K-Car May Be Last Chance

DETROIT (AP) - A new model is always a bit of a new beginning for an automaker. Chrysler Corp.'s "K-car" may be a last chance.

The No. 3 automaker is hoping that hot sales of the new front-wheel-drive compacts will pull the company out of deep financial trouble.

Iran Shoots 13 More

By The Associated Press

A firing squad executed 13 more Iranian officers and enlisted men at dawn today for taking part in the plot to overthrow Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime, Tehran Radio reported. A 14th man, a former brigadier general in the shah's SAVAK secret police, also was put to death.

The deaths of the alleged anti-Khomeini plotters brought to more than 50 the number of people executed for planning the coup, which Iranian officials said they discovered last month before it was implemented.

Gunman Releases Boy

HOUSTON (AP) - A 9-year-old boy was released unharmed today after a standoff between police and a gunman holding the boy hostage and demanding money from the boy's father, the president of one of Houston's largest banks.

Police said the 22-year-old man surrendered to a special weapons unit after holding the boy about two hours in the banker's car parked in the driveway at the fashionable West Side home of Richard Merrill, president of First City National Bank.

Cooperate On Re-Check...

Final Census Report Expected To Increase

Although it is not likely to result in a radical change, efforts to get all Snyder and Scurry County residents counted in the 1980 census are likely to add significantly to the preliminary figures announced last week, local officials believe.

City Manager John Gayle said Census Bureau people have been cooperating with local officials to make certain that the count is as accurate as possible.

Gayle has forwarded material showing water meter records which the district census office at Lubbock has agreed to check against the vacant dwellings listed in the preliminary report. Bill Warner, chamber of commerce manager, is as sembling similar figures on electric power connections for residences in the county.

In both cases, it appears that there could be a significant change in the final figures.

At the same time, the census staff is still re-checking here and County Judge Preston Wilson said his office has received several calls from people who say they had not been counted previously. He said such calls had averaged from four to nine per day since he urged that people contact his office if they believed they had not been counted.

The preliminary census report showed substantial gains over 1970 for both Snyder and Scurry County, but the totals were MERIDA, Mexico (AP) - Hurricane Allen, gaining fury and described as the strongest on record in the western Caribbean sea, churned toward Mexico's Yucatan Channel today on a path that could put the killer storm off the U.S. Gulf Coast by the weekend. If left behind at least 71 dead and extensive devastation on the fourth day of its rampage through the Caribbean.

Offshore workers spotted a body in the Gulf of Mexico today near where a helicopter with 13 Americans aboard was missing in the storm-tossed seas off Louisiana's southern coast. The 13 were among hundreds of oil drilling rig and production platform workers evacuated in anticipation of the storm.

At 9 a.m. EDT, the U.S. National Weather Service said Allen, with top winds of 170 mph instead of 155 mph recorded three hours earlier, was centered near latitude 20.8 north, longitude 85.0 west, or 120 miles east-northeast of Cozumel, Mexico.

"Extremely dangerous Allen is wobbling toward the Yucatan channel," the weather service said, adding that the storm had strengthened through the night to make it the strongest ever to reach the western Caribbean. It was moving west northwest at about 15 mph.

"The projected track of the center will bring it through the Yucatan channel but the strengthening and minor wobbles could result in the center passing over either the extreme western tip of Cuba or the northeast tip of the Yucatan Peninsula. This should bring extreme winds to both of these areas," the weather service said, during the morning hours.

The Texas-Louisiana coast is roughly 700-800 miles northwest of the Yucatan and appears to be in the path of Allen, which has basically followed a north-northwest route since building to hurricane force of the eastern Caribbean island of St. Lucia early Monday morning.

However, there was no certainty the storm would continue on the same track.

Coast Guardsmen using high-powered lights searched the stormy Gulf of Mexico through the night for a helicopter, which was reported missing when it failed to arrive at 7 p.m. Wednesday at an airport 90 miles away from the production platform.

The Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. said five of its employees were aboard, along with the pilot and seven workers from various offshore oil service companies.

Mexican rig and production workers were also evacuated from Mexico's oil-rich Campeche Bay and port authorities suspended all navigation there and in the Yucatan Peninsula, warning ocean-going ships to take "maximum precautions."

A gale warning was issued for the Florida Keys, on the northern fringe of Allen's course Wednesday night. Warnings were also in effect for western Cuba and the Cayman Islands.

Home Town Welcomes Two Of New Triplets

Scurry County's newest residents, triplets born to Steve and Barbara Fuentez, 1410 7th St., were welcomed to town yesterday at a shower held at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Of the triplets, only two were at the shower, however. The third child, the least of the three, remained in a Lubbock hospital.

The triplets, all girls, are named Jan, Janet, and Janice. After checking their medical books, nurses at Cogdell Memorial Hospital reported triplets are born in every 6,400 births.

When Mrs. Fuentez, 26, was told by her doctor that she could expect more than one child, she said she was surprised. Her 29-year-old husband, Steve, a janitor at Cogdell Hospital, said, "I was shocked at first."

The children were born July 29 in Lubbock. Anticipating more than one birth, Mrs. Fuentez stayed at the hospital about a month prior to delivery.

With the triplets, Mrs. Fuentez has six children. Other children include Janie, 9, Christopher, 3, and Michelle, 2.

Multiple births, however, run in both families. Fuentez's grandmother had twins, and twins had been born to an aunt of Mrs. Fuentez.

Even Mrs. Fuentez admitted to having some trouble in telling the girls apart. For the time being, she said she is relying on painted toenails to make the distinction between the children.

Contributing items to the Fuentez's were T.G. & Y., Lad and Lassie, Perry's, Landes Home Furnishing, Tot-to-Teen, Burgess-McWilliams Pharmacy, White's Auto, the Ladies Hospital Auxiliary, Eckerd Drug, Lou's Kiddie Cottage, Hall Drug, Penney's, Snyder Drug, and Stinson Drug.

Panel Ready To Employ Counsel

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate's Billy Carter subcommittee is ready to hire former Watergate prosecutor James Neal as special counsel, sources say, despite some Democrats' fears that the move may invite comparisons with the scandals of the Nixon administration.

First, though, Neal must decide if he wants the job. Neal, who headed the prosecution team in the Watergate coverup trial, met privately with members of the special subcommittee on Wednesday.

Several senators, who asked not to be identified, said Neal expressed interest and might meet with the panel again today after thinking about the job overnight.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said Neal is a "strong leading candidate" and Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the subcommittee said the 50-year-old Nashville, Tenn., lawyer is "under serious consideration."

But a source close to the committee said a formal job offer was withheld

Wednesday because the senators didn't want to be put in the position of being turned down.

Bayh conceded Wednesday he was concerned that hiring Neal might give the Billy Carter-Libyan affair the appearance of a Watergate-scale scandal, but he said that was "outweighed by Neal's ability and prestige."

"Bringing in a person with his background does not make this a Watergate case," Bayh said.

100 May Survive Air Crash

NOUAKCHOTT, Mauritania (AP) - A Romanian jetliner carrying 164 Romanians and fishermen crashed in the Atlantic early today just off the coast of the West African nation of Mauritania, officials said.

Witnesses said as many as 100 people may have been saved.

Fear 13 Dead In Gulf Crash

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Two men were sighted in the Gulf of Mexico today near the wreckage of a helicopter that was evacuating 13 oil rig workers in the advance of Hurricane Allen, the Coast Guard said.

"They've found the wreckage of the helicopter but we don't know if they are dead or alive," said Coast Guard spokesman Joe Gibson.

The Coast Guard said a civilian boat found the wreckage about 60 miles southwest of Houma, La.

The Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. said the pilot and five of its employees were aboard the helicopter, along with seven workers from various offshore services companies.

The missing employees were identified as engineer Robert W. Ellison, 26, of College Station, Texas; and roustabouts Stephen Fagnani, 20, of Armonk and Brandon Young, 20, of Armonk, N.Y.; Lawrence Neehe III, 29, of Houma; and Joe DiGiovanni, 27, of Independence, La.

