'Super Teacher'

Bush teacher honored at Telemundo kickoff event

By Luis Garcia
Staff Writer

With a red carpet, glitz, glamour and a touch of West Texas hospitality, the Telemundo network brought out its stars to shine in West Texas. The celebrities from the Spanish language network formed part of the entertainment of the Hollywood-style premiere party and gala on Thursday night.

Network executives, political leaders and business people were at the invitation-only event, as KWES celebrated their partnership with the Telemundo network.

"I enjoy the energy and the fun of starting a new channel," Candela Ferro, one of the anchors of "Ocurrio Asi," a prime Telemundo program, said.

The gala, held at Confederate Air Force Hangar, drew hundreds of people for the evening. The executives from Drewey Broadcasting, KWES' parent company, and the Telemundo network attended the event, confirming the close partnership of the two businesses in the West Texas area.

The Telemundo network has launched the Permian Basin's first all-Spanish newscast.

The evening started with an informal reception. News anchors Jay Hendricks and Melissa Hendrix were masters of ceremony. Dancers in classical Mexican dress performed.

Reiterating the enterprises' commitment to education, teachers who have had an impact on the Hispanic community were honored. Jack Sherman Chevrolet and Bronco Chevrolet, who sponsored the event, presented some special education awards.

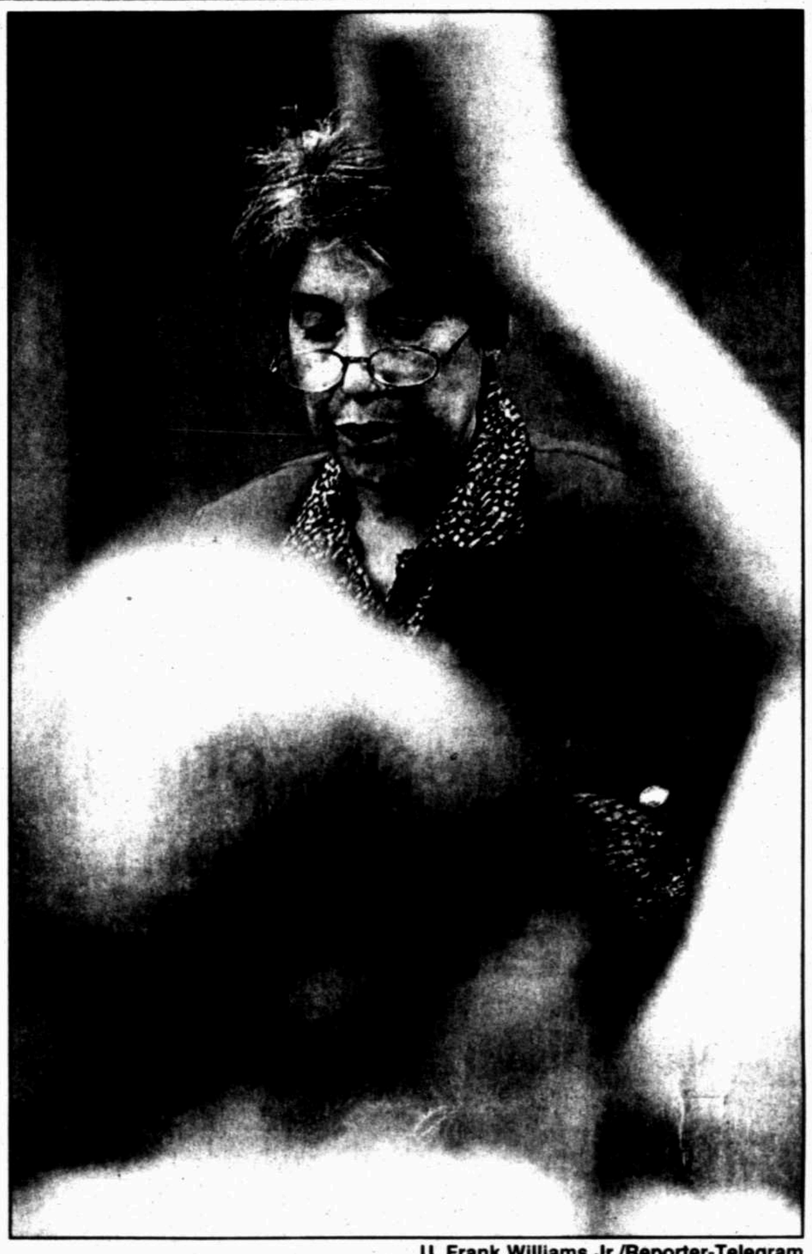

Lupe Miller, sixth grade teacher Bush Elementary in Midland, received the "Super Teacher" award, which includes a Rolex watch. An Odessa teacher was honored, too.

"I am honored to receive this award, but I don't feel worthy," Ms. Miller said.

She has been a teacher for 25 years.

Rounding out the program, Campanas de America, a renowned mariachi group from San Antonio, preformed classic Mexican music. With a mix of violins, guitars and trumpets, the mariachi serenaded the audience as the glamorous evening of fun and fiesta drew to a close.

"This hopefully will not be the last event of its kind," said Larry Patton, senior vice president of Drewey Broadcasting. "In two or three months, we'll open a station in Amarillo."

Brown leads in amount of contributions to campaign

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Before former Midland City Councilman Dale Brown jumped into the mayor's race, he spent $9,620 on professional research to establish the viability of his bid.

"It was important for the people who were supporting me to have some concrete evidence that there would be support for the Dale Brown for mayor campaign, and I wanted to be as clear as possible about what the people of Midland are thinking," Brown said.

■ See page 4A for complete list of contributions.

On Thursday, candidates for the May 5 election filed their first reports of campaign contributions/expenditures.

"It would seem like a lot of money, but I am not surprised Mr. Brown has spent that much. He is the only one doing the polling and the only one who has paid a political consultant," said Buddy Sipes, one of the four others who will be challenging Brown to become Midland's 21st mayor.

According to Brown's expenditure report, he paid Baselice & and Associates, Inc. of Austin $6,000 on Feb. 20 and $3,620 on March 2.

"I don't think it is necessary to run surveys, because I will say what I believe regardless," Mike Canon said. "That $9,000 is money I could find other uses for."

The biggest spender thus far is Bill

Marathon ready to increase presence in Permian Basin

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Marathon Oil Co. is in the process of redefining itself and the Permian Basin, as a core area, will play a big role in the new definition, said Steve Hinchman, senior vice president for worldwide production for Marathon.

Speaking at the noon meeting of the Executive Oil Conference, Hinchman, the former regional manager for the Permian Basin, said Marathon is a 114-year-old company now looking as itself as a startup. He said Marathon had been operating in the Permian Basin for 78 of those years, and the Yates field would celebrate its 75th anniversary this year.

"We are now in the process of finding out who we are," said Hinchman. "We are not a super major. I am not even sure we are a major oil company in today's terms." In the title of his speech Marathon was referred to as a "super independent."

"What we are," said Hinchman, "is the seventh largest integrated oil and gas company in the U.S. and the fifth largest refining and marketing company in the U.S."

While Marathon operates in 12 countries, Hinchman noted that Marathon, with two thirds of its production in the U.S., was more domestic than foreign. The company

Upbeat oil industry honors achievements, contributions

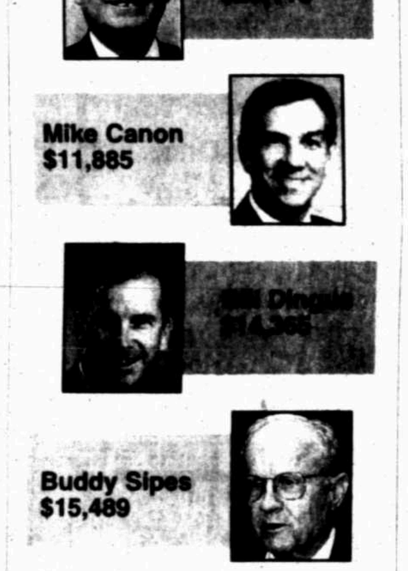

By Mella McEwen

An upbeat group of oil industry executives gathered Thursday at the Petroleum Club for the 2001 Midland Reporter-Telegram/Hearst Energy Awards, recognizing individual and corporate achievements and contributions to the industry.

More than the current level of oil and natural gas prices, there is optimism to be found in the new occupant of the White House and President Bush's administration, said keynote speaker Jerry Jordan, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Nicholas wants to link Tall City to global community

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Mark Nicholas is ready to move Midland into an international direction.

