A Midland firefighter shoots water into the office area of Engineered Equipment Inc. Smoke near the top of the building spews from a back shop area, where the blaze is believed to have started about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday. No injuries were reported in the fire, which broke out in 100-degree heat and took firefighters more than two hours to extinguish. Please see related photo, Page 1B.

Fire may be blamed on wiring

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Faulty wiring may have started a smoky Wednesday afternoon blaze that destroyed an industrial equipment business and kept firefighters busy in searing 100-degree-plus heat, investigators said early today.

No injuries were reported in the 4:30 p.m. blaze at Engineered Equipment Inc., located near County Road 125 West and CR 1285, just west of FM 1788 and south of Midland International Airport.

"Right now we are looking at the electrical wiring of the building, and consider it an accidental electrical fire," Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez said today. "But we're not sure of the definite cause. We will be going back out there today to dig around and see what we can find."

After the blaze was extinguished Wednesday evening, fire inspectors found signs of short circuits in some wiring, Dominguez said. Initially, there was a report that the fire may have been touched off by burning trash, but that was quickly discounted, he added.

The fire is believed to have started in the northeast corner of a shop area, according to the preliminary report. The fire was reported by the owner of the business, J. Pool Webb.

Several employees were in the building when the fire started, Dominguez said.

At least three 500-gallon pumper trucks and a 2000-gallon tanker truck were called on to supply water for the fire hoses, since the business is outside of city limits and the area has few fire hydrants.

Health bill likely to stand the test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first major expansion of Medicare in 23 years is headed to the White House for the expected signature of the conservative president who started the ball rolling last year with his call to protect America's elderly from the financial ruin of serious illness.

Although the catastrophic illness bill given final legislative approval Wednesday by the Senate is more ambitious than the proposal laid out by President Reagan, the administration's No. 1 health official has said he will ask the president to sign it.

There was no reaction from the White House to the Senate's 86-11 approval of the measure, which came a week after the House voted in similarly overwhelming fashion for the compromise worked out in months of negotiations among House and Senate conferees and administration observers.

"This gives additional peace of mind to millions of Americans," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the Finance Committee chairman who guided the measure in the Senate, said just before final approval.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a member of the conference committee that worked out the final compromise last month, said the legislation "is not perfect, but it will vastly improve the lives of millions of elderly Americans who have high health care bills."

"This can truly be called landmark legislation," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., another conference committee member.

But Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., one of the 11 who voted against the measure, complained that it "is going to cost everybody and help very few."

Indeed, proponents never argued that the bill will have an automatic benefit for each of the nation's 32 million Medicare beneficiaries, 29 million of them past age 65. The other 3 million qualify for the federal health program because they are medically disabled.

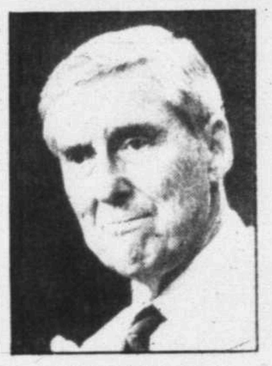

Senate action on the catastrophic health bill came shortly after the House killed a separate measure that would have provided extensive home benefits for people not sick enough to require hospitalization or nursing home care.

Even though it was not intended primarily as a vehicle for improving long-term care benefits, the new Medicare legislation does make some improvements in that area as well.

Reagan urging quick trade action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following up on the Senate vote sustaining his veto of a trade bill, President Reagan telephoned Democratic and Republican congressional leaders today to urge prompt action on a new bill to strengthen America's position in the global marketplace.

The Senate fell five votes short Wednesday of the two-thirds majority required to make the trade measure law despite Reagan's objections.

"The will of the Senate was expressed yesterday in sustaining the president's veto, and we are proceeding to work with the leadership in developing a new bill," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

"President Reagan is calling a number of members today to urge them to proceed as rapidly as possible on a new bill and I think we will be able to show some movement very soon," Fitzwater said.

The spokesman declined to identify the members the president was calling but said they were "the leaders who have been involved in the development of this trade bill over a long period of time" and included both Democrats and Republicans.

Peace convoy standing ground at Mexican border

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The Veterans' Peace Convoy to Nicaragua was stalled at the Mexican border by trade restrictions, but the 94 people in the caravan said today they still won't budge until their shipment of food and medical supplies is allowed to cross the Rio Grande.

"We're going to stand firm here, keep up the struggle and wait until the government changes its mind," Dan Kovalik of Dayton, Ohio said.

Convoy members spent the night at a commercial campground in northern Laredo, several miles away from the U.S.-Mexico border.

"Right now, we're prepared to stay here until we are allowed to leave our own country," said Gerry Condon, a Vietnam veteran from Santa Cruz, Calif. "We feel like we are being held hostage with this humanitarian aid."

The convoy, which opposes the U.S government's trade restrictions on Nicaragua and aid for the rebels that have fought to overthrow the Marxist Sandinista government, had planned to cross the Mexican border Wednesday morning.

But on Tuesday night, federal officials advised them that although the 30 tons of food, clothing and medical supplies would be allowed to be taken to Nicaragua, the 37 vehicles they planned to leave in the Central American nation would violate a trade embargo.

The Nicaraguan Trade Control Regulations of the Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Assets Control prohibit the unlicensed export of goods to Nicaragua, except for "donated articles such as food, clothing and medicine, intended to be used to relieve human suffering."

In order to take the five buses, 30 trucks and two cars to Nicaragua, however, the Treasury Department said the convoy would have to post bonds equal to the value of the vehicles, as assurance they would be returned to this country.

The group also would have to return them to the United States within 30 days or face forfeiture of the bonds and other federal penalties, under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, according to a notice the Treasury Department handed convoy members.

"We do not plan to bring them (the vehicles) back," said convoy member Dave Silk, from Stonington, Conn. "That's part of our humanitarian aid."

Convoy organizers say the vehicles are needed in Nicaragua to distribute the donations .

Customs officials said they took the initiative Tuesday night to tell the convoy about the regulations the Treasury Department requires them to enforce, and disagree with the group's contention that the government is harrassing them for political reasons.

"It's a very usual, ordinary and customary procedure," said Charles Conroy, a Customs spokesman in Houston.

The convoy started on May 21 from points in the West Coast, Rocky Mountain, Midwest and East Coast regions of the country.

By the time it reached the Mexican border Tuesday night, the convoy included 55 veterans from the World War II, Korea and Vietnam eras, as well as 39 non-veteran supporters.

Local firms in running for school expansion

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Two local architects are among five design firms to be considered for the school district's $11.8 million elementary expansion plan, but one former trustee candidate worries the new board's decision may ultimately be made in haste.

Midlanders David Messermith and Gary Vandergriff were among the five architects interviewed Saturday by Midland Independent School District trustees, Superintendent Joe Baressi and School Plant Services Director Wilson Heidelberg, a district spokesman said today.

Fort Worth architect Terry Hardin, the former Midland designer originally chosen for the construction project in an illegal MISD executive session last February, remains in contention for the project.

JRT and Partners of Dallas and AC Associates of Lubbock round out the group of five architectural firms, Messersmith said.

Local architects became disgruntled earlier this year when Hardin originally was chosen to design conceptual drawings for the construction plan.

They claimed $33.5 million worth of MISD construction had been under the direction of out-of-town firms since Lee High School was built in the early 1960s.

Messersmith, speaking on behalf of the Midland Architects Association, told the last Feb. 9 that "since 1968 no Midland architectural firm has received a commission for a project which has had a construction value of more than $700,000."

But today, Messermith said he was satisfied the school board had followed a new selection and interview process formed in the wake of the locals' complaints.

"I think the Midland architects as a whole are satisfied...the process was fairly done," Messersmith said. "We all got a shot at the work."

While he said he couldn't "speak for everybody," Messersmith maintained that a "majority of us are pleased with the fact they gave any local firm a chance to submit" plans for the project.

Ten firms in total submitted letters of qualification for the process, said Ted Miller, MISD communication director.

Miller said he though two or three of the original ten firms were local, but Heidelberg could not be reached this morning for confirmation of the number.

Warmth, moisture may indicate healthy cotton crop for region

LUBBOCK (AP) — Cotton experts say warm temperatures and timely rains could mean the blooming of another profitable crop.

Area farmers will plant an estimated 3.2 million acres, an increase of about 15 percent over last year's 2.87 million acres, according to Plains Cotton Growers Inc., an association of cotton farmers in 25 South Plains counties.

Almost all that acreage is now planted, said Don Johnson, executive director of PCG said Wednesday.

"Overall for Lubbock County, and probably the rest of the area, we're probably off to one of the best starts in several years," said Alan Mackey, executive director of the Texas Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service's Lubbock office.

"We've had some seedling disease early, but overall things look good," he said.

Midland Center changes could reflect new focus

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

With the recent resignation of Midland Center's manager, overseers of the downtown municipal meeting facility may be heading in a new, more aggressive direction in attracting conventions and trade shows.

The former director, Mitch Clark, resigned three weeks ago to pursue interests in the private sector. Midland Chamber of Commerce President John Fowler recently credited Clark with containing costs and reducing operating expenses at the center during slow economic times.

Fowler said that because the city's economy may be picking up, expansion of the center's role as "part of Midland's marketable assets for conventions and trade shows" may now be possible.

The choice of a manager to replace Clark — which should be finished in the next two weeks — likely will reflect that fact, said the chamber president.

Fowler emphasized that any expansion of Midland Center's role would not come at the expense of other Midland meeting facilities, such as the Holiday Inn T-Dome or the Hilton Hotel.

"We prefer to see the Midland Center complement, not compete," he said. "When taken in a package" with other services offered by the city's restaurants, caterers, hotels and convention spaces, "it fleshes out Midland's attractiveness to associations," he said.

The market for the Midland Center probably lies in conventions that attract less than 500 participants, a size that comprises 90 percent of the meeting market, said Fowler.

Midland restauranteur Louis Hochman, who resigned for health reasons recently from the board that oversees the center, noted that the center isn't equipped to handle large events that would involve 15,000 people or more.

However, events that bring in 2,000 to 3,000 people "not in a continuous stream" may also offer a market for the center, he said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the middle 60s and winds will be northeasterly at 5-15 mph.

Friday is expected to be fair with the high in the low 90s and winds will shift to the east at 5-15 mph.

Wednesday's high temperature of 103 was one degree cooler than the record high of 104 set for that date in 1964. The overnight low of 66 was 11 degrees warmer than the record low of 55 set for that date in 1955.

STATE

More hot, summer-like weather was in store across all of Texas although forecasts called for the possibility of showers and thunderstorms across East Texas.

Forecasts called for mostly sunny skies and slightly cooler temperatures across the state tonight and Friday.

The hot weather forecast followed a day of hot temperatures across the state Wednesday. It was 108 at Wichita Falls and 106 at Childress.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s.

Highs Friday will be in the 80s and 90s over most of the state, ranging upward to near 105 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas and to near 100 along the Rio Grande Plains in South Texas.

There were a few patchy clouds around, but most of the state had clear skies early today.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled over much of the nation today after unleashing a damaging tornado and hail as big as golf balls, while a record heat wave baked the northern High Plains with temperatures exceeding 100 degrees.

Frost advisories were posted from northeast Minnesota to northern Wisconsin and much of Michigan.

The showers and thunderstorms that began late Wednesday and continued today brought some relief from record hot weather in the mid-Mississippi and the lower Ohio valleys.

Thunderstorms that developed over northeast Colorado late Wednesday spread into southwest Nebraska and northwest Kansas today, triggering gusts up to 47 mph in Goodland, Kan.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from southern New York to western Pennsylvania, much of Ohio and southern Indiana. Thunderstorms were widespread from Maryland and Delaware to northern Virginia.

Windfall profits repeal may die with bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says a good chance to repeal the windfall profits tax was lost when the Senate failed to override President Reagan's veto of the omnibus trade bill, but he'll keep trying.

"I'll look for another vehicle but it won't be easy. This is the first time the House has agreed to repeal of the windfall profits tax," Bentsen, D-Texas and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Wednesday.

The oil industry is unilaterally opposed to the tax, which isn't collected when prices drop beneath a certain level. But producers nevertheless are required to complete paperwork on the tax.

Bentsen contends the tax has bled $74 billion from the industry and costs of compliance run about $100 million a year. A Department of Energy report found that the federal government spends another $15 million a year to administer the tax.

U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, said House Speaker Jim Wright is planning to reintroduce the trade bill in the House without the plant closing provision, a major point of contention with Reagan. The measure would have required all but small plants to notify workers of massive layoffs or plant closings.

But Chapman said it will be hard to get the new bill though the House, as long as it includes repeal of the windfall profits tax on oil but does not contain the plant closing provision. He believes the saving grace is that Wright is a Texan.

But getting a revised bill through the Senate will be even more of a struggle, Chapman predicted.

Although the House voted 308-113 to override Reagan's veto late last month, the Senate narrowly refused to enact the bill on a 61-37 vote, falling five votes short of the needed two-thirds majority.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, voted to sustain the president's veto, while Bentsen voted to override.

Ten Republicans abandoned the White House and supported the override, while just two Democrats voted to sustain Reagan's second veto of a major trade bill in three years.

According to the American Petroleum Institute, the country's daily production of oil would be some 900,000 barrels a day higher if the windfall profits tax had never existed. The API said that would mean fewer petroleum imports and a reduction of about $6 billion a year in payments for oil at current prices.

Gramm has said oil imports account for the largest share of the nation's trade deficit and has pledged to work for a new trade bill that would be acceptable to Reagan, while still containing repeal of the windfall profits tax.

TRADE

Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he is willing to draft a new trade measure that Reagan might be willing to sign, but he acknowledged that "it's a little late in the day to be talking about a second bill."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., took another tack. Although he strongly supported the trade bill, at the last minute he voted against it — a parliamentary maneuver that could later allow him to ask for reconsideration of the 1,000-page bill.

"This is insurance that the American people can still have a trade bill this year," said Byrd, who argued that efforts to draft a new measure could become hopelessly bogged down in debate over complex amendments.

Fitzwater said Byrd's action "does complicate it and we certainly are discouraged that he would try to do that. It is certainly clear that the president wants a trade bill; the Republicans want a trade bill; the Democrats, most of them, want a trade bill; and we would like to see it proceed as quickly as possible."

The centerpiece provisions of the bill Reagan vetoed would revamp the government's system for imposing import curbs to aid U.S. industries and retaliate against trade violations.

Others range from sizable farm export subsidies to repeal of the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil-industry earnings.

But those were overshadowed in recent weeks by Reagan's objections to a provision to require companies with 100 employees or more to provide 60-day notice of plant closings and large-scale layoffs.

Republican critics objected to what they called special-interest provisions and lingering protectionism in the bill, while supporters in both parties claimed it was vital to farmers and heavy industries suffering from trade upheavals.

The House voted overwhelmingly to override the veto last month, and some of the administration's supporters have said they would feel more comfortable if they could get a second crack at the issue before having to face the voters in the fall elections. Democrats made no effort to disguise their belief that the trade issue can be translated into votes.

"We may lose the battle but we've won the war on this issue," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont. "This is no longer an issue between the Congress and the White House. It is now a presidential campaign issue."

The Democratic presidential nominee-to-be, Michael Dukakis, has supported the plant-closing provision and opposed Reagan's veto. Republican George Bush has sided with Reagan.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., a critic of the bill, said "this controversy with the president is not about trade, it is not even about economics — it is about politics."

He pointed to a sharp rise in U.S. exports since three years ago when record U.S. trade deficits combined with layoffs in heavy industries ignited the congressional fight over the issue.

The final vote to override was 61-37, five votes short of the required two-thirds of those present and voting. Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and Arlen Specter, R-Pa., both recuperating from surgery, were not present.

Ten Republicans abandoned the White House to vote in favor of the override effort. Two Democrats voted to sustain Reagan's veto.

The Reagan administration on Wednesday renewed its call for trade legislation stripped of the plant-closings provision. It has opposed that feature on grounds that it would rob management of "flexibility."

HEALTH

For example, it extends the coverage available for people who need skilled nursing care in nursing homes from 100 days a year to 150. It also will enable an elderly person left at home to keep more money when his or her spouse has to go into a nursing home for an indefinite stay paid for by Medicaid, the government health program for the poor.

Leaders in both the House and Senate have said long-term care will head the domestic agenda in the next Congress.

In essence, the new legislation provides a safety net for Medicare beneficiaries faced with extraordinary expenses from acute illnesses such as cancer.

Beyond that, it introduces a general prescription drug benefit into the Medicare program for the first time — albeit only for those who run up more than $600 a year in drug bills.

The bill is drawn with the idea that potential beneficiaries will foot the entire cost of the expanded benefits, which are estimated to cost $32.6 billion over the next five years.

Each of the 32 million will be assessed $4.00 a month in flat Medicare premiums to pay for the additional coverage.

In addition, the estimated 40 percent of the recipients with enough income to make them subject to federal income taxes — about $10,000 minimum a year for an individual — will be charged a supplemental premium that amounts to a surtax on their income tax liability.

On the benefit side, the measure provides full hospital coverage after a once-a-year deductible estimated at $564 in 1989. Medicare now pays full charges for no more than 59 days a year and the recipient is subject to a deductible for each hospitalization.

The bill also caps out-of-pocket costs for doctor bills at $1,370 a year. After a $75 deductible, Medicare now pays 80 percent of approved doctor bills and that part of the program remains intact. Starting in 1989, however, the $75 deductible and the 20 percent share paid by beneficiaries counts toward the $1,370 cap. After that is reached, Medicare pays 100 percent of approved bills.

FIRE

When empty, the tanker and the pumpers were shuttled to a city-owned hydrant minutes away across FM 1788 and refilled, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said.

"That is standard firefighting procedure out in the county," Petree noted, referring to the lack of water. "It is sometimes difficult."

"We did not run out of water, but we didn't really have as much as we needed," Dominguez said.

As firefighters scrambled to the back of the corrugated steel shop area, thick, brownish gray smoke poured from the building and blew across Interstate 20 to the south.

"It's a mess in there," one firefighter at the scene said. "The ceilings and everything are down."

Unexpected high winds fanned the fire, and just after 5 p.m. orange flames shot into the air 12 feet.

Oilfield equipment, gauges, meters, filters, and other industrial equipment proved ample fuel for the fire, Dominguez said.

An hour after they arrived, firefighters with air-packs were still fighting the fire through hot, suffocating smoke. An ambulance was called to the scene, and several firefighters were given oxygen. A television reporter at the scene also required assistance from the paramedics.

"Several guys did get pretty hot out there," Dominguez said.

By about 6:20 p.m., firefighters reached the last of the flames, and the last hot spots were extinguished about 6:45. However, the site was watched until almost 10 p.m., reports said.

The fire also started a brush fire just east of the company, which has been in business since 1953.

COTTON

Much-needed rains over the past two or three weeks came just in time, he said.

"It's certainly not too late to make a good crop," he said.

Hot temperatures this week are just what the plants need to start growing, Mackey said. The National Weather Service in Lubbock reported a high of 100 degrees here Tuesday.

"The weather we're having now, especially with no wind, is really stimulating the plant, making it grow and develop a root system," said Mackey, adding that areas that experienced too much rainfall will be able to dry out.

High winds, which can damage young cotton plants, died down in the past week, forecasters said.

Johnson said that the high temperatures will mean more moisture is needed.

"We'll need a few showers before too long," he said. "We still have a few places on the plains that area deficient in moisture."

For the 25-county area encompassing PCG's membership, 1987's cotton crop yielded 2.67 million bales for a total value of $1.006 billion, according to figures recently released by the association.

That topped the previous record of $900 million set by 1973's 2.9 million-bale crop, PCG said.

At an average price of 55.5 cents, PCG set the lint value at almost $711 million. Seed, at $75 per ton for 1.1 million tons, was worth another $85.1 million, and government payments totaled $210.7 million, PCG said.

CENTER

"I think the chamber and city are doing a good job, but I think we could do more," Hochman said.

The restaurant owner noted that figures indicate out-of-town conventioneers spend on average $180 daily on hotels, food and shopping. "What I'd like to see us do is emphasize the kind of meeting that lasts more than one day or one hour," he said.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce manages Midland Center under an agreement with the city reached the year before the 30,000-square-foot center opened in 1980. Midland voters in 1976 approved $1.5 million in bonds to build the center.

Through boom times, the center played a pivotal role in providing a large space for meetings and trade shows. "At the time it was built, it was exactly the right size," Fowler said.

In recent years the center has fallen back to providing mainly a room for Midland civic club meetings and smaller events.

Fowler noted that some portion of Midland Center is in use "virtually every day," referring to meetings of Midland Lions, Rotarians, Kiwanis and other service organizations.

That the center operates at a loss to the city in fulfilling both civic and convention roles is an accepted tenet, said Fowler.

The center's projected revenues for the current fiscal year are $74,745 on an operating budget of about $210,000, according to chamber figures.

The chamber currently is projecting a slight increase in revenues to $82,264 for the 1988-89 fiscal year.

On the center's role for the future, Fowler said he has "more questions than answers."

"At some point, the community needs to develop a consensus on the future role of the center," he said. "Is that role changing? Will future requirements require an expansion? How can it better serve the community's ability to attract conventions from outside the (local) marketplace?"

"It is after all a public facility, and it's future role should be in that sense a public issue," he said.

Fowler acknowledged a long-time movement within the city in support of a facility that would have a more cultural emphasis — a concert hall or theater that would hold cultural attractions from out of town and provide a home to music and theater groups within the city.

"Those dreams haven't died, and at the appropriate time, they need to be dusted off and re-examined," he said.

Three Americans killed in helicopter crash

KRUMBACH, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Army helicopter on a routine training mission struck a power line today and crashed in a field along a busy highway, killing all three Americans on board, Bavarian police said.

Sgt. 1st Class John D'Amato of the 56th Field Artillery Brigade in Schwaebish Gmuend confirmed the three crew members aboard — all American servicemen — were killed.

D'Amato said the crash occurred near the village of Hittistetten.

At stake are the design plans for the MISD's $11.8 million expansion, which tentatively includes the addition of more than 100 new classrooms — including a new 15-room school for kindergarteners, first-, second- and third-graders.

There remains a chance that more than one architectural firm will work on the project, Miller said this morning.

Trustees are slated to make a decision on the architect and a cemented design plan at the next regular board meeting 4 p.m. June 14, Miller said.

Former MISD District 6 trustee candidate Dianne Anderson, who lost to board president Bob Rich in the May 21 runoff, explained this morning she is "working to try to find out some information on whether we should put our new schools into clusters."

The former candidate is looking into alternatives to the proposed classroom additions at the 11 elementaries in favor of new schools altogether, she said.

A desegregation decree establishing the MISD elementary school "cluster system" — whereby a student attends three different schools during his kindergarten through sixth-grade life — only applied to the existing 19 elementaries, Mrs. Anderson said.

"There were no conditions for new schools...I would just hate to see them build a K-3 primary school built when we could have a K-6 school instead," she said.

Mrs. Anderson, who supported the $11.8 million bond election, said she simply wants the new board to spend time investigating alternatives to the proposed elementary addition plan.

Her worries stem from her beliefs that the cluster system negates a lack of continuity in education and discipline, and that it could be upsetting to a young child to hop from school to school during those seven years, she said.

The new school board is so "inundated" with new information at this early stage in their terms, Mrs. Anderson said, that she worries "they really at this point do not have time to look into a lot of things."

The former candidate has spoken with Rich about her concerns and said he isn't "closing any doors."

But because "there is so much pressure from powers that be" to make a decision on the construction plan, Mrs. Anderson worries that the new school board will continue "on the same track" as the old board and "keep approving things without thoroughly investigating" them.

Former candidates endorse Dukakis

Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis, fresh from clinching his party's presidential nomination, promptly took aim at the Reagan administration, saying: "We can do a lot better." President Reagan, meanwhile, vowed to do "everything I can" to help George Bush get elected.

Dukakis, whose victories in the final four primaries of the season on Tuesday gave him the delegates he needs for a first-ballot victory at the Democratic National Convention, received a round of support from one-time opponents.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, Sen. Paul Simon and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt all weighed in with endorsements Wednesday. And New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, the most speculated-about non-candidate of the year, finally lent his backing, although it wasn't exactly the flowery tribute traditionally offered on such occasions.

"I endorse him! I endorse him! I endorse him!" an exasperated Cuomo said after persistent questioning by reporters. "There, three times I endorsed him."

Even though the nomination is numerically his, Dukakis is still engaged in a duel of sorts with Jesse Jackson, the second-place finisher in the primary sweepstakes.

Jackson says he'll continue his campaign up until the convention. And he has put Dukakis on notice that he wants to be offered the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

The Massachusetts governor has said he'll consider Jackson as a possible running mate. But Jackson says consideration alone won't do it.

"Consideration means an offer. It does not mean just in passing," he said Wednesday. "The vice presidency is not the top but it is a long way from where I started."

Dukakis kept to what has become his stock line on the subject — that Jackson himself has said it's the nominee's decision to make.

"I'm going to cast my net far and wide," he said, adding that he hoped to have "a very good idea" prior to next month's convention of whom he wants for a running mate.

The Massachusetts governor was back home in Boston today, ready to take his wife Kitty home from the hospital. Mrs. Dukakis, who had spinal surgery last week, watched on television Tuesday night as her husband won primaries in California, New Jersey, New Mexico and Montana.

Dukakis was also meeting this morning with Costa Rican President Oscar Arias.

Jackson was spending a few days at a California resort, resting and talking to advisers. He waged a grueling primary campaign, seldom missing a day of stumping.

Bush, on the other hand, was heading back out on the trail today. He was traveling to Houston, where he was to address the Texas state GOP convention.

Like Dukakis, Bush was seeing former rivals line up behind him. Three of them — Bob Dole, Rep. Jack Kemp and television evangelist Pat Robertson — were joining him on Friday at a "Unity '88" conference in Denver.

On Wednesday, Bush met with Reagan, who pledged afterward he would campaign hard for his vice president and do "everything I can" to keep the White House in Republican hands.

"George, wait until you and I get out there on the trail, and start pinning him (Dukakis) down on things he claims, which we know are not true," the president said.

As Bush has been doing in recent days, Reagan accused the Democrats of being too pessimistic.

If he listened to Dukakis, the president said, "I would be convinced that we're in an economic downturn, and that people are homeless, and that people are going without food and medical attention, and that we've got to do something about the unemployed."

Former astronaut considered for vice president prospect

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Glenn says the Democrats' vice presidential nominee should be a national hero, a former astronaut and a Midwesterner with foreign policy experience.

"But I've talked to Neil Armstrong, and he's not interested," joked the Ohio senator about the first man to walk on the moon.

It is, of course, Glenn who best fits his own description for the second spot on the national ticket with probable nominee Michael Dukakis. And many Democratic insiders agree that the first American to orbit the Earth would be a good choice.

"He's on everybody's short list and ought to be," Democratic party chief Paul Kirk told a Chicago fund-raising audience recently as he introduced Glenn.

"It's a great American story. You take Mike Dukakis, son of Greek immigrants, and John Glenn, a small-town boy who married his childhood sweetheart, a woman who overcame a stuttering problem — and then Glenn goes on to be the world's most famous astronaut and a U.S. senator," said Austin, an Ohio political consultant.

The Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce are constantly working to improve and strengthen the economy of the Permian Basin.

We know that once West Texans make up their minds to do something, more often than not they'll get it done. And we know that jobs are born, and the economy thrives, when we all pull together to make things happen.

BUY WEST TEXAS FIRST — KMID-TV

ClayDesta Communications is a proud sponsor of the Buy West Texas program.

Over $334 million in retail sales alone are made outside the Midland-Odessa area each year. If just 30 percent — $102 million — were spent locally instead, it would have a substantial positive impact on the businesses and lives of virtually everyone who lives in West Texas.

The bottom line to more business and a better lifestyle is simple — whenever we can, let's all "buy West Texas."