ODECO spokesman Al Spindler said that the helicopter picked up the last men from a company oil production platform about 90 miles southwest of Houma and was headed to shore when it disappeared.

He said the pilot was an employee of Air Logistics of Lafayette, which owned the helicopter under contract to ODECO.

The missing were not immediately identified.

Coast Guard helicopters using high-powered searchlights, called Night Suns, searched the area off Louisiana's coast.

"We're hoping for a flare sighting, since the people do have emergency equipment," said Petty Officer Kenneth Wink of the Coast Guard's 8th District headquarters in New Orleans.

The evacuations were part of an oil industry plan to transfer offshore workers to shore as a precaution against the hurricane. Spindler said the company planned to move all of its non-essential offshore employees Wednesday.

The SDN Column

If you think the summer weather has been tough this year, don't think it is "unusual."

We have just been privileged to read a letter written in 1928 by the late Arel Mitchell Thompson, brother of Estella Minor, to homefolks following a trip through West Texas.

"We hit two sandstorms yesterday between Colorado and Big Spring, and three today." (The Colorado he mentions is known now as Colorado City).

"The sand gets in our nose and cuts it up and makes it bleed. We had to stop at a doctor's office today to get something to stop our noses from bleeding. That cost us $1 each."

The letter was written in Lubbock, on stationery of The Hotel Lubbock, which noted that it was under management of W.E. LaFon, was "absolutely fireproof and the most modern hotel in West Texas." Rates were $1.50 to $3.50 per night.

Thompson continued: "If I ever get back alive, I'll never come back out here. We are going to try to get us some sand masks. After paying that doc, I have $5 left. We can't get a meal out here for less than 50 cents. I am sleeping in the truck tonight."

Well, at least they didn't have inflation in those days. Wonder what he would have thought about 50 cents for a cup of coffee, or a Coke? And how would you like to be heading out of Lubbock for Amarillo today with only $5 in your pocket?

Fortunately, we haven't had the sandstorms this year, but unless there's a big change by winter time, the stage is going to be set for some big blows next spring.

Despite the tenacious heat wave, however, Texans and their neighbors still travel. The Texas Tourist Development Agency reports that tourist attractions over the state were attracting near record crowds when an early July survey was made. One exception was Six Flags Over Texas where most of the visitors were waiting until sundown to enter. Coastal areas and lake resorts were attracting the most visitors during the 100-degree-plus days, with some setting new records.

campaign tax ripoffs

One of the legacies of Watergate is the federal subsidy now paid to the two major political parties. This year the Republicans and the Democrats will take in about 120 million tax dollars. The practice is unfair, wrong, and should be abolished.

Few citizens realize that after the major party conventions and the entire cost of the Republican and Democratic party candidates is going to be paid for by the taxpayers. The two campaigns will receive $29.4 million in direct grants and huge postal subsidies so they can flood mailboxes with campaign junk mail. The reason for the political giveaway: to stop corruption, of course.

Over the years money became a major factor in elections. Always looking for an easy way out, politicians opted for expensive media campaigns rather than organizing grassroots efforts. After all, organizing is hard work and requires people to involve themselves voluntarily. At the same time, campaigns were becoming expensive government was growing at a fast clip. It wasn't long before the politicians discovered a method of raising campaign money.

The bigger government gets the more businesses and other interest groups are willing to spend to influence politicians. Can anyone blame business, for example, for contributing to a candidate who will in theory tax it less than his opponent? Even if men of commerce disdain the practice, they view this protection money as part of the cost of getting the job done, and politicians know it.

The abuses of the 1972 Nixon campaign are well known; these abuses convinced Congress to act. Consistent with everything else Congress does, it ended up ripping off the taxpayers in the name of solving the problems.

So now the presidential candidates of the two major parties are, at least in theory, free from the influences of big contributors. But just how fair is the situation? In the current issue of Inquiry, Mary Meehan, a freelance writer from Washington, D.C., castigates the fairness of the current federal financing and regulation of presidential campaigns.

Meehan suggests, and we heartily agree, that it is unfair to force independents and members of small political parties to pay for the campaigns of the two majors. She points out that the current laws are doubly unfair to members of minor parties because they, while not receiving any federal funds, are nevertheless thoroughly regulated by the same complex laws controlling the big boys.

Demonstrating this unfair and wrongful situation, Meehan points out that the GOP and the Democrats will receive $3.3 million each for their respective conventions. The smaller parties will get nothing.

Even if the current system was not patently unfair it still wouldn't work. Already some Republicans have found a loophole and are raising millions of voluntary dollars to wage an independent campaign against Jimmy Carter. Carter forces, no doubt, will find loopholes of their own. Preventing anyone from spending his own money to communicate his ideas is a violation of his right to speak, so the loophole is likely to withstand a court test; it makes a mockery of the whole idea of federal funding of campaigns.

The answer to the problem is simple. Instead of spending tax dollars on campaigns, the way to reduce the influence of special interests is to reduce the size and power of the federal government. If it weren't profitable for them to be around the special interests would stay away.

by john long

The speed with which one puts together words to form thoughts, sentences, paragraphs, and even whole books is something that amazes me. Being a newspaperman, I know how quickly some things can be written, and I am no slowpoke myself, but I am amazed at the one man production factories there are in this world.

For some reason, the writers for the pulp magazines of the 1930s have long held my fascination. Those men, who were generally being paid a penny a word for their efforts, were real demons at the typewriter.

In "The Shudder Pulp" Robert Kenneth Jones speaks of the speedsters.

Arthur J. Burks, back in his prime in the 1930s, was known as the "Speed Merchant of the Pulp." He set for himself a goal of producing 18,000 words a day. He wasn't good, necessarily, but he was certainly prolific.

Stories, near legends, grew up around Burks. It is said that he produced eight million words on a single typewriter. He was a natural born story teller and when he sat down to write a story, it is said he usually didn't get up again until the story was finished.

Burks is reputed to have once dashed off an 80,000-word novel in 10 days. He wrote under his own name, plus several others, too.

Another pulp writer of that era, H. Bedford-Jones, is said to have had three typewriters, with a story going on each. He would work at one story until he went "dry," then would change typewriters and work on another story for a while.

Lester Dent, author of Doc Savage, under the Kenneth Robeson house name, is reputed to have produced 56,000 words as a day's work, 32,000 by dictaphone and 24,000 by typewriter.

Back in the era before the pulp magazines, back in the days of the dime novel, it is claimed that Edward L. Wheeler, the author of the Deadwood Dick stories, produced a 30,000-word novel in two days.

Colonel Prentiss Ingraham, also of the dime novel era, is reputed to have once written a 33,000 word novel in 24 hours, and in longhand, too.

the billy carter thing

In the Billy Carter thing the Jimmy Carter White House is trying - really trying - to avoid any act or utterance which could be construed as cover-up.

However, the apparently inevitable summer-long congressional investigation - at the least - cannot be helpful in an election year.

At worst it could reopen the door for Ted Kennedy.

House of Burgesses tradition led our country's founders to expect better of us. They expected that we would elect, as they did, our best man to make decisions in our behalf.

Instead, in the era of deification of the "common man," we have tended to elect men our own size and then expect them to be something more than we are.

Recently the Wall Street Journal suggested that the Carters, characterized as a "Dogpatch family," are nonetheless a passionate clan; that this is what motivated granny to dogooding in India, put a nephew in jail for armed robbery, a sister into evangelism, brought on Billy's alcoholism and tragic comic-clowning - and sent Jimmy to the White House.

Now that brother Billy Carter's Libyan connection has surfaced, we are hearing allegations of "Billygate" and demands that the president "disown his brother."

What makes this administration particularly vulnerable where any impropriety is alleged is that such impropriety diametrically contradicts the president's public and pious sanctimoniousness.

That does imply an extra obligation - but only on the president himself. I cannot remember many presidents who were not embarrassed by family or friends.

FDR had his son Elliot.

HST had to apologize for Harry Vaughan.

Eisenhower had to fire Sherman Adams.