As the president of the Nicholas Consulting Group Inc., he wants to take his business into a new frontier. As a potential successor to District 3 City Councilman Lee Wood, he is hoping to have the pulpit and spread his international message to Midland.

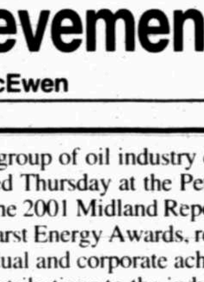

"Now is an opportunity to export our technology across the world into other markets, which are developing and don't have the infrastructure of technology that we have here," Nicholas said. "We have the brainpower, people with years and years of experience, and we still ought to be taking advantage of that intelligence and experience we have in this industry."

According to Nicholas, companies — such as Compressor Systems Inc. (CSI), High Bonds and BCCK Engineering — have already started the transition. Nicholas believes as the District 3 (central Midland) representative he could get more businesses involved.

"Being on the council would provide the opportunity to talk to folks," Nicholas said. "(As a councilman) It would be easier to talk about ideas."

NICHOLAS: Candidate sees organization as key to expansion

(From 1A)

Helping to reenergize the oil and energy-related economy couldn't hurt. With AngelouEconomics and the Midland Assessment and Action Plan (MAAP) in the midst of sending reports on the current state and future of the city's economy, Midlanders have heard plenty concerning the dwindling oil industry and a community that has suffered because of it.

Nicholas says the best minds in the oil business are still found locally, and there is no reason not to take advantage of that.

"We need to leverage the expertise we have," Nicholas said.

It was as if Nicholas was putting his own spin on AngelouEconomic's economic diversity bible. Most recent MAAP reports have stated Midland needs to become less dependent on the oil industry but use its industrial capability in other areas.

"We need to build on our strengths," Nicholas said. "We need not to be focused on oil, but be focused on opportunities which are oil-related."

Those opportunities, according to Nicholas, are across state and national borders in South America, Central America and Asia. These are lands, which are new to the energy business, and economies ready to capitalize.

"Most companies (in Midland) are resource oriented," Nicholas said. "Oil and gas is physically located in West Texas. That is where the resources are. Enterprising companies have exported technology and hardware oversees and done well doing that. We are providing compressors to all the people here in West Texas and Southwestern New Mexico. We can do that in South America."

D'Ann Harris, director of market development for the Northwest Texas International Trade Center, says the opportunities are endless for a city like Midland, which is at the forefront of energy-related technology.

The Northwest Texas International Trade Center is a state supported agency that promotes international trade opportunities for Texas companies. As a state supported agency, the NTITC accepts no fee for services from the buyer or seller.

"There are many opportunities out there that Midland and the Permian Basin can provide assistance for," Ms. Harris said.

In fact, Ms. Harris said she is currently assisting on a large international project which would benefit two Midland companies.

"It brings in brand new dollars and brand new growth," Ms. Harris said.

Nicholas goes on to say promoting expansion abroad would do two things.

- Midland can see a growth of employment due to the increase in the size of the market.
- Midland will see an increase in the diversity of clients if its businesses can get into other markets or other countries.

Nicholas says for this to happen, local businesses must align in a fashion — such as an area-wide organization — that makes it easier for an outside entity to do business. Everything foreign businesses need will be in one place, and many local businesses benefit because of it.

Organizing can make the city of Midland a player where it otherwise might have been passed over because of its size.

"When we compare ourselves to other communities, there is a danger of saying that the pond is bigger and asking how effective we are going to be competing," Nicholas said. "We need to realize we are in an international market and the reality of what the Internet can do for us.

"Also if we are doing work internationally, our location may be a disadvantage. Being here versus Dallas or Houston, we are still talking a place that is 1,000 miles away."

Make no mistake about it. Nicholas believes in economic diversity — using the airport, challenging the Chamber of Commerce, continuing to explore other options. Today's environment doesn't bode well for communities looking to specialize.

"We have to be careful of having a one trick pony," Nicholas said.

He also believes looking at the international market can work for anyone, energy related or not. But again, there is a reason for Midland's existence. That is oil and energy-related fields.

"The largest employers in the community are oil and gas, and that is where the money comes from," Nicholas said.

MAYOR: Dingus leads candidates in spending reported

(From 1A)

Dingus who has spent $23,612 as of the first filing.

"We couldn't afford $10,000 in survey work. We will not have that kind of money. My goal was to have a crisp message out there," Dingus said.

And Dingus, who won election to the City Council less than a year ago, is hoping to have the media help carry his message to the public. So far, he leads all candidates in spending reported. His $23,612 is more than $13,000 more than Brown and the rest of the field, but a large portion of Dingus' expenditures is due to advertising — specifically on television and radio.

"We paid for all of our television spots up front," Dingus said. "I don't think we will spend more than $30,000 (the rest of the way)."

That means the rest will catch up with Dingus. None have any broadcast advertisement listed as an expense in this first report. Few have listed any revenue spent for campaign signs, although all, but Dingus have signs out around town.

Brown has spent $10,486.59; Canon $238 and Sipes $1,107.69.

In terms of money raised, Brown leads the pack in terms of total collections and contributors who have donated at least $1,000.

According to the report, Brown has received $20,116 in total political contributions. Sipes is second with $15,489. Dingus and Canon are third and fourth with $14,365 and $11,885.

Brown has eight contributors listed as giving $1,000 or more. Dingus has three, Canon two and Sipes one.

Dingus goes down as the candidate who has the largest principal amount of all outstanding loans ($15,000).

The fifth mayoral candidate — Thomas Flournoy — has received no money and spent no money, according to the first report.

All the MISD candidates from District 7 signed a form which stated they would spend no more than $500 on their campaigns. Therefore, they don't have to file their contributors as long as they don't spend in excess of $500.

HONORS: Anadarko receives Company Performance Award

(From 1A)

ident Dick Cheney that is addressing energy issues and the lack of an energy policy," Jordan said. "That task force will come up with a road map, work with Congress on legislative needs and then on administrative needs, and that is what this industry needs."

The task force, he predicted, will bring balance to both the nation's energy producers and consumers.

Any energy policy, he predicted, will not open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to drilling, but he expressed confidence an Alaskan natural gas pipeline will be built and that natural gas will remain the industry's focus.

"Natural gas will be a solid investment for the industry for the next two to four years at least," he said. "I'm optimistic; I'm so optimistic I'm already worried about the next bubble. That's our industry — a boom and bust cycle. We have to manage our business, we need capital, we need skilled people and we need access to non-park federal lands."

The first award of the evening was presented to CMS Oil & Gas, which received the 2001 Technology Award for opening up new frontiers in horizontal drilling by using off-the-shelf technology and expertise. The company has also helped advance horizontal drilling in the Permian Basin by sharing lessons learned with other operators, who are applying those findings to other areas and formations.

Denise Bode, only the second woman to serve on the Oklahoma Corporation Commission since its inception in 1907, when Oklahoma became a state, received the 2001 Public Service Award. Before joining the commission, she was president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America for seven years, testifying before Congress numerous times. She currently serves on President Bush's transition team for energy.

She told the gathering she has spent her career "trying to get the word out about the importance of the domestic oil industry and the people that work in it."

Those in the domestic industry, she said, "are the last great entrepreneurs. You have a great responsibility. The country is depending on you; gas demand is going up, electricity demand is going up, and meeting it is critical. It's your responsibility to find the oil and gas to fuel our new high-tech economy. For the first time, I think consumers understand how important you are. Like the bumper sticker in 1985 that read 'Give me another chance and I promise not to screw it up,' this is our chance; let's not screw it up."

Anadarko Petroleum of Houston, a company with extensive Permian Basin reserves and presence, was named recipient of the 2001 Company Performance Award for its phenomenal performance in replacing reserves every year since 1981 at finding costs below industry averages.

Along with the Hearst Midland Reporter-Telegram Energy Awards, the Midland College/Bruno Hanson Award for Environmental Excellence was presented, this year going to Chevron U.S.A. Chevron was honored for its plugging procedures, voluntarily enacting provisions for plugging oil and gas wells that go beyond what regulations require. Known among Chevron employees as "Policy 530," the program identifies candidates for plugging and has established continuous communication with the Railroad Commission on procedures. Chevron is also pilot-testing new well plugging technology.

