Business survey talks at Chamber

Discussion of a recent business retention and expansion survey will take place at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce meeting room Wednesday at 3 p.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Officials said they hope the survey will help local residents better understand the business climate in the community. Business owners as well as private individuals are welcome to attend.

The survey was sponsored by Southwestern Bell, the chamber, Howard College, the Private Industry Council and Midland College's Center for Business and Economic Development.

Chamber board sets open house

The board of directors of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce invite the public to view the chamber's newly remodeled building between 3 and 6 p.m. Thursday.

The building, 215 W. Third St., was remodeled so the chamber and Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. could be housed jointly in the structure.

Mitchell officials hold budget talks

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County Commissioners Court met today for the second of three budget workshop meetings scheduled through Wednesday.

County Judge Ray Mayo said commissioners on Monday heard reports on the budgets for each of the departments and that no figures have been totaled for the 1991-92 budget year.

Mayo said he will have a better idea Thursday on what proposed expenses and expected revenues will be.

Commercial license course at Howard

Budget may not fund new programs

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring City Council members scrutinized a proposed 1991-92 city budget Monday that, even with a slight tax rate increase, would fund no new programs or capital purchases.

It was the first of a series of work sessions for design of a new budget and its resulting ad valorem tax rate.

"If we're going to include any new programs or fund any needed capital, there are going to be cuts made," said Assistant City Manager Tom Decell today. "We've presented the council with a budget that provides the essential services to keep the city going."

Council members present, all but Pat DeAnda, agreed to work out a funding plan that would hold property taxes at the effective rate — the rate that would generate the same amount of revenue used during the previous fiscal year.

According to city figures, the effective tax rate is 64 cents per $100 of valuation. The 1990-91 ad valorem tax rate was 57 cents per $100 of value, but property values have dropped an estimated $32,554,774.

Mayor Max Green said the proposed budget includes a decrease in general fund revenues of $225,000 at the previous tax rate. At the effective rate, the shortfall would be about $50,000.

"But we're still talking about a budget with no new programs, no new fire trucks and no new police cars," Green said.

The council questioned Fire Chief Frank Anderson about his proposed budget of $1,455,370 — $29,610 less than last year. It includes slight decreases in salary, services and allows no money for new equipment purchases.

Anderson discussed an unfunded new program that would add three firefighters to the department. The State Board of Insurance earlier this year cited the department as undermanned, a deficiency that could increase the city's insurance key rate by about 4 cents. The key rate is a figure used to determine commercial and residential insurance rates.

"The (state board's) recommended minimum is 15 firemen on shift every day," Anderson said. He said he expects to use all of his allotted funds for overtime pay because of the shortages.

Police officers, airpark employees and private citizens assist as emergency medical technicians give first aid to Karen Schenk, who crashed Monday while launching a hang glider. Schenk, of Los Alamos, N.M., was listed in critical condition at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock early today.

Glider pilot seriously hurt

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

A hang glider pilot sustained multiple serious injuries after crashing at the Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark Monday, authorities said.

Karen Schenk, 26, of Los Alamos, N.M., was treated at Scenic Mountain Medical Center's emergency room after the crash. She was transported to Lubbock's Methodist Hospital by helicopter several hours later, where she remains in critical condition.

A nursing supervisor said Schenk was in the hospital's surgical intensive care unit. She would not discuss the pilot's injuries.

Schenk was part of a group of pilots flying gliders at the airpark by towing them on the back of a truck. Friends said the eight-year flying veteran, who normally launched her glider on foot from the side of a mountain, was taking her eighth flight by the towing method when the accident occurred.

An eyewitness said Schenk's glider was only about 75 feet in the air when it made an abrupt turn and dipped toward the concrete airstrip.

"She was up to about 75 feet when suddenly it made an abrupt turn," said David Jones, owner of Liberty Machine at the airpark. "I was outside working and I told my partner it looked like she had gone down."

Jones and other area employees, after calling 911, went to the crash scene, flagged down the tow driver and tried to help.

Big Spring Police responded, and two American Medical Transport medics were on the scene quickly, Jones said. An ambulance arrived a short time later.

Airpark employees and private citizens assisted emergency personnel in removing Schenk from the glider.

Geoff Loyns, a pilot who had been flying with Schenk and her boyfriend, Tom Ellis, said Schenk underwent emergency surgery early today. Her father was en route from southern California early today, and Ellis is at the Lubbock hospital, Loyns said.

He and fellow pilots have been analyzing the crash.

"Three witnesses said she released (from the tow vehicle) at 75 feet," he said. "She wasn't climbing and I guess she asked for too much pressure (pull on the line). ... As she released with a right turn, the glider was relieved of all this pressure and did a wing-over straight into the ground."

Ellis and Loyns were flying cross-country when the accident occurred and were contacted by radio.

Pilots are expected to continue flying today, Loyns said.

Property valuations lowered

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Protest hearings for property tax valuations in Howard County began Monday with five property values, originally tagged at a total value of $479,500, being lowered by 66 percent.

Hearings on 80 protests filed this year, following the first full reappraisal of property by the Howard County Appraisal District since 1982, are scheduled through Friday. The last day to file a protest is Friday.

"Today went about like I expected it to go," Howard County

Chief Appraiser Keith Toomire said of the Monday hearings, which were conducted on business personal property disputes by the Appraisal Review Board.

Toomire said it was not unusual that some personal property values were reduced by the board by as much as half or more. Some property owners did not report personal property they owned or reported property incorrectly, he said. As a result, some values were intentionally set high.

"Most people wouldn't have had to go in front of the board if they would have had a rendition (report) or a good rendition," he said. "For what we had to do, yeah, it's typical. After so many letters and so many phone calls, you set a value to get their attention."

Toomire also said the number of protests filed is not unusual either. Last year, when only a partial reappraisal of property in the county was conducted, 78 protests were filed.

Today, the review board was scheduled to hear protests on mineral and industrial values. On Wednesday through Friday, real estate protests are scheduled to be

August election:

Coahoma board against property tax

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

Trustees for the Coahoma Independent School District agreed that the personal property tax on the upcoming ballot for the Aug. 10 election will create problems for the district.

"We need to be opposed to that. It would be a nightmare — we'd never get a certified tax role out to adopt a budget," said Gary Rotan, superintendent.

Jim Wright, president for the board, said, "If they think this is going to save some money, it's not; it's going to cost money."

After an executive session that lasted more than an hour, the trustees approved unanimously the superintendent's recommendation to hire Susan Parsons as special education teacher for the district and Sarah Crippen as curriculum director.

Jim Mathison requested discussion among the board members concerning Jane Begy, the curriculum director who resigned and then petitioned the board to be reinstated. Wright declared the board in executive session, and when the trustees reassembled in open session, no discussion followed.

The trustees accepted the resignations of Truman Meissner, girls high school basketball coach, and Rhonda Gibbs, third-grade teacher. Meissner has accepted a position with the Killeen district, and Gibbs resigned for family reasons.

Meanwhile, Brett Biggers of Global Roofing Consultants told the board that roofing repairs for the junior and senior high schools would be complete by the end of July.

"The progress has been above my expectations. I'm very confident you've gotten what you paid for out of this contractor. It'll be relatively maintenance-free for the life of the roof, 20 years," Biggers said.

He also said the trustees were welcome to view the finished work, and the area would be cleared from all construction materials before the contractors finished.

"In my opinion, the old roof was borderline from splitting wide open. I'd term it extremely poor to poor condition, so much asphalt and gravel had been applied to hold the roof together," Biggers said.

In other business, the trustees:

- Awarded bids for the milk, bread, teaching supplies, custodial supplies and fuel to Grady Walker LP Gas Co. of Big Spring.

The fuel supply bids were awarded to the only company that submitted a bid. Phillip Reid said he hoped to receive more bids for the next year.

• Tabled the bid on the food supplies, due to discrepancies with the amounts. Jim Wright said, "For instance, we've got stew meat at $2.10 a pound from McLane, at $1.99 a pound from Ben E. Keith, and at $30.06 a pound from White Swan. There's something wrong there, folks."

The trustees attempted to award the bid on a line-item option, but business manager John VanDever explained the award must be all or nothing.

Wright asked VanDever to contact the companies and request representatives meet to clear up the confusion.

- Approved the district's policies, known as Update 39, on first reading. The trustees said they will familiarize themselves with the policies and return for final reading and approval at the next meeting, scheduled for Aug. 12.

- Voted 4-3 against tape recording executive sessions. Jim Wright, Phillip Reid, Jimmy Sterling and Ricky Stone voted against the measure, while Guy White, Bennie Fishback and Jim Mathison voted for the recordings. The sessions will be recorded by certified minutes, as usual.

- The first meeting for the budget workshop was scheduled for July 24 at 7 p.m. in the board room of the administration building.

Rate increase hearing begins

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission today continued its hearing into a $442 million rate increase request by TU Electric, the Dallas-based utility that serves nearly one-third of the state.

On Monday, the first day of the hearing, the commission denied requests by the state ratepayers' advocate that Chairman Paul Meek step aside and that a report recommending a TU Electric rate increase be rejected.

However, the commission did vote to allow a legal hearing on evidence having to do with communication among PUC staff members and administrative judges.

A panel of PUC administrative law judges recommended the utility be given a $353.8 million rate hike. But Public Counsel Luis Wilmot has urged the PUC not to consider that recommendation, saying there was improper communication between PUC staff who testified in the case and the judges.

The commission voted 3-0 Monday not to suppress the report. Commissioner Jo Campbell said the communications fell within a policy adopted by the agency in 1987, and that advocates could challenge the policy in court.

Wilmot said he would do so. "We don't mind taking it to the courts at all, because to us, I don't think it's a fair process. And that process has to be changed. None of the parties should be satisfied with this process," he said.

Wilmot said the Office of Public Utility Counsel also would appeal Meek's decision not to remove himself from the case.

Meek is a stockholder and board chairman of Fina Inc., formerly American Petrofina, which has sold fuel to TU Electric. Utility officials say $8.9 million of their $7 billion to $8 billion in gas and fuel oil purchases from 1983 to 1989 were from American Petrofina.

"Sir, your conflict involving Fina permeates this whole case," Stephen Fogel, assistant public counsel, told Meek. "We raise a continuing objection to his participation in this case."

But Meek refused, saying his ties to Fina had been investigated before he was confirmed to serve on the commission by the Texas Senate. In addition, the amount of trade between TU Electric and Fina has little significance to either company, he said.

