How's that? Party Rules

Q. How come Democrats always have local primary elections in Texas counties, but the Republicans don't always have one? There are other differences, too.

A. Whether a party has a local convention or an election depends on whether candidates and a county chairman file with the county clerk's office and follow other election rules. Individual party rules are set by the state executive committees of each party. Also, the Democrats are traditionally strong in Texas because of resentment against the Republican domination of state politics during the Reconstruction era.

Austrian attache murdered

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's government unveiled a plan Saturday to reunite the Christian and Moslem sectors of the capital, as police were reporting that two militiamen shot and killed an Austrian attache in mostly Moslem west Beirut.

As the Moslem-Christian coalition Cabinet of President Amin Gemayel met in Bikfaya, a town 10 miles northeast of here, four gunmen kidnapped a Libyan diplomat and two unidentified companions from a hotel in west Beirut, police also said.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami also announced a revamping of the military high command designed to better distribute authority among Christians and Moslems and end divisiveness in the army. "Beirut shall be reunited," Karami said. "All crossings will be reopened, the 'green line' eliminated and the port and airport will function normally," Karami said, without setting a date for enforcement of the plan.

As he spoke, tears welled in his eyes over news that his mother had died, after a long illness, in a Beirut hospital during the day.

The "green line" divides the capital into Christian east and mostly Moslem west sectors. Christian and Moslem radio stations said that the security plan to reunite the capital and open Beirut's port and airport could be a genuine turning point in efforts to end Lebanon's civil warfare.

The Cabinet's announcement was tensely awaited by the Lebanese, whose nation has devastated by civil war that has killed more than 60,000 people since 1975.

Before the Cabinet met Saturday, gunfire and mortar attacks rocked Beirut 10 miles to the southwest. One person was reported killed and 45 were injured.

Police said that four gunmen stormed into the lobby of the Bristol Hotel and forced Mohammed Moghrabi, a Libyan diplomat, and two companions into a waiting car. The vehicle sped away, said police, who provided no further information.

An hour later, police said, two militiamen killed an Austrian Embassy attache. American University Hospital, where the body was taken, identified him as Gerhard Loitzenbauer, 51. Police said the shooting occurred after the gunman confronted Loitzenbauer in his car in west Beirut's Verdun neighborhood. The gunman escaped in the car.

Police said the shooting and the abduction apparently were unrelated. They said car theft, not politics, seemed to have been the motive behind the shooting.

Moghrabi, who was formally posted to the Libyan Embassy in Damascus, Syria, arrived in Beirut about a week ago on a special assignment, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity. The exact nature of his assignment here was not known.

Confirming reports last week by government sources and Beirut newspapers, Karami told reporters that Brig. Gen. Michael Aoun, a Maronite Catholic, was promoted to the rank of general and appointed commander of the Lebanese army. Aoun replaced Gen. Ibrahim Tannous, another Maronite, who had been harshly criticized by Moslem elements of the army.

The prime minister announced that Aoun was part of a six-man military council designed to balance power among Christians and Moslems.

Five of the six council members were formally named Saturday.

Besides Aoun, they were: Maj. Gen. Nadim Hakim, chief of staff for the Druse; Col. Lutfi Jaber, a Shiite Moslem who commands the 6th Brigade in west Beirut and who was made chief of the army's administration department; Col. Issam Abu Jamra, a Greek Orthodox who will be the army's inspector general; and Col. Edgar Malouf, a Greek Catholic.

The last spot, that of council secretary-general, was reserved for a Sunni Moslem officer, rounding representation for Lebanon's six major religious sects. No agreement was reached Saturday on who will fill the post, the government said.

Karami said the government agreed on plans to deploy selected units of the restructured army to replace Christian and Moslem militiamen along the "green line."

Information Minister Joseph Skaff said Aoun will soon "begin

Several weeks ago Creighton, a director of First Federal Savings and Loan, collapsed during a board meeting but following a hospital stay returned home to help with the 51st annual rodeo.

His ranch is located between downtown and the Big Spring Industrial Park. It is an urban area for a working ranch, but it includes more than 2,000 working acres and several hundred head of registered herefords.

"I didn't move to town, town sorta moved to me," Creighton once said.

He operated Creighton Tire Company for 47 years. In 1933 he joined with pioneer ranchers Tom Good, Marion Edwards, Jess Slaughter, Ira Driver, Bob Middleton, and Harry Lees to form the Rodeo Association.

Chatting over lunch

FREE LUNCH PROGRAM — More than 35 children a day are taking part in the Salvation Army hot lunch program, according to Lt. Carroll Braun of the Salvation Army. Through the program, children receive hot meals at least four days a week and light meals such as sandwiches and fruit on Fridays. Children eat in the Salvation Army kitchen at 308 Aylford. The program is being held in conjunction with the Westside Community Center's summer recreation program.

Salvation Army aids kids with hot lunch

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

"They're here!" said a Salvation Army helper Friday as about 35 boys and girls trooped into the Army's kitchen at 308 Aylford to pick up their lunchtime plates of tuna sandwiches and watermelon.

The children, all of elementary age, were taking part in the Salvation Army's summer feeding program, which began June 1 in conjunction with the Westside Community Center's summer recreation program.

Although the kids were feasting on sandwiches and fruit on Friday, they are served a hot meal four days-a-week by Army personnel.

"It might be the only hot meal that some of these kids get during the day all summer," said Salvation Army Capt. Carroll Braun.

Recent meals for the children have included chili, weiners and beans and spaghetti, he said.

"Can we eat now?" said one of the kids as he sat his plate down on a table in the basement of the Army's chapel.

"What about the prayer?" asked a supervisor.

"They can pray afterwards," answered another supervisor as she eyed the restless congregation. What would be the main topic of conversation among this lunchtime set?

A group of boys at one of the tables was discussing the city Little League baseball tournament.

"If we can beat the Pirates tonight, we'll be in the city championship," one young man said. He said he was a member of the Texas League Red Sox team that Thursday night defeated the American League Yankees 19-0.

Over at a table populated by a group of young ladies, the main topic of conversation was — baseball, again.

A girl with big brown eyes was telling the others how her team, the Angels, won the Texas League Pee Wee championship.

According to Capt. Braun, his organization has the capacity to feed 100 such underprivileged youngsters, including the average of 32 kids that show up daily from the Westside Community Center.

He said that interested parents should contact the Salvation Army to sign up their kids for the feeding program.

After lunch, the children involv-

Town evacuated

By The Associated Press

The rain-swollen Missouri River smashed through a levee and forced the evacuation of a small town on Saturday, after heavy rain and scattered tornadoes buffeted the northern Plains, with winds gusting over 100 mph.

A tornado touched down in Hollis, Okla., part of a line of heavy thunderstorms that raked the state with up to 5 inches of rain as a cold front moved through after temperatures had reached 100 degrees and above.

Hundreds of people remained out of their homes after fleeing floods in the soggy Midwest, and crop damage estimates continued to mount, with Iowa reporting $1 billion in agricultural losses.

Twenty to 25 families were ordered evacuated Saturday from their homes near the James River east of Yankton, S.D., as rivers in the southeastern part of the state reached record levels.

The James River at Scotland, S.D., on Saturday rose to 20.4 feet, 1.7 feet above the old record set in April 1962, the National Weather Service said.

Hundreds of volunteers filled sandbags and dropped hay bales Saturday in Dillon, Mont., as they diverted flood waters from swollen Blacktail Creek through a seven-block section of the town to Pigtail Creek.

The makeshift channel helped "take the pressure off the town a little bit," said Ed Swetish, a disaster coordinator with the state. Officials were working on contingency plans to evacuate people from two subdivisions north of Dillon if the water got too high.

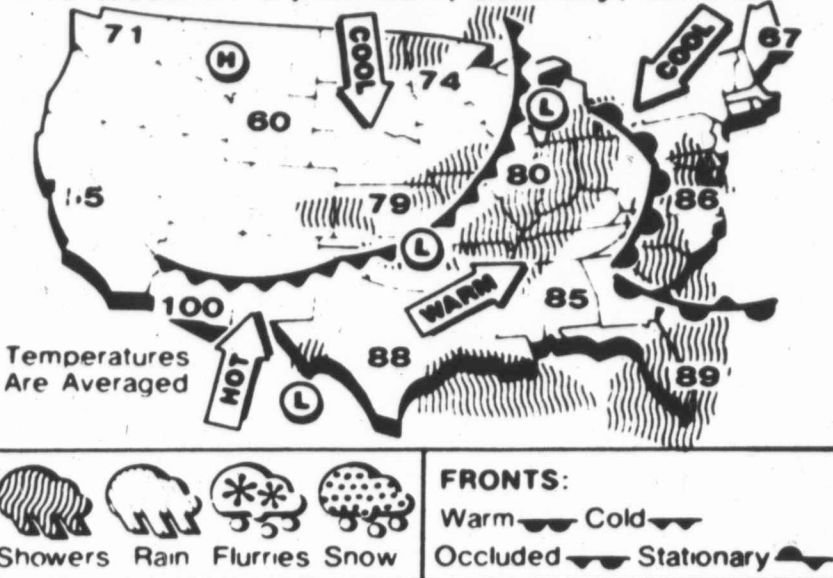

The storms Friday night hit especially hard in northwest Iowa, where up to 4 1/2 inches of rain were reported and winds of 104 mph were clocked at the Estherville airport.

Emmet County Sheriff Dan Grobneck said the winds Friday night "flipped a mobile home over and damaged a car." However, state Civil Defense Director Jack Crandall said "There's no major damage anywhere that we know of."

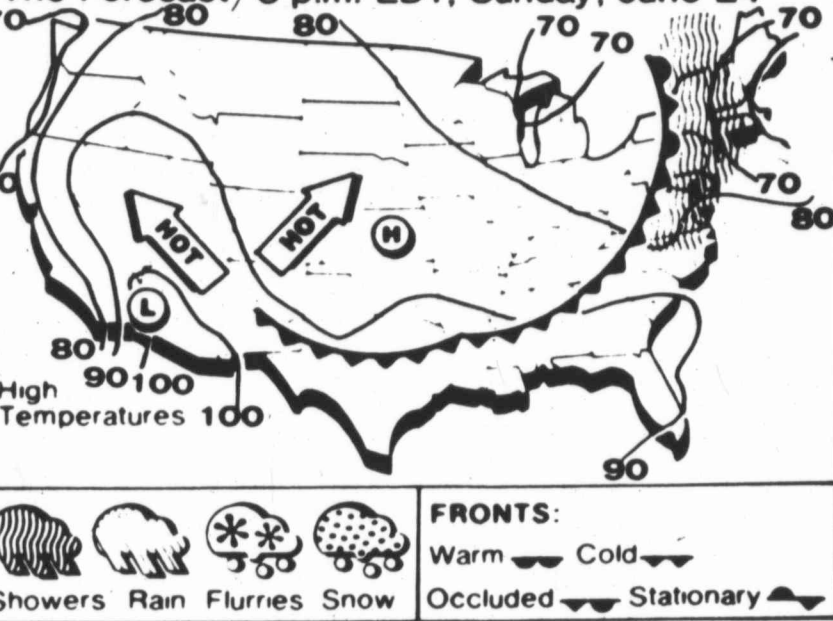

The tornado Saturday tore the roofs off three houses, downed power lines and tree limbs and rammed cars into trailers in the east side of Hollis in far southwestern Oklahoma, said Sue Bishop, a dispatcher for the city's police department. There were no injuries.

Chase ends in arrest

Rex C. Davis, 27, of Lubbock, was arrested on traffic violations and aggravated assault charges Saturday at 8:58 a.m.

Davis, who was driving a 1969 tan Volkswagen, was first spotted on the city's north side, according to police reports. Police attempted to stop him for a traffic violation, according to a spokesman.

A high speed chase ensued across the city with Davis attempting to elude police, reports showed. Spokesmen said that Davis ran several red lights during the chase.

The high speed pursuit ended at the intersection of 22nd and Middle when Davis turned onto an unpaved dead end street behind Goliad Middle School, according to police.

Davis left the roadway and attempted to cross the mesquite, hill covered terrain in his vehicle.

Unable to negotiate the terrain, the car stopped and Davis reportedly jumped from it and attempted to assault approaching officers.

Davis was later transported to Malone and Hogan's emergency room but refused medical treatment. He remains in police custody.

• Ted Gillis, 811 W. 16th, was involved in a car-motorcycle accident at 16th and Settles Friday afternoon with a car driven by Ethel Cason of 1410 E. 18th.

Gillis was treated and released from Malone and Hogan.

• Danny Dwight Cooler, 31, of Childress was arrested at 12:49 a.m. for driving while intoxicated and failure to maintain financial liability.

• Armando Franco, 28, of 1017 Bluebonnet, was arrested in the 2300 block of W. Third for driving while intoxicated, failure to maintain a single marked lane and failure to maintain financial liability, according to police.

• Rickie Dwain Crow, 29, of Odessa was arrested on IH 20 for driving while intoxicated Friday.

Creighton

Creighton was featured in a rodeo special edition which appears in today's Herald. The special edition went to press Friday morning.

Creighton was the last surviving member of the original Rodeo Association. During the rodeo's early days, he often participated in roping events.

"I had a lot of fun... and won my share," Creighton said a few years ago in an Herald interview. But the rodeo has changed a lot in the last few years and I think it's getting better each year," he said.

"We built the bowl in the canyon with the intention of enclosing it. When it was finished in 1950 it was one of the finest facilities in the country."

Creighton remembered the early beginnings of the local rodeo. "It was during the depression — 1933 was really in the depression — and the people wanted somewhere to go, but they didn't feel like going to far. We got together and organized (the reunion and rodeo)."

"At that time, the reunion was really a big thing. People would come to town and fill the hotels — maybe stay a week. For the first few years, we had two performances a day."

"I was the youngest," Creighton had recalled. "They were all mighty good men," he said of founding directors.

The original site of the rodeo was on 20 acres just west of Howard College. Creighton helped construct the original bleachers.

"We had a big crowd one night, and myself and some of the other directors were walking around. Every time they'd yell or cheer or get excited we worried that those bleachers were going to collapse," said Creighton.

"We built the rodeo bowl so that we wouldn't have to be uneasy," he added.

Illness curtails Gatlin's career

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Larry Gatlin said Saturday he has hepatitis that will curtail his career for two to three weeks.

Gatlin, 36, said in an interview from his hospital bed that he expects to be discharged Monday or Tuesday.

He entered the hospital Wednesday and was forced to cancel a Thursday White House appearance with his two brothers.

The Odessa, Texas, native said he has the milder of the two types of the liver disease. He was listed in stable condition.

Gatlin said he hopes to sing as scheduled July 4 at the mall in Washington, D.C.

He said he sent President Reagan a telegram apologizing for canceling the appearance Thursday at the Congressional Seafood Festival on the south lawn.

"I told him I owed him one, and that I'd repay him in November at the ballot box," Gatlin said.

Gatlin, who also had to cancel a concert Friday near Buffalo, N.Y., said his July appearance schedule is being worked out.

Gatlin is known for such hits as "Broken Lady," "All the Gold in California," "Love Is Just a Game," "Night Time Magic," and most recently "Houston."

"I really don't know what to say, honestly," said GOP spokesman Gary Holtsma. "We're happy for anyone to offer their time and talents to the convention... but there aren't a lot of slots available."

"I don't know if I would fit in with my Boy George image," the long-haired singer, also known as Herbert Khaury, said Friday. "They might want to throw me to Mondale."

Mike Debonis of Los Angeles, an agent for the 55-year-old singer, said he plans to contact convention organizers this week to see if

Symphony plans season

The Big Spring Symphony Association has announced plans for the 1984-85 season, according to Sam Woodward, symphony president.

The Big Spring Symphony will perform two concerts under the direction of Marianna Gabbi. Appearing with the orchestra will be pianist Christopher O'Reilly and Metropolitan Opera soprano Myra Merritt.

The first concert of the 1984-85 season will be Nov. 2 and will feature the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra under the direction of John Giordano.

Tickets will be sold by subscription as well as at-the-door.

"The Big Spring Symphony Association and the Symphony Guild have become dynamic forces within the cultural life of this community," Woodward said.

The symphony's budget has grown from $18,420 to $32,875 for the coming season, with reliance upon performance grants, contributed income and earned income from ticket sales.

"Ticket sales," Woodward said, "constitute only nine per cent of the total budgeted income. It will be the success of the fall maintenance fund drive combined with the increased Foundation support plus state grants that will determine the degree of success that we expect to enjoy."

Woodward said, "We anticipate meeting our budgeted goal. Our commitment to bringing quality and artistic excellence to this community is our affirmation of belief that Big Spring should have nothing less than the very best."

Budget talks to continue

Howard County commissioners Monday will continue their discussions of the 1985 county budget, which they say should be about the same size as the 1984 budget.

Also on the agenda are requests by County Treasurer Bonnie Franklin and District Clerk Peggy Crittendon to discuss personnel matters with the commissioners.

Mrs. Crittendon requested a salary level increase for deputy Colleen Barton on her budget requests.

District Judge Jim Gregg will appear before the commissioners to discuss his request for funding for a small computer that keep records of the status of all instruments filed in his court.

County Sheriff A.N. Standard will discuss raising fees the county charges for serving civil papers. The county currently charges about $20, and Midland and Ector Counties charge about $30 or $40, Standard said. The money goes into the county treasury.

In addition, County Auditor Jackie Olson will discuss 1983-84 budget amendments, late homestead refunds and travel funds for the county attorney.

Travis Crow with AT&T Information Systems will appear before the court to discuss the courthouse phone system.

City of Coahoma to close

The City Of Coahoma is closing. City Secretary Cindy Fowler announced Friday that City Hall would be closed from noon Wednesday, June 27 until Friday afternoon June 29 while city officials switch to a new computerized format.

Fowler said that the time would be used to train city personnel from all departments to use the new computerized equipment.

Coahoma's water and trash billings, general ledger, budgets, etc., will be switched to the computer.

People with emergencies may call the city beeper number 267-0187 and a city staff member will return your call as soon as possible, Fowler said.

Friend's competitor in suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The office of Attorney General Jim Mattox has filed suit to shut down the competitor of a company connected with a longtime friend of Mattox, The Dallas Morning News reported in its Sunday editions.