The final award, the 2001 Lifetime Achievement Award was presented to Raymond Plank, founder and chairman of Apache Corp. Under the leadership of Plank, Apache grew from a Minnesota investment company with six employees, $250,000 in assets and 41 investors in 1954 to a $5.5 billion company with reserves of 807 million barrels of oil equivalent.

Plank was in Egypt, meeting with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on the completion of Apache's acquisition of Repsol's interests in the country and was unable to attend.

Dwayne Schultz, southern region vice president, accepted the award for Plank and said "Ray has dedicated his life to building Apache Corp." into a company with $8 billion in assets and about 1 billion barrels of oil equivalent in reserves.

Plank, he said, has remained an advocate of the industry.

Reporter-Telegram Publisher Charles Spence told the gathering Hearst Corp. and its newspapers, including the Reporter-Telegram, are pleased to support the oil and gas industry because "you support us."

MARATHON: Company operates in 12 countries

has 430,000 barrels of oil per day of production.

As Marathon redefines itself, Hinchman said the company would concentrate on its four U.S. core areas for new opportunities. The four areas are the Permian Basin, Gulf of Mexico, Deep Water Gulf and the North American Gas Belt or Arkoma Basin. The North Sea is also a Marathon core area.

Hinchman noted that while the stock market seems to reward the biggest oil companies, size is not everything. Marathon has enjoyed success in using exploration technology; focusing on less competitive areas; becoming a dominant regional player and capitalizing upon acquisition successes. He said Marathon had nearly doubled its gas production since 1993 as a result of acquisitions, and had gone from the eighth largest to the second largest producer in the Anadarko Basin.

He promised the reorganized Marathon would be about capitalizing on size, agility, global experience, technical know-how and niche opportunities.

"We will focus on select areas, and we will get bigger in smaller areas. We will do it with acquisitions and technology. And, we will leverage its relationships to become preferred partners." He said a company the size of Marathon can show greater increases than the majors select areas and not have to hunt elephants.

The company, he said intends to become bigger in the Permian Basin, which produces 1.7 million barrels per day, and solidify its position in all core areas.

Permian Basin's first Low Vision Exposition to be held

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Casa de Amigos and the Texas Lions Eyeglass Recycling Center have teamed up to hold the first Permian Basin Low Vision Exposition, scheduled for Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Texas Lions Eyeglass Recycling Center, 200 Plaza St., the former Howard Hodge Theater.

Members of the public are invited to attend the exposition.

It covers a 17 county area that includes Midland and Ector, Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Loving, Martin, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties. It will be the first and only such exposition conducted an area from the Dallas Metroplex to El Paso to San Antonio and the Oklahoma border.

"The main thing is to give all the people in this 17-county area information or sources of information to find avenues to get assistance in whatever area they're having a problem," said Ike Fitzgerald with the Texas Lions Eyeglass Recycling Center.

According to Fitzgerald, of the world's 6 billion population, 60 percent need or wear eyeglasses or contact lenses. Of that 60 percent, 80 percent have their vision corrected by eyeglasses or contact lenses; the remaining 20 percent have an eye condition that requires surgery or special equipment.

Translated into Midland's estimated population of near 100,000 people, about 60,000 residents need or wear eyeglasses or contact lenses and 12,000 have serious eye conditions that require surgery or special equipment.

While the exposition is also designed to raise awareness of vision problems, Fitzgerald pointed out "Those who have low vision problems are aware of the problem; knowing where to get assistance can be difficult."

Agreed Shannon Moore, Americorp Health Educator with Casa de Amigos, "We hope to connect the people who have problems with more sources."

The exposition includes out-of-town exhibitors who will display the latest in eye care technology, including, Ms. Moore said, "new equipment we've never even seen here."

Representatives of local non-profit health organizations will also be present to discuss the assistance they can provide those with vision problems.

Four seminars will be presented throughout the day.

Dr. Jeff Grigsby will speak on "Diabetic Retinopathy" at 11 a.m.

Dr. Dennis Neely will give a presentation on cataracts at 1 p.m., followed by Dr. Steve Hankinson and his seminar on cataracts at 2 p.m. Dr. John Marshall will give a presentation on "Macular Degeneration" at 3 p.m.

Also at the exposition will be local mascots, who will be available to pose for pictures, and those attending the exposition are welcome to bring unused eyeglasses to the center for refurbishment.

Pressure on GOP to reduce size of Bush tax cut

By Susan Milligan
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The battle over the budget faces its most critical test yet today, as a closely divided Senate votes on whether to endorse President Bush's plan to cut taxes by $1.6 trillion over the next 10 years.

But while the outcome is still uncertain, there were strong signs Thursday that the Republicans were failing in their struggle to win enough votes for the plan. A loss would be a significant blow to Bush, who made the tax cut central to his presidential campaign.

Even as they insisted they could cobble together the votes, Republicans hinted the size of the tax package, part of a $1.9 trillion 2002 budget, might have to come down to get majority support.

"We would imagine that we would be very close to the president's number at the end of the day," said a senior GOP leadership aide. But "there is a possibility it will be lower."

Bush, speaking to a gathering of newspaper editors, urged senators to vote for his package. "There's a lot of people in our country who are beginning to hurt," Bush said.

The president said that "no one vote is decisive" in the multi-layered budget process. But recent developments in the Senate display the critical importance of each senator's vote, particularly in a 50-50 chamber.

Swing-vote Senator James Jeffords, Republican of Vermont, sent a letter to Vice President Dick Cheney officially rejecting the White House's offer on funding for special education as the price for an "aye" vote on the Bush package.

Unless the GOP can bring over another Democratic vote on the tax plan, a "no" vote from Jeffords would doom the Bush package, 51-49.

Senator Lincoln Chafee, Republican of Rhode Island, meanwhile, "is not moving" in his opposition to the package, said spokesman Jeff Neal.

Jeffords is seeking $180 billion over 10 years to fully fund the special ed program, which gives aid for students with disabilities. But the White House would not commit to making the funding mandatory — meaning it could be excised in subsequent years, said an aide to Jeffords.

Further, the White House was insisting on the creation of a special commission to study the program, a condition Jeffords saw as a back-door way to weaken or even kill it down the road.

"They're not negotiating any more at this point," said Jeffords spokesman Eric Smulson, confirming that the letter was sent.

With the pressure mounting, a GOP leadership aide called advocates in the disability rights community, making the president's case. "I wanted to make sure people out there understood there was an opportunity here," said the aide, confirming the calls.

The White House is adamant about reforming the program, and would not sign onto a deal with Jeffords unless they had a way to keep the program from becoming "a bottomless pit" of spending, the aide said. But Jeffords "wanted it his way or no way," the aide said.

Democrats were still wary of counting Jeffords in their corner. The senator has flirted with them in the past, Democrats say, and later gone back to support his own party.

But the laid-back, moderate senator was extremely angry with the way his demands had been handled by the White House. "He felt they were giving him the runaround for four days," said an aide close to the senator.

The budget resolution is not binding, but it is a strong symbolic indicator of support for the president's budget plan and tax cut.

The Senate Thursday night narrowly passed an amendment that would make it more difficult to trim the final tax cut number to be passed today. The measure, passed 51-49, says that the tax cut must be considered under "reconciliation" rules, meaning it cannot be filibustered, and amendments and debate on it are limited.

With amendments so far, the tax plan stands at $1.15 trillion over 10 years. But GOP leadership may offer another measure today supplanting that amount with a bigger number.

Republican senators were clearly worried, anxiously trying to pull one more vote and denouncing the Democrats for weakening the tax cut on Wednesday, when the Senate voted to trim $448 billion from the total.

"They're voting to hand President Bush a political defeat. This is raw politics aimed at the president's political standing," complained Senator Robert F. Bennett, Republican of Utah.

"There's no question we took a hit (Wednesday)," said Senator Bob Smith, Republican of New Hampshire.

But Democrats weren't counting on a win, either. "I noticed some of our colleagues had their arms in slings (Thursday)," joked Senator Richard Durbin, Democrat of Illinois, referring to the heavy arm-twisting being performed on wavering senators.

Republicans insist they can cobble together the votes for their president, hinting that they have a few shy Democrats in their camp who will end up backing the Bush measure. "We will find a way," said Senate Finance Committee chairman Charles Grassley, Republican of Iowa.

