While Resting In Germany...

Former Hostages Calling Loved Ones

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The 52 former hostages, safe in American hands at last and enjoying their first taste of freedom in 14½ months, settled into a U.S. military hospital today and made their first telephone calls to families in the United States.

"First of all there was a very heavy run on the telephones," said State Department spokesman Jack Cannon.

The Americans, 50 men and two women checked into the hospital at dawn, after their dramatic release from Iranian captivity and a freedom flight to West Germany via Algeria.

Just after noon, some of the hostages appeared on the balconies of the hospital, bantering with hospital personnel in the bright sunlight. Orderlies tossed up a copy of the military newspaper Stars and Stripes to a group of four young men, who autographed the newspaper and threw it back down.

Two other men, wearing pajamas and bathrobes, hopped over the railings separating each room's balcony, and joined the other four. They waved when they noticed photographers about 200 yards away.

Elizabeth Ann Swift, who was a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and one of the two women in the group, also came out to enjoy the sparkling, crisp day and her new freedom.

Asked how much notice they received in Iran of their impending freedom, Cannon told reporters at a briefing that he thought "some individuals had little notice, as little as 15 to 20 minutes." Others, he said, had several days, but he did not elaborate.

Cannon said he knew of no former captive who was suffering immediate medical problems. He said the returnees were free to leave the hospital if they wish, but they were advised that previous returnees found an orientation period in seclusion valuable.

He said the former hostages would remain in the hospital for "perhaps several days" for medical tests, orientation, catching up on world events through magazines, newspapers and videotapes and being debriefed by "a number of agencies of the government."

The Americans "suffered far more than they should have suffered," Cannon said. "For freedom-loving peoples everywhere this is a very happy day."

Tell Tales Of Brutality At Hands Of Militants

By The Associated Press

The emancipated hostages told of beatings and other atrocities at the hands of the Iranian captors today as they telephoned their loved ones back home.

One said he was beaten and placed in solitary confinement for more than five months after he tried to escape. Another said he was told by Iranian interrogators trying to extract information from him that his mother had died. He didn't learn that she was still alive until the freed captives reached West Germany this morning.

As they began a stay of several days at a U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, most of the 52 hostages talked with their families for the first time in 445 days. Most reported they were now "doing fine."

Col. Leland Holland, 53, security chief of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, called his 79-year-old mother in Scales Mound, Ill., before dawn.

"He said he had spent a month in what he called the 'dungeon' and said his captors were S.O.B.s," said the colonel's mother, Clara Holland. "He said, 'I didn't fare as badly as some of them did.' He said his house was ransacked and everything taken, including his watch and rings. They took all the furniture and clothes."

Duane "Sam" Gillette called his parents in Columbia, Pa., and Andrew Appel, a spokesman for the family, said later:

"His treatment was at times digusting. I think President Reagan was polite when he termed the Iranians barbarians.

"We know that his letters were covering up what the real situation was. There was no physical torture, but there was psychological pressure. The food wasn't good, and the conditions were very poor."

The family of Malcolm Kalp in Brockton, Mass., said they learned today that the reason nobody back home heard from him during the 444 days of captivity was that he tried to escape and was punished.

Kalp, 43, talked for about half an hour with his brother, Richard Kalp.

"He told us he tried to escape several times," Richard Kalp's wife said. "That sounded like him. He said he had written us often and asked if we had received any of his letters. We told him we hadn't and he said he had never received any of ours."

"He told us he was beaten by them and placed in solitary confinement because of his escape attempts," said Kalp's sister-in-law, Linda Kalp. She said he served from 150 days to 170 days in solitary, but she didn't know if it was all served at once.

U.S. Marine Sgt. Johnny McKell Jr. told his parents in Balch Springs, Texas, that interrogators told him his mother had died.

Young McKeel quoted the interrogator as saying, "Your mother is dead and if you want to go back to the funeral, you'll have to tell us what we want to know."

The Marine said he gave only his name, rank and serial number. A guard knocked out one of his teeth.

On a happier note, Barbara Timm, in Oak Creek, Wis., said she had a "very private and very beautiful" telephone conversation with her son Kevin Hermening early this morning.

State Employees Want More

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Thousands of state employees have rejected a proposal by Gov. Bill Clements that would raise their monthly pay by 3.4 percent Feb. 1. They said they want at least twice as much.

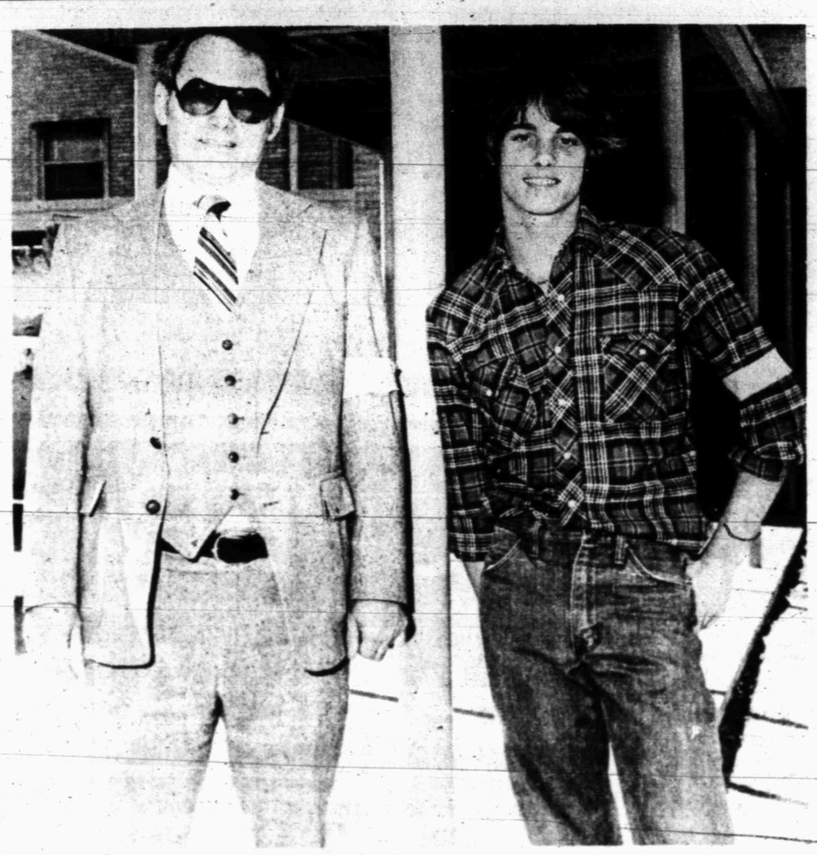

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, the boss of 2,300 employees himself, said Tuesday Clements' emergency proposal would "do very little to relieve inflation-racked employee paychecks" and "borders on being an insult."

Anything less than a 6.8 percent increase, with a $50 minimum, "is a dishonest attempt to deal with a very serious problem," added Bullock in a letter to Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

East Texans Rejecting Cubans

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Pressure from local and state officals may have derailed a plan to resettle Cuban refugees in East Texas, says the personnel manager of a religious organization involved in relocation efforts.

