TERMS OF PEACE ARE APPROVED

DUBLIN OPTIMISTIC OVER PROSPECT FOR PEACE IN IRELAND

DE VALERA'S LETTER IS NOT EXPECTED TO PROVOKE A BREAK.

REPLY BEING CONSIDERED BY THE BRITISH CABINET

Closest Secrecy is Still Maintained in Official Circles at London.

By Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Aug. 13.—Optimism continues to pervade sinn fein circles today regarding the Irish peace proposals. It was re-emphasized that negotiations have not been broken off and that Premier Lloyd George's reply to the last letter of Eamonn de Valera is not expected to mean a break.

BRITISH CABINET CONSIDERS LETTER OF IRISH LEADER

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Eamonn de Valera's answer to proposals of the British government relative to peace negotiations in Ireland were considered at a meeting of the British cabinet this morning. Lord Fitzallan, governor general of Ireland, and Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, were understood to have been called to participate in the deliberations.

Closest secrecy was still maintained in official circles relative to the contents of the communication from the Irish republican leader, and some political writers today reiterated their belief that it was merely a step forward in the negotiations. They declared that the reply asked for explanations of the government's proposals preparatory to the meeting of the Irish republican parliament next Tuesday.

Sensational reports have appeared under bolt headlines in some of this morning's newspapers. Some of them were to the effect that the cabinet took a most serious view of Mr. de Valera's reply, regarding it as tantamount to a rejection of the British terms. It was noteworthy that these rumors were printed in newspapers which yesterday reflected the belief that Mr. de Valera's letter was favorable and indicated his readiness to proceed with the negotiations looking to a settlement. Giving details, these disquieting reports stated that Mr. de Valera had demanded amnesty for all Irish republicans imprisoned or interned, numbering about 6,000, as a condition precedent to further negotiations. It was also stated he had asked monetary indemnity for the losses occasioned by the warfare in Ireland which were estimated as amounting to some millions of pounds sterling.

SEARCH FOR MISSING BARREL OF THE SHOTGUN

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 13.—A navy diving crew at the request of Sheriff Traeger of Los Angeles has been ordered to aid this morning in the ocean side search for the missing barrel of a shotgun, the rusty stock of which has been turned over to District Attorney Woolwine here by a beach camper near Santa Monica canyon mouth, in the belief that it is part of the weapon used in the slaying of J. Belton Kennedy, broker. Kennedy was shot near his summer home in Beverly Glen, eight miles inland, August 5.

The stock was found by the camper the day following the shooting. It is part of an old fashioned 12 gauge double barreled Belgian gun and investigators holding to the belief that it is the gun which slew the Los Angeles man, point to the fact that the charge which caused Kennedy's death came from a 12 gauge gun. Others point out that the firing pins are probably too old to have caused what they say were extremely clear indentations on the caps of the two 12 guage shells found in the glen near the scene of the shooting.

Authorities who have been making expert examination of the gun and shells refused early today to either confirm or deny an statement made in connection with the piece, although Mr. Woolwine yesterday announced to reporters that he had reason to believe" that the shotgun butt was part of the gun used in the mystery shooting, in connection with which two persons were recently indicted here by the grand jury on charges of murder.

Arthur C. Burch of Evanston, Ill., former college friend of the dead man, held in jail since the day after the killing, was said to have been identified yesterday by a motorist who says he encountered Burch in the roadster which the police said had been in the glen on the night of the shooting.

The meeting occurred, he said, near Santa Monica canyon mouth, where officers recently declared they believed the slayer of Kennedy had gone in a machine, throwing the gun used into the ocean.

The witness said that his lights flashed into the car driven supposedly by Burch and that the man inside the car was wearing dark goggles, although it was then late at night.

HIGH RENTS AND SHORTAGE OF HOUSES DRIVING MANY TO SUBURBS OF THE CITIES

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Increased rents and shortage of housing accommodations are driving Chicagoans to the suburbs, officials of the Rock Island railroad said today in announcing that for the past three years suburban traffic on their lines had more than doubled. Similar increases were reported at the offices of other railroads.

NEW TRIAL FOR FOUR HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

ATLANTA, GA., Aug. 13.—The state supreme court yesterday granted a new trial to George and Decatur Crawley, their sister, Rose Crawley, and their cousin, Blaine Stewart, of Union county, who were convicted of the murder of Ben F. Dixon, of Blairsville, a United States deputy marshal, who went to their home in the mountains for the purpose of arresting the three boys on a charge of evading the draft.

COUNCIL OF LEAGUE TO BE CONVENED ON AUGUST TWENTIETH

DECISION IS REACHED RESULT OF UPPER SILESIAN CONTROVERSY.

NO ESTIMATE OF TIME REQUIRED FOR DECISION

Forecasts Vary Widely, Running From a Few Days to Several Months.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13. — Viscount Ishii, president of the council of the League of Nations, is understood to have decided to summon that body to meet on August 20 for the purpose of considering a solution of the Upper Silesian question. Estimates of how long it may take the council to arrive at a decision vary widely, running from a few days to several months.

Discussing the situation with the Echo de Paris last night, Louis Loucheur, minister for liberated regions in the French cabinet, remarked that "things go quicker than you think." He added he had absolute confidence in the ability of the council to arbitrate the vexing question.

His confidence, however, was not shared by Paris newspapers this morning, which called attention to the previous work of the council, relative to Danzig, Vilna and the Aland islands as evidence of the kind of speed and impartiality that might be expected.

In agreeing to submit the Silesian question to the council of the league, Premier Briand is asserted to have waived the rule providing that decisions of the council must be unanimous, and the impression is that he will accept the verdict of a majority of the council.

Pertinax, political editor of the Echo de Paris, declares the French premier made such an agreement. The idea of submitting the matter to the League of Nations, says L'Oeuvre, originated with M. Briand, who suggested it to Mr. Lloyd George when they met at the Italian embassy last Thursday. The premier of Great Britain rejected the plan, but revised it when he found France would not give way.

Emphatic dissatisfaction with the decision of the supreme council to call upon the League of Nations to settle the Silesian question was generally expressed by the press here today.

The students of Paris today entered into the Upper Silesian controversy. Residents of the city found on their way to work this morning that the city had been plastered with large posters issued by an association of students. These posters have a carefully prepared argument in support of the French position as opposed to that of Great Britain.

Newspapers printed in the English and French languages based their contention that the French attitude was correct on the ground that if the partition of Silesia would cause to arise a spirit of revenge in Germany it was too late to apply this theory. They declared that since Danzig and other places had been taken away from Germany, the only thing remaining was to render Germany as impotent as possible.

ACTION OF THE COUNCIL OCCASIONED SURPRISE

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—Information regarding the decision of the supreme allied council to refer the Upper Silesian dispute to the League of Nations was confined to a brief bulletin received here late yesterday afternoon. The action of the council occasioned surprise in official circles, and while the government declined to discuss the new situation, there was an intimation that the Wirth cabinet was disappointed at the council's inability to reach a final and equitable decision.

"We chiefly regret the delay involved by the new procedure," a cabinet official declared, "because it is calculated to prolong the hardships of the already sorely tried populace of Upper Silesia."

Discussing the differences between England and France as reflected in the reports of the deliberation in Paris, a German official said:

"Germany had no interest in promoting an actual break in the ranks of the entente. She has an abiding faith in the righteousness of her case respecting Upper Silesia and is quite willing to have the issue decided by the council of the league."

There is evidence of some apprehension regarding the nature of the attitude taken by the Poles, in view of the council's decision. It is asserted they are prepared for a fresh invasion of the plebiscite area in Upper Silesia.

AMERICAN ACTRESS IS BOUND AND GAGGED AND ROBBED OF HER JEWELS

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Florence Turner, said to be an American actress and who had been missing since Thursday, was found bound and gagged yesterday in Hampstead Heath, North London. She accused a man named Phillips of having robbed her of rings, a brooch and money. The police are searching for Phillips, of whom the woman gave a description.

SIX ARKANSAS NEGROES TO HANG SEPTEMBER 23

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Aug. 13.—The date for the electrocution of six negroes convicted in connection with the Elaine riots in Phillips county, Arkansas, in October, 1919, yesterday was set for September 23 by Governor McRae.

Cases of six other negroes are pending retrial on a change of venue from Phillips to Lee county, where they are in jail at Marianna, having been taken there recently.

MINISTER'S SON AND DIVORCEE QUESTIONED IN MURDER MYSTERY

Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, a pretty divorcee, of Chicago, and Arthur C. Burch, son of an Evanston, Ill., minister, are being held pending the outcome of the police investigation into the mysterious murder of J. Belton Kennedy, wealthy Los Angeles broker, who was shot from ambush when he was about to enter his home. According to the police, Mrs. Obenchain was walking with Kennedy at the time he was shot. Burch, it had been in Los Angeles, was arrested in Nevada while on his way to his home. He was taken back to Los Angeles. Ralph B. Obenchain, prominent Chicago lawyer, says he is ready to forgive his former wife, and will stand by her. Mr. Obenchain is alleged to have told the police that it was his wife's love for Kennedy that broke up their home.

OBREGON MAINTAINS HIS POLICY RELATIVE TO U. S. RECOGNITION

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 13.—President Obregon still maintains his recently announced policy relative to securing recognition of the present Mexican government by the United States. The foreign office last night made public a statement that there was no intention on the part of Mexico to sign a treaty with the United States prior to recognition, and that the whole attitude of the government regarding this matter had undergone no change.

This statement was called forth by an interview attributed to Henry P. Fletcher, American under-secretary of state, who was interviewed at Washington Thursday by a director of the newspaper El Universal.

Mr. Fletcher is said to have demanded that article 27 of the Mexican constitution, which nationalizes deposits of petroleum, be declared non-retroactive.

"It is idle to think of granting recognition," Mr. Fletcher is said to have asserted, "if Mexico is unwilling to sign a treaty of amity and commerce. Washington does not intend to make a peremptory demand for the payment of Mexico's foreign debt or for the payment of damages.

"The United States is not making an exception in Mexico's case, as the same guarantees are being demanded by Germany and Greece."

SENATE TAKES UP THE JOHNSON BILL ON MOTOR TRUCKS

UNDER CONSIDERATION WHEN RECESS WAS TAKEN UNTIL 3 O'CLOCK.

STATE TAX BOARD IS COMPLETELY ELIMINATED

Removed From Appropriation Bill on Adoption on the Beasley Amendment.

AUSTIN, Aug. 13.—The senate committee on criminal jurisprudence reported the Morris house bill amending the Dean law favorably this morning. However, the Hall senate bill was substituted for the Morris bill by the committee. The hall bill proposed outright repeal of the Dean law and enacting a law duplicating the Volstead act of the federal government.

House bill by Veatch of Johnson proposing the consolidation of the warehouse and marketing department with the department of agriculture, which has been lying dormant in senate committee on agriculture, caused Senator Burkett of Eastland to offer a resolution requesting the committee to make a report on the measure by 3 o'clock this afternoon. The resolution was referred to committee on agriculture, which friends of the measure assert means the death of the measure.