When "commerce" is a one-way street leaving town, it's hard to make a come-back.

ClayDesta presently has 14 offices statewide and is still growing.

Because of your support, we've become the largest long distance company headquartered in Texas!

West Texas based businesses like ClayDesta Communications benefit thousands of people in the Permian Basin because of statewide sales and service efforts. Support by West Texans has helped make us not only the largest long distance company headquartered in Texas, but a major force in the long distance business in the southwest.

Shultz must try for Mideast peace

Secretary of State George Shultz has to be respected for his perseverence. Having made four trips to the Middle East already this year on a mission of peace — and having encountered obstacles every occasion to the U.S. plan — he remains seemingly undaunted in his quest and says he hopes to make yet another trip to that corner of the world before the Reagan administration turns the complex question over to a new administration.

Solving the Middle East riddle won't be easy because no "solution" acceptable to American standards may be possible. And it's obvious that getting all the involved parties to consent to the plan will be next to impossible. The hostilities date back thousands of years, although the state of Israel has only been in existence for 40 years, and it isn't realistic to assume that age-old hostilities can be easily overcome by modern diplomacy.

Yet Shultz and his department must strive to keep the various Middle East parties talking, debating, attempting to fine-tune the peace effort to the point that a solution can be found. That's a tough assignment when one recognizes that, going into the quest, much of what can be offered in the way of a peace agreement has been presented at some time in the past and — even though many of the "players" have changed — the fundamental differences between the involved parties remain unchanged.

Of course, Shultz is aware of that fact, saying: "The underlying problem won't go away by itself and can't be wished away. Nor can it be ignored. The lives and well-being of too many people are endangered by the continuation of this conflict."

And it's because of that fact that George Shultz likely will be heading back to the Middle East in coming months, to encourage peace and to promote moderation.

It's a difficult, thankless task, but one that we hope the secretary will continue. As he noted, too many lives are endangered by continuation of the conflict.

Another View:

Hostage democracy

It's mid-October. A candidate for president trails badly in the polls. But then he dramatically announces the freeing of several hostages in Beirut. He insists this came about because of his skillful, informal diplomacy. He promised no more in return, he says, than to normalize diplomatic ties with Iran and to release Iranian funds still blocked in U.S. accounts. Only after the election does the rest come out — that he also promised ransom to Iranian-backed gangs in Lebanon.

Is such a scenario imaginable? It should be, because it closely resembles what has actually happened in France. Only days before the recent presidential election, the rightist challenger, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, announced the freeing of three Beirut hostages. After the vote, it became apparent that he promised everything but the Eiffel Tower in return — up to $30 million in ransom to three guerrilla groups, trade concessions for Iran and freedom for jailed terrorists.

Mr. Chirac lost, yet President Mitterrand feels bound to honor at least some of the promises. Hence the only clear winner is Iran, whose crafty clerical rulers thus refined their skill in manipulating democratic elections.

Their first success was in 1980, when Ayatollah Khomeini used the Teheran hostage crisis to defeat President Carter, confirm extremist rule in Iran and keep alive Republican fears of an "October surprise." The hostages were released only at the moment that Ronald Reagan, who had denounced Iranians as "barbarians," was taking office.

By 1984, Teheran was no longer afraid of the new president; and in March, gunmen in Beirut kidnapped William Buckley, nominally of the U.S. embassy but actually CIA station chief. Two months later, another American was kidnapped, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, with five more to follow. Then began the protracted secret negotiations in which Iran toyed with the White House, building hopes that Americans might be freed just before the 1984 Presidential election, — and then again just before the 1986 Congressional elections.

Iran has also intruded itself in West German politics to obtain $1 billion worth of transport aircraft. The mullahs made common cause with Franz Josef Strauss, prime minister of Bavaria and right-wing rival of Chancellor Helmut Kohl. Bavaria is the center of West Germany's arms industry, and Mr. Strauss is a board member of Messerschmitt, the giant aerospace company. Arguments over Bonn's refusal to license the sale was debated in the 1987 elections,in which high unemployment was an issue. It seems likely that Iran will figure in future votes, since West Germans are still held by pro-Iranian gangs in Lebanon.

In March, almost as a warning shot, another American was seized in Lebanon: Lt. Col. William Higgins, a Marine assigned to the United Nations peacekeeping forces. This happened before Mr. Chirac's secret dealings resulted in the freeing of French hostages — a transaction that brought Mr. Chirac no victory and France no glory.

It is a lesson that George Bush and Michael Dukakis can usefully ponder. When Western political leaders seek campaign help in Iran, they risk being swindled and even humiliated. Ransoming of hostages guarantees two things — further hostage-taking and confirmation of the mullahs' contempt for democracy.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 9, the 161st day of 1988. There are 205 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 9, 1954, in one of the most dramatic confrontations of the Senate-Army hearings, Army counsel Joseph N. Welch assailed Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy for his attack on a member of Welch's law firm, Frederick G. Fisher. Said Welch: "Have you no sense of decency, sir? At long last, have you left no sense of decency?"

On this date:

In A.D. 68, the Roman Emperor Nero committed suicide.

In 1784, John Carroll, who would become the first Roman Catholic bishop in the United States, was appointed supervisor of Catholic missions in the Uniteed States.

In 1860, the first dime novel — titled "Malaeska: The Indian Wife of the White Hunter" — was published.

In 1870, author Charles Dickens died in Godshill, England.

In 1892, composer-lyricist Cole Porter was born in Peru, Ind.

Rift develops over audit of thrift

WASHINGTON — Americans have nearly 1 trillion dollars stashed in the nation's savings and loan institutions, and most people assume their money is safe because the Federal Home Loan Bank Board regulates the thrifts.

Jack Anderson

But the Bank Board has ripped the rug out from under itself in a case that has some federal bank regulators wondering who is calling the shots — the government or the bankers.

M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Bank Board since last July, is the man under the microscope.

When Wall took over the job last year, regulators in the Bank Board's San Francisco regional office were knee deep in an audit of Lincoln Savings and Loan, based in Irvine, Calif.

The acrimonious audit created a rift between Lincoln's owner Charles H. Keating Jr., and the San Francisco regulators. The examiners looked into Lincoln's nontraditional, and some believe high-flying, investment and lending policies and didn't like what they saw. Since Keating bought Lincoln in the early 1980s, the thrift, with $5.4 billion in assets, has changed its focus. Lincoln has virtually abandoned home loans, the bread and butter of savings and loan institutions, and has turned increasingly toward large scale real estate and junk bond investments.

The San Francisco regulators who believed that Lincoln was operating in an unsafe manner recommended that the institution be put in receivership or conservatorship. Now, thanks to Wall and the Bank Board, Keating won't have to deal with San Francisco any more. On May 20, the Bank Board voted 2-1 to take Lincoln Savings and Loan out of the jurisdiction of the San Francisco regional office. Lincoln's next examination will be done in Washington, D.C., and eventually Keating will be allowed to switch regulators permanently.

In a move believed to be unprecedented in the annals of bank supervision, the Bank Board voted to let Keating take over an insured savings and loan in one of the 11 other Bank Board districts. He would then transfer his headquarters to the new thrift and fall under the jurisdiction of a different, and presumably more friendly, regulatory office.

Keating also has agreed to raise $160 million in new capital, according to the announced terms of the agreement.

Our banking sources say the regulatory industry is demoralized and devastated by what appears to be the Bank Board's decision to let a savings and loan shop around for a regulatory district.

Robert Clarke, the comptroller of the currency who regulates the nation's biggest commercial banks, is privately branding Wall's action as "the most outrageous act" he has witnessed in government.

"Danny Wall, in effect, has undercut every regulator in the country," another regulatory official told us. "He's made a eunuch out of the regulator. He just clipped their — off. How can San Francisco supervise anyone else when they basically have been called incompetent?"

One official we contacted said that the top echelon at the San Francisco office included "the cream of the regulatory crop."

The deal Lincoln cut with the Bank Board last month was foretold in a confidential agency memo dated Jan. 13, more than four months before the formal vote. Our associate Michael Binstein obtained a copy of the memo. It shows that the Bank Board was annoyed because word had leaked to Binstein that the San Francisco regulators wanted Lincoln to be put in conservatorship. Keating wasn't supposed to know about that recommendation.

The memo also reveals that when Lincoln officials learned of the recommendation, they demanded to have the San Francisco office taken off the case.

The memo says: "Above and beyond the issue of trying to identify the source of the leak, the most troubling question is what would motivate someone to leak such a document? To put pressure on the Board

... Whatever it was, the costs are heavy. The association (Lincoln) now knows that the (San Francisco office) has recommended a conservator, and the attorney for the association has already called (a Bank Board official) and told him that no agreement can be reached unless they are transferred out of S.F.'s jurisdiction, probably through a takeover of a small association in another District. In short, the leak has likely hardened positions."

HEALTH THREAT — The military may be exposing its troops to deadly fumes from a metallic coating commonly used in tanks and ships. Cadmium is the preferred coating for bolts and other metal parts that can corrode. But a little-read section of the Naval Ship's Technical Manual points out that cadmium plated metal gives off noxious fumes when it comes in contact with fuels, lubricating oil and grease. The result could be heart disorders or even death from exposure to cadmium fumes. Also, cadmium plating will destroy the pliable properties of metal fasteners at temperatures higher than 400 degrees. Ironically, the military has prosecuted several bolt bootleggers for trying to pass off cheaper zinc-plated fasteners as cadmium-plated.

ART BUCHWALD

Help! I think I've got Dukakis blindess!

Something has been happening with my vision lately. Every time I see a headline with the word "Dukakis" in it, my eyes glaze over.

Art Buchwald

I was worried enough about the situation to go to my ophthalmologist, Dr. Kip Robinson.

I told him my symptoms and he said, "I'm familiar with your problem. I've had many patients complain about the same thing."

"I'm glad I'm not alone," I replied with relief. "What's the cause of it?"

"It's more than an eye problem. When you read the word 'Dukakis,' a message is sent to the brain asking what you should do about it, and the brain responds by telling you to go to sleep."

"It's hard to believe," I said.

"All right, now read the chart on the wall."

"D-U-K-A-K-I-S."

"How do you feel?"

"Groggy. I can hardly keep my eyes open."

"And yet your eyesight is fine. Let's put some statements up here, and then you tell me if your vision is better or worse when reading them."

"'I want to make this country as great as it was before,'" I read out loud.

"That's good. Now I'm going to flash another statement: 'I am the governor of a state that has no unemployment.' Is that any better, or is it worse?"

"It's more blurry."

"Okay — the last one: 'I think what a President needs around him are people he can trust, and who are also honest and loyal.'"

"My eyes glazed over completely on that one."

"There is no doubt in my mind that you have what we call the Dukakis Syndrome. The Dukakis Syndrome works like this: You will read every story that has Ed Meese's name in the headline, and pass over every one that has Dukakis in it."

"But I'm a Democrat."

"Democrats are not immune to the Dukakis Syndrome. Some of them are so sensitive to the disease, they will turn him off as soon as he comes on television."

"Can you suggest any medicine?"

"There is none. We're predicting that it's going to get worse as the election gets nearer. The most interesting part is that the polls are showing most people afflicted with Dukakis Syndrome are going to vote for him no matter what."

I told Dr. Robinson, "I have as much trouble reading about the INF treaty as I do reading about Dukakis. My eyes automatically close when I see a story about the missile agreement. Is there any connection between Dukakis and the INF pact?"

"It's part of the same virus family. We know that the eye is a very sensitive instrument and will try to avoid sending boring stories to the brain. It senses when something isn't worth reading about. I think that the best thing for you to do is go home to bed and just accept the fact that you cannot concentrate on a Dukakis story. If you continue to worry about it, you'll only get a headache."

"I'm grateful to you, Doctor. If you hadn't told me what was wrong I would never have been able to get through the election."

"It's nothing to fret about. I have a similar problem to yours. I go into catatonic shock every time I see a story on the front pages about George Shultz and NATO."

GEORGE F. WILL

Is it Bush or Dukakis? Or does it matter?

LOS ANGELES — The vox populi has had its say in the nomination process and has said, with a continent-wide sigh, approximately this: "Oh well then all right — we'll settle for you two." Republicans have done what parties dream of doing. They have decorously nominated the consensus choice of most party leaders, in a context of peace and prosperity. Democrats have done precisely what recent history warns against: They have nominated a Northeastern liberal.

George F. Will

They have done this in spite of the fact that no Northern liberal Democrat other than Franklin Roosevelt has ever received a popular vote majority. Furthermore, in a dismal era for Democrats (they have lost four of the last five elections, largely because they are weak in the South and West), their strongest candidate was a Southerner perceived as slightly conservative (Jimmy Carter in 1976).

Yet George Bush is decidedly the underdog. A small part of the explanation is that his campaign has been stuttering since he defeated Bob Dole. Many dismayed Republicans feel as George S. Kaufman felt toward a bad bridge partner: "I know you learned the game this afternoon, but what time this afternoon?" However, it is hardly news that Bush is a better candidate for appointive than elective office.

Stephen Hess notes that, "At least three 20th-century Presidents have not been instinctive politicians. William Howard Taft, at heart, was a judge, Herbert Hoover a technocrat, Richard Nixon a secretary of state." Hess rightly excludes Dwight Eisenhower from that group because Eisenhower held essentially political offices in Washington in the 1920s and 1930s. He was a brilliant bureaucratic politician who in war was a political organizer of warriors.

Hess rightly regards Nixon as not a natural politician. One of the melancholy aspects of Nixon's life is that he never enjoyed the rituals or was at ease with the manners and mores of his profession. Bush is not as uncomfortable as Nixon was, but the sight and, worse, the sound of Bush campaigning makes many people uncomfortable.

In the last 12 elections, the Republicans twice (and only the Republicans) have nominated candidates who had never held elective office (Willkie, Eisenhower). Bush has one foot in that category, not having won an election on his own since 1968.

Clearly, the Bush campaign's premise is that Bush should not count on convincing the public to vote for him. Rather, he should frighten the public into voting against Michael Dukakis. Bush wants to Goldwaterize Dukakis.

A story — probably apocryphal but true enough — is told about an elderly woman who in 1964 told an inquiring reporter that she intended to vote against Barry Goldwater because "he's the guy who's going to get rid of TV." The reporter assured her that she was mistaken, that it was TVA, the Tennessee Valley Authority, Goldwater opposed. But the woman's resolve against Goldwater did not weaken. "Well, I'm not taking any chances."

Ever since the Democrats demonized Goldwater, Republicans have gleefully done the same to Democrats. George McGovern was "acid, amnesty and abortion." Carter was "Southern-fried McGovern." Today Bush's California campaign chairman, Gov. George Deukmejian, who may after all be auditioning for the role of running mate, sounds very vice presidential when he says Dukakis is Walter Mondale on taxes, Ted Kennedy on crime, Tip O'Neill on spending and McGovern on foreign policy.

Since the McGovernite ascendancy in their party, Democrats have been vulnerable to three indictments. They have been charged with being culturally extreme on "social issues," reckless spenders in domestic policy and unrealistic regarding national-security needs and the Soviet threat.

However, regarding social issues, Dukakis seems to understand the usefulness of having some critics like the homosexual-rights groups that have denounced him for saying that foster children are probably better off when in the care of heterosexual parents.

Regarding spending, it will be entertaining to hear a representative of the Reagan-Bush administration, the all-time deficit spender in the history of the universe, keep a straight face while contrasting Republican rectitude with Dukakis' supposedly dangerous ways.

Regarding national security, Dukakis may never have met a weapons system he liked. But even his likely defense budget would be way too big if President Reagan is right about the Cold War being over, Gorbachev being a "friend" and the Soviet Union having mellowed.

If Reagan is right, the stakes of American politics are suddenly much lower than they were and it matters less who wins elections. If Reagan is wrong but Bush thinks as Reagan does, the choice between Bush and Dukakis does not matter all that much.

Comptroller says drug strategy needs to be reassessed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal efforts to halt illegal drug smuggling haven't been successful because "Americans want drugs and they are willing to pay a high price to get them," says the nation's comptroller general.

Charles Bowsher says it is time "to reassess federal drug abuse policy and strategy" and the goal should be decreased demand rather than increased efforts to halt the supply.

His assessment came as the Senate began work on a bill that would provide the death penalty for large-scale drug dealers whose organizations are involved in killing policemen. The Senate was scheduled today to vote on a motion to conclude debate on the bill.

Bowsher's pessimistic message came in testimony to the Senate Armed Services Committee, which is holding hearings on proposals to increase the role of the military in drug interdiction efforts.

The House last month voted to have President Reagan order the Pentagon essentially to seal U.S. borders against drug traffickers. The Senate's anti-drug measure didn't go as far, but it would give new power to the Navy to arrest drug traffickers seized in international waters.

The proposals were attached to separate Pentagon budget bills approved by the two chambers. A House-Senate conference committee will resolve the differences.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., noted the increasing chorus of congressional demands for action to halt the nation's drug problem. "Congress is on a stampede and we need some direction," he said. "We need to try to corral this stampede and point it in the right direction."

Using the military isn't the right direction, said Bowsher, who heads the investigative arm of Congress, the General Accounting Office.

"I do not suggest that efforts to control the supply of illegal drugs are useless and should be reduced," he said. "I do suggest, however, that the Congress and the executive branch should exercise great caution before deciding to devote more resources and more emphasis to supply reduction programs."

From 1977 to 1987, federal drug interdiction efforts increased by 1,500 percent, he noted.

But "if we measure success by the number of drug users and the amounts of drugs being smuggled into our country, we must unfortunately conclude that our present strategy and policies are not working," he said.

On the opposite side of the Capitol, a government informant testified that drug smugglers using small planes can easily evade federal rules requiring the registration of aircraft and pilots.

The witness testified from behind a screen and was identified only as the former bookkeeper of an international drug ring.

He told the House Public Works Committee that the rules were "very easy to beat. Nothing to it."

Bowsher, meanwhile, told the Senate panel that throwing the military into the drug war "would probably result in more drug seizures and arrests, but it may not significantly reduce supplies."

He said traffickers can increase the volume of drugs shipped to make up for those seized, and they also vary shipment routes to avoid detection.

"As long as the demand stays high, sealing the borders probably isn't realistic," Bowsher said.

"Since our current approach is not working, it is time to consider devoting more emphasis and more resources to activities aimed at reducing demand — prevention, treatment, and research on the causes and extent of drug abuse," Bowsher said.

The United States now spends about $3 billion a year to reduce supply and only $1 billion annually to reduce demand, he said.

Asked if adding U.S. military forces to the overworked civilian law enforcement agencies will help cut drug smuggling, Bowsher replied, "I don't think we have any statistics that show that's going to happen."

Military aid would likely be directed at the same targets as the civilian interdiction, Bowsher said, meaning "trying to stop drugs being smuggled into the country on boats and airplanes."

"Such interdiction activities are very expensive and have produced few results," he said. "For example, the Air Force reported that in fiscal year 1987, it designated 591 AWACS flying hours to interdiction, and only six seizures and 10 arrests were attributed to this effort."

Portland to give needles to drug users

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's first test of distributing hypodermic needles to drug users for curbing AIDS will begin next month in Portland, Ore., and the prosecutor says it's worth a try.

"I'm saddened we have a population that warrants such a program, but I see there are valid public health and public policy reasons for such a program, or at least putting it in place," said Multnomah County district attorney Michael Schrunk.

"To me, the AIDS prevention and the drug treatment counseling for each participant is really the key to it," he said in a telephone interview.

Such counseling may reach people who would not otherwise get it, so it "may well benefit the community," he said. "I'm willing to gamble the counseling will be good."

But Schrunk, who said he believed in a firm drug enforcement policy, declined to say whether the program would break laws. "Those are things we'll have to work through," he said.

Legal opposition has been holding up a similar program in New York City. In Massachusetts, state lawmakers on Wednesday debated a needle distribution program in Boston.

The Oregon project will be conducted by Outside-In, a social service agency, under a $67,000 grant from the American Foundation for AIDS Research, said Kathy Oliver, Outside-In's executive director.

The year-long program, in which 125 drug abusers will get counseling and exchange used needles for new ones, is designed to study whether such programs can reduce the spread of the AIDS virus among drug abusers, said project consultant Don Des Jarlais of Narcotic and Drug Research Inc., a non-profit New York foundation.

A needle used by an infected person can infect the next person who uses it. Besides providing sterile needles, exchange programs provide opportunity for counseling about drugs and AIDS, said Des Jarlais, who is also coordinator of AIDS research for the New York State Division of Substance Abuse Services.

He and other health officials said they knew of no other such program in the nation.

No starting time has been set for New York City's planned program, which must wait at least until a state regulation allowing it takes effect next month, said city health department spokesman Sam Friedman.

In addition, officials must complete "delicate conversations with law enforcement and prosecutorial people in New York City," he said.

The city's special drug prosecutor in February declared that dispensing the needles would be a misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in prison.

In Boston, the Legislature's Health Care Committee conducted a hearing on a bill that would allow the city to set up a pilot needle exchange for six months.

Such programs have begun in Europe, but the idea has sparked controversy in the United States.

"It does carry an implied message that government is condoning the drug use, which we think is an inappropriate message for youth," said Allan Randall of the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth, based in Silver Spring, Md.

But Des Jarlais said he believes the Portland program will send the opposite message because of its drug counseling.

To qualify for the Portland program, a person will have to admit intravenous drug use, show identifiable injection marks and have a needle to exchange for a new one. But no used needle will be required the first time they get a new one.

About 5 percent of the Portland area's estimated 7,000 to 10,000 intravenous drug users are thought to be infected with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, Des Jarlais said.

But that proportion could jump to 50 percent in a few years unless effective action is taken, he said.

Participants in Portland will be interviewed and their blood tested periodically. Results will be compared to members of a second group of drug injectors, recruited from 11 other cities and matched to the participants for such characteristics as race, age, and the period since the person began regular injections.

A third group will be 125 people seen at Outside-In who have histories of using non-injected drugs. They will be compared to a fourth group of similar size, from New York City, of people who do not inject drugs but are high risk for starting injections because of their use of heroin or cocaine.

Both non-injecting groups will receive limited AIDS education and counseling.

House to hear Wright allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright says he can "put all the allegations to rest" once the House ethics committee hears his response to charges he violated conflict-of-interest rules through a book contract and lobbying for oil companies.

But although Wright, D-Texas, says he has formally asked the committee for an opportunity to appear, it's uncertain when that will occur.

The committee today holds its second meeting to review the case against Wright and set the scope of its inquiry. Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who filed the complaint against Wright, has also asked the panel to hire an independent counsel for the probe.

Gingrich, a political foe of the speaker, charged that Wright had a financial stake when he lobbied U.S. and foreign officials on behalf of oil companies, and when he accepted an unusually lucrative royalty contract from a friend and campaign contractor who published his last book.

Common Cause, a non-profit group which pushes for tighter government ethics standards, also has called for an ethics investigation.

"I believe I can put all the allegations to rest," said Wright. "If the committee will give priority into looking at each and every (charge)...it will discover I have violated no rule and certainly violated no commonly accepted ethical standard."

"I would like for it to be done at the earliest possible time," he said. However, the ethics committee had not yet asked him to appear, he said.

Wright, chairman of next month's Democratic National Convention, was asked if the party was concerned that his troubles might hurt chances of regaining the White House in the fall.

"I haven't heard that concern expressed," he said, adding that anyone who was so concerned should come and see him. The speaker and other Democratic leaders have said Wright is a victim of a GOP effort to distract attention from ethical lapses in the Reagan administration.

Privately, Wright's aides said they were frustrated with the slow pace of the ethics committee probe.

The committee held its first meeting on the case a week ago.

Since that meeting, it has been reported that Wright's book, a collection of his stories and sayings, was completed with the help of one of his Capitol Hill staff, who took a taxpayer-financed trip to Texas to do some of the work.

Wright is working on another book with help from one of his assistants, but the aide says this work is being done in his spare time.

The ethics committee, officially called the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, is the only House panel with equal representation of the two parties, with six Democrats and six Republicans.

Poindexter, North to have separate trials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal experts say Iran-Contra prosecutors were handed a "worst case scenario" when a judge ruled that Oliver L. North and three co-defendants must each be tried separately.

"It's like kissing a rattlesnake," said former federal prosecutor E. Lawrence Barcella Jr. of Washington, describing the ordeal of conducting what is essentially the same case over and over again. "It's not fun and usually injurious to your health."

The ruling Wednesday means Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh must conduct four consecutive trials, tipping his hand on prosecution strategy in the initial case.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell — granting defense motions — ordered four trials so the defendants could use each other's immunized congressional testimony to defend against the charges, including a broad conspiracy count.

The immunized testimony would likely be inadmissible in a single trial, thus denying defendants their normal right to cross-examine each other on their prior statements.

The defendants have said the immunized testimony of the other defendants before the congressional Iran-Contra committees would show their innocence. Prosecutors cannot introduce the immunized testimony of the specific defendant on trial as part of their case against that defendant.

North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, and businessmen Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim are charged with conspiring to illegally divert profits from U.S. arms sales to Iran to the Nicaraguan Contras when such assistance was banned.

Gesell said either North, a former National Security staffer, or Poindexter must be tried first. North is charged in 16 counts of the 23-count indictment, while Poindexter is named in seven. The judge gave the prosecutor until Friday to decide the order.

The independent prosecutor declined to say whether he would try North or Poindexter first.

The judge also said he had not made final decisions on whether the congressional immunity, given to all defendants except Secord, posed such a serious problem as to preclude trying the cases at all.

Affinity From Thomasville

A simple, straight-forward style for the contemporary bedroom

Scandinavian settlers in America brought with them an appreciation for subtlety in the design of their furniture as well as function as an art form. Smooth, straight lines reign where heavy ornamentation once ruled. Thomasville celebrates the merging of Scandinavian and American influences in the creation of Affinity, a bedroom and occasional collection.

Affinity presents the deep texture of red oak solids and knotty oak veneers, hand-rubbed to a soft patina with a special finish called "Flax," a rich honey tone. Fingertip pulls are hidden beneath the handsome molding that frames each door and drawer, maintaining the integrity of the straight lines.

Bring Affinity into your home and discover for yourself the Scandinavian appreciation for true simplicity.

Tableau Bedroom by Thomasville

Gracious Elegance For Your Bedroom

Tableau by Thomasville brings the best of the past to today's bedrooms. Many of the Louis XV French Provincial qualities-the graceful lines, elegant carved details, and richly ornate hardware to name a few-are combined with the practicality and versatility you need from your furnishings today.

And the Thomasville tradition of quality is built into every piece. For example, the drawers feature true dovetail construction for extra strength and endurance.

Tableau is crafted from pecan solids and veneers chosen especially for their handsome grain character. The woods are then finished in Thomasville's special 17-step, hand-rubbed finishing process to a rich, clear, brown-tone. The beauty of the finish is reflected in the brass-finished hardware which authentically completes the look of elegance.

SERENADE By Thomasville

"...a glorious combination of beauty and tradition inspired by Greek revival."

Serenade by Thomasville is an inspiring collection of dining and bedroom furnishings. It is lovingly crafted in the Thomasville tradition frome exquisite olive ash burl and finely grained pecan veneers. In multi-steps of hand finishing Serenade is given a rich patina worthy of fine antiques.

Destinctive traditional and Greek revival flavors are the key design inspirations. Notice the reeded pilasters and deep relief of the door overlays on the door and drawer pieces. Shapely crowns grace the top of chinas and mirrors. Serenade's brass finished hardware has a jewel-like quality.

With elegance beytond its price, Serenade will be a beautiful and wise investment for your home.

Essay contest inspires unusual responses

By NANCY CLISE
Advertising Feature Writer

Selecting a gift for a parent can be an agonizing ordeal or the easiest thing in the world. Most of the entrants to our "What My Dad Deserves For Father's Day" found the latter to be true.

Perhaps Permian Basin fathers make their desires known to their families. Or maybe (this is what I prefer to think) that very special relationship between a father and his family makes everything clear.