Nixon's brother was an embarrassment.

Indeed, the Ronald Reagans are apologetic for the sometimes behavior of their own children. Yet nobody expects them to disown the children!

That is where, it seems to me, the present outcry against the Carters is calous, cruel.

If Billy Carter were an administration appointee, certainly he should be fired.

The very idea that he would act as an agent for a foreign government without even registering as such! And for a dictator, racist, ruthless government at that!

But he is not an appointee. He is "family."

The president has done all that he can do to disassociate himself and his administration from the personal and business activities of his brother. That should be enough.

If anybody in the administration deserves criticism, it is Zbigniew Brzezinski, who should have known better than to involve himself in Billy's

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A Congressman who goes on record as having "voted against" law enforcement had best be prepared to answer to the roar of the crowd, including those who contend that "money from Washington" is the cure-all for any of society's problems.

I recently voted against an amendment which would have restored some $100 million this year in the grants program under the auspices of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA). That vote was not, however, a vote against law enforcement, but a carefully made decision of which government entity - federal or local - can best be held responsible for what will always remain essentially a local problem: Crime. That vote was also one of many difficult decisions of how to trim the overburdened federal budget that weighs far too heavy on the taxpayers' shoulders.

It was a decision made earlier in the session, when the House had voted to cut all new LEAA grants programs which are dispensed under block grants to the states and one that I firmly stand behind. The McClory amendment would have required that the Justice Department place LEAA in a higher priority in terms of manpower and essential program needs than the FBI, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration and other federal law enforcement and prosecutorial functions.

The amendment was unlike one offered by Senator Bentsen, which passed the Senate and was rejected by the House, which would have taken $100 million out of the Foreign Aid appropriations and added that money to the LEAA grants program. Nor was it like the amendment to take some $25 million out of Justice Department criminal research and data collection efforts and place those funds into the LEAA grants program. These amendments were fiscally responsible efforts to live within our limited resources and I supported them.

Now that the federal government is finally moving to reduce its involvement in local affairs, and to live within its budget and to look at federal tax relief, I believe it is time for the state, with its budget surplus, to begin planning how best to address the very real needs of the local law enforcement community. Federal involvement is not and can never be a substitute for local support. And fancy electronic gear and new reports about crime statistics will not do anything to reduce crime if the public itself does not support the laws and those who strive to enforce them.

I question the direction that this amendment would have taken us with greater federal involvement and greater federal controls on local law enforcement when what is needed is more manpower, better pay and more flexibility at the local level. Those are state and local responsibilities and can best be funded out of the state budget surplus.

The McClory Amendment would not have helped to achieve that goal. We do not need continued federal mandates (such as gun control) for local crime prevention.

enemy of progress

NEW YORK (AP) - Uncertainty is the arch-enemy of progress, and what is more uncertain than where interest rates are headed? If we knew, says business, we could plan. If we could plan we could make commitments.

Earlier this year the prime interest rate rose like a column of mercury above a lighted match. It reached 20 percent before the match went out. An unprecedented plunge followed, to a low of 10.75 percent.

The impact was devastating for long-term planners. How could anyone lend under such conditions? How could anyone borrow? How, with any sense of security, could anyone commit funds 20 years into the future?

Now the prime rate seems headed higher. Chemical Bank, which lowered its rate to 10.75 just a matter of days ago, has now raised it again to 11 percent. Pressures are growing, and 11.25 percent seems likely.

How much higher? The current feeling is that a repeat of 1979 is almost impossible, given the weakened demand from business and consumers. But already the impact is being felt, mainly in housing.

After showing signs of recovery from the record-high rates earlier this year, housing is now threatened anew. Some lenders have already raised rates, and lenders in other areas complain of meager funds.

When rates rise, the mortgage lenders explain, they cannot compete for funds with bigger, stronger commercial banks. With less than a satisfactory level of deposits they are forced to limit mortgage loans.

Those who closely study the money markets insist the upward tendency of interest rates is temporary. And if by a quirk the rise continues, they say, they are convinced it will fall short of recent records.

Ah, but who knows? Uncertainty, that's the problem. And uncertainty is fed not just by interest rates and economic chaos, but by politics, military threats, nationalism and by change itself.

If you have any doubts about this you can check the readership of scores of private newsletters, at least one with a circulation of more than 100,000, now circulating by mail throughout the country.

Their contents are amazingly similar: Be prepared for the worst, for it is surely coming. Like religious evangelists, they differ on what hell will be, but whatever hell it is coming, just you wait and see.

Several of them think hell will come in the form of runaway prices and runaway interest rates. The day of reckoning has to come, they say, because we have lost control over government spending and debt.

The point isn't whether the doomsayers are right or wrong; it is instead that they have won such acceptance from the public for their books, newsletters, seminars and talk show appearances.

When today's hand was played in a team match both South players ruffed the second club and studied the play. It was easy to see that if West held the jack of diamonds the contract would make easily.

If East held that jack it might be possible to get to lead a heart from dummy and finesse against the king. In that case, the contract would still make.

One declarer didn't see a way to force an entry to dummy if East held both ace and jack of diamonds. He decided to run off a lot of trumps and hope that the defense would not be able to handle discarding problems.

He did just this, but somehow or other East and West managed to hang on to the correct cards and he lost two diamonds and a heart in addition to the club that went away at trick one.

The other declarer found the way to force an entry to dummy. He did play a few trumps and when he attacked diamonds he led the 10, letting it ride to the jack.

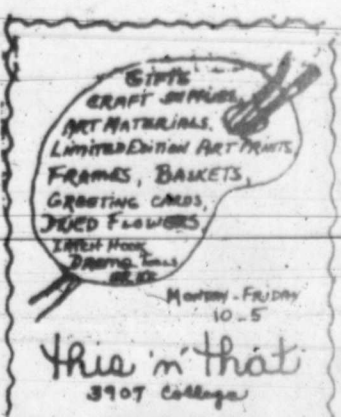

East returned a club. South ruffed and led his six of diamonds to dummy's nine. East took his ace and led his last club. South ruffed.

Now South got to dummy with the king of diamonds and finessed successfully against East's king of hearts to bring home game and a lot of IMPs. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

STIR-N-ROLL BISCUITS

2 cups flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
One-third cup salad oil
Two-thirds cup milk

Heat oven to 475 degrees. Mix dry ingredients together in bowl. Pour oil and milk into measuring cup, without stirring. Then pour all at once into flour, and stir with fork until mixture cleans sides of bowl. Then: for rolled or patted biscuits, smooth by kneading dough about 10 times, without additional flour. Roll or pat out ¼ to ½ inch thick between waxed paper. Cut out with cookie cutter and place on ungreased baking sheet. For drop biscuits: drop from spoon onto ungreased baking sheet or into ungreased muffin cups. Bake 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 16 biscuits.

STIR-N-ROLL PIECRUST

1¼ cups flour

Dear Readers, I've had several requests for baking powder biscuits and piecrust made with vegetable oil rather than with solid shortening. Here are 2 recipes I've found to be very good.

the same as you'd bake any other 2-crust pie.

1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. sugar
½ cup salad oil
3 to 4 Tbsp. ice cold water
Mix flour, salt and sugar in bowl. Add oil and mix with fork till particles are size of small peas. Sprinkle in water 1 Tbsp. at a time mixing with fork till flour is moistened and dough almost cleans side of bowl. (1 to 2 Tbsp. oil can be added if needed). Press dough together firmly into ball with your hands. Divide dough in half; place each half and flatten one piece between 2 15" strips of waxed paper. Roll pie crust 2" larger than pie pan. Peel off top paper and place pastry paper side up in pan. Peel off paper. Roll top crust the same. Cut slits after peeling off top paper; place over filling in pan, flute edges. Makes enough crust for 2 1-crust pies or 1 2-crust pie. Bake 12 to 15 minutes at 475 degrees for baked pie crust after thoroughly pricking crust. For 2-crust pie, follow directions for your recipe.