After disposing of 25 local house bills, the senate today took up for consideration the Johnson of Wichita house bill proposing an amendment to the motor truck law, so as to eliminate the mileage tax feature in the present statute. This bill was still under consideration when the senate recessed until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

By a vote of 14 to 9, the senate recommitted the Morris of Medina house bill proposing to amend the Dean prohibition law, which action, according to members of the senate, means the death of this bill. Earlier in the day senate committee on criminal jurisprudence had substituted for the Morris bill the Hall senate bill proposing the repeal of the Dean law and enacting in its place a duplicate of the Volstead act.

HOUSE ELIMINATES PROVISION FOR A STATE TAX BOARD

AUSTIN, Aug. 13.—The house by a vote of 77 to 44 adopted the report of the free conference committee on the eleemosynary institutions bill this morning. There was little opposition shown the report and no debate was had except a brief explanation by Representative Cummins, spokesman for the house committee.

Reductions in the budgets of the board of control and the treasury department for the next two years were made in the house this morning. The attorney general's department escaped the reduction move, no amendments being offered.

The state tax board was completely eliminated from the appropriation bill this morning when an amendment by Beasley of Hopkins was adopted striking out the appropriation for the board.

HITCH DEVELOPS IN NEGOTIATIONS OVER RELIEF FOR RUSSIA

By Associated Press.

RIGA, Aug. 13.—Difficulties arose today in the negotiations begun here over the draft of an agreement guaranteeing protection of food supplies sent into Russia for famine relief. Maxim Litvinoff, soviet representative, raised a number of objections both in principle and detail to the draft presented by Walter Lyman Brown, the American relief negotiator.

It is not known whether the objections will prove insurmountable. The conference was continued this afternoon.

CONFIRM AGREEMENT FOR RELEASE OF AMERICANS

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Official announcement that soviet Russia has granted permission for all American citizens to leave the country, if they desire, was made by George Chitcherin, soviet minister of foreign affairs, in a cable message received today by the magazine, Soviet Russia.

This is the first official confirmation of the guarantee given to Walter R. Brown of the American relief administration at Riga, by Maxim Litzinoff, that such permission would be granted. Litvinoff is the soviet envoy for negotiations for Russian famine relief.

The message said:

"All American citizens resident throughout Russia may freely leave the country if they desire. They need only inform the Anglo-American department of the people's commissary of foreign affairs and present documents of identification in order to obtain vises for departure, which will be granted immediately."

HUNGARY HAS ACTED FAVORABLY ON RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY U. S.; AUTHORIZED TO NEGOTIATE TREATY

By Associated Press.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 13.—Unanimous approval of the peace resolution adopted by the United States congress early in July has been voted by the Hungarian national assembly. The government is authorized to negotiate a treaty of peace with Washington.

The peace resolution passed by congress and signed on July 2 by President Harding declared the state of war between Germany and the United States and Austria-Hungary and the United States at an end. The resolution likewise reserved to the United States and its nationals all rights they might be entitled to under the armistice with Germany and Austria-Hungary or under the treaties of Versailles, St. Germain and Trianon, establishing peace respectively between the allied nations on the one hand and Germany, Austria and Hungary on the other.

The treaty of Trianon, the Hungarian peace treaty, became effective July 25 by formal acceptance of exchanges of ratifications on the part of the allied powers and Hungary, and was declared law in Hungary by publication of the text on August 2.

STATEMENT FROM THE WHITE HOUSE ON TAX REVISION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—An official statement explaining the administration tax revision program was issued today at the White House. It declares that "the aim was to establish methods that would raise the needed revenue within a reasonable certainty, make collections sure and inexpensive and properly adjust the burden among all classes of the community."

"It is felt that highly important progress has been made along these lines," the statement says, adding:

"There has been no effort to relieve the rich of their share of burdens but rather to insure that no class will be left an avenue of escape from these. A casual analysis of the proposals show that what may be described as 'the rich man's taxes' will produce about $1,800,000,000, while the balance will be distributed over the entire community, rich and poor.

"The reduction of 32 per cent in the highest income and surtax brackets is expected by the experts to produce actually more revenue from these sources than do the present much higher rates. The present rates prevent transactions which would involve application of the high rates, and thus keep taxes away from the government. Also, they drive money into tax-free securities, to the distress of business, and they lead to fraud and evasions.

"Experience has shown, in dealing with the excess profits tax, that where there is periodic selling, this tax is pyramided, multiplying the burden of the consumer," and inducing speculation and waste which has been largely responsible for the intense speculation that followed the war. It is an unsatisfactory tax on which to base revenue estimates because its product of revenue is so extremely variable and in the present epoch of reduced earnings, it would utterly fail to produce the amount needed.

"In increasing the tax on corporation earnings, an exemption is made of those having earnings of $2,000 or less—the poor man's corporations. The number that would thus be exempted would exceed 300,000."

After reviewing benefits which it is claimed will flow from repeal of the transportation taxes and substitution of manufacturers taxes the so-called "nuisance" levies, the state concluded:

"The whole tax reform program contemplates free business from what have been found paralyzing and exasperating restrictions encouraging to the utmost the resumption of enterprise and business, removing every fraud, and distributing the tax burden with the greatest possible equity among all classes of people, keeping in mind the purpose to impose the larger share on those best able to pay."

Having completed practically revision of the levy sections of the 1918 law yesterday, majority members of the house ways and means committee expected to finish work on the tax bill today so as to have a committee draft ready for consideration by the conference of house—republicans called for Monday.

BARBER-PREACHER CHARGED WITH MURDER OF PRIEST

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 13.—A warrant charging murder was sworn out today by Coroner Russum against Edwin R. Stephenson, barber and preacher, who shot and killed Father James E. Coyle, rector of St. Paul's church, late Thursday.

MRS. PENNYBACKER SAYS GIRLS HAVE A DIFFERENT CONCEPTION OF MODESTY

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Girls of today have a "different conception of modesty," declared Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Austin, Texas, former president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, in an address here yesterday in which she indicated approval of the shortened skirts of present-day feminine fashion.

"The boys criticize the dress of their modish sisters," she said, "but the girls they choose are dressed in similar fashion. Moreover, if I tell my daughter about this she would probably reply, 'I am not living in a harem.' No mother who really understands her child will make an issue simply for the sake of exacting obedience."

HENRY FORD ALREADY CONSPICUOUS FIGURE IN DEMOCRATIC PARTY

ALWAYS AMONG THE SHADOWS IN THE BACKGROUND OF THE PARTY.

MUCH IN THE LIMELIGHT DURING RECENT MONTHS

Tilt With Wall Street, Railroad Record And Muscle Shoals Provide Publicity.

By MARK SULLIVAN.
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and the Wichita Daily Times.
Copyright, 1921, by the New York Evening Post.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 13.—Barring one or two handicaps, Henry Ford would be a serious political potentiality. His figure is always among the shadows in the background of the democratic party, and the quality of personality which injects him into the news every few days, usually in a role that commends him to large groups of the public, causes him to have a frequent place in the future speculations of political managers. Of course, not all of the recent publicity about Mr. Ford is founded on the facts. The dispatches from various points which represent him as having made offers for many abandoned war plants, and as intending to use these plants to furnish the public with a large number of commodities at Ford prices, probably represent the hopes of local communities which would like to see these plants start up again, rather than any definite action that Mr. Ford has taken. Doubtless a great many things are being offered to Mr. Ford, in these days of forced liquidation, but there is no authentic information that Mr. Ford is accepting them all. The only war plant that Washington knows Mr. Ford to have made an offer for is the government project at Muscle Shoals, Ala. It is a fact that Mr. Ford is in negotiation for that, although the initiative came not from Mr. Ford but from a government official seeking to salvage something, however little, out of the seventy millions which the government has spent on a project still incomplete. Mr. Ford has considered this suggestion favorably, has made a tentative offer, and may go further. Whether he does or not, the wide publicity given this announced purpose to use the plant, if he gets it, in order to make fertilizer for the farmers at a very low price has placed him as a public figure in the eyes of large groups of voters who have already been favorably impressed by his past performances in the same direction of furnishing standard commodities at low prices.

The picture which the public got of Mr. Ford last winter, as being "in a hole financially," as being about to be trapped by Wall street, as making a dramatic escape from his situation by sheer boldness and resourcefulness was so likely to commend him to the political sentiment of large sections of the west that it might be suspected of being manufactured publicity if so many well informed persons did not know the degree of truth in it. The same might be said of the news which pictures Mr. Ford as a railroad owner, reducing freight rates so fast that the government machinery for registering the reductions can't keep up with him. Mr. Ford, as the builder and director of industrial plants is a sheer individual genius. He does it all on a one-man basis.

He does it through the power of his own personality in this line. If this method has its obvious advantage it has also its defects. Ford's personal achievements are in contrast with the building up of great institutions which will run regardless of any one presiding genius. In the respects other than his intense and narrow genius for individual management of industries Ford is a simple and wholly uneducated child. It is his limitations outside his own field that cause him in the role of periodical owner to do things that are absurd, wanton and grossly unfair. In the qualities ordinarily associated with a senator of the United States, Ford is almost wholly lacking.

If Ford had come to the senate after his fight with Newberry, four years ago, it is a guess what kind of public figure he would cut today. With equal ease he might have become absurd or might have increased the particular kind of stature that he has. There will be another senatorial election in Michigan next year. And with the lack of outstanding presidential material in the democratic party, Mr. Ford always has a tentative place in the speculations of party leaders.

Tried for Murder Of Wife 29 Years After the Killing

EAGLE PASS, Aug. 13.—Twenty-nine years after the alleged commission of the crime, Estevan Tovar went to trial in district court here today on a charge of wife murder. In the preliminary examination of witnesses, it was brought out that the alleged affair which resulted in the death of of Tovar's wife had been completely forgotten until early last summer when the accused quarreled with friends. Soon after, it was said, the persons with whom he had the disagreement furnished authorities with information which led to Tovar's arrest on June 5 last.

The Story of a Thief, One Hundred Thousand Dollars and a Girl

FROM NOW ON ~ By Frank L. Packard

THE STORY

Dave Henderson, who has come up from the slums to manhood in an environment of chicanery, is sorely tempted when his employer, Bookie Skarvan, sends him to San Francisco to get $100,000 from Martin K. Tydeman to recoup race track losses. Dave succumbs and steals the money only to find Skarvan has sent two thugs to do the same thing. They learn Dave has taken the money, and set a trap for him, from which he escapes after hiding the $100,000. He eludes his pursuers in a wild automobile chase and skulks about the country side, nearly starving and forced to quench his thirst in ditch water.

At last he succumbs to a fever and is taken, delirious, to a hospital. There he is found by Joe Barjan, a detective, who tries to learn where the money is hidden. Failing in that he threatens Henderson with a jail sentence of five years. The sick man's brain barely grasps the idea when he is again engulfed in unconsciousness.

IV

FROM somewhere far along the iron gallery, a guard's boot-heel rang with a hollow, muffled, metallic sound; from everywhere, as from some strange, inceptive cradle, the source out of which all sounds emanated, and which, too, was as some strange sounding-board that accentuated each individual sound as it was given birth, came a confused, indeterminate, scarcely audible rupture of the silence that never ceased its uneasy, restless murmur. It was like water simmering in a caldron—only the water was a drear humanity, and the caldron was this gray-walled, steel-barred place.

