Board calls for bond election

MISD trustees discuss proposed open enrollment plan

■ Board members vote unanimously for $39.5 million bond election; turn to heated discussion about adding amendment to 'choice' plan to guarantee students living nearest school first choice to attend.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Calling a bond election caused little excitement at Tuesday's school board meeting, but discussing the district's new neighborhood school plan resulted in enough passion to thaw Midland streets.

As an action item, Midland school board members voted to renovate all elementary school campuses in the district that are more than 30 years old. Trustees voted unanimously to call for a March 1 bond election. The $39.5 million bond would renovate 14 campuses — Bonham, Bowie, Burnet, Crockett, Emerson, Fannin, Henderson, Jones, Long, Milam, Pease and Rusk, and Travis.

Travis will receive additions to the 1983 and 1989 construction and the original 1953 building will be demolished.

The construction would include a stage for South Elementary School and chillers for South, Lamar and Houston.

"In addition, we recommend the purchase of eight portable buildings to assist us in achieving a construction schedule of three years and eight months," said Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services.

The bond package also will include wiring and cabling updates for all MISD campuses.

"The estimated bond payout is 20 years with a 6.75 interest rate," said MISD spokeswoman Susan Webb. "It's just an estimate, but the impact to the homeowner of an average $60,630 home would see a $2.65 a month increase in property taxes," she said.

Richard Bowden, representing Citizens for Fiscal Responsibility, applauded the board for setting priorities and being conservative with taxpayer money. He said the board should pledge to return to taxpayers any money saved on utilities because of the renovated buildings.

Steve Buck, Midland teacher and president of Midland Federation of Teachers, said board members should develop a plan to show the public how much property taxes may need to be raised in order to give teachers a salary increase next year. "If you pass the bond, it will raise taxes, then you may need to raise them again to raise teacher salaries to the state base."

Ernest Angelo, former Midland mayor and member of Citizens for Fiscal Responsibility, said he personal-

A.M. BRIEFING

Bowing out

WASHINGTON — The House ethics committee's ranking Democrat removed himself Tuesday from the investigation of Speaker Newt Gingrich, bowing to pressure that built quickly concerning his role in the handling of a taped phone call involving the House leader.

Routier testimony

KERRVILLE — Life insurance policies and other family records were found near the bodies of Darlie Routier's two sons after they were stabbed to death, a police officer testified Tuesday. Officer David Mayne also testified marijuana was discovered at the Routier home. Defense attorneys immediately objected, Mrs. Routier appeared to smirk and jurors were quickly ushered from the courtroom.

Clinton cuts

WASHINGTON — After blistering Republican plans to hold back Medicare and Medicaid, and riding the rhetoric to re-election, President Clinton is taking his own scalpel to the massive programs. Democrats may be unhappy, but that apparently is a price Clinton is willing to pay for a balanced budget. The president proposed similar reductions in 1995 and 1996, but deeper cuts offered by GOP lawmakers allowed Clinton to declare himself the election-year champion of health care to the poor, disabled and elderly.

Snow days, snow days....

17-year-old wades into lake, saves boy who fell through ice

They might not want to be called heroes, but Tara Whited and Tom Mckown are being called just that after they rescued a boy who had fallen through the ice at Wadley-Barron Park.

The boy probably couldn't have had a better person come to his rescue than Ms. Whited, 17, who is a swimming instructor at City of Midland Aquatics.

Tara Whited saves a boy from drowning at Wadley-Barron Park, Tuesday. Weather story on 4A.

Ms. Whited was driving by the lake around 6 p.m. Tuesday after leaving her job at COM Aquatics, when she noticed the boys had fallen through the ice.

"I guess it's lucky that I had gotten off work early, too," Ms. Whited said.

She pulled over and began wading into the lake. She was dressed in a bathing suit.

One of the boys had already managed to reach the shore,

Police arrest 3 after neighbors report gunfire

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

One 17-year-old and two 16-year-old males were arrested Tuesday afternoon, after neighbors reported shots being fired from a residence at 310 E. Pine Ave.

Neighbors reported hearing about 12 shots being fired from a back window of the residence around 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Police did not say where the suspects were aiming, but no one was reported injured. A neighbor reported hearing shots from the same residence Monday and said three males were aiming at a shed in the residence's back yard.

When police arrived at the scene, two of the males allegedly jumped from the back window and fled from police on foot.

One of the suspects, Michael Lujan, 17 was caught one block north in the 400 block of Spruce Avenue. During the pursuit, Lujan complained of leg injuries and was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, where he was treated and released.

When police searched the room from where the gun was allegedly fired, they reported finding one SKS semi-automatic rifle, which had been reported stolen two days before.

Along with the assault-style rifle, beer and less than an ounce of marijuana were found, police reported.

Lujan was arrested and charged with evading arrest, possession of marijuana and felony possession of a stolen firearm.

The two 16-year-olds face charges of violation of probation, possession of marijuana, minor in possession of alcohol and felony possession of a stolen firearm. One of the juveniles faces an addi-

Electoral commission: Belgrade results should be honored

■ The statement is the first time that the ruling Socialist Party has indicated that it could give up its hold on the capital.

N.Y. Times Service

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — In a move that could signal a government decision to give up its attempt to annul local elections, electoral commissions in Belgrade and Yugoslavia's second-largest city said Tuesday that opposition victories should be honored.

It was the first time the government had shown a willingness to give up its hold on the capital, and the move could be a significant step toward ending two months of daily street protests that erupted after it annulled opposition victories in 14 of the country's 19 largest cities.

But the announcement was greeted cautiously by opposition leaders and Western diplomats, who stressed that the government statements remained ambiguous and without legal precedent and had granted President Slobodan Milosevic's Socialist Party 48 hours to appeal.

Opposition leaders said Tuesday that they would not call off their street protests until the government recognized all their victories in the November vote. On Monday night, the protests drew more than 300,000 to the city center to celebrate the Serbian New Year, in the largest turnout yet.

The decision Tuesday was announced by the head of Belgrade's election commission, Radomir Lazarevic, and overruled an earlier district court decision that stripped the opposition of its victory.

It was followed later in the day by an announcement that the local electoral board in Nis, the second-largest city, would also honor the opposition election victory. Only Monday, the commission appeared to balk at a government promise to honor the vote.

"I remain cautious because there are 48 hours during which appeals against the decision can be made," Vesna Pesic, an opposition leader, told reporters in Paris, where she was meeting French officials about the crisis in Belgrade.

"If the results are recognized then yes, it would be a turnaround because up to now the government has always said that elections would not be recognized," she said.

Milosevic has been reluctant to hand over Belgrade, which holds 20 percent of the country's population and is the headquarters of the state-run news media.

But Lazarevic said that the opposition coalition, called Zajedno, or Together, had won 60 of the 110 seats in Belgrade's main city council. Milosevic's Socialist Party, allied with his wife's Yugoslav United Left Party, would be handed 23 seats, with the remainder going to other parties.

"These may be the cracks in the ice," said a Western diplomat. "This could see us out of the crisis."

The electoral commissions are believed to be controlled by Milosevic, but there remain deep splits within the government, Western diplomats here said. And they noted that despite orders from Belgrade, party officials in Nis tried Monday to defy the government decision to hand the city over to the opposition. Such mutinies by hard-line factions remained a possibility, they said.

But Milosevic, who has been criticized by senior members in his own government and told by close allies, like Greece, to honor the vote, increasingly appears ready to concede defeat, rather than risk further isolation.

The State Department has refused to send senior envoys, like Assistant Secretary of State John Kornblum, who was in the region this week, to meet with Milosevic.

Kornblum announced this week that the United States had drawn up an "action plan" to support democracy in Yugoslavia. He said that trade with the United States would be discouraged and assistance to pro-democracy groups expanded.

"We're trying to tighten the pressure on Milosevic and to demonstrate to him that there is a penalty to the type of behavior that he has shown," the State Department spokesman, Nicholas Burns, said in Washington.

Disabled U.S. veteran to bike across Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — American Dave Barr gave his Harley-Davidson motorcycle one last check Tuesday and set off on the longest and most grueling stage of a marathon ride from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

The journey across the snowy expanses of Siberia would be a tough prospect even for the most committed biker. But Barr's task is even more daunting: He has no legs.

Barr, from Bodfish, Calif., is a Vietnam War veteran and a professional soldier who lost his legs in a mine blast in Angola 15 years ago.

"I take a particularly difficult time of the year to do this to show others with disabilities that they should know in their heart what they can do," Barr, 44, told The Associated Press.

Barr, who began his journey on France's Atlantic coast, expects to reach Russia's Far Eastern port of Vladivostok in early April.

Communist rival calls for President Yeltsin's impeachment

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Communist urged parliament to impeach the ailing Boris Yeltsin, but the president's doctors said he was recovering well from pneumonia and was "significantly better" Tuesday.

Previous attempts to oust Yeltsin have failed and the latest move appeared to have little support. In any case, the president would be certain to resist any moves against him by parliament's Communist-dominated lower house.

A draft resolution, proposed by Communist lawmaker Viktor Ilyukhin, calls on Duma members "to regard the powers of the president as prematurely terminated due to his consistent inability to perform his duties for health reasons."

The proposal says the Federation Council, parliament's upper house, should "confirm the Duma decision and set a date for presidential elections."

Duma speaker Gennady Seleznyov said the resolution had been submitted to the chamber's legal section for review and a parliamentary debate on impeachment could take place in about a week.

He acYeltsin's knowledged that any impeachment attempt would be a long, cumbersome process. Constitutional clauses about dismissing a president "are very vaguely written," Seleznyov noted.

Alexander Kotenkov, Yeltsin's envoy to the Duma, said the draft resolution was "legally groundless" and he called it an attempt to "aggravate the political situation in the country."

Yeltsin remained hospitalized for a seventh day Tuesday at the Central Clinical Hospital outside Moscow, but doctors who examined him in the evening found him "significantly better," the Kremlin said.

"His physical activity has increased and only some occasional wheezing sounds remain in his lungs," the presidential press service added.

Yeltsin was able to start holding working meetings Tuesday, and he met for 40 minutes with his chief of staff, Anatoly Chubais. Chubais was believed to be the president's first visitor, other than his family, since he was hospitalized Jan. 8 with double pneumonia.

Yeltsin also spent two hours Tuesday doing paperwork in his hospital suite, his press service said.

Ousted national security adviser Alexander Lebed, one of Yeltsin's leading critics, has been unconvinced by doctors' reassurances that the president should make a full recovery.

Before leaving on a trip to Germany, Lebed claimed the president was so ill that new elections would be held in a "maximum of two months."

He was more restrained later in Germany when asked just how sick he believed Yeltsin to be: "He's sick, but as a parachute general I'm not in a position to make that kind of comment.

"If you're a parachuter, you're only dead or alive," Lebed added, smiling.

Even though he openly aspires to be Russia's next leader, Lebed called Tuesday's impeachment talk a "stupidity."

Yeltsin, who has been largely sidelined since winning a second four-year term in July, fell ill just two weeks after returning to his Kremlin office following heart surgery.

By all accounts he was making a good recovery from his quintuple bypass operation on Nov. 5, and doctors say the pneumonia is unrelated to his heart trouble.

The pneumonia is expected to keep Yeltsin in the hospital at least until the end of the week. Presidential spokesman Sergei Yastrzhembsky has said the president would not check out until he's made a full recovery.

River Nile bus crash kills 39, injures 29

■ Witnesses said that the driver may have had a heart attack, causing the bus to veer off a bridge.

Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — A crowded public bus veered out of control on a bridge and plunged upside-down into the muddy waters of the Nile River Tuesday, killing at least 39 people and injuring 29 others.

Blood dripped from the bus, turning the water red as rescue workers used a crane to haul the vehicle 115 feet back up onto the el-Sahel bridge.

Thousands of onlookers stood on the bridge and watched rescuers pull bodies from the mud and search the murky waters for more dead.

Prime Minister Kamal el-Ganzoury praised the rescuers for their speedy arrival at the accident site, about three miles north of downtown Cairo. "If the rescue operation was not so quick, those rescued alive would have been dead," he told reporters at the scene.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known, but witnesses said the bus was speeding and veered across the road divider into the opposite lane.

Some passengers said they believed the driver may have suffered a heart attack.

"The driver fell on the steering wheel ... and suffered a sudden bout of vomiting and lost control," the Middle East News Agency quoted one passenger as saying. The driver, Mohammed Kamal Abdel-Wahab, was among the dead.

Another passenger, Hafsa Abdel-Wahab, said "it felt like the bus went over a big bump and then landed on its back in the mud."

"Everyone was screaming and panicking," she said from the hospital bed where she was being treated for a back injury.

Several passers-by who helped with the rescue said they were unable to pull some survivors from the mud.

"These were bitter moments when I saw the passengers' hands stretching for help," but couldn't pull them out, Mustafa Attallah told MENA.

Buses in Cairo are usually crammed, but the city's frantic traffic is even worse than usual because of the Islamic holy month of Ramadan, when Muslims fast from dawn to sunset and drivers are anxious to get home quickly.

Grenade attack at Ugandan church kills 6, wounds 40

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The death toll from a grenade attack on an open-air church service rose to six Tuesday, while 40 people remained hospitalized with injuries.

Three people died Sunday when an unknown assailant hurled a hand grenade into the service, attended by several hundred people on the outskirts of Kampala, police spokesman John Kimera said.

Three others, including two children, died later of their wounds in the hospital, he said.

No one has claimed responsibility for the attack, but on Monday, the independent daily Monitor newspaper attributed the act to a Muslim fundamentalist group it did not name.

WEATHER WATCH

Temperatures to climb into 40s

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

In time, the veil of ice and snow that coats Midland's streets and crevices will pass.

It is supposed to fade into vapor today when the sun is expected to increase the temperature to between 45 and 50.

And for at least a couple of days, Midlanders will have respite from the cold.

"We are going to get cold again" heading into the weekend, said a forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Weekend temperatures are to peak at around 30 and drop to the sub-freezing teens and 20s.

Today is to be "mostly sunny, breezy and warmer," according to the NWS. Winds are to be westerly at 15 to 25 mph and gusty. Tonight will be cloudy with lows in the mid-20s.

Thursday is expected to be mostly cloudy with highs around 45 to 50.

The arctic cold front that ushered in the snow and ice late last week and earlier this week dropped Tuesday's low to 17, which was 4 degrees short of tying the date's record low of 13, set in 1982. Tuesday's high of 26 is well below the record high of 79 degrees, set in 1953.

The record low for today is 6 degrees, set in 1972. The record high for Jan. 15 is 79 degrees set in 1935.

The cold and ice that visited Midland and Greenwood Monday and early Tuesday prompted school officials to cancel classes.

Greenwood classes also were canceled one day last week because of snow-slicked roads and highways.

"You hate to close school because you have got to make it up at some point," said Greenwood Independent School District Superintendent Quentin Burnett.

In Greenwood's case, the makeup days will be March 31 and April 18.

Rankin schools were open Tuesday. In Stanton, classes started late.

Icy roads apparently contributed to the relatively light Tuesday morning traffic on Loop 250 and the closing of Barnes & Noble Booksellers.

STATE

Most Texans got a reprieve from the snow and sleet that troubled drivers early this week, but temperatures remained below freezing in much of the state Tuesday.

Cloudy skies prevailed in North Texas and winds were brisk. Temperatures were generally in the 20s and 30s. At 3 p.m. temperatures ranged between 26 and 36.

The forecast for North Texas called for a chance of freezing rain and a light accumulation of ice today. Lows will range between 28 to 32. Highs will be in the mid 40s.

In South Texas, cloudy skies patchy fog dominated the region Tuesday. Temperature were between 28 and 37 degrees.

The forecast for South Texas was for freezing rain and a few snow flurries today with temperatures dipping into the 20s at night and reaching the upper 40s to near 50 during the day.

In West Texas, skies were mostly sunny over the northwest, but cloudy elsewhere. Lows were in the 20s and low 30s. Highs reached the 40s and 50s.

The forecast for the region calls for another cold front today and Thursday that will keep temperatures in the 20s and 30s. Highs will be in the 40s and 50s.

NATION

Clear skies over much of the nation Tuesday gave winter-battered states a chance to clean up from snow and ice storms, though bitter cold remained.

High pressure kept most areas of the country free of precipitation but cold, with record lows of 1 degree in Beckley, W.Va., 19 in Redding, Calif., and 33 in Oakland, Calif.

The Southwest was the exception, with a low pressure system creating snow showers and some rain in parts of Utah, Nevada, Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico.

Some heavy snow was reported in portions of southern Nevada overnight. Areas around Mount Charleston received anywhere from 22 to 36 inches of snow by midday Tuesday.

Heavy snow continued in portions of southwestern Colorado, where Wolf Creek received up to 80 inches of snow in the past couple of days. Areas around Flagstaff, Ariz., had 2 to 3 feet of snow over the same period, and almost all roads in northern Arizona were closed.

Freezing rain that coated Texas on Monday had let up Tuesday, but below-freezing temperatures meant many highways were still impassable. Patches of wintry precipitation made travel a bad idea in much of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

but the other was still in the water, at least five to 10 feet from the shore and in water above his head, police reported.

As Ms. Whited got closer, she began to crawl on the ice to reach the boy and was followed by Tom Mckown. He had been jogging around the lake and saw the boys fall into the lake.

According to witnesses, the 9- and 10-year-old brothers were walking on the ice to get an aerator pump near the center of the lake.

The ice gave way under Ms. Whited as she told the boy to grab onto a jacket Mckown had given her.

In the frigid water, she tried to get back onto the ice and closer to the boy.

"The ice just kept breaking. I could tell he was panicking," Ms. Whited said.

"He was going up and down, I don't think he could have lasted much longer. That cold water will do that to you," Mckown said.

She eventually broke all the ice between her and the boy. He grabbed her arm and was pulled to shore. Police estimated the boy was in the water for about four minutes.

Both boys were taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center where they were treated and released for minor hypothermia, police reported.

"I just did what I had to do, but that girl, she did a real good job," Mckown said.

Before the incident Tuesday, police said they had received at least 10 reports of children playing on the pond.

"They need to keep an eye on that lake, because this will probably happen again," Mckown said. "I don't want to go in there again."

MISD: Board discusses new 'choice' plan

ly would support the bond election, subject to reviewing all the facts. "I think the quality of education is more of a concern to people in Midland than the cost of education. They are willing to pay for quality. This is a reasonable bond and the board taking steps toward neighborhood schools addresses some of the educational concerns and will definitely offer better education opportunities for all the students," he said.

MISD School Board President Robin Hightower said trustees "are hoping for a victory dance" in the March 1 election.

But before anyone could get out their dancing shoes Tuesday night, the topic turned to the proposed neighborhood school open enrollment plan.

Trustees discussed adding an amendment to the plan to guarantee students living nearest a particular school would get first choice to attend that school. The board previously voted 5-2 (with James Fuller and Adela Marmolejo opposed) to move to neighborhood schools with giving parents the option to choose any school in the district. If no choice was made, the child would go to their closest (neighborhood) school.

On Tuesday night, trustees discussed giving neighborhood children first choice of a school. Once it reached capacity, students wanting to go there would have to make another choice.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said classroom sizes could go up to 35 to accommodate as many students as possible. He said the largest schools in the district could be Travis and Greathouse, housing about 910 students each. "That's with 35 in a class and without adding portable buildings," he said.

Baressi said the school a parent selects would remain binding for a year due to the "tremendous logistics."

"We will be moving teachers, books, portable buildings and materials. We only want to do that once a year," Baressi said.

Trustee Fuller said the choice plan should be called "limited choice."

"Some people are not going to get their first choice and that is going to create tension," he said. "Having taught 35-40 kids in class I know class size is also going to be a problem."

Buck said teachers should not be given larger class loads without more preparation time.

"I don't know that we are going to be having thousands of students moving (creating capacity enrollments at schools)," Baressi said.

"Will you expect the same outcome and accountability we get now if you burden teachers with large class loads?" Fuller asked. "It's just not right, plain and simple."

Ms. Hightower said the sting of not getting one's first choice in a school might be soothed with "keeping all your kids in one school for seven years."

Trustee Jack Hightower then recommended that the neighborhood/choice plan be amended to ensure "students are not bumped out of their neighborhood school."

Margie Titus said the plan "is totally unacceptable" to the plaintiff intervenors involved in MISD's desegregation litigation.

"Some of us remember when separate, but equal was the law of the land, and we want to make sure our children receive the best education," Ms. Titus said.

Hightower said students moving into a particular neighborhood would be guaranteed a slot in the school in their neighborhood immediately.

Some citizens complained that "there is no choice" when the only guaranteed choice students will get is if they stay in their own neighborhood. Others questioned if the amendment guaranteeing slots for neighborhood children wouldn't bump out children from out of the neighborhood as others moved into the boundary.

"Staying in your own neighborhood, and not bumping students from that neighborhood means kids from other parts of town can't get in," Manuel Jimenez said. "This is the first step to segregation. We will start seeing schools with 98 percent of one race or the other. The problem, as I see it, is the majority of the board is not supporting desegregation."

"People naturally choose segregation," trustee Jackie Hamilton said. "There are some strictly minority social organizations. In the churches we see segregation."

"Do you have a problem with people choosing?" trustee Dianne Anderson asked Jimenez.

"I see, as our community grows, people segregate themselves by choice, by social groups and churches," Ms. Hamilton said. "I see it as natural whether intended or not."

"But is that the what public education should be?" Jimenez asked.

"Let's don't cover this all up with icing. Let's be honest and just say you want to go to segregated schools," Alma Marshall said. "The Agreed Judgment plan said this district should guarantee as much desegregation as we have now. Let's just say it's not worth the paper it is printed on."

"This choice plan says you can't go to the school of your choice unless it's in your neighborhood," Shirley Howard said.

Midlander JoAnn Luehring said she wanted to choose a school for her children based on the principal and teachers. She raised concerns that a parent might choose a school based on staff and then the staff would be moved.

