we have not sold any property that was physically occupied."

Oglesby said his staff makes exhaustive searches in trying to locate owners of the property before the judge orders it sold for delinquent taxes.

If the property is not auctioned off, the appraisal district gets title to the property, which is subject to re-sale for taxes against it.

"That's kind of a bummer there," Oglesby said. "We don't like for that to happen, because the district is not in the business of real-estate development. We just want to get the taxes. We're not interested in getting the property."

About $2.5 million in delinquent taxes are on the 1982 and prior tax rolls.

Once delinquent taxes are collected, they are assigned to the taxing entities. Any funds collected beyond the delinquent taxes are held in trust for seven years by the district clerk. Up until that time, the original owner of the property sold for taxes may claim any amount beyond the taxes due. But after the seven-year period, the funds are forwarded to the taxing entities.

Delinquent taxes comprise from 2 to 7 percent of the tax revenue.

"Taxes are only a small fraction of the property value," noted Oglesby.

DEATHS

M.T. Richardson

Memorial services for Marguerite Thomas Richardson of Midland will be at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel.

She died at her home Monday afternoon.

She was born Feb. 4, 1906, in Friendship, Ark., and was raised in Vernon. She moved to Houston after graduation from high school. She married Earl G. Bateman at Galveston in 1928 and lived in Tyler for the next several years. She married Stanley P. Richardson in 1970 in Tucson, Ariz. They lived in Roswell, N.M., until 1982, when she moved to Midland. She was a member of the Methodist Church.

Survivors include a son, Thomas G. Bateman of Houston; a daughter, Barbara A. Schwarten of Dallas; a sister, Ruby Shive, also of Dallas; six grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Doris Alexander

BIG SPRING — Doris Alexander, 60, of Big Spring, died Tuesday morning in a Big Spring nursing home.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland, directed by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home of Big Spring.

She was born Dec. 9, 1923, in Burkburnett. She grew up in Burkburnett and Wichita Falls. She had lived in Big Spring the past five years. She was a Presbyterian.

Survivors include a brother, Leonard Alexander of Odessa; two sisters, Gladys Taylor of Midland and Mary Moore of Lubbock; five nieces and nephews.

Showers reduce CRMWD deliveries

BIG SPRING — Showers in the Midland-Odessa area, which accounts for three-fourths of the municipal demand, reduced water deliveries of the Colorado River Municipal Water District in June.

Total deliveries of 1,765,055,470 were 4.75 percent below June a year ago. Of this total, 1,636,292,300 gallons went to municipalities, down 1.21 percent. Oilfield deliveries of 128,763,170 were off by 34.55 percent, but this was due mostly to a cutoff from surface supplies as a conservation measure.

Odessa received 738,833,000 gallons, down 6.57 percent from June 1983; Midland, 395,570,000, down 3.63 percent; Big Spring, 325,267,500, up 2.75 percent; Snyder, 148,279,000, up 25.80 percent; Stanton, 11,892,000, down 4.33 percent. Robert Lee took 15,071,900 gallons compared to a year ago when it took no water from the district. San Angelo took 1,378,900 gallons in June.

Saudi Arabia reaffirms policy of non-involvement in war

The Associated Press

Saudi Arabia on Tuesday reaffirmed its policy of non-involvement in the Iran-Iraq war, but said it would defend itself if attacked.

Iran, meanwhile, acknowledged that Iraq attacked several ships in the northern Persian Gulf last weekend.

In related developments, Iraq said its gunners and combat patrols killed 25 Iranian troops in assaults on positions along the 730-mile border between the nations. Iran reported that its forces had killed 60 Iraqi soldiers along the front in the previous 24 hours.

And in Washington, U.S. intelligence sources said Iran has built up its tank forces to "significant levels" on the front south of the Iraqi port city of Basra, possibly foreshadowing a long-anticipated ground offensive.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, were reluctant to make any flat predictions about the timing of the expected Iranian offensive.

Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan, making an inspection tour of air defense troop emplacements on the nation's gulf coast Tuesday, said, "The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, fountainhead of the (Islamic) faith, will be neither prey nor aggressor."

Saudi Arabia, he said, is "home of dignity and tranquility. With all these great blessings bestowed upon it by Allah.

"The kingdom uses all its resources to serve Islam, protect Islamic shrines and humanity. Air defense will always be an arena for protection and never an arena for aggression. Ours is a domain for dignity and never a domain for destruction."

Sultan's statement to his troops was distributed by the official Saudi press agency.

Saudi Arabia is head of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council, a mutual defense and economic cooperation pact whose members have been conferring on ways to discourage expansion of the Iran-Iraq war.

Iran recently has attacked commercial shipping in neutral waters, south of the war zone, in retaliation for Iraqi airborne assaults on vessels going to and from Iranian ports.

Iraq has been trying to enforce a blockade on Iranian ports to stop Iran from earning foreign exchange needed to continue the war, which the Iraqis started in September 1980 over a border dispute. More than 40 ships have been attacked by both Iraqi and Iranian warplanes since January.

Iraq had announced on Sunday that its warplanes destroyed five "naval targets" near the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeini on the northern tip of the gulf, and shot down an Iranian jet in an ensuing dogfight. The types of the ships and the jet were not mentioned.

Marine salvage sources have confirmed attacks on three ships, registered in South Korea, Cyprus and Panama. Two Filipino crew members aboard the Cypriot ship were killed and others wounded.

Iran officially confirmed the attack for the first time Tuesday but a spokesman for the Persian country's Supreme Defense Council termed the Iraqi claim about shooting down an Iranian jet a "mere lie." All Iranian jets returned to base safely after the battle, he said.

He added that fires which broke out on two ships carrying steel plates from Mozambique to Iran had been put out. Their locations were not mentioned.

In New York, a U.N. spokesman said Tuesday that Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has expressed concern to Iran and Iraq over charges of renewed chemical weapons use in their war and misuse of a limited truce.

Spokesman Francois Giuliani said Perez de Cuellar last week had sent fresh messages to the presidents of Iran and Iraq "in the context of his efforts to mitigate the effects of the conflict on human lives."

Ex-president of Israel interrogated by KGB for trying to visit Jew

PARIS (AP) — Former President Ephraim Katzir of Israel said Tuesday his interrogation by Soviet secret police after he tried to visit a Jewish man might have been a warning to Soviet Jews seeking to emigrate.

Katzir said he was "deeply offended" by the 90-minute interrogation by the KGB in Leningrad on Sunday.

"I came as a guest of the Soviet Academy of Science," he said at an airport news conference after flying from Moscow. Katzir, 68, an internationally known biochemist who works at Israel's Weizmann Institute, was in Leningrad for a scientific meeting.

Katzir said Soviet authorities knew he was a former president and suggested the interrogation "might have been a message to the refuseniks and any future or potential refuseniks."

Refusenik is a term used to describe Soviet Jews who have been refused permission to emigrate.

Katzir said he had sought merely "to bring regards and a few simple gifts" to the Soviet Jew from his family in Israel. He refused to identify the man but said it was not Yaacov Gorodetsky, whose name was reported in the Israeli media.

"The interrogation started out with some pretty tough questions," Katzir said, speaking in English. "They wanted to know every step I had taken while I was in Russia. They dumped the contents out of my wife's handbag and looked through all of them, and they examined the few gifts that we were taking to the man," he said.

"For themselves, they took a diary with pictures of Israel, a book of songs about Israel, and some Israeli coins. They gave us back the prayerbook and some pencils.

"After it became clear we weren't carrying any secrets or anything, they became nicer and suggested we take a taxi back to our hotel," he said.

The Soviet government has made no comment about the incident. There is no Israeli Embassy in Moscow because the Soviet Union and Israel do not maintain diplomatic relations.

Katzir, Israel's fourth president from 1973 to 1978, said the incident began when he and his wife took a taxi to the man's house and were confronted by three KGB agents who prevented them from entering the apartment.

West German police capture four members of Red Army Faction

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police raided an apartment in a Frankfurt residential district and seized four of West Germany's most wanted terrorists with an arsenal of handguns and grenades, federal authorities said Tuesday.

The two men and two women members of the extreme leftist Red Army Faction were overpowered Monday night by Hesse state police without shots being fired, the authorities said.

Police were tipped off by an apartment dweller below the fourth-floor hideout after a bullet was accidentally fired through his ceiling earlier in the evening, a building resident told The Associated Press.

"Seven large-caliber weapons, one of which was a Colt (pistol) taken in a 1977 robbery of a gun dealer in Frankfurt," were seized in the raid, the Federal Criminal Office said.

Police also found "several hand grenades, radio equipment, a large amount of cash, foreign and domestic identification papers and six time-fuses mounted inside match boxes," said a statement from the agency's Wiesbaden office.

The four suspects — all former West German university students — were identified as Christa Eckes, 34; Ingrid Jakobsmeier, 30; Stefan Frey, 24, and Helmut Pohl, 40. Pohl was described as a member of the Baader-Meinhof gang that terrorized West Germany in the 1970s and spawned the Red Army Faction.

The faction's declared aim is to undermine West Germany's capitalist society with violent acts, including bombings, bank robberies and assassinations. It has not claimed responsibility for any major attacks since 1981.

Barbara Ernst, 29, of Hamburg, and an unidentified man were also arrested in Monday night's raid, the federal statement said.

Ms. Ernst belongs to a militant group called "Women Against the Imperialist War," which is known to have close ties with the Red Army Faction. Police said they were able to identify her by scars from burns she sustained when staging a fire bombing in Hamburg in 1978.

Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann said it was the most successful action against the Red Army Faction since three gang leaders were arrested in November 1982.

Hungarian government forms special police unit

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The government has formed a special police unit to fight bribery, black marketeering and collaboration with foreign criminals, a Communist Party newspaper reported Tuesday.

"The move was made necessary by the increasing frequency in recent years of the violations of ethical rules of public life, with special regard to bribery," said Police Maj. Gen. Lukacs Vincze.

The new police force began operations July 1.

His comments at a news conference were reported by the Communist Party newspaper Nepszabadsag.

The new police force is intended to prevent buyers and sellers from overstepping their legal bounds, Vincze said.

"Within the scope of economic crime, profiteering — a typical form of income without work — takes up a significant share. Data show related cases doubled within (the past) 12 months," said Vincze.

"Throughout the country, including Budapest, the incidence of crime against the national economy and public property has been going up. In fields of commerce and the services, one can observe the speedy spread of corruption," Vincze said.

He may have been referring to a recent case in which more than 30 gamblers were found to have conspired with soccer players to fix games and rig the national soccer pool. The scandal also resulted in widespread suspension of players.

"As a wild outgrowth of foreign tourism, in itself a welcome and developing bracket, effects of international crime have hit Hungary too — showing up in the application of methods hitherto unknown here, and in the increasingly frequent cooperation between foreign and Hungarian criminals," Vincze said.

The new unit will cooperate with private citizens and regular police, said Police Col. Istvan Konczer.

Former police chief faces extradition

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A federal magistrate has ordered former Mexico City police chief Arturo Durazo, wanted in Mexico on corruption charges, transferred to Los Angeles to face extradition proceedings.

Durazo, 61, was arrested Friday night as he tried to pass through customs at San Juan International Airport with his wife, Silvia. A provisional warrant for his arrest was issued June 30 by the federal court in Los Angeles at the request of the Mexican government.

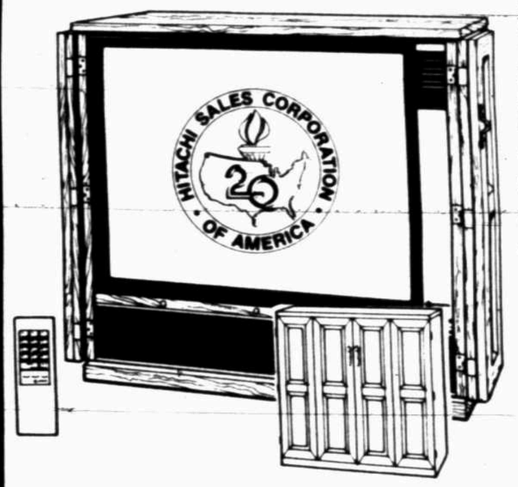

U.S. Magistrate Jose A. Castellanos ordered Durazo's transfer to Los Angeles late Monday, after the former police chief waived his right to a hearing here. He had been held without bail since his arrest by federal marshals and FBI agents.

Singer J. Stewart Richey, performing in a Sulphur Springs club, says he has "something different" to offer audiences.

Singer says his songs give crowds 'something different'

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — It was a "Tuesday night" crowd in the motel club, a thin crowd mostly of guests seeking a little relief from the loneliness of a room in a strange town.

But J. Stuart Richey, the evening's entertainment, responded to the spattering of applause with a smile and launched into another 'C&W' song and a full evening's work.

The only adjustment the musician made for this performance from the one he gives before a full house was to turn the volume down a little lower.

The crowd may have been small, but it was one more step on a road called "success," and Richey isn't about to step in one of the road's many potholes by slouching in front of an audience.

When not on the road, and that's not often, the Wood County native calls a small clearing in the woods on Cypress Springs Lake his home.

Richey talked abut the new trends emerging in Country-Western music and how those trends figure in his future — a future that he has mapped out, including a time table.

"It (the trend) is moving away from Outlaw Country. I'm not saying that Willie (Nelson) and Waylon (Jennings) won't still be big, but people are ready for something different," Richey said.

And he is banking that he has the 'something different.'

Richey, whose own music and personal style leans away from the heavy emphasis of drinking, sex and a life style that thumbs its nose at social conventions, is quick to add that he does some 'crying-in-my-beer' kind of songs and some of the outlaw country songs. "I ride the top 40 real strong, but I slip in some of the older country songs and some of the old gospel songs. People recognize them and I think they like it," he said.

About his own music, which he sandwiches in between the 'Top 40' and old favorites, he said. "I think people are beginning to recognize it."

With the growing acceptance of his music have already come a few swigs of sweet satisfaction. He told about one booking agent in the Houston area whom he tried mightily to convince she should try him in some of the clubs she managed booking for.

"But no matter how hard I tried — I sent her packets and packets of material. I would have sent a video if I could have laid my hands on one — she just wasn't interested. She made it clear that she was interested in someone with the outlaw style." He paused with a slow smile growing, "Well, while I was in Houston. I met this lady. I had booked myself into five of her clubs and an independent."