Envelope-stuffing offers bilk many WESLACO (AP) — Companies that offer financial success through envelope-stuffing offers have bilked Rio Grande Valley residents of hundreds of thousands of dollars, the South Texas Better Business Bureau warns.

"It's a million-dollar a year scam. They prey on people who have credit problems or middle income families, promising them huge profits usually for easy at-home work," said Harold Palmer, president of the South Texas BBB in Weslaco.

Palmer says he knows of at least six "envelope stuffing operations" in the Valley that have "hinged on the edge of chain letter scams" for years.

People who inquire about the offers after seeing them in newspapers are told to send between $10 and $20 to a post office box for directions on how to start up their own business stuffing envelopes, Palmer said.

The directions show them how to make money by obtaining a post office box, taking out ads and recruiting others to get into the envelope-stuffing business.

People usually spend several hundred dollars to obtain a kit before stuffing a single envelope, Palmer said.

Officials deny they withheld HIV rate

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials at the University of Texas deny allegations that they held the release of a study on the HIV infection rate among student health center patients because it could damage the school's reputation.

The study revealed that nine of 1,000 — or nearly one of 100 — patients tested at the student health center last year were infected with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday.

Student health center officials acknowledged last week they knew the preliminary findings of the AIDS study for several months, but have dismissed charges that they withheld the information for political reasons.

"It may seem like we were keeping it under wraps, but believe me, that was not our intention," said Dr. Scott Spear, who coordinated the survey at the health center and heads the UT-Austin Committee on HIV disease.

"I think it is important information for students to have and the community to have," Spear said. "I just think it needs to be complete. We were waiting for the national data and the demographic information."

Lobbyists inundate session

AUSTIN (AP) — With billions of dollars and a major reorganization of state government at stake, the Legislature finds itself surrounded by scores of lobbyists as the special session starts.

Approximately 850 lobbyists were registered with the secretary of state's office Monday — the first day of the session.

Many of them will be active participants in trying to influence state budget appropriations, the needed taxes, or any other issue that might come up in the 30-day overtime session.

Lobbyists say they foresee a tough time as they try to protect their clients in the face of a mandate by Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis to shake up the bureaucracy.

"The big three are really pulling together," said Cliff Johnson, a lobbyist, who has served as a state representative and aide to former Gov. Bill Clements.

One of Johnson's newest clients is the Texas A&M University former students association, one of several influential groups that will lobby against proposed changes in higher education funding proposed by State Comptroller John Sharp.

Johnson said that higher education officials are more worried than they have ever been because of the mood sweeping across the state to cut spending.

"She (Richards) has got her hand on the heartbeat of Texas," Johnson said.

Richards said higher education representatives who have raised concern about proposed budget cuts were using inaccurate figures. The officials have said they stand by their estimates.

"Even with the proposed cuts, more money will flow into higher education than currently does, and it should," Richards said.

Lawmakers face a projected $4.8 billion deficit to pay for an approximately $57 billion budget that would continue the current level of services for 1992-93.

Richards said the Legislature's first priority will be consideration of Sharp's audit of state government — a budget-cutting, fee-raising plan to save $4 billion.

Aside from a lottery — which would yield an estimated $450 million the first year — Richards said lawmakers should restructure the state's major business tax, called the franchise tax, which is based on capital investment.

All these initiatives will take the full 30-day session, and perhaps more, according to Lewis. The current two-year budget cycle ends Aug. 31.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said it would be difficult to balance the budget without some tax increase.

Even if the Legislature adopts much of Sharp's plan, voters endorse a lottery and lawmakers reform the franchise tax, Montford said a 5-cent increase may be required on the gasoline tax.

Without a lottery, Montford said an increase in the 6¼ percent sales tax may be needed.

But Republicans say they will not accept a tax increase.

Midland Rep. Tom Craddick, head of the House Republican Caucus, said the GOP would offer budget cuts beyond those presented in Sharp's plan.

"And at that point, I think it's going to be up to members of the Legislature to decide whether or not they want to do the cuts or they want to have additional taxes," he said.

Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston, said public sentiment is against new levies: "People are sick and tired of higher taxes, refuse to pay them, and demand that we pass a budget with no new taxes."

Secretary abducted

CENTERVILLE (AP) — A Lee College admissions secretary abducted Monday by a gunman who wanted his grades changed was able to escape four hours later, some 170 miles from the Baytown school.

Marlene Geldard, 52, was reported "in good health" late Monday after she walked nearly two hours to a minister's home in Centerville and telephoned her family in La Porte.

A dispatcher at the Leon County Sheriff's office said Arthur Lee Dunbar, 20, of Centerville, had been arraigned on kidnapping charges, but other charges were pending late Monday. He was being held without bond, pending further investigation, said the dispatcher.

Witnesses told police a man initially came to the admissions office, asking that someone call a security guard because he had locked his keys in the trunk of his older-model Lincoln Towne Car.

Ms. Geldard later went down the hall and did not return. Witnesses told police they saw her entering the green Towne Car with a man matching the description of the flustered motorist.

Literacy problems hold back many workers

HOUSTON (AP) — Americans are finding the workplace increasingly sophisticated and highly technical and many are being left behind because of their literacy problems, Labor Secretary Lynn Martin said today.

"The sad reality is that many American workers have not kept pace," Martin said in an address to the National Council of La Raza's annual convention here. The Hispanic civil rights umbrella group has 130 affiliates around the nation.

"Assembly line jobs that require brawn and not brains don't exist," she said. "The same worker today must be literate enough to read complex manuals, analyze data and make judgments."

"Yet somewhere between 20 million and 40 million American workers have as adults extraor-

EL PASO — A man sifts through flood waters for his possessions after torrential rains caused flooding in areas of Juarez, Mexico, squatters' neighborhoods that are located just across the Rio Grande from El Paso. The areas have inadequate drainage and lack paved roads. No one was hurt in the flooding, which caused extensive damage to several homes and businesses.

Conference draws nearly 1,000 participants

ADDISON (AP) — The Little People of America National Conference has drawn hundreds of participants searching for a brief sabbatical from the so-called "normal" world.

"This is a week of fantasy," said Barbara Stidman, one of the conference organizers. "Because for one week (we're) in total control. You don't feel anything around you."

Gone, for a week, are the prejudicial caricatures perpetuated by circuses and folklore.

"That's where they thought all dwarfs went," she said.

By "they," Mrs. Stidman, 45, of Arlington, meant the "average" height population. She, like many other little people, deliberately avoid the word "normal."

"What is normal?" asked actor Billy Barty, the group's founder. "We're getting there, it's a long battle. People still have the attitude — well, look in the dictionary. A dwarf is described as a mean, nasty little person, even today," he said.

Barty and 800 others attending the conference have one of 80 types of dwarfism, caused when the body's hormones, cells or chromosomes fail to develop properly. By definition, dwarfs are no taller than 4½ feet.

Since 1957, when the first conference drew 21 people to Reno, Nev., the roughly 4,800-member group has met annually for a week of seminars and events catering to the issues and problems faced by little people.

There's a fashion show with tips on how to alter "average" people's clothing or make your own. There's also plenty of free time for dances, basketball games and other activities that little people usually are left out of.

One of the top issues today is that of job discrimination. Although not as bad as 10 years ago, it still exists.

"Your resume can be terrific," said Margarita Fernandez, 32, who lives in the San Francisco area. "Then you walk in, and all the doors turn around."

Ms. Fernandez, who works both as a buyer for Hewlett-Packard and as an actress and stuntwoman for LucasFilm Ltd., credits her family background for her success.

"Being one of five children, I never knew I was different. I wasn't treated any differently and I had a lot of support," said Ms. Fernandez. "The rest of my family was average size."

parents and businesses.

"To have any impact, every parent, every person who cares is going to have to get reinvolved in the system," she said. "We need business not just to complain but to do something. It has to move beyond the Washington Beltway ... across this nation."

"You and I share a common goal, to ensure that individuals are able to utilize their God-given talents to the fullest extent possible."

She also put in a pitch for the U.S.-Mexico free trade agreement, saying it will help the economy of Mexico and the buying power of Mexican workers. She also said it would not have made sense for the United States to back the new democracies of Eastern Europe and ignore its neighbor to the south.

Disabled protest

AUSTIN — Lee Sanders of Houston, right, joins members of American Disabled for Attendant Programs Monday in protesting for improved services for the disabled. About 40 people occupied Gov. Ann Richards' reception room Monday at the State Capitol, demanding that she sign a resolution calling for a shift in funds from state schools and nursing homes to more community based services.

Redistricting will wait

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards says lawmakers working on a plan for Texas' new congressional districts shall draw no map before it's time.

Richards said she wants the Legislature's special session that opened Monday to first concentrate on spending cuts, agency consolidation, budget writing and paying for it. Then, they can look at other topics.

Richards said redistricting will get attention because the Legislature, not the courts, should determine the geographic areas Texas congressmen represent.

The Legislature must draw new boundaries for congressmen, and state House and Senate members, after each 10-year census.

Lawmakers took care of the legislative districts during their regular session, which ended May 27. But they put off action on the congressional lines. Texas is scheduled to gain three more seats in the U.S. House, for a total of 30.

Although census officials acknowledged missing about 560,000 Texans in the count, U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher refused Monday to raise the state's official tally of 16.9 million residents.

Texas was one of several states seeking to have its population count raised.

Richards said she was "very disappointed" over Mosbacher's decision, because it denies the state additional federal aid and "proper representation in Congress."

Pay-to-play schemes discussed

FORT WORTH (AP) — Making students pay to play sports or participate in other extracurricular activities is a possibility for three school districts hit hard by Texas' school finance reform law.

Districts with higher revenues from local property taxes will receive less money from the state in the attempt to even out the distribution of Texas funds to local districts.

Tarrant County school systems in Arlington, Grapevine-Colleyville and Southlake Carroll are considering the "pay for play" fee, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Monday.

The concept has generated interest statewide, said Bill Farney, athletic director of the University Interscholastic League.

A fee of up to $50 could be requested from students who want to play high school football to cover the costs of uniforms, shoes and other items.

"It hurts the poor kid, the blue-collar kid," said Arlington Sam Houston football coach Ken Oze. "I think your more affluent schools, it may not. At Highland Park (an affluent district in Dallas County), if you have a participation fee, big deal. But we don't have that."