"Unfortunately, with this plan, your choice must be based on locale," Fuller said.

James Clay said he lived on Weatherford Street. "I have two kids being bused across town. I wasn't happy at first but my kids have adjusted and they love it. I want to continue send them across town. I don't want my children to just know African Americans by keeping them in my own neighborhood. I want them to know other children and other cultures."

Clay said students are attracted to the newer nicer schools that have all the amenities, including computers. "Why should my kid stay at Midland College instead of Harvard?"

Fuller, an English professor at Midland College said, "At Midland College we get students ready for Harvard," drawing laughter and a quick apology from Clay. "I didn't mean it like that," he said.

Baressi said it would be up to a federal court judge whether or not to accept the neighborhood school/choice plan.

In other action items, Midland school board trustees expected a settlement offer in a lawsuit against a local construction materials producer. However, there was no settlement and negotiations are continuing.

MISD filed the lawsuit against Metal Building Components, Inc., (MBCI) for allegedly providing faulty materials that were used in roof renovations to Henderson, Bonham and Jones elementary schools.

MBCI sold metal roofing components for the job, explained Wilson Heidelberg, executive director for auxiliary services for MISD.

"We have had some roof leaks continually and we've not been able to stop them," Heidelberg said. MISD maintenance crews have been forced to repeatedly perform remedial work on these roofs to stop the leaking.

It is MISD's contention that the metal roofing for these renovations suffers from design problems that lead to the leaks.

Attorneys for both sides spent many hours in negotiation to come up with the settlement offer, working until late Monday and continuing negotiation early Tuesday. However, negotiation wasn't completed late Tuesday night.

School officials said they were pushing to gain a favorable settlement before the Tuesday meeting in an attempt to avoid additional expense in the ongoing litigation.

After 3-day pursuit, shuttle docks with Mir space station

HOUSTON (NYT) — The space shuttle Atlantis caught and docked with the Russian Mir space station Tuesday night after a three-day chase across the sky.

After a series of delicate close-in maneuvers, the shuttle commander, Capt. Michael A. Baker of the Navy, nudged Atlantis into contact with a docking adaptor on Mir at 10:54 p.m. Eastern time, about a second longer than planned. The spacecraft was orbiting 240 miles above Earth.

Moments after contact, Baker looked up at Mir and noted: "We see someone in the window with his thumb up."

Baker used flight controls at the rear deck of Atlantis to slowly position the shuttle for the linkup, as other astronauts, including Cmdr. Brent Jett of the Navy and Dr. John M. Grunsfeld, assisted by monitoring cameras and laser range-finders.

Since its launching from the Kennedy Spaceflight Center on Sunday, Atlantis and its crew of six astronauts had the role of a hound chasing a fox called Mir around the skies at five miles per second.

After the connection between the two, 100-ton craft is secured, John E. Blaha, a U.S. astronaut who has been living on the Russian station since September, was to swap places with a colleague, Dr. Jerry L. Linenger, a physician scheduled for a four-and-a-half-month stay on Mir.

Atlantis and Mir, which have docked four times in the last year and a half, are to remain joined in orbit for five days of joint research and the transfer of thousands of pounds of supplies.

The shuttle is carrying a pressurized module, Spacehab, in its cargo bay that is filled with food, scientific equipment and other supplies for the Russian craft. Atlantis is to deliver 3,600 pounds of supplies to Mir and transfer 1,400 pounds of fresh water to the Russian craft.

In addition, the shuttle is to bring back about a ton of scientific samples, equipment and other material from Mir.

Much of the earlier activity aboard Atlantis on Tuesday focused on testing a revolutionary piece of exercise equipment destined for the planned international space station. The astronauts assembled, tested and took apart a jitterless treadmill called TVIS, which in space-talk stands for the Treadmill Vibration Isolation and Stabilization System.

Vigorous exercise is considered essential for astronauts in space to counteract the negative effects of weightlessness and the lack of physical activity, including the loss of muscle tone and bone mass. However, using exercise equipment can send vibrations throughout a spacecraft which can disrupt delicate microgravity experiments. The new device uses gyroscopes and a system of springs and tethers to isolate it from the rest of the spacecraft.

It took Linenger and two fellow astronauts, Marsha S. Ivins and Dr. Peter J.K. Wisoff, longer than anticipated to put the device together in Atlantis' cramped mid-deck area. Because of time constraints, three astronauts had to abbreviate planned 30-minute runs on the treadmill, but officials said they were able to get enough information to evaluate the device.

Anticipating the orbital workout, Mission Control told the crew that was why it chose to awaken them to the sounds of "It Keeps You Runnin'," a popular 1970s song by the Doobie Brothers. To which Ms. Ivins replied, "The TVIS assembly is keeping us running."

Before the orbital rendezvous between the U.S. and Russian craft, NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin called Blaha on Mir on Tuesday to congratulate the 54-year-old astronaut and retired Air Force colonel on working so well with his two Russian counterparts.

Blaha replied, "It is incredible that once two great superpowers who were enemies with nuclear missiles aimed at each other are now holding hands."

Testimony: Family documents found near slain boys

KERRVILLE (AP) — Life insurance policies and other family records were found near the bodies of Darlie Routier's two sons after they were stabbed to death, a police officer testified Tuesday.

Officer David Mayne also testified marijuana was discovered at the Routier home. Defense attorneys immediately objected, Mrs. Routier appeared to smirk and jurors were quickly ushered from the courtroom.

State District Judge Mark Tolle said he would instruct jurors to disregard the officer's statement about marijuana. A seven-woman, five man jury is deciding Mrs. Routier's fate in her capital murder trial.

Prosecutors claim Mrs. Routier was angry over money problems and the burdens of motherhood and that she fatally stabbed 6-year-old Devon and 5-year-old Damon Routier with a kitchen butcher knife on June 6.

Police claim she slashed herself and staged a crime scene in her home in Rowlett, a suburb of Dallas, in an attempt to fool investigators.

Mrs. Routier, 27, contends an intruder killed her sons and attacked her before fleeing through a window in the garage.

The case was moved to Kerrville because of publicity in North Texas.

Prosecutor Greg Davis said the family records were discovered in green folders about two feet from Devon's body. The documents, including Mrs. Routier's will, shed light on her state of mind, Davis said.

Among the papers were life insurance renewals for Mrs. Routier, her husband, Darin, and the two slain boys. Darin Routier's policy was for $200,000, Mrs. Routier's was for $50,000 and each boy's was worth $5,000.

Other papers included birth certificates, the children's immunization records, Darlie and Darin Routier's marriage license, a retail installment contract and handwritten notes.

Prosecutors also planned to present two items found in a trash bag — a letter from American Express and a letter from a mortgage company. The judge OK'd those items outside the presence of the jury.

In other testimony, Mayne said a butcher knife with blood on the blade and handle was found on the kitchen counter.

Blood also was found near the sink, in the utility room, on a small dark baseball cap in the utility room and at the utility room entrance to the garage, he said.

No blood was found on items in the garage or on the garage window sill, Mayne said.

A vacuum cleaner was upside-down on the kitchen floor, and bloody footprints leading away from the crime scene were discovered beneath it, the officer testified.

According to the prosecution, blood was discovered on assorted cloths and rags in the house, on some adult athletic shoes and on a blanket found in one of the upstairs' bedrooms.

Israelis, Palestinians sign historic West Bank withdrawal agreement

■ The agreement gives Palestinians control of the biblical city, home to 130,000 Arabs and 500 Jews.

Associated Press

EREZ CROSSING, Israel (AP) — Israel and the Palestinians signed a tortuously negotiated pact Wednesday on Israel's long-delayed pullout from Hebron and parts of the West Bank, ending a dangerous impasse in Middle East peacemaking but leaving key questions unanswered.

After a post-midnight summit, U.S. envoy Dennis Ross — who had pushed for the accord in four months of often-frustrating negotiations — emerged to say that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat had closed the deal in a last, 90-minute session.

The agreement "brings us another step closer to a lasting, secure Middle East peace," President Clinton said in Washington. "Once again, the forces of peace have prevailed over a history of division."

"This is not a time to relax," Clinton cautioned. "Bringing its words to life will require active and continued cooperation."

Israeli chief negotiator Dan Shomron and his Palestinian counterpart, Saeb Erekat signed the agreement behind closed doors at the summit, held on the Israel-Gaza border. Netanyahu and Arafat went before the cameras afterward to shake hands, straight-faced, but did not speak.

Ross said the agreement was "fully consistent" with the previous Israel-Palestinian agreement from 1995, but the part dealing with Hebron was "more detailed."

Both sides also signed what they called a "note for the record" dealing with further West Bank pullouts and other issues.

"Taken together, these two documents represent a very important building block in terms of developing relations between the two sides .. and peace in the Middle East as a whole," Ross said.

According to previous press reports and accounts from officials, Israel is to give the Palestinians control of 80 percent of the Biblical city of Hebron within days. Israel also agreed to roll back its presence in the West Bank in three stages — beginning in six weeks and ending in August 1998.

It is the first concrete step in the peace process since Netanyahu's hard-line government took office in June, pledging to slow down the handover of land to the Palestinians. Tensions between the two sides have risen sharply as the stalemate in their relations lengthened. In September, Palestinian frustration sparked clashes with Israel in which 79 people died.

But Wednesday's agreement sets the stage for future conflict by leaving as many questions as it answers — most notably the scope of the planned Israeli withdrawals. The Palestinians hope to gain control of most of the West Bank, but Netanyahu by some reports plans to cede as little as one-third of the territory, which Israel captured in the 1967 Mideast War.

Netanyahu spokesman Shai Bazak said Netanyahu would take the deal later Wednesday to his Cabinet — where about half the ministers have said they are against it or undecided. Arafat is expected to encounter less opposition when he brings the accord before his own Cabinet.

The accord is also to be brought to the Israeli Knesset, where it is expected to pass by a large majority with the support of the opposition.

Netanyahu's most ardent past supporters — the Jewish settlers of the West Bank and Gaza — were astounded by his decision to commit to pulling out of not only Hebron but parts of the West Bank as well.

"Netanyahu is on the verge of making a pact with the devil," David Wilder, a spokesman for the 500 Jewish settlers who live amid 130,000 Palestinians in Hebron, said Tuesday.

"If he goes through with this, he will place all of our lives in severe jeopardy."

Settler leaders met Tuesday night in Jerusalem to map a protest campaign against the government they helped bring to power.

"This agreement is going to tear the nation into pieces," said Elyakim Haetzni, a settler leader from the Kiryat Arba settlement outside Hebron. "Netanyahu has cheated us.'

Diana sees Angolan land mine victims

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Visibly shocked by the horror of two decades of civil war, Princess Diana spoke Tuesday with dozens of youngsters maimed by land mines.

After a stop at the Angolan Red Cross headquarters, Diana's bomb-proof jeep took her to the orthopedic center of Neves Bendinha, just outside Luanda.

There, she talked with several children and young adults, knitting her brow and stroking an arm or cheek as she listened to their stories.

Sandra Thijica, a 13-year-old who put on her Sunday best to meet the princess, had her left leg amputated above the knee after a 1994 mine explosion. Diana promised to send her toys.

The princess also spoke with Andre Paulino, 22. He was a government soldier when a land mine blew off his legs in May, 18 months after a peace deal was signed between the government and UNITA rebels. UNITA is an acronym for the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

"I have nothing," Paulino told the princess. "I lost my father, my mother in the war and now my body is also lost. I need help."

On her second day of a four-day tour with the Red Cross, Diana took in the sights and smells of squalor in Luanda's sprawling shantytowns. The Angolan government estimates there are 70,000 amputees, many of whom live in wretched conditions in special camps or homes, scavenging garbage piles for food.

Diana spoke to dozens of mine victims at the center, where the Red Cross organizes the making and fitting of about 150 artificial limbs a month.

The princess's visit is aimed at focusing attention on the horrors of land mines, which the Red Cross is campaigning to ban worldwide.

The Angolan civil war began in 1975, on the eve of independence from Portugal. Today, about 12 million mines remain buried in the southwestern African country of 10 million people.

Cowboys' case had no winners

That was a regrettable incident involving two Dallas Cowboys football players — Michael Irvin and Erik Williams — who were accused by 23-year-old Mesquite resident Nina Shavravan of sexual assault.

Now, however, police officials in Dallas are saying that Irvin and Williams did not rape the woman as she had claimed and that Ms. Shavravan has been charged with making a false report, a misdemeanor offense that carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Dallas Police Chief Ben Click addressed the situation Tuesday when he said, "It does make me angry that someone would do this, especially for the folks who were accused. It has caused us a tremendous amount of work. If nothing else, this has been extremely expensive to the public, and we could have been investigating a real crime."

Without a doubt, making a false report should be a crime. Look at the damage that was done in this instance alone. The reputations of Irvin and Williams have suffered immensely, in addition to them having to bear the undue media scrutiny after being accused of such a crime. Dallas police have been kept busy investigating this report when they could have been investigating real crimes.

And the news media has been sent on a wild goose chase, carrying a fabricated story instead of an actual account.

All sides have egg on their faces in this incident — and a lesson to learn, hopefully.

It's difficult to say that the "story" shouldn't have been reported. In today's highly competitive news environment, if one news organization had not carried the story another probably would have. But the story could have been checked out more thoroughly and Ms. Shavravan's allegations scrutinized more closely.

The police have been criticized for releasing too much information too quickly — and perhaps they did. Of course, they are under constant pressure by the news media to release any details they will and that information is needed to keep the public informed.

But police officials and the media hold tremendous power in their hands to destroy reputations and, as this case shows, it can happen even if no crime was ever committed.

We must wield that power cautiously.

Verdict asserts need for media standards

A North Carolina federal jury's recent verdict against ABC News for a story exposing alleged unsanitary food-handling practices at a national supermarket chain challenged certain techniques of undercover reporting but did not discredit the need for sound investigative journalism.

... Some media critics have suggested that the case, in which the jury awarded a meager $1,402 in financial damages, will cast a chilling effect on undercover reporting. That need not be the case if the press follows its own ethical standards.

The Star-Telegram, for instance, prohibits reporters from willful misrepresentation in pursuing any story. In a word, they must not lie. Such a policy may make the reporting assignment more difficult, but complying with the law and preserving journalistic integrity is essential to retaining credibility with the public.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 15, the 15th day of 1997. There are 350 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 15, 1929, civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was born in Atlanta.

On this date:

In 1559, England's Queen Elizabeth I was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1844, the University of Notre Dame received its charter from the state of Indiana.

In 1870, the Democratic party was represented as a donkey for the first time in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly.

In 1919, pianist and statesman Ignace Jan Paderewski became the first premier of the newly created republic of Poland.

In 1943, work was completed on the Pentagon, headquarters of the U.S. Department of Defense.

In 1947, 50 years ago, the grisly, still-unsolved "Black Dahlia" murder case came to light in Los Angeles as the mutilated remains of 22-year-old aspiring actress Elizabeth Short were found dumped in a vacant lot.

In 1967, the first Super Bowl was played as the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League defeated the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League, 35-10.

In 1973, President Nixon announced the suspension of all U.S. offensive action in North Vietnam, citing progress in peace negotiations.

In 1976, Sara Jane Moore was sentenced to life in prison for her attempt on the life of President Ford in San Francisco.

Ten years ago: Entertainer Ray Bolger, perhaps best-known for playing the Scarecrow in the 1939 musical "The Wizard of Oz," died in Los Angeles at age 83.

Five years ago: The Yugoslav federation, founded in 1918, effectively collapsed as the European Community recognized the republics of Croatia and Slovenia.

One year ago: Risking the lives of more than 100 hostages in an effort to wipe out their Chechen rebel captors, the Russian military hurled rockets and shells at the tiny village of Pervomayskaya. Ailing Greek Premier Andreas Papandreou resigned.

Development agencies squander funds

UNITED NATIONS — The recent British pullout from a U.N. agency is just one signal that the U.N. development gravy train is out of control.

Anderson

Last month, Great Britain announced that it would withdraw from the U.N. Industrial Development Organization, following an earlier decision by the United States to do so. The British rapped UNIDO's waste of funds, but particularly complained about its lack of coordination with other U.N. development agencies.

The U.N. has many overlapping agencies, especially in the development field, which is one of the reasons the Republican Congress has been withholding America's dues to the world body.

Our own investigation has found that none of the U.N. development agencies is run efficiently, or with an eye to maximizing the contributions from member states.

An intensive look by our associate Dale Van Atta at the largest such agency, the U.N. Development Program, proves the point. The United States provides 10 percent of UNDP funding.

There are many U.N. projects that blatantly make no sense. The thousands of UNDP projects we reviewed include one where $66,000 was spent on teaching negotiation techniques to Brazilian diplomats. In another, $177,000 went into a project reorganizing the museum at the Institute of Ethiopian Studies in Addis Ababa. And $3,000 paid for the construction of a memorial to air crash victims in Tanzania. All worthy goals, perhaps, but they hardly fall under the rubric of development.

Some of the most curious projects involve UNDP aid going to rich countries that can well afford to fund the efforts themselves. The following are among the more egregious examples that we found of UNDP funds (sometimes commingled with funds from other U.N. agencies) going for projects in wealthy nations:

■ Saudi Arabia: $13.5 million for a range and animal research center; $11.2 million for the King Faisal Foundation Cultural Centre; $4 million for the development, management and maintenance of a road network; and $826,000 for an ongoing project to preserve the endangered Arabian horse.

■ Bahrain: $147,000 for the conservation and restoration of something called the Al Qal'at al Bahrain; $30,000 for dental care; and $9,000 toward health care for the elderly.

■ Qatar: $5 million to support Qatar University.

■ Japan: $72,000 for the "transportation of great works."

■ Singapore: $4,000 to study the feasibility of frog farming.

■ Finally, the two richest countries on earth were still judged to need some help from the UNDP: Kuwait received $269,000 for "primary health care," while Brunei got $17,000 for "development of primary health care" and $9,000 for "oral health fellowships."

One UNDP report assessing all development aid (government and private) alleges that the funding paradox — slighting the poorest countries to benefit richer ones — means "the richest 40 percent of the developing world receives twice as much aid per capita as the poorest 40 percent." For example, Egypt receives $280 in aid per poor person, while India receives only $7 — even though Egypt is three times wealthier than India in real per capita income.

Much of the aid, when not being sent to wealthy oligarchies in the Middle East, is given to countries with atrocious records of human rights abuses. China, for example, received $119 million from UNDP not long after the Tiananmen Square massacre. The unrepentant Communist dictatorship of Vietnam received $67 million in that same year.

Other funds are used to support some of America's sworn enemies — like Iran, Iraq and Libya. In Iraq, the U.N. was doling out $58 million in development aid through the UNDP in the same year that it passed resolutions authorizing the American-led fighting force that won the Gulf War. Some of that aid, we suspect, was used by Saddam Hussein to bolster his tattered armed forces.

When it comes to trash, some can pile it on

Royko

The Washington media elite ought to be cringing. So should many of those former liberals who now call themselves politically progressive. They're being accused of being White House puppets in efforts to muddy up Ms. Jones as mere "trailer trash."

In one of the most remarkable journalistic confessions I've ever read, a Newsweek writer recently described how he and other members of the "mainstream" press brigade were willing, even eager, participants in the kick-Paula campaign.

As the Newsweek article said:

"In media accounts, she tends to be portrayed as a trailer park floozy digging for money and celebrity."

One of those who spoke for the White House was James Carville, the Clinton adviser who portrays himself as a real grass-roots kind of guy.

But of Jones, Carville said: "Drag a hundred dollars through a trailer park and there's no telling what you'll find."

Well, I know what Carville and other members of the Clinton team usually expect to find in "a trailer park." Democratic votes, that's what. Those who live in trailer parks are on the lower rungs of the economic and influence ladder.

But lacking a comfortable net worth doesn't make them trash.

Those in trailer parks are also the kind of voters Clinton and Carville claim to love and comfort and defend. But forget that — in the heat of a legal and image battle, "trailer trash" was a handy label to slap on Ms. Jones.

The Newsweek confession went on:

"Arguably, the main reason more people don't take her story seriously is that the mainstream media have been skillfully spun by the White House and Clinton's lawyers. By playing on the class and partisan prejudices of reporters, as well as their squeamishness and ambivalence about printing stories about the sex lives of politicians, Clinton's operatives have done a brilliant job of discrediting Paula Jones and her case."

Then the Newsweek article made this stunning admission: "Newsweek's Evan Thomas, the author of this piece, said on a Washington talk show that Jones was just 'some sleazy woman with big hair coming out of the trailer parks.' This elitist attitude was widely shared by the establishment press."

The repentant Evans, having purged himself of his trailer-park-slur guilt, went on to write:

"The mainstream press is beginning to give more credence to Jones' story, in large part because of an influential article by Stuart Taylor in the November edition of The American Lawyer.

"Taylor accused the press of underreporting the Jones story because of a cultural double standard that let off liberal figures like Clinton more easily than conservatives like Clarence Thomas.

"... Meanwhile, the press is waking up. The catalyst was the article that appeared in The American Lawyer by Taylor, a former legal correspondent for The New York Times.

"... Taylor accused the press of hypocrisy and class bias — of believing (Anita) Hill, a Yale Law grad and a feminist, and not Jones with her big hair. Taylor's article was widely read in newsrooms and editors' offices, including those at Newsweek."

Of course, that, too, is revealing. Note that Taylor, the author of the influential article, is a former New York Times legal correspondent. That's as media elite as you can get.

I wonder if those East Coast journalists would have overcome their class and partisan prejudices and been as impressed if the same soul-cleansing article had been done by someone in Salt Lake City or Des Moines.

I doubt it. But the popularity of the slur "trailer trash," isn't limited to the Eastern media elite or White House spin specialists.

Out of curiosity, I ran a computer search to see how often the phrase "trailer trash" has been used in recent months in news publications all over the country.

It's impossible to make an accurate count, the phrase turns up so often. Thousands of times.