His music, which he delivers in a smooth, balladeer style, owes a lot to John Lennon, Paul McCartney and Credence Clearwater, as well as to Ray Price and Eddie Rabbitt and to the songs he and his six sisters learned while singing at the South Hopewell Primitive Baptist Church.

"A lot of people have helped me who don't even know me," he said. He added that a number of people who know him have helped along the way, too, such as Ray Price.

"I worked on Price's ranch near Mount Pleasant when I was just a kid. He encouraged me and, in fact, he lent me the first good amplifier I used."

He said he has always been interested in music, but when his dad, Charlie Richey, a fiddle and guitar player, gave him his first guitar at 13, he was off on the path he's still following.

"I've never really wanted to be anything else besides a musician," he said.

He added that his dad taught him his first three chords on the guitar and that was the only formal music lessons he received. He grinned, "At first, I had to play all my songs in one chord. That's all I knew."

Hurricane hunting began on a dare

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — A goup of World War II British fliers unwittingly began the modern age of hurricane tracking with a one-drink dare that an American colonel just couldn't turn down.

The British fliers were complaining about the rinky-dink American planes they had to fly and the uppity American colonel giving them orders.

So they challenged Cmdr. Joe Duckworth to take one of his beloved single-engine AT-6 planes into a hurricane off the coast of Texas.

Two hours later, on June 23, 1943, Duckworth and a somewhat unwilling Lt. Ralph O'Hair made the first airborne trip into a hurricane.

"I was scared when he first mentioned it. I was scared when we got in the airplane. I was scared when we got to Galveston. I didn't want to go," O'Hair recalled recently.

Duckworth and O'Hair, now a 68-year-old retired colonel in Georgia, survived the three-hour flight and a new era in hurricane monitoring had started.

O'Hair joined his successors, the "Hurricane Hunters" of the 53rd Squadron, based at Keesler Air Force Base here recently, for a modern look at hurricane tracking.

O'Hair said there are big differences in the way hurricanes and tropical storms are tracked now.

Today, college-educated pilots and trained meteorologists steer C-130 transport planes without fear into hurricanes, tropical storms and every other type of bad weather.

"In my opinion, it's the safest C-130 assignment there is," said Capt. John Hughes, a pilot.

"It's the most dangerous flying a woman can do, but it's not very dangerous," said another pilot, Lt. Jill James, referring to the fact that women pilot don't fly combat missions.

Except for one plane that crashed 12 years ago while returning from a typhoon, noone has died from flying into a hurricane, the pilots said.

Hurricane hunter flights play a key role in pinpointing the location and intensity of storms heading for the Gulf Coast and Florida, such as Hurricane Camille, which killed 132 coast residents in 1969, and Hurricane Frederic, which did $1.5 billion in damage in 1979.

A standard six-member crew operates hurricane-bound C-130s and does basically the same work it does on any flight, except more often, said Capt. Ron Havholm, a meteorologist aboard a recent flight.

Every four minutes during a flight through a hurricane, Havholm uses a calculator and computer to record a storm's location, temperature, dew point and pressure. If the pressure drops, the storm is getting worse.

He gathers much of the data from disposable $470 radio transmitters that are parachuted into the storm from the back of the plane.

The pilot's job is to angle the plane, often through vicious thunderstorms into the hurricane, entering almost sideways into the peaceful eye, said Hughes.

In the center, the pilots enjoy the beautiful weather and look at the sights, such as stranded birds, whales and ships.

"It's the prettiest thing I've ever seen in my life," said James, who has been making hurricane hunter flights for two years.

O'Hair thought the same thing 41 years ago, but he's never flown into another hurricane.

"If I had to do it over again, and had a chance, no, I wouldn't do it," he said. "I value my life too dearly."

Election in a mess

WOODLAKE, Calif. (AP) — He doesn't want it but has it. She wants it and is trying to get it. Hopefully voters here will untangle the mess and make the right choice in November.

The "it" is the job as constable in this community 150 miles north of Los Angles.

After Harold Hoffman filed for re-election he got a job in the county sheriff's office and withdrew from the primary election.

His wife, Cheryl, then ran as a write-in candidate along with two other people.

But 731 people voted for Harold Hoffman, the only name on the ballot, giving him 43.4 percent of the vote. His wife was second in the primary with 641 votes, putting them into a runoff in November.

"We plan to go to several functions, when invited, explaining the situation," said Cheryl Hoffman, a deputy justice court clerk.

"He'll be telling them I'm a very qualified candidate and that voting for him will be throwing away their vote."

C'MON OVER--WE'LL BARBECUE

Just about everything tastes better when it's eaten outdoors — and it doesn't matter whether you have a spacious back ard, a pint-size patio or minuscule balcony. For barbecue lovers everywhere, cooking is no chore when it's done on a grill or hibachi. And they don't even object to making the do-ahead dishes to accompany the main barbecue.

Take the menu pictured, for instance. There's chicken on the grill to be sure. But what doesn't show is the superbly seasoned marinade that has penetrated throughout the chicken. This mixture of pureed, tart-sweet fresh plums, honey, garlic and ready-to-use teriyaki marinade and sauce, captures the taste of summer. Versatile and convenient, bottled teriyaki marinade and sauce is a special blend of naturally brewed soy sauce, wine, sugar and a select combination of herbs and spices. It works equally well by itself or as a recipe ingredient.

To the right of the grill is another picnic perennial, potato salad. Again there's a difference. The mayonnaise-sour cream dressing boasts the addition of all-purpose soy sauce. Not often thought of as an ingredient in salad dressings, brewed soy sauce enhances the flavors of many different kinds of food. Brewed naturally from soybeans, wheat, salt and water, this soy sauce has a delicate flavor balance and aromatic qualities that are not found in non-brewed versions. And for a special summer touch, slices of ripe, fresh peaches ring the salad instead of the usual wedges of tomato.

An innovation in good eating, "California Valley Toss" is a fruit-vegetable combination featuring fresh nectarines and zucchini. And the tangy vinaigrette dressing with its "perk" from brewed soy sauce is a perfect counterpoint to the sweetly tart sparkle of fresh nectarines.

French bread hot off the grill that has been lightly spread with mayonnaise, onion, basil and brewed soy sauce is a delightfully different "go-along."

For dessert there's an array of juicy peaches, plums, nectarines and Bartlett pears. All are at their flavorful best right now. Fresh Bartlett pears with their sweet flavor, make a luscious filling for crumbly-bar cookies, too.

The best barbecue beverage is always iced tea. Young and old alike will quaff it down before, during and after the meal. There are several ways to make this old favorite, but surely the simplest is the overnight method, below. Just to be sure, start with a good quality tea so you will come up with a drink that is thirst quenching.

GRILLED PLUM-TERIYAKI CHICKEN

½ pound fresh plums, coarsely chopped
¾ cup teriyaki sauce
2 tablespoons honey
½ teaspoon garlic powder
3 pounds frying chicken pieces

Puree plums in electric blender container until smooth. Add teriyaki sauce, honey and garlic powder; cover and process until blended. Place chicken pieces in large plastic bag; pour in plum marinade. Press air out of bag; tie top secrely. Refrigerate eight hours or overnight, turning bag over occasionally. Remove chicken from marinade; reserve marinade. Place chicken on grill five inches from hot coals. Grill 40 minutes or until chicken is cooked, turning pieces over frequently and basting occastionally with reserved marinade. Makes six servings.

SUMMERTIME POTATO SALAD

2 pounds long white or round red potatoes
⅓ cup mayonaise
⅓ cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes
2 tablspoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon prepard horseradish
½ teaspoon black pepper
4 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and cut into eighths
½ cup minced onions
Fresh peach slices

Peel and cut potatoes in ¾-inch cubes. Cook in salted, boiling water about six minutes or until tender, being careful not to overcook. Drain thoroughly; transfer to large bowl and chill. Meanwhile, combine mayonnaise, sour cream, parsley, soy sauce, horseradish and pepper. Pour dressing over potatoes with eggs and onions; toss gently to mix well. Refrigerate about three hours for flavors to blend or until salad is chilled. To serve turn salad out into serving bowl; arrange peach slices around edge of salad. Makes six to eight servings.

CALIFORNIA VALLEY TOSS

1½ pounds fresh nectarines and/or fresh peaches, sliced
2 medium-size zucchini (about ¾ pound), thinly sliced
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
¼ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
1 tablespoon sesame seed, toasted
3 tablespoons soy sauce
Lettuce cups

Combine nectarines, zucchini and onion in medium-size bowl; set aside. Measure oil, lemon juice, brown sugar, sesame seed and soy sauce into cruet or screw-top jar with lid. Stir or shake thoroughly until blended and sugar dissolves. Pour desired amount of dressing over fruit-vegetable mixture; toss to coat each peice well. Marinate 15 minutes, tossing occasionally. Serve on lettuce-lined plates with additional dressing as desired. Makes six to eight servings.

TOASTED FRENCH BREAD

1 loaf French bread
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon onion powder
2 teaspoons light soy sauce
½ teaspoon basil, crumbled

Cut bread in half lengthwise; place on baking sheet, cut side up. Thoroughly blend together mayonnaise, onion powder, soy sauce and basil. Spread mixture evenly on cut sides of bread. Broil about six inches from heat two to three minutes or until golden brown. To serve cut halves crosswise into serving-size pieces. Makes about eight servings.

BARTLETT PEARS

Pear Filling (recipe follows)
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1¾ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
1½ cups quick cooking oats
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts

Prepare Pear Filling; cool. Cream butter with shortening and sugar in large mixing bowl until smooth. Mix in flour, salt, baking soda and oats. Measure two cups of crumb mixture and set aside for topping. Add walnuts to remaining crumb mixture and press evenly in bottom of greased 13x9x2-inch pan. Bake in 400-F. oven 10-15 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from oven and cool 10 minutes; spread Pear Filling over evenly. Top with reserved crumb mixture, pressing lightly. Return to oven and bake 25-30 minutes longer or until golden brown. While warm cut into bars, about 2x2-½-inches. Makes about 20 bars.

Pear Filling: Mix 3 cups chopped fresh Bartlett pears (2 or 3 pears), 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 cup water in medium saucepan. Bring to boil over medium-high heat. Boil, stirring constantly, 10 minutes or until mixture thickens. Remove from heat; cool.

ICED TEA — BARBECUE BEVERAGE

The Overnight Way (with cold water): Fill quart jar or container with freshly drawn cold water. Add eight to 10 teabags, removing the tags. Cover and refrigerate at last six hours or overnight. Remove bags, squeezing against side of container. Makes one quart. Recipe may be doubled.

The Instant Way (with instant tea or the iced tea mixes): Follow directions on jar or envelope. In general, use two rounded tablespoons instant tea powder for each quart of cold water. Or ½ cup (or two small envelopes) lemon-flavored ice tea mix to quart of cold water.

The Traditional Way (with boiling water): Bring one quart freshly drawn cold water to full rolling boil in saucepan. Remove from heat and immediately add ⅓ cup loose tea or 15 teabags. Cover and let stand five minutes. Stir again and strain into pitcher holding another quart of cold water. Keep at room temperature until ready to serve, then pour into ice-filled glasses.

Jiggling handle doesn't work in space

By ERMA BOMBECK

It is of no comfort to me whatsoever that NASA has put five years of research and $12 million worth of engineering into a space shuttle toilet that does not work.

If the right stuff has the wrong parts, we're all lost.

What chance do I have with a husband who resealed ours with Play-Doh and then instructed me to "jiggle it after you use it"?

What hope is there for earthlings to have an efficient plumbing system when an astronaut who has a doctorate in civil engineering had toilet malfunctions on 10 out of the last 11 missions?

As far as I'm concerned, plumbing is the key to peace throughout the world. It's the universal language that needs no interpreter, the one ethic that binds us all together, the common denominator that is shared by us all.

Can you possibly imagine the adulation due the nation that finally perfects a system that works?

I once toured the interior of the space shuttle in Houston to see what our future would hold. I found it the closest to primitive camping I want to get. The area where the astronauts live is no bigger than a table at the Las Vegas dinner show. The food was packaged and contained in boxes on the wall. At night, you were restrained from floating around by hanging in a sack from the wall (we once did that in Michigan), and every time you moved, you bumped your leg on the water tank. My main concern (as with all mothers), however, was the toilet.

"How does it work?" I asked.

"Just like any other toilet, say on the airlines," I was told.

That was not altogether true. Toilets on airlines do not have seatbelts to hold you in, head and foot restraints and look like a death chair. I didn't even want to know who cleaned it and how.

The way it stands now, toilets are programmed to function a five-day week, gurgling, gasping and backing up on Saturdays and Sundays.

I would like to think the United States would lead the world in building a better toilet. As for the moon, we could put a toilet out there tomorrow if we wanted to. But first, we have to find a plumber who works Sundays.

July parties often include meals rather than snacks

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst Feature Service

July party invitations remind us that showers, family reunions, weddings and anniversaries often call for a meal, rather than a snack. With good planning, preparing all or part of the food yourself can be easy.

To cut down on shopping and food preparation, keep the menu simple. Build the meal around the meat selection. Make-ahead casseroles, salads and desserts reduce last-minute stress. Take advantage of economical convenience foods which are easily improved in flavor and appearance by a clever chef.

Keeping food safe to eat is the primary concern when feeding a crowd. Follow these simple rules to avoid any problem:

– Prior to serving (and during serving, if possible) keep hot foods above 140 degrees and cold foods below 40 degrees.

– Do not let perishable foods stand at room temperature for more than two hours. Milk, meat and eggs are most often linked to food-related illness.

Take a tip from the food industry. Time and effort can be reduced by production line preparation and baking in batches. Cook and serve in the same pan, when possible. Foil, plastic and paper disposables make clean up easier.

With today's small families and working mothers, feeding a crowd is not a common event. Good planning is the key to satisfaction.

DEAR ABBY

Objections at wedding take the cake

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: I was asked by a "Worried" reader if it was possible to omit that portion of the marriage ceremony which asks, "If there is anybody present who has any objections to this marriage, let him speak up now or forever hold his peace." I said it was indeed possible, and if any of my readers had ever witnessed such a happening to please let me know. Many did. Some responses:

DEAR ABBY: When I served as a justice of the peace, I performed hundreds of marriages. The only legitimate reason for halting a marriage would be that said marriage would not be legal. A marriage is illegal if either of the parties had a prior undissolved marriage, were related to each other in a manner prohibiting marriage, were underage, were judged insane or incompetent by a court, or were involuntarily intoxicated or drugged. If a witness came forward with information of this type, I believe the marriage ceremony should be stopped.

