Cease Fire Plea Accepted By Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli government agreed today to halt "all hostile action" along the Israeli-Lebanese border, U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib announced.

Habib made the annoucement after meeting Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Jerusalem and Begin said the Israeli government endorsed Habib's statement.

The U.S.-sponsored cease-fire was aimed at ending 15 days of artillery and rocket exchanges with Palestinian guerrillas across the Lebanese border, and Israeli air and ground attacks on Palestinian strongholds in Lebanon.

It was scheduled to take effect at 1:30 p.m. — 7:30 a.m. EDT, the government said.

Education Minister Zevulun Hammer said Israel agreed to the truce "in order to arrive at a lull on the northern border, a respite that will enable us to improve our security and political situation."

No other details were immediately available, and there was no immediate response from the Palestine Liberation Organization, which had said earlier it would agree to a cease-fire.

Earlier today, Palestinian rockets slammed into crowds of shoppers in the northern Israeli town of Kiryat Shmona, killing a 65-year-old man and wounding 12 other people, witnesses said.

The PLO said the rocket salvo was fired in retaliation for an overnight attack by Israeli naval and ground forces south of Beirut.

A Beirut police spokesman said 13 Palestinians and Lebanese, most of them civilians, were killed and 40 wounded in the overnight attack, and in two Israeli air raids in southern Lebanon Thursday.

The Israeli military command said its artillery batteries returned fire at the sources of the Palestinian rocket barrage.

Witnesses in Kiryat Shmona said the rockets smashed windows and scattered a deadly spray of shrapnel in the center of the town, where residents were shopping for the Sabbath.

The rockets hit as townspeople were beginning to restore normal life following a relative lull Thursday. The new attack drove residents back into the underground bunkers.

"I was on my way to a bomb shelter when I felt a blow on my head and I just collapsed," said one of the victims, David Ben Asher, who was treated for a head wound.

Nearly 200 Soviet-made Katyusha rockets have hit Kiryat Shmona in the past two weeks and the residents either have fled the city or live in underground bomb shelters.

The attack came while U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib was briefing Prime Minister Menachem Begin on his talks in Lebanon and Saudi Arabia aimed at ending the 15-day-old bout of fighting between Israeli forces and Palestinian guerrillas on the Lebanese-Israeli border.

Habib and Begin conferred for 90 minutes and the Israeli leader called a Cabinet meeting to relay to his ministers the information about the latest moves toward a cease-fire.

Meanwhile, the Arab Joint Defense Council, meeting in emergency session Tunisia, warned the United States today of "comprehensive measures" of reprisal if it continues to support Israeli aggression against Lebanon and the Arab world. The session, called by the PLO over the southern Lebanon crisis, opened Thursday evening and ended Friday morning with a terse communique threatening unspecified reprisals.

Pot Plane Caught

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — A New Braunfels businessman has been charged with possessing a planeload of marijuana valued at $800,000 on the street — and weighing 1,600 pounds.

Authorities said that Ronald Kuhlmann, 45, was taken into custody when he landed at the New Braunfels Airport, just inside the Guadalupe County line, allegedly with a planeload of marijuana.

A U.S. Customs plane that had been trailing Kuhlmann's twin-engine craft landed behind him and Kuhlmann immediately was taken into custody by an assortment of police officers including Customs agents, Department of Public Safety narcotics officers and state troopers.

Deportation Planned

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — The airlift that brought 100 "boat people" here was to isolate the Haitians in a remote area to facilitate deportation to their island homeland where they fear imprisonment, torture and possible death, say lawyers for the refugees.

"The real fear is that Immigration is going to deport these people to their death," said Vera Weisz, a spokesman for the Haitian Refugee Center in Miami.

Kidnap Plots Revealed

CHICAGO (AP) — President Reagan's younger son, Ronald, and high administration officials were targets of kidnap plots by the Puerto Rican nationalist group FALN, according to a convicted terrorist.

The kidnappings were planned to win freedom for imprisoned FALN members, Alfredo Mendez testified Thursday in federal court.

Refutes Amnesty Label

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Allowing Mexicans who have lived in the United States for five years to remain in this country is a matter of "humanitarianism," not amnesty, says Gov. Bill Clements.

Keeping tab on our neighbors: Roger Enlow of The Hood County News came up with this definition of a grandmother, allegedly penned by a Third-grader.

"A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own. She likes other people's little girls and boys and they love her. A grandfather is a man grandmother.

"Grandmothers don't have to do anything except be there. They're old, so they shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the store where the pretend horse is and have lots of dimes ready.

"If they take us for walks, they should slow down past things like pretty leaves or caterpillars. They should never say 'hurry up.' Usually they are fat, but not too fat to tie your shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gums off sometimes.

"It is better if they don't play cards, except with us. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like 'How come we can't see God?' and 'Where does the wind come from?'

They don't talk baby talk like visitors do, because it is too hard to understand. When they read to us, they don't skip or mind if it is the same story again.

Everybody should try to have one, especially if they don't have a television, because grandmothers are the only grownups who have got time."

The Cincinnati Inquirer reports that some advertising experts came up with these suggestions for putting that city's Riverfront Stadium to use during the baseball strike:

"Fill the stadium with dough and host a Queen City Dish Pizza Party.

"Stock the stadium with catfish and open a downtown pay lake.

"Turn the stadium on its side and feature it like the Gateway Arch in St. Louis—the Cincinnati Circle.

"Fit the stadium with a huge fan blade to blow away unwelcome storms, haze or smog.

"Outfit the exterior of the stadium with lights, shoot photos and sell them to the National Enquirer as a real UFO.

"Sponsor an all-Ohio musical chair competition.

"Fill it with kitty litter and open a home for stray cats."

Medicare Delays Still Plague Local Hospital

Delays in settling Medicare payments continue to inflict financial woes on Cogdell Memorial Hospital, members of the board of managers were told at their regular meeting last night.

Don Sealy, the hospital's credit manager, said that, although lump sum payments are now being received regularly, they amount to only about half of the amount due the hospital here and the backlog still stands at some $360,000.

The situation, which faces all hospitals in the state who handle Medicare patients, began several months ago when Blue Cross-Blue Shield, the servicing agency for Medicare in Texas, installed a new computer system.

The delays in Medicare payments are blamed for an operating deficit of some $190,000 so far this year at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Sealy said he had talked with Blue Cross representatives regularly and that current claims are now being processed more rapidly. However, the big backlog remains mostly unresolved and Sealy said he had been informed that it might be a year before it is completely unsnarled.

"We are not the only ones with this problem," Sealy said. "It is affecting hospitals all over."

The board approved the administrator's monthly report. It shows a daily average patient census of 67 for the month of June and 70 for the year.

The board also authorized the sale of some surplus, used hospital beds that are now in storage, having been replaaced by more up-to-date equipment.

Rex Robinson, president of the board, presided over the meeting. Other board members present were Roy Kidd, A. Z. Glover, Leon Autry and County Judge Preston Wilson.

Pair Arrested In Hermleigh Cases

Scurry County Sheriff's Department deputies took two 19-year-old males into custody Thursday in connection with several burglaries and acts of vandalism at Hermleigh.

The two suspects also implicated themselves in burglaries at Roscoe in statements given to local officers.

Chief Deputy Andy Anderson said charges would be filed accusing them of burglarizing the Cardinal Cafe and the Fina Station at Hermleigh last Sunday night, the latest in a series dating back to last winter.

They also are suspected of burglarizing the Cardinal Cafe last February and the Hermleigh Community Center last March.

The cafe at Hermleigh had been closed prior to the latest burglary and vandalism there.

