Wright defends his CIA disclosure

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright defended himself today against charges that he improperly disclosed a covert CIA operation in Nicaragua and Republican leaders formally asked for an investigation of his actions.

"I haven't revealed anything that was committed to me as secret or classified," Wright told a reporter. "I am not a member of the (House) intelligence committee. I have not been present at the secret, classified briefings. I have simply said what is generally known and what is true."

Wright on Tuesday said he had received "clear testimony" from the CIA that the agency had fomented opposition demonstrations in Nicaragua to provoke the leftist Sandinista government and sabotage peace talks. He told a reporter later that CIA officials had made the admission under congressional questioning.

Asked today if he had been revealing any confidences, Wright said, "Of course I'm not. And furthermore, don't you think that the Congress of the United States has a right to say what is and is not the policy of the government of the United States? Is the Congress to be just shunted aside and the wishes of a majority in the Congress to be ignored, and the government to be allowed to go on in a secret way and do those things that it professes it is not doing? Well of course not."

Meanwhile, House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., and Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., chairman of the House Republican Conference, asked for an investigation of Wright's actions in letters late Wednesday to the House ethics and intelligence committees.

"Because of the possibility such a disclosure (of classified information) may have occurred, we are writing to ask your committee to promptly and thoroughly investigate the circumstances surrounding these events and to recommend appropriate action to the House of Representatives," Michel and Cheney said in a letter to ethics committee chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif.

In a separate letter to Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the House intelligence panel, they asked for an immediate meeting of the committee "to discuss these matters, to ascertain whether any unauthorized disclosures have in fact occurred and to decide on an appropriate course of action."

House Republicans were meeting today to discuss the Wright matter and in particular to weigh its implications for legislation that would tighten congressional control over the CIA's covert activities.

The Reagan administration opposes the bill, which is scheduled for floor consideration next week. A version already has been passed by the Senate.

"The fact he has made (the disclosure) is serious," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the senior Republican on the House Intelligence Committee. "I am astounded to hear Sandinista propaganda coming out of the speaker's office."

Asked during a photo session Wednesday about Wright's comments, President Reagan said, "The reaction I have, and I think it should fit the speaker also, there is no way we should talk publicly about intelligence operations of any kind."

The tail of an American Airlines Boeing 727 rests on a runway at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport after landing on its belly Wednesday night.

Midlanders on evening flight forced to belly land at DFW

From Staff and Wire Reports

GRAPEVINE — National Transportation Safety Board investigators and American Airlines officials today were studying a damaged Boeing 727 airliner that slid for nearly one mile on one wheel and its belly after a landing gear failed.

The emergency landing came on Runway 18-L at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the same runway where another Boeing 727 crashed three weeks ago. The crash of Delta Airlines Flight 1141 on Aug. 31 resulted in 14 deaths.

One person was injured in Wednesday's emergency landing, an unidentified passenger injured an ankle when those inside evacuated American's Flight 135 on an emergency slide, said American spokesman John Hotard.

Two Midlanders, employees of Dunes Energy Inc., were among the 81 passengers and seven crew members on the 9 p.m. (CDT) non-stop flight from Oklahoma City when the pilot could not get one of two main landing gears in the rear of the plane to descend, Hotard said.

Engine fragment punctures aircraft

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A piece of the engine of a Pan Am Express commuter airplane broke off, punctured one of the craft's windows and entered the passenger cabin, injuring as many as nine people, authorities said.

A witness described a "loud bang" about 10 minutes before the four-engine DeHavilland-7 turboprop was due to land Wednesday at Albany County Airport with 13 passengers and three crew members aboard.

The pilot of Flight 878, which originated at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York City, said nothing to the passengers and the 50-seat craft appeared to land normally, said one passenger, A.K. Gupta said.

Despite reforms, 16 big firms pay no income tax

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — The landmark 1986 tax overhaul boosted the bite on 250 giant, profitable corporations by about $9 billion last year but still left 16 of them legally paying no federal income tax, a private research group said today.

The number among the 250 that paid no tax was down from 40 in 1986 and from a high of 72 in 1982, according to Citizens for Tax Justice, a labor-financed organization whose reports were credited with helping win passage of the new tax law two years ago.

The 1986 law cut tax rates for most individuals and corporations but took away or reduced several deductions and credits. One result was to shift about $125 billion of the federal tax burden from individuals to corporations over a five-year period.

"Tax reform has passed the most critical test of its effectiveness," Citizens for Tax Justice said in its report. "By putting most of the largest tax-avoiding corporations back on the tax rolls, it has struck a blow for fairness.

"Tax reform may not have made things less complex. Tax reform may not have cut everyone's tax bill. But tax reform has made great strides toward a system that puts all profitable corporations back on the tax rolls. And that should, over time, help restore public confidence in our tax system," the report stated.

The annual survey of corporate taxes is based chiefly on stockholder reports filed by the nation's 250 largest profitable corporations. The report deals only with taxes paid to the U.S. government during a given tax year and does not account for deferrals that could fall due in a future year.

DPS trooper resigns as charges filed

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The state trooper who investigated the fatal Midland Boys' Club crash has resigned after being arrested on charges of distributing cocaine.

David Borgas Gonzales, 26, of Sweetwater was being held in Abilene's Taylor County Jail on a federal charge of possession and delivery of a controlled substance, alleged to be cocaine, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said today.

Gonzales was arrested Tuesday morning at the Sweetwater station by his commanding officer, DPS Capt. W.D. Marsh, and DPS Narcotics Sgt. Don Bush, Cox said.

After his arrest, Gonzales was immediatetely suspended, Midland DPS Maj. Kenneth Bertling said.

"He was suspended, but he has submitted his resignation," Bertling said.

The investigation began about a week ago, the major said.

"We received information a week ago about it," Bertling explained. "It was a DPS undercover operation. It did not involve any (of Gonzales') on-duty time, and did not involve his station location."

Cox said no other charges have been filed in the case.

Gonzales started as a DPS recruit on June 13, 1984, and graduated from the DPS Academy on October 12, 1984. He had been assigned to the Sweetwater office since graduation, Cox said.

Although state officers conducted the operation, Gonzales was charged with a federal crime "because he is a police officer," Bertling said.

Nelson Bunker Hunt, left, and his brother, William Herbert Hunt, ride a New York City subway in August. Both now have filed for personal bankruptcy.

Hunts file bankruptcy; New trial still possibility

DALLAS (AP) — An attorney representing the Hunt brothers said he believes they stand a good chance of winning a new trial or having damages reduced in their legal battle with the Peruvian government's mining company.

Two of the multimillionaire brothers, Nelson Bunker and William Herbert Hunt, filed bankruptcy in Dallas on Wednesday, looking to avoid a required $225 million bond to appeal a federal court loss to Peru's Minpeco SA.

A U.S. District Court judge in New York has allowed a temporary stay against the bond.

"Given that Bunker Hunt was at one time one of the wealthiest men in the world, it's absurd to imagine they've come to this point," Thomas Gorman, trial attorney for Minpeco, told The Dallas Morning News upon hearing of the bankruptcy filings.

A federal jury decided Aug. 20 in New York that the two Hunts and brother Lamar Hunt must pay more than $130 million in damages for conspiring in the late 1970s to corner the world's silver market, and ruining the investments of Minpeco, the Peruvian government's mineral marketing company.

The Hunts maintain that Peru, as the second-largest producer of silver in the world, could only have profited as the silver price rose.

Bob Wolin, who represented the Hunts against Minpeco, said the case may not even need to reach the appeal stage.

"It's premature to discuss that," he said. "We have post-trial motions to consider first."

Harden among architects asked to bid on MC project

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A Midland College Board of Trustees subcommittee Friday will begin the search for an architect to design a $1.5 million construction and renovation project, an official confirmed Wednesday.

Among designers to be asked to submit a bid is Fort Worth architect Terry Harden, said MC President Jess Parrish this morning.

The original construction and subsequent additions at MC were designed either by Harden or by an associate at his former employer, the architectural firm of Midlander Preston Geren, said MC spokesman H.A. Tuck.

Harden is currently overseeing the $11.8 million Midland Independent School District elementary expansion plan.

The college president stressed that every architect in Midland and other cities as well will be invited to submit a bid for the construction job.

The architectural selection subcommittee — composed of MC trustees Parker Humes, John Cooper and Ken Peeler — will pare down the submissions to a group of about three or four architects who then would be then interviewed for the job, Parrish said.

An MC feasibility study commissioned six months ago resulted in the suggestion at Tuesday's board meeting to proceed with preliminary construction plans.

The study suggests that an additional 20,000 square feet be added to the MC Student Center to house services that relate to students, Tuck said.

That area is roughly the size of the current Student Center, Parrish added.

Money to fund the additions will come from the college's campus development fund balance, Parrish said.

Renovations at the student center will include the addition of office space for student personnel, counselors, the Dean of Students and the Registrar, multi-purpose meeting rooms, a testing center, a faculty lounge and an expansion of the food service area and bookstore, Tuck said.

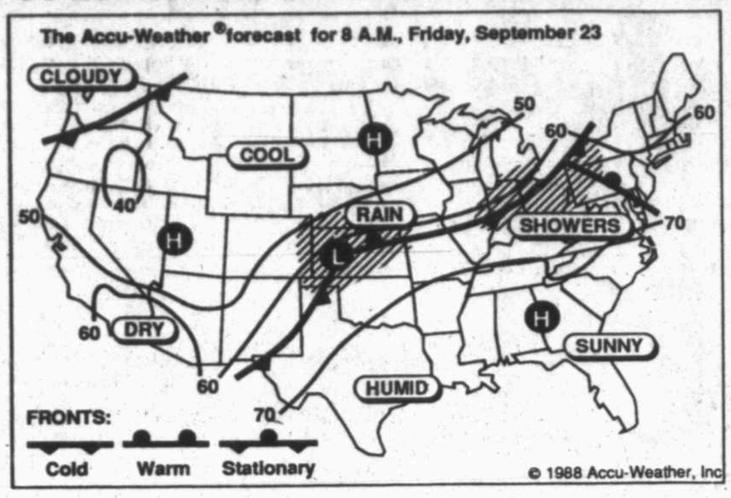
WEATHER SUMMARY



Chance for rain at 30 percent

From Staff and Wire Reports

A 30 percent chance of rain is in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the middle 60s, and winds will be southerly 10-15 m.p.h.

Friday is expected to be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high will be near 90 and winds will be southerly 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 83 was 17 degrees cooler than the record high of 100 set for that date in 1977. The overnight low of 64 was 18 degrees warmer than the record low of 46 set for this date in 1972.

STATE

Moist tropical air spread across the state early today as a large area of high pressure remained anchored over the southern Gulf states. Showers and thunderstorms dampened parts of the Panhandle, South Plains and Gulf Coast.

A strong thunderstorms pelted Plainview with marble-size hail. A 100 mile wide band of showers, some locally heavy, dumped rain between Marfa and Lubbock.

Precipitation in the Panhandle decreased in intensity near sunrise. Isolated showers also developed over the Gulf between Galveston and Matagorda.

Elsewhere, low clouds formed along the Rio Grande and south central Texas while the remainder of the state observed fair skies.

Temperatures before sunrise were generally in the 70s with cooler readings in the 60s located over West Texas. At 4 a.m., temperature extremes ranged from 60 degrees at Dalhart to 81 degrees at Corpus Christi.

A south wind of 10 to 20 mph was common statewide although stonger, variable winds were being reported near the thunderstorms.

The National Weather Service called for fair to partly cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms over parts of West Texas. Highs will be in the 80s and 90s. Lows in the 60s west and the 70s elsewhere.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms fell from Kansas to Texas today after strong storms that ripped the roofs off buildings in Texas with winds gusting to 60 mph and caused flash flooding in New Mexico.

A thunderstorm in the Texas Panhandle on Wednesday evening tore roofs off some buildings near Dalhart. In Dell City in southwest Texas, another thunderstorm also produced gusts to 60 mph.

In southeastern New Mexico, thunderstorms Wednesday evening produced flash flooding between Carlsbad and Artesia.

Showers and thunderstorms also fell today from northern Iowa to eastern Wisconsin. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation.

Skies were cloudy from the Southwest to the upper Mississippi Valley and middle and northern Atlantic Coast. Clear skies prevailed over the rest of the country.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from eastern Kansas to eastern Iowa, most of Illionis and the Great Lakes states, and over the central and southern Rockies and northern Arizona; showers in the lower Great Lakes states; and mostly sunny skies in the rest of the country.

High temperatures were expected to be in the 60s from North Dakota to the upper Mississippi Valley, northern Great Lakes and northern New England, as well as in most of Utah, northern Arizona, the Pacific Northwest and along the California Coast; the 90s in most of the southern Plains, the lower Mississippi Valley, the Gulf Coast, Alabama, Georgia and Florida; and in the 70s and 80s in the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around at the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 34 degrees at Yellowstone National Park, Wyo., to 82 degrees at the Corpus Christi, Texas, Naval Air Station and Dallas.

Texas area forecasts

West Texas: Cloudy most sections late night and early morning with chance of showers and a few thunderstorms. Otherwise fair to partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thunderstorms. Highs Friday mainly in the 80s except around 100 along the Rio Grande. Lows Thursday night mainly in the 60s.

North Texas: Fair through Friday. Lows Thursday night 72 to 74. Highs Friday 93 to 97.

South Texas: Generally fair and mild at night. Highs Friday 80s and 90s. Lows in the 60s and 70s, near 80 immediate coast.

Border forecasts

New Mexico: Mostly cloudy with scattered showers and thundershowers statewide Thursday. Locally heavy rains possible. Thursday night and friday will be partly cloudy with a chance of afternoon showers and thundershowers over the central and east. Lows in the 40s to mid 50s mountains with 50s to mid 60s lower elevations. Highs Thursday 60s to low 70s mountains with mid 70s to mid 80s elsewhere. Highs Friday about 5 degrees warmer in the west.

Oklahoma: Partly cloudy with widely scattered thunderstorms far northwest and Panhandle, fair elsewhere through Thursday night. Partly cloudy west with scattered thunderstorms and mostly sunny east on Friday. Warmer with highs 90s Thursday and from upper 80s Panhandle to 90s elsewhere Friday. Lows 68 to 76.

Arkansas: Mostly sunny and hot on Thursday. Fair and mild again Thursday night. Mostly sunny and continued hot on Friday all sections except partly cloudy with isolated thundershowers extreme northwest. Highs Thursday and Friday from near 90 to the mid 90s. Lows Thursday night upper 60s to lower 70s.

Louisiana: Mostly fair north and west partly cloudy southeast through Friday. Isolated afternoon and early evening thunderstorms mainly north and southeast portions and along the coast. Lows Thursday night 68 to 76. Highs Thursday and Friday 88 to 96.

Bank offering foreign currency consultation

TOKYO (AP) — People who buy travelers checks at the Bank of Tokyo can have their own individual foreign currency consulting service at the touch of a button, according to MIS Week.

The management information services journal reports the bank's computers ask a series of questions about the traveler's plans, including destination, duration of visit, shopping needs and hotels.

The computer then offers advice on how much will be needed in travelers checks and in what denominations, and how much in cash.

The prospective traveler also gets an accompanying printout which contains interesting tips, such as "the yen-dominated travelers check does not circulate well in the United States Midwest" or "the yen circulates well in North Korea, but the dollar does not mean much."

Ninety-nine percent of bank customers who used the system found it agreeable, the publication says.

Hurricane Helene not yet 'dangerous'

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Helene is packing winds of 85 mph far off in the Atlantic Ocean and heading towards the Americas, but forecasters say it has a lot to prove before it should be considered dangerous.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Helene was centered near latitude 13.0 north, longitude 42.1 west, or about 1,225 miles east of Barbados and 2,600 miles east of Miami, according to a National Hurricane Center advisory.

"If it makes it all the way over to the west side of the Atlantic, there's a chance it could become much more significant, but it also has to go through a lot of wind patterns in the atmosphere that could mess it up," said Randy Lascody, a meteorologist at the center.

The Atlantic hurricane season's eighth named storm was moving west at 10 mph. It was expected to maintain that path for a day or two, the advisory said.

"It's a long, long way from causing any problems," Lascody said.

A nominal hurricane about 250 miles wide, Helene is the first hurricane to form since Gilbert, which reached that status rapidly after it entered the Caribbean. Gilbert last week thrashed Jamaica, the Cayman Islands, Mexico and the Texas Gulf Coast.

Weather systems that form this month near the Cape Verde Islands off Africa's coast, as Helene and Gilbert did, enjoy excellent hurricane-spawning atmospheric conditions. They are often the strongest of the six-month Atlantic storm season that begins June 1.

"The water's warm, the environment is favorable, conditions are right for some additional strengthening," said forecaster Hal Gerrish.

Forecasters couldn't predict if Helene might become as fierce as Gilbert, described as the century's most intense hurricane in terms of barometric pressure. The hurricane center expected to send a reconnaissance plane to check Helene's growth on Saturday when the storm is closer, Gerrish said. Until then, forecasters will rely on satellite reports.

"This hurricane could do any of a number of things, but typically in this part of the ocean they don't strengthen too much until they get closer to the Windward Islands," Lascody said.

Tropical depressions — winds swirling around a warm core of low pressure — are named as storms when top sustained winds hit 39 mph, and reach hurricane status when top sustained winds hit 74 mph.

Besides Gilbert, which packed top winds of 175 mph, two small hurricanes formed this season. Debbie brushed the Mexican coast, and Florence moved over Louisiana.

LANDING

American officials were planning to bring equipment to the runway early today to move the aircraft. Until it is removed, DFW will operate with only five runways in service.

The emergency landing was not the only eventful American Airlines flight to DFW on Wednesday night.

A flight that was supposed to travel from Charlotte, N.C. to Dallas was forced to land in Nashville, Tenn., because a warning light came on that indicated an engine problem, said a flight attendant, who refused to give her name.

American spokesman Al Becker said the pilot of the flight from North Carolina shut off one of the engines, then headed to Nashville.

Becker said he didn't know any details about the problem, but called it, "simply a precautionary engine shutdown."

Jim Farrell, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., who was flying to Dallas for business, said the pilot announced he lost an engine and was setting down in Nashville.

"He made all the necessary apologies that passengers were going to have to be late, " Farrell said. "We were exactly one hour late as he predicted."

Farrell was shocked to hear of the emergency landing that occurred just before his flight arrived. "We didn't have anything near that exciting," he said.

The pilot had called the DFW tower and put them on alert, saying he might have a problem, said Angel Biasatti, a spokeswoman for the DFW Department of Public Safety. The crew then looked down into a well of the plane and saw that one landing gear was not down and called the tower again to send emergency vehicles to the runway apron.

"He (the pilot) decided to retract the one main landing gear that had extended before and just come in to DFW with the nose landing gear extended," said American spokesman Jim Brown.

The pilot circled the airport to expend fuel, then brought the 727 in about 9:40 p.m. CDT.

"The aircraft belly-landed and the foam was immediately applied," Biasetti said.

The plane slid along the runway, heavily scraping its underside, but did not break up or catch fire.

Runway 18-L sustained no serious damage and airport workers cleared it of debris left by the belly landing, Biasatti said.

Midlanders Neal Dunnavant, president of Dunes, and Jeffry Smith, a company-employed geologist, were returning from a business trip to Oklahoma City when the incident occurred, according to a company secretary.

After the passengers were evacuated from the plane, Dunnavant reportedly called his wife to let her know he was OK.

ENGINE

There were conflicting reports of injuries early today. Todd Saterlee, manager of passenger services for Pan Am Express, said there were seven people hurt. However, a spokesman for the Albany Medical Center Hospital said nine people were admitted there.

All but one of those injured were treated and released, said the spokesman, Richard Puff. The injuries consisted of smoke inhalation, cuts from glass fragments or, in one case, a minor burn, said Puff.

The only passenger admitted was Steven Roecker, 33, of Rexford. He suffered eye and facial injuries and was in fair condition, Puff said. His wife, Deborah, 40, was treated for a leg injury and smoke inhalation.

Gupta, a General Electric Co. executive who said he was traveling from India, said the incident happened three rows behind his seat on the plane's right side.

"I was asleep. There was a loud noise and there was smoke at the same time and a child started crying," he said. One injured man appeared to have "a lot of blood on his clothes," he added.

"Apparently a piece of the engine did separate and puncture one of the windows," said Pan Am spokesman Jeff Krindler.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating the accident, said Todd Satterlee, manager of passenger services for Pan Am Express. He refused to answer questions.

HUNTS

The Dallas attorney said he has "six or seven separate motions" that could either reduce damages substantially, bring about a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or force a new trial.

"It's very winnable," Wolin said. "Most appeals start out at best as a 50-50 shot. But a number of our post-trial motions are very strong."

Wolin would not specify what the motions might contain, but said there are "damage questions and evidentiary questions."

According to the Morning News, the personal bankruptcy petitions filed Wednesday listed the assets of the two Hunts as "unknown."

But brief summaries of their assets detailed 13,649 Byzantine coins and 44 pieces of a Roman and Greek bronze collection for Herbert, while Bunker's petition noted ancient coins and "various art objects and bronze statues."

Bunker also listed oil and gas properties in 40 counties nationally, three gas plants, 14 ranches, 1,390 acres of raw land, a condo in Kauai, Hawaii, five cars and a host of other assets, the Morning News reported.

Herbert listed half-interest in a ski lodge in Vail, Colo., between one-third and one-fourteenth interest in 3,442 acres in Louisiana, a 3-year-old Cadillac and a 15-year-old Mercedes Benz, the newspaper said.

Both the brothers listed the IRS and Minpeco as unsecured creditors with a miniscule $1 disputed claim. They also listed Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. as an unsecured creditor owed $36 million. The New York bank filed suit Friday in Dallas attempting to collect on the four-year-old note.

A spokesman for the Hunts, Tom Whitaker, executive vice president for the Hunt Energy Corp., said the Hunts "elected to seek Chapter 11 protection of the United States Bankruptcy Court in order to insure their ability to continue their businesses while at the same time appealing the silver case."

Wednesday's filing was the latest chapter in the Hunts' struggle to hang onto what is left of one of the world's wealthiest legacies.

The Texas brothers inherited a fortune from their late father, Texas oilman H.L. Hunt. But heavy losses in silver, oil and real estate had cut the trio's wealth from more than $5 billion to an estimated $1 billion, according to the Dallas Times Herald.

BUILD

The bookstore will probably be twice its current size when the renovations are completed, Parrish said.

Space left available by the exodus of some student services from the administration building will perhaps later house the offices of continuing education and community services, Tuck said.

MC was built in 1973 with revenues from a $5.1 million bond election. In 1976, voters approved a $6.3 million bond issuance that financed the construction of the Allison Fine Arts Building, the Chapparal Center and an addition to the Occupational and Technical Building.

In 1984, without the help of a bond election, the Health Sciences Building was built at a cost of $1.5 million, Tuck said.

Enrollment at the college is down 105 students this fall, though Tuck said the amount is "negligible." Currently, 3,684 students are attending the college.

The renovation should be completed by the fall 1990 semester, Tuck said.

Britain expels three Czechoslovakian diplomats

LONDON (AP) — Britain today ordered the explusion of three Czech diplomats, including two military attaches, for engaging in "activities incompatible with their status."

The terse announcement by the Foreign Office was couched in the diplomatic parlance for spying.

The statement said the Czechoslovak ambassador, Jan Fidler, was summoned to the Foreign Office this morning and told the three must leave Britain within 14 days.

The expelled diplomats were Maj. Bedrich Kramar, the assistant military and air attache; Maj. Vlastmil Netolicky, a member of the military attache's staff; and Paval Moudry, a member of the commercial section.

Britain last expelled Czech diplomats in 1984 when two were ordered out, and Communist Czechoslovakia expelled two diplomats in retaliation.

TAX

Thus, an international company with large tax payments to foreign governments could be listed as paying no U.S. taxes, as could one that bought a large amount of equipment last year, resulting in a deferral of liability.

Among key findings:

- The 250 paid $9 billion more in federal income last year than they would have paid under the old law.
- As a group, the 250 companies last year paid $27 billion in taxes on profits of $123 billion, a 22 percent rate. Five years earlier, they paid less than 12 percent on $87 billion net earnings.
- The 14 largest corporations that paid no taxes in 1982 through 1985 paid at an effective rate of 30 percent last year. This list included AT&T, DuPont, Boeing and Dow Chemical.
- The 128 corporations that were off the federal tax rolls in at least one year from 1981 through 1985 paid an average rate of 19.5 percent last year. Their average rate in 1981-85 was 3.7 percent.
- The combined effective tax rate on the 250 corporations in the survey rose from 14.9 percent in 1981-85 to 22.1 percent in 1987. Their combined profits averaged $102 billion in each of the earlier years and $123 billion last year.
- The number of giant profitable companies paying a tax rate of less than 10 percent has been cut in half, to 55.
- About 60 percent of the 250 companies are paying a higher tax rate than before the new law was enacted. About one-third are paying a lower rate.
- Inequities among industries remain under the new law. The chemical industry and services-trade industry paid an average 38 percent tax last year; textiles, 37 percent; telecommunications, 20 percent; oil, gas and mining, 17.5 percent; airlines and utilities, about 15 percent; and automobile and computer companies paid 10 percent or less.

The survey said the following 16 corporations, whose profits ranged from $42 million to $2.9 billion, paid no federal tax last year: General Motors, IBM, Aetna, Baxter Travenol Laboratories, Carolina Power & Light, Illinois Power, Corning, Hewlett-Packard, Ashland Oil, Greyhound, Ogden, Sequa Corp., Pennzoil, Goodyear Tire & Rubber, Consumers Power and Gulf States Utilities.

"It enhances the penalty for a policeman" who commits a crime, he said.

The former trooper was expected to be arraigned today before U.S. Magistrate Bill Boone, an employee in the U.S. District Clerk's office said today.

Marsh said more arrests will be made in the case, "but no more from inside the department."

Gonzales came into the public eye when he was assigned to investigate the August 12 crash near Sweetwater, which claimed the lives of five Midland Boys' Club members after a club van smashed into a tractor-trailer on Interstate 20.

A report filed by the DPS two weeks after the crash blamed "distraction in the vehicle and faulty evasive action."

Poll shows Bush gaining votes by solidifying GOP support

NATION

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bush has gained in the presidential race more by solidifying his support among Republicans and Republican-leaning independents than by poaching Democrats, a poll suggested today.

Bush has advanced his cause by painting rival Michael Dukakis as ideologically out of step, the Gallup poll suggested, and he has benefited from increased satisfaction with the nation's course and confidence in the economy.

But while Bush has drawn some conservative Democrats to his side, he has lost ground among other Democratic-oriented groups, said an analysis of the poll, conducted by Gallup for the Times Mirror Corp.

It said the more significant movement was Bush's greater support from Republicans in general, and particularly from Republican-leaning, blue-collar conservatives identified in the survey as "disaffected" voters.

"For all the talk of the importance of the Reagan Democrats, this analysis suggests that the most significant dynamic in recent weeks has been the return of Republicans to the fold — with disaffecteds showing the largest proportionate swing," Gallup's analysis said.

The "disaffecteds," who made up about a tenth of the registered voters in the poll, went from a nearly even division on Bush and Dukakis in May to backing Bush by 61 percent to 27 percent this month, Gallup said.

The poll defines the electorate by grouping voters with shared values, rather than through the more traditional measures of political party identification or ideology.

The "disaffecteds," set apart by their suspicion of government, have emerged as a swing group in the election, more so than the Democrats who voted for President Reagan in 1984, said Gallup's president, Andrew Kohut.

"The Reagan Democrats are a bit of an oversimplification," Kohut said in a telephone interview. "Many of the people that are being called Reagan Democrats are disaffecteds. They tend to be the point men for change."

Bush has made inroads only in the most conservative Democratic groups, Kohut said, and he lost ground among another Democratic group, "seculars," who are non-religious and put an emphasis on personal freedom. Another pro-Dukakis group, the liberal "'60s Democrats," supports Dukakis more strongly now, apparently in reaction to Bush's ideologically based attacks.

At the same time, core Republican groups support Bush almost unanimously, and in each "there has been a dramatic increase in the proportion who say they support Bush strongly," Gallup's analysis said.

Overall, Bush was supported by 50 percent in the poll of 2,001 registered voters to 44 percent for Dukakis. The survey, done Sept. 9-14, had a margin of error of three percentage points, so Bush's lead was not statistically meaningful. But, in this as in other polls, Bush had trailed badly before the Republican convention in August.

The poll suggested that Bush in part was the beneficiary of circumstance. It found half the voters satisfied with the nation's direction — a good sign for the party in power — compared with 55 percent dissatisfaction in May. Also, most voters were optimistic about the economy.

Candidates cram for debate

BUSH vs. DUKAKIS DEBATE '88
Sept. 25 • Winston-Salem, N.C.

Democrat Michael Dukakis promised to institute a program of basic health care for poor women and children as the two White House contenders devoted the final days before their presidential debate to cramming for the face-to-face encounter.

While Vice President Bush spent Wednesday engaging in a mock debate and in briefings with advisers, Dukakis conferred with Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey on the Sunday night faceoff that was still dogged by logistics problems over lectern heights and the composition of the panel.

The Democratic nominee, according to campaign sources, scheduled his own mock debate on Friday and planned to meet with two governors well-versed in the successes and pitfalls of public speaking — Mario Cuomo of New York and Bill Clinton of Arkansas.

Bush, who has limited campaign appearances this week to concentrate on the debate, was making a special exception today for two events, an appearance with President Reagan in Houston and an endorsement from an unusual source.

The Boston Police Patrolman's Association, the largest law enforcement in New England, voted unanimously Wednesday to back Bush's candidacy, saying the Republican — not Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis — would be more attentive to the needs of law enforcement.

Dukakis downplayed the endorsement, citing the association's "history of supporting Republicans" and the backing he has received from other law enforcement organizations, including the Massachusetts Police Association, the International Brotherhood of Police Officers and the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas — Bush's home state.

Nevertheless, Bush campaign spokeswoman Alixe Glen said the vice president will venture into his rival's back yard today to accept the endorsement from the union, which represents 1,500 members.

The trip marks Bush's second visit to the state this month. Earlier, the GOP nominee toured Boston Harbor where he criticized Dukakis' record on the environment, particularly the clean-up of the polluted harbor.

That appearance proved to be a media boom for Bush, whose campaign is spending more than 60 percent of its $54 million budget on television advertising, according to a report in today's editions of The Washington Post.

Bush spokeswoman Sheila Tate could not confirm the report, which quoted an unidentified Bush aide. Dukakis spokesman Mark Gearan said, "I think we'll be competitive with the Bush campaign, but beyond that we don't detail our spending."

Dukakis was maintaining the focus on health care today with a visit to a senior citizens center in Boston, where he planned to reiterate his support for Social Security.

His running mate, Lloyd Bentsen, was pitching the Democratic ticket's theme of "good jobs at good wages" in Santa Clara, Calif., and Everett, Wash. Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle was addressing the Council of Foreign Affairs in Los Angeles.

On Wednesday, Dukakis proposed his "Healthy Start" program, which would provide prenatal and post-partum care to pregnant women and children who are either uninsured or underinsured.

House considering amendments affecting drug users' right to drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — After expressing a mood that the House won't tolerate any illegal narcotics use, lawmakers may be ready to toughen anti-drug legislation by voting to revoke drug users' drivers' licenses.

As the House returns to its comprehensive anti-drug bill today, lawmakers face two opposing amendments that could affect any convicted drug offender's right to drive.

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., proposes withholding part of a state's federal highway money unless the state requires suspension or revocation of drivers' licenses of anyone convicted of a drug-related crime.

A substitute amendment by Rep. Glen M. Anderson, D-Calif., provides an incentive approach. Instead of penalties, states would receive Transportation Department grants for imposing the license penalties. The grants would pay part of the license enforcement program.

The overall anti-drug bill would add some $2 billion to the nation's $3.9 billion effort against illegal drugs. While the House expects to approve the legislation Thursday or Friday, the Senate still must consider its own drug bill.

A conference will almost certainly be needed to iron out differences, but lawmakers appear eager to pass a popular get-tough-on-drugs bill so close to the election.

The House bill, as originally written, authorizes money and innovative programs for drug law enforcement, rehabilitation, treatment and education. Each time the House has amended the measure during the past two weeks, it's civil, administrative, or criminal penalties have toughened.

Under McCollum's driver's license plan, states would have to impose suspensions of at least six months for a first conviction and at least one year for repeat convictions within a five-year period.