Such objections were never raised in any of the ceremonies I performed, but I would hope that if anyone were to raise those questions, they would seek out the officiant in advance and let him know. — ROBERT C. SACKS, LILBURN, GA.

DEAR ABBY: Back in the '50s I served a parish in Philadelphia. A young businesswoman who had been a member for two years arranged the wedding for herself and a young man. At the point in the ceremony when I asked, "If anyone can show just cause why these two may not be joined together in holy wedlock, etc.," a solitary figure stepped out near the rear. He said nothing, just stood there until all were aware of his presence. The bride slowly turned, and seeing him, left her place at the altar rail, went up the aisle and left the church with him.

Of course, there was no wedding. I later learned that the bride was married, and it was her husband who had appeared at the church. She had come to Philadelphia from the Midwest to start a new life and thought her past would never catch up with her. — THE REV. W. CARTER MERBREIER, PHILADELPHIA

DEAR ABBY: My mother was in charge of marriage licenses at the Washoe County Court House in Reno, Nev., in which city there were many spur-of-the-moment marriages. One couple who had been obviously partying, but were apparently sufficiently sober to decide to get married, were issued a license. They decided to be married by a judge at the local courthouse, and asked my mother if she would act as their witness. She agreed.

The judge gave the ritual a serious tone and asked the groom, "Do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife?" The man looked at the bride, then the judge, and boomed, "Hell no!" and stalked out of the room.

The bride turned to my mother, then to the judge and asked, "What do you suppose got into that s.o.b.?" Then she departed.

They left my mother holding their marriage license, and never returned for it. — ROBERT O. JOHNS, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ABBY: In the state of New Hampshire a justice of the peace may eliminate that part of the ceremony, and most of them do. (Why ask for trouble?) He can also add anything he wants to the ceremony with only two restrictions: He may not suggest the violent overthrowing of the government, and he may not call anybody any dirty names.

I should know. I am a licensed justice of the peace. — LESTER COLLINS, CLAREMONT, N.H.

DEAR ABBY: As a young clergyman I lived in a community where a deranged woman made it her business to attend prominent weddings and voice an objection at the appropriate time in the ceremony. Needless to say, kindly people made it THEIR business to spot her beforehand and gently remove her from the premises. — THE REV. JAMES ELLIOTT LINDSLEY, ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, TIVOLI, N.Y.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Ice Cream Day proclaimed

Ice cream lovers of the world have a reason to cheer. By an act of Congress, July 15 has been proclaimed National Ice Cream Day.

Mesquite mystique chic

By BETSY BALSLEY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Right now, barbecuing — and its allied method of food preparation, smoking — are definitely "in." Trendy restaurants throughout the country are discovering the virtues of mesquite grilling, making this ancient form of cooking not just socially acceptable but actually desirable.

The truth is, though, that the type of grilling that most of us have become relatively adept at is not really what's happening. Both the smoke-grilling and smoke-curing that are very popular now are much more sophisticated than most backyard specialists realize.

For one thing, most of the barbecue units available for home use are of better design than those of even 10 years ago. The vents are built in, providing better, more even heat control; some have gas hookups to heat ersatz coals; the cleanup is easier and so on. For another, that wonderful current rage, mesquite, is taking the barbecue world by storm.

It is not that mesquite is really better than other hard woods or charcoal made from any of a variety of woods; it is just that it is different.

Mesquite wood or charcoal burns better, longer and, in general, more evenly than other barbecue fuels. That makes it a dependable and practical choice for restaurants in particular and for home cooks who are into the finer points of barbecuing. It also has one other advantage.

Mesquite imparts a very light and delicate smoky flavor, making it a good choice for foods whose flavors might be masked rather than enhanced by a heavier, more pronounced, wood smoke.

But no matter how fancy or simple the barbecue grill one uses, or what kind of fuel is used, turning out a successful, smoke-grilled meal still comes down to the cook. And barbecuing is one thing that is perfected through practice.

Once you have mastered the techniques of barbecuing, you should have no hesitancy at trying to grill any suitable food. The accompanying recipes will get you off to a good start.

CHICKEN PAILLARD WITH ANCHO CHILE BUTTER
3 whole chicken breasts, split, boned and skinned
¼ olive oil
2 to 3 tablespoons ancho chile powder
6 ounces unsalted butter, softened
Salt
Grilled Vegetables
12 lemon or lime wedges

Place chicken pieces between 2 pieces of wax paper and pound with side of cleaver until thin. Combine olive oil with 1 tablespoon chile powder in dish just large enough to hold chicken pieces in one layer. Add chicken to oil mixture, turning once to coat well. Cover and marinate, refrigerated, 3 hours.

In small bowl, combine softened butter with 1 to 2 tablespoons chile powder. Season to taste with salt. Set mixture aside. It should be soft to serve.

At serving time, remove chicken pieces from marinade and cook over medium coals about 1 minute per side. Remove to warm plates; top chicken with dollop of ancho chile butter and surround with Grilled Vegetables. Garnish with lemon wedges. Makes 6 servings.

"We wouldn't be able to start what we started 25 years ago because you can't find the pieces and the prices are astounding," he said.

Grilled Vegetables

Fennel, red peppers, summer squash, eggplants, mushrooms or other vegetables of choice

Clean and trim fennel. Halve peppers and remove seeds and inner membranes. Trim ends from squash and halve if large. Trim ends from eggplants and cut in thick slices or chunks. Clean mushrooms. Parboil all vegetables until barely tender. Drain well and place on grill over medium coals. When vegetables are done, remove to platter and keep warm while chicken is cooking.

Note: More dense vegetables, such as fennel and eggplant, will take longer to grill, so start them first and add rest according to length of time it will take them to cook.

SMOKE-ROASTED SQUAB WITH RED WINE SAUCE
4 squabs
Fresh thyme
6 tbsps. olive oil
Salt, pepper
8 cups veal, veal-chicken or duck stock
1 cup Cabernet or Zinfandel wine
2 tbsps. unsalted butter

Clean squabs and truss. Combine thyme and 1-4 cup olive oil. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add squabs to mixture, turning to coat well. Let stand in cool, dry spot 2 hours. Meanwhile, prepare covered grill by letting coals burn down to gray ash. Spread coals around edges and place drip pan in center at fuel level to catch drippings from squabs. Add grapevine cuttings or fruitwood chips to charcoal and reduce heat to low. (Heat can be controlled by opening and closing vents in covered smoker.)

Brown marinated birds well in remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil in heavy 3-quart saute pan. Season to taste with additional thyme. Place browned birds on grill over drip pan in smoker, reserving browned bits and any oil remaining in pan. Cover and smoke over low heat about 1 hour (less for rare squab). Remove birds from smoker and set aside to cool.

When cool, halve and bone squabs. Chop carcasses and add to saute pan. Degrease drippings from pan in smoker and add to saute pan with wine and stock. Simmer over medium heat 30 minutes. Strain and degrease sauce. When ready to serve, place squabs in warm (not hot) sauce and let slowly heat through. (Sauce must not boil or birds will become tough.) When squabs are hot, remove to serving platter, whisk butter into sauce and spoon some of sauce over squabs. Any remaining sauce may be served on side. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Wood cuttings or chips may be soaked in water for about 30 minutes before use, if desired.

THE BUTCHER'S BARBECUE SAUCE
¼ cup butter
2 onions, finely chopped
2 to 3 cloves garlic, minced
1 stalk celery, minced
1 small green pepper, minced
1 (28-ounce) can stewed tomatoes
1 (12-ounce) can tomato paste
1 tbsp. dry mustard
1 tbsp. salt
1 to 2 bay leaves
½ cup cider vinegar
½ cup dark molasses
1 tbsp. hot pepper sauce
1 tbsp. liquid smoke
Juice of 1 lemon

Melt butter in large heavy pot over medium heat. Add onion, garlic, celery and green pepper. Cook until tender but not brown. Add stewed tomatoes, tomato paste, dry mustard, salt, bay leaves, vinegar, molasses, hot pepper sauce, liquid smoke and lemon juice. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and cover. Simmer 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Allow to cool. Remove bay leaves. Blend mixture in blender or food processor or force through sieve. Keep refrigerated. Use as basting sauce for meat or poultry. Makes 3 to 4 pints.

NEVA'S TERIYAKI SAUCE
3 tbsps. brown sugar, packed
1 tbsp. ginger
½ cup soy sauce
1 clove garlic, mashed
1 tbsp. sake or white wine

Combine brown sugar, ginger, soy sauce, garlic and sake. Mix well and refrigerate. Use as marinade for poultry or meats. Do not marinate more than 1 1-2 hours or it will be too strong. Makes about 3-4 cup.

SAFEWAY

Have a traditional Fourth of July picnic with some new twists on American favorites: Sweet and Sour Ribs, Savory Corn, Shell and Cucumber Salad and Tangy Lemon Squares.

Unusual foods add spice to Fourth of July picnics

In addition to the American freedoms traditionally celebrated on July 4, celebrate freedom from drudgery of food preparation with this easy-on-the-cook menu:

SWEET AND SOUR RIBS
4 to 6 pounds country style ribs or spareribs
2 tablesoons salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1 cup water
1/2 cup frozen concentrated orange juice, thawed and undiluted
1/2 cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 can (15-1/4 oz.) crushed pineapple, undrained
1 small onion, sliced

Sprinkle ribs with salt and pepper; wrap in heavy duty foil packets, folding over several times to seal. Place packets on cookie sheets or shallow baking pan. Bake at 350-F. for one hour. Meanwhile in medium saucepan, combine brown sugar, cornstarch and ginger; gradually add water, stirring until smooth. Add remaining ingredients except onion; mix well. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and clear. Remove ribs from foil and drain. Place cooked ribs in shallow baking dish; add sliced onion. Pour sauce over ribs. Return to oven and bake uncovered at 350-F. for 1-1/2 hours until tender. Serve over rice if desired. Makes four to six servings.

SAVORY CORN
1 package (10 oz.) frozen corn
1/4 cup chopped onion or 1 tablespoon dehydrated minced onion
1/4 cup preapred barbecue sauce
2 tablespoons frozen concentrated orange juice, thawed and undiluted
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder

Cook corn and onion in boiling salted water until tender, about 10 minutes; drain well. Add remaining ingredients; toss lightly. Heat through. Makes four servings.

SHELL AND CUCUMBER SALAD
1 cucumber, peeled and thinly sliced
1 medium onion, sliced
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 package (8 oz.) small shell pasta
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 cup minced pimiento
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon dill weed
1/4 teaspoon black pepper

In medium bowl combine cucumber and onion. Sprinkle with salt. Let sit 15 minutes, then blot dry with paper towel. Cook pasta according to package directions. Drain and cool. Stir in cucumber mixture. Stir together mayonnaise, sour cream, pimiento, vinegar, dill weed and pepper. Pour over shell pasta mixture and stir gently. Chill. Garnish with tomato wedges if desired. Makes six (3/4 cup) servings.

TANGY LEMON SQUARES
1 cup butter or margarine, softened
1/2 cup powdered sugar
2-1/3 cups all-purpose flour
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1/3 cup lemon juice from concentrate
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons powdered sugar

In large bowl cream together butter and 1/2 cup powdered sugar until fluffy. Add two cups flour, beating until blended. Spread evenly over bottom of well-greased 9x13-inch baking pan. Bake in 350-F. oven for 20 minutes. Meanwhile, in small mixing bowl beat eggs until light and foamy. Gradually add sugar, beating until thick and blended. Add lemon juice, remaining 1/3 cup flour and baking powder; beat until thoroughly blended. Pour lemon mixture over baked crust and return to oven; bake 25-30 minutes until golden and custard is set. Remove from oven and sprinkle evenly with powdered sugar. Cool. Cut in small squares or bars. Makes approximately 20 squares.

Poor diet may cause 'roller-coaster' effect

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Do you ever find yourself overwhelmed by work? Do you have trouble concentrating in the late afternoon, and then have to take your work home with you? Does this seem to be happening almost every night lately?

If you answer yes to these questions, you may have a diet problem. Your body may be riding a blood-sugar roller coaster that prevents you from functioning at your best level. What does that have to do with your diet? Everything!

You can actually increase your work potential and possibly even make more money if you start giving your body the kinds of food it really needs. Like any well-tuned machine, it can only function with the right fuel.

Let's look at some of the common eating habits that inhibit work production: skip breakfast, or eat a doughnut or sweet roll with several cups of coffee, take a fast sugar-laden lunch, drink some soft drinks in the afternoon or eat a candy bar, take a late dinner with a rich dessert. You stay up until midnight finishing your work, sleep fitfully, and repeat the whole thing again the next day. You take loads of vitamins, hoping for some magic to make you feel good, but somehow you just continue to drag yourself around.

So, what is the problem? You've got the "sugar blues." Within an hour or two after a high-sugar meal, your blood sugar drops fast, resulting in fatigue, lack of concentration and a loss of productivity.

It's hard to think or work when you have the mid-morning blahs and the late-afternoon drags. But, don't all the vitamins you take counteract your diet, and keep you healthy? No way. Vitamins do not have calories to give you energy; only food does that. And the wrong foods at the wrong time can put your blood sugar into a tailspin even if you are healthy.

"But, I'm too busy to fix breakfast, and sometimes, there's not much time for lunch, and I'm too tired to make dinner, so what else can I do?" you say.

I've heard all these excuses over and over, but a busy schedule need not produce poor nutrition and its excessive fatigue.

You can start right now to extend your energy level up to six hours by keeping protein and complex carbohydrate foods within easy reach whether you are at home or at work.

If you are too busy to eat three large meals, eat several small ones. Protein snacks help keep blood sugar levels steady, without causing fatigue.

Keep hard-boiled eggs, nuts, cheese, peanut butter, tuna, cold meats, fish or chicken handy. Plain yogurt, low fat milk, bread, whole grain crackers, dry sugar-free cereals, muffins, pizza, tacos, corn chips, fresh fruits and vegetables are easy, fast and nutritious.