Anderson said they also are believed to have damaged county-owned road machinery at a gravel pit east of Hermleigh in March. Glass was shot out on two occasions.

They are believed to have burglarized the Chevron Station in Hermleigh in April, and to have stolen gasoline at the Hermleigh School.

In addition to the Hermleigh offenses, Anderson said the pair made statements concerning the burglaries of four business houses and three automobiles in Roscoe.

B. Goldwater Suggests William Casey Resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — William J. Casey's six-month tenure as CIA director is in growing doubt after Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Barry Goldwater accused him of damaging the spy agency and publicly suggested that he resign.

Goldwater also said committee investigators were examining whether Casey misled the Senate during his confirmation process last January.

In an extraordinary news conference Thursday night in the Capitol, Goldwater sharply criticized Casey's choice of Max Hugel, a New Hampshire businessman who had worked on the Reagan presidential campaign, to be the CIA's director of operations, a highly secret and sensitive job. Casey was President Reagan's national campaign director last year.

"That he (Casey) appointed an inexperienced man to be in effect the nation's top spy was bad enough," Goldwater said. "I must say that as a person with a long involvement with intelligence matters, that was a very bad mistake and I might even say dangerous."

"The damage done by Mr. Hugel's appointment is a sufficient position for Mr. Casey to decide to retire or the president to have him retire," the Arizona Republican said.

Hugel resigned abruptly last week after two former business associates accused him of improper stock dealings. He denied the charges, however.

As recently as Tuesday, Goldwater had said he believed Casey "will remain unless we find further allegations against him in the course of the investigation."

The same day, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, ranking Democrat on the Intelligence Committee, said a crisis was building over Casey's tenure and he warned that if the administration was "not going to help us establish that the director should not resign, then the result will be that he will resign."

But while citing grounds for Casey's removal on Thursday, Goldwater denied a CBS News report that he had urged the director to step down.

"At no time have I suggested to Mr. Casey that he leave," the senator said, but he added: "Now, unless he's taking a bath, I'm sure he's heard them."

Goldwater also said he had not talked with Reagan about Casey's status.

"Mr. Casey is a creature of the president," Goldwater said. "As long as the president retains confidence in him, he stays."

Only Wednesday, Reagan publicly denied rumors that Casey's resignation was imminent. Casey also has insisted he has no plans to quit.

The Intelligence Committee began its investigation of Casey after Hugel resigned and published reports cited two recent federal court rulings that criticized Casey's role in Multiponics, Inc., a failed New Orleans farming venture.

In May, a federal judge in New York ruled that Casey and other Multiponics' directors had knowingly misled potential investors in the firm. Last year, a federal appeals court in New Orleans held that Casey and the other directors had driven the company "deep and deeper into debt" by managing it in a "pattern of self-interest."

Multiponics filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws in 1971, three years after Casey helped found it.

Casey, 68, has denied any wrongdoing in the Multiponics suit or in an array of other civil suits brought against him during his long business career.

R.S. Bingham, Operator Of Laundry, Dies

R. S. Bingham, 65, owner and operator of City Automatic Laundry, died unexpectedly at his home at 3600 41st St. this morning.

Death was attributed to natural causes in the coroner's report issued by County Judge Preston Wilson. Mr. Bingham was pronounced dead at about 10 a. m. after he was stricken ill suddenly.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Survivors include his wife, Wanda Bingham, of the home; a daughter, Carol Hutchison of Denver, Colo., and a son, Gary Bingham of Snyder.

Ask Us

Q.—What is the real name of the Spanish Park, and why is it called the Spanish Park instead of having a Hispanic name?

A.—The official name of the park some people call the Spanish Park is "North Park." Traditionally, parks here have not been given names of specific individuals, except in cases where the person, or family, made a significant contribution of park land and-or funds for development.

paul harvey

President Reagan has demonstrated that his administration will not tolerate even a shadow of impropriety.

When Max Hugel of the CIA was accused of engaging in questionable stock market activity seven years ago--he said the accusation was "unfounded, unproved and untrue"--but he resigned anyway.

Had he not resigned, he'd have been fired.

Mister Clean is a tough boss.

Any of us who has sought to staff even a small office with a handful of poeple who are flawless empathizes with a president who must fill hundreds of policy-making positions with "perfect people."

And I have no information that Max Hugel is imperfect. All I know for sure is that it was summer doldrum time for the Washington, D.C., news corps when they sank their teeeth in Hugel's trousers--and they were not about to let go.

He may be proved entirely innocent of any wrongdoing--as Bert Lance was after he had been hounded out of Washington.

But this administration will not let itself be fettered by crony-ism at the price of public confidence.

The accusation impugning the integrity of Max Hugel involves the time when he was president of an electronics company and later for a computer company.

It is said that he leaked confidential information about those companies to a Wall Street securities corporation.

The SEC has very rigid rules relating to "insiders" using inside information to mislead investors, to manipulate stock market prices.

Several persons--not including Max Hugel--were indicted in 1977, pleaded no-contest, were fined or placed on probation.

It appears that two of those who were implicated did not like the idea of Hugel getting off the hook and that it was they who blew the whistle on him.

Subsequent investigation and-or prosecution may clear Hugel of any illegal practice--but that will be too late to rescue his public career.

President Reagan says he is "distressed that once again we seem to be taking an accusation as a conviction." But he accepted the resignation, understanding that "Hugel did not want to cause any trouble to the administration."

There is hypocricy in the public insistence on leaders who are more circumspect than we are.

There is hypocricy within the news media--eager to focus its X-ray eyes on others--while demanding special immunity to scrutiny for itself.

But if President Reagan is effectively to pursue his important objectives, he cannot be distracted by comparatively insignificant sidefights.

Given the situation, however it discriminates, Mister Clean did what he had to do.

Dramatic 3-Hour Operation...

Artificial Heart Implanted

HOUSTON (AP) — In a dramatic three-hour operation, noted specialist Dr. Denton Cooley and a team of surgeons implanted an artificial heart in a 36-year-old man who had a massive coronary during triple-bypass surgery.

The surgery, performed at St. Luke's Hospital, was the second time a Cooley-led team had performed the operation in the past 12 years and only the third time it has ever been tried.

Although the artificial apparatus has not been approved by the Federal Drug Administration, hospital spokeswoman Hazel Haby said Thursday the device was implanted under a special FDA provision that allows such equipment to be used in a life-threatening situation.

Ms. Haby said doctors hope to transplant a human heart within two or three days. She said the artificial heart is not intended for long-term use.

Doctors were "encouraged but guarded" about the unidentified patient, who was in stable condition, Ms. Haby said.

She said the patient suffered a massive heart attack during triple bypass surgery and that doctors determined "only the artificial heart could save his life," adding the man's arteries were "totally occluded."

"The heart is made of smooth-surfaced plastic and has dual chambers," Ms. Haby said. "It is pneumatically activated and electrically driven by console about size of home television set."

She said the device, about the size of a human heart, has undergone extensive testing in calves.

She said the man's heart would not function without the aid of a heart-lung machine at the end of the bypass surgery. The patient suffered the heart attack when a device called a balloon pump was implanted, she said.

The operation to implant the artificial heart took about two hours and 45 minutes, Ms. Haby said.

The patient was kept in the operating room until 9 p.m., when he was moved to a special room and placed under direct observation of a staff of 25 doctors, nurses and biomedical technicians.

Cooley and his associates were not available for comment after the operation.

Cooley's first mechanical heart transplant operation was performed April 4, 1969, on Haskell Karp, 37, of Skokie, Ill.

Karp lived 65 hours with the mechanical heart, but died 36 hours after he received a human heart transplant.

His widow and children filed a $4.5 million malpractice suit, charging the device Cooley implanted had not been properly tested.