Do you remember certain tastes and "smells" from the "good old days?" One of my fond memories was the jar of pickled weiners the butcher used to keep on his counter. There was also, quite often, a jar of them on the back bar of many neighborhood taverns. Pickled weiners was a popular snack to be served with draft beer. An old-time butcher gave me this recipe to share with you.

BARNEY'S PICKLED WIENERS

4 (1 lb.) pkg. wieners
2 large onions, thinly sliced
¾ cup sugar
2 Tbsp. salt
1¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper

1¼ cup ground cumin
4½ oz. bottle pepper sauce
4 cups white vinegar
1 tsp. pickling spices

Slice each wiener into 3 pieces. Combine with onion and set aside. Combine remaining ingredients in a pan. Bring this mixture to a boil, and boil about 3 minutes. Pour over the wieners and onions. Put in jars and cover tightly. Refrigerate for several days before you serve them to let spices and pickling syrup penetrate. This makes a nice big batch and it will keep for several months in your refrigerator.

It's a dandy treat to serve at cocktail parties. You'll be asked for the recipe. If you were to buy these in a gourmet store, you'd pay dearly. You can make these very inexpensively.

Zaps Heart With Electricity...

Device Saves Lives Of Cardiac Arrest Victims

By DANIEL HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP)—Cardiac arrest, killer of 300,000 Americans each year, may be prevented with a tiny implanted device that automatically zaps a victim's heart with life-saving jolts of electricity, doctors say.

The devices — miniature versions of the bulky emergency room defibrillator — have been implanted in the chests of six people to deliver bursts of electricity when their hearts began beating irregularly.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins University and Sinai Hospital in Baltimore say they have successfully tested the devices and found they cause "no undue discomfort."

Like pacemakers, the devices are permanently buried in the heart patients' chests, and both devices can be used at the same time.

A report on the first use of the device, invented by Dr. Michel Mirowski, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

When people's hearts stop beating regularly, medical technicians must reach them within minutes with externally held shocking machines or they will die. Sometimes, the help arrives too late.

The new machine, about the size of a package of cigarettes, delivers a shock when it senses a specific kind of arrhythmia, or abnormal heart-beat, called ventricular fibrillation.

During one seizure, the device can deliver up to four blasts of electricity, the last two more powerful than the first two.

"It's a kind of protection that currently is not available to the high-risk patient," Mirowski said in an interview. "It provides services that are available only in the coronary care unit."

Mirowski noted that an external defibrillator requires a team of technicians who diagnose the problem and then operate the machine.

However, he said his device "monitors the heart automatically for years and then, when the life-threatening arrhythmia occurs, it identifies the arrhythmia and makes the therapeutic decision. Within 15 to 20 seconds after the onset of the arrhythmia, it delivers automatically the defibrillating shock."

The journal report described the use of the device on the team's first three patients, a 57-year-old California woman, a 43-year-old Missouri man and a 16-year-old Pennsylvania boy.

In the first months after the devices were implanted, an external recorder kept track of performance and seven episodes of cardiac arrest were countered successfully.

Since the device is still considered experimental, only people who have had at least two seizures have received them. "The extremely poor prognosis of patients with these features is exemplified by the fact that four patients identified as candidates for implantation of the device died before transfer to this hospital," the doctors wrote.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

August 8, 1980

could be subjected to several changes you might not initially like, yet they'll serve to advance your interests and ambitions in the long run.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally you are a very giving person, but today you may be a bit reluctant to share. Fortunately, those you deal with won't be similarly inclined. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $4 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Activities with friends should prove enjoyable today, provided you're not doing business with one another. Keep commercialism out of your social affairs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're an achiever today and able to fulfill your material ambitions. Take care, however, not to damage your image in going after what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your intuition is usually a useful tool, but today it could prove more negative than helpful. Let your logic and practicality prevail.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Things may not go as you originally envisioned them today, but don't be dismayed. You become more resourceful when operating under pressure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to iron out a disagreement with another. A frank and open discussion will revive the relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something difficult confronting you today can be successfully handled if you use your ingenuity. Look for unique solutions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You have a talent today for managing complicated situations. Take charge of things if you see they're more than another person can cope with.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Instead of you and your mate pulling apart, pull together in domestic matters today. Let compromise, not conflict, be your watchword.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There's a possibility today that you could make your tasks more difficult than they are by acting without thinking. Size them up carefully before proceeding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Strive to keep your budget in balance today. Don't spend more than you can afford. Even where necessities are concerned, look for bargains.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you may feel your way of doing things is best today, listen to the suggestions of others. They could have some clever thoughts, too.

Says Government...

No Escaping Cancer Agents

WASHINGTON (AP)—It seems that everytime you pick up a newspaper, there's a new report about some everyday items that may cause cancer.

Now, the government says it's true — there's no way to avoid cancer-causing agents.

The report issued Wednesday by the Department of Health and Human Services said that almost all Americans are exposed — at low levels — to some type of carcinogen.

Cancer, the nation's second-largest killer, may take 400,000 lives this year and is one of the most worried-about diseases. The report came in response to a congressional directive to survey all known and suspected carcinogens to which a large number of Americans are exposed.

The study examined 26

drugs, compounds and processes that have been studied by panels of international experts.

Even though the list is long, said Dr. David Rall, it is incomplete.

Rall, director of the National Toxicology program, said, "The next report is planned to cover 100 carcinogens and within two years, the report will include all known important carcinogens."

The first modern oil well was drilled at Titusville, Pa., in 1859.

OBITUARIES Clark Lumber Co. Has New Owner

W.E. Barron

ROTAN—W.E. "Mike" Barron, 78, died at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday in a Sweetwater hospital.

Funeral service is set for 2 p.m. Friday at the Weathersbee Chapel here, with the Rev. John Robertson, pastor of First United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will be in the Rotan Cemetery, under direction of Weathersbee Funeral Home.

A native of Fisher County, Mr. Barron was a retired rancher and implement dealer. He was married on Dec. 25, 1920, in Rotan to Dorothy Price, who survives. Also surviving is a sister, Jane Perry of Lampasas, and several nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Dillard Smith, Reed Cave, Kent Cave, David Cave, Dale Cave and I.T. McArthur.

The 60-year family ownership of a local business has come to an end.

Yesterday, after the final arrangements were made and the names signed on the dotted line, ownership of Clark Lumber Co. passed from the Clark family to P.K. Ely of Austin.

The business was started 60 years by G.B. Clark Sr. Until yesterday, the business was owned by G.B. Clark Jr. and daughter and son-in-law, Carol Sue Reed and John Reed.

Reed, who said he will serve as a consultant for Ely for the next month or two, said no major policy or personnel changes are expected for the lumber yard or its employees.

"I wish him all the luck in the world and I'll be there to help him," said Reed of the new owner.

"We've enjoyed the years we were there serving the people and we hope they continue to patronize the new owner," Reed added.

Initial arrangements for the purchase of the lumber yard were made about a month ago, said Reed. The Elys, he noted, formerly owned two lumber yards in Nebraska.

FROGMAN COURTNEY BROWN tows a 55-foot model of the ill-fated Titanic, which sunk on its maiden voyage in 1912 with about 1,500 passengers aboard. The model, which is said to have cost $5 million, was used in the forthcoming film "Raise the Titanic!"

Tracking Hurricanes Not An Exact Science

By ANNE CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP)—Gulf Coast residents from Mexico to Florida eyed Hurricane Allen's path of destruction across the Caribbean and tried to outguess the forecasters on where the killer storm would turn next.

But forecasters are guessing, too. Predicting the paths of these monstrous ocean storms is far from an exact science. Over a 24-hour period, forecasters' predictions can be off by 100 miles or more in either direction if the storm slows down, speeds up or changes course by as little as 10 degrees.

Allen's path late Wednesday and early today seemed to head straight toward Texas, but National Hurricane Center forecaster Paul Hebert warned anything could happen in the next few days as Allen churns across the rejuvenating waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

"They don't always go straight ahead," the Miami forecaster said. On its present course, Allen "could land anywhere from Mexico to Louisiana," he added.