Turkey is a great snack or dinner meal, because it is high in tryptophan which has a very soothing effect, just before bed.

Breakfast need not be a big production; you don't even have to cook anything to have a nourishing meal that will increase your energy level and maintain it for several hours. You don't have to stick with traditional "breakfast" foods, either. You can have anything that's healthful and handy. Try peanut butter on whole grain bread, any fruit, a glass of milk or plain yogurt and coffee, if you wish.

If you have leftover meats, vegetables, cheese or whatever from last night's dinner, have that. Keep low-fat cottage cheese and hard-boiled eggs in your refrigerator, along with fresh fruits and other cheeses and cold meats.

Instead of ruining your energy level in the middle of the morning with soft drinks or candy and doughnuts, keep fruit and small cans of vegetable juices in your desk drawer. A box of whole grain crackers will last a long time, and are comparatively low in calories.

Summertime cherry season

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Sweet red cherries — one of the most delectable and popular of fresh fruits — have a short season. They are at their peak just now and taper off in August.

Cherries are so good in themselves that the simpler they are treated the better. Here are three easy ways to use them.

One way is to accompany them with a dip. For the dip, a friend of mine uses sour cream mixed with finely chopped syrup-preserved ginger plus a little of the syrup. Or she uses ginger marmalade to mix with the sour cream. This combination is fine to serve as a dessert for a luncheon, supper or dinner.

Another cook enjoys teaming them with other fruits to make a compote and serving it as a topping for ice cream or sherbet.

Or you may enjoy serving them with a sabayon sauce. Here is the recipe.

CHERRIES SABAYON
1 to 1½ cups pitted fresh sweet red cherries
2 large egg yolks
⅓ cup dry white wine
¼ cup sugar
¾ teaspoon grated orange rind

Place cherries in individual serving dishes and set aside.

In the top of a double boiler whisk together the egg yolks, wine, sugar and orange rind. Place over boiling water (do not have water touch bottom of double boiler top) and beat with a wire whisk or electric beater until very thick — about 10 minutes. At once spoon sauce over cherries.

Makes 2 or 3 servings.

'I HAD A 6-YEAR-OLD DIE IN MY ARMS!'

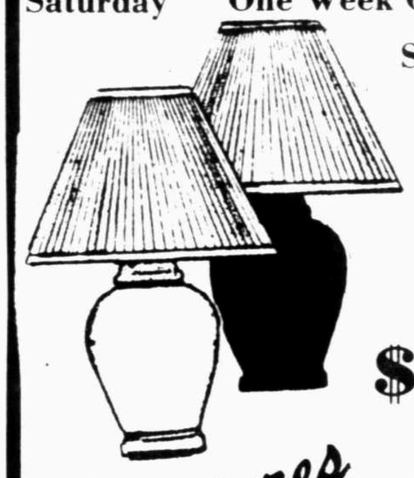

"No matter how tough a policeman thinks he is, he's never ready for the first highway fatality he sees. Mine was here 11 years ago. I had a 6-year-old die in my arms. It still wakes me up some nights. She'd be about 17 today if her mother had made her wear her safety belt. Safety belts can save more than 16,000 lives each year. In those 11 years I've never unbuckled a dead man."

Summer brings on nostalgia for childhood foods

By MERLE ELLIS

Summer always seems to bring on nostalgia for me. I'm a real softy for this season. The hotter it gets, the more I remember the summers of my childhood; swimmin' in the "crick" — that's what we call it in Nebraska, playin' kick-the-can on humid summer nights in Sioux City, catchin' fireflies, church socials on the lawn at the Morningside Lutheran Church and walking Diane Burkett home after, hopin' she'd let me kiss her. I held that hope from the time I was 5 and we were in the same class in kindergarten. I wonder what ever happend to Diane?

We ate good those summers of my youth. My mother was (and still is) an excellent cook, the kind of cook that knows how to cook for kids. That was why most of the neighborhood youth ate at your house all summer. It wasn't anything fancy. Would you believe my mother didn't even know what "gourmet" cooking was? She may have done some from time to time, but it hadn't been labeled yet, so how was she to know? Hers was simple food designed, without design, to satisfy a small herd of hungry kids.

One of her summer specialties is, to this day, one of the favorite summer foods around our house — Taverns. They are delicious, loose-meat hamburgers with catsup, mustard, onion — the works — cooked right in, then served on a soft, warm hamburger bun. I could eat half a dozen and often did!

Taverns originated (at least in my world) at Ye Olde Tavern, a little restaurant on 14th and Jackson in Sioux City, Iowa, where they were the house special and were devoured by hordes of hungry high school kids from Central. I went to "East" on the other side of town, so we learned to make our own.

TAVERNS

2 pounds ground beef
1 cup water
¾ cup catsup
3 tablespoons prepared mustard
½ teaspoon chili powder, or to taste
1 onion, minced
Salt and pepper to taste

Bring the water to a boil in a good-sized saucepan. Crumble the ground beef and add it to the water along with the rest of the ingredients. Bring the mixture back to a boil for a minute or two, stirring to mix well and break up any lumps of meat. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer for 20 minutes.

To serve, spoon mixture on hamburger buns that have been wrapped in foil and warmed in the oven.

If the kids around your house are more into hot dogs than hamburgers, here's another of my mother's summer child-pleasers.

CORN DOGS

1 cup pancake mix
3 tablespoons cornmeal
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon chili powder
¾ cup water
8 wooden skewers
8 hot dogs
Oil for deep frying

Combine the pancake mix, cornmeal, sugar and chili powder. Add the water and heat well to form a batter. Stick a skewer in one end of each hot dog. Dip the dog into the batter to coat and fry in 375 degree oil for 2 or 3 minutes, until nicely browned. Drain Corn Dogs on paper towels. Serve hot, liberally spread with mustard.

Both of the above go beautifully with fried dill pickles. This recipe I cannot trace back to my youth. I discovered it only a month or so ago in Natchez, Mississippi.

FRIED DILL PICKLES

1 egg beaten
8 ounces milk
1 tablespoon Lea ' Perrin Sauce
5 or 6 drops Tabasco
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups flour
Salt and pepper
Sliced dill pickles
Oil for deep frying

Mix beaten egg with milk, Lea and Perrin, Tabasco and 1 tablespoons flour. Add salt and pepper to taste. Mix 2 cups flour with salt and pepper to taste in a separate bowl. Dip pickles in egg mixture then into flour, then into egg and back into flour. Fry in 350 degree deep fat until golden brown.

Sherbet served with wafers

The Associated Press

LEMON SHERBET

3 large eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
1 cup heavy cream
¼ cup lemon juice
Vanilla Wafers

In a small bowl beat egg whites until soft peaks; gradually beat in ¼ cup of the sugar until stiff peaks. In a small bowl beat cream until stiff.

In a medium bowl, beat egg yolks and remaining ¼ cup sugar until thickened and lemon color; beat in lemon juice until blended. Fold in egg whites, then whipped cream until blended. Turn into an 8-inch square pan; cover with saran; freeze til firm.

Serve with vanilla wafers. Makes 6 servings.

Cookbook gives brunch French flair

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Among the more colorful attractions in France are the charcuteries, or pork stores, with their mouthwatering displays of hams, sausages and pates.

So it was with interest that I perused a new American guide to food called "The Soho Charcuterie Cookbook." It is based on a restaurant of that name in New York's Soho district.

("The Soho Charcuterie Cookbook." Morrow. 105 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10016).

Francine Scherer and Madeline Poley, who operate the restaurant, have written the book, aimed primarily at dressing up America's Sunday brunch, but including dinner parties as well.

For brunch there are recipes for an exotic French toast and such ethnic or international offerings as Black Forest ham quiche and smoked turkey crepes.

The book also features many vegetable delicacies, such as fresh broccoli with garlic and anchovy mayonnaise or green beans with fresh oregano.

The brunch sandwiches are robust, such as ham and brie on French bread or smoked salmon and asparagus on black Russian bread.

There are unusual egg dishes, such as beef tenderloin with poached eggs or hard-cooked eggs stuffed with shrimp, crab or lobster.

The charcuterie specials themselves consist of various pates and sausages stuffed with duck meat, a mixture of seafood, spinach and watercress, and other unusual mixtures.

Other specialties are potatoes sauteed in duck fat, and an entree consisting of filet mignon with Westphalian ham and butter blended with red wine.

Here is a relatively simple recipe for spinach crepes, using food processor or blender.

SPINACH CREPES

1¼ cups spinach, well washed with stems removed
1⅛ cups milk
¾ cup unbleached flour, sifted
2 extra-large eggs
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 pinch freshly grated nutmeg
2 tablespoons sweet butter, melted

Bring 1 cup water to boil, add spinach and blanch until wilted and still bright green, about 15 seconds. Drain in colander and place under cold running water, until chilled. Drain spinach and squeeze out remaining liquid. In food processor, combine spinach and milk and puree until mixture is completely smooth. Add remaining ingredients, except butter, and blend well. Pour mixture into a bowl, add melted butter and let batter rest 2 hours. Place 7-inch crepe pan over moderate heat. Brush pan with butter and spoon in 2 tablespoons batter. Rotate pan until bottom is covered with batter. Pour excess batter back into bowl. Cook 1 minute or until top loses gloss. Flip crepe with spatula.

Brown 30 seconds and remove to a plate. Repeat with remainder of batter, buttering pan as needed.

GRAPEFRUIT CHIFFON PIE

A light yet delicious dessert.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1¾ cups fresh grapefruit juice
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated grapefruit rind
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites, beaten into stiff peaks
½ cup heavy cream, whipped
Baked 9-inch crumb crust
8 grapefruit sections, membrane and seeds removed

Dissolve gelatin in grapefruit juice in a saucepan. Add sugar and grated grapefruit rind and cook until well blended.

Whisk a little of the grapefruit juice mixture into the egg yolks, then pour into the saucepan with remaining grapefruit mixture.

Cook for a few minutes until mixture begins to coat a spoon. Remove from heat, cool a bit, and alternately add beaten egg whites and whipped cream. Pour into prepared crumb crust, chill at least 3 hours or until well set, and decorate by placing 1 grapefruit section on each slice of pie.

Serve immediately. Makes 8 servings. —(AP)

Hominy 'puts on the grits'

Copley News Service

For those vegetarians who believe they've sampled every variety of corn dish in existence — but who haven't yet tried hominy — a real treat lies in store.

Hominy is made of corn kernels which have been treated with lye, a process developed by American Indians who lived in the Southern part of the country. In fact, "hominy" is itself believed to be an Algonquin Indian word meaning "small particles." The ground kernels, which may be purchased in fine, medium or coarse grind, are known as hominy grits.

In the South, the larger-size hominy is often served as a vegetable, while grits are cooked with milk or water into a thick porridge which is a standard on the breakfast table.

To prepare basic boiled hominy grits, measure one part hominy to four parts water. Bring water to a boil with a slight amount of salt, if desired, and slowly pour in hominy, stirring constantly. Cover and cook over low heat for one hour, until hominy is tender. Stir often during cooking. Serve with butter and milk or cream as a breakfast cereal, or top with a poached egg, as Southern cooks do.

Cooked hominy grits also appear in a number of favorite Dixieland dishes, and may be fried or baked either alone, or in combination with other ingredients.

This Southern treat is a nice variation from the more standard rice and potatoes favored in other parts of the country. Serve Hominy Italiano or Cheesy Baked Grits as a nourishing meatless entree, accompanied by a tossed green salad and fresh fruit for dessert. Hominy Buttermilk Muffins are delightful when served oven-warm for breakfast, or with a light soup at lunchtime.

HOMINY ITALIANO

1 qt. milk
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup hominy grits
¼ tsp. salt
⅓ cup melted butter or margarine
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup grated Swiss cheese

In large saucepan bring milk to a boil. Add ½ cup butter or margarine, and gradually stir in grits. Stir constantly until mixture thickens, then stir in salt. Remove from heat, then beat hard by hand with wooden spoon, or with an electric mixer, for 5 minutes.

Pour into oiled 13x9x2-inch baking pan and allow to set. Cut into squares and arrange in baking pan, with squares overlapping. Pour melted butter or margarine over top and sprinkle with grated cheeses.

Bake in preheated 400 F oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Place under broiler for last few minutes to brown lightly, if desired. Serves 8 to 10.

Chilled soups can help cool off summer meals

By OLIVIA and PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

With the onset of summer weather, foods that are light, easy to prepare and require little or no cooking take on special appeal. Chilled soups fit the bill perfectly.

Many soups usually served hot adapt well to chilling, and the list of soups especially created to be served cold is almost endless. Both types are an excellent first course for a light summer meal.

To perk up a heat-dulled palate, cold soups should combine crisp, distinctive flavor and an interesting, pleasing texture. Chilling mutes the effect of seasonings, so it's especially important to adjust the amounts of spices, herbs, salt and pepper in cold versions of soups usually served hot.

Consommes and vegetable soups adapt especially well to chilling. Soups that contain meat are a bit trickier — for one thing, you must be sure to skim off every bit of fat that appears on the surface of the soup while it is chilling. If the original recipe for a hot soup contains butter, substitute cream or sour cream in the chilled version.

In the produce section of your supermarket you will find the ingredients for delicious summer soups that need no cooking. Avocados, scallions, parsley, celery, onions and spinach can all be used to create delicious cold soups without turning on the kitchen stove on a hot summer day.

With a blender or food processor you can create a quick raw-vegetable puree. Chopped raw vegetables add texture to a cold soup like gazpacho, one of our recipes for today.

Combinations of ingredients such as white wine, chicken broth, tomato juice, water, sour cream and yogurt are good choices for a cold soup's base. Herbs like basil, dill, thyme and parsley are good additions to chilled soups, since their distinctive flavors come through clearly.

Croutons are a great way to add texture to a chilled puree — or to any soup, for that matter. Dense-textured, flavorful breads like pumpernickel and rye make especially good croutons. The bread you use should be stale and dry — if stale bread is not available, heat fresh bread slices for a few minutes in an over preheated to 300 degrees.

To make croutons, slice the bread about a half-inch thick, remove the crust and cut the slices into half-inch cubes. Fry the bread cubes in a bit of butter or oil until they are crisp and lightly browned. For extra flavor add some minced garlic to the butter or oil before you fry the croutons.

