GRANDMOTHER BROWN.

Grandmother Brown was a very old woman, and she was very wise. She had lived for many years, and she had seen many things. She was a very good woman, and she was very kind. She was a very good mother, and she was a very good friend. She was a very good woman, and she was very kind. She was a very good mother, and she was a very good friend.

VAMPIRE STORIES.

A revival of the old superstition of blood-sucking demons and their kindred, the vampire, is now being revived in the East. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

This is one of several instances that have come under the writer's notice to prove that the ancient and horrible vampire is still a reality. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

From a large collection of vampire stories these are a few of the best. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Another vampire story is taken from a book containing many which was published under the protection of the Bishop of Olmutz in 1703. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

must be a trait in humanity which leads to vampirism, and which awakens from time to time. A case rather different from the above was that of the vampire of the year 1898. He was a vampire, and he was very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

The most celebrated vampire case, perhaps, and the last, happened in 1844. In that year the cemeteries of Paris were entered, graves broken open, and corpses rudely tossed about the ground. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Next day it became known that Sergeant Bertrand, a soldier, was dangerously wounded. He was a vampire, and he was very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

These are more properly stories of vampires than the distinction in vampirism made between the vampire proper and the were-vampire. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

From a large collection of vampire stories these are a few of the best. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Another vampire story is taken from a book containing many which was published under the protection of the Bishop of Olmutz in 1703. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. to form a cross. The vampire, rose in the night, but could not pass over the cross. He requested the shepherd to remove it, as he had important business. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

The scene of another manifestation of the superstition which ended in a tragedy was laid in Hungary. A young miller, on the eve of his marriage with a peasant girl, was suddenly seized with a morbid and morose, and was buried the next day. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

People throughout the city are wondering why amateur musicians are so numerous just now. An old bandmaster smiled blandly when the subject was called to his attention. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Having thus delivered himself the old bandmaster was about to move on Chestnut street. He had, however, something to say to the crowd. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

This wild and solitary bird, once abundantly represented in this region in the old days of the early New England settlements, is now but seldom seen. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Here is an account of the loon by the best observer of birds in America. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

About Corkscrews.

The corkscrew is a contrivance to facilitate the removal of corks from bottles. When a cork protrudes from the neck of the bottle far enough to admit of grasping it with the hand, the corkscrew is unnecessary. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

There are several kinds of corkscrews. That which has been the longest in use is the hand corkscrew. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

An important improvement in corkscrews is mentioned in the foregoing. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

Paper bottles are now made on a large scale in Germany and Austria. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

There is hardly any safety railway appliance but may be improved, and inventors who are seeking for profitable fields of labor will do well to investigate the cause of railway accidents and devise means of greater safety to life, limb and property. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

The height and velocity of clouds may be determined by means of a heliometer. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Let the light of reason shine through your soul's windows, but keep warm by the fire of affection. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Soft soap for all sorts of people. For a Lieutenant, call him a Captain. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Our Young Folks.

ONLY MAMMA. "Where is mamma? Where is mamma? I don't know." The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

THE STORY OF CASABIANCA. Casabianca is the school-boy's favorite hero, but how many of them are acquainted with his true history? The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Watch the Little Things. There is a barn upon the Allegheny Mountains so built that the rain which falls upon it separates in such a manner that that which falls on one side of the roof runs into a stream which flows into the Chesapeake Bay, and thence into the Atlantic Ocean. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

Poisonous Plants and Flowers. There are many plants whose leaves, flowers and seeds contain violent poisons, which every one should know, so as to avoid them and keep children from them. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

armament. But the battle was not yet ended nor the victory won so long as the Orient still smoldered. Everything that could be done by a brave commander was performed by Captain Casabianca at this gloomy juncture. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

From among the wreck, the next morning, was picked up the dead, mangled body of the young hero, whose story romance and poetry can not make more heroic than it was. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

At Vengolaska, by the roadside, stands a large tomb of the Casabianca family; but the name of Gioacchino is not written upon it, nor does his body rest under it. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

So it happens with people. A very little thing, changing the channel of their lives. Much depends upon the kind of tempers we have. The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

The vampire is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous. He is a creature of the night, and he is very dangerous.