A $10 fee per activity or sport would generate $94,060, or 10.4 percent of the athletic department maintenance and operational budget, Arlington district figures show. A $95 fee would generate $896,155, or 100 percent of the budget, based upon the number of participants during 1989-90.

Students in Arlington already pay for such things as towel laundering, uniform cleaning, extra uniforms and training camps.

However, under the user fee system, students might be charged for almost every activity that is not part of the regular curriculum.

Pay phones reject coins at night

CHICAGO (AP) — Pay phones in two drug-ravaged neighborhoods no longer take coins at night as Illinois Bell tries to disconnect dealers from their buyers.

"Illinois Bell is trying to take the phones out of the hands of criminals and make them available to our customers when they need them," said Sam Foster, the company's public communications manager.

Foster said Monday that for the next three months, between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., more than 50 phones in the two neighborhoods will work only for emergency, operator-assisted or credit card calls.

"We don't think many drug dealers will want to use those options because then there will be records of their calls," said Illinois Bell spokesman Geoff Potter.

He said residents of the South and West Chicago neighborhoods complained that drug dealers tied up phones taking orders.

Jay Miller, who heads the Illinois chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the plan discriminates against poor people and invades callers' privacy.

But ACLU officials had no immediate plans to file a lawsuit. "We don't think it's going to work at all, anyway," Miller said.

Two of largest banks may merge

NEW YORK (AP) — The proposed marriage of Chemical Banking Corp. and Manufacturers Hanover Corp. has more going for it than the typical courtship of two giant banks.

They seem to like each other, live in the same neighborhood and above all, know it will be the ultimate marriage of convenience.

The combination — the biggest bank merger in U.S. history — would create a bank with more than $135 billion in assets, second only to Citicorp's $217 billion.

"I believe that it's an excellent fit," Martin Lowy, a bank specialist at the law firm Rosenman & Colin in New York, said

Monday. "I think that as much as two companies can be compatible, they are."

A $2 billion merger of two of the nation's oldest and largest banks doesn't appear to face the obstacles that have killed proposed mergers in the past: conflicting egos and corporate cultures.

"The friendship for one another gave us the confidence that we had the capacity to pull off what will be the largest merger in banking history in this country," Chemical Chairman Walter V. Shipley said at a news conference with Manufacturers Chairman John F. McGillicuddy.

The men have known each other about 30 years.

Bert Convy dies from cancer at 57

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bert Convy, the Emmy award-winning game show host who also starred in movies, TV series and on Broadway, died Monday of cancer. He was 57.

Convy, who won an Emmy in 1977 as host of the CBS-TV show "Tattletales," was also the familiar moderator of such shows as "Win, Lose or Draw" and "Super Password." He was also a guest host on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

A star first baseman at North Hollywood High School, Convy signed with the Philadelphia Phillies one day after graduating and played for their farm teams in Klamath Falls, Ore., and Miami, Okla.

He began dabbling in acting while a student at the University of California, Los Angeles, in the 1950s, and appeared in the musical "The Billy Barnes Revue" in Los Angeles before moving to New York. There, he appeared in 10 Broadway shows, including the original casts of "Cabaret" and "Fiddler on the Roof."

Dormitory deaths

NAIROBI, Kenya — Schoolgirls pick through their belongings in the dormitory of St. Kizito Mixed Secondary School in Meru district, Kenya, Sunday. About 300 male students, angered by the girls refusal to participate in a protest against the headmaster, stormed the dormitory Saturday night in an assault that left 19 schoolgirls dead and nearly 70 injured.

Summit leaders offer support, but not cash

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the world's richest nations today offered Mikhail Gorbachev strong support — but not a bundle of cash — for economic reforms and "new thinking" in the Soviet Union. They also pledged backing for President Bush's new push for Middle East peace.

Gorbachev, in a letter sent in advance to the summit heads, painted a bleak picture of conditions in the Soviet Union, citing critical shortages of food, medicine and products for children. He said the hardships "pose a threat to democratic transformations."

Gorbachev said his meeting on Wednesday with Bush and other leaders "may mark a turning point" in the struggle to transform his economy. However, Western officials already have reacted coolly to his letter, saying it was vague and did not go far enough.

Today's summit focus was on the release of a political communique, giving a verbal boost to Gorbachev, who is seeking Western aid for his beleaguered economy. "Our support for the process of fundamental reform in the Soviet Union remains as strong as ever," it said.

Laying the groundwork for his appeal, Gorbachev told the leaders that East-West cooperation had succeeded "in making a radical shift from confrontation to understanding, from suspicion to trust."

Along those lines, today's communique said, "We believe that new thinking in Soviet foreign policy... should be applied on a global basis."

With the allies split on a big aid package to Gorbachev, the leaders are not expected to provide much more than technical assistance in fields such as banking, energy and food distribution, as well as limited membership in international banking institutions.

Foreign policy issues commanded center stage on the second day of the summit, pushing disputes on trade talks, interest rates and farm subsidies far into the shadows.

Bush said there was "strong, strong support" among the allies for renewed bombing of Iraq unless Saddam Hussein discloses and destroys his nuclear program. And he declared "a breakthrough" in Mideast peace talks because of Syria's acceptance of a U.S. proposal for Arab-Israeli talks.

World

Party makes relief high priority

NANJING, China (AP) — As widespread flooding ravages the countryside of eastern China, the ruling Communist Party — mindful of the historical link between disasters and peasant rebellions — has made relief a top priority.

The army, whose image was tarnished by its brutal crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in June of 1989, has played a key role in that relief.

In Build China Village, west of the provincial capital of Nanjing, soldiers put up tents for peasants whose homes were flooded.

The peasants said they were grateful.

At the Nanjing ferry terminal on the Yangtze River, where soldiers helped build flood walls, a huge banner drove home the point: "Without the People's Liberation Army the people would have nothing."

Nearly two months of heavy rains and flooding have killed about 1,700 people and left at least 2 million homeless.

But at almost any given time, an earthquake, hailstorm, typhoon, blizzard or drought can strike some part of this vast country, adding misery to the hard-scrabble existence of China's 800 million peasants.

One of the most unusual aspects of the current floods is the government's new willingness to show the damage and appeal for international help.

Couple wins $320,000 for conviction

DARWIN, Australia (AP) — A couple convicted in the death of their infant daughter, who they said was dragged away by a wild dog, or dingo, was awarded $320,000 in damages today by the government. Most went for legal fees.

The story of Lindy and Michael Chamberlain, whose convictions were overturned after a lengthy legal battle, inspired the movie "A Cry in the Dark."

The baby, Azaria, vanished from the couple's campsite near Ayers Rock in central Australia in August 1980. Her body was never found.

In 1982, Mrs. Chamberlain was convicted of murder. Her husband was found guilty of being an accessory after the fact. Many people said they believed Mrs. Chamberlain was guilty simply because she showed little outward emotion during the trial.

Mrs. Chamberlain was sentenced to life in prison, but was released in 1986 after the infant's jacket, missing since the disappearance, was found.

In 1988, the Northern Territory government threw out the convictions.

Northern Territory Attorney-General Daryl Manzie said that $306,000 of the award was being paid to the Seventh Day Adventist Church. The church, where Chamberlain once served as a minister, had covered the couple's legal expenses.

Mandela wins permission to appeal

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Winnie Mandela today won permission to appeal her conviction on kidnapping and assault charges, giving her a reprieve from starting a six-year jail term.

Mrs. Mandela beamed when the judge delivered his decision following a brief hearing in the Rand Supreme Court. Her husband, African National Congress President Nelson Mandela, kissed her.

Permission to appeal was granted by the same judge, M.S. Stegmann, who found Mrs. Mandela guilty after a sensational three-month trial.

Report ranks freedom level

A number of Third World governments are steaming about a new report, published by the U.N. Development Program, that seeks to rank — in addition to such factors as levels of income, improvements in health care and the increase in literacy — the degree to which peoples are free. In the U.N. context, this is revolutionary, since most member countries are anything but free, at least by Western standards.

This refreshing trend toward candor began last year when UNDP, one of the most useful and effective U.N. agencies — it occupies itself with development projects, not political rhetoric — began emphasizing the need for popular participation in the development process.

This year it went one better by saying with numbers what human rights agencies have done with compelling words for years: telling the truth about the suppression of human freedom. On a scale from zero to 40, for example — 40 being the highest level of freedom — Sweden scored highest at 38, Iraq was dead last at zero, others fell somewhere in between. The United States got a 33, making it 13th among 88 countries rated.

What's so interesting about the results, as the report states, is the "high correlation between human development and human freedom." Thus did very poor countries like China, Zaire, Bangladesh and Kenya score very low on both scales, while somewhat more developed countries like India, Egypt, Nigeria and Mexico did somewhat better on the freedom scale. (Costa Rica was the only developing country to score above 30.)

"Political freedom," the report says, "seems to have unleashed the creative energies of the people, and (to have led) to ever higher levels of income and social progress."

Surely that ought to please anyone who believes in human freedom. But that's just the problem: many regimes simply don't. Thus did a delegate from Kenya, whose human rights record grows more appalling every year, complain, on behalf of African countries generally, that they "strongly question" the U.N.'s right to publish such material. This from a bloc that approved the notorious anti-Israeli "Zionism equals racism" resolution in the General Assembly in the 1970s.

Not surprisingly, these world-class hypocrites now want to suppress future publication of the human freedom index. One of their concerns appears to be that wealthy nations, which contributed $1.4 billion to UNDP's aid program last year, may increasingly tie Third World aid to improvements in human rights, an idea whose time ought to have come long ago.

So far, UNDP is standing firm and says that, while some modifications may be necessary (most of the research was done five years ago), it plans to go on publishing the index. Write on!

Tragedy brings out the real Big Spring

To the editor:
You hear a lot of complaints about Big Spring. Some of these complaints may be justified and we should voice our opinions and try to set things right. But when tragedy strikes, the real Big Spring appears. The real Big Spring came to the front July 4 at Comanche Trail Lake. We, the family of Paul Holmes, can attest to that.

There are no words to express our love and gratitude to everyone who helped us through the most trying time we have ever faced. There were so many people involved and we don't want to overlook anyone.

To the young men who tried to save Paul, we will never forget what you did.
We would like to thank the AMT personnel, members of the fire department, police officers, Salvation Army, the drivers, volunteers in the boats and everyone who helped in some way. You were so kind and caring. We will never forget you.

