Normally dry High Plains in odd position as state 'oasis'

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The High Plains is one of Texas' driest regions in normal years, but this year has been anything but normal for Texas weather.

While the bulk of the state bakes under a severe drought, this semi-arid region is running on schedule for rainfall. A downright lush landscape across the plains is testament.

"Who'd have thought we'd be the oasis of Texas?" said Van Swinford, grain merchandiser for Willard Grain & Feed in the Panhandle's northwesternmost city, Texline.

Swinford said record corn production from his area is possible thanks to a monsoon-like summer. Weather watchers believe that enough rain has already fallen to invigorate crops in the ground now and lay a foundation for the next winter's wheat planting.

Elsewhere, sporadic showers aren't even making a dent in the dry spell.

"The outlook has really changed a lot as far as corn, cotton and milo (sorghum) in the plains are concerned," said Doug Bierstedt, who monitors crop conditions for the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service in Austin. "The drought is pretty much a done deal down here."

The High Plains region, which includes most of the Texas Panhandle and part of the Permian Basin, is considered to be barely in a drought according to the Palmer Drought Severity Index. The index takes into account several factors, including rainfall, and is figured by the Texas Water Development Board.

Despite some recent relief, most of the eastern two-thirds of Texas is suffering under a "severe" or "extreme" drought, according to the index. Data released Tuesday indicates improving conditions in far East and West Texas and the High Plains.

Recent cloudbursts across the state haven't affected the overall dry picture, meteorologists say.

"There may have been a few cracks in the drought, but it certainly has not broken," said Richard Hagan, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Brownsville, which is plagued with one of the lowest rainfall levels in the state.

Though the Lower Rio Grande Valley is enduring only a moderate drought, Brownsville and other cities in the area rely on the Amistad and Falcon reservoirs to the northwest, which remains extremely parched.

Texas' share of the lakes located along the Mexican border is running at a quarter of capacity.

The story in the Texas Panhandle is much different.

Lake Meredith reservoir north of Amarillo is rising so fast that National Park Service officials are scrambling to keep it from swallowing shoreline picnic tables and docks.

Hagan noted that even El Paso, normally the driest spot in the state with just 8 to 9 inches of rain a year, has had nearly three times more rain than Brownsville, a coastal city.

"You know something is wrong if the desert areas of Texas have had more rain than South Texas," he said.

Hagan said the Valley needs the kind of downpours that have fallen regularly for the past three months in northwestern Texas. A spate of heavy thunderstorms won't do, he said, because too much water at once is more likely to run off than soak into the thirsty earth.

Along with the record corn, wheat farmers who plowed under their bone-dry crops last spring in lieu of sorghum are expecting a bountiful harvest coupled with robust prices. As long as a freeze doesn't strike before October, cotton growers in the South Plains are anticipating hearty yields.

Swinford and others in this part of the state know the kind of trepidation other Texans are feeling.

"I think the agricultural community was sure looking at some people going out of business if it didn't rain and we had good crops," he said. "We're going to heal some people up this year if nothing bad happens."

Drought index highlighted for selected cities

By The Associated Press
The Texas Water Development Board monitors the ongoing drought across the state using a formula called the Palmer Drought Severity Index, which is based on rainfall, soil conditions and other factors.

Anything above zero on the Palmer scale indicates no drought, and the index ranges down to totals below -4.0, which indicate extreme drought.

Here is a sampling of cities across Texas and where their regions stood on the index as of Aug. 3, the most recent Palmer survey:

| City       | Rating | Comment  |
|------------|--------|----------|
| Abilene    | -3.60  | Severe   |
| Austin-SA  | -4.51  | Extreme  |
| Dallas-FW  | -4.30  | Extreme  |
| El Paso    | -2.36  | Moderate |
| H'gen      | -2.90  | Moderate |
| Houston    | -3.37  | Severe   |
| Laredo     | -3.49  | Severe   |
| Lubbock    | -1.85  | Mild     |
| San Angelo | -4.21  | Extreme  |
| Tyler      | -3.90  | Severe   |

Men charged in Littlefield clerk slaying

LITTLEFIELD, Texas (AP) - Two men were charged with capital murder Tuesday in the robbery and shooting of a convenience store clerk who described her attackers to a 911 dispatcher before she died.

Alberto Sifuentes, 23, and Jesus Ramirez, 48, were arrested Monday in Muleshoe. They were being held Tuesday in Lamb County Jail, a jail spokesman said.

Angie Cruz, 32, survived at least nine bullet wounds long enough to dial 911 around 2 a.m. Aug. 6 and describe the assailants. Ms. Cruz, who had worked at the Jolly Roger convenience store for just two weeks, later died from her wounds, including one shot to the face.

Dole poised to claim GOP presidential nod

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent
SAN DIEGO (AP) - Bob Dole finally receives the Republican presidential nomination tonight as the GOP awards him the prize he has pursued for 16 years. Day Three turns from an evening of Clinton-bashing to stressing more positive themes, party leaders said today.

Moving to stress Dole's strengths, keynote speaker Susan Molinari said the Republican "gender gap" with women can be overcome by pointing out Dole's record.

"We have a gift in the fact that our presidential nominee has been in the United States Senate and he has done so much on women's health issues, women's safety issues, women's economic equity issues," Molinari said on "CBS This Morning."

Former Dole presidential rival Lamar Alexander said today that the GOP convention has lifted the spirits of many party members, concerned about Dole's prospects.

"Last week, we were down. I never saw the Republicans across the country so worried," he told "Fox Morning News," adding that the party's gathering has worked wonders.

Dole met late into the night Tuesday with two former Senate speechwriters reworking the acceptance speech he is to deliver Thursday. Dole was described by several sources as unhappy with the text drafted by novelist-essayist Mark Helprin and ordered up major revisions.

Also, campaign focus groups conducted during Tuesday night's proceedings showed that independent-minded voters quickly tired of the relentless attacks on President Clinton, the sources said, speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Democrats also took issue with the verbal pummeling of the president - and predicted it would cost Dole and the GOP any momentum gained by the more positive opening night, which was capped with an address by retired Gen. Colin Powell.

"They're just kind of addicted to that petty, mean-spirited type of thing," said Democratic strategist James Carville.

The Dole camp was back to accentuating the positive tonight, with a program that included a personal look at Dole's struggle-filled life from Elizabeth Dole, moving across the convention floor like a talk-show host.

Forgoing the podium to walk among delegates with a wireless mike, Mrs. Dole says she will talk about the strengths that have enabled her husband to handle adversity - his "brains, heart and guts."

Tonight's nomination dispatches Dole toward what he likes to call "one last mission" for his World War II generation.

