

Oil Activities In State Active

DALLAS, Dec. 12 (AP)—Dallas oil men received reports today that drilling of the plug on the Foster-Deep Rock No. 1 Ashby in Rock county was expected soon. The Foster test is southwest of the C. M. Joiner No. 2, discovery well in the Henderson field.

The Stroube and Stroube No. 1, the derrick and rig of which burned recently when the well was brought in, was being crowned with a new derrick and rigging. The Rosenfield test, south of the Joiner discovery well, was drilling in chalk at about 2,680 feet. Among the companies interested in it are Cranfill and Germany of Dallas.

The Bateman No. 1, in the northern part of the county, northwest of the discovery well, has topped Austin chalk at 3,475 feet, which is about 25 feet lower than the Foster test and about 50 feet lower than the Arkansas Gas and Fuel Company No. 1, southeast of the

Extra Session Seen on World Court Problem

Leaders of Opposing Sides Agree Controversy Cannot Be Disposed of at Present Session of Congress

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 (AP)—Leaders of opposing sides in the senate controversy on the world court agreed today it could not be disposed of at this session but a division developed among its friends whether to urge a special session of the senate.

As chiefs in the impending contest considered a program, word was passed out by the court foes that a new checkup led them to count at least 28 votes in opposition.

This was eleven more than voted against early five years ago and is near the one-third necessary to defeat ratification.

Friends, Optimistic

Friends of the court said they were optimistic. At the same time President Hoover had to lunch on Secretary Stimson and Elihu Root who helped to draft the revised formula to meet the objections of other nations to the senate's reservation adopted five years ago.

It is the intention of the court advocates to have Mr. Root, a former secretary of state, appear before the foreign relations committee to explain the modified proposal. While many Republicans are opposed to reporting the protocol from the foreign relations committee now, lest it precipitate an extra session, there are apparently enough votes to get an early report.

Report Wanted

Chairman Borah, although an opponent of American participation, wants to have the protocol reported. Senator Swanson, Democrat, Virginia, a leader of the court pro-

Senator Walsh, of Montana, a Democratic member of the committee, and court advocate, likewise agreed it would be "utterly impossible" to dispose of the court and the urgent domestic problems at the short session. He urged a special session of the senate in the spring for consideration.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, an opponent of American adherence, predicted the senate would defeat the protocols. However, other foes contended themselves with declarations that their force had increased more than previously believed.

He Who Laughed Last Got Money

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12 (AP)—While M. E. Huiching was taking a walk near his home last night he was confronted by a robber. "Heh, heh!" chuckled Huiching. "The joke's on you. My money's in the bank." "We'll get some of it out," answered the robber, and using a pistol to enforce his orders, marched Huiching home, forced him to write a five dollar check then marched him to a corner store and forced him to cash it. "Heh, heh!" chuckled the thief as he started away. "You have not got so much now."

Sunday-School Lesson

BY DR. J. E. NUNN

General Topic—Saul of Tarsus; How A Pharisee Became A Christian
Scripture Lesson—Acts 22:3-15.

3. I am a Jew, born in Tarsus of Cilicia, but brought up in this city, at the feet of Gamaliel, instructed according to the strict manner of the law of our fathers, being zealous for God, even as ye all are this day.

4. And I persecuted this Way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5. An also the high priest doth hear one witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and journeyed to Damascus, to bring them also that were there unto Jerusalem in bonds to be punished.

6. And it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and drew nigh unto Damascus, about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7. And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8. And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9. And they that were with me beheld indeed the light, but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

10. And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

11. And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

12. And one Ananias, a devout man according to the law, well reported of by all the Jews that dwell there,

13. Came unto me, and standing by me said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And in that very hour I looked up on him.

14. And he said, The God of our fathers hath appointed thee to know his will, and to see the Righteous One, and to hear a voice from his mouth.

15. For thou shalt be a witness for him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

Golden Text—I count all things to be loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but refuse, that I may gain Christ.—Phil. 3:8.

Introduction
The apostle Paul is one of the best-known characters of antiquity; certainly of the Bible. For several reasons. We have a wonderful story about him (Acts) written by his intimate friend and companion Luke. We have a lot of his personal correspondence; and letters reveal personality, character, better than any other form of writing. Really to see Paul in his letters, however, one must take them for what they are—not essays, not theological treatises; but actual letters, written to real people, about matters of interest to him and them; and therefore more or less informal and conversational in style.

"Paul wrote a fourth of the New Testament and a Gentile physician, Luke, whom he mightily influenced, wrote another fourth of it. Of making books about Paul there is no end. He is perennially interesting because he is so alive. His words, as Luther said, have hands and feet. The whole world would today be different had Saul of Tarsus never lived. He gathered all the wisdom of his time into service of Christ. He is indeed Paul the Great. His name is above every name except the name of Jesus."

Sketch Of Paul's Life
Paul was born in Tarsus of Cilicia, about A. D. 1. He was converted on the Damascus Road, A. D. 36. He spent three years in Arabia, A. D. 36-38. He lived in Antioch, A. D. 38-42. His first missionary journey was in 42, the second in 50-52, the third in 53-57. Arrested in Jerusalem in 57, he was imprisoned in Caesarea from 57 to 59. His first Roman imprisonment was in 61 and 62, the second in 66, and his death came in A. D. 67.

Paul Was A Loyal Jew
"I am a Jew," v. 3. Paul, while working among Greeks and Romans, was always loyal to his Jewish ancestry and education; on going to a new city to introduce Christianity he always first sought out some synagogue, believing that the Jews should have the first chance at the wonderful blessings, which came in to the world through their race. He was a member of the tribe of Benjamin, that glorious little tribe which gave to the Jews their first king, Saul, after whom he was probably named. Saul had one sister, whose son played a noble part in preserving the apostle's life on the very occasion under review. His father was a Roman citizen, and Saul therefore possessed that dignity, of which he made good use on more than one occasion when his foes assailed him. Born in Tarsus of Cilicia, Cilicia was situated northwest of Syria at the northeast corner of the Mediterranean. Tarsus was its metropolis. In Paul's day Tarsus was at the height of its glory.

Paul's Conversion
From Jerusalem to Damascus was, approximately, a hundred and fifty miles. The journey gave ample time for reflection. Always in his mind there would be the story of the hated Nazarene that he had heard repeated by those pestiferous heretics. Some of the faces, radiant in death, of the martyrs, of Stephen, in particular, must have haunted him. Then suddenly—the light and the voice!