Five percent of a state's highway money would be withheld the first year if there was no compliance, and 10 percent would be held back for every subsequent year of noncompliance.

The penalty for states would begin Oct. 1, 1991. Individuals penalized would have to have been convicted after the drug measure became law.

The Anderson alternative would require the same six-month and one-year penalties as required under the McCollum plan.

The incentive program would offer states additional money totaling $25 million in the 1989 fiscal year, $50 million in 1990 and $50 million in 1991.

Anderson's proposal also would apply to those convicted after the drug bill became law.

Over the past two weeks, the House has inserted a number of amendments to the drug bill that reflect an attitude of "zero tolerance" toward any drug use, and a feeling that harsh penalties are needed for those who deal in drugs or merely possess them.

A police officer stands guard near burned and looted stores in Shreveport, La., Wednesday, after hundreds of angry black people rioted following the shooting of a black man by a white woman.

More scattered violence threatens shaken Shreveport neighborhood

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Occasional gunshots and scattered violence threatened a fragile peace today in an impoverished neighborhood where rioting by hundreds of blacks was triggered by an interracial, drug-related killing.

The almost exclusively black area known as Cedar Grove became the province of rioters and looters for about five hours Tuesday night and early Wednesday after a black man was killed by a white woman shopping for cocaine, according to police and witnesses.

Less intense violence surfaced again Wednesday night despite pleas for calm by black ministers and politicians. Police detoured traffic when cars passing by the neighborhood were pelted with rocks, bricks and bottles. Then they sealed off a 12-block area when gunshots were heard.

An estimated 300 to 500 people were on the streets at the height of the riot, during which three stores and several cars were burned. Police Chief Charles Gruber said about 200 officers waited for the violence to subside.

The riot was centered near a park where police said dealers provided "curb-service crack."

Ten years ago, the neighborhood was a mixed-race working-class area, but it has become increasingly poor, violent and dangerous, authorities said. Vacant buildings give the appearance of a war zone and drug dealers have intimidated the elderly and families.

High teen-age unemployment and a feeling that police had failed to provide equal protection for blacks have made the area "a time bomb waiting to explode," said State Sen. Greg Tarver, a black former city councilman.

"You can come through here any time, get robbed, get cut, get shot," added Richard Kenner, a policeman who has patrolled Cedar Grove from midnight to dawn the past seven years. "There'll be 100 people standing around and nobody saw anything."

There were no arrests or injuries Wednesday night, but a pickup truck containing three whites had its windshield shattered in three places and its passenger-side window smashed out.

Officials said the trouble was triggered by the Tuesday night slaying of William David McKinney, 20, who lived in the neighborhood. A witness said McKinney just happened to be standing nearby when Tamala C. Vergo, who was shopping for cocaine, opened fire on some men who snatched her purse.

Vergo, 17, was being held today on a charge of second-degree murder, police said. Another woman, apparently a companion, was questioned but no charges were filed, said police Cpl. E.T. Rushing.

At least five blacks were arrested during the rioting on misdemeanor charges ranging from inciting a riot to resisting arrest, police said. Some of them also were booked for looting. All remained in jail today.

Reporters at the scene said some of the rioters shouted "Hot Biscuit," the name of an all-night restaurant where a white teen-ager shot a black teen-ager to death on Aug. 4. When arrested, the admitted gunman claimed he acted in self-defense.

Mayor John Hussey and Chief Gruber, along with black political and religious leaders, appealed for calm after a meeting Wednesday.

Hussey and the Rev. E. Edwards Jones, a local pastor and president of the National Baptist Convention of America Inc., agreed problems run deep throughout Shreveport's black community.

"We've got problems in our economy, we've got problems in our racism, we've got many other problems," Hussey said.

Hussey said the strategy again Wednesday night was to wait out the troublemakers. By 11:30 p.m., scores of police cars, a busload of camouflaged Special Response Team officers and canine units were withdrawn from a command post at a nearby elementary school.

Police remained stationed at two major intersections and beefed up patrols to investigate scattered but unconfirmed reports of gunfire and fires well after midnight.

Gruber refused to give details about the investigation into the riot or the shooting that preceded it.

The chief said a brick was thrown through the windshield of his own car and shots were fired through the back passenger door, but he was not hurt.

A man who identified himself only as Charles, a cousin of McKinney's, said McKinney was shot at random after a woman tried to buy some cocaine from a group of men and was robbed.

Naked man slays usher in cathedral

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A man described as mentally ill stripped off his clothes and ran into St. Patrick's Cathedral Wednesday night, where he fatally bludgeoned a 77-year-old usher and seriously injured a police officer before he was shot and killed by another police officer, police officials said.

The tall, heavy-set man, who appeared to be in his 40s, entered the cathedral at 7:50 p.m., carrying a bouquet of red carnations and a pair of sneakers, witnesses told the police.

He walked to a front altar and ripped a heavy brass prayer book stand from the side of a pew, then began swinging it wildly in circles, said First Deputy Police Commissioner Richard J. Condon.

Witnesses told the police that the man repeatedly struck the usher, John Winter of New York, who had been an employee at St. Patrick's for more than 30 years.

As scores of other people fled the cathedral, calling for help, the man began beating a woman who had been praying in a pew in the middle of the church, the police said.

A 40-year-old police officer, James McMann, who was on duty outside the cathedral, entered the church and tried to calm the man.

However, the man attacked the officer, striking him in the head and shoulder with the prayer book stand.

The man then turned on several other police officers entering the cathedral. One of the officers who was not immediately identified, fired on the man, killing him. He fell to the floor in the middle of the center aisle.

McMann was taken to the Bellevue Hospital Center, where his condition was reported to be serious but stable. According to the police, the officer had lacerations to the head and neck and a broken left hand.

Cardinal John O'Connor, the Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, called the death of the two men and the injuring of McMann "a tragedy."

He described Winter, the usher who was slain, "as a man who loved the cathedral."

The cardinal recalled that at morning prayers he had seen the man who attacked the worshipers and the officer.

Debate over death of 'thunder lizards' still puzzles scientists

Hearst News Service

Whether the dinosaurs vanished with a bang or a whimper continues to be debated by scientists as proponents and opponents bicker over 65-million-year clues suggesting that the "thunder lizards" croaked during a cold wave triggered by a falling asteroid.

The decade-old debate is the controversial legacy of acid-tongued Nobel laureate Luis Alvarez, who this month died of cancer. He was 77.

In 1980, Alvarez and his colleagues at the University of California-Berkeley proposed that an asteroid or comet struck Earth 65 million years ago, generating an immense cloud of dust that blocked the sunlight. This cooled the climate and damaged vegetation by inhibiting photosynthesis. Result: goodbye, dinosaurs.

Evidence, they say, is 65-million-year-old deposits of iridium, an element found in meteorites.

However, many experts disagree. They think the dinosaurs died much more gradually, over hundreds of thousands or millions of years — perhaps because of climate changes that devastated vegetation upon which the dinosaurs dined.

The debate still boils within scientific journals, which recently have printed articles suggesting that falling asteroids could have triggered extinctions in a wild variety of ways, perhaps by drowning life forms in a tsunami, or fricasseeing them in a global forest fire.

For example:

■ A "global fire" caused by a falling meteorite could have killed many creatures at the end of the Cretaceous-Tertiary period 65 million years ago. Huge amounts of soot were discovered in clay deposits dating from about the time the dinosaurs vanished, scientists from the University of Chicago and elsewhere reported in the Aug. 25 issue of Nature, the British science journal.

■ "Showers of impacting comets" may have triggered volcanic eruptions at 11 separate times in the last 250 million years, said NASA scientists Michael R. Rampino and Richard B. Stothers in the Aug. 5 issue of Science. The dates of the eruptions "are close to the estimated dates of mass extinctions of marine organisms."

■ A fatal warming trend, not a cooling one, may have resulted from a cometary impact. An asteroid rich in carbonates could have released a flood of carbon dioxide gas that would have warmed Earth's atmosphere, perhaps fatally for many organisms, California Insitute of Technology scientists John D. O'Keefe and Thomas J. Ahrens said in March.

But skeptics cite evidence against the "extraterrestrial hypothesis" of dinosaur extinction, as it is known. For example: Volcanic activity, not an extraterrestrial object, may have generated the suspicious iridium layers, scientists from the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico and elsewhere said in the April issue of Geophysical Research Letters. They indicate that at 15 sites in Western North America, they found iridium layers rich in scandium and titanium — elements more likely to be found on Earth than in meteorites.

Also, skeptics say, dinosaurs apparently begun disappearing 8 million years before the end of the so-called Cretaceous-Tertiary period, when the asteroid or comet allegedly fell.

And UC-Berkeley geologist William A. Clemens has studied dinosaur bones from Alaska, indicating that the creatures survived cold climates. That, he said, contradicted Alvarez's belief that the creatures would have been devastated.

Still, "with a few exceptions," the dinosaur debate has been civilized, Clemens said. "We get together and debate — and then have dinner together."

But Alvarez, a Nobel laureate in physics (for work unrelated to his dinosaur research), didn't always suffer fools gladly, and in debates his normally amiable tongue could get the best of him.

One of his targets was space scientist Robert Jastrow of Dartmouth College. After Alvarez publicly said his critics were "not very good scientists," Jastrow said Alvarez's accusation was "bad form and bad science." In response, Alvarez ridiculed Jastrow for his support of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, an anti-missile scheme that, Alvarez reportedly said, "doesn't stand a chance."

Another skeptic accused Alvarez of "personal insults" against those skeptical of the extraterrestrial hypothesis: "He has gone for the jugular of Charles B. Officer (of Dartmouth), Charles L. Drake (also of Dartmouth), Dewey M. McLean (of Virginia Polytechnic), Robert Jastrow (Dartmouth) and William A. Clemens (of UC-Berkeley), all highly regarded scientists," said Malcolm C. McKenna, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the American Museum of Natural History, in a letter to the New York Times.

The Times also cited unnamed scientists who alleged Alvarez's supporters had tried, unsuccessfully, to prevent McLean from being promoted to a full professorship. McLean won the full professorship anyway, and declined to discuss the allegation at length.

PUBLIC NOTICE

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

GENERAL ELECTION

NOVEMBER 8, 1988

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 8 proposes a constitutional amendment providing that when the federal government reimburses the state for expenditures of state funds dedicated to acquiring rights-of-way and for constructing, maintaining, and policing public roadways, such federal funds must also be used for those purposes.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment and/or clarification providing that federal reimbursement of state highway dedicated funds are themselves dedicated for the purpose of acquiring rights-of-way and constructing, maintaining, and policing public roadways."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 2 proposes a constitutional amendment to establish an economic stabilization fund in the state treasury. The fund would consist of one half of the unencumbered balance of general revenues at the end of a biennium and three fourths of the difference between the net oil and gas production taxes received in a fiscal year and the net oil and gas production taxes received in the 1987 fiscal year. During any fiscal biennium, the amount in the economic stabilization fund could not exceed 10% of the total deposited in general revenue in the preceding biennium.

The state comptroller and the state treasurer could decide to transfer monies from the fund into the general revenue fund to alleviate a temporary cash shortage in general revenue. The legislature could make appropriations from the fund on approval by a three fifths vote of each house to make up the difference between anticipated general revenue and appropriations. On approval of two thirds of the members of each house of the legislature, the legislature could appropriate monies from the fund for any purpose.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment establishing an economic stabilization fund in the state treasury to be used to offset unforeseen shortfalls in revenue."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment that establishes the Texas growth fund. All investments of the Texas growth fund must be directly related to furthering economic growth and employment opportunities in Texas. At least 50 percent of the fund must be invested in equity and/or debt security for the initial construction, expansion, or modernization of business or industrial facilities in Texas. Not more than ten percent of the fund may be invested in venture capital investments. Of the funds available for venture capital investments, not more than 25 percent may be invested unilaterally, and the remaining investments must be matched at least equally by funds from other sources. The Texas growth fund will be managed by a board of trustees consisting of four members appointed by the Governor and one member from and elected by the membership of each of the following: The Board of Regents of the University of Texas System; The Board of Regents of the Texas A&M System; The Board of Trustees of the Teacher's Retirement System of Texas; The Board of Trustees of the Employee's Retirement System of Texas; and the State Board of Education. The trustees may set the investment policy of the fund, enter into investment contracts, and take any action necessary for the creation, administration, and protection of the fund. The amendment authorizes the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System and the State Board of Education, in managing the permanent university fund and the permanent school fund, to acquire, exchange, sell, supervise, manage, or retain any kind of investment, including investments in the Texas growth fund. The fund will be phased out after the tenth anniversary of its creation, but the Legislature may create a second growth fund by a two thirds vote of each house.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to provide for the investment of the permanent university fund, the permanent school fund, and public employee retirement systems in the Texas growth fund created by the amendment, which will directly create, retain, and expand job opportunity and economic growth in Texas."

AIDS child faces protests in new town

SOUTH ROXANA, Ill. (AP) — An 8-year-old boy with AIDS-related symptoms, whose family fled one city after protests over his admittance to school, dreads another struggle because "the ugly people are going to be back," his mother says.

"Our big problem right now is that we just want to be a normal family," Jason Robertson's mother, Tammie, said Tuesday. "We don't want to be in the spotlight. I don't want to be a civil rights activist.

"All I want to be is a housewife," Mrs. Robertson said. "All my kids want is a mother."

Jason's family left the St. Louis suburb of Granite City, about 15 miles south of here, last month, saying they'd been harassed for their efforts to enroll him in regular classes there.

Last week, as many as two dozen parents began picketing South Roxana Elementary School in this town of 2,000 to protest Jason's application for admission, which officials are considering.

At Tuesday's protest, parents carried hand-lettered signs reading "AIDS Kills" and "Help Keep AIDS Out of Our Schools."

"If that kid comes here, my daughter will go to a private school," Roseann Hayes said in an interview.

Charles Conner, superintendent of Roxana's schools, said the objections to Jason's attendance come mainly from "a minority group of parents...in need of further education" about AIDS.

The boy became infected with the AIDS virus after a transfusion of tainted blood products to treat his hemophilia.

Jason has AIDS-related complex, a disease that often precedes full-blown acquired immune deficiency syndrome. AIDS cripples the body's defenses against disease, leaving the victim prey to infections and cancer.

The disease is spread through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring. It cannot be spread casually.

Because of his illness, Jason was the lone first-grade student in a trailer on the Granite City schoolgrounds through most of last school year.

His isolation ended in May, when U.S. District Judge James L. Foreman ordered Jason back in the classroom with his peers. But the ruling did not end the protests, and the family fled Granite City.

Mrs. Robertson said the family has been left alone in their new home except for a recent harassing phone call to her mother-in-law telling her to keep Jason out of school.

The boy hasn't attended school since it began Aug. 29. His mother said he's eager to be back in class, but dreads further protests over his attendance.

"He said, 'Oh brother, not that again. We're going to have to go back to court again — the ugly people are going to be back,'" Mrs. Robertson said.

Despite the protests, Mrs. Robertson said she's glad the family relocated, and that they have received support from neighbors, churches and a county AIDS-support group.

"My daughter plays with him (Jason)," said Fredia Shimchick. Schoolchildren "are not going to be using his toothbrush. They're not going to be having sex with him. They're going to be sitting in a classroom with him. So what's the harm?"

Conner said a review group, including himself, a school nurse and a doctor, will decide Thursday night on Jason's placement.

Helping Gilbert's survivors laudable

Even though the effects of Hurricane Gilbert weren't felt in Midland, other than in the form of cloudy skies and a steady rainfall for a couple of days, residents of the Tall City didn't forget those whose lives were drastically altered by the storm. Once again, as they have in times past, Midlanders responded to the disaster by opening their hearts and giving to those in need.

Last Saturday afternoon, only hours after Gilbert had stormed into the Texas coastline, an airplane carrying life-sustaining food, water, clothing and medical supplies departed Midland International Airport for Cancun, Mexico, to help residents of that weather-ravaged part of the world. The effort was most commendable, proving once again that human charity is one of this community's hallmarks.

Gov. Bill Clements acted properly and expeditiously in calling on the federal government to get involved in relief work for Texas residents hard-hit by Gilbert. It's left to the federal government to take up the slack in relief efforts when the capabilities of state and local governments are exceeded by a natural disaster. Unfortunately, when it comes to giving help to all those who actually need it following a storm that hits more than one country — and need the assistance quickly — the federal government's role is surpassed. At that point, it's left to charitable relief organizations to fill the need.

The Midland effort showed that such efforts can be put together quickly on a minimum of manpower and can speed help to those who need it. Because of the efforts of the volunteers and those who gave to the relief drive, literally thousands of people who were left homeless or in need because of Hurricane Gilbert were helped and comforted.

Those who helped were too numerous to cite individually, but let it suffice to say to all those involved: "Thank you. What you did was meaningful and appreciated."

The FBI confessions

FBI Director William Sessions was following a young but healthy tradition with his remarkable admission of mistakes in probing opponents of Washington's Central America policy. Such a confession was unimaginable in J. Edgar Hoover's time, but successor directors have shown a willingness to acknowledge failure, or at least the failure of predecessors. The confession also ought to remind Congress to take its FBI-monitoring function more seriously.

Sessions has now told Congress that the bureau undertook to investigate Cispes, the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, on the strength of a flaky informant's unreliable tip. Six months ago, the FBI chief denied that the investigation got out of control; his testimony now makes clear that it was never under control.

Every field office was alerted as agents searched without cause for evidence of terrorist proclivities. They photographed peace rallies, recorded the license numbers of demonstrators and combed the trash of Cispes members and associates. From its gossamer base, the investigation generated 178 "spinoff" probes of groups and individuals between 1983 and 1985.

Documents uncovered by the Center for Constitutional Rights showed the breadth of the venture. One field office urged a "plan of attack against Cispes and specifically against individuals who defiantly display their contempt for the U.S. government by making speeches and propagandizing their cause while asking for political asylum." Small wonder that an agent attending a college campus meeting dutifully logged as suspicious a speaker's complaint that the United States was mining Nicaraguan harbors — which was at the time the topic of heated public debate.

Was the White House involved? Sessions' denial is credible, if only because of the flawed management and inadequate training he cites. Had the White House called for the probe, it doubtless would have been more sharply focused, not randomly spread to far-flung Cispes chapters and other organizations. Nor would the operation have run for two years with little review.

The director's disciplinary action against six officials, all middle management and lower, is commendable. Higher bureau officials must live with the humiliating defense that "they had no reasonable way to know" of their subordinates' abuses.

The Cispes case mars the otherwise distinguished tenure of William Webster, who along with most other Hoover successors, labored for an FBI more sensitive to individual rights. Confidence in his program led Congress to refrain from writing FBI guidelines into law while observing the results of self-regulation.

Now Congress needs to press its function as monitor and, ultimately, its duty to write a legislative charter spelling out the powers and responsibilities of the FBI.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 22, the 266th day of 1988. There are 100 days left in the year. Autumn arrives today at 3:29 p.m. EDT.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1776, Nathan Hale was hanged as a spy by the British during the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

In 1789, Congress authorized the office of postmaster general.

In 1792, the French Republic was proclaimed.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, declaring that all slaves held inside rebel states would be free as of Jan. 1, 1863.

In 1927, Gene Tunney successfully defended his heavyweight boxing title against Jack Dempsey in the famous "long count" fight in Chicago.

In 1950, Omar N. Bradley was promoted to the rank of five-star general, joining an elite group that included Dwight D. Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur, George C. Marshall and Henry H. "Hap" Arnold.

In 1958, Sherman Adams, assistant to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, resigned amid charges of improperly using his influence to help an industrialist.

In 1964, the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" opened on Broadway. It would run 3,242 performances.

In 1975, Sara Jane Moore fired a shot at President Gerald R. Ford outside a San Francisco hotel. She missed as a civilian bystander deflected the shot, and Ford was unharmed.

In 1980, the Persian Gulf conflict between Iran and Iraq erupted into war.

In 1982, San Francisco's famous cable cars made a final run before closing down for a 20-month, $60 million renovation.

In 1985, rock and country musicians participated in FarmAid, a concert in Champaign, Ill., to help the nation's farmers.

Ten years ago: Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin returned home to a hero's welcome from the Camp David summit, which resulted in a framework for peace with Egypt.

Five years ago: Calls for Interior Secretary James G. Watt's resignation grew one day after he had jokingly described a special advisory commission as consisting of "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple." Watt sent a letter of apology to President Reagan, calling the remarks "unfortunate" and "morally offensive."

Cowboys lasso Reagan's name, help

WASHINGTON — When Wyoming's "Cowboys on Everest" climbing expedition ran into financial trouble, Wyoming's cowboys in Congress rustled up a deal with the White House.

Jack Anderson

Perhaps never before has a mountain climbing team had the president's signature on its backpacks. But out in Wyoming where the state's conservative senators and congressman have been Reagan loyalists for almost eight years, anything is possible.

The 34 members of the expedition are now ascending toward the 29,028-foot peak in the Himalayas. But unlike climbers before them, this expedition arrived at the foothills of the Himalayas in an Air Force C-5 jet.

Why is the Air Force rolling out the red carpet for civilian mountain climbers? "We were given orders to provide transportation for them," an Air Force spokesman told our associate, Jim Lynch. Those orders came down from top brass at the Pentagon, which gets its orders from the White House.

Wyoming Sens. Alan Simpson and Malcolm Wallop, along with Rep. Dick Cheney, all Republicans, jointly sent a letter to the White House earlier this year urging presidential support for the "Cowboys on Everest" expedition.

Reagan's top science adviser, Dr. William Graham, took a liking to the expedition and endorsed it. With his backing, the expedition was vaulted to the status of White House sponsorship.

Everest climbs are costly and teams normally raise money from corporate and individual sponsors. The White House credentials helped the cowboy climbers trim $36,900 in transportation costs from their $1 million budget.

"I've never heard of anything like this before," said a spokesman for Citizens Against Government Waste. If the expedition is a precedent setter, what will we see the White House sponsor next? Could a pack of powerful California conservatives get the Air Force to fly a band of Californians to Cape Town for a "Surfers in South Africa" competition? As far fetched as that sounds, the climbing expedition is just as far fetched. Everest climbs are a personal challenge for climbers, but the public benefit is questionable. It holds nowhere near the interest generated by Olympic athletes who compete without the benefit of Uncle Sam's largess.

"Cowboys on Everest" emerged as a promotional brainchild for the 1990 Wyoming centennial celebration. The climbers plan to scale Mount Everest's East Rongbok glacier and the Northeast Ridge. Only six of the 34 members of the team will attempt the summit. Two female climbers hope to be the first American women to reach the top of Everest.

Scientists on the expedition will do medical research with a new high-altitude breathing apparatus and geologists will study the terrain.

The climbers approached Everest from Tibet, and that is where the Air Force came in. Boeing had already leased the C-5 flight to carry a helicopter to Tibet for a demonstration, so the Air Force arranged to have the cowboys dropped off in Lhasa, the capital. An Air Force spokesman noted that Boeing, not the taxpayers, paid for the flight to Lhasa. But free flights have a way of irritating commercial airlines. China Airlines was so disgruntled with the American's failure to fly on its planes that it charged the expedition a $25,000 landing fee in Beijing.

When the Everest adventure is over in late October, the climbers will likely leave China on the Chinese airline and fly to Japan. But from Japan to Travis Air Force Base in California, they will fly a commercial plane chartered by the Air Force Military Airlift Command. That expense — $12,000 — will come out of the taxpayers' pockets. The military rarely uses its Military Airlift Command for civilians. Members of Congress on official business are the exception.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The real estate industry is trying to simplify the paperwork for mortgage applications. We're reluctant to get excited because the work is being done by a task force, and simplification by committee is a contradiction in terms. But anything to cut the paperwork burden for borrowers will be welcome. It currently takes a bank from six to eight weeks to process a mortgage application, which, coincidentally, is how much time it would take the borrower to read the fine print on the application.

Though Bush surged ahead, race not won

George Bush has made striking gains in the popular opinion polls since the Republican Convention. No doubt about that.

But has Bush matched that great leap forward where it really counts, in projections of the electoral vote totals that actually elect a president? That's not quite so clear.

Wicker

The two may be different for the simple but often-forgotten reason that we elect presidents by states.

A candidate can be ahead in national opinion polls, or in popular votes on election day, but still not carry enough states, or the right states, to win the needed majority of 270 electoral votes. Or his electoral victory may be much closer than his popular-vote lead.

A fairly recent example of the difference came in 1968.

With three candidates in the race — Richard Nixon, Hubert Humphrey and George Wallace — Humphrey trailed Nixon in the popular vote by only a half million, just over half a percentage point. But Nixon won 301 electoral votes to only 191 for Humphrey, with Wallace taking 46.

State-by-state surveys of the electoral vote in 1988 show Bush ahead at this point, but not necessarily by the decisive margins his lead in the opinion polls might suggest.

A survey by the usually reliable Field Institute of California, for instance, finds Vice President Bush — after his remarkable post-convention surge — leading in 19 states with a total of 156 electoral votes.

Dukakis is rated ahead in 14 states with 132 electoral votes (including the District of Columbia).

In the Field survey, 18 states with 250 electoral votes remain undecided — which, if accurate, means that neither candidate is close to the 270-vote majority needed for election.

The Washington Post published on Sunday, however, a 1988 election map suggesting that Bush had solid or narrow leads in 28 states with 235 electoral votes.

Twelve states with 138 votes (including the District of Columbia) were rated likely to go to Dukakis. Ten states were considered tossups.

Those 10 include the major electoral-vote states of California, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio, and total 165 electoral votes. The Field survey also rated those four states too close to call, and added Texas and Pennsylvania to the tossup list.

Thus, both surveys concur that neither candidate has as yet clinched an electoral victory. The conclusion seems warranted that California, Texas, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio, totaling 168 votes, remain major battlegrounds.

New Jersey with 16 votes, though considered to be "leaning Bush" by the Post, is also rated a tossup by the Field Institute.

The latter survey, though generally more favorable to Dukakis, found a startling loss of electoral strength for the Democratic nominee since the last report, issued just before the Republican Convention in New Orleans.

Then, Dukakis was leading in 24 states with a total of 353 electoral votes; since then, he has lost more than half that impressive total and dropped far from the needed 270 votes.

But that sharp setback was not accompanied by a comparable increase in Bush's strength.

In the last Field survey, before the Republican Convention, he led in 16 states with 121 electoral votes; his post-convention rise, in electoral terms, yielded him the lead in only three additional states, with only 35 more electoral votes.

Of the major electoral-vote states, both the Post and the Field surveys give Dukakis a solid lead only in New York, with 36 electoral votes. The Field Institute rates Bush solidly ahead only in Florida, but the Post considered Texas, as well, to be at least "leaning" to Bush.

The Post survey, if borne out on election day, would confirm the so-called Republican "lock" on the electoral college.

It depicts Bush solidly ahead in the South and in most of the Western states — those in which, in recent elections, Republican nominees have consistently been the winners, and which have been the base for their national victories.

Dukakis, who was widely believed in July to be far ahead, seems to have fallen victim not only to Bush's energetic campaigning, but to a degree of "Deweyism" in his own camp — the sense that the election was won and little was needed but to protect the lead.

But it's only September. As Thomas E. Dewey learned in 1948, Richard Nixon nearly did in 1968, Mike Dukakis may have in 1988, and George Bush may yet, Yogi Berra had it right: the game ain't over till it's over.

'Libra' vandalism adds nothing good to story

DALLAS — Don DeLillo's ninth novel, "Libra," asserts that what happened here in Dealey Plaza a quarter of a century ago became "the seven seconds that broke the back of the American century." If this hyperventilating book were merely what that sentence is — overwrought and unhistorical — it would not matter that "Libra" is a best-seller. But the book, one of about 20 pouring forth on the Kennedy assassination, is an act of literary vandalism and bad citizenship.

George F. Will

DeLillo's attempt to "follow the bullets' trajectories" back into the minds of Lee Harvey Oswald and others becomes yet another exercise in blaming America for Oswald's act of derangement. It is valuable only as a reminder of the toll that ideological virulence takes on literary talent.

The story is that a cadre of CIA operatives, furious about the half-heartedness of the Bay of Pigs invasion, plan an "electrifying event" to galvanize the country against Fidel Castro. They decide on a "surgical miss" of President Kennedy by a gunman who would leave a paper trail to Cuba. But one thing leads to another, and to the man in the sixth-floor window of the Texas Book Depository.

DeLillo says he is just filling in "some of the blank spaces in the known record." But there is no blank space large enough to accommodate, and not a particle of evidence for, DeLillo's lunatic conspiracy theory. In the book's weaselly afterword, he says he has made "no attempt to furnish factual answers." But in a New York Times interview he says, "I purposely chose the most obvious theory because I wanted to do justice to historical likelihood."

DeLillo traduces an ethic of literature. Novelists using the raw material of history — real people, important events — should be constrained by concern for truthfulness, by respect for the record and a judicious weighing of probabilities.

History, says a DeLillo character, is "the sum total of all the things they aren't telling us." Of course. "They." That antecedentless pronoun haunts the fevered imaginations of paranoiacs. For conspiracy addicts like DeLillo, the utter absence of evidence, after 25 years of searching, proves not that there was no conspiracy but that the conspiracy was diabolically clever.

He says that because of the seven seconds in Dallas, "We have been educated in skepticism." Skepticism? DeLillo is a study in credulity regarding the crudities of the American left. He says the assassination was "the turning point in consciousness" for Americans, that "we have been suspicious ever since" concerning "the secret manipulation of history." In Dallas we entered "the world of randomness," reminded by Oswald that "nothing is assured."

Spare us such sandbox existentialism. DeLillo rejects randomness. His intimation is that America is a sick society that breeds extremism and conspiracies; and that Oswald was a national type, a product of the culture. From the unremarkable fact that recent assassins or would-be assassins (Sirhan, Ray, Bremer, Hinckley) have been marginal men, not social successes, ideologists of the left weave indictments of America.

DeLillo's indictment is interestingly uninteresting. It is the familiar, banal thought that Oswald was a lonely neurotic who tried to shed ordinariness by lunging into the theater of the Kennedys. And guess what? DeLillo has said: "Consumerism is a form of mass anesthesia....It makes people lonely."

DeLillo's lurid imaginings will soothe immature people who want to believe that behind large events there must be large ideas or impersonal forces or conspiracies. It takes a steady adult nerve to stare unblinkingly at the fact that history can be jarred sideways by an act that signifies nothing but an addled individual's inner turmoil.

The mind of an assassin can be a deep and demanding subject. But the more DeLillo explains his work, the shallower it and he seem. In a burst of sophomoric self-dramatization he says: "The writer is the person who stands outside society, independent of affiliations....The writer is the man or woman who automatically takes a stance against his or her government." Automatically as in unthinkingly. DeLillo's celebration of the writer as unaffiliated "outsider" is hackneyed and unhistorical. (Henry James, Jane Austen, George Eliot and others were hardly outsiders.) DeLillo's celebration stops just a short step from declaring the writer as kin to Oswald who, as a defector, was the ultimate outsider.

It is well to be reminded by books like this of the virulence of the loathing some intellectuals feel for American society, and of the frivolous thinking that fuels it. DeLillo is a talented writer whose talent is subordinated to, and obviated by, puerile political stances. What was unfairly said of a far greater writer (T.S. Eliot, born in St. Louis 100 years ago this Monday) must be said of DeLillo: He is a good writer and a bad influence.

Venture to bring printing services to Soviet Union

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A landmark U.S.-Soviet venture will bring copying and printing services to citizens of the Soviet Union, where at one time possession of a mimeograph machine might have meant a one-way trip to Siberia.

In addition, the profit-oriented partnership will sell computers, software, audio-visual products, advertising advice, and American souvenirs, books and magazines in the Soviet Union, according to those involved.

California businessman Martin B. Lopata, chief executive of the U.S. side of the project, said the idea came from the Soviets last winter and flows from the policies of glasnost and perestroika, or openness and restructuring, begun by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"This is a truly pioneering event," Lopata told a crowded news conference Wednesday. "This will also be one of the first facilities to allow printing to the average Soviet citizen."

He said the new business will be open to all Soviets, charging rubles and dollars. The Soviets agreed to the deal as "an experiment, on the basis of 'let's see if it actually works,'" with plans to open offices in Moscow in January, Leningrad next summer and Kiev a few months later.

The Soviet Union has long exercised tight control over access to copiers, duplicating machines and printing presses, all of which are owned by the state. Lack of access to such services has been an obstacle to the many unofficial newspapers and journals that have sprung up under glasnost.