"It appears we just don't have the community support down there," Stevie Shaw of World Relief International said Tuesday.

The SDN Column

We have a new president today, and it has been a long time since the country as a whole awaited the change of command in the White House with so much anticipation.

A group was discussing this the other day and one of the younger ones suggested that Ronald Reagan was taking the president's chair with the greatest mandate ever issued by American voters.

Some of us who remember disagreed. However, we would concede that it is the greatest mandate since 1932 when Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected to his first term. There are other similarities, and then there are some wide differences between the election of 1932 and that of 1980. The country has many of the same symptoms, and the economy is considered the biggest factor in swinging both elections.

But the economic problems of today are at the opposite end of the pole from those of 1932. Today it is too much money--inflation--that is on everybody's mind. In 1930, it was too little--acute deflation--that had people on the ropes.

Roosevelt's game plan was sufficient to get him elected four times. It will be interesting to observe Reagan's approach the situation today. Although Roosevelt made some quick moves after he was inaugurated, there was no miraculous, overnight change. There also will be no miracles this time, but it is obvious that the people want some changes. Let us hope that some of the more zealous passengers on the Reagan bandwagon don't get too impatient.

It is amazing how much more interesting basketball has become to a lot of us since the Dallas Cowboys were eliminated from the Super Bowl race. It's not that we weren't attending basketball games back in December while the football championships were still up for grabs, but now we can give it our undivided attention.

And did you know that those guys who wear the striped shirts at basketball games can't see much better than some of the National Football League game officials? They are not quite that bad, but almost.

However, after watching some junior college games Saturday night, we felt that the teams did deserve someone who could toss the ball up at something better than a 45-degree angle on a tipoff.

And, like the football telecasts, it is amazing how much advice old former coaches-turned-commentators have for the present-day teams.

For example, Al McGuire, who coached Marquette to a national title a few years ago, has a lot more solutions these days behind the microphone than he did when he was coaching, and he he is always anxious to tell us about them.

But for comedy, it is difficult to beat the post-game dressing room interviews after pro football games. We have long suspicioned that dressing room interviews in both print and electronic media were much less interesting to the public than we used to think. Now, the TV networks have pretty well confirmed it. We can't remember when we saw or heard a fresh comment, or a fresh question, in such an interview. About the most interesting things about team dressing rooms now are the arguments over who will be admitted and when. But now that women are demanding their "rights" to walk right in, we at least may have a change of scenery, if not of pace.

Release Of Hostages Sparks Activity Here

Bells rang, music played, and yellow armbands were in evidence Tuesday across Snyder as news of the release of the 52 American hostages spread.

At Snyder High School, while students donned yellow armbands, the fire bell was rung and then the victory bell was sounded.

"It was to commemorate the release of the hostages and just to be patriotic," said Roger Overton, 18, the son of Mrs. Vonnie Overton, who was partly responsible for the show of armbands. "It was to show that we care."

The idea of wearing yellow armbands was first suggested to the students by Jerry Worsham, the drama teacher. Overton said he, Donnie Morrell and Rayme Marlo took the idea and spread it.

He estimated 120 students, plus several more teachers, were wearing armbands by day's end.

"We had quite a few people who wanted to wear them," he said. "It made me feel real good."

Meanwhile, churches participated.

Music was played over public address systems or bells sounded at First Baptist Church, Colonial Hill Baptist, Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, and St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church.

"We've been playing it off and on all day," said church secretary Mariam Sullivan of the music at First Baptist.

At Joe Graham Cleaners an ancient steam whistle was blown, and at Western Texas College chimes were played.

Some of the patriotic displays were performed at the urging of Leon Franks, a Jaycee.

"Caring," said Franks, "that's what it's all about. Caring and trying to get everyone else to."

Lawyer Cited For Contempt

In a surprise turn of events this morning in a criminal trial, the defendant was freed and a lawyer jailed.

Jailed on a contempt of court citation issued by 132nd District Court Judge Wayland G. Holt was Sweetwater lawyer Lance Hall, attorney for murder defendant Don Alton Durst.

Durst, meanwhile, is free on $50,000 bond.

Hall was initially tossed into the pokey for three days, but was actually in jail only about an hour before Judge Holt discovered he had to serve Hall a 10-day notice.

Hall, however, isn't out of hot water yet. He has 10 days to show why he should not be held in contempt of court. Should he prove unable to do so he'll be visiting the county lockup again. If he is able to show why he should not be held in contempt, he'll be a free man.

Why the change of heart? "I have to (turn him loose)," said Holt. "It's not a matter of me wanting to. It's a matter of serving him 10 days' notice."

The contempt of court ruling was made when Hall, for the first time during the proceedings, announced that the trial would have to be delayed again, this time for six or seven months, because

Housing Major Chamber Topic

E. W. McCANTS

Snyder chamber of commerce directors held their monthly meeting Tuesday and centered the majority of their discussion on Snyder's housing problem.

Elizabeth Potts, who heads a special chamber committee on housing, gave a report on meetings the committee has had with various groups.

She said a recent contact was made with Lewis Bunch of the First Southwest Co. in Fort Worth concerning tax exempt bonds. Bonds are being used in some communities to finance housing and apartment projects.

It was reported that such financing might be a long-term solution to the lack of housing, and that the entire support of the community would be needed.

In other business, E. W. McCants, superintendent for Chevron's SACROC unit in Snyder, was named to fill an unexpired term on the chamber board.

Directors also approved the financial report and heard a visitation report from chamber manager Bill Warner.

Truett Bryan, chamber president, presided at the meeting. Other directors present were Brenda Hedges, Elizabeth Potts, David Hines, Morris Light, Brian Boswell, Ernie Armstrong and Roy McQueen.

El Paso Dims Hostage Star

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Darkness — not light — on the side of a mountain was this city's way of saying welcome home to the captives who had been held hostage in Iran.

Lights forming a huge star on a mountainside have burned nightly in honor of the hostages since Dec. 21, 1979. They were turned off Tuesday night in a ceremony celebrating the Americans' freedom.

"Here in Texas we once said 'Remember the Alamo.' Let us remember the hostages," said Mayor Tom Westfall.

American Mag Files For Reorganization

Efforts are being made by American Magnesium Co. to reorganize and eventually re-open is magnesium and chlorine plant southwest of Snyder.

Although resumption of production at the plant likely would be several months down the road, AM has announced that it has filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy laws in the U. S. Brankruptcy Court in Fort Worth.

Under Chapter 11, a firm is protected from action by its creditors while it attempts to work out a restructuring of debts under the supervision of the bankruptcy court.

American Magnesium's plant here has been shut down since Dec. 5.

"We still have a dozen people out here in a housekeeping crew," said E. D. Lloyd, the company's chief administrator at the plant.

Lloyd said that reorganization of the company under the bankruptcy court's supervision probably will require several months, but that it is expected that the plant will be re-opened eventually.

He said that virtually all of the employees who were laid off when the plant shut down in December have been absorbed in oil industry-related activities. Thus, any negative impact on the area's economy was avoided. Most of the AM employees were able to find employment quickly in the Snyder area, with only a few in the highly skilled positions finding it necessary to look elsewhere for new jobs.