State courts and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled against Mrs. Karp and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case.

The National Heart Institute also criticized Cooley, saying he had violated government guidelines on human experiments.

But he said four months after the unsuccessful operation that he would not have hesitated to use another mechanical heart if emergency conditions warranted.

Cooley and a team of surgeons performed more than 20 heart transplants in the late 1960s before he first used the mechanical heart.

Last August, surgeons in Argentina said they had replaced a man's heart with an artificial heart, powered by an external battery, that worked until the man died 15 hours later of respiratory failure.

Dr. Hector Trabucco, assistant chief of surgery at Railroad Polyclinic in Buenos Aires, said he decided to use the device when the man's heart failed to function after an operation, and there was not enough time to find a human heart to transplant.

Surgeons at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City are awaiting permission from the federal Food and Drug Administration to use an artificial heart developed there by Dr. Robert Jarvik.

The so-called "Jarvik 7" heart is powered by compressed air and requires the patient to be connected by tubing to a device which controls the pulses of air.

It has been used to keep a calf alive for up to nine months, but Jarvik and his co-workers say it mainly would be intended to sustain a patient whose heart cannot be restarted after surgery until a suitable human transplant is found.

Court Releases Man Unable To Make Bond

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An appeals court has ordered the release of a man who contended he was unable to pay child support or post bond while he was locked up in jail the past five months.

Alfred W. Tristan had been unable to gain release from jail since Feb. 10, although the 4th Court of Civil Appeals had ordered him released on bond.

Tristan was found in contempt of court last February because he had not made child support payments as ordered by a divorce decree signed on Dec. 26, 1978.

He was confined to jail for three days and ordered to remain there until he paid $2,750 in child support, plus court costs of $33 and an attorney fee of $450.

The man filed an application with the appeals court which ordered him released pending a hearing, on the condition that he file a $750 bond.

The court set a hearing for July 9, but Tristan's attorney could not appear and the hearing was reset for July 14.

Tristan was unable to make the bond and remained in jail.

In an affidavit, Tristan said he could not pay the child support, could not borrow the money and does not own any property to pledge as security. He said he could not earn any money while he was in jail.

In ordering Tristan's release, Chief Justice Carlos Cadena wrote in the opinion rendered Wednesday:

"He has been incarcerated for more than five months, and because of his inability to post bond, remained imprisoned after this court had ordered him released on bond.

"Under these circumstances, we believe testimony concerning the impossibility of raising the required money is not contradicted by the mother's statements that she believes he can pay the required amount.

"(He) is ordered discharged from custody."

Charles Russell Film To Be Shown Sunday

This Sunday the Diamond M Museum of Fine Arts continues its "Museum Sundays" series with the featured film "The West of Charles Russell". Showtime begins at 2 p.m. and the museum invites the public to attend free of charge. The museum is located at 909 E. 25th Street.

Truly an American artist, Russell spent his life in the open spaces of the American West. Born in St. Louis, he watched a variety of adventurers pass through the gateway city and decided to explore the west himself.

He journeyed into the open spaces, fell in love with the land and never returned. Spending 11 years as a cowboy, he began to paint simply to express himself. At first his works were of purely local interest; he often sold them to saloons for the price of a meal. Yet in his own lifetime he became a renowned artist.

Russell's scenes of the cowboy helped solidify the image that became typical. His ability to capture the nobility of the Indians, the majesty of the buffalo herds, and the drama of the high Rockies also combined accurate portrayals of specific episodes and personalities with a sense of the totality of the experience.

Using real people and events, he painted the generalizations that were the west. Perhaps Russell's greatness lies in the fact that the picture we have of the west is the one Russell drew for us.

Vietnam Pilot's Body Slated For Cremation

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — The ship that took Navy Lt. Steve Musselman to war will scatter his ashes at sea, almost eight years after the fighter pilot was shot down over North Vietnam, his mother said.

Musselman, whose plane crashed in a Hanoi city park in September of 1972, was listed as missing until his status was changed six years later to read killed in action.

Ethyl Mussleman learned Monday that her son's body was one of three released this month by the Vietnamese government.

She said the family planned to bury Musselman in the family plot, but decided on cremation after talking with his son's widow, Geanne Schantz.

Auction Center

NEW YORK (AP) — Sotheby's, the auction house, has opened a third auction center in New York City.

Its 84th Street Galleries for Books, Stamps and Coins is believed to be the first separate auction center ever established to be devoted entirely to these three popular collecting areas.

This past fall, Sotheby's opened its block-long York Avenue Galleries to house all of its decorative arts department, while its Madison Avenue Galleries continue to handle sales of fine arts and jewelry.

The firm has now divided all of its facilities by collecting category, rather than by price, extending the concept of more specialized auction services introduced last fall.

Saga To Continue In Phillip Roth's New Book

ZUCKERMAN UNBOUND. By Philip Roth. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. 225 Pages. $10.95.

The number of American novelists who can be counted upon to write good book after good book is not large. Philip Roth is one of them.

Demonstrating once again, and to better advantage, his mastery of language, Roth continues in "Zuckerman Unbound" the saga of Nathan Zuckerman. First met as an aspiring writer in "The Ghost Writer," Zuckerman has now learned his chosen craft and learned it well.

After early popular obscurity, Zuckerman has burst upon the best-selling scene with a novel called "Carnovsky." For years Zuckerman earned little from his writing.

Now, with the success of the sexually explicit "Carnovsky," he is in the big bucks, and he isn't quite sure what to do with them. Nor is he capable of handling the attention being showered on him by the man in the street as well as by the celebrity.

Roth ladles out much black humor as he describes a buffetted Zuckerman adrift in a world he never made and, for the most part, is unable to cope with.

Feeling he has outgrown her, Zuckerman leaves his wife. He moves to a new apartment at a fancy New York City address. He has a one-night affair with a glamorous movie star. He is bothered in the street by a mad stranger.

Through them he learns, painfully, that when a person becomes an artist, then "you are no longer any man's son, you are no longer some good woman's husband, you are no longer your brother's brother, and you don't come from anywhere anymore, either." PhilThomas AP-BooksEditor

South's four-spade contract is quite sound. In fact, it is so sound that if spades break and the heart queen can be picked up, South will take all 13 tricks.

Therefore, South wins the first club and plays his ace and king of trumps. East shows out and the best South can hope for is to make one overtrick.

So he plays his king and deuce of hearts. West follows with the six and 10 and it is now up to South to make a most unusual safety play. He must refuse the heart finesse and rise with dummy's ace. This is going to cost him his overtrick if West started with the Q-10-6, but it insures his contract.

He simply leads a third heart. East takes his queen, cashes a club and plays his king of diamonds. South wins with dummy's ace and discards his remaining diamond on a good heart. West ruffs for the third defensive trick, but that ends his trick taking.

If South took that heart finesse East would win, cash his club and lead the king of diamonds. South would win in dummy and play dummy's ace of hearts, but West would ruff right in and give his partner a diamond trick.

Finger combing

To give volume and shape to short-layered wavy or curly hair, try finger combing it after your shampoo. First towel dry your head thoroughly. Then use your fingers like a hairbrush, lifting sections of hair by running your fingers from base to tips in strong, quick motions. Repeat the brushing motions until your hair is almost dry. Then switch to a plastic brush or comb to give final shape to this style.

Chin ups

If your chin is starting to show signs of doubling, try this firming exercise. Lie flat on your bed with your head hanging over the edge. Keeping your body straight, lift head slowly until you can see your toes. Then lower head

Princess style

Phyllis Diller told Beauty Digest magazine how she dresses to suit her figure: "Because I'm only 5 feet tall and have a big bosom, I can't wear anything with a belt. All I can wear are princess style dresses — all in one piece from the shoulder down. I'm waiting for the day when the sack look comes back."