"It's a very, very major political advance," said Jerry Hough, a Soviet expert at Duke University. "(Copying) machines have been under lock and key and it's been virtually illegal for most people to make copies in the Soviet Union."

Laura Frazer, program officer at the U.S. Information Agency in Washington, called the venture "extremely radical because even most Soviet government bureaucrats do not have access to copying machines."

The joint venture is an outgrowth of the Gorbachev-Reagan Moscow summit meeting earlier this year, when "both sides reiterated their strong support for development of economic ties between the two sides," said Soviet Deputy Consul General Gennadiy I. Zolotov, who sat next to Lopata.

It also is the result of the Soviet Union's new "joint project" laws, he said, which encourages joint Soviet ventures with foreign firms.

"We greet you on a special occasion which does not happen too often in the Soviet-American relations, but is very indicative of the things which are happening...we hope, beneficial to both sides," Zolotov said.

He said a contract for the joint venture was signed recently by MIR, the Soviet publishing house; the Soviet cooperative Sintez; and Unicorn Investments International, a California corporation.

Senate hears accounts of Iraqi gas attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The planes dropped bombs," the Kurdish survivor said. "They did not produce a big noise. A yellowish cloud was created and there was a smell of rotten parsley or onions. There were no wounds. People would breathe the smoke, then fall down and blood would come from their mouths."

The speaker, one of 200 Kurdish refugees interviewed in Turkey earlier this month by two members of the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, identified himself as a member of the Kurdish insurgent forces fighting Iraq's government.

The staff investigators, Peter W. Galbraith and Christopher Van Hollen Jr., called the refugee accounts, describing attacks on more than 30 villages, persuasive and said the symptoms they reported are "classically associated with mustard gas poisoning."

While acknowledging that some of the witnesses obviously were biased against Iraq, the two staff members concluded: "To dismiss the eyewitness accounts would require one to believe that 65,000 Kurdish refugees confined to five disparate locations were able to organize a conspiracy in 15 days to defame Iraq and that these refugees were able to keep their conspiracy a secret not only from us but from the world press."

Kurds, a nomadic Moslem people, have fought unsuccessfully for years to gain autonomy for their region within Iraq. Kurdistan also extends into parts of Iran and Turkey.

Citing the interviews and other evidence, Galbraith and Van Hollen concluded that "overwhelming evidence exists" that Iraq subjected Kurdish villages to three days of poison gas attacks last month.

In a report to Foreign Relations Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., they conclude that the attacks were part of a deliberate policy by Iraq to depopulate the Kurdish regions of the country.

"We find no question that Iraq's policy in Kurdistan has the characteristics of genocide," the staff investigators said.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, prompted by earlier reports of Iraqi attacks against the Kurds, is debating legislation to impose economic sanctions on the Baghdad government. The Senate already has approved sanctions legislation against Iraq.

Iraq, earlier accused of using mustard gas against attacking Iranian soldiers, has denied it employed chemical weapons against the Kurds or anyone else.

The Foreign Relations staff report uses dozens of eyewitness accounts of the alleged chemical attacks against the Kurds to paint a graphic narrative.

"As described by the villagers, the bombs that fell on the morning of August 25 did not produce a loud explosion," the report said.

"Only a weak sound could be heard and then a yellowish cloud spread out from the center of the explosion and became a thin mist. The air became mixed with a mixture of smells — 'bad garlic,' 'rotten onions' and 'bad apples.'

"Those who were very close to the bombs died instantly," the report said. "Those who did not die instantly found it difficult to breathe and began to vomit. The gas stung the eyes, skin and lungs of the villagers exposed to it. Many suffered temporary blindness."

"After the bombs exploded, many villagers ran and submerged their faces in nearby streams to escape the spreading gas. Many of those who made it to the streams survived. Those who could not run from the growing smell, mostly the very old and the very young, died.

"The survivors who saw the dead reported that blood could be seen trickling out of the mouths of some of the bodies," the report said. "A yellowish fluid could also be seen oozing out of the noses and mouths of some of the dead."

Report: CIA allowed chopper smuggling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA let North Korean agents smuggle high-performance Hughes helicopters out of the United States and withheld the information from law enforcement officials for nearly a year, according to an NBC News report.

The agency was aware during the operation that shipments of the aircraft were being made through a West German trucking company between 1983 and 1985, NBC said Wednesday.

Authorities told NBC the trucking company had been bugged, and the CIA had listened to North Korean agents plan details of the smuggling operation.

The CIA believed its source of information was so sensitive that passing on details to law enforcement agencies might compromise CIA agents in Germany, NBC reported.

CIA spokesman William Devine told The Associated Press the agency had no comment on the NBC report. "We neither confirm nor deny the report," he said.

Court bars deportation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court has barred the deportation of up to 100,000 aliens until it decides whether the Immigration and Naturalization Service was too restrictive in denying them amnesty.

In a decision made public Wednesday, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also authorized temporary work permits for the aliens.

The court ordered the temporary measures until it rules on whether the INS exceeded its authority by denying amnesty to aliens who had left the United States briefly. Depending on its ruling, the court could reopen the now-expired deadline for aliens to apply for amnesty under the new immigration law.

The court said it would hear arguments in the case in November under an accelerated schedule. The government is appealing a federal judge's ruling in April that the INS interpreted the grounds for amnesty too narrowly.

The number of aliens potentially affected by the case is estimated to be from 50,000 to 100,000 nationwide, he said.

Seven wounded in attacks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sniper taking cover in a park opened fire on passing cars, injuring an 18-month-old child and four other people and prompting the evacuation of nearby residents before apparently killing himself, police said today.

A police search for the gunman ended at 3:45 a.m. when the body of the man was found in the back yard of a home, police said.

In an unrelated attack, an off-duty policeman and his 3-year-old son were wounded by gunfire on a freeway in City of Industry late Wednesday, police said. City of Industry is a town about 15 miles east of here.

No motive was known for either attack.

Soviet minister, Shultz meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — With nuclear issues high on the agenda, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze were meeting today for what may be the last full-scale Soviet-American negotiating session before a new president takes office in four months.

Shevardnadze's two days of talks here also will include separate meetings on Friday with President Reagan and Vice President George Bush. The latter encounter is being held at Bush's request, a U.S. official said, adding that Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis has not asked for a meeting with the Soviet diplomat.

FREE HEARING TESTS Set For SENIOR CITIZENS

MONDAY Sept. 26
MONDAY Oct. 3
MONDAY Oct. 10

Free electronic hearing tests will be provided this week by Hearing Centers of America, Inc. The tests have been arranged for anyone who suspects they are losing their hearing. Such persons generally say they can hear but not understand conversation. Testing with the latest electronic equipment will indicate whether your hearing can be helped electronically. Everyone, especially those over 50, should have a professional hearing test at least once a year. If there is a hearing problem, a free hearing test may reveal that newly developed methods of correction will help, even for those who have been told in the past that a hearing aid will not help them. Come in for your free test by a state Licensed Hearing Aid Specialist today.

Cadets learn how to survive in event they're ever POWs

By BOB DIDDLEBOCK
Hearst News Service

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Here in the Rocky Mountain foothills, where many of the nation's warriors of tomorrow are being trained today, the subject of global conflict is never far away.

But at the U.S. Air Force Academy, it takes on an added dimension during the summer. The academy puts hundreds of cadets through a survival program that includes a unique component — living as prisoners of war.

The POW training, a graduation requirement, is part of the academy's classified operation known as Survival, Evasion, Resistance and Escape. The program teaches Air Force cadets, as well as a few from West Point and the U.S. Naval Academy, how to survive if they're ever stranded or captured behind enemy lines.

The first half of the SERE training is a sophisticated game of "catch me if you can." After a few classroom sessions, cadets are taken to a semi-wild region a few miles northwest of the academy. Over the course of several days, they must fashion their own shelter, catch or collect their own food, learn how to signal rescue vehicles and to evade patrols out to capture them.

Jessica Blanchette, an 18-year-old academy junior from Dallas who went through the SERE program last summer, described her experience:

"I'm a city girl at heart, and when they turned me loose in the woods and I heard all those strange noises, I asked myself, 'What's going on here?' But like any program, it comes down to what you want to make of it. I had a blast with the survival end of it, making fires and things like that. I learned how to hide from the enemy and how to move at night."

Then comes the 47-hour POW program.

The compound, euphemistically known as the Resistance Training Lab, is equipped with cyclone fences, prison yard, cells, guard towers and a lone water tank. Weapon-toting guards patrol the flood-light-lit grounds around the clock.

According to the cadets, the shock value is awesome. The aim of the exercise is to take cadets out of their accustomed environment and subject them to the isolation, deprivation, loneliness and psychological anguish they'd find in a real enemy camp.

Before entering the POW program, cadets go through a 10-hour classroom session that teaches them how to stay warm, withstand interrogations, deal with stress and communicate with their fellows during confinement.

But, as Blanchette noted, nothing really prepares them for the simulated POW experience.

"It wasn't easy," she said. "I had a lot of time to think, sometimes as much as 12 to 15 hours a day with nothing to do in isolation. But it did make me realize how much I wanted to be at the academy."

Air Force instructors play all sorts of "mind games" with the cadets during their incarceration, but there's no physical abuse, said Master Sgt. Peter Kummerfeldt, who runs the program. The participants, he added, are made well aware that they probably wouldn't get off so easily if they ever landed in an enemy's camp.

The survival program started in 1949 at Fort Carson in southern Colorado. It picked up speed after the Korean War, when American POWs were treated more harshly than they had been during previous wars. During the Vietnam War, which Kummerfeldt called a "rude awakening" in POW treatment, the North Vietnamese were more physically brutal, regularly using beatings, employing torture and witholding food, medical care and clothing from U.S. captives.

Kummerfeldt said the POW training is still important in the wake of terrorist hostage-takings and the detention of American diplomats by unfriendly foreign governments.

"It's a tremendous confidence-builder," Kummerfeldt said of the SERE program. "The cadets are at a malleable age and can be tremendously influenced. It's a good time in their life to challenge them with physical and psychological obstacles that will help them at the academy and later in life."

Indeed, one of the program's most emotional moments comes when the "POWs" are released. The "Star Spangled Banner" is played and, according to Kummerfeldt, there's not a dry eye among the cadets.

"It was a real relief it was over," said Blanchette. "You wouldn't believe the respect I gained for my flag and my country."

Mrs. Quayle her husband's closest adviser

By EILEEN PUTMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marilyn Quayle has done "20/20." Her husband Dan, the Republican running for the country's No. 2 job, has not. He sometimes stumbles over his words. She never does.

He can freeze when a reporter asks an unexpected question. She is always prepared, and the only frozen look is the one she icily bestows on an unfriendly questioner.

Mrs. Quayle, who is on her first solo national campaign swing this week, is considered one of the stronger assets of her husband's campaign.

Her skills, said a senior campaign official, have "been recognized" and she has been asked to travel independently, hooking up with the Indiana senator for joint appearances one or two days each week.

At 39, Mrs. Quayle is a self-possessed woman whose flip hairdo and toothy smile evoke early Mary Tyler Moore. She is a mother of three and a lawyer, although she hasn't practiced for some years.

As a political wife, she's strong willed, fiercely protective and her husband's most trusted adviser.

On the campaign trail, she can be warm and cordial, quick with a handshake for her husband's supporters or a hug for children at a day care center. But she also can be cold and withdrawn, especially around reporters.

A practiced campaigner, Mrs. Quayle nevertheless is unaccustomed to the Nancy Reagan-like role she has played so far — smiling pleasantly at her husband's side, applauding at the appropriate points.

"I've never sat listening to him give speeches and all of that. I always had my own schedule" of campaigning, she said in a recent interview.

She handles most situations with aplomb. When a precocious 4-year-old at a Colorado day care center commented on Mrs. Quayle's slightly protruding teeth as "a little buck," Mrs. Quayle smiled and said cheerfully, "Not many people notice that."

She believes the press has given her husband "the bad rap" in coverage of controversies over his military service, academic record and personal life. She told Barbara Walters on ABC-TV's "20/20" program that the press was after her husband because he was so conservative. She hasn't changed that view.

"I have my opinion, which is reinforced by some studies that have been done on where the majority of the media is coming from...It's liberal," she said.

She often pulls her husband away from reporters, touching his arm or patting him on the back if he begins to respond to impromptu questions.

It is on such occasions, when Quayle talks extemporaneously, that he tends to misspeak or otherwise garble his words. But Mrs. Quayle says she is "not trying to protect him."

"He'd stand there and talk forever," she said. "I'm trying to get him back on the plane."

He is outgoing and affable. She seems more introspective, often aloof. But theirs appears to be a marriage more of similarities than differences.

Dan Quayle and Marilyn Tucker met in 1972 when both were attending night classes at Indiana University Law School. Ten weeks later they were married. They opened a law office together in Huntington, Ind., Quayle's hometown. Mrs. Quayle worked until the birth of their second son.

She is her husband's closest aide. At one news conference, Quayle said his wife "is my best adviser, my strongest supporter, the person that I love more than anybody else in this world."

"She is a very strong, independent-minded woman and she and I have a very close relationship," he said.

Mrs. Quayle says simply: "I have a husband who has always valued my opinion and used me as an aide. ... Our basic fundamental values are the same. We have the same philosophy."

She says she thus far achieved everything she has set out to do. For several years she has enjoyed oil painting. Eventually, she says, she may go back to work.

Her children — Tucker, 14, Benjamin, 11, and Corinne, 9 — all have ideas about what they want to be. She says she wants them to "pick their goals and make them high enough that once they reach them or try to attain them, they don't feel that they've shortchanged themselves."

As for her own goals, Mrs. Quayle hasn't picked out a pet project or special area she would like to concentrate on as a vice president's wife.

Hightower says he's battling indifference

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Former U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower, a Democratic nominee for Texas Supreme Court justice, took a bold step Wednesday in bringing his campaign to the hometown of his Republican opponent.

The 61-year-old former congressman and former State District Judge Barbara Culver of Midland are vying for the Place 4 Texas Supreme Court seat vacated by Justice Robert Campbell.

Culver, who has served as a judge the past 25 years, was appointed to replace Campbell in January by Gov. Bill Clements.

Hightower, in an interview with the Reporter-Telegram, acknowledged that he faced an uphill battle campaigning Wednesday in his Republican opponent's hometown, despite his own widespread name recognition.

The former congressman was undeterred, however, in seeking the support of Mexican-American Democrats at a late afternoon reception. He was then off to deliver the keynote speech at a Texas Medical Association dinner at the Midland Petroleum Club.

"I think it's important for people to know who they're voting for and what we stand for," Hightower said. "The thing that we've been fighting all through this campaign is indifference."

The former congressman is basing his candidacy on more than 30 years of experience in general law practice.

He received a boost from Texas attorneys who — in a poll released last February by the State Bar of Texas — rated the former congressman as a better qualified candidate than his GOP opponent.

Hightower was favored by 8,050 attorneys, compared to 6,441 who picked Culver.

"I believe that is a very essential qualification for sitting on a bench where you review all types of cases, with the exception of criminal cases," he said.

A native of Memphis, Texas, and a graduate of Baylor University Law School, Hightower was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1952.

In 1955, he was appointed District Attorney for the 46th Judicial District, serving as president of the Texas District and County Attorney's Association and on the Texas Law Enforcement Study Commission.

In 1965, Hightower was elected to the Texas Senate, where he served for 10 years, including one term as president pro-tem.

He was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1974 from the 13th Congressional District and served until 1985. While in Congress, he held seats on the Appropriations Committee and on the Select Committee on Hunger.

Hightower lost his congressional seat in 1984 to U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo, now the Republican nominee challenging Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for a U.S. Senate seat.

He was appointed first assistant attorney general by Attorney General Jim Mattox Nov. 15, 1985, resigning June 1, 1987, to announce his candidacy for the Texas Supreme Court.

Hightower said he has no legislative agenda to bring to the state's highest court. "I'm not a frustrated legislator," he said. "I've done that. I've seen all that."

Merger of video chains opposed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The big business of selling and renting prerecorded videocassettes has drummed its way into federal court in Midland in a merger dispute over two nationwide chains in the multi-million national video industry.

A proposal, now before the Securities and Exchange Commission, that Blockbuster Entertainment Corp. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., acquire Major Video Super Stores Inc. of Las Vegas, Nev., and make Major Video a Blockbuster subsidiary is being contested by several Major Video franchise-holders. These include Bobby Cox, an Odessa businessman who formerly owned a 53-store chain of fast-food Taco Villa restaurants, and his partner, Odessa accountant Roger Ellis.

A cadre of Cox-allied lawyers on Wednesday and today were presenting arguments and witnesses to U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton for an injunction to prevent the merger, which Cox and his cohorts claim will dwindle their profits. Blockbuster's attorneys support the merger, on which the SEC has yet to rule.

Major Video, which is extant in West Texas, and Blockbuster and has been focusing on the larger metropolitan markets, are competitive rivals in the movie-video business and compete for business sites in the marketplace.

Major Video had granted Cox the right to open stores in Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, Amarillo, Dallas, Fort Worth, Wichita Falls, Tyler, San Angelo, Abilene, Sweetwater, El Paso, Shreveport, La., and Lawton, Okla.

And Cox, who holds 21 Major Video franchises and has invested $6 million in 21 stores and plans to invest $9 million in 30 additional stores, said the merger would adversely affect his business and would cause Major Video to breach its noncompetitive contract with him.

Major Video granted him "exclusive" territories in which to do business.

"The company is not going to compete with me," Cox testified, under the current agreement.

But, he said, if Blockbuster takes over Major Video, he will be forced into competition with his effective franchisor and in many cases will be denied "exclusive" territory because of Blockbuster's stores in his territory.

"My franchisor becomes my competitor," Cox said. "I think it will be...more and more competitive as time goes on," he said of the video business.

Cox testified that in 1986 he elected to invest in Major Video rather than Blockbuster. "It looked like a very lucrative business to be in," said Cox, who sold his chain of restaurants. "We decided to check it out." He elected to go with Major Video franchises, he said, because "Blockbuster...didn't seem to be high on franchising, and the 'up-front' cost of getting into Blockbuster was double that of Major Video."

Under the re-organization plans, Cox could convert his stores to Blockbuster's logo and color scheme or he could stay with the Major Video concept while effectively being a Blockbuster outlet.

Hobby calls on Bush to outline energy policy

He says Bush reluctant to discuss oil-related issues

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Presidential candidate George Bush should tell Texans how his energy policy would differ from that of the Reagan administration, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said this morning.

"Today I challenge George Bush while he is in Texas with President Reagan to assure Texans that if elected president, he will supply us with an energy policy that we haven't gotten from President Reagan or for that matter from Vice President Bush," Hobby said at a news conference for presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

Hobby said Bush has been reluctant to talk about energy issues during the campaign. Earlier this week, he said, Bush turned down an invitation to speak at an energy forum in Houston.

"He opposes offshore drilling in California and supports it in Texas," he said. "He attacks the oil industry during his primary campaign in New England."

Hobby said Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, has voted consistently against the oil industry.

Not only did Quayle vote for the windfall profits tax, Hobby said, he voted against repealing it. Quayle cosponsored legislation to repeal both the percentage depletion allowance and the intangible drilling costs deduction, he said. Quayle voted against retraining jobless oil field workers and he voted to cut the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, Hobby said.

Dukakis, on the other hand, came up with a "proven producer" when he selected Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate, he said.

"Some Texans are beginning to suspect that George Bush is afraid to remind people in other states that he is a former Texas oilman," Hobby said.

Hobby said Texans are disappointed in Reagan's failure to establish an effective national energy policy. Many believe Bush also will fail to address the energy crisis, he said.

Oil prices have been cut more than half under the Reagan administration, Hobby said, and more than 80 percent of the oil rigs in Texas were shut down. Texas crude oil production was cut by 200,000 barrels a day and 125,000 oil and gas workers have lost their jobs, he said.

"I challenge Vice President Bush to tell us...what he would do to turn things around in Texas," Hobby said.

Seminar teaches how to handle danger

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

An Oct. 1 Red Cross-sponsored program titled "I'm in Charge" will offer kindergarten through sixth-graders help in dealing with a wide range of life-threatening and criminal situations.

The program's two three-hour sessions will feature presentations from the Red Cross, Midland police and fire departments, Southwestern Bell, local crime prevention consultants and weather experts.

"We want to make the kids and their parents aware that there are many dangers out there," Faye Beery, local Red Cross youth committee vice chairman, said today.

The program is one of "15 or 16" that the national Red Cross organization offers to local organizations, Mrs. Beery said, adding that "We took it a little bit further and changed it up for our own purposes."

More than 100 youngsters and their parents participated in a similar program in April, she said. Two three-hour "I'm in Charge" sessions are planned for Saturday, Oct. 1.

The program offers training in five areas: emergency first aid, fire safety, personal safety, telephone safety and weather safety.

As examples, Mrs. Beery said children would learn how to apply simple bandages and stop minor bleeding. Role play simulations would help the children learn use of the telephone in emergencies.

In addition, the children would learn to maintain a three-to-four foot "circle of safety" around strangers and not to approach strange cars or persons 'to try to prevent any type of criminal activity," she said.

The program would be of particular use to children who must spend time home alone while parents work, she said.

Training for parents will be held in a seminar prior to the beginning of the children's presentation.

The program will be held at San Jacinto Junior High School, 1400 N. N Street. Parents may register their children free of charge by calling the American Red Cross at 684-6161 during regular business hours.

Pre-registration is required and must be completed by Sept. 28.

NTSB trying to decipher clicks on Delta's recorder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators of last month's Delta Air Lines crash in Texas are trying to determine whether several "click" sounds on the jet's cockpit voice recorder are indications the flight crew set the flaps before takeoff.

The Boeing 727 crashed seconds after taking off from the Dallas-Fort Worth airport Aug. 31. Fourteen of the 108 people aboard died as a result of the crash. The investigation has focused on whether a false flap setting may have kept the plane from gaining altitude.

At least two clicks can be heard on the recording, according to sources close to the investigation. But additional sounds also are being studied to determine the exact number of clicks and whether they relate directly to the flaps' position.

The flaps, which provide an aircraft with lift during takeoff, were supposed to have been set at 15 degrees for proper takeoff of Flight 1141.

The Dallas Morning News on Wednesday quoted National Transportation Safety Board officials it did not name as saying they were studying the possibility that the flaps were extended, but not far enough.

For some people, football expensive in time and money

Todd

This season, as in others past, I have put aside the he-man's sporting pastime of watching, via the boob tube, grown men playing football in suits of plastic armor. I shun watching mesmerized fans display a range of emotions from momentary thrills to soured disgust and cease gawking at scantily clad young things hungrily yelling and jumping about as if Sunday dinner were almost ready.

And it has been a relief. For getting involved in football, especially if you're a partisan, takes a lot of energy — more than today I am willing to devote to a game. For some, I know, football is a passion, which I can appreciate, for I have a few passions which take time, money and work to fulfill. But I don't recall "investing" in the outcome of football games in hopes of winning the pot. And I don't try my luck in those million-dollar sweepstakes contests, either. The stress of anticipating the answer to the big question, "Did I win?" is too great. Besides, if I really wanted to gamble, I suspect I just might try a fling at horse racing or craps. In the race and in the roll, results are quick. In one, you either win or lose. In the other, you can win or lose, and you can sort of win and sort of lose.

Now, I can tell you without shame or pride that, indeed, I have spent many hapless hours watching televised football and guzzling so much beer that I couldn't tell football from a soap opera. One is surrounded by walls, and the other, by bleachers. And both are too well done — overly dramatized.

Both, as the world knows, are supporting big bucks. And both do their jobs quite well: helping many bored Americans pass the time of day, creating "what-if" and "did-you-ever" small talk, and making their players and the supporting cast a good living.

Actually, it seems that today's professional football players don't really make just a living. Some players end up making so much money that they go wild on whims and end up playing second fiddle to the bankruptcy-court judge, or they get paid so many big bucks and make such bonanza investments that "making a living" for them is given no thought. They are making a slaughterhouse killing.

It is ridiculous that physical prowess, played on the money-green gridiron, is so lucrative. But, that's big business — from selling beer to souls.

And those football players are no dunces.

Instead of donned with those protective pads, helmets and things, those football-playing businessmen just might as well be dressed in three-piece suits in readying for the day's business. That's what they are doing. They have their BBA degrees in the business of football. And they have found the ripe marketplace that's most willing to pay their asking price. What a deal!

Meantime, while they are stuffing their wallets and considering investments or moaning the financial blues to their lawyers, I will do whatever I do without playing like a hedonistic couch potato and staring at the boob tube.

However, converting to Blockbuster would cost Cox "extra money" in hardware and software changes and in name and marketing changes, would "significantly" reduce his territory, and would cause "more red tape." Additionally, Cox said he has advertised heavily in promoting his Major Video stores.

"I would make significantly less money," he said, were the merger approved.

Under the merger, there would be no more new Major Video stores opening other than those already committed to under Major Video contracts with existing franchisees.

"If you are part of a dying organization, as Major Video will be," Cox lamented, "what's a franchise worth?"

Cox said that Major Video has not built any major stores since the merger was announced. Blockbuster and Major Video made the merger agreement in May.

Cox, a former member of the Major Video's board of directors, said he had agreed to "vote for the merger" were the "language" agreement to "protect the franchisees."

He resigned from the board when he sensed that the "language" opposed his best interests as a franchisee.

Cox said he had encouraged Major Video to "build more company-owned stores" for the benefit of the shareholders, to increase profits." He said "the stocks would go up. And everybody would be happy."

Ellis, Cox's nephew, said that he was "positive" that the Major Video franchisor provided for "exclusivity" and that the franchisor and its affiliates "would never compete with you."

Joining Cox and Ellis in the lawsuit against Blockbuster and Major Video are Major Video franchiseholders Cliff Throneberry of Pryor, Okla., Edward Henry of Phoenix, Ariz., and Peter MacKenzie of Connecticut.

Henry, who does business as Edward Henry Capital Inc., said the merger would adversely affect his business.

"In a few years, we'll be competing for the same customers and will be falling all over each other," Henry said. "I don't wish to convert to Blockbuster. I would be dealing with about half the territory I have now." Additionally, he said, "I don't relish competing with my franchisor."

Wayne Huizenga, chairman and president of Blockbuster, said in a deposition that Blockbuster puts store "wherever it makes sense.

"Blockbuster is going to be the household word around the United States," he said.

The company makes about 7 percent off of its franchised stores, while Major Video makes 3 to 4 percent. The pre-tax profit off of company-owned stores, which bring in more revenue, is 26 percent, he said.

"I do not think Major Video has been charging enough for their franchises," Huizenga said, "and has been too lax in letting franchises." He also said that the stock brokerage house of Merrill Lynch had recommended the buying of Blockbuster stock.

Austin economist Dr. Charles Wade Clifton, who testified on behalf of the Cox-allied interests, said that the Blockbuster-Major Video merger would "substantially adversely" affect the value of Major Video franchises.

In 1985, Blockbuster "pioneered the concept of the video superstore," according to the complaint filed by Cox and his allies. Those superstores "typically" carry at least 5,000 video tapes in a store of at least 5,000 square feet.

Blockbuster entered the video-rental business in 1985.

According to court records, Blockbuster, which is the larger of the two video chains, has more than 120 company-owned stores and more than 80 franchises and this year plans to increase its stores to 300 "even without" the Major Video acquisition.

Major Video has more than 25 company-owned stores and more than 100 franchises.

"Blockbuster and Major Video are the only two national chains of franchised (video) superstores," according to the complaint. "Until the recent merger agreement, Blockbuster and Major Video have been engaged in direct competition to achieve a successful, nationwide chain of video superstores."

Writers' workshop planned

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Anita Diamant and Philip G. Spitzer, both New York City agents, will lead the second Austin Writers' League fall workshop titled "Straight Talk From Two New York Agents" Saturday in Austin.

Ms. Diamant heads up a four-person New York City agency that represents over 100 writers and she is frequently listed among the top agents in New York. She began as a newspaper reporter and staff writer for McCall's, and has been an adjunct professor at Long Island University.

Her agency handles book-length adult and young-adult fiction, nonfiction, and film, dramatic, TV and foreign rights in all markets.

Her own writing has been published in many women's magazines. She was the first woman president of the Overseas Press Club of America and at one time the president of Women in Communications in New York City. She has been listed in Who's Who in America for years.

Spitzer began his career in 1961 at the New York University Press. Later he turned to marketing and worked for the McGraw-Hill Book Company. Then he joined John Cushman Associates, a literary agency, where he worked primarily with British authors represented by the parent company, Curtis Brown, London.

Spitzer opened his agency in 1969 where he handles 50 authors of general adult non-fiction and fiction with a particular interest in sports, politics, thrillers and "literary" fiction.

Among the books he has sold are those books by Loretta Lynn, Gov. Mario Cuomo, Ralph Nader and John DeLorean.

"We are going to talk abut the ins and outs of finding and working with an agent as well as the business aspects of book publishing," Ms. Diamant said. "We will talk about the trends in the industry today, what publishers are looking for and how they make editorial decisions."

"There are financial issues that need to be discussed," Spitzer said, "including advances, royalties and author rights."

The workshop will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Best Western South, located at Ben White and South I-35.

Tuition is $100 for non-members and $70 for AWL members. To make reservations or request more information call 512-499-8914.

"What you hear (on the tape of the cockpit conversation) are two 'clicks' in quick succession. That means that the flaps were at least at the 5-degree setting," the newspaper quoted one source as saying.

The Boeing 727 has flap settings of 2, 5 and 15 degrees. The flap control mechanism in the cockpit has notches that produce clicking sounds as the lever is moved.

Meanwhile, investigators are expected to conduct tests in flight simulators to determine what minimum flap setting would have been required for the plane to gain proper lift.

Some aviation experts who have followed the accident investigation say the Boeing 727, which was not fully loaded, should have been able to take off even with a lower than optimum flap setting.

Drucella Anderson, a spokeswoman for the NTSB, said Wednesday the safety board would have no comment on what investigators are examining on the cockpit voice recorder tapes.

Investigators have uncovered conflicting evidence as to the jet's flap setting at the time of takeoff.

The voice recorder shows the co-pilot acknowledged having set the flaps to 15 degrees during the routine preflight checklist.

"Fifteen, fifteen, green," the co-pilot was heard to say on the cockpit recorder tape, according to sources involved in the investigation.

One source suggested that the co-pilot, if he set the flaps, probably did so earlier and was reading off the flap setting at the time his response was recorded.

The reference to "green" refers to a light showing the position of separate control surfaces on the forward edge of the wings called slats. A green light shows them to be in the extended position.

Slats also are supposed to be extended during takeoff, but investigators have said they found the slats on the wrecked aircraft in an unlocked but retracted position.

MC Student Senate elected

From Staff Reports

A campus-wide election has selected 37 members to serve on the 1988-89 Midland College Student Senate.

Senate officers are: Rusty Wilkes, president, Rankin; Schantale Wilturner, vice-president, Houston; Michelle Settle, secretary, Midland; Heather Coleman, parlimentarian, Midland. The executive officers were elected in the spring.

The newly elected senators include Sheila Butler, Katy Carmody, Susie Dunn, Lillian Gambles, Shannon Gassie, Reesa Holland, Jennifer Lynch, Tashya Loyd, Kristy Mires, Kathryn O'Briant, Tom Reneau, and Vallery Von Siebenhoven, all from Midland Lee High School, and Michelle Baker, Travis Bryant, Joanna Carrillio, Kathy Chilcoat, Debbie Colson, Melissa Hagins, Billi Jo Harder, David Monroe, Ralph Nall, Louise Parker, and Hellen Young, all from Midland High.

Others elected were Amy Franks and Jennifer Porter, Greenwood; Randy Dan Fulton and Mike Manville, Rankin; Beth Manville, Pecos; Tracey Marvin, Snyder; Marna Shofner, Lamesa; David Adams, Crane; Abel Carrasco, Kermit; Micki Blansett, Grapevine; Sherri Gayle Wilkes, Odessa; Carol Franklin, Houston; Amy Collins and Julie Collins, St. Louis, Mo.

St. Ann's Fair Saturday

The 40th annual St. Ann's Fair runs from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday.

The carnival rides are open today and Friday from 6 to 10 p.m. and during fair hours Saturday.

"It's fun and everyone is involved," says Sue Munroe, chairman of the 1988 St. Ann's Fair along with her husband, John. Theme for the fair is "The Fun Begins at 40."

"We have about 100 chairmen and co-chairmen of the different booths and the different functions of the fair," she says. "There's a little bit of something for everyone."