Jurors cry while watching girl fight for life during therapy

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Jurors cried as they watched a 70-minute videotape Thursday of a girl struggling for her life while wrapped in a blanket during a "rebirthing therapy" session. The girl died the next day.

The videotape was played at the trial of two therapists charged in the death of 10-year-old Candace Newmaker.

On the video, Candace shrieked as she tried to follow the therapists instructions to push out with her legs.

"I can't do it! Whoever is pushing on my head, you're not helping. I can't do it, I can't breathe, I can't breathe."

Later the girl said, "I'm dying! It feels like I'm dying!" as the two therapists and their assistants pushed against large pillows on either side of the girl. Therapist Julie Ponder appeared to be lying on top of Candace.

One juror put her hands over her mouth, took her glasses off and wiped her eyes. Others let out a collective sigh as the tape ended.

Connell Watkins, 54, and Ponder, 40, are charged with reckless child abuse resulting in death and could get up to 48 years in prison.

The therapists were treating Candace for reactive attachment disorder, in which a child resists forming loving relationships and can become unmanageable and violent.

The idea of the rebirthing therapy was to get Candace to force her way out of the blanket and emerge "reborn," to form a bond with her adoptive mother, Jeane Newmaker, who was part of the therapy session.

Watkins, Ponder and the two assistants adjusted positions several times during the session and at one point appeared to be lounging on the eight pillows surrounding Candace.

Newmaker asks Candace if she was ready to be reborn, to which the girl screams: "I can't do it! Somebody is on top of me."

Newmaker, upset, left to watch the session on a closed circuit television set. After the assistants left to be with Newmaker, Ponder and Watkins talked about real estate and home remodeling.

Seventy minutes after the session began, the therapists unwrapped the blanket and found Candace had stopped breathing. An autopsy listed the cause of death as asphyxiation.

Newmaker, 47, is scheduled to be tried in November on a lesser charge of criminally negligent child abuse.

She testified Wednesday she thought the treatment was standard and didn't know the therapists had limited experience with it.

Drivers need to be careful in work areas

With road improvement work taking place all around the city and most notably on Andrews Highway, we feel it is appropriate to remind drivers to use a little extra caution these days.

Delays, lane closures and detours add to the frustration of drivers who are usually racing the clock to get to their destination.

It's time to slow down.

It's time to put that defensive driving training to good use.

It's time to be extra courteous to your fellow drivers.

Sure, there's always going to be a few hot heads who try to cut others off, blow their horns and potentially endanger fellow motorists.

Inconsiderate drivers and road work are out of your control.

But there are a few things you can do to make your in-town trip a little smoother.

First, look for an alternate route. If you can avoid some of the construction zones on your routine trips, it's sure to be less stressful for you. Leave for your destination a little earlier and give yourself a little extra time to get where you are going.

Second, be sure to obey all traffic laws. Frequently, the construction crews need drivers to reduce their speed, change lanes or stop momentarily. These rules are in place for your safety, for the safety of the road crews and for the safety of your fellow drivers.

Third, pay attention to what's going on around you. Don't allow yourself to be distracted by the phone in your ear or the radio playing. Observe the crews and the cars around you. Be on the alert for lane changes, signals or drivers who may misunderstand the signals and pull out in front of your vehicle.

Remember, that in the end, we're going to wind up with smoother, safer roadways on which to travel. But we are going to have to put up with some short-term inconveniences.

The Midland Police Department and the Texas Department of Transportation are working hard to keep drivers safe.

But it is incumbent upon all drivers to play their part and offer their cooperation.

Road work can be frustrating and inconvenient for motorists.

But let's all play it safe and hope frustration and inconvenience are the only suffering we see. The last thing we want to see is someone injured because a driver couldn't play by the rules.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, April 6, the 96th day of 2001. There are 269 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 6, 1909, explorers Robert E. Peary and Matthew A. Henson became the first men to reach the North Pole. (The claim, disputed by skeptics, was upheld in 1989 by the Navigation Foundation.)

On this date:

In 1830, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was organized by Joseph Smith in Fayette, N.Y.

In 1862, the Civil War Battle of Shiloh began in Tennessee.

In 1896, the first modern Olympic games formally opened in Athens, Greece.

In 1917, Congress approved a declaration of war against Germany.

In 1965, the United States launched the Early Bird communications satellite.

In 1971, Russian-born composer Igor Stravinsky died in New York City.

In 1985, William J. Schroeder became the first artificial heart recipient to be discharged from the hospital as he moved into an apartment in Louisville, Ky.

In 1994, Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun announced his retirement after 24 years.

In 1994, the presidents of Rwanda and Burundi were killed in a mysterious plane crash near Rwanda's capital; widespread violence erupted in Rwanda over claims the plane had been shot down.

In 1998, country singer Tammy Wynette died at her Nashville, Tenn., home at age 55.

Ten years ago: Iraq reluctantly agreed to accept United Nations conditions for ending the Persian Gulf War.

Five years ago: A sorrowful President Clinton was on hand at Dover Air Force Base in Delaware to greet the arrival of 33 flag-draped caskets carrying the remains of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and other victims of a plane crash in Croatia. A stolen truck carrying illegal immigrants overturned in Temecula, Calif., killing eight people. Actress Greer Garson died in Dallas at age 92.

One year ago: The father of Elian Gonzalez, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, arrived in the United States to press for the return of his 6-year-old son to Cuba. China shooting itself in foot with erratic actions

WASHINGTON — Our turboprop Aries reconnaissance aircraft is designed to fly slowly, to listen and observe while aloft for 12 hours. Lumbering along at about 350 mph, the plane that is now impounded by China was being buzzed, shadowed and harassed by a couple of Chinese F-8 fighter jets capable of nearly three times its speed.

Safire

One of the Chinese jets positioned itself in front of the Aries (the name, stargazers know, is Latin for "the ram"). Is it possible that our pilot, with a crew of 23 aboard, deliberately surged ahead to ram the fighter? That makes no sense; even if the slow plane could catch the much faster one, such a maneuver would be suicidal.

What does make sense is this: The jet plane in front slowed to obstruct the Americans' observation of what may have been a new destroyer purchased from Russia. But the F-8 was not designed for such slow speed, and probably stalled; the U.S. plane behind then ran into it.

Thus we have an accident caused by a form of reckless endangerment by the provocateurs commanding the Chinese air force. Beijing's military wants no surveillance of its buildup in the area and is prepared to make life dangerous for American watchers.

The Chinese reaction to what is so obviously an accident reveals a standard Cold War Communist mindset: (1) Blame the United States for killing its reckless pilot. (2) Assert the collision occurred within its territorial waters although it happened more than 50 miles out to sea. (3) Complain that our crippled plane failed to get permission to land when it radioed "mayday" and put down at the nearest airstrip. (4) Hold our crew incommunicado and then, against all civilized custom, treat them as prisoners. (5) Take our plane apart to steal what computer secrets our crew was not able to destroy. (6) Insist we halt surveillance of its coastal patrols and oil exploration.

Finally, the most significant Chinese reaction at the highest level was: (7) Humiliate the United States in Asian eyes by demanding an official apology. An expression of regret or sorrow at the loss of life would not suffice; Beijing made clear that only an abject confession of being in the wrong, followed by a Clintonesque apology, would do.

As facts trickle out, it becomes ever more apparent that the Chinese policy of endangerment was the cause of the accident, compounded by those seven succeeding wrongful acts. The United States is not demanding an apology because it wants its crew back; we also know that such a bootless demand would reveal national insecurity, as China's nervous politicians now display.

Media attention in America is transfixed by "Bush's first test," as if the story of our new president's prudent reactions were more newsworthy than China's bellicose actions. A cool head in the Oval Office is to be expected; too many of us are measuring equanimity under pressure in the White House rather than denouncing the enormity of China's propaganda slander.