Peach Tart Is Made In The Food Processor

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press
Food Editor

Some years ago a professional woman chef who cooked for a family in St. Louis, Mo., generously gave her recipe for a marvelous peach cream tart to a guest of her employer.

In time the guest passed along the recipe to her niece in New Jersey.

The niece in turn gave the recipe to an acquaintance who eventually contributed it to a West Coast "charity" cookbook.

Last summer the niece herself sent the recipe to the "Sharing Recipes" department of "The Pleasures of Cooking" magazine. There it was adapted for use in a food processor and promptly published. Various friends of mine who found it in "Pleasures" and tried it told me they were enchanted with it.

When we tried it, so were we. It's so delicious it's worth being in any cook's permanent recipe repertoire. Here is our adaptation of the original St. Louis version for those cooks who do not yet have a food processor.

PEACH CREAM TART

Butter Crust, recipe follows
6 medium ripe but firm peaches (about 1¼ pounds)
3 egg yolks (from large eggs) 1-3rd cup commercial sour cream ¾ cup sugar ¼ cup all-purpose flour

Prepare and bake the Butter Crust as directed.

Dip the peaches in boiling water off heat long enough to loosen their skins — a minute or so. Halve and pit; slice thickly — 6 to 8 slices from each half.

In a medium bowl beat together the egg yolks, sour cream, sugar and flour until smooth and blended.

Arrange the peach slices in concentric circles, overlapping if necessary, in the baked Butter Crust; pour the yolk mixture over them. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until set looking and a pale golden color — 1 hour; if surface browns too fast, place a tent of foil over it toward end of baking. Surface will look meringue-like in places. Place pan on wire rack to cool. With a small metal spatula, carefully loosen edges; remove sidewall of pan. Delicious served while still warm or at room temperature. Even good after chilling because the crust does not get soggy. Makes 8 servings. BUTTER CRUST 1¼ cups all-purpose flour ½ cup (¼-pound stick) butter
2 tablespoons commercial sour cream

In a medium bowl with a pastry cutter, cut the butter into the flour until the butter is in fine particles. With a fork, stir in the sour cream until the dough forms a ball. Place in the center of an ungreased 9-by 1½-inch round cake pan with a removable bottom. Flatten the ball and press out the dough to cover the bottom and side of the pan evenly and completely. Do not prick. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until set-looking but not browned — about 20 minutes. Set aside at room temperature to cool somewhat while you prepare the filling. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees so it will be ready to bake the filled tart.

Large Sum Given To Museum

NEW YORK (AP) — Real estate developer Harold Uris says he has visited the Metropolitan Museum of Art since he was in grade school and dreamed of giving money to benefit the museum and Cevk'tis, 76, announced Wednesday he had given $10 million to improve education at the 111-year-old institution.

"My interest in this is not art," he said. "I would love to see the boys, instead of roaming the park beating people over the head, learning about art."

The gift is one of the largest the museum has received, and museum President William Macomber said it "has never had this kind of special support."

Nancy Reagan In England

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan is visiting England for only a week, but she'll be squeezing in five luncheons, five dinner parties, two receptions, a fireworks display and a royal wedding.

Mrs. Reagan leaves for London Thursday. In addition to the July 29 wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana, her schedule includes one of the prince's polo matches, a luncheon hosted by Princess Margaret at Kensington Palace and a late-night reception given by Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace.

The first lady's traveling party includes her hairdresser. Her press secretary, Sheila Patton Tate, said any costs incurred by him will be paid by the Reagans.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

B-12 shots will help here

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been in the hospital with pernicious anemia. I don't know much about it. My blood was down and I had a headache, ear ache, dizzy spells, upset stomach, weakness and roaring in my head. I was put on B-12 shots and ferrous sulfate pills. I was told that X-rays showed my stomach lining, which is supposed to put vitamins through to the blood, is gone. The doctor says it is not cancer and will come back but I will be on B-12 shots the rest of my life. Any information you can give me will be appreciated. Will my blood stay up once it gets back to normal or will it drop again?

DEAR READER — There are many causes for dizzy spells and weakness but if you have pernicious anemia or any other form of severe anemia it can cause these and other symptoms. You must have some atrophy of the normal folds of the lining of your stomach that the doctor could see on the X-ray.

Regardless of that, pernicious anemia is caused by a lack of intrinsic factor, a substance formed by the lining of your stomach. You need this intrinsic factor to enable the B-12 in your food to be absorbed through your small intestine. If you don't have enough intrinsic factor taking B-12 tablets will not help either as they will not be adequately absorbed. That is why doctors give you B-12 shots, so the vitamin is absorbed directly into your circulation without being dependent upon absorption from your digestive system.

You should study The Health Letter number 4-5, Vitamin B-12, Folic Acid, Pernicious Anemia, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. As you will see, B-12 has many important roles besides maintaining your blood count.

And your blood count will stay up as long as you get enough B-12. If you fail to get your shots as your doctor has recommended, you will stop forming enough red blood cells and your anemia will return, causing again all the symptoms you have had and perhaps more. So be sure to follow his recommendations.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am an athlete who works out twice a day. I take mainly vitamin supplements (multiple vitamins, B-complex tablets, iron supplements and yeast tablets). Would taking all of these pills at once be harmful? I read that B-complex vitamins speed up your metabolism. Should this give you more energy and burn more calories to help you lose weight? A few days ago I felt sick after taking yeast tablets. I had a headache and blurry vision.

DEAR READER — A lot of athletes follow the fad of popping vitamins and minerals. It is usually a waste of money. It is far more important to be on a well-balanced diet that provides all the essential vitamins and nutrients you need. Vitamins do not increase your energy level unless you are low on vitamins in the first place.

If you eat properly, you should not be low on vitamins unless you have an underlying medical problem. I have no objection to taking one all purpose vitamin tablet a day to be sure to help correct for dietary inadequacies if there is any doubt about the diet. Any more than that won't help.

Reasonable amounts of water soluble vitamins should not make you sick but will just be washed out through your kidneys.

One Week After Reagan's Shooting...

Secret Medical Crisis Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan went through an unpublicized medical crisis a week after he was shot last March — a mysterious, persistent, high fever that made his doctors debate operating on his bullet-pierced lung a second time.

Medical writer John Pekkanen, given access to every doctor at George Washington University Hospital who treated Reagan so he could write an authoritative account of the president's ordeal, disclosed the second crisis in an article for a Washingtonian magazine.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, a hospital administrator who acted as spokesman on the president's recovery, confirmed Pekkanen's account.

O'Leary said there was no disclosure of the possibility of a second operation to remove the left lobe in Reagan's chest because making that information public would have been "inappropriately alarmist."

To keep word that the president was seriously ill from leaking out, Pekkanen reported, one doctor had to lie to a nurse. He also covered up the label on a bronchoscope so others would not know a bronchoscopy had been ordered to clear up Reagan's bronchial tubes.

The article also says:

—The first official photograph of a smiling Reagan in a robe, standing with his wife, was cropped to take out a nurse, who stood next to Reagan, holding a Pleur-evac device connected to a chest-tube coming out from under his robe.

—In a security lapse, a medical voyeur — a doctor who was a part-time member of the university medical faculty but who had no business being there — wandered up to Reagan's bedside and stared intently at the president. Refusing to leave, he was finally escorted away by hospital security people.

Reagan's second medical crisis started on the Thursday night following the March 30 shooting. His temperature shot up to 102, his color worsened, he became more tired and his white blood count went up, Pekkanen said.