Thank you, our pastor Brother Claude Craven, and the loving people of Trinity Baptist Church.

Paul was a typical teenage boy, full of life and hope. He was a quiet, polite young man. He was a Christian boy, who loved His Lord. He had a multitude of friends and people who loved him.

He will be missed.

Thank you, Big Spring.

To the editor:
I read Gary Shanks' egregious column, dated July 9, 1991. I think he owes an apology to the citizens of Coahoma. I found a shred of comfort in the column. I am relieved to know if I am called to serve our country in time of war, my parents will not have to worry about me. Gary suffered enough for all America while his wife was serving in Saudi.

Something different, nothing new

By EUNICE CHOATE
For the Herald

I don't think the young people who say they are bored to death, and without MTV there is nothing to do, are speaking for all the teenagers in town. I don't believe teenagers are any different inside than we were back in the 1950's. Their needs now are pretty much the same as ours were then.

Then, as now, the world was a mixture of good and evil, asininity and grace. What we had in West Texas in the '50's was good and it hasn't changed all that much.

We didn't have Pizza Hut, but we had Masters Drive-In. Hamburgers were 45 cents, and cheeseburgers were 50. The food was excellent, the service was great, and the company was the best in the world. We had each other. We were imbued with a sense of excitement that we didn't understand, but we went out almost every night to share it with our friends.

Our route was always the same: down Main Street to First, a U-turn in front of the train depot, and back up Main to 18th. We turned right at 18th, left onto Gregg, and pulled in at Masters which stood where Payless Shoesource is now. We bought cokes and had "eye contact" with the opposite sex. We laughed and flirted and gossiped. We were alive and living! We left Masters with everyone wanting more of everything. We drove through the City Park and then back to town to do it all over again. We were dragging Main.

We spent our summer days at the City Park pool. Those who didn't have jobs worked at home. We washed, ironed, cooked, cleaned and ran errands. We finished what we could before the pool opened, and left around four o'clock to run home and finish the rest. Boys with jobs sacked groceries at Safeway on Gregg Street, or at Piggly Wiggly on Runnels between 2nd and 3rd. Others set up pins at the bowling alley, hired out as golf caddies, or worked part time at Cosden. Some were lifeguards at the pool and thrilled the girls with their authority and their tans.

Often, after supper, when the dishes were washed and the kitchen floor was swept, we gathered in neighborhoods all over town to play kick-the-can or hide-and-seek. These games are best played at dusk, in twilight, when teenagers with crushes can duck behind a lilac bush or a trash can for one innocent kiss before getting on with the game.

When we weren't in our yards or at the pool, we went to the YM-CA across the street from the First Methodist Church. We played basketball, volleyball, and ping-pong. My friend Toni remembers taking fencing lessons one summer and Julie remembers ceramics classes. We all remember the dances.

Rock'n'roll was our music. We jitterbugged and slow-danced wherever we could plug in our portable record players — on patios and driveways and under the big park pavilion. We danced at Chubby's Patio across from the Terrace Drive-In, and the music of Hoyle Nix & His West Texas Cowboys when we could catch a ride to the Stampede.

We got our driver's licenses at 14, but, well into our later teens, we walked and rode bicycles. We got together any way we could. We played softball on vacant lots and Monopoly at someone's house. We gathered at Bell's Pharmacy, the State Drugstore, and Ritz Drug for cherry cokes, lime cokes, and each others' company. We avoided Walgreens because of the fast boys that hung out on that corner. Our reputations were important and we guarded them.

But we had our moments. There were vandals among us, but something about the character of our peer pressure kept the worst of the lot in line. Between 8th and 12th grades, our friends could do no wrong. We helped each other when we could and kept our mouths shut when we couldn't. We fell in and out of love as often as we fell into and out of the pool, and yesterday's love was today's louse, with no real harm done to anyone. We went to the Ritz every Friday night and Sunday afternoon to see, not the movie, but each other.

We did it all on the same streets the kids drive down today. The Sonic has replaced Masters, Gregg St. has replaced Main, and, if the kids don't dance in the park anymore, you can bet they're dancing somewhere. They still have eye-contact, still share secrets, and still watch out for their friends.

I can't believe they are any different than we were — MTV or no MTV.

Maybe communities like ours and individuals who feel called to serve the highest purposes can help persons who rely on drugs to have a good time to find better ways. I am in favor of the concerts at the amphitheater and golf, etc.

When will we see that drug use is taking our society down a wasteful and ugly path?

Some straight talk about beer in park

To the editor:
Maybe straight talk is not polite. Attempting to remain "polite" has tripped us up on the question of "sale of beer at Comanche Trail Amphitheatre." Lets talk straight to the question. What we are thinking (not saying) is: Should Taxpayers be expended to provide a place for individual profit from sales of a drug?

Alcohol is admitted to be a more socially expensive vice than the "hard drugs". We have ruled there can be no sales of hard drugs within certain distances from our schools. The youth who attend any concert are going to be below adult age; as at school they should be protected from a drug pushed by sale for profit.

Taxpayers own this land at the C.T. Park, Amphitheatre, Lake Park, and Golf Course. All the costs have to be backed up by tax money. . . . As a taxpayer I am not generous enough to want to furnish a "freebie" sales place for an alcohol merchant. Let that merchant own his own store, maintain it and pay taxes to the community. . . .

Could we permit the riders to bring their own drinks and enough to treat one or two buddies, but no sales on taxpayer-owned land? The same rule would apply at lakes and at the amphitheatre. B.Y.O.B. and no litter. B.Y.O.B. privilege continuing dependent upon no littering on that property.

I am a border-line diabetic. . . . a lover of sweets. At a store I restrict myself to avoid buying too many sweets. . . . With sweets in the house, all my control is gone. I bought it to eat. . . . B.Y.O.B. will probably have the same restraint on an individual who has trouble with self-restraint. It could be a help.

Recession limits taxpayers money too

To the editor:
A few days ago I heard a politician on TV, and he said that most certainly the state needed a state income tax to raise money because we are in a recession and there wasn't enough money. May he and all other politicians know that a recession limits the taxpayer's funds, too. Aren't we all becoming very tired of that old phrase, "Raise the taxes because the money available won't meet the proposed budget"? If the funds available won't meet the proposed budget, then it is high time to make a budget that will fit just the same as we individuals all do. Somewhere the mistaken belief has come that if we want something, it is a need, and we should have it regardless. Taxes are becoming larger each year, income tax goes up, and even sales tax has become a large percent.

We are told how well off we are, but look at our four trillion dollar indebtedness. No matter whether it is city, state, county or federal level, we must have common sense prevail. Taxpayers, let it be known how you feel.

Blame films, TV for LAPD excesses

The commission report from Los Angeles concerning its police department indicates that the organization was rife with brutality and lawlessness. It spelled out the LAPD excesses in shocking detail and called for the resignation of Daryl F. Gates who, up until recently, was the city's pillar of law and order.

What happened is anybody's guess. Mine is that the blame for most of the problem lies with the movie and television industries. They were producing so many feature films and TV dramas using L.A. Police Department personnel, that no one was paying any attention to what the regular police were doing out in the streets.

Whenever the movie studios needed police for a film, the most convenient organization to sign up was the LAPD. It was also the cheapest because the studios didn't have to go out of town on location for SWAT teams.

It reached the point that the more police shows Hollywood made, the more the LAPD was tied up. Gates had a larger number of men at Warner Brothers than he did at Watts. The police chief cooperated with the studios because he wanted his department to have a good image around the world. He succeeded in his mission until rank amateurs started taking home videos of his men without his permission.

When the home videos got much higher ratings than the fictional shows made at the studios, Gates was devastated. He couldn't understand why people would rather watch bad cops filmed by amateurs than good cops who were directed by top professionals. He even thought about having video cameras banned in L.A., or at least having the home videos rated X if they made his cops look bad.

The L.A. police, as portrayed by Disney Productions, was Gates' idea. You never saw cops use racial epithets or handcuff someone and then beat him up.

This was not only because Gates wouldn't permit it — neither would a sponsor.

There's no doubt that if members of the LAPD behaved as well on the streets as they did on the screen, the commission would have given the department a "10" for police performance. If Gates made a mistake, and no one said that he did, he assigned all his best behaved men to the movies — and all the underheads to go out and fight crime. The good guys never got to fight the bad guys, because they were too busy driving police cars for Paramount Pictures.

There is a belief that because the good police were given all the cushy jobs at Universal Studios, the underheads became jealous and took it out on the suspects they arrested. Those in the know were not surprised when the underheads got mad and beat up people for no good reason.

Some of his supporters say that Gates is getting a bad rap. When you receive a call from Columbia Pictures for 100 motorcycle policemen, no self-respecting police chief is just going to sit on his hands and do nothing.

The only reason that the police chief should be censured is if he knew what was going on. Common sense indicates that he did not. Gates was so tied up supplying police chases for Clint Eastwood there was no way for him to know that his men were using their baseball bats to exceed their authority.

The big question is, can Hollywood survive the latest LAPD flap? People believe it can. For every bad cop in the barrel, there is an Angie Dickinson doing her job anonymously and selflessly.

She is known around City Hall as a "good cop."

Gates and the L.A. Police Department wish they had a lot more like her.

Youthful mistake haunts jobseeker

DEAR ABBY: I am a 31-year-old married (with children) woman. I have an embarrassing secret.

When I was 20, I was arrested on a felony charge—transportation of pot into a prison. The charge was dropped to a misdemeanor, and I was given a one-year probation since I had never been in trouble before as an adult. I haven't been in any trouble since then.

I have noticed that on job applications certain questions are asked about "any arrests." I don't want to lie on a job application and risk being caught and later being fired—or even being sent to jail because of lying on the application. So, my question is this: Since my arrest was so long ago, is there a way for me to have it sealed so that I can put that part of my life behind me and not worry about it following me for the rest of my life?

Please don't print my name or address. — GOING STRAIGHT

DEAR GOING STRAIGHT: In some states, if the offender was under 21 years of age when the crime was committed and has subsequently proved to be of good character, the record can be expunged (destroyed). Consult a lawyer. It may cost a few hundred dollars, but the peace of mind would be well worth the price.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter from "Heartbroken in Lakewood, N.J.," the writer was distressed over the death of her pet from ingesting antifreeze left on the driveway, and cautioned your readers to hose down their driveways so that their pets are not poisoned.