The fair includes 40 games and refreshment stands, an arts and crafts booth, bingo, the "Ends and Odds" booth dubbed "Texas Largest Garage Sale," a country stall, a bookstall selling used books, jewelry and food booths selling Mexican dinners, sausage, barbecue, fajitas, tacos and nachos.

No admission is charged. Cost to participate in the fair games is 35 cents a ticket. The carnival rides are $1 each, and all day bracelets may be purchased at a savings.

The money raised goes to St. Ann's School. The fair is presented by the Family Fair Association, parishioners of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Accused vandal released

One man accused of recent pellet gun vandalism that resulted in more than 200 broken vehicle windows has been released from jail on bond, according to Midland County jail records.

Harold Keith Turicchi, 18, 2005 College Ave., was released Wednesday on $15,000 bond, according to court records.

Two other men, 18-year-old Spencer David Wilson, 2005 College Ave., and James Hunter, also 18, remain in custody in the county jail, according to records.

According to police, the three men had arranged to be released after they were formally charged and appeared before Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. Police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said today he did not know why the men were not released.

The trio has been charged in the September 11 and 12 shootings that caused more than $40,000 damage to dozens of vehicles in west Midland.

Church damaged in fire

No injuries were reported in a fire that officials believe was set about midnight at a local church.

Four units and 12 firefighters were called to the Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., just before midnight. When they arrived, the fire was out, according to reports.

Four rooms of the church were damaged in the blaze.

According to fire investigators, someone broke into the church and set fire to its curtains.

The fire has been classified as suspicious, and will be investigated as an arson, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said.

Man found guilty of shooting stepson in mouth with BB gun

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury has found a Houston man guilty of punishing his stepson by shooting him in the mouth with a BB gun.

The BBs were discovered, still lodged in his mouth, earlier this year by a dentist.

The jury in State District Judge Ted Poe's court on Wednesday convicted William Williams, 39, of injury to a child.

Williams denied shooting Terrance Harper in the mouth with a BB gun in 1986. He told police he did not remember shooting the boy.

Harper, 11, testified Williams forced him to hold back his head and stick out his tongue, then shot him in the tongue eight times.

Reagan to inspect shuttle, attend Boulter fund-raiser

HOUSTON (AP) — Discovery astronauts will get a presidential sendoff today when Ronald Reagan pays a visit to the Johnson Space Center as the crew prepares for next week's launch, the first since the Challenger explosion.

The president also is planning to raise big money at fund-raisers for GOP presidential candidate George Bush and Republican U.S. Senate nominee Beau Boulter.

Reagan's NASA appearance, touted by the White House as the highlight of the day, will be his first visit to the space center since a memorial service there in the wake of the Challenger disaster in January 1986. In that appearance, he consoled the families of the shuttle blast victims and NASA employees and vowed the space program would continue.

The shuttle is slated to fly again next Thursday, marking the return of Americans to space for the first time since the Challenger crew was killed in an explosion 73 seconds after liftoff.

"The visuals for this are going to be pretty spectacular," White House spokesman Pat Mizell said of the space center appearance. "I'm kind of excited. All of us in the White House envision the NASA deal as the bigger event."

With Discovery Commander Fred Hauck as his tour guide, Reagan will get a close-up tour of the shuttle trainer, then head outside the large hangar-like building that houses the mockup to address the thousands of space center employees, contractors and their families.

Reagan will begin his day in Waco with a speech at Baylor University's new Ferrell Special Events Center. Then he goes to the Waco Convention Center for a Boulter fund-raiser where supporters of the Amarillo congressman have paid $1,000 each to see Reagan at a reception, spokesman Joe Fleming said. Boulter faces an uphill battle against three-term Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, who also is on the ballot as Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis' running mate.

Today's fund-raiser should give the Boulter campaign another $100,000 for its race against Bentsen.

Following his afternoon visit to NASA, Reagan winds up in downtown Houston where he and Bush make a joint appearance at the George Brown Convention Center for an event that is expected to bolster the Bush campaign treasury by more than $3 million.

Dukakis and Bentsen both were in Houston earlier this week, campaigning and raising $1 million.

But organizers of the Reagan-Bush affair, who have been working on the event for six weeks, said the Democratic stop had no effect on their money-raising efforts, even though some people have been donating to both campaigns.

STATE

"Raising money for George Bush has been easy," said Herb Butrum, chairman of tonight's event. "I've been doing political fund-raising now for 12 years and I've never had an easier time."

According to Butrum, more than 3,000 seats — at $1,000 apiece — have been sold for a room that only holds 2,400 people.

"Fortunately, some people have been generous enough to give back their seats," he said.

Insects on Endangered Species List

AUSTIN (AP) — The federal Endangered Species List now includes five kinds of tiny, cave-dwelling creatures that received national attention when environmentalists occupied four Texas caves to demand their protection.

Added to the federal list were two types of beetles, a spider, a tiny insect resembling a scorpion and a kind of daddy-longlegs.

The action means that the species, which are known to exist only in a few caves in Travis and Williamson counties, are protected by the U.S. government. Anyone harming them is subject to civil or criminal penalties under the Endangered Species Act.

The caves they occupy are located on private land in an area of northwestern Travis County. Construction projects, including utility lines, roads and a 1,500-acre commercial and residential development, have been criticized by environmentalists who say the work threatens the creatures as well as an endangered species of bird, the black-capped vireo.

Last month, members of the group Earth First! began a nine-day protest, occupying several caves, to call attention to the development and what they said was a threat to the five species.

David Curtis, assistant supervisor in the Fort Worth office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said the creatures were listed officially in last Friday's "Federal Register."

"It's about time," responded Bill Bunch, an Austin lawyer representing Earth First!

"But the true test will be to see what will be done in terms of protecting the habitat of these creatures," Bunch said.

The Travis County Audubon Society petitioned the government early in 1985 to list six cave creatures as endangered. The Fish and Wildlife Service proposed listing five of them in April.

Concerned about increased development in the area of the caves, Earth First! members and others had pushed since spring to get the government to make the listings on an emergency basis. A concern has been that digging and other construction work would disrupt drainage of the area and cause irreparable damage.

Curtis said his office had met with landowners in the area to make certain development didn't harm the creatures.

Cavazos vows to fight student dropout rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos may have only four months on the job, but he says he'll use the time to fight the dropout rate and advocate education for all.

Cavazos

The first Hispanic member of a president's Cabinet, Cavazos said he is concerned about keeping all students in school, and points to a Hispanic dropout rate of about 30 percent.

"We can't afford to lose that many people," Cavazos told a news conference Wednesday, his first day on the job, as he answered questions in Spanish.

Cavazos said his mission would be to "get out there...and really have people understand the seriousness of the issue. We've got to start now. We can't delay. We've waited too long."

To get his message across, Cavazos said he would meet with local officials, professional education societies, and members of Congress.

"The next few months will give us the forum to talk about the issues that are vital to America," he said. "How do we position this country, this nation, to really be competitive at the turn of the century...and I don't just mean economically.

"Rather, let us look to make sure every person in America today is educated to his or her full potential. My interest is to awaken America to recall that our strength really has come because we had an educated electorate," Cavazos said.

"Rather, let us look to make sure every person in America today is educated to his or her full potential."

— Lauro Cavazos, Education secretary

Cavazos was confirmed by the Senate and sworn in Tuesday by Vice President Bush. On Wednesday, Cavazos said he had "struck absolutely no deal" with the Republican presidential nominee to remain in office if Bush wins the November election.

"We never even discussed the possibility of my staying beyond the January date," said Cavazos, who is taking a leave of absence from his job as president of Texas Tech University and its medical school.

But some Republicans have said they wouldn't mind seeing Cavazos in the next administration. And Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah told fellow Republicans last week that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., leaned over to him at the end of Cavazos' confirmation hearing and said that if Michael Dukakis is elected "I'm going to talk him into keeping him on as secretary of education."

Relatives of crash victims file suit

EL PASO (AP) — The pilot of a plane that crashed in a February snow storm was negligent, according to a lawsuit against the dead pilot's estate filed by relatives of the two passengers.

Pilot Donald McCoy, 57; his secretary, Rosa Linda Puentes, 31; and her son, Jesus Aaron Puentes, 11, were killed Feb. 19 when the plane plunged onto the Interstate 10 access road two miles east of downtown El Paso during morning rush hour.

The crash happened shortly after the plane took off from El Paso International Airport in light snow.

The suit, filed in County Court-at-Law by Ms. Puentes' sister and brother and Jesus' father, seeks unspecified damages from McCoy's estate and the Houston-based company that owned the twin-engine aircraft.

McCoy was "careless, reckless grossly negligent" in operating the Aero Commander 680, according to the suit.

It alleges that McCoy was negligent in taking off in weather requiring instrument flying. He was not instrument-rated or certified to fly a twin-engine airplane. It alleges McCoy failed to remove the landing gear locking pin.

The lawsuit further states that McCoy "did not possess the physical and mental capabilities to guide the aircraft safely back to El Paso International Airport."

Investigators with the National Transportation Safety Board have said McCoy quickly encountered problems after taking off and tried to return to the runway, but became disoriented in the snow and lost control of the plane.

A locking pin had not been removed from the landing gear, investigators said. The pin is used a safety precaution to prevent the landing gear from being retracted while the plane is on the ground.

Also named as a defendant is J.R. Laughead Inc. of Houston, which owned the plane and allowed McCoy to fly it.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be richly rewarded for being one of life's great doers and planners. Financial security is a top priority. A special collection may have to be divided or moved. Setbacks will be galling but strictly temporary. The way you handle them will determine how successful you will be in business. Those in banking and retailing enjoy unexpected fringe benefits. Romance will be slowed only if you delay making your intentions known.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tenor Julio Iglesias, singer Ray Charles, actor Walter Pidgeon, longtime star Mickey Rooney, rock star Bruce Springsteen, actress Gail Russell, musician John Coltrane, sculptress Louise Nevelson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some will argue long and hard with you, but you will win in the end. Apprehension over a business deal should not be ignored. Wipe the slate clean and begin again.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial support will be there if you need it. Tensions on the work scene need to be discussed. Stay in control in a relationship. Do not be taken in by an emotional appeal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A disappointment will lead to a great success. A change of scenery helps you escape business worries. You will return to work refreshed. Use tried-and-true methods now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be sure that everything you do now will be beneficial to a relationship you really believe in. Shun the political battles going on at work. Find a quiet place to complete your assignments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try not to let down those who are counting on you — particularly your boss. A financial windfall could be announced this weekend. Keep a commitment, even if you get a better offer later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Women find their business partners more receptive than before. A job search can be difficult, even if you have good references. A romantic relationship becomes more fulfilling. A student may change majors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on making a new start. A turnaround is near in the financial area. Letters will help open doors on a business trip. Romance will not work if you try to change each other.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have your feet firmly on the ground. Do not give in to peers who want you to follow their lead. Outdoor living always makes you feel fit and adventuresome. Plan a trip.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Redouble your efforts at work so you can take a breather over the weekend. A change of pace will restore your energy and alertness. Spend a quiet evening with mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are constantly amazed at how respected you are. You shouldn't be. You have earned all the praise you receive. A voice from within helps determine the choices you make today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let an authority figure down. A written message could prove even more significant in a week or two. Tend to business matters and let others settle their own differences.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A project begun today will bring rewards as early as next week. Travel for fun, not business. A phone call or casual social outing could change your views on a money matter.

The semifinal of the Spingold Team Championship, played last month in Salt Lake City, saw one of the most remarkable comebacks in bridge history. Trailing by 65 International Match Points with only 15 boards to play, a team led by Jim Mahaffey of Florida outscored a team of East Coast internationalists 96-0 to win easily.

This hand helped the East Coast squad build their early lead. At one table, they played a comfortable four-spade contract and made an overtrick when the defenders did not find a heart lead. At the other, the Mahaffey squad reached three no trump on an auction similar to the one above. North's two hearts was a transfer to spades, and three clubs showed a distributional, game-going hand with interest in slam. South had the wrong hand and signed off in three no trump.

West led his fourth-best diamond and East, Richard Pavlicek of Ft. Lauderdale, won the ace. Since he and his partner were making normal leads, East knew that declarer had started with five diamonds. Obviously, therefore, the only hope for the defenders lay in the heart suit, and a shift to that suit was urgent.

Most players would lead a low heart, and the contract would be secure. Declarer would insert the nine, West would win the queen and the ace of spades would be the only other trick for the defenders. Pavlicek shifted to the king of hearts!

Not surprisingly, declarer thought East was leading from a king-queen combination, so he ducked. He tried the heart jack on the continuation, but West won and forced out the ace. The defenders collected three heart tricks and two aces for down one.

Note that, had declarer won the first heart, he would have been faced with the same guess when East, in with the ace of spades, led another heart. We think he would have gone wrong!

It's 10 o'clock.

Duchess of York to join Prince Andrew in Australia

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York will join her husband in Australia on an official visit marking the country's bicentennial, the first time the couple has been together since shortly after their daughter was born 1½ months ago.

The duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson, left Wednesday and was scheduled to arrive in Sydney today, three days ahead of Prince Andrew, the Duke of York, said a Buckhingham Palace spokesman.

The prince, a Royal Navy lieutenant, is on a Far East tour of duty with the HMS Edinburgh, which will dock in Sydney on Sunday, said the spokesman, who was not identified in keeping with British custom.

Before beginning their official Sept. 28 to Oct. 7 visit, the duke and duchess will spend time privately in Sydney, the palace said. Princess Beatrice, who was born Aug. 8, was left behind in England with her nanny, the palace said.

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — If you're rich and famous and want a hideaway where the natives leave you alone, go someplace where other people are rich and famous, according to Ivana Trump, wife of billionaire developer Donald Trump.

"I think the quality of the living in Greenwich is just special," Mrs. Trump, 38, said in a recent interview. "The people, they mind their own business. As much as we can be free, the Trumps can be free in Greenwich.

"When we come to our country home, we really want to be together as a family. We like to go to the movie theaters and the people don't approach you. They're distinguished enough that they just leave you alone."

The Austrian-born Mrs. Trump and her husband have three children, ages 10, 6 and 4.

The Trumps also have homes in Palm Beach, Fla., and New York. Mrs. Trump works with her husband in his many business ventures. Business Week estimated the total value of Trump's holdings at more than $3 billion.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Clarence Clemons, saxophonist for Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, feels good about his part in the Amnesty International Human Rights Now! tour, but admits it comes with some global hassles.

"One day we had breakfast in Italy, lunch in Hungary and supper in Paris. That's how hectic it's been," he said during the group's stop in Los Angeles this week. "Then you're talking about 250 people going through customs and everyone being on the same plane four hours at a time. It's like you play, you travel, you play."

But the rewards are worth it, he said.

"There are people out here waiting to be executed or have been brutalized. Knowing that makes me feel like my job is really important."

Springsteen, Clemons and the rest of the group started the global tour in London on Sept. 2 with such entertainers as Sting, Peter Gabriel, Tracy Chapman, Youssou N'Dour and Joan Baez.

The tour is aimed at raising awareness about the Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948.

LONDON (AP) — French composer Jean-Michel Jarre is making another attempt to bring huge music, fireworks and laser light shows to the River Thames.

The shows would be held Oct. 8 and 9 in the Royal Victoria Docks, part of the east London area of rotting warehouses being redeveloped into condominiums and high-technology factories.

The go-ahead must come from the Newham Borough Council, which withdrew permission for Jarre's sellout Sept. 24 show, fearing the crowds estimated at 100,000 would create a fire risk and huge traffic jams.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Syndicated columnist Mike Royko, whose putdown of Indiana in a 1982 column angered Hoosiers, has asked The Indianapolis News to drop his column as a favor.

In a letter published in Wednesday's editions of The News, the Chicago Tribune columnist said he receives letters from Indiana residents who describe him as "a boob, a hack or a communist."

Royko said the letters do not offend him as much as opening and reading them wastes his time. He said Tribune Media Services Inc., which distributes the column, does not permit him to choose the newspapers that carry it.

"If you grant me this favor, I will be forever grateful and will never again say anything bad about Hoosiers," Royko wrote. "Except for those who run for vice president," he added.

Surgeon pushes federal financing of transplants

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pioneering surgeon wants Congress to enact legislation to spare families the pain of making emotional public appeals for money to pay for organ transplants.

Transplant surgeon Thomas E. Starzl joined the wife of a heart transplant patient in testifying before a Senate Finance subcommittee Tuesday on behalf of legislation to create a taxpayer-financed fund for organ transplants.

The trust fund would draw from a checkoff on federal tax returns, enabling citizens to direct portions of their tax refund to help needy patients in their state pay for operations to receive new hearts, livers, kidneys or other organs.

The idea, Starzl told the subcommittee on taxation, is to end the need for families to "go public" as a last resort to saving family members who will die without organ transplants.

"I can tell you from direct experience that these are desperate ventures which take a frightful psychological toll on families and patients," said Starzl, a professor of surgery at the University of Pittsburgh who is regarded as the leader of the flourishing transplant field.

"They are literally forced to advertise a dying child or adult to the public in hopes that out of compassion, the public will respond," he said.

Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., told the panel that patients' survival "should not depend on their political connections, where they live, or the generosity of their friends, family and neighbors."

In one well-publicized case, well-wishers from around the country donated more than $350,000 and President Reagan pitched in $1,000 to help pay the medical expenses of 3-year-old Tabatha Foster. She died last May after undergoing a rare, five-organ transplant.

Sherry Clifton of Silver Spring, Md., told the panel she contacted the United Way, the Red Cross, news organizations and even Washington Redskins football players to try to raise $30,000 for a deposit on her 49-year-old husband's heart transplant in 1984.

Finally, she said she called the White House and was directed to a public liaison who was able to secure financing from the State of Maryland and other sources to help pay hospital bills for Hardie Clifton amounting to more than $200,000.

The liaison, Michael Batten, was in the hearing room Tuesday and said in an interview that Mrs. Clifton has not forgotten his efforts. "She sends me a Christmas card every year," said Batten, now a private health consultant.

But Mrs. Clifton said her husband received his new heart only because "I was strong enough to fight. Everyone does not have the same strength.

"I cannot see how the leaders of our country can approve a $500,000 renovation project to house two pandas and be willing to allow human beings to die because there is no money available for transplants," she said.

In 1972, the government renovated a rhinoceros facility at the National Zoo to accommodate pandas Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing, who were gifts from China. Zoo spokesman Robert Hoage said he was not certain the renovation amounted to $500,000, but that it probably cost "several hundred thousand" dollars.

Walgren is the author of the House bill, whose companion is being sponsored by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., in the Senate.

The bill is needed because the financing of transplants is "a crazy quilt" of insurance coverage, Bumpers said.

Centers report measles cases on decline

ATLANTA (AP) — After three years on the increase, measles is on its way down again, but health experts say it's too early to tell if the disease might finally be on the decline for good.

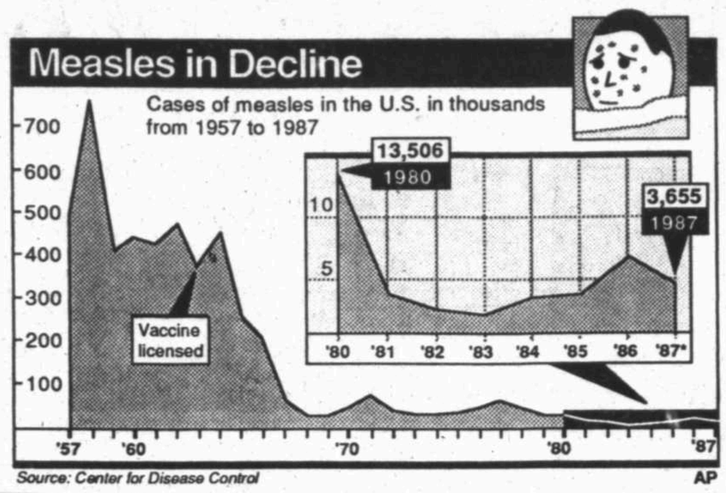
The national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday that 3,652 cases of the once-common childhood disease were reported in 1987, down 42 percent from the previous year. It's the first drop in measles reporting since the record low of 1,497 cases in 1983.

Measles has fallen 99 percent since the era before measles vaccine was licensed in 1963, and the disease was thought headed for eradication when the record low came in 1983. But the case count then surprised researchers by going back up in 1984, '85 and '86.

Researchers cannot say just what the latest drop in measles really means, said Dr. Bradley Hersh, a CDC measles specialist. The disease could continue to show "little peaks and valleys" for the next decade, he noted.

"We don't really know," he said. "We feel now that the vaccine is very good and very effective, but there are problems we are having — in the people unvaccinated in the inner cities, and the vaccine failures in the school-age children."

The CDC said 1,010 of the cases, or 28 percent, were theoretically preventable, occurring in people who should have been vaccinated, but weren't — mostly preschool children in urban areas.



Source: Center for Disease Control — AP

Nearly three-fourths of the cases — 2,642 — were classified as nonpreventable, occurring in patients who had been vaccinated but got measles anyway; most of those patients were older schoolchildren.

"We've got two fronts," Hersh said, "the (young) kids in those preventable cases, and the vaccine failure in older children."

The Atlanta-based agency said Thursday its expert consultants still believe the elimination of measles in the United States "should be pursued," but the two lingering problems — the non-vaccinated and the vaccine failures — will "require different solutions."

"Increased efforts are needed to vaccinate preschool-aged children," particularly in inner-city areas, the CDC said in its weekly report. "Innovative strategies are needed to increase immunization levels in these populations."

Meanwhile, the CDC said, "aggressive revaccination strategies" may be needed during measles outbreaks to eliminate the so-called non-preventable cases in already-vaccinated children.

Such a revaccination would involve a rapid program of additional shots for most children vaccinated before 1980, when new vaccination recommendations and new vaccine techniques began to improve the protection somewhat, Hersh said.

Twenty-nine percent of last year's cases occurred among patients under 5; another 29 percent occurred in the 15-19 age group.

Researchers have reports on how two-thirds of the patients got the measles; 53 percent of them acquired the disease in primary and secondary schools, while others picked it up in day care, universities, at home or in other settings.

Three-fourths of the cases — 2,759 — were reported from eight locations: New York City, 469 cases; California, 809; Texas, 452; New Mexico, 318; Illinois, 213; Missouri, 190; New Hampshire, 162; and Wisconsin, 146. Fewer than 9 percent of the nation's counties reported measles cases.

Mammograms may reduce deaths for women under 50

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study by National Cancer Institute scientists shows that mammogram examinations every one to two years can reduce breast cancer deaths by 24 percent among women aged 40 to 49.

The conclusion came from a detailed analysis of data from a clinical trial begun 18 years ago by the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York. Researchers said it is the first comprehensive study to prove that mammograms can be an important lifesaving screening technique for women under the age of 50.

"This is the first statistically significant evidence of the benefits" for this age group, said Kenneth Chu, lead author of the NCI analysis.

Evidence has been clear for some time, he said, that there is a significant benefit in mammographic screening among women aged 50 and above. But whether these benefits apply to women between the ages 40 and 50 has been a matter of controversy, Chu said.

"Perhaps the new data will encourage those people who do not currently advocate mammography for women under 50 to reassess their position," he said.

By analyzing the Health Insurance Plan data over a longer follow-up period, Chu said, it becomes clear that consistent screening among the younger women can lead to "significant reductions in breast cancer mortality."

Of 742 patients followed for at least 18 years, the NCI researchers found there were 24 percent fewer breast cancer deaths among women who had been screened at ages 40 to 49 when compared with those in a non-screened group.

Though mammography for the younger women has been recommended for some time by the American Cancer Society and others, Chu said a number of experts have said it was not cost effective for women in their 40s to use the screening procedures. He said it takes time to develop breast cancer and that the disease is much more frequent among those over 50. As a result, said Chu, some experts felt that not enough cancer would be found among women in their 40s to justify mammographic examinations.

Charles Smart, another NCI researcher, said the Health Insurance Plan data is based on the results of mammograms that used the technology of the 1960s. He said benefits may be even greater when more modern cancer detection technology is used.

Headaches can signal serious conditions

Associated Press

Most headaches, even painful ones, are signs of nothing more serious than a stressful day. Lying down for 20 minutes will help, though most people pop a pain pill instead.

Dismissing all headaches can be dangerous, however. According to Better Homes and Gardens magazine, head pain occasionally signals a serious problem such as an infection or bleeding in the brain. But even headaches caused by stress, and that is the vast majority, can be cause for concern.

Dr. Seymour Diamond, who founded Chicago's Diamond Headache Clinic, says headaches are worth worrying about if they: occur daily or almost daily, keep you from work and parties, running, coughing, or bowel movements, get worse over time, might be migraines, wake you up from a sound sleep, or are accompanied by a stiff neck, a fever or both.

If the family doctor cannot offer assistance within a couple of months, consider a clinic that specializes. Ask the doctor for a referral or check with the county medical society or a local teaching hospital. Also try the American Association for the Study of Headaches or the National Headache Foundation.

Headache clinics vary dramatically in their approach to diagnosis and treatment. About half of the 20 to 30 headache clinics around the country consist of doctors from a single specialty such as neurology or psychology.

Headache experts often prefer clinics staffed by a variety of specialists. Treatment at these clinics could involve a neurologist, a psychiatrist and an internist. Counselors, physical therapists, nurses or dentists may also play a role.

Before planning a visit to a clinic, call and find out what treatments are used and which medical specialties are represented. Because accrediting standards are not yet common for these centers, as they are with hospitals, it is a good idea to check out the credentials of the staff. Ask whether the doctors are board-certified in their fields (a good sign). Also ask whether staff members have published articles in medical journals about the treatment of headaches.

More common than headache clinics are chronic pain centers, which treat a wider variety of pain problems. Look for one that gives a strong emphasis to headache treatment. Some pain centers have several disciplines represented but apply only one discipline to headaches. "The approach to headaches, not just pain in general, should be multidisciplinary," says Dr. Nelson Hendler of Mensana Clinic in Stevenson, Md.

Treatment usually costs between $200 and $400. Health insurance is likely to cover visits with a physician referral.

New heart shock machines called 'important advance'

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

BOSTON (AP) — New, easy-to-use heart shock machines are a "very, very important advance" that improve the odds of saving many of the 400,000 Americans who die each year of cardiac arrest, researchers report.

Researchers in Seattle found that giving the devices to firefighters allowed them to revive heart victims who would have died if care were left to paramedics who arrived just minutes behind them.

"There is no question that this is a very, very important advance in treating prehospital cardiac arrest victims," said Dr. Donald D. Brown, who has worked with the devices at the University of Iowa.

The machines cost between $4,000 and $7,000 and are highly sophisticated versions of the defibrillators, which doctors and paramedics have used for decades. But unlike their forerunners, these devices are so automated they require little training to operate.

When attached to the chest of someone who has collapsed, the device will check the victim's heart and deliver a shock if it finds cardiac arrest, a disastrous interruption in the heart's blood-pumping rhythm. If given soon enough, the shock almost always restarts the stalled heart.

Dr. W. Douglas Weaver of Harborview Medical Center in Seattle, who directed the study, recommended that the devices be available in police cars, fire trucks, ambulances, office buildings, stadiums and anywhere crowds gather.

"Many communities that have not been able to deliver definitive care to cardiac arrest victims will be able to do so with the advent of this new technology," Weaver said in an interview.

Weaver's work was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Jeremy N. Ruskin of Massachusetts General Hospital called cardiac arrest "the most important public health problem in the United States."

The Seattle results with the automatic defibrillator "provide strong support for its use by those first on the scene," he wrote.

"Their conclusions are very important and very valid," said Dr. Philip Podrid of Boston University Medical Center. "This is an electrical problem. It requires immediate response and definitive therapy."

During cardiac arrest, the heart suddenly stops pumping blood due to a disruption in its electrical signals, and the victims falls unconscious. Unless the heart starts beating within four to eight minutes, brain damage or death are likely.

Most victims have not had heart attacks. So if their heartbeat is restored quickly, they often live for years without permanent heart damage.

Frequently the first to respond to cardiac arrest are firefighters or police, who administer cardiopulmonary resuscitation but not electric shocks.

"You can do the best CPR in the world, and unless you can deliver a shock in that eight-minute window, the likelihood of survival goes down dramatically," Weaver said.

In the study, Seattle firefighters were given four hours of training in use of the new defibrillators. Firefighters who arrived first to treat someone gave shocks to 276 patients, while 228 others got only CPR until paramedics showed up a few minutes later. Thirty percent of those treated first by the firefighters survived, compared with 17 percent of those given shocks by later-arriving paramedics.

Just how many people would be saved if the devices were widely available is unclear. However, Weaver estimated that in communities where only 5 percent or 10 percent of cardiac arrest victims are saved, the devices might raise survival to 25 percent, and in areas with more sophisticated emergency services, a third or a half might be saved.

LEND AN EAR

Pierced earrings are certainly fashionable accessories, but they can bring about some unwanted changes to the earlobe. For instance, careless hairbrushing can cause a snag which may stretch the lobe. Small tears or elongation of the hole in the earlobe can result. Even if a woman is careful about removing pierced earrings, heavier styles and gravity can cause the earlobe to stretch. If caught early enough, earlobe elongation may self-correct with a period of rest. Once the earlobes pass beyond the self-correcting stage, they may still benefit from corrective surgery. A few stitches may tighten the earring hole. The doctor may also agree to alter earlobe size in accentuated cases. From then on, it would pay to intermingle the wearing of small studs with heavier styles.

Different methods and procedures are used in plastic and cosmetic surgery to achieve similar results. These are not deviations from the norm, as the number of variations can be infinite. The surgeon should discuss the different options with you and explain his or her preferences. PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER is located at 848 Central in Odessa and offers you and your family personalized attention in the fields of cosmetic, reconstructive and plastic surgery. Please call for further inquiries. Tel. 335-8711 or 563-3110.

HINT:
Earrings can usually be worn again two months following surgery to the earlobe.

Guard members, reservists injured when bus hits ditch

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty-nine National Guard and Army Reserve members were taken to an Austin hospital Wednesday after the bus in which they were riding slammed into a ditch, officials said.

Four soldiers were admitted to Brackenridge Hospital, and all were in fair condition, said hospital spokeswoman Marsha Walker.

"We don't know exactly why it happened yet. We're looking into it," said Texas National Guard spokesman Lt. Col. Ed Komandosky.

He said the guardsmen and reservists were attending a two-week military petroleum handlers school. They were being bused from one training site to another when the accident occurred between Elgin and Bastrop, east of Austin, about 6:30 a.m., he said.

"The headlights on the bus apparently failed," he said. As the bus approached an intersection, the driver didn't see a stop sign. "By the time he realized it was there, the bus had crossed the highway and slammed into the ditch on the other side."

Ms. Walker identified those admitted as Rogelio Rice, 54, Austin; Mike Light, 30, Kerrville; Charles Harris, 36, Tyler; and Ernest Center, 24, of Kansas City, Kan.

Judges to visit U.S.S.R.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Eldon B. Mahon, a U.S. district court judge in Fort Worth, is traveling with 19 other federal judges to the Soviet Union to tour Moscow and other Soviet cities for three weeks.

The trip costs $4,500 a person. But the cost will be worth it to Mahon, who said he has long been curious about how the Soviet justice system operates.

"I've always had an interest in visiting the Soviet Union. I just want to learn all I can about their judicial system — how case are handled, how judges become judges," he said.

The 70-year-old judge is particularly anxious to see what rights are accorded defendants under the Soviet justice system.

"In America, you're innocent until proven guilty," he said. "I want to see how that compares with Russia."

Mahon said plans also call for the American judges to meet with Soviet judges and lawyers and to visit Soviet courtrooms and prisons.

A former U.S. attorney for North Texas appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson, Mahon also hopes to talk with Soviet citizens.

The American judges' visit is being made under the Citizen Ambassador Program, which is sponsored by the People-to-People International program, founded in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to promote international goodwill and understanding.

Youths held in stabbing

HOUSTON (AP) — Police today were holding a second 15-year-old boy in the stabbing death of a 66-year-old woman who was attacked in her Houston home.

The boys are being held by Harris County juvenile authorities and will be charged in juvenile court with capital murder in the slaying of Gloria Pastor, Homicide Sgt. E.T. Yanchak said. He said it was not certain if prosecutors would seek to have the boys tried as adults.

The first boy arrested was found in a van taken from the woman's home.

Ms. Pastor was stabbed once in the chest with a butcher knife Monday morning, police said.

Detectives said one of the boys has a long record of arrests for property-related crimes.