After the hoopla of nominating speeches, the alphabetical roll call of the states will award Dole the political crown he futilely sought in 1980 and again in 1988.

Dole will claim the nomination Thursday night, right after Jack Kemp formally accepts his assignment as running mate.

At 73, Dole would be the oldest first-term American president ever inaugurated. His rival is the first baby boomer president, the soon-to-be 50-year-old Bill Clinton.

It was clear Tuesday night that Clinton had few friends in San Diego's Convention Center. He was vilified by Texas Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison in a cadence-rich stream of abuse. She accused him of being "high-taxing, free-spending, promise-breaking, social security-taxing, health care-socializing, drug-coddling, power-grabbing" and on and on.

Dole also took up the Republican character attack, declaring, "I have credibility, something that President Clinton lacks from time to time."

Tonight, the mood softens as the convention brings forth memories of Dole's childhood in hard scrabble Kansas, his combat in World War II, the grievous wound that shattered his right shoulder, and his 35 years in Congress. A satellite hookup with residents of Dole's hometown of Russell, Kan., will help tell the story.

Kemp accepts role as backup to Dole

By DARLENE SUPERVILLE

Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) - Jack Kemp doesn't have any problem playing backup quarterback to Bob Dole as they team up for the race to the White House, Joanne Kemp says.

"He's always been on a team, now he's on Bob Dole's," Kemp's wife Joanne said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Kemp also got word today that he won't be blindsided by former presidential contender Pat Buchanan.

"I believe that Jack Kemp and I are going to have some disagreements but they can be postponed until after the election," Buchanan said in a taped interview on NBC's "Today."

Mrs. Kemp said her husband, a former Buffalo Bills quarterback, "is finding it very comfortable to be backup quarterback." Dole and Kemp "seem to be bringing out the best in each other," she said.

Kemp views the chance to work with Dole "an awesome responsibility and a great honor."

His pleasure was evident Tuesday night as an ebullient Jack Kemp soaked up the cheers, tossed toy footballs and generally had a grand old time as he made his first entrance into the convention hall since being named Dole's running mate.

Entering the San Diego Convention Center on Tuesday night, Kemp was greeted by the upbeat sounds of a John Philip Sousa march and thunderous chants of "Dole-Kemp! Dole-Kemp!" He sat between his wife, Joanne, and Elizabeth Dole in the VIP section.

The boisterous entrance projected the kind of energy Kemp hopes will be mirrored tonight as the Republican convention formally nominates Dole and Kemp as the party standard-bearers.

Keynote speaker Susan Molinari, a congresswoman from New York, poked fun at Kemp's reputation as a long-winded speaker as she recounted how she sought Kemp out for advice on her speech.

"He gave me a few suggestions. In fact, he's still giving them. I had to put him on hold just now so I could come out here and give this speech right now," Molinari jibed.

Kemp guffawed for the cameras, then pronounced Molinari's address "one of the greatest keynote speeches of either political party in my lifetime."

Even before his formal nomination, the former National Football League quarterback was trying to fend off some of the tough questions that inevitably come at newly chosen running mates.

In a series of newspaper interviews published today, Kemp defended his decision to follow Dole, the head of the Republican presidential ticket, and endorse an anti-affirmative action proposal in California that he has previously criticized.

He said Dole's tax-cut plan would stimulate the economy and would not require cuts in Medicare and Social Security, as Democrats have charged. And he unequivocally opposed a GOP platform position that would deny U.S. citizenship to children of illegal aliens born in the United States. Dole has yet to decide on that issue.

Kemp also responded to an Associated Press report about his earning $3 million to $4 million in speaker's fees - at $35,000 per speech - as well as director's salaries since leaving government in 1993.

He said the figures were "somewhat exaggerated," but acknowledged making "significant amounts of money" and paying "close to 50 percent of my income in taxes, thanks to Bill Clinton."

Kemp said he would release all of his tax returns, as he did when he ran for president in 1988, resign from his corporate boards and put his assets in a blind trust.

In at least one sign that Kemp is helping unify the divided GOP, New York Gov. George Pataki accepted an invitation to nominate Kemp tonight. Pataki had earlier turned down an invitation to speak to the convention.

Workplace productivity dips in second quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) - Workplace productivity fell 0.1 percent at an annual rate during the second quarter, the government said today in a report watched closely for clues about possible interest rate moves.

The Labor Department said the decline in nonfarm productivity, a key to Americans' standard of living, was the first since a 1.1 percent drop in the final three months of 1995. Productivity rose 1.8 percent from January through March.

Many analysts had expected a larger 0.5 percent fall during the April-June quarter. The rate was adjusted for seasonal variations.

Despite the fourth-quarter drop, productivity rose 0.7 percent for all of 1995, up from 0.5 percent in 1994. The gain last year was less than one-third the productivity growth rate of the 1950s and 1960s.

Productivity measures output per number of hours worked. Greater efficiency means businesses can increase wages without raising prices since workers are producing more with the same amount of work.

Analysts fear that the current tight labor market could lead to increased wages that, without sufficient gains in productivity, would be passed on to consumers as higher prices.

Federal Reserve policy makers will study the productivity report with other recent data next Tuesday when they consider whether to raise short-term interest rates to head off any spurt in inflation.

"Increases in pay, of course, are not inflationary so long as they are matched by gains in productivity," Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress last month.

Once considered a top rival to Bob Dole for the GOP nomination, he spent more than $24 million running for president before dropping out after poor showings in the Louisiana and Iowa caucuses. Now, as he seeks a third term in the Senate, he's barely a blip on the Republican National Convention screen.

Fire crews block off 40 miles of Oregon highway

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

FOSSIL, Ore. (AP) - Fire crews temporarily shut down 40 miles of highway during the night, blocking access to a busy resort, as they fought to halt the spread of a 23,000-acre fire.

Fires burning across some 350,000 acres in the West over the past week have forced dozens of families to flee their homes. Nearly three dozen structures have been leveled by fire in Oregon and Washington.

Thirty houses and other structures were ordered evacuated near Upper Lake in the Mendocino National Forest of Northern California, where fires have burned across more than 10,000 acres. One vacant house was destroyed.

The West's largest fire, a 124,440-acre blaze in west-central Utah, was corralled and crews were being released and sent elsewhere.

Even so, with more lightning forecast and firefighters stretched thin covering fires all over the West, fire officials in the Northwest fear they might come up short.

"The fires in this part of the country - in Oregon and Washington - are competing with other states in the West," said Roland Emetaz of the Northwest Interagency Coordination Center. "They need crews and equipment as well."

Fires have burned across nearly 200,000 acres in Eastern Oregon alone.

