Q—When and where does the United Way board meet? Are the meetings open to the public?

A—The United Way board meets the second Monday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the chamber of commerce. The meetings are open and anyone is welcome to attend.

In Brief

Shuttle away

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery blasted off today on a mission to loft a communications satellite, soaring through thin clouds more than a month late because of damage caused by woodpeckers.

Discovery and its crew of five roared from the seaside pad at 9:42 a.m. Less than nine minutes later, they were safe in orbit.

It's the shortest gap ever between NASA manned missions. The shuttle Atlantis returned Friday from Russia's space station.

NASA briefly held the countdown at the 31-second mark because of a bad radio signal, delaying liftoff nearly a minute.

Discovery was supposed to blast off June 8 with the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, which replaces a satellite lost in the Challenger disaster. A pair of woodpeckers drilled scores of holes into the insulating foam on the shuttle fuel tank, forcing NASA to send the spaceship back to the hangar for repairs.

60th Scurry County Rodeo opens tonight

Parade fans braving near 100-degree heat today can take heart — most of them at least won't be braving the bulls and broncs tonight.

The 60th annual Scurry County Rodeo opens a three-day stand today with the annual parade. The first show gets underway with a grand entry set for 8 this evening in the Scurry County Rodeo Association Arena on Gary Brewer Road.

Despite a temperature forecast in the high 90s, spectators are expected to line the city square and College Avenue for the parade, which will begin from 26th Street and Avenue W at 5 o'clock. The floats, bicycles, cars and horses will proceed to College Avenue, around the square, then head south on College past 30th Street.

Anyone can participate in the parade. Line-up will begin at 4 o'clock. Float prices are $150 for first place, $100 for second place and $50 for third place.

Tickets for the evening rodeo shows — tonight, Friday and Saturday — are $4 each in advance for adults and are available at Bar H Bar Family Outfitters. Admission at the gate will be $5. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Rafter D. Rodeo Company will provide the stock for the rodeo, which will include competition in bareback, saddle bronc and bull-riding, calf roping, team roping, barrels and breakaway roping.

Special events will include a 12-and-under calf scramble, a 7-and-under mutton busting, a merchants' steer saddling and boys and girls 12-and-under barrel racing.

Terry Sneed and Up the Creek will be featured at a dance each night at the rodeo pavilion.

City to consider hike in water, sewer rates

Snyder city council members hope to finish work on the city's 1995-96 budget when they meet tonight at 6 o'clock at City Hall.

The session will be the second of two scheduled three-hour meetings on the budget. The council met Tuesday in a workshop for some three-and-a-half hours.

The city is projecting a lower budget this year — $6,511,715 as opposed to last year's, $7,280,465, a decrease of some $768,750.

The ad valorem tax rate last year was 39.69 cents per $100 valuation while the effective tax rate for the coming year is projected to be 38.93 cents.

Among the items to be discussed tonight are the sanitary landfill, personnel and revenue projections.

While the city's budget is expected to be lower, citizens can expect the council to approve an 8 percent increase in both water and sewer rates to finance the new water treatment plant.

Currently, city residents pay $7.80 for the first 2,000 gallons and $2.15 for each additional thousand gallons used.

The proposed increase will see the basic rate go to $8.45 for the first 2,000 gallons and $2.35 for each additional thousand gallons.

The current base rate for sewer is $7 plus $1.86 per thousand gallons of water used based on 90 percent of the average water consumption of a household for the months of December, January and February.

This is expected to increase to a base rate of $7.60 and $2.05 per thousand gallons, respectively.

Landfill gate fees are expected to increase 50 percent — from $12.05 per ton to $18.10 per ton.

No increase is expected in sanitation rates.

City responds to water woes

Snyder citizens cut back considerably on water consumption Wednesday after a major part of the water treatment system failed and reduced the amount of water the plant could effectively treat.

The plant had been treating almost twice its capacity due to the extremely hot and dry weather. Some 7 million gallons were treated Monday and Tuesday. The 40-year-old plant is designed to treat 4 million gallons a day.

Officials at the water plant said total usage at the plant would probably have exceeded 7 million gallons Wednesday if the problems hadn't surfaced.

Usage dropped to 4.8 gallons after citizens were notified to curtail water use around noon Wednesday. The plant is expected to be at full capacity by Friday although complete repairs to the plant are not expected to be made until a new water treatment plant is completed.

Citizens are encouraged to limit usage to household needs through Friday.

Snyder supplies water to Rotan, Fluvanna, Union, Ira, Dunn and Round Top Acres and the failure prompted water rationing there also.

WAITING ON PARTS - City water treatment plant employee, Wesley McGinty, watches water flow into the treatment plant from Lake Thomas. The problem that the plant is experiencing is approximately 16 feet down an intake pipe. The city of Snyder is asking citizens to curtail water useage at least through Friday. (SDN Staff Photo)

Sheriff defends dispatching staff

Sheriff Keith Collier, responding to complaints that law enforcement dispatching puts city police officers at risk, defended both the training and performance of the five-member staff.