Investigators from the Public Integrity Unit of the Travis County district attorney have taken statements in connection with the matter, the News said.

According to the newspaper, Mattox lent furniture to Guy Briscoe, a consultant to National Exchange Inc., an Austin bartering firm. Briscoe's wife, Bernice Briscoe, is majority owner of the firm, the News said.

Mrs. Briscoe is listed on Mattox's payroll as a $268.20-a-month switchboard operator and was paid $1,300 from Mattox campaign funds to cater functions at the attorney general's office, the News said.

On June 4, Mattox's office filed suit to shut down Capitol Business Exchange — a competitor of Mrs. Briscoe's firm — and lay claim to the property of its owners, the News said. The suit alleged that Capitol's owners misused clients about the firm's assets and services.

Mattox said last week he didn't know the lawsuit had been filed and was not aware that Briscoe was connected to National Exchange.

According to the News, Linda Mims, a founder and former part owner of National Exchange, gave a statement to investigators from the public integrity unit on Friday.

The News said Mims and officers of Capitol Business Exchange told prosecutors that Assistant Attorney General A.D. Downer threatened and harassed Capitol employees.

Downer, who filed the suit against Capitol Business Exchange on behalf of the attorney general, is a friend of Briscoe and recently represented him in a private lawsuit, the News said.

According to the News, Downer was reprimanded last week for handling the private lawsuit, a violation of office policy.

The News also said that Downer was taken off the Capitol Business Exchange case. However, the attorney general's office is still pursued by the attorney general's office, the News said.

side-effects, such as permanent and involuntary twitching of face muscles or limbs.

A Dallas attorney for the plaintiffs, Roger Gette of the North Central Texas Legal Services Foundation, said the parents will decide within 30 days whether to appeal the decision.

"Obviously I'm disappointed," he said.

Sanders' ruling was the latest development in the 10-year-old case, which sought a wide range of reforms in the operation of Texas mental hospitals and patients' rights.

Ringo injured

WINDSOR, England — Former Beatle drummer Ringo Starr has been treated for an eye injury he received when he fell at his home, according to the domestic news agency Press Association.

Starr, 43, also was told to see a specialist at the eye clinic in King Edward VII Hospital in this small town west of London, the news agency quoted an unidentified hospital spokesman as reporting.

Starr was said to have been treated at the outpatients' eye clinic Thursday. Press Association said it was believed he had tripped over a dog while walking on the grounds of his home in Tittenhurst Park.

"I gather there was a bump and he had redness in the eye," the hospital spokesman was quoted as saying.

A nursing supervisor refused to give further details by telephone.

'Grizzly' on trial

LOS ANGELES — A preliminary hearing was scheduled Sept. 12 for actor Dan Haggerty, television's "Grizzly Adams," who has pleaded innocent to two counts of selling cocaine to undercover police.

Haggerty, 41, was arrested at his Beverly Hills home on June 13. Police alleged he had sold 18 grams of cocaine, valued at $2,160, to undercover narcotics officers.

Municipal Court Judge Michael Tynan released Haggerty on $5,000 bond Friday pending the preliminary hearing.

Haggerty was the first actor "of import" arrested by the year-old entertainment unit of the police narcotics division, police said.

Earlier arrests by the unit included "individuals" connected with "The Dukes of Hazard" and "Simon & Simon" television series, but no stars were involved, Lt. Dan Cooke said.

Haggerty played the lead in both the film and NBC television versions of "Grizzly Adams."

Royal portrayal

LONDON — In a royal family first, Princess Margaret portrayed herself in an episode of "The Archers," Britain's longest-running serial.

The 53-year-old younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II had six lines Friday in the episode which depicted her brief visit to Ambridge, the imaginary village where the Archers live out fictional dramas of country life.

"Princess Margaret entered into the spirit of things with great humor," said Bill Smethurst, producer of the 33-year-old British Broadcasting Corp. program.

In the episode, Princess Margaret chats briefly with characters Caroline Bone, played by Sara Coward, and Jack Woolley, played by Arnold Peters.

"I think you've been very generous," the princess says at end of her visit to Ambridge. "We do need all the help we can get to make this a very special year for the NSPCC (the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children)."

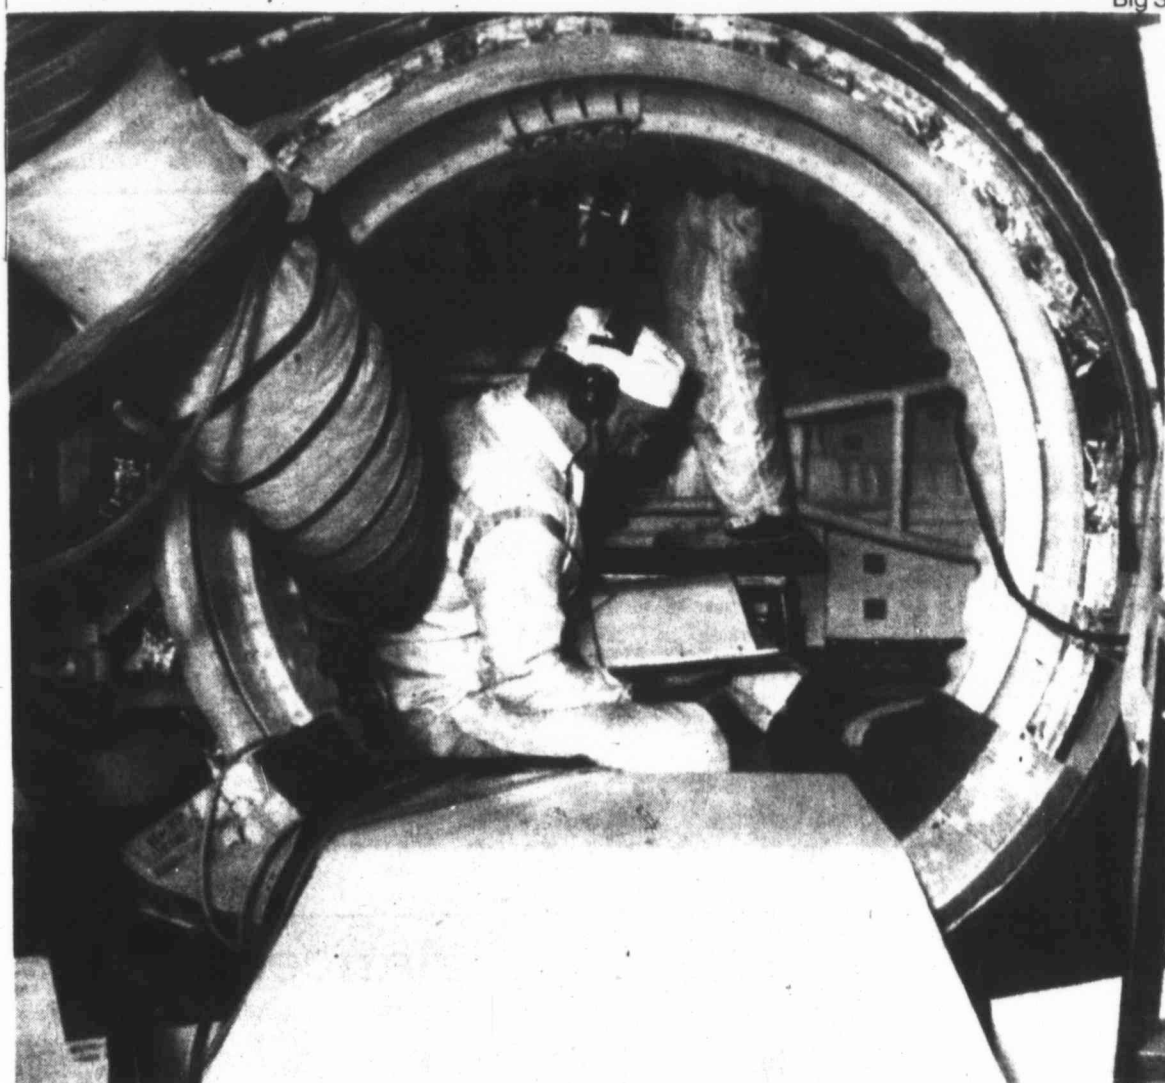

A spokesman for the princess said she was paid 75 pounds ($102) for recording the six lines, and gave the money to the NSPCC, of which she is president.

Historical bed

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Steve Collins and his new bride, Diane, now own a bit of history, thanks to friends and employees of his mother, Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

The group contributed $3,150 to buy the couple the 19th century, walnut canopy bed in which former Vice President Alben Barkley slept.

Jolene Greenwell, executive director and state curator of the Office of Historic Properties, bought the bed at an auction earlier in the week in Louisville.

Hispanic boycott expanded

EL PASO (AP) — The president of the nation's largest Hispanic organization on Saturday amended a proposed boycott of first-ballot voting at next month's Democratic National Convention to include a call for non-Hispanic, as well as Hispanic delegates, to refrain from casting an initial ballot.

Mario Obledo, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said withholding a vote on the presidential nominating convention's first ballot would signal Democratic candidates that they have ignored Hispanic issues.

On Friday, Obledo said the 291 Hispanic Democratic convention delegates would be pressured to help the Rev. Jesse Jackson stop Walter F. Mondale from being chosen on the first ballot as the party's nominee.

At a news conference Saturday, Obledo issued a five-point "Hispanic Manifesto" that at first reiterated a call for Hispanic delegates to withhold their Mondale votes on the first ballot.

But after reporters questioned Obledo about several contradictory statements he had made, the Sacramento, Calif., attorney said he was asking that delegates "not vote for any candidate" on the first ballot.

He added that Hispanic delegates would be asked to "secure commitments from at least two non-Hispanic delegates presently committed (to a candidate) to follow this policy on the first ballot."

Obledo said that would result in at least 873 votes being withheld.

Obledo said he was not endorsing any candidate, but was trying to show the "two leading Democratic candidates" that they have failed to adequately address Hispanic issues.

He also said the "Hispanic Manifesto" had not been voted upon by LULAC, which boasts a membership of more than 100,000 Hispanics nationwide.

"This is from me," Obledo said.

LULAC is a nonpartisan organization and does not issue candidate endorsements. But Friday, after Jackson gave a fiery 45-minute speech to the group, Obledo said "we will walk alongside you until there is, in this land of ours, equality for all."

Since the opening of the LULAC convention on Thursday, Mondale has been assailed for refusing to speak at the meeting.

Officials of the group said the former vice president had been unresponsive to Hispanic needs, and he added that Democratic Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado also had ignored the nation's fastest-growing minority group.

But he said the call for a first-ballot boycott was not being issued just because Hart and Mondale did not attend the LULAC convention.

Another point of his manifesto was to "set Hispanic foreign policy concerns that relate to domestic needs."

Mitterrand goes home

VOLGOGRAD, U.S.S.R. — French President Francois Mitterrand paid tribute Saturday to Soviet war dead as he ended a three-day visit in which he discussed disarmament and irked the Communist leadership by stressing Western concern about dissident Andrei Sakharov.

Later, the French president flew to Paris following a dinner hosted by the Volgograd Communist Party's executive committee. He had no comment upon his arrival in the French capital Saturday night.

Mitterrand, a Socialist, praised the Soviet Union during a wreath-laying ceremony in this Volga River city that was named Stalingrad at the time of the epic World War II battle between the Red Army and German invaders. The battle broke Nazi Germany's back in the Eastern Front.

"After the first Nazi defeat in North Africa, all depended on Stalingrad," Mitterrand said of the city, which was renamed in 1961 after Nikita Khrushchev, then Soviet leader, denounced Josef Stalin's iron dictatorship.

Military chiefs meet

MANAMA, Bahrain — Military chiefs from six Persian Gulf nations held an emergency meeting in Saudi Arabia Saturday to work out a strategy against attacks on gulf shipping in the Iran-Iraq war.

Meanwhile, Iran rejected an Iraqi claim that Iranian gunners had shelled Iraqi border villages in violation of a U.N.-mediated moratorium on civilian attacks.

The start of the private meeting in Riyadh by military chiefs of staff from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman was held up until after the completion of the daylight observances of Ramadan, the Moslem holy season.

One of the goals of the meeting was expected to be creation of a joint command against Iranian air attacks on commercial shipping in the oil-rich region.

Gandhi in temple

AMRITSAR, India — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi flew Saturday to this Sikh holy city and toured the battle-scarred Golden Temple that she had ordered the army to storm on June 4.

It was Mrs. Gandhi's first visit to Amritsar since Sikh militants began their agitation for greater political and religious autonomy for the Punjab state in August 1982, the United News of India said. Sikhs form a majority in the Punjab but are far outnumbered by Hindus in the rest of India.

Soldiers stood guard outside the temple and elsewhere in this city of 700,000 people as the prime minister inspected the fortified positions Sikh militants had occupied inside the shrine complex before the army gained control in a four-day battle, U.N. reported.

In a nationwide television broadcast, Mrs. Gandhi bowed her head before the Sikh sacred book, made an unspecified cash offering and drank water from the holy tank surrounding the 17th-century shrine. Troops had reported removing several bodies and a large quantity of arms from the tank after the temple battle ended.

Drinking limit is for states to set

How ironic that President Reagan should be championing a second major effort to erode states' rights in favor of "the national good." Reagan was the moving force behind the 1980 Republican campaign platform which urged repeal of the 55 mph speed limit. Now, not only has Reagan vacillated on this stand, but he's supporting a federal coup to preempt states' rights on what the legal drinking age should be.

There are solid arguments in favor of a rational drinking age, and 21 may have merit as the standard. But the debate over what age is the best age to allow legal consumption of alcoholic beverages is quite beside the point here. The point is that the federal government is all too prone to dictate what states will set as their governing rules. And it is this propensity which should give us alarm.

We aren't holding our breath on repeal of the 55 mph limit, although a 60 or 65 mph speed limit on four-lane highways in the wide open spaces of Texas seems more rational. Once a law like this is in place, it's near impossible to make it go away. Similarly, once a federal victory is scored in bringing the 50 states in line, it becomes increasingly easy to do it again, and again.

In both the speed limit standard and the drinking age proposal, federal insistence on a national standard has been backed by blackmail — loss of highway funds upon which states depend. Blackmail is a crime; we should not allow it to be purified in the name of the national good. If 21 is a credible standard of adulthood in drinking, let the states individually usher in that age.

Plans up in smoke

Just when the airlines have started to make money they are faced with a new crisis. How do you keep non-smokers from doing bodily harm to smokers on airplanes?

There was a time when non-smokers sat in the front of the cabin and just gritted their teeth when smokers lit up in the back.

But this is no longer the case. Non-smokers are now becoming militant and the CAB is worried that a full-scale riot could break out between the two groups while a plane is in flight.

Harvey Weiner, an airline consultant, has been working on the problem.

"Our research indicates that cigarette smokers are afraid to fly, and that's why they puff so much on planes. The airlines can't afford to lose their business."

"At the same time we've discovered non-smokers have a fear of cigarette smoke, and become violent when locked in a cabin at 35,000 feet with cigarette smokers. Since they comprise 50 percent of the traveling public, the airlines need them as well. My job is to find out how to keep the two groups from killing each other."

"That's not an easy assignment," I said.

"Everything I've recommended so far has met with resistance. The first solution I came up with was to have two flights going to each destination. One plane would be reserved for smokers and one for non-smokers. The FAA objected because it would double the amount of air traffic in the skies, which could be even more hazardous to people's health."

"Then I suggested that non-smokers only be permitted to fly on even days, and smokers on odd days of the week."

"That sounds like a perfect solution. Who objected to that?"

"Frank Borman of Eastern

Airlines. He said the reason people fly is they want to get to their destination as quickly as possible, and if they had to wait 24 hours for their day they would take the train."

"Another idea I came up with was for the airlines to divide the smoking and non-smoking sections of the plane with a locked fireproof steel door between them. The non-smokers and smokers would check in at separate gates so they would never come in contact with each other."

"That sounds reasonable."

"The major airlines turned this one down because it would mean adding an extra lavatory on board, which would displace two seats."

"Airlines hate to use up space for lavatories on planes. So where are you now?"

"I think I've come up with a reasonable compromise which may not satisfy the hardline smokers and non-smokers, but would at least prevent the two sides from resorting to violence. I'm proposing that every flight be manned with federal marshals armed with tear gas grenades. They would be seated six across to separate the non-smokers and smokers. In case of a riot between the two groups the marshals could quell it with tear gas before it got out of hand."

"That might do it," I said. "If the non-smokers have the choice between cigarette smoke and tear gas they're not going to start any trouble."

"I have one more idea if they won't buy the federal marshals. The main cabin would be reserved for non-smoking, but we would have a trap door in the middle of the aisle, so if someone wanted a cigarette, he could slide down into the baggage compartment and puff away to his heart's content."

Quiet persistence will bear fruit

For every "plum" that comes Big Spring's way, there is a coterie of conscientious individuals who work quietly behind the scenes to forge the development. Rarely do major advances simply fall in a city's lap.

A case in point is the testimony last week by a delegation from Big Spring. Community leaders — in both public and private capacities — traveled by plane and car to Austin to push the state highway commission Big Spring's way.

At issue are the widening of Highway 87 south of Big Spring to Sterling City and the prospect of a bypass for Highway 87 in the city limits. Both are important concerns. Neither are likely to come to pass without the quiet but persistent urging of some Big Spring community activists.

I traveled with one contingent of the delegation — composed of the animated community leader Johnnie Lou Avery, city councilman Jack Y. Smith and longtime businessman and civic leader Clyde McMahon Sr. — by air Thursday morning for the hearing. My role as observer in Austin was a productive one; it was a significant help in my goal of finding the pulse of this community, its heartbeat and its heading.

The three-member commission wasn't particularly encouraging. Money is a major hurdle to highway improvement plans and with many projects vying for limited funds, the pie gets cut pretty thin.

As spokesman Arnold Marshall said when commissioners advised him that the Highway 87 widening "is on the 20-year operation study": "I've been coming down here off and on for 20 years."

But the Big Spring contingent emerged optimistic from the brief meeting. No one was expecting an instant "yes," the goal was simply to keep Big Spring's needs in the minds of those who have the power to allocate the funds. In that goal, the day was a success.