One of these blazes temporarily closed access to the Kah-Nee-Ta resort on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation, as firefighters tried to starve the south side of a 23,000-acre fire with a burnout along U.S. 26, Emetaz said.

The highway, which was closed for 40 miles Tuesday night and early today, is a major route between Portland and the central Oregon cities of Bend, Prineville and La Pine.

The Kah-Nee-Ta resort was near capacity although more than 35 reservation homes were evacuated. "We're a little smoky, but we're fine," said the resort's general manager, Zuanne Jarrett.

Fire destroyed Rob Whitbeck's home near Fossil, Ore., and much of his farm.

"When that wind came up, it just sucked the fire right over the place," said Whitbeck. "It'll be hard to feed those cattle with the hay I lost and the fall pasture I counted on all burned up."

Manning the deluge gun

Volunteer firefighter Carlos Ruiz mans the fire department's deluge gun mounted on top of Tanker 1. Tanker 1 was purchased last year to replace the old tanker. It arrived in Hereford earlier this year as the newest truck in the department's fleet. It was among the units called out Tuesday afternoon to a barn fire in northern Castro County.

Insurance committee on 14-city public hearing tour

By TERRI LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Here's the deal. Texas needs to raise money and a state income tax is NOT even an option on the table. So what do you do?

In Texas, you pack up a state committee and send them on the road to weather a whole lot of fingerprinting and griping from the citizenry.

"We'll listen to whatever you want to talk about," instructed Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer, who heads the 17-member Citizens' Committee on Property Tax Relief, now on a 14-city public hearing tour.

"We're here to be the eyes and ears of the governor and like a giant sponge I expect you'll wring it out of us."

At stop No. 9 in Houston, more than 300 people, who were short on solutions but long on complaints, packed a hotel ballroom on Tuesday.

(The tour stops in Amarillo on Aug. 22, with a meeting set at the Amarillo Garden Center, 1400 Streit Drive.

(The day will begin with a public briefing at 9:30 a.m., followed at 10 a.m. with the start of the town hall meeting.

(Citizens are invited to appear before the committee to testify, or may submit written testimony.

(Written testimony may be mailed to: The Governor's Staff Work Group of Property Tax Relief, P.O. Box 12428, Austin, Texas 78711.)

In Houston, big oil and gas representatives complained that retailers and service industries aren't paying their fair share.

"Capital-intensive industries such as manufacturing and energy pay almost 60 percent of all state and local business taxes, yet represent a little more than one-third of the gross state product," said Bob Gower, chairman and CEO of Lyondell Petrochemical Co.

"In contrast, service and trade-related firms pay 17 percent of the business property tax, but generate 62 percent of the state's economic activity," Gower said.

Meanwhile, retailers warned that a raise in a sales tax or other business taxes would only be passed on to the consumer, through higher prices.

"I believe that as price goes up for retail goods, products and services, sales go down and have a negative effect on the economy of Texas," said Jim "Mattress Mac" McIngvale, owner of Gallery Furniture. "Quite often in my furniture store here in Houston, people have to scale back on their purchases because they didn't figure in the 8 percent-plus sales tax."

Gov. George W. Bush is convinced that many Texans are upset with rising school property taxes, which now generates about $10 billion a year. Bush, via Bomer's committee, is seeking input concerning three options to replace the school property tax, as well as the possibility of a combination of alternatives:

- Business activity tax: a business tax applying to markup with a deduction for capital investment. Business activity is "the sum of all its internal costs, including profit," and would be about 40 percent of a company's gross receipts.

- Gross receipts tax: a business tax applying to the gross receipts on all business and investment income.

- Sales tax: making changes in the current 6.25 percent state sales tax, such as expanding it to items not now taxed.

When the homeowner managed to get a word in edgewise, his angry voice vented the view that the little guy keeps getting nailed.

Houston builder Thomas A. Bregel owns property in Bandera County in the Hill Country. He's fed up with counties there and in Houston floating taxpayer-backed, million-dollar bonds for schools that house few students.

"If you pay 25 years continuous into the school district, that should be it," said Bregel, one of the few non-businessmen granted the ear of the committee. "When you're 65, that should be it. You shouldn't have to pay for a school tax. The school systems around here are really Taj Majals.

"They passed a bond for $3.5 million dollars to build a school for 600 kids," Bregel said. "That's expensive."

Bregel even offered to build cheaper, but sound schools. Ones that are free of million-dollar auditoriums but teach basic reading skills.

"These kind of things need to stop," he said.

The property tax committee's next stop is Amarillo on Aug. 22. After all the public input is collected, the committee will report to Bush next month.

Investigators study timing of explosion

By PAT MILTON

Associated Press Writer
SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) - TWA Flight 800's center fuel tank may have blown up as much as 20 seconds after an initial explosion elsewhere in the aircraft, a source said.

The timing of the tank's explosion could help determine whether a bomb blew up the jumbo jet. Investigators know two explosions wracked the plane from the evidence on radar and from witnesses' accounts, and are trying to figure out the sequence of events.

A source close to the investigation said Tuesday that a review of the charred tank suggests it may have exploded seconds after an initial blast closer to the front of the plane.

"I don't think the fuel tank was the primary explosion," said the source, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

"Investigators are split," said the source. "Some believe there was an explosion in the forward part of the aircraft. As much as 20 seconds later, the fuel tank blew up, causing the large fireball. Others speculate that the tank may have been part of the initial blast."

"There is bending of metal but this bending we see says there was a low-energy fuel explosion," rather than the high-energy explosion of a bomb, the source said.

"We need to see the whole middle section, much of which is still missing."

Fugitive of the Week

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers announced this morning that a Fugitive of the Week has been arrested based on a tip received by telephone.

Raul Nava Jr., 18, was arrested on Tuesday after the tip was received that he was staying with a relative.

He was arrested without incident and transported to Deaf Smith County Jail, where he is being held without bail on a charge of violation of probation.

Nava was the second Fugitive of the Week arrested since the program began in recent months.

Crimestoppers Coordinator Sgt. Brent Harrison said the success of the program is attributed to local media, as well as Hereford and Deaf Smith County residents.

Callers to the Crimestoppers Clue Line (364-CLUE) who give information where fugitives are arrested receive a $100 reward.

Crimestoppers also offers rewards of up to $1,000 for its Crime of the Week and other criminal activity in which the tip leads to the arrest or indictment of the persons involved.

Also Wednesday, Crimestoppers announced that its Fugitive of the Week for this week was arrested before the announcement was even made.

Otis J. Roman, 20, was arrested after police received information about his whereabouts. He was arrested on two counts of felony violation of probation.

Volunteering gives opportunity to satisfy the need to be wanted

The volunteer program at Hereford Care Center is designed to give members of the community the opportunity to satisfy their need to be wanted.