A voice, low, quite inarticulate, falling often to little more than a whisper, mumbled endlessly on. That was the old bomb-thrower, old Tony Lomazzi, the lifer, in the next cell. The man was probably clinging to the bars of his door, his face thrust up against them, talking, talking, talking—always talking to himself. He did not disturb anybody. Everybody was used to it; and, besides, the man did not talk loudly. One even had to listen attentively to catch the sound of his voice at all. It had become a habit, second nature; the man was incorrigible. Presently the guard would come along, and perhaps rap the old man on the knuckles; after that Lomazzi would retire to his cot quite docilely. It had been that way night after night, week after week, month after month, year after year.

Dave Henderson laid the prison library book, that he had been fingering absently, down on the cot beside him. It was still early evening in early summer, and there was still light in the cell, though hardly enough to read by; but he had not been reading even when there had been better light. His mind was too active tonight. And now there was a curiously wistful smile on his face. He would miss that stumbling, whispering voice. A most strange thing to miss! Or was it the old man himself whom he would miss? Not tomorrow, not even next week, there still remained sixty-three days—but sixty-three days, with all the rest of the five years behind them, gone, served, wiped out, were like tomorrow; and, as against a lifer's toll, it was freedom, full born and actually present. Yes, he would miss Tony Lomazzi. There was a bond between the old man and himself. In almost the first flush of his entry into the penitentiary he had precipitated a fight amongst his fellow convicts on account of old Tony. Two of them had gone into the hospital, and he, Dave Henderson, had gone into the black hole.

He sat suddenly bolt upright on his cot. He had not forgotten the horror of those days of solitary confinement. He was not likely to forget them—the silence, the blackness. The silence that came at last to scream and shriek at him in myriad voices out of the blackness until he was upon the verge of screaming and shrieking back in raving, unhinged abandon; the blackness that was as the blackness of the pit of hell, and that came at last to be peopled with hideous phantom shapes that plagued him until, face down on his cot, he would dig his fists into his eyes that he might not see—the blackness! His hands clenched hard as the memory of it surged upon him; but a moment later he laughed a little under his breath. It had been bad, bad enough; but he wasn't there now, was he? Old Tony hadn't deluged him with any excessive thanks. The old man had simply called him a fool—but there had been a difference after that. On the march out from the cells, old Tony was always the man behind him, and old Tony's shoulder touch in the lock-step wasn't as perfunctory as it had been before. And there had been years of that. Yes, he would miss old Tony Lomazzi!

Instinctively he turned his head in the direction of that voice that whispered through the bars of the adjoining cell, and his face, lean and hard, softened, and, tinging the dead-white prison pallor, a flush crept into his cheeks. The man was a lifer. A lifer! God, he knew what that meant! Five years of a living hell had taught him that. Five years that were eternities piled upon eternities, and they were only a short step along the path toward the only goal to which a lifer could look forward—death!

Yes, he knew! The massed eternities, that were called five years by those who walked outside in the sunlight, where men laughed, and women smiled, and children played, had taught him why old Tony Lomazzi clung to the bars and whispered.

Five years! Was it only five years since he had stood in the dock in that courtroom, and the judge had sentenced him to—five years? The scene was vivid and distinct enough! Even the ages that spanned the gulf between the now and then could not efface that scene, nor dim it, nor rob it of a single stark and naked detail. Tydeman had been there—Martin K. Tydeman, that prince of royal sports. Tydeman was about the only man in that courtroom whose presence had made him uneasy; and yet Tydeman, too, was the only man in that courtroom who had been friendly toward him. It was probably due to the old millionaire's plea for leniency that the sentence had been five years, and not ten, or fifteen, or twenty, or whatever it might be [illegible] erect, spare little figure on the bench, with the thin, straight lips, had had the right to pronounce. And Tydeman was dead now.

Five years! Was it only five years since he had stood in the dock in that courtroom and the Judge had sentenced him to five years?

Dave Henderson stirred uneasily on the edge of the cot. He drew his hand slowly across his eyes. He had wished from the start, hadn't he, that it might have been some one-else rather than Martin K. Tydeman? But it had been Tydeman's money, and the hundred thousand dollars alone was all that had counted, and Tydeman was dead now, had been dead two or three years, and on that score that ended it—didn't it?

The dark eyes, that had wavered abstractedly around the cell, narrowed suddenly, and from their depths a smoldering fire seemed to leap as suddenly into flame. But there was another score that was not ended! Bookie Skarvan! Baldy Vickers, Runty Mott and the rest of Baldy's gang had lied speciously, smoothly, ingeniously and with convincing unanimity. They had admitted the obvious—quite frankly—because they could not help themselves. They had admitted that their intention had been to steal the hundred thousand dollars themselves. But they hadn't stolen it—and that let them out; and they proved that he, Dave Henderson, had—and that saved their own hides. Also they had not implicated Bookie Skarvan.

Their story had been very plausible! Runty Mott "confessed" that, on the morning of the crime, he had overheard Bookie Skarvan and Dave Henderson making their arrangements at the race course to get Tydeman to put up the money to tide Bookie Skarvan over the crisis. He, Runty Mott, had then left at once for San Francisco, put the deal up to Baldy Vickers and Baldy's gang, and they had waited for Dave Henderson to arrive. Naturally they had watched their proposed prey from the moment of his arrival in the city, intending to rob him when the money was in his possession and before he got back to the race course that night; but instead of Tydeman turning the money over to Dave Henderson, as they had expected, Dave Henderson had completely upset their plans by stealing the money himself, and this had resulted in the prisoner's attempted getaway, and the automobile chase which represented their own efforts to intercept him.

THE dark eyes were almost closed now, but the gleam was still there—only now it was half mocking, half triumphant, and was mirrored in a grim smile that flickered across his lips. He had not denied their story. To every effort to obtain from him a clue as to the whereabouts of the stolen money he had remained as mute and unresponsive as a stone; cajolery, threats, the hint of lighter sentence if restitution were made, he had met with silence. He had not even employed a lawyer. The court had appointed one. He had refused to confer with the lawyer. The lawyer had entered a perfunctory plea of "not guilty."

The grim smile deepened. There had been very good reasons why he had refused to open his lips at that trial—three of them. In the first place, he was guilty; in the second place, there was Bookie Skarvan, who had no suspicion that he, Dave Henderson, knew the truth that lay behind Runty Mott's story; and in the third place—there was one hundred thousand dollars. There was to be no hedging. And he had not hedged! That was his creed. Well, it had paid, hadn't it, that creed? The $100,000 was almost his now—there were only sixty-three days left. He had bought it with his creed, bought it with five years wrung in blood and sweat from his life, five years that had turned his soul sick within him. He had paid the price. Five years of sunlight he had given for that $100,000, five years that had sought to bring the slouch of slavery and subjugation to his shoulders, a cringe into his soul, a whimper into his voice, and——

He was on his feet, his hands clenched until his knuckles cracked. And he stood there for a long time staring at the barred door, and then suddenly he shrugged his shoulders, and relaxed, and laughed in a low, cool way. But he had won, hadn't he, even on that score? It was not often that the penitentiary would do for a man what this devil's hole had done for him! He had entered it a crude, unpolished assistant to a crooked bookmaker, his education what he had acquired before he had run away from an orphan school at ten; and he could leave the place now, given the clothes and the chance, and pass anywhere for a gentleman—thanks in a very large measure to Charlie Millman.

Dave Henderson began to pace slowly up and down his cell. Millman had never understood, of course, just why he had had so apt a pupil. He had never explained to Millman that it had been from the very beginning his plan to rise to the level of $100,000 that was waiting for him when he got out! Millman knew, of course, what he, Dave Henderson, was up for; but that was about all. And Millman had perhaps, and very naturally so, attributed his, Dave Henderson's, thirst for polish and education to the outcropping of the inherent good that in him was the coming to the surface finally of his better nature. And so Millman, up for two years, had proved a godsend, for there hadn't been much progress made along the lines of "higher education" until Millman had come into the prison.

He liked Millman; and somehow Millman seemed to like him. A gentleman from the tip of his fingers was Millman—and he took his medicine like a gentleman. Millman wasn't the name that was entered on the prison books—there it was Charlie Reith.

IT WAS strange that Millman should have given him his confidence; he could never quite understand that, except that it had seemed to come gradually as their friendship grew, until finally it was almost the basis of that friendship itself. He had come to trust Millman as he had never trusted any other man, and he had come to believe in Millman as the soul of courtesy, and honor. And yet he had not been quite so open with Millman as Millman had been with him; he had not spread his cards upon the table, and Millman had never asked to see them; and somehow he liked the man all the better for that. It was not that he did not trust the other; it was because his confidence was not the sort of confidence to give to an honest man—and Millman was honest. There was a queer twist to it all!

Dave Henderson smiled grimly again. It wouldn't be fair to make an honest man a party to the secret of where that money was, for instance, would it—to make an honest man an accomplice after the fact? And there was no doubt of Millman's clean-cut, courageous honesty. The prison stripes could not change that!

He knew Millman's story: A nasty bit of work on the Barbary Coast, and viciously clever. Millman, a stranger in the city, and en route for a long trip through the South Seas, had been inveigled by a woman's specious plea for help into a notorious resort on the night in which a much-wanted member of the underworld was hard put to it to give the police the slip—and Millman had unsuspectingly made himself the vehicle of the other's escape.

The details were sordid; the woman's story pitifully impressive; and Millman's chivalry had led him, innocent of the truth, to deprive the plain-clothes squad of the services of one of their best men for the period of several months—while one of the slickest counterfeiters in the United States, and the woman with him, had made good their getaway. It didn't look innocent in the eyes of the police, and Millman had stood for two years—convicted as Charles Reith—to save the name of Charles Millman, and those that belonged to him back in New York. He had been found in a very unsavory place, and no amount of explanation could purify those surroundings. Millman had never said so in many words, but he was buying a little woman's peace of mind back there in New York with two years' hard labor. And meanwhile he was supposed to be somewhere on a trading schooner in the out-of-the-way isles of the Pacific, or something like that—maybe it was Borneo on a hunting trip—he, Dave Henderson, didn't remember just precisely how the other had fixed it. It didn't matter! The point was that they had made Millman one of the convict librarians in the prison, and Millman had become his tutor and his friend. Well, Millman was another he would miss. The day after tomorrow Millman's time was up, and Millman would be gone. He was glad for Millman's sake.

Five steps and a half from the rear wall of the cell to the steel-barred door, and five and a half steps back again—over and over. He was unaccountably restless tonight, both in body and mind. He had spent his five years, less the time that had been manumitted for good conduct, and less the sixty-three days that still remained, not altogether to his own disadvantage in an educational sense. In that respect he was satisfied he was now ready to leave the prison and make the most of that hundred thousand dollars—not as a "raw skate," blowing it to the winds, but as one who would make it pay dividends on those five years of servitude that represented its purchase price. It was enough, that amount, for the rest of his life, if he took care of it. It meant comfort, independence, luxury. He didn't want any more. That was the amount he had already fixed and decided upon even before the opportunity had come to take it. It was his first job—but it was equally his last. And it was his last because he had waited until, at the first attempt, he had got all he wanted. He wasn't coming back to the penitentiary any more. He was going out for good—in sixty-three days.