Taxpayers get extension

AUSTIN (AP) — The tax filing deadlines for state taxpayers whose businesses were affected during Hurricane Gilbert and the related tornadoes will be extended, the comptroller's office announced Wednesday.

"Texas was lucky. We found relatively few taxpayers whose businesses were destroyed by the storm. But those who did suffer losses should contact us and we'll grant a filing extension," said Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock said taxpayers in Kenedy, Bexar, Nueces, Val Verde, Cameron, Hidalgo and Willacy counties may qualify for extentions. An extra 90 days to file tax returns with the state will be granted to those businesses affected by the storm, he said.

Cotton destruction delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — Heavy rainfall, including that caused by Hurricane Gilbert, resulted in delays in cotton destruction deadlines for South Texas, the state Department of Agriculture said Wednesday.

"Due to the wet conditions, we've decided to give producers more time to get into their fields and destroy the cotton residue," said Dr. Paul Martin, pest management director for the department.

Deadlines had been set for Sept. 10 in the Coastal Bend Pest Management Zone and Sept. 15 for the Lower Rio Grande Valley Pest Management Zone.

Texan to be extradited

HONOLULU (AP) — A man wanted in Houston for the alleged sexual assault of a child was turned over to Honolulu police Wednesday for extradition.

U.S. Magistrate Bert S. Tokairin made the ruling the day after FBI agents and police on Hawaii Island arrested Courtland Laymond Taylor, 42, in Hilo, according to Eugene F. Glenn, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Honolulu.

Taylor, who used the name Rev. James Taylor in Hilo, was indicted March 22, 1984, by a grand jury in Harris County, Glenn said.

On March 31, 1987, Taylor was named in a federal arrest warrant, charging him with fleeing Texas to avoid prosecution, Glenn said.

Case against priest settled out of court

Rodriguez

Reed

Fernandez

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A judge and the Bexar County district attorney are accusing one another of botching an indecency with a child case against a Roman Catholic priest who will not face the charges because a judge refused to accept the prosecutors plea bargain.

The Rev. Federico Fernandez, 40, was charged with indecency with a child after two brothers, now age 16 and 11, accused him of fondling them in the summer of 1987.

But on Tuesday, four days after the alleged victims' family and the Roman Catholic Church settled a civil lawsuit, prosecutors and attorneys went to State District Judge Susan Reed, hoping she would approve a plea bargain.

She refused, and prosecutors, told that the boys would be traumatized if they were forced to testify, dismissed the indictment and blamed the judge for Fernandez being free.

"We had a plea in the hand. We had a bird in the hand. We've got nothing now," District Attorney Fred Rodriguez said Wednesday.

The family's attorney, Jackson Speed joined Rodriguez at the news conference and blasted the judge.

"She dismissed the case and ignored the cry of these children," Speed said at a joint news conference with Rodriguez Wednesday. "Once again, they have been victimized, not by the priest, but by the judge."

The plea bargain called for the priest to receive 10 years probation, to undergo psychiatric counseling, to never serve as a parish priest and to stay away from children.

The judge defended her ruling, saying Rodriguez and his staff failed because she told them several months ago that the case would probably need to go to trial.

"The public doesn't like plea bargains and I don't like child molesters," Ms. Reed said. "I think what I did is a benefit to the community because I think I've set the standard down here and I think I've told the DA something and I think I've told everybody else something.

"I feel very sorry for the children in this case, either way they go, but I'll tell you what, you are not going to come sneaking deals or trying to pressure me into deals that are inappropriate and particularly when you have the resources the district attorney has to handle this kind of situation," she said.

Speed said he pressured the church into a settlement last week.

"I had to settle the case before they ever found out that my witnesses were falling apart," Speed said.

On Tuesday, at the time prosecutors were dismissing the criminal charges, State District Judge Carolyn Spears formally sealed from public view the civil judgment and the amount of money the church will pay the family of the children.

The civil settlement approved Friday came one day after Speed filed new pleadings asking for $6 million.

The boys' family had said earlier this year that they had gone to Catholic officials in August 1987 to report the fondling cases and were told not to go to the media or authorities because the case was being taken care of by the church.

The priest was sent to a counseling facility in New Mexico and church officials did not tell authorities about the allegations until November 1987, investigators charge.

Bob Wachsmuth, an attorney for the church, did not return telephone calls to The Associated Press Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Speed declined to discuss the settlement with the church, but Ms. Reed questioned the attorneys' tactics and said there could be a violation of the law if a civil case is allowed to influence another case or vice versa.

"My question is — the district attorney is aware of this statute. Did he take any steps to ensure that the civil suit had no impact on the decision of the family not to want to proceed (in the criminal suit)?" she asked.

"Did he ever tell the civil attorneys, 'You have got to get my agreement on your civil suit because otherwise you are in violation (of the law)?' " she added.

Prosecutors said they were not aware of the civil suit until last week and they tried to get a plea bargain after Speed said his clients would have difficulty testifying against the priest.

"My concern was not for the priest at all, I couldn't have cared less.

"My concern was for the victims," Rodriguez said. "They had already been victimized once. I had the choice of pushing...the kids regardless of any risk to their health and I knew not only that it was a risk, but irreversible and I chose not too."

Cancun tourists steal food to survive

BEAUMONT (AP) — Four Woodville men never before had stolen anything, but they didn't think twice about breaking into a restaurant after Hurricane Gilbert battered the resort town of Cancun, Mexico.

This was not the vacation they hoped for — no food or water for two days and no idea how much longer that situation would last.

They knew military police were patroling the town with semi-automatic rifles and had been ordered to shoot looters, but those warnings weren't as loud as their stomachs growling, the men said this week after returning home.

"It was just the thought of having food," Troy Dinger, 23, said of the ham, cheese and fruit they took. "We didn't know how much longer we'd have to go without it."

The food and water shortage was bad, but the lack of information was the most frustrating part of their ordeal, said his brother Todd, 26.

"Before the hurricane got there, they were saying it's just a little storm that would blow over," he said.

Their seven-day vacation turned into a nightmare. Todd and friend Carl Pope, 26, watched satellite dishes, trees, shingles and tin scraps fly through the air from the door of their hotel. Troy Dinger and Derrick Rains, 26, slept through the worst of it.

The water-filled bathtub was the only drinking water they had for the next two days.

After they were ordered out of the hotel, "We were no longer tourists. We were refugees. No one would tell us anything," Todd said.

A cab driver charged $15 to take them to another hotel one-eighth of a mile away, Rains said, and the hotel manager told them to take only a toothbrush.

"He said we would be allowed to come back the next day," Rains said. When they finally returned, their suitcases had been rifled for valuables. A camera, shoes and watch were missing. Hotel officials dismissed the problem, saying the hurricane could have blown them from the room anyway.

"A hurricane didn't unzip our suitcases, and that's how we found them," Todd said.

Once they got to the airport, they were relieved they hadn't arrived earlier. With 5,000 people crammed into the tiny terminal, it was like a sauna and smelled bad. Some people were so sick they vomited quietly in corners or out in the open. Babies cried as constantly as the drone of flies inside and people who spent the night there gave reports of cockroaches the size of a toddler's foot. It took two days for some to get out.

"We would have gone anywhere just to get out," Rains said.

They finally got tickets on a flight to Cleveland and were told it was leaving in eight minutes. Three hours later, they took off.

Troy vows to never leave the United States again.

"I was 26 when I left for Mexico," he said. "And I'm 40 now."

Storm washes shells on shore

AUSTIN (AP) — Superintendent John Hunter of Padre Island National Sea Shore says thanks to Hurricane Gilbert the park is now a beachcomber's paradise, with sea shells, driftwood and other "treasures" washed up on the beach.

"The beach is in good condition. The only thing that washed up on our beaches are millions of sea shells, and the water is back to blue," said Breeze Carlile, executive director of South Padre Island Visitor and Convention Bureau. "A visitor would never know that a hurricane had hit."

Radio report details Soviet unrest

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — Soldiers cordoned off streets and checked identification papers today in the disputed region of Nagorno-Karabakh and the Armenian capital of Yerevan as ethnic tensions in the south worsened.

Radio Moscow said today that protesters attacked a prosecutor's office in Nagorno-Karabakh and that a strike in the territory had closed schools, transportation and many state-run enterprises. Public gatherings were banned, it said.

One person was reported killed and 48 injured in clashes between Armenians and Azerbaijanis.

"There are soldiers on every street, at every crossroad, checking passports and personal cars," said a man who answered the telephone at the state radio and television office, Gostelradio, in Nagorno-Karabakh's main city of Stepanakert.

"The situation is not improving. It has become even more threatening," Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vadim Perfiliev said at a news briefing in Moscow.

Perfiliev said an Armenian man was killed and 48 people were injured in clashes in Nagorno-Karabakh. Thirty-two of the injured were Armenians and 16 were Azerbaijanis, the spokesman said. More than 30 buildings had been burned down, Perfiliev said.

The government closed Azerbaijan to foreign journalists today, a day after barring travel to Armenia.

Nagorno-Karabakh is a predominantly Armenian region of mainly Moslem Azerbaijan. Armenians, most of whom are Christian, began pressing in February for its transfer to Armenia.

Blaming the violence on "corrupt elements" trying to distract attention from Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms, Perfiliev said "such a situation, of course, cannot be tolerated. We cannot allow anarchy and the undermining of the rights of citizens under the Constitution."

In response, a 9 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew was imposed in Stepanakert, the region's main city, although most people had been staying home voluntarily because they feared more violence, said the man at Gostelradio. He said he was an ethnic Armenian, but would not further identify himself.

In Yerevan, soldiers blocked streets around government and Communist Party buildings and protesters rallied to demand the Armenian Supreme Soviet again consider annexation of the enclave, an editor of the local Tass affiliate said in a telephone interview.

One Stepanakert resident contacted by telephone from Moscow said food stores, the newspaper and radio and television stations were working, but that public transportation, schools and most other workplaces were closed.

The resident said no one knew how long the "special status" imposed on Nagorno-Karabakh and on the Agdam region of Azerbaijan on Wednesday would last.

The official news agency Tass said the mountainous enclave's Stepanakert and Agdam regions were placed on a "special status," lower than a state of emergency.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said the Kremlin was considering use of "some emergency action" to deal with the unrest. He did not elaborate.

An editor at the official Armenian news agency Armenpress said in a telephone interview from Yerevan that soldiers of the Internal Affairs Ministry had taken up positions in the center of the Armenian capital.

Radio Moscow, reporting on the situation in Stepanakert, said "an attack on the regional prosecutor's office was provoked." It did not say when it occurred or give other details.

The radio also reported several arson attack on cars and scattered shooting. The radio said there were casualties, but gave no numbers.

Tass reported Wednesday that there had been no casualties in violence Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tass reported that protesters had insulted authorities and humiliated Interior Ministry soldiers and police. It did not provide details.

The editor of Armenpress, the local Tass affiliate, speaking on condition of anonymity, said soldiers of the Internal Affairs Ministry had taken up positions in the Yerevan city center.

"There isn't any disorder, and there won't be," the editor said.

Ethnic tensions led to rioting in the Azerbaijani city of Sumgait in February, when 32 people were killed. Some calm returned after the national Supreme Soviet on July 18 turned down a request by the Armenian parliament and rejected annexation.

Jubilant townspeople in the northern port of St. Marc, Haiti, follow rebel soldiers through their city.

More Haitian soldiers turn on commanders

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — More soldiers turned on their commanders and civilian mobs slaughtered the henchmen of three decades of Haitian dictators in the spreading chaos of a popular soldiers' revolt.

In an isolated case of loyalty to a commander, troops in the northern port city of St. Marc killed a 12-year-old boy Wednesday when they fired into a mob about to attack the home of a sergeant with a reputation for brutality, witnesses said.

Rank-and-file soldiers in at least 16 military units throughout the country have revolted against their commanders since ousting and exiling Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy in a weekend coup and naming Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril president.

Avril tried unsuccessfully to quell the uprising on Tuesday by naming a new armed forces chief and retiring nine unpopular commanding officers.

"The situation is precarious. After all, we are in the midst of a general mutiny," one Western diplomat said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In the capital of Port-au-Prince, a leftist coalition called for a popular show of support today for the mutineers. The Confederation of Democratic Unity urged people to meet outside the St. Jean Bosco Roman Catholic Church, where 13 worshipers were killed and 77 wounded by thugs attacking with guns, pikes and machetes during a Mass six days before the coup.

The demonstration was previously scheduled for Wednesday and confederation leaders had suspended it, saying they would meet instead with the leader of the military rebellion, Sgt. Joseph Heubreux, and Avril.

There was no confirmation the meeting was held.

A mob on Wednesday placed the smoldering body of a Tonton Macoute killed the previous day at St. Bosco's, where several hundred people gathered.

The Macoutes were the private army of the regime created by Francois Duvalier that ruled this impoverished nation for 29 years until mass protests forced his son, Jean-Claude, into exile in France in February 1986.

Namphy then headed a junta that promised a transition to democracy. However, independently run general elections Nov. 29 were thwarted when armed thugs supported by soldiers killed at least 33 people at polling stations.

Leslie Manigat, a civilian, was elected president in January in military-run balloting that was boycotted by leading presidential candidates amd marred by widespread irregularities. Namphy ousted him in June.

Radio stations estimated Wednesday that up to 12 Tonton Macoutes had been killed by mobs and soldiers since Sunday.

Rebellious soldiers rounded up agents of Namphy's Bureau of Criminal Investigations Wednesday and dumped them — some in handcuffs — at army headquarters in Port-au-Prince. About 200 people gathered and cheered each jeepload of soldiers with their captives.

The fate of the ousted military commanders dropped off there was unknown.

At least 11 commanders have been ousted since Monday. They include former Defense Minister Brig. Gen. Williams Regala, despised in Haiti for his ties to the Duvalier dictatorship.

When they began their mutiny, the enlisted men led by Heubreux and other members of the Presidential Guard presented the army high command with a list of demands that included calls for Haiti's first free elections in 31 years and for major changes in the military.

When the high command hesitated, soldiers took matters in their own hands, ousting their commanders all over the Carribean country of about 5 million people.

Aide says Bush confronted Noriega

LONDON (AP) — A former senior aide to Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega says Vice President George Bush met with Noriega five years ago and complained about money laundering in Panama, according to a British television documentary.

The assertion by Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera contradicts Bush claims that the Reagan administration took action against Noriega, Panama's de facto leader, as soon as it learned that Noriega was allegedly involved in drugs.

Noreiga was indicted in federal court on drug charges in February and U.S. sanctions began against him early this year.

James Baker, chairman of Bush's presidential campaign, responded to questions about the matter on the "CBS Morning News" today. "You're going to hear a lot of rumors and speculation as this campaign moves through its last 47 days," he said.

Diaz and Jose I. Blandon, a former senior intelligence officer in Panama, also said Noriega claims to have pictures and tape recordings that would link Bush or his aides to secret training of Nicaraguan rebels.

From October 1984 to October 1986, U.S. law prohibited any U.S. government aid to the Contras in their fight to topple Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government. The documentary did not say when the pictures were taken nor when the tape recordings were made.

"We have learned that as early as 1983 ... George Bush sat down with Gen. Noriega to complain about the laundering of drug money in Panama," reporter Julian Manyon said on the Thames Television program, which was screened for reporters Wednesday.

"One of the vice president's concerns, according to Panamanians who were there, was an estimated $3 billion of drug profits that had already been laundered through Panama," Manyon said.

Noriega was shown on the documentary saying he never met Bush nor had any contact with him. "Your source of information is mistaken," he said.

In Washington, Bush spokesman Steve Hart said Wednesday the vice president, during a stopover in Panama in 1983, met with Panama's then-President Ricardo de la Espriella and other officials, including Noriega. Hart said Bush spoke of drug interdiction efforts, but did not speak of any allegations against the general.

Manyon said the meeting took place Dec. 10, 1983 at the VIP lounge of Panama City's airport. According to a black-and-white photograph shown of the gathering, Diaz attended the meeting.

Manyon said the meeting raised "important questions" about Bush's claims the administration acted as soon as it learned of allegations against Noriega concerning the laundering of drug profits.

Diaz, who was interviewed in Venezuela, said he once saw Noriega examining photographs which apparently showed Contras being secretly trained in Panama under an arrangement with Col. Oliver North, the White House aide dismissed over the Iran-Contra scandal in which profits from arms sales to Iran were allegedly funneled to the Contras.

Noriega suggested that the tapes and photos gave him an advantage over Bush, according to Diaz, who has accused Noriega of corruption, electoral fraud and political murder.

In the TV interview, Blandon replied, "Of course" when asked if he believed "people inside the Bush campaign are aware of the threat that Noriega poses for them" by allegedly having tape recordings about the illegal training of Contras.

Blandon, a witness at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing investigating Noriega, said the general has sent a message to Bush campaign officials that he has the tape recordings.

Activist fears disclosures endanger Sandinistas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An opponent activist says U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright may have jeopardized the security of domestic critics of the ruling Sandinistas by saying the CIA tried to destabilize Nicaragua.

Enrique Bolanos Gayer, a former president of the anti-Sandinista Private Enterprise Council, on Wednesday called Wright's statements "irresponsible, full of politicking and moral and ethical faults."

He said Wright made the comments out of "ambition and a partisan fight to reach the White House. ... In his internal politicking, lacking ethics and morals, (Wright) is capable of sacrificing the security of people."

Bolanos made his remarks from Miami to Radio Liberacion, the Nicaraguan rebels' clandestine radio station.

Wright, D-Texas, said Tuesday that Congress had received "clear testimony" that the Reagan administration sought to secretly undermine the Nicaraguan peace process, thus damaging long-term prospects for an accord between the leftist Sandinistas and U.S.-supported Contra rebels.

President Reagan on Wednesday accused Wright of talking indiscreetly about U.S. intelligence secrets, but stopped short of denying the claim.

The Sandinista government had no immediate response, but the official newspaper Barricada ran a banner headline Wednesday saying, "CIA Confesses To Plan Melton."

In July, the Sandinistas expelled U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton, saying he was carrying out an adminstration plan to undermine Nicaragua's government by supporting opposition groups.

The Sandinistas expelled him and seven other U.S. diplomats the day after a July 10 rally they said was part of that plan. Police arrested more than 40 opposition leaders at the big anti-government march in the southern city of Nandaime after clashing with protesters.

The Contras said earlier this week that further talks to forge a lasting peace to replace a March 23 preliminary cease-fire pact cannot be held until the 40 are freed.

38 injured in five South African bombings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Thirty-eight people were hurt across South Africa in five bombings over nine hours, according to police, who said the first blast injured 18 whites, while the next-to-last hurt 19 blacks.

A 1 a.m. blast today inside the Why Not disco in the Johannesburg suburb of Hillbrow injured 19 blacks, three seriously, and caused extensive damage, police said. The disco is frequented almost exclusively by blacks.

During the Wednesday evening rush hour, a bomb exploded at the main white bus terminal in downtown Johannesburg, injuring 19 people, all but one of them white, police said.

The explosion occurred just after 5 p.m. in one of the new concrete trash bins installed throughout the city last year to muffle the effects of bombs. It shattered windows of four buses, damaged a fast-food cafe, and broke the windows of buildings and cars in the area.

Bulldogs rate 'Plus' over Rebels in 4-5A shootout

An R-T Sports Analysis
By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Who will win Friday night's District 4-5A opener between Midland High and Midland Lee?

That seems to be the major question being asked this week, so a rating exercise seems to be in order. To keep this exercise in a positive light, we are using a Plus-System, for a 1 through 10 advantage, for the rating. So, here goes.

Quarterbacks: Midland High Plus 8: MHS' Russell Page vs. Lee's Vince Henderson — the senior vs. the junior. This was a full Plus 10 for MHS earlier this year, but Henderson's 117 yards rushing and 119 yards passing for two touchdowns last week has narrowed the margin. Still, Page has a commanding 487-319 advantage in overall rushing and passing...

Running Backs: Midland Lee Plus 4: MHS' Dwane Roberts is a 1,000-yard threat this year and gives the Bulldogs a major running threat. However, both teams have five touchdowns from their running backs this year, but Lee has four running backs over 100 yards rushing to MHS' two. Another however, however, shows that Lee fullback Jason Fletcher will be out for this game, making Lee's edge smaller than normal...

Receivers: Midland High Plus 6: Again MHS' edge is smaller here than a week ago as Lee showed the touchdown threat in the passing game last week. Still, the Bulldogs have six different players to catch passes this year while Lee has had three. MHS owns a 419-160 yardage edge here...

Offensive Line: Dead Even: Both teams still appear to have a way to go in this area, but both have done better than expected at this stage of the season. Both teams listed the offensive line as problem areas in preseason due to lack of overall experience...

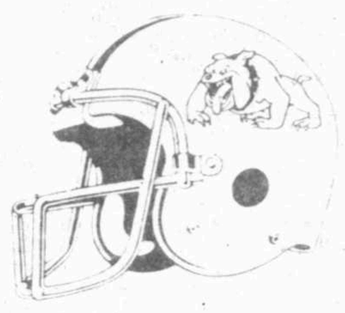
Defensive Front: Midland Lee Plus 2: A strength of both teams in the early going, but the Rebels have been extremely strong against the run and should rate a slight edge...

Linebackers: Midland Lee Plus 8: Just having All-District performer Mike Pearson in the middle gives Lee a big edge here. Lee deserved the full Plus 10 before the season, but the inexperienced Bulldog linebackers have played better than expected...

Secondary: Midland High Plus 5: MHS does not have the foot speed of the Rebels, which keeps this margin down, but the Bulldogs do possess more experience and have shown the ability to hit. Lee seems to be improving weekly in this area after a disastrous start in a scrimmage against Plainview...

Punting: Midland High Plus 8: MHS' Kevin Rychel is the leading punter in the district, averaging over 44 yards per game. Lee's Roland Flores is averaging around 33 yards per punt...

Extra Point-Field Goal: Midland Lee Plus 5. Lee's Arthur Donnelly is only a junior, but has a year of experience and has shown more consistency than MHS senior Shaun Savas, who has of yet to kick a field goal...



Specialty Teams: Midland High Plus 4: Midland High has been consistent in punt and kickoff coverage this year while Lee had some early kicking coverage woes that cost a lost to Killeen. However, Lee seems to have corrected the major problems...

Plus Score: Midland High 31, Midland Lee 19.

The Plus Score should not be construed as a possible game score. The Plus Score should only be used to show an advantage of one team over the other.

For instance, it can be debated that the rating categories chosen for this exercise should not carry the same weight. It can also be debated that there are other factors involved, such as depth, offensive vs. defensive matchups, strength of non-conference schedule, etc.

Also, Midland Lee has won this matchup five consecutive seasons and no "psychological advantage" is counted here — or the odds of such a string continuing.

At any rate, you probably have your own Plus-System working. In an emotional cross-town matchup, any system is as good as another. But it still says here that MHS owns the advantage for 1988.

Lee-MHS memories last

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

This Midland High-Lee High event Friday night at Memorial Stadium is being called a football game by a lot of people.

But it is much more important than just another game. This year, it's the Super Bowl of Midland. The Big Time.

Golly, it's so big the school board even decided to move the band back in the stands.

With a win, either the Lee Rebels or MHS Bulldogs will come away wearing the city crown for the next 12 months. The game's loser will just have to face up to that.

Midland Lee has won the annual intra-city affair 16 out of the 27 times it has been played since 1961. The 'Dawgs have nine city titles to their name and there were back-to-back ties in 1974-75.

Midland High wants to win because they haven't done so since 1982. Midland Lee wants to win just because they've grown accustomed to it.

How important a game? Consider the feelings of Wally Kleine, tight end, MHS Class of '82: "Anyone who's ever played at Midland High ... this one has to be the biggest game of the season. They're working the whole season in particular for this one game. All that work they've done has to be channeled into this effort."

Kleine, who's grown a little since graduation, went on to play offensive and defensive tackle at Notre Dame and followed that up by spending a year with the Washington Redskins.

Quotes from the Lee-MHS past

"My senior year (1985-'86), we got behind 21-7 and ended up winning 28-21. We were down by 14 and we went into the lockerroom at halftime and heard all of the Midland High people and the band. That inspired us." — Jake Young, offensive guard, LHS Class of '85.

"The attitude and spirit has been high at Midland High. I think the thing they ought to think about is our past 10 years, how many Midland High teams have beaten Lee. The fact that these guys have a chance to beat Lee ought to give them a thrill." — Wally Kleine, tight end, MHS Class of '82.

"The game is important because there's a lot of tradition between the two schools. A lot of emotions between the two teams. And not just in football but in other sports." — Tyrone Thurman, running back, LHS Class of '86.

"I was telling someone the other day, even if they go to the pros or college, they'll never forget it (the rivalry). People would have a hard time believing this. At Notre Dame we had some great victories ... we beat USC and Penn State, but this is something everyone remembers." — Kleine.

"I don't feel like Lee looks as strong. I almost have to give Midland High the advantage. It's been a long time since Midland High has been a dominant team. It would be a shot in the arm for Doug McCutchen's program. If they beat Lee, it would have to give them the confidence for the rest of the way." — David Sledge, offensive guard/defensive lineman, LHS Class of '76.

"It was always 'The Season' the week before Midland Lee. My mother was an English teacher at Lee so there was a little family rivalry." — Jeff Robnett, fullback, MHS Class of '80.

MHS lost both games when Kleine played, 14-0 in 1980, 14-8 in '81.

Despite his success in college and the pros, Kleine considers the '81 MHS-LHS contest as "one of those games you'll never forget. I was telling somebody the other day that even if they go to the pros or to college, they'll never forget it."

Pretty important sounding, at least from a former Bulldog.

Now, a view from the west side of town, as seen through the eyes of Jake Young, offensive guard, Class of '85, and now starting center for the Nebraska Cornhuskers ...

"Everyone gets fired up for Midland because you have to live with those people for a year," he said. "Essentially, you can be playing against your next door neighbor."

He didn't play varsity ball his sophomore year, '83, but remembered a time just two weeks before Lee's 35-0 route of Midland High.

"There were signs like, '12 Days,' (until the game). That was the year we went to the finals. That shows you how big a game it is. You've got to live with them, associate with them everyday."

Olympic harmony dies

Chaos reigns with drugs, fighting

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Peace, harmony, progress — the theme of the 1988 Olympics posted all over Seoul — lost meaning Thursday when enraged Korean boxing coaches punched a referee and gave the Games a nasty black eye.

The chaos and disgrace at the boxing arena cast a shadow over a day of perfect 10s by Soviet men gymnasts, speed and hustle by American women in a basketball shootout, and a dramatic comeback victory by the defending gold medal U.S. men's volleyball team.

Even Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi chipped in from afar with some criticism, citing bullfighting as one of the Olympics' violent and brutal sports.

The only bull at these Games was the excuse offered by Korean boxing officials to justify a melee in the ring after one of their fighters lost.

The coaches and a Korean Olympic official stormed the ring and threw several punches at referee Keith Walker of New Zealand, hitting him at least once, after a 4-1 decision by 119-pound Bulgarian Alexandar Hristov over Korean Byun John-il.

"The Korean man, he should win," said S.H. Yoon, a Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee official who was one of those who charged Walker. Yoon and the coaches claimed Walker unfairly deducted two points from Byun for butting.

That excuse didn't win much support from higher Korean authorities.

"It was very disgraceful behavior," said Shin Hyonung, spokesman for the organizing committee. "Necessary action will be followed by the authorities concerned after a full investigation."

A chair and bottle also were thrown into the ring, but police restored order quickly and shielded Walker as he left the arena. However, Byun refused to leave.

In a silent protest after the ring was cleared, Byun, 19, sat in his corner with his arms on his knees. A few minutes later, clad in his blue and gold robe, he got up and sat on his stool and stared impassively across the empty ring.

He sat and he sat and he sat some more — 67 minutes in all, breaking an unofficial sitdown record of 51 minutes by South Korean boxer Choh Dong-kih at the 1964 Tokyo Games after he was disqualified.

When the lights went out after the afternoon card was finished, Byun finally stood and climbed through the ropes. He returned, though, a moment later, to bow courteously in several directions to the empty seats and a few remaining supporters.

On the fun side of things, Jeff Stork came off the bench to rally the defending gold medal U.S. men's volleyball team from an 0-2 deficit to a 3-2 victory over Argentina that virtually clinched a spot in the medal round.

Stork, the usual starting setter, sat out the first two games with a back injury, then turned the match around in the third game with his spinning, dipping, left-handed serves.

He won his first five points, one on an ace that made it 9-4, and got fine support from Steve Timmons, Craig Buck and Bob Ctvrtlik to win the match 11-15, 11-15, 15-4, 17-15, 15-7 and run the U.S. record to 3-0.

Badgers, Owls renew heated area rivalry

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Area Football

The rivalry between McCamey and Reagan County has been one of the area's hottest this decade. Don't expect Friday's result to change that status.

McCamey, 1-2, invades Big Lake Friday for a game with the 2-0 Owls, who were off last weekend. In other games on an abbreviated area schedule, Stanton travels to Garden City, Rankin visits Sanderson, Crane hosts Coahoma, Lamesa opens District 3-3A play at undefeated Brownfield, Greenwood travels to Muleshoe and Iraan visits Wink. Big Spring and Andrews are both off this week.

McCamey dealt Reagan County a rare loss in a 27-26 battle last season, and Owl coach Ronnie Reeger doesn't expect things to be any easier this year even though the Badgers lost quarterback Roman Zarate and tailback Emmit Brown from last year's group and have had trouble putting points on the board as a result.

"In this thing, you'll never know what's going to happen," Reeger said. "There's always a lot of action going on."

Reeger is especially concerned about McCamey's defensive tackle trio of Will Kennedy, Anastacio Dominguez and 290-pound Ivan Borrego.

"Those three inside people are very big and strong," he said. "They make it very hard to run inside and their linebackers support them on the corners very well."

Reagan County will try to overcome the stiff Badger front with a potent offense led by quarterback Rodolfo Guerrero, who has shown flashes of brillance this season. Guerrero shredded the Greenwood defense in the second quarter of a game two weeks ago and has proved to be an able replacement for all-everything Scott Lipsey.

Guerrero likes to throw to wingback Shane McCutchen as well as split end Alfonso Valadez, both of whom can run with anyone in Class 2A. Also, The Owls will try to overcome McCamey's huge defensive line with their own front that includes 227-pound tackle Robby Hooker and center Rodney Benson.

Cowboy-Haters beware: Dallas is on the way back

Patterson

Tuesday, things got off to a rough start. Sunday and Monday had been bad enough, what with Steve Pelluer losing another game for the Cowboys.

But then Tuesday, I get to work and am lambasted by a couple of co-workers.

Subject matter: Dallas Cowboys 10, New York Giants 10, Replay Official Armen Terzian 2.

The Cowboys have played three games this season. The standings show their record is 1-2. But it is not. It is 0-0. Steve Pelluer is 0-2, thanks to Week One's Plague in Pittsburgh and last Sunday's "Heeeere's Harry" interception. Add to that the fact that Dallas did not win against St. Louis, or Phoenix, or wherever. The Cardinals beat themselves thanks to The Fake That Ate Phoenix. Thus, an 0-0 record.

Among all these Twilight Zone-ish happenings comes Darryl Clack's "muff" of the opening kickoff last Sunday against the Giants. (Can you believe there is actually ink being wasted to differentiate between a "fumble" and a "muff?")

What should have been ruled a touchback was called a safety because a muff was called a fumble and therefore, the Cowboys trailed 2-0 with only eight seconds gone in the game.

Anyway, I get to work Tuesday and there's assistant business editor Allen Howland. Allen claims he's a football fan, but I've never really seen him watch a game. I guess we just have to take his word for it.

So Allen, who bleeds orange and says he used to live in Denver, spouts out the by-now, age-old theory of how "the Cowboys had 59 minutes, 52 seconds to win the game but couldn't."

Horse Hawkey!

My contention is that, except for the official's mistake, Dallas and New York both scored the same amount of points in the same amount of time. Therefore, the Giants also had 59 minutes, 52 seconds to win the game but couldn't.

And then there's Gary Ott, the city editor. Gary also claims to be a football fan, but he's actually a Redskin fan. You know the type ... they don't like finesse football (the Cowboy brand), just the violent kind (the Washington brand). Gary probably also likes Charles Bronson movies.

Gary admitted that the officials made a mistake during Sunday's game. On the other hand, he does seem to spend an inordinate amount of time knocking the Cowboys when we all chat amongst ourselves here at work.

Dallas, quite honestly, has deserved to be picked on by Cowboy-Haters since 1984. Actually, since '79, when Roger Staubach, the Greatest Player of Our Time, decided to hang 'em up, lest risk death the next time some brutal Washington Redskin bowled over him unnecessarily.