Neither Lloyd nor John Mezoff, AM vice president of Tulsa, could throw any light on an article which appeared in a recent issue of Metal Week, a trade publication, which attributed AM's shutdown to environmental pollution problems.

Lloyd said that to his knowledge there had been no such problems. He said there had been one complaint several months ago, but that neither AM personnel nor air quality people were able to find any violations.

American Magnesium had some 187 persons on its payroll here when it shut down last December.

watch out, goliaths

Ferrol G. Barlow runs a small plumbing and electrical business in Pocatello, Idaho. Five years ago he defied the U.S. government by prohibiting a federal officer from inspecting his work premises without a search warrant. In a case that went to the U.S. Supreme Court, Barlow won.

"It's a bummer," he says " when you win and you still have to pay the expense of your legal defense."

Barlow personally spent $15,000 — "a conservative figure," he explains—to fight his case, and estimates the court victory cost an additional $190,000 raised by conservative and business groups which joined his cause.

Few small businesses, of course, can afford to spend $15,000 or more to fight the federal government, let alone create a cause celebre and raise altogether more than $200,000 to fight a case.

That is why a new law is likely to turn the bureaucracy and its legal eagles on their head. Thanks to a few hardy souls like Barlow and concerted efforts by groups led by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, small business people like Barlow—those with fewer than 500 employees and individuals with less than $1 million in assets — will be able to contest the government in the courts and before regulatory agencies with the assurance that, if they win, their legal expense will be reimbursed.

Known as the Equal Access to Justice Act, the legislation was passed in the final days of the 96th Congress. It goes into effect Oct. 1, 1981.

In brief, here is how it will work: If a private party is successful as a plaintiff or defendant in an administrative or judicial action against the federal government, it may apply for an award to cover lawyers's and other legal expense. In order to collect, it must win on the merits of the case. Secondly, the court must find that the government was not substantially justified in bringing the action or suit, in the first case.

Passed over objections of the White House and the Department of Justice, the legislation promises to eliminate "iffy" suits and actions by the government, which has more than 100,000 regulators and more than 15,600 lawyers on its payroll.

In the words of Sen. Jim Sasser (D.-Tenn.): "This legislation strikes a careful balance between the individual and government from fulfilling its proper constitutional enforcement of obligations. The burden is on the government, however, to justify its action in order to defeat the award of fees. It is strong enough, therefore, to encourage citizens to exercise their rights."

Goliath, watch out. Here comes a legion Davids.

what's in no name

There's more to the latest on cigarettes than what's inside one.

There's also news about what they're called.

Into a market inundated with vigorously promoted competing brands, one major maker has tossed a newcomer with no name. It's the first generic cigarette, the unadorned packs labeled simply "Filter Cigarettes."

It runs counter to the past experience and beliefs of the cigarette industry on how to score with the public. No big advertising campaign. No extravagant claims of taste superiority, health benefits or properties guaranteeing sexual satisfaction and professional success. Just a price about 20 percent below name brands.

According to preliminary reports, it's moving well, And who knows? If it's a long-run success, it might encourage a newly cost-aware cigarette industry to make a really significant improvement in their product.

Such as no tobacco.

In August of last year, the Associated Press rented a tree across the street from Gov. Ronald Reagan's Los Angeles residence.

For 50 cents a day they got exclusive rights to the tree for 100 days from which their reporters could view and report on the comings and goings of the presidential candidate.

NBC rented an apartment down the street, ABC rented a garage, and it was rumored that CBS had exclusive rights to a fence nearby.

Why do we do it?

Why do we strip our presidents of every personal thought, every intimate relationship, every corner of privacy to satisfy our curiosity? Why do we track down their families, attack them, and lay them bare for cameras and writers to feed upon?

Why is it indeed that less than three dozen reporters were uncovering Watergate while hundreds were interviewing President Nixon's barber?

Ironically, the White House is the only bastion in this country where freedom of speech is punishable by public scrutiny.

It occurs to me if a TV network is willing to try an experiment in the sports booth where the commentators are silenced and everyone must watch the game to see what is going on, why can't we try it for our first family?

I think we could tough it out not knowing:

How big the White House ham is for Easter.

Who is dating a married secret service man.

Where the president jogs and what his time is.

Who had a history of mental illness.

How big was the scar from his operation.

What he bought his wife for her birthday.

Whether or not they share the same bed.

How much she paid for her inaugural gown.

Whether or not they went to church last Sunday.

What the first family's butcher, chauffeur, brother or mother thinks of our foreign policy.

These are not a couple of life-sized toys we have put in a doll house in Washington to look at and manipulate. These are flesh-and-blood human beings who have a monumental task ahead of them and who need a certain sense of self and an occasional escape from the demands to function.

I don't know President and Mrs. Reagan at all.

"I have a feeling that soon I will know more about them than I have a right to know.

She was a volunteer at a nursing home.

She helped with the residents there. She talked to them when no one else would. She listened to their reminisces and complaints.

She cared.

Now she's a resident in the same place and maybe that was something she never expected.

She sits, hunched and trembling in her wheelchair, looking frightened and dejected. Maybe she's frightened and still unbelieving that now she's the dependent one instead of the helper.

She has to wait for people to come see her to get the attention that everyone craves whether they're young or old. Sometimes she tries to get that attention by suddenly letting out a scream. But everyone smiles and goes on their way—they're "used to her."

People don't like to go to nursing homes—they're too depressing. It's depressing because it makes us think about something we're desperately trying to shut out—someday we'll be like that.

Someday it'll be us sitting there. We'll try to talk to someone about what we're thinking but it'll sound to everyone around us like we're a little bit off. We'll be senile.

We'll get our dates mixed up and forget people's names and sometimes even where we are.

We'll sit there and know that we're being snickered at because our words aren't coming out right but we won't be able to do anything about it.

We could always tell someone "Go sit on it!" But they'd say "Did you hear what that crazy old bat said?" Or we could really get angry and throw something or hit someone. But then we'd be labeled "violent" and find ourselves strapped to our beds.

Someday our days will be so empty that the only thing we'll have to talk about is "the old days." And we'll tell the same old stories over and over and over, because they're the only ones that come to mind when someone is finally there to listen to us talk. And we have to talk, it's part of being human.

When we start thinking slower and getting confused easier or start needing a cane or a walker or a wheelchair, people will start thinking about us as inanimate objects and stop thinking of us as human beings, as people who think and feel and need other people to make us feel human.

Someday we'll be frightened and dejected and lonely.

But no one will come to see us—"it's too depressing."

Dr. Pepper Is Suing Sambo's

DALLAS (AP) — Claiming its commercial image was being done irreparable harm, Dr Pepper Co. has filed a federal court suit here, claiming Sambo's restaurants and a public relations firm infringed on its "Be a Pepper" jingle.The suit seeks an injunction against Sambo's and Bozell & Jacobs International Inc. to force them to stop the alleged practice.

In the suit, Dr Pepper claims that Sambo's broadcast a videotaped commercial called "Dancing Seniors" in December. The commercial was placed with the media by the public relations firm, the suit said.