Sixty-three days! He wanted no piker, low-brow life at the end of those sixty-three days when he got out. He had had enough of that. That was one reason why he had taken the money—to pitch that one seamy room at Tooler's and the rotten race track existence into the discard, and he was ready now, equipped, to play the part he meant to play. He had spent the years here learning not to eat with his knife, either literally or metaphorically, but there were only sixty-three days left, and there was still one thing he hadn't done, one problem still left unsolved, which of late had been growing into nightmare proportions. In the earlier years of his sentence he had put it aside—until the time came. That time was here now—and the problem was still aside.

He had made all other preparations. He had even communicated secretly, by means of a fellow convict who was going out, discharged, with Square John Kelly, of the Pacific Coral Saloon, in San Francisco, with whom he had invested his savings—that three thousand dollars at six per cent. And he had had foresight enough to do this months ago in order to give Kelly time to pull the money out of his business and have it ready in cash; for he wasn't quite sure where the law stood on this point. Failing to recover the proceeds of the Tydeman robbery, the law might confiscate those savings—if the law knew anything about them. But the law didn't—and wouldn't. Square John had sent back word that everything was all right.

BUT there was still one problem left to solve—the way, once he was a free man again and outside these walls, of getting that hundred thousand dollars away from under the noses of the police and then giving the police the slip. And this, grown to monumental proportions in the last few months, rose before him now like some evil familiar that had taken possession of both his waking and sleeping hours. And there came upon him now, as it had come again and again in these last months, that scene in the hospital when he had first opened his eyes to consciousness and they had rested on the face of the man who had run him to earth—Barjan, Lieutenant Joe Barjan, of the Frisco plain-clothes squad. And Joe Barjan's words were ringing in his ears now; ringing, somehow, with a cursed knell in them:

"Don't fool yourself! It's a hell of a long time in the pen! And if you think you could get away with the wad when you get out, again, you've got another think coming, too! Take it from me!"

An acute sense of the realization of the tangibility of his surroundings seized upon him and brought a chill to his heart. That hard, unyielding cot; these walls, that caged him within their few scanty feet of space; his keepers' voices, that lashed out their commands; the animals, of which he was one, that toiled upon the eternal treadmill of days whose end but foretold another of like horror and loathing to come. Barjan had told the truth; more of the truth than Barjan ever knew, or could know, that he had told. It had been a hell of a long time. Long! His face, as he still paced the cell, grayed under the prison pallor. God, it had been long! Years of damnable torment that had shut him out from the freedom that he loved. It had been a price beyond all reckoning that he had paid for that hundred thousand dollars, but he had paid it! He had paid it—paid it. He had gone all the way—gone the limit. Was Barjan, right in one thing, right in that other thing as well—that at the end they would beat him?

HIS hands curled into knotted lumps. There were not enough Barjans for that, though the world were peopled with Barjans. The thought had brought a chill of dread for a moment, that was all. He had paid the price; he was not likely to forget what that price had been; and he would never yield up what that price had bought. True, he had no plan for this last play of his worked out in detail, but he would find a way—because he must. He was probably exaggerating what the police would or could do, anyhow. At first when he had come into the penitentiary they had tried to trap, sometimes to wheedle, him into disclosing where the money was, though they had long since given up those tactics and left him to himself. But suppose the police did watch him now when he got out. He could afford to wait—to wait a long while—until the police got tired, perhaps, or perhaps came to the conclusion that, after all, they had got the wrong man. They would not forget that, though he had refused to say anything at the trial, he had not been so mute in his attitude toward Runty Mott and Baldy Vickers, who had "sent him up"; and Barjan would not forget, either, that in the hospital that day, with scarcely strength to speak, he had threatened to get even with the gangster and the Runt. There was a psychological factor in this. If he, Dave Henderson, made no effort to get the money, showed no sign that he had any knowledge of its whereabouts, might not the police in time come to the far from illogical conclusion that they might better have watched—five years ago—the men who had so glibly acted as witnesses for the State, the men who had, admittedly, themselves attempted to steal the money? It wasn't unreasonable, was it? And he could afford to wait. The three thousand dollars from Square John Kelly would keep him going for quite a while! He was a fool to let this thing madden his brain with its constant torturing doubts. It was their move—not his.

From far along the iron gallery again a boot heel rang with a dull, metallic sound. It was the guard, probably, coming to rap old Tony Lomazzi over the knuckles. Dave Henderson stopped his restless pacing and stood still in the center of the cell to listen. No, the old bomb-thrower wasn't talking any longer; there wasn't any sound at all except that boot heel ringing on the iron flooring. The sound came nearer, and Dave Henderson frowned in a puzzled way. The guard was not alone in any case. He could distinguish the footsteps of two men now. It wasn't usual at this hour for any one to be out there with the guard. What was in the wind? The warden, perhaps, making an unexpected round, or——

His hands gripped suddenly hard and tight—but he did not move. There came flashing over him once more the scene in that hospital ward of five years ago. The cell door had opened and closed. A man had entered. The guard's footsteps died away outside. The man spoke:

"Hello, Dave!"

It was Barjan, Lieutenant Joe Barjan, of the Frisco plain-clothes squad. It was the scene of five years ago. That was exactly what Barjan had said then: "Hello Dave," and he had answered: "Hello, Joe." But he did not answer now.

"This is a little irregular, Dave," said Barjan pleasantly; "but I wanted to have a quiet little chat with you, you know, before"—he stepped forward and clapped his hand on Dave Henderson's shoulder, and laughed—"well, before you changed your address."

Dave Henderson made no reply. He moved back from the other, and sat down on the edge of his cot.

"There's a couple of things I want to say to you," said Barjan, still pleasantly. "And the first of them is that I want to tell you on the level just where you stand. You're going out of here pretty soon now, Dave. I guess you've got a better line on that than I have—eh?" He laughed again good-humoredly. "Got the days counted, haven't you, Dave?"

No answer. Dave Henderson's eyes were fixed on the ungainly lines of the toe of his prison boot.

"Oh, come on, now, Dave!" Barjan's tones were still hearty and jocular, but the heartiness and jocularity, as though disconcerted, lacked some of their original spontaneity. "Loosen up! You've been a clam for five years. That's long enough. I've come up here tonight to play square with you. You know that whatever I say goes with both of us. I know you aren't holding anything against me personally just because I happened to be the one who put the bracelets on you, and back of that we used to be pretty good friends. I haven't forgotten the tips you used to give me in the old days—and don't you think I have, either!"

THERE was silence for a moment. Barjan walked the length of the cell and back again.

"All right," he said, halting in front of the cot. "Maybe we'll get along better on another tack. I'm not beating about the bush, Dave." His voice was a little harder, crisper, sterner. "I want to know where that hundred thousand dollars is. But I told you that I'd put you straight first on where you stand. Now, listen. We've played both ends to the middle. We believed that the story Runty Mott and Baldy Vickers told was true; but both men had a record and you can't be sure of a crook on his own say-so. We didn't take any chances and so we're sure now. Those men were watched—not for a couple of weeks, or a couple of months, but for the last four years. They don't know where the money is, and they never did know what you did with it after you handed them that automobile smash and beat it for the woods. Get that? It's up to you! And now, get this: I told you in the hospital that day, you remember, that you could never get away with it, and that's as true as I'm standing here talking to you now. You've got some brains, Dave—use 'em now for your own sake. From the moment you step outside these walls you're a marked man, and not for just a little while either, but for all your life. They'll never let up on you, Dave. Let that sink in! And it ain't only just old Joe Barjan you've got to fool. Talking racy, Dave, your number's up on the board on every police track in this country from one end to the other. You can't beat that kind of a game. I'm talking straight, and you know it. Come on now, Dave, pry them lips of yours apart, and come across!"

Dave Henderson's lips parted, but it was only to touch them with the tip of his tongue. They were dry. His eyes were still on that coarse, ungainly toe. Its significance had taken concrete form now. He knew now what it meant. It typified a living hell of five long years, a ghastly hell and a ghastly price paid for that hundred thousand dollars—years that had left a stench in his nostrils that would live as long as he lived—years that piled the daily, never-ending details of petty persecutions, of loathsome associations, of miserable discomforts, of haggard dreariness, of heart sickness, of bitterness that was the bitterness of gall, into one overwhelming mass of horror from which the soul recoiled, blanched, seared, shriveled.

"Ain't you going to say anything, Dave?"

Tony Lomazzi must have shuffled his way back to the bars of his cell door. The old Italian was whispering and muttering again. If one listened very intently, one could hear him. There was no other sound.

Barjan cleared his throat.

"Look here," he said slowly, "what's the use, Dave? I've showed you that you're bound to lose, and that on that score it don't pay. And it don't pay any way you want to look at it. You don't have to go out of here a marked man, Dave. There ain't any truth in that—that the police never give a guy a chance to go straight again. There ain't anything in that. It's all up to the guy himself. You come across, make good on that money, and I'll guarantee you'll get the squarest deal any man ever got. Why, it would be proof in itself that you meant to go straight, Dave, and everybody'd fall over himself to give you the glad hand. You can see that, can't you, Dave? Don't you want to look the other fellow in the eye for the rest of your life? Don't you want to be a free man? You've got a lot of years ahead of you. Ain't you ever thought of a home, and kiddies, maybe? It don't pay, Dave—the other way don't. You've got the chance now to make good. What do you say?"

Tony Lomazzi was still muttering. Strange the guard was letting the old bomb thrower have so much license tonight. Tony seemed to be chattering louder than he had ever chattered in all the years he had occupied that next cell there!

Barjan laughed a little in a low, but not unpleasant way.

"Well, then, listen again, Dave," he said. "I got one more thing to tell you. You know what I've said is right. You come across, and I'll see that you get your chance—and you don't have to wait for it, either, Dave. I've got it all fixed. I've got the papers in my pocket. You come across, and you walk out of here a free man with me right now—tonight!" He leaned forward and slapped Dave Henderson's shoulder again. "Tonight, Dave—get that? Right now—tonight—this minute! What do you say?"

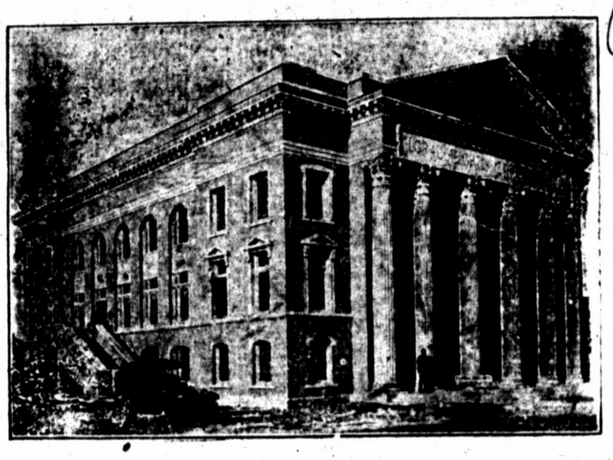

It was true! The tentative plan he had half formulated was no good! He realized that now. To lay low and wait was no good—Barjan had made that clear. The hope that the police might veer around to the belief that Runty Mott and Baldy Vickers were, after all, the men to watch, was no good either—Barjan had made that equally clear. There didn't seem to be any way out—and his number was up on the board on every police track in the country. Yes, that was true, too. He lifted his eyes from the toe of his boot for the first time, and met Barjan's eyes, and held the other's for a long minute in a steady gaze.