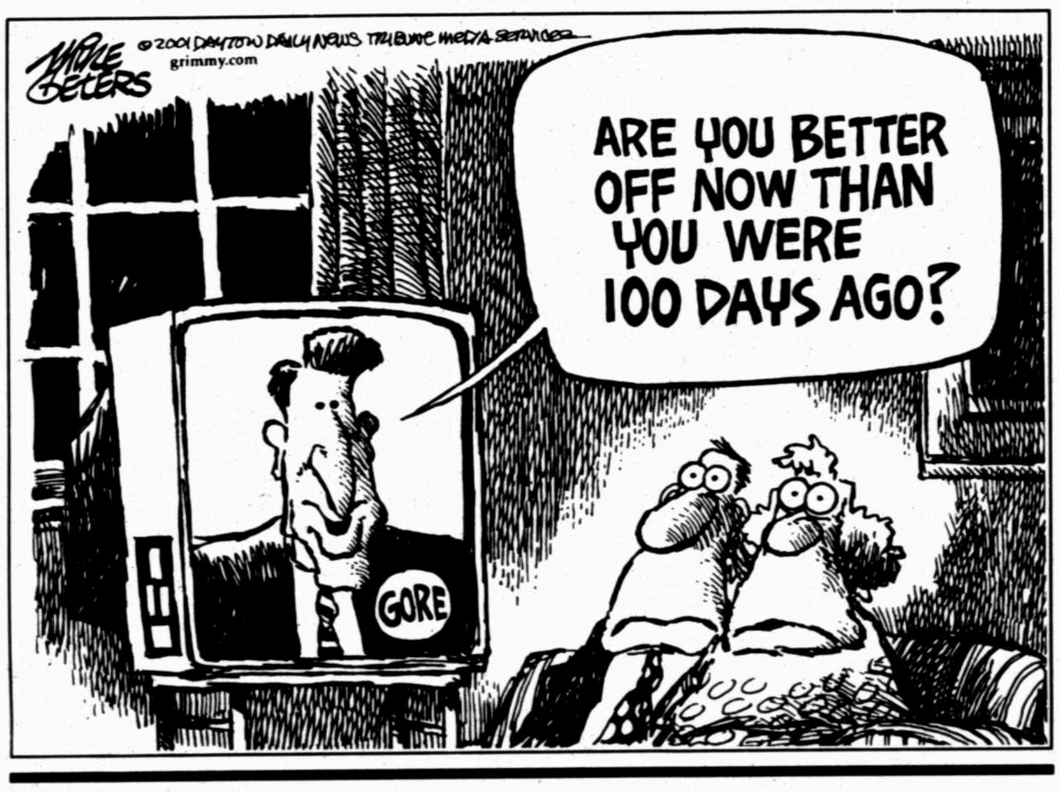

The welcome news is how the Chinese leadership is inflicting great damage on its strategic purposes. Its uncoordinated overreaction to the accident — especially its foolish demand that the United States grovel — is a gift to geopolitical realists here and a blow to softie Sinologists and amoral business interests.

For China to buy a change in America's trade policy with illegal campaign contributions may be troubling. For China to snatch our academics and put them on show trials for espionage may be dismaying. For China to acquire our secret technology from greedy American executives and friendly scientists may be distressing. But for China to hold prisoner two dozen American servicemen and -women to extract our apology for its own reckless wrongdoing — that's infuriating.

And hell hath no fury like a Congress double-crossed. Those on the Hill who ignored human rights and buckled to corporate-Clinton pressure now mutter about rescinding their giveaway of trade restraints. Those who closed their eyes to the missile buildup now threatening Taiwan are opening them to the need for selling that democratic ally our Aegis antimissile defense.

Beijing will soon awaken to its blunder. Our "explanation" and "regret" will lead to its release of our detainees or internees (never say hostages or prisoners). Too late; the tide of political opinion may be turning.

Presidential news conferences critical

WASHINGTON — It doesn't matter where President Bush holds his news conferences, just so he holds them — regularly.

Much has been made of the fact that he is shunning the elegant setting of the East Room of the White House, preferring instead the James Brady S. Briefing Room for his impromptu news conferences in the middle of the day.

So what?

Thomas

The evening prime time news conferences have become pompous televised extravaganzas that begin with the president walking down a long red-carpeted corridor, gladiator-style, to face the lions of the press. Reporters are sometimes accused of posturing to hold the limelight.

With all that fanfare, a major announcement is usually expected from the president. Viewers do not realize that except for CNN, most major television networks refuse to carry live coverage of a news conference without assurance the president will "make news."

Those formal prime-time news conferences are usually limited to 30 minutes under a pact between the White House and the networks. That's so TV viewers won't miss a highly-rated sitcom or sports event.

The most important goal of a news conference is to get the president on the public record on the issues of the day, early and often. While White House press secretaries can brief reporters about the president's views of news developments, nothing can replace hearing it from the president himself.

The news conference is the only forum in our society where a president can be questioned on a regular basis and held accountable. It is a privilege — and an indispensable mechanism — for reporters to be able to question a president. This is the democratic process at its best.

John F. Kennedy was the first president to hold live televised news conferences. Those events were held in the cavernous State Department auditorium and they gave TV viewers the opportunity to see how a president reacts under interrogation. Kennedy used his ready wit to deflect tough questions, and viewers enjoyed the give-and-take.

President Lyndon Johnson detested televised news conferences because he felt they never showed him at his best. He preferred impromptu news conferences in unusual settings. Many were held on his front lawn at the LBJ ranch in Texas. He loved to stage them at different sites.

But his favorite form of torture was to call for his two beagles, and hurriedly summon reporters out of the pressroom to the circular driveway of the South Lawn for what we irreverently called the "Bataan Death Marches" with the dogs.

Walking at a leisurely pace, Johnson would speak in a low drawl. Reporters and cameramen would scramble to get near him on those walks. He would let his hair down about the pain of carrying on the unpopular Vietnam War. When those marches ended, he would say: "Now you know it's all off the record."

We knew he meant it was OK to write a story — just don't attribute anything in your article to the president of the United States.

Richard Nixon was masterful at news conferences, holding his own among reporters, who were called the "enemy" or the "newsies" in the Nixon White House. When the Watergate scandal broke it was a different story. In that tumultuous period, Nixon went for months without holding a news conference and when he did, the East Room seethed with hostile questioning.

Ronald Reagan usually held prime time evening news conferences. He would go off to Camp David for a weekend before a news conference, armed with briefing books the size of telephone books. The books included probable questions and proposed answers.

Both George Bush I and William Jefferson Clinton would pop into the pressroom and take questions for as long as 45 minutes to an hour. The only formality involved aides and the Secret Service agents hanging the presidential seal on the podium and placing the American and presidential flags on the platform. Both presidents were more freewheeling.

Bush performed with more ease and was more assertive the second time around. He even seemed to enjoy the banter with reporters and seemed to anticipate questions about the economy and energy, two favorite topics.

As he gains confidence, Bush undoubtedly will become more adept at fielding complex questions.

It's a two-way street. We learn from his answers and we'll always be ready with a question, no matter when he chooses to meet the press.

Bush's tax cuts having impact on Texas budget

AUSTIN — Ben "Jumbo" Atwell's Texas-shaped gravestone in the state cemetery in Austin says, "Author of Tax Bill."

Atwell, who had chaired the Texas House's tax committee, put it there in 1987, though he didn't die until 1998. He had carried several tax bills in the 1960s and 1970s, but said he'd never found a monument on the Capitol grounds "erected to somebody that had sponsored a tax bill. So I said, 'OK, I'll just do my own.'"

In Texas, proposing a tax increase can be punishable by expulsion from the Legislature. Proposing an income tax is considered a death penalty offense.

McNeely

Both Republicans and Democrats have been elected governor pledging not to raise taxes — though in more than one case they've later had to allow a tax bill to meet the state's needs.

In tight budget times this year, even the anti-tax Republican Party of Texas is seeing some mavericks stray from its gospel — and apparently retaliating.

Rep. Kip Averitt, a Republican from Waco, is co-sponsoring with Democrat Clyde Alexander of Athens a bill to raise the state's 20-cent motor fuels tax by a nickel.

On March 29, a half-page ad in Averitt's hometown paper, the Waco Tribune-Herald, was headlined:

"More Gas Taxes? We Can't Afford It."

It had a picture of Republican Gov. Rick Perry, plus his quote from a letter to legislators Feb. 12 that "given a slowing economy and uncertain economic future ... this is not the time to increase taxes." It was paid for by the Republican Party of Texas.

The governor's office said Perry had nothing to do with placing the ad. Ted Royer, press spokesman for the Republican Party of Texas, said the ad was not an attempt to intimidate fellow Republican Averitt.

"It was distributed around the state," Royer said. "Its intent was to promote the Republican agenda all around the state." But he refused to name any other city in which the ad ran.

Republicans may be well advised, however, to prepare for a flank attack as tax talk becomes more common. For while any major tax bill isn't likely to happen in this redistricting session, some Capitol observers already see the groundwork being laid for a tax hike in two years.