The next day, the fever continued and that night Reagan experienced chills. X-rays indicted fluid in the lungs, suggesting pneumonia.

At the time, O'Leary and other spokesmen revealed the president's rising temperature but minimized its importance. They told nothing about the debate among the attending physicians over whether a second operation would be needed.

Reagan was spitting up fresh blood, and that worried Aaron. In addition, X-rays suggested to the surgeon that Reagan could be vulnerable to a major lung bleed, the article said.

"At one point," it said, "Aaron considered the possibility of going back in and surgically removing the left lobe, the source of the president's problem."

But other doctors argued the president's post-operative setback was of no major importance.

Reagan, Brady Talk Together

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and White House press secretary James Brady swapped congratulations by phone as the president was returning from the economic summit meeting held near Ottawa.

Reagan called Brady, who is recuperating in the hospital from a gunshot wound, to wish him and his wife a happy eighth wedding anniversary Tuesday.

Reagan spoke with Brady for two to three minutes and with Brady's wife, Sarah, for about two minutes from Air Force One, said White House spokesman David Prosperi.

Brady, 40, suffered a gunshot wound in the head in a March 30 assassination attempt on Reagan's life outside a Washington hotel.

Prosperi said Brady congratulated Reagan on his success at the the summit and told him the press accounts of it looked very good.

Washington Star...

Newspaper To Close

WASHINGTON (AP) — American newspapering has seen another death in the afternoon — the demise of the Washington Star, once a robust paper read with care in the White House and in the trolley cars along Pennsylvania Avenue.

The Star's eclipse, in a town that half a century ago supported five vigorous papers, makes Washington the largest American city without competing newspapers — a distinction mourned by its competitor as well as the nation's political leaders.

"No newspaper wants to be a monopoly," said Benjamin Bradlee, executive editor of the morning Washington Post, which reported its competitor's death with two stories at the top of the front page and two full pages inside.

"You think you do, but you really don't," Bradlee added.

One of his reporters, Judith Valente, put it this way: "I hope Post reporters don't get lazy."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., declared that "a one-newspaper city is wrong....We have a two-party system in this country and in every major city I think we ought to have newspapers expressing opposite philosophies."

President Reagan called it "an extremely sad day."

Once no paper in Washington was as serious, as healthy or as vigorous as the Evening Star, which stood first in circulation and prestige.

It was a conservative paper, the recipient of tips from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, and it was read closely in the government. But it found room, too, in its narrow columns of small type, for news of suburban garden clubs and schoolboy sports.

The Star, founded as a four-page penny paper by printer Joseph Barrow Tate in 1852, sold 418,000 copies a day at its peak in 1972, after buying out its afternoon competitor, the Washington Daily News. Within nine years it lost one reader in four, but at the end it still ranked 21st in circulation of the nation's dailies — fifth among evening-only newspapers.

Now it is almost gone, trying to hang on for two more weeks only on the remote chance that someone will buy it. One possibility: the people losing their jobs. Nine Star unions are trying to form a coalition to buy the paper.

"We'll consider ourselves lucky if we can keep going for two weeks," said James R. Shepley, chairman of Time's executive committee and the Star, because both personnel and advertisers now will flee.

The paper has been losing $20 million a year, according to Time Inc., the big magazine publishing house which bought it — for $20 million — from financier Joe L. Allbritton three yers ago in anticipation of giving the Post, which owns Newsweek, a run for its money.

The Star's collapse throws 1,427 people out of work, some of them well-known newspaper bylines. Today, they are putting out a paper with one hand and looking for work with the other.

Southwest Airline In Dispute With 19 Judges

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The chairman of Southwest Airlines says his firm has chosen to go to the judicial mat with 19 Houston area state judges rather than spend $100,000 to stay out of court.

Herbert Kelleher, San Antonio attorney and chairman of the board of the airline, said the company wants trial of the suit moved from Houston to San Antonio and has retained attorneys Richard "Racehorse" Haynes and Robert B. Wallis.

The suit will determine whether the 19 judges were bumped from a Southwest flight in Dallas — or tried to do the bumping themselves.

Hearing on Southwest's request for a change of venue from Houston to San Antonio has been scheduled for Aug. 3 in Harris County's 152nd District Court, where the suit was filed. The judges are resisting the move, preferring that the case be tried on their home turf.

The suit arises from a string of events Sept. 19, 1980, as the judges were returning to Houston from a judicial conference in Amarillo, with a stop scheduled in Dallas.

In their suit, the judges complain they were dumped in Dallas, threatened with physical force and arrest, and arrived in Houston hours later than scheduled.

Kelleher tells a different story.

Rather than being bumped, Kelleher contends, the judges, who had their wives with them, wanted the airline to bump regularly scheduled passengers to make room for them.

Kelleher said the judges missed their connecting flight from Dallas to Houston because the Southwest plane had mechanical difficulty before taking off from Amarillo. By the time the plane arrived in Dallas, he says, the connecting flight already had left for Houston.

The judges brought suit under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act, alleging breach of contract, fraud and misrepresentation.

In 1919, the Treaty of Versailles was signed, drawing up conditions of peace at the conclusion of World War I.

In 1912, China became a republic.

Man Faces Arraignment In Young Girl's Death

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A man convicted of raping his stepmother and charged with capital murder in the strangulation of a 10-year-old girl whose body was stuffed under a porch has been returned to Lubbock for arraignment, officials say.

Jodie Mack Oliver, 32, was scheduled to be arraigned today after being charged with the June 24 death of Dawn Mitchell Stanley, whose blanket-wrapped body was found under her family home.

Oliver was a boarder at the residence until shortly before the slaying, said Don Stapleton, chief administrator for the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department.

Bosque County sheriff's deputies said they arrested Oliver for investigation of burglary at 9:50 p.m. Wednesday in Meridian, and that he was jailed after treatment for a minor bullet wound to the arm that he apparently received earlier Wednesday.

Oliver is serving 10 years' probation after pleading guilty to raping his 60-year-old stepmother in Lubbock.

The suspect also was a defense witness in Cullen Davis' murder-for-hire trials in Houston and Fort Worth, in which the millionaire industrialist was acquitted of trying to have his divorce judge killed.

Testimony from Oliver, who lived in Pat Burleson's karate school, was used by defense attorneys in an attempt to show a conspiracy existed against their client.

Appeals Court Assailed By Prosecutors

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Bexar County prosecutor says district attorneys "would have to be clairvoyant" to get the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to uphold a death penalty.

Local prosecutors are criticizing the Court of Criminal Appeals for ordering a fourth trial for a man sentenced to death in the killing a retired Air Force colonel in fashionable Olmos Park in 1973.

"We will never get an affirmative ruling in a capital case out of the current court of criminal appeals," said Keith Burris, chief of District Attorney Bill White's civil division.

"I'm not surprised the case was reversed. By the ultra-liberal makeup of the Court of Criminal Appeals, there are not going to be any death penalty convictions upheld."

Fred T. Durrough, 39, on death row for the slaying of Henry S. Tyler during a burglary attempt on April 11, 1973, was granted a new trial in a lengthy opinion that jury selection for his last trial, in 1979, was improper.

Ousted President Asks For Election Boycott

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's ousted president appealed in a clandestine radio broadcast for a boycott of today's election to fill his post, sources in Iran said.

"I am your legal president, you have to resist. I will return one day," ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said in a message to the nation Thursday night, urging Iranians not to go to the polls.

Speaking in Farsi in his first broadcast since he went into hiding in mid-June, Bani-Sadr said, "This is a government of terror and strangulation. I am in Iran and will soon return."

