Sandinistas arrive early for peace talks with Contras

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — In a surprise move, a Nicaraguan government delegation arrived in San Jose and asked the Contra rebels to open the first direct cease-fire talks of the 6-year-old war a week ahead of schedule.

Contra leaders were to meet today with mediator Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo to discuss the framework for direct talks next week with the Sandinistas.

But Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister, and his delegation arrived unexpectedly late Wednesday and told The Associated Press the direct talks should begin right after the Contras meet with Obando y Bravo.

"If the Resistance (the Contras) accept that we meet, we would be gaining time. Depending on what is agreed, we would probably schedule to hold a second meeting within the next few days," Tinoco said after arriving from Managua.

Tinoco said the Sandinistas wanted to take advantage of the presence of both Obando y Bravo and the Contra leadership to get the cease-fire talks under way. The cardinal is scheduled to leave next week for a visit to the Vatican and does not plan to return until some time in February.

There was no immediate response to Tinoco's offer from the Contras.

Obando y Bravo, the archbishop of Managua, mediated indirect talks between the two sides and has agreed to act as go-between in the direct talks, too.

The Sandinistas may want to hold the talks early so that an agreement can be reached in time to head off approval of more U.S. aid for the Contras. The direct talks were not scheduled to open in San Jose until next Wednesday, a day after President Reagan is expected to ask Congress for more Contra aid.

Last fall, Reagan administration spokesmen in Washington said the president was prepared to ask Congress for $270 million more for the Contras. Congress approved $100 million in the fall of 1986 and another $8 million, in non-military aid, last December for the Contras.

But faced with persistent and strong Democratic opposition, Reagan is expected to scale down the request he will make next Tuesday, the day after his annual State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress.

Reagan delayed his latest planned request for several months, largely at the insistence of Democratic congressional leaders who urged him to give a Central American peace initiative a chance to work.

But the peace plan's final deadline for compliance with its call for regional cease-fires and democratic reforms passed last Friday with no end to hostilities in Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala.

The five Central American presidents who signed the peace plan met in San Jose late last week to assess progress of their pact. They ended their summit Saturday without setting any new deadlines and urging Nicaragua to comply with the plan's demands "immediately and unilaterally."

Under heavy pressure from his colleagues, President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua announced at the close of the meeting that his government was willing to meet directly with the Contra leaders for the first time.

Ortega also lifted a 6-year-old state of emergency and announced an amnesty for several thousand political prisoners, providing that either a successful cease-fire is reached or that the United States or another non-Central American country agree to accept the detainees.

Immigration and Naturalization officials from El Paso are accepting walk-in applicants for temporary residency from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. today and from 8 a.m.-noon Friday in the Midland U.S. Federal Building, 200 E. Wall St.

The deadline for amnesty applications to be turned into the Immigration and Naturalization Service is arriving soon, with only 89 business days left to process paperwork, said INS officials at a Wednesday press conference.

"Time is running out. We don't want anyone left out," said Henry McGehee, district legalization officer of INS's El Paso office.

People who have lived in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982 have until May 4 to apply for temporary residency.

INS officials will answer questions and take walk-in applicants today from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to noon in Room 224 on the second floor of the U.S. Federal Building, 200 W. Wall St.

This week's visit is the fourth made to Midland by INS officials who have set up appointments to process applicants hoping to eventually become citizens, but it is the first time the agency has accepted walk-in applicants or just general questions, McGehee said.

In the El Paso INS's district, which runs as far east as Big Spring and includes parts of southern New Mexico, only about 1,900 applicants — or half of those estimated to be eligible in

Abandoned girl's legs to be amputated

GARY, Ind. (AP) — A 9-year-old found abandoned in an unheated house and facing amputation of her legs because of frostbite has been overwhelmed by an outpouring of sympathy and concern from around the country, officials say.

A dozen stuffed animals arrived at Wyler Children's Hospital in Chicago, where Dariwin Carlisle was listed in fair and stable condition as she awaited surgery today to remove her legs at midcalf.

The hospital switchboard also has received more than 100 calls of concern about the girl, said Gretchen Flock, spokeswoman for the University of Chicago hospitals, which includes the children's medical center.

"It has meant a lot to her," said Anna Feldman, a social worker at Wyler.

"I have never seen this kind of response," said Suzanne Banz, Wyler's administrative manager. "Everyday people are calling, simply appalled about what has occurred. People cried on the phone, they are so moved. They couldn't believe a mother would do this. They want to help."

Modesta Williams, Angelo jail panel members

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A hefty list of Midland civic leaders list ranging from Modesta Williams to former mayor Ernest Angelo have formed a "Citizens for a New Jail" committee that hopes to persuade voters to support a $3.8 million bond issue election Jan. 30.

"Everything that goes before the voters needs a cheering squad to generate some enthusiasm for it," said one of the committee's members, District 4 City Councilman Robert Rendall.

Another committee member, Bro Seltzer, who helped organize the Tax Awareness Group, said, "Anytime you talk about raising taxes there is going to be a set percentage of the people on a fixed income...that are going to come out and oppose those things."

The group's steering committee includes District 1 City Council member Bill Williams, United Bank President Wayne Merritt, Subsurface Library (geological records library) co-owner Kingdon Hughes, First City National Bank President Darryl Pounds, Midland Phillips 66 oil distributer Ken Peeler, rancher and oil operater William Blakemore II, Lewellen Construction Co. partner Joan Lewellen and attorneys, Randy Turner, Jack Ladd, Smith Ray and Al Walvoord, all with Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder Inc.

The group plans to publish facts describing the advantages of the new jail that would be located on property near downtown Midland known as the South Superblock, Merritt said.

"I don't have any fear that it will fail if people take the time to look at the situation," said Merritt who served on a Chamber of Commerce Jail task force appointed to study the overcrowding problem in early 1985 before bond election for a new jail failed.

"There certainly aren't any alternatives that anyone's putting on the table that are viable," Merritt said.

The committee's treasurer, Mrs. Williams — wife of Midland oil man Clayton Williams — said the group hopes to raise $10,000 to use for promoting the bond issue.

Contributions can be sent to Citizens for a New Jail, P.O. Box 3090, Midland, Texas 79702.

Mrs. Williams said the new jail will help keep money in Midland that is now being spent on transporting excess prisoners to other counties.

Midland Sheriff's office Capt. Richard Sexton said the county spent about $300,000 last year to transport excess prisoners to other jails.

But Sexton said the cost was about $100,000 higher than normal because extra prisoners are having to be shipped out while the fifth-floor jail undergoes reconstruction to conform with state standards.

Bill Williams, who led opposition to a 1985 jail bond issue, said he is in support of this general obligation bond because, "It's a very good, sound conservative proposal."

The cost is less than half of the $10 million failed bond issue, and the location near downtown Midland satisfies most the attorneys and judges, Williams said.

"I think we've all determined that the state is not going to meet the needs and they are going to put the problem of where to put people back on the counties," he said.

Seltzer, who also participated in the 1985 Chamber of Commerce jail study, said he will encourage the about 250 members of TAG — which works to make governmental bodies responsive in spending — to vote for the jail bond issue.

Seltzer said the jail should pay for itself by renting space out to federal prisoners and it will eliminate the duplication of a county and city jail.

Bank head wants to be involved in community

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

The new president of First RepublicBank Midland, Marvin Shiebout, said today he intends the bank "to continue to provide quality services to our customers and to be actually involved in the community and the market place."

The president's election was announced Wednesday, when the bank also announced 1988 board members.

Shiebout, whose experience in banking lies mainly in oil and gas lending, said the local economy continues to show signs of stability.

The bank's intention within that stablity is to maintain the full gamut of services the bank now offers, he said.

The new president joined the RepublicBank Corp. in 1975, spent eight years with RepublicBank Dallas, moved to RepublicBank Houston as a senior vice president, and came to the Midland affiliate in February 1984.

Prior to his election as president, he had overseen the bank's lending operations, he said.

Wednesday's announcement of officers included news that Matthew P. Murphy would retain his position as the bank's chief executive officer and add the title of board chairman to his resume. Murphy previously had held the president's position.

Other board members elected for 1988 were Shiebout, Bill J. Hill, Sam W. Baker, Lloyd A. Hales, R. Scott Terry, W.J. Mewhorter and John F. McGuigan, all of Midland.

Appointed to the bank's advisory board were Midlanders John L. Cox, Roy E. Campbell, L. Decker Dawson, James E. Hall, W.D. Kleine, B.J. Pevehouse, Clarence Scharbauer III and Jack Walcher.

In announcing the selections, Murphy said that "members of our board bring together valuable experience and knowledge of banking and our business environment."

First RepublicBank Midland is an affiliate of the First RepublicBank Corp., the 12th largest bank holding company in the United States. Bank assets are listed as $33.6 billion as of Sept. 30, 1987.

The bank — formerly known as the First National Bank of Midland before its Oct. 14, 1983, failure — had merged into the former Republic Bank Corp. of Dallas system.

RepublicBank last year merged with the InterFirst bank corporation, also of Dallas, resulting in the current First RepublicBank Corp.

Hearst survey shows voters frustrated with election process

By STEWART M. POWELL
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans are frustrated with the way the nation selects the president, believing the campaign takes too long, costs too much money and often produces disappointing leaders, according to a nationwide survey released Wednesday by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation.

Voters appear eager to revise the cumbersome presidential election process even before the first votes have been cast in the 1988 presidential campaign, according to the results of the fifth annual poll on national issues sponsored by the New York-based communications company.

The survey was released by Bennack at the National Press Club one year to the day before the inauguration of Ronald Reagan's successor, a president who will serve as the 41st chief executive since 1789.

Evidence of voter dissatisfaction with the process of selecting the president took a variety of forms in the Hearst survey.

Seventy percent of the 1,001 voters questioned said the campaign was too long. Fully 88 percent of those expressing an opinion suggested that it be confined to a year or less. Only 2 percent supported a campaign of more than 18 months, roughly the length of the campaign now.

Moreover, the responses showed that voters' decisions often are unaffected by the avalanche of activity and campaign advertising that traditionally dominates the early stages of the campaign.

The majority said the decision over a candidate comes after the conclusion of the primaries and the political conventions, not during the tumult of the earlier campaigning.

"I suspect that many voters feel a shortened campaign would mean more attention paid to substantive issues and less to imagery," Bennack said in remarks to a luncheon audience at the National Press Club.

The advertising that consumes millions of dollars apparently has limited effect, as well, the survey found. More than half those questioned said advertising and direct mail were "not important" in reaching a decision, and only one of five voters could recall a presidential campaign slogan from a past election.

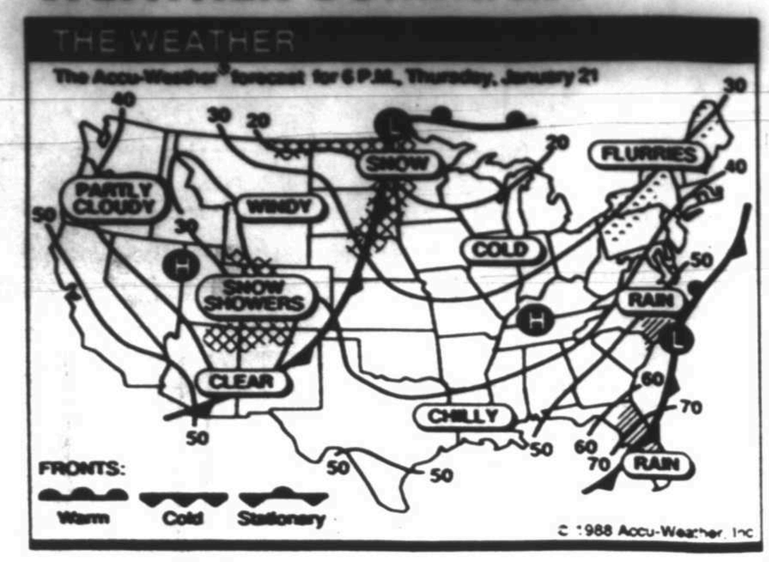

When asked to recall a campaign slogan, only three of the 1,001 persons surveyed, for example, sited the campaign slogan of Lyndon B. Johnson — "All the way with LBJ." Similarly, only three remembered Walter Mondale's biting question to Gary Hart during the Democratic presidential primaries in 1984, a remark that became a slogan: "Where's the beef?"

Said Bennack: "Expensive advertising campaigns, which are commonly known to consume at least half of a candidate's entire budget, need somehow to be made more effective, perhaps more informative and certainly more memorable."

The conclusions of the survey, conducted by Research & Forecasts Inc., a research consulting firm based in New York, were based on telephone interviews with 1,001 randomly selected Americans who said they had voted in at least one past presidential election. The interviews were conducted in the last two weeks of October. The margin of error was 3.2 percent.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cool temperatures forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tonight is expected to be fair with increasing cloudiness after midnight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low should be in the upper teens with light and variable winds.

Friday's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with the high to reach in the middle 40s. North winds will blow at five to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 44 was 32 degrees cooler than the record high of 76 set for that date in 1986. Today's low of 13 was eight degrees warmer than the record low of five set for this date in 1966.

STATE

Some light snow is possible across extreme West Texas tonight, but the rest of the state will have clear skies and cool to cold temperatures through Friday.

Clouds will be on the increase across Southwest Texas tonight, but skies will be partly cloudy by tomorrow in that area.

There were some clouds over mid and upper sections of the Texas coast early today, but the rest of the state had clear skies.

NATION

A powerful storm that pounded the West and the Midwest with high winds and heavy snow rolled into Canada today, but continued producing near-blizzard conditions in upper Michigan, where up to 22 inches of snow fell.

The storm also scattered snow showers across lower Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, western Ohio and the mid-Mississippi Valley.

Elsewhere, snow showers fell in the northern Rockies, while a mixture of snow, freezing rain, sleet and drizzle was scattered across northern New England.

In Marquette, Mich., along Lake Superior, the big storm was the worst in years, said police Lt. Tom Knapp, who added that the weather wasn't much cause for concern.

Whiteouts were reported in the Marquette area late Wednesday, along with 22 inches of snow and drifts 5 to 6 feet deep. A winter storm warning for the area remained in effect today.

Snow and blowing snow advisories were posted for other parts of Michigan and in Wisconsin's Lake Superior "snowbelt," while gale warnings were up for eastern Lake Superior and Lake Huron.

Very cold air chilled much of the Plains, with freezing temperatures reported as far south as San Antonio, Texas. A freeze warning was issued for inland areas of extreme southern Texas.

In northern Illinois, an ice jam on the Kishwaukee River combined with recent rainfall and snowmelt to push the river 2 feet over flood stage at Perryville.

In Pennsylvania, rainfall and melting snow caused minor flooding Wednesday, and small streams in the southeast section of the state were rising rapidly.

Dense fog blanketed much of the Atlantic Coast from New England and eastern New York down to eastern Georgia.

Today's forecast called for rain from Florida through southeast Virginia; scattered snow showers from the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes through northern New England; widely scattered snow showers in the northern Plains and central Rockies; fog and haze in Northwestern valleys and strong, gusty winds in Montana.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Tonight: Fair skies with increasing cloudiness after midnight. The low should be in the upper teens with light winds. Friday: Partly cloudy with the high in the middle 40s. Winds will be northerly at five to 15 mph.

Hart accused of financial irregularities

Hart

LACONIA, N.H. (AP) — Former staffers say Gary Hart's 1984 and 1988 presidential campaigns took advantage of supporters' financial aid to skirt federal limits on contributions. The Democratic contender today declined comment on the new alegations.

Aides traveling with the former Colorado senator said he was not familiar with the specifics of the allegations, raised by The Associated Press, and that he might comment later.

On Wednesday, two former Hart staffers, speaking on condition their names not be used, talked of campaign practices such as receiving non-cash donations that were not reported, and accepting services from businesses that then sent bills knowing they would not be paid.

Hart pledged on Wednesday to investigate one set of allegations — reports that video producer Stuart Karl may have improperly bankrolled Hart's two presidential campaigns.

"We will comply with all the laws and regulations and hopefully go beyond minimum requirements to meet our own very high standards," Hart told reporters at a campaign stop in Keene, N.H.

"I will hold myself responsible for whatever happened and not shift any blame to anyone else."

The Democratic presidential hopeful said he knew nothing of the details of the arrangements with Karl — involving services at the 1984 Democratic National Convention and salary payments to Dennis Walto, who worked for Hart as an advance man at least since 1985.

The Miami Herald reported Wednesday that Karl piloted Hart, paid a monthly salary of $3,000 to Walto when the aide was traveling with the candidate in 1986 and early 1987, and covered 1984 campaign expenses such as car rentals, printing and sign costs.

Federal law limits individuals to a maximum $1,000 contribution to a presidential campaign. Corporations are prohibited from making any such donations.

Hart campaign manager Susan Casey issued a statement late Wednesday in Denver giving details on the arrangements with Karl, saying they were thought to be proper and asking for a Federal Election Commission review.

Ms. Casey said Karl billed the Hart campaign for $96,000 in services, a debt that is under settlement review by the FEC for 10 cents on the dollar.

"However, the issue of impropriety goes beyond simply a legal question," the statement said. "Any contributions or any arrangements that appear to violate even the spirit of the law are unacceptable."

Former Hart campaign staffers told The Associated Press that the help from Karl was just one example of a variety of ways Hart's campaigns knowingly took advantage of financial aid from supporters.

But both were quick to say that many campaigns do precisely what Hart's, with the goal being to save campaign money, not just evade the laws.

"It's all true," said one former staffer, speaking of the Karl allegations, on the condition of anonymity.

"When we needed fliers printed or a chartered plane, Stuart managed to get it done" without the 1984 campaign paying for the services, the source said. "Stuart picked up the tab for a variety of other things."

The source said there was no doubt that people at the highest levels of the Hart campaign knew what was going on.

Karl, who amassed his fortune marketing Jane Fonda workouts and Playboy videos, did not return telephone calls Wednesday.

The source, who was in a position to deal with Karl, added that during 1986 and early 1987, "Walto was a full-time advance man for Hart and he was on Karl's payroll."

Walto was working for Hart's campaign as recently as Tuesday.

Another staffer who took part in Hart's 1984 campaign said that committee was often strapped for money and often tried "to get something for nothing."

This source, who also spoke on the condition of anonmynity, said the campaign would often contract for services from supporters, such as car rental agencies, whose owners did not expect to be paid. The vendors would willingly provide the goods and servces under such conditions because they wanted to help Hart, said this official.

Campaigning in New Hampshire, Hart was dogged with questions about the relationship with Karl. He first said he didn't know Walto's position with the campaign, then said he knew Walto was an advance man.

Hart acknowledged later Wednesday that Walto was on Karl's payroll.

In Des Moines, Walto said, "I had a job with Karl" and "I performed duties for" the video producer.

FEC spokesman Sharon Snyder said she could not disclose whether the agency is conducting an investigation into the matter.

The law also bars an employer from assigning an employee to work on a candidate's behalf for more than an hour a week unless that work is reported as a contribution in kind and subject to the same $1,000 limit.

Survivor says there wasn't 'time to scream'

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — The passengers on a commuter flight didn't even have time to scream as the plane snagged a wing on a snow-covered ridge, turned cartwheels and slid 200 feet, said a survivor of the crash that killed nine.

"The pilot told us we were 10 or 20 minutes outside of Durango," passenger Paul Schauer, who slogged 1½ miles through snow to get help, said Wednesday from his hospital bed.

"I looked down and could see the lights and thought we were awfully low for being that far out," said Schauer, 39. "The next thing it was like being at a carnival on a tilting cup.

"No one had time to scream."

Seventeen people, including two pilots, were aboard the Continental Express flight Tuesday night when the twin-engine turboprop Swearingen Metro III plane crashed.

The crew members and seven passengers were killed. By Wednesday night, only Schauer and two others remained hospitalized, and they were listed in good or fair condition at Mercy Medical Center.

The National Transportation Safety Board expects to release preliminary findings tonigh spokesman John Lauber said Wednesday.

Schauer and six others who survived, including a mother carrying her 23-month-old daughter, walked 1½ miles through darkness, tangled brush and waist-deep snow in 20-degree temperatures to summon help, said La Plata County sheriff's Sgt. Dan Bender.

"Under normal conditions, nobody could walk through this," Bender said. "But the survivors were not under normal conditions. Adrenalin, shock, whatever, they did a superhuman feat."

Schauer, who went ahead of the others, said he climbed to the top of a hill and used lights in the distance to guide him.

"I would count 50 steps and then rest," said Schauer, a bus system consultant from Boonville, Mo. "I was hurt and it was exhausting. The snow was up to my waist, and I'm over 6 feet. At times, I hit some gullies and the snow went up to my shoulders."

Schauer reached a farmhouse, where Thelma Tate, 79, opened the door and saw him, then called the sheriff's office.

Officials said the plane, en route from Denver, went down minutes after flight controllers cleared it to land at La Plata County Airport, about five miles from the crash site.

The crash, which occurred in thick brushland 10 miles east of this southwestern Colorado city, demolished the plane's nose, but spared passengers in the rear.

Passenger Susie Welch, 34, of Durango, described the plane's movement as a "barrel roll."

"We hit the first time, and I thought it was a rough landing," she said. On the second impact, the lights in the cabin went off.

Lee Vollmer, 25, of Longmont survived the hours trapped in the wreck until rescuers took her to a hospital, but died Wednesday.

Two of the others killed died while rescuers worked to extricate them from the wreckage.

"They died right at the very end, trapped in the wreckage. Certainly the cold was a factor," said Keith Roush, a member of the sheriff's search management team.

Sheriff Bill Gardner said it took rescuers more than an hour to reach the site, guided by Schauer's trail down the hillside.

Lawman says Mecham interfered with probe

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham angrily sought to interfere with a 1987 probe of an alleged death threat, the state police chief told a House committee considering impeachment of the embattled governor.

However, Ralph Milstead, director of the Department of Public Safety and the first witness to testify before the panel, said he was not certain whether the Republican governor's action constituted an illegal obstruction of justice.

In a KOLD-TV interview after Wednesday night's hearing, Mecham called Milstead's account "the most far-fetched thing that I've ever heard of."

The governor said he will prove he's not guilty of violating any laws, "and when I do there's going to be an awful lot of people with some great big egg on their faces."

House members who attended the hearing said they wanted to hear more before deciding whether to impeach Mecham for reportedly trying to thwart the investigation of one of his appointees.

Mecham also is accused of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan and borrowing $80,000 in what the House special counsel contends is state money from the governor's protocol fund.

Mecham, who faces a likely recall election in May, is to be arraigned Friday on six felony counts of fraud, perjury and filing false documents in connection with his failure to report the $350,000 loan.

Milstead told the committee that on Nov. 15, Mecham told him, "Don't tell the attorney general anything" about the alleged death threat against Donna Carlson, a former top Mecham aide and a grand jury witness in connection with the $350,000 loan.

Milstead quoted the governor as saying that Attorney General Bob Corbin "is out to hang me and I'm not going to help him in any way. I don't want you to help him get me."

"I was completely taken aback by this," Milstead told the committee. "His anger toward the attorney general surprised me. I don't know why he didn't want me to cooperate."

Lee Watkins, then the head of state prison construction and a former Mecham campaign finance worker, was accused of threatening Ms. Carlson's life but has denied making any such threat. Milstead said he thought Mecham was attempting to protect Watkins, who was subsequently investigated by the grand jury.

Milstead acknowledged he had not tape-recorded the conversation and said that during the conversation Mecham did not threaten to take any action against him if he cooperated with the attorney general.

The public safety director said he was not certain whether the governor's statements to him constituted an obstruction of justice.

TALKS

Obando y Bravo mediated two earlier rounds of indirect cease-fire talks in the Dominican Republic. Those discussions, in which both sides passed messages back and forth through the cardinal, brought only a two-day Christmas truce.

With both sides maintaining diametrically opposite positions, the new round of negotiations also is not likely to produce a quick, sustained cease-fire.

Ortega is insisting that the talks deal solely with the mechanics of a cease-fire, while the rebels want to discuss a broad range of political subjects, including their demands for broader personal liberties and greater freedom of the press.

The rebels also have accused Ortega of agreeing to the new round of talks only as a ploy to fend off a favorable congressional vote on new Contra aid.

The House is scheduled to vote on Reagan's request on Feb. 3, with the Senate to follow on Feb. 4.

GIRL

The girl's mother, Darlwin Britt, 24, of Gary, was being held at Lake County Jail after surrendering Wednesday on preliminary charges of neglect of a dependent child and confinement.

County Prosecutor Jack F. Crawford will probably file formal charges today against Ms. Britt, said spokeswoman Diane Donovan.

If investigators determine that Ms. Britt locked up the child, "there could be child abuse, child abandonment or neglect charges filed against her," said Cpl. William Burns, a police spokesman. The mother refused to give police a statement, he said.

The child has been hospitalized since she was found Sunday wrapped in a thin blanket and huddled in the attic bedroom of a locked, abandoned and unheated house on the city's south side.

Jeff Griffin, one of two construction workers sent by a mortgage company to board up the foreclosed home, said he was nailing plywood over an attic window when he heard a voice say, "Please don't board me up."

The girl had been exposed to extreme cold for at least five days, doctors said. Severe frostbite stopped blood flow at mid-calf and made amputation unavoidable.

"If there was something else for us to do to save her legs, we would have done it," said Dr. Lawrence Zachary, her surgeon.

"She cried when we told her but, but you would, too," said Dr. Wilton Bunch, who will take charge of her rehabilitation. "I think she took it very well."

The child told her rescuers she had gone without water for two days and was unable to move. "I think she really thought we'd give her water and leave, and she'd wait until her mother got home," Griffin said.

The child has been visited by her great-grandmother, grandfather, an aunt and Griffin.

"I brought her the glasses she wanted from the house and a Speak-and-Spell game she really liked," he said, referring to her eyeglasses, which she left behind.

Harold Barnwell, director of county Child Welfare Services, said his office has received calls offering help from around the country, including one from a Denver woman who offered to adopt the girl.

"She feels overwhelmed by it all — much like any 9-year-old would," Ms. Feldman said.

The youngster will be fitted with artificial limbs, but the speed of her recovery is hard to predict. "So much of it depends upon the mental and emotional buildup of the patient," said hospital spokeswoman Mary Fetsch. "She seems to be a strong little girl."

Addie Goudeaux, the principal at Daniel Webster School, where the girl attended third grade, said Dariwin was a classroom representative to the student council and an above average student.

The youngster attended school regularly, appeared clean and appropriately dressed, and healthy, she said. "There was no way you could look at this child and tell this child came out of that house," she said.

The Student Council of Webster School is setting up a fund for Dariwin.

INS

the region — have been processed, said Elaine Mueller, an INS staff director.

In Midland, about 400 people have been granted temporary residency, Ms. Mueller said.

She added many Midlanders have bypassed local offices that help people fill out amnesty applications and gone directly to the El Paso INS office. But since a breakdown is not calculated for each city, the agency is not sure how many Midlanders have received temporary residency.

Some people have been reluctant to apply, fearing the information they turn into the agency to prove their continuous residency may be used to deport other family members who are not eligible.

However, McGehee said, "That cannot happen. The INS cannot use information on amnesty for any other purposes."

Also, employers who hesitate to give their employees letters proving a work history need not fear that the information will be turned over to the Internal Revenue Service or wage and hour board, McGehee said.

"We cannot give that information to any other governmental organization," he said.

For those that miss the INS visit this week in Midland, the office in El Paso will begin extending its hours Jan. 30 to include Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., McGehee.

Veteran charged with VA counselor's murder

KERRVILLE (AP) — A veterans affairs counselor who did all he could to help ex-servicemen was gunned down in his office, and an apparent disgruntled veteran was charged with murder in the slaying, officials said.