Fans of America's Team ... it's time to regroup. The Cowboys are on the way back. They may be a few years away yet, but there are signs of a return to glory.

If the defense keeps playing as magnificently as it has in the first three games, one wonders if Dallas might make some sort of Wild Card spot. It's possible.

But with Steve Pelluer at quarterback, well, what's a team to do? There's no reason for Dallas to have Super ambitions. Pelluer has no leadership abilities, even though Tom Landry insists he'll get better. (Landry also insisted that Danny White would get better, but did he?)

Dallas has no capable quarterback, one offensive weapon in Herschel Walker and another — Michael Irvin — who, to this point, possesses only potential.

If the Cowboys would just listen to me, they could fill those 65,024 seats in Texas Stadium again: They should've kept Tony Dorsett and traded Walker and Pelluer to San Diego for a 1989 draft pick. That way, they could pick UCLA's Troy Aikman, a Heisman-hopeful quarterback who will go Top 5 in next year's draft.

(People say I'm warped for that opinion, but at least we'll never know how right or wrong I'd be.)

The Cowboys will have to struggle through another year or so of mediocrity, but they will return and if the first three games of '88 are any indication, it will be fun watching along the way ...

So to Gary, Allen, and all the Cowboy-Haters out there beware: The Silver and Blue will be back soon enough to make your lives miserable again.

Knepper hurls gem; Mets clinch East tie

NL Roundup

Associated Press

Bob Knepper pitched the best game of his career, but it came too late to help the Houston Astros.

Knepper threw the first one-hitter of his major-league career Wednesday night and Houston beat the Atlanta Braves 1-0. Dale Murphy got the only hit, an infield single to third in the second inning that didn't draw a throw.

"I had a good sinker and a good fastball, and I kept the ball down," Knepper said. "I don't know if this is the best stuff I've ever had. Sometimes I've had good stuff and it seems like I got bombed. But I had good location and they hit the pitches for ground balls when I needed it.

"It's real nice to have a good year. But, in a sense, what good did it do? The idea is to be on a playoff or World Series team. It's just nice to look back and know I didn't cost us anything."

Houston had lost six straight games to fall out of the National League West race. The Astros, tied with San Francisco for third place, trail first-place Los Angeles by 10½ games and are 1½ games behind Cincinnati.

"The way we've been going, maybe this will turn us around," Houston manager Hal Lanier said. "The bottom line is we stopped the losing streak. Maybe we will get a little more relaxed. I wish I knew our hitters problems. Maybe they're pressing too much."

Knepper, 14-5, retired 20 in a row after Murphy's single until he walked Bruce Bendedict to lead off the ninth. Knepper struck out seven and walked one in his second shutout and third complete game this season.

Gerald Young hit an infield single in the eighth inning, sending Atlanta to its eighth loss in 11 games.

Mets 4, Phillies 3

Darryl Strawberry hit his league-leading 36th home run as New York clinched a tie for first place. But the Mets did in on a down note because left-hander Bob Ojeda nearly severed the middle finger of his pitching hand earlier in the day.

Ojeda sustained the injury using a hedge-clipper in his garden. He underwent five hours of microsurgery to reattach the tip of the finger and damaged arteries, tendons and nerves. Doctors estimated he will take four to six months to recover.

Sid Fernandez, 10-10, gave up six hits, struck out seven and walked two in eight innings. Randy Myers finished for his 24th save.

Strawberry broke a 2-2 tie in the fifth when he homered off Marvin Freeman, 2-3.

Gregg Jefferies hit his sixth home run in the seventh to make it 4-2 before Ricky Jordan tripled in the ninth and scored on Juan Samuel's groundout.

New York has won seven straight, 12 of 13 and 22 of 27.

Pirates 5, Cardinals 0

John Smiley pitched a two-hitter for his first career shutout and Benny Distefano hit a three-run homer.

Smiley, 12-10, struck out six and walked none in his fifth complete game, the 16th shutout against St. Louis this season.

Jose DeLeon, 12-9, had his six-game winning streak stopped.

Mike LaValliere and Felix Fermin hit run-scoring singles.

Padres 9, Dodgers 3

Dodgers 6, Padres 5

Mike Devereaux's run-scoring single in the 10th inning of the second game gave Los Angeles a split and lowered the Dodgers' magic number to three.

In the first game, Dennis Rasmussen pitched a seven-hitter and Benito Santiago capped a seven-run second inning with his first grand slam.

Rasmussen, 15-9, won for the ninth time in 10 starts. He struck out two and walked one in his fifth complete game, ending the Padres' four-game losing streak.

Ramon Martinez, 1-3, walked three of the first four batters and John Kruk hit an RBI single to end the Dodgers' streak of 30 shutout innings. Santiago followed with a run-scoring groundout.

Jay Howell, 5-3, relieved in the 10th inning of the second game and struck out the side. Mark Davis, 5-10, relieved in the eighth.

Expos 8, Cubs 5

Graig Nettles' pinch-hit double drove in Tom Foley with the winning run as Montreal rallied for six runs in the ninth.

Montreal opened the ninth with three straight hits off reliever Jeff Pico to cut Chicago's lead to 5-3.

Reds 5, Giants 1

Tom Browning, making his first start since his perfect game, allowed five hits in eight innings and Van Snider hit a three-run eighth-inning homer, the first home run of his career.

Browning, 17-5, came within one out of tying Jim Barr's major-league record of 41 consecutive batters retired, set in 1972.

Massachusetts Miracle put in holding pattern

AL Roundup

Associated Press

The Massachusetts Miracle is going to have to wait.

After taking three out of four against the New York Yankees last weekend, Boston seemed to have sealed its hold on first in the American League East and buried any memories of its collapse in 1978.

But thanks to the pesky Toronto Blue Jays, the Red Sox are suddenly vulnerable again. They dropped two out of three at Toronto and start a weekend series Friday at New York, which swept a three-game series from Baltimore to pull to within 4½.

Milwaukee is just four games back and Detroit trails by five. The Red Sox have 10 games left to play.

"We still control our own destiny, boys," Boston manager Joe Morgan said after his team fell 1-0 to Mike Flanagan and the Blue Jays Wednesday night. "It's been that way since April 1 or whatever. We're still out in front and they've got to catch us."

The Red Sox have dropped eight of 10 against the Blue Jays this season and must face them three more times next week. This weekend, Boston will have its top three pitchers — Roger Clemens, Bruce Hurst and Mike Boddicker — facing the Yankees.

Brewers 10, Angels 3

Milwaukee maintained sole possession of second place in the AL East, completing a three-game sweep at California as rookie Gary Sheffield drove in three runs.

The Brewers, who have just eight games remaining, play host to the Oakland Athletics this weekend.

Yankees 3, Orioles 2

New York made the most of its series with last-place Baltimore, taking all three games. Don Slaught's one-out homer in the bottom of the 12th inning Wednesday night completed the sweep.

The Yankees, held to one hit in the previous five innings, won when Slaught hit the first pitch from Mark Thurmond for his ninth home run.

Tigers 3, Indians 2

Darrell Evans' two-out double in the bottom of the eighth drove in Matt Nokes with the go-ahead run as Detroit beat Cleveland.

With two outs in the eighth, Nokes singled off reliever Brad Havens, 2-3. Evans hit a line drive to right center which got past a diving Cory Snyder, the right fielder, and rolled to the fance as Nokes came around to score.

Athletics 6, Twins 3

Oakland set a major-league record for saves in a single season, made possible, ironically, by shortstop Walt Weiss' first error in 59 games.

The error allowed Minnesota to score an unearned run in the top of the eighth inning, pulling the Twins within three runs and setting the stage for Dennis Eckersley to earn his 43rd save of the season and the 61st for Oakland.

White Sox 6, Rangers 1

Shawn Hillegas allowed no hits for 6⅓ innings before combining with Bobby Thigpen on a three-hitter to lead Chicago.

Hillegas, 2-2, allowed a single to center by Pete O'Brien in the seventh. The only Rangers to reach base prior to the hit were Jerry Browne, who walked in the first, and Geno Petralli, hit by a pitch in the second.

Royals 5, Mariners 4

Bo Jackson homered twice and scored the go-ahead run in the ninth inning as Kansas City beat Seattle.

McCamey coach Danny Wilhelm was pleased with his team's showing in a 19-7 win over Alpine last week, especially on defense. The Badgers held Alpine to four first downs total, including one in the second half while holding the visitors to 92 total yards.

Eighty of those yards came on a touchdown pass play in the first quarter.

Along with the inside of the defensive line, defensive ends Johnny DeLeon and Brad Grider kept Alpine's veer offense under wraps.

But the Badgers are still dogged by injuries. Tailback Daniel Flores played some in the second half against Alpine and is expected at full strength against Reagan County, but quarterback David Anglin has been bothered by a hand injury and is doubtful for Friday's game.

If Anglin has to miss Friday, junior Chris Phillips could be in a position to throw a touchdown pass one week after catching two from Anglin in the Alpine game.

While Wilhelm is pleased with the Badgers' increasing ability to hang onto the football, he still laments his team's propensity for penalties. The Badgers were whistled for 90 yards in flags against Alpine after being assessed 91 yards in a 25-12 loss to Crane two weeks ago.

AREA NOTES: The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes may wish they were back in Class 4A after Friday's game with Brownfield. The Cubs have outscored their three victims 74-2 behind a quick attack led by quarterback Kenny Lawrence.

As if that wasn't enough for the struggling Tors, Lubbock Cooper is also undefeated and Denver City has outscored three opponents 101-33, despite losing last week.

One of those Denver City victims was Muleshoe, which faces the other DC dumpling this week — Greenwood. If nothing else, Greenwood coach Bob Purser should be cheered by the fact that his team only lost to Denver City 28-6, while DC slapped Muleshoe 53-7.

It doesn't matter to Purser. The Ranger mentor feels that Muleshoe just got off on the wrong foot against DC, and that Ranger partisans shouldn't get too cocky, especially since the game is being played in Muleshoe.

"I think they're a lot better than that," Purser said. "They have some physical kids."

But, then again, so does Greenwood. While quarterback Randy Donnell was shredding the Stanton defense in a 14-8 win last week, safeties Tim Flowers and Randy Marquez and middle linebacker Jimmy O'Briant bottled up the Buffs.

"O'Briant played his best game ever," Purser said.

The Rangers traveled for 369 total yards against Stanton, while holding the Buffs to 155 three-foot increments.

MEMORIES

Young and Kleine are a couple of the more recent graduates of the rivalry. Steeped in 27 years of tradition, the MHS-LHS series was just as important in the '60s and '70s to those involved.

All-Southwest Conference back Ross Montgomery, a graduate of TCU, was a fullback for Midland High in the first-ever game between the two, 1961. The Bulldogs took a 15-6 win over the Rebels, their first of six straight victories in the new series.

"What really sticks out is that most all of us had gone to junior high together," Montgomery said. "When they opened Lee, that split us up. I think that made it special. Back then, that was the last game of the year. Both teams might've had poor records but you just threw that out the window."

Midland High dominated the series in the early days, winning seven of nine matchups in the '60s. Lee has won seven games in both the '70s and '80s. MHS has won only two games in the last fifteen years ('82 and '73).

Jeff Robnett, a 1980 MHS graduate, played three years ('77-'79) in the Lee rivalry and said the match more or less sums up the season.

"I think the thing I probably remember most is it's a season in itself," said Robnett, a Princeton grad who will complete law school at Texas Tech in December. "You got to know who those guys were. They were people who you'd played against in the YMCA and junior high. It was sad my senior year to know that not only were we not going to not play anymore games, but not play them anymore."

The game between the two is not really a grudge match. It's a great rivalry between two football crazy schools in a football crazy town. Friday night's game not only means a lot to students and athletes, parents and brothers and sisters, but also to a lot of people not connected to either school.

"I was downtown eating lunch," Kleine said. "Everybody's excited about it. They're not just talking about Lee-Permian anymore."

Doug Williams joins QB missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins quarterback Doug Williams will be out for at least four weeks after undergoing surgery for appendicitis, a team spokesman said late Wednesday night.

"He's expected to be in the hospital for five to seven days, and is expected to be out for at least four weeks," spokesman Marty Hurney said. "That's four games at minimum."

Mark Rypien, who has never played in a regular-season NFL game, will start against the Phoenix Cardinals on Sunday.

Williams was taken to Arlington Hospital in suburban Washington for tests complaining of abdominal pain after the team's regular practice Wednesday, Hurney said.

"He was experiencing some slight abdominal pain," Hurney said. "He practiced and took every snap."

Williams went into surgery, which lasted about 1¼ hours, at 10:20 p.m. It was performed by Dr. Todd Arcomano of the Arlington Hospital staff.

OLYMPICS

In women's basketball, the United States fell behind Yugoslavia by eight points before its running game and trapping defense kicked into high gear. Then it was goodbye.

The Americans became only the second women's basketball team in Olympic history to top the 100-point mark, winning 101-74. The only other women's team to score 100 was the Soviet Union, which beat the United States 112-77 in 1976.

"Naturally, a coach would like to have a strong start, but you'd rather have a stronger finish," Coach Kay Yow said. "You just go with the flow. That's this team's personality. I don't feel you can force something on a team just because that's what I would want to do."

With a 2-0 record and only a Sunday game against China remaining in pool play, the United States is assured of getting into the medal round.

The Soviets, as expected, dominated men's gymnastics as Vladimir Artemov captured the all-around gold to lead a sweep of all three medals.

Artemov, 23, outlasted teammates Valery Lyukin and two-time world champion Dmitri Bilozerchev in a display of perfection.

Bilozerchev, 21, drew six 10s in three days of competition but ended up with the bronze because of one mistake on the high bar. Lyukin, 21, took the silver.

The Soviets added six perfect scores in the all-around finals to the seven 10s they posted in Tuesday's team optionals.

Charles Lakes, the U.S. national champion from Chatsworth, Calif., was the top American finisher in 19th place. His best score was in his speciality, the high bar, where he scored a 9.950 with a series of flying releases over the bar and a double somersault dismount.

The other Americans in the all-around finals, Kevin Davis and Lance Ringnald, finished 34th and 35th in the 36-man field.

Weightlifter Mitko Grablev lost his gold in the 123-pound class and was banned from the Games after testing positive for a diuretic he used to shed pounds and squeak into his weight class. Bulgarian officials said they deplored his drug use and would send him home on the next available flight.

Australian Alexander Watson, competing in the modern pentathlon, also was booted for having an excessive level of caffeine.

American swimmers Matt Biondi, the Games' first triple medalist, and gold medal-winner Janet Evans led qualifying heats for Thursday night's finals.

On Wednesday, the United States won four more medals — two by Biondi, who then came back on Thursday to break an Olympic record in the 100-meter freestyle qualifying. Evans led her heat for the women's 400-meter freestyle. Both are world record-holders in those events.

Biondi, already with a gold, silver and bronze, swam his qualifying heat for the 100 freestyle in 49.04 seconds, lowering Rowdy Gaines' 1984 Olympic mark of 49.80 for the second time Thursday morning. Chris Jacobs of Livingston, N.J., had a 49.20 two heats before Biondi.

Biondi, of Moraga, Calif., holds the world record of 48.42.

Kristin Otto of East Germany was the top qualifier in the women's 100 backstroke, and Sergei Zabolotnov of the Soviet Union had fastest time in heats for the men's 200 backstroke.

Top qualifier for the women's 400 freestyle was East Germany. The U.S. team of Jill Sterkel, Paige Zemina, Laura Walker and Mary Wayte was third.

The Soviet Union won the gold medal in the women's team gymnastics event Wednesday, while a half-point penalty on a technicality gave East Germany the bronze over the United States, prompting the U.S. team to cry foul.

Vladimir Artemov of the Soviet Union won the gold medal in the men's all-around gymnastics competition, leading a Soviet sweep that left the medal standings like this: Soviet Union 22, eight gold. East Germany 11, four gold. United States nine, three gold.

"We got ripped," said Mike Jacki, executive director of the U.S. Gymnastics Federation. "We will sleep well tonight because we know we were the third best team out there. I hope the East Germans can sleep."

East Germany edged the U.S. team 390.875 to 390.575 — .300 of a point. Their victory came on a .500 penalty called Monday by Ellen Berger, an East German who is head of the gymnastics technical committee.

Koreans see joy fade to violence

By MARK ZEIGLER
Copley News Service

SEOUL — In a South Korean night and a morning, the hosts of the 24th Olympic Games learned something about the thrill of victory and the turmoil of defeat. Sixteen hours separated gold medal from ghoulish mess.

Indeed, it was Koreans who were the big story Wednesday (Sept. 21) as the Games moved into Day 6. In the shadows, a Bulgarian weightlifter was stripped of his gold medal for failing a drug test. And wrestler Dennis Koslowski won the United States' first medal on land, and Matt Biondi and Janet Evans moved closer to more in the water.

Kim Young-nam won South Korea's first gold if the XXIV Games on Wednesday night Korean time. Trailing, 1-0, in the 74-kilogram finals of Greco-Roman wrestling, Kim wrapped his powerful arms around the Soviet Union's Daoulet Tourlykhanov and jerked him to the mat. Two points to Kim.

Moments later, time expired and pandemonium transpired. Kim charged around Sangmu Gymnasium in a fist-pumping display of exuberance worthy of every Olympics highlight film. His wife cried hysterically. A nation celebrated. Soon, Kim was on the phone with President Roh Tae-woo.

The victory meant more than a gold medal. Kim will get a bonus reportedly worth $138,000 U.S. dollars from various sports groups and a lifelong monthly pension of $1,235 from the National Sports Promotion Fund. The later fund was set up in the 1970s with contributions from the government to encourage Korean athletes, and the monthly pension is much more than most Koreans earn.

And then came the morning after. Boxer Byun Jong-il took on Bulgaria's Alexander Hristov. The decision was announced: 4-1, Hristov. No, the Koreans at Chamshil Students' Gymnasium did not like it nor the officiating of New Zealand's Keith Walker, who had penalized Byun two points for head-butting.

The last punch had not been thrown.

Chairs flew in the ring. A water bottle sailed in. Then came Koreans, including coaches and at least one ringside security officer. Punches flew. More than one landed on Walker.

Then, as Walker was escorted out, another yellow-jacketed guard tried to kick him in the head. Back in the ring, Byun staged a sit-down strike.

For one hour.

Evans wins gold with world mark

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Janet Evans astonished even herself by shattering her 400-meter freestyle world record with incredible ease Thursday night while capturing her second gold of the Olympics.

Evans, who won the 400 individual medley earlier in the week, churned through the race in 4 minutes, 3.85 seconds, lowering the mark of 4:05.45 she set last December.

When she saw the time flash on the scoreboard, her eyes popped wide and her mouth opened in disbelief.

Heike Friedrich of East Germany won the silver in 4:05.94 and East German Anke Moehring took the bronze in 4:06.62.

Evans, 17, of Placentia, Calif., beamed broadly on the victory stand, waved to the crowd, and sang the Star Spangled Banner while the American flag was raised.

Doomsday back in Dallas

IRVING (AP) — Lost in the furor over "phantom" safeties and quarterback Steve Pelluer goofs, is the play of Dallas' defense which has closely resembled the Cowboys' old "Doomsday" outfit of the 1970s.

Dallas is seventh in the NFC in total defense and tied for sixth in points allowed.

"I'm delighted with the way we are playing defense," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "We still lack a scoring punch on offense but our defense is hustling and doing the job."

With injuries at linebacker, the Cowboys picked Garry Cobb off the waiver wire when the Philadelphia Eagles released him and he has begun establishihg himself as one of the team leaders.

"Cobb is playing very well," Landry said. "He was at the experience level we wanted. He has already made some big plays. I'm delighted by his progress."

Ironically, Cobb was with the Cowboys in training camp nine years ago but was cut and picked up by the Eagles.

"Cobb just knows how to play the game," Landry said. "He is picking up the defense very fast."

Cobb beat out Garth Jax for the right outside linebacker's job.

"You just can't beat experience and Cobb has it," Landry said. "He's been a real find for us."

Cobb said "It's been fun watching this defense come together. It should keep getting better and better."

An increase in pressure from the defensive front has given the Cowboys nine quarterback sacks for 66 yards in losses.

"We have one of the best teams we've ever had just for the pure fact of playing hard," Landry said.

Landry has moved Randy White to defensive end on some pass rush situations.

"Randy is starting to become more active," Landry said. "He had a good game against the Giants."

On pass defense, Robert Williams has sparkled as a cornerback replacement for Ron Francis, who came back this week after sitting out almost two months with a separated shoulder.

"I've been well pleased with Williams," Landry said. "He has great closing speed on long routes. He isn't beaten very often."

Before the season started, it was theorized the Dallas offense would have to carry the defense until it overcame injuries at linebacker and to Francis.

"Right now, our defense is carrying our offense," Landry said. "The defense is moving forward but the offense lacks scoring punch."

Jamelle Holieway has eye on USC

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Despite a national championship, three Big Eight Conference titles and a 29-1 record as a starter, Oklahoma's Jamelle Holieway says he has never taken his eyes off Saturday's game against Southern California.

"It's something I was looking forward to ever since I signed the letter of intent," Holieway said this week as the third-ranked Sooners prepared for No. 5 Southern California.

More than the team, it's the neighborhood and his best friend — Southern California fullback Leroy Holt — that makes this game the biggest for Holieway.

He has played in the Los Angeles Coliseum twice while playing high school football at Banning, 20 miles away. His record there is 1-1, and he said this one is for all the marbles — at least his marbles.

"In so many ways, it's just another game," Holieway said. "I get to go home to play. But it's make or break, personally, because I'll have to hear about it all the time.

"It's my last one," he said of the game in Los Angeles, "and I'll never live that day down."

Holieway said he doesn't feel like he needs to prove anything to the Trojans, who once told him he wasn't their type of quarterback or running back.

"They wanted me to play defensive back or wide receiver, so I told them no," said Holieway, who was recruited by former Southern California coach Ted Tollner.

"Ted Tollner and his crew has left. All I want to do is go back home and perform well, do my best, and have my team win," he said. "I guess a lot of people still have doubts about how my knee is holding up, and it's holding up great."

The knee, which he injured late last season against Oklahoma State, nearly kept him from playing this year. He sat out of spring practice, then returned to Los Angeles for what he called the toughest summer he's ever had.

But anticipation of Saturday's game — and some prodding by Holt — pulled him through.

"There were times when I didn't want to go to therapy," Holieway said. "I didn't want to do this, I didn't want to do that. Leroy would tell me, 'You have to play in this game. We have to play in it against one another.'

"He was by my side the whole time. It was an inspiration."

In Oklahoma's victories over North Carolina and Arizona this year, Holieway has rushed for 122 yards and two touchdowns, and has completed 5-of-10 passes for 134 yards and one touchdown.

Holieway said he was indecisive against North Carolina — his first game since the injury — but he saw the "old Jamelle" against Arizona.

Trent, Lazbuddie head six-man list

LUBBOCK (AP) — Trent and Lazbuddie continued their rapid rise in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal's weekly six-man high school football rankings.

Trent, which made the poll of West Texas sportswriters for the first time two weeks ago, passed Fort Hancock to move from sixth to fourth place. The Gorillas' offensive was aided by a 60-14 victory over Carbon and by Lazuddie's 52-6 rout of Silverton, the No. 5 team last week.

Lazbuddie used its big victory to vault from ninth to fifth place.

Lohn, the defending state champion, remained comfortably in first place, although the Eagles had a scare thrown into them Saturday in an 18-12 victory against Aquilla. The Eagles were no longer a unanimous No. 1 choice, as Zephyr claimed one of the six first-place votes.

Christoval, idle last week, was second and Zephyr was third.

Rounding out the bottom of the poll were Cherokee, New Home, Jayton and Rochester.

The rankings:

1. Lohn (3-0), 59 points; 2. Christoval (2-0), 53 points; 3. Zephyr (3-0), 49 points; 4. Trent (3-0), 37 points; 5. Fort Hancock (3-0), 31 points; 6. Lazbuddie (3-0), 30 points; 7. Cherokee (3-0), 24 points; 8. New Home (3-0), 17 points; 9. Jayton (2-1), 8 points; 10. Rochester (3-0), 6 points.

Others getting votes were Loraine 5, May 4, Wilson 1, Milford 1 and Harrold 1.

No. 2 Worley SEC's No. 1

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia's Tim Worley doesn't start, yet the No.2 tailback for the sixth-ranked Bulldogs leads the Southeastern Conference in rushing and is fifth in the nation.

"It's weird," said Worley, a 6-foot-2, 221-pound junior who sat out last year due to academic difficulties. "I'm leading the SEC in rushing and I'm No. 2 behind Rodney (Hampton), but it really doesn't matter who starts.

"Me and Rodney are capable of doing the job," he said this week as the Bulldogs practiced for their meeting with No. 14 South Carolina on Saturday. "Being second or third on the depth chart at Georgia is like being No. 1 anywhere else."

Hampton, a sophomore, is right behind Worley's 434 yards in the SEC rushing race with 377 yards. The duo has keyed a ground game that leads the nation, averaging 355.3 yards a game for the Bulldogs, 3-0.

Both, however, get adequate playing time under Coach Vince Dooley's system of rotating four running backs.

And Worley — who last week earned SEC offensive player of the week honors in rushing for 162 yards and four touchdowns in a 42-35 victory over Mississippi State — says sharing time actually helps.

"I love it. I've got a good relationship with Rodney and it helps. You get tired out there," he explained.

"What it does is make you go 110 percent all the time. And you know that Rodney is going to come in and do just as good," Worley said. "Whether I start or not doesn't matter. I'm a team player. I'm not selfish."

It was not always bliss, however, for Worley, who was highly recruited out of Lumberton, S.C., and in 1985 as a freshman started six games and rushed for 627 yards.

His sophomore season was ended after four games by a knee injury. Then, in 1987, he encountered academic problems, was ruled ineligible and made some unflattering remarks about the university.

Miami buries 34-game past

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The Miami Hurricanes have won 34 straight regular-season games, but prefer talking about the future, not the past.

"We're concerned with winning games, not how many we've won," Hawkins said. "We don't care about the past. We're only worried about the future, and the future is to beat Wisconsin."

When the top-ranked Hurricanes play host to winless Wisconsin on Saturday, they'll be trying to extend a streak that began with the second game of the 1985 season.

The Hurricanes' 31-30 victory last Saturday at Michigan tied them with the University of Pennsylvania teams of 1894-96 for the fifth-longest regular-season winning streak in major college football history. Coach Bud Wilkinson's Oklahoma Sooners of 1953-57 hold the record of 45 straight victories.

Coach Jimmy Johnson, whose record is 54-9 since he came to Miami in 1984, said the time to think about the winning streak is when it ends.

"You're going to take pride in it, but you're not going to be thinking a lot about it," he said. "You can't put it in its place, and you don't know where it stacks up against others until it's over."

The biggest remaining hurdles for Miami this season appear to be games at eighth-ranked Notre Dame on Oct. 15 and at seventh-ranked Louisiana State on Nov. 19. If the Hurricanes go 11-0, they'll be only two victories short of the Sooners' record.

Miami this year also is trying to become the first school this decade to win consecutive national championships. Only bowl game losses prevented the Hurricanes from winning the national title in 1985 and 1986.

Miami's last regular-season loss was to Florida 35-23. Since then, the Hurricanes have beaten weak teams such as East Carolina, Cincinnati, Toledo and Miami of Ohio. They've also beaten 13 Top 20 teams and eight Top 10 teams.

Hawkins, a three-year starter, attributed the Hurricanes' success to one thing.

"Hard work," he said. "You've got to have (talented) people and coaches around, but I think the biggest factor is to work hard."

Performance under pressure is a Miami trademark too, quarterback Steve Walsh believes.

"We've scored whenever we've had to score," he said.

Brady's stand on thrifts criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Banking Committee accused the new treasury secretary of being "nonchalant" about a crisis in the savings and loan industry requiring $20 billion in tax money to fix.

In a speech prepared for delivery on the Senate floor today, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said it was his "reluctant but profound conviction" that the problem "has grown beyond industry resources."

Even if the next Congress appropriates the $20 billion, healthy S&Ls will need to contribute another $30 billion over the next several years, he said.

"The bailout-to-come will be the largest ever in the history of the U.S. It will be far bigger than the combined cost of the assistance ... to Chrysler (Corp.), Lockheed (Corp.) and New York City," he said.

Despite that, he said, "the administration has its head buried in the sand" and Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady in his confirmation hearing last week "was nonchalant about the S&L mess."

Brady, who replaced James A. Baker III, contended that the industry-financed Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which guarantees S&L deposits up to $100,000, has as much as it can spend for now.

More will be known about the scope of the problem today when the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates the nation's 3,000 S&Ls, releases a report on the industry's second quarter losses.

S&Ls lost a record $7.6 billion last year and are well on their way to surpassing that, having lost $3.8 billion in the first three months of 1988. Much of the red ink is concentrated in the oil-dependent states of Texas and Oklahoma.

Estimates of the cost of cleaning up the industry vary from the bank board's $31 billion to private projections as high as $100 billion.

The current bank board estimate is well within its $42 billion 10-year revenue projection, but the agency has said it will issue a revised cost estimate this fall.

An official of the General Accounting Office, the auditing arm of Congress, told the House Banking Committee last week that the problem was in the $45 billion to $50 billion range and would require money from Congress.

The American Bankers Association, a trade group representing commercial banks, this week pegged the cost at $74 billion.

Meanwhile, Brady on Wednesday ordered a top deputy, Undersecretary George D. Gould, to look into the rapidly growing cost estimates. He called on Congress to consider several steps, including authorizing an additional $5 billion in borrowing by FSLIC, before appropriating tax money.

A senior Treasury Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the FSLIC has enough funds to operate "well into next year." However, if the higher cost estimates appear to be valid, "then we'll say what this means to funding FSLIC, how much it needs and how it should get it," he said.

Federal regulators have greatly accelerated the pace of S&L closings and mergers since mid-August, committing more than $13 billion in aid to resolve the cases of more than 50 institutions.

However, Proxmire charged that, "The regulators are engaging in sham resolutions. ... These are garbage deals with garbage thrifts."

The rescues have brought little money from private investors and the acquiring institutions themselves often are thinly capitalized, he said. In other cases, regulators are striking "Faustian bargains" with investors who plan to use S&L deposits to further their own business ventures, he said.

Energas Co. renaming self Atmos Energy

DALLAS (SWN) — The shareholders of Energas Co. have approved a change in the Company's name to Atmos Energy Corp. effective October 1, 1988.

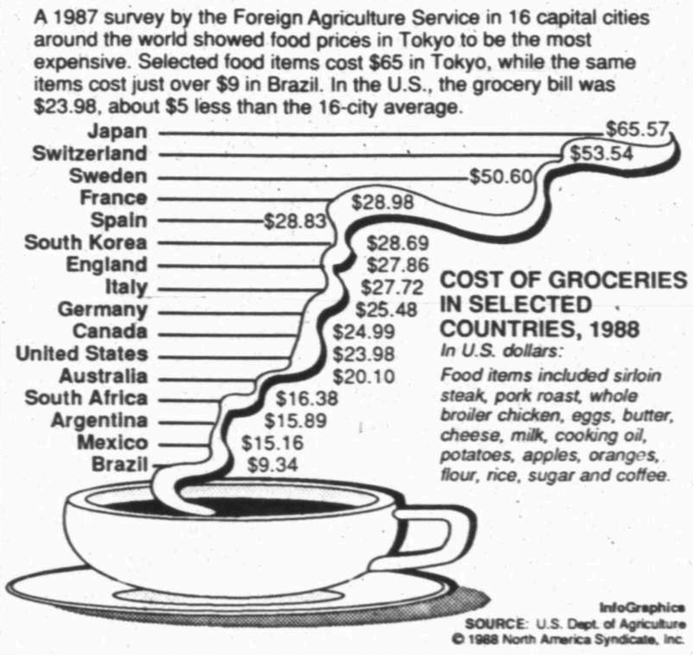
At a special meeting of shareholders held this morning, Charles K. Vaughan, chairman, president, and chief executive officer, announced the results of the shareholders' vote. In addition to the name change, shareholders also approved a proposal to increase the company's authorized common shares to 50,000,000 and approved a restricted stock grant plan.

In related action, the Company announced that common shares of Atmos Energy Corp. will begin trading on the New York Stock Exchange beginning Monday, October 3, 1988 under the trading symbol "ATO."