And then Dave Henderson spoke—for the first time.

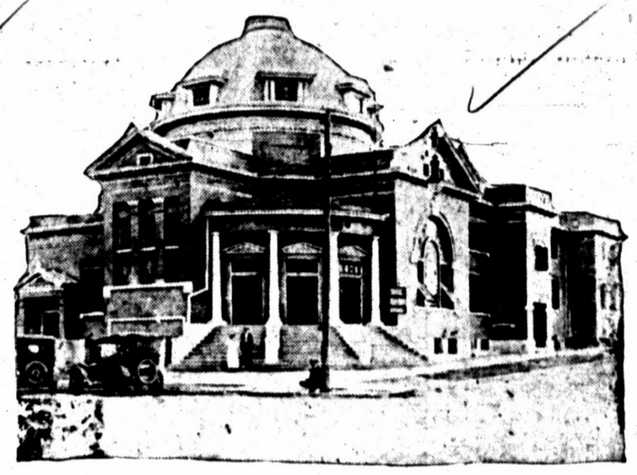

"You go to hell!" he said.

GREATNESS

By RICHARD LLOYD JONES

Though the temple of fame is said to stand upon the grave and its flame to be kindled from the ashes of dead men there lies back of every such temple a life of romance, for fame is the echo of action.

Fame is the fullest compensation for true and honorable deeds, and only in struggle and conflict can greatness be measured. Any one may be a pilot upon a peaceful sea.

"A great man," said the Earl of Beaconsfield, "is one who affects the mind of his generation." Mere family never made a great man. Thought and deed, courage and conviction, and not pedigree, are the passports to enduring fame.

Great men are not supernatural; they are the natural and true men in whom nature has succeeded. They who fall short of greatness are the imperfect.

The great men are they who both see the right and choose it—and having chosen pursue it with invincible resolution, resisting the temptations of easier paths. It is they who point out the way and their example show others.

Great men are unique only in that they are uncommon and are conspicious by their contrast to the common.

Minor minds may at times show greater originality but it is range of vision, foresight and farsight that lift up the common horde.

Learn to think not in counties but in continents and think with sincerity, for sincerity is the first attribute of greatness.

In the panorama of times the great men loom up like snow-capped peaks above a range of hills. Each in its solitude represents a great spiritual force rather than material force. The great prophets and painters, preachers and poets, musicians and patriots all stood for, fought for, lived for and died for ideals. The princes of the market, the money changers, and the accumulators of material things, all have been forgotten while the stories of the great spiritual forces have molded and shaped the world have remained. They and they alone are the world's priceless heritage.

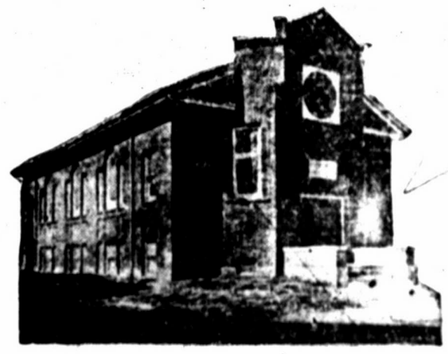

Yet all these great potential powers have come to us unheralded and unknown, for there is nothing more simple than greatness. The greatest men like the greatest truths, are the simplest. The great man is what he is from nature and he rises to his height of fame without reminding us of others. It is only the pretender who calls for contrasts. However far above us the truly great may be they always make us feel that they are our brothers.

No really great man ever thought himself as great as he really was.

No man ever became great by imitation. A great man must give us something new in thought or fact. Service becomes his passion. He becomes the servant of mankind. Only the little king ever hopes to make mankind servant at his court.

Great men never lose their childlike heart. They give to the world a great affection and it is this, when they are gone, which the world keeps and holds for them. Because great men possess this passion to serve rather than to be served, to give rather than to get, to do something for the world, we find great acts and great eloquence most commonly going hand in hand.

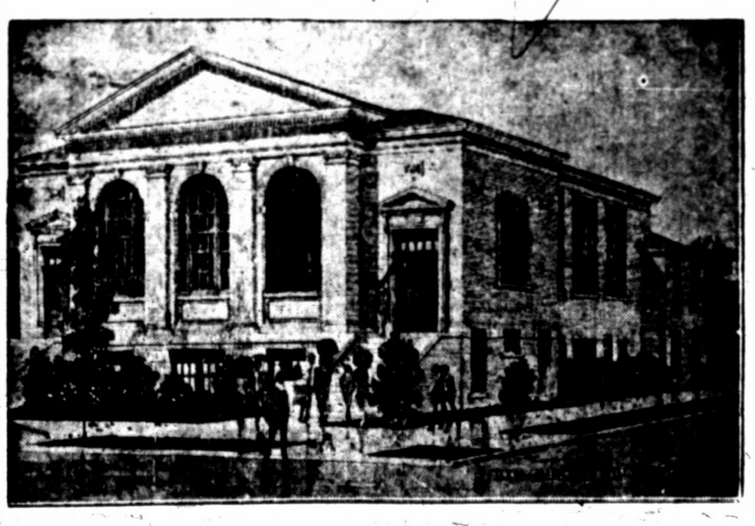

The road to greatness is through loss of self in the thought of all.

HUGHES TO HEAD AMERICAN COMMISSION.

Announcement of the appointment of Secretary of State Hughes to head the American commission at the forthcoming disarmament conference will be received with satisfaction by the great mass of the American people. Only those irreconcilables who are opposed to any kind of an association with other nations will be displeased, for Hughes has declared more than once for such an association.

Mr. Hughes was one of those republicans who saw good in the league of nations, although he did not endorse it in whole. There is great hope that the coming conference will see the development of an association of nations having for its purposes the same high aims as the league of nations and which can be substituted for the league or merged with it. In such an undertaking Mr. Hughes is probably the best fitted man in the country to continue the great work begun by Woodrow Wilson.

ABOVE PARTISANSHIP.

Mark Sullivan in Thursday's Times told us that the democratic leaders in congress stand ready to give every assistance to President Harding's plans for disarmament and that the attitude of the democrats in congress as a whole would be wholly dissimilar from that of the republicans toward President Wilson when the latter asked for the ratification of the Versailles treaty with the league of nations covenant. While the democrats have it in their power to block President Harding's efforts and to do so would be only paying the republicans back in their own coin we are glad that they are not going to do this. We are glad that in this great movement democratic representatives in congress are too big for narrow partisanship. Anyway democrats can find enough embarrassment in the tax and tariff problems of the republicans to satisfy any partisan desires.

SELF INTEREST ABOVE THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

Selfishness of members of the legislature has for many years kept West Texas out of its proper representation in that body. Now that a bill has been drawn and is about to be passed that would give this section something like its proper representation, selfishness is again about to defer this consummation. In the measure agreed upon which may be passed at this session of the legislature senatorial redistricting would not become effective until 1924. The reason why it is deferred so long is that some members of the present senate do not wish to be disturbed in their places. They are placing their selfish interests above the rights of the people. They show that they regard their positions, not as a public trust but as personal property to be protected above the public interests.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion whitener.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes bleach out and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. (adv.)

MARKETS

COTTOR MARKET.

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 6 to 13 points on favorable week-end reviews of the goods trade, and scattered buying which included a moderate demand from houses with continental connections. There was also covering, but the demand seemed to be readily supplied around 13.75c for December and prices turned easier after the call under local spot house selling and liquidation. December sold off to 13.60c with other months also easing off to about last night's closing. It is reported that some of the large New England mills are now employing more people on full time than at any time previously since the war.

The report of the census bureau showing domestic mill consumption of only 410,120 bales for July against 525,489 bales last year was less favorable than expected and led to some scattered selling. There was also increased southern selling which sent October off to 13.18c and December to 13.60c, and the close was barely steady at 4 points decline to 2 advance.

Cotton closed barely steady.

December	13.75	13.60	13.60

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—The early trading in cotton brought narrow fluctuations, the more active months standing 6 to 7 points under yesterday's close soon after the opening, but they were 3 to 6 points higher than yesterday's final prices at the end of the first hour of business. Texas reported more or less rain and this caused selling, but the soft spot that resulted tempted new buying almost immediately.

The census bureau report of 410,120 bales of cotton consumed by American mills during July against 461,636 bales during June was considered disappointing and resulted in sufficient selling to put prices back to about the lowest levels again. Towards the closing the trading months were at net losses of 2 to 3 points.

The cotton market closed steady at net declines of 1 to 3 points.

	High	Low	Close
October	12.92	12.69	12.73

DALLAS, Aug. 13.—Cotton middling, 11.50; steady. At Houston, 12.50; steay. At Galveston, 12.80; steady.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Wheat again displayed steadiness in price today. There was some buying on the reports of a light frost at Moose Jaw. Opening quotations, which varied from unchanged figures to 1c higher, for September $1.22¼ to $1.23¼, and December at $1.25¼ to $1.26, were followed by a slight setback and then by a slight rally to the opening figures.

In the last half hour the market rallied on reports of frosts in the northwest. The close was steady, 1c to 1¼c net higher, with September at $1.24¼ to $1.24¾ and December $1.26 to $1.26¼.

Corn, after opening 1c decline with September at 56¼c and 56¾c, sagged and gave no early indication of rallying.

Offerings were liberal and the market closed slow, a shade net lower, with September at 56¢ to 1c.

Oats opened unchanged to 1c advance with September at 36c to 36¼c, but later sagged all around. September dropped below 36c for the first time this year.

Provisions were steady.

Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Active export demand together with correct anticipations that the government crop report would prove bullish have done a good deal this week to lift the value of wheat. Compared with a week ago, wheat prices this morning showed gains of 3¼c to 5¼c a bushel, corn was 1¾c to 1¾c under to ¼c to ¼c advance, oats off ¾c to 1c, and provisions down 32c to 55c.

Export business in what appeared to have been helped by a sharp advance in sterling exchange and by word that Germany had obtained large credits in New York. Efforts for world-wide relief of Russian famine were also regarded as a stimulus to foreign buying. On the other hand, heavy profit-taking sales after the United States government crop report was out gave evidence that speculation had fully discounted beforehand the big reduction in estimates of yield as compared with the month previous. Renewed demand from exporters and from domestic millers rallied the market again, but confidence on the part of the bulls was afterward somewhat disturbed by announcement that wheat production in France this season was much greater than the trade here had been led to believe.

Corn and oats were weakened by the big prospective crop of corn and by the huge visible supply of oats.