Abby, unintentional acts of pollution are not only dangerous to residents and their pets, but have similar impacts on the fish and wildlife who are on the receiving end of our storm (drain) water. Most liquid substances washed into storm drains get dumped, untreated, into our rivers and lakes—where one pint of oil will produce a one-acre oil slick.

The Congress and states are attempting to clean up storm drainage as part of the Clean Water Act. Disposing of oil, antifreeze, paint or paint thinner, household cleansers and other substances by dumping them into gutters and storm drains not only damages the environment but is also a crime.

So, Abby, urge your readers to call their local public works department and find out where to dump used oil and how to properly dispose of other toxic liquids. Remember, for most of us, the water you wash away could be someone else's water supply! Please don't put anything down a gutter or storm drain that you wouldn't want to drink or swim in. —BERT McCOLLAM, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR MR. McCOLLAM: Consider it done! Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In reference to Fluffy, the sweet little dog who lapped up the antifreeze her owner left in the driveway, it isn't clear whether the Sunday mechanic collected most of the antifreeze and spilled a little, or just drained it on the driveway.

Abby, if the antifreeze killed Fluffy, just imagine what it would do to the environment if it were hosed off the driveway and into the ecosystem.

Please, tell your readers that ALL antifreeze (as well as oils) should be collected and disposed of properly. Shops that change oil must, by law, accept used oil. —J.H.K., HEMPSTEAD, N.Y.

Readers can write to Abby at P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Key: 'Don't let the little things get to you.'

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring native Randy Key said he decided a long time ago not to let disability slow him down.

Nine years ago, an automobile accident changed Key's life. When the truck his friend was driving was broadsided by another vehicle, Key, a passenger, was the most seriously hurt. He was paralyzed from the waist down and hasn't been able to walk since.

"The doctors first told me I wouldn't be able to walk, and I guess I accepted it," Key said. "I accepted it and I didn't. But you never give up hope."

Once an oilfield welder, Key took on a trade that, although different, was remarkably similar.

"I had a friend who worked in jewelry repair. She said I should come down during the day and learn the trade," Key said. "It's different, but along the same lines really. I picked it up pretty easy."

Now employed by Chaney's Jewelers & Gifts, Key repairs valuable, delicate pieces and mounts stones.

In his spare time, he hunts, goes fishing and practices his shooting skills with a local club. He drives a pickup truck equipped with hand controls and participates in activities with the Jaycees.

Key said being confined to a wheelchair changed his life, but didn't slow him down.

"I don't think I take things for granted as much as I used to," he said. "Before, I was always so busy, wrapped up in my work. I didn't notice things around me."

Soon after he learned he would be paralyzed from the waist down, Key said he was angry and depressed, common feelings. Being the father of two, however, he said he couldn't.

"I still feel the anger," he said. "But I don't let it get to me. I just put it away in a little box and leave it there."

His family, Key said, reacted typically as well. They wanted to help him with all the things he needed to learn to do for himself.

"That was hard. I had to learn to re-do things by myself," he said. "It helped me grow."

Now he frequently tells his friends and other people facing disability to enjoy every day to its fullest. On short vacation trips to Dallas, Key said he meets a lot of people in similar situations and tries to help them out with some advice.

"Don't let all the little things get to you," Key said. "Pay attention to what's going on around you. You never know what tomorrow's going to bring."

Hérons foul scenic Charleston park

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The little baby herons wandering around Washington Park on spindly legs may be cute, but the birds are forcing artists and tourists to be careful where they walk and when they look up.

From late winter through early summer, the yellow-crowned night herons nest in the popular park next to City Hall where office workers and tourists sit to enjoy the scenery or a bag lunch.

But during recent years, anyone who does so risks aerial assault by bird droppings.

"They eat crabs and shrimp. Someone referred to each of the droppings as being a quarter of a cup of the most foul liquid you can imagine," said Steve Livingston, city parks director.

And the problem is getting worse.

This year, 174 herons were counted in the 1.5 acre park during nesting season. Four years ago, there were no more than six. There could be 350 birds next spring, said Pris Massenburg, an ornithologist studying the birds.

Hérons migrate south for the winter. But the young tend to return to the nesting areas where they were fledged.

The park is the site of an art show held each spring during the Spoleto Festival U.S.A.

That's also about the time the aerial bombardment reaches its peak.

Sr. art showing

The first showing of the Sr. Citizen's "Just Do It" art class is scheduled Saturday, June 29th at the Fair Barn from 7:30 to 3:30.

The "Just Do It" art class meets each week at the Spring City Sr. Citizen Center on Thursdays from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, with 10 members — working in oils, pastels, pencil and watercolor.

Special worker for the month of June was Candy Andrew who works in pastels.

Haitian children's hunger fed with hope

By SHAWN G. HENRY
National Geographic

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti —

By 7 a.m. mothers are sitting quietly on the wooden benches inside the clinic, cradling their frail young children in their laps, waiting for their names to be called.

One by one they are shunted into a cramped, dimly lighted doctor's office, then to the pharmacy for medications. Next, each mother is handed a dollop of pink medicated soap and a small plastic tub in which to bathe her baby.

Once bathed, some babies and their mothers fill the clinic's small cafeteria, where they receive milk and soup. Although the food is intended only for children, many mothers share the meal. For some, like Ivse Dorsene, the daily visit to the clinic provides the only food of the day.

Dorsene, 26, and her daughter, Cristela, not yet 2, have been coming to the clinic for less than two months, but already Dorsene notices improvement in her child. "She could not walk or sit up before coming," she says. Now mobile and alert, Cristela is still the size of an infant. In Haiti, 12-year-olds often look 5.

A child of Cite Soleil, 3-year-old Noula Saenier is growing up in perhaps the poorest section of the poorest city in the Western Hemisphere, the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince.

But Haitians are hopeful that this pitiful pattern will change under the democratic administration of their recently inaugurated president, the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a priest from the slums who has championed the cause of the poor.

Up to 150 children a day receive care at the Center for Preventative Health, one of two prenatal and pediatric clinics operated by the Medical Social Complex of Cite Soleil. This "City of the Sun," an infamous slum of the Haitian capital of Port-au-Prince, is perhaps the poorest section of the poorest city in the Western Hemisphere.

More than 50 percent of children brought to the clinic suffer from malnutrition, some so severely that they show the telltale bloated bellies and reddened hair of third-degree malnutrition.

The cinder-block clinic is an oasis in Cite Soleil, where the harsh Haitian sun intensifies the stench rising from open sewers. When it rains and the ground turns to jelly, it is easy to sink up to the ankles in human and animal waste.

Row after row of wooden shacks, inhabited mostly by people fleeing the impoverished countryside, line the streets and dirt paths. Like many of Cite Soleil's 150,000 to 200,000 residents, Dorsene was driven to the city from the countryside by dreams of something better.

But both she and her husband are unemployed. The percentage of those unemployed in Cite Soleil is even higher than the nearly 50 percent unemployment rate for all of Haiti.

Although Cite Soleil's open sewers contribute to epidemics of sanitation-related diseases, malnutrition is the leading killer of the young.

A 1990 study by the Pan American Health Organization indicates that more than 21 percent of Haitian children age 5 and under suffer from malnutrition. Of every 1,000 Haitian children,

Only half of the children of a 35-year-old widow on the impoverished Haitian island of La Gonave, these youngsters show the strains of their meager existence. The pile of beans on the ground is their mother's share of the harvest from neighboring farms.

161 die before reaching age 5, the U.S. Agency for International Development reports.

But "there seems to be a definite improvement in the nutritional status," Dr. Miguel Gueri of the Pan American Health Organization tells National Geographic. A similar 1978 study found that 38 percent of Haitian children age 5 and under were malnourished. Nutritional-education campaigns have made a difference.

Haiti, sharing the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic, is both the hemisphere's poorest nation and its newest democracy. It was brutalized and ravaged — notoriously during the 29-year Duvalier family dictatorship.

Decades of political oppression and corruption, coupled with an exploding population, degradation of the land and stagnation of agricultural productivity, have left Haiti struggling to feed its children.

Hunger even extends offshore. On the rural island of La Gonave, about 35 miles and a six-hour coal-boat ride from Port-Au-Prince, people find it hard to feed themselves. Most are farmers and fishermen.

Lisina Ulsin, a 35-year-old widow whose husband died in a Dominican Republic sugar-cane field last year, struggles to support her eight children.

She owns no land and has no hope of a paying job. When possible she labors in the fields of neighboring farmers in exchange for a small share of the harvest. But often, the harvests are too meager to be shared.

"La Gonave is the poorest, most disinherited place in Haiti," says a development-agency official in Port-Au-Prince. Food production is barely above subsistence level, and the signs of malnutrition are more prevalent there than elsewhere in the country.

The international development agency World Vision operates an immunization program on the island, but there is no food-relief program. One is expected to begin soon.

For now, Ulsin says, "We have no one to help."

Texas cattle herd flown to Thailand

HOUSTON (AP) — The first of two jumbo jets loaded with Texas Brahman bulls and heifers is flying to Thailand today as part of a $1.3 million export deal that state officials say has been unmatched for two decades.

"We stand on the threshold of a mighty era as we expand our business with Thailand," said Dinah Weil of the HK Ranch in Rosharon, which has 32 heifers in the sale. "We in Texas are in an enviable position. We hope to open a gateway through which our trade, commerce and affection will flow back and forth."

The shipment, which left Houston's Intercontinental Airport late Monday en route to Bangkok, is one of two aboard specially outfitted jets and comprise the largest single sale of Texas cattle to a foreign country in 20 years. The second shipment is expected to leave Houston next week.

"This is one of the most exciting things to happen to the beef cattle industry in the state of Texas and we expect to see a lot more of it happening," said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry.

The 600 heifers and nine bulls, each of which are 10 to 15 months old and weigh about 700 pounds, come from 62 ranches throughout the state, ranging from South Texas to Texarkana, said Dwight Roberts of the Department of Agriculture.

"Texas is known as the super-market of the beef industry," Roberts said. "We have the top quality genetics and we're known for our fine breeds."

The animals will grow to as much as 1,500 pounds in the next two years, Ms. Weil said.

The cattle will be used for breeding to help build the beef cattle industry in Thailand, said Ausswin Wongwan, director of Thailand-based Complete Agriculture Systems Co. Ltd.

"We think we will keep coming

for more business in Texas," he said.

Perry said while it's not unusual to ship cattle by truck for extended periods of time, it is uncommon for a trip to be made in 747s.