We are told that what happened was overwhelming and marvelous. No ordinary experience could have turned Saul straight about in his tracks and given him that impulse, that sent him on into a life of such enthusiastic devotion to Christ and hard self-denial for Christ's sake.

First, there was the casting down and the blinding. Then the vision of Jesus, and his words. "Why persecutest thou me?" The union of the believer with his Lord, notice, was afterward one of Paul's favorite teachings. In the blindness that followed he beheld what he had never seen before: his past in its real hatefulness; the wonderful works of God in Christ Jesus. "He blinds me that I may see," wrote Augustine. Obedience to the heavenly vision meant surrender to his hated enemy, the Nazarene.

Varieties Of Religious Experience
Many people have made the mistake of thinking that one man's conversion can be taken as a pattern for all men. Studying the conversion of Saul they have concluded that all genuine conversions must be sudden and revolutionary. If they themselves have had no such experience, they question the reality of their conversion. They apply the same standard to the conversion of others. Paul did not fall into this mistake. He did not require others to have the same kind of experience, and they usually did not.

Ananias Instructs Saul. (Paul) vs. 13-15
"Ananias came unto me," Paul's account is very condensed, for he was speaking to a restless audience. The Lord had come to Ananias in a vision and told him to seek out Saul in the house of Judas, in Straight Street, a splendid street running straight through the city, and, laying his hands upon him, restore his vision. Ananias knew of Saul's errand to Damascus, and was afraid to go till the Lord told him of Saul's change of heart and life. And standing by me said unto me, Brother Saul! In that word,

"Brother," he received Saul into the Christian family. "Receive thy sight." And he filled with the Holy Spirit." Ananias added (Acts 9:17). "And in that very hour I looked up on him." Saul's sight, however, was not fully restored, but there are indications of his dimness of vision throughout the narrative, and usually he had to dictate his letters to amanuensis. "God hath appointed thee to know his will." Of ten at the opening of his letters Paul speaks of himself as "an apostle according to the will of God." "For thou shalt be a witness for him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard." This commission from the Lord, which Ananias transmitted, was more definite, including the information that he was to preach before Gentiles and kings as well as Jews, and to suffer much for Christ's sake (Acts 9:15, 16).

Paul The Writer
"Paul has been the most influential of all religious writers. He gave the watchword of the Christian Reformation, Justification by faith. He gave the watchword to the Wesleyan movement, 'The witness of the Spirit to conversion and entire sanctification.' These have been the most important revivals in the history of the church, but it would be safe to say that no great church revival anywhere down the centuries or on any of the continents has failed to base itself on the teaching of Paul as recorded in his Epistles. These Epistles formulated the theology of the church, and they have been the church's chief authority in this field ever since." "If Paul's Epistle could perish, the loss to literature would be the greatest possible with only one exception—that of the Gospels which record the life, the sayings, and the death of our Lord. They have quickened the mind of the church as no other writings have done, and scattered in the soil of the world hundred of seeds whose fruit is now the general possession of mankind." While the Epistles to the Romans and to the Ephesians are the greatest, each Epistle has its elements of supremacy and wonderful power.

Paul The Christian Hero
"Unmoved and undefeated, and, we may be sure, with his face shining, as Stephen's shone that memorable day in Paul's youth, he went to meet his death. They could kill his body with their sharp sword, but they could not crush his spirit or conquer his faith and hope. When his eyes could no longer see Rome with its capital and its coliseum, he could see his Christ, and when his ears could not hear the shouting and the cries of the people, he could hear a gentle voice say: 'Well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of thy Lord.' The hero got home with God at last."

Letters To Santa Claus

The first batch of 1930 "Letters To Santa Claus" will appear in the columns of tomorrow's Avalanche-Journal and the rest of the scores of letters to jolly St. Nick will appear in papers to come between Sunday and the Yuletide.

A half hundred have been already received—there will be many more before the "shouting is over." And while nobody but the young correspondents and their parents care much about "Santa Claus Letters," there is something touching, something so trusting in these laborious scrawls that start "Dear Santa," "Somehow another Christmas wouldn't be Christmas without them and they have come to be as much a part of the holidays as the trimmed evergreen itself.

We are not urging "Santa Claus" letters from all over the South Plains and from every child in Lubbock because copying them, editing them and printing them is a big job in a busy season. But if little Bill and Mary feel that they just must write to Santa, send their contributions along and we'll try to get them in the paper.

SEX AND THE TALKIES

Few observers, it is believed, will go as far as a certain theater operator who believes that an excess of sex in the films is causing many parents to break their children of the "movie" habit, but most of them will concede that sex is often badly handled by Hollywood and that the producers are largely at fault when theater attendance falls off.

Modern parents are too liberal and tolerant to do much censoring for their progeny. Those who place limitations on their children's attendance at the "talkies" do so for other reasons than cinema faults. Moreover, it seems that among one's acquaintances the severest critics of the films or those who seldom if ever see a picture and who are children. Imagination takes the place of reality with them.

However, this matter of sex is but a detail. It never people are going to the "movies," it is because they have found that the realization too seldom comes up to the expectation. There are too many mediocre or worse pictures interspersed with the excellent to make it a good gamble for the film fan.

Mass production has been introduced in the motion picture industry, with the apparent result that quality is being sacrificed for quantity. It is a pity that the industry in the world to work with, is producing so few cinema classics.

Thus it would appear that the financial backers of the producers, if they are—as is reported—interesting themselves in what their money is producing, could not do better than to modify a practice under which pictures are accepted, not because they are good, but because maximum production must be maintained.

HIGH TOLL

Experience proves that most industrial eye accidents are preventable, yet statistics prove that industrial accidents are the cause of 15 per cent of all blindness in the United States. This frightful toll of blindness gives pause for sober thought.

This situation seems the more appalling because of the gratifying progress made against blindness resulting from infant diseases. In 20 years blindness due to this source has been reduced by one-half. It is manifest that this important work has just begun.

When one reflects upon the enormous number of babies who are either born blind or become so shortly after birth, and upon the high rate of industrial blindness, a realization of the importance of the preventive work dawn on the mind.

That this work should be carried on and rendered in a large degree nugatory by carelessness in handling industrial machinery seems tragic indeed, that it should be spoiled by improper or defective machinery seems too horrible to think about.