The program, which not only benefits the individual volunteer but is also meaningful to the residents of the center, is in need of volunteers. Most residents enjoy visitors who like to chat or sometimes participate in a friendly game of cards, write letters or read.

Volunteers with special skills in gardening, woodworking, crafts and sewing can share their experience and talents.

Working as a volunteer is a good way for you or your group to add more meaning to life.

Fifty percent of Texas nursing home residents have no surviving spouse or family, and about 60 percent have no regular visitors. Volunteers can help brighten their days by visiting with them and being part of their lives.

Any group of three or more people can join the Adopt-A-Nursing Home program by committing to help with residents' activities at least four times a year.

For more information, please feel free to contact Carman Dotson, ADC at Hereford Care Center, at 364-7113 to discuss the volunteer program or the Adopt-A-Nursing Home program.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Is there such a thing as dog-bite etiquette? My husband and I are having a disagreement. We hope you will tell us what to do.

We were spending a week in the home of friends when their dog bit our son. Because of the bleeding and puncture marks, we decided to take him to the emergency room and have the bite looked at. It was cleaned up, and fortunately, no stitches were necessary. The child did not seem traumatized in any way. We returned to our friend's for the remainder of the week, and they kept the dog away from our son. We didn't realize at the time that our insurance had lapsed and the emergency room visit was not covered. The bill came to $160.

I say our friends should pay it. My husband says we should pay the bill and wait until our friends bring up the subject and hope they will offer to cover it. He feels it's not their fault that our insurance lapsed.

I say since THEIR dog did the biting, we should just tell them about the insurance problem and hand them the bill. In my opinion, they should have offered to pay it in the first place. We have agreed to abide by your decision, Ann. What is it? -- Stymied in Minneapolis

Dear Mpls: I agree that the hosts should have offered to pay the emergency room bill, but since they did not, I wouldn't make an issue of it.

It could be that your son antagonized the dog in some way. I recommend that you pay the bill and not risk the friendship.

Dear Ann Landers: You printed some stories about dogs attacking children. Can I get in the "dog fight"? Some of your readers need educating. The problem is not the dogs, it's the owners.

No one should own a dog unless he or she is prepared to teach that dog good manners and the basics of obedience. A well-trained dog is a happy dog. -- East Coast Reader.

Dear East Coaster: Amen, brother. Keep reading for more on the subject.

Dear Ann Landers: This is in response to the letter about dogs attacking children. The dogs were of the large variety, such as Rottweilers, but the problem is not the breed, Ann, it's how the owners treat, train and care for their pets.

Dogs need attention, discipline and affection. Training a dog to respond to commands and keeping it under control at all times is essential, especially with large dogs. There are scores of excellent books on the correct methods for training dogs. They should be studied before getting a pet. Also, make the dog a part of the family. Train it, love it and teach children to be gentle with the dog. It will respond in kind. -- J.C., Pensacola, Fla.

Dear Pensacola: Thanks for the wise counsel. And now for the closer:

Dear Ann Landers: I volunteer at an animal shelter and believe NO dog is born vicious. They are taught to be vicious by owners who abuse them. When dogs are neglected, their trust is violated and they defend themselves the only way they know how, by mistrusting all people.

Neglect means leaving them tied up so they can't exercise. It means not providing a shelter in bad weather, not feeding them regularly or replenishing their water bowls and not providing veterinary checkups. The worst neglect is ignoring them. -- T.J., Beacon, N.Y.

Dear T.J.: Thanks for the excellent windup. Your comments were right on.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $5.15.)

Spikers get started

The Hereford High School varsity volleyball team began two-a-day practice on Monday as they look toward the opening of the 1996 season and what they hope is a return trip to the Class 4A state championship tournament -- and a win to go with their 1995 runner-up title. Here, members of the team worked on spiking, blocking and setting skills under the watchful eye of head coach Brenda Reeh.

Could AL playoffs actually be coming to Arlington?

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)-- Could the AL playoffs actually be coming to Arlington, the town the baseball gods forgot?

Since 1972 the Texas Rangers have been in their own personal Bermuda Triangle. Somewhere, somehow all their playoff ambitions vanished along the way.

A team of dimstore mannequins or circus clowns could have tied the Rangers for the numbers of pennants they have won. As in none.

It's been a sad history of clueless owners, bad trades, horrible draft picks, atrocious managing and a level of play that would make an American Legion team cringe.

Today Texas fans are being teased and tempted by the best team they've ever had. General manager Doug Melvin and manager Johnny Oates have put together a club that's played the best baseball people in this part of the country have ever seen.

The Rangers starting pitching has produced victories second only to the Atlanta Braves.

The defense is the best in the American League.

The hitting is right there with any team in baseball.

Is this really happening? Is this just somehow a tempting baseball mirage?

Melvin has made some bold moves and been right more times than he has been wrong.

Oates has shown he is a shrewd manager, who is calm in crisis but will also kick over tables in the clubhouse if he thinks his player's need an adrenalin boost.

Oates has had a reputation of not being able to handle pitchers. Enter Dick Bosman who can and does.

Melvin had the guts to trade Jose Canseco and sign Kevin Elster, Darryl Hamilton and Ken Hill. He had the smarts to trade for Mike Stanton and somehow get John Burkett through the waiver wire list out of Florida.

Oates had the smarts to have faith in Rusty Greer and entice Juan Gonzalez into the best hitting and fielding season in his career.

Elster has been amazing. He's had over 18 homers and 70 RBI, hit over .250, and played a spotless shortstop with only 10 errors. What if Melvin and Oates hadn't taken a chance of Elster, who was thought over-the-hill by most baseball gurus? Benji Gil had a back operation during the spring

Ex-Cowboy arrested

DALLAS (AP)--Former Dallas Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin was arrested on misdemeanor harassment and assault charges Tuesday after fighting with his girlfriend, officials said.

The arrest was the second time in six months the 45-year-old former All-Pro player faced assault charges involving Debbie Clark, 37.

Martin posted bond and was taken to a hospital for observation on a temporary mental illness warrant on the order of a county magistrate, sheriff's department officials said.

Carolina tries to ink Biakabutuka; Cowboys worry about team depth

By The Associated Press
Representatives for Tshimanga Biakabutuka, drafted to give the Carolina Panthers a running attack to go with the passing of second-year quarterback Kerry Collins, are talking with the team again.

Tuesday was the 25th day of the holdout by Biakabutuka, drafted by the Panthers with the eighth overall pick out of Michigan. The negotiations have been punctuated by acrimony, skipped meetings and unreturned phone calls.

"I'm very optimistic that we'll get it done," Panthers president Mike McCormack said Tuesday night after Carolina finished a workout at Wofford College in Spartanburg, S.C.