Highway commissioners gave the group — which also included businessman Jerry Womthly, Chamber of Commerce executive F. LeRoy Tillery, county commissioner Louie Brown and electric company head Hooper Sanders — some encouragement. The fact that the two-lane stretch of Highway 87 south of Big Spring represents a "gap" in the mostly four-lane road is "the strongest thing in favor" of widening, commissioners said. And, they suggested a truck bypass for Highway 87 in Big Spring could be viable if a way is found "to get the loop more cost effective."

I believe the point was well made, and well taken, that thru-truck traffic makes Highway 87 (Gregg Street) a hazardous drive through a highly concentrated population.

A written presentation to commissioners gave police statistics supporting a bypass. According to police, 23.8 percent of all accidents in Big Spring in 1983 occurred on Gregg Street. A cover letter from Tillery said, "A large percentage of (Gregg Street) traffic is truck traffic, many of which carry potentially hazardous materials."

At the close of the presentation, one commissioner began questioning the delegation about alternatives for routing thru traffic around the city.

Encouragement enough for indefatigable Big Springers, who'll be back, by and by, to keep plugging for this city.

Billy Graham

Loss of job proves difficult burden

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have lost my job and now I just feel useless. I know you probably believe that God has a plan for our lives, but frankly I can't see it. — H.B.

DEAR H.B.: I know losing a job can be one of the most difficult times in life for some people, especially when they are unable to find employment again. But you are not useless, and God wants to help you during this time.

First of all, if it looks unlikely that you will be able to get a job in the same field as your old job, I encourage you to explore new opportunities. For example, your local community college or another agency may have programs that are specifically designed to retrain people like you. Or you might consider a move to another area. I know these may not be practical steps for you — but the point is to do all you can to regain employment and not just sit around getting more and more discouraged.

Make use of your time right now to help others. Sometimes we get so absorbed in our own problems we forget how much we have to give other people. Go to your pastor and tell him of your availability to help in any way you can.

I received a letter not long ago from a man who had been unemployed for some months. At first he felt useless, but finally decided to volunteer his time to his church. He became involved in his church's program to help shut-ins, and said he had never felt more fulfilled in his life. God wants to use you right now in some special way. Ask Him to help you find it.

Realize also that God wants to be teaching you some new things about yourself and your relationship with Him. You are important to God, and He loves you — whether you are able to work right now or not. "Is not life more important than food, and the body more important than clothes? ... But seek first His kingdom and His righteousness" (Matthew 6:25,33).

Perhaps God wants to teach you to trust Him more than you have been doing in the past. Perhaps He wants to point out areas of your life that need His touch. If you have never accepted Christ, God wants you to turn to Him right now. Then let God's Word, the Bible, become your daily companion, and ask Christ to help you discover His perfect will for you and your family at this time.

Who among us, the children and grandchildren of immigrants, would keep another from dreaming the dream of America, prevent another from becoming American? We are a nation of immigrants, a country created by immigrants. Our national character was molded by immigration. Who among us could bar another from this country?

We are a nation if immigrants, a land of promise and hope. It is written into our national legacy that he who takes the responsibility will be treated as an equal here.

We are from many lands. We would not be American if we were not.

English-Americans fell at Bunker Hill. German-Americans died at Gettysburg. Irish-Americans were killed at the Somme. Mexican-Americans never returned from Iwo Jima.

A flood of humanity now rushes toward our borders from Mexico and Central American. Refugees. The wretched refuse asking for the opportunity to be American.

Do we dam the flood or harness its power?

When the Russian writer def. cts, no one objects. When the Hispanic peasant wades across the Rio Grande, a political storm gathers.

We are a nation of many nations, many tongues, many colors.

Ask your grandfather. It takes courage to leave the land of your birth in search of freedom and security.

For the sake of America, let these brave souls in. We do not need an immigration law. We need more immigrants.

Immigration is neither legal nor illegal. It is our national testament, our destiny.

How can we deny to others what was granted us?

The goals of my parents, like those of every other immigrant, were really very simple. They only wanted to provide an opportunity for their families and children to improve themselves. And in doing so, they established a spirit of freedom that prevails in no other country in the world.

Bentsen meets with Mondale

Men discuss vice presidency

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau
NORTH OAKS, MINN. — Walter Mondale and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Saturday emerged from a three hour meeting on a possible vice presidential bid by the Texan admitting they differ on some issues but suggesting the differences wouldn't interfere with a Democratic victory this fall.

"There are differences — we don't want to gloss over them. There's a lot of common ground," Mondale told reporters gathered in the driveway of his lakeside home in this suburb of St. Paul.

"I am not asking that someone (to be his vice president) have identical views," Mondale said. "I am willing to accept differences. There's a lot of common ground."

The 63-year-old Texas Democrat was the second in what is expected to be a series of would be vice presidential running mates coming here for talks.

When questioned by reporters,

Mondale and Bentsen spelled out some of their differences — primarily in areas of defense policy and weapons systems.

"We disagree on (the nuclear freeze)," Mondale said. "We disagree on the B-1 bomber," Bentsen said.

Bentsen told reporters he did not want to be a "yes man" vice president. Mondale said he did not want a "yes man" at his side either.

If elected as vice president, Bentsen said he would be frank in private discussions but would follow the policies established by Mondale.

"A vice president must have the courage to speak candidly," Bentsen said. "I don't want the job if it's just pomp and ceremony."

"I want to be involved," Bentsen said as Mondale smiled approvingly.

The Texan said he and Mondale discussed the role of vice president and he indicated that he was satisfied that the role would be responsible.

Mondale said if elected he wants his vice president to be fully involved in his administration.

The former vice-president called Bentsen "one of the most respected members of the U.S. Senate and one of the most thoughtful economic minds in Congress." Bentsen is a member of the Joint Economic Committee.

Mondale said one of the most compelling needs in this country is "a fundamental change in economic policy."

He and Bentsen discussed economic policy and how to hold down soaring deficits during their meeting.

"I was reminded again of the depth and good sense Lloyd Bentsen brings," Mondale said.

"I have great respect for his intellect and ability," Mondale said.

In what sounded like a campaign speech, Bentsen said the nation can not afford four more years of President Reagan.

"This country can not continue to have $200 billion deficits," he said.

Obviously trying to emphasize areas of agreement between themselves, Bentsen said he and Mondale believe the nation must build a strong defense, "but you can go too far."

In foreign policy he said they agreed that, "you don't shoot first and ask questions later."

Asked if he thought Mondale could win in November, Bentsen said, "If I didn't think Fritz Mondale could win, I wouldn't be here."

While there are substantial differences in areas such as military weapons systems, Mondale aides have indicated that Bentsen's popularity in Texas is a strong reason for considering him for a running mate.

"It was Lloyd's leadership" that helped Democrats win in Texas in 1982, Mondale said.

A Closer Look

by Jim Davis

Power of the press

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Rep. Bob Bush gives a lot of weight to the power of the press in determining the future of school reform proposals in Texas.

Bush, the affable Sherman attorney and chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said last week many legislators will vote out reform legislation and wait to see how it flies with the people back home.

If their constituents decide this is true reform worthy of support, the legislators will pass a tax bill to fund it. If the home folks decide it's all a bunch of timid shuffling of the status quo, the tax legislation could be in trouble.

And, he added, the media is the message bearer that will mold that back-home opinion.

That's a sobering thought for those of us who have something to do with delivering that message. In fact, it's a little scary.

Most journalists take seriously the responsibilities that go with the job, but it never hurts to be reminded, even if Rep. Bush's analysis probably is a bit excessive.

The problem is there is no way to adequately inform Texans through newspapers, television or radio about the fine details of the educational reform proposals of the 1984 special session.

These are complex issues that demand complex explanations. But there are so many facets to each of the several dozen key issues that journalists can never explain each one to the extent that the reader or listener will understand totally. Even if such an explanation were possible, no one would want to read or hear that much about the legislation.

That, of course, presents the challenge of journalism: to boil down the mountain of information to a digestible form. Sometimes that job is relatively easy; sometimes it's impossible and journalists can console themselves with the notion that they did the best they could under the circumstances.

The current special session, I believe, comes closer to falling under the latter category than the former.

Not only are the issues complex, but they are being considered and acted on by the Legislature with remarkable speed. The session started slow but speeded to a frenetic pace last week. Both houses were voting items up or down in an almost machine gun rhythm.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides in the Senate, and House Speaker Gib Lewis obviously decided to head 'em up and move 'em out. Both men are supporting the basic policies of the select committee headed by H. Ross Perot, and they are showing this session how powerful they can be.

That was particularly important for Lewis, who has suffered image problems as a leader and was embarrassed by the House Public Education Committee's rejection of his compromise reform plan earlier in the week.

This fast shuffle method of making laws can be effective. The opposition hardly has time to form and everything is over before most people realize what happened. It hardly seems the best way to make laws that we and our children will be living under for years to come, however.

Education reform is not a new issue. It has been studied at length by Perot's committee and others. But all the proposals we see flying out of the Legislature this session are not what has been studied at length.

They often are the result of compromises hammered out in back-room sessions attended only by a few key legislators and lobbyists representing the various special-interest groups involved.

Some of them will do the wonderful things promised by their supporters; some will not. And some of the coming tax legislation will be fair; some will not.

But neither journalists nor the public are likely to have much impact on the final result because of the speed of the special session.

It may even take a while for the public to realize it should care what happened. But when Texans finally digest all the information available during and after the session and when the new laws start affecting their pocketbooks and their children's educations, they will care and eventually they will make their views known at election time — one way or another.

that youngsters also suffer from the same debilitating migraine headaches that plague their elders.

In a survey of headache doctors in Great Britain and the United States, two specialists determined that diet may be linked to migraines.

"However, the proof is not scientific," said Dr. Seymour Diamond, of Chicago's Diamond Headache Clinic Ltd.

"This was a highly motivated, intelligent group of children. But that doesn't diminish the result. These children were able to control their headaches quite well," Sargent said Friday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Study of Headache.

"Children seem to be better with it than adults," Sargent said, possibly because "it requires a change in lifestyle. For children, it's quite an effective tool."

Joy to the world

By JOY CULWELL
C-City Correspondent
John and Dorothy Starr run Lakeview Store on Colorado City Lake which is famous for the "grouchy burger" John makes.

Why anyone would call our sweet John Starr grouchy is beyond me. He is a wonderful, thoughtful man. He bought his wife, "her very own" weed eater the other day. June 5th was her birthday and John was never one to skip a gift giving occasion. He just hated the thought of that sweet Dorothy down on her hands and knees pulling up weeds.

Well, John, your thoughtfulness has been recognized and you will receive my Joy to the World bouquet for today.

Now, this lack of rain in our area is getting to me. Being a natural born optimist is getting harder by the day. I was talking to my friend George Womack at his job for the big friendly City National Bank here in Colorado City. We were talking about this lack of rain and George told the late Gus Chesney's story about a guy who stopped at a service station here in town and said with his Yankee accent, "How much does it rain annually right here?"

An old timer answered him, "Oh, about 16 inches." "That's not very much," the Yankee surmised.

"You ought to be here the day it comes," the old timer answered.

Boy! That's true! I wouldn't be surprised to get all the rain that we have missed so far this year in one afternoon or night. What we need is a real big rain just west of Westbrook on the watershed on Morgan Creek. A downpour will be all right.

Anything. A sprinkle will do. A wet cloth on my forehead. Anything!

When I was a child I survived the drought of the depression days. A man stopped in Breckenridge and asked my daddy if it ever rained in Texas. Daddy said, "Well, it rained about six weeks ago, one-tenth of an inch over in Albany, but I didn't get to see it."

In the drought of 1950-57, a small cloud passed over the courthouse in Anson and released a few sprinkles of rain as it passed over. One of the members of "the spit and white-tile club" jumped up from his bench and started walking fast over to the bank on the corner.

"Where are you going," his buddies asked.

"I'm going over to the bank and borrow some money while it is still raining!"

Bless our bankers' hearts, they believe it will rain. I do, too. When, Lord? When?

I'm going to hunt up my umbrella and rain coat I have packed away and get them out. Anyday now it's going to come.

Fans flock to Lennon auction

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of John Lennon fans, ignoring the late singer's call to "imagine no possessions," packed the Sotheby Parke Bernet galleries Saturday to bid for a piece of their idol's life.

"It's tremendous. We've had a fabulous response from all walks of life," said Elizabeth Auran, spokeswoman for the exclusive auction house.

Sotheby's was hired by Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, to sell 123 lots of items worth perhaps $250,000.

On Saturday, the East Side showroom was crowded with potential buyers ranging from serious antique collectors to "rock 'n' roll types who walk around with their mouths open and sit on John Lennon's couch," Ms. Auran said.

Items for sale included a 1965 Rolls Royce Phantom V, the grand piano on which Lennon composed "Dear Yoko" and a set of Lennon's erotic "bag one" lithographs, done in 1969 as a wedding present to Ms.

Ono. At their first showing, Scotland Yard confiscated eight of the prints as indecent.

Sotheby's called the offerings "signposts of American popular culture." Each was to be accompanied by a certificate of ownership signed by Ms. Ono, who said she would donate the proceeds to charity.

"These objects being offered at Sotheby's are things John and I loved dearly in different periods of our lives," Ms. Ono said in a statement. She called it "the only large collection of items that will be released to the public."

Ms. Ono said other possessions will be kept by the family or "would one day be in (a) Lennon Museum" commemorating the ex-Beatle, who was shot to death Dec. 8, 1980, in front of his Upper West Side apartment building.

The proceeds will go toward a multimillion-dollar donation that Ms. Ono said in October she would give to charity "in apology as a member of the human race" for bloodshed around the world.

Escalating political violence "somehow prompted her to really think about contributing, giving, sharing what she's got, which is an overwhelming amount of things," George Speerin, a spokesman for Ms. Ono, said Saturday.

Speerin said Ms. Ono also was selling mansions in Virginia and Palm Beach, Fla., an island off Ireland and an upstate New York farm, all to raise money for charity. She already has sold another Virginia mansion and recently gave $500,000 for an enclave commemorating Lennon in Central Park.

Speerin declined to estimate the value of the property or the assets of the Spirit Foundation Inc., which Lennon and Ms. Ono founded in 1979, chiefly to aid the elderly, abused children and orphans. The foundation will handle most of the donations, he said.

Kids find natural headache cure

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Children may be more successful than adults in reducing their reliance on drugs to get relief from headaches, researchers say.

Thirty-one children between the ages of 7 and 17 were taught how to relax, and nearly all of them were able to control about half of their headaches two months after the training session, according to Dr. Joseph Sargent of the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kansas.

The children reduced their usage of drugs, mainly aspirin and acetaminophen, by 87 percent following the biofeedback training, according to the study.

"This was a highly motivated, intelligent group of children. But that doesn't diminish the result. These children were able to control their headaches quite well," Sargent said Friday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Study of Headache.

"Children seem to be better with it than adults," Sargent said, possibly because "it requires a change in lifestyle. For children, it's quite an effective tool."

Peanut man enjoys his work

LONGVIEW (AP) — At 85, Hubert Gregg is at an age where most people have long since resigned themselves to a rocking chair on the front porch.

But Gregg insists he's given no thought to retirement. He doesn't have the time. "Besides," he says, "I'm still having too much fun doing what I'm doing."

What he does — as most folks in Longview can tell you — is sell peanuts. In fact, it was 52 years ago this month that Gregg first barked his now-famous yell: "Goobers! Fresh, hot goobers!" Mention "The Peanut Man," and people in this East Texas city know who you're talking about.

The blind vendor says he has no idea how many peanuts he's sold down through the years, which have seen the Nebraska native outlive two wives and several seeing-eye dogs. But Gregg — blinded at the age of six by meningitis — shows no signs of slowing down. In fact, he says, this is his busiest time of the year.

Gregg, sacking peanuts in his garage-turned-workshop located in his comfortable east Longview home, said "I'll spend four or five days a week at the (Little League) ballpark through June. I try to put in plenty of hours. It's my job, you know."

In addition, he has regular routes a couple of days a week to various downtown businesses. He also is a permanent fixture at all in-town Longview High School football games as well as other sporting events and activities around the city.

This particular day, he was busy preparing 300 sacks of peanuts to sell customers attending the next night's wrestling matches at Maude Cobb Activity Center. There's also a big soccer tournament to get ready for.

And business is good. He'll order between 300 and 400 pounds of peanuts — "New Mexican Reds and Virginia handpicked" — every month.

"For years, I really haven't had any competition. But I've tried to keep the prices down and give the people the very best," Gregg says.

He is almost apologetic about asking 60 cents for a sack of peanuts — he hasn't increased his prices since 1980 — remembering that when he first started in the business more than a half-century ago he sold the sacks for a nickel a piece.

Gregg arrived in Longview — "best move I ever made" — in November 1931. He had operated a newspaper and tobacco stand in El Dorado, Ark., and decided to come to East Texas to try the same in this oil-boom city. But it was a fire in Shreveport, La., that got Gregg started in the peanut business.

"The ballpark in Shreveport burned, and they moved the (minor league) baseball game to Longview. Shreveport was playing San Antonio," he recalled. "That was April 14, 1932, and that night I decided selling peanuts was what I wanted to do."

As a youngster, Gregg attended schools for the blind in Illinois and Minnesota. As a young man he sold medical goods and other merchandise, and for a while even played the piano at revivals in the Midwest.

"I used to play pretty good, too. I'd still play if I had a piano. It'd probably take me six months, so I don't know. After all, I'm 85."

Gregg's first wife, Linnie (who also was blind), died in 1960. His second wife, Lina, died in 1980 after 20 years of marriage. He has four stepchildren. Two live in Dallas, the others are in Colorado and California.

When Gregg makes his downtown rounds, he is driven and accompanied by Irene Van Wie. Mrs. Van Wie "has been as good as gold to me," Gregg says. "I've known her for years. She's a good person. She'd have to be to put up with me." The south Longview resident has worked as a housekeeper and driver for Gregg for a year and a half now.

The Peanut Man usually rises at 6:30 a.m., and when he does Buster is there beside him. Buster is "a mutt" that was given to Gregg about three months ago. And when Gregg is at home, Buster is there beside him.

"I can take care of him with no trouble at all," Gregg smiles. "He really took up with me. He's a good watch dog, too."