The commercial, Dr Pepper contends, was designed to attract senior citizens into Sambo's restaurants and uses a jingle substantially similar to Dr Pepper's jingle.

The jingle contains the phrase, "Don't you want to be a senior, too" and the music and dancing are similar to the Dr Pepper commercial, the suit says.

The suit asks that all copies of the commercials be impounded, but left it to the court to decide the amount of damages.

Vineyards were usually on hills and surrounded by walls or hedges to keep out animals and thieves. Vine-dressers lived in stone towers. Jesus had a parable about a vineyard let out to husbandmen.

Top Texans Comment On Hostage Situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The relationship between the United States and Iran must remain decidely cool despite the release of the 52 American hostages, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

"I don't think we can, or should, contemplate anything approaching normal relations with the outlaw band that is now attempting to rule Iran," the Texas Democrat said Tuesday. "I presume we'll have an arm's-length relationship — dealing through a third country — and the longer the arm the better."

Bentsen, in a statement, suggested that the way to prevent any future occurrences like the 14½-month-long hostage crisis might be stating clearly the response that could be expected.

"We must prepare a government policy statement that will act as a positive deterrent to any such irresponsible violations of international law in the future," he said.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said he was not prepared to comment on the terms of the agreement that freed the hostages until the details become available.

He said in a statement that he was delighted the hostages are on their way home. "I'm glad the long ordeal is over," Tower said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth said the "unlawful and humiliating treatment" that the hostages received should not be forgotten.

"Not since the Middle Ages have such despicable acts been committed by any government to the official peaceful emissaries of another," Wright said in a statement. "Personally, I do not see how the United States could resume normal relations with Iran in the absence of some very decided changes in its government and in its attitude toward us.'"

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, said the declaration of hostilities against Iran that he had introduced earlier should still be approved by Congress.

"It would formally define, in other words, Iran as an enemy," he said about his proposed resolution. "We must make Iran pay for its crime against the United States and the civilized world. That's my feeling — we must make them pay."

Gonzalez, who called for the United States to demand damages and reparations from Iran, said a formal declaration of hostilities could be useful in finally resolving some aspects of the freeze that was placed on Iranian assets.

"Honor is still important to this nation," he said. "I'm still going to press for some attention given my resolution."

Rep. Jim Collins, a Dallas Republican, said his main concern in finding out the specific terms of the hostage release would be to determine if any precedents were set.

"Our (foreign) policy has been one of complete appeasement, and you always want to be deliberative, but we've got to change our policy," Collins said. "If they ever take our people by force, we've got to move in and take action quickly."

He said the first step taken against Iran after the American Embassy was seized should have been the placement of mines in Iranian harbors to put a total economic blockade into effect.

Rep. Jack Fields, a freshman Republican from Humble, said the "ultimate answer" to prevent any similar crises would be to maintain a strong national defense posture.

Marriage License Fee Hike Wanted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Houston legislator wants a $4 increase in marriage license fees to pay for a special fund to help widowed or divorced housewives and battered spouses.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, has proposed legislation raising the marriage license fee from $7.50 to $11.50. Two dollars of the increase would go into a "domestic violence fund," $1.50 would go to a "displaced homemaker fund," and 50 cents would be kept by county clerks to cover paperwork costs.

WTC Offers Course In Razzle Dazzle Ribbon

Razzle Dazzle Ribbon, a fun course in needlepoint, will be offered at Western Texas College in classes meeting on Jan. 31 and Feb. 7.

"This is a sure cure for the winter blahs," Dorothy Dennis, instructor, assures. "Students should have a good working knowledge of the basketweave stitch and be able to read a chart," she adds. "We will be working with two-inch ribbon, attaching it to linen canvas and surrounding it with a variety of stitches."

Mrs. Dennis had this class in Denver in October at the American Needle Point Guild's annual meeting under Margee Farris of New Orleans.

Persons interested in Razzle Dazzle can see a finished pillow at the Needle Point Shop in Cogdell Center.

Classes will meet from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day in the Scurry County Museum. There will be only a short break for lunch, so students are asked to bring a brown bag lunch. They also need to bring scissors.

Fees will be $50 per person, with a minimum of 20 required to form the class.

Students are to register by calling the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, extension 240. Fees will be paid in advance of the first class meeting.

Safe and sound slam play

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

North and South were playing a 21- or 22-point two notrump, so North made no effort to explore grand slam possibilities with his 12 points and simply bid six.

West opened a diamond and South saw that if East held the club king there would be no problems. Suppose West held his majesty? Then South could still make six by getting home with two heart tricks before going after clubs.

After that start he would bring home the bacon if East held four hearts to the ace. West would not have a heart left to lead back to his partner. Even if West held three hearts he might not lead one. A smart West would, but it is remarkable how even the world's greatest players miss plays that arm chair quarterbacks would never overlook.

Anyway, South rose with dummy's ace and dropped his king. Then he led the three of hearts to his queen, went back to dummy with a second diamond and led the five of hearts. East ducked for a second time and South was home. He entered dummy with a spade, took and lost the diamond finesse and had his 12 tricks since West was fresh out of hearts.

Rejoicing Hostage Release...

Celebrations Ring Across America

By The Associated Press

The Empire State Building was lit in red, white and blue, bells that had been silent for years were rung in joy and strangers embraced on city streets as Americans celebrated the liberation of the 52 hostages from Iran.

Gamblers in six states played hunches and flooded state-run lotteries with bets on the number 444 because the hostages were freed on their 444th day of captivity. The gamblers lost.

In midtown Manhattan, office workers began throwing adding-machine confetti and toilet-paper streamers out of windows when the news spread that the hostages had been freed. Mayor Edward Koch said he would like to hold a real ticker-tape parade for the former hostages when they come back to the United States.

In Memphis, Tenn., church bells rang for half an hour, increasing in volume as word of the hostages' freedom spread from church to church.

"The reaction of the people downtown was kind of like the ending of World War II — people were embracing in the streets," said the Rev. Douglass Bailey of the Calvary Episcopal Church in Memphis.

In Washington, the lights on the national Christmas tree on the ellipse near the White House were turned on. The tree was dark during the holiday season as a reminder of the hostages' plight.

The Statue of Liberty in New York harbor was lit Tuesday night for the first time since 1976.

In San Francisco, Mayor Dianne Feinstein proclaimed Tuesday as Freedom Day after the city's Emergency Services Department let loose with its sirens in a tribute to the hostages. The Nebraska Legislature approved a resolution designating each Jan. 20 as Freedom Day in the state.

Taghi Rezaian, an Iranian-American rug merchant in Mill Valley, Calif., said he was looking forward to an end of anti-Iranian feeling in the United States and said he planned to give each of the hostages a Persian or oriental rug worth $1,000.

A 300-pound newborn rhinoceros at the zoo in Knoxville, Tenn., was named Freedom to honor the release of the 52 Americans, zoo officials said.

At the University of Maine at Farmington, a bell that has been silent for 25 years rang out following the release. University Vice President Roger Spear spent five hours ringing the bell, located atop Merrill Hall, the oldest building on campus.