THE booming boom of all is the Cleveland and Hendricks boom.

MR. E. W. HARRIS, formerly of the Greenville, has purchased the Clarendon of the same place.

Both are on good foundations and will get there after a while.

CLEVELAND was elected governor of New York by 192,000 majority. He will, no doubt, make a similar fine race for president in November.

HON. CARTER HARRISON, mayor of the city of Chicago, was nominated by acclamation at Democratic candidate for governor of Illinois.

A LADY in Doniphan county, Kansas, has suicided by starvation. She lived for fifty-three days without eating food. Trouble with her father caused it.

THE Democratic National nomination of Cleveland of New York for president and Hendricks of Indiana, for vice president, meets with enthusiastic approval all over the nation. It is virtually the only ticket of 1876. Kluge and Hendricks carried the day and Cleveland and Hendricks will not be behind.

A SHOCKING double tragedy took place at Dallas last Sunday night. Two young Virginians, John Bowie Strange and William Beale left their hotel together after supper and returned to their room late at night in rather a noisy condition. Soon after pistol shots were heard. The inmates of the house rushed to the room broke open the door and found both young men breathing their last and writhing in their blood. Bad whiskey was the cause.

OVER one hundred and fifty nebulae which have escaped the vision of previous astronomers have recently been discovered by Dr. Lewis Swift, Director of the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y. One of these is of a most peculiar nature, and seems to be undergoing a wonderful change. Dr. Swift desires to fully investigate the great nebula which appeared on the night of July 23, and for this purpose requests all who have it to communicate within at the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y., immediately, giving the direction of view, motion, color, etc.

THE revised Old Testament has been finished and will be issued shortly. When the work of the revisers of the New Testament was completed and the result published, the change made excited great opposition among the conservative Christians, and the revised New Testament has not yet found recognition among the churches. This excitement promises to be revived by the changes made in the Old Testament, which are said to be more radical than those made in the new, and if allowed to stand will completely overturn many of the cherished beliefs of orthodox Christianity. The theological world will await the publication of the revised Old Testament with much interest. — Fort Worth Gazette.

THE State of Texas has given nearly one-half of Western Texas to railroad corporations for building roads east of the Brazos river; and the legislature went to rent on the other half for a paltry sum. Syndicates who obtained large tracts of land for a mere trifle because it was unfenced and unimproved now have the power of the State to fence their land with a stringent penal code, an enormity unheard of in any country. We believe that the lease system is doomed; that the damnable plot to monopolize the interests of West Texas for a few dirty rascals will never be consummated; that children's grass is the battle cry of granger demagogues to whom self interest is dearer than educating the kids. — Nolan County Record.

NEW CANDIDATES.

HON. S. W. L. LANHAM is the first name to grace our list this week. This gentleman has already served our district in the halls of Congress for one term, and has made a record for himself, which is a credit to him and an honor to his constituency, and as he is a young, ambitious, energetic, talented, honest, and above all, a safe man, the people will say "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." * * * you can go to Congress again.

W. J. POWER.

It is upon our list this week and wants the people to know that he is a candidate for the office of county treasurer of Callahan county. He has been a resident of Callahan county for a number of years and consequently is well known in the county. He is a man of honest, sober and industrious habits, and if elected, would no doubt make a good treasurer.

Little Joker is the best smoking tobacco.

No Free Grass.