"That's kind of exciting for me," he said. "A lot of times they've gone 24 hours to get somewhere but it's not halfway around the world."

Perry said the importance of the sale was that the $1.3 million likely wouldn't end up in banks or pockets but would be spent in the communities where the ranchers live.

Panel says not enough time

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — A committee of Hispanics were scheduled to address the Mitchell County Commissioners Court today, saying the panel has not had enough time to come up with an alternate commissioner precinct redistricting plan.

A redistricting plan put together by an Austin law firm was scrapped, and the committee formed last month after Hispanics at a public hearing complained that no attempt was made to create a predominantly Hispanic precinct.

The largest Hispanic precinct in that plan was 38.34 percent Hispanic. A second plan by the same firm, which was scheduled to be considered by commissioners today, has 40.48 percent Hispanics in one precinct. Hispanics comprise 30 percent of the 8,016 county residents counted in the 1990 U.S. Census.

"It just wasn't enough time," said committee member Esther Goss, who is a local member of the League of United Latin American Citizens. "Unless you do this for a living, or if you have the hardware or computer system, there's no way you can come up with a plan."

Plans by Hispanic citizens to work with the Austin firm drawing up the redistricting proposal were canceled two weeks ago because the county would not pay expenses for a car trip to Austin plus the meals, said Sarah Ortiz, also a local member of LULAC.

County Judge Ray Mayo said he was advised by Austin attorney J. Greg Hudson, who drew up the two redistricting proposals, that other counties do not usually pay for such trips. Now Goss and Ortiz are unhappy with the second proposal, and Austin attorney Hudson said he did not receive much advice from the committee.

"We want to see a precinct that is at least 65 percent minority so they can elect a minority representative, or so that the minority community can elect a commissioner they want to regardless of his race," Goss said.

Hudson said last week that Hispanics are concentrated in the northwest part of Colorado City but are spread throughout the county, presenting too many problems for a precinct with even 50 percent Hispanics.

Goss said the panel received redistricting information and maps from Hudson's office but the information was too complicated to draw in a plan in the time it had. So the group turned over the information to the Southwest Voter Registration Project in San Antonio. Goss said the panel expects to receive an acceptable plan by next week.

"They (Southwest Voter Registration Project) are going to send a field representative out with it next week," she said.

But if commissioners decide to pass the proposal by Hudson, Goss said the panel will contact a LULAC attorney for advice. Goss said the filing of a voting rights civil suit is possible and pointed to the success of two agreements worked out in similar suits filed in 1989 against the Colorado City Independent School District and the city of Colorado City.

"We feel that the Justice Department will be listening to us," she said.

force — a $73,884 proposition — would allow the men to use a safer, more efficient system of firefighting with three men per truck, Anderson said.

The fire chief also unveiled his proposal for relocating fire stations throughout the city, part of a five-year plan. He hopes to close three current stations and build two new ones — one at the airport and another near U.S. 87 and Whipkey Drive.

The cost of a new station was estimated at $500,000 however, and Anderson said it could be funded with a bond proposal.

A new firetruck is also part of the five-year plan. Engine 3, one of two 1964 Mack pumpers in the department, is no longer cost effective to keep in service, Anderson said.

Concerns about street maintenance were expressed by council members. Assistant City Manager Tom Decell's street repair budget includes $150,000 for maintaining and repairing streets in the city. Corky Harris said that's not enough.

"We're going to get to the point our roads are just going to fall apart and we're not going to have the money to fix it," Harris said.

Decell briefly discussed an unfunded new program request, $1.5 million to renovate a large number of city streets now in bad condition.

Police Chief Joe Cook is expected to discuss his proposed $2,187,870 budget at a work session scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. today in the office of the McMahon/Wrinkle Airport.

Meanwhile, a July 25 property value certification date has been moved up a week, Toomire said. "We're right now looking at certification Aug. 1."

Part of the problem, he said, is that the district has not had enough computer time to get all information in.

In addition, district employees had to work overtime since March when one of four appraisers was fired due to absenteeism not excused by a doctor. Toomire and another appraiser were also plagued by ill health.

Personal property values were lowered Monday by the board for the following owners:

• Cinemark Corp., from $321,160 to $91,000.

• Drs. James Cohen and Rudy Haddad, $80,000 to $30,000.

• Aarons Beauty Shop, $3,240 to $1,350.

• Mt. View Nursing Home, $56,000 to $27,920.

• Jabor Dry Goods, $19,000 to $12,000.

Census will not be adjusted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats say the Commerce Department's refusal to include more than half a million Texans in the census cheats the state out of $1 billion in federal aid and political representation for blacks and Hispanics.

"It means fewer police, fewer teachers and fewer miles of paved highways for the people of this state," said Gov. Ann Richards.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher refused Monday to break with tradition and correct the 1990 census to account for millions of people who were left out. Some Democrats charged the decision was politically motivated.

A statistical adjustment would have boosted Texas' population by an estimated 560,000 people, including at least 396,000 minority residents from the state's major metropolitan areas or along the Mexican border. The state's total population would have increased from 16.9 million to 17.5 million.

In many cases, said Texas Comptroller John Sharp, federal funding provides essential health and human services.

"At a time when Texas is trying to improve its record on federal funding, Secretary Mosbacher's decision is particularly disheartening," Sharp said.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales called the decision by Mosbacher, a Texas Republican, "the denial of simple basic justice" and said it defies logic and law.

Lawmakers say Mosbacher's decision could cost the state $1 billion in federal aid over the decade for programs based on population.

The Division I All-Stars and Division II All-Stars will be playing in Tuesday's finals.

The Division II All-Stars had to have a playoff and beat Andrews to reach the finals. They will play Snyder in the championship game.

The Division III All-Stars lost both of their games Monday and the Division IV All-Stars lost to Snyder. The Division IV All-Stars had to have a playoff with San Angelo to see who made the finals. They dropped a 2-1 decision to San Angelo, finishing in third place.

Arrick sinks hole-in-one

Saturday, July 13, local golfer John Arrick made the second-hole-in-one of his career.

Arrick pulled off the feat at the parent-child golf tournament at the Big Spring Country Club Golf Course. He aced the 16th, 175-yard hole. Witnesses were Jamie Arrick, John Arrick Jr., Josh Wooten and Terry Wooten.

Arrick hit his first hole-in-one exactly one year ago from the day he hit his second hole-in-one.

LeMond still leading Tour

QUIMPER, France (AP) — Greg LeMond is getting stronger and his rivals weaker as the Tour De France approaches its midpoint.

LeMond will try to hold onto his advantage through today's 11th stage, from Quimper to St. Herblain. After that, the riders fly from Nantes to Pau before beginning the last 11 stages in the Pyrenees mountains.

LeMond, seeking his fourth Tour title, has more than a 1-minute lead over Soviet Djamolidine Abdoujaplov and Erik Breukink. The Soviet gained six bonus seconds after twice finishing in the top three in two intermediate sprints in Brittany.

However, today's leg is the last of the flat stages for a while. Abdoujaplov, a sprint specialist, is expected to fade in the mountains, as he did last year.

The 13th stage from Jaca, Spain, to Val Louron, France, is marked by two first-category climbs and two others rated "out of category" in the Tour de France's rating scale on degree of difficulty.

Breukink, whose PDM team has been decimated by a virus, may not make it to the mountain stages.

Breukink dropped to third behind LeMond as the Dutch rider struggled to finish the 10th stage with a 100-degree fever.

MIDLAND — This time, close was good enough.

Big Spring International League starting pitcher Gilbert Morales took a no-hitter into the bottom of the final inning against Odessa Sherwood Monday afternoon, and although his no-hit bid failed, he still had more than enough pitches to lead the IL to a 6-4 victory in a District III Little League tournament elimination game.

Big Spring now advances to play Odessa Jim Parker at 6 p.m. today. With one out in the bottom of the sixth, Odessa's Jeff McWilliams broke up Morales' no-hitter with a bloop single to left. Until then, however, Morales pitched a superb game, ending the game with a two-hitter and striking out four while walking two.

"Pitching was the difference today," Sherwood manager David Sheldon said. "He's a good little pitcher. The key to Little League is throwing strikes, and that's what he did."

"Gilbert pitched a great game," IL manager Randy Gee said. "He had confidence before the game started — not cockiness, just good, strong confidence. . . . He was just waiting for his chance to pitch."

This was not just a one-man show, however, as the Internationals put together a fine all-around game. Robert Valencia led a 12-hit attack by going two-for-four at the plate with a home run and three RBIs.

Defensively, second baseman Joe Montez was a vacuum cleaner at second, contributing eight assists on nine chances.

Big Spring plated two runs in its first at-bat. Brad Cox started things by reaching on an error, stealing second, taking third on John Morelion's single and scoring on a passed ball. Morelion later scored on Valencia's single to left.

Morales, meanwhile, was cruising until the third, when a bout of wildness led to the first Sherwood run. With one out, He issued back-to-back walks to Dossie Shirley and John Pinkstaff. Shirley eventually scored on consecutive passed balls.

Morales settled down after that, however, and did not allow a baserunner past first until the sixth.

Big Spring took control with four runs in the fifth. Valencia gave the IL a 4-1 lead when, with one on and one out, he pounced on a Joey Cruz fastball for a two-run homer to left. One out later, Gabriel Rubio and Cody Peugh hit back-to-back singles and later scored on Montez's double to the left-center gap.

But Sherwood, which rallied from a five-run deficit in its last at-bat to win Sunday night, wasn't through. After McWilliams busted up Morales' no-hit bid to put runners on first and second, Cruz made up for his gopher ball by knocking Morales' first pitch over the right field fence, making the

Babe Ruth All-Stars fall in championship game

ODESSA — The Big Spring Babe Ruth All-Stars finished in second place at the all-star tournament losing to the Odessa Nationals 13-6 here Monday night.

In the top of the first inning starting pitcher Todd Parrish fanned the side, but allowed two hits which eventually scored on an error by the shortstop Wes Hughes.

Big Spring struck for three runs in the bottom of the first as Parrish and Hughes scored on a double by catcher Brandon Hamblin, who later scored.

In the top of the second inning first baseman Big Spring Brandon Rodgers put on a fielding show of his own. He took a throw from third baseman Jason Henderson for the first out. Rodgers then snagged a line drive for the second out, and caught a pop fly for the third out.