"I want the public to know that neither officers' nor the public's safety is in jeopardy," Collier said this morning from out of town where he was en route to pick up a prisoner in Waco.

"Two of our present dispatchers came from the city. All five have been trained in 911 dispatching and in CPR. I have been in law enforcement 36 years, 31 as sheriff, and I know good dispatching from bad."

Collier said that in the almost two years since the dispatching was combined, there have only been three complaints. He said the last was on Sept. 30, 1994. Collier said he investigated the complaint and found that the officer, not the dispatcher, was in error because of incorrect information given.

"We set ground rules two years ago that any complaints about dispatching should be put in writing. All three complaints were answered and resolved."

Collier said he had invited police personnel, including the chief, to sit in on quarterly dispatch meetings but none have ever attended.

"The way to solve problems is to sit down and talk about them. This setup was designed to save money, and I believe it has done it without the loss of efficiency," Collier added.

Collier said he would request a joint meeting of the commissioners court and city council so that any concerns about dispatch operations can be voiced. "If there is a problem brought to my attention, I will assure the citizens it will be resolved."

Collier added, "I've been in law enforcement for 36 years and have always had good relationship with the police, DPS and the Rangers, and I will do my part to make it continue."

The complaint about law enforcement dispatching surfaced at Tuesday night's city council work session in which Police Chief Lannie Lee suggested enlarging the Law Enforcement Center or relocating the police department and communications center.

Budget, personnel matters key SISD agenda

Personnel matters, a donation request and workers' compensation are among the agenda items Snyder ISD trustees will address this evening, following a budget workshop.

Trustees will convene at 5:30 to get their first look at anticipated budget revenues and expenses for the 1995-96 school year. At 7 o'clock, the board will address monthly business matters, including consideration of letters of resignation from five teachers and hiring of six others.

The board will consider a request that the district donate land south of Travis Field to the City of Snyder in order for the city to expand its water filtration plant.

City officials plan to close 32nd Street between Avenue L and Avenue M and use that land, plus a 45-foot strip of land at the south end of the Travis Field complex, to expand the plant, which is located at 3200 Avenue M.

Not all of the requested property will be needed by the city immediately, and, if donated, would continue to be utilized by the district until further expansion is required, city officials have said.

The board will also hear a presentation and recommendation in the district's workers' compensation program, as well as bids for athletic supplies.

Other discussion before trustees tonight includes:

—Second reading of a policy revision increasing mileage payment from 21 cents to 25 cents per mile and meal allowance from $22 to $25 per day.

—A proposed local policy revision and a Texas Association of School Boards policy update.

—A preliminary TAAS results report

—Payment of bills and approval of previous minutes.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Kids clothes will stay clean for several days...if you keep them off the kid."

It seems to get earlier every year, those subtle reminders that summer vacation is passing quickly. We notice that clothing stores have already started back-to-school sales.

In Snyder, classes start Aug. 14, meaning there are only 31 more days of summer vacation.

Domestic automakers have been successful in getting the federal government to negotiate fairer trade deal with Japan. Then Kodak said a Japanese film competitor had an unfair advanage.

The government may have to get to the bottom of international trade.

A coalition of U.S. underwear makers has appealed to President Clinton, expressing deep concern about an administration decision to seek quotas on underwear imports from seven nations where they have plants.

Boxers or briefs....sounds like an issue for the courts.

We're already excited about next summer. That's when a Fort Worth dentist plans to hurl a car 250 yards though the air.

The doc and 12 of his friends plan to build a 110-foot tall catapult outside Fort Worth. The Hurling Society of Cowtown was inspired by a 1991 article about an Englishman who tossed pianos with a 65-foot catapult.

The doc said, "..this is Texas, we've got to do something even more stupid."

A quarter-mile strip has already been cleared for next summer's launch. The group has been practicing with a smaller model that can fling a toilet about 150 yards.

The planned catapult will be the world's largest. It is technically a trebuchet because of the pivoting wood and metal beam with the car in a sling on one end and a 25-ton counterweight on the other.

The group needs $50,000 to complete the project. They plan a Tour de Thor, a fund-raising relay across Texas. He's also seeking corporate sponsors, but to date, no coins have been tossed his way.

Resignations OK'd

Hermleigh ISD trustees this week accepted three teacher resignations but tabled any action on building improvements until they can get a clearer picture of the 1995-96 budget.

The board also approved teacher salaries, insurance, payment of bills and toured the campus.

Trustees accepted the resignations of June Watkins, math teacher and girls coach; Brenda Logan, special education instructor; and Callie Kennedy, English instructor. Supt. Jerry Church said the district is currently advertising for teachers to fill those vacancies.

In other action, the board decided to continue paying teach-

Ira may name grid coach

Ira public school trustees could name a new football coach as early as this evening.

The board is set to meet at 7:30 tonight for its July session. Topping the agenda is an executive session to interview two prospects for the position.

Trustees are looking to replace Darren Jannsen, who recently resigned to take a position as athletic director and head football coach at Wilson. Jannsen coached football and boys basketball for Ira the past two years.