Those who live in trailer parks have become a media punching bag. Why? Obviously there is no National Association for the Advancement of Trailer Park Inhabitants to speak up in their defense. And there are few, if any, trailer park offspring in today's newsrooms.

So those who live in trailer parks are not on any semi-official politically correct endangered species list.

Those who live in trailer parks get to defend themselves only if some reporter drops by to study them as some sort of sociological oddity.

In one such story in a Long Island paper, a trailer owner had this to say:

"'Trailer trash,' that's what they call us. We only live on our Social Security, and that's why we can't move out of here. I don't care what people think. I know what kind of people we are, to heck with anybody who looks down on us."

Get that, Mr. Clinton, Mr. Carville and all you journalism school products in Washington?

One final thought: I really like Paula Jones' hair.

Food and wine make inauguration go round

Inauguration time is the busiest period for Washingtonians. We are all cooking and baking and deep-frying chicken fingers for the thousands of people coming into town for the big occasion.

Buchwald

Paul Peck, the Democratic chief caterer, was stir-frying pigs' feet.

"Lobbyists have to be fed," Paul said as he poured peanut oil on the feet. "If they're not, they won't buy any tables for Al Gore's birthday party."

"I guess food and wine are what make this town go round," I said.

"They do during the week the president is sworn in. The lobbyists gave to us when we needed it. Now we're giving back to them — with cheese puffs and egg rolls. Fair is fair when you pay homage to a president."

"How do you decide which lobbyists get fed and which ones don't?"

"Political parties treat everyone like the homeless. If a lobbyist is hungry and he is on our side, he can have all the sweet and sour pork he can eat."

"I was under the impression that the lobbyists were the major entertainers during a presidential inauguration."

"They're in it, too. After all, if the big-shot telephone people show up and you're on their payroll, you have to throw a party. But a party is nothing unless you can show off lots of congressmen and senators. So the lobbyists throw in extra PAC money for the politicians to guarantee that the pols will turn up at their event."

"Yet what we're really talking about is food. Don't most people come to the inauguration because they can't get these kinds of things to eat at home?"

Paul laughed. "You can say that again. People are still talking about the celery stalks I served last year at the cocktail party for Dick Morris."

"I hope you didn't give anyone the recipe."

"Oh, no. My celery stalks are my party's political secret."

"Does the Democratic Party ever exchange menus with the lobbyists?"

"All the time. We had a problem at Clinton's first inauguration with deviled eggs, so we called up the nuclear waste lobby, and it offered to hard-boil 230 platters for us. This kind of cooperation makes American inaugurations the greatest in the world. Had Dole won, the nuclear waste folks would have done the same for the Republicans."

I told Paul, "If I was a lobbyist, I'd like the chicken livers on potato latkes."

"You're in luck. That's what I am making next. I've always said you can't have a decent inauguration without potato latkes."

"God bless America."

Clinton looks to Medicare, Medicaid reductions to balance budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — After blistering Republican plans to trim Medicare and Medicaid, and riding the rhetoric to re-election, President Clinton is taking his own scalpel to the massive programs.

Democrats may be unhappy, but that apparently is a price Clinton is willing to pay for a balanced budget.

The president proposed similar reductions in 1995 and 1996, but deeper cuts offered by GOP lawmakers allowed Clinton to declare himself the election-year champion of health care to the poor, disabled and elderly. Republicans accused Democrats of distorting the record.

"Mediscare! Mediscare! Mediscare!" Republican rival Bob Dole bellowed again and again on the campaign trail. Heading to the voting booths, few people realized that Clinton wanted to cut the health care programs, Republicans complained.

This time, it will be hard not to notice: Clinton is required by law to produce a budget plan, forced by political reality to introduce one that balances and, aides say, bound by economic forces to cut Medicare and Medicaid to do it.

In other parts of the budget, according to officials familiar with it, the White House will propose:

— Adding back as much as $16 billion to the revamped welfare program to restore benefits to legal immigrants who became disabled after entering the country and to provide more for food stamps. There also would be $3.4 billion for an initiative aimed at moving welfare recipients into jobs.

— Trimming $5 billion from this year's military budget, to a total of about $260 billion for fiscal 1998.

Republicans are sure to fight on both counts.

On Medicare and Medicaid, the Republicans will let Clinton make the first move. Even as they promise to work with Democrats on any serious balanced-budget efforts, they welcome the prospect of him sweating those particular cuts.

"Now that Bill Clinton can't ever run for re-election, perhaps he will put the political charades behind him," said Haley Barbour, Republican National Committee chairman. "But America can't afford another phony political gesture."

White House officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton's Feb. 6 budget submission is expected include:

—Reductions in payments to health maintenance organizations, doctors and hospitals to save about $100 billion from the giant Medicare program over the next five years. Medicare provides health insurance for the elderly and disabled.

—A per-capita limit on the growth of Medicaid, which provides health care to the poor. Under the plan, states would receive a set amount of federal money for each person in their Medicaid programs. But Medicaid spending would not be allowed to grow faster than the nation's per-capita economic output.

Both items are drawn heavily from balanced-budget proposals offered by Clinton in 1995 and 1996.

Under both Clinton's and the Republicans' proposals, Medicare and Medicaid spending is projected to rise in future years. The two plans differ, however, in how much they would trim these projected increases to achieve the savings needed to balance the budget.

On Medicare, the president's election-year budget plan proposed $124 billion in savings over six years, only $40 billion less than Republicans.

On Medicaid, the president had offered a per-capita cap as an alternative to GOP plans to slap an overall limit on Medicaid funding to each state. The per-capita cap would allow states to increase their funding proportionately if poverty rolls swell.

Still, Democrats fear that faster-than-expected increases in medical costs would force deep cuts in Medicaid under the per-capita cap

Georgian diplomat had four previous traffic citations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before his involvement in a car wreck that killed a 16-year-old girl, a Republic of Georgia diplomat was cited at least four times by local police for traffic violations, the State Department said Tuesday. On two occasions, he was fined for speeding in excess of 80 mph.

But in contrast to a statement Monday by Georgian President Eduard Shevardnadze, no evidence has been received by the State Department that any of these incidents were alcohol-related.

Gueorgui Makharadze, the No. 2 diplomat at the Georgian Embassy, has been ordered by Shevardnadze to remain in the United States until the investigation into the Jan. 3 crash near Washington's Embassy Row section is completed.

Shevardnadze has said he is prepared to lift Makharadze's diplomatic immunity so that he may stand trial. Skid marks indicate that the car he was driving may have been traveling 80 mph at the time of the accident that killed Jovianne Waltrick of Kensington, Md. Police also have said there is some evidence that alcohol may have been a factor in the accident.

State Department Nicholas Burns said Makharadze was fined $75 for running a red light in the District of Columbia on May 8, 1995; $179 for two violations that involved speeding in excess of 80 mph, both on April 22, 1996; and $56 for an improper lane change that led to a minor traffic accident on Jan. 3, 1995.

Burns said that Makharadze also was stopped by district police last Aug. 22 but that it is not clear from D.C. records whether he was issued any citations.

Kevin Ohlson, a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office, said he doubted whether Makharadze's past driving record will have much impact if his case goes to trial.

He suggested that a defendant's previous traffic violations normally are not considered admissible in a trial relating to traffic infractions.

"In each case, the facts have to stand on their own," he said.

Burns said that if a foreign diplomats accumulates 12 points for traffic infractions over two years, the State Department suspends his department-issued driver's license for 90 days. As of the time of the fatal car wreck two weeks ago, Makharadze had accumulated eight points under the department's scoring system, Burns said.

He added that the department had not known about Makharadze's driving record until almost a week after the Jan. 3 crash because local police do not always notify the department — as they are supposed to — of driving infractions by diplomats.

Last year, the driver's licenses of 10 diplomats were suspended, he said. In the last four years eight diplomats have been expelled because of a consistent pattern of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Women's Care Update

WOMEN AND HEART DISEASE

The fact that heart disease is the leading cause of death for all women is something that most women fail to recognize. According to a recent Gallup Poll, 46 percent of the women surveyed feel that they are ten times more likely to die from breast cancer than from heart disease; however, just the opposite is true. Heart disease is responsible for 34 percent of female deaths, versus 4 percent for breast cancer. Estrogen generally protects women from cardiovascular disease, but the risk increases as estrogen levels decline after menopause. For this reason, women should be screened once before menopause and once after menopause for risk factors. Recent research indicates that women's risk factors for heart disease differ significantly from men's. By recognizing these factors and treating them, heart disease in women could be significantly slowed. The first step in this direction comes with recognizing the problem.

Routine professional exams are exactly what is needed to lower your risks and protect your overall health. We are devoted to improving and maintaining the health of all women, and offer a full range of gynecological service, testing and counseling. If you are looking a health care provider, and would like to discuss your concerns, we are currently accepting new patients. For more information about our service, please call 522-2222, conveniently located at Primary Medical Clinic-Westwood, 4214 Andrews Highway, Suite#100, in Midland.

Simpson pits his credibility against his ex-wife's

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — At his civil trial, O.J. Simpson has employed some of the same themes that got him acquitted of murder: claims of conspiracy, corruption and contamination of evidence.

But a new "C" has been added — credibility.

Simpson has pitted his credibility against that of Nicole Brown Simpson, asking the jury to believe his tale of a blissful marriage and reject her claims of abuse.

The most crucial new elements were Simpson's own testimony and photographs that were either unused or unavailable during the criminal trial.

"This case may very well come down to a photo finish," said Loyola University Dean Laurie Levenson, who has been observing the trial. "Which pictures do you believe?"

The defense rested Tuesday after 39 witnesses and 14 days of testimony. The plaintiffs started calling their rebuttal witnesses immediately. Closing arguments in the wrongful-death case are scheduled for next week.

Just before Thanksgiving, when confronted with a photo of him apparently wearing Bruno Maglis — the same kind of shoes that made tracks around the bodies of Ms. Simpson and Ronald Goldman — Simpson branded the picture a fake. Earlier he said he would never wear such "ugly-ass" shoes.

Over the Christmas break, the plaintiffs came up with 30 more photos appearing to show Simpson in the same shoes. Confronted with the pictures, Simpson testified: "I didn't wear those shoes."

"Do you have any explanation for why all these photographs show you wearing those shoes?" plaintiffs' attorney Daniel Petrocelli asked.

"No," Simpson said.

Johnnie Cochran Jr., who headed Simpson's Dream Team in the murder case, said he was troubled by the pictures.

"We didn't have those in the criminal case, and the question is quite simply whether they're legitimate, whether the photographs are fakes or they're legitimate. And only the jury is going to make that decision," Cochran told a Boston radio station.

The defense fought back with its own startling photos — of the bloody gloves. One picture showed an apparent hole in a crime scene glove — a hole nowhere visible on the glove given to the jurors. Defense attorney Robert Baker suggested there had been a sinister switch.

Then there were the bloody crime scene photos. Defense forensic wizard Henry Lee held up his magnifying glass and showed jurors a new trail of seven blood drops leading away from the scene. This supported a two-killer theory.

"The defense managed to raise some mystery, which never hurts," Levenson said. "You have to give them credit. They didn't roll over and die after the Bruno Magli shoe pictures."

The defense's secret weapon, of course, was Simpson and his much-vaunted charisma. He didn't testify at his murder trial, and his first turn on the stand in November was under hostile questioning by the plaintiffs.

But Friday, under friendly questioning, it appeared he would charm his way through. Simpson portrayed himself as a loving husband mystified by his wife's mood swings in their final months together.

"I felt I had to distance myself from Nicole," he testified, and insisted it was she who persisted in trying to win him back.

Simpson was relaxed and confident under questioning from his own lawyer. He looked frequently at the jurors, speaking as if confiding in them. At one point, giving his version of a golf course argument the day of the killings, he conversationally set the scene: "I know you don't know much about golf maybe, but he sculled his third shot over the green. It was a par five."

Simpson seldom smiled. But jurors chuckled with him when Baker asked: "Now, at that time, you were a relatively wealthy man, were you not?"

"At that time, yes," Simpson said.

Baker continued: "That's before you met a lot of lawyers?"

Simpson replied: "Yes. Now there's a lot of wealthy lawyers."

Up until then, Simpson was a charismatic enough witness that jurors could be inclined to overlook what he actually said, said Peter Arenella, a law professor at the University of California at Los Angeles.

But then Simpson and Petrocelli clashed during cross-examination — at one point, over whether Simpson was tailoring his testimony to impress the jury. "I believe it's important for me to be honest with this jury," Simpson repeated several times, angering Petrocelli, who never got the direct answer he demanded.

On Monday, Petrocelli accused Simpson of being a liar. The defendant admitted to infidelities during his marriage but said he didn't consider those lies. "Morally wrong," he called it.

The plaintiffs then produced a surprise piece of evidence — an anguished letter written by Ms. Simpson to her husband sometime before they divorced in 1992. He said he never received it.

Exceedingly detailed, it alleged a litany of abuse by Simpson against his wife. She said once he "beat the holy hell out of me," then lied to a doctor by saying she fell off a bike.

The eight-page letter was the subject of furious legal arguments, and it remained unclear how much of it would be handed over to jurors.

"If that letter gets to the jury it will devastate Simpson," Levenson said. "It will undermine all his credibility. It will be as if he got on the stand and shot himself. If will be as if he committed legal suicide."

Jurors deliberate over $1.9 billion ABC settlement

■ Last month the jurors found ABC guilty of fraud and trespass and awarded $1,402 in compensation.

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Jurors deliberated Tuesday whether ABC should pay as much as $1.9 billion to Food Lion for an undercover, hidden-cover report that alleged the grocery chain sold rotten meat.

Food Lion denied the 1992 "PrimeTime Live" story, but the lawsuit challenged only ABC's methods. The jury last month found ABC producers committed fraud and trespass by lying on supermarket job applications to get their hidden cameras inside three stores in the Carolinas.

Jurors deliberated for 5 1/2 hours Tuesday, then went home without reaching a verdict. They were due back in court Wednesday morning.

The jury gave Food Lion $1,402 in compensatory damages to cover the cost of hiring and training the producers. The company asked jurors to award between $52.5 million and $1.9 billion in punitive damages.

ABC's lawyer said the jury didn't have to award punitive damages at all because the network had learned its lesson.

The jury — which began deliberating just before 10 a.m. — must determine whether the defendants consciously broke the law. ABC employees, including "PrimeTime Live" anchorwoman Diane Sawyer, testified that the undercover probe was approved by ABC's lawyers and executives and they thought it was legal.

The judge reminded jurors that it is legal under North Carolina and South Carolina laws for a person to record or tape events or conversations in which he or she is involved, without the knowledge of the other party.

Food Lion contends the network knew it was doing wrong but did so anyway for the sake of ratings and profits.

City Council examines cost overruns

Expenses force council to approve $904,984 from general fund

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The City Council Tuesday admonished city staff about budget overruns that required the withdrawal of more than $900,000 from unappropriated funds.

"We need some way during the year to close the valve before draining the tanks," City Council representative Dale Brown said.

Drawing from the city's general fund — financed with tax dollars — during the 1995-96 fiscal year, 20 city divisions exceeded budget by $1,338,263 and 23 divisions were under budget by $434,079.

As a result, the council had to approve $904,984 be taken from the general fund's unappropriated balance, which consists of reserve dollars and revenues collected over what was budgeted.

Mayor Bobby Burns asked the city's finance director, Troy Gifford, whether the overall amount over budget for general fund expenditures was standard. "I think that is probably in excess of normal," Gifford said.

In response to council questions about why spending wasn't curtailed before the fiscal year ended, Gifford said quarterly reports — with overruns highlighted — had been submitted to the City Council.

Because funds budgeted are only estimates, cost overruns are not always predictable and therefore not uncommon. But the amount of overruns and for what specifically irked some members of the council.

Council member Jose Cuevas took exception to parks and recreation spending $10,050 over its $4,000 budgeted for travel expenses. "How can you justify $10,000 more? ... What can you do so this doesn't happen again?" he said.

Trips to Fort Worth related to a half-million grant for the C.J. Kelly Park, trips to Austin in connection with a pending grant application for a half-million dollars for the proposed southwest park and travels by the Lineberry House committee to see how other cities used historical property were largely responsible for the overruns, Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said.

Overruns in travel expenses accounted for only a portion of excess expenditures by parks and recreation, part of the city's community services division.

Parks and recreation overruns totaled $628,421, including $293,650 for watering parks and other city property. Watering was under-budgeted in part because of the drought, more park land and anticipated water wells not yet on-line, Menchaca said.

Some of the other high-cost overruns in parks and recreation were: irrigation equipment, $70,650; temporary help, $51,200; equipment leasing, $46,080; and overtime, $45,927.

Overruns considered major by the Road work

The Texas Department of Transportation will be widening Farm-to-Market Road 1379 in a dual phase project that includes stretches north and south of State Highway 158. Phase 1 of the project begins one mile south of the State Highway 307 intersection to SH 158, a distance of 5.7 miles. Phase 2 begins one mile south of the State Highway 158 intersection and continues south for 2.5 miles. The work consists of adding 10 feet to the highway surface for the purpose of adding shoulders to the roadway. The contractor, Price Construction of Big Spring, will be working on both phases at the same time. Parents taking students to Greenwood School, as well as local residents driving on FM 1379, should be on the look out for all warning signs. Cost of the state-funded project is $1,204,838 and it is expected to get under way Monday. It should be concluded by early June.

Samaritan Counseling Center adds ...

Room to GROW

Agency breaks ground for annex, play center

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Braving frigid temperatures, more than 20 board members of Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas, representatives of several foundations and friends of the counseling center attended a groundbreaking ceremony Tuesday for a new annex and play therapy center facility.

The facility, located at the center's central office near Midland International Airport, is expected to open in June or July.

"The reason for the new annex are twofold," said Jerry Kelly, executive director of the center. "First, we wanted a permanent play therapy room for the children. Right now we're using a conference room. Secondly, we wanted to provide enough office space for the therapists on our staff."

Plans call for construction of a new 2,890-square-foot annex containing six counseling areas, an observation/therapy training area, increased storage space, meditation garden and handicapped access in addition to the play therapy center. The 3,780-square-foot existing main office will also be renovated during the project.

Funding for the new annex came from a $125,000 challenge grant from the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation, matched by support from the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation, Abell-Hanger Foundation, the Prairie Foundation, the Hahl Proctor Charitable Trust and the Frances and Jack Brown Fund of the Communities Foundation of Texas.

At present the center has 13 therapists on its staff who last year provided 5,300 hours of counseling. Kelly said the center's goal is to provide 10,000 hours of counseling by the year 2000.

Kelly said there are several reasons the center, which is in its 24th year, has experienced growth.

"People are realizing that stresses are more complex than they were a generation ago," he said. "We're a Christian counseling center helping with spiritual as well as physical and emotional needs. Surveys show that 80 percent of respondents preferred to receive counseling from someone spiritually based like themselves. Also, we have a good reputation and history. Clients know they'll be treated with respect and receive good counseling."

The center offers counseling to children, adults, families and couples.

Ex-cheerleader to face burglary, other charges

■ Former Midland College cheerleader Todd Daniel Tucker is scheduled to go before a grand jury today accused by authorities of a series of 'peeping incidents.'

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

A former Midland College cheerleader, Todd Daniel Tucker, 23, goes before a grand jury today on charges of burglary of a habitation, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and public intoxication.

Tucker

Tucker reportedly entered the mobile home of a woman on West County Road 132 on Oct. 24 and tried to suffocate her by covering her mouth and nose, according to sheriff reports.

Tucker, a salesman at USA mobile home sales, had sold the home to the woman approximately one month before the incident and had allegedly entered her home using a master key, sheriff deputies reported.

As the man entered the woman's bedroom, she awoke and confronted him, deputies reported.

The suspect then fled to the other side of the residence and was followed by the woman. The man attacked the woman from behind and a struggle ensued.

The man tried to "smother" the woman, deputies reported.

The woman was able "to gain an occasional breath" and continued struggling with the man until her father arrived. The father confronted the suspect, who

Credit unions meet to fight lobbying by banking industry

By Joe Gaines
Staff Writer

State and local credit union leaders met in Midland Tuesday to campaign against what they're calling an attack from the banking industry.

Banks are out to eliminate credit unions and competition by lobbying the state Legislature to make recommendations for further regulation of the industry, said Richard Ensweiler, president of Texas Credit Union League.

Banks have pushed to end the state's 28-year history of independent regulation of credit unions and want to abolish the Credit Union Commission, Ensweiler said.

They want to lump not-for-profit, state-chartered credit unions together with the for-profit banks under control of the bank-dominated Texas Finance

Kraft

Cox

Two Midland men face charges of child molestation in two separate trials now before the 142nd and 238th district courts.

Testimony is scheduled to begin today in 142nd District Court in the first-degree felony trial of Kenneth L. Kraft, 44, accused of exposing himself and touching a 5-year-old girl in November 1994.

He is charged with aggravated sexual assault of a child, a first-degree felony; indecency with a child by touching, a second-degree felony; and indecency with a child by exposure, a third-degree felony.

According to the indictment, Kraft is alleged to have been visiting his girlfriend who was babysitting the child at the time of the incident.

Prosecutor John Westbrook will be presenting a videotape today of professionally elicited testimony from the victim, saving the child from the trauma of appearing in the courtroom.

In the 238th District Court, Gerald L. Cox Jr. is facing allegations that he exposed himself before two girls, ages 11 and 10, fled on foot, deputies reported.

During the struggle the man left his keys, including the master key used to enter the home and the key to his vehicle, deputies reported.

During the investigation, deputies were able to link the suspect to approximately 2,000 "window peeping" incidents, which was a "conservative estimate," Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Tucker has also been linked to at least seven other home entries within the city limits, deputies reported.

During all of the entries the residents were home, deputies said.

Tucker would allegedly enter the homes at night to watch the residents sleep or for "some other sort of self-gratification," deputies said.

Tucker was a cheerleader at Midland College during the 1994 and 1995 seasons, Elise Coombes, MC public relations director said.