Garnishes chosen to complement the flavors of the other ingredients add an elegant final touch to almost any chilled soup. Parsley, watercress, chopped chives or a dollop of sour cream added just before serving enhance both taste and visual appeal.

Gazpacho, which originated in Andalusia, in southern Spain, is a lively combination of tomatoes and crisp vegetables. It makes a dramatic first course, and requires no cooking. Cold Cucumber and Watercress Soup is a hot-weather favorite of ours — cooling both to the eye and the palate. Cold Cream of Tomato Soup is light and refreshing, with a hint of dill and basil.

COLD CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP

8 large tomatoes, about 2½ lbs.
½ cup sliced scallions
3 tbsps. butter
5 cups chicken broth
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 fresh basil leaves, chopped, or 1 pinch dried basil
3 heaping tbsps. sour cream
½ tsp. dill weed (for garnish)
3-4 tbsps. additional sour cream (for garnish)

Drop tomatoes, one at a time, into boiling water for 20 seconds. This will ake the skins slip off easily. Core and peel tomatoes and cut into quarters.

Melt butter in large saucepan and saute scallions until soft. Add tomatoes, stir and pour in chicken broth. Add salt and pepper to taste. Simmer 20-30 minutes, until tomatoes are soft. Stir in basil about 5 minutes before end of cooking time.

Allow to cool and blend, in batches, in blender until smooth. Whisk in sour cream. Chill thoroughly in refrigerator and serve in individual bowls, garnished with a small dollop of sour cream and a sprinkling of dill weed.

Serves 8 to 10.

COLD CUCUMBER & WATERCRESS SOUP

½ cup scallions, sliced
4 cups diced cucumbers
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. lemon juice
4 cups chicken broth
1 cup chopped watercress
½ cup sliced, peeled potatoes
½ cup half-and-half or heavy cream
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 tbsps. chopped chives (for garnish)
2-3 radishes, sliced (for garnish)

In large saucepan, saute scallions in butter until softened. Add cucumbers,chicken broth, watercress, potatoes, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Simmer until potatoes are tender, about 30 minutes.

Puree in blender, in batches. Transfer to large bowl, add half-and-half or cream, stir and allow to cool. Chill thoroughly in refrigerator.

Serve in individual bowls, garnished with radish slices and chopped chives.

Serves 8.

GAZPACHO

6 large, ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and finely chopped
2 medium cucumbers, peeled, seeded and finely chopped
1 medium green or red bell pepper, seeded and finely chopped
½ cup finely chopped onion
2 cups tomato juice
½ cup cold water
⅓ cup olive oil
1½ tbsps. wine vinegar
3 tbsps. fresh lemon juice
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ tsp. Tabasco sauce
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tbsps. chopped parsley (for garnish)

Put chopped tomatoes, cucumbers, onion and bell pepper in large glass bowl.Pour in tomato juice, water, lemon juice, olive oil and vinegar and stir well.

Add garlic, Tabasco, salt and pepper, stir again and taste. Adjust seasonings as needed.

Chill thoroughly in refrigerator. Taste again when chilled to check seasoning.

Serves 6 to 8.

Soup has long history

Copley News Service

The word "soup" derives from the Germanic sop, which originally meant the bread over which a broth was poured. In some provinces of France, la soupe still indicates the bread over which the liquid (le potage) is poured. The words "sup" and "supper" also are related, indicating how typical an evening meal soup once was. In the United States, the call of, "Soup's on!" is still used as a folksy call to dinner, whether soup is actually on the menu or not.

The French seem to have a particular affection for soups, and often create especially delicious ones. The first eating place to be called a "restaurant" was a Parisian soup kitchen established in 1765 by M. Boulanger. Above the entrance was the Latin motto Venite ad me omnes qui stomacho laboratis et ego restaurabo ... "Come to me all whose stomachs call out and I will restore you." This seems to us just what a restaurant should be — a place which not only serves food, but "restores" the patron, as well.

Louis P. DeGouy, a European chef who worked in the United States for many years, published "The Soup Book" in 1949. In it, he sums up the appeal of soup better, perhaps, than any other writer.

"Soup is cuisine's kindest course," he writes. "It breathes reassurance; it steams consolation. ... There is nothing like a bowl of hot soup, its wisp of aromatic steam making the nostrils quiver with anticipation."

LENTIL-SPLIT PEA SOUP WITH HAM

2 cups dry lentils
1 cup dry split peas
1 lb. smoked ham, or ham bones with meat on them
2 cloves garlic, chopped
3 medium onions, chopped
1 bay leaf
¼ tsp. cayenne
3 carrots, sliced
3 stalks celery, sliced
Salt and pepper to taste

Soak lentils and peas overnight in bowl with enough water to cover. Drain ad rinse them, and place in large soup pot with 14 cups water, ham, garlic, onion, cayenne and bay leaf.

Simmer, partially covered, 4 to 6 hours until well reduced and beginning to thicken.

With slotted spoon, remove any bones and meat scraps from soup. Allow to cool and separate meat from bones and fat. Coarsely chop meat and return it to soup.

Forty-five minutes before serving, add carrot and celery slices and simmer gently. Add salt and pepper to taste; serve very hot.

Serves 10 to 12.

BIG SOUP

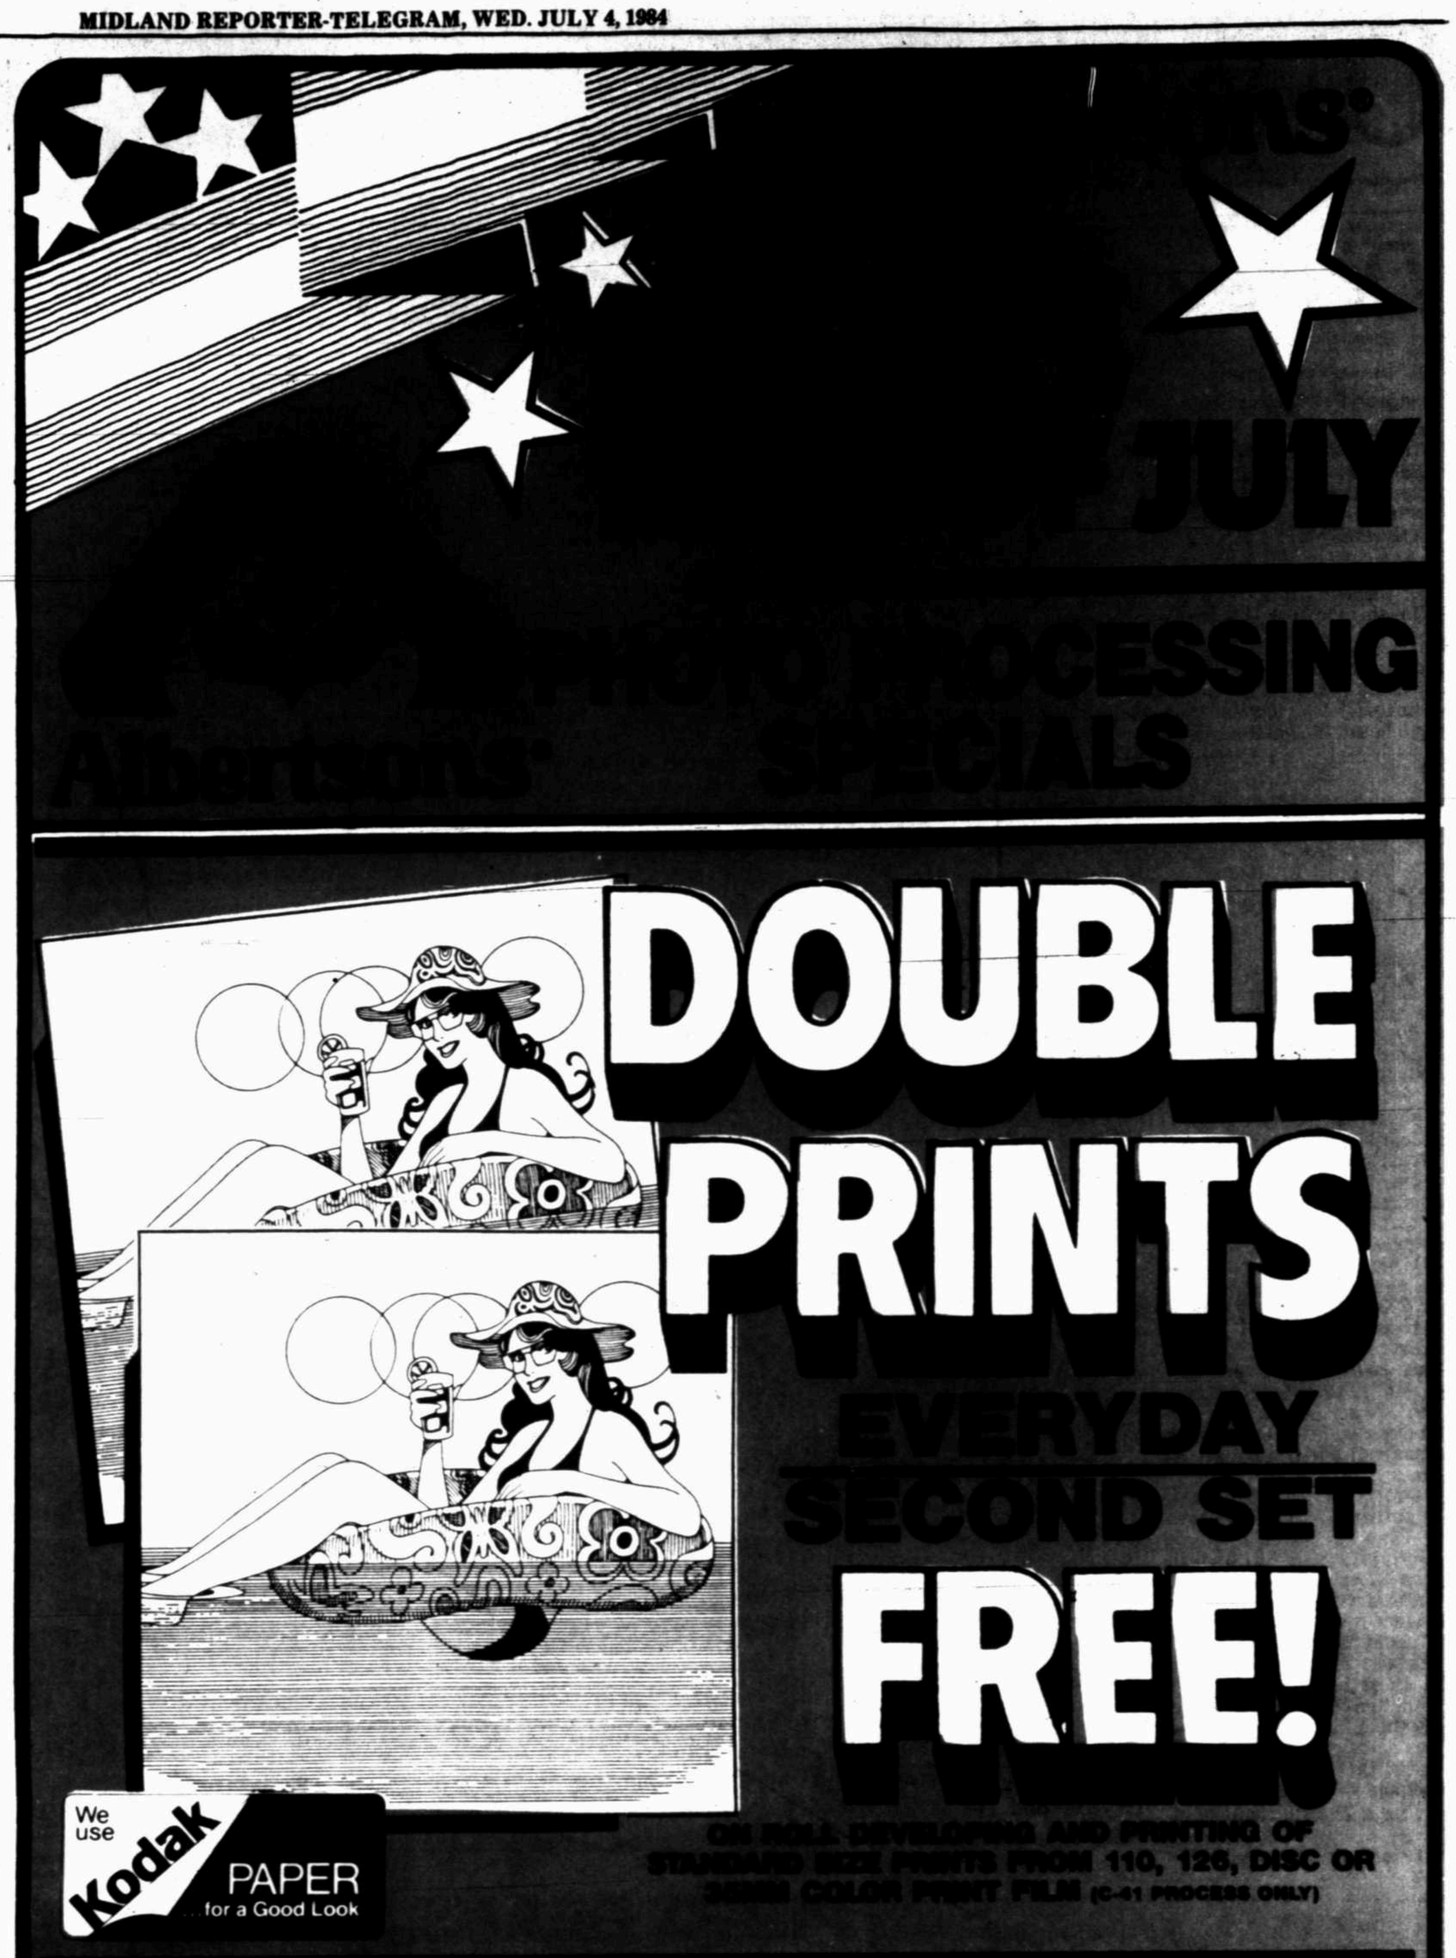

1 medium-size chicken
½ cup uncooked rice
5 smoked frankfurter links, sliced
2 medium onions, chopped or thinly sliced
⅛ tsp. thyme
Salt and pepper to taste
A generous handful (or more) each of several vegetables, either leftover or raw, such as the following:
Sliced okra
Corn
Chopped potatoes
Green beans
Chopped tomatoes
Peas
Zucchini, sliced
Summer squash, sliced

Place whole chicken in pot with water (10 to 12 cups) to cover. Add onions nd thyme; simmer 45 minutes to 1 hour, until meat begins to fall from bones.