In other business, the board will consider adoption of a Texas Association of School Boards policy, a local drug and alcohol screening policy, personnel, teacher increment pay for 1995-96, the 1995-96 student handbook, a strategic plan for designated funds and payment of bills.

How serious is Barrett's disease?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A good friend was recently diagnosed with Barrett's disease and he said something about the acids damaging his throat. Can you enlighten me about the seriousness of this malady? What is the recommended treatment?

DEAR READER: Reflux, the abnormal backwash of gastric acid into the esophagus, causes heartburn, bloating and indigestion: symptoms that may be indistinguishable from those of peptic ulcer. Reflux is commonly, but not always, a complication of hiatal hernia, a weakness of the sphincter that prevents stomach acid from flowing in a reverse direction.

Reflux is usually treated by elevating the head of the bed at night, avoiding certain foods (such as coffee, alcohol, fats and chocolate), stopping smoking, and using antacids (such as Gelusil) or prescription drugs (Zantac and others) that reduce the production of stomach acid.

Despite this therapy, however, the acid may chronically irritate the lower esophagus, leading to a condition called Barrett's metaplasia. This premalignant condition is potentially serious because it may not respond to the medical treatment that I mentioned. Surgery may be necessary to remove the abnormal tissue and prevent cancer.

Barrett's metaplasia is diagnosed by endoscopy (visual examination of the esophagus) and biopsy. Many authorities recommend that patients with this affliction be treated aggressively with antacid drugs and undergo periodic surveillance with the endoscope. If the inflamed area grows or persists, surgery must be considered.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Hiatal Hernia." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife has advanced melanoma in the liver and is currently undergoing interleuken 2/antibody treatment at a teaching center. Are alternative protocols available?

DEAR READER: Melanoma is a highly malignant skin cancer which usually must be treated by extensive surgery to remove the growth and surrounding tissue that may harbor undetected melanoma cells.

Unfortunately, even with apparently successful excision, the cancerous cells may metastasize (spread), to involve internal organs, such as the liver.

Because metastatic melanoma is usually resistant to traditional therapy — making the outlook grim — many teaching hospitals are experimenting with drug combinations in an attempt to find a cure. Thus, your wife has been enrolled in such a "protocol," of which there are several. However, no one has yet discovered which combination is the most effective.

Therefore, I recommend that your wife continue with the course of treatment she has been prescribed. To change protocols at this time might do more harm than good, by depriving her of a potentially successful therapy.

FDA ponders stricter tobacco regulation

NEW YORK (AP) — Concluding for the first time that nicotine is a drug that should be regulated, the Food and Drug Administration has made initial suggestions for stricter regulation of tobacco products, The New York Times reported Thursday.

The FDA is authorized to regulate drugs on its own, but in view of the politically sensitive nature of the issue, the agency submitted its proposals to the White House for action, the Times said, citing administration officials it did not identify.

The proposed regulations include a ban on selling cigarettes in vending machines, a chief source of cigarettes for children, and stricter licensing to hold vendors responsible if they get caught selling tobacco to minors, the newspaper said.

Technically, tobacco sellers are already prevented from selling to minors, but enforcement is lax.

Other tobacco regulations currently in force include a ban on television ads for tobacco products and a warning label printed on packages about the health risks of tobacco use.

The FDA has been investigating whether nicotine should be regulated as an addictive drug, which would give the agency wide-ranging authority to control the distribution and sale of tobacco products.

Jim O'Hara, an FDA spokesman, told The Associated Press late Wednesday that the agency had no comment on the Times' report. "We are continuing to work" on the investigation of tobacco, he said.

The FDA proposal sent to the White House includes a document asserting the agency's authority to regulate tobacco under the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, and an outline of possible regulations that would cause the least political turmoil.

Texas Lottery dramatically introduces 'Red Hot Cash'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Lottery Commission's announcement of its latest scratch-off ticket game burns with drama.

"Texas Lottery Commission Executive Director Nora Linares braved the blistering hot sands of a Corpus Christi beach — barefoot — to unveil the Lottery's 'Red Hot Cash' scratch game," said a Wednesday statement from the agency.

It says Ms. Linares stood beneath the "scorching, noonday sun" on Corpus Christi's McGee Beach, and describes the tickets' color as "flaming orange."

"We wanted to go out of our way to demonstrate just how hot we expect this new game to be," Ms. Linares said.

Lotto Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 12, 19, 20, 21, 43 and 49.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Saturday night's game will be $10 million.

Psychoanalysis not got Hughes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hugh Grant says he's not too worried about trying to figure out why he hired a prostitute.

"I think that's more of an American syndrome," Grant said Wednesday on CNN's "Larry King Live." "One thing I noticed in making 'Nine Months,' every other actor in the cast was in analysis, apart from me,"

King pressed again, wondering if Grant wasn't fretting over his actions.

"I might ponder on it but, you know, there's nothing more I can say than I think it was an atrocious thing to do and disloyal, and I can't beat myself up any more than that," Grant said.

The suave British star of "Four Weddings and a Funeral" was arrested June 27 in his car with a prostitute.