Carolina last week withdrew its offer of a seven-year, $12.5-million contract with a signing bonus of more than $5 million, and broke off talks. Biakabutuka vowed to sit out the entire season.

McCormack said the Panthers put an offer back on the table Tuesday, when they spoke repeatedly by telephone with Biakabutuka's representatives.

Also on Tuesday, Panthers coach Tom Cappers said he was moving Blake Brockermeyer, one of Carolina's star rookies last year, from left to right tackle, leaving converted tight end Mathew Campbell to deal with the NFL's best pass rushers.

Cappers said he was making the change because of several injuries that have thinned the line during training camp and because of Campbell's rapid progress at his new position.

Pro Bowl offensive tackle Mark Tuinei will be out 2-4 weeks after rupturing the medial collateral ligament in his right knee.

Tuinei was injured Monday night in a 31-7 exhibition loss to New England.

Switzer said he will switch Pro

Bowl right guard Larry Allen to replace Tuinei at left tackle. Third-year backup offensive lineman George Hegamin will replace Allen at right guard.

"Sometimes you've just got to play the default and hope they play well," Switzer said.

Switzer said the Cowboys have not eliminated the possibility of contacting offensive lineman Derek Kennard, who came out of retirement last year to help at center in place of injured starter Ray Donaldson.

Kennard, who has battled weight and motivation problems, was not brought back by Dallas this year.

"It's not the time of year he (Kennard) plays well," Switzer said. "He likes that cold weather, hog-killin' time. We don't know whether he wants to play. He would obviously fit us better than anyone out there, but I am sure he's not in condition."

Switzer said this week's injuries to Tuinei and backup receiver Orande Gadsden, on top of several others, have made the Cowboys "the thinnest team in football."

Redskins

Heath Shuler will start the game that will decide Washington's quarterback battle.

Coach Norv Turner said Shuler will play the first quarter and most of the second Friday night against the Cincinnati Bengals at RFK Stadium. Gus Frerotte will then take over, continuing with the first team through the third quarter and possibly into the fourth.

Baseball talks stalled by White Sox owner

NEW YORK (AP)--Baseball talks may remain on hold today while management negotiator Randy Levine tries to overcome the opposition of Chicago White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf.

With players and owners on the brink of a deal, Reinsdorf is opposed to giving players service time for the 75 regular-season days wiped out by the 232-day strike.

Levine spent Monday holed up in his office, speaking to about a dozen teams on the phone.

"We're anxiously waiting," union head Donald Fehr said, unsure when the next bargaining session will take place.

According to two owners who spoke on condition they not be identified, it appears most teams would support a deal giving players service time for the days wiped out by the 1994-95 strike if the union releases teams from legal damages they may have caused during the walkout.

Several owners and management officials, all speaking on the condition they not be identified, said Reinsdorf was opposed to that tradeoff and some said he was trying to get other teams to support him.

Union officials repeatedly have said there will not be a deal unless players get service time.

While Levine, in the words of one management official, attempted to get his "ducks in order," management lawyer Rob Manfred met with union official Lauren Rich in what was described as a technical session.

Mariners snap skid; Rangers win 5th straight

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

All was right in the Kingdom again.

Randy Johnson had batters flailing at air and the Mariners rallied like they did so many times last year.

So long, seven-game losing streak. Seattle, in jeopardy of playing itself out of the playoff picture with each successive loss, came back from a five-run deficit Tuesday night for a 9-5 win over the Kansas City Royals.

"That was awesome," Seattle starter Terry Mulholland said.

The victory ended the Mariners' eight-game home losing skid and gave them only their second win in 11 games. Seattle trails Texas by six games in the AL West and is five games behind in Chicago in the wild-card race.

Johnson, last season's AL Cy Young Award winner, was sidelined from May 12 to Aug. 6 because of a bulging disc. But in his third and longest appearance out of the bullpen since coming back, he looked like his old intimidating self.

Johnson recorded 12 outs - eight on strikeouts - and gave up one hit in helping Mulholland (1-1) get his first win for Seattle after coming over in a trade last month.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was: Chicago 8, New York 4; Boston 7, Toronto 5; Baltimore 4, Milwaukee 3; Texas 6, Detroit 2; California 4, Cleveland 2, and Minnesota 6, Oakland 2.

Jay Buhner ignited the Mariners' comeback with a three-run homer and Johnson closed out the game with a dominant pitching display that gave him his second career save.

Johnson said he's not quite ready to start despite manager Lou Piniella's desire to have him pitch in New York next Monday or Tuesday.

"I'm going to start when I feel ready to start, and right now I don't feel I'm ready to start," Johnson said. "It's as simple as that. I threw 52 pitches. That's not 120. It's far from it. That's what I normally throw in a nine-inning game."

Rangers 6, Tigers 2

At Arlington, Texas, Will Clark's first home run since June 1 snapped a sixth-inning tie and Roger Pavlik picked up his first win in a month.

Texas has won five straight. Clark, mired in a 10-for-56 slump, broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth with his seventh homer, a shot off Omar Olivares (7-8).

Pavlik (13-6) snapped a personal four-game losing skid by allowing two runs and five hits in seven innings for his first win since July 13.

White Sox 8, Yankees 4

At Chicago, Robin Ventura hit a 3-0 pitch from David Weathers (0-2) over the wall in right for his ninth career grand slam to lead the White Sox.

Ventura's shot capped a five-run fifth inning made possible by a costly error on Yankees' second baseman Pat Kelly, who was making just his second start there this season.

Harold Baines, who ended Monday night's game with a homer in the 10th, hit his 20th for Chicago.

Mike Bertotto (1-0) picked up the win.

Paul O'Neill and Bernie Williams homered for the Yankees.

Red Sox 7, Blue Jays 5

At Toronto, Wil Cordero drove in two runs in his first game since coming off the disabled list with a broken leg.

The Red Sox have won 9 of 11. The forgettable game featured 10 pitchers, all going less than four innings. There were also 13 walks, two errors, two wild pitches, two passed balls, two hit batsmen and 23 runners left on base.

Jacob Brumfield and Shawn Green homered for Toronto.

Orioles 4, Brewers 3

At Baltimore, the Orioles used five walks and a sacrifice fly to score three runs in the eighth.

Baltimore finished with only two hits, but took advantage of 10 walks by four Milwaukee pitchers to win for the sixth time in eight games.

Milwaukee has lost eight straight, the Brewers worst skid since dropping 14 in a row in 1994.

Jeff Cirillo and Dave Nilsson homered for the Brewers.

Angels 4, Indians 2

At Anaheim, Calif., Garret Anderson drove in the go-ahead run in the sixth inning and threw out a potential tying run in the seventh as the Angels won for only the third time in 15 games.