As the hurricane moved toward the Gulf of Mexico, storm jitters inspired precautions in many coastal areas. People stocked up on canned goods in Louisiana and Alabama and oil workers were evacuated from rigs off Louisiana. The storm passed south of Florida, but small boat operators were warned to stay in port from South Marco Island on the west coast and Jupiter Inlet on the east.

A giant ridge of air under high pressure, stuck over most of the southeastern United States, has so far resisted Allen's natural inclination to turn north, weather officials say.

The air moving south out of the high pressure area was curved clockwise to the west by the earth's rotation, pushing the storm to the west. That has spared the Eastern Coast the fury of a killer hurricane with maximum sustained winds of 150 mph.

For Billy Carter...

Money Slide Seemed Sudden

ATLANTA (AP)—For Billy Carter, the slide seemed sudden. From his days collecting up to $10,000 for a personal appearance, he was reduced, he said, to borrowing from a foreign country to pay his bills.

But as far back as 1977, while cashing in on his celebrity as the nation's No. 1 good ole boy, the president's brother was already rolling up six-figure debts, records say.

Courthouse records say Carter pledged collateral for two bank loans totaling more than $300,000 and borrowed nearly $150,000 from Carter Farms Inc., a family agribusiness in which he does not own a share.

He also bought a sprawling country home 19 miles north of Plains, saying he and his family needed privacy.

Late in 1978, two years after Jimmy Carter's election, Billy Carter was still bragging that he was earning more than the president's $200,000 annual salary.

Within a few months the balloon had burst. As host to a Libyan trade delegation, Billy Carter unleashed a surge of outrage when he justified his activities by saying, "There's a hell of a lot more Arabians than there are Jews."

His immediate appearances were canceled, and by his account, he has had no significant income since.

Billy Carter says the details of his finances are not "anybody's business," although he has agreed to tell the U.S. Senate what happened to the $220,000 he got from Libya, if it wants to know.

He refused to confirm a report that he used some of the money to make a $45,000 partial payment to the Internal Revenue Service, and some to pay a $25,000 debt to Don Carter, an old family friend but no relation.

Billy Carter gave up his salary as manager of the family peanut warehouse in 1977 when he went into the celebrity business full-time. In the past couple of years, the warehouse business has been losing money.

Ax Murder Autopsy Said 'Obscene'

McKINNEY (AP)—The autopsy report on a Wylie ax murder victim is "the most obscene piece of literature ever printed," according to Justice of the Peace John Newton.

Newton made the remark Wednesday in refusing to release the autopsy report to the news media.

The autopsy report, filed by the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, was on Mrs. Betty Gore, who was found hacked to death with an ax at her Wylie home June 13.

Mrs. Candace Montgomery, a close friend of the Gore family, has been charged with murder in the slaying and is free on $100,000 bond.

A Plano newspaper has filed suit seeking to make the report public.

Childhood asthma

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My son is just 1 year old and before he could hardly walk he was in the hospital for what his pediatrician thought was pneumonia. Then after three weeks he was having the same breathing problem again. This time the doctor said he had asthma. I understand that asthma is a hereditary disease and my wife's mother suffers from it, including two in her family. My friends tell me since my son is just 1 year old he will grow out of it. How is that possible? And can tests be run on a child to determine what he is allergic to?

DEAR READER — Childhood asthma is more common in boys and it's usually on an allergic basis. There is a basic chemical change in the blood which may be related to an hereditary tendency. Even so, you'll be happy to know that about 30 percent of asthmatic children do not have severe asthmatic symptoms as adults. If they also have infantile eczema — the allergic skin condition — then they're more likely to have trouble as adults.

Sometimes the child will have both hayfever and asthma. To help give you a better appreciation of this problem, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 8-6, Asthma. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There are quite a few things that can be done now to help control asthma, particularly in children and young adults who don't have advanced adult onset asthma. Medicines can even be used to help prevent attacks. Some of these permit children with a tendency to having asthmatic attacks to engage in relatively normal athletic activity.

So my advice to you is to not be overly concerned. Be aware that the probabilities are your child will develop as a normal adult. Depend on your pediatrician's wise counsel on what is best for him. Asthma that has its onset in children is usually far less severe than asthma that occurs for the first time in adults.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What is the connection between duodenal ulcers and heart disease? I've had ulcers since 1945 and had a subtotal gastrectomy in 1958. I've been on a bland diet since 1945 when I got out of the service. Eventually I developed heart disease and I believe the bland diet contributed to my original heart attack in 1967.

DEAR READER — It depends almost entirely on what the bland diet does to your blood fats and cholesterol level. That would vary on an individual basis. The practice of ulcer patients consuming large amounts of whole milk can significantly increase the fat intake in the diet. Moreover, half of butter fat is saturated fat. This, plus the increase in cholesterol intake, will raise the cholesterol level in some people.

It is recognized that the higher the blood cholesterol level is, the greater the probability of having fatty-cholesterol deposits which can lead to heart attacks and strokes. People who have high cholesterol problems or high blood fat problems would do well to use fortified skim milk or at least low-fat milk to help decrease the saturated fat and cholesterol intake in their diet.

Now the other fact is that heart attacks are extremely common in American men in your age group, whether

Limited Drilling Eyed At Red Rock

LAS VEGAS (AP)—Bureau of Land Management officials have recommended that limited gas and oil drilling be allowed in the scenic Red Rock Canyon area.

The BLM said Wednesday its recommendation calls for limited, restricted drilling around the edges of the 62,000-acre area nestled against the Spring Mountain foothills west of Las Vegas.

No drilling will be permitted in a core area of the canyon, which includes most of the scenic attractions the thousands of tourists visiting the area come for.

A number of oil companies, including Chevron, have applied for drilling leases in the area, which is believed to be on or near the "Overthrust Belt," a wide area ranging from Montana to Nevada that may contain oil reserves.

A final decision on whether the leases will be granted, however, will not be made until after Sept. 8 by state BLM chief Ed

Spang. The BLM recommendation comes in the face of opposition of local citizens who contend the drilling will damage the fragile area.

A total of 2,222 citizens responded in opposition to all drilling during public hearings last November, while 297 residents said they favored drilling.

Last month, BLM spokesman Ed Ciliberti said in Las Vegas that the agency fears oil companies may go to court unless some drilling is approved.

Radiation Victims Owed Damages, Says Panel

By William Kronholm
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—
The government deliberately concealed radiation dangers from people living downwind of atomic

tests in the 1950s and 1960s and should pay damages to innocent victims, charges
a House subcommittee.
The panel, in a draft report released Wednesday,

day, said the now-defunct
Atomic Energy Commission
"not only disregarded,
but actually suppressed,"
all evidence of harmful effects from radiation given off by atmospheric

tests at its Nevada Test Site. The subcommittee said the nation owes a moral debt to those who relied on false assurances of safety during the tests and should not force radiation victims to battle for damages through the courts. "It is all the more pitiful that the forgotten human beings

— the guinea pigs of our country's atomic bomb testing — have in some cases had to wait nearly 20 years just to have their cries heard,"

said Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, the subcommittee chairman.

"Simple human compassion and morality dictate that we promptly and adequately compensate these unfortunate victims for their past suffering," he added.

The subcommittee's report charged that the AEC deliberately discouraged health studies and concealed information on radiation hazards. The panel said statistics have shown Utah residents, many of whom were in the path of fallout from the blasts, have higher rates of leukemia, thyroid cancer and thyroid abnormalities than would ordinarily be expected.

Indeed, the subcommittee said, the AEC had known since 1953 of the potential health hazards of eating or drinking contaminated foods, but did not try to stop infants or children from drinking milk from cows grazing downwind of the test site.

Although such milk can carry radioactive iodine-131, which tends to concentrate in the thyroid gland, the report said the AEC refused to monitor the milk until 1957. And when a 1963 study showed the commission's hazard level for such contamination was "grossly underestimated," the AEC resisted attempts to change the standard, the report said.