Widow Fears Phone Romance May Fade Person to Person

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1995 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my late 60s. My husband and I were very friendly with "Frank" and "Lucy" (not their real names). In 1963, they moved to Hawaii, and I have not seen them since. In recent years, both Frank's wife and my husband have passed away.

Frank and I have been talking on the telephone since then. We have become very close, and the calls have become more and more frequent. He is an interesting, funny and loving man — and we have wonderful, warm conversations.

So what's my problem? He wants to come here to see me — and I am terrified!

I feel this almost-make-believe "phone romance" is not real, and that to meet in person might spoil it all! The years have not been kind to me, and I also have some medical problems of which he is not aware. On the phone, I can be 35 again, beautiful and sexy.

True, Frank is also 32 years older, but to me, that is not important. I just couldn't bear it if he were disappointed when we met. How can I refuse to meet without hurting him? Or am I just being foolish?

ON HOLD IN HOUSTON

DEAR ON HOLD: Do not refuse to meet him, but do begin to inject some reality into your conversation. You could find that there are some details that Frank hasn't mentioned to you either. The passing of decades takes its toll on all of us.

DEAR ABBY: You asked what comforted readers when they were confronted with tragedy:

Several years ago, my husband was on jury duty. When I found out that he had had an affair with one of the women jurors, I was devastated.

We had three teen-aged children, and he had been the light of my life, and now he had betrayed me.

As I sat thinking about it, it was as though God was asking me, "Who do you think you are, putting limits on my love? My son died on the cross for your sins and also for the sin your husband committed. If I can forgive him, you can, too."

I replied, "Yes, Lord, I will forgive him." Then a sudden peace that I cannot explain settled over me.

This year we will celebrate our 37th wedding anniversary. I am signing my name, but if you publish this, please sign me ...

BLESSED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BLESSED: To forgive fully and unconditionally, as you did, merited you a religious experience, the sudden peace that settled over you.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a dispute I am having with a close friend. It concerns gift-giving.

My friend says if she receives a gift she cannot use or doesn't like, it's common courtesy to return it to the sender saying, "Thank you, but this is not right for me."

I disagree. On several occasions, she has returned gifts I've chosen for her and, as a result, I felt insulted and hurt, regretting the time I spent shopping for them.

She contends that I am far too sensitive — that she appreciates knowing when a gift is not right, and she is sure the majority feels the same way.

Abby, where do you stand?

HURT

DEAR HURT: I stand in your corner. Next time, give her a gift certificate or a check, and let her buy her own gift.

Your Birthday

Friday, July 14, 1995

A number of favorable shifts might be in store for you in the year ahead. It looks like you'll disengage from unproductive involvements and find new paths of promise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Subdue the urge today to gamble on things about which you know little. The odds might run against you at this time, so use your best judgment. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might have to bend a bit more than usual today to appease a partner in a business arrangement. If you're inflexible, expect a similar response.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are slovenly in your tasks today, don't expect co-workers to cover up for you. Instead, they might even squeal on you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not buy something costly today, thinking that you'll be able to sell it when you grow tired of it. That market might not be there.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Distinguish today between being assertive and being abrasive. If you can't make this distinction, you may defeat your purpose.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Let bygones be bygones today. If you attempt to even up an old score, it could make a bad situation even worse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Upon occasion, you're too generous to the wrong people. This could be one of those days when you ignore the deserving and cater to the users.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Avoid doing things today that might cause companions to lose respect for you. Walk the straight and narrow and keep your charisma intact.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, if you feel someone has wronged you, try to forgive the offense. Harboring a grudge could cause it to grow disproportionately.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In an involvement with friends today, don't alter plans without consulting them first. Your move could complicate everyone's agenda, including your own.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Let an unresolved, volatile matter between you and your mate rest today. This issue has a short fuse on both ends and could explode at a moment's notice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not delegate assignments today to a person who has performed poorly for you in the past. This individual might cause you even more serious problems this time.

A blurred picture, an extra trick

By Phillip Alder

Herbert Spencer, the English evolutionary philosopher, wrote, "How often misused words generate misleading thoughts." (In my experience, "misused" should be "misunderstood.") In bridge, a psychic bid may mislead the opponents. During the play, though, you must mislead the opponents with actions — the cards you play — rather than words.

Changing the subject for a moment, you are on lead against a small slam with an ace in your hand. You lead the ace and the slam makes, whereas if you had led something else, you would have beaten the slam. Alternatively, you don't lead the ace and the slam makes, whereas if you had led the ace, you would have beaten the slam. Which is more likely?

English expert Terence Reese, whose opinion is respected, thinks the latter is more likely. So, if in doubt, lead your ace at trick one. Here, West, an acolyte of Reese (that's a pun, the main bidding system in England being Acol), started with the ace and another club.

Now South had to play the trump suit without loss. He knew the odds: cash the ace and king, hoping the queen drops. That was about to work — until East threw a wrench-shaped card into the works. When the spade five was led off the dummy at trick three, East played the queen.