Said Vaughan, "These actions set the stage for our company's continued growth and expansion. We are pleased that our shareholders have demonstrated their support for our plans."

Comparing food prices around the world

A 1987 survey by the Foreign Agriculture Service in 16 capital cities around the world showed food prices in Tokyo to be the most expensive. Selected food items cost $65 in Tokyo, while the same items cost just over $9 in Brazil. In the U.S., the grocery bill was $23.98, about $5 less than the 16-city average.



Traders Village plans to open Houston center

HOUSTON (AP) — Traders Village, which operates a Dallas-area flea market and entertainment complex, plans to expand with the opening of a 100-acre development in northwest Houston next March, company officials said.

The Traders Village shopping market, recreational vehicle park and entertainment center will initially provide jobs for about 200 people, said Ron Simmons, Houston-area president.

The company's initial investment in the Houston venture will be about $6.5 million, but that number is expected to double by the time the park is completed in three years, Simmons said.

"The entire complex, including our parking lots, will be paved, and we will provide clean rest rooms, water fountains, strollers, wheelchairs, a first-aid station and a guest courtesy and information booth," Simmons said.

Gold mining powers set for takeover battle

Politicians, apartheid foes watch

By STEVE LOHR
New York Times News Service

LONDON — A takeover battle between the largest gold mining powers in the non-communist world began Wednesday when a unit of South Africa's Anglo American group made a $4.9 billion bid for Consolidated Gold Fields PLC, a London-based concern that has vast gold mining operations in South Africa.

Because of its South African connections, the fight promises to grab the attention not only of the usual bankers and brokers but also of politicians and foes of apartheid.

The takeover, which would be the largest ever of a British company, would bring about a dramatic restructuring in the gold mining industry.

In making the bid, the Minerals and Resources Corp., the overseas investment arm of the Anglo American Corp., said that if it acquired Consolidated, it would sell Consolidated's extensive interests in South Africa.

It also said it might sell some or all of Consolidated's 49 percent stake in the Newmont Mining Corp.

Minorco, as the unit is known, said it was mainly interested in Consolidated's ARC subsidiary, a supplier of gravel, stone and other building aggregates in the United States and Britain, and its gold mines in North America and Australia.

The presence in South Africa of Consolidated, the West's No. 2 gold producer, stretches back more than a century, to the colonial days of Cecil Rhodes, the British entrepreneur.

Minorco, based in Luxembourg, belongs to a corporate family with an even stronger South African pedigree: It is 60 percent owned by Anglo American and De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd., the twin pillars of the empire controlled by Harry Oppenheimer.

The Oppenheimer dynasty in South Africa dates to 1902, when Harry's father, Ernest, went there as the agent of a London diamond merchant and soon pursued larger ambitions. Today, De Beers dominates the world diamond business, and Anglo American is the West's largest gold producer.

The Consolidated bid raises questions about whether Oppenheimer, a critic of apartheid, is trying to shift more of his familiy's assets out of South Africa.

The fight is expected to be lengthy and acrimonious. "In Consolidated Gold, the Oppenheimer interests are going after one of the great old giants of the mining industry, which will be fighting for its life," said Michael Coulson, an analyst at Kitcat & Aitken, a London brokerage house.

Minorco, which began buying into Consolidated in 1981, is offering cash and shares for the 71 percent of the company it does not already own.

If successful, the bid would be the largest acquisition in British history, said Philip Healey, the editor of Acquisitions Monthly, a trade journal. The biggest to date, he said, was the 1986 purchase by Hanson PLC of the Imperial Group PLC for $4.5 billion.

Mobile phone firms form cellular network

From Staff Reports

Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems and GTE Mobilnet have joined forces to form Lone Star Cellular Network.

The network was created through reciprocal agreements with selected cellular providers in Texas to allow each company's subscribers to receive calls automatically while traveling member service areas.

Under the new network, calls placed to subscribers' cellular phones can be automatically forwarded to their phones while "roaming" in any city served by a network provider. A cellular user is considered to be "roaming" when a cellular phone is used in cities outside of a home service area.

There is no additional charge for this service over and above regular roaming charges, according to Pam Porter, director of operations for Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems in Midland.

Lone Star utilizes a new proprietary technology called "Follow Me Roaming," developed by Houston-based GTE Mobilnet. It eliminates the need for "roamer access codes" and operates similar to the call-forwarding features available for home telephones.

With this technology, a subscriber enters a three-digit code upon entering each new network city. All calls are then automatically forwarded.

In addition to Midland and Odessa, the network will provide automatic access in the Abilene, Amarillo, Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Dallas/Fort Worth, Lubbock, McAllen, San Antonio, Sherman/Denison, Austin, Beaumont/Port Arthur/Orange, Bryan/College Station, Galveston, Houston, San Angelo and Victoria service areas. It currently includes Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems, GTE Mobilnet, and West Central Cellular.

By the end of the year, four additional Texas cellular providers — United TeleSpectrum, U.S. Cellular, Century Cellunet and Centel Cellular — will bring eight more service areas into the network, including Killeen, Longview, Marshall, Temple, Texarkana, Tyler, Waco and Wichita Falls.

Commission chairman denies wanting tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The co-chairman of the congressionally appointed National Economic Commission says he did not call for tax hikes or cuts in Social Security to help erase the federal deficit, despite several reports to the contrary.

"I am somewhat surprised that there has been so much interest in my remarks" in a speech Tuesday to an economic consulting firm, Robert S. Strauss said in a statement Wednesday. "Let me make it clear that I did not call for or endorse cuts in the Social Security programs. Nor did I endorse a tax increase.

"I did tell the cold, statistical truth about the size of the deficit. I further stated that the views expressed were my own."

But several newspapers interpreted Strauss' remarks to mean he expects the commission to recommend tax increases and cuts in programs including Social Security.

The Washington Post quoted Strauss as saying in the speech, "We have to go to Social Security; we have to go to Medicare — entitlements generally — and we have to go to defense," because these programs are "where the money is."

Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis said Wednesday if the commission recommended cuts in Social Security "they won't get to first base in a Dukakis-Bentsen administration."

"I oppose reductions in scheduled payments to Social Security recipients, and I am committed to maintaining full benefits and full cost of living increases," Dukakis added.

Strauss, a lawyer and former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said in the statement that defense expenditures account for 28 percent of the federal budget and entitlement programs account for 47 percent.

"That leads to an inescapable conclusion: to the extent that we reduce the debt by reducing outlays, it has to be done largely in defense and entitlements," he said in the statement.

Nevertheless, reports of Strauss' remarks spurred a vehement Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., to promise Social Security will "never" be cut to help wipe out the federal deficit.

"As chairman of the (Finance) subcomittee on Social Security, I'm here to say never," Moynihan said at a news conference Wednesday. "It mustn't be done and it won't be."

Opening oil prices off slightly

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices opened slightly lower today as the oil futures market remains cautious in advance of next week's meeting of the OPEC price monitoring committee, analysts say.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the November contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, settled 19 cents higher at $14.56 a barrel Wednesday. Tuesday was the last day of the crude contract for October delivery. Other contract month were mixed at the close.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery gained 0.92 cent to close at 45.35 cents a gallon, while other contract months also closed higher.

The October wholesale heating oil contract lost 0.23 cent to settle at 41.09 cents a gallon. Other heating oil contracts settled mixed on the day.

Skepticism about the outcome of the upcoming meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' pricing committee has made traders reluctant to sell, analysts said. The meeting is scheduled for Sunday and Monday.

"This is a market that sees considerable storm clouds on the horizon," said Stephen Smith, a research analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co. "Crude prices are holding up probably because there's some chance that OPEC can pull a rabbit out of the hat."

There is speculation that such a meeting could lead to a gathering of all 13 OPEC members and a possible reduction in the cartel's oil output. Recent reports have suggested that several OPEC countries are producing far above their assigned quotas, helping to flood world markets with oil and keeping prices weak.

Nevertheless, near-month contracts for crude oil and gasoline continued to gain strength from falling inventories in the face of strong demand. Oil brokers said demand is up nearly 2 percent from last year.

The American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday that U.S. crude oil stocks were down by 6.212 million barrels in the week ended Sept. 16, while gasoline stocks fell by 2.58 million barrels.

Analysts said the fall in gasoline inventories stemmed from last week's hurricane in the Gulf of Mexico and the temporary shutdown of several refineries in the area.

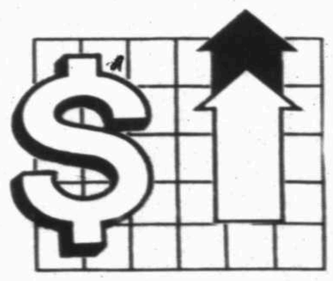
Dollar trading light, little change



LONDON (AP) — The dollar was little changed in light European trading early today as most players moved to the sidelines ahead of the weekend meeting of the seven leading industrialized democracies.

Gold prices slipped below $400 an ounce in Europe.

Dealers said the Group of Seven meeting on Saturday in West Berlin is not expected to provide any changes in the group's monetary or foreign exchange policies but still cast a cloud of caution over the markets.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.29 Japanese yen to a closing 134.47 yen. Later, in London, it fell to 134.45 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:
—1.8770 West German marks, up from 1.8748
—1.5840 Swiss francs, up from 1.5833
—6.3747 French francs, up from 6.3710
—2.1167 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1145
—1,397.60 Italian lire, up from 1,395.60
—1.2190 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2183

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6712, down from $1.6755 late Wednesday.

Gold bullion on Wednesday tumbled through the $400-a-troy ounce level in the United States for the first time since early last year.

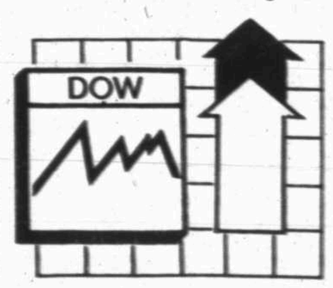
The metal opened in London at a bid price of $399.25 an ounce, down from $401.50 bid late Wednesday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $399.60.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $399.70, down from $400.50 bid late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.96 to close at a bid $402.42 bid at Wednesday's close.

Silver bullion fell in London to a bid price of $6.19 a troy ounce, down from $6.22 bid late Wednesday.

Market quiet, drifts aimlessly



NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted aimlessly in quiet trading Wednesday, still seemingly in the "summer doldrums" with autumn about to arrive.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up 3.02 to 2,090.50.

But declining issues slightly outnumbered advances in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 689 up, 697 down and 536 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 127.40 million shares, against 142.22 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 148.74 million shares.

Activity was curtailed somewhat by the absence of investors who were observing the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $4.70 billion, or 0.18 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .20 to 152.64.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose .64 to 310.11, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .43 at 270.18.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market picked up .81 to 384.91. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 298.97, up .34.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

U.S. personal income edging upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income increased only half as fast as inflation in August, the government says in a new report.

The numbers released Wednesday by the Commerce Department are consistent with other recent government reports showing the economy slowed in August from its vigorous pace during the first half of the year.

Personal income grew 0.2 percent, while personal consumption spending rose 0.5 percent. A price index tied to the personal income report rose 0.4 percent.

Brazil signs $82 billion financial pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Brazil will sign an unprecedented $82 billion financial package with its international commercial bank creditors.

The deal to be signed Thursday was billed by Citicorp as a possible landmark in the Third World debt crisis. A preliminary accord was reached in July.

The package includes $5.2 billion in new money to help Brazil cover its external financing needs for 1987, 1988, and the first half of 1989.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Midland discovery flows 28 barrels

From Staff Reports

A reentry project in Midland County has yielded an undesignated discovery surrounded by production in the Billy Bryan field.

PERMA-ESON, Midland, reentered the No. 1 Texaco Fee, completing it to flow 28 barrels of 48.9 gravity crude, 423 Mcfd and no water on a 10/64 inch choke from perforations 11,199 to 11,379. Flowing tubing pressure was 900 psi and production was natural. Gas-oil ratio is 15,107:1.

Original total depth is f11,523 ft. A 4 1/2 inch liner was hung from 9,424 to 11,523 ft.

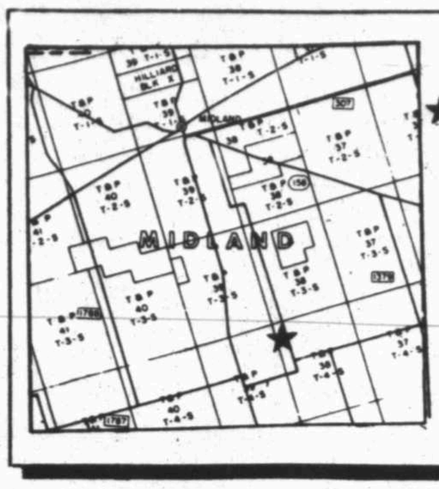
Location is 1,320 ft. from north and west lines of Section 7, Block 38, T-4-S, T&P survey, 20 miles south of Midland.



★Undesignated discovery

A reentry project in Midland County resulted in an unidentified 28 barrel discovery for Permo-Eason of Midland.

Abo gas discovery recorded in Eddy

An Abo gas discovery has been recorded in Chaves County, N.M., north of the Pecos Slope West field.

McKAY OIL CORP. tested the No. 1 Camp State to flow 142 Mcfd from perforations 3,210 to 3,343 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 362 psi. The producing interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 55,000 gallons of gel and 81,845 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 3,650 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,514 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,555 ft.

The well topped the Abo at 3,128 ft. on ground elevation of 4,126 ft. Pay was topped at 3,210 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and east lines of Section 25, T5s, R22e.

Eddy reentry yields Bone Spring discovery

A reentry operation in Eddy County has resulted in a Bone Spring discovery for MOROILCO., INC.

Moroilco reentered the No. 1 Halcon, swabbing 25 barrels of 36 gravity crude, 25 Mcfd and 30 barrels of water. Production is from perforations 8,088 to 8,248 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Originally drilled to 10,750 ft., the well was cleaned out to 8,412 ft. and plugged back to 8,372 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,415 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,353.3 ft., include the Anhydrite at 290 ft., Salt at 384, Base Salt at 1,250, Yates at 1,453, Seven Rivers at 1,730, San Andres at 3,017, Delaware at 3,670, Bone Springs at 5,743, Wolfcamp at 9,345, Pennsylvanian at 9,865, Cisco at 10,088, Canyon at 10,242, and Strawn at 10,455 ft. Pay was topped at 8,088 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and east lines of Section 26, T19s, R29e.

The well was originally drilled by Petroleum Corp. as the No. 1 Petco "A".

Chaves field gains dual gas producer

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. has completed the No. 3 Witz "VN" State as a dual producer in the Foor Ranch field of Chaves County, N.M.. The well produces from the Pre-Permian and Wolfcamp formations.

From the Pre-Permian, the well flowed 900 Mcfd and 240 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 590 psi. Production is from perforations 5,969 to 6,097 ft., natural.

From the Wolfcamp, the well flowed 2.1 Mmcfd on a 1/2 inch choke from perforations 5,271 to 5,276 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 320 psi. The Wolfcamp zone was acidized with 1,200 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Drilled to 6,410 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 6,040 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,806.5 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 1,146 ft., Glorieta at 2,220, Yeso at 2,242, Abo at 4,508, Wolfcamp at 5,172, Cisco at 5,770, Pennsylvanian at 5,850, and Pre-Permian at 5,956 ft. Pre-Permian pay was topped at 5,969 ft. and Wolfcamp pay was topped at 5,271 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 26, T9s, R26e.

DEVELOPMENT WELLS

■ EXXON PLANS DRILLING PROGRAM IN ANDREWS FIELD. Exxon Corp., Midland, has applied to drill seven additional producers in the Means field of Andrews County. All seven are in the Means San Andres Unit, and contract depth is 4,700 ft.

■ DEVELOPMENT SET IN LEA FIELD. Sirgo-Collier, Inc. will reenter five abandoned wells and complete in the Dollarhide field of Lea County, N.M. All five are in the West Dollarhide Queen Sand Unit, six miles northest of Jal. Contract depth is 4,000 ft. All five wells were drilled and later plugged by Skelly Oil Co.

GOLD

When the bid was announced Wednesday morning, Consolidated's shares, which for two weeks had risen mysteriously despite falling gold prices, quickly jumped ahead of the offered price of 13.06 pounds ($21.95), to trade at more than 15 pounds. Analysts expect Minorco to increase its offer to perhaps 16 pounds a share.

For Minorco, the bid reflects a sharp break with its tradition as a passive investment entity. If it does acquire Consolidated, it said, it planned to become an operating company, managing mining operations worldwide.

When Minorco announced its offer, it also said it had named Sir Michael Edwardes, a highly regarded manager, as its new chief executive.

"Minorco is ready for a quantum leap forward," said Edwardes, who was born in South Africa. "We now have the management ability to create a natural resources company, with the financial resources for expansion. We have $900 million in cash and a debt-free balance sheet."

The Minorco move, analysts agree, was carefully timed. Consolidated's resources for defense may be somewhat weakened because the price of gold is falling and because it increased its debt last year to boost its stake in Newmont Mining, which has attractive gold mines in the United States.

Consolidated increased its stake to 49 percent from about 28 percent to help Newmont deflect a takeover bid by T. Boone Pickens Jr.

The acquisition would leave Minorco with a debt load estimated at $3.5 billion, meaning that it would have to auction off some properties.

BRADY

Karl Hoyle, a spokesman for the bank board, said the bank board has brought in substantial private capital with its rescues — $1 billion since July 1987 — and expects to bring another $750 million in by the end of this year.

Sen. Jake Garn of Utah, the senior Republican on the banking committee, issued a statement assailing "sanctimonious attempts" and "partisan charges" to shift the blame for the S&L crisis onto the administration.

While he did not mention Proxmire by name, he said he was "outraged by repeated efforts to get the U.S. taxpayers to pick up the tab."

CONSUMING INTEREST

Sometimes convenience goes too far

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

I know convenience is a wonderful thing, but sometimes things get ridiculous.

A company called Timber Crest Farms (California-based — it figures) has decided that the convenience food of the '80s should be — are you ready? — dried tomatoes.

Don't get me wrong — I love tomatoes. In fact, nothing tastes quite as good as a fresh, vine-ripe tomato eaten all by itself, without dressing or lettuce or anything except maybe a little salt.

But dried tomatoes? As you have probably guessed, I had somewhat of a problem accepting this concept?

What's a consumer columnist to do? I was sent a package of this product in the mail, and I can't resist trying something new (and free). We checked out the dried tomatoes for taste and advertising accuracy. (While one of my co-workers, upon seeing the package of dried tomatoes on my desk, said he had tried them and they were good, the general concensus about the product was 'Yuck!")

Label advertising claims "Since it takes 17 pounds of fresh tomatoes to make one pound of dried tomatoes, you can expect an intense rich tomato flavor." I'm not entirely sure what "intense rich tomato flavor" is, but I do love tomatoes. The label goes on:"To soften, simply place in boiling water for 2 minutes, drain and then go on with your favorite recipe. Add to soups, stews, meat loaf, omelets, or toss in your favorite salad."

OK, I'm willing to at least give it a try, even though these dried tomatoes look like they are beyond help — I mean come on, they're dried.

Anyway, I boiled water and dutifully placed the tomatoes from a 3-ounce package in for two minutes. Nothing much happened. The tomatoes sogged up a little bit but still looked like thin red prunes.

Then I tried to boil the tomatoes themselves, thinking that cooking them might make them edible. The only thing that happened was that the water they were boiling in got redder.

Finally, I decided to follow further instructions and cook them in something. I just happened to have a half a pot of chili already prepared, so I put the still-shriveled tomatoes in the chili, adjusted the seasoning and simmered the concoction for a while.

The result of all this is that the tomatoes remained shriveled-looking, even though you could at least get your teeth through them. They were still wearing their skins, though, so they weren't exactly tender. Somehow, dried tomato skins remain dried tomato skins, no matter what you do to them.

According to company information, "Dried tomatoes provide the flavor and color of fresh tomatoes during the months when the quality of fresh tomatoes is less than idea. However, as the raisin is to the grape, the dried tomato is to the fresh tomato — it is a delicious food unto itself."

If you want my advice, stick with canned tomatoes for soups, stews, etc., "when the quality of fresh tomatoes is less than ideal." The dogs finished off the half-pot of chili with the dried tomatoes in it. They liked it.

Company information also states that "Sonoma Dried Tomatoes from Timber Crest Farms are available nationally in supermarkets, gourmet shops and specialty stores. In supermarkets, dried tomatoes can usually be found in the produce or gourmet sections."

I can save you a search — don't bother. In my experience the dried tomatoes just aren't worth hunting for.

LET'S DO LUNCH

Local steakery has surprising decor

THE OFFICE GOURMET

ZENTNER'S STEAKERY

WHERE: 2215 N. Midland Drive at Neely, 14 minutes from Wall and Big Spring. 689-8158
HOURS: 11 a.m.-2 p.m. and 5-10 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.; 11 a.m.-2 p.m. and 5-10:30 p.m. Fri.; 5-10:30 p.m. Sat.
PAYMENT: All major credit cards. No checks are accepted.
ETC.: Ample parking available.

Zentner's Steakery's decor is a pleasant surprise from what patrons might expect as they enter the restarant through a small ordinary store-front shopping center. The hostess graciously escorts guests into an attractively spacious dining room decorated in lush dark green carpet and light birch paneling.

The small comfortable wall booths and spaciously-placed tables make it a perfect setting for a "power" lunch.

As a matter of fact, the majority of the customers appeared to be engrossed in "power" lunches. Even the wood and mirrorparquet ceiling added a touch of elegance.

The only hint of the expected "good ole boy"-steak 'n potatoes decor was the cowhide menu cover, which seemed appropriate.

The menu itself is unexpectedly diverse. For example, "Starters" includes fried zucchini, sauteed mushrooms, shrimp cocktail and Zentner's famous crisp golden fried onion rings, which certainly deserve that name. The "Super Salads" offer a choice of avocado and chicken, spinach, guacamole or Moa salad (with tropical fruits). A few seafood or chicken entrees, plus of course, the extensive steak variations, complete the selections.

Daily luncheon specials range from Beef Stroganoff to fajitas to catfish and are posted each day on a chalk board at the entrance. The steak sandwich, served on a large bun, was cooked to perfection, and the accompanying french fries were hot and tender, but the sliced tomatoes (with lettuce) were tasteless and mushy. The T-bone and rib-eye steaks were cooked to each guests' exact preference, demonstrating the chef's steak expertise.

Unfortunately, although the waiter was initially attentive and served the starters promptly, the entrees did not arrive for an interminable 15 to 20 minutes, and then could not be found to present the check.

However, Zentner's is a genial, easy-to-like, sublimely relaxing restaurant with a respect for the basics. If you are able to take a long lunch hour in the middle of a busy day, do sample the equally famous (and huge) Zentner Burger.

Banquet and party facilities are available by reservation. Price range: Entrees $3.50-$16.95.

BETTER BUSINESS

Advertising descriptions misleading

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Advertisements that offer you beef and other meats at fantastic prices can turn out to be a "bait and switch" game that leaves you with hamburger instead of steak for dinner.

Meat descriptions often are a key to bait and switch practices, and the labels can lead you to switch from a lower grade meat to a higher one.

Below are some that you might like to check:

■ Beef halves. This doesn't mean a "side of beef," which it implies. It means an assortment of beef cuts that may not even come from the same animal. A side of beef is a forequarter and a hindquarter from the same animal.

■ Beef order. Only the dealer knows what a "beef order" contains. Better find out before you buy.

■ U.S. Fancy Beef. It implies a grade. There is no such grade as "fancy."

■ USDA Grade A: All meat is inspected, but unless it bears the designation "prime," "choice" or "good," it is not government graded. There is no "Grade A" in the U.S. Department of Agricultures meat grades.

Beware of high-pressure sales tactics as well as bait and switch and misleading labels. And check your local Better Business Bureau for a reliability report on the business before buying.

Fall prices may cause 'sticker shock'

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

If you didn't buy fall and winter clothes last year — especially dresses, men's and women's suits or coats — be prepared for "sticker shock" when you begin shopping.

Last fall consumers stayed away from the stores and for the first time in 20 years, annual sales of women's apparel fell. The buying slump has continued through 1988, although retailers hope sales will pick up this season.

Industry sources have blamed the drop in clothing sales both on a rejection of recent clothing styles, such as last season's short skirts, and prices, which rose 7.3 percent in 1987 and continue to inch up this year.

The higher prices may encourage consumers to be more conscious of what they're getting for their money, especially in the big ticket fall and winter clothes like wool suits.

Although the price of raw wool has doubled in the past year, that's not the only cause for increasing higher wool clothing prices this fall. The cost of the wool is only about 3 percent of the retail price for the finished garment. So in a $300 suit only about $10 goes for the wool.

There's somewhat of a trickle effect, with the cost of wool yarn and fabric increasing as the price for raw wool goes up. However, the labor to produce a garment is by far the greatest expense.

Rising clothing costs may mean that consumers will hang onto the clothes in their closets for another year, or adopt some different strategies for shopping. Consumers have a number of options for making sure they get the most for their clothing investment.

Use should be the first consideration. Paying for high quality fabrics, good construction and classic styling is more important in clothes you will wear frequently and expect to have for some time, rather than those worn only once in a while.

Many retailers will feature winter clothes made with wool blends, rather than 100 percent wool, to keep consumers' costs down. Wool blends have many excellent features, but have less breathability than the pure wool fabrics. A lighter weight wool or wool blend also may be a better investment since it can be worn for a longer period of time in the Texas climate.

In addition to styling and fabric content, check for signs of quality construction. Some manufacturers of clothing — in all price ranges — may skimp on workmanship, materials or quality inspections to keep prices from rising faster.

For example, check to see that seams are flat and wide enough to withstand normal stress, buttons or other fasteners are sewn on securely and all openings are smooth and flat.

Rules limit check endorsing space

New York Times News Service

Endorsing a check?

A new federal law says you have just 1½ inches in which to do it.

Most times, of course, you just sign your name, print your account number, and, perhaps, for safety's sake, write: "For deposit only."

It seems reasonable enough to do that within 1½ inches at one end of a check. But suppose you run a business and routinely stamp the back of a check and list the customer's driver's-license number and home and business telephone numbers. To comply with the new law, buying a new stamp that squeezes the information into the allotted space might help. Or you may just have to learn to write smaller.

The new rule is necessary so that customer endorsements are not printed over by those from the bank where the check is deposited, officials at the Federal Reserve Board say. There are no penalties, but a misplaced endorsement could slow the check-clearing process.

Tiny FM transmitters are new ad medium

Copley News Service

Imagine an advertising medium that reaches only people who want to hear your message, and only when they want to hear it.

According to Inc magazine, there are several small companies that think it's a revolutionary new way to advertise, and they are rushing to market with very, very low-power FM radio. What they are selling are small FM transmitters that can broadcast recorded messages a couple hundred feet on a frequency set by the operator.

Officials warn of radon, offer little help

By MICHAEL deCOURCEY HINDS
New York Times News Service

With its warning last Monday that tens of millions of people should test their homes for the presence of carcinogenic radon gas and make repairs, the government in effect proclaimed a national emergency, according to government officials and spokesmen for consumers' organizations.

But there are only fragmented government programs at the federal, state or local levels that deal with questions raised by concerned homeowners and renters. And there are no licensing requirements for contractors who test for the naturally occurring gas or install systems to divert radon from buildings.

A result, the officials and consumer experts say, is that anybody can call himself a radon expert, and many consumers may be frustrated by incompetent contractors or be swindled by unscrupulous sellers of useless services or spurious products.

"It's a serious enough problem without having to deal with people trying to make a buck on bogus products and services," said Richard M. Kessel, executive director of the New York State Consumer Protection Board. "But just as we've seen fraudulent cures for AIDS popping up, I expect to see people selling magic wands and sprays to get rid of radon."

The federal government has no plans to supervise efforts to fulfill its recommendation for testing for radon in all residences up through the second floor and to treat homes in which the naturally occurring gas exceeds safe levels.

"Our role is to continue doing research and to share that information with people best equipped to deliver that information — the people in state and local governments," said Richard J. Guimond, director of the office of radiation programs at the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington. The agency has published brochures explaining the radon problem and its solutions and it has certified testing devices that manufacturers sell through the mail for as little as $10.

Thus, most state governments are on their own in developing and financing radon programs.

Only Maryland, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Florida have "fully operational" programs offering consumers a wealth of information and technical assistance, said Guimond.

In Florida, state agencies have spent $1.8 million for surveys to find high-risk radon areas and develop a building code for radon-resistant buildings.

In Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, state agencies offer free radon tests after homeowners' original tests indicate unsafe levels. New York also gives free radon tests to consumers who have participated in energy audits offered by utilities, usually free or for a nominal fee.

Next year New York expects to spend $2.75 million to help several thousand homeowners with unsafe homes to make plans for reducing radon contamination.

New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have each spent or earmarked about $5 million on radon programs in the past few years.

Guimond said that nine states have toll-free hot lines to answer consumer inquiries and 12 states have passed some sort of legislation dealing with the radon problem, which has been defined by scientists only in the past two years.

Leaders of consumer groups say the most important next step is for states to license or certify contractors who do testing and abatement work.

Mary Ellen Fise, product safety director of the Consumer Federation of America, which represents 200 consumer groups in Washington, said: "The radon announcement presents the ultimate consumer protection problem since it poses a potential health hazard around the country as well as a potential for a lot of deceptive and misleading practices in the marketplace."

Pennsylvania will require all radon contractors to meet certification requirements by Sept. 21. By Jan. 1 certification will be required in Florida. New York and New Jersey are drafting licensing requirements that may be in effect early next year, officials said.

Licensing requirements in Pennsylvania are fairly typical: contractors must pass a state-approved course in radon detection, have a year's professional experience and agree to provide radon testing data to the government, said Jason J. Gaertner, a spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Resources.

In states without certification systems, consumers may consult the American Association of Radon Scientists and Technologists, a trade group. James J. Craffey, executive secretary of the organization, said its 150 member contractors meet or exceed all proposed state certification requirements. Members of the association, based in Park Ridge, N.J., work in 35 states. (For referrals, call 201-391-6445.)

DEAR ABBY

Call-waiting feature can be blessing or a curse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You agreed with a reader who said that a call-waiting signal was a "rude interruption." Picture this: A lonely wife, passing time on the phone with her mother, sister or friend, when her serviceman (or traveling) husband calls home. If he's in the service, he has probably stood in line for two hours to get his turn at the phone. But wait! Abby says it's "rude" to have her call interrupted — so let him get a busy signal.

How about the parents of a runaway finding comfort in a phone call from a dear friend; the child, in a moment of loneliness, decides to call home. The line is busy! The child has a change of heart and decides not to call after all.

In today's busy, hectic world, with so many two-job households, our time at home is limited, and we should all have the option of knowing who wants or needs to talk to us.

Call waiting allows us to know that someone is trying to reach us. If you happen to be on a call that is of vital importance and do not wish to be notified if someone else is trying to reach you, call waiting can be turned off during your conversation.

Please rethink your opinion, Abby. — PENNY RITTER, OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR PENNY: I plead ignorance. I was not aware that the call-waiting signal could be temporarily deactivated by the one who has the service. Thank you. Your letter was one of several hundred to promptly get that messge to me.

DEAR ABBY: I am seven and a half months pregnant with my first child, and I cannot help thinking about the many horror stories I have been told since I became pregnant. Abby, even though I have withstood a tremendous amount of physical trauma and have been in and out of the hospital a good deal of my life, childbirth is still a bit unnerving. Just yesterday, a young woman in a store began to chat with me, and went on to tell me of the "horrible experience" she had with her first.

I realize that when a pregnant woman enters a room, all mothers must feel some sort of bond with her and feel it's necessary to "share" — with only good intentions, of course.

But I wish these women would think about what they are saying, and the effect it could have on someone who has never before gone through this experience. Let her doctor tell her the risks and complications that could arise. Just share with her the happiness and joy she is trying to feel. And if you must share something, please let it be courage, strength and hope.

Thank you, Abby, for letting me say this. I just had to tell somebody! — EXPECTING IN SILVERDALE, WASH.

DEAR EXPECTING: Glad to lend an ear. That's what I'm here for. Congratulations, and all good wishes for a healthy baby.

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating an older man for almost two years now. (He's 30 years older than me and has been divorced for three years.) He has a daughter who still thinks her parents will get back together again. (Not a chance.) He hasn't told her that he is dating me. He says he doesn't want to "hurt" her. Sometimes I wonder if he is ashamed of me.