Much depends on this generation whether the next must carry the tremendous burden of a large blind population due to the carelessness of workers or the negligence of employers.

If only the dear things wouldn't get the bloom of youth higher on one cheek than on the other.

Practical Health Problems

WHOOPING COUGH IS DANGEROUS

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Of all of the diseases that scientific medicine attempts to control, whooping cough seems to be most difficult. It is generally lightly regarded because most people seem to recover from it readily.

The disease is, however, extremely dangerous to small children from the point of view of life. In older children it is not infrequently followed by pneumonia or tuberculosis, and hence represents a menace from that point of view.

The control of whooping cough by health authorities is extremely difficult because it seems impossible to isolate or quarantine cases and families for a sufficiently long time to prevent spread of the disease.

Mothers and fathers permit the children to begin playing outdoors as soon as they are free from fever, yet if they continue to cough, the secretions may contain the responsible infectious agent.

The disease is, moreover, infectious at an early stage and children are not put to bed and kept alone until after they have been infected for some time. In this condition and in measles, particularly, it is important to get the child to bed as early as possible and to keep him indoors until a physician has pronounced it safe for him to play with other children.

The methods of relief of whooping cough are numerous. It is possible to keep the child quiet by the use of properly selected drugs. It is possible to make the infected child comfortable and to control intestinal vomiting by proper measures.

Not infrequently such children become anemic due to the long period spent indoors and the difficulty of eating and assimilating food. In such cases, it is important to build up the child through proper diet before it is permitted to return to its usual activities.

So far as is now known, the vaccines and serums used for the prevention and treatment of whooping cough have not been proved scientifically to be efficacious in the vast majority of cases. Medical research continues to spend much time on the problem, and undoubtedly some specific method of treatment that is effective will be secured.

What Other People Think

This depression will soon pass and we are about to enter a period of prosperity the like of which no country has ever seen before; a new era of big business working in the fulfillment of its social obligations.—Walter C. Gilford.

There is more culture in housework, as it was done in the old days, than in all the things women pretend are splitting in this new era.—O. K. Chesterton.

It is true that music hath charms. Rhythm and harmony serve to soothe the tired business man or business woman, as well as the tired mother of a family after the children have been put to bed.—Dr. C. O. Thompson, director of the Health Division of the National Safety Council.

Years Shroud War Stories

By CHARLES F. STEWART

Central Press Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The World War may be over with a third of a century before the government's official record of it is completed.

It was 28 years after the Civil War ended before the 140 volumes, known collectively as "War of the Rebellion Records," made their appearance. At the present rate, World War records will take as long.

The navy department could begin publishing its records of the World War on short notice, if it had the money to do it.

Not so the department of war. The war college's historical section is still indexing the mass of orders, reports and assorted documents. No one will estimate when all the material will be ready for the printer.

"WAR OF THE REBELLION RECORDS" and a corresponding naval series of about 10 volumes are not histories, in the ordinary acceptance of the term, of the army's and navy's activities during the war of secession.

No regularly linked-up history of any of the armed struggles ever has been undertaken by Uncle Sam, nor is such a thing contemplated.

The records are available for the information of private historians, but formal history writing appears to be one of the industries which the government regards as best left to individual enterprise.

IN THE SELECTION and arrangement of material for their parallel civil war publications, the army and navy compilers exercised their discretion; not otherwise.

Trivial papers were omitted. Records are grouped by campaigns, geographically and chronologically. Both sides' orders and reports are included—first the Union commanders', then the Confederates', period by period.

Some are dry and perfunctory; some dramatic and colorful. They are the official accounts of their own and their followers' deeds told by thousands of mostly dead and gone officers, in as many different styles.

THE ARMY'S World War compilation is being shaped and the navy's is virtually completed along substantially the same lines.

The navy's historical section has perhaps not worked faster; the army's has much the greater volume of records to handle. The world conflict (at least after America's entrance) changed to be a war which was marked by more incidents on land than at sea.

It was a struggle, too, in which American operations overlapped those of various foreign forces. Only recently the navy department received the British admiralty's consent to the publication among American documents of all those of British origin which, in their nature, are necessary to a complete understanding of the doings of the fleet under the stars and stripes.

The war department will need similar authorization from French as well as English sources before issuance of its series, whenever that may be.

NEITHER DEPARTMENT has assembled, in printed and bound form, the records of any of the country's wars prior to the one between the states, or of America's short clash with Spain.

Original documents, pretty thoroughly classified and indexed, are available, indeed, relating to the Cuban campaign, with its more distant ramifications, as are records of the war with Mexico and even of the War of 1812—although they are not so satisfyingly complete as to this latter conflict.

American seamanship, to be sure, gave a brilliant account of itself during the 1812 trouble, but the navy department was only 14 years old, and there was good deal of informality in its methods, and not much less in the war department's. Typewriters had not been invented then, carbon copies equally were unknown, and although written orders sometimes were kept, more often they were not, not to mention the fact that the greater part of them never were written at all.

As for the Revolutionary fighting, samples of its official literature class as curiosities. Aside from being scarce to begin with, a large share of them were destroyed by the British following their capture of Washington in 1814. A very small book would hold all of them that are known to exist today.

CLOSE ADHERENCE Industry, in its efforts to standardize production and eliminate waste has received much aid from the bureau of standards at Washington, which has taught concerns in all lines of business that a steady increase in industrial efficiency makes possible the chief assurance of high purchasing power for the mass of the people. Wonders have been accomplished in the elimination of waste and in the standardization of machinery and specifications.

A bureau bulletin points out that "close adherence to standard weights and widths whenever possible in buying textiles makes for lower prices, wider assortment of supply and quicker deliveries. Those words, 'close adherence,' sound significant. Why not apply the rule to goods made and sold by Uncle Sam?

Postage stamps turned out by the bureau of engraving, with the aid of the expert knowledge and facilities of the bureau of standards, can stand a little more of that "close adherence."

In the matter of mass production the stamp situation is all that could be desired. But if the bureau of standards will develop an adhesive compound that will make stamps stick on the first moistening, the stamp-licking public will be grateful. Close adherence should begin at home.

Unemployment has one virtue. It is one issue Herbert Clark Hoover cannot straddle.

Sound judgment: The faculty that sprouts from a collection of blisters.

Naughtiness is not more prevalent than of yore. It is just less sneaking.