Severe breaks in the hog market pulled down provisions.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Efforts to bring about a further rise as the result of favorable overnight developments were unavailing today. Active liquidation of rubber, leather and can shares, some of which recorded new low figures, caused selling out elsewhere of earlier purchases. The closing was easy. Sales approximated 150,000 shares.

United States Rubber, first preferred, broke 5 points, the common and Central Leather, preferred, 3; Continental Can 2½, Central Leather 2¼ and American Can, preferred, 1.

DRIVING STOCK TO MARKET IMPRACTICABLE SAYS SPILLER

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, Aug. 12.—Although some cattle raisers are driving their stock to market, according to reports from south Texas, the idea would be generally impracticable, E. B. Spiller, secretary of the Texas Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, said today.

The advance of civilization, with its hard roads in place of the old trails, the heavy tourist travel and the lack of ranges and watering places along the route, would prevent the driving of cattle on long trips over the highways, Mr. Spiller said. Shipment of cattle by railroad will remain the only practical way, he said, regardless of freight rates.

Some cattle from points near the shipping centers, according to Mr. Spiller, are driven to market. The distance the stock travel, however, is short.

Cattle are being driven over some of the highways of south Texas, according to reports received here. They are brought regularly along the winding roads from the hill counties of Mason, Llano and Gillespie to the San Antonio market. Where the former trails wound, however, are good roads. Automobiles, too, pass continually over the most remote roads.

An average of about 500 head of cattle each month are driven overland from the hill counties to avoid the payment of high freight rates. All classes—steers, cows, yearlings and calves—make the trip. The shipments are made mostly from Fredericksburg and Kerrville, the reports said. Four days are required for the journey and the cattle are turned into pastures by the roadside at night, fed when grazing is not sufficient and watered at troughs.

SEYMOUR GINNER LOSES HIS FORD AUTOMOBILE

SEYMOUR, TEXAS, Aug. 13.—A Ford touring automobile belonging to G. M. Kennedy, a cotton gin man residing at Red Springs, 10 miles west of this city, was stolen Wednesday night from his garage at that place.

So far there is no clue leading to the recovery of the car or the whereabouts of the thief.

Something to Think About

What's More Important, Heredity or Environment

—By F. A. WALKER—

THE question of the relative importance of heredity and environment is suggested in a vivid way in the news.

A conference in which the world at large is very much interested was begun in the cabinet room at No. 10 Downing Street, London, the other day.

An examination of the names of those taking part in it seems to suggest that descent has very little to do with political or national convictions.

Mr. David Lloyd George who represented England is a Welshman, who is said to think in the language of his Celtic ancestors.

Eamonn de Valera, the leader of the South of Ireland delegation is of Spanish descent and happened to be born in New York.

Of his colleagues, Arthur Griffith belongs to a Welsh family, while Austin Stack and Robert Barton are of pure English stock.

Sir James Craig, the Premier of Ulster, is said to be as Scottish in appearance as he is in name.

General Jan Christian Smuts, who is reported to have been more instrumental than anybody else in bringing the parties together is a South African Dutchman who was one of the leaders of the Dutch in the Boer War.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Randall Thomas Davidson, who brought all his influence to bear in favor of conciliation, though he is active head of the Church of England, is a Scot born at Edinburgh.

The situation seems to give point to the remark of the Canadian who said that some day England would get tired of being governed by men from other parts of the world, and insist on having home rule for herself.

But this paradoxical situation is to be met with in the history of many nations.

If the schoolboy were asked to give the name of the greatest Frenchman that ever lived, he would not hesitate for a moment about answering "Napoleon."

Yet that famous soldier had not a drop of French blood in his veins, but was an Italian by race and temperament.

While Lord Bryce was ambassador to the United States he pointed out in a speech that Washington, Franklin and the other founders of the American republic broke away from Great Britain because they were so intensely English in their views on the subject of the rights of the colonists.

It is of the greatest importance to America that environment plays such a large part in shaping men's convictions because it is through the force of their surroundings that newcomers are absorbed into the mass of this nation.

To-Day's Lucky — Jewel Color Flower

By MILDRED MARSHALL

TURQUOISE.

THE Persians rank today's talismanic gem—the turquoise—of equal value with a friend and the source of religion, since, according to an old superstition, good fortune will attend those who see the new moon reflected in either of these three: the surface of the jewel, the face of a friend or a volume of the Koran. This promise of good fortune seems to take the form of riches.

Both the turquoise and the diamond, which is today's natal stone, have a common quality—each will fail to exercise its potent qualities if bought and sold. Those whose birth anniversary this is will not have good fortune, particularly in love, if they purchase the stone. It should be the gift of another and should be worn upon the left arm and set in gold according to an ancient belief.

Light green, symbolizing joyousness and spontaneous pleasure, should be the color chosen for today. It is best suited to the flirt to whom it will bring transitory happiness, though eventual disappointment.

The delicate maiden-hair fern presides over mortals in their lighter moods today. It symbolizes temporary fascination and is recommended to those who wish to create a fleeting but pleasing impression.

THT PLACE OF CHEESE IN SALADS.

CHEESE SALADS. — Cheese may be considered highly economical, and the combination of salad greens, cheese and some sort of war bread, makes a highly nutritious and satisfying lunch. One good cheese salad is made of freshly grated American cheese sprinkled generously over crisp lettuce, well mixed with French dressing containing a liberal addition of paprika. Pot cheese and cottage cheese, which utilize skim milk—and that is one thing we are urged to do, you know—and sour milk, as well, can be fashioned into many delectable salads. Little pats or cakes of the cheese, sprinkled with paprika, may be served on lettuce leaves, with French dressing, or the cheese may be crumbed over the lettuce and served with French dressing.

One delicious salad making use of cheese is made with canned or fresh pears cut in halves, with the cores taken out and with balls of cheese put in the core cavities. The whole is dressed with mayonnaise and chopped walnuts are sprinkled over the top.

Another salad is made by splitting ripe cherries in half and filling the pit cavity with cream cheese. Then five or six of the cherries are served in a bed of lettuce leaves and served with mayonnaise.

DOROTHY DIX'S TALKS

By DOROTHY DIX
THE WORLD'S HIGHEST PAID WOMAN WRITER

Her Hated Rival

IF THERE is one thing in the world that makes me more deadly weary than another it is all of this maudlin bunk that is talked and written about the American man neglecting his family for his business, and leaving his poor, persecuted, neglected wife to mope alone at home while he disports himself in orgies of work at his office.

That is the theme of innumerable novels and stories, and because a man is striving with might and main, and bending every energy to make a place in the sun for his wife and children, it is represented as sufficient justification for said wife to hunt up an affinity and have an affair with some man who has time to play around with her because he doesn't have to support her, and pay her bills for the frills in which she looks so ravishing.

And invariably in such cases the hard-working husband is represented as the one in fault, not the silly, selfish, self-centered woman he had the ill luck to draw in the matrimonial gamble, who has not heart enough to appreciate the sacrifices that a man is making for her, nor brains enough to understand and sympathize with his ambitions.

The worst feature of all of this twaddle about a man's business being his wife's deadly rival is that a lot of neurotic women have taken it for gospel truth, and are shedding barrels of tears of self pity because they have had the cruel fate befall them of being married to hustlers instead of lounge lizards.

It doesn't seem possible that any woman could be fool enough to be just as jealous over her husband being vamped by the grocery business as she would be if he was vamped by a blonde siren with a willowly figure and long jade earrings. But it is a fact.

During the course of a year I get hundreds of letters from women who say that their hearts are broken, and they are the most miserable creatures alive, though nobody would think so to look at them, because they live in fine houses, and have motor cars, and beautiful clothes, and travel, and are lapped in luxury, but they are neglected by their husbands—boo hoo—who never go to afternoon teas with them, or summer and winter resorts with them, and who often work at night, and sometimes actually break engagements to go to the theatre with them because some horrid old man has come from California, or Maine, to see them about some dreadful business deal—hoo-hoo-hooo-hooo!

No. There's nothing the matter with hubby. He's good, and kind and generous, and he never looks at another woman, but he's just absorbed in his business, and his business has alienated his affections from the wife of his bosom, and she feels ill-used, and persecuted, and she wants to know what I think about it.

I think that when a grown-up, married woman lets herself get into such an unhealthy state of mind that she views her husband's business as a rival, that it's a great pity somebody can't spank her into sanity, as we do a child in a tantrum. No, I am not advocating child-beating, nor wife-beating, but there are times when it takes a good stiff jolt to wake us up, and make us see things as they really are instead of the way we have been beholding them in a billious dream. And this is one of the occasions.

I am not saying that men should not give more time to their families and less to their business than they do. The ideal arrangement would be for men to be able to make enough money in a few hours' labor suffice, and to be able to spend the balance of the time in heart-to-heart association with their wives and children. But before that ideal can be realised several things will have to happen.

For one thing a man will have to give up all ambition because nobody ever achieved any worth-while thing yet who kept union hours. The ones who get there are those who "while their companions slept were toiling upward in the night." The man who is Johnny-on-the-spot and always on his job is the one who is going to succeed every time. Don't forget that, weepy ladies.

Business will also have to be reconstructed so as to permit a man leisure in which to hold his wife's hand. As it is now, it is as relentless as fate. It is a life and death game, with all a man has on the table, and he either sits in it and matches his wit, and energy, and foresight against other tight-fisted players, or else he has to drop out entirely. It's no tiddlewinks that you can take a hand in now and then, as the notion seizes you. When a man starts an enterprise he has got to push his stone up the hill and over the crest, or else it rolls back on him and crushes him.

For another thing, wives have got to demand less if they want more of a man's time. You don't hear of the woman who complains that her husband is neglecting her for his business, telling him that she will go and live on a cheap street, and do her own cooking, and give up the car, and wear hand-me-down dresses. Not much. She wants to eat her cake and have it too, and it can't be done.

So I say to the woman who imagines that her husband neglects her because he gives most of his time to his business:

Brace up and act like a sensible woman instead of a cry baby. Go down on your knees and thank God for having given you a man who has got the grit to do a man's work instead of a lazy loafer. Be proud of his ambition. Enter into his plans. Get as much interested in his business as he is, and bear in mind that all of his work is for you and yours, and that there is no other proof of devotion a man can offer a woman so great as being willing to slave for her.

And don't forget this—that the most contemptible woman on earth is she who dolls herself up in the clothes a hard-working husband has paid for, and goes out man-hunting in them.

LUCKY STRIKE

The American Tobacco Co.

This is Saturday and when I woke up my neck was as limber as a piece of rubber and I took the rag off that my mother had tied on it and let Jubilee down with the rope in his teeth and put on my short pants when I had held them up to the light to see if they was getting thin in the seat but they wasn't.

I stood up against the side of the door and made a mark with a piece of chalk to see how tall I am, because I am going to watch out and see if I am growing at all. I don't believe I am growing any more than a rabbit. If a fella is growing at all he ought to be as big as a house by this time I can remember almost forever and I was always like I am now, but I am glad I thought about the chalk mark. I will make another mark tomorrow and then I will multiply it and I will measure my father and my unkle and then I will know how big I have got to be and how long it is going to take before I get long pants, and then I can tell Youniss. She does not say anything about it but she must be wondering if I am not ever going to have long ones. I bet she is wishing she was big enough to have her dresses as short as her mother's but she don't ever say so. Girls are different from boys. Boys are always thinking and telling what they are going to do when they get long pants, but a girl never tells what she is going to be when she gets short dresses.