In any case, immediately below are the winners of the Midland Reporter-Telegram's First Annual Father's Day Essay Contest. Spelling, punctuation and other grammatical irregularities have been preserved to ensure the essence of the author's message is conveyed.

Congratulations and best wishes to these winners and all the Fathers who will receive tokens of gratitude and love this Father's Day. Here's hoping you get what you deserve.

Josh Weber won first place and dinner for his family at Cattleman's Restaurant.

Josh Weber, 13

When thinking of traditional Father's Day gifts, ties and sock immediately come to mind. But what is truly the best Father's Day present? I think that my Father deserves to know that he's appreciated. The simple, meaningful works, "Thanks Dad, Happy Father's Day!" would show my true feelings for him.

Dominick Veltru wins a $50 gift certificate from Midland Park Mall and second place for his essay.

Dominick Veltru, 7

For Father's Day, my dad deserves a Texas size party with all the fixin's. A banner, a cake, gifts, and lots of hugs from all of us. He deserves this great big "Thank You" for all the wonderful things he does for our family all year long.

For her essay on "What My Dad Deserves For Father's Day", Sarah Dzubinski wins a tie from S&Q Clothiers.

Sarah Dzubinski, 6

I want to give Him a suit because I Love him. I think it will Look fancy on him. I Love My daddy because he is silly.

Read through the rest of these essays and you're sure to get an idea on what to give your Father for Father's Day.

Kimberly Holleman, 10

I think my dad deserves a whole year off! He works all the time (seven da/s a week). He is a pumper. He gets up very early in the morning and gets home late at night. His work is so hard. I love my dad and wish his work was easier. The End.

Maggie Manning, 9

My Dad Deserves a hundred and one kisses. My Dad is so nice I don't know why he has to have such a terrible cold. I wish my Dad's cold would go away. I love my dad when he tickles us to death. I love my dad with all my heart.

John Manning, 6

My dad deserves his cold to go away. I love my dad he deserves his cold to go away for good. But my dad helps me read and when I was three he helped me ride my bike.

Carolyn Broome, 12

I think my dad (Larry Broome) deserves a $50 gift certificate at the mall because he is a family man who sacrifices all of his time, energy and money to make a good life for his family.
P.S. For all his sacrifices the only thanks my dad asks for is our love, but I think a gift certificate from the mall would be nice.

Christy Metcalf, 12

My is grand.
My dad is great.
He listens to me,
when I am late.

My dad cares.
My dad is tall.
He gives me comfort
when I fall.

My Father gives us love.
He makes the plans.
He is a saint.
And most of all, he understands,

If I could have one fine wish,
I'd wish for everyone to have a grand dad like mine.
I'll love him until all the days are gone.

Gavin Lyons

My dad is a very special guy. I think he deserves new knees because he has worked very hard as a fireman. He used to crawl into burning houses on nails, broken boards, and broken glass. Because of this his knees are not very good and he is usually in pain. I think he deserves new knees so he can continue his hard working career saving people's lives as a fireman.

Dayna Lyons

My Dad is a very important guy. I think my dad deserves a new tool box because his has grown old from all the work he has done for me. My dad also deserves a disability retirement for all the lifes he's saved brawling on boards, nails, splinters, and metal as a fireman. And because of that his knees do not work.

Jennifer Dzubinski, 7

My Dad deserves a tie, a suit, pajamas, and a pair of shoes. My Dad deserves the tie and suit because he looks good in them. My Dad deserves the pair of shoes because he is a good Dad. And also he is good because he wears pajamas.

Tonya Altman, 10

What my Dad deserves most of all is God's gift of another year free from cancer. My dad is a wonderful father and tries to spend as much time as possible with our family. My dad deserves it all he's great.
I love you Dad.

Jerry Altman, 13

My Daddy deserves more time with his family. He also should nver have his cancer come back. My Dad's the best, he tries and does everything in the world he can with me. My Dad deserves the best of everything the world has to offer. I love you dad, have a happy Father's Day!
Love.

Leslie Forga, 14

My Dad deserves anything and everything he wants, for being one of the most caring and special people I know. My Dad really likes to do things with and for me. I will always look up to my Dad. I will always love my Dad.

Men talk about new challenges of fatherhood in changing times

By JANE CLIFFORD
Copley News Service

Father's Day is set aside on the calendar to honor men of all backgrounds and temperaments, all statuses and circumstances. Four fathers are profiled here — men who don't fit the traditional mold.

STEVE

The alarm goes off in Steve's bedroom at 6:30 every morning.

He hits the floor, heads for the kitchen and makes coffee and breakfast for 6-year-old Matthew.

"It depends on how tired I am," Steve says of the morning menu. "It could be cold cereal or pancakes."

By then, Steve's wife, Leela, is on her way out the door to her nursing job. Four-month-old Nicholas is next up and fed.

"Then I usually sit in the living room. The boys watch 'Sesame Street' and Dad tries to shake the cobwebs out with coffee."

The children are secured in the car by 8 a.m. Once Matthew's dropped off at his first-grade class, Nicholas and Steve either come home or run errands — grocery shopping, the dry cleaners. They're home by noon for lunch and a nap.

"I straighten up the house — vacuum, make beds, do laundry — and usually by that time I've decided what's for dinner and will set it out to defrost."

The routine is broken when Nicholas or Matthew is sick and Steve takes them to their pediatrician.

"The front-office girls at the doctors' office have dubbed me 'Mr. Mom.' "

The reaction to his lifestyle is mixed.

"Some people find it neat that I stay home and take care of the boys," Steve deadpanned.

He's not the stereotypical "Mr. Mom" because he works nights — 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. — with people who have sleeping disorders. He averages 5 hours of sleep at night, but he wouldn't have it any other way.

"I was given an opportunity to go on days, but I said no. It would mean leaving Nicholas with a sitter. I was there when he was born. I got to see his first smile, when he first started cooing. To turn him over to a baby sitter would have meant giving up a lot of things — his first word, his first laugh ..."

Steve, 32, chuckles and admits he didn't always feel this way.

"I was like W.C. Fields. Babies were fine as long as they were somebody else's."

Steve doesn't hide his feelings either.

"I think they should see that it's OK for Daddy to cry, for Daddy to feel the exact same emotions they do. And to know that, at their ages, Daddy was just as precocious, just as obnoxious."

What does fatherhood mean to "Mr. Mom?" — "I think the biggest part of being a father is remembering what it was like when you were a kid. Before I correct (Matthew), I have to remember that I did the same things."

Steve wishes for his children "just a happy life. For as corny as it sounds, the whole nuclear thing scares me for my kids. I don't know if my dad was ever concerned about that."

STEFAN

Father's Day will be an especially poignant time for men like Stefan. He has a 16-year-old daughter whom he sees three, maybe five times a year.

And never on Father's Day.

"It's the weirdest feeling in the world," he says. "I want a Father's Day card and I wonder if I'm going to get one. I want to be remembered, but have I earned the right to be remembered?"

Stefan, a 41-year-old television photographer, dusted off images he'd carefully tucked away in his mind as he recalled the first four years of Jennifer's life. The time he spent with her before her mother won legal custody of her in divorce proceedings.

"I was very involved and I took her everywhere."

He paused, mentally revisiting Albuquerque, where he and his daughter had been a family.

"It was a good time, a very enjoyable time," he continued. "When separation and divorce came, it was a very traumatic experience for Jennifer. She was upset we were torn apart."

Stefan continued to be Jennifer's primary caretaker during the day while her mother finished studies for a teaching certificate.

"It was hard going back, doing all those things during the day but leaving at night."

It was even harder once Jennifer's mother took her to live in Phoenix.

"Half that child is me, half of me is gone out that door," he says, his hazel eyes belying a subdued rage. "There's a human being there the couple created. You share it and suddenly it's taken out of your life. You can't describe that feeling. You watch someone grow, you see yourself grow and suddenly it's taken away."

To Stefan, being a father means giving guidance, love and support. During the past 12 years, he's tried to provide all three.

What does this father wish for his only child?

"That she survives adolescence and finds herself. That she can grow from this experience. That it's not going to leave an emotional scar. That she can trust men."

SONNY

Being a single father who has charge of his children is a welcome opportunity for Sonny.

"I think I like it better," the 49-year-old public relations man says matter-of-factly, "because philosophically, there's not a disagreement about how the children should be brought up."

When he and his wife divorced after 10 years of marriage, he felt the children benefited by being able to live with only one of them the majority of the time.

"When both parents are working, in some ways there's a benefit to kids living with single parents. There's someone to focus on them."

After being on the job for 12 months, Sonny said:

"It takes a tremendous amount of patience and tolerance."

And juggling schedules to fit in meals, homework, discipline, shopping and time for play. He then searches for the energy to meet the schedules.

Sonny says fatherhood demands of him the same skills he has honed for use in business: "Honesty, integrity, patience, tolerance and good listening skills. No answer is not acceptable. You have to explain why."

He has faced some uncomfortable realities.

"I'm not a good cook, so we eat out a lot. I work with them on putting their breakfast and lunch together."

He drops them off at school on his way to work.

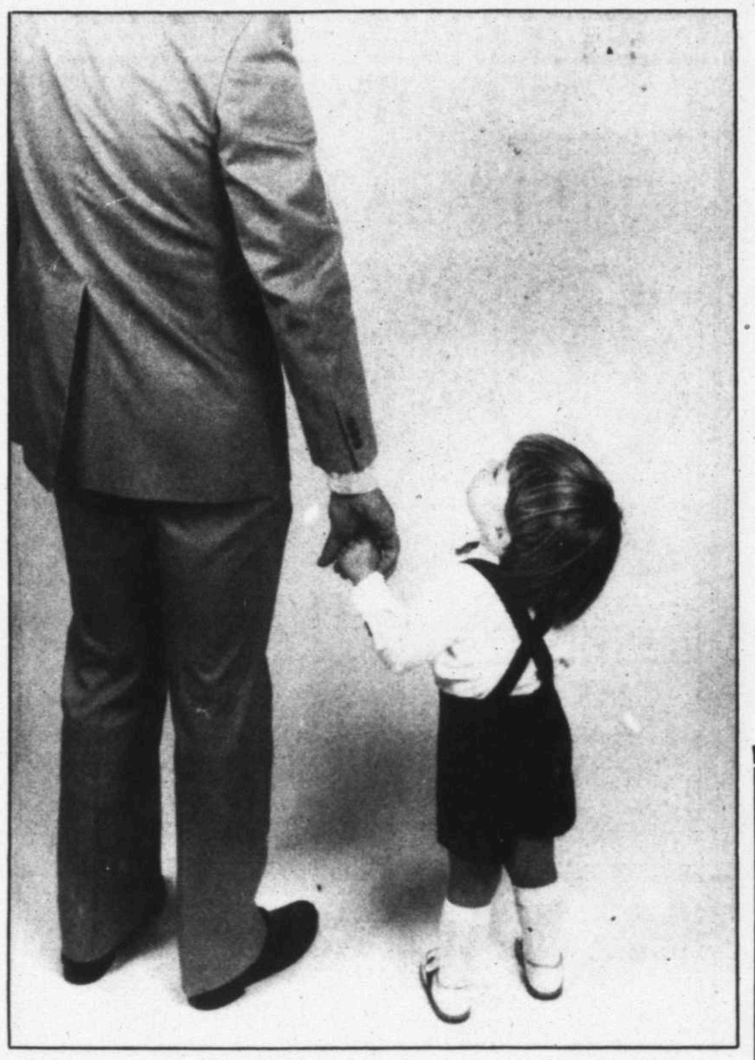

"They go to a (recreation) club after school and I usually pick them up before 6 o'clock. I use mealtimes to talk with them. In the evenings, we'll do some homework, sometimes play games, watch TV."

Weekends — except for the once-a-month visits with their mother — are devoted to family time.

He makes it sound easy, if not effortless.

To Sonny, fatherhood is synonymous with hard work.

"I think you have a responsibility to be a teacher and it means you can only expect nothing in return, and that's very hard to do. You'd like them to love you and care about you, but there are no guarantees."

Bless his heart. The only times Dad gets new clothes and accessories are on his birthday, Christmas — and Father's Day.

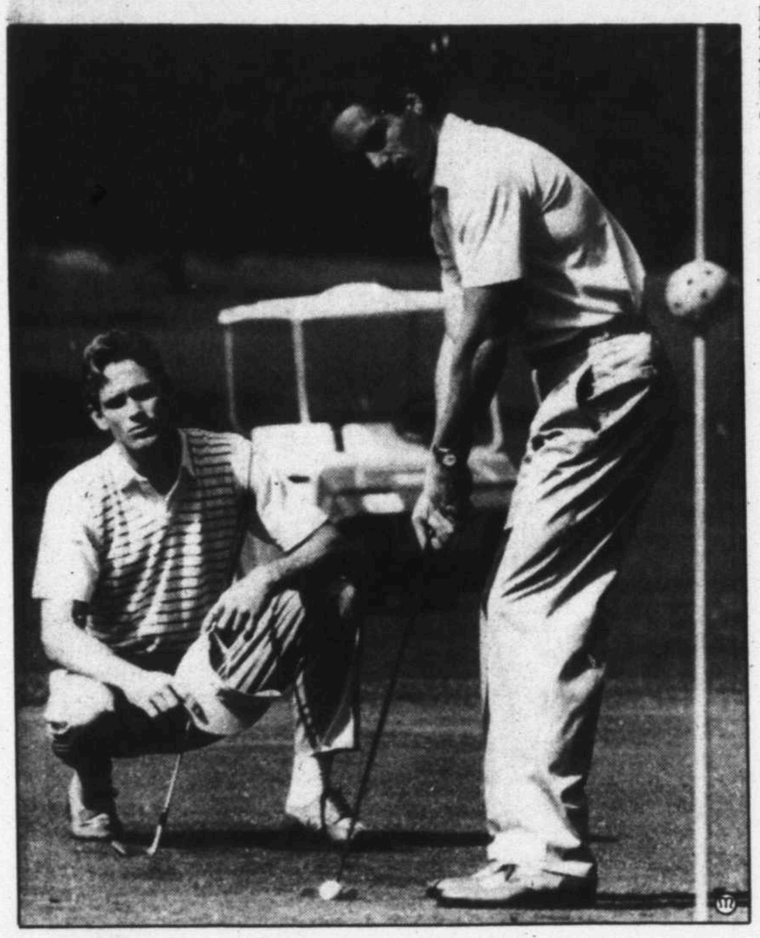

He's depending on you. His underwear is frayed and elastic-less. "Just a few more weeks," he's thinking to himself.

He's waiting patiently.

He's out of cologne and aftershave — and he's hoping you will notice.

There are holes in the heels of his last pair of navy blue socks. He's cheerful about it. They're about to be replaced.

Ditto for that stained golf cap (it looks like he wore it while working on the car), the mildewed raincoat, the bathroom slippers Sasha chewed and the jacket with the torn lining.

Whether your get your dad some casual clothes for his day in the sun, or something more sophisticated for at the office, make sure to get clothes that match his style and taste.

You know that pair of gray slacks in his closet? He's sure a matching shirt or sweater will arrive on Father's Day.

He mentioned to you he's amazed what wristwatches do nowadays. "Maybe..." he mused, "maybe I'll get one to fiddle with."

Watches are a good thing to look at first when you hit the shops, list in hand.

Highly talented electronic watches haunt appliance dealers and department stores. A hot new one from Casio stores phone numbers — just like an address book. After Dad programs it, he can recall the numbers on the watch's liquid crystal display.

It may be that Dad already has a watch with a digital readout, or one that computes his running pace or heart beat so what he really needs is a watch to wear to the office with a suit or tie.

Thin is in for men's fashion watches. The classy look: gold Roman numerals on a black background. Check jewelry stores for something simple, Swiss and indestructible.

Pick a piece of jewelry that reflects his lifestyle: a tie tack symbolizing his hobby (golf, fishing), a monogrammed money clip, a ring with the family crest, a gold sailboat pendant.

If Dad waits for Father's Day to get his annual tie, don't disappoint him. Most sought after are designer ties — those with a not-so-subtle name embroidered in the lining or a pair of initials tucked in the corner.

This year, Dad's tie should be paisley. Second choice: one with red stripes. For fabric, select silk, wool, blends or hand-knit yarns.

If Dad's wardrobe of white and blue dress shirts seems a bit too traditional, he may be counting on you to make him fashionable — gently. Expand his shirt palette to include pink and maize. Or one of the new 'dusties:" clay, rose, aqua, seafoam, pale lavender or mauve.

Dress him with elegance. Buy him white cotton dress shirt with French cuffs. He'll need a pair of cuff links — look for them in jewelry and department stores. A popular style: replicas of ancient coins.

Cotton is the fabric for men's sportswear. Short-sleeved shirts in wovens and knits are great for comfort. Most in-demand colors: white and yellow.

"Dads like brighter colored golf shirts," advises a buyer for a major department store. "Particularly those in electric blue, though the old standbys — yellow, white and gray — are still popular."

For the active Dad, there are warm-up suits and cotton fleece cardigans. Hunter's favorites, such as padded or quilted elbows and shoulders are current, as are rugby shirts and canvas sneakers.

If Dad plays tennis or runs, update his outfits with color. Even if he prefers white, give him shorts and Ts trimmed or collared with color. Best bet: tropical prints and bright solids — including red, white and blue.

If he's an "I hate fashion" father, focus on classic, comfortable styles.

Cuffed, pleated trousers with suspenders have come back into the spotlight, as have bow ties that you really tie, pocket squares, V-neck cable knit sweaters and tasseled leather shoes.

Speaking of leather, now's the time to replace Dad's belt. And if his wallet is held together with electrical tape, take the hint.

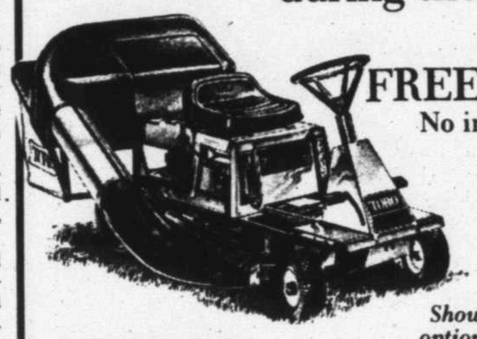

Check out his bathrobe. It is frayed and full of holes? Replace it with one made of thick terry cloth, plush velour or brushed flannel — patterned with paisley, stripes or plaid.

Delight Dad by giving him a custom-made bathrobe. (You can't go wrong. After all, he won't be wearing it in public.)

Save your Dad's back for Father's Day.

Take your choice.

Dad sure to enjoy Father's Day token for the tastebuds

By Dan Benson
Copley News Service

One way to a prospective husband's heart, the old adage goes, is through his stomach. The bread basket is also a good target to shoot for when it's time to let Pops know he's tops.

Whether it's breakfast in bed, a midnight snack in Maui or a little something special purchased by the family, Dad is sure to enjoy a token for the tastebuds more than any garish tie or odd-smelling aftershave.

SAFE AT HOME

Some Dads enjoy the friendly confines of the easy chair more than the glittery nightlife. In that case, it may be wise to plan a creative repast to enjoy at home. If possible, surprise the king of your castle with some of these ideas:

If he's a sports fan, why not give him the treatment he would get at a stadium event. He can kick back and enjoy the game while vendors come and go to the cries of "Ice Cold Soda, Heeya" and "Popcorn, Heeya" just like at the old ballpark. Deliver cola and a hot dog, smothered in chili. Complete the sports fantasy by making the frustrated athlete in him feel like an all-star with a bushel of fan mail from his adoring fans — his family.

Maybe Dad pines for peace and quiet at home. Then give him a Monastery Night. Dress everyone in monk-like robes and for one evening, take a vow of silence, including supper. Serve quiet food, such as spaghetti, and leave the crunchy carrots for another night. Practice asking for the mashed potatoes without saying a word!

Does Poppa like to get down and dirty? Then have a Caveman Meal. That means no forks or spoons or knives, and wear your bathrobes to the Sunday supper. The more primitive the food, the better — lamb chops, boiled whole potatos and fresh berries, passed with grunts only, please.

There's always the tradition of breakfast in bed. Make it a new experience with the kids dressed up in chefs' outfits. Have one offspring read Dad the sports section (or the comics) while he wolfs down his early a.m. feast of jelly doughnuts, orange juice and cinnamon-laced coffee.

Ladies can spice up this traditional Father's Day treatment by presenting Poppa Bear with breakfast in the boudoir, wearing something slightly suggestive that's sure to wake him up better than any cup of coffee.

Vary your breakfast routine by serving brunch on the veranda, the porch or in the backyard.

All kinds of gift ideas for all kinds of fathers

By DEBRA LEE BALDWIN
Copley News Service

This Father's Day, throw out tradition. Don't buy Dad a tie — unless he asks for one.

What else can you give him?

The key is to see him in one of his many roles: sportsman, exec, provider, gourmet, game player. Delight him with a gift for his alter-ego. It doesn't have to be expensive.

Search the newspaper for special Father's Day events — boat, RV, gun and computer shows, exhibits of model trains, swap meets and more. Present Dad the Hobbiest with tickets to the event and an invitation to lunch or dinner.

Maybe there's a play or a movie Dad the Fine Art Buff would enjoy. (Treat him to the popcorn, this time!) Or buy him a record, tape or CD of the classical — or country western — music he craves.

If you're short on cash but long on love, fix Dad the Kid at Heart the kind of breakfast that got him out of bed when he was a boy. (Blueberry pancakes? French toast? Biscuits and gravy?)

Bake him cookies. Make him a fabulous ice cream sundae.

Solve one of his problems. For example, one Dad (a Hinter) mentioned to his family that the fruit on a backyard tree was going to waste. The teen-age daughters experimented and came up with fruit salads and desserts — for Dad's approval.

If he hints that the house is too noisy, give him a promissory note for an hour of silence — whenever he wants it.

DAD THE HANDYMAN

Perform Dad's least favorite chore. Chop firewood. Present him with a box of kindling. Scrub the driveway. Organize the tools in the garage.

Clean out the glove compartment of his car and replace the tattered maps with fresh ones. Give him a battery-operated screwdriver or a cordless, rechargeable drill.

DAD THE PROBLEM SOLVER

Make up a special Father's Day message. Transcribe it into a simple code (AZ, BY, CX). Enclose it in his Father's Day card.

If his alter-ego is Arnold Palmer or Bjorn Borg, buy Dad a set of ice cube trays in the shapes of tennis or golf balls. Give him a gift certificate to a golf or tennis clinic.

Buy him a video that will show him how to perfect his swing or avoid a slice.

DAD THE OUTDOORSMAN

Dad will appreciate a Swiss Army knife. Or a new pair of sunglasses — look for ones with magnifying lenses built in below the regular lenses. He'll thank you every time he cuts bait or ties a fly.

Examine his camping supplies. Does he need a canteen? Should his thermos be replaced? How about batteries for his flashlight?

Better yet, buy him a flashlight with lithium power cells that will wait up to 10 years to be switched on.

If he loves sleeping under the stars, get him a telescope, a new sleeping bag or a lightweight tent.

Prepare a batch of granola for his next expedition.

DAD THE ATHLETE

If he jogs alone, place strips of reflecting tape on the backs and sides of his shoes. Get up early and keep him company (on your bicycle?)

Whatever dear ol' Dad's sport or hobby, bookstores will have readables to please him. Humorous books spoof golfing, gardening, cooking, fishing and more. There's one titled "Sailing: The Fine Art of Getting Wet and Becoming Ill While Slowly Going Nowhere at Great Expense" (Workman).

Is he a Bears fan? Mets? Dodgers? Dolphins? Give him a ceramic mug, cap, jersey or jacket with his team's logo. Buy him a pair of binoculars for the next big game.

DAD THE CAR BUFF

Dad is not only King of the Castle, he's also King of the Car.

Select a book on tape: stories by Mark Twain, H.G. Wells or Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Or one that introduces him to a subject he has wanted to explore — the power of positive thinking, perhaps, or successful public speaking.

Bring him a special bumper sticker or a personalized license plate. Give him a wide-bottomed coffee mug that won't tip or slide.

Check hardware and auto parts dealers for special holders for canned beverages and sunglasses. Another good idea: a wide-angle rearview mirror.

Give him a give subscription to an auto magazine. Wrap up a desktop-sized version of the Mercedes, Porsche or Corvette he has always wanted. Present it to him with a keychain that has the longed-for vehicle's logo.

Visit a hobby store for a model kit you and he can build together: a classic car, World War II bomber or battleship.

DAD THE GOURMET

Dad will enjoy a basket packed with deli items: caviar, crackers, smoked salmon, tiny ears of pickled corn, soft cheese spread, European chocolates.

Present him with a sampler of imported beers. Or a bottle of wine with a trendy new opener.

Give the Dear Old Nut a jar of cashews or pecans. Visit a shop that stocks exotic nut mixes.

DAD THE GARDENER

Dad will appreciate a pair of pigskin gloves, knee pads, a rain gauge, or any one of many items that make pruning, watering and weeding easier.

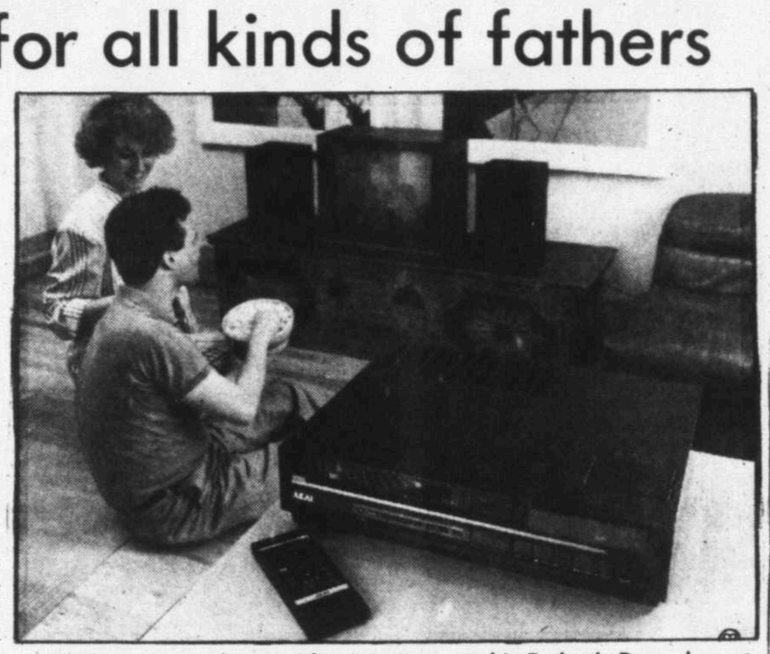

DAD THE GRANDDAD

Indulge Dad with something that will remind him of the good old days.

Hunt for a shop that specializes in hard candy. Buy him a bag of horehound lozenges. Chances are, he hasn't seen this candy he loved as a child for over 50 years.

Many antique shops carry back issues of Life and Look magazines. Bring him an issue with a meaningful date — your birthday, perhaps, or the day he and Mom were married.

Dad the Sentimental Ol' Softy will love a custom-framed gift for his den or office.

The big news in home video is stereo, so this Father's Day why not surprise the whole family with a VCR that can transform your mono TV into a stereo video theater.

we've got the gifts that make dads happy!

Father's Day has changed since holiday's inception

By GLENDA WINDERS
Copley News Service

Louisa Smart didn't realize what she was starting. She would be amazed to see how her idea for a holiday has changed.

Smart was the daughter of a Civil War veteran who raised six children alone after the death of her mother. In 1910, Mother's Day was established, Smart heard a Mother's Day sermon and she decided fathers deserved the same distinction.

She proposed the idea to ministers and civic leaders in her hometown of Spokane, Wash. Smart suggested June 5, her father's birthday, for the holiday.

The ministers said they needed more time to prepare sermons on a new topic. So, the holiday was moved to the 19th and subsequently observed on the third Sunday in June.