Remove chicken, allow to cool and separate meat from skin and bones. Chop or shred meat and return to broth.

Add rice, frankfurter slices and any raw vegetables to simmering broth. Allow to simmer a half-hour before serving. Any cooked leftover vegetables to be used should be added about 5 minutes before serving. Add salt and pepper to taste; serve hot.

Serves 8 to 10.

Disney renegotiates Gibson Greetings purchase

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

BURBANK, Calif. — Walt Disney Productions, under fire from investors and analysts who claim that the company paid too much for acquisitions spurred by a recent takeover attempt, said Monday that it has renegotiated — and reduced — the price it will pay for Cincinatti-based Gibson Greetings Inc.

Disney Vice President Erwin Okun said a recent sharp drop in the price of Disney shares was a key factor in restructuring merger terms with the third-largest U.S. maker of greeting cards and gift-wrapping paper.

Another reason, he added, was that under standard accounting rules Disney could not, as anticipated, account for the deal on a "pooling of interests basis," which would have allowed Disney's and Gibson's balance sheets to be added together.

Instead, the merger must be treated as "purchase accounting," under which Gibson's assets will be carried on the books at the purchase price on the day the deal closes. As a result, some balance sheet entries, such as depreciation of fixed assets and amortization of good will, generally will be higher and therefore could cause Burbank-based Disney to report lower than expected earnings. A spokesman said that the company anticipates that the reduction will be "slightly less" than 5 percent.

Under the new agreement, each share of Gibson stock will be exchanged for one-half of one share of Disney stock. Originally, Disney would have swapped shares according to a formula based on the price of Disney stock, with the total deal valued at $330 million. Disney will also pay Gibson shareholders $30 million in cash, or about $2.90 a share, the same as in the initial agreement.

Analysts estimated that Gibson shareholders stand to receive between $18 million and $40 million less on the restructured deal, which is expected to close in about 40 days. Disney, on the other hand, will issue about 1 million fewer shares than it would have otherwise, Okun said.

"The bottom line is that the merger is going through on terms slightly more favorable to Disney," said Fred Anschel, an analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. Anschel added that "the merger will have a negative impact on Disney's per-share earnings and create a large amount of increased debt."

The merger was intended to ward off a hostile takeover attempt by New York financier Saul P. Steinberg by issuing stock to dilute his stake in the company.

It originally called for Disney to issue between 4.5 million and 6.2 million new shares to acquire the greeting card company.

Disney squelched the takeover move June 11, by buying back Steinberg's 11.1 percent stake in the company for $325.3 million in exchange for a promise from Steinberg not to invest in the company for the next decade.

Meanwhile, the price of Disney common stock on the New York Stock Exchange has plummeted from $65.25 per share in mid-June to $46.125 on Monday, and 20 lawsuits have been filed by shareholders against the company.

Flag sales soar this year

BLOOMFIELD, N.J. (AP) — At the 137-year-old Annin & Co. flag manufacturing firm in this Essex County community, preparations for July Fourth began last winter.

And 1984 has been "an exceptionally good year for the flag business" because of the improved economy, the presidential primary season and the Olympics, said Annin advertising manager Dan Connors.

The company is perhaps the largest flag manufacturer in the country, and possibly the world, said Connors. With six plants in New Jersey, Ohio and Canada, Annin sells 600,000 to 700,000 different types of flags and banners annually.

In addition to American flags, the firm makes state and foreign flags that are sold to schools, churches, industries, private individuals and foreign embassies. It makes flags for 5,000 dealers and distributors across the nation.

About two-thirds of the firm's sales are in American flags, said Connors.

"The Olympics seem to arouse more interest in the flag," he said.

Annin makes flags in every size, from the 4-inch-by-6-inch desk model to one 20 feet by 38 feet.

The firm also fills special orders for hugh flags in the south and southwest, "where there's more room to fly them," Connors said.

Connors boasts that his firm has manufactured the largest flag to fly from a flagpole — a 50-foot by 100-foot model for a 220-foot flagpole in Texas.

"That's Texas for you," he said.

Tube check

A construction supervisor at the Raytheon Company's new Microelectronics Center in Andover, Mass., checks the inside of a return tube that recycles and cleans the air at the new center. Forty of such tubes will be used in the new center in order to keep the air cleaner than that of a normal hospital operating room in order to maufacture very high speed integrated circuits. The facility is now almost 90 percent complete.

Chrysler confirms it secured line of credit

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., on its way to tripling its record 1983 profit, confirms it secured a $1.1 billion line of credit.

The credit line was arranged with 57 banks from around the world. The No. 3 automaker said in a statement Monday it has no immediate plans to draw on the credit and considers it a "rainy-day fund."

Chrysler, in contrast to its recent brush with bankruptcy, has an estimated $1.5 billion of cash on hand. It earned a company record $701 million in 1983 and is expected to top $2 billion in earnings this year.

Firm intentionally moves to bolster condition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Continental Illinois Corp., parent company of the troubled Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., has intentionally moved to pare the size of its assets and deposits to bolster its condition, a government banking official says.

The official, who would only speak on condition he not be identified, said "They're taking this bank in the direction it has to go."

"It's a route they have to go regardless of how the Continental situation is ultimately resolved ... The end result has to be a smaller Midwestern bank," he said.

Auto wreckers cast off image of 'junkyard dog'

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Terry Gaines used to loathe buying replacement parts for his 1978 Monte Carlo because it usually meant a trip to a local junkyard, where he would get on his back and scavenge for parts under the wreckage.

But Gaines and many consumers like him are finding that they do not have to get dirty every time they need a spare part, because the $4 billion-a-year junkyard industry lately has been trading in its scrap-heap image for a sleek new one.

The junkyard dog — and even the term "junkyard" — have been abandoned by the new-breed owners, who prefer to be called recyclers or salvage dealers.

Recyclers are leading a management revolution in a lucrative but unglamorous industry. New techniques, such as cleaning and separating parts, setting up showrooms and packaging selected items in plastic and using computers to catalogue inventory, are being incorporated so fast that some experts say used-parts supermarkets will soon be commonplace.

"In the past, most junkyard dealers have not been businessmen," said Barry M. Isenberg, head of Isenberg Associates Inc., a consulting firm in Cupertino, Calif., which advises junk dealers on how to operate more efficiently. "They've been failed auto mechanics or tow truck operators.

"There's now a radical change going on in the industry," Isenberg continued. "The same thing that happened to the retail food industry is happening to junkyard owners. Like the mom and pop grocery stores that died out with the advent of supermarkets, the junkyard dealers that don't modernize will suffer."

Gaines, for example, bought a set of gears for his Monte Carlo at Lakenor Auto Salvage in Sante Fe Springs — a facility that even competitors admit looks more like a bank than a junkyard with its landscaped exterior, smoked glass windows and Spanish roof tile awning.

The gears Gaines bought for $25 had been tested, packaged in plastic and were guaranteed. Gaines, a truck driver, estimated that he saved about 70 percent by buying used parts rather than new ones.

In recent years, about 25 percent of the nation's 11,200 junkyards have built clean, well-lighted warehouses.

"Up until 12 years ago, it used to be common practice here for a customer to come in and take a wrench and get their own part," said Herb Lieberman, owner of Lakenor Auto Salvage. "But we found the customer would damage one part trying to remove another one. We decided to modernize and build a new building and install computers."

The changes have made Lakenor Auto Salvage one of the most modern and successful of the 585 auto dismantlers in Los Angeles County with revenues of $3 million last year.

Other recycling companies in the Los Angeles area share similar success. For example, B-J Used Auto Parts of Downey Inc., and two other Southern California retail store subsidiaries of Automotive Part Recyclers Inc. of Compton, grossed about $2.5 million last year, according to Jack Purcell, APR's general manager.

And Marvin L. Schmidt Inc., parent company of Marv's Auto Dismantling in Sun Valley, Calif., topped 1 million in annual sales last year for the first time in its 15-year history.

"There is a good profit to be made in used auto parts," said Cecil Erwin, a regional inspector for the California Department of Motor Vehicles, which licenses junkyards. "You may get your hands dirty — but the money is all green."

Junkyards are prospering with car owners balking at high sticker prices for new automobiles and fixing their clunkers.

According to the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association the average age of passenger cars on the road was 7.4 years in 1983, the oldest in 30 years. Just 7.2 million cars were junked in 1982, the second lowest number since 1976.

A quick look at the arithmetic explains why owners are so bullish on junk: Putting all new parts on the average American-made used car would cost about two to three times its sticker price, according to Russell F. McKinnon, executive vice president of the Automotive Dismantlers & Recyclers Association in Washington, D.C.

Old furniture building proclaims proud history

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — One of Marshall's most historically significant landmarks is not identified by a historical marker, is not listed on the state historical society's register and is not included in any known tourist guides, maps or scenic tours of the Marshall area.

It does, however, still sell some of the area's best furniture.

Located in downtown Marshall at the southeast corner of Washington Avenue and Rusk Street, Smith Furniture Co. is the legacy of its former owner and proprietor, the late Edward Noonan Smith, who built it in 1910 with handmade bricks.

The building was known as the E.N Smith block and rightfully so, for in many ways, the large, handsome edifice reflected its founder's colorful style, ambitious spirit and successful presence in Marshall.

However, like his furniture company, Smith's self-made career had to start from scratch.

Born April 19, 1885 in Somerset, Ky., Smith lost two fathers to violent deaths before he was a year old. According to Smith's eldest son Wesley, young Edward's natural father died in a mining explosion before he was born and his new stepfather died on the railroad before the child's first birthday.

Reared on his grandparents' 70-acre farm near Somerset, Smith got as far as the seventh grade in school before he and his mother, Nannie E. Lynch, moved to Longview in 1898.

Two years later, they moved to Marshall where the widow Lynch managed the old Capitol Hotel, which was at Bolivar and East Houston street off the southeast corner of the courthouse square.

A couple of years later, she quit the hotel and ran a boarding house on Bolivar Street, which catered to railroad engineers.

It was during those years that young E.N. Smith began his long road to success as a peddler, going door to door, selling what he could from a valise carpet bag.

"He was a peddling jewelry, eye glasses, watches and small carpets or throw rugs," Wesley Smith said. "After a while, he bought a horse and buckboard and got to be pretty well known in Harrison County."

The sales experience he received from those years of peddling, together with the business contacts and money he made doing it, led Smith to open the first automobile dealership in Marshall — selling Hudsons and Cadillacs — around the turn of the century.

"He did not own the first car, but he sold the first car in Marshall," recalls Wesley. "It was about 1906 and I think it was a Maxwell."

According to Ann Woods, sales manager at Smith Furniture Co., E.N. Smith also brought the first gasoline-powered Cadillac to the Marshall area.

Imported oil could be replaced

A study by the American Gas Association says natural gas could replace 340,000 barrels of imported oil within 30 days should escalation of the Iran-Iraq war reduce U.S. access to Middle East oil.

The study, "The Strategic Role of Gas in Replacing Imported Oil," highlights the necessity of removing current constraints on industrial demand for natural gas, such as the Fuel Use Act; incremental pricing provisions of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, and certain state and local tax policies.

Ample short-term natural gas supplies and a flexible pipeline and gas-utility distribution system would accommodate an immediate and sustained increase in the use of natural gas if U.S. oil supplies were halted, according to the study.

Within one year approximately 17 percent of U.S. oil imports could be displaced by natural gas. A national effort to replace oil with natural gas could reduce oil consumption by 1.8 million barrels of oil a day within five years, the study says.

How do banks account for their loans?

NEW YORK (AP) — In the world of banking, the interest payment due on a loan is considered an asset, like a manufacturer's accounts receivable.

But when there is a risk that payment will not be made on time, or at all, there can be a significant gap between what a bank says it is earning and what it really is earning after the dust settles.

Wall Street analysts take a dim view of this accounting. Some have even steered investors away from buying stock in big banks that are heavily into foreign lending.

And the government is now leaning on the banks to be more candid about listing such income from borrowers, such as those in the Third World, who may be behind their formal deadlines for making loan repayments.

Here are some questions and answers about the situation:

Q: Why has it seemed lately that worries about international debts rise near the end of each fiscal quarter?

A: If a borrower's payment is more than 90 days overdue, a bank must show it as "non-accruing," and subtract that sum from its profit. With many Third World debtors struggling with mountainous debts, the big international banks worry they may end up with sharply reduced profits for a quarter, which does not please stockholders.

Q: How have banks handled the problem of late loans?

A: Until recently, some banks took a liberal approach and gave borrowers until the end of the quarter to catch up with debt payments even though the 90-day accrual period may have run out before the end of the quarter. Thus, if a borrower managed to make a last-minute payment — as Argentina did twice this year — the banks were spared from reporting a substantial decline in profit.

Q: How is that changing?

A. As of the third quarter this year, the federal banking regulators are insisting that the banks adhere to a strict 90-day accounting rule, no matter when the payment deadline falls within a quarter.

Q: Will that result in earnings declines if countries are late in paying?

A: Yes, depending on the bank, and how conservatively it has approached its accounting.

When the government reminded bankers of the strict 90-day rule last month, Citibank, for example, said its earnings would not be affected because it has always taken a conservative approach to its loan accounting.

On the other hand, Manufacturers Hanover Trust said its second-quarter earnings probably would show a 13 percent drop from the same period a year ago, because Argentina was late paying its interest. Other banks may be in the same position.

Q: How will that affect the banks?