He graduated from Midland College in May 1995 with an associate's degree in applied sciences. At the time of the incident, he was enrolled at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and was taking a one-hour cheerleading course at Midland College.

However, he had dropped the cheerleading course before the incident, MC officials said. Midland College officials would not say exactly when he had dropped the course.

The course, considered a "physical education" class, is open to other students besides members of the five-man and seven-woman cheerleader squad, Tommy Ramos, cheerleader instructor said.

Because Tucker had already served as cheerleader for two years, the maximum allowed, he was not eligible to become a cheerleader again, said Camal Dakil, MC vice president of student services.

Officials were unsure whether Tucker would ever be able to retake the class, but Dakil said it was unlikely.

"If he was found to have violated the student conduct code, putting the college in a bad light, it would be taken into consideration," Dakil said. Because Tucker is no longer enrolled, no action has been taken, Dakil said.

No reports of misconduct were reported involving Tucker and other cheerleaders, Ramos said.

Tucker was released from Midland County Detention Center Nov. 26 on $20,000 bond.

TRIALS: Molestation trials continue on June 20, 1993, at his Midland home.

An eight-man, four-woman jury began hearing testimony in the case Tuesday.

In Cox's defense, attorney Glen Aaron called a neighbor who testified that one of the alleged victims made comments to her indicating that she had been coached to make false allegations against Cox.

"She said they had said for her to say it — but it wasn't true," the neighbor testified.

Over Aaron's objection, Judge John Hyde allowed a probation officer to enter statements she'd taken from the defend nt in an aborted plea bargain more than a year ago.

This officer of the court, Valerie Thomerson, testified that in pleading guilty in exchange for a sentence of deferred adjudication probation, the defendant said the girls appeared to be under the affects of some kind of drug when they came to his home.

Ms. Thomerson maintained that the defendant admitted to allowing the victims to disrobe him until he was naked.

"He said he realized this wasn't right and told them to put their clothes back on and he took them home," she said.

Taking the stand in his own defense, Cox testified that he fabricated this story, even though he maintained his innocence, so that he could receive the light penalty of deferred adjudication.

He said he recanted this story and declined the plea bargain, however, when he found out that as part of his conditions of probation that he would not be allowed to see his 15-year-old son or be near the daughter of his live-in girlfriend.

Jurors also listened to an audio tape of a telephone conversation between a friend of the defendant and one of the victims. The defense presented this evidence in which a voice, alleged to be one of the victims, admitted to being high on drugs.

When the trial continues today, prosecutor Teresa Clingman will continue seating witnesses in an effort to prove that Cox exposed himself to the girls while showing them a pornographic video tape.

Commission, Ensweiler said.

The Credit Union Commission has not been shut down, but bank lobbyists have secured three recommendations, which Ensweiler said could impair credit unions.

It has been recommended that the CUC be reviewed by the Sunset Commission in four years, instead of a 12-year cycle like other state agencies. Banks also want to cut the number of credit union appointees from six to four, reducing the voice of 5 million Texas credit union members to a minority on the commission, Ensweiler said.

More regulations have also been suggested for state-chartered credit unions wanting new charters, mergers or to allow new field of membership, Ensweiler said.

All the recommendations, if taken, would hit the consumer in the pocketbook, said Anita Lintzen, CEO of Midland Atlantic Federal Credit Union.

The recommendations show that the banks are getting greedy, wanting the credit union's customers and assets, Ms. Lintzen said.

Of the 30 credit unions and 77,000 members in the Midland-Odessa area, credit union assets total around $312 million, Ms. Lintzen said.

"Do you know how much the banks have in assets? Billions. How are we a threat to them?" Lintzen said.

Credit unions are also on the attack from banks on the federal level. Late last year, they lost a case in which they were not allowed to acquire new fields of membership. They are appealing the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, Ensweiler said.

"Now that banks see credit unions are prospering, they want to fight us in the courts instead of on Main Street," Ensweiler said.

The battle won't be easy because banks have more money and experience at lobbying the Legislature, Ensweiler said.

"That's why we're here. We're urging the local credit unions to contact their members and tell them that the benefits they have today, might be taken away if the banks win," Ensweiler said.

If the banks were to win, Herbert Itz of Complex Community Federal Credit Union in Odessa, said he would have to close many member accounts.

"It would hurt a lot of people in the Permian Basin," Itz said.

Ms. Lintzen said banks' charge that credit unions are expanding their membership and taking away their customer is untrue. Consumers pick the credit unions because of the higher dividends and lower fees, she said.

"The consumer needs a choice. If the banks win, they can charge anything they want. It's a losing proposition for the consumer," Itz said.

STANTON — Robert L. Taylor, 58, of Stanton, father of Midlanders Wendy Hernandez and Richie Taylor, died Monday, Jan. 13, at a local hospital.

Graveside services are to be 2 p.m. today, Jan. 15, at Mount Olive Memorial Park in Big Spring with Dereck Looney, officiating. Arrangements by Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home in Big Spring.

He was a born on Sept. 26, 1938, in Ackerly.

He was a retired transport driver and a farmer. He was a veteran of the U.S. Army and was a member of the Disabled American Veterans.

Other survivors include another daughter, Tina Williamson of Franklin; his father, W.C. Taylor of Ackerly; a sister, Winnie Looney of Stanton; two brothers, Lonnie Taylor of Lenorah and Ronnie Taylor of Big Spring; and six grandchildren.

James Carter

Funeral services for James Carter, 87, are pending with Jackie Warren Funeral Home.

He died Monday, Jan. 13, at a local hospital.

COUNCIL: Expenditures force use of unallocated funds finance department also occurred in five other divisions.

That consisted of the Police Department - field operations, $257,878; Fire Department - fire, $56,071; Fire Department - emergency medical services, $47,208; communications and information systems - maintenance, $41,731; and non-departmental - inter-fund transfer to the golf course, $62,450.

In addition, divisions with overruns in excess of $10,000 included: the city manager's office, the city secretary, administrative services, communication and information systems - informations systems, engineering and development - code administration, engineering and development - street maintenance, community services - animal control, police - airport police and fire - airport division.

In addition to overruns for divisions financed by the general fund, there were overruns in other fund groups. Those were: Lineberry property maintenance, $1,750; DARE, $1,489; crime analysis, $62,400; police special purposes (federally funded), $5,107; and police special purposes (state-funded), $29,650. Those overruns will be made up by the appropriate fund of each.

Although the general fund overruns totaled $904,984 (after subtracting money saved by other areas coming under budget), that will be decreased by grants received or expected to be received and not yet accounted for, Menchaca said. Those grant dollars will essentially lessen the overrun down to $671,801, he said.

For now though, the $904,184 over budget will be off-set by unappropriated funds. Those unforeseen expenses coupled with $1,498,629 in revenues collected over budget last fiscal year and $1,342,920 in unbudgeted council appropriations that year reduces the general fund reserve from $12,324,000 to $11,575,525. The city operates an annual budget of about $90 million and the general fund budget accounts for about $42 million.

Texas Legislature opens 1997 session

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Legislature's 1997 session opened Tuesday with an outbreak of bipartisan goodwill.

Republicans and Democrats said the GOP's historic control of the Senate should make little difference in how Texas' laws are made.

"Frankly, some of my best friends are Republicans," said Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, who was elected Senate president pro-tem on a unanimous vote of both Democratic and Republican senators.

That largely ceremonial post — technically the state's third-highest behind the governor and lieutenant governor — each session is awarded to a veteran senator.

Ms. Zaffirini's nomination was seconded by several Republicans, and the Democrat said that reflected well on the Senate. "I am not worried (about partisanship) because every member of this wonderful body is committed, is dedicated, is serious and hard-working," she said.

When the gavel fell at noon, Republicans held 16 of the Senate's 31 seats. It's the first time the GOP has controlled a Texas legislative chamber in 125 years. Democrats still hold a majority in the 150-member House.

Throughout the opening day, lawmakers and state leaders insisted that little has changed.

Gov. George W. Bush, a Republican, called Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock "a great Texan" and "a great friend."

House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, was re-elected without opposition from any of the chamber's 68 Republicans. "We have proven we can have legitimate differences without becoming gridlocked," Laney said.

Senators voted 30-0 for new rules — none of which stripped Bullock of his powers to make committee appointments and control the flow of legislation. Democrats chair nine Senate committees and Republicans six.

A private, pre-session meeting of all senators was held without partisan rancor, participants said. "I didn't see any partisan issues in there," reported Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson, the chamber's longest-serving Republican.

Bullock said he was pleased with the new rules. "I gave them every opportunity to offer an amendment," he said. "The vote speaks for itself."

Bullock, who has presided over the Senate since 1991, said he expected the bipartisanship to continue.

"These senators will rise above it. There's oly a small group of people, party activists of both parties, that in my opinion would like to see confrontation," he said. "I do not believe Texans give a darn whether a person's a Democrat or a Republican or an independent. They want to see something done."

In the House, Rep. Frank Corte, R-San Antonio, who chairs the Conservative Caucus, said he expected Republicans and Democrats to work together.

"I haven't been able to detect any partisanship. Texas has typically not had a divided house, and the people have benefited from that," he said.

With 139 days left until adjournment, the Legislature faces several tough issues — led by Gov. Bush's call for relief from the $10 billion a year levied in local school property taxes.

Bush promised to spell out a plan around the time of his State of the State address, tentatively scheduled for Jan. 28.

DOE considering Pantex for plutonium processing

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The Pantex plant near Amarillo is closer to becoming a plutonium processing facility after Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary finalized plans Tuesday to move much of the nation's nuclear stockpile there.

O'Leary finalized a $2.3 billion strategy to concentrate plutonium stores at Pantex and two other sites, a plan her department revealed last month.

She also confirmed that the United States will dispose of the radioactive metal in two ways: immobilization in glass or ceramic and burning it as a mixed oxide fuel.

"The Clinton administration believes that the dual-track approach for eliminating excess U.S. weapons plutonium stockpiles best serves our arms reduction and nonproliferation goals," O'Leary said.

"Maintaining both the reactor and immobilization options will provide important insurance against possible difficulties with the implementation of either one and help ensure an early start to this important task."

The consolidation of the nation's weapons-grade plutonium will require upgrades and expansion of the facilities at the Pantex Plant, near Amarillo in the Texas Panhandle, and the Savannah River Site in South Carolina.

Highly enriched uranium will continue to be stored at the government's Y-12 Plant in Tennessee, also up for expansion.

"It's still really vague," said Beverly Gaddis of Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping, a group opposed to expanded operations at Pantex. "Pantex is still on same list of sites that might receive certain things. STAND still has a lot of concerns about whether they want to turn it into plutonium processing site."

The DOE revealed Tuesday that at least eight metric tons of plutonium are destined for immobilization, but the fate of the estimated 30 metric tons in surplus is still in limbo.

"The full extent to which either or both options are implemented will be determined by the results of technology demonstrations, additional environmental reviews and detailed cost proposals," a DOE statement said.

The timing and extent to which each technology is deployed also depends on the results of nonproliferation negotiations with Russia and other countries.

Immobilization is the preferred disposal method among nuclear watchdogs, who don't like the MOX fuel alternative because of fears of increased nuclear waste.

MOX fuel is derived from plutonium for use in existing reactors. The technology currently is in place in Europe but never has been tried here.

Pantex always has dealt with plutonium in its finished product for installation and recovery from nuclear weapons, and the plant's pollution problems haven't been as acute as those at other nuclear facilities.

Gaddis and other opponents of Pantex expansion fear that the plant, one of four installations under consideration for a $1 billion MOX fabrication facility, will become a far worse environmental hazard.

"It's just beginning to unfold kind of the way we thought it would," Ms. Gaddis said. "We're going to follow down that road that we've managed to avoid and now do the kind of work that really causes us problems. It seems a real shame to walk into it right now."

Plutonium from the Rocky Flats Environmental Technology Site in Colorado would be moved to Pantex and Savannah River under the plan as early as this year.

New Braunfels residents tired of roaming deer

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Some New Braunfels residents are fed up with deer that are causing car accidents and damaging residential gardens inside the city limits.

So the City Council is appointing a 15-person committee to study whether the city's growing deer population should be curbed, possibly by trapping and relocating the wayward animals to ranches.

Council members, who voted to form the committee Monday night, stipulated the panel cannot consider hunting the deer.

Earlier discussions had included the possibility of allowing bow hunting in the city. City officials also have said they might want to trap and relocate the deer with the help of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

City Manager Mike Shands said the new committee's first priority likely will be to determine whether the deer pose a problem.

Stacey Robins, whose home in north New Braunfels gets lots of deer traffic, believes the animals need to be controlled.

"We continue to see the deer population grow," Ms. Robins was quoted as saying in Tuesday's New Braunfels Herald-Zeitung. "The food and water supply is not there for them. They are starving and hungry."

Ms. Robins noted that a deer recently got trapped in a fence and was injuring itself. She said she had to call the Humane Society, which was forced to kill the animal.

Many citizens at Monday's council meeting said they wanted to make sure the animals are treated in a humane manner.

Ms. Robins suggested deer could be trapped and their processed meat given to local charities.

Top democrat steps aside from Gingrich investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee's ranking Democrat said Tuesday he was removing himself from the investigation of Speaker Newt Gingrich, bowing to criticism of his role in the handling of a taped phone call involving the House leader.

Meantime, the FBI opened an investigation into whether federal criminal law was broken in the taping and dissemination of the Gingrich telephone call.

Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., said he would step aside "as a matter of conscience" less than a week before the panel was to vote on penalties for Gingrich's violation of House rules.

McDermott left with a parting shot for committee chairwoman Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., who he said had herself violated House rules by refusing to consider the tape as evidence against the speaker.

In a written statement, McDermott said he would leave as soon as Republicans restored the political balance on the committee. They could do so by removing a GOP member — presumably newly appointed Lamar Smith of Texas — leaving four members from each party.

McDermott, who was in his Seattle office, also said there was no guarantee that outside counsel James M. Cole's report would be publicly released or that hearings would be held — although Mrs. Johnson has promised those developments would occur.

"As of today, no public hearing is scheduled and Mr. Cole's report may never see the light of day," McDermott said. "No agreement exists to make either his report or any hearing on the speaker's actions public."

McDermott, apparently referring to the intercepted phone call of Gingrich and other Republicans that he sent to the committee's office, said Gingrich violated his agreement not to orchestrate a response to the ethics violations.

McDermott said the tape showed evidence of the breach. But Johnson refused to accept the recording from McDermott and delivered it instead to the criminal division of the Justice Department.

"Rather than evaluate the evidence of the breach and give it such weight as it is fairly entitled to receive, you, without committee or House approval, have jettisoned the evidence and willfully ignored its content," McDermott said in a letter to Johnson that accompanied a press statement.

"I regard that as a shameful act in conscious avoidance of the search for truth."

McDermott did not say whether he provided the tape to The New York Times, which ran a transcript of the conversation. The recording was apparently made by a Florida couple, who said they gave it to McDermott.

Tuesday evening, FBI Director Louis Freeh informed House Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., that he ordered "an investigation be immediately undertaken based upon the public reporting of a possible illegal telephone interception and the subsequent dissemination of the contents of the telephone call." Hyde had written Freeh requesting this step.

"The opening of this investigation should not be interpreted as conclusive that there were in fact violations of the law," Freeh cautioned.

Federal law prohibits intentional interception of calls from cellular telephones and also the dissemination of any such recording — if the person transmitting it knew the recording was illegal.

Globe agrees to return crime scene photographs

■ After an agreement Boulder County has agreed to drop charges against the tabloid.

Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A supermarket tabloid that ran crime-scene photos of slain 6-year-old beauty queen JonBenet Ramsey agreed Tuesday to return the pictures, along with two others it didn't publish.

In return, Boulder County agreed to drop a lawsuit that sought to block The Globe from publishing any more of the crime-scene photos, said Mike Kahane, a lawyer for the tabloid.

The weekly Globe ran five photos in the issue that hit newsstands on Monday. The photos show a garrote — a cord-wrapped stick that might have been used to strangle JonBenet — and a rope around one of her wrists.

Whoever leaked the pictures could face theft charges, authorities have said. An investigation is under way into how the Globe obtained the photos.

Kahane said that under the agreement, "we deny all wrongdoing, we deny all liability." The 1.3-million-circulation tabloid based in Boca Raton, Fla., also reserves the right to republish any of the photos that it ran Monday, and to publish any material it obtains in the future, he said.

The paper will return two other crime-scene photos that it obtained but did not publish, Kahane said.

Madeleine Mason, deputy county attorney, said the county was more concerned with two photos that The Globe did not run because authorities did not know what they showed.

The agreement was "the best way to resolve the issue," she told a news conference Tuesday.

Police and County Coroner John Meyer have said publication of the photos could damage the investigation by revealing details known only to the killer and police.

"They were stolen from my office," Meyer said of the photos. "No matter what the source was, it's stolen material."

Meanwhile, The Globe announced it will match the Ramseys' $50,000 reward for information leading to arrests in the killing of JonBenet, 1995's Little Miss Colorado.

JonBenet's body was found in the basement of her home Dec. 26 after her mother reported finding a ransom note on a stairway. Police said the girl was strangled but would not confirm reports she was sexually assaulted and her skull fractured.

Disemboweled child to receive cash settlement

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A girl who was disemboweled when her bottom became pinned to the drain of a kiddie pool will receive a total of $30.9 million under a settlement announced Tuesday.

Most of Valerie Lakey's small and large intestines were sucked out in the 1993 accident, and the girl, now 9, must spend at least 11 hours a day being fed intravenously.

On Monday, a state jury awarded the family $25 million in compensatory damages, the biggest personal-injury verdict in North Carolina history. The jury was to begin deciding whether to award punitive damages when the maker of the drain cover, Sta-Rite Industries of Delavan, Wis., agreed to a settlement adding $5.9 million more.

"It was in the best interest of Valerie to get the medical expenses taken care of immediately," said family attorney John Edwards.

Sta-Rite will pay $25 million, while other parties, including Wake County and Medfield Area Recreation Club, agreed to pay $5.9 million.

Valerie, then 5, was playing in the recreation club's wading pool in Cary when she became stuck against the drain cover. Her father, David, and three other adults could not dislodge her, and turning off the pump failed to ease the pressure.

The Lakeys argued that Sta-Rite failed to put sufficient warnings on its drain covers. Sta-Rite contended the cover was installed incorrectly.

The president of Sta-Rite said he felt it best to settle rather than go through a long appeal.

Rodman tops Worst Dressed Woman List

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cross-dressing basketball bad boy Dennis Rodman led Mr. Blackwell's 37th Annual Worst-Dressed Women List, a roll-call of fashion misfits that included Glenn Close, Helen Hunt and Goldie Hawn.

The acid-tongued Blackwell, who was designing dresses for the rich and famous when he originated the list in 1960, annually skewers celebrities in what he says is an effort to encourage fashion consciousness.

This year he included a man, Rodman, for what he said is the basketball star's bad habit of dressing in drag.

"In fishnet and feathers, he's a unisex wreck," Blackwell said in unveiling the list Tuesday.

High Court considers challenge to Georgia's drug law for candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question for the Supreme Court in a case argued Tuesday was whether a Georgia law violates the Constitution in requiring candidates for many state offices to pass a drug test to be placed on the ballot.

Underlying that question was another one: whether the war on drugs has finally gone too far for the Supreme Court.

The likely answer appeared to be that it has.

If Georgia has a justification for its seven-year-old law, the only one of its kind, it was not one that appeared to satisfy the justices as they considered a challenge by three Libertarian Party candidates who, under protest, took and passed the drug test so they could appear on the state ballot in 1994.

Walker L. Chandler, a lawyer who had been the party's candidate for lieutenant governor and was arguing his own case, denounced the law as "cheap symbolism" that violated the Fourth Amendment's prohibition against unreasonable searches.

The justices appeared inclined to agree, pressing a lawyer from the Georgia attorney general's office, Patricia Guilday, to explain the need for a sweeping statute that requires drug tests of candidates for the Georgia Supreme Court and State Legislature as well as for the positions of governor, commissioner of agriculture, secretary of state and many others.

"Is there any place in the record where we might find a specific need for this suspicionless, general search?" Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asked Ms. Guilday. "Are there candidates who turned out to have drug problems?"

The record contained no such evidence, the state's lawyer replied.

O'Connor continued, "Was any evidence offered by the state?"

No, was the answer.

O'Connor persisted: "Is there any evidence anywhere in this record that Georgia has a particular problem" with politicians using illegal drugs?

There was no evidence of problems in the past, Ms. Guilday gamely acknowledged, "and there is no such problem as we sit here today."

O'Connor, who voted in dissent two years ago when the court upheld a random drug-testing program for high-school athletes, was not ready to let go.

"Isn't that what we look for: A special need by the government for a suspicionless search?"

Yes, Ms. Guilday said, her voice barely audible.

"So what is the need Georgia asserts here that is special?" O'Connor asked, closing in.

Ms. Guilday replied that the officials covered by the law were "trustees and servants of the public" who could properly be held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary citizens. It was important to send that message to the public, she said.

Other members of the court had questions of their own.

"So this is not a test designed to catch people," Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg said. She continued: "It is in part symbolic. And then we have a Constitution with a Fourth Amendment in it. If we're deciding what lesson to give the public, doesn't the Constitution come first? Doesn't the Fourth Amendment always win on that balance unless you have a good reason?"

Catching drug users might be a good reason for drug-testing, but "here that's not true," Ginsburg said.

Ms. Guilday responded, "People have a right to know" about candidates' drug use.

That answer got the attention of Justice John Paul Stevens.

"If you rely on the public's right to know everything about a candidate," Stevens said, "it seems to me you can justify a search of a whole house for private papers" that might reveal evidence of wrongdoing.