John W. Pettit, 54, a counselor with the Texas Veterans Commission, was shot to death Wednesday at his office, which is adjacent to Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Rufus William Smith, 63, a World War II veteran living in Fredericksburg, was charged with murder in the shooting. Justice of the Peace Pat Knox set bond of $300,000, and Smith was being held in the Kerr County Jail Wednesday night.

Hospital spokesman Bob Fair said Pettit had worked as the sole veterans' affairs counselor in Kerrville since August 1979.

Pettit's wife, Linda, a clerk at the hospital, was in her husband's office when the shooting occurred.

Suspect wants game show winnings

NEW YORK (AP) — A man arrested on mail fraud charges while trying to collect his $56,600 winnings from the television game show "Super Password" said he still wants the money, a newspaper reported today.

Kerry Ketchem, who used the name Patrick Quinn on four shows broadcast from Jan. 8 to Jan. 13, sent a Mailgram to the producer Wednesday saying he won the money fairly and provided the show with "priceless free publicity," according to The New York Times.

Ketchem won the biggest one-game prize in the show's more than 20 years, said Jerry Chester, a vice president at Mark Goodson Productions, which produces the show.

Ketchem had identified himself on the show as a government employee despite being sought by law enforcement officials in Indiana, California and Alaska for numerous fraudulent activities, according to authorities.

A Secret Service agent in Alaska recognized him, and he was arrested last Thursday at the producer's Los Angeles office when he went to collect his winnings.

In the Mailgram, Ketchem acknowledged that he "wasn't exactly whom I said I was," but said he deserved the money, the newspaper said.

Mother, children escape captor

WARE, Mass. (AP) — A mother and her two children escaped from a man holding them at gunpoint when her 9-year-old daughter sprayed a fire extinguisher at the gunman, police said.

Susan Welsh, 35, her daughter and 11-year-old son, ran about a mile to a police station after their escape early Wednesday, police said.

Police then returned to the house to arrest Ms. Welsh's boyfriend, Michael Royce, 33, said Sgt. Richard Primavera.

"We approached from the kitchen side, rushed the door and overpowered him in the kitchen," said Primavera. "He didn't really know what hit him."

Royce was released on personal recognizance after pleading innocent Wednesday in Ware District Court to three counts of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Police had no details on what caused the dispute.

Police said they confiscated four shotguns, two rifles and two bows at the house.

Airman gets sentence

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An Air Force security officer has been sentenced to a year in military prison for an adulterous romance with an enlisted woman that officials said they tried to cover up.

The affair came to light when military police officers saw the two kissing in a parking lot near a coffee shop.

The Air Force said it was efforts by Capt. James Etheridge Jr. to cover up the affair with his female subordinate that earned him the tough sentence and ended his military 20-year career.

Etheridge, who is married and has a family, was convicted of adultery, fraternization with an enlisted woman, obstruction of justice and conspiracy. He was sentenced Jan. 6 to a year in Leavenworth prison and fined $12,000.

Officials said it hasn't been decided what, if any, disciplinary action will be taken against the woman, whose identity was not released. Fraternization isn't a crime for enlisted personnel.

Ashland awards grant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. has awarded a $250,000 grant to the University of Pittsburgh to study the effects of a million-gallon diesel fuel spill on the Monongahela and Ohio rivers.

The fuel contaminated the rivers after an Ashland oil storage tank ruptured south of Pittsburgh on Jan. 2.

Environmental, social and health problems caused by the spill will be examined in Pittsburgh and downriver communities, the university said Wednesday.

Authorities said what's left of the spill, which disrupted water service in three states, was expected to reach Huntington, W.Va., by Saturday.

The university's Center for Hazardous Materials Research will receive help from the Netherlands Organization for Applied Scientific Research, an applied research group, during the one-year study.

Woman fined $7,000

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A woman and her company have been fined $7,000 for paying $20,000 in kickbacks over three years to a Morton Thiokol purchasing agent.

U.S. District Judge David K. Winder imposed the fine Tuesday on Evelyn Deese, 56, president of Acme Seal and Fastener Inc.

He fined her $2,000 personally and $5,000 on behalf of her Arlington, Texas, company.

As part of a plea agreement, Deese had agreed to testify against John E. Ward of Salt lake City, former Morton-Thiokol purchasing agent.

Deese admitted paying a kickback for parts used in Thiokol's subcontract for the Navy's Trident missile.

In addition to Ward, seven people and eight companies were indicted in the kickbacks scheme. Ward pleaded guilty to mail fraud, filing a false tax return and receiving a kickback and is to be sentenced March 15.

Subway riders sprayed

NEW YORK (AP) — Dozens of people on a subway platform Wednesday night were sprayed in the face with a Mace-type chemical by someone aboard a train pulling out of the station, authorities said.

At least 34 people were treated, most of them suffering from eye and throat irritation and dizziness. A 44-year-old woman was hospitalized with chest pain, shortness of breath and an irregular heartbeat, authorities said.

A pregnant woman was also among those treated.

Medicine will make many leaps by next century

EDITOR'S NOTE: In a special 10-part series for the Associated Press, John Diebold, an internationally acknowledged authority in technology and management, predicts the future in letters to his 5-year-old daughter who will be 25 in the year 2010.

By JOHN DIEBOLD

Dear Emma:

Medical science will have wiped out a great many diseases in the next quarter century. In your adulthood, Emma, you will be hard pressed even to remember the names of extinct, crippling diseases that had threatened your parents' generation. The mention of heart disease and cholesterol will sound as old-fashioned as the term "consumption" did in 1988.

I believe we can expect a cure for AIDS in the early 1990s and a vaccine by the late 1990s. Until then, sexual conservativism and caution will continue, but the cure will result in swinging the pendulum back toward much freer lifestyles.

It will soon be possible to detect most diseases in the unborn fetus, and sophisticated surgery will correct them in the womb. The next step is genetic surgery before conception — correcting defects in parents by inserting counterparts to the defective genes in the parents' bodies.

Parents will be able to select the sex of their babies, too, but strict laws will prevent them from choosing other physical traits. Although it will be possible to alter the genetic code and create blond, blue-eyed babies on demand, governments will wisely prohibit the practice. The specter of Nazi doctors trying to perfect a master race 50 years ago will haunt society's conscience well into the next century.

Organ transplants will be commonplace in your lifetime. Human tissue "farms" will grow living replacement tissues, from single cells to full lungs and hearts. In the 1980s, we already have such techniques for growing skin tissue to graft onto burn victims. The technique will have been vastly enhanced in your century, Emma.

Until that time, organ transplants will be facilitated by computer networks that will quickly match available donors with patients. These networks will operate on an international level, so that a liver donor in Singapore can be matched with a transplant patient in London.

Doctors could be spared from having to ask bereaved families for permission to use organs from deceased patients — that is, if laws are passed to ease this process. Parents could be required to indicate whether they will grant permission to transplant their babies' organs in the event of their death. The law could allow for children, when they reach the age of 18, to alter their designated donor status. However, the movement that began in the 1960s to limit government intervention in citizens' lives makes such a move unlikely.

Technology will, as ever, move much faster than the ability of policymakers to cope with it. Abortion should have been rendered virtually unnecessary by simple and safe contraceptives for male and female. However, I expect the same conservative groups that oppose abortion will also oppose the legalization of new contraceptives.

Poor women and families on Medicaid will be left with few choices, while affluent men and women will purchase more advanced contraceptives from abroad. A conservative Supreme Court will have reversed its stand on abortion, making it illegal in the U.S. Right-to-life debates will continue.

Even greater controversy wil rage over the right to death. How long should doctors prolong human life? It will now be possible to keep frail, elderly patients alive almost indefinitely.

And what of the poorer nations of the world? The gap between rich and poor will be felt strongly in the area of medicine. Africa will be troubled by AIDS long after the U.S. found a cure for it. And many of the world's poorer citizens will be reduced to selling their blood and organs in order to survive — a black market in human parts will exist, contrary to Western laws, serving a clientele of wealthy, aging persons.

And computers will have a prominent role in caring for the elderly. Electronic devices will help monitor the condition of out-patients and assist in at-home nursing care. Robots will even act as companions and nurses to elderly patients.

Thee will be much popular approval of the products of genetic engineering. Food crops will be extremely rich in nutrients. Household pets will live longer and healthier lives, and new breeds will be developed to adapt well to the household interiors of the future.

Perhaps you, Emma, will own one of these pets: docile llamas, highly intelligent pigs, and even horses engineered into smaller, more manageable forms. Homes will bloom with household plants that require little or no care. These everyday conveniences will help promote a positive public image for genetic engineering.

By now, a new government agency — the Department of Biological Sciences and Genetic Engineering — will be assigned to regulate new genetic processes and to patent new life forms.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 25. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

a'pri-kot'

apricot — (noun) Apricot can be pronounced two different ways. The "long A" pronunciation is more frequently used in the South than in the North. An apricot is an oval, orange-colored fruit that resembles both a peach and plum in flavor. It is believed the word is derived from the Latin word, "apricum," meaning a sunny place — certainly a location you can imagine as you enjoy eatign this juicy, tasty fruit.

SURVEY

The study found that voters are considerably less concerned with the personal morality of candidates than recent media coverage might suggest. Asked the "single most important standard" for judging a candidate, 41 cited honesty and 37 percent cited shared political beliefs, compared to only 15 percent who cited "moral character."

"Candidates have been discarded or discredited because of private acts and personable foibles rather than their public records," Bennack said. "Yet there appears to be no consensus...on the relationship between moral character and fitness to serve in public office."

The responses also highlighted dissatisfaction with a system of public campaign financing that emerged from reforms following the Watergate scandal. Presidential candidates currently are eligible for up to $11 million each in matching federal funds.

Sixty-five percent of those questioned said candidates should receive either less federal support, or none at all. Forty-nine percent said they do not designate $1 of their federal taxes for use in federal campaigns, compared to 44 percent who do. Seventy-nine percent endorsed limitations on campaign spending.

The survey found many voters expressing disappointment with the performance of recent presidents. Twenty-four percent of those who said they voted for Jimmy Carter, for example, ranked his performance as the "most disappointing." Yet 19 percent of the supporters of Richard Nixon expressed similar sentiments, as did 17 percent of those who voted for Ronald Reagan.

Voters were almost evenly divided on whether candidates should be subjected to an age limit. But of those who endorsed a limit, 56 percent favored ages between 61 and 70.

The survey corroborated Americans' modest involvement in the political process. Indeed, 80 percent of those surveyed said they had never attended a political rally for a presidential candidate, 88 percent said they had never worked for a candidate, 65 percent said they had never made a financial contribution. Twenty one percent of those who have voted in at least one presidential election said they had abstained from voting in at least one election because none of the candidates was appealing.

That disenchantment, coupled with voters' "rather spotty knowledge" of presidential election history, Bennack said, puts a greater burden on the news media to objectively inform the electorate.

"The survey tells us that the American public relies on the media...for its information on the presidential campaign," he said."...Certainly, we believe that the press is the safeguard of our political system and has an obligation to see to it that the American public is provided with the objective news it needs to become fully informed."

Yet the survey found the media may not be entirely effective.

Television, relied upon by 54 percent of the voters as the "most important" source of information in campaigns, was considered the most biased by 30 percent of the respondents. Newspapers, counted upon by 51 percent of voters as the primary source of information, were considered by 43 percent of those surveyed to be the most biased source of information.

"Far too many people perceive that media coverage may not be fair," Bennack said. "We must always bear that in mind...We view such findings as an indication that what we do well must be done better."

The survey from which these tables were compiled is based on 1,0001 interviews with Americans over age 21, who live in private households in the continental United States. The sample is representative of the U.S. population, with demographic data closely resembling U.S. Census Bureau data for gender, race, age, education and geographic region. The margin of error was plus or minus 3.2 percent. The poll was conducted by Research & Forecasts Inc.

Crime statistics revealing problems

Statistics certainly don't tell the whole story about crime. They don't reveal the motives behind the crimes, or the human suffering of the crime victims, or the never-ending work of law enforcement officials. Statistics are merely an abbreviation of the total crime story. But in that respect they can be critically important and indicative of trends that may prove harmful.

For example, a recent report from the Bureau of Justice Statistics contained this information: Only one-third of the people arrested on felony charges in 11 states went to jail and only a third of the individuals convicted of violent crimes were sentenced to more than a year.

If those statistics are surprising, consider these. Eighty-four percent of all those arrested for felonies were prosecuted and 62 percent were convicted, but only 36 percent served time in jail. What that says about the quality of our criminal justice system is depressing, at best.

It must be noted that officials with the bureau stressed that the statistics for this particular region of the country — Alaska, California, Delaware, Georgia, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Virginia — are not necessarily typical of felony cases in the rest of the nation. They say that future studies will help to provide a clearer picture of what actually is happening on crime and punishment nationwide.

No doubt the future information will be important in pointing out ways the criminal justice system can better tackle the problem of crime. But a couple of conclusions need to be drawn generally even at this early stage of the survey. One is that when only a third of those arrested on felony charges can expect to spend time in prison for their crimes or those who commit violent crimes can expect to spend no more than a year behind bars, the entire purpose of the criminal justice system is eroded and mocked.

For the system to be meaningful, those contemplating a criminal act have to at least fear that they will be held accountable by society for their actions. Without that assurance, there's no reason for them to hold back from criminal acts.

If society is not going to utilize its criminal justice system properly with the intent of making criminal acts outlawed behavior, what's the purpose of having laws?

Trust a peace plan

Central America's five presidents made a bold decision last weekend. Their plan called for Nicaragua and the United States to take simultaneous steps toward peace — steps neither side liked. With the plan's fate hanging in the balance, the presidents leaned hard on the Sandinistas to go first. The strategy seems to have succeeded.

Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua grudgingly goes along. Does he go far enough, and who is to judge? Predictably, Reagan administration officials insist he's offering only paper promises. But their appraisals have long since lost credibility. Congress would, wisely, listen to the answer of the presidents.

Ortega, on his best behavior, wants to persuade Congress not to renew aid to the Nicaraguan contras. No doubt the approach of the Feb. 3 showdown vote helped induce the concessions he made last weekend. He agreed to suspend emergency rule, even without a cease-fire, and to talk directly with contras, despite Managua's longstanding refusal to do so.

Congress has voted repeatedly on contra aid without ever before wresting such big concessions from the Sandinistas. Most of the credit belongs to Costa Rica's president, Oscar Arias. Beginning a year ago, he has kept a regional peace process moving forward, despite stubborn resistance from the Reagan Administration as well as Managua.

Using limited leverage shrewdly, he benefited from confusion in Washington last August to gain unexpected approval for his plan in Guatemala. Then, his stature enhanced by the Nobel Peace Prize, Arias pleaded, cajoled, joked, chided and reasoned to keep the plan alive. No one wants to be blamed for killing it.

Thus the Sandinistas agreed to name their most formidable internal critic, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, to head the reconciliation commission. La Prensa, an uninhibited opposition newspaper, was allowed to resume publication. Something like normal political activities also resumed, albeit under emergency laws permitting prolonged detention. Though he welcomed these shifts, Arias pressed for fuller compliance. Last weekend, Nicaragua found itself in blunt exchanges not with Washington but its neighbors.

The resulting concessions, true enough, are reversible and fragile. In the cardinal's words, Nicaragua has "much further to go." Indeed, Ortega's promises were belied by deeds in Managua. Opposition leaders had just been detained on charges of holding talks with contras. This hardly reflects a willingness to transform armed resistance into politics, the peace plan's purpose. Nonetheless, the peace process is alive and moving, with the burden now clearly on Nicaragua.

For the moment, as Arias said on American television, the future of aid to the contras "is entirely in Daniel Ortega's hands." If he carries out his promises, "then there's no more reason for aid to the contras because there's no more reason for war." The Central American leaders will judge Nicaragua's actions in coming days. That judgment deserves to weigh heavily when Congress votes.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Jan. 21, the 21st day of 1988. There are 345 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 21, 1793, King Louis XVI of France was executed by the guillotine.

On this date:

In 1861, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi and four other Southerners resigned from the Senate.

In 1908, New York City enacted an ordinance that made smoking in public by women punishable by a fine of $5 to $25 and up to 10 days' imprisonment.

In 1915, the first Kiwanis Club was founded, in Detroit.

In 1924, Russian revolutionary Vladimir Ilyich Lenin died of a stroke at age 54.

In 1950, a federal jury in New York found former State Department official Alger Hiss guilty of perjury.

In 1950, author George Orwell died in London.

In 1954, the first atomic submarine, the USS Nautilus, was launched at Groton, Conn.

In 1976, the supersonic Concorde jet was put into service by Britain and France, with flights from London to Bahrain and from Paris to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

In 1977, President Carter pardoned almost all Vietnam War draft evaders, a move that drew limited praise from pro-amnesty organizations and denunciations from major veterans' groups.

In 1982, Jack Henry Abbott, a convict-turned-author, was found guilty in New York of first-degree manslaughter in the stabbing death of waiter Richard Adan in 1981.

Ten years ago: In a speech to the Egyptian parliament, President Anwar Sadat accused Israeli leaders of sabotaging peace negotiations, but said "the door to peace is still open."

Pork express derailed by Congress

WASHINGTON — Every Christmas, members of Congress scramble like elves to pass their favorite treasures into law before they recess for the holidays. Often, the lawmakers hide little presents to themselves in bigger bills. The surprises sometimes masquerade as housekeeping changes, euphemistically known as "technical amendments."

Jack Anderson

Several members recently got caught sneaking in funding for everything from ski lifts in Idaho to a center for the study of Belgian endive.

The bolder members make their proposals in the open, on the Senate or House floor. One of the boldest is New Jersey Democrat Jim Howard, the foreman of the Capitol Hill Pork Factory, better known as the House Public Works Committee.

While other lawmakers grappled with trimming the budget deficit, Howard spent the last weeks before Christmas bringing home the bacon — scouring the Hill in search of ways to stuff a few more road projects into the stockings of his friends. He failed, but not for lack of heroic effort.

At first, he tried to create his own bill for these giveaways — a "technical corrections" bill that rightfully should be saved for correcting typos and mispellings. The Senate refused to buy his "corrections."

So, Howard forged on to the House Appropriations Committee, which was working on the continuing resolution, the bill that keeps the government running until individual budgets are approved. You might think that's an unlikely place to find millions of dollars in road projects, but you can't keep a good porker down. Howard's aide told our associate Stewart Harris that the congressman only tried the back-door tactic after the committee had let stand some pork barrel projects sent over by the Senate. The committee looked like an easy mark, but it wasn't. The members said no to most of Howard's more questionable projects.

Down, but not out, Howard then tried to tack his pet projects to the Budget Reconciliation Act, the bill that Congress hoped would slice billions from the deficit and settle the Wall Street jitters over the growing national debt. To no one's surprise, Howard's proposal was rejected.

Howard had only the most generous of intentions. He wanted to divvy up $31 million in road projects for the districts of his friends in Congress. It was probably just coincidence that those friends were also senior members of the house Public Works Committee: John Hammerschmidt, R-Ark., Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., and Bud Shuster, R-Pa.

Howard and his pals run a system that hands out public works money based on political clout, not on merit. That isn't to say these particular projects wouldn't be worthwhile, but the system doesn't allow for much weighing of priorities. Howard lavishes money on his friends while other urgent projects go unfunded.

Pork players argue that the money comes from the Highway Trust Fund, which is a separate pot of gold and doesn't count against the national debt. It is funded by gasoline taxes. What they don't seem to grasp is that many of the states would rather have the money go to needier projects.

For those states that manage to delay the unwanted projects and spend the money where it is really needed, Howard had a Christmas gift, too. He proposed language to force a state to spend money on projects recommended by Congress, even if the state officials know their road needs better. Fortunately for the states, Howard had no luck getting that passed, either.

ILLEGAL BARGAINS — Buying cars on the gray market may look like a bargain, but buyers have to skirt the law to get the cheapest price. Gray market dealers import luxury foreign cars direct to the buyer and skip the middleman. But they also frequently skip the emissions control equipment required in the United States. The Environmental Protection Agency investigated the gray market and found that some dealers are falsifying emissions certificates, claiming that the car carries pollution control gear when it does not.

MINI-EDITORIAL — If God had meant us to watch television commercials, He wouldn't have invented remote control. Now, Coca-Cola has the pluck to expect that we will not only watch the commercials, but that we will make plans to watch them. Coke announced it will produce the first 3-D commercial. That means getting a pair of Coke's special 3-D glasses and tuning in deliberately to catch the ad when it airs during "Moonlighting." (Coke didn't specify whether this will be a new episode or yet another rerun. Admittedly, that could make the commercial more compelling than the program.) The last time this kind of hype worked, Michael Jackson had to get his hair set on fire to guarantee viewers. Look out, Pepsi.

Polls show voters like ol' what's-his-name!

This is probably the toughest presidential election year the pollsters have ever had," Zimmich, a national pulse-taker, told me.

"The voter doesn't know the candidates, so we can't get any accurate information for our polls. Come with me tomorrow and I'll show you what I mean."

Art Buchwald

The next morning we started ringing doorbells in Norfolk, Va.

"Sir," Zimmich asked the person who answered a door, "do you have a preference for one of the Democratic candidates for President?"

"I like them all, especially when they're sitting around arguing with each other on television as to who is more qualified to save the country."

"You have to choose one," Zimmich said.

"You mean they are not all running in a package?"

"No, sir. They just look that way because you never see them photographed alone. Now pick a candidate."

"I like the little fellow," the man said.

"There are several short people in the race. Could you give me a name?"

"I don't know any of their names. Do you?"

"I have a list here and I'll call them out to you. Babbitt, Dukakis, Gephardt, Gore, Hart, Jackson, Simon."

"I think it's Dukakis because he tells it like it is."

"Like what is?"

"I'm not sure. I always say that when someone asks me which man I like."

"Are you saying the other candidates are not qualified?"

"How should I know? I have no idea who the hell they are."

"Thank you, sir," Zimmich said.

"Do you think Dukakis has it sewn up?" I asked Zimmich.

"We'll find out at the next house."

A man and woman came to the door. "When it comes to a Democratic President, who are you for?" Zimmich asked.

The man said, "Gary Hart. He has a fine record."

"A fine record doing what?" his wife wanted to know.

"He's broke," the husband said, "but he knows how to have a good time."

"Anybody but Hart," the wife said. "Even what's-his-name."

"I wouldn't give a nickel for what's-his-name. He's on the make," the husband said.

"For heaven's sake," Zimmich cried. "Give me a name. Any name."

"You know who I mean," the wife said. "The fellow who always crosses his legs during a TV debate."

"Yeh, that's the one. She'd vote for him before she voted for Hart because that guy looks like he never had a good time in his life," the husband said.

We retreated from the house. Zimmich was tallying up his sheet. "I have one for Hart and one for Dukakis."

"You better give one to Jackson or he'll accuse you of rigging the poll."

"Right. We have one more home to check," Zimmich said.

A lady answered and Zimmich addressed her. "I don't have much time. Are you going to vote Democratic or Republican?"

"They are all so good I haven't made up my mind. I especially like Cuomo," she said.

"He isn't a candidate."

"That's why I like him. Anyone who isn't running for President has a mind of his own."

"Would you take Cuomo over George Bush?"

"Oh, no."

"Why not?" Zimmich asked.

"Bush would get mad at me," she replied. "Sen. Bob Dole said on television the other night that although Bush hasn't done anything for the country during the last seven years he has a rotten temper."

Lawmakers STILL raking Bork over coals

WASHINGTON — In the present unsatisfactory state of the law we are not permitted to horsewhip lawmakers, for which fact some senators should give thanks. They deserve thrashing for their behavior concerning Judge Robert Bork — their behavior since the vote. They are giving constituents odd and sometimes dishonest explanations of why they opposed him for a seat on the U.S. Supreme Court.

George F. Will

Obviously, some senators are not proud of what they did or why they did it. A wise man once said, in defense of wartime deceptions, that sometimes the truth needs a bodyguard of lies. Today some senators do, too, when dealing with their constituents.

Alabama's Howell Heflin (D) should listen to his conscience, understood (by H.L. Mencken) as the inner voice that warns us that someone may be watching. Heflin is a large, loud man who seems to think the lungs are reservoirs of learning. In his newsletter to constituents (your tax dollars at work) and in letters, such as one to some constituents in Mobile, Heflin charged that, "The history of his (Bork's) life and his present lifestyle indicated a fondness for the unusual, the unconventional and the strange."

Regarding Bork's present life, Heflin says not a syllable to substantiate his smear. It just hangs there, reeking of innuendo and its author.

Concerning Bork's past, Heflin says Bork once considered himself a socialist. Heflin does not say that Bork committed that crime when he was a teen-ager. Then, Heflin says, "He nearly became a communist — he recruited friends to attend Communist Party meetings."

That is another lie. As Bork has cheerfully recounted his adolescent intellectual life, when he was 16 he and a friend attended one — count with us, Heflin: one — communist meeting.

In his role as God's servant, Heflin has told an Alabama radio station that he was "disturbed by his (Bork's) refusal to discuss his belief in God — or the lack thereof." To this Heflinism, three responses are required.

First, there was no "refusal." Second, in the hearings Heflin himself eschewed such questioning, noting that the Constitution says "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office." Third, with Heflin now implying such a test, there is a noticeable silence from the self-appointed guardians of "the American way." The liberal lobbyists are too tuckered out from Bork-bashing to rise to the challenge.

Heflin is not just disagreeable, he is ammunition for disagreeableness in others. Sen. John Warner (R-Va.) has quoted to constituents Heflin's smear about Bork's "fondness" for the "strange."

A Warner constituent wrote to Bork to report that Warner said he had looked Bork "right in the eye" after questioning Bork, and that Warner had told Bork he would oppose him. The constituent also sent to Bork a news story from the Richmond News Leader. It reported Warner saying that he did not "get satisfactory answers" to questions he put to Bork. It reported that Warner concluded from his questioning that Bork lacked a philosophic "center of gravity."

Well now.

Responding to Warner's constituent, Bork says he was available to Warner for more than three months and Warner did not ask to see him until the day of the Senate vote. Then Warner called. Warner said he had not studied the hearings. They met for approximately 10 minutes. Warner reminisced about a judge, then asked Bork about a Heflin remark about Bork's intellectual history. Bork answered. Warner did not respond. To Warner's constituent, Bork writes:

"I said I hoped he would vote for me and he simply did not answer. Nor did he look me in the eye. Our entire conversation was brief, devoid of content, and wholly unsatisfactory. When Warner had left, one of my clerks expressed surprise that the conversation was over so quickly. The absence of any real discussion made me think that Warner had merely wanted to be able to say he talked to me. After reading the account of his misrepresentations in the newspaper, I am convinced of it."

Some senators have said silly things to inquiring constituents. Florida's Bob Graham (D) wrote to a Daytona Beach Shores man that Bork did not understand that "the Supreme Court is the living instrument of the will and yearnings of the American people." How, then, does the judicial branch differ from a political branch of government?

Tennessee's Jim Sasser (D) wrote to a Signal Mountain, Tenn., voter that because Bork is not a Southerner, his nomination jeopardized the Court's "regional balance." And in a refreshing departure from a pretense of high principles, Sasser said "scientifically conducted polls" showed that Bork was unpopular.

Ohio's irrepressible Howard Metzenbaum (D) wrote to a priest in Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, that Bork "would support reinterpreting the antitrust laws to eliminate the right of retailers to give consumers a discount." That is an exquisitely misleading way of saying that Bork (perhaps the nation's leading authority on antitrust laws) favors allowing re-sale price maintenance for manufacturers. But Metzenbaum may be explaining things as well as he can.

Stand-ins fill gap for candidates

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — There were two distinct knots of people in the airport lounge — one surrounding a man who would be president and another, equally large, around a stylishly dressed woman who isn't running for anything.

"Oh, you absolutely MUST let me do that for you," drawled Elizabeth Hanford Dole, reaching for an autograph book and giving an admirer a hug.