Against someone capable of finding this falsecard, it is right for South to continue with his second top spade. But South, believing the queen was a singleton, continued with a low spade to dummy's nine. With the adrenalin flowing, East produced the 10 to defeat the slam.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have scoured the country looking for a Proctor Double-Flip Top ironing board. They still have the cover in the stores. Also, I need the recipe for Edinburgh Date Bars. You cook the dates and spread on an oatmeal crust, put more oats on top and then powdered sugar. — ARLENE G. EDEL, Arlington Heights, Ill.

DEAR ARLENE: Here's the bad news. According to the people we spoke with at Hamilton Beach/Proctor Silex Customer Service, the Flip Top ironing board is no longer available. But here's the good news.

EDINBURGH TEA SQUARES
Dough:
1/2 cup soft butter or margarine

1/2 cup oatmeal
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup all-purpose flour
Filling:
1 cup dates
1 cup water
a pinch salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
grated rind (zest) from one lemon

Preheat oven to 350.

Cream the butter until light. Add the brown sugar and continue beating until fluffy. Mix in the oatmeal, salt and flour. Pat half this dough evenly in a lightly greased 9-inch square pan.

Cook the dates in water until soft. Mix in the salt, lemon juice and rind. Spread the filling over the bottom layer of dough in your baking pan. Sprinkle the remaining dry mixture over filling. Cook for 30-40 minutes. Cut into squares. Dust with confectioners' sugar, if desired. (From the King Arthur Flour Cookbook, Countryman Press, 1994.)

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: How can I clean an alabaster lamp that has a yellowish discoloration? — L.D., Summerfield, Fla.

DEAR LYDIA: Either a paste of Bon Ami cleanser or an application of Bon Ami soap should do the job. Bon Ami contains feldspar, a gentle abrasive that is not harmful to the surface of polished stone such as alabaster, onyx and marble. It also contains a biodegradable detergent that cuts grease and dissolves surface dirt (the cause of your yellowing problem).

If you can't find Bon Ami products in your area, write to Customer Service, Faultless Starch/Bon Ami Co., Kansas City, MO 64101-1200 or call 816-842-1230.

FEEDBACK: S. Halvern of Iron River, Mich., was looking for large-size jeans with an elastic waist. He can find them in the King Size Catalog for $49.95. To order a catalog (or the jeans), call 1-800-846-1600. And many thanks to all of you who wrote!

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Could you tell me what is the proportion of Epsom salt and water when making the solution for watering plants and also how often to use it? Does it work on all plants, that is both flowers and vegetables? I heard years ago that it also helped bell peppers. — DAISY UNDERWOOD, Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR DAISY: Epsom salt is nothing more or less than packaged magnesium sulfate. This occurs as a natural trace element in soil and is critical in the formation of chlorophyll. Plants growing in magnesium-deficient soil won't grow well and will often have fading, mottled or yellowing leaves. Magnesium also aids in a plant's absorption of phosphorous, which contributes to growth, flowering and disease resistance.

For both flowering and vegetable plants, add 2 tablespoons of Epsom salt per gallon of water. Give to the plants at every watering. For tomatoes, sprinkle a tablespoon full of Epsom Salt around the base of each plant once a month to prevent blossom-end rot.

For roses, sprinkle one teaspoon per foot of plant height and spread evenly around the base of the plant for better blooms and deeper greening. As for bell peppers, Epsom salt will benefit them as well as other plants but we've found, when we transplant our peppers, if we bury a book of paper matches alongside a plant, the peppers flourish mightily. Actually, it sounds weird but has a rational explanation: Peppers love phosphorous!

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have an old doll with rubber arms and legs. They have turned real brown. Is there anything I can use to bleach them? I have tried Purex but that didn't help. — JANE BOWMAN, Mountainburg, Ark.

DEAR JANE: We're afraid there's nothing you can do to get the arms and legs back to their original color. The rubber itself has deteriorated over the years; any bleach product you might use will just deteriorate it further.

A catalog offered by the Standard Doll Co. (1-800-543-6557, ext. 31) carries anything and everything you will ever need for the restoration, repair and even making, of dolls, as well as a large selection of replacement arms and legs.

The folks we spoke with there suggested, before you consider replacing the old arms and legs with new, that you go around to local yard sales where you might find a doll (however appalling it may sound) that you could use for the "spare parts" you need.

FEEDBACK: Many, many thanks to all of you who wrote offering to send their no longer needed Magnus Organ Music books to Sherry Dickson of Hadley, Pa. Unfortunately, Sherry did not include her street address, so we've been unable to send your kind offers on to her.

Raising healthy children takes study, more planning

By MARY MacVEAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents harbor a host of worries about protecting their young children's health. Two recent books won't make them think they're worrying for nothing.

In "What Are We Feeding Our Kids?" (Workman, $8.95), Michael Jacobson focuses on one of the most common worries.

The answer to the question of his title could be a variety of delicious foods that will help them grow to healthy adults. It also could be a lot of foods that are full of fat, or grown and processed with chemicals, or appeal to kids just because they're advertised on television or have a cartoon character on the package.

Jacobson acknowledges parents' fears about pesticides, but argues at greater length and more fervently about obesity, bacteria, fast food, school lunch programs and the way foods are marketed to children.