Tehran residents who heard the statement said they recognized the voice of Bani-Sadr, who has been reported hiding with Kurdish tribes in northwestern Iran near the border with Turkey.

The leftist underground group Mujahedeen Khalq has vowed to disrupt the elections, in which Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai was expected to win easily over three other candidates from the ruling, clergy-dominated Islamic Revolutionary Party.

Sources in Tehran, who declined to be identified, said two bombs exploded this morning a few hours after the polls opened at 5 a.m. for 12 hours of balloting.

One person was killed and several others injured when a bomb blasted a bridge in front of the governor's office in the south Tehran suburb of Shahr Ray, the sources said. were destroyed.

A second bomb exploded the crowded Shemiran Bend Square but there were no immediate reports of injuries or damage, the sources said.

There were protests, some peaceful and some violent, at several Iranian consulates overseas where Iranian voters living overseas could go to cast ballots in the election.

In Ankara, Turkey, a band of leftists took over the consulate and ripped open the ballot box, which they said contained six votes for Rajai and one for a woman who is a popular singer in Tehran. Two people were reported injured in a scuffle between pro- and anti-government Iranians. The protesters surrendered to police after about an hour.

Peaceful demonstrations were reported in Bonn and Munich, and in Vienna four people were injured — at least two by gunshots — in an attempted occupation of the Iranian Embassy, police said.

Tehran Radio reported that Iran's revolutionary guards arrested more than 60 leftists who were plotting to sabotage today's election.

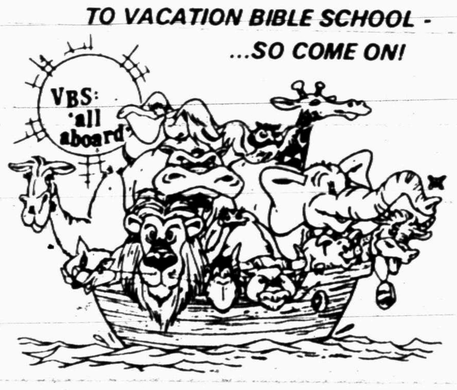

In 1905, Alfred Dreyfus, a young Jewish French army staff officer, was acquitted of a charge of treason.

Dear Abby

Generation Gap Opens Over Lifestyle Without License

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old daughter is living with her fiance. They consider themselves committed to each other in a mature, loving relationship. They are both in satisfying work situations, but neither of them wishes to marry at this time.

Although my wife and I were not happy when our daughter and her fiance chose that kind of lifestyle, we trust their maturity and judgment. Her grandparents, on the other hand, are shocked and totally unforgiving. Their realtionship with her formerly was excellent, but they now feel that she is living a sinful, immoral life and they make no distinction between her lifestyle and that of a young woman who sleeps around with several partners.

Our daughter has written them several long, affectionate letters explaining her values and feelings, but to no avail.

What would your advice be to the grandparents? And how would you advise the granddaughter? Is it possible to bridge the double generation gap?

NEW YORK

DEAR NEW YORK: Since the grandparents consider their granddaughter's lifestyle as sinful, I would advise them to "hate the sin, but love the sinner."

And I would advise the granddaughter to keep trying to persuade her grandparents to respect her right to make her own decisions and to trust her judgment.

DEAR ABBY: I have several children, and over the years I have bought lovely shower and wedding gifts for all their friends. I have given expensive parties as well, and I later sent them baby gifts. All this I was happy to do, but now many of their close friends are divorced and I am receiving invitations to their second weddings!

How do you suggest I handle these? Abby, please tell people that it is not proper to send invitations to second weddings.

HAD IT WITH SECOND-TIMERS

DEAR HAD IT: It is not "improper" to send an invitation, providing the invitation is sincere.

What you want to do about it is up to you. You obviously feel pressured to send a gift because you received an invitation. Since you've had it with second-timers, send your regrets and best wishes.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 74, and my boyfriend is 67 and single. We both live in a nursing center — that's where we fell in love. We want to get married, but my boyfriend is on welfare and I understand that if I marry him, he will be taken off welfare and I will have to support him. I have some money, but I would rather not support him if I don't have to.

My children tell us to forget about marriage and just continue to be sweethearts like we have been doing. I have nothing against this, but I would prefer to get married unless, of course, it means supporting him. Please advise.

IN LOVE AT LAST

DEAR IN LOVE: Each state has its own laws concerning welfare recipients. However, in most states a person is not eligible for welfare if a spouse is able to provide support. Inquire at your local welfare department, and find out if this applies to you.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Sharp as you usually are, it's apparent that you were never a "second wife." That woman who refuses to attend family gatherings with her husband's ex-wife doesn't have a problem. She's normal. No woman wants to socialize with her husband's first wife who's been part of his family for years and probably worked hard at getting them to like her.

The in-laws should be more sensitive and entertain each wife separately.

SECOND WIFE

DEAR SECOND: You're right, of course, and many readers wrote to point it out. Score: Readers, 100; Abby, 0.

* * *

You're never too young or too old to learn how to make people like you. Get Abby's new booklet of practical advice. Send $1 and a stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Death Sentence Given To Man

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who said unemployment drove him to participate in an armored van robbery that ended in the slaying of a guard has been sentenced to death.

James Ronald Meanes, 25, was convicted of capital murder Thursday and sentenced to death by injection for his participation in the April 21 robbery of a van carrying more than $1 million.

Guard Oliver Flores, 29, was shot to death by Meanes or co-defendant Carlos Santana, witnesses testified.

Santana will be tried for capital murder in September.

Meanes, who had two previous felony convictions, told the jury Wednesday he took part in the robbery because he could not find welding or construction work.

Evidence showed Meanes and Santana fired numerous rounds from a shotgun and a pistol.

They were caught a short time later in a field where they planned to hide the van and transfer the money to a getaway car.

Defense Says Duff-Smith Was Set Up

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorneys portray capital murder defendant Markham Duff-Smith as an innocent victim "set up" by a man who killed for pleasure and then hoped for reward from their client's inheritance.

But prosecutors accuse the 34-year-old Houston investor of arranging the 1975 stangulation of his affluent, adoptive mother and the 1979 shooting deaths of his sister and her family in order to inherit their wealth.

Duff-Smith goes on trial today for the slaying of his adoptive mother, 60-year-old Trudy Duff-Smith Zabolio, whose death was listed as a suicide for more than four years after she was found strangled with a pair of pantyhose.

He also is accused in the slayings of his sister, Diana Wanstrath, her husband and child. Those killings were originally ruled a murder-suicide.

Assistant District Attorney Ted Poe says the case might have remained closed if not for the 19-month-long investigation conducted by a lone homicide detective who found little official support for his digging.

Johnny Bonds, a 14-year police veteran, was assigned to investigate the 1979 Wanstrath shootings.

He refused to accept a Harris County Medical Examiner's report that concluded Diana Wanstrath shot her husband and 14-month-old son before killing herself — because he could not find the weapon.

Eventually his investigation led to ex-con Allen Wayne Janecka who confessed to the Wanstrath killings and told investigators he was hired by Walter Waldhauser.

Waldhauser, 32, a self-described financial expert and one-time business associate of Duff-Smith, admitted his role in both the Wanstrath and Zabolio killings, prosecutors say. He agreed to testify against Duff-Smith in exchange for a 30-year prison sentence.

Janecka received the death penalty earlier this year in the killing of the Wanstrath baby.

Duff-Smith's attorneys, meanwhile, portray their client as an innocent man who was "set up" by Waldhauser.

Defense lawyer Victor Blaine says he must convince the jury that Waldhauser committed the killings "because he enjoyed it," and he hoped to get some part of Duff-Smith's inheritance.