Life: A conception seven parts imagination and three parts yellow streak.

Rheumatism may have been Nature's first primitive effort to establish a weather bureau.

In these bootleg days it isn't the neighbor's income that is puzzling so much as the how come.

CHAPTER LX
A man in tall hat and dinner clothes jostled against Barney Shields and begged his pardon. Shields muttered a reply and strode on. He looked neither to left nor right but shouldered through the crowd. Someone knocked his hat. Shields caught it just in time to keep it from falling.

The sickening realization that Celia was lost to him—lost utterly—blinded the young man. He did not know where he was going. He did not care.

Then he became aware that someone was shouting. It was his name, shouted by a crowd. He looked back. He saw a man in a top hat and dinner clothes shouting "Mr. Shields! Oh, Mr. Shields!"

Barney turned. A small man, looking very excited, was running toward him calling his name. The man stopped about a group and reappeared. It was Edward, the butler.

Too disturbed to find this performance strange, Shields waited. "What do you want?" he demanded when the butler reached him.

Edward was out of breath. "She's—she's over there!" he gasped. "She wants to see you."

The electric spark of hope kindled and died instantly. Edward was gasping for a figure half way the deck. Shields was not sure that he saw the person Edward was pointing out, but certainly it was not Celia. Celia was nowhere in sight.

"Who is it?" What does she want me for?" The butler was struggling to regain his lost breath and seemed incapable of replying but he urged Shields in the direction from which he had come. For an instant the young man hesitated. Then he followed.

They had gone 10 yards when Shields uttered a sharp exclamation. He brushed past an intervening group, broke into a run and halted before a woman in black.

"Mrs. Rogers!" he cried. "How did you get here?" He caught the woman in his arms, staring down at her.

Margaret Rogers' brown eyes were wide and terrified. "Oh, Barney, I was so afraid I couldn't find you! I came as quickly as I could. What has happened? Where's Celia? Oh, I must know!"

Barney's arms fell. "You come for Celia?" he asked.

"Of course. Where is she? All I know is that servant said something dreadful had happened and you and her father had come to his boat. Where is she?"

The young man's lips were set. "I'm afraid it's too late even for you to do anything now."

"Barney?" The mother's voice was hysterical.

"Oh, she's here all right. She's up on the next deck with the good-for-nothing she's married. Her father tried to stop her but he couldn't do anything."

"Married! Celia's married?" "I'll take you up if you want to see her."

"Oh, Barney, it can't be! Not Celia!"

"Now stop filling on bread."

The Woman's Angle

BY BLANCH E. BEAN
Avantage Woman's Editor

SO FAR, I haven't received any lists of qualifications for husbands. This may mean that the women aren't particular; it may mean that the men are already all that one can desire, and it may possibly mean that no one cares much about the whole thing. One man did comment on my list. He thinks that I am asking a lot. That was good enough for an argument. I thought I was rather liberal and, anyway, I had a loop-hole when I said that I would modify the list after a fair trial.

BETTER SAY IT

IF YOU haven't written your short story or some poetry yet, you might just as well go ahead and get it done. I mean, from what I can see and hear, the practically everyone in the world decides at one time or another that he can be a great writer and attempts some literary flights.

I'm no better than the rest. I had a great idea for a short story one time and sat down one rainy afternoon to write it. It was all finished in a half-hour and I let some of my friends and family read it. Needless to relate, they were not wildly enthusiastic about the masterpiece. I've still got it though. It can be one of my post-humous publications.

Newspaper people have occasion to know considerable about these literary aspirations. There is hardly a week that someone doesn't come in with some poetry that he has written or that his 9-year-old son or daughter has composed. We are offered enough themes and stories and other composition to fill the paper.

There is this about it, the ability to write is democratic. One never knows that he can't be a Shakespeare of a Kipling until he has tried it.

EASY SHELLING

IF YOU pour boiling water over pecans before you start shelling them, you will find it much easier to get the most out of the whole.

IF I TROTE SPORTS

EVERY time I read a sportswriter's column, I think about what an easy life he leads. He can say just what he thinks about people all of the time and quote others with equal temerity.

Some day I'm going to try that style of writing. I could say, for instance:

The society women have really wrought well during the past season and, although the social roster during the last three years has boasted some mighty fine bridge parties, much of the credit for the parties is due to the hostesses who have worked tirelessly trying to keep up with the Joneses. But our object today is not to toss out a flock of bouquets to the matrons who have been behind all of this entertaining but to point out some interesting facts about some of the players.

Mrs. John Doe, the pride of the Chatty Circle and what have you, has done several things socially since she moved into Lubbock. There may have been better all-around card players in town in years gone by but we doubt it. One of the most outstanding records compiled by Mr. Doe's wife is that she has picked and made high score at six parties hand running for three days in succession and has never failed to pass out the good old line of gab while she slapped the cards on the board.

By the way, we hear it rumored that Mrs. Doe is going to try her hand at backgammon during the coming season and that some of her contemporaries of the cards are to go with her into the new tilt.

It is odd that Miss Blank has failed to make a single dance during the present season. Dame Rumor has it that she has lost some of the old pep and sparkle and that her season of hits closed in 1929. However, it is right there with the spirit, however, and has been seen at beauty parades and gymnastics regularly since the opening of the

"We have heard that some people who are entitled to a refund for factors or other purposes, are using the gasoline in their motor cars. This is a law violation."

Mr. Holt explained that four cents a gallon refund is made for non-highway purposes. The state averages a refund of $160,000 a month according to Mr. Holt.

Slaton Tigers Best Team for Opening Round

Olney Cubs Forced to Rise to Supreme Heights to Win by 13-6 Count After Slaton Scores Early in Game

(Special to The Avalanche) OLNEY, Dec. 12.—A brilliant Olney Cub football team rose to supreme heights here today and turned a determined Slaton Tiger team away with the short end of a 13 to 6 score.

With the victory went the regional championship, the second in two years for Albert Ackers' team.

The score doesn't tell half the story. After trailing at the half on a 4 to 0 score, the Olney team fought the Tigers off its feet in the second half. Slaton made 8 first downs to 6 for the Cubs in the first half and had the better of the argument from the standpoint of yardage gained.

Alford intercepted an Olney pass deep in enemy territory and the heavier Tiger team plunged across for its only score, which looked like it was enough to win. But the Cubs said no.