"Raising Children Toxic Free" by Herbert L. Needleman and Philip Landrigan (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $20) goes beyond food to consider the environment, cancer, radiation, tobacco, lawn-care pesticides, lead poisoning and other issues.

The good news about both books is that parents are not helpless. Both offer a good deal of practical, everyday advice.

"You have the ability to limit the exposure of your children to many toxicants such as lead or asbestos without panic or unnecessary constriction in living," Needleman and Landrigan write.

Throughout their book, they explain what substances can be a problem and how they can harm children. And they offer advice on avoiding or dealing with each.

Needleman, a professor of child psychiatry and pediatrics at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, studied the effects of lead on children and in pregnancy and has written extensively on the subject. Landrigan is chairman of community medicine and director of environmental and occupational medicine at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City.

Jacobson argues that what children eat will affect their later risk of many diseases, including some cancers and heart disease. With evidence that children today snack more and eat more meals away from home than children of previous generations, it's all the more important for parents to pay attention, he writes.

Every parent knows how much television — both commercials and shows that have food products connected to them — influences what cereals and snacks their children want. "Almost invariably, the ads push foods loaded with fat, cholesterol, sodium or sugar. For some reason, broccoli producers have never managed to create a good jingle for kids," Jacobson writes.

As executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based advocacy organization, Jacobson has long criticized the fast-food industry, and he is particularly disdainful in this book of fast-food companies appeals to children through clubs, toys and specially packaged foods.

However, he also has long advocated consumers' power to change the market.

Here are his "Five Commandments for Raising Healthy Eaters":

— Relax. "As long as their diets are basically healthy, eating a Big Mac once in a while won't do any harm.

— Retain authority over food in your home. "You should control what foods are available in your home and what your kids eat when they dine out with you.

— Before tackling your child's diet, examine your own.

— Start teaching healthful eating habits as early as possible.

— Make mealtimes happy occasions. "If your dining room table becomes a battleground, everybody loses."

King posts 30th career win

COLORADO SPRINGS (AP) — Don't confuse the serenity that has recently overtaken Betsy King with complacency.

Immensely relieved at finally posting her 30th career victory to gain entry into the LPGA Hall of Fame, King still has the inner fire to excel.

It was suggested to King, who won the ShopRite Classic in New Jersey three weeks ago, that she could now freewheel it in this week's U.S. Women's Open on the Broadmoor East course.

King said that's taking it too far.

"If I freewheel it, I would be in trouble," King said after Wednesday's final practice round. "You have to play conservatively in an Open. But I definitely feel more relaxed playing. I don't feel the same sense of urgency to win."

At the end of 1993, King captured the tour's final official event, the Toray Japan Queens Cup, for her 29th career win. To gain admission to the Hall of Fame, a player has to have 30 victories, of which two must be majors. King had already won five majors, but was one short of the 30 total.

She went 18 months before finally reaching that figure.

"I felt like I played OK the last couple of years," King, 39, said. "I just think the level of competition has improved. It's harder to win. If you are off a little bit on your game, somebody else is going to be in there.

"It wasn't something I thought about teeing off on a Thursday, but when I got in contention to win, I definitely think it became a factor. There was almost a sense of urgency to keep grinding and to play as much as possible. Whereas now, I don't feel that. It doesn't mean I'm not going to try to do well. It's just more relaxing."

Her Hall of Fame stature won't affect her strategy for today's opening round of the Open.

"When you play a U.S. Open, you have to keep the ball in the fairway off the tee and get it on the right place on the green," she said. "It's going to be difficult to score if you're on the wrong side of the hole."

The 50th Women's Open is being contested on the longest course in tournament history — 6,398 yards.

But because of the Broadmoor's 6,400-foot elevation, balls travel about 10 percent farther than at sea level. And for prodigious hitters like Laura Davies, the course effectively becomes even shorter.

With her first swing in Wednesday's practice round, Davies hit a 308-yard drive on No. 1, and uphill par-4, leaving her only a 91-yard wedge to the green. In earlier practice rounds, she managed drives in the 330-yard range.

"It's amazing," Davies said. "It's going to be more than the 10 percent (difference). It is like 15 percent or 20 percent if you get a really high, well-struck one."

Davies, the LPGA money leader with $431,176, said she expects to be left with a pitching wedge — and usually a sand wedge — for her second shots on the par-4s this week.

Although it is an Open course with punitive rough, Davies vowed not to back off. "I plan to hit that driver and have some fun," she said.

Kidder must repay $303

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Howard College basketball coach has been asked to repay the $303 in scholarship money he used to pay for a summer school course for a student trying to become academically eligible at Texas Tech.

Jeff Kidder, who coached at the Big Spring junior college during the 1991-92 and 1992-93 seasons, misused Howard's money to help player Nate Jackson in the summer of 1991, according to a report by Howard officials.

The report said Kidder was trying to help "a coaching friend with his program." Kidder was a student manager for the University of Kentucky basketball program when Texas Tech head basketball coach James Dickey was an assistant coach there.