Generations of Longview children grew up knowing Gregg's guide dogs. Buck, a big brown Boxer, was a familiar sight at local ballfields when the Peanut Man was hawking his wares. Buck was Gregg's companion for 11 years until he died in the 1960s. Then there were Sally and Perda, two German Shepherd seeing-eye dogs, who served Gregg as he pulled a small red wagon filled with his peanuts.

Gregg orders his peanuts from a couple of Dallas firms. The freight company delivers the peanuts to his front door, usually in orders of 200 pounds, and Gregg empties them into seven-pound plastic measuring barrels. Then he places the peanuts into a roaster for 40 minutes or so, and then they are ready to be sacked. Some he puts into special one-pound bags, which he measures by using a specially marked "Braille Scale" in his workshop.

And Gregg says there's a technique to successful peanut-selling.

"You don't just bust in and put the things in their faces," he says. "You go dressed as good as possible, and give the people the best you're selling. I never take any money from anyone who doesn't buy peanuts. That's not business. I have people who tell me to keep the change, but I never take any tips from people who've been drinking heavy. In English, that means drunk. That'd be taking advantage of them."

Gregg goes about his job professionally.

"I never try to show off. I'd rather lose weight than sling it," he grins. "I try to be as kind to my fellow person as I can."

And the people of Longview have been kind to Gregg, as well. Individuals and civic organizations have pitched in from time to time to aid Gregg in one way or another. And on April 3, 1979, officials declared "Hubert Gregg Day" in the city to honor one of their best-known and most popular residents.

"I just try to be one of the citizens in the community," Gregg says. "Sure, I'd probably do some things a little different, especially in my younger life. But I've had a good life. I enjoy what I'm doing. There's no need for grumbling or worrying. Grumbling and worrying won't do you any good. In other words, I never feel sorry for myself."

"I'm a very lucky person." Folks will tell you Longview's lucky, too, for having been home to the Peanut Man.

PEANUT MAN — Hubert Gregg, 85, bags peanuts in the garage of his Longview home. Gregg, who is blind, has been selling peanuts for 52 years.

U.S. volleyball on the rise

It's no surprise that the United States is expected to field its strongest Summer Olympics team ever when Los Angeles rolls out the red (even though the will boycott the whole thing) carpet in several weeks.

Among the teams and individuals taking part in this progress is one Rose Magers of Big Spring, Texas. More on Rose will appear on these pages within a very few days, but today's column will try and delve a little into Rose's sport and team — namely volleyball and the U.S. Women's Volleyball Team.

Usually reserved for the traditional powerhouses from Asia and Eastern Europe, a medal (and more than likely a gold one) is expected to come America's way this summer in volleyball.

It should also be noted that this year's team will be the first USA volleyball team to participate in an Olympics. The 1979 team qualified, but never reached Moscow due to President Carter's called boycott.

The 1984 team formed the foundation three years ago when it finished a very respectable fourth at the World Cup Championships, stunning the highly respected Japanese along the way. Japan won or finished second every Olympics since 1964 except for the boycott year of 1984.

Coming back in 1982, the Americans showed marked improvement that was rewarded with a bronze medal at that year's World Championships. It was then that international volleyball experts began voicing their opinions that the U.S. showed the potential to compete on a level with the self-professed upper division countries.

The experts knew of what they spoke. In 1983 the squad seldom strayed from its road to the gold by capturing six international tournaments and posting a 63-11 record.

Along the way has come the number one ranking in the world and now the traditional powers are reportedly studying U.S. training methods instead of vice-versa.

Aside from a trip from the outhouse to the penthouse of international volleyball, another good side affect of America's success in the sport is the emphasis now being placed on youth volleyball.

After the 1984 Games a hard look will be taken as to how to widen the base of and establish even stronger grassroots programs. By doing this, a pyramid of order will be established that should insure the growing success story of the U.S. Women's Volleyball Team.

AMERICAN RECORD WIN — Valerie Brisco-Hooks of Los Angeles, stretches across the finish line of the women's 200-meter dash Friday, winning the final in an American record time of 22.16 at the US Olympic Track and Field Trials in Los Angeles.

Decker takes easy win in 3000 meters

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Decker, the nation's premier distance runner who is determined to compete in the Olympic Games for the first time, won the women's 3,000-meter race in the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials Saturday night.

The 25-year-old Decker, the world champion and the American record holder in the 3,000, was timed in 8 minutes, 34.91 seconds, the fastest by an American this year and the second-fastest in the world, in earning the Olympic berth.

In 1980, she made the Olympic team in the 1,500 meters, but did not get to compete in the Games because of the United States boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

In 1976, the oft-injured Decker was suffering from shin splints and lower leg ailments which necessitated two operations, and did not compete in the Trials.

And in 1972, she was only 13, one year under the allowable age of participating in the Olympics, and was not allowed in the Trials.

Sunday, she will try and make the Olympic team in a second event, the 1,500 meters. She won both the 1,500 and 3,000 in last year's World Championships.

Joining her on the Olympic team in the 3,000 were Cindy Bremers, the runner-up in 8:41.19 and Joan Hansen, who finished third in 8:41.43, making them the No. 2 and 3 performers in U.S. history, behind Decker.

Fires two-hitter

Rodriguez hurls Red Sox to title

By STEVE BELVIN
Staff Writer

Thanks to Sambo Rodriguez the National League Lions ended their season the way it started — on a losing note.

The Lions lost their season opener and then had won 17-in-a-row, that is until Mr. Rodriguez came along and silenced their bats in the championship game of the city Little League tournament as the Texas League Red Sox downed the Lions 5-1.

Rodriguez, a small wiry curveballer put on a pitching clinic against the usually heavy hitting Lions by allowing them only two hits while going the six inning distance. He struck out six while walking three. The lone run was unearned.

Rodriguez was in control all the way as time and time again his breaking pitches baffled the Lions. The 12-year-old hurler had to be at his best because Lion pitching ace Sammy Carrillo was giving the Red Sox problems of their own.

The fire-balling Carrillo went the distance for the Lions, allowing four hits, striking out 11 and walking two in five innings.

In fact, the Red Sox got all of their hits and runs in the fourth inning and with Rodriguez's tough pitching, it was all the help he needed.

Catcher Robert Lara started off the big fourth for the Sox with a triple over the left fielder's head. Raymond Castandez singled, scoring Lara; tying the game at 1-1.

Ricky Escoredo reached on an error and Renee Villa walked loading up the bases for first baseman Tom Hernandez.

Hernandez singled scoring Castandez and Escoredo upping the score to 3-1. Angel Villa followed with a single driving in R. Villa. Hernandez added the fifth and final run when Tony Saracho brought him in, but the damage was done as the Red Sox held a commanding 5-1 lead.

From then on Rodriguez took everything into his own hands as he kept crossing up the opposition with his curveball and elusive fastball.

Rodriguez ended the contest by striking out Aaron Salazar and Lance Newell and getting Carrillo on a fly ball to right fielder Escoredo.

The Lions lone tally came in the second inning when Newell reached on an error and scored on a passed ball, giving the Lions their first and last lead of the contest.

A jubilant Red Sox Manager Lupe Lara said he was uneasy when the Lions jumped out to the 1-0 lead. "Yes I was worried when they got the first run of the game. The way that pitcher was pitching I thought we might not be able to hit him," said Lara. "We told the kids to choke up on the bat and just meet the ball. When Robert (Lara) got the first hit in the fourth inning, it gave everyone confidence."

The Red Sox ended the season with a 15-2 slate, while the Lions close out the season with a 17-2 mark.

Kite takes lead in Atlanta Classic

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Kite, seeking a second title of the season, shot a 6-under-par 66 and took one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic.

Kite, the steady little man who has finished in the top 10 in six of his last eight starts, completed three trips over the leg-straining hills of the Atlanta Country Club course in 202, 14 strokes under par.

Don Pooley, twice a runner-up in this tournament, held second going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize. He was at 203 after a third round 67.

Pooley, playing in the same group with Kite, had a 2-shot lead after he scored four consecutive birdies beginning on the 11th hole, but lost three shots to Kite on the next two.

He regained a share of the lead with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th, but could not match Kite's birdie-4 on the water-guarded final hole.

Tommy Valentine, the hometown boy who held the second-round lead, had to work hard to salvage a round of par 72 and drifted back to third at 205.

Scott Simpson, a winner at Westchester two weeks ago, vaulted over 53 players with his brilliant 63 that left him at 206.

Simpson, whose 36-hole total of 143 was the figure necessary to qualify for the final two rounds, played with the new U.S. Open champion, Fuzzy Zoeller, in the first group off the tee.

"I wasn't in contention when the day started. Now I am. And that's a good feeling," he said.

He was tied with Mike Donald, who had a 69.

Payne Stewart was alone at 207 after a 69 that included an eagle-3 on the 18th.

1984 Summer Games expected to be success

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the boycott of the Soviet Union and its political allies and the threat of future defections, U.S. Olympic Committee officials painted a healthy picture Saturday for the 1984 Summer Games.

"Despite the 12-nation boycott, a record 142 nations will be represented when the Games open in four weeks. I believe we will still have a great Games," predicted USOC president William Simon.

The Soviet Union, citing security reasons, announced on May 8 that it would not attend the Summer Games. The Soviet bloc nations in Eastern Europe, Cuba and Ethiopia subsequently withdrew from the Games.

"I believe we have contained the spread of this," said Harry Usher, a representative of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. "But there are no givens. Nothing is etched in stone. We must be vigilant. It is not unprecedented to see other countries walk out, even after they have arrived at the village. It is not over."

Holding their final meeting prior to next month's games, USOC officials also took time Saturday to name Houston as the site of the 1986 National Sports Festival.

On other issues, USOC Executive Board Director F. Don Miller said:

— The USOC proposed liberalization of amateur rules to enable Olympic athletes to profit from their sport other than by direct payment for competition. Under A USOC report, to be presented later to the International Olympic Committee, would allow athletes to accept money for television appearances and endorsements provided they do not involve a performance in the athletes' sport. The USOC recommendation would further not make an athlete ineligible to participate in the Olympics for merely signing a contract or having an agent.

— The USOC had received $13 million from corporate sponsors to date, about 18 percent of the total cost of the Games.

Rosario gains decision over Davis

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Edwin Rosario of Puerto Rico, gained a split decision over Howard Davis Jr. Saturday to retain his World Boxing Council lightweight title and remain undefeated.

The 21-year-old champion hit the challenger from Glen Cove, N.Y. with a stinging left hook with about 15 seconds remaining in the fight to put Davis on the canvas. It was a blow that decided the fight.

Referee Mike Jacobs of London, gave Davis a mandatory eight-count and it looked like Rosario would move in for a knockout. But the bell ended the 12-round fight.

In the final scoring, Sidney Nathan of London and Angel Tovar of Mexico gave the fight to the champion by a count of 115-114 and 117-113, respectively. Jose Juan Guerra of Mexico, had Davis ahead by a 114-113 score.

The stunning finish of the fight was the second time Rosario was able to knock Davis, a gold medalist in the 1976 Olympics, down. The first time came in the second round, when Rosario unleashed a left hook, similar to the one that decked Davis in the final round, that put the 28-year-old down. But the Puerto Rican was unable to do much more with the challenger, ranked No. 2 in the lightweight division coming into the fight.

Rosario seemed content to box with Davis during the middle rounds, trying to be aggressive with right-and left-hand combinations at the beginning and end of those rounds. He apparently was attempting to stay away from the long arms of Davis, who had a six-inch reach advantage over the champion.

At 5-foot-9½, Davis also stood nearly four inches taller than the champion and weighed 1½ pounds more.

Martina wins Eastbourne, next stop is Wimbledon

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Forty-eight hours before the start of Wimbledon, Grand Slam champion Martina Navratilova claimed her third straight Eastbourne grass court tennis title Saturday with a commanding 6-4, 6-1 victory over fourth-seeded Kathy Jordan.

Jordan, who ousted second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd in straight sets in Friday's semifinals, went into the match apparently full of confidence but suffered a setback when Navratilova broke her service in the first game.

The 27-year-old Czechoslovakian-born American never looked back. It was a sharp contrast with Friday's semifinals, in which Navratilova was extended to three sets by West Germany's Claudia Kohde.

"I felt a lot more confident today," Navratilova said. "But then I always do when I'm in a final. Getting there is usually more of a problem because it is always on your mind. But in a final I'm always more relaxed."

The service break clearly rattled Jordan, and there was no repeat of the precise serve-and-volley game that ousted Lloyd.

The 24-year-old from King of Prussia, Pa., wasn't helped by Navratilova's pinpoint serving.

In the first set, Navratilova conceded just four points in five service games. Three of those came in the 10th game, which she closed out on the first advantage point with a winning forehand volley to take the set in 39 minutes.

"I really could do very little," said Jordan. "Even when I was putting in good serves, Martina was hitting me with some incredible passing shots. She had a go at everything I did and made it very difficult for me."

"I was upset at losing the very first game of the match, because I think I hit three very good serves, which she somehow got winners from."

GRAND SLAM WINNER — Martina Navratilova, off the ground with a backhand return to Kathy Jordan during the finals match of the $175,000 Eastbourne Tennis Tournament. Martina went on to defeat Jordan 6-4, 6-1, to claim her third straight Eastbourne grass court tennis title.

Navratilova kept the pressure on at the start of the second set when she broke Jordan's serve to 15 and held her own to love to go 2-0. She quickly reeled off another three games before inexplicably dropping her serve at 5-0.

But Navratilova quickly recovered her form to end the contest on her second match point when Jordan charged in and hit a smash straight at the net. Navratilova earned $28,000 for her victory, while Jordan had to be content with $14,000.

Later, in the doubles finals of this $175,000 event, Navratilova and partner Pam Shriver ousted Britain's Jo Durie and Ann Kiyomura 6-4, 6-2 to win the $11,000 top prize. The runners-up get $5,500.

Dodgers keep mastery over Braves, win 10-2

ATLANTA (AP) — Bill Russell lined a three-run double to break a sixth-inning tie Saturday and spark the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 10-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

With the score tied 2-2, the Dodgers started their sixth-inning outburst with two outs when Mike Marshall and Mike Scioscia singled off Pascual Perez, 7-2. Greg Brock then drew a walk to load the bases before Russell lashed his double that landed just inside the foul line in the left-field corner.

Russell delivered an RBI single, his third hit of the game, and Candy Maldonado added a two-run double to account for three more runs in the eighth off reliever Donnie Moore. The Dodgers scored twice in the ninth off Gene Garber on a run-scoring double by Scioscia and an RBI single by Brock.

Winner Fernando Valenzuela, 7-8, retired the first 12 batters he faced and struck out eight of the first 10. Dale Murphy doubled to start the Atlanta fifth and scored on a single by Ken Oberkfell, who later scored when second baseman Steve Sax booted Perez's grounder.

Phillies 7, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Glenn Wilson and Sixto Lezcano homered to back the strong pitching of Jerry Koosman as the Philadelphia Phillies ended a four-game losing streak by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5 Saturday night.

Koosman, 8-6 after winning his fourth consecutive decision, survived a shaky start in which he allowed six hits in the first two innings. He then retired 16 of the next 17 batters he faced and didn't give up another hit until the eighth.

Lee Lacy singled home the first of two Pittsburgh runs in that inning before Al Holland came on with two runners on base and no one out. He allowed an RBI double to Tony Pena before retiring the side and was tagged for a two-run homer by Lacy in the ninth.

With the Phillies leading 1-0, Ozzie Virgil singled to lead off the second before Wilson, who went 3-for-3, drilled his fourth homer of the season over the right field wall. Lezcano made it 4-1 in the fifth when he tagged loser John Candelaria, 5-6, for a solo homer, his 11th.

CUBS 12, Cards 11

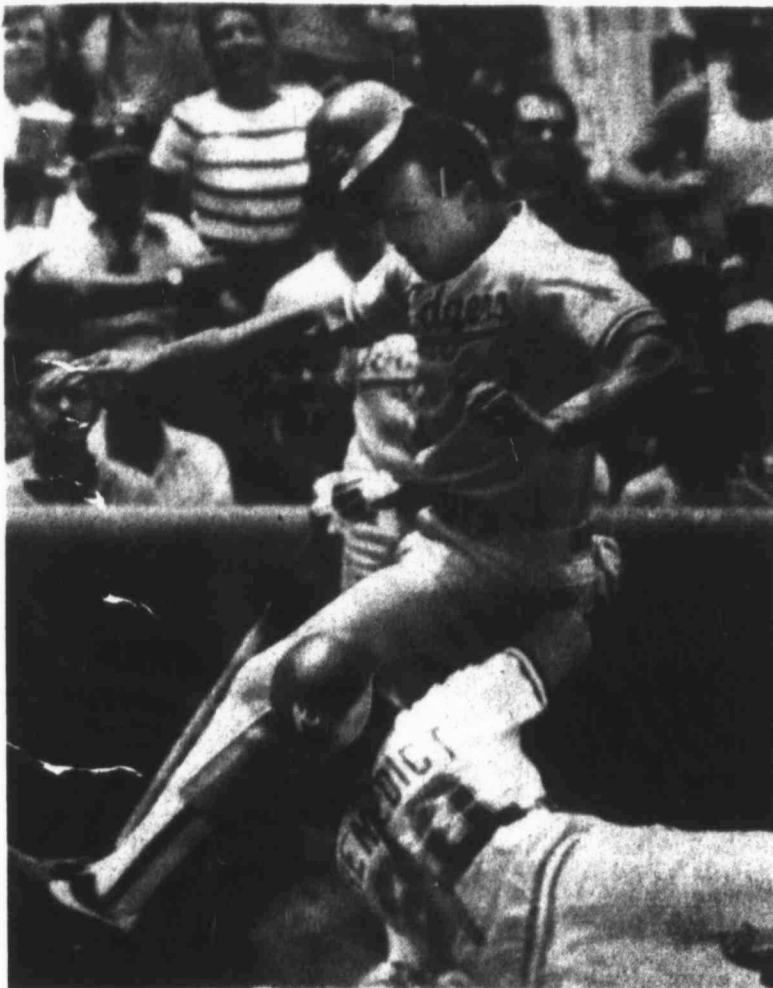

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Owen's pinch-single with the bases loaded and none out in the 11th inning gave the Chicago Cubs and Ryne Sandberg, who had five hits, including two game-tying home runs, and seven RBI in a wild 12-11 triumph Saturday over the St. Louis Cardinals and Willie McGee, who hit for the cycle and drove in six runs.