"She speaks southern real good," observed her husband, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, the other celebrity in the room.

"We've got the best surrogate of any of the candidates, Democratic or Republican," bragged Dole spokeswoman Katie Boyle.

Virtually all the presidential campaigns have mobilized friends, relatives, political allies and elected officials to serve as surrogates, the stand-ins who fill the breach when the candidate has to be somewhere else.

Ned Chiodo wasn't terribly surprised when the phone rang and it was Richard Gephardt's brother urging consideration of his Democratic presidential bid.

"After a while, it's hard to tell one from another," said Chiodo, a former state legislator and precisely the sort of Democratic activist who's highly prized in the battle for next month's precinct caucuses.

With wide-open battles in both political parties the candidates have pulled out all the stops.

They include Euterpe Dukakis, the 84-year-old mother of Massachusetts Michael Dukakis, and Loreen Gephardt, 79-year-old mother of the Missouri congressman, and a host of children and in-laws.

Mrs. Dole is one of the biggest stars of the surrogate circuit.

A former Transportation secretary, Mrs. Dole is credited by aides with allowing her husband to retain his Senate post while staying on the campaign trail.

"She is a tremendous asset," said Ms. Boyle. "If it weren't for Elizabeth Dole, Bob Dole would not have been able to continue his Senate responsibilities."

Gephardt has been among the most active in bringing in a supporting cast, including his mother.

"She's got a condominium in Des Moines," said spokeswoman Laura Nichols. "She's been here since last summer."

Gephardt has also recruited other members of Congress, where he's the leader of the House Democratic Caucus. A group of 43 congressmen will travel to Iowa later this month, some on an "adopt-a-county" mission where they will pick a single county and help organize for Gephardt, campaign aides say.

Sen. Bob Dole and Pete DuPont, former governor of Delaware, exchanged pleasantries Wednesday afternoon when Dole relinquished the podium at a meeting of Iowans for Tax Relief at the Hotel Savery in Des Moines. DuPont was the next to speak and be interviewed.

Reagan's son discusses assault

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — President Reagan's son Michael said Wednesday he decided to reveal he was sexually molested as a child in a forthcoming autobiography because he "didn't have the guts" to tell his family face to face.

However, magazine reports revealed the contents of the book before it was published, an act the 42-year-old Reagan said was "tantamount and as bad as what that counselor did to me when I was 8 years old."

Reagan made the comments at a news conference prior to a fund-raising dinner for the Appleton-based Life After Assault League, a counseling organization for victims of sexual assault.

"I am a molested child. It's things that happened that tear your life apart from one end to the other," he said.

Reagan said he did not originally intend to mention the childhood incident when he began plans for a book about his life.

But when he at last told his wife more than 30 years after the molestation, she said he had to include it because it had affected his life, he said.

Last May, reports about the 30-page outline for the book revealed that Reagan was molested when he was a boy and photographed nude by a day-camp adult leader.

"It was a disheartening thing to me because it is something that you hide for so long that you want to be the one that finally says something about it," he said.

"The National Enquirer and Penthouse magazine ... to take that story to sell more magazines using my situation, that to me was tantamount and as bad as what that counselor did to me when I was 8 years old," he said.

After keeping the incident a secret, he told his wife, Colleen, on the eve of their 11th wedding anniversary, he said. He told the president and Nancy Reagan, his stepmother, in April, he said.

He said he began therapy to deal with the incident after he started work on the book.

Jackson seeks Denby's release

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson says he is involved in talks through private and government channels to win the release of American James Denby, who was shot down over Nicaragua and is being held there.

Jackson declined to discuss the specific nature of the negotiations but said Wednesday he was trying "through current contacts" to get the Illinois farmer freed as he did Navy pilot Robert Goodman whose jet was shot down over Syria in 1983.

Jackson said he has spoken to Denby's family about what he might do to help.

Denby's small plane was shot down by the Nicaraguans on Dec. 6 while he was en route to Costa Rica. Nicaraguan prosecutors have accused him of having ties to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels who are fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government.

Denby's son, James Jordan Denby Jr., told the Tampa Tribune in Florida that Jackson called last week "and he said he was going to fly down there and do something." The younger Denby said he was disappointed Jackson had taken no public action or called back.

Jackson said Wednesday, however, that he has no immediate plans to go to Nicaragua, and that he is trying to work on the Denby matter from the United States.

"We are making some approaches through some people seeking to gain his release," he said.

In early 1984, Jackson went to Syria and met with King Hafez Assad to discuss the matter of Goodman, who was being held in Syria. Jackson succeeded in winning Goodman's release and brought him home.

Trident 2 missile explodes in flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Trident 2 missile exploded today in the first test-flight failure in nine launches for the Navy's new submarine weapon.

The 44-foot, three-stage weapon thundered off a land launch pad at 5:08 a.m. and appeared to observers to be flying well. But nearly an hour later, the Navy reported that a malfunction had occurred 2 minutes 43 seconds after liftoff, near the end of powered flight and well down the Atlantic tracking range.

When the malfunction was detected, the range safety officer sent a radio signal to destroy the Trident 2, but the missile may have destroyed itself before the signal got there, a statement said. Debris fell harmlessly into the Atlantic Ocean.

Officials were studying radio data in an effort to learn what went wrong, the Navy said.

The failure ended a string of eight Trident 2 test flight successes that began with its maiden flight a year ago this month.

The test was one of a series of 20 planned from a land launch pad here. That series will be followed by between five and 10 submarine test launches, with the weapon scheduled to become operational in late 1989.

Trident 2 is an intercontinental range missile designed to propel up to 10 nuclear warheads to different targets. Each Trident submarine will carry 24 missiles.

Before former Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger left office last year, he had sought to test the missile with 12 warheads. That plan has been on hold while the Reagan administration discusses it with Congress.

Diana Ross no show at induction

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul McCartney refused a ticket to ride and Diana Ross decided it wasn't a day to be together, giving the Beach Boys' Mike Love bad vibrations at a lively induction dinner for the Rock'n'Roll Hall of Fame.

Love delivered a speech calling McCartney's and Ross' absences "a bummer," boasting about the Beach Boys' numerous performances and criticizing several other rockers before he left the stage saying "love and harmony."

That elicited a tweak, in turn, from Bob Dylan, who along with the Beach Boys, the Beatles, the Supremes and the Drifters was inducted into the hall Wednesday night at its third annual ceremony.

"I want to thank Mike Love for not mentioning me. I play a lot of dates every year, too. Peace, love and harmony is greatly important, indeed. So is forgiveness," Dylan said in a speech that drew the loudest ovation.

Forgiveness, however, apparently wasn't on the mind of McCartney, who said through a spokesman that he wouldn't appear with fellow ex-Beatles Ringo Starr and George Harrison because "after 20 years, the Beatles still have some business differences."

"I would feel like a complete hypocrite waving and smiling with them at a fake reunion," McCartney said, according to spokesman Joe Dera. McCartney was in England making a record with Elvis Costello, Dera said.

Appearing with Starr and Harrison at the $300-a-plate ceremony at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel were John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, and his sons Julian and Sean.

Police suspect insider took $3 million in armored heist

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bags containing $3 million in cash and checks vanished from an armored truck, and police Wednesday said they suspect an inside job.

Officer Joe Mariani said police believe the heist occurred sometime after the truck, loaded with two bins containing cash and checks, left an Armored Transport Inc. lot Tuesday night on a 15-minute, non-stop drive to a bank.

"Upon arrival, the passenger employee determined there was only one bin in the truck and he informed the driver employee," Mariani said.

Sgt. Richard Kalk said police found the bin along the route, but the 30 bags that had been inside were gone. "The preliminary information we have is that it's an inside job. A number of people had access to the money," he said.

Detective Andy Cicoria said: "He went from point 'A' to point 'B,' and when he got to point 'B' the money was missing."

Kalk said probably more than one person was involved in the theft.

"How many more, I don't know," he said. "We're interviewing several people. We're hoping to get the broth to thicken a little bit."

Couple sues FBI for $40 million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A couple acquitted in 1985 of charges they conspired to export missiles to Iran have filed a $40 million malicious prosecution lawsuit against the FBI.

Fadel Norman Fadel, 56, and his wife, Farhin Sanai, 54, were arrested in the conspiracy case in July 1985 following an undercover FBI investigation in Orlando, Fla. A Florida jury acquitted them five months later.

"It completely demolished their lives," attorney Michael Artan, who filed the lawsuit Tuesday in Los Angeles federal court, said of the FBI probe.

FBI spokesman Jim Nielson of Los Angeles declined comment.

The suit charges that during the investigation, an FBI informant who had a criminal record and ties to a New York organized crime family coerced the couple into going along with the missile sale.

According to the suit, the FBI knew of the threats but did no intervene.

Artan also said the couple remained in federal custody between the time of their arrests and acquittal.

DA calls witnesses in poisoning trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen this morning began calling witnesses as he continues to build the state's case against a 34-year-old Midland man accused of the chloroform poisoning death of Leza Kay Chandler, who was found dead in her home June 28, 1987.

The 358th District Court jury of six women and six men Wednesday finished listening to the last of about 9½ hours of audio and video surveillance recordings made of meetings between Kerri Dawn Middleton, a Midland friend of Ms. Chandler, and David Dowler, who owned and operated a photo developing store at Loop 250 and Midkiff Road.

District Judge Bill McCoy recessed Wednesday's court session shortly after 4 p.m. and ordered jurors to return to court at 8:30 this morning to continue hearing more testimony in the trial that is expected to last into next week.

The first recorded meeting between Ms. Middleton and Dowler took place July 16, 1987, slightly more than two weeks after the death of Ms. Chandler. The next meeting took place July 31 and the final meeting recorded by Odessa police and DPS detectives occurred shortly before Dowler's arrest Aug. 20, 1987.

References in the recordings to the use of cyanide as an effective — and difficult to detect — method of killing prompted police to seek new pathological studies in the deaths of 26-year-old Lisa Blythe Krieg and Juan Antonio "Tony" Casillas, 29. Both were friends of Ms. Chandler and Dowler. Casillas was a former husband of Ms. Chandler and business partner of Dowler.

Reexamination of tissue specimens from the bodies of Ms. Krieg and Casillas by Dr. Robert Bright revealed both had died as a result of cyanide poisoning. According to a report released by Bright Sept. 23, 1987, the body of Ms. Krieg at the time of her death in August 1983 contained 7.7 micrograms per milliliter of blood. The body of Casillas, when he died Feb. 12, 1986, contained 9.7 micrograms per milliliter of blood. According to Bright, cyanide is lethal when dosage is no more than 1.1 micrograms per milliliter of blood.

The recordings of meetings between Dolwer and Ms. Middleton indicate he was apparently aware cyanide had been used to kill Ms. Krieg and Casillas at least a month and a half before the results of Bright's pathological reexamination of tissue specimens were anounced.

According to Dowler, all a person has to do is splash or spray cyanide in someone's face and it works very quickly to kill them.

Taber's Cyclopedic Medical Dictionary states that cyanide (potassium or sodium) "starts working within a few seconds, rarely longer than 2 minutes. The patient utters a cry and falls insensible. Respiration is first rapid and convulsive, later slow and gasping. Death usually comes within 5 minutes."

Sheriff's office probe leads to arrest in 1984 murder

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

This week's arrest of a 35-year-old man suspected of involvement in a 1984 murder was familiar territory for Midland County Sheriff's Lt. Monnie Weddel.

Ramon Ochoa Dominguez, 2304 S. Terrell St., is being held in Midland County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond. He has been charged in connection with the July 7, 1984, slaying of Jesus Ricardo Corona, 37, 1704 Garden Ln.

Corona was gunned down in the same block where Dominguez was arrested — the 2300 block of South Terrell Street — in what lawmen said at the time was a drug-related killing. Corona was shot five times with a nine-millimeter automatic pistol, according to reports. His body was found just before 5 a.m.

Weddel said he began re-investigating the case just two weeks ago, and Monday night's arrest came after the "right questions were asked," he said.

"A lot of times, in cases like this, it comes down to asking the right questions at the right time," Weddel said. "It worked out this time."

On Feb. 27, 1987, a state district court jury sentenced 32-year-old Jackie Dorn to 99 years in state prison for the brutal ambush slaying of 45-year-old Wylie Wilson. Dorn was the fourth man sent to prison in connection with the crime — a crime that would not have been solved if not for Weddel's interest.

Wilson was found dead June 10, 1982, on a southeast Midland County lease road. His skull had been crushed, and he had been robbed of jewelry and cash, investigators said.

Lawmen who testified in Dorn's trial and the trials of his accomplices said the case had reached a dead end shortly after Wilson's body was found. The case remained dormant until Weddel, who was a sergeant at the time, and Texas Ranger C.J. Havrda began re-interviewing witnesses in Aug. 1985. They discovered a suspect who had been overlooked in the initial investigation, and the killers were soon found.

Information is sketchy about the investigation which led to the arrest of Dominguez, according to Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

West Texan says he'll bring 'rich background' to SBOE

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A West Texas man running for a spot on the State Board of Education said the fact his parents, wife, aunts, uncles and daughter all spent time as teachers will help him bring a "rich background" to the job.

Jim Wilks, of Sweetwater, was in Midland Wednesday to discuss his candidacy for the 15-member State Board of Education.

Wilks, 51, is an attorney who has served on the boards of the Sweetwater Independent School District, the Sweetwater Chamber of Commerce, the Sweetwater Downtown Lions Club and the Texas Association of School boards, he said Wednesday.

Presently he is chairman of the Texas School Services Foundation — a post held since 1984.

Said Bill Jackson, Midland Independent School Board trustee: "He will bring a lot of experience to the state board which will have new challenges this year."

"There is no doubt in my mind that the way public schools go in the next 10 years is the way the entire state will go," Wilks said.

Wilks said the challenges the newly elected board will face include curtailing the drop-out rate in Texas and grappling with threats to public education's budget.

"Schools don't belong to the districts or the teachers. They belong to the students," he said.

Needs study not meant to 'sit on shelf, collect dust,' consultant says

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The "worst possible thing that could happen" to Midland's communitywide needs assessment study now in preparation would be allowing it to "sit on a shelf and collect dust," Fort Worth needs consultant Pat Miller said Wednesday.

Miller and co-consultant Rene Moquin are engineering the private, multi-funded study called "Midland Introspective 1988" to determine community needs within the realms of physical, emotional, mental, material, and spiritual needs.

The six-month study is to be followed by an 18-month implementation program.

"What we are looking for is not to create our research (paper)," the sociologist said after a Wednesday session, "but to implement" the study for the community's betterment.

Miller, 40, told human-care services representatives in the Midland Center that the early stage of the study is "part of the implementation planning" and if they are not involved in the project "from the beginning," then there likely would not be a hearty follow-through effort.

"This is not an agency evaluation," Miller said. "This is not an agency evaluation of any sort."

By no means is the survey limited to United Way agencies, he said. It is to be steeped in the private and public sectors.

"We are going to listen to you," Miller told the human-care representatives.

Among the study's goals are identifying problems, assessing community values and describing the current level of effort in the service system.

In seeking out "barriers and problems" in the survey process, Miller noted that the intent would not be to compile a "wish list," but to reflect situations and circumstances.

The needs-assessment process is "not a panacea," Miller said. But it will "increase community awareness" of problems and will allow for the "allocation of resources more consistent with community values and needs."

Secretary of state casts ballot for more Texas voters

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Secretary of State Jack Rains, at Midland International Airport Wednesday, touches base with his Austin office, where his "Voter 88" program is headquartered.

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Texans can cast a vote in the state's presidential primary March 8 or be financially cast aside later by the federal government, Secretary of State Jack Rains asserted Wednesday.

Rains, in Midland to plug his office's "Voter 88" program, said he is "embarrassed" that Oklahoma, New Mexico, Louisiana and Arkansas have a higher percentage of registered voters than Texas, the third most populated state in the U.S.

Texas lags behind the national average of registered voters — 68 percent — by at least seven points, Rains added.

"I couldn't accept that fact," the secretary said in an interview at Tiger Charter late Wednesday afternoon.

Last August, Rains began his voter registration program, which seeks to enlist one million new Texas voters this year.

The secretary said a study found many Texans aren't registered to vote because they are a younger, mobile population who don't re-register every time they get a new address.

Furthermore, many don't register because the thrust of most voter sign-up drives are door-to-door during hours most are at work, Rains said.

While voting in the presidential primary or general November 1988 election may not be a panacea to the state's woes, "I don't see how not voting can help," Rains said.

"The vital interests of Texas are ignored for the most part. When foreign competition threatened Michigan's auto industry, Washington rushed to its rescue and negotiated "voluntary import quotas" to hold down imports of foreign cars.

"While oil-producing states have been hurt, perhaps crippled, all Washington offers us is rhetoric about the free market mechanisms that determine the price of oil," Rains said.

"If oil prices are set by a free market, then I am the King of Siam! To influence a democracy, one must vote."

Texans are hurt by a federal government that returns little more than two-thirds of every tax dollar sent, Rains said.

The situation is partially due to the fact Texans aren't heard in Washington, D.C., because they are not vocal at election time.

A lack of assertiveness by Texans at the polls also lets presidential candidates avoid a platform which includes a solid national energy policy, Rains said.

"We have a chance (March 8) to focus the candidates' attention on federal funds for Texas and an energy policy. Why, there are more voters in Harris County (Houston) than there are in the entire state of Iowa," the secretary said.

With the advent of the "Super Tuesday" primary in Texas — a primary which possesses the biggest voter bloc of all the 20 states that will cast ballots on that day — candidates will have to address Texas and shape their platforms around some of this state's needs, he said.

"The legislators in Washington, D.C., as well, will know they can't go home until they resolve the problems that face their constituents," Rains said.

Shifting his focus from the nation to the state, Rains said it is imperative Texans vote this year because of the important Supreme Court, Texas Railroad Commission and Board of Education elections at stake.

Rains' said his program involves the help of business and trade associations and traditional voter registrars such as the League of Women Voters and political parties.

Big businesses included in his drive are Southwestern Bell, the utilities, Southwest Airlines, the Southland Corp., Wal-Mart and the state government.

Registrations cards, for instance, are available at the business place itself or in places where the businesses operate — such as a convenience store or an airline ticket counter — or included in an electric bill, Rains explained.

While Rains said it is impossible at this point to assess the number of new voters his program has garnered, he said he has had requests for seven million voter registration cards.

If one finds himself unable to register to vote anywhere — a situation Rains finds hard to perceive — he should nonetheless call 1-800-252-VOTE, or "write me," he said.

Discontent with hometown often in heart of the beholder

Todd

Every so often, hometown folks come up with reasons why not to live in their hometown.

It's just the usual disgruntlement that comes with the emotional ups and downs of being human.

There are potholes in the city streets, the winters are too cold, the summers are too hot, the spring winds are too stiff, everybody in government and in big business is "on the take," the city water could be better, there are better jobs elsewhere, the roof on the house is leaking, the neighbors are too loud and gossipy, there are too few trees — or too many — it just doesn't feel right, and nobody understands.

It's rough being discontent — it takes a lot of work and energy. I wonder if the eagle ever is unhappy in his aerie or if the fox covets another's cave?

You know, I've lived on the plains, at the foothills of mountains, in forested country, and along the Gulf Coast. Each territory has its own beauty. And, ideally, I'd like to live on an acre of placid plains country within magnificent mountains graced by stately trees whisked by an ocean's breeze.

So, who doesn't want it all? Who doesn't want the idyllic life?

I never really wanted to live in a city, although I was born in one — Big D — without being privy to due process. Quickly, I'm sure and most unaware, I soon escaped to the country — to the rustic, rural life where friendship and neighborliness abounded in rich degree. The only fancy things we ever saw were either in store show windows on those occasional Saturdays when we went to town, or in the old black-and-white movies, now often tabbed "classics," we saw in town. Once, somebody brought a moving-picture show to our community, Pacio near Lake Creek in Northeast Texas, and set up a screen, probably a white sheet, on the side of Jay Gentry's Country Store. It was a locomotive "thriller."

You know, we all reach the age of growing up, so we "have" to decide to do something productive so that we can live somewhere without being a hobo who travels over plains and mountains in his coast-to-coast wanderings.

Where do most people work? In cities and towns, but of course. Why? The money is more plentiful there, but, as most of us know so well, it is not so accessible.

So, here we are working and playing and occasionally thinking about being somewhere else. I don't do that much anymore. It's too tiring and frustrating. Anyway, that sort of Sears-Roebuck wishful thinking may have its place for those who tend to cry in their beer and talk about how things could have been or how they where in the mind's-eye that might have got its wires crossed on what's real and what's imagined.

If there is any point to what I'm writing on this very day, it is simply this: "Honey," as philosopher Geraldine would say, "What you see is what you've got."

Here we are, and let's make the best of it.

Where else are you going to be at this very moment? You certainly aren't "there" — wherever that is.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

4 arrested on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

Area lawmen were kept busy Wednesday night as four people were arrested for alleged narcotics violations, according to reports.

Three Rankin residents were arrested just before 9 p.m. on State Highway 349, and are expected to be charged with felony possession of marijuana, sheriff's Lt. Monnie Weddel said.

"We had set up surveillance on a black Ford Bronco coming in from Rankin," Weddel said. "We suspected narcotics trafficking, yes, in marijuana. They were carrying only a quarter-pound, a rather small amount, though."

The vehicle was stopped just south of FM 1787, Weddel said. The driver had a loaded .38-caliber derringer nearby when he was apprehended, Weddel said, and may also be charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Two men, ages 28 and 26, and a 32-year-old woman were arrested, Weddel said.

Officers from the Upton County and Ector County Sheriff's Department assisted in the investigation, Weddel said.

A 40-year-old Midland man is in police custody after he eluded officers who attempted to stop his car Wednesday evening.

According to police Cpl. Jim White, narcotics officers were watching the man when he left a nightclub on Hicks Avenue just before 6:30 p.m. When officers tried to stop him, he refused. Along the way, he tossed out a half-ounce of what was later tested and determined to be cocaine, White said.

The man finally stopped at the intersection of Lamesa Road and Hicks Avenue, and was arrested, Whites said.

Cattle to be autopsied

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss said today a Gardendale veterinarian will do autopsies on some of the cattle found on a Notrees ranch in an effort to determine how the animals died.

Kloss said a number of cattle have been found dead on the ranch on State Highway 302 at Notrees in western Ector County.

According to Kloss, although ranch employees have indicated 17 cattle have been found dead since mid-December, Ector deputies have only located 11. He said that, while the ranch is partially situated in Winkler County, all of the dead cattle have been found on the Ector County portion of the ranch.

Concerning reports that the dead cattle have had all the blood drained from their bodies, reproductive organs missing, and speculation the cattle may have been killed as part of a Satanic ritual, Kloss said, "We don't know anything about that. We're simply investigating in an effort to determine how the animals died."

Kloss is head of the sheriff's criminal investigation division.

As to missing reproductive organs or possible intentional mutilation, Kloss said this could have been caused by any number of animals.

AA conference to begin

From Staff Reports

The 18th annual Mid-Winter Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous is being held Friday through Sunday at the Midland Hilton, Wall Avenue and Loraine Street.

Founded in the mid-1930s by the late Bill Wilson and the late Dr. Bob Smith, AA is not allied with any other group in or out of the treatment field. The organization is self-supporting through the voluntary contributions of its members and has no religious affiliation. The primary purpose of AA, as stated in its basic textbook "Alcoholics Anonymous," first published in 1939, is to carry its message to the alcoholic who still suffers.

Guest speakers for the conference come from outside the Permian Basin area. Those speakers and the times of their talks are Clancy I., Venice, Calif., 8 p.m. Friday; Keith D., Yorba Linda, Calif., 11 a.m. Saturday; Angie D., Blythe, Calif., 8 p.m. Saturday; and Paul M., Riverside, Ill., 10 a.m. Sunday.

The conference also features a talk by Sue D. of Yorba Linda, Calif., at 10 a.m. Saturday. This speaker is a member of Al-Anon Family Groups, an independent, self-supporting organization founded in 1951.

Al-Anon and AA are separate fellowships, related only in having the common cause of helping those who have been affected by alcoholism. Al-Anon members are those whose lives have been affected by another's drinking.

The conference includes a general meeting of Alateen, chaired by David. F. of Midland, at 2 p.m. Saturday. Alateen, established in 1957 as part of the Al-Anon Family Groups, is for teen-agers whose lives have been affected by someone's drinking.

Registration begins at 1 p.m. Friday on the mezzanine at the Hilton. The registration fee is $20 for adults and $2 for Alateens. Badges will be furnished for those who are interested in these programs, but are financially unable to attend.

The conference is open to the public.

Franklin show on local stage

From Staff Reports

"Frankly, B. Franklin," a one-man show based on the life of Benjamin Franklin, plays Theatre Midland's Mabee Theatre II 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The production, created and enacted by Burdette Parks, was first performed Sept. 16, 1982, at the Maddux Theatre, on the campus of Incarnate Word College in San Antonio.

Ticket price for this weekend's performances is $6. For reservations call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111. The theater is located at 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Hance to speak in Stanton

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance will be the featured speaker at the Martin County Chamber of Commerce's annual banquet at 6:30 p.m. today in the Stanton Junior High School Cafeteria.

Hance is a former United States congressman.

Tickets to the chamber event are $7.50 each.

Joe Hodges will be master of ceremonies at the banquet. Mary Prudie Brown will present the awards for the Man and Woman of the Year, and Leslie Wood, out-going chamber president, will recognize the Martin County Farm Family of the Year.

Steve Herm is incoming chamber president.

Three continuing education courses set for next week

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer three short courses beginning next week. They are:

— Study Skills Clinic will be taught by Barbara Stoltz in two different sections as follows: Monday and Wednesday from 3-5 p.m., Jan. 25 through Jan. 27 or on Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 p.m., Jan. 26 through Jan. 28. Do you have difficulty completing your homework assignments? Do you feel anxious and does your mind go blank at exam time? Are you easily distracted in class? Can you take effective notes? Help for these and other problems will be provided at a study skills clinic, co-sponsored by the Special Needs Program and the Continuing Education Department. Course is offered free of charge.

— Fundamentals of Bookkeeping I will be taught by Dan Rush on Tuesdays from 7-10 p.m., Jan. 26 through Mar. 22. Covers the double entry bookkeeping cycles. Includes analyzing business transactions, recording, summarizing effects, and preparing simplified and routine reports. Text available at Midland College Bookstore. Class limited to 30 students. Course fee is $43.

— Respiratory Care Registry Up-Date will be taught by Terry Gilmore and Bob Weidmann on Wednesdays beginning Jan. 27 and ending on May 11. This 45 hour course is designed to give the Respiratory Therapist a concise over-view of the content area included in the NBRC Entry Level, NBRC Written Registry, NBRC Clinical Simulation, and Texas Credentialling exams. Instructional sessions will entail two hours on basics and one hour on clinical simulation on computers. The material covered is related to the NBRC matrix. Course fee is $80.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses, come by the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

Blackwoods to perform

The Blackwood Brothers and Family will perform a concert at Midland Christian Fellowship, 200 S. Baldwin St., at 7 p.m. Friday.

The performance will feature Donna Blackwood.

The Blackwood Brothers began after the Depression in rural Chocktaw County, Miss. Only three of the original members were brothers — Roy, Doyle and James. The fourth member, R.W., was Roy's son.

MCF is located behind Texas American Bank and Dennis the Menace Park. No tickets will be sold. Donation and offerings will be received.

The public is invited to attend.

MURDER

"It is similar to the Wylie Wilson case, yes," Painter said. "The only thing I can make public is that he was arrested due to information we received from an informant. Monnie went out and re-contacted some of the witnesses. Through his efforts, we were able to get a warrant for murder issued."