Jim Edmonds and J.T. Snow homered for California.

Shawn Boskie (11-7) allowed two runs and 10 hits in seven innings for his first win in four decisions.

Troy Percival got three outs for his 28th save.

Albert Belle hit his 39th homer and Kenny Lofton added his 12th for the Indians.

Twins 6, Athletics 2

At Oakland, Calif., Matt Lawton's two-run single highlighted a five-run eighth inning that included two Oakland errors as Minnesota overcame Mark McGwire's 42nd homer.

Rick Aguilera (6-4) pitched seven innings for his fourth straight win.

Rich Becker and Paul Molitor ignited the Twins' rally with back-to-back singles to chase Don Wengert (5-8).

McGwire's homer in the sixth was Oakland's 194th this year. The A's are on pace to surpass the major league record of 240 set by the New York Yankees in 1961, the same year Roger Maris set the individual mark of 61. McGwire needs 19 homers in the final 41 games to tie Maris' mark.

Maddux shines as Braves win pair; Expos ground Astros again

By The Associated Press

Greg Maddux's losing streak is over and Terry Pendleton is on his way back to the Atlanta Braves. Suddenly the best team in baseball is a couple steps closer to being even better.

Maddux broke his longest losing streak in eight years with an eight-hitter Tuesday night to lead Atlanta to a 2-0 victory over Philadelphia in the first game of a doubleheader.

Atlanta won the nightcap, too, beating the Phillies 5-2 with a seventh inning rally highlighted by Mark Whiten's three-run pinch-homer.

Earlier in the day, Atlanta acquired Pendleton, the 1991 MVP, from Florida for minor league outfielder Roosevelt Brown.

"I've never gone from fourth place to first in one day," the 36-year-old third baseman said. "It does feel good that a contender wants to take a shot at you and says, 'This is the guy who can get us over the hump.'"

Atlanta increased its lead over second-place Montreal to seven games despite the Expos' 7-4 victory over Houston. In other games, it was Florida 5, Colorado 0; Cincinnati 10, San Diego 4; Chicago 3, New York 2; Los Angeles 8, St. Louis 4, and San Francisco 12, Pittsburgh 10.

Maddux (11-10), who snapped a personal four-game losing streak - his longest in six years - had lost his previous three starts against the Phillies this season. He also had lost seven straight games on the road, his only road victory coming on April 27 against St. Louis.

In the second game, Matt Beech had a three-hit shutout going into the seventh before Whiten, who was released by the Phillies on June 24, connected for his 10th homer of the season.

Grissom followed with his 18th home run to extend his hitting streak to 18 games. He also had an RBI groundout in the ninth.

Expos 7, Astros 4

At Montreal, Moises Alou hit a pair of two-run homers, one off Doug Drabek (6-8) in the first and another, his 16th, in the second. Mike Lansing added a three-run shot during a five-run second for Montreal, which won its third straight.

Pedro Martinez (10-7) allowed four runs and five hits in seven-plus innings to earn just his second win in eight career decisions against Houston. Mel Rojas got four outs for his 22nd save.

Marlins 5, Rockies 0

At Miami, Al Leiter pitched seven shutout innings and new third baseman Kurt Abbott drove in two runs.

Leiter (12-10), who pitched a no-hitter against the Rockies in May, held them to two hits before he departed after throwing 112 pitches. He walked six and struck out seven. Abbott, making his first start at third after the Marlins traded Pendleton to Atlanta earlier in the day, had a pair of two-out RBI singles against Kevin Ritz (13-8).

Reds 10, Padres 4

At Cincinnati, Hal Morris capitalized on the early wildness of Joey Hamilton (10-7) by hitting a three-run double in the first inning.

Cincinnati starter Kevin Jarvis (5-5) allowed seven hits in seven innings for the win that ended the Padres' four-game winning streak.

Barry Larkin and Eric Davis both homered for the Reds, who snapped a three-game losing streak.

Cubs 3, Mets 2

At New York, Amaury Telemaco allowed just two hits over 7 2-3 innings and Chicago held off a ninth-inning rally.

Telemaco (5-6), a 22-year-old right-hander who had two losses and five no-decisions in his last seven starts, struck out five and walked two.

Jose Hernandez and Dave Magadan each hit solo home runs off Pete Harnisch (8-8) and Luis Gonzales had an RBI groundout. Turk Wendell got his 12th save by retiring pinch-hitter Chris Jones on a groundout with two runners on base after New York had scored twice.

Dodgers 8, Cardinals 4

At St. Louis, Tim Lincecum drove in two runs, giving him eight RBIs in three games with Los Angeles.

Wallach had a run-scoring single in the second and walked with the bases loaded off Todd Stottlemyre (10-8) in a six-run third as the Dodgers won their fourth in a row.

Chad Curtis also had two RBIs, Eric Karros homered and Raul Mondesi had three hits, including two doubles, an RBI and two runs scored.

Giants 12, Pirates 10

At Pittsburgh, Rick Wilkins pinch-hit a grand slam in the eighth inning as San Francisco came back from a five-run deficit.

The Giants, who have won four of six since snapping a seven-game losing streak, won despite allowing a grand slam by rookie Jerome Allensworth - the record-setting 10th of the year off San Francisco pitchers.

Ten years ago: U.S. officials announced that members of Mexico's police force had abducted, interrogated and tortured Victor Cortez Jr., a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent.

Five years ago: Freed American hostage Edward Tracy returned to the United States, arriving in Boston, where he was reunited with his sister, Maria Lambert. President Bush expressed "100 percent" support for United Nations efforts to mediate a settlement to the Middle East hostage crisis.

One year ago: Shannon Faulkner officially became the first female cadet in the history of The Citadel, South Carolina's state military college. (However, Faulkner quit the school less than a week later, citing the stress of her court fight, and her isolation among the male cadets.)

1996 Property Tax Rates in HOSPITAL DISTRICT

This notice concerns 1996 property tax rates for Hospital District. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Forensic students see, smell death

By JEN SANBURY
Waco Tribune-Herald
WACO, Texas - The putrid smell of death takes some getting used to. But with a little sense of humor and a mission to solve mysteries, forensic anthropology students at Baylor University are learning to overcome it.

"At first it's like, 'Oh my God, I can't believe anything smells that bad,'" said Waco native Erica Muller, a Louisiana graduate student who returned to Baylor this summer for a forensic field study course.

The students learn to recognize and appreciate the odor. After all, it may lead them to find a body and provide closure to both families and investigators.

Susan Maki-Wallace, an assistant professor in Baylor's Department of Anthropology, teaches graduate and undergraduate classes in forensic anthropology as well as the summer field study.