Sandberg had tied the game 9-9 with a leadoff homer in the ninth off reliever Bruce Sutter and tied it again 11-11 with a two-out, two-run homer in the 10th off Sutter.

In the 11th, Leon Durham drew a walk off Dave Rucker, 1-1, the fourth St. Louis pitcher. Jeff Lahti, then replaced Rucker and Durham stole second and went to third on catcher Darrell Porter's throwing error. The Cardinals walked the next two batters before Owen delivered his single.

Lee Smith, 4-4, the seventh Cubs pitcher, was the winner.

McGee had a bases-loaded triple in the second, a single in the fourth and a two-run homer in the sixth. He then cracked an RBI double in the 10th that sent St. Louis ahead and made him the first Cardinal to hit for the cycle since Lou Brock did it in San Diego in 1975.

A SMASHING PLAY — Atlanta Braves catcher Bruce Benedict tags out Los Angeles Dodgers Franklin Stubbs Saturday as he tried to score from second base in the third inning. Benedict held on for the out despite the collision with Stubbs' thigh. Benedict was taken from the game after the play.

Pinch-hitting adds new life to aging players

NEW YORK (AP) — At 31, Steve Braun thought his career was over. Traded to Kansas City after two mediocre seasons, he was trying to win an outfield spot on a pair of legs that were 10 years too old.

But Braun found a niche — he learned to pinch-hit.

Braun is one of a group of players — aging stars and journeymen alike — who have made or extended careers by pinch-hitting. Their common link — they can hit in clutch situations.

A starter with Seattle and Minnesota, Braun spent most games on the bench after joining the Royals in 1978.

"I knew my limitations and that helped me adjust," Braun said. "I didn't have enough speed to play the field every day and I understood that."

With aid from batting coach Charlie Lau, Braun developed into the team's top pinch-hitter. Since signing with the Cardinals in 1981 as a free agent, he has been St. Louis' most dependable left-handed pinch-hitter, leading the club with 15 pinch-hits last year.

"As a pinch-hitter, you can't expect to get a hit every time at bat, but if you make good contact, they'll fall in more often than not," he said.

Sitting in the dugout for long stretches, a player can lose his timing. But Braun stays crisp with a tri-weekly diet of callisthenics and extra batting practice.

"It helps you mentally," he said. "And when you feel good, you play good."

Even more crucial, he added, is the adjustment to not playing every day.

"If the manager doesn't put you in the lineup, you got to figure that there's a pretty good reason. We all have our pride, but you've got to face reality."

Jose Morales of the Los Angeles Dodgers is another player who rescued his career by pinch-hitting.

"In this job you can't afford to miss," said Morales, third on the all-time pinch-hitting list behind Smokey Burgess and Manny Mota.

"That's what they're paying you for."

Morales, who set a major league record with 25 pinch-hits in 1976, has led the National League four times in pinch-hits since breaking in as a seldom-used first baseman-catcher with the Montreal Expos in 1973.

"For me a slump is every time I don't get on base," he said. "Look, if I don't get a hit, that's my incentive to go out there the next time and bang one. I say to myself, 'Tough luck, Jose,' and try to do better the next time." Morales equated his task with that of a relief pitcher.

"The only difference between us is that he comes in to close the line, and I go in there to open it up," he said. "We have pride in what we do."

Morales, who has not started a game since August 1977, said the lack of playing time forces him to concentrate on the game at a much higher level.

"There aren't many players that take baseball home with them, but I do," the 12-year veteran said. "Even the night before, I'll be thinking about what the pitcher is probably going to throw in different situations. You have to do a lot of mental preparation. That's the key. I always have my mind on the game."

Not all pinch-hitters cheerfully accept their roles.

When he signed with the New York Mets as a free agent in 1981, Rusty Staub, third among active players in total base hits, was a player without a position. The beefy 230-pound right fielder no longer had enough speed or a strong enough throwing arm to play the outfield. He accepted the inevitable — the transition to pinch hitter.

"It was the most difficult thing I have ever had to do," said Staub, a lifetime .280 career hitter and six-time All-Star. "I just had to resign myself to the fact that this was it, that I wasn't going to play the field much. So I just worked on it the best I knew how."

Last year, at age 40, Staub led the majors with 24 pinch-hits — one short of Morales' record — and tied two major league marks with eight consecutive pinch hits and 25 pinch-hit RBI.

"You have to be strong and believe in yourself," he said, "because there are going to be times when you won't get a hit."

A's hurler fires one hitter at Rangers

OAKLAND (AP) — Southpaw Tim Lincecum salvaged his starter's role by going eight innings and combining with Bill Caudill on a one-hitter Saturday as the Oakland A's whipped Texas 5-1 and ended a five-game losing streak against the Rangers.

Conroy, 1-3, allowed the only Texas hit — Alan Bannister's second home run of the season with two outs in the fifth. Conroy, banished to the bullpen early in the season returned to the starting rotation this month and had not won a game since last September. He walked two and struck out five.

Bill Caudill pitched the ninth for Oakland. Danny Darwin, 5-4, took the loss.

The A's built an early 4-0 lead. Dave Kingman singled in the second inning, went to second on a groundout and scored on Bruce Bochte's single. Mike Davis followed with a 400-foot homer, his third, into the right-center field stands for a 3-0 lead.

Oakland picked up a run in the third when Rickey Henderson walked, stole second and third and scored on Joe Morgan's sacrifice fly. Henderson now has a league-leading 32 stolen bases.

Tigers 5, Brewers 1

DETROIT (AP) — Howard Johnson hit a three-run homer and Kirk Gibson added a solo shot Saturday to support the four-hit pitching of Milt Wilcox over eight innings as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 5-1.

Wilcox, who had dropped five of his last six decisions, did not allow a runner past second base until the eighth as he improved his record to 8-5. Doug Bair pitched a hitless ninth for the Tigers.

Gibson, who also had a pair of singles, belted his ninth home run of the season with two outs in the first inning. Detroit got three runs in the second, also with two outs, when Larry Herndon singled, Dave Bergman doubled and Johnson followed with his sixth home run of the season.

Blue Jays 9, Red Sox 3

BOSTON (AP) — Buck Martinez, a 13-year veteran, belted two home runs in a game for the first time in his career and Rance Mulliniks had a single, double and triple Saturday, powering the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Martinez, who also had a single, and Mulliniks drove in three runs apiece as the Blue Jays unleashed a 17-hit attack and sent Boston to its ninth defeat in its last 10 games.

Part-time starter Jim Gott, 3-2, making his first appearance since June 8, allowed only three hits over six innings before needing relief help from Roy Lee Jackson with two outs in the seventh. Jackson worked out of a bases-loaded jam and Toronto breezed the rest of the way.

The Blue Jays jumped on Rich Gale for four runs in the first inning. Gale, 1-2, was making his first start since being recalled from the minors June 7.

Damaso Garcia led off the game with a double, Dave Collins was hit by a pitch and Lloyd Moseby delivered an RBI single. George Bell singled home another run and Mulliniks drilled a two-run triple.

Mets 2, Expos 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Berenyi and Doug Sisk combined on a three-hitter, leading the New York Mets to a 2-0 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

Berenyi, 4-8, making his second start for the Mets since being obtained from the Cincinnati Reds on June 15, pitched seven innings, allowing all three hits. Sisk, in registering his 10th save, hurled hitless ball over the final two innings to lower his earned run average to 0.55 in 48 2-3 innings this season as he saved his fourth game in his last four appearances.

Charlie Lea, 11-4, yielded both runs on five hits, while striking out seven and walking one before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Lea had won seven of his last eight starts.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a two-out double to right by Darryl Strawberry that scored Wally Backman, who singled to open the inning. Danny Heep hit his first home run of the season with one out in the seventh inning.

National League

Padres 5, Reds 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Alan Wiggins singled home a pair of runs and Carmelo Martinez slammed a home run Saturday night to pace the San Diego Padres to a 5-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Winner Mark Thurmond, 4-3, allowed just four hits and one unearned run before giving way to Rich Gossage in the ninth. Gossage allowed a run on Duane Walker's triple and Dave Concepcion's single.

Cincinnati's Charlie Puleo, 0-1, making his second start since his recall from the minors, fueled San Diego's three-run second inning with his wildness. Puleo walked Terry Kennedy to start the inning, then issued a one-out walk to Martinez. Garry Templeton singled Kennedy home and Thurmond's grounder put both runners in scoring position. Wiggins' ground single to right made it 3-0.

Martinez hit a solo homer off Bob Owschinko in the sixth, his eighth of the season, for a 4-1 lead.

Piquet sets mark in Grand Prix

DETROIT (AP) — Nelson Piquet of Brazil, coming off a convincing victory in the Canadian Grand Prix, Saturday buried the track record on the way to winning the pole position for Sunday's Detroit Grand Prix.

The two-time world champion drove his BMW-powered Brabham race car around the twisting 2.5-mile course through the streets of downtown Detroit in 1 minute, 40.990 seconds, averaging 89.127 mph.

That obliterated the record set last June by Rene Arnoux of France, then in a Renault and now driving for Ferrari. Arnoux covered the 20-turn circuit in 1:44.734 (85.931 mph).

In fact, the assault on the circuit curling around the high-rise glass and steel towers of the Renaissance Center and along the Detroit River, produced laps under the old record by 14 of the 26 qualifiers.

Frenchman Alain Prost, the current Formula One world point leader, was second in a McLaren-TAG-Porsche. He was clocked at 1:41.640 (88.548).

"Qualifying is difficult here because you cannot make any mistakes," said Piquet. "It's so bumpy, I think during the winter it was cold and broke this up. It was bumper than last year."

"I think it will be very difficult to finish this race because track is so hard on cars."

The two front-row starters were in the same positions in Canada a week ago and, except for trailing Prost through the first few turns, Piquet led all the way. It was his first complete race of the season.

"In seven races we've won four poles and only finished once," Piquet noted. "So, obviously, being on the pole does not mean that much (in the race). We'll see tomorrow if this is a turning point."

Nigel Mansell of England, who won the provisional pole in the 60-minute qualifying session on Friday, lowered his first day time of 1:45.130 (85.608) to 1:42.172 (88.087).

The Ferrari of defending race champion Michele Alboreto of Italy, who drove a Tyrrell last year, was fourth at 1:42.246 (88.023).

A BIG CATCH — Ralph Murphy of Big Spring shows his proof that the fishing is good at Moss Creek as he shows off this 46-pound yellow catfish he caught at Moss Creek June 16th at 2:30 a.m. Murphy landed this catch with a rod and reel using perch.

SPORTS HIGHLIGHTS

There are a couple of legends as to how the term "Charley horse," associated with muscular cramps in the legs of athletes, originated. Seventeenth-century English policemen, "Charleys" as they were called, complained a good deal about leg and foot strain. The reference survived into 19th-century America. Ballplayers who complained about weary and tired legs claimed they were "riding Charley's horse." The other theory of the origin of the term points to an incident in the 1890s at the Chicago White Sox ball park. A horse strained to pull a roller across the infield. The pulling was done stiffly by Charley the horse.

CADILLAC DREAMING — Stanley Marsh 3 leans on the roof of one of 10 Cadillacs stuck nose first in the ground at his ranch west of Amarillo. The unusual display is 10-years-old and Marsh planned a party to celebrate the occasion.

'Cadillac Ranch' 10 years old

AMARILLO (AP) — The row of bruised and battered Cadillacs popping out of the ground near U.S. 66 west of Amarillo have left a decade of motorists gawking. And that's just what Stanley Marsh "3" wanted.

The eccentric Texas millionaire created what he calls a work of art back in 1974. Today he is throwing a giant beer bash to mark the 10th anniversary of his Cadillac Ranch creation.

Marsh, who uses "3" instead of III after his name, decided the anniversary would be a good excuse to get together with 400 or 500 of his closest friends.

The three artists from the Ant Farm, a West Coast artists group, who helped Marsh design the "art-work," will be there for the celebration. They are Chip Lord, Hudson Marquez and Doug Michels.

Marsh, who has made millions in natural gas and broadcasting enterprises, and his three companions planted the 10 Cadillacs — ranging from 1949 to 1963 models — back in 1974.

To a lot of highway motorists west of Amarillo, the Ranch is just another roadside attraction, in between the "10,000-Pound Prairie Dog" and Stuckey's. But to Marsh, it's a work of art.

"I have a theory of art. The most significant art is the art we never see. The art we dream about. When I saw the Mona Lisa, I was disappointed. See, I like art that comes as an abrupt surprise. Art that's not in a museum, that's not on a wall. I like being able to make my own mind up on what art is," he told the Dallas Morning News during a pre-party trek through his ranch.

The cars, planted in a row and tilting out of the earth, are barely standing the ravages of time. They are weatherbeaten and have been vandalized. Tires have been slashed, windows broken, and graffiti is layered upon graffiti. But Marsh, 46, believes the cars remain an attraction for that special, unsuspecting motorist.

Jackson 'Victory Tour' to net millions in interest on tickets

NEW YORK (AP) — Promoters for the event of the summer — the "Victory Tour" of pop singer Michael Jackson and his brothers — and the U.S. Postal Service could make more than $34 million from fans who won't even get to attend the concerts.

Almost half that money would come from interest on money orders cashed and eventually returned to fans not selected to get tickets. The Postal Service would collect the remainder in money order fees from those fans.

The Jacksons tour will stop in 12 cities for 42 concerts, with the first scheduled for July 6 in Kansas City's Arrowhead Stadium. Tickets are $30 each, must be purchased in lots of four and will be allocated based on a random selection process.

Promoters have estimated that 12 million fans will buy money orders worth $1.5 billion and mail them to New York.

Only about one in 10 applicants will receive tickets; the remainder will get their money back by mail, "in a negotiable instrument within four to six weeks after the concert," promoters say.

The money orders must be mailed about two weeks before the concert to be considered. With the delay in returning the money, the promoters or the Postal Service would have use of the money for six to eight weeks.

Assuming the tour sells $100 million in tickets, as the promoters have estimated, $1.4 billion will be returned. In a common money market deposit account at a bank, which pays about 7 percent interest, that money would earn $8 million a month, or about $16 million for the two-month period.

"There will be a float involved. There has to be," said Bob Sullivan, staff director of Stadium Management Corp., national promoter for the tour.

Depositing the money orders in a bank escrow account, he said, "is the only way the money can be safeguarded." The promoters have not calculated how much interest they would receive, Sullivan added in an interview in New York.

Jim Murray, public relations director for the company, said at a Kansas City news conference that "it's my understanding the interest will be eaten up by the cost of the process itself." The ticket price, however, includes a $2 handling charge.

Applications for tickets must include a $120 U.S. postal money order, which costs $1.55. If 12 million fans purchase the money orders, post offices will collect $18 million. In all of 1983, the Postal Service collected $124 million in money order fees.

In just three days last week, the Postal Service said, more than 27,000 money orders for Jackson tickets were sold in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

Until a money order is cashed, the Postal Service also has use of the money, in the same way a consumer has use of his money until his check clears the bank. That is known as "float."

As the money orders arrive in New York, they will be deposited in an escrow account at Bankers Trust and the selection process will be monitored by an accounting firm, Sullivan said. "This is a fair way of allocating the tickets," he added.

After Kansas City, the tour moves to Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas, for concerts July 13-15. The third stop is the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., July 21-23. The remaining concert locations have not yet been announced.

Clown-hopefuls vye for jobs

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — They laughed on cue, they danced. They tip-toed like the floor was burning hot. And they all had one thing in common — they wanted to put on white face and run away with the circus.

Jennie Whitt came from Richardson, Texas, just to have a chance. Robert Hanna strutted his stuff, then returned to his Oklahoma City home to fill out his application — and hope he makes the grade.

The two, along with Denham Cramer of Oklahoma City, did everything they could to get an encouraging nod or word of approval from the watching residents of Clown Alley.

That approval, and successful completion of one of the most exhausting application forms around, gives them a chance to attend Clown College and maybe — just maybe — land a job with the Greatest Show on Earth.

Their audition was held in a ring where elephants lumber and ponies prance.

A man in baggy pants and a bright orange wig finished off with a bound topknot gave the directions and explained just how hard a clown works. Pre-schoolage youngsters, wriggling with delight and giggling at the antics, sat on the wooden outline of the ring as the professionals and the hopefuls demonstrated the fine art of making people laugh.

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus held the audition one morning the past week when the circus was in town. The tryout was conducted by Boss Clown Top Parish. He and other circus clowns were in full outfit, much to the delight of the children from the St. Luke's Methodist Church Day Camp and the adults who had been attracted by the chance to get close to the perennial pranksters who perform the pummeling and pratfalls that produce the perfect prescription for propelling personal problems.

Parish said "the most important thing is the application," a four-page, tightly spaced form that ranges from the standard name, age and address sections to questions asking: "Describe your worst phobia or fear?" "When was the last time you cried?" and "In one or two words describe how you enter a room."

"They have two choices on the application," said clown Chris

Shelton of Newark, Del. "They can either fill it out straight or fill it out funny. But if they try the funny way, it better be funny."

"It's been said that it's harder to get into Clown College than it is to be elected to Congress," said David Kiser of Oklahoma City, who is in his second year as a circus clown.

Parish stopped the auditions twice as clowns demonstrated some of their routines for the hopefuls. Even the watching clowns laughed.

"We don't get a chance to see the whole routines," said Tuba, also known as Michael Patrick Heatherton. "We're all doing something else when they go through their routines."

While Parish was conducting clown auditions in one ring, Janet Madsen and Lisa Emms watched and coached as two young women swooped and swirled around another ring in tryouts for the circus' showgirls.

Mary Jo Thompson of Oklahoma

City, in her first year as a circus showgirl, was in the stands as Janet Lester, a friend from the University of Oklahoma, auditioned.

"I just graduated with a B.A. in dance and I don't have a job," Miss Lester said. "I'm trying out for the circus and anyplace else where they're having auditions."

Unlike the clown hopefuls, who must wait to see if they hear from Clown College, and if they do then go through the 10-week clown course, a dancer might be signed that day to a showgirl contract.