Newspapers around the U.S. covered the Spokane celebration, and it got the attention of orator and political leader William Jennings Bryan. Bryan wrote Smart: "Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the relation between parent and child."

At first, the all-male U.S. Congress declined to endorse the holiday because they said it seemed like a self-congratulatory pat on the back.

In 1916, President Woodrow Wilson celebrated the day by pressing a button in his office that unfurled a flag in Spokane.

In 1924, Calvin Coolidge wrote to the nation's governors, suggesting that they observe the holiday in their respective states.

"The widespread observance of this occasion," he wrote, "is calculated to establish more intimate relations between fathers and their children, and also to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations."

In 1957, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith wrote in Congress, "Either we honor both our parents, mother and father, or let us desist from honoring either one. But to single out just one of our two parents and omit the other is the most grievous insult imaginable."

President Richard Nixon signed the holiday into law in 1972.

Louisa Smart said that an ideal Father's Day observance would include "family attendance at church, a little gift for dad and some tender words you've always longed to say to him."

She didn't realize her celebration would grow to include long-distance phone calls, air travel and expensive gifts.

Smart would be surprised to know that Father's Day is the fifth biggest card-sending day of the year, following Christmas, Valentine's Day, Easter and Mother's Day. American Greetings and Hallmark estimate that nearly 100 million Father's Day cards will be delivered this year.

Smart lived until 1978, but in the 10 years since her death, the holiday has changed dramatically in tandem with fathers' new roles.

When her father raised his family single-handedly, it was a remarkable feat. Today's dads, however, expect to take an active part in their children's lives.

The card companies are ready to help celebrate, no matter what the nature of your relationship with your dad might be. Hallmark, alone, offers 835 different designs, and the company says about one-third of those are humorous.

The cards tend to be less tender and sentimental than Mother's Day cards, but they still send messages of gratitude and affection. One new design depicts a father lighting up with electricity as he connects his child's science fair project. The child is clapping his hands, and the message reads, "I couldn't have done it without you, Dad."

Some cards employ popular cartoon or television figures.

"You've done a marvelous job of being a dad," Charlie Brown says on the front of one card. Inside he continues, "Considering the material you've had to work with."

Some are traditional, with scenes of sailboats, fishing expeditions, pipes, covered bridges and antique cars. Others acknowledge Dad's sensitive side with lines of poetry.

Nobody is left out. There are cards for fathers-to-be and fathers celebrating their first year of being a father. Besides cards for fathers, there are also cards for grandfathers, uncles, husbands, brothers and sons.

The greeting card industry mirrors changing family structures. Cards for stepfathers, both humorous and affectionate, are now available, as are cards for "someone who has been like a father to me" and generic cards appropriate for family friends. There are even Father's Day cards for single moms.

The role of today's father is changing, and greeting card messages and modes reflect these trends.

Want to give Dad an extra dose of devotion this year? Make his card yourself — no matter what your age.

Or give him an added gift of your time. Create a photo album or slide show featuring pictures of him with his children. Record your message on an audiocassette so he can hear it again and again, or, better yet, videotape it so he can see you when you deliver your greetings.

Use stencils, paint or your computer to print a banner for his living room or office.

The best gift of all, of course, is having you there. Arrange to have lunch or dinner, take a walk or wash the car together. If there are lots of miles between you and your dad, have a good chat by phone or splurge on a weekend visit. Organize a family reunion so Dad can spend the day with his whole family.

However you decide to celebrate the day, make sure you are armed with a camera. Then you have a head start on next year's Father's Day surprise.

Gift favorites for Father's Day

Fads come and fads go! Capricious is as capricious does. But year after year, some favorite gifts for dad remain favorites, regardless of how high-tech gifts become, how "cute" your choices are.

The all time choice of donors and donees is "something to wear." Whether you pick a sport or dress shirt, a tie or a belt, swim trunks or walking shorts, socks or ties, changes are overwhelming that your choice will be both welcome and applauded.

What dad couldn't use a bit of finery to freshen up his summer wardrobe, especially at the beginning of the warm weather when he changes his clothing to face the changing season!

And with fashion so fluid and exciting and colorful today, you can unshackle dad's taste from his normal conservatism and introduce him to the new world of leisure and casual apparel that's guaranteed to give him a fresh, updated outlook on life and his lifestyle.

You say you want to get something "different." If you don't want to be too different, there are plenty of fine quality colognes, after shave lotions, skin creams, et al.

And few dads wouldn't like to have their wine cellars shored up with a preferred vintage bottle or two or, it it's more to his taste, some scotch whiskey, a bottle of bourbon or imported or domestic vodka, gin or rum.

If he's a weekend sportsman, some golf or tennis gear, or some fishing equipment would be a big hit. Fathers who watch sports instead of play them might want a new pair of binoculars or a day with you, out at the old ball game.

Hobbyists like photography equipment, model building kits, art supplies and the like.

Group aiming to HALT troubles with lawyers

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Georgia Kubiak had a problem with her attorney. So she sued him — twice. Today, both sides are still in litigation over an inheritance struggle that began more than seven years ago.

Mrs. Kubiak isn't alone. A lot of people — "consumers" as she likes to describe them, are given no recourse when they feel their case is bungled or when they are quoted one price and charged another.

Unhappy with the end result of her case, the Midland woman turned to the state bar's grievance committee for help, but said she found none.

About the same time, she had visited her credit union and ran across a magazine where she read an advertisement for HALT, a national volunatary group for legal reform.

This weekend Mrs. Kubiak and others will host a public meeting to introduce West Texans to silent world of lawyer discipline — a discipline that HALT officials describe as non-existent.

"Who's protecting the consumers?" asks Mrs. Kubiak, "If the state bar was doing its job, it wouldn't be necessary to bring suits against attorneys...I harbor resentment and frustration."

But she's not alone. HALT, which is seeking massive reforms from public disclosure to replacing legalese with plain language, boast a national membership of 170,000, with 7,000 in Texas alone.

Mrs. Kubiak will attempt to add to those rolls at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Lexington Hotel, where she and other HALT members will introduce other West Texans to the group's objectives.

Mrs. Kubiak claims that of the 2,000 cases filed daily against attorneys nationally, 95 perent are dismissed; 3 percent are given private reprimands and only 2 percent are ever made public.

James Alsup has no way of verifying those claims, but as president of the Midland Bar Association, he believes the system is in better working condition than Mrs. Kubiak or HALT give it credit for.

"We've started to involve lay people in the process," said Alsup, a partner in the firm of Lynch, Chappell, Allday & Alsup.

He also disagreed with Mrs. Kubiak's dislosure claims. "When disciplinary action is taken, it is publicized in the bar journal...so it's not a secret process."

Alsup said he believes the state grievance system is "responsive" and that attorneys are "being disciplined" from total disbarment to private reprimands, depending on the severity of the complaints lodged.

However, in a series entitled "The People's Bar Exam," HALT graded the performance of attorneys in all 50 states. It gave Texas four D's and a F in the following areas:

— Public access to its proceedings.
— Public oversight of the system.
— Client encouragement to file complaints.
— Whether its process is fair and responsive.
— And, whether it makes is disciplinary records public.

"Consumers are at a loss if they run into a problem with their attorney," said Mrs. Kubiak. "A lot of attorneys are just unresponsive (when it comes to suing another attorney)...they're just left holding the bag."

But, notes Midland Bar President Alsup: "Lawyers are no different than any other profession. We have problems, too. Anything we can do to improve our performance is helpful."

"Who's protecting the consumers? If the state bar was doing its job, it wouldn't be necessary to bring suits against attorneys..."

Architect thinks jail will pass inspection

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Despite a few minor glitches, the architect in charge of Midland County's year-long jail renovation project is certain the structure will be ready for a state commission's white-glove test in less than two weeks.

Architect Walter Pate's review of the jail Wednesday established a June 18 deadline for substantial completion, meaning construction crews have about 10 days to finish the work and prepare for a tentative June 22 inspection by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

In the next 10 days, construction workers will zero in on such finishing touches as minor electrical wiring, touch-up painting and balancing the jail's new mechanical system, which included the installation of smoke and fume detectors, Pate said.

"Every building is one of a kind and there are going to be some imperfections," he said. "There's nothing significant and the contractor's going to take care of it."

The jail commission's inspection will determine whether the structure, located on the fifth-floor of the Midland County Courthouse, is fit to begin taking in prisoners, which have been limited to 85 percent of capacity since 1985.

Midland County fell under a Texas Commission on Jail Standards remedial order in April of that year because it neglected to equip the facility with adequate cell lighting, an exercise area, sunlight throughout the jail and sound-and-sight separation of prisoners.

By imposing the remedial order, the commission limited inmate population to 85 percent of capacity and threatened to close the jail within 60 days unless the county moved to correct those deficiencies.

The commission's cap on prisoners provided for the classification of prisoners in single and multi-occupancy cells according to sex, inmate temperaments, status as misdemeanor or or felony offenders and seriousness of crimes charged against inmates.

In authorizing $1.5 million to renovate the jail, Midland County voters paid for additional bed space, improved light, an exercise area, plumbing and electrical systems and mechanical locks.

Since the renovations began last year, the county has operated the structure without many of its amenities, including the kitchen facility and air conditioning, Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Two brothers drown while playing in lake

LUBBOCK (AP) — Two young brothers who drowned while playing in a small lake had ignored warnings not to swim there, said witnesses to the event.

Jason Matthew Ivey, 7, and Phillip Wayne Ivey, 8, drowned Wednesday in the shallow, murky lake marked with "no swimming" signs.

"I kept telling them not to play in the lake, and they kept playing in the lake," said Larry Lincoln, who had been fishing at the lake, which borders on a residential area.

The children's mother, Clara Ivey, was cleaning a house in the neighborhood and had given her children permission to play outside, said police Sgt. Ralph Bowen.

Lincoln said he looked up to check on the children and they were gone. He spotted something red floating in the water, which turned out to be the body of Jason Ivey.

Attempts by Lincoln and another bystander to resuscitate the boy were unsuccessful.

A Lubbock Fire Department Dive team found Phillip Ivey's body underwater on the edge of a concrete boat ramp.

A memorial fund has been set up at First National Bank in Lubbock. Donations can be mailed to the Jason and Phillip Ivey/Southwest Little League Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 1241, Lubbock, Texas, 79408.

Radar system can detect forces that become tornadoes

By DAVID ELLIOT

CORSICANA (AP) — The device in Lloyd Huffman's pocket erupts with a cacaphony of frenzied beeping and Huffman jumps.

He holds the beeper up to his ear, listens for the message, and relaxes.

"Oh, it's not the weather," he says.

Huffman, a Corsicana resident who owns Huffman Communications, has good cause to be on edge. For several days, potentially savage spring thunderstorms ranging in severity have dotted and danced across the Texas landscape, playing havoc with weathermen and weekend picnickers alike.

As one of three primary operators and the driving force behind the Doppler system — a radar unit that is the most sophisticated of its kind in Texas — many depend on him and his crew to predict severe weather conditions that could result in the formation of a tornado, perhaps Mother Nature's most destructive force.

The radar can "see" rain for a radius of 300 miles, and can monitor for about 125 miles the forces that could develop into tornadoes.

Among those who depend on Navarro County's radar are viewers of Dallas' WFAA television, which pays a monthly fee to help maintain the radar.

During periods of severe activity, the radar can also be seen on Navarro College's Channel 29, or cable channel 3.

Huffman, Alan Wilson and Bill Dosser, the other two primary operators, provide WFAA with a computer-generated visual of the existing weather conditions.

That visual, sent to Dallas via microwave, can outline intensity of rain and wind in 16 different colors.

The radar here is especially important for Dallas because of what's known as a "dead zone."

Refinery fire 'under control'

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Firefighters could do little but watch and wait for a massive fire at a Chevron refinery plant to burn itself out.

The fire, which began Wednesday morning, sent bulging black clouds swelling skyward throughout the day, and continued to burn into the night.

"It's not out but it's definitely under control," said plant spokesman Art Spencer.

Firefighters, virtually powerless against the fury of the fire, held back, kept the fire isolated, and waited. By Wednesday afternoon, crews had located a valve believed to be feeding the fire with unfinished gasoline, and closed it off, Spencer said .

After burning off what was in the pipes, it was hoped the fire would sputter and die, he said.

The fire began in a pump station at the refinery west of Port Arthur about 9:40 a.m. and spread to some small storage tanks nearby.

Later Wednesday, some of the burning fluid began spreading along the ground and into nearby ditches, but was kept isolated in the area where the blast took place, Spencer said.

Five subcontracted workers suffered minor injuries and were taken to Park Place hospital, where four of them were treated and released, hospital officials said.

One firefighter was admitted to Mid-Jefferson Hospital in Nederland for observation, suffering from dehydration and heat exhaustion, a spokeswoman said.

Spencer said most of the blast occurred away from the main manufacturing area, was contained, and was not affecting all operations at the plant.

The refinery pump station moves hydrocarbons — unfinished gasoline — from the manufacturing section to the storage area, Spencer said.

The injured workers, whose identities were not released, all received minor injuries, according to spokeswoman Gayle Yarbrough.

Port Arthur Police Department officers closed off Highway 87 to traffic between Port Arthur and Sabine Pass, said Capt. J.E. Huebel.

Midland cyclist hospitalized after accident

From Staff Reports

A 30-year-old Midland man remained in critical condition early today after his motorcycle rammed a car late Wednesday on Loop 250, Midland police reported.

Charles Lee Cone, 522 W. Carol Lane, was in critical condition with unspecified injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said this morning.

At about 11:15 p.m., Cone was driving a 1979 motorcycle west in the 3300 block of Loop 250 — near the intersection with Midkiff Road — when a car pulled out of the private drive near McDonald's Restaurant, police reports said.

The car, driven by 24-year-old Teresa A. Ridgley, 1212 E. Wadley, then tried to turn off the Loop into the parking lot of the Kent Kwik convenience store when the two vehicles collided, reports said.

Ms. Ridgley was not injured in the accident, but was cited for failure to yield right of way, according to the police report.

Pretrial hearing set on attempted murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A pretrial hearing on motions seeking to suppress statements given by an Odessa man accused of attempted capital murder in connection with a shootout with Ector County sheriff's deputies has been set for June 15 by 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater.

Deputy Carl Rogers was struck in the forehead by a single pellet from a 10-gauge shotgun fired several times at him and deputies Gerald Gray and Herschel Callender and their vehicles.

Terry Phillips Walls, 39, 4045 Cypress, is accused of firing the shots in the April 29 incident.

Walls was struck in the shoulder by a bullet fired by one of the deputies during the late night shootout that began when deputies attempted to investigate a complaint by a neighbor.

Walls' attorney, Jim Jordan, contends two separate statements given by his client should be suppressed as evidence because Walls apparently was too intoxicated to give the first statement and was denied the right to have an attorney present when the second statement was given a few days later.

In the motions filed Tuesday, Jordan contended doctors at Medical Center Hospital refused to remove a bullet from Walls' shoulder because he was too inebriated for anesthesia to be administered.

In his motion, one of several filed, Jordan said if Walls was too intoxicated for medical treatment, then he was also incapable of understanding his rights prior to questioning.

According to Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, Walls was questioned again May 3 and gave a second statement comparable to the one he had given nearly four days earlier. Kloss stated Walls was fully apprised of his rights prior to questioning the second time.

However, Jordan, in seeking to suppress the second statement, contends Walls asked for an attorney to be present but was denied this right until after he made the second statement.

RADAR

This zone, usually about three miles in length, occurs when a storm is directly over a radar unit. The storm is so close that the radar cannot pick it up.

When the Navarro County radar itself falls under a dead zone of intense storm development, conventional radar units in Stephenville and Waco keep a watchful eye on Corsicana. In turn, when heavy thunderstorm activity threatens the Dallas-Fort Worth area, it is this county's radar unit that provides the sensory functions for the millions of residents in the area.

"We have a perfect view of the Metroplex out here," Huffman said. "We're far enough away so that there's no ground clutter. But we're close enough to see what's going on."

Although it is the actual tornadoes and all their unleashed fury that interest weather buffs the most, Huffman and crew are concerned with the forces that unite to create a twister.

Toward this end, he keeps an eye on rainfall rates, wind velocity, and most importantly, the possible formation of factors that could signal the ominous rotation of wind and raindrops that so often leads to a tornado.

"A tornado is the final facet of a bunch of dynamic things happening," Huffman explains. "The most powerful use (for the radar) is in spotting the conditions in the storm that are going to cause a tornado 30 minutes from now."

Once they determine that a tornado is possible, or even likely, calls go out to police departments, civil services and others who try to hunt down and chase the tornado if it touches ground.

Huffman can't say whether the Navarro County radar has saved lives through its warnings. But he does recall a time, back in the 1970s, when they picked up a tornado in Hill County. It turned out that the storm was in the vicinity of the Presbyterian Children's Home, and a sheriff's deputy was dispatched in time to steer the children to safety before the tornado arrived.

Before installation of the radar, Huffman said Navarro County itself was in a sort of radar "no man's land." Although radar units in Longview and Stephenville could monitor rain in the county, they may not have necessarily picked up the intricate formations that foreshadow violent weather.

And even if a tornado were picked up, it might have been half an hour before county officials heard about it from the National Weather Service.

"By the time we got it, it wasn't of any use," he said.

Because the radar operators study the storm patterns that may predicate severe weather for this area, they are more interested in studying the storms to the north and west than to the east.

This is because thunderstorms tend to move west to east, with the storms that strike the Dallas-Fort Worth area forming over Abilene and heading eastward, sometimes in a rapidly advancing line of unstable air.

When this happens, Huffman explains that one of three factors may bring the radar operators out to keep an eye on the situation.

First, if the National Weather Service in Kansas City, using satellite pictures and other data, calls a tornado watch for this area of the state, the unit will be cranked up.

"Those guys in Kansas City are so good that there will be (some severe weather) in the torndao watch area," Huffman said.

A tornado watch indicating conditions are right for twisters to form will involve a wide range of counties, maybe a dozen or so.

A tornado warning issued when a tornado has actually been spotted will usually be issued for one county only.

Huffman said the Kansas City weather office is so accurate that "85 percent of the time" a tornado will form in a watch area, although it might not actually touch ground.

The radar also is activated when police departments or other officials request it, or when the three primary operators suspect bad weather may be in the works.

Although May and June are the most common times for volatile activity, even the darkest of clouds don't always mean severe weather is in the offing. Huffman said that to the naked eye, "sometimes the storms that look the worst aren't, and sometimes the things that don't look that bad, are."

Cloudcroft's Western Roundup this weekend

From Staff Reports

CLOUDCROFT, N.M. — Folks in the tiny mountain village of Cloudcroft take their fun seriously, and visitors to the weekend's Western Roundup there Friday through Sunday are warned to have lots of fun too, or go to jail.

"Jail" is actually a rather shaky cardboard and plywood edifice temporarily erected on the corner by the post office on Burro Avenue in downtown Cloudcroft. "Sheriffs" are a colorful assortment of locals in Western garb who are sworn to uphold the festivities in the true spirit of the West. In fact, locals who don't get into the spirit of things by wearing some sort of Western attire are also subject to "arrest."

"But it won't be hard for anyone to get into the spirit of things and have fun, since Roundup festivities abound with foot-stompin' hoedowns, slippery greased pole contest and even an old-fashioned pie auction, and that's just part of the fun at Cloudcroft's annual Western Roundup Celebration," says a release from Cloudcroft Chamber of Commerce.

At 9,000 feet elevation, Cloudcroft is a popular Southwestern retreat from the surrounding desert heat, even though it's located just 100 miles northeast of El Paso and 16 miles east of Alamogordo.

Roundup festivities officially kick off Friday with a barbecue at 5:30 p.m. in Zenith Park just behind the Chamber of Commerce building on Highway 82. At 6:15 that evening a pie auction will be held on the back porch of the chamber and at 7 p.m. an open air musical entertainment hour will be provided by the Fuller Family from Chippeway Park.

At 10:30 a.m. Saturday, area organizations and businesses will parade through Cloudcroft, with parade awards to be presented at 1 p.m. in front of the Western Bar on Burro Avenue.

Activities Saturday afternoon include a square dance demonstration on Burro Avenue by the Dancin' Bears, and the greased pole contest to be held at noon.

Country western music by a western band will round off Saturday's activities with a street dance from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. on Burro Avenue.

Zenith Park is again the focus for activities Sunday, with horseshoe and washer pitch, all afternoon, and The Tenderfoot Express tractor shuttle will make its rounds throughout the village for foot-sore and weary visitors.

Other events Sunday are a cross cut saw contest and a post ropin' with sack races for the kids of all ages.

For more information on Western Roundup and other Cloudcroft events and attractions, contact the Cloudcroft Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 125, Cloudcroft, N.M. 88317, 1-505-682-2733.

Intoxilyzer ruled unconstitutional

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County judge ruled that the statuses and regulations regarding the state's Intoxilyzer testing are unconstitutional, the second county court judge to do so in the past five weeks.

Court-at-Law Judge Don Hendrix suppressed the results of an Intoxilyzer test of a 23-year-old man on the grounds that the Legislature had improperly delegated to the Department of Public Safety the power to create the regulations — a violation of the constitutional separation of powers.

Attorneys Gary Trichter and Jim Steels, who represent Robert Koening, argued Wednesday that the Legislature cannot delegate to an executive branch agency, the DPS, the power to compel judges to accept Intoxilyzer results which may not be reliable or accurate.

Prosecutor Kay Anderson said the state will go ahead with Koening's trial, even if it does not appeal Hendrix's ruling, using other normal evidence available in driving-while-intoxicated cases — such as the officer's opinion whether a person is drunk and the videotape made of the suspect.

District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. said he does not know whether to appeal the decision.

Koening, a University of Houston student, was arrested early Jan. 8 and measured 0.10 percent on the Intoxilyzer, the point that state law says a person is intoxicated. Koening said he was not drunk.

Last month, Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Billy Reagan, a longtime critic of sobriety-measuring police equipment, banned Intoxilyzer evidence in his court.

Neither ruling is binding on the other courts-at-law, Trichter said.

The validity of alcohol testing machines has been attacked recently with lawyers focusing on the machines' mechanical workings and possible tampering by police operators to elevate findings.

MAA, Texas Arts Council will hold non-profit groups workshop

From Staff Reports

Midland Arts Assembly and the Texas Arts Council will sponsor a workshop for area nonprofit arts councils and arts organizations from 10 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Midland College's Health Sciences Center Lecture Hall. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m.

Beginning at 10 a.m., public relations officers from Midland banks will offer suggestions for "How to Make Public Relations Easy for Nonprofits," outlining steps nonprofit organizations can follow for effective public relations in their communities. Lunch, scheduled from noon-1 p.m., is included in the workshop fee.

"Corporate Funding for the Arts" is the topic for the afternoon session, and will be addressed by representatives from Midland corporations and businesses.

The workshop is open to the public. Fee is $15 for members of the Midland Arts Assembly and the Texas Arts Council; $20 for members of either organization; and $25 for nonmembers. To register, contact the Midland Arts Assembly at 687-1149. Registrations will be accepted at the door.

Double shooting probe continues

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police this morning were continuing to investigate a double shooting that left a man and woman dead early today.

Police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon said officers responded to a "shots fired" call about 12:25 a.m.

Arriving on the scene, he said, patrol officers found Marialma Renteria, 35, lying on a sofa in the living room of the residence with what appeared to be a single gunshot wound to the head. Uriel C. Renteria, 42, was found lying on the floor in the same room with a similar wound, McAhon stated.

An ambulance was called and "the male was determined to be deceased at the scene," according to McAhon. The woman was transported to Medical Center Hospital, treated in the emergency room and admitted to intensive care, where she died a short time later.

Peace Justice Julian Pressly ordered autopsies but made no premliminary determination as to the cause of death of the man and woman, McAhon said.

Auto trends lean toward 'European' look

Fashion trends in the auto industry currently lean toward the "European" look which features the use of raised, black letters on tires rather than the raised, white letters which used to mark American "muscle" cars, according to Armstrong Tire co.

Services for Lydia Grayson Hunter, 93, of Midland will be at 3 p.m. Friday at New Jerusaleum Baptist Church with Rev. John H. Campbell officiating.

Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Jackson's Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Hunter was born Jan. 6, 1896 in Fairfield. She was a housewife and a seamstress.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Eloise Howard of Santa Fe, Texas; Mrs. Baby Ruth Dixon of Phoenix, Ariz.; and Mrs. Juanita Allen of Portland, Ore.; 66 grandchildren and 50 great-grandchildren.

She was preceeded in death by one daughter, Mrs. Lola Faye Pearson, who died March 7 of this year in Midland.

Mrs. Bernie Wiley

Services for Mrs. Bernie Wiley, 56, of Midland are pending with Sizemore Funeral Home.

Mrs. Wiley died Wednesday in a Midland hospital.

William Huckaby

Services for William Huckaby of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday in an Odessa hospital.

Jury convicts woman in death of her husband

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Jurors in Brownsville today convicted South Texas socialite Fredda Susie Mowbray of murder in the 1987 shooting death of her husband.

Louisiana lawyer Gerald Burnett, the defendant's first husband, termed the Sept. 16 death a tragic suicide. But prosecutors convinced jurors that Ms. Mowbray used a .357-magnum revolver to end her rocky marriage to Jay William Mowbray Jr.

Ms. Mowbray's sentencing also is expected today.

Jurors retired for the night Wednesday without reaching a verdict in the trial of Ms. Mowbray, a 40-year-old widow accused of murder in the shooting of Mowbray on Sept.16, 1987, as the prominent Oldsmobile-Cadillac dealer lay sleeping in his bed.

"She didn't pull the trigger, he did," said Gerald L. Burnett, a Louisiana lawyer and Ms. Mowbray's first husband, in the closing argument for his ex-wife.

He pointed out the results of an atomic absorption kit that can determine if someone fired a gun.

"It's negative just like it's supposed to be," Burnett said Wednesday. "She never fired a gun."

If someone shot himself in the head, the state's attorney said, it doesn't make sense that he would be covered to the right shoulder and finger tips by a bed sheet.

Strake says Democrats don't represent Texas anymore

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas GOP convention opened today with party leaders saying Republicans can do more for the average Texan than Democrats.

With adopted Texan and presidential candidate George Bush heading the ticket this fall, the GOP stands to make big gains, said outgoing party chairman George Strake.

"The Democrats don't represent Texas any more," said Strake, who is stepping down after five years as chairman. "I go out with nothing but good feelings about the past, present and future."

Strake said that between 10,000 and 12,000 people would be attending the convention, where Bush was scheduled to deliver the keynote address.

Speaking to the State Republican Executive Committee, Strake said this year's gathering is "the largest convention we've ever held."

"We are on track to become the majority party in the state of Texas by the middle of the 1990s," he said. "If we just keep our noses to the grindstone and don't self-destruct...we can really become the majority party."

During pre-convention activites on Wednesday, two anti-abortion groups pledged to support the vice president's campaign this fall, although they differed on their feelings about how they think Bush should choose a running mate.

Mark Fury, executive director of the Texas Right to Life Committee, said his group would back Bush all the way. "I suppose there has been some confusion among some people who are backers of George Bush about 'are the pro-lifers really behind him,'" Fury said.

"We are here to say, emphatically, yes. We want the convention of delegates to be clear that we are comfortable with George Bush's position," he said.

Asked whether his group was worried about Bush's possible choice for a running mate, Fury said, "We feel they are aware of the pro-life concern on that. We feel comfortable with that situation."

But Bill Price, head of the Texas Coalition for Life and leader of a conservative alliance called Issues '88, said he believes conservatives should keep reminding Bush that any running mate must have a strong anti-abortion stance.

"We think there needs to be some pressure applied to make sure that there is a good pro-life running mate selected. If there isn't some pressure applied on that, we could see somebody it would be hard for us to live with," Price said.