INS to hire 2,000 more agents to protect borders

■ A record new budget allows for expansion of the immigration service

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With a record $3.1 billion budget, the nation's immigration service is allocating $400 million in new money to deter illegal crossings along the Southwest border and remove undocumented aliens from the country's interior.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service is using part of the extra money provided by Congress to hire 2,000 new personnel — including 1,000 new Border Patrol agents and 350 inspectors at land border crossings and airports.

"Our first priority remains to secure the border," INS Commissioner Doris Meissner told a news conference Tuesday.

California will gain 506 of the new agents, inspectors and support personnel, followed by Texas with 479, Arizona with 224, New Mexico with 98 and New York with 62. "We are continuing to concentrate these agents in the highest illegal immigration corridors," Meissner said.

Once chronically underfunded, INS has seen its fortunes improve dramatically in recent years while other federal agencies have had to scale back. The budget for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 is more than double the $1.5 billion INS received at the start of the Clinton administration in 1993.

"Our borders have been greatly strengthened with more personnel and better technology, workplace enforcement has gotten tougher, and a record number of criminal aliens have been deported," President Clinton said in a statement. "Today's announcement represents continuing wise management of the additional resources requested by me and provided by the Congress."

That assessment wasn't shared by the House immigration subcommittee chairman. "The INS track record can be greatly improved," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas. "Last year they deported less than 2 percent of the illegal aliens currently living in the United States. Simply doing better is not good enough."

And the new chairman of the Senate immigration subcommittee proposed splitting the INS into separate enforcement and service agencies.

"We should not have a single agency charged with catching criminals and keeping out illegals while at the same time letting in relatives, skilled workers and true refugees," said Sen. Spencer Abraham, R-Mich.

Meissner denied any inherent conflict in the dual roles her agency performs. "I don't think any ... macro changes such as that are called for," she said of Abraham's proposal.

Beyond the new hires, the nearly $200 million in new funding to beef up enforcement along the U.S.-Mexican border includes $24 million to speed authorized crossings at border checkpoints, and new technologies such as infrared scopes and motion detectors to deter unlawful entries.

Another $114 million is dedicated to improve the agency's detention and removal of criminal and other illegal aliens. INS anticipates removing 93,000 criminal and unlawful aliens this year, up from 68,000 last year.

And $23 million is earmarked to help INS process a record number of citizenship applications, expected to reach 1.6 million or 1.7 million this year — up from 1.3 million last year.

Republicans sharply criticized INS during the campaign season, accusing the agency of allowing thousands of non-eligible foreigners to gain citizenship in an effort to win votes for Democrats. Congressional hearings are pending.

The new funding, in part in response to the surge of citizenship applications, also is for "strengthening the checks and the balances in the citizenship process," Meissner said.

Babbling man admits to breaking out of jail

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When a babbling, seemingly deranged man was picked up in a Texas bus station, medical workers ignored his claims that he had escaped from prison in Pittsburgh.

"Nobody really took the guy seriously," said Larry Johnson of Houston's Ben Taub Hospital. "These people always see people who claim to be who they're not: Visitors from Mars or the CIA."

Thomas Berkelbaugh, however, was exactly who he said he was: one of six inmates who used power tools to tunnel under a maximum-security prison wall and up through an outside warehouse last week. The others remain at large.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Decide your priorities and stick to them. Jumping from one project to another will backfire. A new admirer adds pizzazz to your social life. Pay special attention to security matters in May. An ounce of prevention will prevent costly losses. Next fall, your ability to spot creative talent helps you land an important client or contract. Be willing to travel on short notice. Marital tensions fade when spouses agree to treat each other with more respect. Be considerate.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., jazz drummer legend Gene Krupa, singer Charo, tennis player Mary Pierce.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Improving a difficult work relationship will bring multiple rewards. Admit earlier mistakes and vow to do better. Someone's body language is more revealing than words.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sweeping a misunderstanding under the rug could lead to bigger problems later on. Talk things out. A budget revision will help relieve financial pressures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stop being such a bear when things go awry. Your loved ones are more tolerant and supportive than you deserve. Let them know how much you care. Your powers of persuasion are at a peak.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An orderly work and home environment helps you stay on track. Turn on the charm when dealing with a co-worker who is sometimes uncooperative. Special causes attract your attention now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Influential people are impressed by your take-charge attitude. Investing in new work clothes will enhance your image. Welcome an authority figure's interest in your efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Refuse to let emotionalism set the tone today. Family members and business associates value your objectivity. Avoid taking sides in petty disputes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your energy level is high; use your time wisely. Planting the seeds for a special project involves gaining the support of a particular group. Take things one step at a time. Profits will soon soar!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An authority figure may not understand your generation's concerns. Avoid bringing up politics in work-related discussions. Your romantic partner is the best person to listen to your hopes and plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Steer clear of pessimists; they will only dampen your enthusiasm for a plan that could very well succeed. Investigate new vocational opportunities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dress for success. Update old wardrobe favorites with new accessories. A romance that has stood the test of time could change your views on a permanent commitment. Go ahead; take a chance on love!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use your business acumen to determine if a get-rich-quick scheme is viable. Romance and finance go hand-in-hand now. It is wise, however, to keep your loved ones out of your workplace.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cultural events hold special appeal this month. Your appreciation for someone's artistic efforts inspire you to be more creative. Take your pick from weekend invitations.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣

The 1997 World Bridge Olympiad was played on the island of Rhodes. France won the open series and the United States took the women's crown. The standard of play in both events was high. Starring on this hand was Patrick Huang of Taipei, who made his international debut 30 years ago.

Note that, over three no trump, Huang did not bother to bid hearts.

If partner held better hearts than spades, the holding would help limit possible losers in that suit, and the spades were solid enough to need no support from partner.

There was little hope for 10 tricks as the cards lay — until West made the unfortunate lead of the ace of clubs. Huang was quick to take advantage.

The opening lead was ruffed and, after drawing trumps in three rounds, the ten of diamonds was led and covered by the jack. Huang ducked in dummy. West continued with a diamond to East's king, and the latter returned a heart. Declarer shot up with the king and, when West discarded a diamond, exited with the jack of hearts.

After winning with the queen of hearts, East was faced with a Hobson's choice. Since a club return would bring dummy back to life, East was forced to return a heart. But that allowed declarer to take the marked finesse of the seven of hearts, and South lost only two diamond tricks and a heart.

Owner of Nat King Cole's childhood home hopes a buyer will restore it

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The childhood home of Nat King Cole is looking very forgettable these days.

The modest house, vacant for a year, bears "No trespassing" signs that didn't stop vagrants from kicking in a back door and moving in.

Nat King Cole lived in the house in Montgomery until 1922.

"That is why we want to sell it and have it restored as soon as possible," said Shirley A. Watkins, who inherited the house last year and hopes a buyer will turn it into a historic landmark.

Cole, whose "Unforgettable" is a popular music classic, was born in Montgomery in 1919 and lived in the house until 1922. He died in 1965.

The house's appraised value is $30,250.

Mary Ann Neeley, director of Montgomery's Landmarks Foundation, said that the group is concerned but that it would be expensive to restore the house.

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — Things are anything but harmonious at Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Eighteen of Tanglewood's 22 full-time summer faculty members have signed a letter protesting the resignation of Richard Ortner, the top administrator at Tanglewood Music Center, The Berkshire Eagle reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said Ortner posted a letter of resignation in December at Boston Symphony Hall, saying he was leaving at the behest of symphony conductor Seiji Ozawa. The symphony has authority over Tanglewood, a music festival, and the Music Center on its grounds.

The newspaper's sources said Ozawa and Ortner tangled over two projects close to the conductor's heart, and Ozawa asked Ortner to leave.

A source who saw the teachers' letter told the Eagle that the signers voiced "deep concern about the health and creative future" of the Music Center and were disturbed because Ozawa didn't consult them first.

Ortner was returning from Europe and could not be reached. Ozawa was in Japan. Tanglewood officials did not immediately return calls for comment.

CLEVELAND — The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame is gathering no moss, changing the date and place for its upcoming induction ceremonies.

The Bee Gees, Buffalo Springfield, Crosby, Stills & Nash, the Jackson 5, Jonie Mitchell, Parliament-Funkadelic and the Young Rascals so far are still among the artists to be inducted.

Rising production costs drove organizers to drop plans for a dinner-award program in a tent outside the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum. It would cost too much to erect a tent big enough for the 1,500 people expected, Suzan Evans, director of the hall of fame's foundation, said Monday.

Ms. Evans said several other locations in Cleveland are being considered and she hopes to have a decision by the end of the week.

The date also has tentatively been changed to May 6 instead of May 15.

The annual ceremonies are $1,500-a-plate galas staged as fund-raisers for the nonprofit foundation.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Queen Margrethe II began celebrating her silver jubilee Tuesday with a turnout that could make Britain's troubled royals envious.

Flag-waving Danes lined the streets in bitterly cold Roskilde, 25 miles west of Copenhagen, as the royal family arrived for a memorial service for Margrethe's father, King Frederik IX.

In Copenhagen, hundreds more eagerly waited to get a glimpse of the 56-year-old queen outside the Christiansborg castle.

Since Margrethe ascended the throne on Jan. 15, 1972, Danes' enthusiasm for the monarchy has grown. Margrethe has inspired affection with regal pomp, a wry sense of humor and her accomplishments as a painter and translator.

A quarter of a century ago, nearly half the country wanted to eliminate the monarchy, but today 68 percent support it and only 22 percent want a republic, according to a recent poll.

FRANKLIN, Tenn. — Jennifer O'Neill will face trial in March on drunken driving and speeding charges.

A March 27 trial date was set Monday.

O'Neill, who starred in the "Summer of '42," was stopped March 13 by a state trooper who said she was going 95 mph in a 65 mph zone. The trooper said that he smelled alcohol in her car and that she failed a sobriety test.

O'Neill, who lives in this Nashville suburb, is free on $500 bail.

South Texas begins to thaw out but thousands still without power

HOUSTON (AP) — The frigid weather loosened its grip on ice-crusted South Texas as temperatures began inching above the freezing mark Tuesday, but more than 100,000 residents remained cold and in the dark because of power outages.

The cold wave and ice storm that swept across the state beginning over the weekend is blamed for at least 13 deaths, most of them in traffic accidents, authorities said.

Some roads and highway bridges remained treacherous as far south as the Kenedy County, just north of the Rio Grande Valley, but there was no repeat of Monday's hundreds of collisions.

Improving conditions allowed state transportation officials early Tuesday afternoon to reopen for the first time in 20 hours a 200-mile stretch of Interstate 10 in West Texas from Junction to Fort Stockton.

In Houston, people downtown had a new hazard to consider — ice falling from the city's skyscrapers. As the temperatures rose, ice that had coated the exterior of buildings began tumbling to the streets.

Barricades were erected on sidewalks around the 75-story Texas Commerce Tower, the tallest building in the Southwest, and the 35-story angular twin-tower Pennzoil Place across the street to keep pedestrians from being pelted by the flying chunks of ice.

In Austin, the Texas legislature began its biennial session but the number of spectators was down because of difficulties getting into the city.

A winter weather advisory remained in effect throughout the day for south central Texas and the Hill Country with temperatures near or below freezing generally north of a line from Del Rio to College Station. Light freezing rain and sleet was reported in the Hill Country.

The most serious power problems were in southeast Texas, where 53,500 Entergy customers in the three counties around Beaumont and Port Arthur and some 50,000 Houston Lighting & Power Co. users remained in the dark. Still, that was an improvement from the nearly 300,000 customers who were out 24 hours earlier.

"We're continuing to have trees and tree limbs fall onto our lines," Entergy spokesman Kim McMurray said. "We'll get one area put back on and then a tree limb falls and knocks that same area out or some other."

Company crews from other states were being brought in to help.

"We hope that the bulk will be back on by Friday but there may be some that linger into the weekend," he said.

HL&P officials hoped to have 80 percent of their outages fixed by Tuesday night.

"I understand what they're going through," Charles Jones, who was without power in his Houston home, said. "They have a lot of lines and you've just got to be patient."

Most schools in the Houston area remained shut Tuesday for a second straight day, but it appeared classes would start resuming today. Texas A&M University, which had been closed, said it would begin its spring semester today, two days late.

Greyhound bus service in Houston also was idled Tuesday for a second consecutive day, forcing travelers to pass the time in the terminal. Some slept in parked buses.

"We've been sitting around talking to people," said Manuel Hernandez, who was trying to get home to Laredo. "It's a little boring, but you do what you can. You make the best of it."

At Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, where American Airlines cancelled 600 out of 1,560 flights Monday, only 160 departures were put off Tuesday as temperatures warmed.

Wells injured

SAN DIEGO (AP) — New York Yankees left-hander David Wells broke his pitching hand in a fight and will miss the start of spring training, his agent said Tuesday night.

Wells could face felony assault charges after being involved in a fight Sunday night that left two other men injured, according to police.

Raiders, Sooners on rebound path

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — Kelvin Sampson usually gives his Oklahoma basketball team Sundays off, although he didn't this past weekend.

A 27-point loss to Iowa State irritated Sampson enough that he ordered his players in Sunday night for what he called a "character-building" workout.

"Sometimes you get a feeling that you're a little bit better than you really are," he said. "Sometimes you need to remember your humble beginnings, and that's what we've been trying to get across to our team."

The Sooners started out 7-0, including a rout of Purdue, but now are 9-3 overall, 1-1 in the Big 12. They figure to get another test Wednesday night when No. 25 Texas Tech visits.

The Red Raiders (10-3, 1-1) have already proven they can win on the road. They opened conference play by beating Oklahoma State in Stillwater last week, and seven of their victories have come away from home. But they enter this game after losing to Colorado, a game that snapped their 35-game home unbeaten streak.

"It doesn't get any easier at home or on the road," coach James Dickey said. "This is a great league. You have some of the outstanding coaches in the country, some of the best players, and these coaches get their teams ready to play. There are great homecourt advantages.

'Sometimes you get a feeling that you're a little bit better than you really are. Sometimes you need to remember your humble beginnings, and that's what we've been trying to get across to our team.'
— Kelvin Sampson, Oklahoma basketball coach

"It's only going to get tougher as we progress through the conference season," he said. "We're going to have to become mentally tougher as we go along."

The Red Raiders have one of the league's best inside-outside combinations in center Tony Battie and guard Cory Carr. Battie has been magnificent in the two conference games, scoring a career-high 31 against Colorado and 25 against Oklahoma State.

Carr has struggled with his shot of late. He was 6-for-19 against Colorado, 3-for-13 against Oklahoma State.

Dickey said Carr needs to do a better job adjusting to defenses that are adjusting to stop his outside threat.

"Right now Cory's put it on the floor in the heart of the defense when he doesn't have the opportunity," he said. "We have to get him the ball in the open floor more where he can create, and he's going to have to work more without the ball in his hands."

Oklahoma only trailed Iowa State by five early in the second half before getting steamrolled. Sampson said he wasn't as upset about the loss as he was about the way the Sooners lost — he didn't feel they played as hard as they had in their previous games.

"I thought the things we had built this program around and the things we wanted to be our strengths, the way we wanted to play, were certainly not demonstrated in that game," he said.

AUSTRALIAN OPEN TENNIS

AP Laserphoto
Players in the Australian Open, like Pete Sampras above, are complaining about the yellow Slazenger balls being used. Players think it is a conspiracy to slow the game.

Players to Open: New balls, please

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Tennis hackers who play with the same can of balls for three sets, or sometimes three weeks, wouldn't work up much sympathy for the players whining at the Australian Open.

The way the players are carrying on, the Slazenger balls used at the year's opening Grand Slam event are so soft, so heavy, so dead, they're ruining everyone's arms and wrecking the sport.

"New balls, please," the umpire's traditional call for a change every nine games, is taking on a different meaning, especially with $7.6 million at stake.

Pete Sampras claims he has to wrap his tired arm in ice for 20 minutes after every practice and match because of the balls. Goran Ivanisevic fears the men's power game will soon resemble a women's baseline lob-fest. Boris Becker blames his first-round loss on the balls.

Tournament officials, not surprisingly, say the balls are just fine and no different from those last year when no one complained. They have tests to prove it, using technology that would make NASA proud. The balls are just as yellow as ever, bounce just as high, and the players don't have to pay for them.

"We would have rocks in our head (to change)," tournament director Paul McNamee said. "The tournament has had no interest in slowing the balls down and has no interest in doing so in the future. There is no hidden agenda, no anything."

That's not how the players see it. They see a conspiracy to slow the game, produce longer rallies and offset some of the power of the big, booming rackets. The trouble, the players say, is that soft balls cause them to swing harder to generate their usual speed on serves and groundstrokes.

"I haven't had arm trouble for a couple of years, but my arm's been feeling a little bit heavy the past three or four days and I think that is because of the balls," Sampras said after a week-long exhibition and a first-round 6-2, 6-4, 6-2 victory Tuesday over Dinu Pescariu.

Sampras said he'd hate to see how his arm would feel if he played with these balls every week.

"It's killing the game," he said. "I hit a couple of aces today but not many. (Actually, he had 12, typical for him in three quick sets). The balls have always been pretty soft here but it seems like this year they are a little inconsistent; some are soft, some are okay.

"It's tough to put the ball away, to be aggressive but at this point there's no reason to complain because they (tournament officials) can't do anything."

The problem, Sampras said, is caused by money and competition between the ball manufacturers.

"A lot of these tournaments have their deals with Penn and Wilson, and this tournament has a deal with Slazenger," he said, not mentioning that Wimbledon also uses Slazenger balls and he's won there three times and here once. "It seems each week on the tour, it's a different ball. It would be nice to get one ball, maybe not this one. But I think this ball would be OK indoors. I think you've got to even it out a little bit. If it's a faster

Bill Parcells will bring prepared team to party

By Michael Madden
N.Y. Times News Service

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — At 12:30 Sunday afternoon, just before kickoff in Green Bay, it was the Jacksonville Jaguars who were regarded as having the hottest and possibly most complete offense in the National Football League.

By 7:15 Sunday evening, after the last extra point of the day, those Jaguars had not been able to score a touchdown, money talked in Las Vegas and all of America heard that Green Bay was favored by 13 1/2 points over New England.

"Ridiculous," was the immediate reaction. The Patriot defense is now playing as well as — if not better than — the only other defense still playing football. Bill Parcells has his defense exploding to its peak at precisely the right moment.

And then the news stories filtered in from across America and, except for the loyalists in New England, the tone of them echoed Las Vegas' voice, that the Patriots had little to no chance against the Packers. "Another NFC blowout," was a common theme.

This will build. The avalanche already has begun, and in 10 days, the gargantua that is Super Bowl media coverage will have the Packers invincible, the Patriots an incredible good-luck story.

And Bill Parcells will be giddy with delight. But he'll show no one the giddiness, of course.

"I can assure you that a week from Thursday," said Parcells, "this team will be ready to play a game."

Parcells has often said his ideal game has to have the key factor of his team being the huge underdog. The master motivator, Parcells will milk this perception, and the Patriot defense will be even more aggressive and fierce than it has been the last two weeks.

And prepared. It's not wise to toss around hyperbole at this time of the year, but seldom has a defense been better prepared than the Patriots' the last two weeks, particularly Sunday against Jacksonville.

Jacksonville had a mobile quarterback who could pass and pass very well on the run.

Jacksonville also had a bruising running back who had been running over December, then January, then everyone. These are the opposite ends of the offensive spectrum — mobile QB who can pass and bruising runner — but the Patriots took both weapons away in one and the same fell swoop.

It is wise to listen to Parcells' words. There are no great teams in football now, he has said from Smithfield to snowfall, what with parity, expansion, the salary cap and free agency diluting team talent and chemistry.

These Packers are not the 1985 Chicago Bears, the team Parcells said was the best he ever coached against (and was the team that crushed the Patriots in Super Bowl XX). The 49ers may have been the team of the '80s but it was those Bears who were far and away the best team for one season in that decade.

"A small bit of preparation," can greatly affect results of Police charge woman for false charges

Associated Press

DALLAS — Police filed charges Tuesday against a woman who falsely accused Dallas Cowboys Michael Irvin and Erik Williams of sexually assaulting her at gunpoint.

Nina Shahravan, 23, of Mesquite, could face a maximum of six months in jail and a $2,000 fine for making a false report to police, a misdemeanor offense.

Shahravan told police that Williams and another man raped her while Irvin held a gun to her head at Williams' Far North Dallas home on Dec. 29. Police acknowledged the accusation at a Dec. 31 press conference and named the two players as suspects.

When confronted with evidence that Irvin couldn't have been at Williams' house at the time Shahravan claimed, she recanted her story last Friday. Police announced soon after that confession that there would be no charges.

A man who answered the telephone at Shahravan's parents' home Tuesday said she was not there. The woman has been in hiding since she made the initial accusation.

Williams' attorney, Peter Ginsberg, said he hopes the charge against Shahravan doesn't signal an end to the investigation.

"I hope that law enforcement authorities are pursuing the possibility that there were others who acted in concert with the complainant and I also hope that authorities are examining the police's own conduct in this investigation," he

Hockey name game brings in 3,074 contest entries

Staff Report

Any worries about enough interest for a hockey team in the Permian Basin might have been all for naught.

That is if the "name the Odessa hockey team" is any indication of the what the Permian Basin's reaction might be.

A total of 3,674 entries were received and 1,147 different names were suggested for the team which begins play in the soon-to-be, 10-city Western Professional Hockey League team in October of this year.

"The response has been beyond our wildest dreams," said team general manager Monty Hoppel, who is attending the WPHL All-Star Game in Belton today. "We have known that the fans of the Permian Basin were outstanding, and they have proven it again."

The finalist in the name search are — Dusters, Dust Devils, Sandstorm, Jackalopes (Jacks), Wind, Meteors, Roughnecks, Tornadoes, Twisters and Tumbleweeds.

Along with the massive number of entries, the hockey team has also sold in the neighborhood of 800 season tickets. That number is impressive, considering the offical announcement of an existing team was just a month-and-a-half ago and the dropping of the first puck is still a number of months away. Team representatives are very enthusiastic. None of the other three expansion teams have settled on a mascot.