"Clown College takes 50 to 60 people a year, and the classes start in September," Parish said. "The tuition is free, but the students have to pay for their own room and board. The latest estimate is that it costs a student about $1,500 for the 10-week course."

And, Parish added, only about half of those who complete Clown College will be offered a job.

AWAITING THE CONCERT — Young Japanese pop music fans look at portraits of British pop singer Boy George on the program Saturday outside of the concert site in Nagoya, Japan. Boy George and members of the British rock band Culture Club are to give a performance in the central Japan city of Nagoya today before winding up their 7-day tour with three concerts in Tokyo next weeks.

Cookie cutters trade wares

AUSTIN (AP) — When Rosemary Clapham and her fellow conventioners get together every other year, they're looking to cut deals.

"It really gets kind of frenzied. People just rush up, start paying their money or trading. They know what they want," Mrs. Clapham said.

What the conventioners — who traveled to Austin this weekend from as far away as Vermont and Alaska — want are cookie cutters. Old ones, new ones, plastic ones, tin ones, copper ones, rare ones, cheap ones, expensive ones.

"It gets to you," Mrs. Clapham said of the hobby which has left her with 3,000 cookie cutters so far. "You just start and you don't stop. It kind of mushroomed on me."

Mrs. Clapham is president of the National Cookie Cutter Collectors club, a 600-member band devoted to a hobby which she says allows her "to be rolling in dough and surrounded by men — even if they are just gingerbread men."

The club publishes newsletters and holds conventions every two years where members can buy, sell and swap cutters to round out their collections.

Jule Mitchell, of Rock Island, Ill., said her collection is among the largest, numbering about 7,000 cutters.

"It's been fascinating. I've made lots of friends. I use the cutters for display and design, not for cooking any more. You learn a lot about everything collecting them — geography, astronomy, theology," she said.

Mrs. Clapham's own assemblage adorns the kitchen walls in her Austin home. "Some people have wallpaper, I have cookie cutters," she laughed.

Her oldest cutters date to about 1910. The collection includes cutters shaped like states, animals, cars, trucks, stars, cartoon characters, letters, numbers and more.

Places of distinction are reserved for a cutter in the shape of Texas and one shaped like a longhorn steer.

"Regional cookie cutters are very popular with collectors because you can't get them everywhere. People who can get cutters in some parts of the country and not others bring them to trade," she said.

There are even new trends — such as cutters shaped like video game characters. "They keep up with everything. You never have every one you want," said Mrs. Clapham, adding that her current wish list numbers about 100.

Many of the older cutters were given away as advertising by manufacturers of flour, baking powder and stoves, Mrs. Clapham said. The ads help collectors date the old tin cutters and increase their value.

Celia Donovan, 68, of El Monte, Calif., said she has an Egg Baking Powder cutter from the 1940s that is worth $35 to $50 today.

"I've been collecting them from way back. My mother and grandmother had a lot of cookie cutters," Mrs. Donovan said.

But there's a dark side to this wholesome hobby — inflation and fraud.

"A few years ago, cookie cutters could be had for 25 cents. All of a sudden, antique dealers started charging ridiculous prices," Mrs. Clapham said.

Her most expensive cutter costs about $30, although she said some rare Pennsylvania Dutch cutters can run up to $200.

And Mexican tinsmiths have begun making fake replicas of antique cookie cutters, then selling them for high prices, she said.

"If you're into antique ones, you really have to know your stuff," she said.

As with many other collectors, Mrs. Clapham's fascination extends to the end product — cookies.

She hangs cookie-shaped magnets on her refrigerator, wears an apron adorned with gingerbread men, has cookies embroidered on kitchen towels and potholders, a cookie-shaped cookie jar on the counter, cookie cook books, and even wears tiny cookie-cutter pins.

"People say this is obviously a middle-class hobby because middle-class people can afford it. Who can afford to collect Waterford crystal? And what could you do with it anyway, except worry about breaking it?"

"I've met lots of great people doing this," she said. "Really, you don't meet many mean people collecting cookie cutters."

Driver dies in truck explosion

HIALEAH, Fla. (AP) — A tanker carrying 8,300 gallons of gasoline swerved to avoid a car, struck a utility pole and exploded Saturday, killing the truck's driver and destroying one house, authorities said.

About 50 people were evacuated from a four-block area while about 100 firefighters battled the blaze for three hours, said Hialeah Fire Department spokesman Hugh Caines.

Witnesses told authorities they heard the truck driver, trapped in his cab, scream for help but were unable to get him out of the truck because of the intense heat.

"The heat was so intense, residents reported they could feel it one block away," said Caines.

Damages from the fire were estimated at between $250,000 and $500,000, Caines said.

An elderly couple in a house that Caines said was destroyed by the flames escaped unharmed after four men — two ambulance drivers called to the scene and two passersby — kicked down the front door and rescued them before the roof caved in.

"They went to the next house to check, but they found only a parakeet," said Caines. "They took the parakeet out."

Heat from the truck's burning fuel, which spread nearly a block in each direction, destroyed five parked cars and caused fire and smoke damage to five other homes, Caines said.

"All five of those cars were burned to a crisp," he said. "They were totaled."

The accident occurred around 6:30 a.m. EDT after the driver of the truck tried to avoid running into a car that apparently ran a stop sign, Caines said.

The identity of the truck driver was being withheld pending notification of relatives, Caines said.

Caines said the driver of the car, identified as Lazaro Victoriano, 22, of Miami, suffered compound fractures to his right arm. He was treated at Jackson Memorial Hospital in nearby Miami before being taken into police custody, he said. It was not immediately known whether he was charged in the accident.

The fire was declared under control at 9:45 a.m., and about half the evacuated residents had returned to their homes by 1 p.m., said Caines. But he said the area was covered by fire retardant foam and other debris, and many were waiting until it was cleaned up before returning.

Rape

A traumatic crime of power and aggression

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

Denise was asleep at her mother's home. Late at night, a man entered, apparently intent on burglary. But when he saw the young woman alone in bed, he decided to rape her.

He covered Denise's face with a pillow. She awoke startled and unable to see her assailant. The man held a knife to her neck and told her to shut up or he would hurt her — possibly kill her. Her muffled screams were not loud enough to awaken her brother in the next room. "I was scared and frightened. I couldn't move," she said. After the ordeal was over, she felt horrible.

Her mother came home from her late shift at work about 10 minutes after the man left the home. Trembling, Denise called out for her mother and told her what had happened. She thought the man was still close by. Her mother woke her brother and the two searched the house. They noticed some things were missing. Afterwards, the police came to the house and Denise went to the hospital for an examination.

DENISE IS NOT her real name. But she is a real person, living in Big Spring. At first she felt ashamed and guilty. She didn't understand why. "I didn't think anything like that would happen to me, but it did," she said. Her family felt angered and took much of the blame that night for not being there to protect her.

See related article on rape prevention, pg. C-7

At first she couldn't sleep at night and had nightmares. "I don't stay here by myself," she said. "I'm scared to go anywhere in this house. I still won't go into my mother's room. That's where it happened. I'm scared to go into any room when I'm the only one here."

Denise receives counseling. The nightmares have diminished. "Once in a while it will come back to me, but it hasn't lately." Counseling and being with the few friends who know about the incident helps her cope. Her family and those friends are protective of her and provide moral support. However, her family members also are victims and are still trying to cope with her ordeal themselves. She has gone through a lot of frustration with herself and her family, a local detective said. "They didn't feel what she felt."

Any woman can be the victim of a rape. Law enforcement agencies, hospitals and rape prevention groups debunk the myth that young, attractive women wearing "provocative" clothing are the only ones to get raped and maybe they were asking for it anyway.

The fact is a victim of sexual assault is a victim of violence, police say. Rapists choose their victim without regard to physical appearance, age, shape, race and social class. The reported rape age in Abilene, Texas is six months to 85 years old, says the Abilene Rape Crisis Center. The myth that the victim "asked for it" is false. The myth takes the criminal blame away from the rapist and shifts responsibility to the victim. Victims don't ask to be abused or violated with the possibility of injury or being killed. "People have got to stop thinking of rape as a sexual encounter," says Lynn Norcia, director of the YWCA's Supporting Elimination of Rape, Violence and Exploitation in Bergen County, N.J. "Rape is a crime of degradation and violence, with sex as a weapon."

VICTIMS OF sexual assault experience Rape Trauma Syndrome, a variety of reactions and feelings following an attack. Each reacts differently, but experience at least a few of the symptoms associated with the syndrome, such as:

General body soreness; bruises; vaginal tears and bruises; lacerations; loss of appetite; fears of the attacker returning, of being alone, of crowds, of men and of the ethnic origins similar to the assailant. They also may experience concern for family and friends, obsession with the assault, sleep disturbances, generalized anger, depression and feelings of shame, guilt, helplessness and humiliation, says the Abilene Rape Crisis Center.

Initially, the victim experiences shock and denial and realizes what has happened to her. Some people may have problems understanding the victim who remains outwardly calm and indifferent. Fear is the most common reaction at the beginning and continues as the victim reorganizes her life.

The second phase is outward adjustment. The anxiety and denial has decreased and the victim is more rational. She copes with changes in lifestyle, nightmares and phobias, and begins questioning her role in the assault, trying to regain her self-image, responsibility for her life and control over the possibility of being assaulted again.

The final stage is the integration phase. She begins to integrate this event into her life experiences. She regains control of her life and tries to return to her previous level of functioning.

Rape is a crime that has more than one victim. The most evident victim is the woman who was attacked. The other victims are her family and friends.

FAMILIES USUALLY react in an emotional manner at first and then try to put the blame somewhere. Who is blamed often depends on the victim's age, according to the book Adolescent Obstetrics and Gynecology. The attacker is most commonly placed with the blame. Parents of older adolescents often blame the victim for provoking the attack. Parents of younger victims blame themselves. Husbands of victims usually are full of misconception, misunderstanding and anger about the incident.

Victims and their families often need counseling to help them get over the trauma of sexual assault.

Just as a victim can be anybody, so can a rapist. People tend to think of a drooling, sex-starved, ugly, huge man when they conjure images about a rapist. Actually, a rapist could be the nice looking boy next door. "The rapist is a sick human being who has certain psychological needs," says Frederic Storaska, executive director of the National Organization for the Prevention of Rape and Assault, a frequent speaker on the subject and author of How To Say No To A Rapist And Survive.

"He is a man with a complex problem and needs help. As for appearance, he looks like anybody else. The only difference between the rapist and his fellow human being is that he does something they don't do...he rapes."

Rape is the sexual expression of aggression, not the aggressive expression of sexual desire, say researchers Nicholas Groth and Ann Burgess in their study of 170 sexual offenders and 146 victims of sexual assault. Rapists are classified into three groups: the anger rapist, the power rapist and the sadistic rapist.

TO THE ANGER rapist, sexuality becomes a means of expressing and releasing feelings of rage, contempt, hatred and frustration. He is often surprised by his behavior. If he has any prior criminal record, it usually will include other aggressive types of crimes. Less than 1/3 of the rapists are in this group.

About 80 percent of the convicted rapists are in the power rapist group. His goal is to gain control of his victim to dominate her through sexual means. This assault assures him of his masculinity. The assault is usually premeditated and the offender has accompanying fantasies. The power rapist is insecure about himself and can never live up to his fantasy.

The most rare of the three types is the sadistic rapist. The violence he commits is intentional and the aggression itself is erotic to him. His assault is bizarre and often ritualistic. The victim is usually maimed and sometimes murdered. The assault is often premeditated. The rapist tries to trap or kidnap the victim and often uses a weapon to torture the victim. Victims are symbolic and suggest a commonality.

Victims in the Howard County area go to Malone-Hogan Hospital's emergency room for a rape examination, says Leslie Williams, R.N., emergency room nurse at Malone-Hogan. The attending nurse gathers all clothing worn during the rape as evidence. A sheet is placed on the floor underneath the victim. She undergoes a total body exam for signs of brutality or violence, physical force, scratches and skin under fingernails.

THE VICTIM IS interviewed for an assessment of the events of the assault by the emergency room nurse, gynecologist and police. The gynecologist also performs a rape examination. A nurse is with the patient at all times during the examination to comfort the patient and act as a patient advocate, Ms. Williams said. All evidence is transferred from the emergency room to the lab where the pathologist examines it and locks it up. The victim signs a release before the rape exam and before photographs of brutality are taken by police, thus giving her approval for the evidence to be used in court if necessary.

The victim must have a follow-up examination in about one month to check for venereal disease and pregnancy, the nurse said.

Family members are often very angry and hostile. "So it's not only treating the patient but treating the family," Ms. Williams said. Their anger needs to be worked out so they can give total support to the rape victim.

It will take time for the family to work out their feelings, Ms. Williams said. "We tell them the patient needs a lot of support emotionally for quite a while. And we explain to them they can get support outside, which counsels the family members."

When the victim is examined for evidence, the city or county pays for the rape exam if the patient presses charges, Ms. Williams said.

ACCORDING TO TEXAS law, rape is classified as a sexual assault offense, which is a felony of the second degree, says Lt. Jerry Edwards of the Big Spring Police Department. "It becomes aggravated if a weapon is used." A convicted rapist can get two to 20 years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000. Rapists and child molesters are not well thought of by other prisoners and have an uneasy time in prison, he said.

When rape is reported to the police, an officer or detective begins gathering evidence. They get statements from the victim and any witnesses. They also secure tangible evidence from bed sheets, points of entry and exit, finger or footprints and anything that shows evidence of the crime. The officer tries to preserve the crime scene until an investigator can get a complete diagram of the scene.

It is important that the victim not clean herself or her environment before reporting the assault, Edwards said. Most victims, following an assault, feel dirty and degraded. They want to clean themselves, and destroy anything associated with the assault. If they do, they destroy the evidence that can help convict the attacker.

The investigator tries to make the victim comfortable with him enough to answer questions about the attack in order to make a crime report. "The investigator may not like what happened and are repulsed by it, but (he has) to remain independent of it...not let (his) feelings get involved," Edwards said. "If you start showing your emotions, their emotions go so much deeper," Sgt. Bill Price added.

According to Sgt. Fred Pace, Big Spring Police Department's crime prevention officer, an average of one sexual assault out of 10 is reported. The local police department usually receives one or two rape reports a month. That may mean that 10 to 20 actually occur but are never reported.

In sexual assault, often one of the persons knew of the other — acquaintances or friends, Edwards said. The victim or the rapist may have just seen the other once before the attack. "Seventy percent of the assaults are committed by acquaintances of some sort," Pace said.

Why don't more assaults get reported? Women are embarrassed and feel nothing will be done about it, the officers said, or they don't want to go through the ordeal of a public trial.

In court, the defense attorney will represent the accused rapist, will try to discredit the victim and say she enticed the attacker. The victim will be advised of what to expect at the trial.

A victim's testimony will center on her actions after the assault, the events leading up to the assault and a complete description of everything that happened during the assault. According to Surviving Sexual Assault, "In court, it will not be you vs. the rapist. Your role is as a witness. The 'people of the state' prosecute the suspect because the suspect is charged with committing a criminal act under the penal codes and/or state laws."

Rape awareness, support services offered

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

Whether a person wants information about rape prevention or help with reporting a rape, at least three services are available to answer his or her questions. The services include: rape prevention seminars and speakers available for club programs or private assistance, a puppet show about touching for children, and a newly formed Rape Crisis Service for rape victims.

The RAPE CRISIS SERVICES acts in support of victims of sexual assault, says Mary Kenny, coordinator of the service being organized in Big Spring.

Also organizing the service is Gail Earls. The women have selected a board of directors and are accepting applications for volunteer counselors. Their target date for beginning the service is Aug. 27.

The Service's objectives are assistance to the rape victim and rape prevention. It provides medical and legal information to victims of sexual assault on a 24-hour basis. It also provides information on how to report a rape to the appropriate law enforcement agency or the alternatives available should the victim choose not to report the crime. The Service's volunteer accompanies the victim through the reporting of a rape to medical and law officials and at the prosecution procedure. The victim also is referred to counseling services if she desires them. The Service's goal is to bring about an increase in reporting and prosecution of the crime and to see the victim of the crime return to a normal lifestyle as soon as possible.

"We're striving to get more people to report it to the hospital and the police," Mrs. Earls said. "Reporting it doesn't mean you have to press charges."

If the victim files charges, the volunteer provides emotional support and information, assists through medical examinations and court proceedings, giving a statement to police, obtaining counseling, and interface with the family, friends and employer.

If the victim does not want to prosecute, the volunteer provides emotional support and information, assists with medical treatment, and refers the victim to counseling services.

The service is available to assist with reported rape victims. Later, it plans to start a hot line, Mrs. Kenny said.

"With this type of supportive response, communities are finding increases in the reporting of the crime and increases in prosecutions as well as more emotionally healthy victims of the assault," Mrs. Kenny said.

"Primary responsibility of the counselor is to the victim; to listen, to explain, to clarify, to support and to assist the victim in dealing with anyone involved, (It is) not to investigate or judge the victim," Mrs. Kenny said.

The Service has set up its board of directors and is accepting applications for volunteer counselors. "It's important to realize the position of volunteer counselor requires commitment and professionalism," Mrs. Kenny said. "We are looking for people who will be committed. The volunteer counselor has to deal with persons going through a crisis and dealing with trauma. Not all people can deal with this type of trauma in the way needed, although they have good intentions," the women said.

"Volunteers are responsible and committed to doing what is best for the victim. They can't force their beliefs on the victim," they said. "Volunteers have a responsibility to the victim to keep her experience no more traumatic than it already is. Confidentiality is important, even among counselors."

Volunteer training will be Aug. 11 and 18. Applications for volunteer counselors will be accepted until July 16. They are available at the Howard County Library and Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

Reviewing a book on rape and assault for junior high to college-aged women spawned Howard County librarian Donna Jackson's interest in offering a RAPE AWARENESS AND PREVENTION PROGRAM locally, two years ago. She realized that little was offered to help young people understand everything involved with sexual assault.

Ms. Jackson got permission to pursue her idea of taking an awareness program to the schools and the library's meeting room. Ms. Jackson, Johnnie Lou Avery, Debra Wallace, R.N., policewoman Pat Dunham, and Jean Connelly, R.N., began presenting rape prevention programs to area schools and clubs. To continue their rape awareness and prevention program this fall, Ms. Jackson, Ms. Wallace and members of Malone-Hogan Hospital's staff have acquired a puppet show titled, "Alfred the Frog Talks about Touching." It will be shown this fall to elementary students.