Cubs Come Back Powerful When the second half began it was evident that Ackers had closed all the gaps in the Cub line for the day. Sullivan, W. Gilmore, and Kuehn leading the line before the brilliant, hard driving backs, Goode, Graves, Duckworth, and Goldsmith, 11 first downs to 4 for Slaton were registered in that finish that is typical of Coach Ackers' team. O'Brien, who plays center on offense and half back on defense, turned in a brilliant performance. Graves and Alford backed out of the line on passes and stopped the Slaton crew on numerous occasions.

Alford intercepted an Olney pass deep in enemy territory and the heavier Tiger team plunged across for its only score, which looked like it was enough to win. But the Cubs said no.

Faculty Committee Is Still The Papa In Southwest Loop

BY GAYLE TALBOT JR., Associated Press Sports Writer. DALLAS, Dec. 12.—One point about which there had been considerable disagreement, was settled very definitely at the meeting of the association of Texas colleges here yesterday.

It now can be said without fear of successful contradiction that the faculty committee of seven, presided over by Dr. Daniel Penick of the University of Texas, is ruling and will continue to rule Southwest Conference athletics. Any individual or groups of individuals who might have imagined they had their hands on the steering wheel simply were mistaken.

Wise Birds Were Wrong. Prior to yesterday's star session, it had been announced quite confidently by those "in the know" that the faculty committee would rescind its pet rule penalizing seniors who play in post-season football scrimmages. It was all cut and dried it was said, and the vote would be 5 to 2 to abolish the statute.

Imagine the surprise when it seeped from the "big" room that the rule had been ratified by the same vote as last year, 4 to 3. Officials of the Dixie Classic, vitally interested in abolishing the dictum, refused to take the word of this reporter and a companion, and went to find out for themselves. Even though the governing body later granted the plea of Pres. Joe Utay of the Dixie Classic that the rule be waived for this season, it was made clear that it would stand henceforward.

Things Learned at Powwow. At the big meeting, Learned that Southern Methodist will not play such a rip-tearing interscholastic grid schedule next year as had been planned. The conference fathers suggested, in a nice way, that the Ponies hold it down.

Coach "Big" Daugherty expects to have a fair basketball team at Rice, but regrets the loss of his two star forwards, Hart and Hess. Jimmy St. Clair said his Southern Methodist quintet would be stronger than last year, though lacking an experienced center.

Armed Plays Great Game. The Slaton team was not without its stars. The forward wall by Captain Arms played a whale of a game, in the ball carrying department. Cannon was the big gun. He was ably assisted by Johnson, Alford, and Rucker. The play of Nowell at end was outstanding as was that of Poteet, a big tackle.

Olney Leads First Downs. First downs were 16 to 12 for Olney. It was in the passing game that the Cub team showed its greatest superiority, completing 12 of 22. Two were intercepted. Slaton completed 5 of 21 and had three interceptions, one for a touchdown. Punting averages were slightly in favor of the Olney team because several of Slaton's punts were partially blocked. His average was 33 yards on eleven tries. Goode kicked off a 27 yard average on 4 tries.

Sandies Ready For Corsicana In Semi-Finals

Winner of Amarillo-Tiger Tilt Favored to Win Big Championship Game; Austin Meets Tyler High Today

(By The Associated Press) FORT WORTH, Dec. 12.—After a brisk workout at the T. C. U. stadium here this afternoon, the Amarillo Sandies doffed their football uniforms and headed for Corsicana where they meet the Tigers of that city tomorrow in a semi-final game of the state high school gridiron race.

Amarillo presented a much larger line than expected. "We're in great shape and will be in there doing our best," declared Coach Cherry of the Sandies.

(By Associated Press) CORNICANA, Dec. 12.—Corsicana and Amarillo high schools will clash in their semi-final interscholastic league championship tilt on Tiger Field here tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in the outstanding game of the season for this section.

The rival coaches, John Pierce of Corsicana, and Blair Cherry of Amarillo, reported their charges in excellent physical condition, with full strength of both clubs available.

A special train, carrying 1,000 Amarillo Sandie followers, will arrive shortly before noon. The team was due to arrive late tonight from Fort Worth, where it worked out on the Texas Christian university gridiron this afternoon.

The Corsicana Jungle Beasts, undefeated and untied this season, were prepared to spend their full force of power, strategy and aerial effectiveness against the running and passing attack boasted by the Golden Sandies, pride of the Panhandle.

Probable lineups: Amarillo—Floyd and Conaley, ends; Montgomery and Estes, tackles; Foster and Allen, guards; Glass, center; Fowler, quarter; Scanlan and Hancock, halves; Bustin, fullback. Corsicana—Stewart and Pryor, ends; Richardson and Speed, tackles; Stamps and Middleton, guards; Vanderlian, center; Hornback, quarter; Ross and Wilson, halves; Clarke, fullback.

Austin Maroons Tackle Tyler Lions Today

AUSTIN, Dec. 12.—The Austin High Maroons and the Tyler Lions went through final workouts this afternoon for their semi-final game tomorrow which will decide the opponent of the winner of the Corsicana-Amarillo game for the state high school football championship.

The Lions arrived shortly after noon and, after taking a rest at their hotel, went to the scene of tomorrow's fray for a signal drill and limbering up exercise. They were followed by the Maroons.

Coach Benny Strickland, Maroon mentor, said he was not confident of victory and admitted the Tyler outfit will be a hard one to crack.

The Maroons, according to Strickland are in bad shape as the re-telling of the loss of Buster Nelson, captain and star half back who will be out with an injury to his shoulder. Strickland said this would seriously handicap the Reds since a large portion of the plays have been built around Nelson.

Mexicans Hold Annual Affair

Over Seven Hundred Women, Men and Children Attend Celebration Here Friday to Commemorate Saint

From Lubbock and surrounding territory nearly 700 Mexican men, women and children came Friday to St. Joseph's Catholic church in the Mexican quarter here to attend the annual Feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe in commemoration of four centuries of her patronage.

As the day of homage and festivity began at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning, the pews were filled and many persons stood during solemn high mass in St. Joseph's church. Priests from nearby towns gathered there with Rev. Gregory Beckman, pastor of the church.

Following the religious ritual, the day was devoted to feasting and a subsequent dance lasted far into the night. In the tradition of the people of Mexico, Friday marked the 20th anniversary of the appearance of the Blessed Virgin to an Indian boy, Juan Diego, near Mexico City.