The document, made public by the college Wednesday, cites Kidder's "inappropriate use" of scholarship money to pay for the work of a student-athlete "who would never play basketball at Howard College."

Kidder, currently an assistant coach at Nevada, could not immediately be reached for comment. Howard officials said the report would serve as the school's comment.

Howard officials took up the case following a story by the Houston Chronicle that said Jackson, a 6-foot-9 forward, took a correspondence Spanish course at Howard even though the school typically doesn't offer such classes.

The credit enabled Jackson, who said he never was required to pay tuition or fees at Howard, to become eligible at Tech for the 1991-92 season, Dickey's first as head coach of the Red Raiders.

NCAA rules prohibit coaches and other school representatives from helping recruits obtain special academic arrangements not generally available to others.

The NCAA also bars coaches and school representatives from paying for, or arranging to pay for, recruits' pre-college educational expenses.

An internal review by Tech concluded that its coaches didn't break any NCAA rules.

WTC signs Shawna Davis

WTC girls' basketball team signed Shawna Davis of Fall City, Wa.

Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Davis, attended Eastlake High School. She lettered all four years of high school and was voted MVP her senior year. She was the leading rebounder in the league and averaged 12 points per game.

As a freshman she participated in fast-pitch softball and tennis. Davis played volleyball her sophomore and junior years. She participated in track her junior and senior years and set the record in shotput, javelin and discus her senior year.

Davis has been involved in WTI, Washington Teen Institute, Natural Helpers, Leadership and Interact Club.

"Shawna will be a big impact in the WJCAC. She is extremely strong and can handle the ball well in the paint. She will be fun to watch this year," said Coach Brenda Nichols.

SHAWNA DAVIS

Davis will join the team for the 1995-96 season.

In winning the British Open in 1977, Tom Watson had a 65 on each of the last two rounds.

There is a Florida expressway named after Don Shula, longtime coach of the Miami Dolphins.

Denver drops bid to host Big 12 game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Denver apparently has dropped its bid to host the Big 12 Conference football championship game next year.

Conference Commissioner Steve Hatchell said Wednesday he didn't think Denver planned to enter a bid before Friday's deadline.

"Nobody has contacted us, and nothing has happened there," Hatchell said. "I can't see them in the loop."

The game is tentatively planned for the first week of December 1996. Kansas City, Dallas and Irving, Texas, submitted their bids long ago. Houston, San Antonio and St. Louis haven't yet submitted final bids.

Hatchell wouldn't reveal the specifics of any bid.

He was in Kansas City for meetings with television sports programmers, Big Eight officials, city officials and attorneys.

Rockets may try to avoid paying Maxwell's $1.8 million

HOUSTON (AP) — Now that Vernon Maxwell is no longer a Houston Rocket, the club's lawyers may be looking for ways to avoid paying him the remaining $1.8 million on his contract.

Maxwell was cut June 30, the day before the NBA lockout of players halted any club-player dealings. His final act with the team was faking an injury so he wouldn't have to face the loss of his starting job when Clyde Drexler was obtained in a trade with the Portland Trail Blazers.

"I never had any personal problems. That was just something I made up," Maxwell told the Houston Chronicle on May 23. "The deal was I wasn't playing. That was it. I couldn't take it."

Those statements could be the basis of a breach of contract lawsuit by the Rockets that could keep them from paying the final year of his contract.

"The only way we would not have to pay it would be if his contract were terminated for some other legal reason," said Rockets legal counsel Michael Goldberg.

Goldberg would not comment on specific legal action. The Rockets, in a four-paragraph statement Wednesday announcing Maxwell's release, said they would have no additional comments "because of the NBA lockout situation."

Neither Maxwell nor his agent, Kyle Rote Jr. of Memphis, Tenn.-based Athletic Resource Management, immediately returned telephone calls.

Jeffrey Newport, Maxwell's attorney, said his client had been contacted by teams around the NBA.

Clinton denounces base-closing list process

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angrily denouncing a politically perilous military base-closing list, President Clinton today accused an independent panel of treating California and Texas unfairly. But aides said he still planned to accept the panel's list.

In a finger-pointing, fist-pounding outburst, the president said the independent Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission did not adequately consider the economic implications of its decisions.

"This is an outrage," he declared.

The diatribe was intended to show California and Texas voters he was fighting for them, even as he moved toward accepting the list.

The president was particularly upset over accusations that he was playing politics with the decision, insulating himself from blame in vote-rich Texas and California.

"You tell me that my concern over that economic situation, when (the California-area) unemployment rate is eight-and-a-half percent ... is political? My concern in San Antonio, Texas, where one decision could virtually wipe out the middle class, is political?

When there were other alternatives that the Pentagon said were better for national security?" Clinton said.

Aides said Clinton still planned this afternoon to accept the commission's base-closing list, which would close or consolidate 105 military bases, including two major Air Force maintenance depots in California and Texas. California would lose nearly 20,000 jobs.

In recent days, the White House has gone at great lengths to show Clinton struggling with the decision, insisting that the Pentagon ensure him that some of the lost jobs could be reclaimed in the private sector.

The target of his rage varied and was not always clear.