He also said he believes the party platform should reflect the anti-abortion movement's views.

"George Bush does have a very acceptable pro-life position and we support him. We want to make sure there are some issues resolved in the platform," Price said.

Man testifies he shot officer in self defense

DALLAS (AP) — A capital murder defendant claims he shot Dallas police officer James Joe in self-defense.

Bernard Amos, 26, could receive the death penalty if found guilty of killing Joe on Jan. 14 at a northeast Dallas apartment complex where the officer lived and worked off-duty as a security guard.

The testimony Wednesday contradicted that of his cousin, Gary Von Bennett, who said that Amos knew Joe was a police officer.

The defendant said a man approached him at the apartments and asked him if he were breaking into a car. Instead of telling the man the car belonged to him, Amos said he began calling for Bennett.

Amos told prosecutor Norman Kinne he did not know Joe was a police officer. He claimed that Joe shot him without provocation.

Bennett had testified that he and Amos were burglarizing an apartment when Joe caught them.

Bennett said he was standing with Amos in the apartment parking lot when Amos pulled a gun within two feet of Joe and shot him in the chest. Joe was wearing a sweat shirt with "Dallas Police Department" on it, he said.

HEALTH BEAT

by Kanti Patel, M.D.

THE TEN-PERCENT SOLUTION

Warm weather tends to bring our attention back to the matter of our weight. However, for the person who is more than forty percent over his or her ideal body weight, weight loss should not be a seasonal preoccupation. Obesity brings an increased risk of diabetes, gallstones, high blood pressure, heart disease, and mortality. This does not mean, however, that an overweight individual must meet his or her ideal weight in order to realize significant health benefits. A recent study of nearly 1,500 people who were at least sixty percent over their ideal weight showed that a weight loss of only ten percent yielded significant health gains. These benefits took the form of decreased hypertension and lowered dosages of insulin for diabetics. This means a realistically attainable goal of a 10-percent weight loss can help achieve improved health.

A sensible approach to dieting is necessary with a moderate loss of 1 to 2 pounds a week recommended. Before starting a weight loss program, contact your physician for a complete medical evaluation. MEDI-HELP, 805 W. Wadley @ A, offers preventive health care services, including the Medfast medical weight loss program. This is an easy to follow, medically supervised plan, incorporating nutritional counseling. For more information on our family medical services, tel. 687-2704. Office hours: 8-8, 7 days a week.

HINT:
Setting an unrealistic weight-loss goal is a set-up for failure. Allow the doctor to supervise a safe weight-loss program.

Pharmacy Footnotes

A DOSE OF YOUR OWN MEDICINE

Before the 1920's, very few of the available drugs had much affect. However, this fact allowed them to be safe. Today, drugs are both effective and potentially dangerous. This means that prescribing dosages has become a very exact science. There is no longer an "average dose". Today's pharmaceutical publications suggest a "usual dosage range". The doctor takes a patient's weight, age, and general condition into account when prescribing a dosage within this range. In addition, drug manufacturers suggest optimal dosages based on extensive testing. They also determine the median effective dose and median toxic dose. All this points out the folly of a patient meddling with his doctor's prescribed dosage. The effect could be disasterous.

When your doctor gives you a prescription bring it to us for prompt service. We can handle all your needs at ALLEN'S PHARMACY, 2101 Midland Dr., 689-9999. Be sure to check with us before buying gifts for Father's Day or graduations. Greeting cards, candy and many other items are handled. Hours: 8-7 Mon. thru Sat. 6-10 Sundays.

HINT:
The difference in dosage between a beneficial effect and a poisonous one of digitalis is minimal.

SOUND ADVICE

By Orland Purcell, M.S., Audiologist

MEASURABLE LOSS

Standardized hearing tests allow the hearing specialist to measure a hearing loss in terms of decibles. Using an audiometer, the hearing specialist introduces pure tones to each ear of the person being tested. Each tone is amplified, decibel by decibel, until the person indicates that he can hear the sound at that particular frequency. In this way, hearing ability is tested for a whole range of frequencies. If the normal hearing standard for a particular frequency must be raised ten decibels for a tested person to hear it, that person is said to have a 10-decibel hearing loss for that frequency. A 30-decibel loss often indicates that a hearing aid is necessary so that normal conversation may be heard clearly.

To enjoy the sounds of normal conversation and the world around you let AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC. 32 Village Court, provide you with the hearing instrument that will make the difference. The correct device, properly fitted can return an enjoyable lifestyle to you. Come in and hear what we mean. Tel. 682-5033. Open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.

HINT:
A loss of hearing over 50 decibels makes telephone conversation very difficult.

Incidence of breast cancer linked to numerous risk factors

Breast cancer is the most common malignancy experienced by women in the U.S. One of every 10 women will have to deal with this disease at some time in their lives. It is estimated that 135,000 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed and 42,000 victims will die during calendar year 1988.

Humphreys

Many risk factors have been implicated already in the genesis of breast cancer and these are fairly well-known:

- A positive family history with risk increasing according to the number of relatives who have had the disease;
- Late child-bearing (first baby delivered at or greater than 30 years of age) or no child-bearing;
- Early onset of menses and late menopause;
- Radiation exposure to developing breast tissue prior to puberty;
- High fat intake in the diet;
- The general phenomenon of aging, and
- Various interaction and combinations of these risk factors.

Since it is such a large health problem, breast cancer has been studied extensively, as one would expect. Other possible risk factors besides those listed above have been considered — one of these is the intake of alcohol. Recently, the possibility has been mentioned that drinking alcoholic beverages might increase the risk of developing breast cancer.

The May 20, 1988, issue of the Journal of American Medical Association included a study of 1,467 breast cancer patients who were matched with 10,178 control patients for age, sex and other risk factors. The authors of the study were unable to demonstrate that alcohol consumption was a risk factor in the development of breast cancer. Only in a subgroup of lean women was there seen a significant association of alcohol consumption and the presence of breast cancer. However, this subgroup tended to consist of career-oriented women who never married, or who either had a late first pregnancy or no pregnancies at all. The reproductive history was the risk factor rather than the alcohol consumption.

Thirteen other studies have focused on alcohol consumption as a risk factor in breast cancer. Of these, 10 showed only a weak positive association and the other three showed no effect or even a slight negative effect.

Besides the inconsistency in the findings of the aforementioned studies, there are other facts which tend to negate the association of alcohol consumption and development of breast cancer:

- Human studies and animal models have failed to reveal a mechanism by which moderate alcohol consumption might either induce or promote the disease either directly, or indirectly by alteration of the hormone environment;
- If alcohol by some mechanism were capable of inducing or promoting breast cancer, then the incidence of the disease should increase as the consumption of alcohol increases. Such an association can be shown for other cancers such as those in the larynx, esophagus and mouth, but not for breast cancer;
- Countries such as France and Italy which have the highest per capita consumption of alcohol do not have correspondingly high death rates of breast cancer (15 and 16 per 100,000 population for those two countries as opposed to 27 per 100,000 for the U.S.); and
- Follow-up studies of alcoholics do not provide consistent evidence of increased mortality from breast cancer.

Ample opportunity is afforded those who do statistical analyses to fall into the trap of concluding that because certain conditions co-exist, they also are interrelated as to cause and effect. A recent noteworthy example was the erroneous conclusion that mosquitoes were linked to the transmission of the virus that causes AIDS. The dubious association between breast cancer and alcohol consumption also may be an instance where a relationship was inferred incorrectly.

Further investigation may reveal that the link between moderate alcohol intake and breast cancer is real. At present, however, any recommendation to the public should not suggest that stopping social drinking can modify breast cancer risk. There are laudable reasons for minimizing or avoiding alcohol consumption, but hopes of preventing breast cancer does not appear to be one of them at this time.

Nurses named managers for clinical services

From Staff Reports

Gina DeGraaf, RN, BAN, and Leslie Robbins, RN, BSN, have been named Glenwood Hospital's unit managers for clinical services, according to Judi Lanham, human resources director at the hospital.

Ms. DeGraaf brings to Glenwood more than 10 years of nursing experience, most recently in the field of psychiatric nursing.

She will be unit manager of the child and adolescent services.

Ms. Robbins joins Glenwood after almost 14 years experience in nursing.

Prior to her employment with Glenwood, she was the manager of the emergency department at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

Ms. Robbins will be the unit manager of the crisis care and adult services unit at the hospital.

"The education base and the management experience these two individuals possess adds to the commitment to quality we strive toward at Glenwood,' said Russ Thomason, interim administrator.

"Both Gina and Leslie have a strong desire to personally excel in the profession."

Screening for cholesterol gets people to doctor

NEW YORK (AP) — More than half those who were informed in community screening programs that their cholesterol levels were high contacted a doctor within two months, an encouraging sign for such programs, a study says.

That showed "very good followup for the amount of time that had passed," said Reagan Bradford, director of the Oklahoma Lipid Research Clinic in Oklahoma City.

Bradford spoke Tuesday at a symposium on cholesterol sponsored by the American Medical Association.

His results came from about 13,000 people who went through pin-prick blood tests for cholesterol at shopping malls, schools and other public places.

About 70 percent of those who had seen a doctor received confirmation that their levels were high, and had started a diet prescribed by the physician, Bradford said.

HE'S QUIT TALKING TO YOU AND GOTTEN SUSPENDED.

THIS IS NO PHASE.

You better open your eyes because there's a good chance he's doing drugs.

The fact is, 60% of all high school students are abusing drugs and alcohol. It's a disease, not a family failure. The best form of prevention is intervention. STRAIGHT helps you do just that.

Injuries play key role in NBA finals

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson, the director and one of the stars of the Los Angeles Lakers' "Showtime" offense, has the flu. Bill Laimbeer, the heart and soul of the Detroit Pistons' bruising defense, is hobbled by a foot injury.

Their effectiveness — or absence — could have a profound impact on tonight's second game of the NBA Championship Series.

Johnson, who had a fever and missed practice on Wednesday, is expected to play tonight at the Forum in a game it would seem the Lakers must win. No team has ever lost the first two games of an NBA Championship Series at home and come back to win the title.

THE LAKERS, humbled 105-93 by Detroit in Tuesday night's opening game, are attempting to become the first team to win consecutive NBA titles since 1969.

Laimbeer, the Pistons' rough-and-tumble center, also missed practice and was listed as doubtful for the 9 p.m. EDT game.

"I'll be totally amazed if he plays," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said of Laimbeer. "It has serious ramifications. I'm not sure we can win without him, his rebounding, his leadership. If he can't play, it would make their job a lot easier."

Laimbeer, who suffered a strained left arch when Lakers forward James Worthy landed on his foot in the first quarter of Game 1, has played in 695 consecutive games, including 646 regular-season games, the longest current streak in the league.

He said he doesn't intend to miss a game now.

"The team says I'm doubtful, but I say I'm probable," Laimbeer said. "I'll probably be able to play, but I'll be affected."

Lakers coach Pat Riley at first played down the effect Laimbeer's possible absence might have on the Pistons, saying, "It didn't look like it affected them before (in Game 1). They got real production from James Edwards when he was in there at center."

But he added, "They'd lose his (Laimbeer's) leadership, his rebounding, his three-point shooting. He strings your defense out. But I think they could survive as a team ... for at least one game."

Johnson's health could have even more impact than Laimbeer's in Game 2. He was the only Laker to have a decent game in the opener — 28 points, 10 assists, eight rebounds — and if he's slowed, Los Angeles' fast break will suffer immeasurably.

"Magic has the flu and he really looked it," Riley said after Johnson showed up for practice Wednesday morning and instead was sent to the doctor. "He's on medication."

Ironically, Worthy, who went out of the game briefly with a hip pointer after he landed on Laimbeer's foot, apparently will be fine for Game 2.

"It's a little tender, but I'm going to wear a pad over it and I'll be OK," Worthy said. "Landing on his foot may actually have padded my fall a little. I didn't even know he was hurt."

INJURIES OR not, virtually everyone involved agreed that the second game will probably be extremely intense.

"Rambo IV," Daly predicted. "It's a must game for them and we know how it's going to be. Their onslaught at the start of the game is going to be unbelievable."

"To lose like that on our home court was embarrassing for us," Riley said. "Our guys came into practice a little angry, a little upset. I hope they get even more so. We need something to happen."

In the context of the Lakers' up-and-down play during the playoffs, Tuesday night's loss to the underdog Pistons somehow didn't seem particularly surprising.

Piston's Johnson living dream

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — When he was growing up on the mean streets of Brooklyn, Vinnie Johnson had a dream.

Johnson, a key reserve on the Detroit Pistons' Eastern Conference championship team, sometimes returns to those streets and asks about guys he knew at Franklin D. Roosevelt High School, guys who did not escape.

Johnson played collegiate basketball for Baylor University.

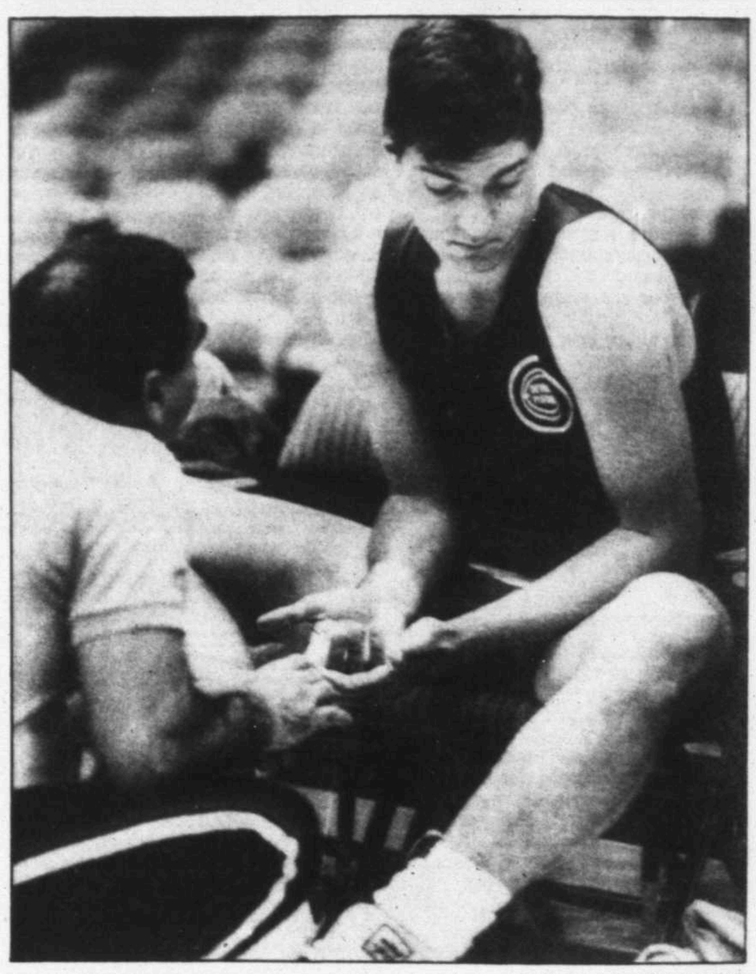

"I'd say, 'Where's so-and-so?'" Johnson said. "They'd say, 'Oh man, he got shot. He's dead,' or 'He's on drugs,' or 'He's in jail.' You heard all kinds of stories. But some guys made it. My dream was to play one year in the NBA. I got that dream. But I know others didn't."

Rather than one year, Johnson has played nine seasons in the NBA. He has that reputation for occasionally getting a hot shooting hand, the epitome of the player who gives a team instant offense off the bench.

Danny Ainge of the Boston Celtics dubbed Johnson the Microwave because he gets hot in a hurry.

But after shooting 44.3 percent from the field during the regular season and 40.7 percent in the Pistons' first 15 playoff games, including nine scoreless minutes in Game 5 against Boston, Johnson's image was becoming somewhat tarnished.

Angels rip Diablos, 8-1

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — Jim Thomas had three hits and three RBI while two Midland pitchers held El Paso to a single run here Wednesday night as the Angels rolled to an easy 8-1 Texas League victory over the Diablos.

The loss dropped the Diablos to two full games behind league leading San Antonio.

Midland took a 6-0 lead through 5⅓ innings before Fred Williams connected off winner Chris Collins with his seventh homer of the year. Williams has hit five of his seven homers off Midland pitching.

But that was all Collins allowed and Shane Young pitched 3⅔ innings of scoreless relief to run his scoreless inning streak to 11 in relief. Young earned his first save of the year.

Thomas had an RBI single in the sixth and a two-run triple in the eighth. Jeff Manto also had a three-hit night, including two doubles and an RBI. Catcher Mike Knapp had one hit in three at-bats to run his hitting streak to eight games. He is hitting at a .423 clip over that span.

Manto is seven-for-14 in the current series and continues to tear Dudley Field apart. Although he didn't hit a homer Wednesday, Manto has seven of his 12 homers in this park.

Aldrete winner in trade

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Giants General Manager Al Rosen says the Jeffrey Leonard trade gives Mike Aldrete, the team's leading hitter in his first big league season last year, an opportunity to play every day.

"You can't continue to keep a hitter of Mike Aldrete's ability out of the lineup regularly," Rosen said after Leonard was traded to Milwaukee for shortstop Ernest Riles on Wednesday. "He has a chance to be a great hitter. Unfortunately, something's got to give."

The "giving" was Leonard, the team's post-season star of 1987 who had been demoted to part-time duty.

"We don't want to give up a player of Jeffrey Leonard's caliber, but I've always said that to get quality players, you have to give up quality players," said Rosen.

Leonard, 32, and a free-agent after this season, will join the Brewers in time for Friday night's game in Chicago.

"It's not too much of a surprise. I'm in the last year of a contract and all that stuff," Leonard said. "It all comes down to the younger players. Mike Aldrete and Candy Maldonado have to play every day.

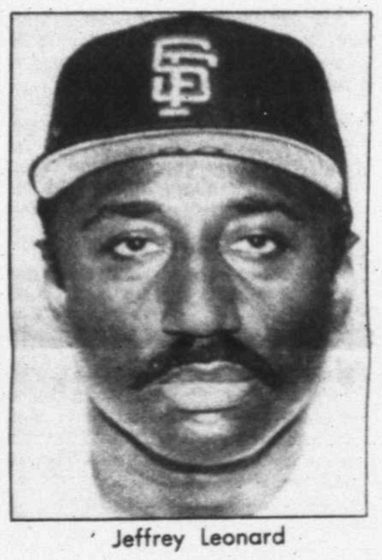

"Hopefully, I'll get to play every day in Milwaukee — wherever that is," he said.

A member of the Giants since 1981, Leonard was the Most Valuable Player of the National League Championship Series last fall. He was hitting .256 in 44 games this season with two homers and 20 RBI, and was benched frequently in recent weeks as the Giants started Aldrete, 27, in left field and Maldonado, 27, in right.

Aldrete, who hit .325 last season, played all three outfield spots and first base, but not regularly.

Ernest Riles

Jeffrey Leonard

He said he had "mixed emotions" about the trade, calling Leonard "a good friend."

Manager Roger Craig said Aldrete "doesn't have to prove anything. He knows the job is his. He should be able to relax and concentrate on hitting the baseball."

Leonard, acquired from Houston in 1981, was the Giants' regular left fielder most of the time since 1982.

Warriors trade for Bullets' 7-foot-7 Bol

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Golden State Warriors Coach Don Nelson, long a proponent of size and defense on his teams, took a giant step on both fronts with the acquisition of 7-foot-7 Manute Bol from the Washington Bullets.

The Warriors, who last season acquired 7-4 Ralph Sampson, now have created the tallest pairing of centers in NBA history. Bol is the tallest man in the league, followed by Sampson.

"He is the most incredible shot-blocker I've ever seen — the best at doing that — the best at blocking shots, and I played with Bill Russell and against Wilt Chamberlain and I've coached against Mark Eaton," Nelson said. "And I'd still say that Manute is by far and away the best shotblocker I've ever seen."

The trade Wednesday saw the Warriors send backup center Dave Feitl and a 1989 second-round draft choice to the Bullets or Bol.

"Now these are real twin towers," Nelson exclaimed, recalling the name given to the duo of Sampson and 7-foot Akeem Olajuwan in Houston before Sampson joined the Warriors last December.

In three seasons with the Bullets after only one year of college ball, Bol averaged 3 points, 4.7 rebounds and 3.79 blocked shots per game. He played 77 games this season, averaging 2.3 points, 3.6 rebounds and 2.7 blocked shots as a reserve.

Bol, a native of Sudan, came into the league as a skinny player with few skills but great leaping ability, excellent timing and surprising grace that belied his appearance.

Nelson said he wasn't sure yet how Bol would fit in with Sampson, who missed the final weeks of the season after undergoing knee surgery March 10.

Bol was a second-round pick by the Bullets in 1985 — the 31st pick overall.

Rally keeps Arizona St. breathing

Sun Devils score two in ninth, win in 10th

College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jim Brock has seen many a startling comeback in his 17 years as baseball coach at Arizona State, but none any sweeter than a ninth-inning rally that helped his Sun Devils stay alive in the College World Series.

Trailing Wichita State 3-1 in its final at-bat Wednesday night, top-ranked Arizona State was one strike away from elimination when Ricky Candelari came through with a single. The Sun Devils went on to score two runs, sending the game into extra innings.

Martin Peralta singled home Kevin Higgins in the top of the 10th for a 4-3 victory that forces a rematch between the two teams in a game Friday that will determine which advances to Saturday's championship game against Fullerton State or defending champion Stanford.

"I certainly can't remember a comeback better than this one ... particularly in a game of this importance when we got down to the last strike twice," said Brock, coaching in his 11th College World Series.

"... We hadn't done anything offensively all night. It was amazing," he said.

Wichita State Coach Gene Stepenson, whose team beat ASU in the Series opener, 7-4, said he was not surprised by the late rally.

"You've got to give credit to their hitters. They're a tough-minded team," Stephenson said.

"You all had them picked No. 1 in the country, so they're entitled to have some ninth-inning rallies," he said.

"I respect them a great deal. They've got great talent ... We should have won the ballgame. But, it's not the end of the world. But don't think Arizona State is going to have an easy time of it Friday night," he said.

A stellar relief job by Brian Dodd allowed the Sun Devils to get back in the game after leadoff hitter Mike Lansing ignited a three-run first for the Shockers. That rally knocked ASU pitcher Linty Ingram out of the game before he was able to get an out.

But Dodd faced the next 17 hitters without allowing a hit and logged 7 1-3 innings, giving up just two hits. He has not allowed an earned run in 11 1-3 innings in the World Series.

"I just came in hoping to keep the team in the game. Luckily, that's what I've been able to do," Dodd said.

Mark Standiford had an RBI and three hits, including his NCAA-leading 94th career double, for the Shockers, 56-15-1.

Candelari hit an 0-2 pitch to right field in the ninth to score John Rumsey, who had doubled to open the inning. Candelari moved to second on Mike Burrola's third single of the game, then scored the tying run on a base hit by Pat Listach.

The comeback denied Wichita State pitcher David Haas his 50th career victory. Haas, who allowed 10 hits and three runs in 8 2-3 innings, is third on the NCAA's all-time win list, two behind Wichita State's Don Heinkel, who pitched from 1979 to 1982.

Gary Farmer, 7-0, pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for ASU, 59-12, to earn the victory. He allowed one hit and struck out three.

Lansing opened WSU's first with a single, stole his 51st base of the year, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Dan Raley's single. Standiford knocked in P.J. Forbes with a single and Raley scored when Eric Wedge grounded into a double play to make it 3-0.

ASU cut the margin to 3-1 in the fifth when John Finn's bloop single to center scored Tim Spehr, who had singled to open the inning and moved to second on Mike Burrola's base hit.

The Shockers loaded the bases with one out in the sixth, but Dodd got Mike McDonald to ground into a double play. Reliever Jim Newlin, 0-1, took the loss for the Shockers.

Fullerton State can secure a spot in Saturday's championship with a victory tonight over Stanford. If Stanford wins, the teams play again Friday.

SIX HAVE A SAY

Bob Quinn was named vice president and general manager and said a group of six people would make the club's baseball decisions — Lou Piniella, Gene Michael, Stan Williams, Clyde King, Eddie Lopat and Quinn. Piniella, who quit as GM on May 29, will remain with the club as a vice president.

Sheridan gives Tigers grand slam, six RBI, victory

Associated Press

In one night, Pat Sheridan hit almost half as many homers and drove in almost half as many runs as he did in the first third of the season.

Sheridan gave Detroit the lead with a two-run homer on the seventh pitch of the game. He added a grand slam in the sixth inning Wednesday night to give him a career-high six runs batted in and lead the Tigers to a 12-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

"The first one I didn't think was high enough to get out and the second one I thought I hit it better, but the wind blew it back and it landed in the first row," Sheridan said.

Sheridan started the game with five home runs and 13 RBI in 89 at-bats. His home-run high was eight in 1984 with Kansas City, when he drove in 53 runs. The grand slam was his second this year and the third of his career.

"It was the best game I've ever had production-wise, no doubt about it," Sheridan said. "It was a case of feeling good at the plate, getting some good pitches to hit and having some men on base."

Sheridan gave the Tigers a 2-0 lead in the first when he homered off Jose Bautista, 2-5. He hit his grand slam off Don Aase.

American League

Angels 5, Rangers 2

Mike Witt won for the fourth time in his last 22 starts and Chili Davis hit a two-run double as Texas lost for the fourth time in five games. Witt is 9-4 lifetime against Texas and 5-2 at Arlington, the site of his 1984 perfect game.

Witt, 3-7, struck out eight, walked three and gave up six hits in eight innings. Bryan Harvey pitched the ninth for his fifth save. Ray Hayward, 4-3, was the loser.

Brewers 8, Mariners 7

Glenn Braggs hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning.

Milwaukee, which earlier trailed 5-2 and 6-5, was behind 7-6 in the ninth. Mike Jackson, 2-2, walked Robin Yount with one out and, after Rob Deer struck out, Braggs hit his 10th home run on a 1-2 pitch.

Royals 5, Athletics 4

Frank White drove in three runs, including a go-ahead two-run single in the sixth inning, as Kansas City completed a three-game home sweep.

Matt Sinatro, whose last major-league hit an RBI was on Oct. 2, 1983, against San Diego for Atlanta, drove in all of Oakland's runs with a pair of two-run doubles. The Athletics have lost four straight for the first time this season.

Bret Saberhagen, 8-5, gave up 11 hits in 7⅓ innings and outdueled Dave Stewart, 9-4. Jeff Montgomery pitched 1⅔ innings for his first major-league save.

Twins 5, White Sox 2

Pinch-hitter Randy Bush broke a tie with a two-run, ninth-inning double, his fifth pinch hit in eight at-bats.

Indians 4, Blue Jays 2

Cory Snyder homered and Domingo Ramos hit a two-run single as the Indians swept the three-game series. They have won five of their last six home games.

Rich Yett, 5-3, gave up two runs and three hits in 6⅔ innings, walking six and striking out two. Doug Jones got the last two outs for his 14th save.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Roger Clemens struck out 10 and improved his road record to 7-0. Clemens, 9-3, allowed eight hits in 7⅓ innings and walked one. He has struck out 10 or more in half of his 14 starts and leads the majors with 139 strikeouts. Clemens has won 10 straight road games since Sept. 20.

Lee Smith pitched final 1⅓ innings for his eighth save.

Walk's hit makes Cubs' walk wrong

Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs made a mistake by giving a walk to face a Walk.

Cubs manager Don Zimmer ordered Pittsburgh shortstop Rafael Belliard, a .227 hitter, intentionally walked to load the bases in the sixth inning. Up stepped pitcher Bob Walk and his .045 batting average.

"I didn't want that little shortstop up there with runners on second and third," Zimmer said. "I thought he would get the pitcher out. So the pitcher winds up hitting a double with the bases loaded."

Walk, naturally, was most interested in talking about his offensive prowess Wednesday night as the Pirates beat the Cubs 5-2.