See doctor about diarrhea

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been having diarrhea for a couple of years. When I'm nervous or upset it seems to act up more. For a year now, I've been on a diet a friend gave me. I take wheat germ, bran and honey mix once a day with vitamins. Is there any diet or information of any kind you have that I may follow up on? Do you have a list of diet foods I could eat or a diet sheet I could follow?

DEAR READER — If celiac sprue is a cause of your diarrhea, the wheat germ and bran could make it definitely worse. Sprue is an allergic-type reaction to gluten found in all cereals — including wheat — except corn and rice.

The point is that you can't treat a person's diarrhea properly without knowing what causes it. Some people have diarrhea because they have an infection of the bowel. Some of these can be chronic. Others have important diseases such as ulcerative colitis. Still others have a spastic colon.

Some people have diarrhea because they can't tolerate milk or any foods that contain milk products. In fact, if a complete examination fails to provide any reason for diarrhea then it is sometimes useful to temporarily try a diet that eliminates all milk and foods containing milk products, all cereals except rice and corn (including foods that contain cereals such as cream soups, even ice cream and cold cuts), coffee, tea and spices.

The various causes of diarrhea and the approach to the problem are discussed in greater detail in The Health Letter number 13-8, What You Need to Know About Diarrhea. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. A frequently neglected cause is the excess use of alcohol. The elimination of alcoholic drinks should be added to the list I gave you of foods to eliminate. But see your doctor. Remember that diarrhea is a symptom, not a diagnosis.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you discuss the effects of sugar on the digestive system? I have a problem with spastic colitis and I love sweets. I do eat nutritious meals, brush my teeth afterwards and do not worry about my weight. I have the idea that we would all be better off with little or no sweets except for fresh or dried fruit. Someone told me recently that I need sugar and that it is absorbed in the bloodstream before it ever gets to the intestines. If this is true then it would not affect colitis.

DEAR READER — Sugar, honey and other sweets are digested and absorbed in the small intestine, mostly within the first few feet after they are emptied out of the stomach. So in a normal person, no sugar or other sweets should reach the colon or even the distal part of the small intestine. You are right. They will not affect the colon.

The problem is that they contain no bulk and the colon needs bulk. If you are providing enough bulk from the rest of your diet that is not a consideration. Concentrated sweets can also cause rebound low blood sugar levels in the few people who have reactive low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) problems. Otherwise, the main difficulty with sweets is what they don't provide, not because of anything harmful in them.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Your Birthday

January 22, 1981

It's possible this coming year that you could have something quite good in your grasp without fully appreciating all its ramifications. Look for an unusual product or item which can be taken to the marketplace.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The opinions of others are important today, but they should not be taken so seriously that they cause you to act against your own better judgment. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If your work habits are erratic today, the results are likely to be similar. Don't do things in fits and starts. Organize your schedule and efforts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Basically you're a very adventurous and daring person. Under proper circumstances, these are commendable traits. Today, however, you may be tempted to take unwise risks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Remorse could later set in if you make important decisions too impulsively today. Stall for time and a chance to study what you're getting into.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep in mind today that anything worth doing is worth doing well. Tasks given merely a lick and a promise may have to be done over.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Treat your resources and possessions with prudence and respect today. Reckless or extravagant behavior could put you behind the 8-ball.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Look out for your interests today, but try to do so without being too self-serving. Others will let you know quickly enough if you are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're pretty good at keeping confidential information to yourself, but today could be an exception. You might reveal something that's best kept secret.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a very generous person, but be careful today what you lend and to whom. Give only if there is a real need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be careful today that you don't overreact and make an issue of something that really isn't one. Let your logic prevail, instead of your emotions and pride.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes your hunches are rather amazing and accurate, but this may not be the case today. Signals from your intuition could contain a lot of static.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A well-meaning friend who has caused you some complications previously could create ripples again today if you permit him or her to get involved in your private affairs.

Clayton Names House Committees

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton returned Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, as chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee today and reappointed Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, as head of the State Affairs Committee.

Clayton said he kept in their jobs all 1979 chairmen who were re-elected to the House.

There were exceptions, however.

Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, who faces a special election Feb. 10, was not returned as chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee because of his uncertain status.

The constitutional amendments post — important because the committee will consider Gov. Bill Clements' initiative and referendum proposal — went to Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington.

Rep. Sue McBee, D-Del Rio, who headed the Elections Committee in 1979 was promoted to chairwoman of the Calendars Committee, which regulates the flow of bills to the floor after they are approved by other committees.

Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, was named chairman of the Elections Committee.

Clayton said he tried to distribute chairmanships and vice chairmanships proportionately to the various groupings in the House, including Republicans, blacks, Mexican-Americans and women.

The chairmanship of the Regions, Compacts and Districts committee, which will handle legislative and congressional redistricting bills, was returned to Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, one of Clayton's lawyers at his Brilab corruption trial in Houston, again will be chairman of the Human Services Committee. Clayton also reappointed Washington as speaker pro tem, giving him authority to preside over the House in Clayton's absence.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, was moved from the chairmanship of the largely inactive Rules Committee to chairman of the Judicial Affairs Committee.

The Judiciary Committee chairmanship, vacated by former Rep. Ben Grant's decision to run for a judgeship, went to Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman.

Other chairmanships: Agriculture and Livestock, Rep. Leroy Wieting, D-Portland; Business and Industry, Rep. Chris Semos, D-Dallas; Criminal Jurisprudence, Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood; Employment Practices, Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas; Energy Resources, Rep. Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge; Environmental Affairs, Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels; Financial Institutions, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado; Government Organization, Rep. Charles Evans, D-Hurst; Health Services, Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston; Higher Education, Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin; House Administration, Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center; Insurance, Rep. Bob Simpson, D-Amarillo; Intergovernmental Affairs, Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth; Liquor Regulation, Rep. Bill Coody, D-Weatherford; Local and Consent Calendars, Rep. Jim Nowlin, R-San Antonio; Natural Resources, Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland; Public Education, Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston; Security and Sanctions, Rep. Billy Hall, D-Laredo; Transportation, Rep. Don Henderson, R-Houston; Ways and Means, Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving.

Rep. Charles Finnell, D-Holliday, was made chairman of the House General Investigating Committee.

2-Vehicle Mishap

A minor two-vehicle accident was investigated Tuesday by city police.

The accident, reported shortly after 8 a.m., occurred in the 1200 block of 30th St. and was worked by Sgt. Jerry Parker. Involved in it were a 1977 Ford driven by James Folsom and a 1970 Buick driven by Pauline Taylor.

Hostage Families In State Of Joy

Former hostages.

Those words were as sweet as champagne to the families of the three Texans who flew from Iranian captivity to freedom Tuesday.

And those families' joy reached across the state to become acts of celebration reaching from courthouse lawns to city skylines to the side of a dusty West Texas mountain.

As word spread that the captivity had ended for the 52 Americans held captive in Iran, Texas family members celebrated with tears, cheers and the popping of champagne corks.

"I'm just happy, happy — and it's not the champagne," said Dorothy Royer, who had poured champagne for friends in Houston upon learning that Mrs. Royer's son, hostage William B. Royer, had left Tehran.