Killing spree suspect's parole officer suspended

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Hours before Darnell Collins went on a two-state murder spree, he called his parole officer and admitted he had a drug problem.

The officer told Collins to call back Monday to let him know if he had been admitted to a treatment program. The next day, Collins began the five-day rampage that killed seven people and ended with his shooting death.

John Goodman, who supervised Collins since November, was suspended Wednesday for neglect of duty in connection with the case, said Mario Paparozzi, the assistant chief of New Jersey's Bureau of Parole. A preliminary hearing will be held next week, and Goodman could face dismissal.

"Goodman could have arrested him himself, had him admitted to a drug program, or he could have said, 'Come to the office,'" Paparozzi said.

Parole officials previously had said the two had a routine telephone conversation on July 16.

Goodman declined today to comment on his suspension. "Any way I say anything, it'll sound bad."

Collins had a long history of violence and drug abuse, and using drugs was a violation of his parole. Paparozzi said he didn't know what kind of drugs Collins was using.

Less than 12 hours after the phone call between Collins and Goodman, Collins' ex-girlfriend and her mother were shot to death. Collins continued his rampage between Atlantic City and New York City's Harlem for five days.

Collins was shot 14 times by police in Nutley, N.J., following a car chase and shootout June 22.

Trustees tabled any action on building improvements. Supt. Church said items being considered are a weight room and dressing room at the gym, and one or two additional classrooms.

"Basically, we're out of space and we're trying to look at our options to see how we can get some more room," he said. "Right now, that's been tabled until after the board gets a good, solid look at the budget for next year."

Second Alamo dig might cost too much

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A futile dig for a well under the Alamo has triggered a controversy that has stalled plans to begin a second hunt for history.

The pricetag of the first dig is being questioned by the Tesoro del Alamo preservation society, which refuses to finish paying St. Mary's University until it receives a list of expenses.

Frank Buschbacher, Tesoro's project director, expected the dig to cost $42,000, but the university's bill is 30 percent higher than that — nearly $55,000.

St. Mary's, in turn, has halted its analysis of Spanish-Colonial and Mission Indian artifacts uncovered during the just-completed excavation.

Mark Denton, project reviewer for the Department of Antiquities Protection that oversees permits for the state commission said the stalemate has jeopardized plans for another dig.

"This is exactly the kind of thing that we didn't want to happen," he said.

DWI plea nets probation

A 27-year-old Snyder man was assessed a five-year probated prison term following a guilty plea entered Tuesday in 132nd District Court.

Jesse Rivera Jr. of 2809 Ave. N pleaded guilty to an April 16 offense of felony driving while intoxicated.

Senior District Judge Gene Dulaney also ordered Rivera to pay a $750 fine and participate in a 30-day in-patient treatment program within the next six months.

Galileo spacecraft releases Jupiter probe

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — After six years spent whizzing through space, the unmanned Galileo spacecraft launched a probe toward Jupiter's unexplored atmosphere, where it will promptly disintegrate.

Moments after the separation was confirmed about 11 p.m. Wednesday, a huge cheer went up from more than 300 Galileo team members and their families gathered at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

An onboard computer program directed the firing of explosive nuts that allowed titanium springs to push the 747-pound probe away.

Barring any problems with the $1.6 billion project, the probe will make a 75-minute plunge into Jupiter's atmosphere on Dec. 7, piercing Jupiter's dense clouds. The heat and pressure will destroy the spacecraft.

It will be the first time a manmade object has penetrated the atmosphere of so distant a planet, 560 million miles from Earth.

VA can use private doctors statements now

According to E.H. (Dan) Dever Jr., veterans' county service officer for Scurry County, the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) has published in the Federal Register regulations that will allow the VA to rate veterans' compensation and pension claims based on a private physician's statement.

In the past, original claims for compensation and pension benefits, claims for additional service-connected disabilities and claims for higher level aid and attendance required an examination by a VA physician. VA already accepts statements of private physicians in deciding claims for increases in compensation.

Provided VA accepts it, a private physician's statement can now be used to rate a claim without further VA examination if it meets VA medical standards. These include describing clinical manifestations and substantiating the diagnosis with findings from diagnostic techniques generally accepted by medical authorities, such as appropriate pathological studies, X-rays and laboratory tests.

In cases where private physician exams are accepted, VA estimates the average claim processing time could be reduced by as much as 35 days. The change also is expected to make it easier for veterans to file for and receive benefits due to the potential decrease in veterans' travel time to see a VA physician and an increase in accessibility for many veterans who see only their private physicians.

Veterans will be responsible for paying for exams performed by private physicians for VA purposes. VA exams are given at no cost to veterans seeking disability compensation.

In other activity, an offense report for Class B criminal mischief was submitted at 7:43 a.m. in reference to two tires being cut on a pickup at a residence on South Ennis Creek Road.

An offense report for criminal mischief was submitted at 1:42 p.m. in reference to someone getting into another person's car in the 3200 block of 40th Street.

An officer was requested at the ABC Rental Buildings at 9:40 p.m. in reference to a unit being broken into.