Dominguez was not armed, and offered no resistance to officers, Painter said.

The sheriff declined to comment on the circumstances surrounding the shooting, but he said Dominguez is not the last man sought for the shooting.

"We are continuing in the investigation," he said. "We do know that there are more individuals involved.

"It has been a long investigation," he said. "Because of other work, we haven't been able to spend as much time on it as we would have liked. But we've got a break now."

PROJECT

The $30,000 project is being overseen by a 38-member Oversight Committee, which, Miller said, is equivalent to a board of directors.

The committee takes in men and women from business, industry, science, the clergy, medicine, education, government, law, social services, and communications.

Miller said that the committee is "outstanding."

"I have never seen a group that's so sharp, committed, bright, intelligent and nice to work with," he said. "They (committee members) are our bosses. We are responsible to that group."

Midland Chamber of Commerce Chairman Charlie Spence, who also is chairman of the needs-assessment project, said that Midlanders traditionally "have always taken care of their own" and willingly respond to needs.

Tom Sloan, Midland stockbroker and former Midland city councilman, said that the project "stands to do a lot of good. There's some potential there," he said.

"They need to address the causes of the problems and not the symptoms," Sloan said. "If you treat just the symptoms, you'll treat them forever with no end result."

SBOE

Prior to 1948, the board was appointed by the governor. A legislative mandate after that year called for the board to be elected.

That situation lasted until 1985 when the sweeping Texas Education Agency measure — House Bill 72 — abolished the elected board and temporarily reverted to an appointment system.

Voters decided Nov. 3, 1987, they wanted the board elected, despite arguments for an appointment system from Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot and key legislative members.

Wilks said he voted for an elected board because those in his district didn't like the appointment system.

The current appointed board — while "great people" — is not as "conversant" with education as an elected board will be, he said.

District 14 — which includes both his home and Midland — contains 49 counties and stretches as far west as Midland County, north to Childress County, east to Hill County and south to Menard County.

"Texans want to vote for their representatives in Austin," Wilks said.

TRIAL

During Wednesday's court session, jurors heard Dowler tell Ms. Middleton that Ms. Krieg was dying from radiation poisoning because, against his warnings, she had broken the double seal of a container of plutonium she had purportedly obtained from the Pantex plant in Amarillo. Realizing she was dying, Dowler said, she discussed the possibility of committing suicide and using cyanide to do so.

In addition to discussing the effectiveness of cyanide as a murder weapon, the ease with which it can be administered and difficulty of detection unless specifically looked for, Dowler outlined to Ms. Middleton how easy it would be to construct a nuclear bomb that would "remove Midland from the map" using the plutonium obtained by Ms. Krieg, which he indicated remains hidden even today.

Dowler claimed the FBI had questioned him about the missing radioactive material, but he told them nothing, he said. According to Dowler, the alleged missing plutonium weighed about 13 pounds.

Dowler also indicated to Ms. Middleton that he had been employed as a "hit man" for a secret government agency and had been involved in the killing of several people. There was also reference to this by Kyle Chandler, the former husband of Ms. Chandler, during his testimony Tuesday.

At one point in their lengthy recorded conversation heard Wednesday by jurors, Dowler told Ms. Middleton, "I haven't always been David Dowler. I have been several other people, even though I was born David Dowler." Dowler also stated he had "been under government protection."

Throughout the recordings heard by jurors, Dowler repeatedly referred to his apprehension about Kyle Chandler, his jealousy about his former wife and his bad temper. Dowler also has more than once referred to his belief that Chandler had a "hit list" and he (Dowler) and Ms. Middleton were on it.

During one of their recorded conversations in front of his photo development store, Ms. Middleton asked, "When do you think this thing will be over?"

"In my opinion," Dowler replied, "when you and I die."

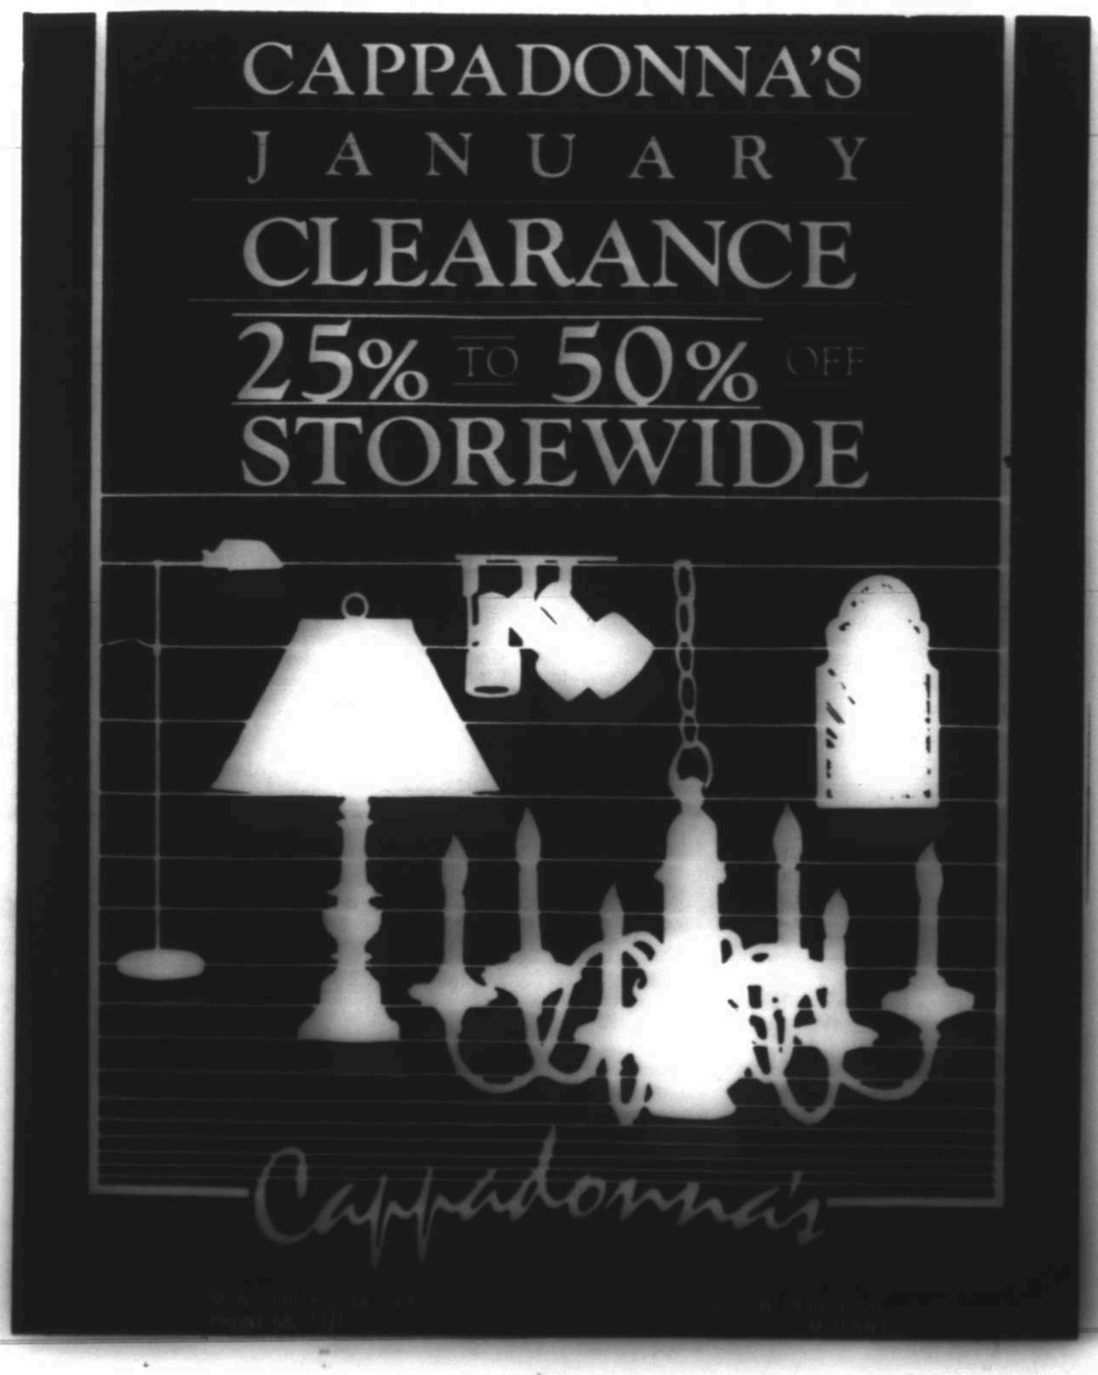

At one point, Dowler suggested Ms. Middleton help him set Kyle Chandler up so he could kill him using cyanide.

Throughout their conversations, Dowler kept accusing Chandler of killing Ms. Krieg and Casillas, noting they were on his "hit list."

Of the death of Kathy Hicks, 29, of Midland, who died suddenly Nov. 29, 1986, while attending an arts and crafts show at the Ector County Coliseum, Dowler described her death as "the first public death" that went undetected.

An autopsy revealed Ms. Hicks' cause of death was a malfunctioning heart valve. Because her death was not unattended, but with relatives and other people in close proximity, investigators have not pursued it.

Initially, Ms. Krieg's death was attributed to complications growing out of anorexia. Casillas' death was initially determined to be the result of an undetermined chemical.

City of Austin, Montana coal firm settle dispute with $55 million

AUSTIN (AP) — A $2.5 billion contract dispute between a Montana coal supplier, city officials and the Lower Colorado River Authority ended with a $55 million settlement that all parties say is a satisfying agreement.

The 15-member LCRA is expected to consider the settlement today and members appear to support the deal, which already has been approved by the Austin City Council.

The Tuesday settlement ends a dispute that centered on a long-term contract the city and LCRA had with Decker Coal Co. and its parent firms to buy coal to fuel the Fayette Power Project near La Grange. The plant is owned jointly by the city and river authority.

Under the terms of the settlement, the city and the LCRA each will pay Decker $27.5 million in return for canceling the 26-year contract.

Austin Mayor Frank Cooksey says the settlement will relieve the city and LCRA of a contract that could have cost them more than $1 billion. The city's share will be paid by selling short-term notes that will be repaid by electric customers in their bills over 12 months.

Attorneys for the coal supplier say the deal also was a good one for their side.

"The settlement amount was not all we thought we had coming, but it was reasonable, and we are pleased with it," said Lee Godfrey, a Houston attorney who represented Peter Kiewit Sons, one of the defendants in the case. The Omaha, Neb.-based Peter Kiewet, jointly owns Decker Coal with NERCO Inc., a subsidiary of PacifiCorp, which is based in Portland, Ore.

"We would have preferred that the city and LCRA have been required to perform their contract, but under the circumstances we are comfortable with the outcome," said Sharon Ratliff, an Austin attorney for NERCO.

Austin and the LCRA signed the contract with Decker in 1974 when fuel prices were expected to continue rising and as the federal government began buckling down on the emissions of pollutants from power plants.

The city and river authority sued Decker in U.S. District Court in Austin in February 1985 after receiving more than 1,100 trainloads of the coal. They complained they were overcharged and were shipped coal contaminated with dirt and other non-burnable materials.

In documents filed with the court, they sought nearly $300 million for alleged overcharges. Decker filed a counterclaim requesting the contract be honored at an amount exceeding $1 billion.

Robison stops new construction to pay off old debts

FLOWER MOUND (AP) — A television evangelist involved in the construction of a $6 million ministry and broadcast center took the advice of a higher authority and decided to stop building until he can pay off a $2 million debt.

The James Robison Evangelistic Association, headed by James Robison, has been working on a 72,000-square-foot building it started in 1986 and expected to move into by the first of this year, said Jim Rogers, the association's vice president.

"With the economy being the way it is, and the fact that James feels like the Lord wants us to get out of debt, we have put the new center on hold," Rogers said.

The old debts and bad economic times halted construction last August, Rogers said. Robison was out of town Wednesday and couldn't be reached for comment.

"We need in excess of $2 million," Rogers said. "We are hoping and praying that we will be able to accomplish this by no later than June and start back building."

The complex was to include offices, a chapel and a 35,000-square-foot television studio with seating for a live audience on a seven-acre site in this community of 4,400 about 20 miles north of Dallas.

The center is being financed with donations, while the back debts are for "television bills and other operational expenses," Rogers said.

Warning: 'Hot' watches may be deadly

AUSTIN (AP) — Old watch or clock faces crafted into pendants, string tie clasps or other jewelry may contain radium, a radioactive element, the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Radiation Control says.

The jewelry could cause increased risk of cancer and possible contact dermatitis, the bureau said Wednesday. Artisans working with the jewelry are at higher risk because of the possibility of internal contamination from ingestion or inhalation.

Some of the jewelry has been located in Austin. It may be radioactive if it is made from watches and clocks with faces painted with radium to make them glow in the dark.

Bureau personnel are working with radiation control programs in California, Pennsylvania and Oregon to determine the extent of the problem.

The levels of radiation in items containing radium require that people handling the material meet specific license requirements, the bureau said.

Casualties in gas war take shots at mayor

McALLEN (AP) — Mayor Othal Brand hasn't made many new friends among McAllen gasoline dealers since he started a gas war last week.

"It does look suspiciously like he is willing to sacrifice the gasoline industry in the McAllen area to the winter Texan trade," said gasoline distributor Joe Phillips, who took issue with the mayor's accusations that the dealers have conspired to gouge the public.

Last week, Brand began selling gasoline to the public at about 10 cents below prevailing prices in the city from pumps previously reserved for his agribusiness firm, Griffin and Brand Inc.

Since then, other McAllen stations have matched or beaten his prices.

For two years, the mayor has accused the fuel dealers of overcharging motorists and giving the city a bad name among the thousands of retirees who spend winters here.

Winter Texans often complain about gasoline prices in the McAllen area.

But an independent gasoline station operator said he cannot afford to stay open if the price war continues.

"If this goes on, I'm going to go out of business," said Lupe Hinojosa, a station operator who said since matching the mayor's price, he is making 1 cent to 2 cents per gallon before expenses and cannot afford to hire an attendant.

He said he made 9 cents to 12 cents gross profit per gallon before the Brand started selling gas.

"The little monopoly they had has been broken up," he said "The winter Texans are very important to us here. They spend $100 million a year, and that turns over three or four times...we're trying to develop that to several times that, and overcharging the winter tourist is doing a disservice to the Valley."

Brand has been selling his fuel for 76.9 cents for regular and 75.9 cents for unleaded since last week.

Independent dealers are paying a wholesale price of 71 cents for unleaded and 72 cents for regular, Phillips said.

"The mayor hasn't done his homework," said Phillips at a news conference at the McAllen Chamber of Commerce offices.

Phillips, who operates Phillips Properties, a McAllen-based fuel distributor, cited a survey compiled by the McAllen Chamber of Commerce.

Gasoline prices in McAllen before the mayor started the price war were actually lower than the national average, and about the same as the rest of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Phillips said.

Tommy Joyner, executive director of the McAllen chamber, said the local price survey was modeled after the national Lundberg survey of gasoline prices.

The local survey indicates that unleaded gasoline on Jan. 11 sold at an average of 88.3 cents per gallon in McAllen, and 90.9 cents nationally. The chamber survey added 1.6 cents to the national price because the tax in Texas is 1.6 cents above the national average, Joyner said.

Dealers have no choice but to join the gas war, said distributor Robert Gutierrez with Discount Oil, Lubes & Fuels Inc.

"Your neighbor changes their price sign, you change yours," Gutierrez said.

Outside of the gasoline industry, the mayor has seen his popularity surge.

"We at the Sleepy Valley Ranch in Mission, Texas, want to congratulate you on the 'brave step' you have taken in supplying gasoline and diesel to the Valley residents at a reasonable price," wrote one group of area winter Texans in a petition of support for the mayor.

Volunteers help couple living among roaches

DALLAS (AP) — A husband and wife bedridden for nearly a year in their cockroach-infested bedroom are receiving help after a volunteer discovered them living in conditions she says resembled a horror movie.

Ever since failing health left Roman and Margarita Rios unable to buy food or seek medical treatment, their world has extended no further than the walls of the bedroom in their small south Dallas house.

At the urging of the Rioses' landlady, a social service volunteer visited three weeks ago and found the couple malnourished and lying in soiled sheets. Roaches swarmed in their dresser, barren refrigerator and mattress.

"It's one of the worst cases I have ever had," said Aminda Silva, director of La Voz del Anciano Mexicano-Americano, or The Voice of the Mexican-American Elderly. "It's hard for the Hispanic elderly. They don't know English or the system, and they have cultural barriers."

Rios, 51, and his 85-year-old wife, both unable to move without walkers, began a gradual decline after Rios broke his foot and began losing his sight in 1985.

Without any neighbors, nearby relatives, a working telephone or English skills, the Rioses had lived alone on Mrs. Rios' $186 monthly Social Security check and sandwiches delivered by Ayala's Cafe and Market, where their friend Sam Ayala cashes the checks.

In the last few weeks, Ms. Silva has made sure the Rioses received new beds, clean sheets, food, baths, clean clothes, medical checkups and enrollment in Meals on Wheels, which delivers hot food five times a week.

"I think it's just their faith that pulled them through," said Ms. Silva, who has volunteered for La Voz since 1983.

"When people like these fall through the cracks, it's when families or individuals don't have any idea of what's available. They don't have any way to get out for assistance," said Oeita Bottorff, associate executive director of the Greater Dallas Community of Churches.

"I suspect there is much more of this than people realize," Ms. Bottorff said. "When a situation like this arises, there are agencies that move quickly to help them."

Louise Suniga, the Rioses' landlady for 17 years, called La Voz del Anciano to get help for the couple.

"He was always doing all right until he broke his foot, and since then he has been sick," Ms. Suniga said of Roman. "They didn't pay me any rent, but I couldn't throw them out on the street."

SBC 'floor fight' begins over rooms

DALLAS (AP) — The latest squabble between moderates and conservatives within the Southern Baptist denomination is not over inerrancy of the Bible, but a scramble for hotel rooms for the group's convention.

A leader of the group's conservative faction says that some delegates have been asked where they stand in the philosophical clash when they tried to get rooms.

Only 300 of San Antonio's 13,000 hotel rooms are still available for the Southern Baptist Convention in June, officials say.

Moderates and conservatives, who have fought for a decade to control the nation's largest Protestant denomination, are accusing each other of hording hotel space for their members.

"I have evidence, in their publication, saying they have 1,500 rooms, and I have heard reports from people who tried to get rooms and they were asked many questions on where they stand before they could get rooms," said Paul Pressler, a Houston judge and conservative leader, Wednesday.

The Rev. J. Neal Rodgers, editor of the Dallas-based Baptist Laity Journal, said his group had 1,420 rooms reserved, but he suspected conservatives had a share, too.

"I'd ask Paul Pressler," Rogers said when asked whether conservatives had a block of rooms. "They've certainly blocked off rooms for their coalition in the past."

Pressler claims he does not have a block of rooms reserved and he did not know of any conservatives who did.

Rooms for the San Antonio convention have been an issue since Oct.1, when 4,000 Baptists were selected by lottery for downtown hotel rooms which the convention had reserved.

About 2,000 registrants who did not receive rooms were notified of another 9,000 rooms in the city.

But many found the available space was gone.

A poll of San Antonio hotels last month by Baptist Press, the denominational news agency, found less than 300 non-reserved rooms available.

The squeeze may be due to denominational politics, said the Rev. Alvin Shackleford, head of Baptist Press.

"Some people have said this is the moderates' best opportunity to elect a president and that would inspire moderates to go. It would also inspire conservatives to go," Shackleford said. "Anytime there's going to be a denominational conflict, attendance will go up."

Conservatives took control of the 14.3 million member denomination in 1979 after calling for an end to the theological liberalism they said pervaded seminaries and institutions.

Moderates claimed the conservative clamor was a cover-up for a political style takeover.

Election of a new president will be the key issue at the June meeting.

EMS response time longer in San Antonio, Houston

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A person waiting for an ambulance will have to wait longer in Houston and San Antonio than in three other large Texas cities, a newspaper report says.

An average wait for an ambulance in Houston was 10 minutes while people in San Antonio waited between six minutes and eight minutes, the San Antonio Light reported Wednesday.

The report was based on a study of Emergency Medical Service records from Austin, Dallas, Houston, El Paso and San Antonio.

Houston, with 37 ambulances covering 669 miles, averaged the 10-minute response rate 74 percent of the time.

Harris County is not covered by the city's ambulance service. The city added four ambulances to its fleet this month, improving its average response time to seven minutes.

"Ideally, it should be three to five minutes," said Dr. Vincent DiMaio, Bexar County Medical Examiner. "The problem becomes especially acute when people go into heart arrest — anyone who is arrested more than four to five minutes is not going to come back."

In San Antonio, from Jan. 1, 1987, through November 1987, 70 percent of the calls were answered within 10 minutes. In Bexar County, 30 percent of the calls were answered within 10 minutes. Within 20 minutes, 91 percent of the calls had been made in Bexar County. The average response time was 6.7 minutes, the Light reported.

David Eaton, a professor at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin, has studied ambulance response times.

"Compared to Austin and Dallas, there's more risk (in San Antonio)," Eaton said. "That's clear with 70 percent of the calls in Bexar County made after 10 minutes."

Officials said annexation and insufficient emergency vehicles to serve the expanding city are to blame.

"With all the annexations, how many ambulances have been added?" Alamo Area Council of Governments Executive Director Al Notzon asked. "At the time we began the EMS program in the '70s, the goal was a five-minute response time. But the town has spread out since that time. The low-density areas add time into the averages."

But Deputy Chief Curtis Franz said annexation did not slow response time, because EMS served those areas prior to annexation.

There are 19 ambulances that are dispatched from area fire stations to cover 1,250 square miles in the city and county, he said. The area served is larger than any of the other cities surveyed.

FREE HEARING TESTS SET FOR SENIOR CITIZENS
MIDLAND - Hearing Centers of America, Inc., announces the grand opening of a new hearing aid facility in La Villita Office Building, 3325 W. Wadley, Suite 115 (Formerly Better Hearing Consultants). In celebration, Hearing Centers of America, Inc. will be providing FREE electronic hearing tests to senior citizens for the next three Mondays, by appointment only
The tests have been arranged for anyone who suspects they are losing their hearing. Such persons generally say they can hear but not understand conversation. Testing with the latest electronic equipment will indicate whether your hearing can be helped electronically.
Everyone, especially those over 60, should have an electronic hearing test at least once a year. If there is a hearing problem, a free hearing test may reveal that newly developed methods of correction will help, even for those who have been told in the past that a hearing aid will not help them.
Available for inspection on the test days will be features found in the Automated Hearing Systems. These aids are especially designed for nerve deafness. No standard batteries to buy, rechargeable. No need to adjust volume control wheel.
Call 699-3001 today to schedule your FREE hearing test by a state licensed Hearing Specialist.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The financial outlook is golden. A money matter comes down to the wire. You triumph! Improve your relations with the people you see daily, especially your co-workers. Success depends on a willingness to compromise. Do not ignore a family member's need for outside interests. Your understanding means a lot to your loved ones. Lend a sympathetic ear. Strengthen ties with business partners. More rest means more energy. Take a well-deserved mini-vacation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: philosopher Francis Bacon, actors Bill Bixby and John Hurt, actress Linda Blair, poet Lord Byron, film pioneer D.W. Griffith, boxer George Foreman, actress Piper Laurie, author Joseph Wambaugh.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Force yourself to complete projects on time. Loved ones want to know about important decisions beforehand. Get your home better organized. Begin to collect tax materials; make an appointment with a CPA.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Indecision could plague you today. Make up your mind! Gather all available information and base your decision on facts, not wishful thinking. Others are proud of you and let you know it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A startling conversation or incident gets you back on track fast. Keep any gossip to yourself or you could hurt someone close to you. You meet someone who intrigues you today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check details before signing contracts. You hear some fascinating news through the grapevine; pay attention. You need to take steps to showcase your special talents. Let higher-ups see what you can do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A hobby could renew your creativity on the job. Getting additional training will boost your earning power. Investigate your options. A long-term relationship is on firmer ground now. Some set the date!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strike a better balance between family responsibilities and community activities. An acquaintance may try to show you up in public. You will win respect if you do not retaliate!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your relatives or friends may not understand a recent decision. Suit yourself and you will be happy with the outcome. An unexpected development involving a family member calls for quick thinking.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Social activities will get you out of the house early today. Have fun, but limit the money you spend on "extras." Entertaining at home holds special appeal this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A reunion with loved ones gives you a tremendous lift. Write friends and family members who are far away. A long-distance call brings welcome financial news. Relax at home tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you get an early start, you can tidy up your home with remarkable efficiency. Your optimism is contagious! Spread some cheer around. Extend an invitation to a newcomer. New alliances are favored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel torn between being fiscally conservative and trying a new approach to money management. Seek experts' advice. A platonic relationship could be turning romantic. Know your heart!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day to spruce up your environment. Reduce household clutter, donating used clothing to your favorite charity and take a tax deduction.

Opening lead: Ten of ♣

There's an old saying at tournament bridge: "Never let the opponents play at the one-level." By and large, that's sensible. If the auction dies meekly at the one-level, it means that the balance of strength is just about even. Going one down competitively could net you an excellent score. However, we do impose limits on what we need to balance.

Reopening the bidding was taken to great lengths on this hand from the finals of the Reisinger. When Zia Mahmood and Jaggy Shivdasani of the eventual winning team, who were using a weak no trump opening bid, did not proceed beyond the first bid, North reopened with two diamonds—a bid showing the major suits. Mahmood, West, was delighted to double two spades.

He was not quite as happy when he led the ten of clubs and dummy appeared, for it was obvious that every card lay right for declarer. East won the ace of clubs and returned the suit to declarer's king.

JUST SHORT OF GREATNESS

Had declarer now led a trump from hand, the defenders would have had to win and lead the ace of hearts and another immediately, or else declarer would get home, losing only one heart, one club and three trumps. Perhaps declarer should have played for that, for down one doubled and vulnerable would certainly lose the board.

Instead, declarer led a heart. West won the ace and persevered with clubs. A diamond to the ace and a diamond ruff was followed by the king of hearts and a heart ruff as East sluffed a diamond. Another diamond ruff put declarer on the table for another heart lead. He needed only to score his queen of trumps for his contract. But East was alive to what was happening. He ruffed with the ace of trumps and led a trump, and the defense prevailed.

Burns celebrates 92nd birthday

Burns

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — George Burns' philosophy upon reaching age 92: "So when you're 17 you become 18. When you're 91 you become 92. When you're 99 you become 100. I can't afford to die. I'd lose a fortune."

Burns made the crack and several others Wednesday night at the kind of birthday party he enjoys: at a fashionable restaurant surrounded by pretty girls and fellow comedians.

The media event was given at the Bistro Gardens by New World Pictures, which will release the comedian's new film "18 Again!" in April.

Among those celebrating the birthday were Carol Channing, Danny Thomas, Milton Berle, Connie Stevens and Jack Carter.

All sang "Happy Birthday" to Burns, who declined to sing the song "I Wish I Was 18 Again." Instead, between puffs of the everpresent cigar, he sang "Old Bones."

Among his future activities are an NBC special, "Disney's World of Magic," a book about his 38-year marriage to Gracie Allen, a film, "Oh God IV," plus appearances in Las Vegas, Nev., Atlantic City, N.J., Florida and elsewhere.

Scott

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George C. Scott was in good condition at a hospital after being admitted for chest and stomach pains, said a spokeswoman for the Academy Award-winning actor.

"He was watching football on Sunday when he experienced chest and stomach pains," Maggie Begley said Wednesday. "He had had a complete physical just two weeks before, and had passed with flying colors, but his doctor told him ...to check in and get tested again."