"They are gone from Iran — yay!!" shouted John McKeel of Balch Springs, thrusting his fist into the air as he received the official word that his son, Marine Sgt. John McKeel Jr., had left Iran on an Algerian jetliner. "The celebration starts now!"

In contrast, his wife, Wynona, reacted by saying, "Thank God. I'mm going to go cry now.."

The McKeels were told of their son's freedom by Undersecretary of State Mark Johnson, who called at 11:53 a.m. CST Tuesday. While still on the phone, McKeel turned to the dozens of reporters crowded around: "They have confirmed they are in the air. It's official. They are in the air."

"I'm really excited now,' said Mrs. Royer, 79, who got her state department phone call at precisely the same time as the McKeels. "For the first time, I'm really excited. This is something I've waited for a long time.

"This is the next to the happiest day in my life. The happiest will be when I see him again."

another lawyer in the case, Jack Ogg, will be tied up with the state legislature until then.

Ogg is a state senator from Houston. Because the legislature is now in session he'll be occupied with it until June or July.

During a pre-trial hearing earlier this month, Durst's murder case was scheduled to begin Monday, Jan. 19. When Monday came, and the jury panel was summoned, Hall announced he would be tied up with a case in Brown County. The case was rescheduled for today.

Today Hall announced the need for a further delay, this time until the summer. It was then that the contempt of court citation was issued by Holt.

"When they practice law in this court," said a miffed Judge Holt, "they'll have to do it as gentlemen."

Durst is charged with murder in the Nov. 28 death of Billy Norris Cobb.

Dear Abby

Bride's No Thank-You's Include Mother-in-Law

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our son was married last June at a beautiful church wedding. He and his bride received many lovely wedding gifts. (There were over 300 guests.)

In September I started getting calls. ("Did Wendy ever get our wedding present?") I mentioned this to Wendy, and she said she was waiting for her monogrammed stationery. I told her I'd be glad to buy her some appropriate stationery and even help her write the notes, but she said she was "too busy" getting settled, and she'd rather wait. (This girl is a college graduate.)

Come December, my friends were asking me if Wendy ever received their wedding gifts, so I wrote a "thank-you" to everyone I knew had given them a gift. I signed Wendy's name, and mailed them off.

When I told her what I had done, Wendy was furious. Now my son isn't speaking to me. I really don't think I did such a terrible thing. Abby, what would you have done in my place?

MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: I would have apologized to those who inquired, and let Wendy suffer the consequences of her own procrastination and bad manners.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and I'm in love with my teacher. He is 30 and married, and I know there is no hope for me, but I think about him night and day. (Especially night.)

I did a couple of dumb things, like copying his picture out of the yearbook for art class, and I also told some kids in school how I felt about him. Well, it must have gotten back to him, because now he avoids me and won't even look my way. Before this, he would smile at me and say hi.

I have written him a dozen letters but I've torn all of them up. I can't help how I feel. What should I do?

MISERABLE IN MALVERN, ARIZ.

DEAR MISERABLE: Don't do anything. Apparently your actions have already caused your teacher some embarrassment. You can't help how you "feel," but you can help how you behave.

DEAR ABBY: This is for those who are upset because their wedding gifts have not been acknowledged. I think this is even worse.

Last summer my husband and I were invited to a wedding. It was several hundred miles away and the trip cost more than we really could afford, but we felt an obligation to go because the bride's parents were our good friends, so we went anyway.

We did all the right things — signed the guest book, went through the receiving line, wished the bride happiness and congratulated the groom.

Subsequently we received a very nice note from the bride, thanking us for our gift. And she ended with, "We were so sorry you couldn't attend our wedding. We missed you." Sign me . . .

Lasting Reform, Failure Marked Daniels's Career

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Price Daniel Jr. left behind a record of lasting government reform and utter failure in both his statewide political ambitions and his desire to give Texans a modern constitution.

Daniel, 39, was shot to death at his home in Liberty Monday night.

Daniel was House speaker in 1973, winning the job on a "reform" wave that followed former Speaker Gus Mutscher's involvement in the 1971 Sharpstown scandal.

Because of Daniel's efforts as speaker, Texans who wish to take the trouble can see the origins of the money that fuels political campaigns.

Laws pushed to passage by Daniel also forced legislators and other officials to reveal the sources — if not the amounts — of their personal income and wealth.

Daniel bills opened up government records and forced lobbyists to disclose how they were spending money.

Yet his stated overall objective of ending one-man rule in the House and weakening the grip of business interests on legislation did not come to pass.

Daniel was a one-term speaker who wanted to limit the number of terms a speaker could hold. A speaker's control over each representative's legislative success or failure is so tight it is hard to say no when the speaker asks for a written promise to vote for him next time.

Daniel was unable to get the two-term limit he sought, and his successor, Bill Clayton, is serving his fourth term and talking about a fifth.

Lobbyists must report their spending, and so do the political action committees through which they funnel money to legislators' campaigns. Yet the spending is bigger than ever, and business lobbyists had one of their best years ever in the 1979 legislative session.

Daniel mounted a behind-the-scenes campaign and won the presidency of the 1974 Constitutional Convention. He badly wanted the convention to submit to the voters a new state charter to replace the one written in 1875 and amended over 200 times since.

But Daniel's leadership often wavered. He made powerful enemies among the senators and House members that made up the convention.

Conservatives — whose votes were needed for approval of the final document — successfully injected the state's so-called right-to-work law into the package. Labor called in its chips, and the new constitution fell three votes short in the final night of the convention. Daniel refused to lay out a proposed constitution without the anti-union provision.

Daniel ended up calling labor leaders — old allies who less than a year earlier were touting him for a statewide race for treasurer — "callous and selfish."

Usually mild-mannered, Daniel could be waspish, quick to blame or call names.

One memorable moment of the convention came when he refused to apologize for calling some of the delegates "cockroaches" for stalling the work of a convention committee.

Politics, the convention and the speakership strained Daniel's first marriage, to Diane Womack Daniel, and the couple divorced within months after the convention concluded in 1974.

Daniel married Vickie Moore in November 1976. She was present when he was shot to death Monday night and was hospitalized for shock.

Daniel didn't run for re-election to the House in 1974, saying he wanted to devote full attention to the constitutional convention, and he sat out the 1976 elections.

He announced early as a candidate in the 1978 attorney general's race.

Officials Ponder Charges Against Daniel's Wife

LIBERTY, Texas (AP)— Law enforcement officers sifted through a stack of evidence and interviews today in an effort to decide whether to file charges against the wife of Price Daniel Jr.

The former Speaker of the Texas House died Monday from a gunshot wound in the stomach. No charges have been filed and no arrests made in the case, said Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols, who earlier had called the death a homicide.

Daniel, 39, who had tried to carry on the tradition of family political power begun decades ago, was killed in his ranch home on the outskirts of this Liberty County community of 8,000, nestled along the banks of the Trinity River.

Funeral services are scheduled for 2 p.m. today.

District Attorney Carroll E. Wilborn Jr., said the "the investigation thus far has led us to believe the fatal wound was inflicted by his wife. But we have yet to determine whether it was a homicide, in self-defense, provoked, or an accident."