In the bottom of the second Big Spring moved its lead to 6-2 as Parrish, who had three hits in the game, doubled. Next Brandon Rodgers then hit an inside-the-park homer. The final Big Spring run of the contest came when David Akin, who had two base hits in the game, singled. Akin scored on Ryan Hamby's base hit.

In the top of the fifth inning Hughes relieved Parrish with Big Spring leading 6-4. Odessa tied the game at 6-6 via four hits and a walk.

In the sixth inning Hughes allowed four more runs before being replaced by Henderson. Odessa Nationals scored three more runs to seal their trip to the state tournament.

In the top of the seventh second baseman Akin made a good defensive play when he made a diving stop of a grounder and tossed the ball to shortstop Parrish for the force out at second base.

Odessa Nationals advances to the state tournament in Brownfield.

Dravecky knows about adversity

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Losing an arm to cancer is only a temporary setback to Dave Dravecky, who knows what it means to come back from adversity.

"There's adjustments that I have to make, but there's nothing out there that I don't want to do," the 35-year-old former San Francisco Giants pitcher said Monday during his first news conference since being released from Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York on June 24.

Cancer was diagnosed in September 1988 in Dravecky's pitching arm, and he underwent surgery to remove a tumor and nearly half of the deltoid muscle in his left arm.

He came back dramatically from that radical surgery, beating the Cincinnati Reds in his first game back at Candlestick Park in 1989.

Five days later, he broke his arm while pitching at Montreal.

He broke the arm again in October 1989, ironically as the Giants celebrated winning the National League pennant, and retired from baseball the following month.

After further surgery, and months of pain, doctors amputated his arm and shoulder last month.

Although his future won't include baseball, Dravecky said he will swim, play golf and tennis, and engage in other sports he was unable to enjoy in the past because of baseball. He also has a full schedule of speaking engagements.

Dravecky said his wife, Janice, and two children have been supportive throughout his ordeal.

After his young son looked him over following the amputation, he ran out and invited his friends to come and look.

"It became show-and-tell," Dravecky said. "My daughter was extremely thankful that she could hug her dad without worrying about his arm."

Two Olympic Festival records fall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two U.S. Olympic Festival records fell Monday night during the final session of swimming, and the matchups for the basketball gold medal games fell into place.

The nine-day festival was in its third day Monday with action in a dozen sports.

Brian Jacobson of Downey, Calif., set a record in the 100 freestyle with a time of 50.89 seconds. That erased the mark of 51.30 set by Bill Barrett of Los Angeles in 1983.

"I was focused on this," said Jacobson, 17. "I had all day yesterday to concentrate."

Jacobson, who also qualified for the U.S. Olympic trials in the event, said he usually feels tired at the end but had enough left in the last 25 meters to hold off Scott Wester of Huntington Beach, Calif.

Sheilah McCarthy of Winchester, Mass., set a festival record in the 200-meter backstroke, finishing in 2 minutes, 16.61 seconds. That broke the record of 2:17.68 set in 1982 by Theresa Andrews of Annapolis, Md.

Wester was one of two swimmers to win six medals. Along with his silver in the 100, he earned a bronze as a member of the South's 400 free relay team.

Earlier he won golds in the 50 free, 200 free and 800 free relay, and a silver in the 400 medley relay.

Joyce Murphy of Campbell, Calif., finished with six medals after winning the 100-meter freestyle and earning a silver in the women's 400-meter medley relay. She earlier had won silvers in the 50 free, 200 free and 800 free relay and a bronze in the 200 free.

In basketball, the North men will play the East in the gold medal game Tuesday at Pauley Pavilion. The North finished round-robin play undefeated Monday night with a 105-83 victory over the West (1-2).

Sean Robbins of Emporia State scored 20 points and Glenn Robinson, who's headed for Purdue, had 14. Richard Scott of Kansas and Anthony Miller of Michigan State had 10 rebounds apiece.

Brian Fair, a University of Connecticut recruit, led the West with 18 points.

"I was impressed with the way we played in the first half," said North coach Clem Haskins of Minnesota, whose team led by 14 at halftime. "The team played extremely well after the lead got down to 12 points in the second half."

The East, after losing its opening game in the tournament, beat the South 109-97 on Monday to go 2-1 and reach the championship game. The South is 0-3.

Danny Hurley scored 17 points and Dickey Simkins had 16 for the East. Hurley, of Jersey City, N.J., will attend Seton Hall this fall. Simkins plays for Providence.

The East used a 14-2 run late in the first half to take a 56-38 lead and wasn't threatened thereafter. Benjamin Davis, headed for Kansas, led the South with 20 points.

The women's gold medal game will have the North playing the South. Both are 2-1, and the South won the first meeting 67-59 on Sunday.

The North reached the title game by beating the West 67-59 Monday night. Yonda Hill of Northern Illinois scored 18 points and Jamillah Lang of Colorado scored 12 for the North. The West (0-3) got 14 points from Sara Wilson of Oregon.

Earlier in the day, Katrina Colleton of Maryland made two free throws with 21 seconds left to give the East (2-1) a 71-70 victory over the South.

Colleton, who scored just three points, gave the East a 71-68 lead with her free throws. The South could manage only a late tip-in after that.

The festival boxers took the day off, giving them a day to rest before the finals Tuesday night at the Forum. It also gave new electronic scoring devices a break.

With the new system, all five ringside judges press a button when they see a boxer land a scoring blow. In order for a point to be counted, three of the five judges must recognize the same punch and push their buttons within a one-second span.

Jerry Dusenberry, vice president of the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation, said he was "pleasantly surprised" by how well the system was working.

Texas loses two gridders

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Texas Longhorn football recruits who failed to meet academic requirements will play at Kilgore Junior College, according to the Austin American-Statesman.

Tyrone Brooks, defensive lineman from Mount Pleasant, and Schulenburg wide receiver Bo Adams said they hoped to transfer to Texas in two years.

Brooks said he scored 690 on his final Scholastic Aptitude Test, and needed 700, the newspaper reported Tuesday. It quoted Adams as saying he scored 17 but needed 18 on the American College Test.

Two other Longhorn recruits — running back James Thornton of McKinney and wide receiver Kenny Harrison of Port Arthur Jefferson — still are waiting for entrance exam results. Each has taken exams several times, the newspaper said.

Walker loses bobsled berth

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Herschel Walker lost his newly earned spot on the national bobsled team because of commitments to the Minnesota Vikings, and will have to win a special competition with his replacement in order to compete in the 1992 Olympics.

John Philbin, coach of the U.S. bobsled team, said today that Walker won't join the other 11 members of the team for training sessions in Lake Placid Sept. 15-21 and in Calgary Oct. 7-15. The running back would also miss World Cup competitions that begin in late October in Calgary.

Walker's spot on the team has been filled by Tom Allen of Meredith, N.H.

Allen was named as an alternate to the bobsled team during trials last week in Lake Placid. Walker was one of eight pushers picked to that team for World Cup competition this fall and winter and for the 1992 Olympics in Albertville, France, in February.

Walker will make a written request for a competition waiver to the executive director of the U.S. Bobsled Federation, Jim Hickey. Approval is expected, according to Philbin.

"We definitely anticipated it would be necessary," Philbin said. "It was part of the plan to accommodate professional athletes who are in that kind of position. We would have done the same for (Willie) Gault or whoever."

Barring injuries to other pushers on the U.S. team, Philbin said Walker will get a chance to get back on the national team during a head-to-head competition against Allen between Jan. 12-17 at a bobsled facility in Europe. The site of the push-off has not been finalized, Philbin said.

Female calls men's professional game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sandhi Ortiz-DelValle became the first woman to officiate a men's professional basketball game, working a United States Basketball League game between the New Haven Skyhawks and the Philadelphia Spirit on Monday night.

Ortiz-DelValle, 40, a referee since 1978, said she would eventually like to break into the NBA.

"I hope that (NBA officials) are as open-minded as the officials in the USBL," Ortiz-DelValle said.

Ortiz-DelValle has officiated since 1984 in the Greater New York Pro-Am and the Los Angeles Pro-Am men's basketball leagues. She was also the referee at the championship game of the Pro-Am Nationals in Fort Hood, Texas, last year. The Philadelphia Spirit won the game played at Holy Family College 110-104.

"She definitely could be an NBA official somewhere down the line," Spirit coach Bill Lange said. "She knows the game. She gets into position well. She runs the floor very well."

"I was nervous at first tonight, but I felt the game was going OK," Ortiz-DelValle said. "My partner gave me some great encouragement and it helped me reinforce my confidence."

The Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass., has asked for Ortiz-DelValle's jersey and whistle to commemorate the event, according to hall official Wayne Patterson.

Twins outslug Brewers, 11-7

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Minnesota Twins did not need Scott Erickson to be at his best to beat the Milwaukee Brewers. They will need him to beat the rest of the American League West.

American League

Erickson, makin his first start since returning from the disabled list, pitched the same way he did right before the All-Star break — not too well. He struggled for four innings, but the first-place Twins still went on to win 11-7 Monday night.

"I'm not upset. It was a terrible effort on my part. The guys did a good job and I did terrible. Now I have a two-game awful streak," Erickson said.

Erickson, baseball's hottest pitcher in the first half, took a 12-3 record and a major league-leading 1.83 ERA into the game. In his previous start on June 29, the Chicago White Sox hit him hard and stopped his 12-game winning streak; then he went on the 15-day disabled list with a sore elbow.

Against the Brewers, he gave up four hits, including a grand slam by Franklin Stubbs and a solo home run by Greg Vaughn. He walked four, hit a batter and left with an 8-5 lead.

"He was too pumped up and he was rushing it. It was a long layoff and he was a little out of whack. That's to be expected," Twins manager Tom Kelly said.

In other games, Toronto beat Kansas City 5-3 in 12 innings, Detroit downed Texas 8-7, Chicago defeated Boston 7-1, Oakland beat Cleveland 6-1, Seattle stopped New York 5-1 and Baltimore rallied past California 2-1.

Greg Gagne hit a three-run homer and Shane Mack hit a two-run shot as the Twins gave Erickson an early 7-1 lead. But Vaughn led off the third inning with his 17th home run and Stubbs hit his second career slam in the fourth.

"I don't think I was prepared mentally very well. I'd have men on base and throw it right down the pipe," Erickson said.

Erickson said his elbow felt fine "except for some tightness, but it's not the tightness of the injury. I just have to work the muscles out."