"It is beyond our wildest dreams. When looking at 4,000 entries in a market this size, it says great deal," the team's director of media relations Bob Hards said. "We are in the beginning stages, and the reaction from folks has been outstanding.

"I didn't know there were so many hockey fans. I think that we are all surprised and pleased, in same breath."

The original list was narrowed down to the 10 finalists according to the following criteria: Is the name unique?, potential for a mascot, and does the name lend itself to marketing and the media? Also, a large number of the entries received could not be considered due to copyright and/or trademark infringement that would have incurred. For that reason, any names already connected with a professional sports franchise were eliminated.

"We want the name to be ours and ours alone," Hoppel said.

The sports fans of Midland/Odessa will also be responsible for voting on the official name of the team.

People interested in voting can mail an entry with their top three picks to;

Name the team contest, P.O. Box 51187, Midland, Tx., 79710 or fax them to 915-683-0994. Entries can also be dropped off at the Christensen Stadium or Ector County Coliseum offices.

The official announcement of the voting process will last approximately three weeks. The name, official logo and contest winner will be unveiled at a news conference at that time.

Rockets run over Knicks

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Charles Barkley had 29 points, 12 rebounds and no fights with Charles Oakley as the Houston Rockets beat the New York Knicks for the first time since Game 7 of the 1994 NBA Finals, 106-86 Tuesday night.

The Rockets snapped a four-game losing streak to the Knicks and broke New York's four-game winning streak.

All eyes were on Barkley and Oakley early in the game. Oakley body-slammed Barkley to the floor during an exhibition game in October and received a two-game suspension and $10,000 fine. Barkley drew a one-game suspension and $5,000 fine.

Barkley talked more trash than usual and dominated the matchup in the first half, scoring 24 points as the Rockets quickly established command and opened a 63-43 halftime lead.

"I wanted to kill Oakley for what he did in the preseason," Barkley said in a post-game inverview on TNT.

Celtics 116, Warriors 108

BOSTON — Rick Fox scored 23 points, Eric Williams had 21 and both made key baskets down the stretch as Boston broke a two-game losing streak by beating Golden State.

Joe Smith scored 33 and Latrell Sprewell had 32 for the Warriors, whose road record dropped to 5-12 as they completed the third stop of a six-game trip.

Boston opened its biggest lead of the night, 97-84, on a jump shot by Fox with 8:22 left in the final quarter. Sprewell's 3-point shot with 5:59 remaining cut the lead to 100-95, but the Celtics answered with a 7-1 run to make it 107-96.

Hawks 95, Timberwolves 93

ATLANTA — Former Midland College star Mookie Blaylock made two free throws with five-tenths of a second remaining to give Atlanta a victory over Minnesota to extend the Hawks' home winning streak to 14 games.

■ NBA Roundup

Sam Mitchell hit one of two free throws with seven seconds left to tie it at 93. On Atlanta's next possession, Blaylock drove the lane and drew a foul from Mitchell to set up Atlanta's seventh consecutive victory overall.

The Timberwolves, who had their club record-tying, three-game road winning streak halted, could not get off a shot in the final half-second.

Suns 110, Nuggets 101

PHOENIX — Kevin Johnson scored 25 points and recorded his 6,000th career assist as Phoenix rallied in the second half to beat Denver.

Cedric Ceballos added 23 points and rookie center Loren Meyer contributed season-highs of 18 points and 11 rebounds for the Suns, who beat the Nuggets for the first time in three tries this season

Bulls 108, Bullets 107

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 39 points, including eight in the final two minutes, and Dennis Rodman reached 10,000 career rebounds as Chicago beat Washington.

Scottie Pippen added 25 points and made three key 3-pointers in the final quarter for Chicago, which won its seventh straight.

Illinois shocks No. 7 Minnesota

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Kevin Turner scored 24 points, including three free throws over the final 36 seconds, as Illinois beat No. 7 Minnesota 96-90 Tuesday night to snap the Golden Gophers' 10-game winning streak.

The Gophers (15-2, 4-1 Big Ten) led for most of the second half, but Illinois came back behind some scrappy defense and a 23-15 rebound advantage in the second half. Minnesota entered the game holding opponents to 60 points per game.

Chris Gandy's 3-pointer with 3:16 left gave the Illini (13-4, 3-2) an 84-82 lead. Minnesota pulled within 87-86 with 1:39 left on Russ Archambault's 3-pointer.

But Archambault fouled out 28 seconds later, followed by Quincy Lewis and Sam Jacobson, as Illinois made six free throws down the stretch to seal the win.

Kiwane Garris also scored 24 points for the Illini, including four free throws in the final two minutes as he finished 13-of-14 from the line. Gandy scored 14 points and grabbed nine rebounds.

Minnesota led 74-68 with 6:26 left as Charles Thomas converted a three-point play. Illinois responded with a 9-4 run capped by Gandy's fast break layup that brought the Illini within 78-77 with 5:26 to go.

No. 5 Kentucky 86, No. 21 Georgia 65

ATHENS, Ga. — No. 5 Kentucky rebounded from a rare Southeastern Conference loss, getting 24 points from Derek Anderson and a strong first-half performance from its bench in a rout of No. 21 Georgia.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The Wildcats (15-2, 3-1) broke open a close game late in the first half with one of their patented defense-generated runs. The Wildcats outscored Georgia 15-6 over the final 5:43 of the half to build a 40-26 lead.

The Bulldogs (12-3, 1-2) never cut the margin below 12 points in the second half even though Kentucky was plagued by serious foul trouble. With more than eight minutes remaining, many in the sellout crowd at Stegeman Coliseum began leaving while the small contingent of Wildcat fans chanted "Go Big Blue!"

No. 16 Villanova 68, Notre Dame 57

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Alvin Williams scored seven of his 16 points during a second-half run that sealed No. 16 Villanova's victory over Notre Dame, a second straight game where the Wildcats were affected by technical fouls.

In their loss to Miami on Saturday, freshman Tim Thomas called a timeout the Wildcats didn't have with .8 seconds to play in a tie game and the Hurricanes made two free throws for the victory.

On Tuesday, two technical fouls, one against Thomas, almost cost the Wildcats (13-3, 4-2).

Women's Top 25

No. 10 North Carolina 62, Wake Forest 55

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Tracy Reid scored six of her 23 points in the final 3 1/2 minutes to help No. 10 North Carolina stay unbeaten in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Jessica Gaspar had 12 points, including a 3-pointer with 4:14 left that gave North Carolina (13-1, 4-0 ACC) the lead for good at 53-52. Reid followed with six unanswered points. Her turnaround jumper with 2:08 remaining put the Tar Heels up 59-52.

Sophomore Chanel Wright added 14 points as North Carolina won its sixth straight.

No. 22 Auburn 89, South Alabama 56

AUBURN, Ala. — Laticia Morris hit all 12 of her shots and scored a career-high 33 points to lead No. 22 Auburn over South Alabama.

Tara Williams also had a career-high 30 points as the Tigers (11-4) jumped to a 49-27 halftime lead and cruised from there.

Morris' shooting performance was the best in Auburn history, surpassing a 10-for-10 effort by Vickie Orr in the 1987-88 season.

No. 17 LSU 86, Lamar 57

BATON ROUGE, La. — Pietra Gay with 22 points led four LSU starters in double figures as the 17th-ranked Lady Tigers beat Lamar.

LSU (14-0) extended the nation's longest winning streak to 15 games. The 14-0 start is the best ever for LSU.

Kentucky 79, No. 18 W. Kentucky 73

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Nikki Hay scored 16 points to lead six Kentucky players in double figures to defeat No. 18 W. Kentucky.

Hay scored seven points, including two 3-pointers, during a 17-2 spurt to start the second half as the Wildcats pulled ahead 55-36.

Baylor is answer for Missouri losing streak

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Jason Sutherland had 19 points and Kelly Thames led an early-second half run that put the game away as Missouri ended a school-record four-game home conference losing streak with an 82-66 victory over Baylor on Tuesday night.

Tyron Lee added 18 points for Missouri (9-7, 1-3 Big 12), which also had begun the conference schedule with three losses overall for the first time since 1985.

Sutherland had four 3-pointers and made 5 of 6 free throws when he was fouled behind the 3-point line, then added a layup late in the game. Missouri was a season-high 11-for-21 from 3-point range, with Tyron Lee also hitting four and scoring 16 points, and Baylor made eight 3-pointers.

Thames, who was scoreless in the first half, had nine points in the first 5:10 of the second half. Missouri broke open a close game with a 17-4 run that actually began late in the first half, making it 49-35.

The numbers in the run were similar to what happened to Baylor against Kansas in an 87-68 loss on Saturday. Kansas put that game away with a 16-0 run at the start of the second half.

Thames added 12 points and eight rebounds for Missouri, topping 1,000 career points in the process. Jeff Hafer had 10 points, including three dunks.

Five more cities bid for NHL teams

NEW YORK (AP) — If the NHL is determined to go to 30 teams by 2000, it has plenty of cities from which to choose.

The league concluded two days of presentations from cities seeking expansion franchises on Tuesday, listening to representatives from five more communities.

Appearing before an executive committee of the board of governors were groups from Hampton Roads, Va.; Oklahoma City; Nashville, Tenn.; Atlanta; and Raleigh-Durham, N.C. On Monday, three delegations from Houston and others from Hamilton, Ontario; Minneapolis-St. Paul; and Columbus, Ohio, made their pitches.

"We were impressed overall by the quality of the presentations, the quality of the applicants, the applications themselves, and we're going to move forward over the next month to evaluate and analyze everything we've heard," NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said. "The gentlemen that met with the applicants today — that is the executive committee and the few governors who joined us — were all going to get together in the middle of February and see what we've all concluded with the benefit of some further thought and analysis over the next few weeks."

Nashville, which lured the NFL Houston Oilers for delivery in 1998, would like a hockey team for its new downtown arena.

"We just emphasized we have everything in place right now," said Craig Leipold, a Wisconsin businessman involved with the Nashville bid. "We're ready now. We're ready to go. That's the message we gave them and I feel good about our presentation."

Atlanta, which lost an NHL expansion franchise when the Flames moved to Calgary in 1980, hopes to replace that team in a new arena with Ted Turner heading the ownership group.

Stan Kasten, president of the NBA's Hawks and baseball's Braves, made Atlanta's presentation to the board.

"They asked the right questions that owners of a league would want to know about prospective new partners," Kasten said. "I've been on the other side of the table in two different sports and they asked the same questions that I have always wanted to know on the other side.

"If I had ever seen a group like ours come in with strength in marketing, arena and history, I would have been very happy sitting on the other side of the table. I thought we made a strong bid and would be an outstanding member of the NHL."

The league has made no commitments but the speculation is that it would add two teams in 1998 and two more in 2000 with each team carrying a purchase price of between $75 million and $80 million.

Four new teams would increase the NHL to 30 teams. The NFL has 30 teams and major league baseball will reach 30 in 1998 when expansion teams in Phoenix and Tampa Bay begin play. The NBA has 29 teams with no immediate plans for expansion.

"We're not in any rush, and if we do it, we're going to do it in an orderly fashion," Bettman said. "We're trying to do this is a very careful, considered way. We want to make sure there are no missteps."

Penguins run unbeaten streak to 12 games

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Patrick Lalime improved to 12-0-2, matching the best start by a rookie goaltender since the 1967 NHL expansion, and the Pittsburgh Penguins ran their unbeaten streak to 12 games by beating Dallas 3-1 Tuesday night.

Jaromir Jagr's league-leading 39th and 40th goals broke a second-period tie and the Penguins, the NHL's best home club (14-3-3), fought off the tight-checking Stars, the league's best road team (14-7-1).

Lalime, who became the Penguins' starting goaltender only after Ken Wregget and Tom Barrasso were injured, turned away 30 of 31 shots to match the 14-game unbeaten streaks of Montreal's Ken Dryden (12-0-2 in 1970-71) and Boston's Ross Brooks (11-0-3 in 1972-73) at the start of their careers.

The 22-year-old Lalime can set the unofficial record for longest unbeaten streak by a goaltender at the start of his career by winning Wednesday.

Boxing Hall

CANASTOTA, N.Y. (AP) — A brief look at the 1997 inductees into the International Boxing Hall of Fame:

RICHARD FOX—Author and publisher of several boxing books, including "Famous Fights in the Prize Ring" in 1877.

PETE HERMAN—Born Feb. 12, 1896 in New Orleans. Known for quick hands and defensive skills. Career spanned 1912-1922. Won world bantamweight title from Kid Williams in 1917 and held it until Joe Lynch won by decision in 1920. Regained the crown from Lynch in 1921 and lost it again later that year to Johnny Buff. 94-26-14 with 21 knockouts. Died April 13, 1973.

JOE HUMPHREYS—Born Oct. 19, 1872. Nicknamed "Joe the Beaut" because of his handsome looks and tenor voice. Humphreys began announcing fights in 1890 and continued until the year he died, 1936. Announced approximately 60,000 fights. Died July 11, 1936.

JOE JEANNETTE—Born Aug. 26, 1879 in North Bergen, N.J. Top heavyweight contender who possessed vicious body attack. A black, his race kept him from title shot. Between 1905 and 1917, he fought future heavyweight champion Jack Johnson eight times. Retired from the ring in 1919 with 117-19-15 record. Died July 2, 1958.

DON KING—Born Aug. 20, 1931 in Cleveland. Promoted more than 300 championship fights, including Ali-Frazier III, Foreman-Ali, Leonard-Duran I, Tyson-Douglas, Tyson-Holyfield, Chavez-Camacho, Tyson-Spinks. Promoted the "Grand Slam of Boxing" card in Mexico that broke boxing attendance record with 136,274 spectators. Named promoter of the century by WBA and IBF and greatest all-time promoter by WBC.

FREDDIE MILLER—Born April 3, 1911 in Cincinnati. A left-hander, he ruled featherweight division from 1933-1936. Won title by defeating Tommy Paul. Career record 212-27-6 with 44 knockouts. Died May 8, 1962.

TOM MOLINEAUX—Born March 23, 1784 in Georgetown, S.C. He fought other slaves under his master's last name and eventually won his freedom. Traveled to England in 1810 and became first American challenger to the world heavyweight title. Died in Galway, Ireland, Aug. 4, 1818.

SUGAR RAY LEONARD—Born May 17, 1956 in Palmer Park, Md. Won light welterweight gold medal at the 1976 Olympics. Won welterweight title in 1979 by stopping Wilfred Benitez. Lost title to Roberto Duran in June 1980 and regained it from him in November 1980 in the "No Mas" fight. Won world junior middleweight title from Ayub Kalule in 1981. Unified welterweight titles with 14th-round KO of Thomas Hearns in 1981. Defeated Marvin Hagler in 1987 for middleweight title. Won the WBC light heavyweight and super middleweight titles in 1989. Record is 36-2-1 with 25 knockouts.

LUIS RODRIGUEZ—Born June 17, 1937 in Camaguey, Cuba. Began pro career in 1956. A slick counterpuncher, he won the world welterweight title from Emile Griffith in 1963, only to lose it back to Griffith three months later. Beat Hurricane Carter twice as a middleweight. Lost 15th-round decision against Curtis Cokes in WBA welterweight championship fight. Stopped in 11 rounds in middleweight title fight against Nino Benvenuti. Retired 1972. Had record of 107-13 with 49 knockouts. Died July 9, 1996.

DUTCH SAM—Born Samuel Elias on April 4, 1775 in London. Began fighting in 1801. At 133 pounds, he routinely defeated taller, heavier opponents. Credited with being the first boxer to use the uppercut. Died July 3, 1816.

JOSE TORRES—Born May 3, 1936, Playa Ponce, Puerto Rico. Won light middleweight silver medal in 1956 Olympics. Fought professionally as a light heavyweight. Defeated Willie Pastrano for light heavyweight title in 1965. Lost title to Dick Tiger in 1966. Retired in 1969, with record of 41-3-1 with 29 knockouts, and became author, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission (1983-1988), and president of the WBO (1993-1995).

FREDDIE WELSH—Born March 5, 1886. Won world lightweight title from Willie Ritchie in 1914 and held it until 1917. Retired with record of 120-27-16 with 30 knockouts. Died July 29, 1927.

CHALKY WRIGHT— Born Albert Wright in Durango, Mexico, Feb. 10, 1912. Boxed nearly 14 years before winning featherweight title in 1941 with KO of Joey Archibald. Lost crown to Willie Pep in 1942. Retired 1947, with record of 148-39-16 with 74 knockouts. Died Aug. 12, 1957.

OPEN: Balls cause players concern

court, they should get a heavy ball, a soft ball."

Ivanisevic, the chief exponent of the big-serving power game, believes these balls favor the baseline players over the big-hitters.

"I don't know why they are doing this," said Ivanisevic, who hit a record 1,477 aces in 1996 on his way to five ATP Tour title wins. He served a respectable 15 aces in a straight-sets victory over Australian Ben Ellwood on Tuesday.

"They are always talking about how the game is going fast, and they are slowing everything. They even use slow balls on clay and indoors; they put slow balls everywhere.

"In 10 years, five years, you are going to watch men's tennis, women's tennis; they are going to play together because of these balls."

Sampras dismissed McNamee's assertion that the balls haven't changed.

"I've been playing this game for a lot of years and I can tell if the balls are a little bit different from year to year and I think they are here," Sampras said, adding the change is not so terrible for him.

"I can still serve and volley, and I think in some ways it gives me a little bit more time to return and kind of get a rhythm out there. It's tough to put the ball away. It's tough to be aggressive."

Jim Courier, a two-time winner of the Australian, is also disenchanted with the balls.

"The first ball I hit when I got here I thought I'd got a flat batch," he said.

As it turned out, all the batches were like that.

Prosecutors seek jail term for Graf

MANNHEIM, Germany (AP) — Prosecutors sought a jail term of six years and nine months Tuesday for Peter Graf, the father of Steffi Graf, charged with evading taxes on more than $26.5 million of his daughter's tennis earnings.

Prosecutors asked that Joachim Eckardt, the former family financial adviser and co-defendant in the tax evasion trial, be sentenced to four years and nine months in jail as an accomplice.

Graf, 58, masterminded a "web of lies planned over a long time" to dupe tax authorities, chief prosecutor Hubert Jobski said in his summing-up before the Mannheim state court.

Graf refused to comment to reporters, but his attorney Franz Salditt said he would reject the prosecution's charges.

Graf and Eckardt went on trial Sept. 5 charged with evading $12 million in taxes by failing to declare certain income earned by Steffi Graff from 1989-93.

Since Peter Graf's arrest on Aug. 2, 1995, the family has paid back taxes based on figures determined by investigators and tax authorities.

Despite cancer, Armstrong aims to 'Tour' once again

PARIS (AP) — He is wearing a cap to hide a bald head and two deep scars, the result of cancer and brain surgery. It is just one of many adjustments Lance Armstrong has to make these days.

"Just mentally, knowing that you are fighting for your life," he says. "... Oh, I'm scared."

Armstrong, the former world cycling champion, was in Paris on Tuesday with his new cycling team. The French squad Cofidis signed him as their leader for reportedly more than $1 million a year.

That was before he discovered he had cancer.

His contract has been renegotiated, with a smaller salary a number of performance bonuses, based on when he returns to cycling.

"I have no idea when I will race again," Armstrong said.

He has been cycling since the announcement he had cancer and hopes to be back to competition by the middle of the cycling season.

"I am ready to return but it depends on what the doctor says and how training goes," Armstrong said.

Last October, just before the world championships, he announced he had testicular cancer. At the time, he had started chemotherapy to fight the disease that had spread to his stomach and lungs. He also had surgery to remove two small brain lesions.

A month ago he stopped chemotherapy and said the hormone markers in the blood had gone down from a high of 90,000 to 3. An individual without cancer has zero. But it has affected his training.

"I lost a lot of conditioning," he said. "I lost muscle and put on some fat. I have to start working on my strength.

"On the bike I never had to suffer like I still do now and like I did in the last few weeks. I tried to ride through the whole chemotherapy, I would have to go so slow and it would hurt so bad. I suffer in the climbs. Relative to what I would do before, it was a big difference."

He did a lot before. He won the world road championship in 1993, one of the youngest riders to take the title then at 21.

He took the Tour DuPont twice and also won Fleche-Wallone and finished second four days later in Liege-Bastogne-Liege, two World Cup races in Belgium.

Forced out of the Tour de France this summer in the sixth stage with bronchitis, Armstrong finished sixth in the time trial and 12th in the road race at the Olympics.

He took two stages of the Tour de France, including a stage after his teammate Fabio Casartelli died in a crash in the Pyrenees in July 1995.

Now Armstrong must face his chances of living.

Austin's Lance Armstrong, who is undergoing cancer treatment, hopes to participate in this year's Tour de France.

"At the end of the last treatment (of chemotherapy) based upon what they saw, I asked if I were 50-50 before, what am I now," Armstrong said. "They said 80-20."

"It's scary. When I go to the doctor as soon as I get the result I feel better," he said "The longer I get away that period, I get more and more worried and I have to talk to the doctor again.

"There is a sense of relief when he tells me everything is going well."

Chisox sign Drabek

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox, looking to shore up their starting rotation, signed Cy Young Award winning pitcher Doug Drabek to a one-year contract Tuesday.

Drabek, who won the 1990 Cy Young while going 22-6 with Pittsburgh, pitched the last four seasons with the Houston Astros, compiling a 38-42 record.

The 34-year-old right-hander was 7-9 with a 4.57 earned run average in 30 starts with the Astros last season. He is 137-112 lifetime, with a 3.41 ERA.

He will get $1.3 million in salary from the White Sox and can earn another $1.3 million in performance bonuses.

Drabek, who made $5.05 million with the Astros last season, talked with several other teams, including the crosstown Cubs. He chose the Sox, he said, because they were persistent and because they have a chance to go to the postseason.