Court records showed that Vickie Daniel had filed for divorce 21 days ago and a hearing on the action was scheduled for Thursday. She had filed for divorce once before, in November 1976, but withdrew the petition.

In the recent lawsuit, Mrs. Daniel claimed a "conflict of personalities ... with no hope of reconciliation."

After the shooting Mrs. Daniel, 33, suffering from shock and hysteria, was taken to a local hospital and placed under sedation. Later, on advice of her attorney, she refused to talk with authorities.

In the spacious home at the time of the shooting were the Daniels' two young children and an 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Daniel by a previous marriage.

Wilborn said he had asked that the 11-year-old girl be questioned.

Eckols said he understood the children were in a back bedroom and did not hear any gunfire.

Daniel, dressed in boots, dungarees and a shirt, was found laying face down in a narrow hallway between the kitchen and the car port.

He was dead at the scene.

A rifle was discovered in a nearby room. Two empty shell casings were on the floor.

Daniel had served three terms in the Texas House, the last session as speaker when he pushed several reform measures through the legislature. He later made a bid for state attorney general, but was beaten in the Democratic primary.

Price Daniel Sr. had served as Texas House speaker, governor, U.S. Senator and State Supreme Court Justice.

The Daniel influence was seldom challenged in Liberty, one resident said. In recent years the family had lived close together on the ranch outside of the city.

Since his defeat for attorney general, Daniel had practiced law in Liberty and taught in Houston, at the South Texas School of Law, Texas Southern University, and the University of Houston.

Eight Out Of Every 10 Texans Live In Cities

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Almost eight out of ten Texans live in cities, according to the latest census figures, and those metropolitan areas are still booming, Gov. Clements' office said Tuesday.

Using the 1980 definition of "standard metropolitan statistical areas," Clements office said 79.5 percent of Texas population lived in metropolitan areas, up from 77.9 percent in 1970.

The preliminary 1980 census figures also showed that 85 percent of the total state population increase over the past decade was in metropolitan areas.

Five urban areas grew by more than 40 percent during the 1970s. Bryan-College Station swelled by the largest percentage, with a 61.5 percent leap, while Houston increased most absolutely, with 887,646 people moving in.

Dallas-Fort Worth increased by 24.5 percent, San Antonio by 20 percent, and Austin by 47.7 percent.

Austin's population now stands at 532,359, up from 360,463, and San Antonio passed the million mark, with a rise from 888,179 to 1,065,441.

South Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley saw significant growth, with the Cameron County area — including Brownsville, Harlingen and San Benito — increasing by 48.3 percent: from 140,368 in 1970 to 208,125. The city of Laredo grew from 72,859 to 99,027.

And the Hidalgo County urban area, encompassing McAllen, Pharr and Edinburg, increased 53.8 percent.

In the Panhandle, growth was a little slower. Potter County's population increased by only 8.9 percent, although Randall County was up by 39.1 percent. Amarillo increased by 20.2 percent, from 144,396 to 173,550.

West Texas points experienced significant growth. Abilene was up 13.9 percent, Midland 25.8, Odessa 24.3, and San Angelo 18.5.

Snyder Airman At Sheppard AFB

Airman First Class Kevin W. Fritz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Fritz of 2709 48th St., is now assigned to duty at Sheppard AFB.

Fritz, a law enforcement specialist, was previously assigned at Hahn Air Base, West Germany.

Snyder firefighters doused a grease and stove fire last night in the home of Eddie Thane, 4504 Fredonia.

The fire was reported at 6:30 p.m.

Uncle Sam Spends Big Bucks On Ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan is taking over an enterprise that's running in the red, and he may want to do what other chief executive officers often do in that situation: cut the advertising budget.

If he does, Reagan will discover the government spends more than $150 million for ad space or air time and millions more on market research, ad production and creative efforts.

All this made the United States the country's 28th biggest advertiser in 1979 — far behind Procter & Gamble, but well ahead of such big advertisers as Pillsbury, the Gillette Co. and Reagan's former employer, the General Electric Co.

But if Reagan tries to cut ad outlays, he'll run into flak from agencies that say they must communicate with the public and can do it best through advertising.

The Defense Department, for example, says it couldn't run a voluntary army without advertising heavily for recruits.

The government advertises for many purposes. Amtrak advertises to sell seats on its passenger trains. The Treasury advertises to try to overcome public resistance to the Susan B. Anthony dollar. The Energy Department advertises to try to boost fuel conservation.

The Corporation for Public Broadcasting advertises the television shows it underwrites. The Peace Corps advertises for volunteers.

The Postal Service advertises the joys of stamp collecting because sales of stamps that aren't used for postage are pure gravy.

Three of every four government ad dollars go for military recruiting. For every recruit the Army signs up, the Pentagon spends $410 on advertising to lure him into the recruiting office. The few good men the Marines want cost $339 each in advertising.

These expenditures are for ads which can only plant the idea of enlisting. Millions more are spent in the entire recruiting effort.

Each branch of the service has its own ad director (usually a colonel), and each has a separate ad agency. Advertising Age, an industry publication, notes that J. Walter Thompson Co. has the Marine Corps account; Ted Bates and Co. writes Navy ads. Each service competes with the others for recruits.

"The purpose of advertising is to help the prospective enlistee make a decision that's good for him and good for us, and competing ads help him do that," says Al Martin, the Pentagon's director of accession (recruiting) policy.

In addition to buying ad space and time, the government gets millions of dollars worth of free advertising through industry donations. These public service campaigns promote health and safety, urge energy conservation and acquaint people with government services such as direct deposit of Social Security checks.

The Advertising Council, a 40-year-old non-profit industry organization, estimates the government gets about $300 million worth of free public service advertising a year.

Everyone knows these ads — the 39-year-old "Only you can prevent forest fires" campaign, for example.

The Ad Council sometimes turns down proposed government campaigns on the grounds that they beat unimportant drums. For example, it refused to undertake a Treasury campaign to get people to stop hoarding pennies.

Government ad officials, while not ungrateful for the free ads, say they must still run paid ads to reach their intended audiences.

Martin, the Pentagon official, questions the value of public service ads. He wants his commercials to run, say, at halftime during the pro football playoffs rather than for free between the sermonette and the sign-off of a small-town radio station.

Increasingly, the government is running ads for services that compete directly with private enterprise. The Postal Service is putting ad dollars behind selling its Express Mail service in hard-nosed competition with private delivery firms.

The government is such a big advertiser that the Federal Trade Commission wants to screen government ads to make sure they meet the same standards of honesty that the FTC imposes on commercial advertisements. But the program is voluntary, and the Pentagon won't submit its ads for clearance.

The FTC acted after the Gray Panthers, an organization in support of elderly people, objected to Treasury ads which called investing in U.S. savings bonds a way to "put your financial worries to rest" even though savings bonds offer interest rates considerably below the inflation rate.

After the FTC carried the Gray Panthers complaint to the Treasury, the bond theme was changed. The bonds are now plugged as a means people can use to force themselves to save — "a sure way to save the dough that runs right through your fingers."

Boy's Game Postponed Until Saturday...