Honage was paid to the patron saint of the Mexican people before the gay festival began.

Rev. Joseph Wunderly, of Pampa, was celebrant; Rev. Raphael Kriemer, of Childress, was deacon; Very Rev. Thomas D. O'Brien, of Slaton, was sub-deacon, and Rev. Thomas Burger, O. S. B., from Nazareth, was master of ceremonies.

Rev. Charles Dvorak, of Littlefield, relative of Anton Dvorak, composer of "Humoresque," preached today's sermon. Priests present in the sanctuary were Rev. John Dolje, from Umpire, Rev. Edward Clinton, from White Deer, and Rev. Mr. Beckman.

"Hurrah For The Slaton Tigers!"

An Editorial Praising Our Neighbor Boys on Grid Prowess

AFTER more than three quarters of air-tight football, during which they led by a score of 6 to 0, the Tigers of Slaton High school met defeat at Olney yesterday by a score of 13 to 6.

But even though the Tigers lost, Lubbock, like Slaton, is proud of them. It was just "one of them times" when things went wrong and the Lubbock county lads from the Santa Fe city saw the tide go against them and victory turned to defeat. Although they lost at Olney yesterday, the Slaton Bengals have showed a good part of the state that the Class B teams of the South Plains can—and do—play real football. And even in the face of their heart-breaking defeat, the Morning Avalanche asks permission to chime in with Slaton on the well known war-cry:

"Hurrah for the Slaton Tigers!"

Cadets And Midshipmen Draw Up In Battle Line

BY TED VOSBURGH Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—A unique athletic episode marking the greatest service ever rendered by the game of college football to the cause of charity will bring together the football teams of the United States Naval and Military academies in the Yankee Stadium tomorrow before a crowd estimated at 70,000.

The ranks of those who will flock to the Yankee Stadium to see the ancient rivalry renewed in the interests of the public good after a three-year break were swelled by a last-minute ticket boom which lasted all day despite dismal weather. No rain is predicted for tomorrow but the final workouts of the Army and Navy squads were held on wet fields in a drizzle.

The Navy worked out on the scene of the battle while the Army ran through its final drill a few miles outside the city, where the squad is bivouacked. Although light work was in order for both Midshipmen and Cadets, the athletes moved with a snap and vigor that forecast one of the hardest fought games in Army-Navy annals.

First Since 1927. Not since 1927 have the Army and Navy met on the gridiron and all the built-up rivalry of three years will be released at the moment of the kick-off. Neither Coach Bill Ingram of the Navy nor Ralph Sasse of the Army was able to announce a definite starting lineup, both backfields remaining in doubt until shortly before game time.

In the colorful crowd will be numerous notables from Washington including the Secretaries of war and navy. With tickets ranging up to $50, the game is the highest priced affair in the history of football. All arrangements have been handled by a joint salvation army-children's committee headed by Grover Whalen, former New York City police commissioner.

Lubbock Gridders Mix In Scrimmage

Lubbock ex-Westerners, who meet the Spur High School Bulldogs in a benefit game next Wednesday at the Texas Tech field will rest from practice labors today after a week of extensive training and drill on the Fair Park field.

A stiff scrimmage between two fairly evenly matched teams constituted the bulk of the workout yesterday, and a small crowd of spectators received no little thrill at seeing the hard playing on the field. Both Texas Tech and Lubbock high school players appeared in either lineup and tackled, blocked, ran, charged and interfered as though in a competitive series.

With the exception of two or three candidates, all of those working out on the Fair Field have just completed a season of hard football, and are in the best of physical condition and with a thorough knowledge of the game. A lineup consisting of regular players of the Tech varsity and freshman teams, and of the 1930 Westerner team will face the powerful Spur High School Bulldogs on the field next Wednesday.

As things now stand, it appears that Coach Henry Franks' starting lineup will consist of: Dub Lawson, Moody Smith, Mina Watkins and Yancy Price in the backfield, with Bill Teal, Whitesides, Allen, Barton, L. L. McCreary, and Friswell in the line. All of these, with the exception of Friswell, former star tackle for the Westerners, are regulars on the Tech grid team.

Reports from Spur are to the effect that the club is coming strong, with a determination to win and a team that has passed over everything which came in its path this season. The Bulldogs defeated the Post All-Stars, 26 to 0, yesterday.

Strib Gets Best Of Tuffy

Decision Wins 10-Round Bout For Stribling

Griffiths Gives Him Tough Scrap All the Way; Fight May Have Resulted in Heavyweight Title

(By The Associated Press) CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Young Stribling defeated Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Iowa, heavyweight, in a ten round battle in the Chicago Stadium tonight, winning the decision of the referee and judges.

CHICAGO STADIUM, Chicago, Dec. 12. (P)—W. L. "Young" Stribling, risked his acclaimed position as outstanding challenger for the heavyweight championship by engaging Tuffy Griffiths, shifty and dangerous Sioux City, Ia., contender in a ten round battle in the Chicago Stadium tonight.

The bout between the pride of Dixie and the midwesterner was regarded as the most significant in the heavyweight division since the start of the winter season.

The National Boxing Association, through a proclamation by Gen. John V. Cimin, president of the N. B. A., and chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, announced it would recognize the winner of the Griffiths-Stribling bout as champion, due to the failure of Max Schmeling to defend his title six months after winning it. However, the ruling of General Cimin must be ratified by each of the states holding membership in the N. B. A.

Communications will be dispatched to each of them tomorrow requesting a vote.

Bat Battallino Defends Title Over Chocolate

MADISON, SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Dec. 12. (P)—Bat Battallino, featherweight champion, Hartford, Conn., successfully defended his title tonight by winning the decision in a 15-round engagement with Kid Chocolate, the fading Cuban, in the feature bout of the Christmas fund show. The crowd boomed the decision lustily. Battallino was floored for a count of nine in the first round. He weighed 124 1-2 pounds, Chocolate 125.

Sacrifice Fly Is Legislated Out Of Baseball Rulings

(By The Associated Press) NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The sacrifice fly was legislated out of existence today by baseball's joint rules committee, meeting in the Hotel Commodore.

From now on when a batter left a lofty fly to the outfield and enables a runner to advance a base he will not be credited with a sacrifice and he will be charged with a time at bat.