Colts owner Robert Irsay dead at 73

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Robert Irsay, who on a snowy night in 1984 packed the moving vans and took his Baltimore Colts away to Indianapolis, died Tuesday, more than a year after suffering a stroke. He was 73.

Irsay had been in and out of hospitals since the stroke. He was taken Monday to Indiana University Hospital, where his condition deteriorated. Death was attributed to heart failure.

Forever scorned in Baltimore for his infamous midnight flight, he gained a reputation there as a meddlesome, tightfisted tyrant. But he generally kept a low profile in Indianapolis, turning over most of the day-to-day operations and player negotiations to his son, Jim.

"He was an asset to the league," Kansas City Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt told ABC Radio Sports. "He was kind of a throwback to the old days, where when a man speaks his mind, you know how he feels."

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue called Irsay a "loyal and devoted member" of the league family.

"His heart just got weaker, and he died peacefully," said Irsay's doctor, Douglas P. Zipes, director of the Krannert Institute of Cardiology at the IU Medical Center. "He was very alert. ... He was right with it up until the end."

Born in Chicago, Irsay made his fortune in heating and air conditioning. In 1972, he purchased the Los Angeles Rams and swapped ownership with Carroll Rosenbloom, who owned the Baltimore franchise.

The Colts won the Super Bowl following the 1970 season and three straight AFC East titles in the mid-'70s but never managed another winning season in Baltimore. Irsay became the target of increasing criticism in the news media.

In 1984, then-NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle said Irsay was considering moving the Colts, and on March 29, the Maryland House voted to give Baltimore the power to take over the Colts through eminent domain. The city sent Irsay a telegram offering $40 million for the franchise.

But Irsay packed the Colts' equipment into moving vans in the middle of the night and took his team to Indianapolis, leaving a 30-year tradition in Baltimore.

"Now that he's dead, I don't want to say bad things about the man. It's over," said former Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer, who was mayor of Baltimore when Irsay fled with the team.

"I tried in every way to accommodate him. We negotiated with him and the business community and we met time after time. We were still talking to him and I thought we were close to him saying, 'I'm going to stay in Baltimore.'

"Then I found out he already had made the deal (with Indianapolis). ... One thing I resent is that he took the Colt name and the memorabilia."

PARCELLS: Master planner in his world games, Parcells has said. And how about a huge bit of preparation, the type of preparation that had Pittsburgh's Bill Cowher sitting alone on his bench at game's end, running his fingers through his hair in frustration?

Or the preparation that yanked Mark Brunell back from being the next Steve Young to just another good quarterback and Natrone Means into a facsimile of a former Parcells favorite who could run nowhere, Marion Butts?

And Green Bay's Dorsey Levens is no Natrone Means, and neither is Edgar Bennett.

"I was back here in the stadium at 3 a.m., that's why," said Parcells, when told by a media member that he looked tired after his team's happiest day. Doing what? Looking at film, of course, getting ready, being prepared.

Against the Steelers, the Patriots were very prepared by the coaches. Against the Jaguars, the Patriot defense was even more prepared. And, with Parcells, it is now a given: He and his assistants will scheme and plot and prepare to take away the best of an offense.

The "Slash" mania? Turned out to be a laugh. The Mark Brunell-can-do-it-all mania? Maybe, but not against the Patriots.

Parcells even was so prepared that as his defense began to resemble a bit of his 1990 Giants defense, the coach also was able to bring in the offense from that 1990 team, the weakest offense to win a conference title (Giants 15, 49ers 13) in recent memory. If possible, the Patriot offense Sunday was more impotent than that weak bunch.

(For those with long memories, the Giants were able to win that 1990 NFC Championship game by forcing a late fumble by Roger Craig, similar to Willie Clay's late interception and Chris Slade's forced fumble on a James Stewart run.)

As for the Patriots' jittery offense and the jittery Drew Bledsoe, perhaps the words of Brett Favre in Green Bay were comforting. "I had butterflies before a game for the first time since grade school," said Favre.

If anything, the Patriots know going into the Super Bowl that their offense can't play any worse. They've got that out of their system.

Perhaps the Packers will win the game despite the outlandish odds. But, certainly, the team that will be more prepared is the New England Patriots.

CHARGES: More lawsuits may come

(From 1C)

said Tuesday.

Irvin's attorney, Royce West, said the charge against Shahravan "needed to be done."

"I am pleased because I believe very strongly that this woman has set back the issue of sexual assault victims 100 years," West said.

Ginsberg and West both said their clients were considering lawsuits.

"We are considering legal action not only against the woman but we are examining whether Erik's civil rights were violated by the city of Dallas police department," Ginsberg said.

The case and its handling by the police and media brought up a number of ethical issues, particularly regarding the release of suspects' names before charges are filed.

Anantha Babbili, chairman of the journalism department at Texas Christian University, said a central issue regarding how reporters handled the case was the credibility of sources.

The story emerged after Shahravan contacted a television reporter. Police acknowledged the allegations after the television report.

"We have an obligation, first, not only to bring out new information on anything and anybody but to really validate and recheck and crosscheck and dig into the credibility of our sources of information," he said.

He said he hoped the incident would serve as a learning experience.

"I hope something really good comes out of it," he said. "I think this gives us a good idea of how we can restructure and recoup as an institution. I think the media will really be cautious next time."

First tennis player gets suspension for drugs

MIAMI (AP) — Ignacio Truyol of Spain became the first tennis player to be suspended for drug use Tuesday, testing positive for an anabolic steroid and a stimulant.

Truyol, ranked No. 127, denies misusing or abusing the banned substances, which he said were prescribed by a Spanish physician to treat a back injury. The drugs were nandrolone, an anabolic steroid, and pemoline, a stimulant.

"The player feels he has been seriously wronged," said Steven Hammond, a New York attorney representing Truyol.

The 23-year-old Spaniard, who violated ATP Tour rules established in 1990, will be banned from all tournaments for one year. He will forfeit $39,985 in prize money and ranking points earned since July 1996, when he tested positive at a Challenger Circuit tournament in Ostende, Belgium.

Hammond said the anabolic steroid was administered once in a minimal dosage of 25 milligrams — not enough to enhance performance. Truyol's physician believed the quantity was acceptable and prescribed the steroid without the player's knowledge.

NATURAL GAS PRICES
Tuesday $3.393

Gas prices soar

Natural gas futures prices rose sharply Tuesday as frigid temperatures wreaked havoc with key Texas pipelines used to ship the heating fuel to many parts of the country also suffering from below-normal temperatures.

Natural gas suppliers reported snow and ice across Texas had forced the shutdown of many production wells in the region. The gas is shipped from the U.S. Gulf to parts of the Midwest and the Northeast states of New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

Suppliers were forced to dip into gas in storage to meet their commitments, which led to expectations of a sharp drawdown in storage for the week ended Jan. 10.

The situation was further complicated by new forecasts from the National Weather Service for sharply colder weather to linger over the next 10 days in the Midwest and Northeast, where much of natural gas is used, said analyst John Saucer at Smith Barney Inc. in Houston.

Natural gas for February delivery rose 13.9 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange to $3.393 for each 1,000 cubic feet.

February crude fell 8 cents to $25.11 a barrel.

Dollar rallies

NEW YORK — The dollar hit a 45-month high against the Japanese yen and a 29-month high against the German mark Tuesday as U.S. financial markets rallied and after Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin reiterated the government's support of a strong dollar.

The dollar rose above 117 yen in intraday dealings before settling in late New York trading at 116.93 yen, up from 116.44 yen Monday. The dollar also rose to 1.5943 marks from 1.5886 Monday.

As the dollar staged its broad advance, the British pound fell to $1.6711 from $1.6739.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 5.3810 French francs, up from 5.3555; 1,550.24 Italian lire, up from 1,544.00; and 1.3508 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3485. But the dollar settled at 1.3761 Swiss francs, down from 1.3765.

Dow soars

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average cruised to its fourth straight high and technology shares led a broad rally Tuesday after interest rates fell in the bond market on news that inflation has remained tame.

The Dow rose 53.11 points to 6,762.29, slipping from an 80-point advance during the last half hour, but notching its sixth record close in seven sessions. In the nine trading days this year, the blue-chip barometer already is up 314 points, or nearly 5 percent.

Broader measures also charged to new highs as bonds rallied after the Commerce Department reported that the core inflation rate rose just 0.1 percent in December despite recent signs of a surprisingly robust economy.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by an 11-to-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 531.30 million shares.

Also setting new highs on Tuesday were the Standard & Poor's 500 list, up 9.35 to 768.86; the NYSE composite index, up 4.36 to 405.07; the Nasdaq composite index, up 15.45 to 1,346.36; and the Russell 2000 list of smaller companies, up 1.67 to 367.52. The American Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.22 to 588.35.

Jack Sherman, AutoNation to merge

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Jack Sherman Chevrolet/Geo/Buick/Mazda has agreed to a merger with Republic Industries Inc., a publicly held company that operates AutoNation USA.

Sherman

"It will mean a lot of progress," said Jack Sherman, chief operating officer. "This will give us an opportunity to expand our business."

He said the merger with AutoNation, a national retailer of pre-owned cars and trucks, should give the dealership access to a large supply of vehicles and to new financing options.

"This will open up new avenues for us," Sherman said. "It's a very exciting opportunity for us and will be a big benefit for the people of the Permian Basin. We'll continue to do what we've been doing only better and more of it.

"We're happy to be affiliated with AutoNation," he said.

Sherman said all the dealership's employees will remain in place and there will be no change in management personnel. The name will remain Jack Sherman Chevrolet/Geo/Buick/Mazda.

"Nothing will change; this is just a merger. It will still be the same Jack Sherman Chevrolet," Sherman said.

Ron Castell, senior vice president, marketing and communications for Republic Industries, said his company is looking forward to its new association with the Grubb family, the Phoenix-based family that owns the Jack Sherman dealership and a dealership in Phoenix.

"The Grubb family is a legendary family in the automotive retail business," Castell said. "They have a great attitude and philosophy in dealing with their customers; they are leaders in one-price selling, standing behind their product and giving the utmost service. For us to be associated with those individuals and that kind of business is a thrill for us."

Republic Industries is a diversified corporation with interests in waste disposal, outdoor advertising, electronic security and automotive retailing and renting. The company owns Alamo Rent-A-Car and is in the process of acquiring National Rental.

The company opened its first AutoNation giant pre-owned car lot in October 1995 in southern Florida and also has AutoNation lots in Houston, Dallas, Detroit and Phoenix. Castell said the company plans to open a dozen AutoNation locations this year with a goal of operating 80 to 100 by the year 2000.

The company also owns seven large dealerships; the Grubb family is the newest member of that group.

"The arrangement is for Mr. Grubb and his son to stay on to manage and expand the business," Castell said. "We feel no one knows the market as well as they do, whether it's in Midland or Phoenix.

"We think this merger will be good for Republic Industries, AutoNation, the Grubb family and, better than that, for the consumers," he said.

Mexican firm to distribute fertilizers from Midland

■ Firm honored by Mexican government chooses Midland as U.S. distribution point.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

An organic fertilizer company that has garnered awards in its native Mexico is expanding into the United States, establishing a national distribution center in Midland.

The company, Thedal Internacional of Jimenez in the state of Chihuahua, developed the technology to produce the organic fertilizers 10 years ago, said Luis Alberto Lightbourn, a company chemist and director of production for the company.

Also visiting from Mexico were Enrique de Diego Cobos, general director, and Gustavo Giner, technical representative.

"That's what we've been doing in Mexico for 10 years and now we're expanding into the United States" because it is "the most important market in the world," Lightbourn explained.

Officials, gathered at the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce offices during a recent visit to Midland, said that Thedal's fertilizers have been tested in seven states for the last 18 months. Hispanic Chamber officials are offering to provide translation or other services.

'We're expanding into the United States because it is the most important market in the world.'
— Luis Alberto Lightbourn, Thedal chemist.

Thedal officials said the product has proven to be extremely good product for all crops such as the cotton, pecans and tomatoes grown locally as well as being environmentally safe and non-damaging to aquifers, of importance to areas concerned with protecting aquifers such as the sugar cane growers in Florida.

"The raw materials in our fertilizers are humates of potassium," Lightbourn said. "The difference between our product and traditional inorganic fertilizers is tests show the synthetic inorganic fertilizers cause toxic problems in soils, plants and fruits. That's the reason most of the word is going to true organic fertilizers."

The company uses potassium rather than sodium in processing its fertilizers, he said, because potassium is the main substance for ionic exchange in soils. He added that his product not only replaces nutrients in the soil that were absorbed by growing plants, the fertilizers give more disease resistance and increases transportation and storage life.

Thedal, which was honored as Best Company Furthering Mexican Agriculture by the Mexican government in 1991 for its technology, makes two lines of fertilizers, one for soil applications and a second for leaf applications.

Lightbourn said there is a possibility the company could build a production plant in Midland in the future.

Consumer price hike highest in six years

Analysts say underlying inflation rate still tame

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices rose 3.3 percent in 1996, the biggest increase in six years. But aside from higher energy and food costs, the underlying inflation rate turned in its best performance in 31 years.

Financial markets cheered the inflation news and a second report showing a 0.6 percent rebound in retail sales in December.

Analysts said investors were heartened that retail sales rebounded after having fallen in November, meaning the economy entered 1997 without a big overhang of unsold goods. But at the same time, inflation has remained stable, giving the Federal Reserve no reason to start raising interest rates.

"This is a winning combination," said Robert Dederick, chief economic consultant at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "We had a solid increase in retail sales and inflation is still the non-problem of the day."

President Clinton, who campaigned for re-election on a good economy, also expressed pleasure in Tuesday's reports, saying the good economy provided an excellent opportunity to balance the budget.

"1996 was an exceptional year for the economy in terms of low inflation and low unemployment," Clinton said in a statement. "The combined rate of unemployment and inflation — the so-called Misery Index — was lower in 1996 than in any year since 1968."

The Labor Department reported that the 3.3 percent increase in its Consumer Price Index was the largest rise since a 6.1 percent jump in 1990, another year of surging energy costs.

Prices had risen just 2.5 percent in 1995, the fourth straight year that inflation had been below 3 percent, a record not matched since the mid-1960s.

But discounting the spurt in energy and food costs, the underlying rate of inflation was up just 2.6 percent in 1996, matching the 1994 increase and the lowest rate since a 1.5 percent increase in 1965.

The core rate of inflation had risen by 3 percent in 1995 and analysts said it was remarkable to see such an improvement last year, given that the economy was finishing up its sixth year of expansion, a time when tight labor markets normally trigger higher inflation.

"Inflation has never been so low at such an advanced stage of a cycle and that's without accounting for the overstatement in the official CPI measure," said Bruce Steinberg, senior economist at Merrill Lynch in New York.

For December, overall prices posted a fourth straight 0.3 percent increase, reflecting a 1.6 percent jump in energy costs, the biggest increase since April. But reflecting the pattern for the year, outside energy and food, the core rate of inflation was up a much more modest 0.1 percent.

While rising energy prices could at some point filter into price pressures in other sectors, economists noted that crude oil prices have already started to retreat and they predicted more good news on energy in 1997 as extra supplies from Iraq begin flowing onto world markets.

Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics AP

Energy prices, which had fallen by 1.3 percent in 1995, rose 8.6 percent for all of 1996, the biggest advance since an 18.1 percent jump in 1990.

The 0.6 percent increase in retail sales followed a 0.2 percent drop in November. Sales of autos climbed 0.8 percent while sales at department stores were up 0.5 percent and clothing stores posted an even better 1.5 percent jump.

While retailers had hoped for an even better Christmas performance, Tracy Mullin, president of the National Retail Federation, said, "On the whole, it was a modest and respectable season — especially given the shortened shopping calendar and unpredictable weather."

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE exceeds 99. dd – Loss in last 12 months. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. q – Closed end mutual fund; no PE calculated. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.

DEAR ABBY

Animal shelters can not be a haven for all homeless pets

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I work in an animal shelter. Thank God more people are bringing unwanted animals to shelters instead of dumping them by the roadside where they risk being struck and killed by cars or attacked by wild animals. At least these animals have a chance at life if they are brought to a shelter.

Van Buren

There is a poster in the shelter where I work which reads: There aren't enough homes for all of them.

For those who are not lucky enough to be chosen, the shelter provides the most humane death possible, with a loving attendant by their sides as they are put to sleep. But what a waste of beautiful life.

Abby, as I write this, I am in tears. The cats and dogs whose cages I clean daily are wonderful, loving animals. It breaks my heart when no one comes to adopt them because when we run out of space, we must choose which ones will be euthanized.

Please print this so pet owners will think about what happens when our country is overpopulated with animals. If only owners would spay or neuter their pets, there wouldn't be so many unwanted animals that must be put to death. —BEGGING FOR THE ANIMALS IN ARLINGTON, VT.

DEAR BEGGING: Thank you for writing. For years I have encouraged my readers to spay or neuter their pets, and go to shelters to choose an animal companion.

A very dear friend of mine, Rhonda Fleming Mann, went to an animal shelter to get a dog. There she found an adorable mongrel whom she named "Sparkey." No one could hope for a more loving pet. (He looks like a Pomeranian whose mother had more than a sniffing acquaintance with a fox terrier.)

Sparkey is now 14 years old and still going strong. Rhonda's husband, Ted Mann, is also crazy about Sparkey and walks him frequently.

So, dear readers, if you want a pet, consider adopting one from an animal shelter, thereby saving a life.

DEAR ABBY: As a gentleman, I greet other men with a firm handshake. However, over the years I have found that most women do not care to shake hands with men or women.

Occasionally, a woman will offer a hand to shake, but in a very feminine way. The women who do offer a hand tend to be middle-aged or professional women who are accustomed to formality. Older and young women usually do not offer to shake hands. Once I asked a woman why she chose not to, and she replied, "It's a guy thing."

Some women roll their eyes and grudgingly give me a light handshake, apparently just to appease me.

Recently, however, I greeted a woman by just saying, "Hello, I'm pleased to meet you." To my surprise, she offered her hand, so I shook it with medium firmness. She said, "Come on, give me a real shake."

Since I have been rebuffed so much in the past, I no longer extend my hand unless the woman does so first, but how do I know whether to shake a lady's hand firmly or lightly? — ON SHAKY GROUND, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ON SHAKY GROUND: To be on the safe side, do not offer your hand until the lady has indicated she wishes to use this form of greeting. Then take the middle road and shake her hand with medium firmness.

DEAR ABBY: I often hear people misquoting famous sayings. One in particular gets my goat. The classic adage is NOT "Ignorance is bliss." Correctly, it is "When ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

Would you help me set the record straight? — A READER IN LIBERTYVILLE, ILL.

DEAR READER: I'm happy to help set the record straight, but let's make sure it's correct. The quote, "WHERE ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise," is from a poem titled "Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College," by Thomas Gray, who lived from 1716 to 1771.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Dried potatoes flake in taste-test

By Linda Anderson

I'm usually a sucker for products marketed as "New!" even when I know they probably aren't.

Anderson

Take, for example, the line of "New" boxed mashed potatoes from Betty Crocker. Available in different flavors, such as Butter and Herb, and Roasted Garlic, these dried potato flakes are supposed to be the ultimate of their kind and so close to real you can't tell the difference (at least that's what most dried potato flakes are marketed as).

I bought a box of Betty Crocker's Sour Cream and Chives Mashed Potatoes to see if they were really as good as they are supposed to be. (Besides, I figured you can cover a lot of dried potato flake taste with sour cream and chives.)

A 7.6-ounce box of Sour Cream and Chives Mashed Potatoes contains two pouches, each one said to make four servings. And each box costs 99 cents, so you can get eight servings for 99 cents, or about 15 cents per serving, after you add in the cost of the one-and-a-half cups of hot water, half-cup of milk and two tablespoons of margarine you use to make the potatoes.

Each of these servings contains 160 calories, with 60 of them from fat (as prepared with milk, water and butter. Of course you can eliminate some of those calories by using skim milk and no butter, but that's pretty much up to you.)

On the side of the box is a quote from Betty Crocker herself: "My recipe combines Idaho russet potatoes with just the right blend of special ingredients that will help you add a distinctly delicious flavor to your meal. From my kitchen to yours. Enjoy!"

OK, we'll bite — literally. I made one of the four-serving packets just like it said on the box. (It's real easy too. You just boil the water, milk and margarine to boiling; turn off the heat; add the potatoes and seasoning — which also comes in the box — stir and fluff, and there you go.

I could tell the taste-testers were less than enthused, though, when I called one of them into the kitchen to taste and she said, "You aren't going to make me eat it, are you?" She agreed to just a taste, and then gave her verdict: "Tastes just like dried potatoes." That's it — no better, no worse than any other dried potato flakes she's ever tasted.

I tried the mashed potatoes next, and I had to agree with her. I couldn't taste anything that led me to believe the potatoes had any sour cream or chives in them. Sure, little flakes of what is probably chives are visible, but you can't really taste them.

My advice: If you really, really want mashed potatoes with sour cream and chives, you'll probably have to make them yourself with real potatoes, real sour cream and real chives, because you won't get them from a box of Sour Cream and Chive Mashed Potatoes. If all you want is a box of dried potato flakes with a decent dried potato flake mix, give this kind a try. But don't expect marvels. Dried potatoes are just dried potatoes.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Quick-to-fix dish features pasta, cheese, flavored with ham, broccoli

Associated Press

For a quick-to-fix dish, serve pasta and cheese flavored with broccoli florets, chunk deli ham and freshly chopped garlic. This dish serves six people and is ready in less than 30 minutes.

COUNTRY PASTA WITH AMERICAN CHEESE

8 (2-1/2 cups) uncooked dried mostaccioli
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups broccoli florets
6 ounces chunk deli ham, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
1/2 teaspoon finely chopped fresh garlic
1/2 cup milk
8 slices (3/4 ounce each) American cheese, cut into quarters
1/4 teaspoon white pepper

Cook mostaccioli according to package directions. Rinse with hot water; drain.