The leukemia deaths were young children born in the mid-1950s and lived downwind of the tests, the report said.

As for thyroid abnormalities, a 1967 study showed they doubled among Utah residents between 1948 and 1962. Thyroid cancers quadrupled during the same period, the report said.

The panel said the AEC concealed information that might have threatened congressional or public support for nuclear weapons testing at the Nevada site.

Hungry Wildlife Raids Pet Dishes For Food

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Because the drought is destroying their normal food supplies, many hungry wildlife are coming right into people's yards in search of nourishment.

Deer, opossums, raccoons, armadillos and skunks have raided pet dishes, gardens and bird baths as they become hungrier and thirstier in the relentless heat.

A black bear wildlife officials said probably was driven north in search of food because of the same dry conditions in Mexico was spotted recently near Boerne, 15 miles south of here, and a raccoon was found foraging across the street from city hall.

Thirty to 60 percent of some deer herds have died as the relentless sun destroyed their food supply, causing many starving deer to chew up gardens and lawns on the outskirts of San Antonio.

Gary Nunley, assistant state supervisor of the Texas Rodent and Predatory Animal Control Service, said the drought has altered the behavior of many wild animals that live side-by-side with humans, but seldom are seen during normal conditions, especially during daylight.

"They're not coming into town; it's those already in town coming into people's yards for water and food. When they get hungry, they get a little friendlier and a little braver," Nunley said. "Skunks, raccoons, rats are around all the time, but they start coming into people's yards during times of drought.

"A lot of time people think they're feeding their dog, but they're really feeding a rat."

Nunley's agency, headquartered here, is funded by federal, state and private money and employs about 200 personnel throughout Texas. Their main task generally is to trap coyotes, but specialists are assigned to 14 Texas metropolitan areas to provide educational materials and information and assistance on dealing with predators, primarily rats, and other wild animals.

"Lately, because of the drought, there has been a bigger problem. Large raccoons have been killing lambs on the Edwards Plateau. They chew their noses and their tongues," he said.

Bill Clay, San Antonio's wildlife damage control specialist, said he has noticed an increase in complaints during the drought. He removed the raccoon discovered rummaging near city hall.

"They come right up on porches and into swimming pools. Armadillos come in from burned-up areas and dig up yards. They're just surviving the best way they can. Pet food is a major source of food for rats and mice and most of the natural wild population, raccoons, possums, skunks. With the drought, people are seeing them more to pet dishes and bird baths. There's not any great influx from outside the city."

John Caudle, a Texas Parks and Wildlife game warden, noted the kill-off of deer and said, "The drought is hard on all wildlife. One warden found two dead fawns in Atascosa County and he couldn't see anything other than they starved to death. We've been seeing a lot of doe deer with no fawns."

Dear Abby

Trashy Mail Needs Boss's Handling

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My boss is the president of a good-sized corporation. I am his secretary. He has instructed me to open all his mail and mark each piece with "date received."

Abby, he is always getting sex mail with very embarrassing pictures, and he orders slides of trashy sex. I feel like quitting my job because I resent this sort of thing so much. He's a middle-aged man, well-respected in this community and has a lovely wife. I can't imagine why he wants anything so trashy coming through his office.

If my husband knew about it, he would insist that I quit my job.

What should I do? My job would be ideal if it weren't for this problem.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Since your boss is "always" getting mail of this kind, you should be able to identify it readily by the envelope. Don't open it. Simply mark "date received" and give it to him unopened.

DEAR ABBY: This problem concerns my sister. She is 38, married for 12 years, and as far as I know, not very happy. Her husband is a good man, but he is "weak" and has no voice in the household, which is probably part of the problem, because my sister has become a compulsive TV watcher, compulsive eater, and now a compulsive drinker. Her husband has tried to correct these problems, but maybe he didn't try hard enough or he gave up too easily. I am very worried about my sister. She has three young children, and God only knows how they're going to grow up, watching their mother sit in front of the TV all the time with a drink in her hand. She stays in her pajamas all day because she's overweight and doesn't care to dress up.

Everyone in the family is worried about her, but she won't listen to anyone. Please don't suggest professional help, because she tried it once and it didn't work for her.

Any ideas on how we can get her to be the positive, happy person she once was will be appreciated by me and all the members of our family.

WORRIED SISTER

DEAR WORRIED: Sorry. The only suggestion I can offer is professional help. The fact that your sister tried it "once" without success doesn't mean that it will never work for her. Therapy sometimes fails because the patient and therapist do not relate well, in which case the patient should try another therapist. Or possibly the patient expects an immediate miracle. Successful treatment takes time.

You cared enough for your sister to write to me. Now care a little more and try to persuade her that she needs outside help. If you can get her to Alcoholics Anonymous or Overeaters Anonymous it would be a good start.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know of a way to test one's own breath to find out if it is unpleasant or offensive?

My employer, who is young enough to be my son, always takes several steps backward whenever I approach him, as though my breath is offensive to him. No one else — man or woman — does this. Nor have I seen my employer react this way to anyone except me.

My doctor says my breath is fine. My dentist confirms this. My best friend says I am foolish to be concerned.

By the way, I am certain that I do not have a body odor because I am meticulous about my person, and have been complimented often on my "fresh fragrance." Please help me.

BAD BREATH (?)

DEAR BREATH: If your doctor, dentist and best friend have assured you that your breath is not offensive, perhaps your employer is either allergic to, or offended by, that "fresh fragrance" you've been complimented on so often. Quit fretting about it. Tell your employer what's on your mind and clear the air!

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Singing Star In Air Crash

FORT WORTH (AP)—A musical troupe including country singer Charley Pride narrowly escaped death when a small Cessna clipped their aircraft and crashed, killing two people, authorities said.

"We didn't know what hit us," Pride said.

"It scared the hell out of us," said Bobbi Smith, Pride's road manager and passenger on the plane.

Department of Public Safety officials identified the victims as Dan Murff, 19, of Beaumont, and John Fitzgerald, 37, of Arlington.

Murff, a student who reportedly had a commercial pilot's license, was piloting the Cessna, said DPS Trooper Harold McFerrin.

Fitzgerald was an instructor with the Acme School of Aeronautics, located at Meacham Field near Fort Worth, McFerrin said.

Pride and members of his entourage were uninjured, but the Fairchild 27 carrying the group suffered extensive tail and rudder damage, investigators said.

Pride praised the actions of pilot Bob Sower for his ability to maneuver the plane to a safe landing at Meacham Field.

"With his great ability in flying, he got us down safely," the singer said, "I used to think he's a good pilot. Now I know he's a great pilot."

The collision will not hamper Pride's travel plans. He said he will continue to fly to out-of-town singing engagements.

"I make my living flying. That's the way I get to my shows," he said, "I'm safer up there than I am on the ground."

The plane was about 30 minutes from its scheduled landing at Dallas Love Field when members of the group heard a "thud" and the plane began to fly erratically, said Meriam Longino of RCA records.

Debris was reported three miles north of Bridgeport, in Wise County.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said the Fairchild, an executive-type plane owned by Ward International, was on an instrument flight from Rapid City, S.D., when the pilot was given clearance to 6,000 feet.

About two minutes before the crash, shortly after noon Wednesday, the pilot was told another plane was close to the Fairchild, authorities said.

The pilot of the Fairchild told air traffic controllers that he had "adjusted," said Warren Wandel, investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board.

"We will assume... the Cessna was on visual flight rules," and did not need clearance from controllers to land, said FAA spokesman George Burlage.

"Our plane lost an engine and part of the tail section but our pilots brought it in," said Pride's agent, Joe Prater.

"We were coming in to do a private show for 600 nuns from all over the world," he said, adding, "we're thankful now. I think that we were doing it for nuns."

Pride went on with the scheduled concert Wednesday night at the University of Dallas.

The country singer was named Entertainer of the Year by the Country Music Association in 1971 and Best Male Vocalist by the association in 1971 and 1972.

H.E.B. Move

Is Announced

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—H.E. Butt Co., which operates 151 supermarkets in Texas, will move its headquarters to San Antonio from Corpus Christi.