Ms. Begley said she didn't know which hospital the 60-year-old actor was in. "The last report we had was he's doing OK, he's in good condition," she said.

She said it wasn't known how long Scott would be hospitalized.

Scott stars in the Fox television network show "Mr. President." Filming of its final episode had been set for Friday, but the producers decided to scrap that installment after Scott became ill, Ms. Begley said.

Carter

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Amy Carter, daughter of peanut farmer and former President Jimmy Carter, has a new job: staff member in the national headquarters of Farm Aid.

Ms. Carter, 20, has been working part-time in the Cambridge office since late last year, said family spokeswoman Melissa Montgomery in Atlanta.

Ms. Carter is working with five other staff members, said Farm Aid spokeswoman Ellen Kay.

Ms. Carter has been in the public eye during the past few years for protesting South African-related university investments and U.S. policies in Central America. She was asked to leave Brown University in Providence, R.I., last summer for neglecting her studies in favor of political activism, and has not indicated if she will return to school.

The office of Farm Aid, which was formed by singer Willie Nelson in 1985, directs funding to more than 110 grassroots groups in 41 states providing food, financial and medical assistance to farmers, said Kay.

• • •

Norris

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chuck Norris says fellow action movie heroes Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger may beat him at the box office but he's the king of video.

"I'm No. 1 in video in the world," Norris said in a recent interview to promote "Braddock: Missing in Action III," which opens in theaters Friday.

"I'm bigger than Stallone or anybody," said the 47-year-old karate expert. "It's amazing. People who may not have been interested in seeing a Chuck Norris film would see the videos."

Norris, who said said he's still striving for the kind of box-office success Stallone and Schwarzenegger have enjoyed, has just released an autobiography, "The Secret of Inner Strength: My Story." It details his rags-to-riches climb to stardom and coping with an alcoholic father.

Prince Edward

LONDON (AP) — Prince Edward has signed on as a production assistant for composer Andrew Lloyd Webber's internationally successful theater company a year after he signed off from the Royal Marines.

Queen Elizabeth II's youngest son will be expected to do everything from making tea to checking box office figures, distributing advertising posters and organizing rehearsal dates for the Really Useful Theater Company, whose hits include "Cats" and "Phantom of the Opera."

When he starts work next month, the 23-year-old Edward will become the first member of the royal family to choose the theater as a career and the first child of a reigning British monarch in modern history to take a full-time job outside the military.

Newspaper estimates put his annual salary at $17,700 to $26,550. He already receives a $35,400 government allowance.

Edward, an actor in amateur productions while at Cambridge University, quit the marines on Jan. 12, 1987, four months into a year-long course to become a commando officer.

TOKYO (AP) — Bernardo Bertolucci, director of "The Last Emperor," says he's been assured that newsreel scenes of Japanese atrocities will not be cut after the epic movie opens in Japan on Saturday.

Misuhiro Saito, a spokesman for the distributing company Shochiku Fuji, said Wednesday that producer Jeremy Thomas asked it "if he could provide the film with the scenes deleted, and Shochiku Fuji agreed."

But a statement by Bertolucci issued later in London said the company had agreed to restore the Italian director's version of the film and that Shochiku Fuji had apologized for "a big misunderstanding."

The 2¾-hour movie, shown intact at last September's Tokyo Film Festival, includes newsreel footage of Japanese soldiers killing Chinese and dumping their bodies in a hole during a massacre that became known as the Rape of Nanking.

"The Last Emperor" is based on Pu Yi's autobiography "From Emperor to Citizen." It traces his life from becoming the last emperor of China in 1908 at age 3 to his final years as a gardener in Beijing. Pu Yi died in 1967.

Intrauterine devices [IUDs]

Coil, loop and the Dalkon Shield

Most IUDs are small plastic devices of different shapes and sizes for insertion into the uterus. One or two strings extend into the upper vagina so placement of the device can be checked. IUDs may remain inserted for long periods of time for contraceptive purposes.

Exactly why an IUD works is unknown. Theories include:
A. that it makes the ovum pass down the Fallopian tube too rapidly for either fertilization or implantation;
B. that it interferes with the lining of the uterus, making implantation impossible;
C. that it interferes directly with the implantation process.

Study questions contraceptives' effectiveness

By GINA KOLATA
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The available data on the comparative effectiveness of different contraceptives is misleading and only marginally useful in helping people choose which method to use, according to a new study and a growing number of health experts.

The new study cited defects in the way all studies have been done. In particular, researchers said, the data usually reflect a bias in favor of the pill and the intrauterine device.

The finding is important because women make their decision on which contraceptive to use after weighing two factors: the side effects of a particular contraceptive and its presumed efficacy. If the information on effectiveness is wrong, the researchers said, the choices made by millions of women have been ill-informed.

The researchers, Dr. James Trussell and Dr. Kathryn Kost of Princeton University, are calling for a new effort to examine the relative efficacy of the contraceptives.

Their report was published recently in the journal Studies in Family Planning, and the research has inspired wide discussion among scientists who support its conclusion.

"Right now," Trussell said, available data on contraception is "a giant castle built in sand."

There is no doubt that the methods vary somewhat in how well they prevent pregnancy. The pill is usually ranked first, followed by the IUD and then condoms, diaphragms, foam and other methods. The Princeton researchers said they guessed that the pill was, in fact, the best, but they said that no one knows how much better than the IUD it is, or whether both methods are more effective than some others, as is commonly asserted.

It is likely, the researchers said, that all the methods are extremely effective and they differ most in whether they are being used properly and consistently. The pill, for instance, tends to be used consistently, while the diaphragm is used less consistently.

It is more important for women to select a contraceptive they will use consistently than to choose one according to published data on its efficacy, they said.

Trussell and Kost said they arrived at their conclusions about contraceptive research after reviewing the hundreds of papers on contraceptive failure.

One problem, the scientists said, was that the studies usually failed to follow up on women who dropped out of the research for one reason or another. The number of women lost to follow-up was frequently several times larger than the number who became pregnant, making the data impossible to interpret, Trussell said.

The published studies also failed to determine the effectiveness of methods for ideal users — those who used the contraceptive correctly and in every instance of sexual intercourse.

But there is at least one solid finding, according to Trussell and Kost.

Recent studies of the contraceptive sponge indicate that it is far less effective for women who have borne children than for women who have not. In a study in the United States, for instance, 28.3 percent of the women who had had babies became pregnant in the first year, while 13.9 percent of the childless women did.

The most likely reason, Trussell said, is that the sponge is made in just one size and it is too small to protect women whose cervixes were enlarged by previous childbirth.

A universal drawback of the contraception studies, the scientists said, is "selection bias."

Interferon may aid pregnancy

New York Times News Service

A protein that had not been previously linked to pregnancies may play a crucial role in getting a pregnancy started, researchers report.

The protein, an interferon, was already known to help the immune system kill viruses and certain kinds of cancer cells. But the new studies show, for the first time, that interferon can work as a hormone to prevent a pregnant animal from spontaneously aborting an embryo.

The findings were made in sheep, cows and pigs, and it is not yet clear whether the interferon acts the same way in human pregnancies.

But Dr. Michael Roberts of the University of Missouri, a principal researcher of the group, said no one had ever looked for it in human pregnancy. As a first step, he plans to search for the same effects in primates.

The work was published in a recent issue of Nature, a British science journal, and involved molecular biology studies to establish which genes are activated in embryo cells and which proteins are made by the cells.

Keith Marotti of the Upjohn Co. said the discovery took the researchers by surprise.

"We didn't believe it initially," he said, adding that interferon "just wasn't something that came to mind when you think of pregnancy maintainance."

Roberts initiated the work by studying pregnancy in sheep, asking what it is that lets a ewe know, biochemically, that it is pregnant, even before the embryo becomes implanted in its uterus.

Several years ago, Roberts established that sheep embryos produced some substance that told female sheep that they were pregnant. But no one knew what it was.

Symptoms vary with astigmatism

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Children who consistently sit close to the television screen and avoid sports may be nearsighted, says the American Optometric Association.

On the other hand, youngsters who consistently avoid reading or spend most of their time engaged in sports may be farsighted.

In either case they may have astigmatism.

According to the association, the eye chart test commonly used in schools checks only how well a child can see at a distance, and many other vision problems can seriously hamper a child's ability to learn.

Parents and teachers, it says, can be more effective in detecting such problems.

Behavior clues the association advises they watch for include frequent daydreaming, excessive blinking or rubbing of the eyes and a short attention span for the child's age.

Difficulty in going up and down stairs, throwing or catching a ball, buttoning or unbuttoning clothing or tying shoes also are warning signs, along with difficulty in following verbal instructions, and headaches, nausea and dizziness after concentration on close work.

AN UNWANTED LIFT

The debate has gone back and forth as to whether or not caffeine is good for a person's health. There is one indisputable fact though concerning caffeine. It is a drug. Most people do not need a scientific study to tell them that caffeine makes them anxious and jittery. Pregnant women usually wish to avoid caffeine as a precautionary measure. People should bear in mind that thousands of medications contain caffeine. Some use this ingredient to suppress the appetite. Some use it to speed a drug's active ingredient through the bloodstream. Regardless of its intended purpose, consumers who are concerned about caffeine intake should check the labels on all over-the-counter medicines. The pharmacist should be asked about the inclusion of caffeine in prescribed medications.

If you are concerned about your intake of caffeine, our pharmacist will be glad to check any medication you're taking. Complete service is available at ALLEN'S PHARMACY, 2101 Midland. 689-9999. We have 24 hour emergency service. Greeting cards, candy and other items are available for Valentine's Day. Hours: 8-7 Mon. thru Sat. 6-10 Sundays.

HINT:
It is not unusual for a dose of some analgesics or decongestants to contain the same amount of caffeine as found in a half cup of instant coffee.

BRONCHITIS

The bronchial tubes are the air passages which extend from the windpipe to the lungs. They are lined with tiny hairs called cilia that clean the air that passes within the tube. If virus, bacteria, smoke or dust irritate the bronchial lining to a significant degree, the cilia will stop doing their job. Inflammation then leads to mucous secretion, causing the characteristic cough of bronchitis. When a cold moves from the head to the chest, it is time to consult a physician. He can prescribe treatment for acute bronchitis which may accompany the flu. If allowed to progress, acute bronchitis may reach as far as the tiny bronchioles and cause bronchopneumonia.

Bronchitis, as well as flu, colds and viruses, tonsillitis, and sore throats are often forerunners to asthma. Although asthma cannot be cured, it can be controlled through medication. Many children "outgrow" this disease by their mid-teens. Ask your family physician what measures you can take when your child experiences an asthma attack. Call MEDI-HELP, INC. at 805 W. Wadley @ A for treatment of your family's medical concerns. In-house lab and x-ray facilities are available in addition to allergy testing and treatment. Hours: 8-8, 7 days a week. Tel. 687-2704.

HINT:
The symptoms of bronchitis are chest pains, fever, and a dry hacking cough that eventually produces blockage-causing mucous.

A SMALL WONDER

For the hearing-impaired person who is concerned with the attractiveness of a hearing aid, modern technology has made available the canal aid. With their miniaturized circuits, canal aids are so small that they can be placed within the external ear canal. This has proved to be a boon for people with a mild to moderate hearing loss. These patients may wear the canal aid takes a higher degree of manual the advantages of listening frely over the telephone or even while exercising. These advantages alone should attract the notice of younger hearing-impaired people.

Science has provided numerous options for assistance to the hearing impaired. Technology has achieved a balance of need with cosmetic preference to provide the hearing instruments you need and prefer. For assistance with the selection and fit of the device you require, we invite you to come to AUDIO ACOUSTICS HEARING CENTERS, INC., 32 Village Court. Tel. 682-5033. Open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.

HINT:
The canal aid improves a person's lifestyle without sacrificing a person's looks.

Iba cuts first notch against Tech

Associated Press

Texas Christian's Moe Iba got his first victory as a Southwest Conference basketball coach, but was more pleased by what it meant to his team than for himself.

John Lewis scored 22 points to lead Texas Christian past Texas Tech 55-52 for Iba's first SWC victory.

SWC

"That (his first SWC win) isn't as important as what it might do for our basketball team," Iba said. "It's a good thing to have happen. Maybe it will show our team what it takes to be competitive."

"I just felt like their defense played a lot better than ours did," Tech coach Gerald Myers said. "Their play on our guards was terrific, and we couldn't do anything offensively that we wanted to do."

Lewis said things just went his way, and that he really wasn't looking to score 22 points.

"I didn't feel any pressure to score," he said. "Coach (Iba) doesn't want you to shoot if you don't have your shot, but if you've got it and your hot, he wants you to take it. I knew I had to control Sean (Gay) cause he's one of the leading three-point shooters in the conference and he can hurt you."

TCU improved to 7-9 for the season and 1-9 in league play. Tech dropped to 7-8 overall and 2-2 in conference action.

Gay, with 15 points, was the Raiders' only player in double figures.

Texas A&M 75, Rice 70

Freshman Freddie Ricks scored 20 points and three other Aggies hit in double figures as Texas A&M defeated Rice to stay atop the conference standings.

Donald Thompson scored 14 points, while Keron Graves and Darryl McDonald had 11 each for the Aggies, now 4-0 in league play and 12-6 overall.

Andy Gilchrist scored a game-high 29 points for Rice while D'wayne Tanner added 13 and Ronald Robertson had 10 for the Owls, now 2-3 in conference and 5-10 overall.

"There was a five-minute stretch in the second half that was the difference in the whole ballgame," said Rice coach Scott Thompson. "They scored on us about eight straight times."

Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf agreed,

"The big difference between the first half and the second half was our defense. It played much better in the second half," Metcalf said. "In the first half we were moving around going about three-quarter speed and we took some bad shots.

Arkansas 70, Baylor 62

Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson had high praise for Andrew Lang, who scored 20 points, grabbed nine rebound and blocked four shots to lead Arkansas to a victory over Baylor.

"This was one of Lang's best games," Richardson said. "He got after it on the offensive end and we got the ball to him. When Lang hits his first two shots and gets a chance to play, he can be tough.

"Every time we play Baylor we have a tough time pulling away. We had a 17-point lead then threw the ball away a couple of times and they had some people who haven't been doing much all year come in and hit some 3-pointers."

Lang, a 6-foot-11 senior, took advantage of a frequent double-team on forward Mario Credit, who was held to 10 points after a 27-point game in a losing effort to Texas A&M last week.

Tim Scott had 11 points for Arkansas, now 13-3 for the season and 4-1 in conference.

The Bears, 10-7 overall and 1-3 in conference, were led by Darryl Middleton with 21 points. Michael Williams added 14.

"Arkansas is a good team," Baylor Coach Gene Iba said. "I thought we played well except for mental mistakes that we cannot make playing on the road. They took us out of our game plan."

Curt Kieffer, 8, takes a breather as he prepares for this weekend's COM Winter Invitational at the Mabee Pool Friday through Sunday.

West Texas' wet best splash in COM meet

From Staff Reports

More than 200 swimmers from around West Texas will converge on the City of Midland's Mabee Pool this weekend for the COM Winter Invitational.

Heading the 10-team field will be close to 100 swimmers from the host COM club, including Olympic hopeful Michaela Hasek and Texas All-Star champion Matt Houston, according to head coach Brad Swendig.

Hasek, a junior at Midland High, is the defending state champion in the 100 backstroke and should qualify for the U.S. Olympic Trials this spring.

"She was just a half-second off the qualifying time last year and I really feel like she's much improved this year," Swendig said. "And once she gets to the trials, it's wide open. Even if she doesn't make it, the experience will be a great help for her the next time (1992)."

Houston swims in the 13-14 age group and was the champion in the 50 freestyle at the Texas All-Star meet this fall.

Approximately 40 state age group qualifiers will be in the water from Midland alone making COM one of the top contenders for the team title.

The El Paso Aqua Posse, perennially one of the top 10 teams in the state should provide the most competition for the COM team, but squads from Odessa, Amarillo, San Angelo, Lubbock, Abilene and elsewhere combine to make this the largest short course meet COM hosts all year.

Distance events will begin at 6 p.m. Friday night then relays will kick off the day-long affairs on Saturday and Sunday mornings at 9 a.m.

Chaps take show back on road

From Staff Reports

Midland College ventures to Levelland Thursday for its first meeting of the season with South Plains College. Sporting a 15-4 record and 4-2 in conference play, the Chaps are just one-half game ahead of the Texans in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference race.Both are chasing league-leaders Odessa College and New Mexico Junior College.

The Chaparrals can put some distance between themselves and South Plains with a victory, but wins aren't easy to come by at the Texan Dome in Levelland.

South Plains is led by guard Donnell Hayden, who averages more than 21 points per game. Backcourt teammate Dennis Green is second in the conference in three-point goal accuracy, hitting 22 of 42. Hayden has nailed 37 of his 79 three-point attempts. Keith Stewart, a 6-8 freshman, leads the inside game for South Plains. Another guard, freshman Joe Ankum is the team leader in both steals and assists.

MC coach Reggie Franklin got solid performances Monday night from sophomores Herman "Skeeter" Henry and David Martin. After sitting out for a month with a broken wrist, Martin has played in the last two games for the Chaps, getting double figures in both games.

Franklin also is getting more production and playing time from 6-10 freshman Sydney Rice. With just one semester of high school experience, Rice still is learning the game, but his natural shot-blocking talent is opening eyes around the league. Rice rejected four shots and scored 14 points Monday night as the Chaps whipped Western Texas 99-85.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Charles "Smokey" McCovery brings the ball upcourt for Midland College.

"We're not where we want to be, but we're beginning to see some signs of leadership from the sophomores," Franklin said. "We had way too many turnovers against Western Texas (27), but we also forced them into a lot of mistakes. South Plains took Odessa to the wire last week before losing by nine points, so we've got to be ready to play smart and error-free."

The game will be carried on KCRS, 550-AM, starting at 7:50 p.m.

The Chaps return for two home games next week. They end the first half of conference play at 7:30 p.m. Monday against Frank Phillips and begin the second half Thursday against Clarendon College.

In a rare Tuesday night conference game, Odessa College stayed a half-step in front of NMJC at the top with a 119-78 rout of Frank Phillips in Borger.

Florida topples Kentucky as three ranked teams fall

Associated Press

Florida put No. 4 Kentucky in the no-win zone, and the result was another upset at Rupp Arena.

Vernon Maxwell scored 19 points and Dwayne Schintzius 18 Wednesday night as the Gators took advantage of Kentucky's poor shooting and held on for a 58-56 Southeastern Conference victory.

Florida's 2-1-2 zone defense limited the Wildcats to 16-for-57 shooting from the field. Richard Madison missed a 16-footer with five seconds left that could have tied the game and Ed Davender's three-quarter-court heave was no good at the buzzer.

"When the game started I just decided to go to a zone," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "I had no idea we'd stay in it the whole game."

Kentucky, beaten by Auburn at home earlier this season, made too many mistakes, Coach Eddie Sutton said.

"You can't shoot (16 for 57) and expect to beat anyone," he said. "Just like that last play. Richard shot the ball, but he wasn't the one that was supposed to shoot."

AP Top 20

Florida, 13-4, 4-1, forced Kentucky into bad shots and then got in position for the rebounds. The Gators held a 40-33 edge in rebounds.

"We felt like the key was to keep them off the offensive boards," Kentucky's Winston Bennett said. "The backbreaker was Capers."

Chris Capers, starting in place of injured Livingston Chatman, scored eight points and had 12 rebounds. He got six points on tip-ins and follows.

Schintzius' dunk gave Florida a 58-51 lead with 3:24 remaining. Madison's basket and a three-point play by Bennett got Kentucky within 58-56.

Maxwell missed a 3-pointer with 28 seconds to go, but Kentucky could not capitalize as Madison missed a desperation shot.

Purdue 78, Michigan St. 67

Todd Mitchell scored 21 points and No. 5 Purdue won its 15th straight game by defeating visiting Michigan State in the Big Ten Confernce.

Melvin McCants added 17 points for the Boilermakers, 16-1. Mitchell scored nine points during a 14-4 run that started the second half and put Purdue ahead 56-40.

Iowa St. 114, Nebraska 76

Jeff Grayer scored 37 points and No. 10 Iowa State recorded its biggest rout ever in a regular-season game.

The Cyclones, 16-2, matched their record 38-point margin in the 1957 Big Eight Conference tournament.

Lafester Rhodes, who did not start because he arrived late for the game, scored 23 points as Iowa State reached the 100-mark for the seventh time this season.

Oklahoma 96, Colorado 76

Harvey Grant scored 24 points and Stacey King had 21 as No. 11 Oklahoma pulled away in the second half at Colorado.

Holmes guilty of un-retiring to face Tyson

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Larry Holmes once said of Muhammad Ali, "He didn't know when to retire."

Oh, Ali did retire as a champion, but on Oct. 2, 1980, he came back to challenge Holmes for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship.

It was embarrassing. Ali, only shell of a once-great fighter, took a beating before the fight was halted while he sat on his stool following the 10th round.

On Nov. 6, 1986, three days after his 37th birthday, Holmes announced his retirement.

"I'm tired of people using me," he said. "I'm tired of fighting. ... I got old, too."

At his 38th birthday party, Holmes got a T-shirt from his wife, Diane, with the inscription, "MIKE TYSON 32-1"

The gift was a cute idea. Not too cute, according to a lot of people, is Holmes' idea to come of retirement to challenge the unbeaten Tyson Friday night.

Evert now looks toward Graf

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Chris Evert, having disposed of Martina Navratilova, hopes to prove she can beat Steffi Graf for the women's singles title at the $1.9-million Australian Open tennis tournament.

Evert gave a vintage performance today in beating powerful Navratilova 6-2, 7-5 in a semifinal match. Graf, ranked No. 1 in the world and top-seeded in the first of the year's Grand Slam events, disposed of Claudia Kohde-Kilsch 6-3, 6-2.

"Chris served well, got her first serves in, and returned well," Navratilova said of her long-time rival. "I made a whole bunch more unforced errors than her."

The loss left Navratilova with a 40-36 advantage over Evert.

"I wouldn't want to touch Chris now. She's so hot I'd burn," Navratilova joked.

Evert, 33, has a 6-4 record against Graf, but the 18-year-old West German has won their last four meetings in straight sets.

"I haven't found a way to beat her in recent matches, but everyone is beatable," Evert said. "I'm not fearful if I play the way I have in my last two matches — I'm excited."

Australian Open

The third-seeded Evert will be seeking her 19th Grand Slam title in Saturday's final.

Evert did not win a Grand Slam title for the first time in 14 years in 1987. She did not even make a final. But she banished memories of a dismal campaign with the way in which she took apart three-time Australian Open champion Navratilova, who was aiming for her third straight victory in Grand Slam tournaments.

It was the first time since the 1984 Australian Open that Navratilova, ranked second in the world, has failed to make a Grand Slam final.

Evert, who won in 1982 and 1984, now has reached the final of the Australian Open on all six of her appearances.

"If you look at my record, I've always bounced back," Evert said. "I lose a few matches and I work harder."

Flores leaves Raiders with two Super Bowl rings

By RIC BUCHER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — The seventh coach in Oakland/Los Angeles Raiders history retired Wednesday, and there was no clue who might be the eighth.

Al Davis, the Raiders' owner and managing general partner, announced Wednesday morning that Tom Flores was ending his nine-year reign as the Raiders' head coach but would be retained as an adviser on special projects. Flores spent 22 seasons with the Raiders as a quarterback (1960-61, 1963-66), assistant coach (1972-78) and head coach (1979-87).

"This is a sad moment and a happy moment for me, personally, and certainly for the Los Angeles Raiders," Davis said. After listing Flores' accomplishments, he added: "If this sounds like an enshrinement in the Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio ... it may well be some day. He was, and is, a star among stars."

There was speculation before the press conference began that the Raiders also would announce Flores' replacement. Several sources suggested that a black coach would be chosen, which would have been a precedent in the modern-day NFL.

Davis, not wanting to overshadow Flores' retirement with talk of his replacement, said, "I would hope the Raiders would have a new head coach by the league meetings in Phoenix in March. Other than that, I haven't given it much thought."

He did say he would not hire "a college coach with no pro football experience."

As for hiring a black head coach, Davis said, "One characteristic of the Raiders is that race, color, creed and even sex has never interfered with the idea of winning. I want the best people, I want equal opportunity, and that's what I'm going to do. I'm going to select the best person who can lead the Raider organization."

DAVIS EMPHASIZED that "no one asked Tom Flores to retire. This is what he wanted to do. It was his decision, and he will tell you why."

"I'm not burned out," Flores said. "I'm tired, because it is a very, very strenuous position. It's very draining on you emotionally, physically, mentally. It's all-consuming, and I think it's time to do something else, which is go onto some business and get away from it awhile."

His immediate plan is to leave for Palm Springs Thursday with his wife, Barbara, for an extended vacation.

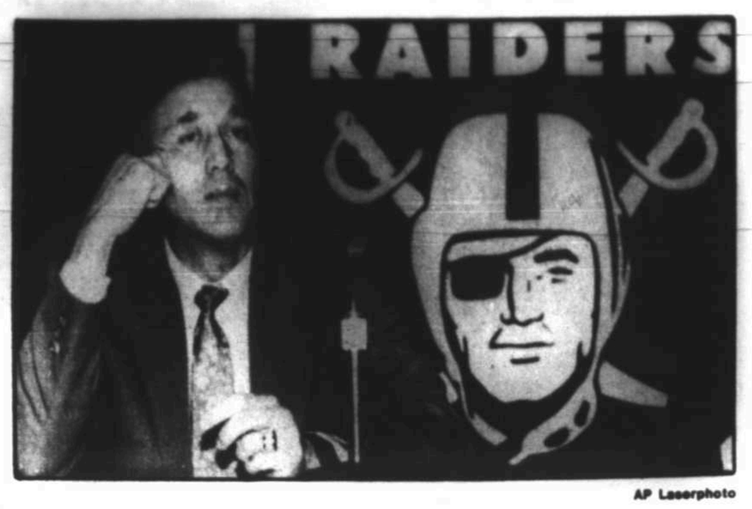

Flores' postseason accomplishments were particularly outstanding. He was a quarterback with the Kansas City Chiefs when they won Super Bowl IV, an assistant coach with the Oakland Raiders when they won Super Bowl XI and the Raiders' head coach when they won Super Bowls XV and XVIII. He is one of only two in NFL history to win league championships in all three capacities (Mike Ditka is the other). He also was selected the NFL coach of the year in 1982.

The Raiders made the playoffs five of Flores' nine years as head coach, but after finishing 8-8 in 1986 and 5-10 this season, some wondered whether he would be back.

Flores, 50, intimated that he might have stayed on for one more season if there was a chance of winning 100 games in 10 seasons. This season's showing precluded that, leaving him with a nine-year record of 83-53 in regular-season play and 8-3 in postseason.

HIS RETIREMENT comes one year short of the agreement he made with Davis when he was hired as the Raiders' head coach on Feb. 9, 1979, replacing John Madden.

Asked what he might say to the Raiders' next coach if he were able to speak to him, Flores invoked Davis' motto: "Just win."

Greenwood still unbeaten

From Staff Reports

CRANE — Greenwood's Rangers and Rangerettes improved their unscathed District 4-3A records to 4-0 with wins over the host Cranes Tuesday.

Tommy Lawson poured in 18 points as the Rangers struggled to a 55-46 win to hand the Cranes, 3-1, their first district loss. Kane Harris added 13 for Greenwood. Rodney Lane had 13 for Crane.

Greenwood upped its overall record to 14-6.

The Rangerettes hung on and outran the Lady Cranes in an explosive fourth quarter for a 49-45 win Tuesday. Cheryl Martin's 16 and Denisa McMullan's 15 points paved the way for Greenwood, 4-0, 16-4.