Meanwhile, in a 10-inch skillet, melt butter; stir in broccoli, ham and garlic. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until broccoli is crispy tender, about 4 to 5 minutes. Add cooked mostaccioli and all of the remaining ingredients. Continue cooking, stirring occasionally, until cheese is melted, about 3 to 5 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

COOK: Ladies ensemble at church serves as taste-testers for Dufford simmer 10 minutes. Serve warm. Makes five to six servings.

AMARETTO CHEESECAKE

CRUST:
1-1/4 cups graham cracker crumbs
6 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 cup cocoa
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup chopped walnuts, pecans or almonds
1/4 teaspoon almond extract

Mix crust ingredients thoroughly and press into bottom of well-buttered 9- or 10-inch springform pan. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven for 15 minutes. Remove from oven and increase oven temperature to 375 degrees.

FILLING:
24 ounces cream cheese, softened
1 cup sugar
4 eggs
1/3 cup evaporated milk
1/4 cup amaretto
1 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 teaspoon almond extract

Using electric mixer, beat cream cheese until fluffy and smooth. Add sugar and eggs; blend well. Add evaporated milk, amaretto, vanilla and almond extract. Beat until light and creamy. Pour batter into prepared springform pan and bake 40 to 45 minutes at 375 degrees. Remove from oven and cool for 5 minutes. Spread with topping mixture.

TOPPING:
2 cups sour cream
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix topping ingredients until smooth and spread over top of baked cheesecake. Return to oven and bake 5 to 8 minutes. Remove from oven and cool for several hours. Refrigerate overnight. Serves 14 to 16.

NOTE: This cake is quite soft but will firm as it cools.

MOM'S SUGAR COOKIES

1 cup butter, softened
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt

Cream butter, sugar, eggs and vanilla until fluffy. Add flour and salt; mix. Refrigerate for at least 30 minutes. Roll out to about 1/8-inch thickness and cut out with cutters. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes.

FROSTING:
1 pound powdered sugar
1/2 stick butter or margarine, softened
Enough milk to soften to consistency desired

Mix all ingredients and spread on cooled cookies.

WRAP: Flour tortillas serve as perfect wrap for steak, potatoes

(From 1D)

1-1/2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded, reduced-fat sharp Cheddar cheese
2/3 cup sliced green onions
Salt and pepper, to taste
8 10-inch flour tortillas, heated
Steak sauce, if desired

Place potatoes in a microwave-safe bowl. Cover with plastic wrap, venting one corner. Cook on high (100 percent power) for 8 minutes, just until tender.

Cut steak with the grain into strips 2 to 3 inches wide, then cut across the grain into 1/4-inch slices. (Partially freezing steak simplifies slicing.)

Meanwhile, in a large nonstick skillet, heat oil over high heat. Add steak, cook and toss 2 minutes. Add Worcestershire sauce. Cook and toss until steak loses pink color. Remove to bowl with slotted spoon.

Add potatoes to the skillet. Cook and toss until most of the liquid is absorbed. Mix in steak, cheese and onions. Toss just until cheese melts. Season with salt and pepper.

Portion 1/2 cup potato mixture onto center of each tortilla. Fold tortilla as for a burrito. Serve with steak sauce, if desired.

Makes 4 servings (2 wraps per serving).

NOTE: Microwave cooking times are based on a 700-watt microwave oven.

Jeweled stuffed artichokes — elegant and easy on the cook

Associated Press

Jeweled Stuffed Artichokes make an elegant cold salad or light entree for the holidays. The artichokes and their couscous mixture can be prepared ahead and refrigerated separately. Assemble the dish just before serving. Serve as a prelude to dinner or for a gala weekend brunch.

JEWELED STUFFED ARTICHOKES

4 medium artichokes
1 teaspoon salt
1-1/2 cups chicken broth
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon onion powder
1/2 teaspoon tarragon
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup couscous
1/2 cup dried cranberries
1/4 cup sliced green onions
1 tablespoon chopped candied ginger
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
2 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
Orange Sauce (recipe below)

Wash artichokes under cold, running water. Cut off stems at base and remove small bottom leaves. Cut off top 2 inches of artichokes and discard. Stand artichokes upright in a deep saucepan large enough to hold snugly. Add 1 teaspoon salt and enough boiling water to cover by 2 to 3 inches. Cover; boil gently 30 to 40 minutes or until just tender (base can be pierced easily with a fork). Plunge into cold water to stop cooking; remove and turn upside down to drain. Carefully pull out center petals of artichokes. With a spoon, remove fuzzy center and discard.

In medium saucepan combine chicken broth, garlic powder, onion powder, tarragon, thyme and 1/4 teaspoon salt; bring to a boil. Remove from heat; stir in couscous and dried cranberries. Cover let stand 5 minutes. Fluff couscous with a fork. Stir in green onions, candied ginger, orange peel, orange juice and oil. Spoon into center of artichokes. Serve with Orange Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Orange Sauce: Combine 3/4 cup sour cream, 1/4 cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon grated orange peel and 1 tablespoon orange juice. Add 1-1/2 teaspoons chopped candied ginger; mix well. Makes about 1 cup.

SHRIMP AHOY!

Associated Press

Seafood Lasagna is made with cooked salad shrimp, low-fat ricotta cheese and low-fat mozzarella cheese. The lasagna is quick and easy to assemble. Steamed and Spiced Shrimp is also easy to make, using just three ingredients.

SEAFOOD LASAGNA

28-ounce jar spaghetti sauce
10 ounces cooked salad shrimp or cooked medium shrimp, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup low-fat ricotta cheese
1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon fresh parsley, minced
1/8 teaspoon black pepper
4 ounces lasagna noodles, cooked according to package directions
2/3 cup shredded low-fat mozzarella cheese

Heat oven to 375 degrees.

Empty spaghetti sauce into saucepan; simmer for 10 minutes until thickened and reduced to about 3 cups; stir in shrimp.

Combine ricotta cheese, Parmesan cheese, parsley and pepper in a small bowl.

To assemble lasagna, place half of the cooked noodles in an 8x8-inch casserole dish. Top with half the seafood mixture. Drop half of the ricotta mixture by small teaspoons on top. Sprinkle with half of the mozzarella cheese. Repeat layers. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven for 35 minutes or until bubbly. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting. Makes 6 servings.

STEAMED AND SPICED SHRIMP

1 pound raw medium shrimp in the shell
2 teaspoons canola or olive oil
1 tablespoon prepared seafood seasoning (such as Old Bay)

Coat shrimp with oil. Toss with seafood seasoning. Place shrimp on steamer rack over boiling water. Reduce heat and steam, covered, about 2 to 3 minutes or until bright pink. Serve warm with your favorite spicy cocktail sauce. Makes about 40 pieces.

WHAT'S COOKING?

Cook's culinary skills are from 'trial and error'

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Although Beth Dufford of Midland was raised by a mother who was a wonderful cook, she herself didn't learn to cook until she was an adult.

"My mother had eight kids, and she didn't have time to teach us how to cook," Mrs. Dufford said. "All her recipes were from scratch. If you call her to get one of her recipes, they never taste the same" as they do when her mother makes them.

Instead, Mrs. Dufford learned to cook "since I've been married," she said, "by trial and error. I started out cooking mainly to help my husband when I was putting him through school at (Texas) A&M (University).

"It's gotten better since then," she laughed.

Today her husband, Scott, a geologist and owner of Trend Exploration, and the couple's three children — Amy, 11, Betsy, 9, and Neil, 5 — enjoy a wide range of Mrs. Dufford's culinary masterpieces.

And her repertoire keeps growing, thanks to her practice of asking for recipes whenever the couple and/or family eats with friends or at restaurants. "I have to have a recipe," Mrs. Dufford said. "I don't dare cook from scratch!"

She does, however, like to try new things. "I sing in a ladies' ensemble at church, and I have them over for brunch and I always experiment on them. They get to try all my new quiches."

She said her specialties would probably include Teriyaki Chicken, which is a "marinated chicken breast and really is good," and "my mom's sugar cookies." For herself, however, Mrs. Dufford said her favorite meal might be a Caesar salad, a quiche and "something sweet to dunk into coffee!"

These recipes are some of her family's favorites:

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Beth Dufford says that although her mother was a wonderful cook, she was too busy taking care of eight children to give cooking lesson. Instead, Mrs. Dufford says she learned to cook after she married and never misses a chance to add a good recipe to her collection from family, friends and even restaurants.

PECAN CHICKEN

1 cup flour
1 cup ground pecans
1/4 cup sesame seeds
1 tablespoon paprika
1-1/2 teaspoons salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 egg, beaten
1 cup buttermilk
8 chicken breasts (5 ounces each), boned and skinned
1/3 cup butter
1/4 cup coarsely chopped pecans

Combine first six ingredients. Mix together egg and buttermilk. Dip chicken in egg mixture and then coat well in flour mixture. Melt butter in baking dish. Place chicken in dish, turning once to coat with butter. Sprinkle with coarsely chopped pecans. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Do not overcook. Serves eight.

MONTEREY QUICHE

1 partially baked 8- to 9-inch pie crust (bake 15 minutes at 350 degrees)
10 eggs
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
3/4 teaspoon sliced pickled jalapeno and juice
2-1/2 cups evaporated milk
2 cups grated Monterey Jack cheese
1 cup chopped green onions
1 cup diced or slivered Canadian bacon
1 cup sliced green chilies, drained

Beat eggs in blender with salt, white pepper, jalapenos and juice. Add milk to egg mixture. In prepared crust, place half of the Monterey Jack cheese on bottom. Layer with green onions, Canadian bacon and green chilies, finishing with other half of cheese. Pour egg mixture over layered ingredients. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 1 hour and 45 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Allow quiche to cool for 15 minutes for easier slicing. Makes nine to 10 servings.

GERMAN POTATO SALAD

8 to 10 small new potatoes, peeled and cleaned
4 slices of bacon
3 tablespoons white sugar
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
3 tablespoons vinegar
1/2 onion, very thinly sliced

Boil potatoes until done but not mushy. Cook bacon and crumble into bits. Add sugar, vinegar and mayonnaise to bacon grease, mixing thoroughly. Add salt and pepper. Mix in thinly sliced onions. Slice potatoes thinly and gently toss into mixture. Cover and let

Moya becomes unlikely Australian Open star

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — First Becker, then McEnroe. Spain's Carlos Moya continued on his winning way at the Australian Open Wednesday, becoming one of the unlikely stars of the year's first Grand Slam tournament.

Moya, 20, who ousted defending champion Boris Becker in the first round, beat American Patrick McEnroe 3-6, 6-0, 6-3, 6-1 in the second in a stadium court populated by a growing legion of Moya fans.

In the absence of local heroes Mark Philippoussis (injured) and Patrick Rafter, beaten in the first round, Moya has been adopted as a new pin-up favorite at the Open.

About two dozen young girls gathered around the court exit after his 1-hour, 49-minute win, waiting for the Barcelona-based right-hander to emerge.

"I'm the first to be surprised how the crowd they want me," said a smiling Moya, ranked 25th in the world. "It's nice to feel. I'm so far from home, but I feel like home. Even when I was one set down, they support me and help me a lot."

Moya, runner-up to Tim Henman of Britain in the Sydney International tournament last Sunday, is also proving to be a star in his homeland after his upset of Becker.

"I've had so many calls, I had to switch off my mobile (telephone), my phone from the room. It was crazy," said Moya, whose callers have included radio and television stations as well as supporters.

Moya is one of 15 Spanish players entered in the men's singles draw at this year's Australian Open, equal with Australia and only behind the 16 from the United States. Of those, seven progressed to the second round.

Many of his compatriots were also on hand to watch Moya Wednesday.

"We are all friends, we play cards together and go to support the one who is playing," said Moya. "I think that is one of the keys.

"I think we (also) realize that the money and points are in the hardcourt events and we start to play, to practice in them."

Moya admitted he was mildly surprised by his powerful start this year.

"I expected to play good, but maybe not at the beginning, maybe February, March, but not so early," he said.

Moya took time to find his rhythm against McEnroe, ranked 229th in the world and returning from shoulder surgery that had sidelined him for most of last year.

"I'm a slow starter. I don't know why. Maybe I'm a little bit lazy," the Spaniard said. "After the first set I started to feel better and at the end I can play really good tennis."

Moya faces Bernd Karbacher of Germany in the third round.

Two boxers enter Hall

CANASTOTA, N.Y. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, whose charisma and virtuoso style endeared him to boxing fans, and flamboyant promoter Don King, often regarded as a ring rogue, will be enshrined into the International Boxing Hall of Fame.

Former light heavyweight champion Jose Torres was the other living honoree in the 1997 induction class of 13 announced Tuesday.

Welterweight champion Luis Rodriguez and featherweight champion Chalky Wright joined Leonard and Torres from the modern era as posthumous selections.

A loophole in the five-year retirement eligibility rule allowed Leonard's selection even though he is scheduled to fight Hector "Macho" Camacho March 1 at Atlantic City, said Edward Brophy, the hall's executive director.

Leonard's last fight was in February 1991, thus he became eligible in 1996. This year's selection ballots were mailed Nov. 1 to 142 boxing writers and historians from the United States and nine other countries.

Even though Leonard announced his comeback in October, it was determined as long as he didn't fight before Dec. 31 when the votes were counted, Leonard retained his eligibility, Brophy said.

"Fights are canceled and rescheduled like this one has been," Brophy said. "Comebacks are announced then put off. Until the bell actually sounds, it's not a fight. Sugar Ray made it in the required five years."

Previously, Hall-of-Famer Alexis Arguello returned to the ring in 1994, two years after his induction.

Jobs for athletes mean headaches

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Now that Division I athletes can have part-time jobs, the schools get full-time headaches.

"It's a compliance nightmare," Donald Morrison, UCLA's faculty representative, said Tuesday, the day after NCAA Convention delegates voted in part-time jobs for full scholarship players.

But Paul Dee, the athletic director at Miami, says it's time for administrators to forget their own woes.

"There's no question there are problems, but is our inconvenience a reason to constrain students?" Dee said. "I think not."

As passed, the new rule says athletes can earn as much as the difference between the value of their scholarship and the estimated full cost of attending that school, which falls somewhere between $1,200 and $2,500.

Full scholarships pay for tuition, room, board and books but not other costs such as travel or living expenses. The difference is what the athlete can earn.

The proposal, which goes into effect on Aug. 1, was approved by a 169-150 margin, with six abstentions. The bigger schools, in Division I-A, voted against it, 61-51.

In addition to creating paperwork, other concerns include:

—keeping track of an athletes' income so it doesn't exceed the earnings cap.

—influential boosters hiring athletes.

—making sure athletes are actually working.

—giving schools a recruiting edge due to more job opportunities.

"There will definitely be abuses," Kansas State athletic director Max Urick said. "For example, it gets us right in the middle of something we've tried to keep away from — a direct relationship between athletes and boosters. The boosters will be the ones providing the jobs."

Big Ten commissioner Jim Delany has a slightly different view.

"Sure there will be bogus jobs," he said. "It'll open up a can of worms, but I think we have to start living with cans of worms and let the presidents, athletic directors and board of trustees handle it."

Baiul arrest shows her turmoil

By Jere Longman
N.Y. Times News Service

When Oksana Baiul of Ukraine won a gold medal at the 1994 Winter Olympics, she riveted the figure-skating world with a story of inspirational triumph over staggering odds.

Orphaned at 13, sleeping alone in an ice rink, she moved in with her coach, won the world title at age 15 and Olympic gold at 16. In the span of a year, she went from being an unknown to the most celebrated skater in the world.

She moved to the United States just as figure skating moved into the financial and athletic stratosphere.

At 19, she should be at the top of her sport, in terms of earning power on tour and in professional competitions and in terms of the maturing grace of her ephemeral, ethereal style of skating.

Instead, her vast potential remains unfulfilled in a sport noted as much for its soap-opera turns as it is for its elegant, stylish performances. Her arrest came on the same day that Tonya Harding announced that she would make her return to skating next month in a professional exhibition in Reno.

Baiul was arrested Tuesday after voluntarily turning herself in to police in Bloomfield, Conn., and was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and reckless driving in connection with a traffic accident early Sunday morning. Baiul was released on her promise to appear at a hearing on Jan. 27, and she returned to her home in Simsbury, Conn., to continue recovering from a concussion and 12 stitches in her scalp.

The Associated Press reported that it had obtained a hospital report showing that Baiul had been driving her green Mercedes-Benz under the influence of alcohol when it skidded and left the road about 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

The A.P. also reported that her blood-alcohol level was .168 percent, above the legal level of .10 percent. Complicating matters is that Baiul is two years under the legal drinking age for Connecticut residents.

Before the accident, Baiul and a fellow skater, Ararat Zakarian, 30, of New York, had visited friends at an ice pageant in Hartford Saturday night. Zakarian, who broke a finger, was said by friends to be in Europe on Tuesday.

"I am sorry for the mistake I made, and the circumstances surrounding the accident," Baiul said Tuesday in a statement. "I apologize to the many people who have supported me in the past, and I ask for their understanding."

The automobile accident was the latest in a series of setbacks for Baiul, who can command up to $2 million a year in earnings, but who has struggled since the Olympics to deal with knee and back injuries, a maturing adult body that affects her jumping, the dizzying opportunities in her new country, and the willfulness and distractions of being a teen-ager, all without any parental guidance.

Her mother, Marina, died of ovarian cancer when Oksana was 13; her father, Sergei, divorced her mother when Oksana was 2. She did not see him again until her mother's funeral.

"If you take a step back, you find a young lady of modest means in Ukraine who comes onto the figure-skating scene like a bolt of lightning," said Michael Burg, a figure-skating promoter who has an exclusive competition contract with Baiul.

"She wins the worlds and Olympics and she goes literally from rags to probably the wealthiest skater in the world. She has to deal with a lack of parents, moving to the United States, capitalism and being a teen-ager. It's really, really difficult."

Burg added: "The answer is setting priorities. I think Oksana needs guidance in determining the who, what, when and where of what she wants to do. Sometimes, when something like this happens, it makes you focus."

Baiul, who has passed on her Olympic eligibility for the so-called professional circuit, has withdrawn from three competitions this season and fared poorly in a fourth. She missed the beginning of a current 25-city tour promoted by Tom Collins, and had to postpone joining the tour Tuesday in Wheeling, W.Va.

Collins said Tuesday that he hopes Baiul can join the tour in a week. A spokesman at the William Morris Agency, which represents her, said that it may take Baiul two weeks to recover from her concussion.

"She has nobody; that's the problem," said Collins, who is close to Baiul, one of the headliners of his popular 65-city summer tour.

"You get into the skating world with no guidance, no mother, father, grandmother, it's very tough. When you're not the actual mother or father, guidance can be tough. She's had injuries. Her body is changing dramatically. It's been very difficult for her. She's such a sweet, lovely, caring person. I think this will be an eye opener for her."

One friend of Baiul's friends, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said that "nobody tells her the truth and puts her in her place. They all tell her how great she is." But, the friend added, Baiul is headstrong as many teen-agers are and does not want to listen to advice.

The same willfulness that allowed Baiul to emerge from orphan to Olympic champion, the friend said, has left her "a little out of control" as a teen-ager whose interest in shopping, partying, dyed blond hair and expensive homes and cars conflicts with the training necessary to remain a top professional skater. Others close to her described her as "rebellious" and "wild."

Two people familiar with an incident last summer said that Baiul had developed a rivalry with another skater on tour and had laughed once when the rival fell, prompting Nicole Bobek to tell Baiul that she was acting unprofessionally. Baiul later apologized, a person familiar with the incident said.

"Does she have an attitude?" Burg said. "No more or less than any other skater."

No one interviewed in the skating community said they believed Baiul had a drinking problem. Some pointed out that, as a European, she grew up in a culture where it was socially acceptable for teen-agers to drink in public at as young as 16.

Those closest to her in Connecticut are her coach, Galina Zmievskaya; her fellow Ukraine Olympic champion, Viktor Petrenko, and Petrenko's wife, Nina, who is Zmievskaya's daughter. Baiul once lived with Zmievskaya, but she is 19 now, with the desire and financial ability to strike out on her own. She recently moved into a $450,000 home in Connecticut.

"I believe it is a teen-ager thing," Petrenko said Tuesday in an interview. He said that he and his wife speak frequently to Baiul and attempt to advise her, but she has not listened "for the last period of time. She wants to be on her own, wants to live her own life, she wants to have freedom. This, maybe, is the result of it. She got everything at 16. She couldn't handle it right away. Maybe this will be a good lesson."

Nina Petrenko said: "We are sorry for the thing she has done. Teen-agers, you can't control them all the time. My mom talks to her a lot about it. We understand she is a teen-ager, but she also has a responsibility for all her fans."

At the Olympics, Baiul was a 16-year-old waif who stood 5 feet 2 inches and weighed 95 pounds. She has since grown four or five inches and has added about 10 pounds. The added height and weight make jumping difficult for a skater. Baiul's situation has been complicated by injury, and an apparent headstrong determination to make decisions on her own.

"It's very clear that Oksana makes her own decisions," said Michael Carlisle, who represents her with the William Morris agency. "At age 19, maybe that's not how it should have been, but so far, that's been the case."

He added: "Thank God no one was seriously hurt. She needs to pull it together. We're trying to rein her in. Hopefully, out of this experience will come an understanding of what behavior is appropriate."

Katarina Witt, the two-time Olympic champion from the former East Germany, said it can be "overwhelming" to adjust to opportunities and responsibilities after moving from the East to the West. At least she was 22 and had parents to guide her, Witt said, while Baiul was 16 and without family support.

"I think she wants to be a little rebel now," Witt said.

"When you are young and successful overnight, you take it for granted. It takes years to appreciate success. She needs good guidance, people she can trust and wants to trust. But she's young and wants to do what she wants. Maybe it's something every teen-ager has to go through. You put your head through the wall until you say, 'I've done this. I have to change.' Everybody adores her and wants to help her. She has to want to be helped."