"I've never been a good hitter," said Walk, whose career average is .151. "I don't try to hit the ball anywhere in particular. I just try to battle you and put the ball in play."

NL

The 31-year-old right-hander knows he will never be paid for his hitting. But he is earning his way with some solid pitching, going 14-6 over the last two seasons since Manager Jim Leyland made him a starter. His 2.84 earned run average is the lowest among Pittsburgh's five starters.

"He's as good a competitor as there is in the league, and I'll admit even I have underestimated his stuff," Leyland said. "I'm not trying to get a controversy going with our pitchers, but he's got as good a stuff as any of them."

Dodgers 11, Astros 1

Fernando Valenzuela broke a personal five-game slide with a six-hitter for his first win at home after four losses. Mike Marshall had a homer, two doubles and a single in a 14-hit attack at Los Angeles.

"My arm feels fine," said Valenzuela, whose health has been questioned during his slump. "I felt the same as the last five games. The difference is that we won."

John Shelby drove in three runs and extended his hitting streak to 23 games. Marshall and Kirk Gibson homered on consecutive pitches against Houston ace Mike Scott in the third inning.

"I think we caught him on an off-night," Marshall said of Scott. "We laid off some pitches tonight, and Kirk and I just jumped on a couple of them. He was wild in the beginning, and I think he wanted to throw some strikes, and we got some good pitches to hit."

Braves 5, Giants 4

At San Francisco, Albert Hall's two-out run-scoring single in the ninth inning won it for the Braves. With one out, Ron Gant singled off Craig Lefferts, 1-3, and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by winning pitcher Jose Alvarez. Hall singled through the legs of Lefferts and into center field to score Gant.

Alvarez, 2-1, allowed one hit in two innings. Bruce Sutter pitched the ninth for his ninth save. The 35-year-old Sutter, who missed the last two seasons because of arm trouble, has six saves in his last seven appearances. In that stretch, he has allowed no runs and only five hits in 9⅓ innings.

Reds 7, Padres 1

Paul O'Neill had five hits and drove in four runs for the visiting Reds. It was the first five-hit and four-RBI game of O'Neill's career, and the first five-hit game by a Reds player this year. In his last five games, O'Neill is hitting .550 with 11 hits and nine runs batted in. H's batting .276 for the season.

Jose Rijo, 7-1, made his first National League start after 29 relief appearances and held the Padres to just two hits, walked two and struck out eight in six innings. Rijo was moved into the starting rotation when the Reds traded left-hander Dennis Rasmussen to the Padres for reliever Candy Sierra earlier in the day.

Cardinals 5, Mets 2

At St. Louis, the Cardinals took two of three games from the National League East leader. The Cardinals' 10th win in their last 14 games left them 6½ games behind the Mets and in third place.

A three-run seventh against New York relief ace Roger McDowell was decisive. Jose Oquendo singled, Tony Pena also singled and Luis Alicea walked to load the bases. Oquendo scored, but Pena was trapped retreating to third on Curt Ford's single to right. Both Alicea and Ford, who had moved up on the Pena rundown, scored on Ozzie Smith's infield single to shortstop on a slow roller.

Expos 5, Phillies 4

At Montreal, Herm Winningham tripled home Wallace Johnson with two outs in the 10th. Johnson led off with a pinch-hit single against Steve Bedrosian, 0-2, and scored when Winningham lined his hit into the right field corner.

Official calls for ANWR drilling

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Interior Department official told a House subcommittee today that the best way to preserve the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge is to authorize exploration and development of its potentially rich oil deposits.

"The greatest risk to (the refuge) is to prevent exploration and development in a sound and orderly way," said J. Steven Griles, assistant interior secretary for land and mineral management.

Griles and other advocates of opening America's biggest wildlife refuge to oil rigs said that the refuge could be hurt if a nation faced another oil crisis that forced Congress into a crash program to find new sources of domestic petroleum.

He appeared before the House Interior Water and Power Resources subcommittee, which is taking up the administration's controversial refuge-drilling proposal as time is running out in the 100th Congress.

On Wednesday, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel announced that he was shelving one of the more controversial aspects of the push to open the refuge.

Put on indefinite hold was the proposal to trade away taxpayer-owned mineral rights on 166,000 acres of the refuge on Alaska's north slope.

The announcement was made by Interior Secretary Donald Hodel on the eve of hearings by the House Interior water and power resources subcommittee into the larger question of allowing drilling on the refuge's 1.5 million-acre coastal plain.

The Interior Committee is one of the final congressional battlegrounds for the outgoing administration in its 18-month-old struggle against the calendar and environment-conservation lobby over the future of the refuge.

Hodel said the plan to trade the mineral rights for 891,000 acres elsewhere in Alaska was being put on hold at least until after Congress decides whether to open the refuge to petroleum development.

In a prepared statement, Hodel said he was indefinitely delaying publication of a legislative environmental impact statement (LEIS) on the trade, the necessary study document that would be used to justify the deal.

Hodel and other Interior officials have pushed the trade as a way of acquiring valuable fish and wildlife property owned by Aleut, Eskimo and other native corporations, which are anxious to get in on the possible oil rush.

"From the start, it has been our position that Congress first must approve legislation to allow oil and gas leasing in the ANWR coastal plain and second must adopt legislation to ratify the agreements before the proposed exchanges could take effect," Hodel said.

"Therefore, I believe it would be premature to publish the draft LEIS on the proposed exchanges until Congress clarifies its intent on ANWR," said Hodel, who has gotten drilling legislation approved by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources and the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries committees.

Rejection of proposed Audi settlement urged

CHICAGO (AP) — A pair of consumer groups say they will try to persuade a judge to reject a proposed settlement of a class-action lawsuit charging that Audi 5000 sedans accelerate on their own, causing drivers to lose control.

An Audi spokesman called the proposed settlement a vindication for the car line, whose image was tarnished by the allegations.

Under the proposed settlement announced Wednesday, Audi of America Inc. would offer rebates of $300 to $2,000 on new Audis to 390,000 current or former owners of Audi 5000 sedans with automatic transmissions. To qualify, they must buy a new Audi between Sept. 1, 1988, and June 30, 1991.

The deal applies to Audi 5000 sedans built between 1978 and 1986.

As part of the settlement, which needs approval of a Cook County circuit judge, Audi acknowledged no liability and attorneys who sued the company admitted they couldn't prove that any defect in Audi's cars caused sudden, unintended acceleration.

Mexico gives U.S. clients break on crude oil price

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, the world's sixth largest oil producer, last month trimmed the average price of its light Isthmus crude to U.S. clients, the government oil monopoly said Wednesday night.

Pemex said in a statement that it charged U.S. customers an average of $15.78 for a 42-gallon barrel in May, down from the $16 of April.

The average price of heavy Maya oil rose from $12.77 a barrel in April to $13.07 in May, the statement said.

"The Isthmus- and Maya-quality crudes that Mexico exported during the month of May to the American continent had a light variation in their quotations, with respect to April, due to the linkage of the prices of Mexican oil with the prevailing ones in the international market," Pemex said.

Prices for Japanese buyers were held steady in May at $15.30 a barrel for the light oil and $12.60 a barrel for the heavy brand.

European customers paid less last month. Pemex said those clients were charged on average $14.99 a barrel for Isthmus crude during the first 15 days of May and $12.15 for the Maya quality. In April, the average cost for Europe was $15.43 a barrel for Isthmus and $12.51 for Maya.

Pemex said Mexico exported an average of 1.357 million barrels a day in May, with U.S. buyers taking 51 percent of the total.

Spain bought 21 percent of the total, and Japan was the third largest buyer, with a 15 percent share.

Mexico is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, a 13-member cartel, but it monitors its decisions closely and often follows its guidelines on pricing and production.

Prices rise as stocks record sixth busiest session

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices jumped ahead in heavy trading Wednesday, reviving the market's recent rally with a push from declining commodity prices and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 48.36 points to 2,102.95, winding up just short of its April 12 close of 2,110.08, which marked a high since the market crash in October.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board reached 310.03 million shares, up from 168.71 million Tuesday and the sixth largest total ever at the exchange. The five busiest days all occurred last October.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 342.75 million shares.

Wednesday's activity was inflated by trading strategies involving the impending dividend of Pacific Gas & Electric, which rose ¼ to 16 on volume of 97.88 million shares.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose about $10 for each $1,000 in face value.

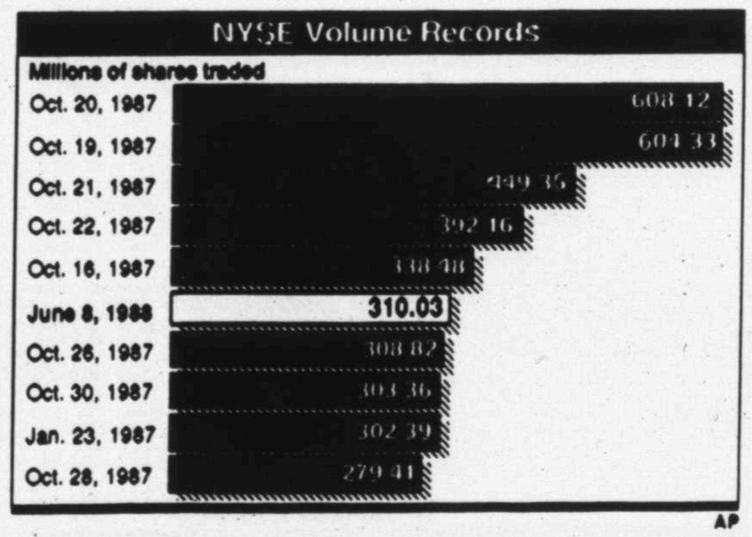

Also, commodity prices, which had been moving up steadily of late, turned downward, bringing at least a respite from inflation fears.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 2⅞ at 116⅝; Ford Motor, up 1 at 51¾; Eastman Kodak, up 1¼ at 44⅞; Exxon, up 1½ at 45¾, and General Electric, up 1⅜ at 43⅝.

In a demonstration of the apparent new-found enthusiasm for stocks, both oil and airline issues showed strong gains. The two groups often move in opposite directions under the influence of ups and downs in oil prices.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $52.38 billion, or 1.98 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 3.19 to 152.87.

AP

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 7.37 to 313.91, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 6.35 at 271.52.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 4.09 to 383.41. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 306.23, up 3.62.

How to keep gas down on the farm?

Howland

While the natural gas industry is still scrambling to cope with federal pronouncements bringing about deregulation, in one corner of the world, re-regulation of natural gas prices is re-rearing its ugly head.

A group of Oklahoma Panhandle farmers and other residents are asking Sooner lawmakers to pass a bill that would put controls on rising natural gas prices.

The Texas County Irrigation & Water Resources Association said farmers in the Panhandle who buy wellhead natural gas have seen their costs jump more than 200 percent in recent months because of partial federal decontrol of prices.

William Pitts, president of the Oklahoma/Kansas division of the Midcontinent Oil & Gas Association calls the move an attempt to get a depressed gas industry to subsidize irrigated farming in the state.

"Farmers are not paying more than any other purchaser and in fact, without the wells their costs would be substantially higher," Pitts said.

Irrigation farmers in other parts of the state who use electric power pay three to four times as much in energy costs, Pitts said.

Bonita Hoeme of Guymon, a member of the Panhandle group, said farmers are using only about 3 percent of the natural gas being produced on the sites leased by producers.

She also said a break on the price of the gas is only fitting because farmers have given producers free use of the land.

That pair of statements puzzled me. If the sites are, in fact, being leased that implies that money changes hands from lessee to lessor.

Doesn't sound like free use of the land to me.

Tulsa attorney Tom Dalton, who represents the farmers, explained the apparent discrepancies by noting that the wells, many of which are 40 or more years old, don't provide what the farmers feel is adequate compensation for the inconvenience and surface damage caused by wellhead equipment and workovers.

Gas from the old wells was abandoned from interstate commerce by the pipelines many years ago because they didn't want to bother with setting up the facilities to sell the small amounts of gas sold to the farmers.

But despite the fact that the gas was not interstate trade, the pricing mechanism used in the farmer's contracts tied the price to the interstate rate. Thus, when "old" gas prices were deregulated by FERC Order 451 last year, the irrigators' prices were able to fly up.

"FERC never considered, and probably never even knew these contracts existed," Dalton said Wednesday. That's why the group has turned to the state to remedy the situation.

A pair of Western Oklahoma legislators told the Associated Press this week that the pending bill would allow gradual increases in wellhead prices, which would allow farmers to adjust to higher prices.

Being born and raised on a farm, I can certainly empathize with the myriad problems farmers face daily and with the arguments against rapid price hikes.

But if there's one other group in the country that can least afford to offer subsidies to others, it is gas producers. They surely know what it's like to have the rules changed one or more times in the middle of the game with little warning.

Dalton emphasized the importance of low-cost readily available wellhead gas to the entire development of irrigation farming in the Oklahoma Panhandle and the region's entire economy.

"Rightly or wrongly, these farmers developed an historic economic reliance on low-cost gas and congressional testimony has been made that more than 200 farmers in the Texas County area can't make it with immediate new $1.50-1.70 prices," he said.

Those kind of attrition figures sound familiar to the gas industry too.

Gas rally highlights languid day

From Staff and Wire Reports

Futures contracts for wholesale gasoline staged a strong but brief rally Wednesday, as crude and heating oil prices continued to languish ahead of the upcoming OPEC meeting this weekend.

Crude contracts responded by oipening up 6 cents in early trading this morning at $17.39 for July contracts on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline settled up 0.14 cent at 50.34 cents a gallon, but off from midday peaks.

The near-term contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 4 cents per barrel to finish at $17.33.

Among July contracts for refined products, wholesale heating oil closed at 45.93 cents a gallon, off 0.30 cent.

Analysts said reports of a fire at a Chevron Corp. refinery, coupled with an American Petroleum Institute report that showed lower-than-expected gasoline production, helped spark a strong rally in the July and August contracts for unleaded gas.

"But it died in the afternoon as apathy in crude and weakness in heating oil prevented gas from rallying too much," said Richard Redoglia, a vice president at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures.

Dollar boosted by bankers meeting

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose in moderate European trading early today. Gold bullion fell.

The dollar benefited from statements Wednesday by central bankers meeting in Chicago indicating support for stabilizing the currency.

—1.7219 West German marks, up from 1.7183

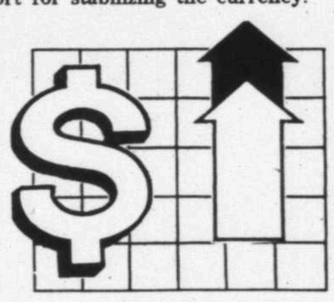

—1.4370 Swiss francs, up from 1.4350

—5.8105 French francs, up from 5.7923

—1.9336 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9250

—1,279.20 Italian lire, up from 1,273.50

—1.2225 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2220

The dollar rose against the British pound, which slipped to $1.8120 from Wednesday's $1.8175.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 125.43 Japanese yen, marginally up from 125.32 yen on Wednesday. In London trading later today, the dollar fetched 125.30 yen.

London's main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $455 a troy ounce, down from $458 late Wednesday.

In Zurich, gold traded at a bid of $454.90, down from $458.50.

Earlier, the metal closed in Hong Kong at a bid of $456.59, down from $458.98.

Silver bullion traded in London at a bid of $7 a troy ounce, down from $7.15.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Greenspan: Weak dollar won't trim deficit

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan warned that a further decline of the dollar in foreign exchange would not help improve the nation's trade deficit.

Greenspan told the International Monetary Conference on Wednesday that the deterioration of the dollar "will augment the dollar-denominated U.S. trade deficit rather than implement further progress."

Because U.S. manufacturers already are running at capacity or near-capacity levels, further declines could not do anything to help them sell more goods overseas or anywhere else, he said.

SEC defends foreign trading investigations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Securities and Exchange Commission defended his agency against charges by a House investigator that it has failed to aggressively pursue insider trading by foreigners.

Citing the SEC's work in negotiating cooperation pacts with Canada, Japan and other countries, Chairman David S. Ruder said Wednesday: "The commission has made substantial progress in recent years, and expects to conclude additional agreements in the near future."

Brady likely candidate for Treasury job

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York investment banker Nicholas Brady is a leading candidate to succeed Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who is expected to resign this summer, administration sources said.

The sources, who spoke Wednesday on condition of anonymity, said Brady was at the top of a short list of candidates for the Treasury job if Baker resigns as expected to oversee Vice President George Bush's presidential campaign.

Americans built thrift balances in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans continued to entrust their money to savings institutions in April, despite increasing publicity about S&L bailouts and closings, the government.

In a report Wednesday, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said net deposits at the 3,113 federally insured thrift institutions increased by $1.2 billion to $962.4 billion in April, the seventh consecutive monthly increase.

BUSINESS TRENDS

New fabric 'to-dye-for'

EL PASO — An El Paso company hopes a new apparel line that changes color with the right mix of bleach and water will cause a hue and cry in the fashion industry.

Colormagic clothes can change from teal blue to peach, or from royal blue to hot pink, or from violet to orange, among other combinations.

Greater Texas Finishing Corp., which dyes and markets the clothes, hopes the new line will reach the "to-die-for" status of the acid washing fad. The company does acid-washing for denim clothing manufacturers.

"I think (the possibilities of Colormagic) are unlimited — as far as it can go," Tom Ahmann, executive vice president of Greater Texas, said Wednesday. "It's so different from what's been offered before."

The line of clothes — which is now offered only in girls' and junior sizes — consists of jean jackets, hats, socks, jeans, T-shirts, belts, walking shorts and camp shirts. They're not cheap: T-shirts cost $19, a pair of socks is $10 and jeans are $48.

Ahmann said the line will be expanded later to adult sizes and might be offered in more stores once manufacturing capacity increases. The clothes are sold in five stores nationwide: Bloomingdale's in New York, Marshall-Field's in Chicago, Macy's in San Francisco, Highbee's in Cleveland and The Popular in El Paso.

The garments' colors can be changed in two ways. First, the color of the entire garment can be altered by tossing it in a cold-water wash cycle with a specific amount of liquid bleach. Colors usually can be changed twice; for example, from hot pink to apricot to cantaloupe.

OIL & GAS REPORT

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Hunt reports 499 barrel producer

From Staff Reports

An Upton County reentry project has yielded prolific Wolfcamp production for HUNT OIL CO., Dallas.

Hunt reentered the No. 5 V.T. Amacker "76", a Lower Wolfcamp producer in the Amacker-Tippett field, completing it to produce from the Wolfcamp as well. On potential test, the well flowed 498.7 barrels of 39.4 gravity crude and 16 barrels of water on a 25/64 inch choke from perforations 9,077 to 9,136 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons.

Location is 1,975 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 76, Block Y, TCRR survey, 14 miles northwest of Rankin.

The well was completed in 1986 as the Lower Wolfcamp opener, flowing 431 barrels of 44.8 gravity crude on a 14/64 inch choke from perforations 9,369 to 9,474 ft.

★Dual producer

A recompletion project in Upton County has yielded a 499 barrel Wolfcamp producer for Hunt Oil Co.

Howard nets modest Fusselman discovery

ANADARKO PETROLEUM CORP. has recorded a Fusselman discovery in Howard County, north of the Bond field.

The No. 1 Shroyer was finaled to pump 36 barrels of 44.2 gravity crude and 151 barrels of water from perforations 10,276 to 10,300 ft. The interval was acidized with 700 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Permitted as a 10,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,400 ft. and plugged back to 10,335 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,398 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,680 ft., include the Fusselman at 10,262 ft., Mississippian at 9,746, Strawn at 9,392, Canyon at 8,868, Spraberry at 6,357, and the Yates at 1,921 ft. Pay was topped at 10,276 ft.

Location is 1,234 ft. from north and 2,561 ft. from east lines of Section 23, Block 33, T-2-N, T&P survey.

Crockett well tested for 10.05 Mmcfd

STATEX PETROLEUM, INC., Irving, added a new Strawn gas producer to the Whitehead field of Crockett County with completion of the No. 3 T.E. Glasscock.

The well was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 10.05 Mmcfd from perforations 8,676 to 8,824 ft., which had been acidized with 4,500 gallons of acid and fractured with 63,000 gallons of gel.

Drilled to 9,250 ft., the well was plugged back to 9,161 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,202 ft.

The well topped the Lower Canyon at 8,675 ft., Fusselman at 9,076, and Ellenburger at 9,160 ft. on ground elevation of 2,418 ft.

Location is 2,587 ft. from north and 1,360 ft. from west lines of Section 14, Block H, GC&SF survey, Abst. 4788, 15 miles southeast of Ozona.

Dallas firm reports 6.8 Mmcf producer

A Dallas operator has added Strawn gas production to the University 31 field of Crockett County.

J. CLEO THOMPSON finaled the No. 1 Couch for a calculated absolute open flow of 6.8 Mmcfd from perforations 8,727 to 8,883 ft. The interval was acidized with 12,500 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 9,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 9,880 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 2,488 ft., the well topped the Canyon at 6,922 ft., Strawn at 8,724, Detrital at 8,814, and the Simpson at 9,184 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and west lines of Section 1004, Mrs. J.S. de Gonzales survey, 10 miles west-southwest of Ozona.

BTA finals Devonian producer in Andrews

Activity by BTA OIL PRODUCERS, Midland, has resulted in new Devonian production being added to the University Block 13 field of Andrews County.

On potential test, the No. 1 Fuhrman pumped 24 barrels of 43.2 gravity crude, 25 Mcfd and no water. Production is from perforations 9,099 to 9,126 ft., which had been acidized with 12,250 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,042:1.

Permitted as an 11,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,453 ft. and plugged back to 9,210 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,300 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,264 ft., include the Yates at 2,954 ft., Glorieta at 5,657, Lower Clearfork at 6,799, Wolfcamp at 8,228,Devonian at 9,093, and Ellenburger at 11,378 ft. Pay was topped at 9,099 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 12, Block A-47, PSL survey, eight miles north of Frankel City.

Macmillan, Bass have court date

Bass

NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover target Macmillan Inc. and Texas billionaire Robert M. Bass will face off today in court, where a judge will decide whether the publishing giant can proceed with a controversial restructuring plan.

Macmillan rejected Bass's latest $1.9 billion buyout offer on Wednesday, saying its restructuring plan is more beneficial to shareholders.

At a hearing in Delaware Chancery Court set for this afternoon, Bass attorneys will seek to halt a dividend payout, which marks the first phase of the restructuring, on grounds that Macmillan directors have breached their fiduciary duties by failing to get the best price for shareholders.

Macmillan attorney Dennis Block defended the plan as "perfectly appropriate" and providing "substantial value to shareholders at this time and (giving) them continuing equity interest in the future of the company."

The restructuring plan would split the company into two publicly held entities and pay shareholders a special dividend of $52.35 a share. The dividend is scheduled to be paid Friday, and Macmillan stressed it is proceeding on schedule.

The time limit is extremely tight, and both sides likely would prefer the judge to rule from the bench.

Robert Dunlap Jr., an analyst with Brown Brothers Harriman & Co., said if Macmillan "manages to pay the dividend on Friday, it would appear management has won."

Attorneys close to the deal say it is likely the Bass request, which has drawn support from the aggressive New York investment firm Coniston Partners, will result in at least a temporary delay in the payout.

List of PUC candidates narrowed

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The search to replace former Public Utility Commissioner Dennis Thomas has narrowed to a handful of candidates, James Huffines, the governor's appointments secretary, said Wednesday.

More than 40 people had either applied or been recommended for the job, which Huffines said will be filled in about two weeks.

"We're down to the short list," he said. "We're looking for someone with a high degree of experience in regulatory matters."

The appointee to the agency that regulates electric and telephone utilities will replace Thomas, 40, who resigned as chairman May 31, 15 months before the end of his term.

The opening gives Gov. Bill Clements his second appointment to the three-member panel and the opportunity to have a Republican majority on the commission.

Believed to be in the running is former PUC Chairman Moak Rollins, who served on the panel from 1979 to 1983. Appointed by Clements in his first term, Rollins resigned after Mark White was elected governor.

A possible candidate is Joe Nall of Dallas, a civil engineer who has served as a consultant to cities, utility commissions and utility companies. Nall was named Dallas Engineer of the Year in 1983.

PUC administrative law judge Charles Smaistrla is a potential appointee to the commission. Smaistrla has a law degree from the University of Texas and a doctorate in economics from Texas A&M. He has won the endorsements of Rollins, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, Public Utility Counsel Kingsbery Ottmers and Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance.

Another PUC lawyer, commission secretary Phillip Holder, is a possible candidate. Holder has worked at the agency since 1981.

Study finds state has highest rate of jail suicides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prison experts say the "double-edged sword" of jail overcrowding may have influenced results of a federally funded study that found the Lone Star State had the highest incidence of jail suicides for two years running.

Texas had 48 jail suicides in 1985 and 46 in 1986, for a total of 94, the National Center on Institutions and Alternatives reported.

"When there are more inmates, there are more eyeballs to watch someone commit suicide," said Linday B. Hayes, who directed the study. "It's more apparent. There's little or no privacy.

"But overcrowding also breeds violence, depression, acting-out behavior, all of which breeds suicide," Hayes said.

California came in second with a total of 69 for the two years, followed by New York with 56 and Illinois with 51. Ohio rounded out the top five with 39.

Texas's reporting system, one of the best nationally, may have boosted the state's suicide totals, Hayes said.

Hayes also noted Texas has more jails than any other state except Pennsylvania, and incarcerates more people than elsewhere, with the possible exception of California.

Texas jails have been required since September 1983 to report any suicide or death to the state attorney general's office. Mike Feary, a supervisory criminal investigator for that unit — the prosecutor assistance and special investigations division — said the figures from Hayes' study warrant close inspection of the situation in Texas.

Nationally, the suicide rate is nine times greater among jail inmates than the general population, and continues to be the leading cause of death in city and county lockups, Hayes said.

Forest Service seeks injunction against group

GROVETON (AP) — While Rainbow Family members expanded preparations for a huge summer gathering, attorneys for the U.S. Forest Service sought to halt the efforts through a court order.

On Wednesday, the Forest Service asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to grant an emergency injunction against the group, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Steve Mason in Tyler.

The Forest Service hoped the injunction would prevent the group from making further preparations for its Fourth of July "Gathering of the Tribes," without obtaining a special use permit, which it has refused to do.

On June 1, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice rejected the Forest Service's request for a preliminary injunction, saying the permit requirement infringed upon the group's right of free speech and assembly.

Justice is to hear arguments June 13 on a request for a permanent injunction against the group.

Meanwhile, members of the Rainbow Family have been camping at Ritter Lake in the Davy Crockett National Forest, about six miles from Groveton.

The Rainbow Family, a loose-knit, largely leaderless group of nature enthusiastics and alternative lifestyle supporters, holds an annual meeting in a different national forest each year.

Murder suspect testifies

BAY CITY (AP) — A man accused in the slaying of a highway patrolman told his second trial that after being pulled over, he fired at shadows in the dark after shots were fired at him first.

Billy George Hughes Jr., 36, received a new trial after his conviction and death penalty was overturned last year. Hughes is accused in the April 4, 1976, shooting death of Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Mark A. Frederick, 25, of Bellville.

On Tuesday, Hughes told jurors he was stopped by officers on an Interstate 10 exit in Sealy.

"... I suddenly heard a loud noise and the rear view mirror wasn't there anymore," Hughes said.

Hughes said he thought he was being shot at, so he pulled a weapon from under the front seat and fired.

"I couldn't see to point at anybody. I just fired. I wanted to make 'em quit," he said.

Hughes, who said he did not know until two days later that he had killed an officer, was sentenced to death in 1976. His conviction was reversed on the grounds that some jurors were improperly excluded from his first trial.

Man charged with murder

DALLAS (AP) — A man was charged with two counts of capital murder in the fatal shootings of two men at a drag racing strip in front of a crowd of hundreds.