Blaine admits his client had an obvious motive — Duff-Smith collected about half a million dollars in combined inheritances. But Blaine says there are holes in Waldhauser's story and says Waldhauser admits he was never paid for the killings.

Duff-Smith has been held in lieu of bond since his April 24 indictment and arrest in the Zabolio killing.

The Panama Canal was formally opened in 1920.

President Reagan Is Revising Tax Cut Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told House Republicans today he is revising his tax-cut plan again to include automatic annual adjustments in personal taxes to offset inflation.

A leading congressional Republican said, meanwhile, that the president also is offering new tax breaks for the oil industry, farmers and small businesses in a bid to hold wavering Republicans and woo conservative Democrats in the House.

Democratic leaders claim they have enough votes to pass a rival bill.

Reagan, in a pep talk to House GOP members, said his revised tax package "is a good and a fair tax bill. ... This tax cut is the most crucial item left on our agenda for prosperity.

"If we remain together, we can change the course of history," the president said.

He was interrupted several times by applause.

Lennon Sisters Have Grown Up

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The matronly woman leaned toward the stage and grasped the outstretched hand of Janet Lennon.

"Does your mommy know you're doing this?" she admonished after watching the Lennon Sisters do a modified striptease that was a far cry from the pigtails and poodle skirts of another era.

"We had to move on and grow, to become women," said Janet, who, at age 9, was the 'baby' of the group a quarter-century ago when the four sisters became a national Saturday night television fixture on the Lawrence Welk Show.

Today, with teen-agers of their own, the Lennons say they are first of all wives and mothers — among them they have 14 children ages 7 to 17 — but they still like to take their act on the road when the occasion is right.

Playing gigs from Las Vegas and Reno to amusement parks and state fairs, Dianne, 41, Peggy, 40, Kathy, 37, and Janet, 35, throw in enough of the old songs to satisfy older generations who come to see what's happened to America's precocious sweethearts.

But when they swing into a sultry rendition of "Anything Goes" and strip down to red corsets and black silk stockings, the Lennons leave little doubt that they, like the times, have changed.

If the whistles, applause and shouts at a recent appearance at a Kansas City amusement park were any barometer, the public likes what maturation has done for the Lennon sisters.

"Some people say 'Why didn't you stay the way you were?'" said Kathy.

"Some say 'How dare you?' and a few mouths drop open," added Peggy, who is the mother of six and teaches drama classes near her home in Los Angeles' San Fernando Valley. "People expect us to still be children. They don't realize we're women now. But we would never do anything that was not in good taste."

"People have always thought of us as four little girls who stand around, do the polka, things like that," said Janet, the mother of five. She now works with her husband, who produces radio and television commercials in Hollywood.

The sisters began singing professionally in the mid-50s, blessed by an ability to harmonize and a father, Bill Lennon, who once sang tenor in quartets with the Freddy Martin and Paul Whiteman orchestras.

Early engagements were school affairs and private parties — anything to raise a few dollars toward the goal of getting the 11 Lennon children, their parents and their grandmother out of their two-bedroom house in suburban Los Angeles.

Israel

Israeli civilian casualty toll this month to six civilians dead and at least 54 wounded. Most of the casualties were from Kiryat Shmona, a town inhabited mostly by North African and Russian immigrants in the northeast corner of Israel.

Lebanese and Palestinian authorities report more than 450 Arabs killed by Israeli shelling and bombing during the same period.

Early today, Israeli commandos made another raid on the Lebanese coast south of Beirut.

OBITUARIES

Wm. Marchel

William Marchel, 73, who lived at 3102½ Ave. I, died at 10:15 a. m. Thursday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Funeral service has been set for 10 a. m. Saturday in the Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel. Officiating will be the Revs. W. J. Peteron, T. B. Hardman and Robert Bracey. Burial will be in the Snyder Cemetery, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

He had been a resident of Snyder for six years, moving here from Colorado City.

Surviving are his wife, Bobbie Lou Marchel, and three stepsons, Billiy Ray Thompson of Phoenix, Ariz., Curtis Thompson of Salina Kan., and Edgar Montgomery of San Bernardino, Calif.

Police Probe Hit And Run

Two hit-run mishaps and a couple of theft cases were about the only events to break the overnight routine at the Snyder Police Dept.

A hit-run mishap was reported at 6:50 p. m. Thursday in the Varsity Square Shopping Center. A 1979 Chrysler owned by Dural Wilson, Route 2, was hit by another vehicle that left the scene. No wrecker was needed.

Another hit-run was logged after a gas leak was reported at 2309 Merrill. It was learned that a gas meter had been hit by an unknown vehicle that left the scene.

Efrain Guerrero reported that a 10-speed bicycle had been stolen at 2:45 p. m. Thursday. It was later reported found near Deep Creek on 24th St.

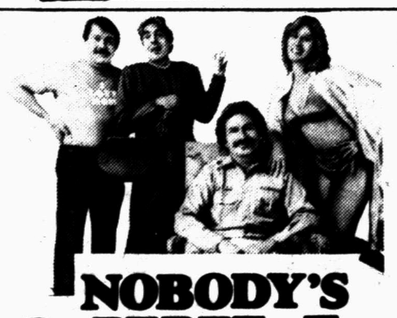

At 7:15 a. m. today, Alan Davis of 1407 31st St. reported that a five gallon water can valued at $5 had been stolen from a vehicle.

Swann Signs, Payton Near It

by The Associated Press

Lynn Swann will be doing his pass-catching for the Pittsburgh Steelers and Walter Payton his running for the Chicago Bears as usual this season - and Ken Stabler will have the opportunity to watch them both on television as often as he desires.

While Swann came to camp and to terms with his team and Payton closed in on a contract agreement with his, Stabler made a startling announcement Thursday that he is retiring from pro football.

"Stabler's agent called us today and told us Kenny was not returning," said Ed Biles, first-year coach of the National Football League team.

Biles' reaction?

"Gifford Nielsen's our quarterback," he said. "We have confidence in him and we've never been dissatisfied with Nielsen."

Nielsen, a third-round draft choice in 1978, played behind former Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini for two seasons and was a seldom-used backup for Stabler last year.

Meanwhile, Payton, an All-Pro running back, arrived at the Bears' camp and club General Manager Jim Finks said he expects to have his leading ground gainer signed "before the first practice on Saturday."

Finks said the club would not disclose any details of the contract to be signed, but said negotiations are continuing.

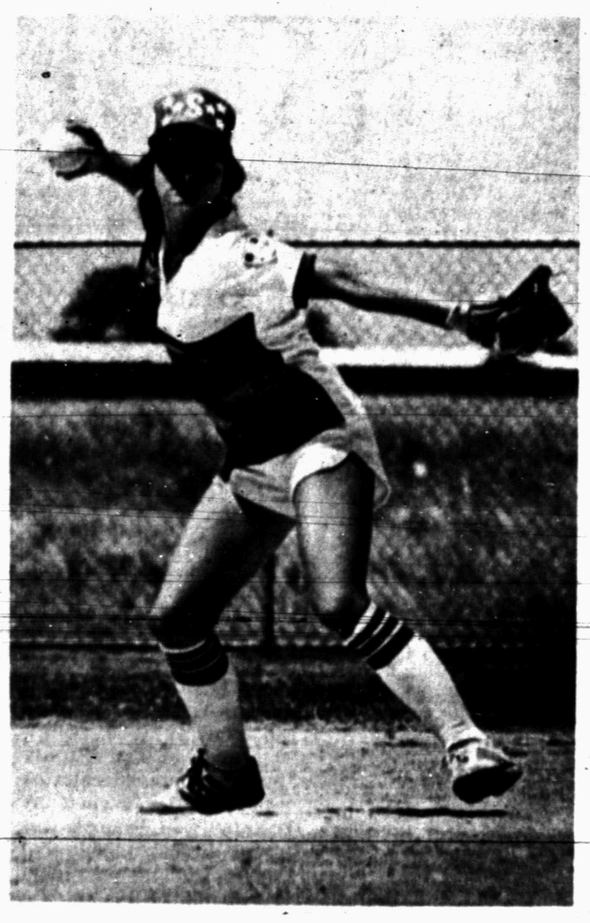

Swann, one of the NFL's top wide receivers who is beginning his eighth year in the league, arrived in time at Pittsburgh's training camp, just hours after ending his free agency and coming to terms with the Steelers.