Proponents of the change insisted the sacrifice fly had no place in the rules. They pointed out that in most cases batters had no intention of hitting a high fly to the outfield so the runner could advance a base. Instead most of them were swinging for home runs or a bit of some desperation. Therefore, they argued, he should be charged with a time at bat just as he is when he lifts a fly which does not permit a runner to advance or which comes within the range of the fielder.

Captain Brode Puckett Stars to Score All of Bulldogs' Points; Meet Ex-Westerners Here Wednesday

SPUR, Dec. 12. (Special.)—Led by Capt. Brode Puckett, who scored 26 points, the Spur Bulldogs defeated Post All-Stars, 26 to 0, today at Fair Park. Spur made 11 first downs to Post's 8. Post tried two passes but failed to connect with either. Spur passed 7 times, completing two for 43 yards.

Barrett was the outstanding defensive star for Spur with Cross, Thaxton and Floyd for Post. Puckett and Jim Hahn were the offensive stars.

Lamesa Home Run. Another important change limits the runner to two bases when the ball bounces off the playing field. This rule was designed to prevent "trick home runs" made when the ball took a hop into the stands.

GIRL GRIDDERS PLAY

Amherst High Girls Don Grid Uniforms for Rough Fight

AMHERST, Dec. 12. (Special.)—The Blues and the Whites, Amherst high school girl grid teams, fought it out on the local gridiron today in a charity game and the result was a 24-to-0 victory for the Blues and a handsome purse for the unfortunate. A large crowd of local fans turned out to see the girls in molesters put on a well-played football game. Hard tackling and smart running was displayed on both sides. Iva Grimes was the star for the Blues. Once she intercepted a Whites pass and tripped out 25 yards for a touch-down. Fay Collins, Minnie Gordon and Maurine Boyd were outstanding in the Whites attack and defense.

Heart Hungry

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN
AUTHOR OF "DREAM ROMANCE"

"I'll fool you!" Margaret Rogers' eyes flashed fire. "Young man, my daughter is coming with me!"

"But she's not!" Suddenly Celia flung her head up. "I will not stay!" she cried. "And you can't talk to me that way! Let me go—!"

She pulled her arm free and ran toward the stairs. In the doorway she met Mitchell and Sheldie. "Oh, father!" Celia sobbed. "Let's go home!"

Margaret Rogers followed immediately after the girl. "We'd better hurry," she said. "I think it's nearly sailing time."

They descended quickly. As they reached the dock below the cry rang out once more: "All ashore who's going ashore!"

Edward, a frightened and pathetic figure, waited on the pier. He brightened as he saw the four coming toward him. "Will you wait the car now, sir?" he asked Mitchell. "I thought they were in the Ramsey Park drawing room."

Mitchell nodded. Celia still clung to her mother's arm and the three men followed down the length of the pier. They found Mitchell's limousine still got inside. A heavy embarrassment hung over the group. None of them understood all that had happened.

"What I'd like to know," Mitchell said after they had ridden for a time in silence, "is how you got here, Margaret?"

"It's hardly clear in my own mind," the woman answered. "I arrived in Baltimore this afternoon and went to the apartment Mrs. Schultz said you'd been trying to find me. I can't understand it. John, I wrote you a letter before I went to the sanitarium. Didn't you get it?"

"Sanitarium? What letter?"

"I sent you a note in a letter to Celia. I remember—it was before your birthday. You see, I thought you ought to know how to reach me!"

"I never got that letter," (Neither Mitchell nor Celia recalled the evening Evelyn Parsons had been left alone in the drawing room with Margaret's message.) "What did you say about a sanitarium?"

"I've been there. The doctor told me I had to go and I'm feeling so much better! Really, it's wonderful!"

Celia looked up. "I knew something was the matter," she said. "I knew you wouldn't go away unless you were sick!" She caught her mother's hand and held it.

"But I'm not sick any more, darling. I'm well! As soon as I talked to Mrs. Schultz I took the train. And when I reached the house the bottle wanted I should go to that boat."

Edward in the front seat beside the chauffeur kept his eyes discreetly forward. There were few conversations in the Mitchell home on which he was not conversant.

All of them wanted to ask questions and get all of their hesitations. Most of all Mitchell was afraid to quiz his daughter. Celia had returned and it was Margaret who had worked this miracle. Better leave the rest to Margaret.

The curious suspended feeling which is the aftermath of emotion and excitement rested over the four as they stepped out of the car. Edward held open the door and the others entered the house. Then Margaret took charge of the situation.

"Celia and I would like to be alone for a while," she said. "Will you leave us, please?"

Mitchell and Sheldie departed in the direction of the study. Margaret sat down on theavenport and drew the girl beside her.

"What is it that has happened?" she asked tenderly. "Tell mother."

It was some time before Celia could speak coherently. Then she launched into a recital of loneliness and desperation. Her mother had gone. Her father she believed had turned against her. Barney Sheldie no longer loved her. When Ted Jordan declared he would make her happy there seemed nothing else but to marry him.

"But—!" Margaret began, gripped in frozen fear.

"We were going to married in Havana," Celia confided. "I wanted to go to a justice of peace this afternoon but I wouldn't do that. I said it had to be a real wedding in a church!"

"Ask my father, you don't really love this man!"

"No."

Margaret gathered her daughter into her arms and held her tight. "Then you must never, never think of marrying him!" she declared. "Oh, Celia, suppose I'd been too late! Listen, darling, and remember what I'm going to tell you—"

Margaret paused and then in a tone voice she began: "I married your father because I loved him. I was a school girl, an orphan, and three weeks after the day we first met we were married. His mother disapproved and John quarreled with her. The first two years of our married life were the happiest I have ever known. You were born, and we got out of the habit of going about together. John worked hard, spending more and more time at the office. There were—trivial things, oh, I don't know—that caused quarrels. I felt neglected and mistreated. Things grew worse until finally—here Margaret's voice suddenly broke—"I did the most foolish and reckless thing a young wife could do. I left him!"

Celia was watching her mother wide-eyed.

"I went away," Margaret continued, "and he let me divorce him. There was no cause—only my foolish misjudgment! Love can't be toyed with, Celia. If you cast it aside it becomes a knife blade, turning, ever turning, in your heart. Time passed and I was lonely. I married Bob Rogers but the knife blade remained. Oh, my darling, I'm telling you all this so you won't make a hideous mistake! You must never marry without love, Celia, and you must never marry for anything else!"