And the irony is that George W. Bush may be tax hikers biggest ally when that comes to pass. As whispers of the need for tax hikes evolve into public discussion, many Democratic lawmakers — and even a few Republicans — are saying Texas would be better off without Bush's tax-cut legacy.

As Bush presses for a $1.6 trillion federal tax cut, some Texas legislators glumly recall the tax cuts he got them to pass in 1997 and 1999.

That $2.6 billion loss in state revenue for 2002-3 could have leveraged enough additional federal money that the Legislature could have come much closer to meeting the state's needs in areas like Medicaid funding, said Sen. Mario Gallegos, D-Houston.

Republican Sen. Chris Harris of Arlington has proposed a constitutional amendment that would let voters roll back the Bush property tax cuts.

"Let's face it, we made a mistake two years ago, and four years ago," said Democratic Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi on the Senate floor Tuesday. "Now we're having to face the music, and now we are left holding the bag."

Next: Is Texas ripe for an income tax?

Disease puts zoos, universities and farmers on defensive

By Jay Hughes
Associated Press

Fear of foot-and-mouth disease has friendly Midwestern farmers pulling up their welcome mats. Zoos and theme parks around the country are posting warning signs. Some universities are canceling overseas exchange programs and even quarantining foreign students.

Around the nation, Americans are closely examining their own cows, hogs — even giraffes — while also watching for anybody or anything that could carry into the United States the highly contagious disease ravaging Britain's livestock.

And just in case foot-and-mouth strikes this country for the first time in more than 70 years, officials are drawing up worst-case scenarios, from destroying entire herds of cattle to mobilizing the National Guard.

"I wake up nights thinking about it," said Gene Eskew, a veterinarian for the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture. "This particular virus is the most contagious in the world."

Foot-and-mouth is dreaded because it can be transmitted so easily — by dirt on vehicle tires, clothes, shoes, even in the air.

The virus is harmless to humans but destroys animals hooves and causes mouth blisters that ruin their appetite. The United States has not had a confirmed case since 1929.

In Britain, more than a million animals have been condemned to slaughter in an attempt to contain the outbreak, and restrictions have been imposed on tourism events and the movement of animals.

The United States has already banned imports of livestock and raw meat from Europe. Now, many of the precautions are aimed at international travelers.

Zoos from New York City to Chicago are posting signs asking visitors who have been overseas recently to avoid petting zoos or other areas where they can come in close contact with animals. At the Busch Gardens theme park in Tampa, Fla., visitors step into a disinfectant shoe bath before boarding buses for tours where they can feed giraffes and get close to other exotic animals.

Many farm states are canceling agricultural tours that bring in visitors from out of town or overseas.

In Illinois' Rock River Valley, farmers are redirecting foreign tours to livestock-free attractions such as the John Deere home. Agriculture officials in Wisconsin advised farmers to stop the tradition of inviting visitors to tour the farm and have breakfast in celebration of dairy month. Officials suggested gatherings instead be held in town this June.

Phil Klink, who had 4,000 people on his farm for last year's breakfast, said that this year the fun just isn't worth the risk to his 140-cow herd. "We were looking forward to having it, but it's better to cancel it now," Klink said Thursday.

Leading agriculture universities across the Midwest are isolating students who have been abroad until the risk of contamination is over and restricting access to school farms.

Seventeen foreign students who came to the University of Minnesota began their training on farms this week after cooling their heels for eight days at a suburban St. Paul hotel.

"We had the students wash their clothes so there would be no fear of that. The host farmers were going to purchase new work shoes for them. We asked them to blow their noses quite often. Evidently the virus can reside in the respiratory system," said Steve Jones, director of the Minnesota Agricultural Student Trainee program. "By the end they were a little bored, but they understood the potential threat."

At Illinois State University, officials posted a big sign outside the university farm in Normal that reads: "STOP. Bio-Security Area. If you or an immediate family member have been out of the United States in the past 14 days, do not pass this point."

From the nation's farms to meatpacking plants, livestock handlers are double-checking to make sure the animals they deal with are disease-free.

In Kentucky, officials are inspecting cattle trucks along the interstates, checking papers for the animals' origins or any signs of foot-and-mouth. At an auction barn in Galesburg, Ill., this week, employee Rick Grappe dodged the tossing heads and flying hooves of cattle to study each animal before its sale, looking for telltale blisters on their noses.

"I don't want to see them. It would scare me and scare the whole country," Grappe said.

State officials are working with U.S. agriculture officials and law enforcement personnel to plan for any outbreak. In most cases, the state veterinarian would quarantine the affected farm and consider stopping the movement of animals within the state's borders. The herd would almost certainly be destroyed, and people, equipment and vehicles would have to be disinfected before being allowed out of the area.

West Virginia plans to call out the National Guard if an outbreak occurs there because the guard has heavy machinery that could help quickly bury the large numbers of animals likely to be slaughtered. Workers disposing of the animals would have to be quarantined until the job was done.

Trucker found guilty in deaths of 58 Chinese immigrants

By Beth Gardner
Associated Press

LONDON — A Dutch driver who watched movies and ate dinner while 58 Chinese immigrants slowly suffocated in the back of his sweltering tomato truck was convicted Thursday of manslaughter and sentenced to 14 years in prison.

The case exposed a murky underworld of smuggling gangs, known as "snakeheads," who profit from immigrants' hopes for new lives in the West.

Justice Alan Moses laid much of the blame for the tragedy squarely on the shoulders of driver Perry Wacker, 32.

"You took no care for the people in the trailer in that confined space," Moses told Wacker, of Rotterdam, as he sentenced him at Maidstone Crown Court. "When you closed the vent you deprived them of the air they needed to stay alive. You did not once check on them."

Wacker, also convicted of four counts of conspiracy, swallowed hard but otherwise showed no reaction.

Ying Guo, 29, of South Woodford, England, a Chinese interpreter who served as the victims' British contact, was found guilty of one count of conspiracy to smuggle immigrants and sentenced to six years in prison.

Prosecutors said 27 of the dead were carrying Guo's telephone number.

"They looked to you for guidance, you failed them," the judge said.

Wacker and Guo had pleaded innocent.

The dead — 54 men and four women — had paid tens of thousands of dollars each for the chance to begin a new life in the West. Only two migrants survived.

Claude Moraes, former director of the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants, said hundreds risk their lives each week trying to enter Europe.

"The smuggling of humans has become as profitable as drugs," prosecutor Karen Wiseman said. "This trade hinges on the promise that at the end of the journey the illegal immigrants are heading for a better life. Tragically for these 58 victims, commercial gain took precedence over human life."

Shocked port officials in Dover, England, found the lifeless bodies packed with a shipment of tomatoes in a hot, nearly airless container that had just crossed the English Channel by ferry from Zeebrugge, Belgium, on June 18.

Prosecutors said Wacker sealed the immigrants' fate during the voyage when he closed the container's only air vent to muffle any noise. He then went to the upper decks for a meal and a movie, without checking on his human cargo during the five-hour voyage, they said.

"This was a callous and calculated act to ensure no one could hear this human cargo," Wiseman said.

Wacker testified at the six-week trial that he did not know the Chinese were there, and said he did not shut the vent. He claimed to have taken the driving job from a friend of a friend without asking questions because he needed money.

Prosecutors said he took an active part in the smuggling effort, shopping for the truck, the trailer, and the load of tomatoes that was used for camouflage.

One survivor, Ke Shi Guang, 22, said at the trial that the group was calm until oxygen ran short.

"They started panicking after about two to three hours because the vent was shut and there was no air," he testified. "Some people removed tomatoes and tried to kick open the doors. There was also a lot of shouting and screaming, but nobody came to help."

Kent police said many of the victims apparently became resigned to death.

"They settled down, held hands and ate tomatoes because, in China it is believed that you should not die on an empty stomach. You should not be a hungry ghost," the police statement said.

Port workers gave gruesome accounts of discovering the corpses. Freight supervisor Darren Bailey described intense heat in the truck, and said it took him a moment to realize what he was seeing.

"I thought the floor was covered in fallen pallets," he testified. "After taking a proper look, I realized it was covered with bodies."

Nine defendants — six from Holland and three Turks — are on trial in the Netherlands, charged with manslaughter or assisting in manslaughter.

Dutch authorities say they were hired to handle the immigrants' transit from the Netherlands to Britain — described by prosecutors as the third such shipment by the gang in six months.