Both Greenwood teams will stay on the road with a game at Alpine on Friday night.

Wacker names assistant coach

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian announced Wednesday that defensive coordinator Rick Johnson has resigned to take a similar post at Duke and has been replaced by Mark Dove, defensive coordinator from the University of North Carolina.

Dove, a San Angelo native and former standout Texas Tech defensive back, will handle TCU's linebacking corps in addition to his duties as coordinator, said head football coach Jim Wacker.

Last week, Rocky Long of the British Columbia Lions in the Canadian Football League joined the TCU staff as secondary coach.

Dove has served as coach in seven post-season bowls, with coaching stints at Texas Tech, South Carolina and Mississippi State before joining North Carolina where he served as linebacker coach for three seaons before becoming the Tarheels' defensive coordinator in 1987.

The game was tied at 60 with eight minutes left before the Sooners scored 12 straight points. Former Midland College All Americas Ricky Grace and Mookie Blaylock had 3-pointers as the Sooners took advantage of Colorado turnovers.

The Sooners are 14-3 overall and 2-1 in the Big Eight Conference.

St. John's 65, Georgetown 58

Michael Porter scored 21 points and visiting St. John's dropped No. 15 Georgetown into last place in the Big East Conference.

Porter scored six points during an 11-2 burst in the second half that enabled the Redmen to stop a 13-0 streak by the Hoyas and overcome a 50-49 deficit. Shelton Jones had 16 points and 14 rebounds for St. John's, 11-3 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

Georgetown, 11-4, is off to its worst-ever start in the Big East at 1-3. Charles Smith scored 20 points for the Hoyas.

Wake Forest 71, No. Carolina St. 67

Cal Boyd made a 3-point shot and two free throws in the final 20 seconds as Wake Forest upset No. 20 North Carolina State in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Demon Deacons scored the final nine points of the gamme. Wake Forest made 12 of 14 foul shots in the final 6:37, and Boyd's go-ahead jump shot for a 68-67 lead was its only field goal during that stretch.

Sam Ivy scored 25 points for Wake Forest, 6-8 overall and 1-3 in the ACC. Vinny Del Negro had 20 points for the Wolfpack, which had its seven-game winning streak end and fell to 10-3 and 2-1.

Warriors get first road win, beat Nets at buzzer

Associated Press

It was the biggest on-court celebration the Golden State Warriors have had all season.

Hugs, high-fives and smiles all around followed a short jumper at the buzzer by Steve Harris that gave the Warriors a 103-101 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets on Wednesday night at East Rutherford, N.J.

Not only was it only their seventh victory in 34 games this season, it was the Warriors' first of the year on the road after 17 straight losses.

"We got the monkey off our back, but Terry Teagle said it was a gorilla," Warriors Coach George Karl quipped.

NBA Roundup

With the score tied 101-101, Golden State's Ralph Sampson forced Dwayne Washington to alter his driving layup attempt with less than 10 seconds to play. Sampson rebounded the miss and got it to Harris, who missed one shot, got it back and made the second try.

"Ralph made a super defensive play and made a quick outlet pass down the side," Harris said. "I took a jumper, but (Orlando) Woolridge got the ball. I didn't know how much time was left, so I just tried to get it and shoot it again. It definitely beat the buzzer."

SuperSonics 106, Knicks 96

Xavier McDaniel scored a career-high 41 points and pulled down 18 rebounds in leading Seattle to its 16th straight home victory and an NBA-best 17-1 home record.

Dale Ellis added 20 points for Seattle, which won its fifth straight game and tied its single-season franchise mark for home-court victories.

Trent Tucker's 3-point shot with 1:30 left cut the margin to 101-94, the closest the Knicks came after the first period. But Seattle pulled away again with free throws.

Celtics 131, Suns 115

Larry Bird scored 23 points, Danny Ainge added 21 and Boston opened the third quarter with a 14-2 spurt that helped the Celtics to their fourth straight home victory by at least 16 points.

Bird gave the Celtics the lead for good with 4:51 left in the first quarter when he hit a 3-point basket that broke a 16-16 tie. Boston led 61-52 at halftime, quickly turned that into a 75-54 edge and never led by fewer than 15 points the rest of the way.

Bullets 110, 76ers 98

Moses Malone scored 22 and John Williams 20 as Washington used a fourth-quarter surge to get past Philadelphia. The Bullets trailed 74-73 going into the final period, but moved ahead to stay with a 14-2 spurt that made it 87-76 with 8:02 to play.

The 76ers, led by Maurice Cheeks' 20 points, twice slashed the Washington lead to five, the last at 93-88 with 3:08 remaining. But the Bullets went on a 17-10 run to put the game away.

Pistons 120, Jazz 117

Adrian Dantley and Isiah Thomas scored 28 points apiece, 24 between them in the fourth quarter, as Detroit downed Utah. Karl Malone led the Jazz with 39 points and Thurl Bailey added 20.

Utah led 87-84 going in the final period and increased the margin to 91-84 in the first minute. But the Pistons went on a 14-6 run, with Dantley scoring six points, and Detroit led 98-97 with 7:07 remaining.

Kelly Tripucka cut the Detroit lead to 118-115 with a pair of free throws with 26 seconds remaining, but Thomas, who also had 12 assists, iced the game with a jumper with six seconds on the clock.

Clippers 104, Pacers 97

Mike Woodson scored 13 of his 22 points in the third quarter as the Clippers staved off a late rally by Indiana. The Clippers led by as many as 17 points with 7:30 to play before the Pacers mounted their final run.

The Pacers, losers of three in a row, hit Los Angeles with an 18-8 spurt, including four free throws at the end by Steve Stipanovich, bringing them within 102-95 with 1:19 left. The Indiana shooters turned cold thereafter, and didn't get any closer than six points.

17 trainers suspended in track scandal

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Elans Special, the winner of the $2 million All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs last September, ran under the influence of a stimulant drug, the New Mexico Racing Commission announced today.

The filly earned $1 million in the race, the richest event in quarter-horse racing held annually at the southern New Mexico track.

Elans Special's trainer, John Buchanan, was among 17 trainers summarily suspended by the commission today

Elans Special was among 19 horses that tested positive for the stimulant Oxymorphone in tests conducted in recent weeks by the Arizona-based Analytical Technologies Inc. firm, said commission Chairman Harris Hartz.

The positive tests included three other horses that ran in the All-American Futurity, a 440-yard sprint for 2-year-old horses in which the total purse is $2 million and the winning horse earns $1 million.

Locally-owned Cool Rainy Night, a colt that finished ninth in the race and earned $60,500, also tested positive for Oxymorphone following the rich race. Rene Odom of Greenwood owns Cool Rainy Night.

Don Maines, trainer of Cool Rainy Night, was also included in the suspensions.

Send The Gals Candy, the third place finisher in the race, and Back To Cash, the seventh place finisher, tested positive from urine samples taken after the trials that determined the 10-horse futurity field. Send The Gals Candy earned $153,500 for running third and Back To Cash earned $69,500.

Hartz conceded the positive tests, particularly those involving the horses in the All-American, might trigger lawsuits. However, he said it was uncertain what options the commission had in regard to the purse money, which already has been distributed to the owners of the horses in the race.

In recent months, more than two dozen trainers have been suspended in New Mexico for illegal use of drugs in race horses.

Seventeen of the 20 positive tests resulted from races at Ruidoso Downs, which holds an annual summer meet. There was one positive test reported from The Downs at Santa Fe, San Juan Downs and the State Fair meet in Albuquerque.

FIGHT

Holmes' comeback is no suprise to Tyson, the 21-year-old undisputed heavyweight champion.

"I knew if I won the title and I could captivate the public, he would come out of retirement," Tyson said. "I know Larry Holmes is an ego guy. He has a lot of pride."

That pride has often been wounded by what Holmes perceived as a lack of public recognition of his prowess. Holmes never achieved the personality status of an Ali or a Sugar Ray Leonard, although he did win respect as a good champion.

Holmes also remains bitter about his two decision losses to Michael Spinks in the last two fights of his career. Both fights were close, the second one a split decision.

"I'm 50-0," Holmes said on the occasion of his retirment. "People know it. They can question the 49th, but they can't question the 50th."

The late Rocky Marciano, the only heavyweight champion to retire unbeaten, had a 49-0 record.

So at age 38, assured a place in boxing history as one of the best heavyweight champions, Larry Holmes still seeks redemption.

Holmes isn't as shot at age 38 as Ali was. But 50 fights, countless rounds of sparring and the good, if not wild, life have taken a toll. Tyson, meanwhile, is blessed with the strength, quickness and joy of combat that go with youth.

"Larry will go in there and do his best," says Eddie Futch, who trained Holmes for 12 straight fights before the two losses to Spinks. "Larry's not afraid of anyone. Larry just doesn't have the physical capabilities at this stage of his career."

"I don't think he can beat Tyson," said Ray Arcel, who helped train Holmes for his 13th-round knockout of Gerry Cooney in 1982. "Tyson is too young, too strong, too determined and he can set a hell of pace."

Tyson considers Holmes "one of the great fighters of his time."

It's Tyson Time, however. When Tyson was just starting out as an amateur under the tutelege of the late Cus D'Amato, he recalls running on cold mornings and fantasizing about Holmes.

In his dreams, he said, "I didn't knock him out. I just beat him good."

That's the most likely outcome Friday night.

Witnesses oppose gas proration

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Natural gas and pipeline company spokesmen told the House Committee on Energy that a proposal to prorate natural gas production statewide is not the answer to the industry's problems.

"The gas industry does not need further confusion and shake-up," Robert Mayse, senior vice president at Houston Pipeline Co., said at a Wednesday hearing.

The Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association also has set aside a proposal urging the Texas Railroad Commission to study a statewide proration system, said President John Watson.

Although some association members support the plan, Watson said, the group's executive committee "believed TIPRO members are too divided on this issue at this time to fully develop an acceptable concept."

Despite the division Watson said, "This in no way lessens our feeling that the rules are wrong and they need to be changed."

Midlander Clayton Williams Jr. testified that he favors prorationing oil but said the proposed system would not work for natural gas.

"I'd like to get more out of my product, but when you look at it (prorationing) you can see its difficulties," he said.

"It's kind of a sad shame. It gave us a price stability in oil for many years. It was valuable to the industry," he said.

Under the present system, natural gas purchasers file nominations each month telling the Railroad Commission the market for gas in each field. Producers file a statement saying how much each field will produce, and the demand is divided among each well on a pro rata basis, said Bruce Connell, attorney for the TransAmerican Natural Gas Corp. "By reducing demand, prorationing would not help the industry or the public."

The proposed system would instead assign every well in the state a proportionate amount of the aggregate demand, Connell said. "It would be a nightmare for staff to try to implement."

Mayse said the idea is not the answer to overproduction.

"Any cutting back of gas flow in Texas would encourage net importation of gas from sources outside the state," he said."

Larry Bell, vice president for ARCO Oil and Gas Co., said proration would hurt exploration and production projects in South Texas.

Oil production decline will continue, but slower

TULSA (AP) — U.S. oil production will continue to decline in 1988, although stable prices in 1987 gave a slight boost to exploration and drilling activity, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

An increase in Alaskan production this year combined with a modest expansion in lower 48 drilling will slow the rate of decline, but output will continue to decrease, the weekly publication stated in its annual industry forecast and review featured in the Jan. 25 issue.

The prospect of more stable prices, in addition to lower operating costs, is expected to result in a slight increase in drilling activity this year, the Journal stated. The Tulsa-based publication predicts an average active rotary rig count for 1988 to be 1,080, compared with an average rig count of 936 last year.

While the growth rate will moderate, demand for petroleum products in the United States will increase again this year and a new surge of imports will result, according to the Journal.

A widening gap between supply and consumption will be filled by imports of crude and products, leading to an increase of 5 percent this year to more than 6.8 million barrels a day, the Journal reported. At that rate, imports will represent nearly 41 percent of the country's demand.

Meanwhile, U.S. production of crude and condensate is expected to decline 1.8 percent in 1988 to 8.15 million barrels a day, according to the Journal. Production has declined 9.2 percent or about 821,000 barrells a day in the past three years.

Demand for petroleum products will surge by about .7 percent to 16.6 million barrels a day, the highest level since 1960, the Journal reported

The extent of drilling expansion, and the timing, will depend primarily on crude price stability and price levels, which traditionally have been determined by OPEC, according to the Journal.

Oil activity could see small increase in 1988

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

To determine which way the U.S. petroleum energy will go in 1988 one need only determine which way the Permian Basin of Texas and Southeast New Mexico is going, says Max Jensen, division manager of Schlumberger Well Services in Midland.

Providing an overview of Sclumberger's 1988 planning criteria to the members of Society of Independent Earth Scientists (SIPES) Wednesday, Jensen said Permian Basin drilling activity would track oil prices with national drilling rates tracking at about the same pace.

Jensen said it was only natural that the Permian Basin would set the pace for national oil and gas activity since it contains one-fifth all the oil in the U.S. and one-tenth all the natural gas.

"For each penny oil prices increase, we can normally expect to see one rig go back to work nationwide. A one dollar increase in the price of crude oil will up the Permian Basin rig count 5 percent," said Jensen.

Based on a $2 movement in oil prices in 1988, he expects the rig count in the Permian Basin should see a 10 to 15 percent increase.

Despite a slow start, he says the Permian Basin rig count should finish the year with about 185 working rigs with the numbers beginning flat in the first quarter, dipping slightly in the second and climbing to the 185 high in the fourth quarter.

While most operators are predicating budgets on $15 oil, Jensen said Schlumberger expects oil prices to increase about two dollars, ending the year around $20 per barrel.

Improved gas prices, now approaching $2 in some markets, could also play a role in stimulating activity says Jensen. He noted that there was already gas drilling activity in some shallow economical areas of New Mexico in the San Angelo area.

Annual inflation rate at six-year high

Associated Press

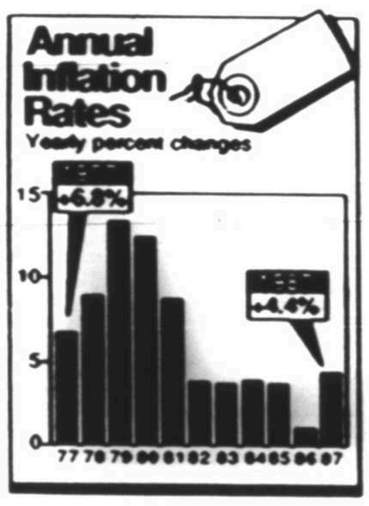

Consumer price inflation last year hit 4.4 percent, its highest rate in six years, due to the weaker dollar and a rebound in oil prices from their lows of 1986, the Labor Department said.

The government also reported Wednesday that housing starts fell 16.2 percent in December, but economists were divided over whether the drop signaled a recession.

Separately, stock prices slid to an early-year low as traders dumped shares in computerized trading strategies and amid worries about some disappointing corporate earnings reports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 57.20 points to 1,879.14, its lowest close since it stood at 1,867.04 on Dec. 11. Broader market indicators also declined.

In the credit markets, short-term interest rates declined as many investors apparently moved their funds from stocks to bonds. Yields on three-month Treasury bills tumbled to 5.79 percent from 5.97 percent late Tuesday.

The inflation report indicated consumer prices rose 0.1 percent in December, pushing the annual rate to 4.4 percent.

The 1987 rate compared with a tiny 1.1 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index in 1986, a 3.8 percent increase in 1985 and a 4 percent rise in 1984. The 1987 rate was the highest since the 8.9 percent rate of 1981, but relatively mild historically.

December's seasonally-adjusted price increase was the best one-month performance since July 1986, when the CPI was unchanged. Prices rose 0.3 percent in November and 0.4 percent in October.

For all of 1987, energy prices rose 8.2 percent after falling 19.7 percent in 1986; food and beverage costs rose 3.5 percent; and all other consumer goods rose 3.5 percent, reflecting price increases stemming from the weaker dollar.

The dollar fell 25 percent against the Japanese yen and 20 percent against the West German mark during 1987.

Icahn: Oxy interested in Texaco bid

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Financier Carl C. Icahn, seeking bankruptcy court support for his reorganization plan for Texaco Inc., has testified that Occidental Petroleum Corp. expressed interest in buying Texaco or its Canadian subsidiary.

Icahn, Texaco's largest shareholder, said Wednesday during a hearing called by U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Howard Schwartzberg that he had discussed Occidental's interest in Texaco and Texaco Canada Inc. several weeks ago during a meeting with Occidental Chairman Armand Hammer.

Schwartzberg is considering whether to allow both Texaco's reorganization plan and Icahn's to go to a vote by Texaco shareholders.

In testifying, Icahn said he told Hammer some time after their meeting that Texaco President James W. Kinnear had told him that $60-a-share might be a price worth discussing to buy the White Plains-based oil giant.

NYSE mulls single-stock trading limits

By JAMES STERNGOLD
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The New York Stock Exchange will consider a proposal to halt trading temporarily in individual stocks if their prices rise or fall by a certain amount, the exchange's chairman, John J. Phelan Jr., said in an interview Wednesday.

The new proposal would bring the most significant change in the way the market functions since the collapse in stock prices last October. It will be taken up at the exchange's next scheduled board meeting, Feb. 4, Phelan said.

Some Wall Street executives have argued strongly that price limits would artificially constrain the free market. But the exchange is clearly eager to introduce its own changes before Congress or the Securities and Exchange Commission impose new trading regulations that investors and brokers might welcome a lot less.

Awful is in the eye of the beholder

Howland

"Badvertising" — irritating, annoying and inane commercials and print advertising — is rampant around us. The trade journal Adweek last week bestowed its annual "Baddie" awards on what its staff feels are the worst of the worst.

At the top of their list, the "Grand Baddie" went to Nissan Motors' campaign utilizing the tag line "Built for the toughest race of all — the human race." In the 30- and 60-second spots, actors portraying Nissan engineers informally discuss how they design cars to fit peoples' needs.

Adweek singled the ad out for their top award because it "reeks of phoniness," they said.

I'll admit that they aren't my favorite ads, but I can think of several much more personally offensive and annoying efforts. Give me phony auto engineers over singing toilet bowls or talking room deodorizers any day.

Another much more deserving is already on Adweek's list. I'd nominate it for the "Horrible Hall of Fame." That is Jacko, the retired Australian football player who screams as he hawks Energizer batteries. For sheer irritation, I can't remember any commercial character even in his league.

Not even former Oakland Raider coach John Madden yelling about Ramada Inns compare to the idiotic yammering of the "post-nuclear punk Atlas of the battery world."

Add to my list — very near the top — any commercial from the Time-Life group. Not only do the ads for Time, Life, Sports Illustrated and books on everything from home repair and Vietnam to the Wild West and the occult have a tendency to be trite and bland, but (on cable at least) they seem to go on forever. Hopefully the networks won't follow cable's lead in offering 90- and 120-second ad blocks — it's the marketing equivalent to a root canal.

Getting back to those talking toilets and deodorizers, it's kind of disappointing to see how far "creative types" in the ad business have knocked the once-proud tradition of commercial animation.

Speedy Alka-Seltzer, the Scrubbing Bubbies and friends must be whirring around in their charcoal-line graves, when they see a singing toilet asking for a Vanish Pop-in or Renuzit's talking air fresheners.

This is not to say that good animation is strictly a thing of the past. Witness the success and popularity of the entertaining "clay-mationed" California raisins.

But as with most good ideas, imitation turns out to be much less the sincerest form of flattery and more the degradation of originality. I don't think it's any secret that the creators of Pillsbury's Pop Secret ads with sunglass-wearing corn kernels at the beach must have seen the raisins strut their stuff and said "Why not?"

The most-imitated genre of commercials currently flooding the airwaves seems to be the MTV-look, wet streets and neon, with rock music that worked so well for Michelob. Now, everyone from direct beer competitors to car companies are "borrowing" the look and feel of the hip spots — and downplaying their product in the process.

GM chose this approach for its peculiar looking Amerasian LeMans, imported from Korea for its Pontiac division. In an entire 60-second spot, the viewer never gets a full-view conventional-angle look at the car.

The slightly off-focus, shaky camera, black-and-white "commercial noir" is quickly joining the ranks of the "over-done" as well. AT&T's phone equipment spots using this approach are vaguely alienating and Coors and Miller beers variations on the theme look like the fell out of the same cookie cutter.

But, you'll notice that good or bad, rave or pan, each award-winner's name got remembered and mentioned — both in the original spot and again in this column.

As one admaker told the Associated Press after Adweek "honored" her client's campaign with a "Baddie," the truly worst advertising of the year "isn't on the list because people can't remember it."

That's the real proof of the pudding.

MARKETS

Indecisive crude prices drift lower

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices are eroding as traders remain puzzled over which way the market is headed over the near term.

February contracts for West Texas Intermediate closed down 10 cents from Tuesday's close at $17.25 per barrel at the New York Mercantile Exchange Wednesday.

Prices for refined products also fell. Wholesale unleaded gasoline for February delivery dropped 0.15 cent to 45.69 cents a gallon, while wholesale home heating oil for February delivery finished up 0.24 cent lower at 50.95 cents.

James Steel, an analyst at Refco Inc. Commodities, and Peter Beutel, an analyst at Elders Futures Inc., said prices were being pushed and pulled in opposite directions.

"The bottom line is, this is a market that does not know which way it wants to go," Beutel said.

The main factor bolstering prices is a cut in production by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries

Trade worries depress dollar, gold

LONDON (AP) — The dollar moved lower against most major currencies in early European trading today as worries persisted about the U.S. trade balance. Gold prices also dropped in Europe.

The dollar was being pressured by fears that the 25 percent narrowing in the merchandise trade deficit to $13.22 billion in November may be a temporary phenomenon and that the trade performance continues to be an acute threat to the overall economy.

In Tokyo, the dollar plunged 1.98 Japanese yen to a closing 126.80 yen. Later, in London, it edged up to 127.32 yen.

Other dollar rates in Europe at mid-morning, compared with late rates Wednesday:

—1.6610 West German marks, down from 1.6615

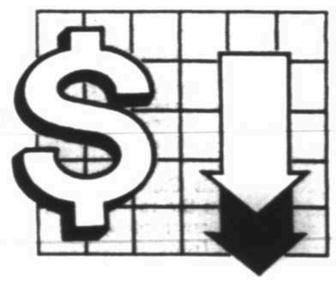

—1.3487 Swiss francs, down from 1.3490

—5.6015 French francs, down from 5.6110

—1.8635 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8690

—1,219.00 Italian lire, down from 1,222.50

—1.2823 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2822

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7955 from $1.7925 late Wednesday.

Dow plunges 57 points to year's low

NEW YORK (NYT) — Stock prices plunged Wednesday, and the Dow Jones industrial average fell to its lowest point since Dec. 11. Technology issues were particularly hard hit, despite some strong earnings reports.

The Dow, made up of the stocks of 30 of the nation's premier corporations, fell 57.20 points, or 2.95 percent, to close at 1,879.14.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 3.41 points, to 136.72, and the S&P 500-stock index dropped 6.69, to 242.63. Volume on the Big Board was 181.7 million shares, against 153.6 million Tuesday; 1,329 stocks fell, and 333 rose.

The NASDAQ index of over-the-counter stocks dropped 6.68 points, to 333.68.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index fell 4.57, to 263.97.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Management to blame in many bank failures

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of bank failures from 1979 to 1987 shows that although ailing regional economies had an obvious impact, much of the blame must go to poor managers, Comptroller of the Currency Robert L. Clarke said. Clarke told a group of industry officials Wednesday the study examined the assumption that depressed conditions in agriculture, energy production and real estate were largely responsible for a wave of bank failures unprecedented since the early 1930s.

Since 1979, 631 federally insured banks with state or national charters have closed their doors. More than half of the failures have occurred in the past two years.

Shell will pay for ineffecitve crop spray

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Shell Oil Co. must pay more than $412,000 to an Iowa seed corn company because a Shell insecticide failed to rid the company's fields of European corn borers, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled.

The Wednesday ruling upheld a district court decision, although the Supreme Court cut about $105,000 in interest payments from that judgment.

The high court ruled Shell was to blame for 75 percent of the 1983 crop losses suffered by Renze Hybrids Inc., a family-owned seed corn business. Those losses totaled $549,816.

Only German car parts more costly than U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. automotive parts are seen as more costly than those made in everywhere except West Germany, giving foreign makers an edge over their embattled domestic competition, a government study said.

"U.S. parts makers are in a very competitive and increasingly international market in which they must lower costs, improve quality, ensure timely delivery and expand design and research and development efforts," the report by the U.S. International Trade Commission for the Senate Finance Committee said. It was released Wednesday.

Volkswagen begins planning for shut-down

NEW STANTON, Pa. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union is telling its members that Volkswagen has agreed to give them each at least $1,000 in cash, medical insurance for a year and special retirement packages when the automaker closes its Pennsylvania plant.

Chet Bahn, Volkswagen's spokesman at the Westmoreland County plant, declined comment Wednesday on the package, which was outlined by the UAW in a flier to members.

Pecos producer gets second pay

From Staff Reports

A recompletion project in Pecos County has converted an Ellenburger oil producer into a dual Ellenburger-Wolfcamp gas producer, both in the Putnam field.

R.K.G. ENGINEERING, INC., Odessa, reentered the No. 2 Emma Gay Woodward, completing it for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.7 Mmcfd from Wolfcamp perforations 4,408 to 4,818 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,500 gallons of acid.

Originally drilled to total depth of 5,393 ft., the well was plugged back to 4,923 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,940 ft. Pay was topped at 4,440 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and west lines of Section 34, Block 11, H&GN survey, eight miles south of Girvin.

Dual producer

★An Odessa firm has turned a Pecos County producer into a dual producer, producing both Ellenburger oil and Wolfcamp gas production in the Putnam field.

Eddy County gains 75 barrel discovery

A Bone Spring discovery has been recorded in Eddy County, N.M., northwest of the Owen Mesa field.

ENRON OIL & GAS CO. potentialed the No. 1 Owen Mesa "26" Federal Com. to flow 75 barrels of 43.3 gravity crude, 544 Mcfd and 92 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 640 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,952 to 7,962 ft., which had been treated with 8,000 gallons of gel and 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 7,253:1.

Drilled to 12,860 ft., the well was plugged back to 9,965 ft. A 4 1/2 inch liner was hung from 10,696 to 12,860 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,967 ft., include the Delaware at 3,108 ft., Cherry Canyon at 4,152, Bone Springs at 6,842, Second Bone Springs at 8,478, Third Bone Springs at 9,764, Wolfcamp at 10,130, Strawn at 12,376, Atoka at 11,545, and Queen Lake at 12,664 ft. Pay was toped at 7,952 ft.

Location is 1,350 ft. from north and 1,880 ft. from east lines of Section 26, T24s, R29e.

Pennsylvanian find pumps three barrels

EXXON CORP., Midland, has completed a very modest Pennsylvanian discovery in Ward County, surrounded by production in the Estes Block 34 field.

On potential test, the No. 34 American National Life Insurance Co. pumped three barrels of 34.9 gravity crude and eight barrels of water from perforations 7,535 to 7,573 ft. The interval was acidized with 4,634 gallons fo 15 percent HCL.

Originally drilled to 9,188 ft., the well was plugged back to 7,874 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,096 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,568 ft., formation tops include the San Angelo at 4,570 ft., Upper Clearfork at 5,150, Wichita at 6,020, and the Pennsylvanian at 7,680 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from northwest and southwest lines of Section 25, Block 34, H&TC survey, nine miles south of Monahans.

Andrews field gains 50 barrel producer

New Wolfcamp production has been added to the Shafter Lake field of Andrews County.

OILFIELD MANAGEMENT, INC. finaled the No. 1 University "13-12" to pump 50 barrels of 41 gravity crude, 30 Mcfd and 60 barrels of water. Production is from perforations 8,593 to 8,614 ft., which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL. Gas-oil ratio is 600:1.