Swann signed a multi-year contract. No details were announced, but best estimates put the salary at about $300,000 a year. The agreement came after a meeting Wednesday in New York between team officials and Swann's agent, attorney Howard Slusher.

The Steelers at the same time waived veteran safety Tim Moriarity and nine rookie free agents.

The Dallas Cowboys released 17 rookie free agents, leaving 57 rookies in their training camp. Dan Reeves, who was a Cowboys assistant coach last season, made his first cuts as Denver Broncos head coach, releasing 13 free agents.

The New York Jets cut two linebackers, Dan Cernansky of Waynesburg and Frank Lewandoski of Northern Illinois, and signed tight end Richard Ruzika of Columbia.

Landry Ready To See Cowboy Veterans Now

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) - Time is running out for the rookie draft picks and free agents who hope to make it in the National Football League with the Dallas Cowboys.

Dallas invited 102 rookies to its Southern California training camp this summer and, after they scrimmaged against San Diego's crop of youngsters Wednesday, Cowboys head coach Tom Landry said he had seen about enough of them.

"I'm ready to go to work with the veterans now," Landry said. "We've looked at these guys about as much as we need to."

Since nine rookies made the Cowboy squad last fall, openings for the current rookie group are pretty scarce - probably no more than five, in fact.

Balancing this bleak outlook, however, is the fact that Landry is as impressed with this collection of new faces as he has been in years, especially on defense.

"I think we're going to have a good group of linebackers and defensive backs before it's all over," said the coach.

He said he was particularly impressed with linebackers Scott Pelluer, Paul Piuorowski and Danny Spradlin, all chosen in the draft.

"From those three guys I think you're going to find someone who can play with the pros. They are all pretty tough players," Landry said.

He also singled out safety Mike Downs, who saved a touchdown in Wednesday's scrimmage with an end-zone interception and later made a strong, jarring tackle to hold a San Diego runner to no gain.

"When a rookie does something like Downs did, it kind of catches your eye," Landry said. "That's what you're looking for, a flash of something that makes you think he could develop."

The Cowboy coaching staff also indicated pleasure at the performances to date of former Houston quarterback Terry Elston, being given a try at tight end, and second-year quarterback Gary Hogeboom.

Elston has an "uncanny ability to make the big play," according to Cowboy personnel director Gil Brandt, who had watched Elston make two circus catches in the rookie scrimmage.

Stabler Calls It Quits, Nielson To Take Over

SAN ANGELO (AP) - Houston Oiler players greeted the unexpected retirement of veteran quarterback Ken Stabler with a rally of support and chorus of chants for his successor.

Stabler, who already was absent without leave from the Oiler training camp here, sent word through his attorney Thursday, rather than telling team officials himself, that he was calling a end to his 12-year professional career.

His departure, coupled with Bum Phillips' firing and move to New Orleans, means the Oilers have lost both last year's head coach and starting quarterback during the off season.

"Obviously, my initial reaction is that Gifford (Nielson) is our quarterback and I have a lot of confidence in him," said Oiler first-year Coach Ed Biles.

"It just means that what a lot of people thought was our quarterback of the future is our quarterback today," said Biles.

Oiler players, told of Stabler's retirement at the end of Thursday's practice session, formed a circle and chanted, "Giff, Giff, Giff."

Nielson, who led the nation in passing while at Brigham Young, completed two of four passes for 12 yards and one touchdown last season as Stabler's seldom-used backup.

But the three-year veteran is undefeated as a starter for the Oilers, leading Houston to a pre-season win over Dallas, a regular season triumph over Kansas City and a thrilling playoff victory over San Diego in 1979.

"I suspected yesterday that there was more to this (Stabler's absence from camp) than Kenny having personal business," Nielsen said. "He is a team quarterback and he always recognized his responsibilities and obligations to the team.

"That's why I felt when he wasn't here yesterday that he might retire. I hate to see a quarterback like Kenny Stabler who has been so good for the NFL retire, but I'm also excited about the opportunity it's presented to me."

Biles said the team had not heard from Stabler in a month and that Stabler's attorney, Henry Pitts of Selma, Ala., told him of the retirement in a telephone call late Thursday afternoon.

Stabler could not be reached for comment Thursday, but Pitts said Stabler did not give any reasons for his decision.

Pitts said Stabler is not considering a renegotiated contract or a trade, and he denied any connection between the retirement decision and Stabler's no-show at the Oiler training camp.

Biles said Pitts called him Wednesday and said Stabler was not at training camp because he had been detained by business matters and was considering quitting.

Stabler, onetime quarterback for the Oakland Raiders, was traded to the Oilers last year in a swap for former Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini.

The Oilers finished last season with an 11-5 record and a wild card playoff berth, but the team fell short of expectations.

Although Stabler had completed 64 percent of his passes last season, he threw for just 13 touchdowns, was intercepted 28 times and finished 11th among AFC passers.

Nielsen said he is physically ready to replace Stabler.

"I came to camp prepared to play," he said. "I've been on a weight program and running since January. I would be letting myself and my teammates down if I did it any other way."

Biles said the retirement would not prompt any change in offensive strategy other than finding a new second-string quarterback.

But he said the Oilers would not trade for a new reserve quarterback because too many teams will try to "hold you up."

"I'm not going to sacrifice the future of the Oilers just to make someone else a rich quarterback," said Biles.

Baseball Talks Halted; May Recess Several Days

WASHINGTON (AP) - With chances of saving the rest of the season labeled "very bad" by the players' top negotiator, talks to end the major league baseball strike have recessed amid disagreement over the progress of the bargaining.

The negotiations are not expected to resume until the middle of next week, after the executive board of of the Major League Players Association meets to discuss the status of the dispute with club owners over free-agent compensation.

"The situation gets more difficult with each passing day," Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' union, said Thursday night as talks ended after a day of apparent ups and downs at the bargaining table.

Raymond Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee and the owners' top negotiator, told reporters that "we're closer than we've ever been" to ending the 43-day-old walkout.

"We have moved much closer, narrowed our differences," he said. "Unfortunately, the parties have been unable to totally resolve the differences. We're closer than we've ever been."

Grebey told reporters the talks were recessed to allow the players to study new proposals by the owners. After the players meet, he added, "we hope...this will produce a settlement, will bring back baseball and save the All-Star Game," originally scheduled July 14.

But Miller declared "nothing has changed in regard to the concept they are pushing of direct compensation."

"I would not quarrel with the assessment that we narrowed some of the issues." Miller said. "We succeeded not at all on the basic issue of direct compensation."

Asked about the prospects for resuming the season, Miller replied: "Very bad."

Snyder To Host Playoff Series

Snyder will host a best-of-three Little League playoff series beginning 8 p.m. Monday at the local Little League Field.

Vying will be the Lubbock district winner, either Midwestern or Dixie, and the Abilene district winner, either Western or Ballinger.

The winner will advance to the state tournament in Waco.

The first night major-league baseball game was played in Cincinnati in 1935.