EDITORS CLARENDON:—We read carefully your article on free grass. You don't think it right to cut a man's fence to make his grass free. So far, so good, you might add, that it is not right to burn his house, to destroy his property and even further, it would hardly be fair to cut his throat to deprive him of life. We are glad you are in favor of law, order and justice. You say, what any man pays for, he has a right to do with it as he sees proper. You might add if he does not use it so as to deprive others of just and legal rights and privileges. You say, it is not right for foreign corporations to come here and grab up large quantities of land, which belong to the citizens of Texas. They get no land except what they buy at least, if they have stolen any, or swindled the citizens of Texas out of any, they should be punished, and if you will instance a case, we will get Mr. Bell, or John D. Templeton after them, and if they have bought it, they are O. K. for you say a man has a right to do what he pleases with what he has paid for. You say there are non-residents, who own large pastures in this county to the detriment of the poor farmers here. Well, you say a man has a right to what he pays for and you see there are no Callahan pastures covering other than lands owned by owners of the fence. And you may not abuse a man because he is not your neighbor. We see some town lots in Baird owned by a man in the city of Marshall and others owned by some one in Dallas; do you presume to dictate to a man where he shall live? Do you go back on your first proposition and say he shall not enjoy what he has paid for unless he lives where you locate him? You say lands of Texas belong to citizens of the State. The citizens only have a common interest in the public lands. They are owners absolutely of the lands they buy or acquire by complying with home-steader laws.

You think the lease law bad and an infringement on the rights of the people. We think the lease law bad too, so we can embrace on that and come again. But you forgot what started or produced it. A few years ago the large cattle men "bulldozed" the legislature to such an extent that they forced upon the sheep men a herd law. They started a bill in motion that rolled and is rolling yet, and will before five years result in a full-fledged herd law that touches cattle and horses, as it now does sheep. The cattle men are now kicking; their organ at Fort Worth has gone crazy on free grass and has shot a gallon of hypocritical tears over the evils resting on the poor farmer by reason of the lease law, when in truth the lease law only touches the pocket of the cattleman, who has grown rich by running cattle on other men's property.

We all admit that sixteen men located on four sections of land are of more value in building up a country than where one man lives on and owns four sections. Yet, what shall we do about it? The fact exists, that men all have equal rights in the employment derived from owning property. One man owns 160 acres, his neighbor owns 640 acres and still another owns 10,000 acres, each is supposed to pay an ad valorem tax and the rich and the poor have same rights and if ten of the ten thousand acre men desire to form an association who can rightfully say nay and if one of them prefers to live in Jerusalem or Timbuctoo rather than on his Texas land who can say kill him or confiscate his land?

In conclusion, Mr. Editors, let me say I am one of the small farmers and only hope to develop a nice little farm on my 160 acres near Baird and when I get mad with the town cow, and have stamps to spare, I will fence my 160 acres, but if I was young, rich and ambitious, I'd join you and other H-I-I could secure the dirt and we'd form a soulless corporation and make things howl.

REMARKS. In this issue, we are taken to task by a correspondent, who signs himself "Hastings," with reference to our article in last issue on free grass. He tries to insinuate that we have not always advocated law and order; but all who have read the Clarendon during the last four years, know that we have always advocated the principles of law and equity; nor have we been backward in denouncing crime in its various forms. The gentleman seems to think, from his style of reasoning, that we contradicted ourselves, in saying "that a man has the right to do with his own as he sees proper; and goes further to say: 'They get no lands except what they buy, at least if they have stolen any, or swindled the citizens of Texas out of any, they should be punished.' And further he says: 'If you will instance a case, we will get Mr. Bell, or John D. Templeton after them.' We have only to refer the gentleman to the recent grant of 3,000,000 acres of land, worth at least $40,000,000, for the erection of our State Capitol, which it is said can be done for $1,500,000, to furnish our Mr. Bell, or John D. Templeton work during the next twenty-five or thirty years. But this is not by any means all we are interested in, but to keep in future, the public lands out of the hands of corporations and syndicates. We don't propose to take lands from those who already own them; but we want in the future, to have the lands sold to actual settlers; and do not think it expedient to sell lands in large quantities. Who is there in this broad land of ours, who has not watched the growing evils of corporations and monopolies. Almost every branch of industry, have been, or are being rapidly secured and controlled by monopolies. Our manufactures, railroads, the banking business and in fact every other remunerative business are owned and controlled by corporations, and what is the result? We have only to go to our legislative halls, or to the capitol at Washington, to see its effect. We all know that if any measure comes up at the seat of government, of either the State or Nation, which would be detrimental to monopolies and advantageous to the people, that it is promptly met in the lobby, by these monopolists or their agents, and with their money, they are enabled to have the matter nipped in the bud. All who have watched this growing evil for the last twenty-five years, and have seen its rapid strides, will surely join with us, in striving to protect the farmer, and secure him against the encroachments of this vampire, which will sap the life-blood from this the only remunerative employment left for the poor hard-working man.