According to Ms. Jackson, if the show meets the state's curriculum requirements for health or science education, it will be up to the principals at each school whether the show will be offered to students.

The show is a sexual abuse prevention program for parents and elementary children together. It is family oriented and fun, yet explains information on sexual abuse to children to make them know what can happen to them.

Alfred the Frog is a character that children can identify with as knowledgeable, wise and a trusted friend. As a narrator, his purpose is to keep the children's attention, to explain and clarify what is happening, provide continuity to the skits, and reiterate messages.

"The play has been received well in California," Ms. Jackson said. The first presentation is expected to show in late August at Malone-Hogan Hospital. The show primarily will be for elementary children and their parents. "But if anyone wants, we are available for PTA meetings or rape prevention programs," Ms. Jackson said.

Sgt. Fred Pace, Big Spring Police Department's crime prevention officer, also presents RAPE PREVENTION PROGRAMS AND FILMS to area organizations. One film that he uses and that also is available at Howard County Library for loan is "How To Say No To A Rapist And Survive" by Frederic Storaska. The film presents a different approach to rape prevention than what most sources give, Pace said. Although both organizations show the film, they do not endorse Storaska's methods exclusively. They believe only the individual can choose what rape prevention method is best for her based on her circumstances during the assault.

Former teacher excels

DON DEVINEY, former Goliad Junior High art teacher, had to give up his teaching career as he is now legally blind due to juvenile macular degeneration. While doing his internship in the Therapeutic Recreation at Chris Cole Rehabilitation Center for the Blind in Austin, he learned of the United States Association for Blind Athletes (USABA) Summer Games.

In June 1983, Don competed in the swimming division of the Masters Competition (ages 25 and up) at the University of Montana. He won four gold medals in breaststroke, backstroke, 100-meter freestyle and 200-meter freestyle, setting new national records in two of these events. Even though the title is limited to being faster than any other blind swimmer in the country over the age 25, he said after that competition, I am still proud of my accomplishments.

Don entered the USABA athletic competition again June 6-9, 1984 in St. Louis. He received five gold medals in swimming and set a new national record in the butterfly stroke. He also received silver medals in discus and javelin throwing.

Channel 24, an Austin television station, recently featured Don in a human interest story and in a sports news item. Don hopes that with his encouragement and support more blind people can utilize sports and recreation to help them feel more worthwhile and fulfilled.

DAVE TRUSTY was honored by the Caprock Chapter of the March of Dimes' executive director, LINDA FLOYD, for his support and work in getting his radio stations KWKI and KKIK to back the March of Dimes in all their events. Linda Floyd presented him with a plaque. Dave moved to Baton Rouge, La., June 17, and will take over management of his company's newest radio station.

RUBY AND JAKE ARMISTEAD, St. Louis, Mo. and formerly of Big Spring, spent two weeks with her sister GERRI ATWELL before they finished moving to Fort Worth.

JONI AVERY, daughter of JERRY AND JOHNNIE LOU AVERY is going on an exciting six-week trip to Japan, Hong Kong and Communist China. She will leave the first part of July with 16 other senior business administration students from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. These students were selected for the trip by the University and will study business practices in these countries as well as have a grand trip.

Working women make cleaning house simple

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Cleaning house the way mother did takes about 25 hours a week, says Ann Guilfoyle. But most people today don't have 25 extra hours to devote to the task.

As a single working mother, the New York-based writer certainly did not have the time to spare. As a result, she and her child were, in her words, "living in chaos." She would periodically binge on house cleaning, but on a day-to-day basis, the house was not in good order, she says.

To make life more comfortable, however, the 46-year-old New Yorker decided to change her mode of operating — figuring out what was essential to keep her household going and allowing the rest to slide. She says her efforts resulted in an orderly and comfortable household.

According to Ms. Guilfoyle the major pitfall generally is that standards are simply too high. "Many of us still carry around the outdated mores that drove our mothers or grandmothers ... More realistic standards would be based on the limitations of our lives," she said.

"When standards are too high, there is always something more to be done and you're rarely satisfied with what you can actually accomplish," she added.

It takes some discipline to set up a system, but once the framework is established you can relax and let many things drift. Furthermore, the pleasure of a smoothly-running home is also an important motivation to keep the system in operation.

The first step, says Ms. Guilfoyle is expedient compromise. "Decide what's important to you and attend to that. The rest is discretionary."

Based on interviews and research she did, she says an experienced professional house cleaner can thoroughly surface-clean a typical three-bedroom two-bath house in less than four hours, provided the space is picked up in advance.

To work like a pro, decide what you intend to accomplish and in what order the work will be done, then stick to the plan. "Amateurs tend to do a bit more here and there as they go along and drift back and forth from job to job. This slows you down and prevents you from accomplishing the day's goals."

Some tips for streamlining the job include assembling supplies ahead of time. Keep small tools and cleaning supplies in a portable carrier. Start with an easy job; then do the harder jobs in the first half of the cleaning period instead of at the end when you are tired and have lost interest.

If two people are cleaning at the same time, work in separate areas, she suggests. Work to a predetermined deadline, beginning and stopping promptly. Give yourself a reward at the end of the job. It might be watching television, having a friend over, having a special snack, or listening to music.

If you tend to dawdle, set a portable timer at first to help you become aware of how much time is passing.

Try cleaning to music. The right kind can lift your spirits. Ms. Guilfoyle cleans to Russian gypsy music. Her sister is partial to a disco beat.

To make life easier in her own home, Ms. Guilfoyle made some changes in her decorating scheme. She says there are many ways of minimizing maintenance by selecting easy-care decorative objects, colors and materials.

For example, she switched from white walls to a medium gray tone. "In New York, gray is the same color as dirt," she noted. However, it is also a neutral that takes on different characteristics depending on the accessory colors used with it and the quality and amount of light in a room.

Another way to camouflage dirt on walls and eliminate or minimize wall-washing chores is to select a wallpaper with a busy pattern. If white or a pastel color is the only way, then opt for rough textures, if possible. Barn siding and brick painted white both take little maintenance and show few smudges, she said. When using paint, opt for a glossy enamel which is easily washed instead of a flat paint which is not.

Another idea is to look for and obtain help from others. "Older persons who may live nearby often need the money which housework could bring, but are too proud to ask for it," she said. By tactfully asking them, you may find an invaluable resource.

On Turning Heads

by Gary Don

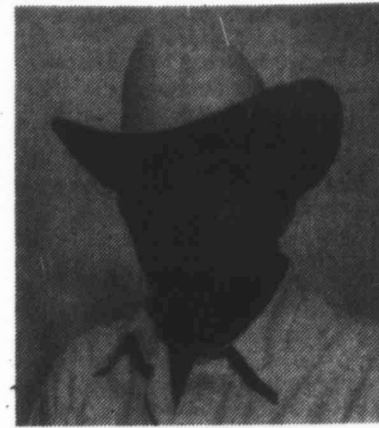

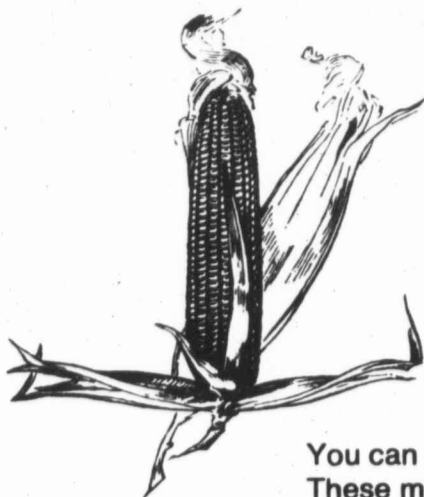

Male-pattern baldness is a hair-loss condition that occurs as a result of the follicles' sensitivity to a high level of certain hormones in the system. These are primarily the androgenic or male hormones. When these hormones are present in the bloodstream in higher than normal concentrations, they tend to shut down the functioning of the hair follicle. This results in either temporary or permanent hair loss. The condition is more common in men than women because their bodies produce far higher levels of androgen which is the hormone usually responsible. It does occur in women, too. However, in women, it is probably a result of the androgen-like hormone, progesterone, which is produced in female sex glands and adrenals.

Easy care, fashionable hair styles are a must for today's busy, modern women. LA CON-TESA offers you the latest trends in hair cuts, color and perm styles to meet your needs while being in the height of fashion. Protect yourself from sexual assault

Lifestyle Editor

According to the National Child Safety Council, a forcible rape occurs every nine minutes in the United States. Rape is a violation of a person, and every woman must consider the possibility that it could happen to her. The following are a few of the many methods women can use to protect themselves from a rapist.

On the mailbox and in the telephone book's listing, single women often list only their last name and first initial. This does not identify the person as being a woman living alone.

Be wary of service workers and door-to-door salesmen, especially if unexpected. Call their employer to verify their identity and purpose.

Walk briskly and give the impression of confidence if you must walk alone in the dark or secluded areas. You won't appear as vulnerable. Stay in well-lighted areas.

Check the back seat of your car when entering it. Keep car doors locked and windows rolled up. Have keys ready before reaching the door to your home or car. Leave spare keys with a trusted friend and not under a mat.

Go to an open business, police or fire station if you are being followed. Do not go home and don't let the follower know where you live.

If you suspect someone has been in your home, leave quietly and call the police from a neighbor's home.

Many rapes occur in the victim's home. Other places are in alleys, open fields and shopping mall parking lots, parks and cars, deserted buildings. Be alert to potential dangers in all areas, and don't give a rapist an easy chance.

Preset plan may save life during fire

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Surviving a hotel, or any high-rise, fire can hinge on knowing what to do and when to do it and reacting instinctively, warn officials of an insurance firm.

You must be prepared to make sound, quick decisions under extreme circumstances, according to the Hartford Insurance Co.

By having a preset plan, your chances of getting out alive are greatly increased, the company points out, offering these tips:

- Once you check into a hotel, survey your surroundings. Find the emergency exits and make certain that they are operating properly. Does the door permit re-entry from the stairwell or does it lock automatically behind you? You may have to return through the door if your escape route is blocked. If it locks automatically, you will have to instinctively block open the door or put tape over the latch.

- Find the fire extinguishers and other emergency equipment on your floor.

- Upon retiring, always place your room key on the bedside table and keep shoes handy by the bed.

- If you must leave your room never open a door without checking for heat and smoke. If smoke is present crawl, do not walk. Smoke is the No. 1 killer. If your door, doorknob or doorframe feel cool, open the door cautiously and assess conditions in the hall. Always take your room key with you so that you can return if necessary. If you encounter heavy smoke, return to your room.

- If you do remain in your room, fill the bath tub with water, since it may be necessary to wet down the walls and doors while awaiting rescue. Carry duct tape, the silver tape found in most hardware and variety stores, with you. Seal cracks around the doors and windows and gaps between water pipes and wall, as well as ventilation grills.

Since smoke is the major hazard, keep it out of your room. Open windows, if possible, to let out smoke but then close them again. Windows should be kept closed to prevent smoke coming in from the outside. Do not break windows unless your room is heavily invaded by smoke and you must get air to survive.

- Once you have taken all the necessary precautions call the front desk or fire department to let them know what room you are in and what the situation is. Since every hotel is different you must use your judgment.

For a free booklet on procedures, reminder stickers for your luggage and a wallet-size card pointing out the major points to remember, send a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope to "Get Out Alive," The Hartford Insurance Group, Hartford Plaza, Hartford, CT 06115.

Dear Abby

Stepchild casts approving vote

DEAR ABBY: With both Mother's Day and Father's Day behind us, I would like to make a pitch for a forgotten minority: stepchildren. I have two wonderful parents who divorced, and each married another wonderful person. My stepdad has helped me out through some tough times — financially and emotionally. My stepmother is a caring, considerate person who makes our time together special and fun.

It's hard to be a stepchild. They have to work twice as hard to get the love and respect that natural parents get automatically. For Mother's Day, I bought two presents. And I did the same for Father's Day. I feel lucky to have four parents who love me.

I hope this letter makes other stepchildren realize that some stepparents really care.

STEPKID: What a lovely letter. If other stepkids learn from it, it will be a step in the right direction.

Dr. Donohue

Weightlifting

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am presently incarcerated at — Prison. I am a weightlifter, and have been lifting since 1973. I was once diagnosed as having high blood pressure.

Presently, I am not on medication and as a matter of fact my blood pressure hasn't been high for a year. My problem seems to be with my respiratory system. It happens when I am doing squats. After my lift and after I have put the weight back on the rack, I feel like someone has knocked the air right out of me. It takes me two to three minutes to recover. If I have pushed myself to more reps than usual, it can take five minutes to recover. Can you comment for me? — A.C.

There are two questions in your letter, as I see it. First, is lifting weights good for someone with high blood pressure? I want to get to that one right away because I want to be sure you have a chance to serve your time and get straight.

Lifting is not good if blood pressure is consistently high and cannot be lowered with medicine or changes in lifestyle — weight loss, salt restriction, etc. When you strain while lifting heavy weights, both the systolic and diastolic (first and second pressure numbers, respectively) rise, and sometimes to quite high levels. To be on the safe side you have to have your pressure read while actually lifting, no matter what your resting pressure numbers are telling you.

The second part of your letter seems to me to have to do with your lifting technique, the way you breathe during your lifts. When you take a deep breath and hold it, then strain to make the lift, you are doing a valsalva maneuver. That means you are pushing with your breathing muscles. You are exag-gerating the practice of forcibly breathing out with your mouth closed tightly.

This buildup of pressure can block blood flow to your heart. It pumps less blood and the deficiency of flow causes you to see spots before your eyes and feel dizzy. Are these the things you experience in the post-lifting period?

The answer is to lift properly, that is never hold your breath during lifts. That goes for any lifts, whether squat-type or other.

You should inhale as you bend your knees and exhale as you rise. If you can't do that, at least keep your mouth open during the exercise so you don't get that straining valsalva effect of your chest muscles pushing against a closed air outlet in your throat. That's what you're doing to yourself now.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Why is it that male breast enlargement can be caused by use of anabolic steroids? I thought they were male hormones? — W.W.

They are male hormones, but the body converts them to female hormones (estrogen) and that promotes the growth of breast tissue.

In response to reader requests, Dr. Donohue's publisher now has a complete listing of all the booklets on various medical problems. Readers wishing this list can write him care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return mailing.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Anything closer than three weeks will not be published. The engagement form must be submitted no later than Wednesday noon prior to the Sunday it is to be published.

If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to the Herald. If only grandparents live in our area, please, give their names and addresses.

WEDDINGS

If a wedding writeup is submitted to the Herald after the wedding has occurred, the space allotted to it will diminish according to the length of time that has passed since the wedding.

Dr. Long provides allergy services to area

Allergy services will open June 25 at Malone and Hogan Clinic's new Department of Dermatology and Allergy.

"This is a response to a local need for more allergy care," says clinic administrator Richard Lehigh. "Dr. Thomas Long is expanding his practice to include both dermatology and allergy."

Trained at Harvard Medical School, the University of California and Massachusetts General Hospital, Dr. Long joined Malone and Hogan Clinic in July 1983. Having dual specialties, he is certified by both the American Board of Dermatology and the American Board of Internal Medicine.

Allergy consultation, skin testing, immunotherapy and desensitization are new services Dr. Long will offer.

"About 15 percent of the population nationwide has true allergic disease," said Long. "Pollen, mold, dust and animals are the most common causative agents."

Though the tendency to develop allergies is an inherited trait, persons do not inherit specific allergies, according to the specialist. It is rare to have only one allergy.

The same short winters which make Texas so appealing can spell problems for persons prone to allergies. The long West Texas growing season means extended exposure to pollen; and dry, dusty days are ideal for spreading it.

"Avoidance is the simplest treatment for allergies, and it can be effective if allergies are limited," Long said. "You can get rid of a cat or stop eating a certain food. Unfortunately, you can't eliminate pollen, mold or dust."

Second line of allergy treatment is the use of drugs. Nasal inhalants, antihistamines, decongestants and topical corticosteroids can be effective, according to Long. They can control symptoms like runny nose, congested nasal passages, itchy eyes or sneezing for most sufferers.

For others, however, immunotherapy is the only answer, he said. It is a process which desensitizes the body to allergies and is undertaken only after other methods prove ineffective.

Allergy skin testing is a step which must precede immunotherapy. It identifies the exact substances to which a person is allergic.

Allergy skin testing is similar to the familiar TB test, but more extensive. Instead of TB antigen, dozens of different allergenic solutions are introduced to a patient's skin by a series of tiny, almost painless pricks on the back. The skin's reactions to those minute quantities of antigens identify specific allergies.

Bermuda grass, Johnson grass, elm, cottonwood, ragweed and dog and cat dander are a few of the pollen, dust, animal and mold antigens, Long names as present in a usual skin test for this West Texas area.

Once the culprits have been singled out, injections of allergic extracts gradually desensitize the body. At first, injections every four to seven days are required. The goal of this immunotherapy, according to Long, is that a maintenance level injection once every six weeks should offer year-round protection against allergies.

Long explains that everyone who is "allergic" does not need skin testing and immunotherapy. "The question is 'How much does your allergy bother you?' If it's just one month of sneezing, chances are an antihistamine or some other drug may control the problem. If it's just one month of sneezing, chances are an antihistamine or some other drug may control the problem. If it's a month-after-month problem, and either drugs don't work or they make you sleepy or jittery, then desensitization may be needed."

ALLERGY TESTS — Nancy Futch, Dr. Thomas Long's nurse, sets up an allergy test at Malone and Hogan Clinic. Each vial contains a different allergic solution. A person may be tested for as many as 50 or more allergies at one time. The allergic solutions are introduced to a patient's back by tiny pricks made by the small white instrument the nurse holds in her right hand.

The 'bear' facts for sewing furry pets

If you are stuck with the unbearable urge to buy one of the expensive but irresistible stuffed bears as a gift for a relative or friend, consider making it instead.

With cost savings, you can make several for a fraction of the price of purchasing just one, says Grace Johnson, education director of a sewing machine manufacturer. "And that way, you can justify keeping one for yourself."