Permitted as a 12,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,990 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 8,665 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,271 ft., include the Yates at 3,043 ft., San Andres at 4,600, Clearfork at 6,300, Wolfcamp at 8,584, Devonian at 9,914, and Simpson at 11,707 ft. Pay was topped at 8,593 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 900 ft. from east lines of Section 12, Block 13, ULS survey, four miles southwest of Frankel City.

DEVELOPMENT

■ UNOCAL TO ADD FOUR TO ANDREWS FIELD. Union Oil Co. of California, Midland, has applied to drill four new producers in the Dollarhide (Clearfork) field of Andrews County. The four are in the Dollarhide Unit, with depths ranging from 7,250 ft. to 7,775 ft.

Stock repurchase programs enhance per share earnings performance

By BILL DOYLE

Q. The latest report to stockholders from a company in which I have invested says the company will repurchase, from time to time, up to 2.5 million of the company's outstanding common stock.

Suppose the company now has 22.5 million shares outstanding and there will be 20 million shares outstanding after the buyback. Does this mean the company's earnings then will be divided among the remaining 20 million shares?

Doyle

A. Exactly! Only outstanding shares — those owned by investors — share in the company's earnings. Repurchased shares are no longer outstanding.

Let's say that company has net earnings of exactly $200 million in a given year. On 22.5 million shares, that works out to $8.89 per share. Assuming no change in the company's net earning, per share earnings will be $10 on the 20 million shares outstanding after the buyback.

Of course, this is a simplistic example. A corporation's net earnings change from year to year. And it's most unlikely the 2.5 million shares can be repurchased in one fell swoop.

Nonetheless, a repurchase program does enhance earnings per share and the value of the shares that remain outstanding. With higher per share earnings, dividends might or might not be increased.

The shares that are bought back become "treasury stock." Besides not sharing in earnings, they are not entitled to dividends and have no voice in corporate affairs. They cannot be voted at stockholder meetings.

Many companies announced stock repurchase plans immediately after the October stock market crash, as their managements voiced the opinion that the stocks were undervalued in the marketplace.

Q. Can stock that has been repurchased by a company be reissued at some future date?

A. Yes. The company can sell that stock to raise money, which it might do if the stock's market price rises.

That stock also might be used for some other corporate purpose, such as a merger or to have shares available for officers' stock options or employee stock purchase plans.

Q. I'm told that management can strengthen its control of a company through a stock repurchase plan and make it more difficult for a "corporate raider" to take over or, even, for unhappy existing stockholders to make any changes. Is that true?

A. Yes. Each share of stock represents a share of corporate ownership. Reducing the number of shares through a stock repurchase plan gives each remaining outstanding share a bigger piece of ownership. If management keeps the number of shares it already owned, a stock buyback will increase its percentage of ownership.

Let's say officers, directors, their relatives and friends owned 40 percent of a company's stock before a stock repurchase and 51 percent after that buyback. At that point, there's no way in the world management can be ousted.

Actually, management's percentage of ownership needn't be nearly that high. Control can be exercised with ownership of 20 percent or less, because most stockholders vote with management at shareholder meetings. Some don't vote at all.

TEXACO

But Kinnear later called back to say he was not serious about the idea, Icahn said.

Icahn repeated earlier statements that he had no plans to seek control of Texaco himself.

At Occidental's Los Angeles headquarters, spokesman Frank Ashley said the company had no comment on any of the matter. He did confirm, however, that Occidental had previously expressed interest in possibly acquiring Texaco Canada.

In White Plains, where Texaco is based, Kinnear pointedly denied Icahn's account, and accused him of making it up.

"I never suggested to Carl Icahn or anybody else that Texaco might be for sale at $60 a share or any other price," Kinnear said. "I do not believe that it would be in the best interest of all shareholders to sell the company at this time."

"I regret that Mr. Icahn has resorted to flat-out fabrication in his continued attempt to use the bankruptcy proceedings to put Texaco on the block so that he can reap short-term gains at the expense fo the long-term interests of all Texaco shareholders," Kinnear said.

Texaco managers have accused Icahn of trying to dismember the company to boost the value of his holdings. Icahn, who controls 14.5 percent of Texaco's common stock, has conceded his plan would make his shares more valuable.

In 90 minutes of testimony, Icahn said he opposed Texaco's plan because it was "basically a tyrannical act by Texaco."

He said he was confident his plan would win a vote of stockholders, because Texaco was attempting to intimidate shareholders and deny all accountability by managers.

"Texaco is trying to give us no choice," Icahn said. "The stockholders are being strong-armed."

The hearing came a day after a committee appointed to represent Texaco shareholders during the reorganization agreed to support the company's plan.

In return, Texaco's management agreed to measures that would loosen its anti-takeover provisions and provide greater protection to shareholders in the event of an attempted takeover of the company.

Icahn's plan would remove all the company's anti-takeover provisions.

Texaco's creditors committee also is supporting the company's plan, as is Pennzoil Co.

The keystone of Texaco's plan is an agreement between Texaco and Pennzoil in which Texaco will pay Pennzoil $3 billion to drop a $10.3 billion damage judgment held by Pennzoil.

Icahn has said that dropping the anti-takeover measures — such as the staggered election of board members and "poison pill" provisions — would give Texaco's management more incentive to do a better job.

Law firms bill Texaco's fees

DALLAS (AP) — Law firms handling Texaco Inc.'s massive bankruptcy proceedings have racked up sizeable fees, including more than $600,000 from Houston's Fulbright & Jaworski.

Ten firms and three individuals have asked U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Howard Schwartzberg, sitting in White Plains, N.Y., to approve payment of $6.4 million, which includes $1 million in disbursements, The Texas Lawyer magazine reported in this week's edition.

Fulbright litigation chief James Sales, president-elect of the State Bar of Texas, billed nearly $262,000 for 873 hours of work at $300 per hour, court records showed.

More than one-third of the legal fees that Texaco's lawyers asked Schwartzberg to approve came from Weil, Gotshal & Manges, which has been clocking more than $20,000 per day in fees and expenses since August.

Weil, Gotshal of Houston led the other firms by a wide margin in its compensation request for fees, totaling just over $2.1 million.

It was the second time firms have been allowed to request interim compensation in the case. On the first round in September, requests added up to about $6.7 million.

Schwartzberg allowed firms to submit monthly bills to Texaco for payment of 75 percent of their legal services and all their expenses. All must file every 120 days for court approval of Texaco's disbursements.

"Some published reports say oil prices will go up others say they will go down," added Jensen. "But we see a movement of $2 per barrel as the OPEC objective this year. That was their objective last year and we think they will try to stick with it this year. There is a strong need for cash among OPEC members, and they will try to increase oil prices at least some."

He said over supply was still holding oil prices down, but there were several factors which could affect the surplus. "World demand for crude oil is increasing. According to the Energy Information Agency, the world is using about 2 million barrels per day more than previously thought.

"Also, the tanker war is taking it's toll. Some shippers will not now send their tankers into the Persian Gulf." He also noted that U.S. reserves and production were also on the decline.

Jensen said continuing uncertainty of oil prices was having a profound effect on the planning process in the oil industry: "Used to be you would see a lot of 10-year, even 20-year plans for oil companies, but not any more. Now, few plan further than one year ahead."

Mobil weighing inquiries for Montgomery Ward retail chain

NEW YORK (NYT) — The Mobil Corp. said Wednesday that it was exploring the sale of its Montgomery Ward subsidiary after having received inquiries from "some sizable companies" interested in acquiring the retailing chain.

A Mobil spokesman, John Lord, responding to inquiries based on reports from trade sources, said that Montgomery Ward's management "endorsed this activity and is participating in it."

Lord would not comment on related repors that a senior management team at Montgomery Ward, headed by Bernard F. Brennan, the retailer's chairman and chief executive, had submitted a bid for a leveraged buyout of the 315-store chain. The price of such a bid was estimated at more than $1 billion.

Under Brennan, who has been chairman since 1985, the 115-year-old Montgomery Ward has made dramatic strides. Sales in 1987 by the Chicago-based retailer were estimated by industry experts Wednesday at about $4.2 billion, and its pretax profit was put at about $245 million. The earnings figure compares with $106 million in 1986 and $42 million in 1985.

The results, as estimated, were the best for the retail chain since Mobil acquired it in 1976 in an effort to diversify its holdings beyond the oil industry.

In 1986, Montgomery Ward accounted for about 5 percent of Mobil's $44.8 billion in sales and 2 percent of its $1.4 billion in net profits.

In the late 1970's, severe losses at the chain had forced Mobil to provide the retailer with more

The stock exchange currently operates without any fixed price limits, although it does have rules for temporarily halting trading in individual stocks when there is a large imbalance in buy and sell orders.

But these halts, which are not imposed at any fixed point, are discretionary, initiated by a broker in a given stock, known as a specialist, and approved by exchange officials. By contrast, the proposed system would be based on predetermined limits on price movements, making halts in trading more predictable.

Phelan explained that, if accepted by the board, the trading halt would probably be based on a price change of a certain percentage, and would be tried first on just a few stocks. For instance, he said, if a stock rose or fell more than 30 percent in one day, trading would be halted automatically. During this time — perhaps 10 minutes — news of the halt would be flashed to traders, and then trading would resume.

Phelan said the exact percentage had not been selected. But the halt would not prevent a stock from declining or rising more when trading resumed.

One aim of a halt would be to give investors an opportunity to note the size of a stock's price movement.

Although price limits have been strongly resisted by some, many long-held assumptions have been jolted by the shock of the stock mar ket's crash. On the worst day, Oct. 19, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 22.6 percent, and many individual stocks declined substantially more.

The stock exchange is contemplat ing this step in an effort to gain better control over the market at times when it might be turning chaotic, Phelan said.

"There are points in time when everyone wants out — where you just say, 'Forget it, we have to wait for this thing to stabilize,'" Phelan said.

The new proposal would be the sec ond important change adopted since October. Last week, the exchange initiated a rule that will shut down the use of the exchange's automated trading system for a computerized strategy known as program trading whenever the Dow Jones industrial average rises or falls more than 75 points in a day. Phelan said that the testing period of the 75-point rule, which was due to end Friday, was likely to be extended.

Currently, during trading halts in individual stocks the specialist works to find the price at which there is equilibrium between buyers and sell ers, at which trading is resumed.

Phelan conceded that there had always been, in effect, an informal price limit system, in which limits were not fixed in advance.

Phelan explained that the proposal would formalize the process of halting trading and make it more predictable, which in itself could help reduce volatility.

"We've always done price limits," he said. "We don't call them price limits because there is no hard and fast rule. The new approach is to give some warning, give people time."

CPSC issues warnings, recalls

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

Consumer Product Safety Commission has issued warnings and recalls on involving several products including:

■ Toy flying helicopters, which have already been recalled by six firms but may still be sold at flea markets. The CPSC warned that the blades may separate from the rotor while the toy is in flight, which may result in injury to user or bystander.

The helicopter in question is white with red blades, and red and yellow markings on the tail. It is about 7½-inches long and had a green launching handle. On the reverse of the box, in the lower right-hand corner, are the words, "Made in Taiwan — WL322."

Consumers are advised to dispose of any of these helicopters they may have, and flea market operators are asked to stop selling them and either return any left in stock to the supplier or destroy the toys.

For more information call the CPSC toll-free hotline, 1-800-638-CPSC. Teletypewriter number for hearing-impaired in 1-800-638-8270.

■ Blueray "glue flame" furnace or boiler. Blueray Systems Inc. of Schuylkill Haven, Pa., in cooperation with CPSC, has begun a program of alerting service technicians, distributors and home owners of the importance and strict maintainence and service of these products.

Failure to do so may result in danger of carbon monoxide poisoning. Furnaces or boilers included in this program carry a blue and white label that reads, "BLUERAY by Blueray Systems, Inc." Model numbers are BR60, BR75, BF60 and BF75.

Blueray can be reached by calling 1-800-338-9681 or by writing Blueray Systems Inc., P.O. Box 1262, Havertown, Pa. 19083. The CPSC can be reached at the above numbers.

■ Crib Soft Playground activity center for cribs and playpens. Shelcore Inc. of South Plainfield, N.J., manufacturer of the activity center, in voluntary cooperation with CPSC, is offering customers a free replacement because of the product represents a potential strangulation hazard.

Recalled items are about 11½x14-inches. One type, labeled "SHELCORE CRIB SOFT Playground," was available from several stores since 1982; "Winnie-the-Pooh Crib Soft Playground" was available at Sears, Roebuck and Co. in 1982-83. Some activity centers were sold in three-piece crib toy sets.

The products were imported from Taiwan and sold for about $9.50. Consumers are advised to remove the activity centers immediately from cribs and playpens.

To receive a new activity center, consumers should mail the old one, along with their name, address and telephone number, to Shelcore Inc. 3474 S. Clinton Ave, S. Plainfield, N.J. 07080. Postage will be reimbursed by Shelcore Inc.

I've got some more warnings and recalls to tell you about. Stay tuned for part II ...

Advice given on fireplace safety

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

During a cold winter night, there are few things as enjoyable as a warm, crackling fire in a home fireplace.

However, the Better Business Bureau recommends that homeowners take certain precautions before enjoyng this relaxing pleasure.

■ Be sure the fireplace is in sound working condition.

■ Use the proper type of firewood for burning.

Professional chimney sweeps recommend that any chimney that hasn't been cleaned for years be checked before you start a fire. Possible damage may result from a buildup of flammable chimney dirt, called creosote, that collects on the inside of chimneys.

A knowledgeable sweep also can check for cracked flue liners, possible structural damage, inside debris from birds or animals or an improperly working damper.

While chimney sweeping is a messy job often best left to experienced sweeps, homeowners who have the proper tools can do the job. The correct flue brush, for example, should be round and made of wire, and should be somewhat larger than the flue opening to get the necessary scraping action.

Professional sweeps also can use special industrial strength vacuum cleaners to suck up debris as it falls from the flue. Home vacuums are not usually designed to handle the debris and dirt.

As for buying wood for your fireplace, the BBB recommends that homeowners understand what they are purchasing. A full cord of wood, the most common measure for firewood, is defined as a tightly stacked pile of wood 4 feet high, 4 feet deep and 8 feet long. Seasoned wood is that which has been cut and has had at least six to nine months to dry.

Some tips to remember for maintaining a safe fire are:

■ Do not use flammable liquids.

■ If you use synthetic logs, follow the instructions on the wrapper.

■ Keep a metal or glass screen in front of your fireplace.

■ Don't use excessive amounts of paper to build a roaring fire.

■ Never burn charcoal in your fireplace.

■ Before you go to bed or leave your house, be sure your fireplace is completely out.

Companies race for best TV technology

Associated Press

A war is being waged among companies in Japan, Europe and the U.S. to devise the best television delivery system for the U.S. that technology can create.

It is being fueled by the advent of Super VHS, with its ability to deliver a picture superior to the NTSC broadcast standard, coupled with the most profound breakthrough in TV technology since the introduction of color. That breakthrough is high-definition television (HDTV), an electronic means of reproducing pictures so fine they are indistinguishable from film. The current issue of Video Magazine goes behind the battle lines to uncover whose high-definition TV system will dominate America.

HDTV was created by engineers who wanted to approximate the limits of human vision. The result was a production standard that makes movie-quality TV possible. The drawback to HDTV is it requires three television channels of spectrum space — far too much to be used as a general broadcast medium. So, to comply with the shortcomings of current broadcasting systems, some compromise systems have been proposed. The goals of these systems are to improve both picture and sound quality as much as possible while spectrum space usage and cost are kept to a minimum.

The Federal Communications Commission has set up a committee to study these competing systems

Yellow Page advertising is creative, active advertising.

FACT:

It's hard to be creative when you have to limit your message. Harder still when you realize you can only change that ad once a year. Yellow Page advertising by necessity is stagnant, passive advertising. Your products change. Your services offered change. Your prices change. Your customers change. So should your advertising.

DEAR ABBY

Allergists protest 'purrfect' answer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter from a man who hadn't visited his mother for four years. She lived 1,000 miles away, but that wasn't the reason. His wife and daughter were highly allergic to cats and his mother had a cat.

You offered the "purrr-fect" solution: "Have someone keep your mother's cat once a year while you and your family visit." Your solution was shortsighted. Many persons who are highly allergic to the animal will also be allergic to the dander and hair that the animal has left all over the house. My family learned this the hard way, after we'd bought a house that had been vacant for over a decade. The previous owner had kept numerous animals, and the hair they'd left made our breathing so difficult that we had to have an industrial cleaning crew come in to vacuum and clean before we would move in.

I'm glad that man is considerate enough to ask for advice in this matter. Too often persons who do not have allergies are unwilling to acknowledge the sensitivity of those who do. — MARGO HABLUTZEL, CHICAGO

DEAR MARGO: The fur has been flying in my office all week. Most wrote from their firsthand experiences. I knew there were millions of cat lovers in the USA and Canada, but I learned from my readers that the number of people who are allergic to cats is nothing to sneeze at.

DEAR ABBY: The following true story could save someone's life. While my sister-in-law and I were on the golf course last week, I was sipping a soft drink straight from the can. After taking a big swallow, I felt a very angry bee in my mouth! (I had not noticed any bees around.) Before I could spit out the bee, it had stung me on the tongue! My sister-in-law carefully removed the stinger and poison sac from my tongue, then we raced the cart to the clubhouse where I filled my mouth with ice and held some alongside my neck. (Both were numb.)

I thought of the thousands of picnics and other occasions when someone pops open a can of beverage, takes a swallow and thinks nothing of it. To most people a bee sting isn't very serious, but a person who is highly allergic could die from it.

From now on, I will always carry a plastic cup or a tape to cover the opening in a beverage can if I don't plan to drink it all at once. Thank you for warning people, Abby. — WENDY IN VICTORIA, TEXAS

DEAR WENDY: Thanks to you for caring enough to warn others.

DEAR ABBY: Help! I live in what is considered an affluent condominium complex.

A new neighbor moved in who cooks fish four or five times a week and the odor wafts into our apartment. Because we meet socially now and then, and everyone is congenial, I don't want hard feelings or resentment to occur.

Is there a way to resolve this without confrontation? — IRRITATED IN TAMPA

DEAR IRRITATED: Unless you communicate your displeasure (annoyance, irritation) to your neighbor, nothing will change. There are ways to minimize, mask or eliminate disagreeable cooking odors, but ideally it should begin at the source. Either speak to your neighbor, or write her a pleasant note — with a carbon copy to the president of the homeowner's association.

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling are included).

Forming personal savings habit easy

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

If you're like most Americans, your savings probably looks pretty slim. In fact, last year American households saved only 3.9 percent of their disposable income — the worst for personal savings since World War II.

Saving, like spending, can be habit-forming. So, now may be a good time to get back in the saving habit.

Having adequate savings means you can dip into these funds for emergencies or big-ticket purchases rather than run up large credit card bills or installment payments. That's especially important now that there are fewer tax advantages to borrowing.

One savings method is to take money directly from your paycheck and put it into your savings. Your employer may have a program that allows you to have a payroll deduction made directly into a savings account. Without having the money in hand, you will be less likely to spend it.

Many people have success "paying" their savings account each month, just as though they were paying a regular bill. By doing this regularly, they will always have set-aside savings. Or try taking the balance in your checking account at the end of each pay period and transferring it to savings when you deposit a new paycheck.

It may take some creativity and discipline to save from daily living expenses, but it can be done. Consider never spending the change you receive from purchases and putting it into savings.

If you buy something on sale, "pay" the difference between the sale price and regular price to your savings account. Or try saving the money you receive from coupon refunds. There are probably hundreds of small ways to save that add up to lots of dollars over time.

Having a particular goal in mind is a big help in savings. Let's say, for example, that this year you spent $1,000 for travel and gifts at Christmas. Rather than "financing" next year's holiday expenses on credit cards and paying finance charges for several months while you pay off the bills, save that amount in advance.

Here are some strategies for saving $1,000 in a year:

- Bank 1 percent of your monthly income the first month, 2 percent the second month, 3 percent the third month and so on up to 10 percent or until you reach your goal of $1,000. Putting away the first 1 percent will probably be harder than putting away 10 percent later on.
- Give up $76.41 per month in impulse credit card purchases. That money, plus the interest you save, will total $1,000.
- Deposit $18.30 each week in a savings account.
- Save the $1,000 by shaving $2.74 from your food budget. Simply bringing a brown-bag lunch and drinks from home, rather than eating out and buying drinks from a vending machine, will save that much each day. But don't forget to bankroll the savings.

Top opposition leader detained by Haitian police

Louis Dejoie II

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Louis Dejoie II, a top opposition leader, was detained by police and taken to the National Penitentiary. His wife called on "the international community" to pressure the junta to release him.

Dejoie was detained Wednesday night at the airport after he arrived from Puerto Rico. The military-led junta gave no reason for his detention.

"You might be able to find out someday, but not today," Lt. F. Fenelon said from inside the prison entrance gate in downtown Port-au-Prince.

A spokesperson for the Information Ministry, speaking on condition of anonymity, said: "I don't know if there is an arrest warrant against him."

Capt. Antoine Atouriste, chief of security at Port-au-Prince International Airport, told reporters waiting to interview Dejoie, "He's being detained just for a formality." Atouriste did not elaborate.

Dejoie lived in Puerto Rico for 26 years after his family was exiled by dictator Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier. Dejoie's father, reputedly the richest man in Haiti in his day, lost to Duvalier in a disputed 1957 election.

Dejoie was a leading presidential candidate in the Nov. 29 election that was called off due to widespread violence which Dejoie and the other main candidates blamed on the ruling junta of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy. They claimed the violence was orchestrated or at least tolerated by the junta as a way to prevent the election of a president the army might not be able to control.

Dejoie, a businessman, and three rivals — economist Marc Bazin, pastor and acountant Sylvio Claude, and human rights activist Gerard Gourgue — were expected to be the top vote getters in the Nov. 29 election.

After the election was called off, the junta dismissed a civilian Electoral Council, appointed a new board and held new presidential balloting on Sunday.

Turnout was low and the results are still being tabulated. Dejoie and other opposition leaders had called on Haitians to boycott the election.

Mrs. Ghislaine Dejoie said by telephone from San Juan, Puerto Rico: "I have no idea why my husband was detained. Maybe they didn't like what he was doing." She said she tried calling the penitentiary but no one answered.

She said contacted members of her family in Haiti and quoted them as saying authorities "wanted to put (Dejoie) back on the plane and he said no." Dejoie was quoted as telling authorities, "You will have to kill me to do that."

"He (Dejoie) went back to Haiti to finish the work he has started," his wife said, adding: "I appeal to the international community. Tell them to help not only my husband but help us in our struggle to give Haiti democracy. Don't let Haiti drift back into a dictatorship."

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said police gave Dejoie the option of leaving Haiti and took him to jail after he refused.

A candidate from Sunday's presidential election, Gregoire Eugene, said Dejoie may have been detained because he called for foreign intervention in Haiti and urged countries to withhold support of a new government.

"I don't know why it happened, but I should guess it is related to a few statements he issued while outside the country such as calling for a foreign intervention in Haiti," Eugene said in an interview.

During the past several weeks, Dejoie has traveled to Puerto Rico, Barbados, Washington, D.C., and Canada urging those governments not to recognize whatever regime emerges from last Sunday's election.

In Washington, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., called on the Reagan administration Wednesday to recall its ambassador to Haiti in protest over the weekend's presidential election.

Curfews eased to allow refugees to go to work

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli authorities eased curfews in four Gaza Strip refugee camps today to allow Palestinians to go to work in a test of the fragile calm the army imposed after six weeks of violence.

The action followed appeals from the United States, Canada and the United Nations to allow residents in the sealed-off camps to get food.

Michel Amiguet, Mideast area director of the International Red Cross, said he had received no reports of food shortages.

But the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, which administers the camps, said lengthy curfews were disrupting supplies and causing shortages.

In a statement referring to Amiguet's remarks, agency spokeswoman Christine Debbagh said: "There is no starvation but people are hungry. There is some food going in through UNRWA, but this not sufficient."

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said calm had been restored enough to allow a relaxation of the army's crackdown, but police reinforcements were rushed to patrol duties along a major highway through the Israeli countryside after two firebombs were tossed at a schoolbus Wednesday night.

Touring the Gaza Strip, Rabin said: "All these stories of food shortages are propaganda stories that have no basis in reality. In a curfew there is bound to be hardship, but not hunger."

Palestinians were allowed to leave the four Gaza camps only from 3 a.m. to 6 a.m., said Brig. Gen. Arye Ramot, head of the Gaza military government.

In the other four Gaza Strip refugee camps, the curfews were to be lifted for two hours sometime during the day and "we will increase this period according to the tranquility in the area," Ramot said.

In the occupied West Bank, two villages and a refugee camp were under curfew, Israel radio and a Palestinian news agency said.

U.N. spokesman Maher Nasser said 230,000 people in eight Gaza Strip refugee camps have been under curfew and confined to their homes for up to 13 days. An additional 10,000 are under curfew in the West Bank.

Rafi Levy, Jerusalem police spokesman, warned that police commanders had authorization to impose curfews in Arab neighborhoods of Jerusalem if they felt the measure was needed.

Police Minister Chaim Bar-Lev said Wednesday that curfews might be imposed for the first time as an anti-riot measure in Jerusalem's Arab zones after protesters stoned a police jeep and three people were injured.

A stone smashed the window of a bus approaching Tel Aviv Wednesday night, and the driver saw a fleeing figure in a ski-mask, police said. There were no injuries. Israel Television said if the incident was related to the unrest, it would be the first time it has spread to Israel's populous coastal plain.

Also Wednesday night, two firebombs were thrown at a bus carrying school children on the Wadi Ara Highway linking the coast to the Galilee, police said. No injuries were reported.

The firebombs were thought to have been thrown by militants among Israel's Arab citizens who live in village along the road, and officials warned them not to be swept up in the West Bank unrest.

The bus that was attacked was carrying children from a school at neighboring Kibbutz Ein Dor which, ironically, is planning to participate in a demonstration by the Peace Now movement against Israel's occupation of Arab land.

Israel Radio said incidents on the highway had reduced its traffic by more than 50 percent with drivers making a detour that lengthens the drive by half an hour.

Mayor Ovadia Eli of Afula, which is served by the highway, said: "This is a very serious phenomenon. If Jews keep away from Wadi Ara they're giving a prize to these foul terrorists."

In Gaza, Ramot said curfews were lifted from the Rafah, Deir el Balah, Khan Yunis and Beach refugee camps.

"Most of the population — 80 to 90 percent — are tired of this (the protests) and want to go to work...They feel as well as we that the situation has to return to normal," Ramot said on Israel radio.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said:

"We hope that for humanitarian reasons, all concerned will take every possible measure to ensure that essential needs are provided for the civilian population in the refugee camps."

Meanwhile, United Nations officials in the Gaza Strip said at least seven Arabs were hospitalized with beating injuries a day after Rabin said he ordered soldiers to use beatings instead of bullets to quell unrest.

Rothschild dies at age 85

Rothschild

PARIS (AP) — Baron Philippe de Rothschild, a bearer of one of Europe's most famous names who became in his own right one of the world's foremost winegrowers as well as a writer and a sportsman, died Wednesday at the age of 85.

Rothschild, of the famous banking family, was also a noted theater director and film producer.

The Baron Philippe, as he was commonly known, had been in declining health for some time and died at his home in Paris.

He remained a man of the land despite his wealth, his many awards and his active, many-faceted life. The enthusiasm for the outdoors began in 1922, when his father made him manager of the family's Bordeaux vineyards, Mouton-Rothschild.

He took the run-down operation at Pauillac, a few miles outside Bordeaux, and turned it into a great establishment that produced one of the world's finest wines and is visited by thousands of tourists each year.