We do not ask that lands already bought and paid for, be taken from any man or company of men; but we do ask that its sale in large quantities be stopped, and have it reserved for actual settlers.

We will diverge from the main question, in order to write a few words more with reference to monopolists, and also touching the tariff question. For the last five or six years, this question has been agitated in congress, but has been so promptly met by these combinations that nothing has been done. Did we say nothing? Yes, there has been something done: There was a small tariff on wool (we mean the raw material), but this tariff was on the wrong side of the question to suit these government pests; as the sheep men had the benefit of the three or four cents per pound, which was collected on foreign wool; and it was an easy matter to have it taken off, and have it changed, so that instead of the sheep man getting the benefit, it was transferred to the corporations, who have been fostered and fattened ever since this was a nation. The gentleman says (not in so many words, but in substance) that those who are now howling for free grass, are those who have grown rich by running cattle on other men's property. Perhaps this is true; but who can blame such men as C. W. Merchant, who owned considerable land in the west, and numbered his cattle by the thousands, and who has been forced to relinquish his rights by corporations and the lease system, to cry out against it, and call for reform. We know that he has always been a friend to the poor man; has encouraged farming, and given aid to the pioneers of this country during the early days of its settlement.

With regard to his charges against the Fort Worth Gazette, we have nothing to say; knowing it to be well prepared to fight its own battles. We will suppose that the lease law had been passed ten years ago, and five or six men had formed a company, leased and fenced Callahan county. Would it be as prosperous to day as it is? We think not. We believe it would be yet attached to Eastland county for judicial purposes.

The Pauline of Texas has been subdivided into twenty-eight counties. Only three of these are organized, viz: Oldham, Wheeler and Donley. The remaining twenty-five counties are attached to these three for judicial purposes; and under the present lease system, will remain so for the next ten or fifteen years. All who are acquainted with this part of Texas, know that it is one of the richest parts of the State, and capable of supporting a population equal to the present population of the State; and would in a few years, be the garden spot of Texas, and would have towns and cities spring up, that would rival Fort Worth and Dallas, if the lease law was repealed and the land put on the market; allowing only actual settlers to buy.

We would ask the gentleman, if he favors a herd-law? Do you want to deprive the citizens of the town or a cow? Are you in favor of forcing men, who own fifty or a hundred sheep or cattle, to either sell to those who have land or leave the State? A herd law means this, and the present lease law is virtually a herd law. He says that the sheep men were not allowed the same privileges before the lease law was instituted, as the cow men. We know this to be so, but do you not wish to legislate for the cattle alone, but we want free grass alike for all.

You say you are a farmer, do you want to see land entailed? Do you want to see large tracts of land, embracing entire counties held together for the next forty or fifty years? If so, sell to corporations. If a large tract of land be sold to an individual, at his death it passes into the hands of his heirs, and is divided; but if controlled by a corporation, it is only dissoluble by liquidation. Now you are certainly anxious, being a farmer, to see our grand State settled up by farmers; men who toil for the welfare of the State, and who are not striving, alone to amass wealth, but are laboring for the benefit and advancement of the entire State. And we hope that in the future you will join with us in striving to have our public lands set apart for actual settlers; there being many in the older and more crowded states, who are anxious to come and secure homes among us, and who are only waiting for us to give them the opportunity to buy the lands that are now held by leases.