Company president H.E. Butt announced Wednesday that the 75-year-old grocery firm would move its headquarters, employing 450 persons, by the end of 1983.

He said selection of a site for the new headquarters was underway and that design and construction of the building was expected to take two to three years.

H.E.B. employs 13,000 workers in its stores located from just south of Dallas to the Mexico border and Butt said San Antonio's central location in the market area was a major factor in the decision to move from Corpus Christi.

He said San Antonio also represented the chain's biggest market with 25 percent of total sales in 34 stores employing 3,500 persons.

"The company's growth during the decade of the 70s has exceeded our expectations and presently our offices are housed in four different buildings," Butt said.

SWEETWATER—If they pass out endurance medals here no one will gripe if Port Lavaca and Sweetwater cut in line to get theirs.

The pair tossed it around the horn until 2 o'clock this morning, with Port Lavaca's Cardinals taking a hefty 12-1 victory.

The win, coupled with a 16-3 thrashing of Hillsboro by Sweetwater earlier Wednesday evening, pits the Cardinals against undefeated Snyder in tonight's championship game at 7.

A two-hour between games schedule has played havoc with the Junior Teenage League State Tournament being held at Newman Park. Hillsboro and Kermit, two teams now departed, stayed on the field until nearly 3 a.m. Wednesday morning. They had been scheduled to start at 9 p.m. Tuesday night.

Port Lavaca and Sweetwater were slated to start Wednesday's final elimination game at 9. The contest finally got underway at 11:30.

Yesterday's offerings did begin on time as Snyder recorded its second shutout of this tournament, a 6-0 blanking of previously unbeaten Port Lavaca. The win left Snyder's Oilers atop the winner's bracket, and sent the Cardinals spiraling down to fight their way back up.

In the first eliminator's game, Sweetwater jumped on a pitcher-ragged Hillsboro squad, 16-3. A ten-run first inning, highlighted by Rodger Rowan's grand-slam homer, was enough to do the opponent in.

That set the scene for the final elimination contest — save tonight's championship game. Weary Sweetwater fell behind 3-0 over the first three innings as a

Rangers Nipped, 2-1; Reggie Held at 399 Still

NEW YORK (AP)—For Rudy May, it came as a rather pleasant surprise when he was given a starting assignment against the Texas Rangers Wednesday.

May, 9-5, produced a four-hit effort with one-out relief help from Rich Gossage as the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 2-1 after May was moved up in the rotation to replace Ron Guidry.

"Hey, you give me the ball anytime you want," said May, "and I'll go out and do the best I can."

May's best was a shutout until Richie Zisk hit his 16th homer of the season with two outs in the ninth. Bobby Murcer singled home a fifth-inning run off Doc Medich, 9-6, and Jim Spencer cracked his ninth homer of the season in the sixth to account for New York's scoring.

"Medich has pitched well," said Texas Manager Pat Corrales. "We just haven't gotten him any runs. It's funny how it slightly less tired Port Lavaca crew kept hammering the hosts. In the fourth stanza, Sweetwater cracked, giving up five runs, and eventually, all hope of making the tourney finals.

There are no doubts as to which team has the inside road to a state championship. Snyder, which has won three games here with three different pitchers, should have rest and the mound going for them tonight.

The Oilers are expected to go with Gerald Don Hicks on the hill, winner of Monday's 12-2 game over Cameron and holder of a 10-0 record.

Tickets for the final are $2 for adults and $1 for children age 12 and under.

Should Snyder fall to Port Lavaca in the 7 p.m. game, a second contest would be held at approximately 9:30.

Shutout Port Lavaca, 6-0...

Snyder Teens In Title Game, 7 p.m.

SWEETWATER - Snyder's Oilers reached the Junior Teenage League State Tournament as a team and will take the field in tonight's championship game as a team, but there is one individual among the group who will no doubt haunt Port Lavaca's Cardinals for a while.

Brent Roemisch gave what may be the stellar performance of the four-day tournament last evening as he went three-for-four from the plate with three RBI, a double and two scores.

That was on offense. On defense, the Snyder High School sophomore pitcher dealt out a three-hitter and fanned 13 Cardinal batters in posting Snyder's second straight shutout, 6-0, of the tournament.

It was Snyder's seventh straight victory in Junior Teenage playoff action, and sets the team up in tonight's championship game with the Cardinals.

Port Lavaca, sent to the eliminator's bracket, looked on as Sweetwater dumped Hillsboro 16-3, then came on the field to zap the hosts, 12-1.

Offensively, Snyder began to chip at the Cardinals in the third inning yesterday. Leadoff hitter Johnny Overton rapped a double and next-up Charlie Bollinger cracked into a fielder's choice (Overton out) to get aboard. Roemisch followed with his first RBI of the night, rapping pitcher Ricky Stafford's first toss into left field for a double that scored Bollinger.

Card manager Max Sturm tried to put the fire out by bringing in Gene Robbins in place of Stafford, but the tactic didn't take.

Robbins struck out the next batter, but catcher David Gee found the right combination moments later and drilled a single to left which scored Roemisch after the runner had taken an third on a wild pitch.

Snyder added two more runs in the fourth. Darryl Boone singled and stole second, then Overton rapped his second hit of the game. A would-be double steal got Boone to third base, but Overton lagged back. When the Cardinals attempted to nail the Oilier baserunner at second, Boone raced home unmoled.

Overton later advanced to third when Bollinger grounded out, and came in on Roemisch's only out of the game, a shot to the second baseman, who had no play at home.

The Oilers bought insurance in the sixth frame, instituted when Boone got aboard on an error, stole second and was balked to third. Robbins struck out the next two batters he faced, but Roemisch unleashed a one-zero count to far left field to send Boone scampering in. Next-up Barry Davis got the final RBI of the game, uncorking an 0-2 count for a double to left that scored Roemisch.

runs in cycles. Earlier in the year, we were scoring for him but he's 1-3 in his last four starts and I don't think he has given up more than two earned runs in any of them."

Texas threatened twice before either team scored. In the fourth Al Oliver reached third on a one-out error by Yankee center fielder Bobby Brown and in the fifth John Ellis doubled and stole third.

May walked Jim Sundberg after Ellis doubled but worked out of the jam when Pepe Frias hit into a double play. Reggie Jackson was hit LONG REACH - Snyder's Gerald Don Hicks, left, leaps for home plate during second-inning action of yesterday's Oilier-Port Lavaca game in the Junior Teenage League State Tournament. A safety bunt, called by coach Mitch Mackey, got Hicks off third and headed home, but when the bunt didn't materialize, the runner found himself too far from the bag and was caught in a rundown. He made a good effort, but Port Lavaca third-sacker Gene Robbins tags him just short of home. Snyder came back to post two runs in each of the third, fourth and sixth innings to blank its opponent 6-0 and enter tonight's championship finals. Hicks, a 10-0 pitcher, will likely get the call tonight. See related articles, this page. (SDN Staff Photo)

Port Lavaca left four runners on base during the contest. Roemisch, who went the seven-inning distance, gave up two first-inning hits as he got off to a shaky start, but the Cardinals didn't see another free ball until the fourth inning.

In that case, Stafford cracked a shot that went just right of the mound. Roemisch, in a reflex action, attempted to stop the ball. It glanced off his pitching hand and rolled to the right of the hill, enabling the runner to get aboard.

Next batter Marcus Rubio drew a walk, and both

CARDINAL NIGHTMARE - Brent Roemisch haunted Port Lavaca's Cardinals with a top all-around effort last night as the Oilers won 6-0 and enter the Teenage League State Tournament playoffs. Roemisch pitched a three-hit shutout, including 13 strikeouts, and was three-for-four from the plate with three RBI and a double. The Snyder sophomore didn't go it alone, however. He got superb fielding and good offensive artillery from his teammates. (SDN Staff Photo)

Fems Slated For Physicals

Snyder High School girls who plan to participate in athletics during the 1980-81 school year are requested to take physicals this evening.