Rothschild was born in Paris on April 13, 1902, son of Baron Henri de Rothschild and the former Mathilde de Weisweiller.

His father sent him to Bordeaux for safety in 1918, the final year of World War I. He finished high school there and later received a doctorate in science at the University of Paris.

When he was put in charge of the vineyard, owned by the family since 1853, Bordeaux wines were in an economic crisis. The vineyard's buildings were dilapidated, with no electricity, running water or telephones.

He decreed that his wines would be bottled at the chateau and labeled that way, a practice not common years ago although now routine for fine wines.

In the 1920s that he became interested in theater. From 1924 to 1928, he built the Theatre Pigalle, and from 1928 to 1931, directed plays. He also produced films, including "Lacs aux Dames," in 1932, the first of the French talkies.

His first wife, Countess Elisabeth Pelletier de Chambure, was deported by the Nazis in June 1944 and died in Ravensbruck concentration came in March 1945. They had a daughter, Philippine.

After being imprisoned by the collaborationist Vichy government, Rothschild joined the Free French Forces in London in January 1943 and was a liaison officer during the Normandy landings in 1944.

He married Pauline Fairfax-Potter, daughter of a well-known Baltimore family, in 1954. She died in 1976.

Sports, particularly auto racing, were a passion with Rothschild and he often was behind the wheel himself. His Bugatti finished second in the German Grand Prix and fourth in the Monaco Grand Prix in 1929.

Rothschild twice won the French Cup in eight-meter sailing.

He was the author of several books, poems, and even a fairy tale, written for his daughter. He probably was best known for his translations of English works, including those of Christopher Fry, Christopher Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus," and a book of Elizabethan poems.

Wiretaps link Hamid to abductions

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — Police wiretaps linked suspected Lebanese terrorist Abbas Ali Hamadi to the abduction of two West Germans and efforts to free his brother, an alleged TWA hijacker, according to court testimony.

Evidence presented in the hearing on Wednesday indicated that Hamadi made numerous calls to friends in West Germany after his younger brother, Mohammed Hamadi, was arrested at Frankfurt airport Jan. 13, 1987 on explosives charges.

In one of the conversations, Abbas Hamadi told a friend there "would be a terrible price to pay" if West Germany agreed to U.S. extradition demands for his brother.

The comment was allegedly made in a telephone conversation between Hamadi, who was in Beirut at the time, and Hamza Kassim, 49, who lives in West Germany.

The conversation, recorded by West German authorities, was made Jan. 21, 1987, four days after the kidnapping in Beirut of West German businessman Rudolf Cordes.

Abbas Hamadi, 29, is accused of kidnapping Cordes and another West German, Alfred Schmidt, in a bid to force West Germany to free his brother. He was arrested two weeks after his brother was seized, also at Frankfurt airport.

Schmidt was released in September.

Transcripts of the taped conversations were read in court Wednesday. Court then adjourned until Jan. 26. The trial is being held two days a week in a heavily-fortified courtroom.

A high-ranking member of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Cabinet is expected to testify Tuesday about the government's reaction to the kidnappings.

Mohammed Hamadi, 23, is expected to be brought to Duesseldorf from Frankfurt under heavy security to testify at the trial on Wednesday.

He is being held in investigative custody under suspicion of hijacking a TWA jetliner to Beirut in June 1985.

Iraq says it raided Iranian oil installations

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes flew 500 miles to bomb key Iranian oil installations in the Persian Gulf on Wednesday in the first long-range air raid this year.

Iran said its forces crushed four Iraqi attempts to retake captured territory in mountainous Kurdistan and killed or wounded 500 Iraqis.

The official Iraqi News Agency said "columns of black smoke" covered Lavan island after the air strike at 12:20 p.m. The island is off the coast of Iran in the gulf, where both Iran and Iraq have attacked foreign shipping in their seven-year war.

Iran made no comment on the Iraqi report.

The Iraqi agency quoted a military spokesman as saying the Iraqi warplanes "penetrated the enemy's defenses on the island and struck hard at specific targets, setting the island's oil installations ablaze."

He said all planes involved in the attack returned safely to base.

The unidentified spokesman said the air raid was "part of Iraq's legitimate right to direct severe blows to the Iranian enemy as long as this regime continues to reject the international will."

That was a reference to Iran's refusal to accept a United Nations Security Council resolution in July that called for a cease-fire.

The air raid was one of Iraq's rare long-range attacks. The Iraqi air force, which has maintained air supremacy in the war, had focused its strikes on Kharg island, at the northern edge of the gulf, and on tankers ferrying Iranian oil.

Kharg accounted for more than 90 percent of Iran's oil exports before the war. But repeated attacks prompted Iran to set up makeshift loading terminals Lavan and Larak island. Larak is in the Strait of Hormuz, the only gateway to the gulf.

Air raids on Lavan and Larak are difficult because the distance requires refueling in flight.

In the last such attack on Dec. 22, 1987, Iraqi warplanes struck tankers off Larak.

The reported deaths in Kurdistan raised the casualty toll Iran claims to have inflicted on the Iraqis to 4,500 men since the fighting 200 miles north of Baghdad began on Friday.

Iraq did not comment on the latest Iranian claim, but in the past it has denied Tehran's reports of heavy fighting in the region.

"All the counterattacks were repulsed and completely crushed," said an Iranian communique, broadcast by Tehran Radio and monitored in Nicosia.

Iran claims its fighters have taken 56 square miles of territory in Kurdistan, braving minefields and harsh winter weather.

The reported fighting in the north coincided with reports that Iran has massed up to 500,000 troops for an offensive in the south against Basra, Iraq's key port city.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Embassy denies hostages held by Iranian Revolutionary Guards

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An Iranian Embassy official denied a report that some foreigners kidnapped in Beirut are now in the hands of Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Lebanon, newspapers reported today.

Asked about the report, Ali Asghar Mohammadieh, political adviser at the embassy in Moslem west Beirut, said: "The Revolutionary Guards are in no way involved in this issue."

He spoke to reporters Wednesday after meeting in east Beirut with the secretary-general of the Lebanese Foreign Ministry, Fuad Turk, and was quoted by the An-Nahar and As-Safir dailies.

The Washington Post reported Wednesday that some of the hostages had recently been put in the hands of Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Lebanon.

A contingent of Revolutionary Guards came to Lebanon in 1982 to take part in attacks against Israel and has since established bases in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and the Shiite slums of south Beirut.

Most of the 21 foreigners missing and feared kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985 are believed to be held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem factions.

Terrorist's deportation hearing set

OTTAWA (AP) - A deportation hearing has been set for next Monday for a convicted Palestinian terrorist living in Canada, junior immigration minister Gerry Weiner told the House of Commons.

But Weiner also suggested Wednesday that the government would be just as happy if Mahmoud Muhammad Issa Mohammad would leave the country voluntarily, avoiding the necessity of a hearing.

"Our object is to get this man out of the country," Weiner told reporters in Ottawa. "He may either leave as the result of the threat of deportation or as the result of a deportation order that will be issued under due process. Our object will be accomplished either way."

Mohammad, 46, was convicted in 1970 of killing a man in an attack on an Israeli jet in Athens in 1968. He was sentenced to 17 years in prison, but he and an accomplice were freed by Greece a year later and deported to Lebanon in an exchange of prisoners.

He received landed immigrant status from Canadian immigration officials in Madrid in January 1987, after lying on his application form about his criminal record. Police say they only recently learned he was living in an Ontario city.

Maids banned from working abroad

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government will temporarily suspend issuing permits to allow women to work abroad as domestics because of widespread sexual and other abuse, Labor Secretary Franklin Drilon said.

He said the decision was taken at Wednesday's Cabinet meeting and would affect Filipino domestics seeking jobs worldwide.

Maids working for senior government officials, diplomats and certain other categories of employers would not be affected.

The order follows growing demands by human rights groups for government action to protect women who go abroad as maids and are forced into prostitution or are paid salaries well below those promised.

Drilon said women already working as domestics overseas could renew contracts if their employees were considered "humane."

According to official records, about 81,000 Filipino women are employed as domestics abroad. The actual number is believed much greater since most leave as tourists and obtain jobs once they reach foreign countries.

Train crash death toll rises to 19

BEIJING (AP) — The death toll in the head-on collision of two trains rose to 19 when one of the injured died in the hospital, the official Xinhua News Agency said today.

Of the 72 other injured people, four have been discharged from hospitals, the report said.

The passenger train and freight train collided Sunday at the Beiyinhe station in northeastern China's Heilongjiang province.

A preliminary investigation indicated that as the passenger train entered the station, its brakes failed due to sabotage "at a point between the diesel (engine) and the first car," Xinhua said. It did not elaborate, nor did it comment on who might be responsible for the sabotage.

Xinhua said three passenger cars were overturned in the crash. The national television news program said damage was estimated at more than $400,000.

President-elect to be sworn in

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President-elect Roh Tae-woo will be sworn in Feb. 25 in an inauguration ceremony in front of the National Assembly building in Seoul, officials said today.

Lee Choon-koo, chairmen of the governing Democratic Justice Party's inauguration committee, said a "solemn" inauguration will be held for Roh.

The party and the government will hold a separate ceremony for the outgoing president Chun Doo-hwan on Feb. 24. No details were released on the ceremonies.

Roh defeated the divided opposition in last month's presidential election with 36.6 percent of the vote. Roh's inauguration will mark the country's first peaceful transfer of power in modern South Korean history.

New U.S. ambassador meets with Waldheim

New York Times News Service

VIENNA, Austria — A new American ambassador, Henry Anatole Grunwald, presented his credentials Wednesday to President Kurt Waldheim.

The president told Austrian television that the encounter had been "pleasant," but an embassy spokesman, rejecting favorable adjectives, said the visit was "normal" and "necessary."

Waldheim attached more meaning to the meeting, saying, "I would think that the possibility will arise, especially through the sending of an ambassador, to normalized relations once again."

Both sides said neither the president nor the ambassador had raised the issue of the American decision last April to place Waldheim on the Justice Department's "watch list." The action bars him from the United States because of suspicion he may have been connected with war crimes during service as an intelligence lieutenant in the German army in occupied Yugoslavia and Greece.

An international commission of historians appointed by Austria will deliver a report, an informed Austrian said, shortly after Feb. 8. In the interview, Waldheim said he hoped it would lead to a "calming" of the situation.

Grunwald must operate under strict State Department guidelines that limit his contacts with the president, whom he met when he was editor in chief of Time and Waldheim was secretary general of the United Nations. The ambassador will not take part in informal occasions at which he might meet Waldheim and would reject social invitations from the president.

Grunwald, a Jew and a native of Vienna, fled as a teen-ager with his family nearly a half century ago, after Germany annexed Austria. His father was a prominent operetta librettist.

$56 million of Marcos family wealth recovered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government has recovered $56 million in two years of a worldwide search for wealth Ferdinand Marcos and his associates allegedly plundered during his 20 years in power, an official said today.

Ramon Diaz, chairman of the Presidential Commission of Good Government, told a civic club meeting his task force expects to recover an additional $174 million in bank deposits and properties in the continuing search.

In Honolulu, Hawaii, where Marcos has lived since his 1986 ouster, the former president denied stealing government funds and told a news conference Wednesday he was living off gifts and loans from supporters while in exile.

"We have borrowed for our legal fees as well as for our living expenses," Marcos said. "But right now we are almost penniless."

Diaz said the amount recovered was part of the proceeds from the sale of Philippine and U.S. properties surrendered by close associates of Marcos since the commisison was created immediately after Corazon Aquino was catapulted to the presidency in a civilian-military revolt two years ago .

He said part of the money was from sale of Marcos properties in New Jersey and New York and from deposits Marcos or his agents made in Philippine banks.

Diaz also announced that the Philippine government is set to auction off some "knicknacks," including apartment buildings and paintings, owned by Marcos in New York by mid-February to raise another $1 million.

Diaz added they also recovered 3.94 million acres of choice Philippine lands, 61 expensive cars, 20 planes and helicopters and 13 yachts and ships.

Pelican likely cause of B-1B crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A B-1B bomber that crashed in Colorado last September probably struck a lone pelican that smashed through a wing like a "bowling ball," setting off a fire that quickly doomed the plane, the Air Force said.

Two of the victims were not in ejection seats and did not have time to bail out manually. The third crewman, the co-pilot, died because his ejection seat malfunctioned, the accident investigation report released Wednesday said.

The bomber, which was based at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, probably could have survived if the pelican had struck an engine or been pulled into one. But Gen. James W. Meier, Strategic Air Command assistant director of operations, said at a Pentagon briefing that the bird apparently struck with great force in a critical area, setting off the fire.

The pelican struck the underside of the wing just above the engine housings on the right side of the plane, which was flying about 600 feet above the ground. The plane was moving at such a high speed — 640 miles per hour — that the bird's body tore through the aluminum skin into the wing, ripping apart critical hydraulic and fuel lines.

"What we believe happened in this was an extremely unlucky penetration of an area that produced a fire that subsequently burned through a sufficient number of hydraulic lines" that the plane became unflyable, Meier said.

"The mass of that bird is like a bowling ball operating at the speed of sound. It's a large, large projectile."

AP Laserphoto

In Abilene Wednesday, USAF Lt. Col. John R. Gannon of the 96th Bomb Wing's Operation and Training Division points to the location above and left of the inlet of a B1-B bomber's right inboard engine, where a collision with a 15-20 pound pelican caused severe enough damage to a B1-B to make it crash last September.

The 3-inch-thick accident report presents a detailed chronology and probable cause based on interviews with three surviving crew members, examination of the crash debris, experiments with B-1B simulators and reports from witnesses on the ground.

It does not offer a precise explanation as to why the co-pilot's ejection seat failed to operate.

Rather, it suggests there was a malfunction involving some switching devices within the automatic ejection system that left the co-pilot's seat in the plane after his hatch had been blown clear.

Meier suggested the system could have been damaged accidentally by a bird strike.

Some modifications are being made now to the ejection systems on all the B-1Bs, Meier said.

The Air Force said Wednesday it would spend $62.5 million this year strengthening certain sections of the plane to better withstand bird strikes, including the wing section above the engines. The service said it would spend another $1.6 million on the modifications to the ejection system.

Meier said B-1Bs would not resume low-level, high-speed training flights until each aircraft had been modified. Low-level flights should resume this spring, but in the meantime the bomber crews won't be able to train as they normally should, Meier said.

The general defended the B-1Bs design and survivability in combat, describing the bird strike as a fluke that managed to start a fire that knocked out three of the plane's four hydraulic systems.

The Sept. 28 crash, which occurred over a bomber training range near LaJunta, Colo., was the first of a production-model B-1B — the first new strategic bomber built by the United States in more than 25 years. From the beginning, Air Force officials made clear the accident involved a bird strike.

Contradicting initial reports, however, the Air Force investigators concluded the bomber struck a single bird — not a flock — and that it was probably an American White Pelican weighing 15 to 20 pounds. The B-1B was designed to withstand strikes by birds weighing up to six pounds.

No violations found in probe, NRC says

Wilhelm

AUSTIN (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, notified by a former South Texas Nuclear Project worker about possible safety problems, has investigated and found no violations, an NRC spokesman says.

Lonnal Wilhelm, who worked at the STNP construction site near Bay City for from 1978 until 1984, said Wednesday that safety re-checks were made on equipment that later proved to be inaccurate.

From February 1982 until August 1984 Wilhelm was supervisor of the Measuring and Testing Equipment Calibration Laboratory, which tests instruments used to check safety-related items.

Under federal rules, the calibration lab must send notices to departments which used an instrument that wasn't within required tolerances. That department then determines whether retesting is needed.

Many of the notices concerning instrument problems were answered with "false or misleading statements," Wilhelm said.

"This calls into question the integrity of many of the safety-related tests performed on the plant," said Wilhelm, who is now unemployed and would only say he lives in South Texas.

But a spokesman for Houston Lighting & Power Co., managing partner of the project, said Wilhelm's concerns were addressed and no safety problems were found.

And a Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman said the federal agency reviewed Wilhelm's allegations and found no problems.

"We did an inspection as a result of the things he was concerned about and we didn't find any violations as a result of that," said Joe Gilliland of NRC s Arlington, Texas, office.

A copy of the report was sent to Wilhelm in December, but was returned because Wilhelm had moved, Gilliland said.

The STNP, near Bay City, is scheduled to go into limited operation next month, HL&P spokesman Graham Painter said. The NRC could vote in February on final licensing for the plant.

"We looked at the actual construction and found no problems in the areas he was concerned about," Painter said of Wilhelm's allegations.

The company did find problems in "routing" of reports and notices concerning instruments that were not properly calibrated when used, he said.

"Some were not getting back to where they were supposed to flow back to," Painter said, noting that the problem has been corrected.

Wilhelm said he had voiced concerns to project officials and the NRC.

"I am very pro-nuclear power, so long as the plants are built and operated safely," he said. "Based on my knowledge and experience of the many tests not reperformed, it is my opinion that the STNP is an accident awaiting to happen."

South African singer struggling to get daughter into U.S.

DALLAS (AP) — A top female South African singer thought she left behind the troubles of her strife-torn country when she moved to the United States and married an American she met in a Texas town called Uncertain.

But the woman is facing a possible breakup of her family as she tries to straighten out a paperwork mistake that could keep her 4-year-old daughter from joining her.

Since Christine "Chrissy" Jackson came to the United States six months ago, her daughter, Danielle Jackson, has been staying with her grandparents in Zimbabwe.

But the child's temporary passport expires Saturday, and Zimbabwean authorities plan to expel her to South Africa, where she has nowhere to go despite efforts of legislators and requests to consulates, Ms. Jackson said.

"The last time we talked to Danielle, two days ago, she was excited about seeing her momma," said Allan Askew, 29, of Longview, who married Ms. Jackson in December.

"And she said she wanted a 'neck-a-lace.' I let mama talk. And she said she would see her in just a few days."

Ms. Jackson, 32, said officials in South Africa gave the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service the wrong documents for her to obtain legal U.S. residency.

"What we were told at the U.S. immigration office was that as soon as citizenship papers and my wife's divorce papers came from South Africa, then we could get my wife a green card that same day and obtain a visa for the child to come to America," said Askew.

But immigration officials received only preliminary settlement papers from the 1985 divorce, not the decree needed from a Johannesburg court. That put both Ms. Jackson's residency and her daughter's future in question.

"Just when you think nothing else can go wrong, here we go again," said Ms. Jackson, who came to the United States last May and was married six weeks ago in Uncertain.

"We tried everything to get my daughter here and we would if the INS would just give us three weeks until we can get the right papers," she said.

Federal immigration officials in Dallas did not immediately return phone calls from The Associated Press. Officials of the Zimbabwean and South African consulates said they could not be helpful.

"We cannot handle that problem because it is an American one," said Savi Gobener, a spokeswoman for the South African Consulate in Houston. "Both have to go through U.S. Immigration. It will take some time. It's very tough."

Ms. Jackson left Danielle with grandparents in nearby Zimbabwe when she left South Africa last year.

The grandparents, Cynthia and Charlie Jackson, applied for Danielle's visa at Harare, Zimbabwe.

With the girl's temporary passport due to expire there, Ms. Jackson's mother spent about $2,600 on plane tickets for her and her grandaughter to fly to the United States on Saturday. But the document snafu has killed those plans.

"My wife came to America from South Africa to try to build a better life for her children because of the fighting and unrest that is over there," said Askew.

Under the show name "Chrissy," Ms. Jackson she recorded four albums and several singles spanning five years and has platinum records in South Africa, Germany and England.

Her latest album, "Chrissy Jackson: All On My Own," describes the country and gospel singer's struggle for herself and her children. Two older daughters by another marriage are still in South Africa.

Her husband has helped her contact consulates and the offices of U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, and Sen. Phil Gramm, R-College Station.

"We are trying all possible avenues to get the daughter here," said Delores Poskey of Chapman's office. "The congressman has been in contact with the State Department and the immigration service. He will not take no for an answer. But we have to work within the rules."

While Ms. Jackson was waiting for her American citizenship papers to be processed last October, she met Askew in Uncertain, near Caddo Lake in East Texas. He learned of her fight and remained positive.

"We can get the right papers and make everything OK," Askew said. "It's just a matter of time."

PUC concerned about access to 976 services

AUSTIN (AP) — State utility regulators want Southwestern Bell to show why Dial 976 services, including "dial-a-porn" calls, shouldn't be disconnected in Texas.

"I think that we have to take a look at whether all of the kinds of problems that are surrounding 976 as it is being offered now truly makes this service in the public interest," Public Utility Commissioner Jo Campbell said Wednesday.

The 976 problems include complaints from the Texas PTA, which told the commission Wednesday that dial-a-porn is too accessible for young people.

"We feel very strongly that such material should neither be readily available to everyone, and especially children, nor should telephone subscribers have to pay to keep the access to this unwanted pornography out of their homes," said Kathryn Whitfill of Houston, Texas PTA president.

The 976 lines are leased by Southwestern Bell to companies that provide a variety of recorded information. The price of the calls is set by the companies that provide them. Southwestern Bell does the billing and sends the company its share.

Until a recent state appeals court decision, 976 calls included both recorded and live messages. But the 3rd Court of Appeals ruled Dec. 16 that only recorded information could be carried on the 976 lines. That decision became final Wednesday when the appeals court overruled a motion to rehear the case.

Southwestern Bell officials said Wednesday they would immediately disconnect all live 976 service in Texas.

The court decision does not, however, clear up all concerns about 976 service.

"You cannot always control, as an example, at a business, who happens to walk in the door of their business or which employee happens to pick up the phone. You're asking them to be jailers with their own employees," said Commissioner Marta Greytok.

Ms. Greytok and Ms. Campbell said they would prefer a system in which 976 service would be available only to customers who pay a fee to have access to it, instead of the current system of having to pay for blocking.

They also said they have concerns about all 976 services, not only dial-a-porn.

The commission Wednesday also approved an agreement in which Southwestern Bell will offer free blocking of 976 service for 60 days. The offer begins Feb. 20.

Dallas EEOC office smothered under caseload

DALLAS — Two years ago, a Dallas truck driver filed a race discrimination complaint against a former employer, but he says he is still waiting to find out if he'll get compensation.

"It's lousy to be poor, broke and waiting for the federal government to act on your behalf," said the 32-year-old driver who did not want his name used. "You go to the federal government for relief because they are the only source of help for those without money. But they take their time, and you wait and wait."

For 24 other people who filed age discrimination suits, the wait was too long. A two-year statute of limitations expired on their cases because of a heavy backlog in the Dallas office of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, District Director Lorenzo Ramirez said.

The cases had priority but were lost in the shuffle of the heavy caseload, Ramirez said.

The office has the largest caseload of the agency's 23 district offices and is receiving an increasing number of new equal pay, sex and race discrimination complaints, he said.

Its 37 investigators resolve about 3,200 cases a year, but this year the office has 5,800 complaints pending, Ramirez said.

"The EEOC is the best there is," Ramirez said. "It is about the only thing there is to help people discriminated against. In these field offices, we are the most active and available source to protect the civil rights of the common man."

STATE IN BRIEF

TEA nominates 29 schools

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty-nine public schools have been nominated by the Texas Education Agency for consideration in the U.S. Department of Education's 1987-88 Elementary School Recognition Program.

The program recognizes outstanding public and private elementary schools across the United States.

Schools nominated were chosen by the agency from among 81 that applied. Criteria included school philosophy and goals, leadership, curriculum, instruction, student outcomes, character development and school-community relations.

Private schools are nominated for the recognition program by the Council for American Private Education.

McAuliffe grants offered

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas teachers can apply for one-year fellowships that will be awarded under a program established in honor of the late Christa McAuliffe, the Texas Education Agency said Wednesday.

The Christa McAuliffe Fellowship Program will honor outstanding teachers in each state by enabling them to engage in a variety of activities to enhance their professional growth. In Texas, four or five one-year fellowships of about $25,000 each will be awarded.

The fellowships honor Sharon Christa McAuliffe, the New Hampshire teacher who was a member of the astronaut crew that died when the Challenger space shuttle exploded in 1986.

Was Dumpster man's home?

LUBBOCK (AP) — A man whose charred body was found in a garbage Dumpster may have been living there, police say.

An autopsy showed that the man, whom police have not identified, was in his 50s, white and in poor health, police Sgt. Randy McGuire said Wednesday.

Homicide detectives had been investigating the case after the body was discovered Tuesday afternoon, but forensic pathologist Ralph Erdmann told police he found no indication of foul play.

Officials believe carbon monoxide poisoning may have killed the man, said Justice of the Peace Bill Ross. The gas could have been given off in a fire set in the garbage container for warmth, he said.

The victim's lungs were weakened before the fire because the man suffered from pneumonia, according to the autopsy report. The condition of the man's internal organs indicated he was an alcoholic, but the pathologist said the victim was not intoxicated when he died.

Ross said Erdmann calculated that the victim had been dead for about 24 hours. A witness reported seeing smoke come out of the Dumpster early Monday morning.

Number of women in charge at state agencies rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost twice as many women ran major state agencies in 1987 as in 1981, according to a survey released today by the National Women's Political Caucus.

The survey of the 39 states with appointive cabinet-level positions found that 130 women held such posts in 1987 compared to 70 in 1981 — an 86 percent increase.

"This study should serve as another reminder that women are in the political process to stay," Irene Natividad, executive director of the bipartisan caucus, said in a statement. "The political reality is that women no longer are going to be content with token representation in the lower and middle ranks of government."

The survey was released in conjunction with the Women's Agenda Conference this weekend in Des Moines, Iowa. More than 40 national women's organizations organized the event.

Democratic Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana ranked first in the caucus survey of women cabinet officers, with women leading seven of his 11 agencies in 1987.

Another Democrat, Gerald Baliles of Virginia, was second with four women in his nine-member cabinet. Democrat Madeline Kunin of Vermont ranked third with women running two of five departments.

Two Republican governors were in the top 10 — Tom Kean of New Jersey, tied for fifth place, and James Thompson of Illinois, No. 10.

"Women cabinet appointees are breaking new ground by heading departments traditionally run by men," the caucus said. In particular it cited Karen Case, secretary of the Wisconsin Department of Revenue; Constance Foster, head of Pennsylvania's Department of Insurance; and Cynthia Milligan, director of Nebraska's Department of Banking and Finance.

The survey found that most women cabinet members are still "clustered in social services agencies" but noted those agencies often are among the largest in the state and affect thousands if not millions of people.

According to the survey, most GOP governors elected for the first time in 1986 appointed fewer women to cabinet posts than their predecessors. For example, it said, Gov. Garrey Carruthers of New Mexico named one woman compared to the five appointed by former Gov. Toney Anaya.

Most of the Democratic governors elected for the first time in 1986 improved on or equaled their predecessor's record, the caucus said, and 14 of 20 governors who were serving both in 1985 and 1987 beat their own 1985 record.

Caucus lists state-level cabinet posts held by women

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

The Board of Trustees of Reagan County Independent School District will accept bids on band uniforms for the high school band.

An on-site visit to the superintendent's office for a 'specifications' conference with the band director will be required. Specifications for the band uniforms will be given to the bidders during their visit.

Bids will be received until 3:30 p.m. on Monday, February 8, 1988. Bids received after this time and date will be returned unopened. The bid should be addressed to the Superintendent of Schools, Reagan County Independent School District, 1111 Twelfth Street, Big Lake, Texas 76932. The bid envelope should be marked "Band Uniform Bid". The bids will be opened and tabulated at the regular board meeting on Monday, February 8, 1988, at 7:30 p.m.

Reagan County Independent School District reserves the right to award the band uniform contract to the bidder offering the best value, and not necessarily to the firm bidding the lowest price.

The Board of Trustees reserves the right to reject any and all bids, and waive informalities therein.