A wide variety of patterns and fake fur fabrics are available to create a den full of bears, including perennial favorites such as pandas, teddys, and brown and black bears. Additionally, new species are available in the designer family.

Despite the appearance of a pedigree, these patterns are not difficult for the average sewer and do not require as much time as you would think. "You will, however, want to spend some time in choosing your fabric and notions," says Johnson.

The age of the intended recipient is a major consideration. Button eyes, plastic noses, fringe balls and other small details that could be pulled off and swallowed should be avoided if the owner is under six years of age.

Embroidered or machine-sewn felt eyes, nose and mouth can be substituted without losing the appeal. And if washing the critter is an important consideration, as in a crib toy, you may choose to pass up the fur and opt for terry cloth, fleece or even corduroy although the realism and some of the charm may be lost.

Attention to detail is an important ingredient in making your gift special. Because of the bulkiness of the fabric, the larger the animal the easier it is to assemble. If you plan to make several, you may want to choose a pattern with a bear family and start by constructing the largest one first.

Fake fur is manufactured several ways, which results in different backings: stiff and tightly woven, knit and loosely woven and heavy and rubberized. There should be no problem in mixing furs of different backings if two or more colors are required for Carebears and pandas. You may even want to consider using synthetic suede for the face and foot pads for realism.

The key in construction is to avoid making noticeable seams that give the animal the appearance of a bad hair cut. Follow the nap instructions on the pattern, pinning the pattern onto the wrong side of a single layer of fabric. Using a safety razor or art knife, cut the backing. Do not use scissors, and do not cut through the fur itself.

Use long pins with large brightly colored heads so that you don't lose a pin in the bear to be discovered by a young owner.

Johnson also recommends sewing 1/4-inch seams using a short zigzag stitch for maximum strength. You may need to loosen the pressure on the pressure foot slightly if the top layer has a tendency to scotch out while sewing. If you have problems with the fabric catching on the pressure foot, you may want to try using tissue paper or a no-sag pressure foot. Plan on over-stuffing the bear. If your backing has a tendency to unravel, use seam binding to add stability to the seams and help prolong the animal's life. If your backing is stiff, you may need to clip curved seams, or notch for arms and legs. A mistaken cut can easily be repaired and rendered invisible in the nap of the fur.

After the seam is complete, use a pin to pull the fur out of the seam on the right side to help camouflage the seam. Follow your directions for assembling and stuffing the bear.

Add realism by trimming the thick pile fur around the face and bottoms of paws. Trimming may also be necessary for adding facial features.

Motor Patrol wins state competition

By RHONDA WOODALL
Lifestyle Writer

Before 10,000 Shriners and their families, the Suez Motor Patrol of Big Spring won the Texas Shrine Motor Patrol Association (TSMAPA) State Contest, held in Fort Worth, June 7-9. The group is part of the Suez Temple, Big Spring Shrine Club.

For the last three years, the group has been in 5 point of winning state, Motor Patrol Colonel Gordon Myrick said. "This year we pulled it off." The group formed 22 years ago has always placed in the top five. The competition began in 1934.

Performing on Kawasaki 1000 Police Motorcycles, the group competed in the Class Five division, which is the top class. Classes are based on the size of the engine. To win, the group performed 13 maneuvers in an eight to ten minute time limit maintaining a speed between 20 to 30 miles per hour. All of these precision maneuvers were performed on 125 by 125 feet square.

The group competes against motor patrols from the 13 Temples in Texas. The temples are Houston, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Dallas, Waco, El Paso, Longview, Lubbock, Odessa, Tyler, Corpus Christi, Galveston and Amarillo. In Texas, the Suez Temple has the fewest members, but covers most land. The temple includes towns from Midland to Abilene, and from Del to Brownwood.

The motor patrol team consists of Myrick, Chris Christopher, Charles Wash, Arvin Henry, Charles Lewis, Bob Miller, Coleman Nalls, Richard Knous, Chuck Reynolds, Joe Matthews, Howard Walker and Bud Summers. The motor patrol has 25 members including two charter members C.R. McLenny and J.C. "Red" Woodward. Each motor patrol member pays for their motorcycle, uniform and traveling expenses.

The men participating in the competition "do it to have fun," Myrick said. "All the other time we work" to help the Shriner's 19 or-thopedic hospitals and three burn centers.

The motor patrol practices two to three hours each weekend for three months. For the rest of the year, the group practices once a month.

The motor patrol members' wives help them prepare for competition. "Our ladies help us all the WE'RE NUMBER ONE — The Suez Motor Patrol team displays the flag and trophy that it won at the Texas Shrine Motor Patrol Association competition. The competition was held in Fort Worth, June 7-9. time. Without them we wouldn't exist," Myrick said.

With a score of 76.61 out of a possible 77, the group also received the highest score ever given to any motor unit. The group received 100 percent on showmanship, time consumed and number of drills performed.

Judging the competition were officers from Carswell Air Force Base, the Texas Highway Department, and the Sheriff department. The patrol was judged on appearance, performance and showmanship. While inspecting the group's eight motorcycles, one judge found one screw that had rusted and marked us down, Myrick said.

However, judges were pleased with the Suez Motor Patrol's performance. "Great job with the big bikes," said Scott Tidwell, TSMAPA judge. "The finest ride of the day! I really enjoyed," said Charles Bergman, judge.

Although the group is serious about competition, they do enjoy having fun. Proudly, the group points out a pair of stuffed red lips attached to one bike. The lips read "Kiss me, it hurts". "Everyone has a mascot which is given to the individual who messes up," Myrick said. The mascot goes everywhere the patrol member goes until it is passed on to the next person. At present, Matthews has possession of the lips.

New motor patrol officers were elected June 16. They are Nalls, colonel; Matthews, Lt. colonel; Reynolds, president; Knous, publicity chairman; and Walker, vice president.

The group won the International Competition in 1983 at Denver, Colo.

'Saturday Night Live' reveals new cast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maybe the "Saturday Night Live" form of sketch humor has been all wrong. It might be funnier just to put the five new cast members on stage and let them field questions.

That's what happened recently when Billy Crystal ("Soap"), Martin Short ("SCTV"), Rich Hall (HBO's "Not Necessarily the News"), and Christopher Guest and Harry Shearer of the movie spoof "This Is Spinal Tap" did improvisations for the press.

One of the first questions came from a loud television reporter, who wanted to know what each new cast member would contribute to the 10th season of "Saturday Night Live."

"Soft drinks and chips," said Hall.

"I'm bringing the cake," said Crystal.

"I got a Buckwheat imitation I'm working on," said Short, referring to former cast member Eddie Murphy's electrified impression of the slow-witted kid from "The Little Rascals."

Undaunted and unashamed, the TV reporter re-stated the question, requesting that the group not shout out its answers but respond one by one.

"For easy panning, right?" said Shearer.

The comedians then served up another round of replies:

"There's some dramatic stuff I'd like to try," said Short with a straight face.

Guest, the stoic deadpan of the group, said his contribution would be "a delightful sensitivity."

Crystal liked that line. "I'm bringing Chris," he said.

And Shearer, who had been on "SNL" for one season, 1979-80, said he was bringing "bitterness and bad memories."

The latest new, improved "SNL" seems off to a good start.

It isn't easy living in the shadow of TV legend, and the farther we get from the original "SNL" of John Belushi, Dan Aykroyd, Gilda Radner and Chevy Chase, the funnier we remember it.

The fact is that the sketch writing on this past season's "SNL" often was sharp, incisive and, let's not forget, funny.

Yet "SNL" was laboring under the weight of its successful older brother and the public perception that, since the golden days were over, that left only tarnished Saturday nights.

Then, when the red-hot Murphy and Joe Piscopo, the show's only break-out performers, departed, many people thought "SNL" was over and out.

Executive producer Dick Ebersol knew that for the show to survive another season, he had to find some familiar TV names — not like Steve Martin and Buck Henry who were from a past TV generation and failed to revive NBC's "New Show" last season — but comedians who were identifiable to today's young, multi-channelled videophiles.

Ebersol and producer Bob Tischler said they put six names on a list, and five of those people were sitting on unpainted stools, doing schtick and giving strong indications to the press last week that they could be funny fast.

That's another thing about today's young viewers, also known collectively as Mr. and Ms. Pac-Man; they're short on patience. With all the cable-TV and video alternatives, "SNL" doesn't have a year or two to let fresh faces grow on accommodating audiences.

Said Ebersol: "We went after five established funny people." They will join returning "SNL" players Jim Belushi, Mary Gross, Gary Kroeger and Julia Louis-Dreyfus. One additional female regular will be added before the end of August, Ebersol said.

For his ability to sign an All-Star team of cable and stand-up comic entities, Ebersol was dubbed "the George Steinbrenner of comedy" by NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff.

Ebersol's most difficult problem, though, may come right from Steinbrenner's Yankee playbook: too many stars, too few positions and not enough role players.

Maybe it would work out if, besides comedy skits, they could all tackle a topic each week. Say drugs, a subject of interest particularly since Bob Woodward's book "Wired" painted a black profile of the late John Belushi as a chronic abuser.

"Rich, you want to take that?" joked Short.

When Hall, appearing a little uncomfortable, said of course he's seen drugs in his lifetime.

Strange phone coincidence

BOLDER, Colo. (AP) — When John Buechner answered the telephone at his Boulder home three weeks ago, he met his match — John Buechner.

The Buechner-to-Buechner conversation, although brief, was long on coincidence:

In 1982, the Boulder Buechner ran a losing campaign as a Republican in Colorado's 2nd Congressional District. This year, the Missouri Buechner is the Republican candidate for that state's 2nd District.

Both Buechners have mothers with the maiden name of Richardson.

Their wives have the same favorite hobby: horses.

Their paternal grandfathers both came to the United States from the Black Forest region of Germany.

Malone and Hogan Clinic's Department of General and Vascular Surgery

Endoscopy, peripheral vascular procedures and outpatient surgery are available from each of our three surgeons at Malone and Hogan Clinic.

Endoscopy — Dr. Donald Crockett inspects a colonoscope. It is one of the unique endoscopic instruments which now let physicians look inside the body without exploratory surgery. Using new fiberoptic technology, Malone and Hogan surgeons can examine areas as inaccessible as the stomach, colon, esophagus, lungs and bile ducts — with no incisions.

Peripheral Vascular Surgery

Dr. James Mathews shows how new diagnostic equipment helps Malone and Hogan surgeons determine extent and location of blockages in blood vessels of the legs, arms, neck and abdomen. "The Doppler" permits evaluation of blockages without insertion of catheters. Its amplifier, which Dr. Mathews presses against a patient's skin, "hears" blood flow and transmits flow rates to the screen.

Outpatient Surgery — Dr. N. S. Rao (standing) checks a patient's injured thumb as physician's assistant Roger Demers sutures it. Many other surgical procedures — even ones like breast biopsies — are done here in the clinic's own surgical suite. Like physicians across American, Malone and Hogan's specialists are moving toward increased use of outpatient surgery. Elimination of unnecessary hospitalization can reduce medical expenses by 50%, according to medical authorities.

Hiker scales Chisos Mountains

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Donn Cook of Santa Ana, Calif., recently climbed the Chisos Mountains, adding his first Texas peak to the list of 300 he has scaled in the last four years.

But Big Bend National Park's isolation probably discourages many tourists, the park's chief naturalist said recently.

Visitors to the 740,118-acre park, which celebrated its 40th anniversary last week, find a wealth of natural contrasts: The river and mountains share the terrain with a broiling desert.

"I'm a member of the Sierra Club in California," Cook, a 44-year-old high school science teacher, said recently, "and enjoy a good hike as often as I can find one."

He came to the park looking for rare birds when he decided to climb the 7,835-foot Mount Emory, the park's highest peak. "Climbing Emory was really a spur-of-the-moment decision."

Cook said he was most impressed with Emory's view of the Chihuahuan Desert. "It's stunning. You can see the whole park from up there," he said.

Bob Huggins, 38, the park's chief naturalist and public information officer, said he wished more people would follow Cook's lead into the mountains.

"Other large parks, Yosemite and Yellowstone, for instance, are over-visited," Huggins said. "During the summer months, they'll run two to three times the number of people per acre that Big Bend draws."

Huggins said two factors limit the number of visitors — isolation and the heat. "You have to want to come to Big Bend. It's not on the way to anywhere," he said.

National Park Service records show about 200,000 people annually visit the park, located about 200 miles southwest of Odessa.

"Most of our traffic is in the cooler fall and spring months," Huggins said. "Traditionally, people get vacation time in the summer so they can be with their children."

Although some visitors may be attracted to the park because of its 40th anniversary, Huggins said the real celebration is set for next year.

"Big Bend National Park was enabled by Congressional legislation in 1944," he said. "But it was a park 10 years earlier. We're gearing up for the 50th anniversary June 20 next year."

Huggins said most visitors camp in the Chisos Mountains. There is a lodge at the Chisos Basin, where tourists have booked rooms as much as 18 months in advance.

Dale Sorrels, 28, of Pomfret, Md., said recently that he planned to photograph a sunset from Emory's peak, then camp at Laguna Meadows, the most popular mountain camping area, according to Huggins.

Huggins recommended Government Spring to those who want a quiet place to camp close to the road. It sits back from the road less than a quarter mile above the Basin Junction turnoff.

Big Bend has five kinds of campings, including recreational vehicle hookups, Class A, B, primitive and outback, Huggins said.

RV hookups, which include water and electrical connections, cost $6 a day. Class A campsites, which run $4 a day, have flush toilets, tables and cover. Class B campsites, $2, have tables and outhouses.

Primitive campsites are little more than flat places beside dirt roads. Free permits for primitive and outback camping are available at ranger stations, Huggins said.

One recent night, about a dozen javelina foraged near the west rim of the Basin's Class A campsite.

Charles Watson, a branch manager for Dictaphone in Corpus Christi, jumped up on his car when he heard the wild pigs running toward his campsite. "Do they bite?" he asked a friend.

"Nothing would bite you," the friend replied, climbing off the car.

Most of the park is desert, according to a park service pamphlet. Few backpackers hike the sparsely covered desert floor, where ground temperatures sometimes reach 180 degrees and natural water is spotty.

Huggins said the main park service station at Panther Junction issued only one desert backpacking permit for the last week in May.

Instead, park visitors increasingly are turning to the river, Huggins said.

Two of the three developed campsites — Cottonwood and Rio Grande Village — sit within casting distance of the muddy international boundary.

New Jersey residents Kent Zavacky, 20, of Maple Shade and Richard Benz, 22, of Cinnaminson said they planned to spend a night at Cottonwood, readying themselves for a week at a primitive campsite on the Rio Grande.

The men took a 10-week leave of absence from their custom software programming jobs. Because writing programs is mentally draining, they said, they plan to spend their time off as far away as possible from computers, telephones and people.

"Hopefully, we won't see anybody at the park," Benz said. "Or at least, the fewer people the better. That's one of the reasons we came — for solitude."

Camping is far from all the river offers. Huggins said rafting and fishing — usually for catfish — are big draws. "We see a consistent group of Marathon fishermen every week," he said. "It's close to home, and they need no license to fish in the park."

An Odessa family — Jerry and Barbara Metcalf and son, Stephen, 14, and nephew, Travis, 12 — chose the Class B campsite at Cottonwood.

"We needed shade," Mrs. Metcalf said. "But we didn't want to camp too far from the river. Our son likes to fish and swim, so we knew this and Rio Grande Village were where we should go. This seemed cooler."

The camp is named for the stand of cottonwood trees that shelter the picnic tables and tent sites, Huggins said.

East of Cottonwood are several primitive sites. One of them, Black Dike, lies about 10 miles south of the Tuff Canyon exit above Castolon. Separated from the Rio Grande by a thin band of mesquites, Black Dike's daytime temperatures and humidity levels are high, but the river cools it at night.

"Big Bend, especially the less developed areas, will grow on you," Huggins said. "People who come once nearly always come back."

Q.: The amount of cash required to purchase an equity on an older home is more than a little frightening. Since I don't have, say, $25,000 in cash available, are there any options?

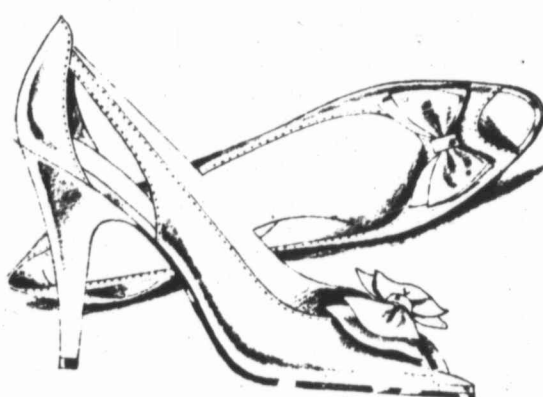

A.: Yes, there are several. If you've exhausted all your personal resources for cash, you might ask your real estate agent to inquire as to whether the owner is willing to carry part of the equity. Many times, this sort of "creative financing" has real benefits for both buyer and seller. Essentially, this will set up a second note, payable to the seller at a specified interest rate which may be lower than those found at lending institutions. And, some lending institutions will make an equity loan for the amount you need to swing the deal. These loans are for much shorter repayment periods than home mortgages, and will be at prevailing interest rates.

Hotel caters to canines

NEW YORK (AP) — The newest luxury hotel on Manhattan's trendy Upper East Side boasts spacious suites, limousine service and a doctor on call, and it's so exclusive it doesn't even accept people.

The Montrose Pet Hotel caters to the dogs and cats of New Yorkers who go away on occasion and can spend $17 a night for pet care.

"Instead of cramped cages," the pet palace features "spacious, private suites complete with beds and a continuous supply of fresh drinking water," according to a hotel brochure.

The hotel is the fourth in a national chain developed by Don Mensh of Potomac, Md. The first was built 13 years ago in Rockville, Md., and others followed in Fairfax, Va., and Marietta, Ga.

Recently, Leslie Liebman of Manhattan reluctantly checked in her dog Gingi.

"She hasn't been in a kennel in three years," Ms. Liebman admitted. "She usually stays with my folks, but they are going away too."

Did Ms. Liebman feel guilty? "Sure, especially when she started barking, but everything looks very clean and nice."