China has moved in recent months to crack down on the snakeheads. More than 400 people were arrested last year, the biggest number yet, China's official news agency said. It said the alleged leader of the gang that dispatched the group to Dover was picked up in January.

SPY KIDS

Family film draws Midlanders to box office

By Georgia Temple
Entertainment Writer

In 3,104 locations opening weekend, "Spy Kids" averaged $8, 552 at the box office per location. In Midland, at Tall City 10, the pint-sized secret agents brought in more than the average take at theaters across the country.

"It was our biggest movie and made $10,000 for the weekend," said Chris Lauritzen, a manager at Tall City 10. "The next movie that came close to it was 'Someone Like You,' and it did $5,000 less than 'Spy Kids.'"

Nationwide, the film grossed $26.5 million, reported The Associated Press.

"The best March opening ever — that's what they said on the radio this morning," said Tom Laney, who writes the Parent to Parent movie column in the Reporter-Telegram.

Both Ms. Lauritzen and Laney have seen the film.

"The kids will really like it," Ms. Lauritzen said. "It's a good family movie."

"It is so-o good," Laney said. "This is the first really great children's movie since last year's 'Chicken Run.' This is a Dimension film, too, and Dimension Films are the incredible bad guys that gave the world 'Scary Movie.' And to see Dimension Films as producers and then sit through what turned out to be a wholesome and pro-family film, renewed my faith in the industry — almost."

The film is the creation of Texas filmmaker Robert Rodriguez who first came to the attention of Hollywood in the early 1990s with his first feature-length film, "El Mariachi," which he wrote, directed, photographed, edited and sound-recorded for $7,000. The film won the Audience Award for best dramatic film at the 1993 Sundance Film Festival.

Then the San Antonio native wrote, directed and edited the film "Roadracers" (1994) starring David Arquette and Salma Hayek for Showtime's Rebel Highway Series. His next feature updated "El Mariachi" and introduced American audiences to Antonio Banderas, who starred opposite Ms. Hayek. Banderas again worked with Rodriguez in his Miramax/Dimensions Films "Spy Kids," which was written and directed by Rodriguez and produced by Rodriguez and his wife, Elizabeth Avellan.

"What I love about 'Spy Kids' is that it's an espionage adventure for the whole family, but the real action heroes are the kids," Banderas said in the film's production notes, aptly entitled "How to be a Spy," author unknown. "They go off on a James Bond-style quest to save their parents and the world. Along the way, they not only get to use incredible gadgets, they use true bravery and imagination to face the bad guys."

"Spy Kids" marks the third collaboration between Rodriguez and Banderas. The two also worked together on "The Misbehavers" in 1995, one of the four segments of Miramax Films' "Four Rooms."

'El Mariachi' director plays different tune

NEW YORK — Just because you make an edgy shoot-em-up at age 23 doesn't mean you're an edgy shoot-em-up filmmaker. Robert Rodriguez wants the world to know that.

An icon in the independent film world for making 1992's "El Mariachi" for the low, low price of $7,000, Rodriguez comes out this week with a family film featuring a big-name cast and loads of special effects, "Spy Kids."

Now 32 and a father of three young boys, Rodriguez says this is the movie he always wanted to make.

"Spy Kids" stars Antonio Banderas and Carla Gugino as married ex-spies who get kidnapped by the devious host of a children's television show (Alan Cumming), and their children (Alexa Vega and Daryl Sabara) must rescue them and foil his evil plot. It's fast-paced, colorful and surprisingly smart.

"I really wanted to do a really big, cool, family action and adventure movie like the ones I grew up with like 'Escape to Witch Mountain' and 'Willy Wonka' and 'Chitty Chitty Bang Bang,'" he says during a recent interview, kicking back on a couch in green cargo pants and a baggy gray T-shirt.

Growing up in San Antonio, the third of 10 children, Rodriguez started making movies starring his brothers and sisters in his backyard at age 12. As he got Following that project, Rodriguez teamed up with Quentin Tarantino on "From Dust Till Dawn" (1996) for Dimension Films and then made, again for Dimension Films, "The Faculty" in 1998. In some ways, the over-the-top melodrama that was "Desperado" and the wacky bad-meets-worse tale that unfolds in "From Dust Till Dawn" are forerunners of the out-of-this-world spy caper in Rodriguez's latest adventure.

"I actually turned to my daughter and said, "'Willie Wonka' Part 2,' because the Floop character that has the children's show is just as bizarre and mildly disturbing as some of the chocolate factory scenes," said Laney. "Gene Wilder played Willie Wonka with a subtly scary kind of touch that I didn't really expect. It's not evil scary so much as it is that you never really know whether to trust this guy and what's going to happen next."

Alan Cumming plays techno-genius Fegan Floop, whose children's program enthralls Juni Cortez (Daryl Sabara), the son of the world's two greatest super spies, Gregorio (Banderas) and Ingrid (Carla Gugino) Cortez.

"'Spy Kids' takes parents and kids into a magical world filled with outrageous villains, virtual reality wizardry and genetically transmogrified creations," Cumming said in the film's production notes. "I think it will be a blast just to look at."

The film also has two bright youngsters ready to rescue their parents from danger.

"They're real sharp," said Laney. "The thing I thought was amazing was that they found a girl who looks like Sara Gilbert from the early 'Roseanne' Show. It was a terrible show, but she was one of the highlights of it — and John Goodman. And the curly headed, redhead boy took me back to 'The Partridge Family' and Danny Bonaduce. I wonder if they were selected partly for that familiarity factor? Not to diminish their own acting skills. They both did a great job, but I wonder if they wanted their looks to resonate with the adults' memories."

When the going gets tough and the adults have failed, Carmen and Juni refuse to quit. Carmen sums up the solution when she says, "Never send a grown-up to do a kid's job."

She proves her point when she and her brother — the "Spy Kids" — are able to go where no adult spy has safely gone before.

"It's a fantastic film," Laney said. "The PG rating is just for karate violence, which is milder than many TV shows, in stark contrast to the PG rated 'See Spot Run,' which was filled with disgusting potty humor and a running gag about the dog biting off a mobster's testicle. I was really happy to see this one deliver a legitimate PG film. It's very funny for kids at every age and adults, too. It's a film that you will not regret taking your kids to see."

older and studied at the University of Texas at Austin, he kept making movies about kids — and they beat out dark, brooding works to win film contests.

His first film, "Bedhead," a short he made in 1991 starring his four youngest siblings, is about a little girl with psychic powers who torments her brother.

But it's his first feature, "El Mariachi," that put Rodriguez on the indie film map.

After eloping to Venezuela at 21 with his college sweetheart, Elizabeth Avellan, Rodriguez formed Los Hooligans Productions with his bride.

He raised money for the film by working as a paid subject in a clinical experiment at a drug research center. He wrote, directed, shot and edited every frame of the story of a mariachi who goes to a Mexican border town looking for work and is mistaken for a killer.

Then Rodriguez walked away with the audience award at the 1993 Sundance Film Festival.

"When I made 'Mariachi,' the only reason I even made it an action film was because the video market I was making it for wanted an action film. And when Columbia bought that and wanted to remake it as 'Desperado,' I said, 'I'll do that but I want you to include my short film 'Bedhead' on the videotape so people know that I'm gonna do something other than action movies,'" Rodriguez says.

After 1995's "Desperado," which also starred Banderas, Rodriguez wrote, directed and edited one of the four segments of "Four Rooms" later that year. He teamed up with Quentin Tarantino on 1996's "From Dusk Till Dawn," a vampire comedy that co-starred Harvey Keitel and George Clooney. And in 1998, Rodriguez directed the teen thriller "The Faculty" starring Elijah Wood, Josh Hartnett and Jon Stewart.

Making bigger films, including "Spy Kids," changes Rodriguez's appearance in the independent film world, "but not for valid reasons," says Harry Knowles, creator of the Austin-based "Ain't It Cool News" film Web site.

"Robert's an incredibly smart filmmaker. Instead of saying, 'OK, I'm going to make small action films in the under-$18 million category for the rest of my life,' Robert has decided to diversify a bit to possibly help himself get to a stronger position of power in terms of having control of his projects in a complete and total way," Knowles says.

But John Pierson, author of "Spike, Mike, Slackers & Dykes: A Guided Tour Across a Decade of American Independent Cinema," sees Rodriguez's career as being more about making genre films than independent films.