The Cholera.

PARIS, July 13.—The sanitary condition of Paris is good, but there are some cholera cases in the city, but none of an epidemic nature. The minister of commerce has written a letter to the academy of medicine, which will hold a meeting on Tuesday, taking the academy to give an authoritative opinion in regard to the treatment of cholera cases, and the best measures to prevent an extension of the disease.

PARIS, July 13.—During the twenty-four hours up to 9 o'clock there were fifty-seven deaths from cholera at Marcellus and thirty-six at Toulon. Three Sisters of Charity were among the deaths at Toulon. The municipality of Marcellus is providing free kitchens for the relief of sufferers from the plague.

PARIS, July 13.—Dr. Koch, the German expert, arrived at Lyons today. He thinks the cholera will reach there, but will appear in a milder form, owing to the excellent drainage of the city.

LONDON, July 13.—The admiralty has ordered rigorous precautions to be taken in the navy against cholera.

MARSEILLES, July 16.—Twenty deaths from cholera last night.

DEATHS AT TOULON. Toulon, July 16.—The deaths from cholera last night numbered twenty-two, including the wife of Admiral Fiaschi. Municipal Counselor Alt-jarb was attacked by the disease last night and died this morning. Rosca, minister of the interior, and Herisson, minister of commerce, have arrived. They visited the St. Maudrier hospital.

DEATHS SINCE MORNING. MARSEILLES, July 16.—Eight deaths from cholera since 9 o'clock this morning up to noon today.

SPAIN—AN EXCITING SCENE.

MADRID, July 16.—The French ambassador, the Brazilian minister and other diplomats, with a number of French officers, the French consul-general and a large party of friends arrived at Zazam today. While the French ambassador was paying his respects to Queen Isabella the rest of the party embarked on a French cutter for a short sail. When they returned the Spanish officers refused to allow them to land, owing to the quarantine.

A scene occurred in which carabinieri with loaded muskets threatened the cutter. The Brazilian minister and French consul expostulated and were insulted. The cutter finally proceeded to San Sebastian and landed the passengers. The French and Brazilian ministers telegraphed their complaints to the Spanish government.

Last Tuesday night the city prisoners, six in number, made their escape through a hole in the wall of the calaboose, by removing the brick with an old corkscrew. The opening made by them is about 12x18 inches in size. Officers are in search of them.—Colorado Clipper.

A man by the name of John Anthony was killed at San Antonio, July 6th, while excavating a large rock, which toppled over the brink, and fell some sixty feet, striking him squarely on the head, killing instantly. The skull was flattened out on the shoulders, and the brains scattered around.

A poetical and pious circumstance was witnessed by Zack Tucker and his outfit, traveling north through the nation with a herd of cattle. An Indian crowd, presiding on a chuck wagon, during a storm, was struck by lightning and killed. A few examples of this kind have been badly needed for a long while.—Mobettie Panhandle.

Judge T. M. Wheeler and District Attorney Culhoun were in town several days this week. The habeas corpus case of young Loyd charged with murder in Jones county, was continued to August 24. The parties who were charged, with fence-cutting in Runnels county, having been arrested on account of insufficient bonds, succeeded in giving sufficient bonds and were released.—Nolan County Record.

A dusky fiend attempted to outrage a lady of Dallas on the 13th inst. He took a chair and after cutting through the slats of the window opened the wire gauze and approached the bed-side of the young lady. He had a handkerchief saturated with chloroform which he attempted to use. The young lady became aware of his presence and her screams brought forth her parents when the negro fled and made his escape. He will receive his just reward if captured.