Lake View Shocks Felines

SAN ANGELO — Snyder's Felines fell behind 17-0 early here and could never recover as Lake View's Maidens posted a 63-48 victory.

The loss gives Snyder's girls an 0-1 start in second-round District 2-AAAA play, and ends a seven-game winning string.

In Snyder, the scheduled Snyder-Lake View boys game was postponed until Saturday when referees failed to show for the 8 p.m. contest.

Coaches could not agree on substitute referees, and therefore rescheduled the game for 8 o'clock Saturday in the coliseum.

"We just didn't play very well at all," said Snyder girls Coach Ken Housden who was ill with the flu and did not attend classes this morning. "Especially in the first quarter. After that we stayed with them. But we just got too far behind in that first quarter."

The Felines, who finished round-one in second place, are to host 17-1 Monahans Friday in the SHS Gym at 8. Last night's loss puts a different complexion on the district race, which was expected to be almost totally a Snyder-Monahans affair in the second round.

"We'll have to beat them (Monahans) and then hope somebody else can beat them also," said Housden. "Friday night is a must win situation for us if we expect to stay in the district race."

Monahans won the first round, and need only to tie in the second to clinch the 2-4A title.

No details were available on the Snyder game, but it was known that Michelle Townsel led the team in scoring with 17 points. Snyder junior varsity also lost.

In other District 2-AAAA girls games yesterday, Monahans defeated Andrews 62-52 and Pecos beat Odessa Ector, 53-50. It was learned that Sweetwater defeated Lamesa, though no score was available, and in a non-district encounter, Fort Stockton nailed Rankin, 56-29.

Boy's action included: Lamesa 53, Sweetwater 45; Andrews 79, Monahans 60; and Ector 84, Pecos 56.

Is Snyder Athletics A Victim Of Apathy?

By BILL MCCLELLAN

I recall when I first met Chuck North, the soft-spoken, hard working transer student from California. Chuck told me he chose Western Texas College because it had the No. 1 basketball program in the country and he wanted to be a part of it. His only worry was he might somehow let the fans down.

I didn't have the heart to tell him it would probably be the opposite.

There were possibly 230 on hand to watch the Westerners play Amarillo last Tuesday, maybe 100 for the Dusters' game. Both were decided in the final minute. Last Thursday, WTC defeated Clarendon College in double overtime. Great basketball, lousy support.

A state volleyball championship team and maybe 75 people in the stands, mostly moms and dads, sisters and brothers. The defending District 3-3A boys and girls high school basketball teams and maybe 200-300 folks out for the Tigers and 75-125 out for the girls.

Coaches across the state have said that sport-for-sport in Class AAAA there is no district tougher than the one Snyder High School is currently competing in.

The talk around the NJCAA National Basketball Tournament each year is centered around Texas teams. The toughest of them? The WJCAC, which bore last year's national champs and boasts this year's No. 1 and No. 12 ranked teams.

But here's the clincher... if things don't change soon - if the fans don't come out - athletics at Western Texas will die, and at SHS they'll get to the point where the athletes themselves don't care anymore.

It's a joke, when Howard College in Big Spring sends over as many fans as Snyder can muster when the Hawks play here. Is it any wonder that Duster Coach Joe Cushing says his girls play better on the road than at home? WTC doesn't have any "home advantage"!

Soon it'll be that time of the year when Cushing brings in prospects to watch his team in action. Maybe not, because I think he stopped doing it at the end of last year. He was embarrassed when some all-stater looked around and saw 100 people in the coliseum. Does wonders for recruiting, believe me.

Recruiting? Frankly, Snyder doesn't have the edge that other WJCAC cities have. We don't have the night life of Midland, Odessa or Amarillo. There's not much of anything for these young men and women to do but study and play basketball, or golf, or rodeo. That's why without community support athletics at Western Texas will dry up. The quality players will go elsewhere. I'm not talking about monetary support, though everyone realizes that's important. I'm talking about filling the stands, letting the athletes know you're with them, because enthusiastic community support leaves impressions - on the visiting team, the possible recruit, on the home team, and on the scoreboard.

Where's your pride, Snyder? Where's that pride turned nothing more than a dream into Western Texas College? Where's the pride that earned this city the Sparkle City Award? And senior citizens, you who held the banner so well last year, WHERE ARE YOU NOW?

If it sounds like I'm upset, I am. I'm just a little tired of seeing people go out and bust their butts in the name of Snyder and having only a handful of concerned citizens show any support.

To those who have been coming out, believe me, it's appreciated more than you can imagine. I'm sure the coaches and players will join me in extending their deepest thanks for your help.

Thursday, WTC's Dusters and Westerners take on Frank Phillips College at 6 and 8 in the coliseum. FPC's Plainsmen are nationally ranked. People, they need your help.

Friday, SHS's girls host first-round district winner Monahans in the high school gym at 8. They need your help.

Tuesday, SHS's boys entertain state-ranked Andrews in the coliseum at 8. They need your help.

And next Thursday, WTC's Dusters and Westerners host South Plains, 6 and 8, at SCC. They need your help.

Please try and get out to one. The future of Snyder athletics may be at stake.

Western Texas Hosts FPC Thursday Night

Western Texas College plays the host role again Thursday night, welcoming nationally ranked Frank Phillips College to Scurry County Coliseum. The women's game begins at 6, then men's at 8.

FPC's Plainsmen, 17-1 and ranked No. 12 in the nation, upset No. 1 rated Midland College earlier this week, 69-67. In another shocker, Frank Phillips was stunned 72-63 in Big Spring last night by Howard College, the current conference leader.

"For us to make the regional tournament, we're going to have to knock off one or more of the top three teams," Westerner Coach Larry Dunaway has said. "That way, if we get into a tie, we'll have more power points. Every game is a big one for us, and we're not conceding anything."

The Westerners will likely be playing without 6-4 sophomore starter Chuck North, who is suffering from a badly sprained ankle. Although it was feared he might be benched for a week to 10 days initially, the last report was amended to "staying off of it for two or three days".

The Westerners, 13-5 for the season and 4-3 in conference play, have just come off back-to-back wins over Clarendon and Amarillo.

FPC, 6-1 in conference play, boasts the tallest team in the conference with 6-10 sophomore Lance Tomlinson and 6-9 sophomore Larry Hubbard. The Plainsmen lead the WJCAC in defense, allowing only 63.9 points per game. Attacking that wall will be the leading offensive team in the conference, WTC, which averages 93.8 points.

Frank Phillips' women are 0-5 in loop competition and 6-10 for the season, while Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters are 17-5 and 3-2.

"It could be considered something of a breather for us after having Amarillo in here Monday, but we know from experience that we can't afford to take them lightly," Cushing said of tomorrow's opponent."

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students. Those under age 16 with an adult are admitted free.

Rice Trips A&M Aggies

by The Associated Press

Both coaches were quick to agree on the difference between Rice and Texas A&M after the Owls upset the Aggies at College Station in a Southwest Conference basketball game.

"Kenny Austin was the key to this win," said Rice coach Mike Schuler after Austin scored 20 points Tuesday night as the Owls beat Texas A&M, 54-50.