Malcolm Vershon Gooch was held in the Dallas County jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, Jim Ewell, Dallas County sheriff's spokesman, said Wednesday.

"Some witnesses indicated the shooting was sparked by a betting transaction that went sour," Ewell said.

Three people were wounded Sunday night in the shootings at Yello Belly Drag Strip. The strip was deannexed by the Dallas suburb of Grand Prairie because of problems, including the deaths of five people in accidents.

Ernest Blanton, 25, and a 17-year-old youth died at Dallas hospitals shortly after the 8:45 p.m. shooting Sunday.

Freight train derails

TRENT (AP) — Thirteen cars from a freight train derailed Wednesday, including two tankers carrying hazardous materials, but no leaks were found, authorities said.

The train — with an unspecified number of cars — ran off the track just inside the Nolan County line about two miles south of Interstate 20, about 30 miles west of Abilene, officials said.

Authorities originally said 14 cars derailed, but later revised that number.

CALL puts translators, telephones together

By FRANK VIVIANO
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

McFerrin was perfecting his advanced Vietnamese at DLI, and he had come to San Jose looking for an opportunity to translate, to help out any way he could. Logically enough, he was aimed in the direction of Jeff Munks. "Here we were," Munks says, "him with his command of Vietnamese and me with this language obsession. It was like magic."

Within months the two had launched a strictly volunteer program, using the city communications switchboard, in which San Jose police could reach the beeper of an on-call Vietnamese interpreter in Monterey when an emergency developed. Almost immediately, they had what Munks refers to as "saves," telephone translations that produced valuable, possibly lifesaving information for police and emergency medical personnel.

But the system, which relied on two ancient donated beepers, had fatal technological flaws. Without anyone's realizing it, one beeper stopped working. Too often, police found themselves unable to get through to an interpreter and concluded that Officer Munks' project was pie-in-the-sky. Notwithstanding strong initial support from SJPD Chief Joseph McNamara, the department was in no position to take on the cost of improving the system. The experiment, it appeared, was dead.

IT WAS then that Mike McFerrin and Juff Munks spent their funereal beery night on the back deck, and McFerrin had his brainstorm. "You know, Jeff," he remembers saying, "this is a hell of a lot bigger than the Indochinese refugees. Disasters must be happening a million times a month across the country, with Russians, Ethiopians, Salvadorans, you name it. All because of these stupid language barriers, people are in terrible trouble who don't need to be."

As Munks tells it, McFerrin simply stated the idea as fact. "We ought to start a service that can put a translator on the telephone for all of them, whenever it's necessary. I'll bet we could do it. I mean, sure it's crazy proposing something that big when we've just been shot down on one language in one town. But why not?"

"Why not?" Munks thought.

There were plenty of reasons "why not"; endless proposals, strategy sessions, consultations and sales pitches before CALL materialized. McFerrin, thanks to his DLI connections, gradually built an enormous network of expert translators from coast to coast. Though the translators are paid $30 per hour, many are immigrants themselves and plainly eager to help. A schedule was hammered out that guaranteed around-the-clock access to speakers of some 108 major languages, and a computerized data base was established to store information on 5,600 separate dialects.

Arthur Braunstein, a language professor at the Monterey Institute of International Studies, joined the effort and took on the task of training interpreters for their specialized role with CALL. Munks became a standard fixture on the public agency speaker's circuit, spreading the news.

FROM THE first disappointing beeper experiment, however, it had been clear that the basic problem wasn't convincing people of the need. It was proving that it could be done. That's where technology entered, in the form of a nationwide upgrading of central telephone switchboards accelerated by the breakup of AT&T. If McFerrin's CALL brainstorm had occurred a decade earlier, it would have been stillborn; the older generation of switching systems lacked the speed, complexity and decibel power to put a Los Angeles-based speaker of Bhopuri at the ear of a paramedic treating an Indian accident victim in Minneapolis. The new equipment, McFerrin learned as he researched the possibilities, could do that and much more.

You want to end a tale like this one on an upbeat note. CALL is the kind of story that renews our faith in humanity and reminds us that what happens in Silicon Valley labs is only as promising — or threatening — as the uses we dream up for new technology. But reality is seldom 100 percent upbeat.

Put bluntly, there isn't much money in CALL. Jeff Munks still pounds his San Jose beat because he has two kids. Co-founding a company has drained his income rather than inflated it. Mike McFerrin dreams of an even better operation, based on an upgrade that would allow their present equipment to handle more lines simultaneously, but CALL is a very long way from having the $120,000 in capital that would take. Right now, the firm's efforts to branch out into profitable services are hampered by the dependence of their $300,000 computer on a faded green AT&T switchboard designed 60 years ago.

THEY CAN'T afford more than that, not without the sort of business loan that regularly underwrites fast-food franchises, dry cleaners and souvenir shops. So far, CALL hasn't been able to secure a penny from the sources that fund most entrepreneurial brainstorms in this country.

"What has stood in our way at every step is that conventional financing involves people who won't believe a policeman and a guy who recently made his living as a roofer could pull this off," says Munks.

At the California Highway Patrol, Sam Houston Memorial Hospital and the Minneapolis Emergency Communications Center, they do believe it. "The usage of CALL has become so routine here that we don't even think about it anymore," according to Paul Linnee, director of the Minneapolis service. "It's become second nature to our people, the first thing they think of when they encounter a language barrier in a crisis." Nearly 1,400 other public agencies share his enthusiasm.

Yet, ironically, there are people who say that the financial problems of Munks and McFerrin are directly proportionate to the size of their client list.

They laugh at the rates: $250 to sign up, $9 per month to subscribe, applicable to $1.94 per minute online — long-distance charges included — even if the customer is the New York Police Department. The critics say that CALL isn't a business: It's a giveaway. That's the point, according to Munks. "What's the use if it can't be affordable to as many agencies as possible?"

Computer represents 'guts' of CALL operation

By FRANK VIVIANO
Copley News Service

CALL's headquarters is an unprepossessing office suite about a block from the Monterey Institute of International Studies. Along with DLI, the institute's staff and students provide the bulk of CALL's Spanish and Asian-language interpreters. One of them, a young woman named Ha Binh, who is trilingual in Vietnamese, Cantonese and English, is busy at the switchboard as CALL co-founder Mike McFerrin shows a reporter around the premises. "Another freeway problem," she says when the conversation has been completed.

"We're handling a lot of calls now from emergency phone boxes on the road, as part of our contract with the California Highway Patrol, McFerrin explains. "Usually it's a matter of an engine breakdown. Nothing serious — unless you're unable to explain what's wrong to the CHP operator in English, and the breakdown is out in Death Valley at noon."

Upstairs, in a room that's shared with another company, lights blink from the control panel of a $300,000 computer that represents CALL's chief capital investment. "This is the guts of our system," McFerrin says. "Calls come here from our clients all over the country, and the computer instantly directs them to a sub-office. East Indian and Pacific island languages go to L.A.; Lao, Hmong and Khmer go to Stockton — the Central Valley is where a lot of the highland Asian refugees are. Eastern European calls are shuttled to Pittsburgh. From each of these points, the job is then transferred to a translator. If it's one of our major languages, we can have a connect in 15 seconds. If it's real exotic, it may take between 45 seconds and a minute and a half."

The clients range from big-city hospitals and 911 emergency services to rural police departments that don't know what to do with a reckless motorist who speaks only Farsi. McFerrin tells of a group of Urdu-speaking Pakistanis on their way to Troy, N.Y., who were put on a plane to Houston by someone who thought they were headed for Troy, Texas. The Houston airport officials cleared up the confusion through CALL.

"We never know what the next job might bring," says McFerrin, "because our clients never know what language they're about to run into."

FDA faulted for shift on food label rules, claims

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A Food and Drug Administration proposal that would allow food manufacturers to put health claims on labels violates federal law and could subject the public to deceptive and unfounded assertions, a House committee report has concluded.

Under the proposed regulation, products could be labeled "adequate or effective in the prevention, cure, mitigation or treatment of any disease or symptom." Although the proposal states that claims must be truthful and supported by scientific evidence, manufacturers would not have to provide proof in advance to the FDA.

The House Committee on Government Operations said in the report that products with such claims would become "drugs," which, under federal law, cannot be marketed until they are certified safe and effective by the FDA.

Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., and chairman of the human resources and intergovernmental relations subcommittee, which held hearings on the issue, called the proposal a dangerous step.

"The public can be harmed and, at the very least, can be wasting their money on things that say, 'Eat this product and prevent X disease,' " Weiss said.

A spokesman for the agency, Chris W. Lecos, would not comment on specifics in the report, saying, "The F.D.A. is taking the congressional report under advisement and will consider it part of the overall evaluation when developing a final proposal on health claims."

The report, "Disease-Specific Health Claims on Food Labels: An Unhealthy Idea," was released last week by the committee.

The committee recommended that the rule change not be allowed. Weiss said that if the agency did not significantly modify the proposal, public-interest groups would fight it in court. Nutritional science, medical and health organizations oppose the proposal, the report said.

The FDA surprised the food industry with its the proposal to reverse its longstanding policy prohibiting health claims on labels. The agency is evaluating comments and expects to issue a final regulation late next summer, officials said.

However, the House report said the agency was already permitting health claims on food labels by not enforcing current laws.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's toothless grin offensive

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For years my husband neglected his teeth because he was afraid of dentists. Of course, he lost all his teeth, and now he has dentures, which he never wears unless he has to appear in public.

Abby, looking at him without teeth is offensive, and watching him eat is unbearable! He is 60 years old and still goes to work every day, but I dread the day he retires because he never wears his dentures at home.

His father was the same way — he refused to put his teeth in around the house. His mother finally gave up nagging him because they had a fight every time she mentioned how terrible he looked without his teeth.

My husband's dentures are beautiful, and he says they fit fine, so that's no excuse for not wearing them. I sometimes wonder if he goes without teeth just to irritate me.

I hope you have some good advice for me because this problem is making me crazy. Thank you. — REVOLTED IN MAINE

DEAR REVOLTED: I think your husband is lying through his toothless mouth when he tells you that his dentures fit fine. (If they did, he'd wear them when he eats because eating without teeth is no pleasure.)

Why is he lying to you? Because he's still afraid of dentists and doesn't want to go back to have his dentures adjusted — which is exactly what he should do.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote in with a serious concern about her boss's computer addiction, and you pointed out how useful computers are and brushed aside her complaint. One of the most destructive forces in the workplace today is addictive computer hobbying. Computers are essential tools in the workplace, but much time and money are wasted when "working" with the computer becomes an end in itself.

The reason that computer hobbying is so dangerous is that it is difficult to distinguish from real work. If I spent 80 percent of my time at work carving decoys or playing cards, I would be fired. However, I can spend 80 percent of my time on our computer just for the sheer joy of it and be highly valued, even if I never produce anything really worthwhile.

The boss of the woman who wrote to you has discovered that "working" on the computer is more fun than any other part of his job (or life?). He will not simply computerize the operation and back off. He will continue to spend all his time reading about computers, talking about computers, studying and buying new hardware and software, programming, reprogramming, running off unnecessary memos and statistics, and visiting other people's computers.

When you give a 4-year-old a hammer, suddenly a lot of things need hammering. When you give a burned-out worker or administrator a computer, a lot of things need computerization. — HAL

DEAR HAL: There is no denying that computers have become the "in" toys for those who can afford (and understand) them. In fact, they are so "hot" that next year a more sophisticated model will come out and make the latest obsolete. Readers?

CONFIDENTIAL TO YEARNING FOR IMMORTALITY IN CHICAGO:

Nobody said it better than Benjamin Franklin:

"If you would not be forgotten
"As soon as you are dead and rotten
"Either write things worth reading
"Or do things worth the writing."

DEAR ABBY: Since we moved from our home state to an adjacent state 17 years ago, we have had plenty of visitors every summer. With summer here and people traveling for vacations, we have tips to offer guests who plan to visit friends or relatives at their homes:

1. Don't talk all the time. Your host or hostess needs time to plan meals, what to do with you today, tomorrow, etc. Step outside by yourselves once in a while. Go for a walk or take a snooze.

2. Do allow your host or hostess to read the newspaper without interruption. Some visitors tend to talk whenever they see our noses in the newspaper. It's very rude.

3. If your host or hostess goes to work during your visit, find out what time he or she has to leave for work, and leave the bathroom free for his or her use if you do not have you own guest bathroom.

4. Build a little extra money into your vacation fund so you can treat your host and hostess out for at least one meal.

5. It would be very considerate if you would offer to fill the gasoline tank if they are taking you sightseeing a lot.

6. If you are a smoker, smoke outdoors. Do not put people on the spot by asking if they "mind" if you smoke. Neither of us smokes, and it takes a week to air out our house after smoking guests have been here.

7. Before you make the trip, have it clearly understood how long you plan to stay. We stay three or four days maximum. After that, we run out of things to talk about. We think it's far better to leave people wanting more of your company than less. — NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Thanks for a helpful item. May I add another tip for the ideal guest: Please don't leave any of your belongings behind for your hosts to pack and return to you.

'Premium' frozen pizza gets rousing review

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Just when you thought it was safe to go back to the frozen food section again, some food manufacturers have introduced new microwave foods. Of course they are easy to prepare. Of course they are supposed to be "new and delicious." Of course we couldn't resist sampling some.

Case in point: Red Baron's "Premium" Microwave Deep Dish Singles pizza. All you have to do is remove from wrapper, turn the tray over and its corners up, set the mini-pizza on top and zap it in the microwave for a few minutes. Or, if you prefer, you can heat them on a cookie sheet in a regular oven. Simple.

And since the taste-testers like pizza and I like easy, we checked out these little pizzas for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

The "singles" pizzas, packaged two in each 12-ounce box, cost $2.99 per box, or about $1.50 per mini-pizza. Each pizza is supposed to be a single-serving, but if you are a little kid, you could probably share one with a friend and still get full. (Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising was limited — I guess Red Baron is already known for quality and felt further words to be unnecessary. Anyway, the label did claim the product was "supreme pizzas" and were "made with 100 percent real cheese" as well as "sausage, pepperoni, green and red peppers, onions." And some kind of deep-dish crust too, I assume, although nothing was mentioned on the box about the finest flour or the purest shortening.

We tried the pizzas both ways — cooked in the microwave and heated in a conventional oven. Everyone agreed that the microwave-cooked pizzas had softer crusts, while the regular oven made the crusts crispier. This pleased all the taste-testers, who were semi-divided as to how they liked their crusts. Sometimes, crispy crusts are harder for little kids to manage.

Anyway, the total taste-test was a rousing success. Fortunately, all the testers but me were pizza fans, and all agreed that the little pizzas were delicious, even though they were frozen, not made from scratch. Several of the younger ones said they would be more than happy to have the microwave singles pizzas again. One even wanted some for breakfast the next day.

We'll probably try them again sometime soon, but not too soon. Sometimes, the price of "easy" is just too much to pay very often.

EXTENSION EXTRA

Proper freezer packing important

By MARIAN FARR

Althogh freezing food may be the fastest and easiest form of food preservation, it's not foolproof. The end product depends both on the quality of the produce and the packaging materials you use.

Most people start freezing foods because they have excess from their gardens or they've found a source of top-quality produce at farmer's markets and truck farms.

Yet it's easy to compromise the quality of that food by skimping on the materials or failing to use proper packaging procedures.

The right packaging materials will protect the flavor, color, moisture content and nutritional value of frozen foods from the dry climate of a freezer.

Rigid containers, flexible bags or wrap are made to be moisture and vapor-proof especially for freezer use. If the label does not state that the material is made for freezing, don't use it.

Rigid containers made of plastic or glass are suitable for all packs of food and work especially well for food that is packed in a liquid.

Wide-mouth freezer jars have no exchange of vapor, keep out odors, don't lose shape and are easy to reuse. The major problem with plastic containers is getting the lids to fit tightly. If they don't the seal must be reinforced with freezer tape. Masking tape won't work because it doesn't stick at the low freezer temperatures.

Don't freeze fruits and vegetables in a container larger than a quart. In a large container foods freeze too slowly to produce a good product.

The freezer bags have the advantage of eliminating practically all excess air, but are more easily damaged during storage. Use a rubber band instead of twist closures that have wire, since the wire can catch and tear bags. To make stacking and storage easier, put the bags of food inside milk cartons or in cardboard freezer cartons and then freeze them.

It's no bargain to use recycled plastic vegetable and bread bags or cottage cheese, ice cream and milk containers for freezing. They're not vapor proof and foods frozen in them will lose their moisture, flavor and nutrients.

Some business experts not very reliable

By MIKE DALE
and CHUCK EDWARDS
Copley News Service

If you don't know where to start your new business, don't depend on business experts for advice — so-called business experts can't even agree on which state has the best business climate and which has the worst.

For example, the accounting firm of Grant Thorton recently picked North Dakota, Nebraska and South Dakota as leading states for manufacturing.

But another big shot in the rating game — Corporation for Enterprise and Development — ranked those states almost dead last.

What's wrong?

Grant Thorton spokesman Michael Hogan says each study uses different factors to determine what makes for a better business environment.

'Fixing' credit not possible

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

If you are having trouble getting credit, ads that promise to fix your credit history may sound like the perfect answer to your problems. Many of these advertisements promise to that you can:

Learn how to:

- Get your credit report;
- Correct inaccurate information;
- Use your legal rights;
- Get free or inexpensive credit counseling.

But before you pay a credit repair clinic to "fix" your credit record, learn what the law says and consider saving your money by making some telephone calls yourself.

Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, you have the right to learn what your file says. If you have been denied credit based on a report from a credit bureau, the creditor must provide you with the name and address of the credit bureau they contacted. If you contact that bureau within 30 days to learn what is in your file, there is no charge for this service.

If you simply wish to learn what is in your credit file, check the yellow pages under credit bureaus or credit reporting agencies. If several are listed, call to find the one that keeps your file. Credit bureaus may charge to give you file information. Their fees usually range from $5 to $15.

If you find any inaccurate information in your file after reviewing it, contact your credit bureau. By law, a credit bureau must investigate and remove any items that cannot be double-checked.

However, if the information is accurate, no one can require the credit bureau to remove it — unless it is outdated. If you have been late paying your bills during the last seven years, the law permits the credit bureau to tell creditors about your history. Bankruptcy may be reported for 10 years. That is the law.

If anyone tells you that they can remove negative but accurate items from your file, they are making promises they cannot keep.

If you are having problems paying your bills and need help, there are several options you can take advantage of. You can contact the companies you owe money to and work out an adjusted repayment plan yourself, or you can check your telephone directory for non-profit financial counseling programs to get help.

If you have any questions, call the Better Business Bureau at 563-1880.

Woman refusing to testify remains in Queens church

NEW YORK (AP) — A black woman was holed up in a church a second day today after being sentenced to jail for not testifying about her daughter's alleged rape by whites, and a family adviser insisted, "We will never back down!"

Glenda Brawley probably will not be arrested as long as she remains in the Queens church, state Attorney General Robert Abrams said Wednesday.

"That decision is in the hands of the sheriff," said Abrams, the special prosecutor in the investigation.

"But I think he and I agree that if we charge that church today, that would be precisely what the advisers for the Brawley family would want in terms of their agenda and another chapter of the media circus they have performed."

Mrs. Brawley, 33, spent Wednesday in the Ebenezer Baptist Church, where more than 400 supporters gathered in the evening for a prayer service, giving her a standing ovation.

"We will never back down! We will never give up! We will never buckle under! We will never apologize!" the Rev. Al Sharpton, one of Mrs. Brawley's advisers, told the gathering.

In Poughkeepsie, where a grand jury investigating the case met again Wednesday, Abrams said: "If Glenda Brawley chooses to exile herself, confine herself, jail herself, in a particular church, and she wants to do it for a day, 10 days, 30 days, that's her choosing.

"It's only going to be added to, and on top of, a 30-day eventual jail sentence she will have to serve for her violation of the court's order."

Dutchess County Sheriff Fred Scoralick refused to say what action, if any, was being taken. On Tuesday, the department issued a statewide arrest warrant for Mrs. Brawley.

Sharpton said, "We're going to stay here until the warrant is killed."

Tawana Brawley, 16, disappeared for four days in November and was found wrapped in a plastic bag about 10 miles from her Wappingers Falls home.

Some of her hair had been chopped off, animal excrement was smeared and racial epithets were scrawled on her body.

In sketchy interviews with authorities, she said she had been abducted and sexually abused by six white men, one of whom had a police-style badge. A hospital found no evidence of rape.

Her mother was sentenced Monday to 30 days in jail for defying a grand jury subpoena, but she had been given until Wednesday to cooperate. Mrs. Brawley made no statements Wednesday.

NATION IN BRIEF

Aid denied to town where plant exploded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House space committee is criticizing the Reagan administration for refusing federal aid for explosion-damaged Henderson, Nev., when NASA and the Air Force desperately need a rocket fuel plant in the town to reopen.

"The American space effort, both civilian and military, will literally run out of gas sometime next year," Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., said at a hearing Wednesday.

One of the town's two ammonium perchlorate plants exploded on May 4, killing two people, injuring hundreds and causing $73 million in damage. The second plant was shut down after the explosion, reopened briefly and closed again after Gov. Richard Bryan threatened to sue on grounds that the facility was a safety hazard.

In addition, the Clark County Fire Department found some safety violations and the county threatened action if those were not taken care of before production resumes.

On Wednesday, the Federal Emergency Management Agency rejected a request from Bryan for disaster relief for Henderson.

Town celebrates pact

DUTCH HARBOR, Alaska (AP) — Russian sailors danced in this remote American outpost during a shoreleave blowout celebrating the recent U.S.-Soviet fisheries agreement.

More than 600 Soviet sailors, many clutching fistfuls of dollars, arrived late Tuesday in this Aleutian Island town of about 1,900 people 800 miles southwest of Anchorage.

They were treated to rock music, mounds of food and gallons of various beverages, welcome sights and sounds for Soviet sailors who had been at sea more than six months.

"This is the first time I meet Americans," said Alexander Cherkov, first mate aboard the vessel Semiozernoye. "Americans are very nice people."

The party was held partly to celebrate the fisheries agreement President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed during last week's Moscow summit meeting.

Mecham trial continues

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham never asked anyone to omit a $350,000 campaign loan from financial reports required by the state, the businessman who gave the money testified.

Developer and lawyer Barry Wolfson testified Wednesday that he expected Mecham's 1986 gubernatorial campaign to report the loan even though Wolfson asked Mecham to sign a letter promising that it would remain confidential.

That request was intended to assure "that I not be seen as a fat cat contributor who would be pestered for further contributions," Wolfson told the Maricopa County Superior Court trial of Mecham and his brother Willard.

Asked by Mecham attorney Michael Scott whether he would have minded having his name reported in connection with the loan, Wolfson said, "I not only didn't care, but I expected that I would have been."

Meanwhile, Scott said Wednesday it remained uncertain whether Gov. Rose Mofford would be called to testify in the case, partly because she is still suffering from a mild concussion she received in a recent fall.

House rejects health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House rejection of a home health care plan buried any chance of action on the proposal this year, but lawmakers and lobbyists say the next Congress is likely to pass an even broader program.

"It is safe to say that 1989 will be the year that Congress considers seriously a comprehensive long-term care program," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Villers Advocacy Associates, a lobbying group for the low-income elderly.

FRIDAY, JUNE 10, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You can really turn things around this year if you want to. Be willing to make sacrifices in order to salvage a relationship. A larger paycheck is the answer to financial problems, not the lottery or risky investments. Think big at work and your dreams will come true. Learning new skills will bring a big payoff. You have the right stuff to handle increased responsibilities. A highly emotional love relationship blossoms this summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Judy Garland, writer Saul Bellow, illustrator Maurice Sendak, slugger Ken Singleton, playwright Terence Rattigan, quarterback Dan Fouts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take a larger view of what is going on around you. Seize the initiative in a money matter and you will come out ahead! You are at the center of the action at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will be in a better position to assess a financial situation next week. Postpone signing a legal document. Your positive approach is the key to your success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Things come to a head in business or finance. Plan travel carefully so you get the most for your dollars. Do not charge beyond your ability to pay. Close relationships are changing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some of your dreams will be fulfilled this summer. You welcome a chance to vary your routine. Take a broader view of life. Great good can come out of a new relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your love life improves. A batch of new friends enter your life when you expand your social activities. Listen to what others are saying, but follow your intuition when making a deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Jot down any creative ideas that come to you now. Morning hours feature a subtle plan for getting the maximum benefit from mixing business with pleasure. Influential person provides valuable financial backing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Talking over a financial dilemma with a close friend provides practical insights. Watch out for someone intent on prying; a misunderstanding could arise. A chance encounter may lead to romance. Go slow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel and education are in the spotlight today. An unusual career opportunity offers increased income and prestige. Grab for the brass ring. You and loved one enjoy new rapport. Be considerate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Curb your daydreaming and zero in on practical matters. A work situation calls for more self-discipline. A lunch date could spell romance or an intriguing business proposal. Watch spending. Pay off debts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Partnership ventures prosper today. Your earnings increase when you reorganize financial affairs along new lines. Your ESP is powerful. Heed that inner voice, especially where a complicated relationship is concerned. Cut negative ties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Schedule a lunch date with someone special. Try to recall a sudden flash of intuition you received last night. A financial venture proves increasingly profitable. A platonic relationship heats up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not let someone persuade you to dip into your financial reserves. "Doing your own thing" now could boomerang. Consider loved ones' needs ahead of your own and communication will improve.

Opening lead: Jack of ◇ How you play some card combinations is purely a matter of guesswork. At other times, learning as much as possible about the hand can help you arrive at the winning solution.

East-West were using weak no trump opening bids. Even so, West's decision to try to buy the contract in three hearts via a two no trump relay rather than jump to game in hearts as a preemptive action does not meet with this department's approval. Since North's double of two no trump promised spade support, South elected to try for game in spades instead of defending.

East won the first trick with the ace of diamonds and returned the suit. Since declarer had to lose a trick to the ace of trumps, the fate of the hand rested on whether declarer could limit his club losers to one.

Did East or West hold the king of clubs? Declarer decided he needed to find out more about the holdings before committing himself. At trick three, declarer led the queen of hearts, and West did well not to cover. Declarer called for dummy's ace and ruffed a heart. A spade to the jack lost to East's ace, and declarer ruffed the diamond continuation high. He crossed to the king of trumps and ruffed another heart, and East's discard was a revelation. Now East had to hold the king of clubs for his opening bid.

The rest was easy. Declarer drew the last trump, cashed the ace of clubs and, with a heart full of hope, led a club to the ten. When that fetched the king, all was well.

'God has given us a plan' to restore faltering PTL ministry, Jim Bakker says

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker says the crumbling PTL ministry will be cursed if it is sold for non-religious purposes.

"God has given us a plan how to pay for it and how to restore it," he said in an interview Wednesday. "The same God that has given me the vision to build it has given me a vision to maintain it."

Bakker said he has met with businessmen to begin raising money to buy back the evangelical empire, which he built over 14 years and lost a year ago in a sex and money scandal.

"We're just getting the finances started," he said, declining to reveal how much has been raised. Asked if he had the resources to buy PTL, Bakker said, "God does."

Bakker has said he would try to buy PTL's 2,300-acre Heritage USA headquarters and theme park here piece by piece as it is liquidated in Bankruptcy Court. The ministry is as much as $130 million in debt.

"If anyone takes Heritage USA and turns it into anything other than what it was dedicated, I'm convinced it will be cursed," Bakker said.

A reorganization plan calling for the sale of much of PTL's assets awaits final approval by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds on June 16 in Columbia.

Under the plan, a separate, non-profit corporation called Heritage Ministries would be formed to run the cable TV show and church at Heritage USA. George Shinn, owner of the Charlotte, N.C., Knights minor-league baseball team and the new Charlotte Hornets of the NBA, is among those who have expressed interest in buying Heritage USA. Shinn would like to build a baseball stadium there.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy, returned to Fort Mill Tuesday from Gatlinburg, Tenn., and set up in an office next door to the headquarters of the Bring Bakkers Back Club, about a mile from Heritage USA.