Senior girls are scheduled at 7:30, juniors at 8, sophomores at 8:30 and freshmen at 9, all at the Field House. Boy's physicals were taken Tuesday.

Junior high athletes will take physicals later this month.

Mike Hagen was 6 years old when he first started "working" for the Cowboys at their California Lutheran College training camp. Now 21 and with excellent credentials as a receiver during his college career at Cal Lutheran, he's been signed as a free agent by Dallas and has high hopes of making the National Football League team.

"He was a lot of help when he was here as a kid helping us out; he was just about that high," said Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, holding his hand at his waist. "When I see him now, it's hard to believe it's Mike. He's a gifted receiver with great moves and hands."

"He doesn't have good speed, that's what he's fighting," continued Landry, who added that Hagen in the pattern reminds him of Golden Richards, the former Cowboy receiver.

"He runs routes just like Richards and he even wears his old number. Every time I look up and see No. 83 running across the field, I think Golden Richards is back."

Hagen, a 6-foot, 175-pounder, is the son of a Cal Lutheran buildings and grounds supervisor. The youth worked his way up from waterboy to assistant equipment manager during the 15 years he spent at the Cowboys' training camp.

Last season, his senior year at Cal Lutheran, Hagen caught 66 passes to lead the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics in receiving.

Super Bowl XV, scheduled for the Superdome in New Orleans Jan. 25, 1981, will mark the fifth time the game has been played in that city.

Korsch Finds Win; Astros Stop Giants

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston Astros pitcher Ken Korsch was in a jovial mood Wednesday night because he had pitched nine innings and shut out the San Francisco Giants 1-0 in a game that kept the Astros in first place in the National League's western division.

Korsch and San Francisco starter Vida Blue dueled through 5 1/2 scoreless innings until Houston's Rafael Landestoy and Enos Cabell hit back-to-back singles in the sixth inning and Terry Puhl rove Landestoy home for the winning run.

Choral Directors Attend Workshop

Bill Lyon, choral director at Snyder High School and Martha Fagin, choral director, Snyder Junior High, were among those attending the Texas Choral Directors Association 25th annual convention-clinic held July 30, 31 and Aug. 1 in San Antonio.

Initially organized in 1955 to operate a new-music reading clinic, the organization has grown to affiliate with the American Choral Directors Association. This summer convention-clinic included clinicians Dr. William Triplett, assistant professor of music education, USC; and Dr. Howard A. Doolin, music consultant, Dade County school, Miami, Fla.

Fifteen sessions were offered. Those attended by the local directors included sacred literature; music for middle school, junior high; chamber choir-small ensemble; UIL Grade I, II, III; new choral literature; new Christmas music; high school-college literature; TMEA all-state choir repertoire; pop, novelty, and TCDA commissioned works.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Hollywood cowboys have long been digging their booted toes into the red Utah dust, squinting into the camera under the desert sun. These days, the state is more than a backdrop — it's home to the whole show.

A growing community of film makers, alienated by Hollywood's morality and high costs — or both — has found fertile soil in Utah's economic and social climate. "People are shocked when they learn how many films are being made here," said Paul McGuire, a former New Yorker now with Utah's Linton Productions. "Utah is a phenomenal place for movie production — but it's still almost a secret."

Hollywood film companies often use Utah for location shooting. Director John Huston and actor John Wayne made some of their best-known westerns on the state's vast deserts, among its delicate sandstone arches or high in its mountains. And actor Robert Redford, who lives in Utah near his Sundance ski resort, filmed "Jeremiah Johnson" and parts of "The Electric Horseman" here.

But the state is more than scenery. In the past decade, about 50 feature films — for TV and cinema — have been shot almost entirely in Utah, many by home-grown companies.

One lure for film makers is Utah residents' strong support for family entertainment. Utah film makers have latched onto the family film industry, orphaned by Hollywood because many there consider a "G" rating the kiss of death.

Sixty percent of Utah's residents are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — a faith that emphasizes wholesome family activities.

Except for Walt Disney Productions, most G-rated films now hail from Utah, include: "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams,"

Snyder police arrested a 45-year-old man early this morning on a rape charge. The suspect, said police, is alleged to have raped a 38-year-old woman in the backyard of a residence in the 800 block of 27th St. The incident occurred about midnight.

The suspect was booked at the police station about 4:20 a.m. In an unrelated matter, police are also investigating what appears to have been an attempted assault.

The complainant in that case was a 12-year-old girl who told officers that as she was fishing in Towle Park Wednesday morning a man threateningly approached her. The subject was scared off, however, when the girl's 10-year-old cousin came to her aid.

Driver Charged In Accident

Aubrey Vurner Ingram, 65, of Lindale, Ga., has been charged with failure to stop and render aid, a felony offense, following a car-pedestrian accident Tuesday.

The accident occurred about 3 p.m. at Denson's Gulf on the East Highway and sent Ray Gutierrez, 24, of 1008 14th St., to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for observation. Gutierrez has since been released.

Ingram, police reports state, left the scene after the accident.

Nursing Shortage Is Bitter Pill For Hospitals

By LEIGH SHIRLEY
Associated Press Writer
The critical shortage of registered nurses has been a bitter pill for Texas hospital administrators to swallow.

A "persistent and growing problem" statewide, the shortage has caused consternation within the medical industry and resulted in push-and-shove competition between hospitals vying for available qualified personnel, according to a House subcommittee Nursing Shortage report released Monday.

Citing a 1979 study by the Texas Hospital Association, the report stated the shortage was created by a "changing work ethic" among today's nurses reacting negatively to rigid schedules and growing demands of the profession.

"The days nurses can be told when and where they will work ... those days are gone," said one Dallas hospital administrator. "Many women refuse to put up with the demands in this women-dominated field, and they are no longer locked into two or three profession choices they can make better money and work better hours in other fields," he said.

Administrators, faced with a growing number of vacancies, have been researching their own temporary cures.

One attempt at filling the empty spots temporarily is the use of agency nurses, hired through an outside firm for up to double or triple the wages of regular staff nurses.

For a few hospitals, such as Parkland Memorial in Dallas, this practice has shoved administrators from the frying pan into the fire.

"Agencies are a viable way to staff in emergencies, but we were using them for long-term staffing, and it is just too expensive," said Kent Norman, director of nurse recruiting at Parkland. "At our current rate we would be spending $22.6 million of taxpayers' money just paying agency nurses."

As the hospital's desperation for personnel increased, more than 100 agency registered nurses were hired for extended periods to fill the vacancies, he added.

Administrators found themselves far over budget and opted for a "float pool" of nurses instead of continued use of agency personnel, Norman said.

The part-time nurses are not bound to rigid schedule demands, but "work when they can" to fill the hospitals' needs until administrators can eventually fill the positions with full-time employees, Norman said.

"Then they could be vacation relief and so forth." Other Texas hospitals also opt for nurse pools instead of turning to agencies for help.

When faced with the nursing shortage, Bexar County Hospital in San Antonio formed its own pool, offering staff nurses overtime to work when needed, said spokesman Jeff Duffield.

"You have a greater experience factor within our own personnel, and we have used nurses who resigned full-time work, but went into the part-time pool," he said. "It's worked out very well for us."

In the scuffle to recruit full-time nurses, hospitals today must make adjustments and work at "selling the hospital" to the nurse, not vice versa, said Cristy Rossett, coordinator of nurse recruitment at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas.

Hospitals spend an average of $1,010 to recruit one nurse, according to the National Association of Nurse Recruiters.

Apparently it is money well spent.

Those institutions with the most active nurse recruiting programs seem to be holding their own against the nursing dry season.

"We recruit nationwide, and having a nursing school associated with us helps, too," Ms. Rossett said. "Our turnover rate is around 30 percent, that's 20 percent lower than the national average."

"We've been able to hold our head above water through this thing ... because we are extremely active in nurse recruiting," said Karen Cason spokeswoman for Houston's Hermann Hospital.

"Our people go out and contact nurses one-to-one and let them know about the benefits that make us attractive," she said.