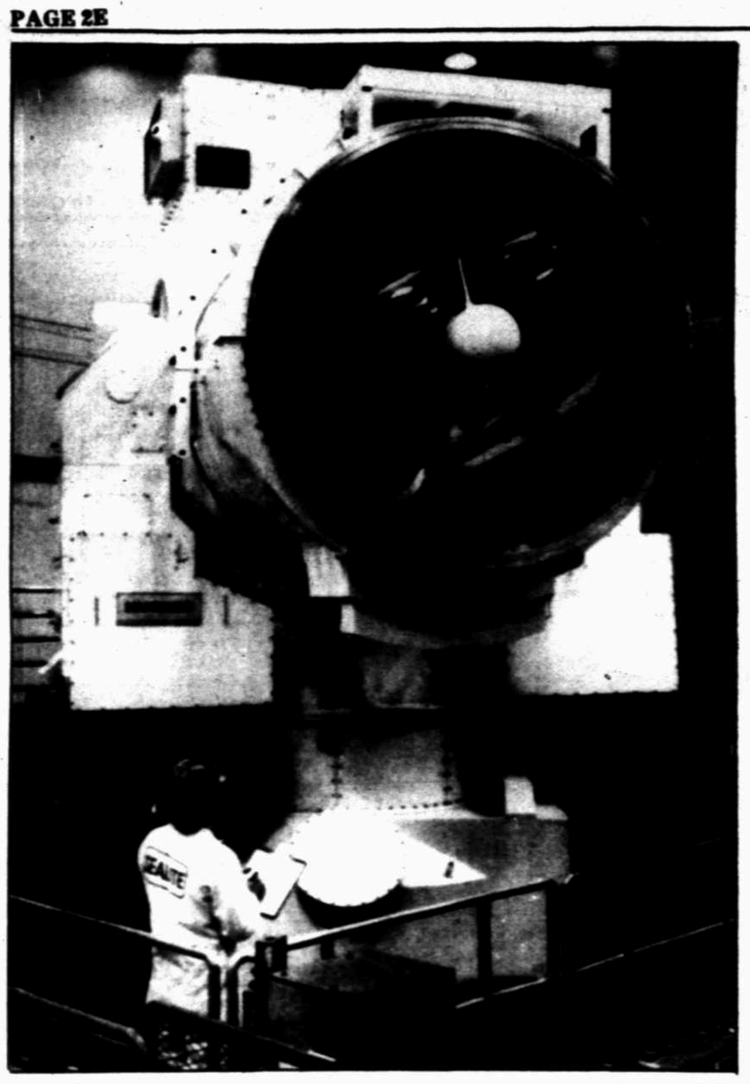

A: That remains to be seen. Stock prices of the big banks are down sharply from the beginning of the year, primarily because of worries over international debts. But when Manufacturers Hanover said it would bite the bullet on its loans, its stock and that of other banks actually went up.

Q: Why?

A: Wall Street analysts took it as a sign that the investment community would view bank earnings as more realistic. In fact, the analysts said, with their new accounting, banks may end up being in a stronger position than many expected because investors had so heavily discounted reported earnings vs. perceived earnings.

Q: So in the end, the banks may be perceived more positively by Wall Street?

A: Maybe. But the fact remains that until the economies of the developing world rebound and allow them to whittle away their debts, the banks' problem will remain.

Survey shows well servicing expenditures lowest since 1978

DALLAS — Well servicing expenditures by the petroleum industry last year were the lowest since 1978, according to a survey cconducted by Petroleum Engineer International magazine. Results of the survey, appearing in the publication's July issue, also indicate that well servicing expenditures fell below $3 billion in 1983 for the first time since 1980.

All facets of well servicing — recompletions, artificial lift repairs, tubular repairs, remedial stimulations, etc. — participated in the downturn, which saw only 31 percent of the United State's 869,872 active wells serviced or worked over. In 1981, 70 percent of the country's wells were serviced, and 58 percent were treated in 1982.

Investors getting short end of stick

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Hey bunkie, have I got a deal for you.

How would you like to be able to sell gold you don't own?

Of course, you'll have to pay through the nose for the privilege. And you may not get the best price for your gold. And you may lose a whole lot of money, only to discover the federal government won't help you and the state government can't.

But that's your problem.

It's certainly no big worry for the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which — less than two weeks after declaring war on commodity fraud — is preparing to unleash a risky new gold gimmick on unsuspecting investors.

Against the advice of its own chief economist — who says it serves no economic purpose — and its top law-enforcement officer — who fears investors will be ripped off — the CFTC is lined up 4-0 in favor of something known as "short leverage."

If you have trouble remembering the phrase, just think of investors' getting the short end of the stick.

"Short leverage" is a variation on an already obscure variety of investment called a "leverage contract." Even sophisticated investors have never heard of leverage contracts, because none of the big-name Wall Street brokerage houses sells them.

Congress several years back began steps to outlaw leverage contracts because of a history of abuses going back to the Depression.

Only the four companies already in the business were permitted to continue selling leverage, and the assumption was those four would not remain in operation forever.

One of the four leverage companies is, for all practical purposes, out of business. That firm, Premex Inc. of San Diego, has been placed in receivership by the CFTC as the result of investor complaints.

But far from withering away or changing their business, three other leverage firms are thriving: International Precious Metals Corp. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Monex Inc. of Newport Beach, Calif.; and First National Monetary Corp. of Southfield, Mich.

The leverage firms are as aggressive at influence-peddling as they are at peddling gold, using their political clout with the Democratic-controlled House Agriculture Committee and the Republican-run CFTC to get new business.

As evidence of that clout, let it be noted that leverage contracts are the only futures-type investments that are not required by law to be sold on regulated futures exchanges.

Also thanks to the leverage of the leverage industry, Congress has taken away the power of states to regulate leverage-contract sales.

Until now, leverage contracts have only been used to sell gold and silver to speculators counting on the price to go up.

Now the firms want to let investors who think prices are going down to "sell short." In a "short-leverage" contract, investors will sell gold they don't own in hopes of buying it back later at a cheaper price.

And the commodity commissioners are lined up unanimously to let them do it, even though CFTC administrative law judge George Painter has ruled in one case that leverage contracts, by their very nature, are a fraud on investors.

The agency's chief law-enforcement officer also has written a confidential memo against letting the leverage companies expand.

Texas refinery production up

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace has announced that 58 refineries in Texas processed 132,479,714 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during March.

The March volume compares to 129,532,853 barrels in February and 125,509,426 barrels in March 1983.

Texas refineries ran 102,640,237 barrels of crude oil in March, compared to 100,507,368 barrels in February and 98,403,393 barrels in March 1983.

Products manufactured in March totaled 133,127,430 barrels, up from 129,103,117 barrels in February and up from 125,220,328 barrels in March 1983.

March manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 56,079,996 barrels, compared to 53,530,685 barrels in February and 50,689,741 barrels in March 1983.

Texas refineries manufactured 6,706,674 barrels of home heating oil in March — a decrease of 5,409,916 barrels from the February volume. March 1983 output was 8,139,375 barrels.

The well tested 37 barrels of 25 percent gravity oil and 3 barrels of water per day on pump from perforations between 1584 feet and 1595 feet during a 24 hour test. Oiltex owna a 16.67 percent interest in the field and in the 3384 leasehold acres surrounding the well. A stepout test will likely be drilled in August.

Firm announces six successful completions

DENVER - Quesata Oil & Gas Co. of Denver has announced the successful completion of six of seven wells drilled in three Texas counties in its 1983 Program Ltd. Daily production is approximately 100 barrels of oil and 700,000 cubic feet of gas.

According to an independent engineering reserve study, the program's share of the wells has proved developed reserves of 23,107 barrels of oil and condensate and approximately 2.1 billion cubic feet of gas. Estimated future net revenues, discounted 10 percent, are $6.7 million.

Settlements made in take-or-pay exposure

HOUSTON (SWN) — Panhandle Eastern Corp. has announced that settlements made or imminent with producers have eliminated approximately 25 percent of the 1983 take-or-pay exposure of its two interstate pipeline subsidiaries.

In a presentation to the New York Society of Security Analysts, Robert D. Hunsucker, President and Chief Executive Officer, said that the take-or-pay relief under more than 100 gas purchase contracts of Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company and Trunkline Gas Company amounts to $360 Million. He said that settlement payments related to these contracts amounted to $30 Million. He said:

"We are most encouraged by the progress now being made in reducing our pipelines' take-or-pay exposure. The negotiations with producers are continuing and we expect that additional agreements will be made in the next few months which will further substantially reduce the 1983 exposure."

Mystery Conrail bidder remains mysterious

By the Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — On June 19, the government listed Kenneth Perryman, identified only as "a Los Angeles businessman," as having bid $3 billion for the assets of the U.S.-owned Conrail freight railroad in the Northeast. As reported at the time, a check here showed Perryman with a profile so low as to be invisible.

The Los Angeles Times found no trace of him in voter rolls, property tax records or newspaper files.

In the intervening two weeks, neither the Federal Railroad Administration nor its New York investment bankers, Goldman, Sachs & Co., have been able to flesh out the meager amount of information on the mystery bid — one of 14 received by the government.

However, a man identifying himself as Perryman surfaced late Monday in a telephone interview arranged by his attorney, although he added little substantive information about his means and intentions in bidding $3 billion for Conrail.

Perryman said that he had been out of touch with his attorney the last two weeks and didn't know that he had been invited to talk to Goldman, Sachs, the New York investment banking firm that is considering the Conrail bids for the government. He said he would call the firm Tuesday.

He would not give the details of his plan, but said it would involve "a consortium of banks in Europe." Asked if he had something to show the government to support his bid, he said he was sure he could obtain it.

Did he think he had a chance of getting Conrail?

"Equal to the others, no more and no less," Perryman said.

He said he his chances might be diminished for "lack of 30 to 40 years of management of a railroad," but he said if common sense counts he will be in the running.

Perryman declined to give his address or telephone number.

FRA official Chris Rooney said Monday that he had talked briefly by telephone with a person who identified himself as Perryman. It was just after the bids were announced, he said.

"He was in a phone booth," said Rooney. "We chatted a minute. I asked him for a little background. He said he was engaged in the trucking business and had previously been or was presently in public accounting but not a CPA. He had been a janitor and what-not."

Perryman confirmed his background. "One time I was a janitor in a warehouse," he said. "I also shoveled coal and drove a truck and was a truck line salesman. I'm not a high school graduate; I was kicked out in my freshman year. I had some college."

A Goldman, Sachs executive said Monday of Perryman: "He's the only one who has not come to talk to us. My people have been talking to him or his lawyer. They made a big effort, and he's the only one who isn't coming in."

Meanwhile, Goldman,Sachs was going ahead with analysis of bids submitted by better known bidders, such as hotel magnate J. Willard Marriott, CSX Inc. and the operator of the Norfolk Southern railroad.

Mitchell Energy plans to increase gas sales

GALVESTON (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has "excellent potential" to increase its net natural gas sales by 20 million to 30 million cubic feet per day over the next 18 months, the company's chief executive told stockholders recently.

Speaking at the annual meeting, Chairman and President George P. Mitchell also predicted that the scheduled January 1 expiration of federal controls on certain categories of natural gas would have little effect on overall market prices. "There will be no price 'fly-up', in my opinion, because market forces won't allow a substantial average price movement in either direction," Mitchell contended.

Mitchell said further increases in crude oil and condensate sales are likely to result from the company's current emphasis on oil drilling and enhanced recovery projects. Crude oil and condensate sales in the first four months of the present fiscal year averaged approximately 6,500 barrels per day, up from 6,100 barrels per day in the corresponding year-earlier period.

Additions to the company's natural gas sales are expected from three main sources, he said.

- About eight million to 10 million cubic feet of gas per day will revert to the company's account from MEC Development, Ltd., a partnership in which Mitchell Energy is the general partner;

— A production gain of eight million to 12 million cubic feet per day is anticipated from expansion of the gathering system through which gas is collected in the Boonsville Field area of North Texas; and — A step-up in the North Texas drilling program is expected to yield another four million to eight million cubic feet per day.

The company sold an average of 153 million cubic feet of gas daily in the first four months of its present fiscal year.

Under terms of the partnership agreement, most of NEC Development's reserves revert to Mitchell Energy after borrowings are repaid. The partnership's first $50 million development drilling program resulted in more than $180 million worth of reserves, Mitchell stated, and the borrowings for that program will be paid off during the first half of the coming year. A second $50 million drilling program already has been undertaken by the partnership.

Initial work on the expansion by Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America of its gathering system in the Boonsville Field area of North Texas is beginning immediately, Mitchell said. As the system's capacity is increased during the next year and a half, a greater amount of gas from existing Mitchell Energy wells in that area can be sold.

Mitchell said the new drilling activity planned by the company in North Texas also will increase its production there. The current year's program, originally planned at about 100 wells, is being stepped up with about 40 additional wells, and the higher level of drilling will continue next year, he added.

Gas collected by Natural Gas Pipeline's gathering system in the Boonsville Field area is processed at a Mitchell Energy plant in Bridgeport, Texas. Thus, Mitchell noted, his company will benefit not only from the higher gas sales, but also from gains in the production of ethane, propane and other natural gas liquids extracted at the plant.

Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. is one of the nation's largest independent energy producers and is a major real estate developer in the Houston-Galveston area. Its annual meeting was at the recently opened San Luis on Galveston Isle, a 244-room beachfront hotel for which the company is managing partner.

THE DOCTORS IN

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Family physicians usually can handle osteoarthritis

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have osteoarthritis for which I am being treated by my family doctor. He says the problem is in my hip, but sometimes I get a pain in the groin. Also, some months I feel better than others. What I would like to know is whether you feel I am neglecting my condition because, I have not seen an orthopedist. Should I ask my doctor for a referral? — Alfred, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Alfred: Some patients with osteoarthritis require treatment by an orthopedic surgeon, but such a referral is not necessary in all cases. The condition is a chronic one for which there is no cure, and many patients are best treated by their family physician.

Osteoarthritis generally affects joints, such as the hip or knee, that are subject to hard use. It is not unusual for the pain from osteoarthritis of the hip in adults to be felt in the groin. The fact that you feel better at some times than at others is also not unusual but is rather characteristic of osteoarthritic pain.

From this distance I cannot recommend that you do or do not see an orthopedist. All I can say is that family physicians are equipped to handle osteoarthritis in many patients, and there is nothing in your letter that would indicate that such a referral is mandatory at this time.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why would a doctor become concerned just because a person itched a lot? My father had such a condition and he went to a doctor because he thought he could get a salve of some king to relieve the itch, but he says the doctor put him through all sorts of tests. Would you have any idea why? — Gerald, Port Arthur, Texas

Dear Gerald: A generalized itching may be an indication of a serious illness, and I assume the physician wanted to rule this out through laboratory tets. As just one example, chronic kidney failure may be a cause of severe itching, and a salve would of course have no effect.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've known people who were as sharp at 65 years of age as they were at 40, but this is not true of everyone. What accounts for the fact that some people continue to have clear minds as they grow older, but others don't? — Madelaine, Knoxville, Tenn.