Baylor is one of only a handful of universities in the country that offer anthropology master's degrees with a forensic specialty. The undergraduate program is also rare, Maki-Wallace said.

Maki-Wallace said the courses offer students, particularly pre-med students, a rare chance for exposure to cadavers prior to medical school.

"Most of these students have never seen death; they've never smelled it," Maki-Wallace said. "You don't usually get to this level of forensics in undergraduate school. It's so much hands-on stuff."

Forensic anthropology is the identification of skeletal remains. Law enforcement agencies call in forensic anthropologists when they are searching for missing bodies or when found cadavers are unrecognizable.

"It's when the body is in a state that it can't be identified (such as) when it's burnt or decomposed," Maki-Wallace said.

One of the best-known cases Maki-Wallace has worked on is the 1994 disappearance and death of Lela Blanche Hickson of Robinson. She identified the Hickson's torso, which was discovered on a Bosque County ranch; her skull had earlier been found along the shore of Lake Waco.

Maki-Wallace teaches her students basic osteology, the science of bones, such as how to tell a chicken bone from a human foot bone. She also teaches them to apply that knowledge to case work. The students learn to determine sex, race, height and other characteristics of a person by looking at skeletal remains.

"That's something that no one is trained to do except a forensic anthropologist," Maki-Wallace said.

On partially decomposed bodies, the students learn how to tell abuse from ant bites, which can look similar, or how long a person has been dead based on the insect activity on the body.

Texas Department of Public Safety investigator Jacky Wallace, Maki-Wallace's husband, helps teach the students how to decipher gunshot wounds.

Maki-Wallace's students also develop a keen eye for finding bodies by searching for clues and things that may seem out of place around a crime scene or place where someone may have disappeared.

"I just like the whole puzzle itself - the cause of death, the motive," said Mario Cantu, an anthropology/pre-med senior. "It's putting together a mystery."

In preparation for the field study program, Maki-Wallace in January buried a dead chimpanzee, frozen for 15 years, on land she and her husband own in Oglesby. The students in her summer program found the animal by using their sight and smell.

Forensic anthropology students come from various disciplines at Baylor and take the courses for different reasons.

Jennifer McCampbell, a psychology senior, wants to become a forensic psychologist and develop profiles of criminals, such as serial killers.

Adriano Salicru, a biochemistry/anthropology major, is interested in the chemical aspects of decomposition.

Jason Hogue, an anthropology senior who is specializing in forensic photography, wants to work in a medical examiner's office doing "everything but autopsies."

All would benefit, Maki-Wallace said, if there were a forensic training institute nearby. She has researched the possibility of opening such a facility in McLennan County and envisions a county medical examiner's office working in partnership with Baylor.

McLennan County has no medical examiner's office. Bodies and evidence needing forensic lab work are sent to Dallas or Fort Worth, costing the county more than $150,000 a year, county officials said last year.

Baylor students do not have access to autopsy rooms at those facilities. A training facility would give the Baylor students a laboratory to learn in while providing free services to the county, Maki-Wallace said.

"It's just all in the talking stage right now," she said. "We each have something to offer each other."

As a public service, Maki-Wallace and her students already provide help to law enforcement officials in Central Texas. She and Hogue recently went to Lampasas County to help identify charred bones found there.

Earlier this summer, the Baylor forensic field school group drove to Dade County, Fla., to participate in a one-week course at the medical examiner's department there. They participated in more than 25 different types of autopsies, including those of some victims of the ValuJet Flight 592 crash in May.

It was the first time for many of the students to see an autopsy.

Maki-Wallace said the Dade County facility is the only medical examiner's office in the country that gives access to college students. What she envisions for Baylor and McLennan County would be the second, she said.

"If the county ever had a medical examiner, we would have all this expertise (available)," Maki-Wallace said. "There's so much we could do if we had a facility here."

Real cowboys wear only starched, creased clothes

By TANYA BELL
Colorado Springs
Gazette Telegraph
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.
(AP) - Rodeo lesson No. 1: Don't be a "jick."

A jick is rodeo slang for someone who tries - and fails - to look like a real cowboy, someone who wears a $10 straw hat, a yellow shirt and a pair of wrinkled jeans that aren't Wranglers.

Rodeos have their own dress codes every bit as precise as those at a Wall Street brokerage house.

"Everybody thinks cowboys are these dusty guys in dirty clothes, but they're actually very clean and neat," said Steve Fleming, director of communications for the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, the sport's governing body.

"Starched and creased clothes are a must."

Jay Pool, a 24-year-old calf roper from Big Lake, Texas, competing in the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo, said heavy starch makes clothes last longer. Starching also allows the traveling cowboy to fold his jeans and not have to worry about unsightly horizontal creases.

"I can wear my Wranglers for three days," he said.

Notice he didn't say jeans. Wranglers are de rigueur.

"They fit better and they go around your boots easier," said bull rider Tyler Martin. And they are cut with riding in mind. They've got more room in the seat and thigh, and tend not to "ride up."

So before you say you're a cowboy, at least look the part. Ask for heavy starch at the cleaners.

Images show Europa's crust sliding on geysers

By JANE E. ALLEN
AP Science Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - New images of Europa, Jupiter's frozen moon, suggest that its fractured crust of icy slabs could be sliding on a layer of slush or even water - the fundamental ingredient for life, scientists say.

The latest images from the unmanned Galileo spacecraft, taken 96,000 miles from Europa's surface, show its surface dotted by a series of dark spots that could indicate slush-spewing geysers.

"It's really exciting," Ronald Greeley, an Arizona State University geology professor, said Tuesday. He described the surface as resembling "ice floes on polar seas on Earth."

Europa's features are particularly interesting in light of NASA's announcement last week that it might have found evidence of primitive microbial life on Mars.

NASA Administrator Daniel S. Goldin called the Galileo images "exciting and compelling" but cautioned against jumping to conclusions about life on the icy moon.

"A few days ago I greeted the possibility of ancient microbial life on Mars with skeptical optimism, and invited further scientific examination and debate. I greet the new pictures of Europa in the same light," he said in a statement.

Galileo's pictures, taken June 27, let scientists "see details not even suspected" from pictures returned in 1979 by the Voyager spacecraft, Greeley said. For example, the icy slabs appear thinner than scientists thought.

The presence of slush would add additional weight to the argument that Europa is not frozen solid, but has water within its layer of ice. Strong tidal forces could be cracking the crust, Greeley said, adding that the more geologically active Europa turns out to be, the more likely it is to have niches that could harbor life.

The images, which captured a chunk of terrain as large as the United States west of the Mississippi, show dark bands crisscrossing the globe. The bands give the appearance of a great interstate highway system, with lanes up to 6 miles wide and extending thousands of miles in length, scientists said.