Mark Guthrie (6-5) pitched two innings for the victory and Steve DETROIT — Texas Rangers' second baseman Jeff Huxton goes up high for the throw as Detroit Tigers' Milt Cuyler seals second base during second inning action Monday night at Tiger Stadium.

Bedrosian got his fourth save.

Jim Hunter (0-3) was the loser. The Brewers gave up 14 hits one day after the White Sox got 15 hits and mauled Milwaukee 15-1.

"We had some problems containing them. We are only going to go as far as the pitching takes us," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "The last couple of days it hasn't taken us very far."

Blue Jays 5, Royals 3

Kelly Gruber singled home the go-ahead run in the 12th inning and Toronto went on to win at Kansas City.

Tied at 2, the Blue Jays escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the 11th. In the 12th, Joe Carter drew a leadoff walk from Steve Crawford (2-1), John Olerud doubled and Rance Mulliniks was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Gruber singled past a drawn-in infield, Pat Borders was hit by a pitch to force home another run and Cory Snyder added an RBI grounder.

Tigers 8, Rangers 7
Tony Phillips led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a home run, leading Detroit over Texas.

Mickey Tettleton, Lloyd Moseby and Lou Whitaker also homered as the Tigers increased their major league-leading total to 114. Ruben Sierra and Jeff Huxton connected for the Rangers.

Orioles 2, Angels 1
Rookie slugger Chito Martinez rescued Baltimore with a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning as the Orioles won at California. Kirk McCaskill shut out Baltimore on three singles for eight innings before Bryan Harvey (1-3) relieved to start the ninth. Randy Milligan singled with two outs, pinch-runner Brady Anderson stole second and Martinez hit his second home run.

Athletics 6, Indians 1
Andy Hawkins pitched his first complete game since last July 27 and Oakland beat visiting Cleveland.

Hawkins (4-5) gave up four hits, struck out three and walked three. He is 4-3 since joining the Athletics on May 18, and has not allowed more than three earned runs in any of his last seven starts.

Mike Gallego went 3-for-3 with a two-run double off Denis Boucher (0-6) and a solo home run, his fifth, off Jeff Shaw.

White Sox 7, Red Sox 1
Frank Thomas hit two home runs in a game for the first time in his career and Chicago sent Boston to its fifth loss in six tries.

Thomas made it 1-all with a homer in the third inning and put the host White Sox ahead with his 16th home run in the fifth. Carlton Fisk's two-run double capped a five-run sixth.

Mariners 5, Yankees 1
Edgar Martinez tripled, doubled and singled as Seattle beat New York at the Kingdome.

For the second straight game, Martinez had a chance to become the first Mariner to hit for the cycle. His string of seven consecutive hits ended in the eighth inning when he lined out; on Sunday, he homered, tripled and singled twice.

Pirates rout Houston Astros, 8-0

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

In a tale of two divisions, it's difficult to understand why Jim Leyland — whose Pittsburgh Pirates are on a roll in the National League East — should be so stressed out.

National League

Tom Lasorda and Lou Piniella are managers with real problems in the NL West.

"I'm fine ... but I thought I was going to die," Leyland said Monday night before the Pirates won their sixth straight game. "I thought I was gone. I legitimately thought it was all over."

Leyland thought he was having a heart attack Sunday night while returning to Pittsburgh from Cincinnati, where the Pirates clobbered the Reds in sweeping a four-game series. So great were the chest pains that the Pirates' USAir flight made an unscheduled landing in Columbus.

Dykstra

Dykstra's early return is a gamble. He estimated the collarbone is about 85 percent mended.

"It's a calculated risk," Marone said. "No doubt if I had someone else, not a professional athlete, I would say you can't play. But I have an obligation to him and the club. In the purest sense the longer he delays the better off he is."

"I've let guys play when they weren't completely healed. As long as he understands and I think he

But tests showed no heart irregularity, and Leyland was back in the dugout Monday night when the Pirates routed the Houston Astros 8-0 to increase their lead to 4½ games over the New York Mets.

Meanwhile, in the West, Lasorda's Los Angeles Dodgers maintained the five-game tie they had at the All-Star break the hard way — by losing their fifth straight.

Pirates 8, Astros 0
Randy Tomlin had his first career shutout, and Andy Van Slyke and Bonilla combined for seven RBIs.

Tomlin (4-3) pitched a five-hitter for Pittsburgh's 13th victory in 17 games. The Pirates' 53-31 record is the best in baseball.

Van Slyke had four RBIs to tie his career high, giving him at least one RBI in 11 of his last 13 games. Bonilla has three run-scoring singles.

Jimmy Jones (5-6) allowed six runs and eight hits in two innings as Houston lost its fourth straight.

Phillies 8, Dodgers 8
Darren Daulton had his first understands. Understands what? "That he can't run into walls, and dive into bases like he does," the doctor said.

Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said before the game that he didn't know what to expect from Dykstra. "That's a tough thing to judge," Fregosi said. "I would think it's more of a mental thing than physical."

Fregosi said he didn't expect that Dykstra would hesitate to dive into career-grand slam and five RBIs, and Lenny Dykstra, back after missing 61 games following an automobile accident in which both were seriously injured, had a productive night.

The Phillies broke a 7-7 tie in the sixth when Dykstra singled, stole second and scored on Dale Murphy's RBI single.

Steve Searcy (1-0), a minor-league free agent signed Monday, pitched two innings. Mitch Williams got his 16th save.

Orel Hershiser was staked to a 6-1 lead after three innings, but allowed two more runs and left in the fourth.

Daulton — with six homers among his last 11 hits at home — gave the Phillies a 7-6 lead with his grand slam off Tim Crews (2-2) in the fifth.

Cardinals 5, Reds 2
Geronimo Pena led a 12-hit attack with a homer and an RBI double as visiting St. Louis beat Cincinnati in a matchup of teams that hadn't won since the All-Star break.

Gerald Perry and Ray Lankford

a base or crash a wall if that's what was necessary.

"You can only play one way. ... If you have a pulled hamstring you slow down naturally. Running into a fence, Lenny isn't worried about that," he said.

"The doctor says he's ready to play, so he's in the lineup. You look at his offensive numbers and you know he's the catalyst of this ballclub," he said.

Dykstra has said he feels fine physically and is getting stronger each day. He rationalizes that there comes a time when he has to give it a try.

He knows that the collarbone could crack again. He admits he's worried that he may forget and dive into a base instead of sliding — his style before the injury. He worries that his competitive nature could carry him into a wall.

As for fan reaction, he has convinced himself that how he plays will be the test. If he does well the fans will cheer.

Cubs 6, Braves 4
Greg Maddux won his first game since June 9 and Chico Walker had three hits, three RBIs and scored twice as surging Chicago cooled off Atlanta.

Paul Assenmacher worked the final inning for his ninth save as the Cubs won their fourth straight and snapped Atlanta's four-game winning streak since the All-Star break.

Giants 4, Mets 3
Don Robinson won at Shea Stadium for the first time in nine years and Matt Williams hit his third home run in two games for San Francisco.

Students-athletes may have to pay to play

FORT WORTH (AP) — Making students pay to play sports or participate in other extracurricular activities is a possibility for three school districts hit hard by Texas' school finance reform law.

Districts with higher revenues from local property taxes will receive less money from the state in the attempt to even out the distribution of Texas funds to local districts.

Tarrant County school systems in Arlington, Grapevine-Colleyville and Southlake Carroll are considering the "pay for play" fee, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Monday.

The concept has generated interest statewide, said Bill Farney, athletic director of the University Interscholastic League, which governs academic and athletic competition among Texas public schools.

A fee of up to $50 could be requested from students who want to play high school football to cover the costs of uniforms, shoes and other items.

"It hurts the poor kid, the blue-collar kid," said Arlington Sam Houston football coach Ken Ozece. "I think you more affluent schools, it may not. At Highland Park (an affluent district in Dallas County), if you have a participation fee, big deal. But we don't have that."

A $10 fee per activity or sport would generate $94,060, or 10.4 percent of the athletic department maintenance and operational budget, Arlington district figures show. A $95 fee would generate $896,155, or 100 percent of the budget, based upon the number of participants during 1989-90.

Students in Arlington already pay for such things as towel laundering, uniform cleaning, extra uniforms and training camps. However, under the user fee system, students might be charged for almost every activity that is not part of the regular curriculum.

School board members at Southlake Carroll are considering charging fees for science labs, band instruments and art, said Superintendent Annette Griffin.

"You hate to see it happen," said Farney. "We see music, academic competition and athletics as being part of the curriculum. If you take it out of schools, you erase a very important part of education."

Many board members and administrators say they don't like the idea, but face a dilemma similar to that confronting school officials in Connecticut. There, state cutbacks forced officials to choose between instituting a fee program or eliminating some extracurricular programs.

"The option is you either pay the fee or lose the program," said Mike Savage, executive director of the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference.

"Most of the parents are willing to pay the fee to continue the program," he said.

User fee opponents said it's unfair to put a price on a student's desire to sing in the choir, play baseball or lead cheers.

An Arlington administrator presented the board last month with an extensive study of the programs in place at 30 U.S. school districts. Arlington and Grapevine-Colleyville have not yet developed detailed proposals.

"To be honest, it's a fairly new concept and a fairly sparsely practiced concept. But there's quite a bit of interest in it," Tom Wheeler, director of research for the Arlington school district, said.

Marla says no to prenuptial papers

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite earlier indications, Marla Maples may have to sign on the dotted line before Donald Trump says "I do."

Asked if she would sign a prenuptial agreement — as did Trump's first wife, Ivana, Maples told People magazine: "I don't think we're doing it that way" and "This relationship is going to be built on trust — and that's it."

But Maples backed off some on Monday. "My statement in People was not conclusive as to the issue of prenuptials, nor at this time is it of any great significance and rates lit-

MARLA MAPLES MICHAEL MILKEN tie thought," she said in a statement.

Trump, in a statement of his own, said: "When and if a prenuptial is considered by us, it will be our mutual decision, considered highly personal and strictly our business."

Ivana and Donald Trump divorced in December.

Milken calls in heavy hitter

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Milken has hired lawyer Alan Dershowitz for help in getting his prison sentence reduced and in battling a rash of lawsuits.

Dershowitz, a Harvard Law School professor, gained an acquittal for Claus von Bulow, who was accused of trying to kill his socialite wife, and helped win dismissal of some tax evasion charges against hotel queen Leona Helmsley.