Dear Madelaine: According to Dr. Nathan W. Shock, who founded the Baltimore Longitudinal Study of Aging, people generally experience little change in their intellectual performance as they grow older until after the age of 70. Those who do show severe memory loss and overall intellectual deterioration may be affected more by disease than by age.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 69 years old. He told me that at his last physical examination, the doctor told him that his blood presure is a little high but that he is not going to give him anything for it. Why not treat blood pressure if it is possible to do so? — Ken, N.Y.C.

Dear Ken: I can only guess as to the reason your father did not have antihypertensive medication prescribed for his condition. All medication has the potential for adverse side effects. If, as you suggest in your letter, your father's blood pressure was borderline, the physician may feel that it is better to leave it untreated than to introduce medication that might do more harm than good.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please explain what is meant by stages when a doctor speaks about cancer of the prostate? I would also like to know why it is considered so important to determine the stage. — Bill, Casper, Wyo.

Dear Bill: Cancer of the prostate is divided into four stages: A, B, C, and D. Stage A has the least involvement, and stage D the most. Without going into too great detail, prostatic carcinoma designated as stage A cannot even be felt during rectal examination. On the other hand, stage D refers to metastatic disease that may involve the liver, lungs, and other parts of the body.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When my husband was told that he would need a heart operation, he promised that he would stop smoking and stop doing all the other things he knew were bad for him. Now that he has had the operation, which turned out to be successful, he says that he is healthy again and that there is no reason for him to act like an invalid. So he has started smoking, doesn't get as much rest as he should, and pays no attentin to anything I have to say about it. I'm hoping that he will listen to you. — Mrs. L.D., Chicago.

Dear Mrs. D.: If your husband is intent on killing himself, I'm afraid that nothing anyone says will have much effect on him. However, if he has resumed the kind of activities you write about because he misundrstands the nature of the illness, I can tell him that he's playing with fire.

A cardiac patient who undergoes successful surgery is still subject to the same risks that led to the disease in the first place. Smoking is a risk factor for heart disease both before a person develops the disease as well as after recovery from an operation. If your husband is under the impressin that heart surgery acts like a vaccination that protects him from further complicatins, he is very much mistaken. I hope he realizes this before the mistake becomes fatal.

Ozona boasts of tax system

OZONA, Texas (AP) — This small West Texas town — the only community in Delaware-size Crockett County — may lack the amenities big Texas cities offer, but that doesn't faze Ozona residents, who say it's what their town doesn't offer that makes it unique.

"We've always said we're the biggest little town in the world and that's because we're the cheapest place for taxes in the state," said County Judge A.O. Fields. "The big advantage to living in Ozona is taxwise."

Since its founding nearly a century ago, Ozona has chosen not to incorporate though it is the sole community in the seventh largest county in the state.

By not incorporating, the 4,100 residents of Ozona avoid paying city taxes — a savings that "you often can't believe," Fields said.

"The county does everything, so we only have to pay county taxes. There is no duplication of services and that keeps the tax rate way down," he said.

Currently, the county tax rate stands at 55.6 cents per $100, according to Crockett County Auditor Dick Kirby.

The town, where about 90 percent of the population of Crockett County resides, is managed by a four-member county commission.

"There's no mayor, no police department," Fields said. The county takes care of everything from law enforcement, in the form of the sheriff's department, to garbage and trash collection, which is handled by the county water district.

County government also oversees maintenance of the town's parks, 18-bed hospital and roads.

"It's really quite simple and has been working this way for a long time," said Fields, who recently became county judge after serving 25 years as justice of the peace for Crockett County and Ozona.

And residents of Ozona say they never intend to allow their community to incorporate.

Yet, Fields conceded, there are drawbacks to living in Ozona, which rests just off Interstate 10 about 200 miles west of San Antonio and 120 miles southeast of Midland-Odessa.

"You're limited here in that there's no place to work and you don't want to retire here because there's nothing to do," Fields said.

Most people in Ozona are ranchers and have lived in Crockett County their entire lives, he said.

Olympics discouraging political attacks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Olympics have been made a "hardened target" to deter potential terrorist attack, but the Summer Games will try to avoid the image of an armed camp, officials responsible for security say.

The officials, appearing confident that the 16,000-man security force and array of high-tech equipment will be adequate to meet any threat, also note that U.S. intelligence has yet to uncover any plan to attack the Games.

"The Olympics right now have become a hardened target," Edgar Best, director of security for the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said in a recent interview. "Good terrorists will not normally attack a hardened target."

"We think the probability (of a terrorist attack) is remote," said Cmdr. William Booth of the Los Angeles Police Department. "But we still have to plan as though it would happen."

"We are very adequately prepared," added Richard T. Bretzing, the FBI's special agent in charge of the Los Angeles office. "We have an excellent response capability and should an incident occur, our response will be both swift and effective."

To protect the 8,500 athletes expected at the games, which start July 28, security officials will amass a force of 16,000 to 17,000 officers to patrol the three Olympic villages, the 23 game sites and the 150 miles of freeways that connect them. The force will include a specially trained 50-man FBI hostage rescue team that will be stationed at an undisclosed location.

"Whatever we haven't planned on, I think we have the capability to immediately enter a delicate situation and resolve it very decisively," Best said.

The Olympic organizing committee's security budget has been kept secret, but is estimated at about $100 million. In addition, Congress has appropriated $50 million — some of it standby money — to cover security costs incurred by the federal government.

The Olympics have given the police forces of Southern California a chance to obtain an arsenal of glittering, high-tech hardware that might otherwise have been left on the back burner for years.

A remote-controlled robot will be in Los Angeles to handle bombs; police snipers will be equipped with night-vision scopes for their rifles; 84 helicopters are being bought; and sophisticated communications gear will provide "secure radio transmissions," the FBI says.

And in case an attacker is planning a quick escape across the Mexican border, the San Diego police have set up a special "hot line" with the Tijuana police.

Despite the preparations, security officials hope the police presence will be less intrusive than at other games.

"At other Olympics, there was an oppressive look," said Best, a former FBI agent. "The look of security here will be different. ... It is an international sporting event, not an international security event. We did not want to overpower the games with security."

Best has said the Olympics will try to avoid use of metal detectors for spectators attending games, a procedure that produced long lines at the Winter Games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, where troops startled some visitors by carrying submachineguns.

Security officials also see the Soviet pullout as likely having little overall impact on chances for terrorism at the Summer Games.

Best noted that the withdrawal of 14 Soviet-bloc nations would remove potential targets for anti-communist extremists, but Brian Jenkins, an anti-terrorism expert at Rand Corp., said their absence would reduce Soviet interest in discouraging attacks.

However, Jenkins added, "I'm not saying (the Soviets) will give the green light to some terrorist proxy to go after the Olympics."

Law enforcement officials, speaking anonymously, have expressed particular concern about potential terrorist attacks by Armenians, Croatians, Iranians, Cuban exiles and Puerto Rican separatists. Also cited have been domestic groups, opposed to President Reagan's foreign policy, that have claimed responsibility for recent bombings at the U.S. Capitol and the Navy Yard in Washington, D.C.

While no security official was willing to predict an incident-free Olympics, Best drew some optimism from recent history, noting that with tighter security since 1972, the Games have avoided violence.

Security has been a high priority at the Olympics since 1972 when eight Palestine Liberation Organization terrorists killed 11 members of the Israeli team at the summer games in Munich, West Germany. Five attackers and one policeman also died.

"Munich was trying desperately to avoid the Nazi image," said Best. "There virtually wasn't any kind of protection. ...Then some things happened. There was worldwide backlash to that incident. ...

"Maybe the thought is that (the Olympics weren't), in retrospect, such a good target because to use amateur athletes as a target I don't think gets a lot of world acceptance."

But Rand's Jenkins said the Olympics remain an attractive target for terrorists seeking to draw attention to a cause.

Cows pampered to stop 'moo'-diness

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona summers have become a great deal less stressful lately for thousands of Arizona's dairy cows and the people who milk them.

The cows are being treated to three-a-day showers and pampered with cooling fans while they stand flank to flank in holding pens waiting to be milked.

Keeping the cows cool has saved several of the state's dairies more than $200,000 by increasing milk production during the summer season.

It also has reduced the mortality rate of their herds and boosted the number of new calves born, says Frank Wiersma, a University of Arizona agricultural sciences professor who designed many of the cooling systems being used.

Because the highest-producing cows are those most susceptible to heat stress — and because some of these higher producers have died from the heat — Wiersma said he expected the use of cooling systems for dairy cows to become standard before long.

Normally, at the better-managed dairies, a quality cow will produce about 65 pounds of milk a day, Wiersma said recently. In the summer, production drops to about 50 pounds a day because of heat stress.

This drop in production represents a loss of $1 million a year for the seven dairies using cooling systems, based on an average milk production cost of 14 cents a pound. A pound of milk is equal to a pint.

Current cooling systems recoup only a portion of the losses, but research is continuing to cut the losses further.

The local research effort to reduce the production losses began about 10 years ago when dairymen turned to the university's College of Agriculture for help.

The problem is that the cows aren't just suffering heat stress from the time spent out in the fields, Wiersma said. Three times a day, in preparation for milking, they are herded into crowded, sauna-like holding pens with concrete floors and 6-foot walls.

As many as 160 cows will spend up to an hour in the holding pen each time they are milked.

California dressing up for Olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Company's coming from around the world this summer, and inner-city kids, suburban mothers and corporate executives are sprucing up this proud Olympic city with everything from freeway murals to patched-up, prostitution-free sidewalks.

"It's that part of us human beings that says, 'Hey, let's dress up and look good," said Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee official John Bevilaqua.

The LAOOC, corporations, private citizens and public agencies have joined forces to polish Southern California's image before an estimated 650,000 visitors attend the July 28-Aug. 12 Summer Games.

"I'm an American and a Los Angeleno and I want the city to be beautiful for the Olympics," said Carolyn Moore, an insurance company supervisor who plans to spend four Saturdays helping clean the downtown area. "I'm proud that the games are here."

Spread across five counties, the effort includes new construction at universities, new flowers in the suburbs, new murals along the freeways and a crackdown on prostitution.

LOS ANGELES POLICE Cmdr. William Booth said vice raids were part of "an ongoing effort for a long time." But, he acknowledged, "pimps and panderers (are) trying to get a foothold in the city because of the Olympics."

In Long Beach, site of several Olympic events, Lt. David Dusinebury said prostitution-related arrests were "almost three times the average."

"We are aware there will be people visiting from all over the world," he said. "We want to make the city as safe as we possibly can and as presentable."

More permanent than the police efforts are constructionare construction and cleanup projects in Los Angeles suburbs and neighborhoods.

In Monterey Park, a field hockey site, residents are "painting fire hydrants, cleaning curbs and planting flowers," said Mayor Lily Chen. "We're involving Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Boys Club and schools. It's something that will be lasting."

New signs at the city limits say Monterey Park is "The Olympic City With a Heart." "These are regular street signs that we put up," said the mayor. Like other public officials she is wary of spending public funds just for the Olympics. "Even without the Olympics we have to put these signs up."

THE LAOOC IS paying for $1 million in decorations to give a "festive federalism" feel to main traffic arteries in the city.

"By mid-July we'll have over 10,000 banners going up in over 70 communities," said LAOOC official Lynda Shateen. The committee is also distributing 1.5 million bumper stickers, 800,000 small flags and 600,000 buttons that say "Welcome" in 16 languages.

Dotted throughout Southern California are building projects completed in time for the Olympics but not done expressly for the Summer Games.

Los Angeles International Airport recently finished improvements totaling $700 million, including a new international terminal.

"We didn't do that specifically for the Olympics, but we did hurry it up," said Los Angeles International Airport spokesman Lee Nichols. Without the Olympics the modernization project would "have taken two years more."

From 250,000 to 300,000 Olympic visitors are expected to pass through the airport.

The Los Angeles Bureau of Street Maintenance has patched streets at 37 "venue areas" around the city. Bureau director Ed Langley said additional work on more than 15 miles of streets was part of a two-year program.

SIDEWALKS around the venues also were fixed. Norman Giard, chief inspector of the street use division of the maintenance bureau, told a newspaper the repairs were a favor to the LAOOC but, of course, would also benefit the city.

"If somebody falls off a broken sidewalk while watching the marathon, they'll sue us, not the LAOOC," he said.

Six hundred inner-city youths were hired to bag debris and repaint graffiti-scarred walls in neighborhoods around Exposition Park, home of the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum and the Sports Arena, the sites of the boxing and track and field competition and the opening and closing ceremonies. More than 1,200 youths applied.

In recent months, motorists have watched 10 larger-than-life murals created along the freeways. The murals "are meant to be seen at 55 mph, meant to be seen in the fast lane," said Robert J. Fitzpatrick, director of the Olympic Arts Festival, which financed the murals.

Some drivers are themselves part of the Olympic effort. More than 15,500 Californians have bought $100 Olympic commemorative license plates. State officials say they hope to sell 50,000 pairs of the red, white and blue reflectorized plates.

COLLEGES and universities serving as competition sites have been able to afford extensive campus improvements, much of it paid by the LAOOC or Olympic corporate sponsors.

UCLA, site of gymnastics events and one Olympic village, has spent more than $4.8 million on construction related to the Olympics. Improvements include a widened roadway, a new office building and dormitory renovations.

An additional $24.5 million has gone toward long-planned projects for facilities that will be used by the athletes, including renovation of the student union, new tennis and recreation centers, and repairs to the swimming pool and to Bruin Walk, a major campus artery.

Across town at the University of Southern California, site of the swimming competition and the Games' other major village, $7.5 million in Olympic money has built a new cafeteria, swimming and diving pools, a running track and a weight room.

In 1983 the U.S. Patent Office received 105,704 patent applications and awarded 61,985 patents, about 60 percent of them to Americans. The top states, in order, were California, New York, New Jersey, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL

Freedom. We cherish it, as we celebrate another milestone year in our nation's great history, for the democratic ideals set forth in our founding doctrines still prevail today. We can recite these words from our Pledge of Allegience proudly, knowing that in America, freedom is more than a word, it's a way of life.