Even before NASA's announcement, geologists, planetary scientists and exobiologists - the specialists who look for life in other environments - planned to gather in mid-November in San Juan Capistrano to examine the potential for life on Europa.

Scientists are anxiously anticipating even better pictures from a December flyby, when Galileo will pass within 600 miles of Europa, roughly the size of Earth's moon.

In other findings Tuesday: - An image of Jupiter's volcanic moon Io taken June 28 shows a new, blue-colored plume of sulfur dioxide spewing 60 miles up from a New Jersey-sized expanse called Ra Patera, scientists announced. Sulfur dioxide molecules could be breaking apart, because the plume glows in the dark, they said.

In addition, Alfred McEwen of the University of Arizona said the pictures are showing that Io has large, red expanses, "closely associated with recent volcanic deposits" around a volcano named Pele.

- From pictures taken June 26, Andrew Ingersoll of the California Institute of Technology found long-sought evidence of thunderstorm clouds on Jupiter. They turned up north of Jupiter's Great Red Spot, a lingering hurricane twice as big as Earth with 250 mph winds.

Dallas teen earns two CMA award nominations

By JIM PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - The unassuming attitude of Vince Gill has apparently rubbed off on Texas teen singing phenom LeAnn Rimes, the youngest performer ever nominated for a Country Music Association award.

Rimes, 13, became an overnight success when her Patsy Cline-like single "Blue" raced to the top of the charts this year. She vowed Tuesday not to get "the big head" after picking up nominations for best single and The Horizon Award for most promising artist.

Gill was the top nominee, with seven including one for the top honor of entertainer of the year. Rimes has opened shows for Gill.

"That's cool," Rimes said Tuesday of her CMA nominations. The Dallas-based singer is two years younger than Tanya Tucker when Tucker earned her first CMA nomination.

"People tell me I've sold 129,000 albums in a week," Rimes said. "That gets to me for about an hour, and then I come back down to earth. I'm just not letting it get to my head, so I don't get the big head."

Gill is the most awarded performer in CMA history, with 15 trophies. He will also host the CBS special at 8 p.m. EDT Oct. 2 when the winners are announced.

Gill was told he is the leading nominee while golfing at his pro-celebrity invitational tournament. He downplayed his status as the most-nominated performer, saying he stood a good chance of going "oh-for-seven" when the awards were handed out.

"This could be the biggest skunking in history," Gill quipped. In addition to the entertainer award, he is up for best male vocalist, album, single, song, music video and vocal event.

The nominations were announced at a news conference by singers Lorrie Morgan and Marty Stuart. Some 7,000 industry workers will choose the winners.

Shania Twain, the best-selling country music artist of the past two years, won a measure of respect with two nominations, one of them for best female vocalist.

Garth Brooks joins Gill in the race for best entertainer, along with George Strait, the duo Brooks & Dunn and 1995 winner Alan Jackson.

Newcomer Bryan White and Collin Raye join old hands Gill, Jackson and Strait in the best male vocalist race. Twain, Faith Hill, Martina McBride, Pam Tillis and Patty Loveless are up for best female vocalist.

McBride's "Wild Angels" and Loveless' "The Trouble With the Truth" are up for best album, against offerings by Strait, Brooks & Dunn and Gill.

"It's good to see the girls getting recognized," said Loveless, who won the award last year for her album "When Fallen Angels Fly."

Two women who didn't get recognized much in the nominations were Alison Krauss and Reba McEntire. Krauss won four awards in 1995 including best female vocalist, but garnered no nominations Tuesday. McEntire got one nomination for vocal event, but did not receive her customary nominations for best female vocalist and entertainer this time around.

Soldier to receive military funeral 132 years after death

By RICK CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The skull of "Rebel Butler" spent 70 years in a dusty display case, an undignified end for a Confederate soldier who gave his life in the Civil War's Battle of Spotsylvania.

But 132 years after that battle, Butler will finally receive a military funeral - complete with a procession and 18-gun salute - on Aug. 24 at the Confederate Cemetery in Spotsylvania, Va.

"It's still a mystery who he was, but he'll be buried right with other soldiers killed in the same battle," said Wayne Retter, a member of the Sons of Confederate Veterans in Fredericksburg, Va.

The plans began earlier this year when Betty Lou Heintz, curator of the Henry County Historical Society

Museum in New Castle, Ind., came across a skull marked "Rebel Butler." She found it while cataloging the museum's American Indian remains to comply with a new federal law seeking their reburial.

Museum records show that an assistant surgeon with the 46th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry removed the skull from the battlefield a year after the May 1864 battle.

The skull was donated to the museum in 1923 and remained on display there until the early 1990s, when it was put in storage, Heintz said Tuesday. Heintz next week will personally deliver the skull to Retter, who has arranged the burial in a donated, child-sized casket.

The battle that claimed Rebel Butler's life was the first in a series of confrontations between Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee and Union Gen. Ulysses S. Grant called the Overland Campaign.

About 5,000 soldiers were killed during that campaign, but historian Robert Krick said it was highly unusual for bones to have been removed from the battlefield.

"I don't know of another case where a skull was carried home as a souvenir," he said. "It sounds like Vietnam, not the Civil War."

Russell Stover to build candy plant in Corsicana

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) - Russell Stover will build a candy plant in this Texas town now that plans for a new grease and fat processing facility have been scuttled.

District Judge Kenneth A. "Buck" Douglas formalized a deal Tuesday that the town will pay Griffin Industries $1.3 million for its 366-acre site, preventing it from building the facility.

In return, the rendering company agreed to drop all legal claims against the city and Navarro County. Griffin was suing the city of Corsicana over a new ordinance prohibiting slaughterhouse or rendering facilities.

Russell Stover had committed in April 1995 to build a plant that would create candy and at least 600 jobs. But the candy-maker claimed odors from the Griffin facility would contaminate its sweets, a charge Griffin vehemently denied.

"I think it's time to get on with making some candy," Russell Stover's co-president and chief operating officer, Tom Ward, said after learning of the out-of-court settlement.

About 2,000 people protested the proposed plant at a state hearing in June, citing environmental concerns and the possible discouragement of other factories, like Kansas City-based candy-maker Russell Stover.

Construction of the 400,000-square-foot candy plant, estimated to cost $60 million, will begin next spring. Candy will start rolling off production lines in 20 to 22 months, he said.

Griffin officials are withdrawing air and water permit applications filed with the state and now will focus on finding another place to construct the plant.

"It was a good piece of property, but now we will start searching for another," said Bill Shirley, part-owner of Griffin Industries. "We have never had this problem anywhere else. We weren't going to contaminate the water or ruin the air."