We went out looking for snakes today. I was going to get enough of them so I could skin them and then I would braid their skin and make me a hat band and a belt and then I would walk through town and everybody would turn around to look at me, and they would think I was brave to kill all them snakes, but we could not find any, so we dug up a few angle worms and took a look at them, but they cannot be skun.

Then we went to the vacant lot and was playing ball and Youniss and Hattie and Maggie, the mut that got fascinated on the leg come over so we made it up we would go and get some green apples and they asted if they could go along and we said they could an dthey did, and they all chanked down as many as we did.

Youniss is certainly brave. Maggie and Hattie have not got any sense. The man chased us and the girls did not even run till they got outside of his orchard, and we waited down the road and they said when they got to us that the man said they should come back and get some when they was ripe, and he showed them where the rambo tree is. Youniss is going to show me. If a fella was as sweet as a girl and as tuff as a fella he could have a lot of fun, because no one would do anything to him. When I had went to bed and was holding Jubilee close to me I thought about the kittens and wondered if anything was happening to Youniss.

(To Be Continued.)

The man chased us and the girls did not even run till they got outside of his orchard.

EMERALD.

FOR today the talismanic stone is the emerald. In the Orient it is the custom to wear this stone on the index finger, as the result of a belief that if worn in this way it endows its wearer with the power to foresee evil and avoid it.

The emerald is also the natal stone for today. To those who wear it for this reason it is said to bring success in love affairs, youth that lasts, and the affection of all loved ones. It has also been adopted as the lucky stone for those who write, since it is believed to bring success as the result of mental work.

Black is today's color, and is symbolic of good judgment and clearness of thought.

The peony, symbolic of courage, is today's flower.

McDonald's Terrific Hitting Pilots Team to Another Victory

By PAUL W. LARKIN.

The Spudders, having had their lead in the pennant race reduced by the Marines Thursday to such a slight and fragile margin that they didn't care to handle it roughly, decided yesterday to give the poor thing a little nourishment and see if they couldn't raise it into something worth while. So they trampled those same Marines from Dallas into the turf of Athletic Park and sent out an S. O. S. call to the Gassers in Shreveport pleading for an additional dose of the same to be administered to the Fort Worth Panthers. Much as Billy Smith pretends to dislike the Spudders, he and his men heeded the cry for help, with the net result that before today's game the Wichitans found themselves possessed of a three-game lead and one which they can breathe upon without seeing it vanish.

The score of the affray at the local ball yard was 7 to 3. Jack Hellingsworth, the hurler who was given a rude reception by the Dallasites in the first game of the series, was master of ceremonies for the local cluster of athletes and he was also master of the Marines. Early in the afternoon Snipe Conley took a few liberties with his shoots and the result was that Ham Fatterson and his disciples gloried in a thin and temporary lead. Snipe thumped one out of the orchard with a Marine aboard in the third session and these two markers put the visitors in front only until the Spudders came in for their offensive part of the frame. After the count was knotted, "Holly" went imperturbably ahead, curling them up from over his head and giving an admirable exhibition of efficiency, while he waited for his mates to unlimber their bats. They did this presently, floggin; the offering of Snipe until he went to the showers and continuing to lambast the offerings of "Lefty" Swartz again until he was once more given the air. As the score indicates, the slams were grouped for more runs than were necessary.

The greatest exhibition of club wielding ever given in the local lot was put on for the fans by Tex McDonald and the Marine are still trying to get him out. Tex toed the platter five times during the course of the matinee and faced some honest-to-goodness pitching, some scuffpawing, and some spit-balling. The different brands were all alike to him. Off Conley he whacked out a slashing triple to deep center and a home to home clout that cleared the barrier in deep left center. Off Swartz he poled a clean drive to left for two cushions and drew a free ticket when he was hit. Off Harper, the last Marine to do the honors, he lined a terrific double to left center. A home run, triple and two doubles. Good enough in any league.

Frank Kitchens and Jake Miller also pounded the apple with a vengeance and garnered five safeties between them, three bouncing off the pole of the former.

The fielding of the local athletes was beyond reproach and they were so completely superior to the invaders in every department that it is hard to see how the Marines can possibly leave town with more than one additional victory to their credit. In fact, we'll be very much surprised if they get that one.

The following detailed score shows just how the visitors were swamped:

First Inning

DALLAS — Hollingsworth pitched brilliantly in the first and fanned Falk and Munson. Skinner flew out to Bescher. No runs, no hits, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS—Bescher went out on a roller to Conley. Tanner flew out to Skinner. McDonald drove a triple to the center field and Clark followed with another three bagger to the same spot, Skinner and Falk allowing the ball to fall between them, McDonald scoring. Miller drew a pass and Griggs went out, Conley to Galloway. One run, two hits, no errors.

Second Inning

DALLAS—Galloway fouled out to Kitchens. Palmer was a victim of the Tanner-Works combination and Robertson went back to the bench after swinging vainly at three of Holly's shoots. No runs, no hits, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS — Works walked and went to second when Kitchens singled to center. Holly fanned, Kitchens stealing second on the third strike. Bescher was walked intentionally and Tanner hit into a double play, Stow to Palmer to Galloway. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Inning

DALLAS—The Marines took the lead in this frame, but it was short lived. Stow started by lifting a high foul to Kitchens. Segrist worked Holly for a pass and then Snipe Conley lifted one ove rthe left field fence for the circuit, scoring Segrist ahead of him. Falk went out, Tanner to Works and Munson was Holly's fourth strike-out victim. Two runs, one hit, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS—Tex McDonald was not satisfied with Conley's performance, so duplicated his feat, sending one over the same fence and trifle further than Snipe's. Clark walked, Miller fouled out to Robertson and Griggs and Works fanned. Clark stole second as Griggs sat down. One run, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Inning

DALLAS—Skinner flew out to Miller. Galloway beat out an infield hit to Works but was out stealing, Kitchens to Clark, after Palmer had lifted another long fly to Miller. No runs, one hit, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS — The Spudders came back strong and drove Conley from the box. Kitchens led off with a single to center. Holly popped to Robertson. Bescher was out, Palmer to Galloway. Kitchens taking second. Tanner singled to right, scoring Kitchens and sending Conley to the showers, Swartz replacing him. Buddy made second on the throw to catch Kitchens at the plate. McDonald greeted Swartz with a ringing double to the left field fence, chasing Tanner over the pan. Clark lifted a weak foul to Stow. Two runs, three hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning

DALLAS—Robertson went out, Tanner to Works. Stow beat out an infield hit to McDonald and stole second as Segrist fanned. Swartz also struck out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS—Miller doubled to left. Griggs hit to Swartz who threw to Segrist to olate to catch Miller, both runners being safe. Works fanned. With the count three and two on Kitchens to hit to Galloway who threw wildly t ohome, Miller and Griggs scoring and Kitchens going to third. Holly struck out and Bescher popped to Swartz. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Sixth Inning

DALLAS—Falk singled to center. Munflew out to Bescher. Skinner dropped a Texas leaguer into center, putting Falk on second. Galloway flew out to Miller and Tanner threw out Palmer. No runs, two hits, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS—Tanner fanned. McDonald was hit by a pitched ball, took second on Clark's tap to Palmer and scored when Miller singled to center. Jake made second on the throw to the plate. Griggs went out, Palmer to Galloway. One run, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning

DALLAS — Robertson and Stow walked. Bot hadvanced a base when Segrist hit to Hollingsworth and was thrown out at first. Mattick was sent in to bat for Swartz and flew out to Bescher in deep left. Robertson scoring after the catch. Falk flew out to Miller. One run, no hits, no errors.

WICHIT AFALLS—Harper took up the pitching burden in this frame. Works beat out an infield hit to Palmer. Kitchens lined a hot one to Skinner, who muffed the ball but recovered in time to throw to second, forcing Works. Holly hit into a double play, Palmer to Stow to Galloway. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Inning

DALLAS—Munson rolled to Clark and was out at first. Skinner doubled to right and took third when Galloway flew out to Griggs in deep right. Palmer lifted a long fly to Bescher. No runs, one hit, no errors.

WICHITA FALLS——Palmer threw out Bescher, Tanner fanned, McDonald doubled to right center, his fourth extra base hit of the game, but was stranded when Clark went out, Segrist to Galloway. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth inning

DALLAS—Robertson singled to center. Stow hit into a double play, Tanner to Clark to Works. Segrist popped to Tanner for the final out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

ARBOTT AND WEBB FIGHT EIGHT ROUNDS TO A DRAW

VERNON, TEXAS, Aug. 12.—Will Abbott, Vernon boy, and for two years a student at the University of Texas, and D. Webb, county lad, fought eight rounds here last night in a no-decision bout for the championship of Wilbarger county. The fight was somewhat tame and there was a prevalence of clinching. Abbott shaded his heavier opponent and displayed more science than did Webb. Abbott has boxed considerably in university circles and has a reputation in Austin as a classy lightweight.

SPORT SHOTS by Paul W. Larkin

If "Lefty" Swartz is the Dallas ace, how we wish that the Marines had nothing but aces.

After last Wednesday's game "Holly" said; "All I want is one more crack at those birds." He got it. You know the rest.

From the manner in which the Marines crabbed Sentell and Myers, one would think that they were responsible for the Spudders' victory. Still, they've got to have some excuse.

The umpires certainly could not be held accountable for the Spudders' first run which was the result of two triples, Tex knocked the sphere out of bounds without the assistance of either arbiter. The two runs in the fourth which resulted from Kitchen's clean single to center, Tanner's drive to right and McDonald's double to left were not made possible by the umpiring. There are enough runs to win.

The Marines, Ham Pat especially, swore up and down that the squeeze was on in the fifth when Miller scored on Kitchens' tap. Ham contended that Frank should have been called out when he fouled on a third strike because the squeeze was on. Certainly it was on, but Kitchens didn't attempt to bunt the ball. In fact he swung so far that he threw his bat at the pellet. Just because the squeeze is on, it doesn't necessarily follow that the man at the plate has to bunt. He usually does, but he can swing slowly and keep the ball on the ground. Kitch proved that by doing it a second later when he grounded to Palmer as Jake came tearing in for the plate. Frank swung easily, but he didn't bunt.

Well, we've seen about everything the Marines possess now except Dan Tipple. The locals have faced five hurlers in three days while the extra catcher has gone in to pinch hit as has Mattick. We've yet to see the new third baseman and Dan Trot 'em out, Ham.

The following was gleaned from the Dallas Journal and appeared under the signature of Horace S. McCoy, the Dallas scribe who is covering the current series: "The Spudders showed no semblance of being a great baseball machine, and they looked like bush leaguers. They've either had generous umpires, or they have been around somebody's blacksmith shop, because they looked like ham-and-eggers yesterday." In another section of the narrative he says that "Caddy Works, who swings from both sides, but seldom hits from either, etc." Boys, here's food for thought. Let's ponder a moment.