We are very much in love, but have no definite plans to marry. I feel insecure about our future. What should I do? — INSECURE

DEAR INSECURE: You are insecure with good reason. Don't build your future around this man. Before you invest any more time in this relationship, ask him what his intentions are and give him a deadline.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your reply to a letter from a 14-year-old girl whose mother wouldn't let her wear a strapless, wraparound, Hawaiian-style dress because she thought it was too revealing. Abby, I didn't object to your saying that the mother's judgment was probably better than hers. However, I did object to your calling the girl "Honey."

I realize that "Honey" is merely a term of affection, but I find it extremely offensive. Teen-agers' problems are every bit as important as the problems of older people, so please don't belittle teen-agers who seek your advice by calling them "Honey."

I request that you print this and ask for the opinions of other readers. Many teen-agers read your column and I am sure most of them share my opinion. — IRRITATED IN FORT COLLINS, COLO.

DEAR IRRITATED: Here's your letter. I welcome the opinions of my teen-age readers. Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Be chemical-wise when choosing lawn services

By JOAN LEE FAUST
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The condition of one's lawn can be a sensitive subject. Whether green, brown or full of weeds, its appearance could be a comment on the owner.

Now, midway through what has been a particularly punishing summer for lawns, many homeowners may wish they had a professional service to make the right decisions about mowing, feeding and weeding.

These services have advantages that go beyond saving strenuous and time-consuming labor. Among them are the professional equipment they use, like sprayers and spreaders, and the benefit of the latest research and studies, to which they have access.

Their principal disadvantage — and it is important — is a loss of control over what pesticides are used on your property, and how they are used.

Typically, contracts for full-service professional lawn care are made in the spring. The first year, a representative comes to the house, inspects the lawn, measures it and recommends what services will be needed for the year.

A standard contract would cover application of fertilizers, herbicides and fungicides, plus mowing and trimming. The cost of materials is included in the charge, and you get the benefit of the service's bulk rate.

Most lawn care services bill clients monthly. ChemLawn, the largest service in the nation with 250 branches, charges about $40 a month for a lawn of 5,000 square feet, which is considered average size. The ChemLawn service begins in spring and includes pre-emergence herbicide application for crabgrass control followed by fertilizers and weed- and insect-control chemicals.

ChemLawn and others like it provide comprehensive care. There are less elaborate options, if you don't mind keeping up with the mowing and trimming but could use help with the more technical chores.

But those pesticides and herbicides can mean trouble. The Connecticut Fund for the Environment has been monitoring the use of lawn care pesticides commonly used in the state and recently published a fact sheet listing seven chemicals representing herbicides and insecticides; three are listed as toxic, particularly to wildlife. Listed as toxic are carbaryl, used for billbug, sod webworm and chinch bugs; chlorpyrifos, used for ants, billbugs and weevils, and trichlorfon, used for grubs.

Emperor Hirohito

Considered something of a figurehead for much of his reign, Hirohito has been isolated from his subjects by tradition.

1901 Born in Tokyo on April 29. Taken from his parents to be reared in isolation and trained as Emperor.
(Japan's population is 44,359,000 people)

1916-1921 Became crown prince in 1916. Sent abroad by his father, Emperor Taisho, in 1921 to tour the U.K., France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Italy, the first time any imperial family member allowed out of Japan.

1924 Married Princess Nagako on Jan. 26 after delay by great earthquake of 1923.

1926 Became Emperor on Christmas Day, following death of Emperor Taisho.
(Japan's population is 60,741,000)

1928 Formally installed as emperor at age 25 and designated his reign "Showa," "enlightenment and peace."

1945 On August 10, 1945, four days after Hiroshima bombing, and one day after Nagasaki, announced by radio Japan's surrender to the Allies.
(Japan's population is 72,147,000)

1946 Renounced his divinity Jan. 1 to remain as symbolic head of his nation without facing charges as a war criminal.

1946-1954 Toured the country to encourage local people to rebuild. Japan made a phenomenal recovery in this period.
(In 1951, the U.S. and 48 other non-communist countries sign a peace treaty with Japan restoring Japan's sovereignty. After World War II, Japan rebuilds to become one of the most powerful economies in the world, and as a leader in manufacturing and trade)

1971-1975 Became first reigning Japanese emperor to travel abroad, visiting Belgium, the U.K., West Germany & four other European nations. In 1975, visited the U.S.

Japanese prince temporarily given role of emperor

TOKYO (AP) — The Cabinet today temporarily passed the imperial mantle to Crown Prince Akihito as Japan fretted over the failing health of Emperor Hirohito, the world's longest reigning monarch.

Akihito

Officials of the Imperial Household Agency, which runs palace affairs, set up booths today around the country and allowed people to sign their names in books for the emperor.

Crowds have gathered in front of the Imperial Palace in central Toyko since Hirohito took to bed with intestinal hemorrhaging four days ago. Palace officials said today that he remained in serious but stable condition.

"I felt like my grandfather was dying," Aya Kitade, a 22-year-old college student, said Wednesday at the palace.

She came from Kyoto, 230 miles away, after her grandparents asked her to visit and convey their greetings to the emperor.

Across Japan, Shinto shrines held services to pray for the emperor.

Many older people still hold Hirohito in high regard, but younger Japanese typically give him little thought. A minority strongly opposes the imperial system, charging it represents the strongly centralized state control and militarism that characterized wartime Japan.

The United States forced the emperor, who has occupied the throne since 1926, to publicly renounce his claim to divinity after World War II. He remains a symbol of Japan without wielding any real power.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Keizo Obuchi said the Cabinet met today and agreed to put 54-year-old Akihito temporarily in charge of all imperial duties.

"Taking into consideration the emperor's illness and medical treatment, we have asked the crown prince to temporarily assume responsibilities," Obuchi said in a nationally televised press conference.

Government officials said Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno will not leave for Washington today for talks with Secretary of State George P. Shultz. They said that in view of "domestic circumstances," they had also postponed upcoming visits to Japan by Prime Minister Ciriaco De Mita of Italy on Sunday and by Irish leader Charles J. Haughey on Wednesday.

One year ago, when Hirohito underwent an intestinal bypass operation, the prince took charge of all duties for three months. In December, Hirohito resumed most of his imperial duties.

The emperor's health problem began late Monday, when he vomited blood. The hemorraging is related to an inflamed pancreas.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Fighting erupts in Beirut as parliamentary vote delayed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting broke out along this city's dividing Green Line today after a Parliament session to elect a new president was postponed in a deadlock between Moslems and Christians.

Shell explosions and bursts of gunfire echoed across Beirut after the Parliament speaker put off voting for 24 hours in a last-ditch effort to avert a showdown that is threatening Lebanon with partition and renewed civil war.

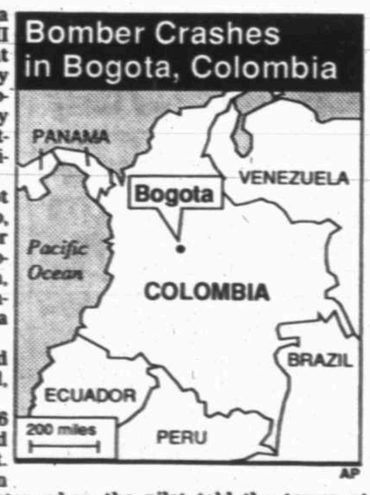
Parliament sources said President Amin Gemayel would announce a caretaker Cabinet later today led by a Christian as prime minister.

Under an unwritten national covenant dating from independence, the Lebanese president must be a Maronite Christian, the prime minister a Sunni Moslem and the Parliament speaker a Shiite Moslem.

Police said one Christian militiaman was killed and two soldiers of the regular army's predominantly Shiite Moslem 6th Brigade were wounded in mortar and machine gun duels near the old Parliament headquarters.

Twenty-seven Christian members of Parliament boycotted today's session to elect a successor to Gemayel, blocking a required quorum of 51 in the 99-seat one-house body. Gemayel must step down at the end of his term, which by tradition ends Friday.

WWII bomber crashes in Colombia



BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A World War II bomber on a test flight crashed into a heavily populated area of Bogota Wednesday, but only two people were reported killed, a civil air official said.

The pilot and copilot died, Col. Edgar Lozano, chief of operations for Colombia's Civil Aeronautics Administration, said in a broadcast interview with the Bogota radio station RCN.

No one on the ground was killed or injured, Lozano said.

The two-engine B-26 had been reconstructed and was on a test flight. The plane had been in the air only two minutes when the pilot told the tower at Bogota's El Dorado international airport that he had engine failure, the colonel said.

The plane came close to hitting two condominiums and skipped along the roofs of three houses, he said.

The plane crashed at 12:30 p.m. in northern Bogota near the intersection of 127th Street and Suba Avenue, one of the capital's busiest areas.

Robber's son seeking royal pardon

LONDON (AP) — The son of fugitive Ronald Biggs has arrived in Britain to seek a royal pardon for his father, a member of the gang that pulled off the notorious Great Train Robbery of 1963.

Mike Biggs, 14, said upon arriving Wednesday at Heathrow Airport that he plans to present Queen Elizabeth II with a letter urging her to suspend the 30-year sentence imposed on his father for his part in the robbery.

"I want to see my father a free man," the young Biggs told reporters after his flight from Brazil, where his father has lived in exile since 1970.

"It is his right. He has lived for the past 25 years as an honest man. I have lived with him for the past 14 years and know he is not a thief anymore," Biggs said.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace, speaking on condition on anonymity, said it would be "highly unlikely" for the queen to meet the youth. The British monarch is on vacation in Scotland.

The senior Biggs, 59, took part in the $7-million robbery from the Glasgow-to-London mail train Aug. 8, 1963. At the time, it was Britain's largest heist.

Less than $980,000 was recovered, but most of the 15 gang members, including Biggs, were caught and sentenced to prison.

Biggs escaped from London's Wandsworth Jail in July 1965 and fled to France, where he had plastic surgery on his face, then to Australia and finally in 1970 to Brazil, which has no extradition treaty with Britain.

In 1985, Biggs said his reported $325,000 share of the robbery was long gone. He said in an interview this year that he supports himself by selling souvenirs.

Kenya suspends 33 wildlife officers

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The government has suspended 33 wildlife officers suspected of collaborating with poachers who have slaughtered scores of elephants, said a senior Ministry of Tourism and Wildlife official.

Josiah Sang, permanent secretary in the ministry, said in a statement Wednesday that the action was take to rid the Department of Wildlife of "dishonest and unreliable officers who have been found not only unproductive but also collaborating with poachers."

The department has acknowledged that poachers have killed 92 elephants in Tsavo National Park during the past four months.

Five game wardens and policemen have been killed and at least nine wounded in clashes with poachers during the past month, officials said.

In the most recent clash, on Friday, police officers exchanged gunfire with about 50 suspected poachers in Tsavo. Newspapers said a policeman and a ranch foreman were killed and nine policemen wounded.

Prime minister visits Punjab province

GOINDWAL, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, protected by a bulletproof vest and shield, appealed for help in his government's fight against Sikh terrorism on his first visit to the embattled Punjab since 1985.

Gandhi placed the foundation stone for a new paper mill in this small village amid tight security on his one-day trip Wednesday to the northern state, where Sikh extremists are fighting for an independent homeland.

The government hopes the $170 million mill will help pump new life into a state shattered by six years of guerrilla and terrorist attacks.

Sikh radicals have killed more than 1,950 people in Punjab this year, nearly double the toll for 1987.

The prime minister was accompanied by more than 6,000 paramilitary troops, mostly armed with steel-tipped bamboo sticks, and stood at the podium behind a bulletproof shield.

Canton man executed for robberies

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities executed a Canton man convicted of robbing tourists including a visitor from Japan who was forced to surrender a camera and $820 in yen, a newspaper reported today.

The China Daily said the Canton City Intermediate People's Court condemned to death Li Zhaoheng, who was executed Tuesday, and handed down life sentences to an accomplice for multiple armed robberies in the city's Yuexiu Park in August and September of last year.

A third man was sentenced to seven years in prison. The ages and professions of the three men were not given.

Among the victims, it said, was a Japanese tourist robbed of 110,000 Japanese yen ($820, a camera and his passport, and a Chinese man who was stabbed in the chest and stomach.

The daily said the robbers were armed with a dagger.

China usually metes out harsh punishment for crimes in which foreigners are victimized, and there have been several cases of the death sentence being given to Chinese who attack or rob foreigners.

Drought likely to limit Soviet harvest

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's grain harvest this year will be smaller than the relatively good harvests of the two previous years because of drought in the country's breadbasket, Izvestia reported.

The Soviet government newspaper gave no figures, but said the harvest was just drawing to a close and it was clear it would fall short of the 231 million tons harvested in each of the past two years.

A significant shortfall in the grain harvest would be a blow to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to improve food supplies to consumers and reform agriculture. It also would require the Soviet Union to use more of its scare foreign currency to buy grain instead of machinery and equipment to modernize the economy.

Officials warn of radon, offer little help

By MICHAEL deCOURCEY HINDS
New York Times News Service

With its warning last Monday that tens of millions of people should test their homes for the presence of carcinogenic radon gas and make repairs, the government in effect proclaimed a national emergency, according to government officials and spokesmen for consumers' organizations.

But there are only fragmented government programs at the federal, state or local levels that deal with questions raised by concerned homeowners and renters. And there are no licensing requirements for contractors who test for the naturally occurring gas or install systems to divert radon from buildings.

A result, the officials and consumer experts say, is that anybody can call himself a radon expert, and many consumers may be frustrated by incompetent contractors or be swindled by unscrupulous sellers of useless services or spurious products.

"It's a serious enough problem without having to deal with people trying to make a buck on bogus products and services," said Richard M. Kessel, executive director of the New York State Consumer Protection Board. "But just as we've seen fraudulent cures for AIDS popping up, I expect to see people selling magic wands and sprays to get rid of radon."

The federal government has no plans to supervise efforts to fulfill its recommendation for testing for radon in all residences up through the second floor and to treat homes in which the naturally occurring gas exceeds safe levels.

"Our role is to continue doing research and to share that information with people best equipped to deliver that information — the people in state and local governments," said Richard J. Guimond, director of the office of radiation programs at the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington. The agency has published brochures explaining the radon problem and its solutions and it has certified testing devices that manufacturers sell through the mail for as little as $10.

Thus, most state governments are on their own in developing and financing radon programs.

Only Maryland, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Florida have "fully operational" programs offering consumers a wealth of information and technical assistance, said Guimond.

In Florida, state agencies have spent $1.8 million for surveys to find high-risk radon areas and develop a building code for radon-resistant buildings.

In Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, state agencies offer free radon tests after homeowners' original tests indicate unsafe levels. New York also gives free radon tests to consumers who have participated in energy audits offered by utilities, usually free or for a nominal fee.

Next year New York expects to spend $2.75 million to help several thousand homeowners with unsafe homes to make plans for reducing radon contamination.

New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have each spent or earmarked about $5 million on radon programs in the past few years.

Guimond said that nine states have toll-free hot lines to answer consumer inquiries and 12 states have passed some sort of legislation dealing with the radon problem, which has been defined by scientists only in the past two years.

Leaders of consumer groups say the most important next step is for states to license or certify contractors who do testing and abatement work.

Mary Ellen Fise, product safety director of the Consumer Federation of America, which represents 200 consumer groups in Washington, said: "The radon announcement presents the ultimate consumer protection problem since it poses a potential health hazard around the country as well as a potential for a lot of deceptive and misleading practices in the marketplace."

Pennsylvania will require all radon contractors to meet certification requirements by Sept. 21. By Jan. 1 certification will be required in Florida. New York and New Jersey are drafting licensing requirements that may be in effect early next year, officials said.

Licensing requirements in Pennsylvania are fairly typical: contractors must pass a state-approved course in radon detection, have a year's professional experience and agree to provide radon testing data to the government, said Jason J. Gaertner, a spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Resources.

In states without certification systems, consumers may consult the American Association of Radon Scientists and Technologists, a trade group. James J. Craffey, executive secretary of the organization, said its 150 member contractors meet or exceed all proposed state certification requirements. Members of the association, based in Park Ridge, N.J., work in 35 states. (For referrals, call 201-391-6445.)

DEAR ABBY

Call-waiting feature can be blessing or a curse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You agreed with a reader who said that a call-waiting signal was a "rude interruption." Picture this: A lonely wife, passing time on the phone with her mother, sister or friend, when her serviceman (or traveling) husband calls home. If he's in the service, he has probably stood in line for two hours to get his turn at the phone. But wait! Abby says it's "rude" to have her call interrupted — so let him get a busy signal.

How about the parents of a runaway finding comfort in a phone call from a dear friend; the child, in a moment of loneliness, decides to call home. The line is busy! The child has a change of heart and decides not to call after all.

In today's busy, hectic world, with so many two-job households, our time at home is limited, and we should all have the option of knowing who wants or needs to talk to us.

Call waiting allows us to know that someone is trying to reach us. If you happen to be on a call that is of vital importance and do not wish to be notified if someone else is trying to reach you, call waiting can be turned off during your conversation.

Please rethink your opinion, Abby. — PENNY RITTER, OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR PENNY: I plead ignorance. I was not aware that the call-waiting signal could be temporarily deactivated by the one who has the service. Thank you. Your letter was one of several hundred to promptly get that messge to me.

DEAR ABBY: I am seven and a half months pregnant with my first child, and I cannot help thinking about the many horror stories I have been told since I became pregnant. Abby, even though I have withstood a tremendous amount of physical trauma and have been in and out of the hospital a good deal of my life, childbirth is still a bit unnerving. Just yesterday, a young woman in a store began to chat with me, and went on to tell me of the "horrible experience" she had with her first.

I realize that when a pregnant woman enters a room, all mothers must feel some sort of bond with her and feel it's necessary to "share" — with only good intentions, of course.

But I wish these women would think about what they are saying, and the effect it could have on someone who has never before gone through this experience. Let her doctor tell her the risks and complications that could arise. Just share with her the happiness and joy she is trying to feel. And if you must share something, please let it be courage, strength and hope.

Thank you, Abby, for letting me say this. I just had to tell somebody! — EXPECTING IN SILVERDALE, WASH.

DEAR EXPECTING: Glad to lend an ear. That's what I'm here for. Congratulations, and all good wishes for a healthy baby.

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating an older man for almost two years now. (He's 30 years older than me and has been divorced for three years.) He has a daughter who still thinks her parents will get back together again. (Not a chance.) He hasn't told her that he is dating me. He says he doesn't want to "hurt" her. Sometimes I wonder if he is ashamed of me.

We are very much in love, but have no definite plans to marry. I feel insecure about our future. What should I do? — INSECURE

DEAR INSECURE: You are insecure with good reason. Don't build your future around this man. Before you invest any more time in this relationship, ask him what his intentions are and give him a deadline.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your reply to a letter from a 14-year-old girl whose mother wouldn't let her wear a strapless, wraparound, Hawaiian-style dress because she thought it was too revealing. Abby, I didn't object to your saying that the mother's judgment was probably better than hers. However, I did object to your calling the girl "Honey."

I realize that "Honey" is merely a term of affection, but I find it extremely offensive. Teen-agers' problems are every bit as important as the problems of older people, so please don't belittle teen-agers who seek your advice by calling them "Honey."

I request that you print this and ask for the opinions of other readers. Many teen-agers read your column and I am sure most of them share my opinion. — IRRITATED IN FORT COLLINS, COLO.

DEAR IRRITATED: Here's your letter. I welcome the opinions of my teen-age readers. Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Be chemical-wise when choosing lawn services

By JOAN LEE FAUST
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The condition of one's lawn can be a sensitive subject. Whether green, brown or full of weeds, its appearance could be a comment on the owner.

Now, midway through what has been a particularly punishing summer for lawns, many homeowners may wish they had a professional service to make the right decisions about mowing, feeding and weeding.

These services have advantages that go beyond saving strenuous and time-consuming labor. Among them are the professional equipment they use, like sprayers and spreaders, and the benefit of the latest research and studies, to which they have access.

Their principal disadvantage — and it is important — is a loss of control over what pesticides are used on your property, and how they are used.

Typically, contracts for full-service professional lawn care are made in the spring. The first year, a representative comes to the house, inspects the lawn, measures it and recommends what services will be needed for the year.

A standard contract would cover application of fertilizers, herbicides and fungicides, plus mowing and trimming. The cost of materials is included in the charge, and you get the benefit of the service's bulk rate.

Most lawn care services bill clients monthly. ChemLawn, the largest service in the nation with 250 branches, charges about $40 a month for a lawn of 5,000 square feet, which is considered average size. The ChemLawn service begins in spring and includes pre-emergence herbicide application for crabgrass control followed by fertilizers and weed- and insect-control chemicals.

ChemLawn and others like it provide comprehensive care. There are less elaborate options, if you don't mind keeping up with the mowing and trimming but could use help with the more technical chores.

But those pesticides and herbicides can mean trouble. The Connecticut Fund for the Environment has been monitoring the use of lawn care pesticides commonly used in the state and recently published a fact sheet listing seven chemicals representing herbicides and insecticides; three are listed as toxic, particularly to wildlife. Listed as toxic are carbaryl, used for billbug, sod webworm and chinch bugs; chlorpyrifos, used for ants, billbugs and weevils, and trichlorfon, used for grubs.

At-a-Glance

Emperor Hirohito

Considered something of a figurehead for much of his reign, Hirohito has been isolated from his subjects by tradition.

1901 Born in Tokyo on April 29. Taken from his parents to be reared in isolation and trained as Emperor.
(Japan's population is 44,359,000 people)

1916-1921 Became crown prince in 1916. Sent abroad by his father, Emperor Taisho, in 1921 to tour the U.K., France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Italy, the first time any imperial family member allowed out of Japan.

1924 Married Princess Nagako on Jan. 26 after delay by great earthquake of 1923.

1926 Became Emperor on Christmas Day, following death of Emperor Taisho.
(Japan's population is 60,741,000)

1928 Formally installed as emperor at age 25 and designated his reign "Showa," "enlightenment and peace."
(Japan invades Manchuria in 1931, starts war with China in 1932)

1933 First son & current crown prince, Akihito, born Dec. 23.
(Japan launches war with U.S. by attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7. 1941)

1945 On August 10, 1945, four days after Hiroshima bombing, and one day after Nagasaki, announced by radio Japan's surrender to the Allies.
(Japan's population is 72,147,000)

1946 Renounced his divinity Jan. 1 to remain as symbolic head of his nation without facing charges as a war criminal.

1946-1954 Toured the country to encourage local people to rebuild. Japan made a phenomenal recovery in this period.
(In 1951, the U.S. and 48 other non-communist countries sign a peace treaty with Japan restoring Japan's sovereignty. After World War II, Japan rebuilds to become one of the most powerful economies in the world, and as a leader in manufacturing and trade)

1971-1975 Became first reigning Japanese emperor to travel abroad, visiting Belgium, the U.K., West Germany & four other European nations. In 1975, visited the U.S.
(Japan and China restore diplomatic relations in 1972. Japan emerges as a world leader in technology)

1982-present On Aug. 22,1982, became the world's oldest reigning monarch after the death of 83-year-old King Sobhuza of Swaziland. With only a ceremonial role in Japanese affairs, Hirohito develops a reputation as a knowledgeable marine biologist, and is infrequently seen in public.
(Japan hosts an economic summit of the seven major industrial democracies in 1986. Japan's population hits 121,870,000)

Japanese prince temporarily given role of emperor

TOKYO (AP) — The Cabinet today temporarily passed the imperial mantle to Crown Prince Akihito as Japan fretted over the failing health of Emperor Hirohito, the world's longest reigning monarch.

Akihito

Officials of the Imperial Household Agency, which runs palace affairs, set up booths today around the country and allowed people to sign their names in books for the emperor.

Crowds have gathered in front of the Imperial Palace in central Toyko since Hirohito took to bed with intestinal hemorrhaging four days ago. Palace officials said today that he remained in serious but stable condition.

"I felt like my grandfather was dying," Aya Kitade, a 22-year-old college student, said Wednesday at the palace.

She came from Kyoto, 230 miles away, after her grandparents asked her to visit and convey their greetings to the emperor.

Across Japan, Shinto shrines held services to pray for the emperor.

Many older people still hold Hirohito in high regard, but younger Japanese typically give him little thought. A minority strongly opposes the imperial system, charging it represents the strongly centralized state control and militarism that characterized wartime Japan.

The United States forced the emperor, who has occupied the throne since 1926, to publicly renounce his claim to divinity after World War II. He remains a symbol of Japan without wielding any real power.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Keizo Obuchi said the Cabinet met today and agreed to put 54-year-old Akihito temporarily in charge of all imperial duties.

"Taking into consideration the emperor's illness and medical treatment, we have asked the crown prince to temporarily assume responsibilities," Obuchi said in a nationally televised press conference.

Government officials said Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno will not leave for Washington today for talks with Secretary of State George P. Shultz. They said that in view of "domestic circumstances," they had also postponed upcoming visits to Japan by Prime Minister Ciriaco De Mita of Italy on Sunday and by Irish leader Charles J. Haughey on Wednesday.

One year ago, when Hirohito underwent an intestinal bypass operation, the prince took charge of all duties for three months. In December, Hirohito resumed most of his imperial duties.

The emperor's health problem began late Monday, when he vomited blood. The hemorraging is related to an inflamed pancreas.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Fighting erupts in Beirut as parliamentary vote delayed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting broke out along this city's dividing Green Line today after a Parliament session to elect a new president was postponed in a deadlock between Moslems and Christians.

Shell explosions and bursts of gunfire echoed across Beirut after the Parliament speaker put off voting for 24 hours in a last-ditch effort to avert a showdown that is threatening Lebanon with partition and renewed civil war.

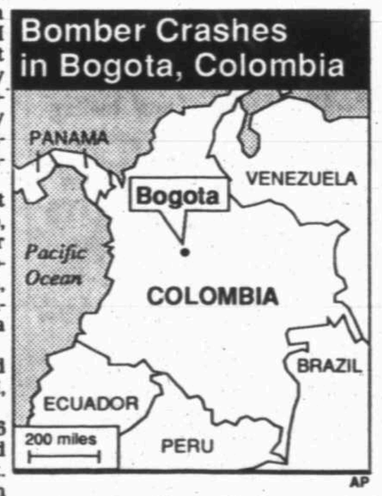
Parliament sources said President Amin Gemayel would announce a caretaker Cabinet later today led by a Christian as prime minister.

Under an unwritten national covenant dating from independence, the Lebanese president must be a Maronite Christian, the prime minister a Sunni Moslem and the Parliament speaker a Shiite Moslem.

Police said one Christian militiaman was killed and two soldiers of the regular army's predominantly Shiite Moslem 6th Brigade were wounded in mortar and machine gun duels near the old Parliament headquarters.

Twenty-seven Christian members of Parliament boycotted today's session to elect a successor to Gemayel, blocking a required quorum of 51 in the 99-seat one-house body. Gemayel must step down at the end of his term, which by tradition ends Friday.

WWII bomber crashes in Colombia



BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A World War II bomber on a test flight crashed into a heavily populated area of Bogota Wednesday, but only two people were reported killed, a civil air official said.

The pilot and copilot died, Col. Edgar Lozano, chief of operations for Colombia's Civil Aeronautics Administration, said in a broadcast interview with the Bogota radio station RCN.

No one on the ground was killed or injured, Lozano said.

The two-engine B-26 had been reconstructed and was on a test flight. The plane had been in the air only two minutes when the pilot told the tower at Bogota's El Dorado international airport that he had engine failure, the colonel said.

The plane came close to hitting two condominiums and skipped along the roofs of three houses, he said.

The plane crashed at 12:30 p.m. in northern Bogota near the intersection of 127th Street and Suba Avenue, one of the capital's busiest areas.

Robber's son seeking royal pardon

LONDON (AP) — The son of fugitive Ronald Biggs has arrived in Britain to seek a royal pardon for his father, a member of the gang that pulled off the notorious Great Train Robbery of 1963.

Mike Biggs, 14, said upon arriving Wednesday at Heathrow Airport that he plans to present Queen Elizabeth II with a letter urging her to suspend the 30-year sentence imposed on his father for his part in the robbery.

"I want to see my father a free man," the young Biggs told reporters after his flight from Brazil, where his father has lived in exile since 1970.

"It is his right. He has lived for the past 25 years as an honest man. I have lived with him for the past 14 years and know he is not a thief anymore," Biggs said.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace, speaking on condition on anonymity, said it would be "highly unlikely" for the queen to meet the youth. The British monarch is on vacation in Scotland.

The senior Biggs, 59, took part in the $7-million robbery from the Glasgow-to-London mail train Aug. 8, 1963. At the time, it was Britain's largest heist.

Less than $980,000 was recovered, but most of the 15 gang members, including Biggs, were caught and sentenced to prison.

Biggs escaped from London's Wandsworth Jail in July 1965 and fled to France, where he had plastic surgery on his face, then to Australia and finally in 1970 to Brazil, which has no extradition treaty with Britain.

In 1985, Biggs said his reported $325,000 share of the robbery was long gone. He said in an interview this year that he supports himself by selling souvenirs.

Kenya suspends 33 wildlife officers

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The government has suspended 33 wildlife officers suspected of collaborating with poachers who have slaughtered scores of elephants, said a senior Ministry of Tourism and Wildlife official.

Josiah Sang, permanent secretary in the ministry, said in a statement Wednesday that the action was take to rid the Department of Wildlife of "dishonest and unreliable officers who have been found not only unproductive but also collaborating with poachers."

The department has acknowledged that poachers have killed 92 elephants in Tsavo National Park during the past four months.

Five game wardens and policemen have been killed and at least nine wounded in clashes with poachers during the past month, officials said.

In the most recent clash, on Friday, police officers exchanged gunfire with about 50 suspected poachers in Tsavo. Newspapers said a policeman and a ranch foreman were killed and nine policemen wounded.

Prime minister visits Punjab province

GOINDWAL, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, protected by a bulletproof vest and shield, appealed for help in his government's fight against Sikh terrorism on his first visit to the embattled Punjab since 1985.

Gandhi placed the foundation stone for a new paper mill in this small village amid tight security on his one-day trip Wednesday to the northern state, where Sikh extremists are fighting for an independent homeland.

The government hopes the $170 million mill will help pump new life into a state shattered by six years of guerrilla and terrorist attacks.

Sikh radicals have killed more than 1,950 people in Punjab this year, nearly double the toll for 1987.

The prime minister was accompanied by more than 6,000 paramilitary troops, mostly armed with steel-tipped bamboo sticks, and stood at the podium behind a bulletproof shield.

Canton man executed for robberies

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities executed a Canton man convicted of robbing tourists including a visitor from Japan who was forced to surrender a camera and $820 in yen, a newspaper reported today.

The China Daily said the Canton City Intermediate People's Court condemned to death Li Zhaoheng, who was executed Tuesday, and handed down life sentences to an accomplice for multiple armed robberies in the city's Yuexiu Park in August and September of last year.

A third man was sentenced to seven years in prison. The ages and professions of the three men were not given.

Among the victims, it said, was a Japanese tourist robbed of 110,000 Japanese yen ($820, a camera and his passport, and a Chinese man who was stabbed in the chest and stomach.

The daily said the robbers were armed with a dagger.

China usually metes out harsh punishment for crimes in which foreigners are victimized, and there have been several cases of the death sentence being given to Chinese who attack or rob foreigners.

Execution is normally by a bullet to the back of the head.

Drought likely to limit Soviet harvest

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's grain harvest this year will be smaller than the relatively good harvests of the two previous years because of drought in the country's breadbasket, Izvestia reported.

The Soviet government newspaper gave no figures, but said the harvest was just drawing to a close and it was clear it would fall short of the 231 million tons harvested in each of the past two years.

A significant shortfall in the grain harvest would be a blow to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to improve food supplies to consumers and reform agriculture. It also would require the Soviet Union to use more of its scare foreign currency to buy grain instead of machinery and equipment to modernize the economy.

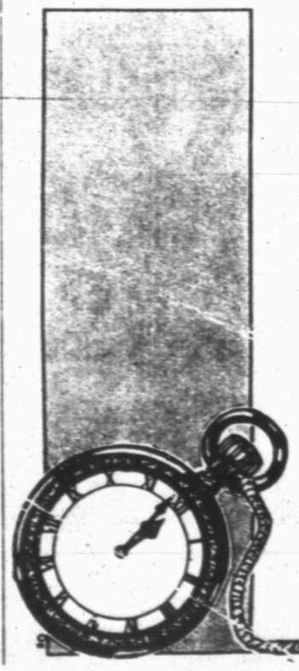
WATCHES



Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going - selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!