Bakker resigned his ministry in 1987 as a story about a sexual dalliance with former church secretary Jessica Hahn was about to break.

DENVER (AP) — Yoko Ono got an autograph and a hug when she showed up at a book-signing by Jimmy Carter at a book store here.

Carter was promoting his new book, "An Outdoor Journal: Adventures and Reflections." Ono was in Denver to open an exhibit of artwork by her late husband, John Lennon.

She approached the former president as he was preparing to leave the Tattered Cover Book Store. Ono received the autograph and the hug before making a quick exit.

In the latest of his six books, Carter writes of his lifelong relationship with nature. A devoted fisherman and hunter, he took regular trips to the wilderness while occupying the White House from 1977 to 1981.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Archbishop Teklehaimanot, the former barefoot monk who led Ethiopia's 20 million Orthodox Christians through the turbulent transition from feudal empire to Marxist state, died Sunday of an undisclosed illness.

Teklehaimanot dedicated his life to missionary work in primitive rural areas and was more at home shepherding peasant converts than with the pomp of high church life.

He was elected patriarch in June 1976, as the new military government was attacking the church for its opposition to change. The former Father Melaku chose the name Teklehaimanot, which means "the tree of faith."

Teklehaimanot involved the church in relief work in drought-stricken areas and often wept openly when he preached of the plight of famine and drought victims.

Former President Jimmy Carter, left, signs a copy of his new book "An Outdoor Journal" for Yoko Ono, wife of slain Beatle John Lennon, when the two met at an autograph-signing party for Carter at a Denver bookstore Wednesday afternoon.

Teklehaimanot was born into a poor farming family in northern Showa province. He proselytized in remote parts of southern Sidamo region, bringing Christianity to an area where paganism was widespread.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher got an explosive surprise when she fired a laser beam to set off fireworks at the groundbreaking of an amusement park.

The fireworks spelled out the name of the park, The Battersea, accompanied by a huge bang and blue smoke.

"They could have warned me," joked Mrs. Thatcher, who was wearing a hard hat for Wednesday's ceremony at a former power station that will be converted into the Disney-style park.

Mrs. Thatcher said the $360 million park on the south bank of the River Thames would create 4,500 jobs and is expected to attract 4 million visitors in its first year.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two-time Tony winner George Rose, slain last month at his Caribbean vacation home, was remembered by his friends from the Broadway stage as a Renaissance figure, friend and teacher.

Actress Betty Buckley, a co-star of Rose in "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," moved many in the audience to tears when she sang "They Can't Take That Away from Me" at Wednesday's service at the Shubert Theater.

"It reminds me of George, a time when things were gentler, more elegant," she said in explaining her choice. "George Rose was a teacher of mine. He was the epitome of elegance and high standards. I can only aspire to his standards."

Producer Joseph Papp, who worked with Rose on "Drood," called him "a Renaissance figure, and it was all presented on the stage."

Rose won his second Tony for his role as the chairman in "Drood"; his first was as Eliza Doolittle's father in a revival of "My Fair Lady."

Students battle riot police in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of radical students armed with clubs, rocks and firebombs and screaming "Yankee go home" stormed into the streets today and battled riot police, who blasted them with tear gas.

The vicious street fighting occurred around Yonsei University, where the roughly 20,000 students had gathered for a march Friday to Communist North Korea to press for reunification.

Police armored vans fired hundreds of tear gas bombs straight into the charging students as special martial arts squads tried to hold the protesters off. At least a dozen riot policemen were engulfed in orange flames after being hit by firebombs.

Scores of police and protesters were injured in the fighting.

The students had surged out the school's main gates to attack police after they heard the sound of fighting in nearby streets, where cordons of riot police were trying to turn away students attempting to reach the campus.

Clouds of choking white tear gas blanketed the campus and surrounding streets as police struggled to hold back the attacking students.

"Down with the military dictatorship" and "March to North Korea," students yelled as they pelted the lines of riot police with rocks and bricks.

Police, trying to fend off the attacks with shields, hurled rocks and bricks as well as tear gas grenades at the charging protesters.

Masked students repeatedly ran right up to the police lines to hurl firebombs at close range. Officers with fire extinguishers frenziedly doused the blazing clothes of comrades set on fire.

Police officers with burns and with blood streaming from their faces and arms from rocks staggered to safety or were carried away by other officers.

Students from dozens of colleges had gathered at Yonsei for an overnight vigil before trying to march Friday to the North Korean border in efforts to force reunification of the divided peninsula.

North Korea's official news agency, monitored in Tokyo, said a North Korean student delegation already had left Pyongyang for the border to meet the South Korean students and seek a breakthrough for peaceful reunification.

Before the mass fighting erupted at Yonsei, police had arrested scores of students who were trying to reach the campus and used tear gas to disperse groups of students in nearby sidestreets.

Thousands of students came to the university after attending rallies at dozens of colleges in Seoul and provincial areas.

The government deployed more than 60,000 riot police and put all security forces on maximum alert to stop Friday's planned march to the border truce site of Panmunjom, 30 miles north of Seoul.

Government leaders said the march was a threat to national security and students were playing into the hands of the Communist North.

South Korean police ringed campuses in Pusan, Taegu, Taejon, Kwangju and other provincial cities to try to prevent radical students leaving for Seoul.

In Taejon, about 5,000 people held an anti-communist rally today in front of the railway station to urge the students to abandon the march to North Korea.

Riot troopers guarded government buildings and diplomatic posts in Seoul as part of a massive security operation to prevent student attacks. Hundreds of police ringed the U.S. Embassy.

Radical groups claim the United States enforces partition of the peninsula and rules the south as a colony. Their protests have been violently anti-American, calling for withdrawal of the 42,000 U.S. troops in the south.

South Korean riot police are engulfed with fire hurled by protesting students during a demonstration today in front of Seoul's Yonsei University. Dozens of college students gathered at the school to hold a rally for tomorrow's planned march to the North Korean border in efforts to force reunification of the divided peninsula.

GREENHAM COMMON, England (AP) — The cumbersome launchers and the cruise missiles are lined up inside this U.S. Air Force base, the anti-nuclear protesters remain outside — and everybody is waiting for the Soviet inspectors.

"They could do it today, I'm ready to go," said Col. William E. Jones, an ebullient Tennessean who is the commander at Greenham Common, 50 miles west of London.

"I have 29 launchers, I have 101 missiles. Everything I have is for display," he said Wednesday.

In the background, photographers milled round a 55-foot missile launcher — on show for the first time.

U.S. military authorities lifted the veil at Greenham Common and two other intermediate-range nuclear missile bases, at Florennes, Belgium, and Mutlangen, a Pershing II missile base in West Germany, ahead of the Soviet visits.

The teams of up to 10 inspectors are due to arrive at 16 hours notice sometime in July or August, implementing the first step of the superpower accord to eliminate by 1991 the 2,700 land-based intermediate range missiles both sides have deployed in Europe.

The initial checks under the agreement ratified June 1 are to inspect the missiles before they are dismantled.

While Soviet inspectors visit 12 bases in five West European countries and 14 in the United States, American teams have a reciprocal right to check 133 sites in Eastern Europe.

During the Greenham display, the launchers, which are scheduled for destruction along with their missiles, trundled out of giant bunkers ringed by four layers of rolled barbed wire — then roared through muddy lanes, showing off their paces.

On the perimeter fence, a favorite target of protesters, hung a banner with the slogan, "Bread Not Bombs." A solitary woman protester tried to climb the fence, but jumped back and disappeared.

Outside a nearby gate, a dishevelled half-dozen group of women protesters sat round a camp fire, a broken baby carriage and other litter in the background.

Women protesters have camped at Greenham since 1981 — two years before the cruise missiles arrived.

Wednesday, they said that they, or others, will still be living in the tent and plastic camps here long after the missiles have gone — ever-suspicious that cruise missiles will simply be replaced by something just as deadly.

"The Americans have a history of reneging on agreements," said a young woman in her 20s, a former clerk who identified herself as Xak Aroo.

"So they're going to take out the cruise — it's no big deal. We object to Americans being here anyway."

Inside the base, preparations have included fullscale rehearsals — mock inspections with Pentagon officials playing the part of Soviet inspectors.

"The first group played very belligerent — out of sorts Soviets — and we had to deal with that," said Lt. Col. Michael McCarney.

"The second group were what we expect — very professional, very businesslike Soviets and we found that...you really could do the inspection in two to three hours."

McCarney, project director for the inspection arrangements, said he does not expect suspicion to cloud each Soviet visit.

"I think they are as anxious as we are to make this thing work," he said.

The fine print of the agreement means that the longest Soviet teams can stay on any one inspection visit is 4½ days.

The visitors will fly to Greenham and remain at the base — or go under escort to the second cruise base in Britain, at Molesworth, near Cambridge, where 24 missiles are deployed.

McCarney said he's laying on a few extra touches — miniature bottles of vodka and videos.

Soviets invite U.N. leaders to 'historic event'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union has stolen the disarmament show with a dramatic invitation to U.N. leaders to witness the destruction of intermediate-range nuclear missiles on its soil next month.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, speaking Wednesday at a U.N. disarmament session, asked Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, members of the Security Council and representatives of the 102-nation non-aligned movement to come to the nuclear bonfire in July.

It will be "not the Bolshoi Theater, but a major premiere nonetheless, a momentous historic event," he declared.

"When the first public execution of weapons in human history takes place, no one is likely to cry or weep. It will herald an end to a lot of tears," he said. "But having dug a grave for weapons of mass destruction, mankind must now build the foundation of a nuclear-free and nonviolent world."

Diplomats said Shevardnadze's speech was a tour de force that put the United States on the diplomatic defensive.

Even U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters praised the speech as "hopeful, useful and good."

"It was an extremely interesting new speech, it broke a lot of new ground and it is deserving of study," he said.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz plans to deliver a U.S. statement before the 40-nation conference next week.

But diplomats speculated that Vice President George Bush, or even President Reagan, might make a last-minute decision to offset the Soviet first-strike advantage and deliver a weighty American rejoinder.

"The Soviet Union got on the stage first and kept up the momentum of its view from the Moscow summit. They showed they are in the forefront of the disarmament effort," said one U.N. official who spoke on condition of anonymity. "They have made the U.N. their forum."

The missiles will be among the first scrapped under the now-ratified Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty.

In a news conference Wednesday, Soviet arms negotiator Viktor Karpov said the destruction of the missiles would begin soon after July 1. Under the treaty, all 2,700 land-based intermediate-range missiles the superpowers have deployed in Europe are to be destroyed by 1991.

In his speech, Shevardnadze also invited the United States to join the Soviet Union in banning all nuclear tests as the first move toward "a step-by-step elimination of nuclear weapons by the year 2000."

And, for the first time, he said the Soviet Union would announce the presence or absence of nuclear weapons on naval ships on foreign port calls if the United States and Western allies do the same.

The United States has consistently refused to confirm or deny whether its ships are nuclear-powered or carry nuclear weapons.

Shevardnadze also called for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact each to reduce their forces by 500,000 troops.

In August 1985, the Soviet Union commenced a unilateral nuclear test moratorium, but the United States continued testing. The Soviets ended their moratorium 1½ years later.

"On the basis of reciprocity with the United States, we are ready to reintroduce and to observe it, this time not for a year and a half, but for all times," Shevardnadze said.

On conventional disarmament, the area in which NATO says the Soviets hold a clear advantage in Europe, Shevardnadze proposed an exchange of official data on troop strength, followed by on-site inspections.

This session, the third in 10 years, is debating disarmament issues and will draw up a declaration of objectives and an international action plan.

Palestinian strike closes territories

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians today shut down the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip with a general strike to mark six months of rebellion. Israeli soldiers shot and killed a 17-year-old Arab in a clash.

Four other Palestinians, including a 12-year-old girl, were shot in other clashes with troops, hospital and army officials said.

Meanwhile, Israeli physicians accused the army of causing paralyzing injuries by using powerful high-speed bullets to disperse demonstrators.

Ahmed Hassan Hawari, 17, died after he was shot in the head during a confrontation with troops in Sebastiya, near Nablus in the West Bank, said officials at Ittihad hospital in Nablus.

An army spokesman confirmed the death and said an officer was forced to shoot when he saw the young man standing on a terrace holding a block that he intended to throw at the troops.

An 18-year-old youth and a 12-year-old girl were shot and wounded when soldiers fired at protesters in the West Bank town of Tulkarem, officials at the Tulkarem and Nablus hospitals said. Both were shot in the legs.

The hospital also treated seven other Arabs for cuts in the head inflicted by rubber bullets, a hospital official said.

The army spokesman confirmed the bullet injuries and said two other Arabs were wounded by gunfire in the Nablus marketplace when soldiers blocked a crowd of protesters who headed out to the main road hurling bottles.

Since the anti-occupation unrest began Dec. 8 in the lands Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war, 203 Palestinians and two Israelis have been killed. More than 5,000 Arabs have been wounded or injured and 5,000 are in jail.

Underground leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization ordered today's general strike. Stores were closed, workers stayed home, public transportation was paralyzed and many children stayed home from school.

Men with kafiyeh headresses wrapped around their faces went into schools in the West Bank and encouraged children to leave classes and demonstrate, Israeli army radio said.

An underground leaflet calling for the general strike urged children to stay out of schools, which have opened in recent weeks after a four-month shutdown ordered by Israeli military authorities.

The army clamped curfews on about 110,000 Palestinians in villages or refugee camps. They included the Jabaliya refugee camp in Gaza, which has been under curfew for a week, and the West Bank village of Janiya and Beit Ur Et Tahta, where attackers hurled firebombs at two Israeli vehicles overnight.

Two army officers suffered minor injuries when their jeep was hit by a firebomb and set ablaze in Janiya, the army said.

Six Israeli doctors said in a report on military action in the Gaza Strip that the army should not disperse protesters with high-velocity bullets of the type used in the M-16 automatic rifle.

The report said such bullets produced 13 paraplegics and two quadriplegics and caused 20 cases of serious internal injuries.

It also accused the army of misusing tear gas by firing into enclosed areas, failing to keep proper records of injuries and failing to carry out autopsies in unexplained deaths.

In some cases, the army transferred seriously injured people to Israeli hospitals to interrogate them, thereby exposing them to increased risk, the report charged.

South African blacks return to work after 3-day strike

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Blacks returned to work and school today after more than 2 million stayed away for three days to protest curbs on anti-apartheid activity and legislative proposals to limit the right to strike.

Organizers called the nation's longest and largest general strike a success, and the white minority government's manpower minister said he might delay action on the proposed labor legislation.

Employers estimated that the strike cost the economy $250 million.

Downtown Johannesburg, which had been relatively deserted, was bustling again. For the first time this week, fleets of mini-bus taxis arrived carrying workers from the huge black township of Soweto.

In Durban, the port city where the strike was most effective, transport companies said ridership on commuter trains and buses remained 20 percent below normal. Officials suggested some blacks feared it was unsafe to return to work because commuter buses had been stoned and firebombed during the strike.

Police said three men were stabbed to death by other blacks during the night at Riverview in Natal province. There was an unconfirmed report that a fourth man was killed there today when a mine in his possession exploded.

Eight other killings were reported earlier this week in Natal, where groups supporting and opposing the protest clashed. Two people were killed in unrest elsewhere during the strike.

Black labor federations, backed by prominent clergymen, organized the strike to protest restrictions put on anti-apartheid groups Feb. 24 and proposed legislation that would limit the right of unions to strike.

Today's editions of the financial newspaper Business Day quoted Manpower Minister Pieter du Plessis as saying he planned to send a formal invitation to black labor leaders to meet with him.

Du Plessis also offered to suspend action on certain clauses of the labor bill if the unions could convince him this was warranted, Business Day said.

To anti-apartheid activists, the protest was a success because it took place without overt help from the restricted opposition groups.

"The stayaway is an indication of the determination of the people to oppose the apartheid government," said the Rev. Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches. "It means the February restrictions have not suppressed the spirit of resistance."

Security forces maintained a relatively low profile during the protest and government officials made virtually no public statements about it, but employers threatened to reduce work forces and move toward mechanization if political strikes continue.

Black miners virtually ignored the strike and kept the nation's most lucrative industry operating almost normally despite support for the protest by the National Union of Mineworkers leadership.

Mining produces 80 percent of South Africa's export earnings.

Including the near-total boycott of urban black schools, the number of participants each day appeared to have exceeded 2 million — the number of people who stayed home June 16, 1986 to protest the nationwide state of emergency imposed four days earlier.

President P.W. Botha declared the emergency to combat a black uprising against apartheid, the racial policy that preserves power for South Africa's 5 million whites and denies the 26 million blacks a voice in national affairs.

It is expected to be renewed this week for a third year. The state of emergency gives police sweeping powers of detention without trial, imposes press restrictions and outlaws several forms of peaceful protest.

Police told news media this week it was illegal under emergency regulations to report on the extent of a general strike.

Such reports were carried by pro-government newspapers and the state-run broadcasting company, along with other media, but many accounts were worded cautiously and avoided positive assessments of the strike.

China warns U.S. citizens of possible terrorist attacks

BEIJING (AP) — China told the U.S. Embassy in Beijing that terrorists from another country may be planning attacks on Americans in the Chinese capital, the U.S. Embassy said today.

The embassy sent out an "urgent notice to American citizens" warning them of the security threat and telling them be cautious.

Embassy officials circulated among staff members and American businessmen a 15-point list of "personal security tips" giving such advice as "Don't daydream while traveling to and from work" and "Vary your activities, times, and transport routes."

The notice said there was no specific information on the time or place of such an attack. "But the embassy believes that this warning reflects a genuine threat and that American citizens in the Beijing area should take appropriate steps to protect themselves," it said.

Consular Office Second Secretary Dewey Pendergrass said the embassy had been informed of the threat Wednesday from high-level public security officials.

"We're taking it seriously," he said.

Pendergrass said an emergency meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce in Beijing was called today to discuss the reported threat.

It said Americans should not be lured into conversations with strangers and should not stop where crowds have gathered as a result of a traffic accident or supposed misunderstanding.

Sandinistas report progress in talks, but Contras still unhappy

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government reported some progress in peace talks with U.S.-backed rebels after both sides accused each other of negotiating in bad faith.

The rebels, known as Contras, said today would be the last try at talks aimed at negotiating a definitive settlement to the six-year civil war.

It will be the "moment of truth for the government," said rebel spokesman Bosco Matamoros. Rebel leader Roberto Ferrey said it is "now or never."

The Contras had agreed to extend a truce that began on March 21 until today. It was not immediately clear whether the fighting, which has killed more than 26,000 people would start again.

The Sandinistas say they will unilaterally observe a truce until June 30.

Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco said the fourth round of the talks, begun after a preliminary peace accord March 23, had run into snags after a positive start Tuesday.

"It has deterioriated, but it is pre-planned on the part of the (Reagan) administration and the Contras," he said.

He said there was a "conspiracy to rupture the talks" and blame the breakdown on the Sandinistas.

The rebels accused the Sandinistas of being evasive about when promised democratic reforms would be enacted, and Matamoros described the atmosphere of Wednesday's talks as "intense."

"In our view, a concrete result depends on the political goodwill of the government," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Deported Tatars not entitled to homeland, Soviets say

MOSCOW (AP) — The government said today that the Tatars Josef Stalin forcibly deported en masse from their Crimean homeland during World War II are not entitled to an autonomous homeland.

The announcement was a major setback for the ethnic group, whose members have been agitating for a return from what they consider exile in Central Asia to their ancestral lands on the Black Sea.

The report was issued by a commission headed by President Andrei A. Gromyko to study Tatar grievances that was formed after Tatar activists staged an extraordinary 21-hour demonstration in Red Square last summer.

Carried by the official Tass news agency, the report criticized individual groups of Crimean Tatars for "insisting that the issue of creating a Crimean autonomy be resolved first."

It said the Crimean Tatars, Turkic-speaking descendants of the Mongols, have been given greater employment and educational opportunities in the past year and...there are no grounds for establishing a Crimean autonomy."

The issue of disgruntled ethnic minorities has been a sensitive one for Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has acknowledged that appeasing the country's more than 100 national groups is among the Soviet Union's most pressing problems.

East Germans holding dog

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — East German's Communist authorities have refused to allow an 11-year-old dog to be reunited with its owners, who went to West Germany to visit relatives and refused to return, a newspaper says.

The mass-circulation Bild tabloid reported Wednesday that East German officials had turned down a request to allow Elsa, a Boxer, to rejoin Gerd and Brigitte Bornschein.

The two stayed in Duesseldorf rather than return to their home in Jena, where they had left the dog in the care of a relative, Bild said.

The newspaper said Elsa has refused to eat because it misses the family.

The tabloid quoted officials of West Germany's office of Inter-German Relations as saying they have interceded on behalf of the family.

Iraq claims warplane hit ship

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said today its warplanes hit a ship off Iran's Persian Gulf coast during the night, and Iran said its interceptors shot down an Iraqi jet in a dogfight over the waterway.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said one civilian was killed and six wounded when Iraq planes bombed a village near Sardasht in northwestern Azerbaijan province Wednesday.

The agency said the French-built Iraqi Mirage F-1 was shot down and exploded over the gulf.

There was no confirmation from Baghdad. But the official Iraqi News Agency reported that Iraqi helicopter gunships shot down an Iranian Bell 214 helicopter today over the northern sector of the gulf war battlefront.

Baghdad Radio, monitored in Nicosia, quoted a military communique as saying Iraq fighter-bombers carried out the "accurate and effective" shipping raid Wednesday night.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT

TO: All women who, since January 31, 1985, applied for, or were discouraged from applying for production, warehouse or driver positions with Sierra Spring Water Co.

This notice is being given by Order of the Court to women who may be members of a class of women affected by settlement of a lawsuit called VASQUEZ V. SIERRA SPRING WATER CO., No. CIV S-86-1272 LKK (E.D. Cal). The lawsuit claims that SIERRA SPRING WATER CO. ("SIERRA") discriminated against women in hiring production, and warehouse workers and truck drivers in its facilities throughout the United States since 1985. SIERRA has denied any wrongdoing and denies that it discriminated against women.

A hearing has been scheduled by the Court to consider the settlement, on June 30, 1988 at 4 p.m. before the Honorable Lawrence K. Karlton at the address below. If the court approves this settlement all claims by class members against SIERRA for sex discrimination in hiring will be finally resolved in accordance with the terms of the settlement.

IF YOU ARE A CLASS MEMBER, YOU HAVE THREE POSSIBLE COURSES OF ACTION AT THIS TIME:

1. You can decide to take no action, in which case you will automatically be included in the class. As a member of the class you will not be able to bring any separate court action against SIERRA based upon claims of sex discrimination in hiring.

2. You may comment on or object to the proposed settlement. If you wish to have your comments or objections considered at the settlement hearing, you must file them in writing, on or before June 23, 1988 with the Clerk of the Court at:

Clerk, United States District Court
650 Capitol Mall
Sacramento, CA 95814
Re: Vasquez v. Sierra Spring Water Co.
No. CIV S-86-1272 LKK

IF YOU DO NOT MAKE YOUR OBJECTIONS BY THAT DATE, YOU WILL LOSE THE RIGHT TO OBJECT. BOTH the envelope and the document inside MUST contain the case name and number. If you do so comment or object, you have the right to appear personally or through an attorney at the hearing described above to present your comments or objections to the court. Except with special permission of the Court, you will not be permitted to object or comment at the hearing, if your comments or objections are not received in writing by June 23, 1988.

3. If you do not wish to be part of the settlement, and thus wish to preserve your right to file your own lawsuit, you must file a written request (letter or postcard) to be excluded from the class with the Clerk of the Court at the address given above, no later than June 23, 1988.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

The only complete statement of the terms of the proposed class action settlement is contained in the proposed Consent Decree itself and the papers filed in support of it, which you have a right to examine and/or copy at the above address.

1. SETTLEMENT CLASS

The proposed Consent Decree resolves the claims of all actual and potential female applicants and deterred female applicants who, at any time since January 31, 1985, have been denied employment by SIERRA on account of their sex for the job positions of production or warehouse worker or truck driver, excluding long-haul driver.

2. MONETARY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

The proposed Consent Decree provides recruitment, hiring and promotion procedures, which SIERRA is required to follow. SIERRA is required to set aside a fund of $300,000 to be used exclusively for these purposes.

The proposed Consent Decree establishes a 30% goal for hiring of females in these job openings in California and a 25% goal for hiring of females in these job openings outside California. These goals will last 7 years unless SIERRA increases the percentage of women employed in class positions to 20%.

The proposed Consent Decree requires that SIERRA set aside a fund worth $200,000 for enforcement of the Decree. Every year it fails to meet the goals described above, a portion of the fund will go towards recruiting more women. Every year that Company meets the goals a portion of the fund will be returned to it.

The proposed Consent Decree imposes detailed reporting obligations to allow monitoring of SIERRA's compliance with the requirements of the Decree by plaintiffs' counsel.

The proposed Consent Decree will require SIERRA to pay $33,000 to named plaintiffs Vasquez, T.; Smith, S.; Butler, D.; George, R. and $67,000 to be divided between the following women ONLY: Canedo, Q.; Castanedo, M.; Drumheller, L.; Fryar, M.; Gayfield, K.; Helmhout, K.; Lopez, L.; Miranda, S.; Morales, R.; Neely, Y.; Nielson, M.; Rodriguez, A.; Salinas, I.; Sullivan, M.; Todd, L.

The proposed Consent Decree requires that SIERRA donate $50,000 to Equal Rights Advocates to be used to eliminate barriers to the employment of women in blue-collar jobs.

3. ATTORNEYS' FEES

The amount of costs and attorneys' fees to be paid to class counsel will be determined by the Court and will not be paid out of the sums listed above.

HOW TO FIND OUT MORE

If you have questions about the proposed Consent Decree, the settlement hearing or this lawsuit you may contact the attorneys who represent the class, Farnsworth, Saperstein & Seligman, 505 Fourteenth Street, Suite 1150, Oakland, CA 94612, (415) 763-9800. There will be no charge to answer your questions.

BY ORDER OF THE COURT:

DATED: May 5, 1988

THE HONORABLE
LAWRENCE K. KARLTON
UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT JUDGE
May 19, 26, 1988
June 2. 9. 1988

LEGAL NOTICE AND NEWS RELEASE

In accordance with provisions of Section 9 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended, the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission (PBRPC) will conduct a public hearing for the purpose of discussing the Planning Commission's intention to request Section 9 UMTA funds for planning purposes. The PBRPC is proposing to request $40,000 from UMTA to be matched with $10,000 Planning Commission funds for a total planning project cost of $50,000. The proposed Program of Projects for which the Section 9 planning funds are being requested will also be discussed.
The proposed 1988-89 Program of Projects for the Midland-Odessa Urbanized Area is:
1. Administration
2. Data Collection and Analysis
3. Routine Review
4. Long Range Planning
5. Transportation System Management
a) Continue to coordinate with Private Transportation Providers
b) Continue Transportation Services Monitoring and Evaluation and Possible Transportation Coordination
c) Continue to accumulate data for a transit study update and for a Title VI update
d) Participate in the Census Bureau/MPO Cooperative Assistance Program for the 1990 Census
6. Transportation Improvement Program
7. Elderly and Handicapped Planning
8. Documents

A detailed spending plan for these projects is include in the proposed 1988-89 Unified Planning work Program; a copy of the UPWP and the Program of Projects can be reviewed at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission offices between 8:00 A. and 5:00 PM, Monday through Friday. The Public Hearing will be held in the conference room of the PBRPC located at 2514 Pliska Drive, Midland International Airport, from 10:00 A. to 12:00 Noon, Thursday, June 16, 1988. For additional information, contact Jerry Tschauner at 915/563-1061.