"But, mother—if you still love father—"

"Hush! You are never to mention a word I have said."

There was a footstep in the room. Two pairs of startled eyes glanced up into John Mitchell's face.

"Margaret," the man said uncertainly, "why didn't you let me know? There was pleading and adoration in the voice."

Margaret Rogers rose. "You heard?" she began.

"Everything, Oh, my dearest—" Mitchell's arms closed about Margaret's shoulders. For an instant she clung there, then raised her head. Her lips met and at sight of the joyous radiance on those two faces Celia crept from the room.

She went out into the darkened hallway. A gleam of light beckoned from the library. Celia moved forward on tip-toe. A familiar pair of shoulders came in view.

The girl paused in the doorway. "Oh, Barney!" she called softly.

Barney came.

TO HOLD DANCE

The last all-college dance for the fall term of school will be held tonight in the Tech gym beginning at 9 o'clock. Price of admission will be $1.00 for stage and 75 cents for couples. Frank Stone and his colleagues will furnish the music.

At the beginning of the fall term it was decided to hold an all-college dance every two weeks during the year. This is "dead week" and no social activities are to be scheduled, but as no dance has been held in three weeks, officials announced the affair for tonight.

TEACHERS TO MEET
Approximately 40 teachers of Spanish from West Texas high schools and colleges are expected to gather here tonight to perfect a West Texas chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish. The teachers will meet at 2425 Broadway at 8 o'clock this evening.

At present there is no chapter of the organization nearer than Austin and teachers of Spanish from West Texas have expressed themselves as being in favor of a chapter here. The Tech Spanish department of which Prof. C. B. Qualia is head, is sponsoring the organization.

MAHONEY TO SPEAK
"Drough resistance in small fruits" is the subject Prof. C. H. Mahoney will discuss at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Horticulture sciences, which is to be held in Cleveland, O., during the Christmas holidays. Professor Mahoney is head of the Tech horticulture department.

Last year the meeting was held at Des Moines, Ia., and is to be in New Orleans in 1931. Professor Mahoney will be one of the principal speakers on the program at Cleveland.

SPONSOR PARTY
Aided by The Treador, Tech weekly publication, the "Y" association of the college is sponsoring a party for out-of-town students who will remain in Lubbock during the Christmas holidays. A turkey dinner is to be held and Jack Boyd, Tech YMCA secretary, is anxious to know how many students will remain here. Many students will be unable to leave Lubbock during the holidays, states Mr. Boyd, "and we are anxious to show them a big time."

It is probable that Santa Claus will be at the party. A committee composed of Mildred Hinda, H. Y. Price, Robert Martin and Don Wellman has been appointed to work out the program.

STUDY ALL NIGHT
"It's cram time for exam time" and Tech students have begun their regular "cramming" with the hopes of passing their courses during the last week of school. No social activities are scheduled for this week in order to keep the students at home as much as possible. It is reported that some of the students don't even go to bed during these "cram" days but stay up all night. B. E. Snyder, Jay Timmons and "Flop" Marshall are among the ones who came to school recently looking sleepy and telling long stories of how they studied all night.

SPEAKS TODAY
Mrs. William Dingus, head of the college Latin department, is scheduled to speak today at a meeting of the American Association of University Women in Amarillo. The gathering today is an open meeting. Headquarters for the association branch of this section of the state are in Amarillo.

ASK FOR COURSES
Petitions are being circulated among Tech students asking for the short story course to be taught next winter. Dr. A. B. Cunningham, member of the college English department, teaches the course.

A similar petition is being circulated asking for a new course in Spanish poetry. This course would be taught by Prof. C. B. Qualia, head of the college Spanish department.

REPORT MADE
Report of the honorary membership drive recently launched by the Tech Chamber of Commerce was heard at a meeting of the organization last night. Many Lubbock business men have joined the Tech organization as honorary members during the membership drive.

Julius Bergfeld, Tyler, is president of the Tech organization.

MAY PURCHASE TICKETS
More than 200 students artist course tickets are available, according to reports from Prof. W. R. Waggoner's office. Professor Waggoner is head of the music department and is in charge of the sale tickets. The tickets, sold earlier in the fall for $1.00, but may be bought now for 50 cents.

Three numbers remain on the course which primarily contained five. The Chervinsky trio will appear in the Tech gym on February 16, the Brahms quartet will be here March 20 and Dumesnil, famous pianist, will appear here April 16. More than 1,000 students tickets were sold last fall.

TO INSPECT PLANT
Seniors and juniors in the mechanical engineering department of the college will make an inspection trip of the Tuco power plant near Abernathy shortly after the Christmas holidays. The trip was planned some time ago, but rain caused postponement.

Seniors in the electrical engineering department already have inspected the plant.

COURSE OFFERED
A three-hour course in general history of architecture is offered for the spring and winter term under the direction of Prof. F. A. Klein-schmidt, head of the Tech architectural department.

The course will consist mostly of lectures and illustrations with slide lanterns.

Colonel Zack Miller Unhurt

Unknown Assailant Fires at Widely Known Rancher and Showman at His 101 Ranch in Oklahoma; Escapes

PONCA CITY, Okla., Dec. 12. (AP) — An unknown assailant made an attempt on the life of Colonel Zack Miller, widely known rancher and showman, last night at his 101 ranch near Marland, south of here, officers reported this afternoon.

The man fired a shot into the ranch house door jamb after Miller had answered a knock at the door and slammed it upon seeing a gun in the visitor's hand.

The intruder fled after firing the shot, before pursuit could be organized, Colonel Miller, only survivor of the famous Miller brothers who founded the 101 ranch show and operated a large model ranch, left today on a business trip to Mississippi without making an effort to learn the identity of the assailant.

Col. Miller has been vigorous recently in attempting to check thefts of cattle and hogs from the ranch.

Are MOTOR BUS Companies REGULATED?

YES

They are under the constant supervision and control of the Motor Transportation Division of the Texas Railroad Commission with headquarters in the State Capitol at Austin.

Four inspectors travel over the State continually checking up on motor bus operators and reporting violations of the law to the proper authorities, who prosecute these cases like any other offense.

Special permits must be obtained by bus companies before they can legally operate; insurance must be provided by the company and other requirements designed to promote the convenience and security of the traveling public are required of all legal operators.