The Spudders may not have shown any semblance of being a great machine, and they may have looked like bush leaguers. We use the "may" advisedly. But the fact remains that the Spudders beat the Marine in the game in question. They scored more runs. We didn't notice anything "bushy" about the way they hit the ball. Nor did we notice anything "bushy" about the way they played the game. However, we did see a "busher" go to the mound in a Spudder uniform for a few rounds and stand the Marines on their heads. We also noticed a Marine very foolishly try to steal third in the ninth with only one man down and one run needed to tie. We also saw a slugging Marine taken out of the batter's box with two strikes on him to allow a much less experienced and much weaker batter to hit for him. Again, we dont' recall ever having seen "Caddy" Works hit from the right side of the plate nor do we think a man who is batting around the .290 mark "seldom hits." What do you think, Mac? Guess you must have got your clubs mixed a bit.

Bob Bescher failed to increase his batting average yesterday, but were it not for his bad leg he would have garnered at least one hit. Bob tapped a slow roller to second that he would have beaten by several feet under ordinary circumstances.

The Spudders are even pushing the Panthers off the sport page of the Fort Worth papers. For several days now a certain column has been devoted to telling about the trials and tribulations of Walter Saim and his employees. But today's was the richest of them all. The Panther scribe has learned (?) Saim has been ordered by the Pittsburgh club to work Hollingsworth not more than once every five days in the future. Looks like a case of "the wish being father to the thought." "Holly" worked yesterday, but unless we miss our guess he'll be in there in one of the games in Dallas Monday.

It was also stated that "Holly" could hardly raise his right arm in the sixth chapter of a game in which the Panthers drove him from the box and that his "cap was reeking wet with perspiration." If we remember correctly, "Holly" soaked his cap in water. The fans may remember the bunk that was handed around a couple of weeks ago about "Holly" going back to Pittsburgh and Zinn and Yellowhorse coming here. They may also remember how those who used their heads a bit laughted at the mere suggestion of such a shift. Yet they were so worried in Fort Worth that a wire was sent to Pittsburgh to get the dope straight. And yet they try to tell us in Fort Worth that he Spudders are not to be considered. Horses!

TEXAN PERFECTS SCORING SHEET FOR FOOTBALL

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 13.—A new system for keeping tab of every phase of a football game has been perfected by Merritt I. Wheeler, of El Paso, Texas, who today was on his way to Chicago to consult with publishers with reference to turning out a scoring sheet.

He conferred here yesterday with Dr. L. H. Williams, football coach of the University of Minnesota. Wheeler said he had obtained a recommendation from Dr. Williams regarding the system.

The plan advocated by Wheeler would enable scorers keeping records of football games to jot down with a minimum waste of pencil every detail of play, including individual records.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas to the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita county, Greeting: You are hereby commanded to summon G. W. Wentz, Fort Stuben Oil Company, George H. Weber, Jess S. Evans, Robert C. Evans, A. E. Davidson and J. W. Rowley by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 89th District court of Wichita county, to be holden at the courthouse thereof in Wichita Falls, on the first Monday in October, A. D., 1921, the same being the third day of October, A. D., 1921, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the sixteenth day of December, A. D., 1921, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. ...., wherein W. H. Gibbs and W. F. Woodrum are plaintiffs and G. W. Wentz, Fort Stuben Oil Company, George H. Weber, Jess S. Evans, Robert C. Evans, A. E. Davidson and J. W. Rowley are defendants and said petition alleging that on or about the first day of June, 1920, they were lawfully seized and possessed of the following described land and premises in Wichita and Archer counties, Texas, holding the same in fee simple, to-wit: First Tract: 40 acres of land, same being the southwest 40 acres of Block 25, Kemp & Kell subdivision of League No. 4, Denton County School land in Archer county, Texas, said 40 acres being in the form of a square. Second Tract: 40 acres of land, same being the northeast 40 acres of Block No. 25, Kemp & Kell subdivision of League No. 4, Denton County School land, in Wichita and Archer counties, Texas, said 40 acres being in the form of a square. That on the day and year aforesaid, defendants unlawfully entered upon said premises and ejected the plaintiffs therefrom and unlawfully withhold from them the possession thereof, to their damage in the sum of $5,000. That the reasonable rental value of said land and premises is $5,000. Plaintiff allege that on the 15th of April, 1920, they entered into a contract with G. W. Wentz, a copy of which, attached to the original petition is in this office, marked "Exhibit A." That said contract as hereto attached is in substance what is generally termed a Producers Form 88, lease on the two 20-acre tracts described as being in Block 25, Kemp & Kell subdivision of League 4, Denton County School lands. In said contract it is provided that the lessee agrees and binds himself within 30 days from the date of the contract to commence operations for the drilling of a well for oil or gas upon the above described premises and to prosecute the same with due diligence until completion to the depth of 2,000 feet, with further provision with reference thereto. Plaintiffs allege that it is their information that an assignment of part of this lease has been made to the Fort Stuben Oil company, and plaintiffs have failed to find same of record, but they do find of record that the Fort Stuben Oil company, made a deed of trust to the other parties named above as defendants, securing them in the payment of certain notes named in that deed of trust, and that it is the information both from the records and otherwise that said parties are claiming an interest in said lease. Plaintiffs here allege that the defendant, Wentz, nor the Fort Studen Oil company, nor any of the defendants nor any one holding under them, so far as the records disclose, have in any way complied with the terms and provisions of said contract with reference to the drilling of said well to the depth of 2,000 feet, and have wholly failed and refused to carry out and comply with the terms of said lease contract, aforesaid. Plaintiffs allege that by reason of the acceptance of said lease in writing and agreeing to perform the things therein contained and by reason of defendants Wentz and the Fort Stuben Oil company having given deeds of trust which are recorded, and that since defendants have wholly failed and refused to carry out the terms of said contract, that such assignment and such deeds of trust are a cloud upon plaintiffs' title and should be removed. Wherefore, premises considered, plaintiffs pray the court that defendants be cited to appear and answer this petition; that plaintiffs have judgment, first, for the title and possession of said above described land and premises; that writ of restitution issue, and that they have their judgment for their rents, damages and costs, and that plaintiffs also have judgment cancelling said lease and setting same aside and removing the cloud from title by reason thereof. Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same. Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the first day of August, A. D., 1921. A. F. Kerr, Clerk District Court, Wichita County, Texas. By Eunice Jackson, Deputy. Aug. 6, 13, 20, 27.

SEAL ON HUNGER STRIKE FED ON MILK

Four little baby seals were recently brought from Southeastern Alaska to Seattle's Woodlawn Park Zoo. On their arrival the youngsters went on a hunger strike, because they were too young to eat fish and refused to take any kind of nourishment. Three of the youngsters died as a result of their hunger strike. The only remaining one, named Jiggs, is being brought up on a "gun" filled with condensed milk. The photograph shows two of the keepers of the Zoo "shooting" the food in the gun into the little fellow's mouth.

WARNING OF THE DANGER OF TREMENDOUS INCREASE IN WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Warning of the danger of a tremendous increase in white slave traffic was issued today by Major Bascom, attorney for the American Social Hygiene association. He has just returned from Geneva, where he represented the association at the international conference on traffic in women and children, called by the league of nations.

"Owing to conditions following the war, the trade is bound to flourish unless the nations of the world agree on stern repressive measures," he declared. "The general opening of frontiers and the increase in the number of women and girls who can neither marry nor find adequate means of support are the main contributing causes."

He charged that the main hindrance to international control of the traffic lay in the refusal of the government of the United States to co-operate in the movement because it was sponsored by the league of nations. The United States, he added, was the only important power not officially represented at the Geneva conference. He was sent, he said, as an unofficial observer by the hygiene association.

DEFENSE ALLEGES JURY MISCONDUCT IN TOUSSAINT TRIAL

Setting forth 15 reasons, attorneys for Henry John Toussaint, who was sentenced to hang for the murder of his father, have filed a supplementary motion for new trial in the 20th district court.

The motion is voluminous and enumerates the usual statutory formal reasons in addition to exceptions to the court's charge, the refusal of a special requested charge, exception to the court's ruling with reference to permitting the defense to open and conclude arguments, newly discovered evidence which impeaches the testimony of former Chief of Police Lee Huff, misconduct of the jury, and testimony of Dr. George F. Powell, superintendent of north Texas hospital for insane at Terrell, Texas, and newly discovered evidence that tends to show that the defendant at the time he killed his father was of unsound mind.

Two affidavits attached are given to impeach the testimony of Lee Huff, former chief of police, one affidavit with reference to the mob that congregated around the court house in the presence of the jury on the night that Mrs. Bennett is alleged to have identified a negro as her assailant, three affidavits with reference to the attitude of two jurors whom the defense contends were prejudiced before they had heard the testimony.

The affidavit of Dr. Powell concludes with the statement that "I do not believe him to be a normal or sane man, or wholly mentally responsible for his acts. It is a form of mental disorder known as paranoia. It is hereditary in most cases and is incurable."

In referring to the mob which congregated around the court house the motion sets up that the jury was in hearing of the various expressions of the mob and also in hearing on an address made by County Attorney E. L. Fullen to the mob. The defense contends that the intense public interest and the known prevailing public sentiment and the gathering and the occasion of the mob each and all combined prejudiced the jury and inflamed its passion against the defendant and his cause.

The motion for new trial was filed with the district clerk at noon Saturday.

Judge S. H. Hodges left Saturday for Frederick, Okla., where he will spend Sunday.

ANOTHER SCHOOL BUILDING ORDERED BY BOARD FRIDAY

School children in the extreme southeastern part of the city will have a building of their own, to be known as the Bowie school, early this fall; the school board late Friday decided to advertise for bids for construction of a four-room building.

Last session classes were conducted in a church building, which is no longer available for that purpose. The district is not only some distance from any other school, but is so situated that the children would have to cross numerous railroad tracks in going to and from school; for that reason the board decided to proceed with the new building at once.

GRANTS INJUNCTION TO WOMAN PLAINTIFF IN DIVORCE CONTEST

Upon preliminary hearing of a divorce petition filed by Bertha Aven against her husband, C. L. Aven, Judge Ed Napier of the 78th district court Friday evening issued an injunction restraining the defendant from molesting the plaintiff and her children at her home and also restraining him from disposing of $20,000 worth of community property which the plaintiff contends he owns.

The order also included that the defendant pay the plaintiff $150 a month during the pendency of the suit.

The plaintiff seeks a divorce on the grounds of cruel treatment and abandonment.

UNEMPLOYMENT SITUATION IN CHICAGO IS SERIOUS ONE STATES CHIEF OF POLICE

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Thefts of food from doorsteps and small shops in the poorer districts of Chicago are on the increase, Police Chief Fitzmorris declared today. He added that indications are the city will be confronted with one of the worst "crime waves" in its history unless the unemployment situation in the middle west is improved this fall.

Arrest of persons charged with eating meals in the cheaper restaurants and then admitting they have no money to pay are more numerous, the chief said, and in some districts, police captains report, families are dispensing with cooked meals to economize on fuel. The chief estimates the number of unemployed in the city at 100,000.