Pierson acknowledges that making "El Mariachi" for just $7,000 was "a totally iconic moment in the history of independent film in the '90s."

"I would never take anything away from that," he says. "He has extremely deft visual directing skills."

But, he adds, "Independent film to me is about something else."

Rodriguez says his main intention with all his films, including the home movies he now makes at his Austin area ranch with his kids — 5-year-old Rocket, 3-year-old Racer and 2-year-old Rebel — is to entertain.

"All of the independent people who say they're independent, they didn't make their movies by themselves. I did. I was the whole crew," he says, laughing.

"I mean if you really looked at ('El Mariachi'), the only reason it seemed arty was because it was in Spanish. But if you spoke Spanish you realized, this is just a cheesy exploitation movie about a guy with a guitar case who becomes a gunman.

"It was total cheese. I was just having fun with it."

Salma Hayek to portray Frida Kahlo in movie

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican actress Salma Hayek said Thursday she will portray artist Frida Kahlo in a biographical movie, ending a tug-of-war for the role among Hollywood divas.

Hayek beat out stars like Jennifer Lopez and Madonna, who had expressed interest in playing the Mexican artist. The Miramax movie, tentatively titled "Frida Kahlo," will start filming this weekend at locations around Mexico City, Hayek told a news conference.

Kahlo died in 1954 at age 47 after a long series of illnesses. She was twice married to muralist Diego Rivera, who will be played by actor Alfred Molina.

Confined to a wheelchair for much of her life by injuries suffered in a trolley car accident, she nonetheless blazed a path as a painter and political activist. Her circle of friends included communist leader Leon Trotsky.

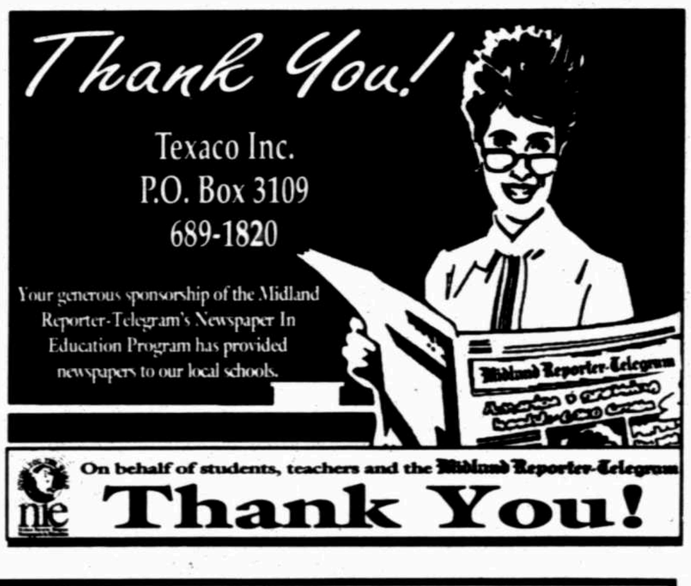

"Frida Kahlo was always ahead of her times. She had a great individuality," Hayek said. "She had a broken body but an indestructible spirit."

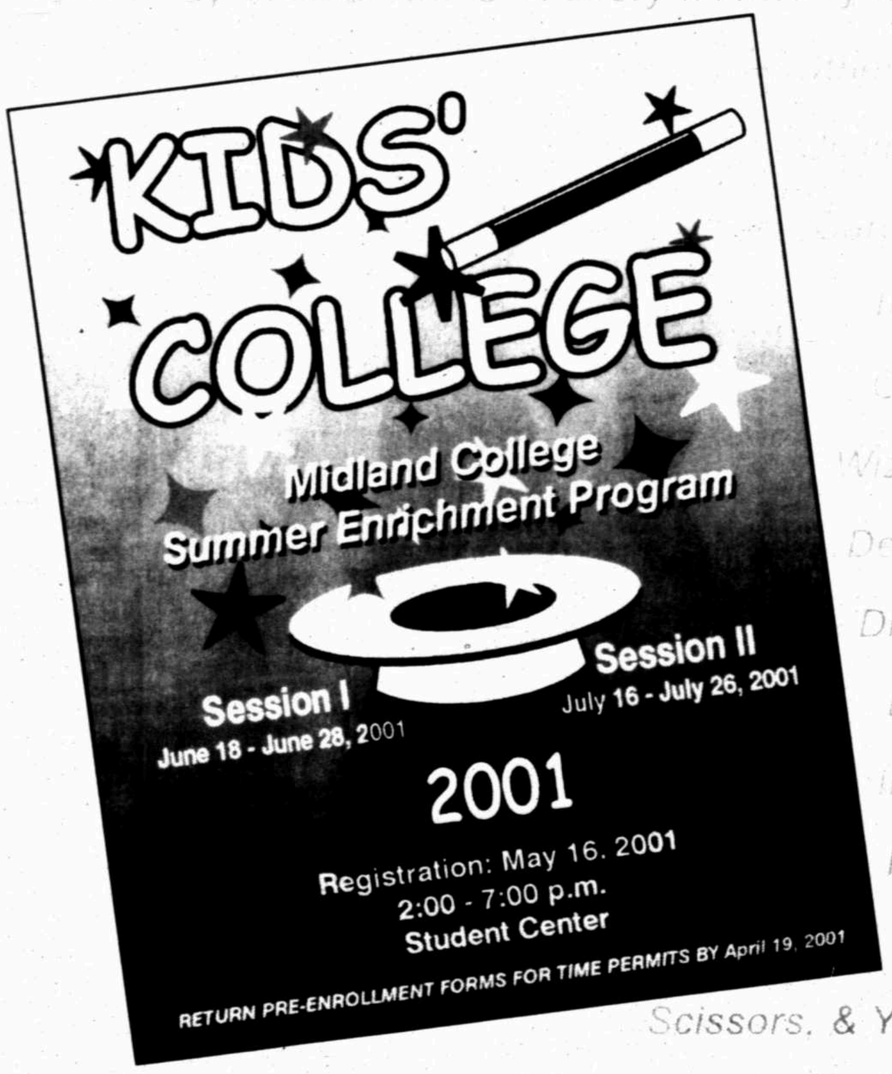

In her self-portraits, Kahlo brutally bared her physical and emotional suffering, showing herself wounded and bleeding or as a deer pierced with arrows.

Madonna reportedly expressed interest in the role as early as 1992.

JESUS CHRIST SUPERSTAR

Some theatrical productions are more fitting at different times of the year. This is the case of "Jesus Christ Superstar." Offered to us last Lenten weekend by the students of Trinity School Choir, this musical gives us a different look at the last week of the life of Christ through the eyes of Judas Iscariot. How would it feel to be told you will betray Jesus by Jesus?

This strong production musically was overseen by Darryl Knapp, who has been musical director of many shows at Midland Community Theatre. It is always a pleasure to work with a talent like his. The actual stage direction was a joint effort of two of the cast member students — Daniel Hartman, who also played Jesus and Dan Wilson who played Judas. Direction is a daunting task for any show, made even more so when one is one of its stars.

Designed by Michael Jerrod Moore, the set was a modern art museum turned into Jerusalem. The patrons were transported back 2,000 years by lights and flown-in hints of other set pieces, an effective use of white flats and lighting. Especially effective was the crucifixion scene, impressive Jerrod!

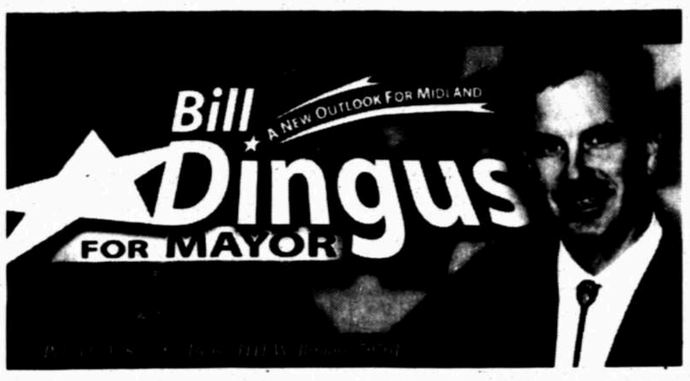

The costumes reminded me a little of the movie by the same name, modern-day street people wearing a crown here and a cape there, but rag tag otherwise. I particularly loved the "gold lame and black leather" clad King Herod!

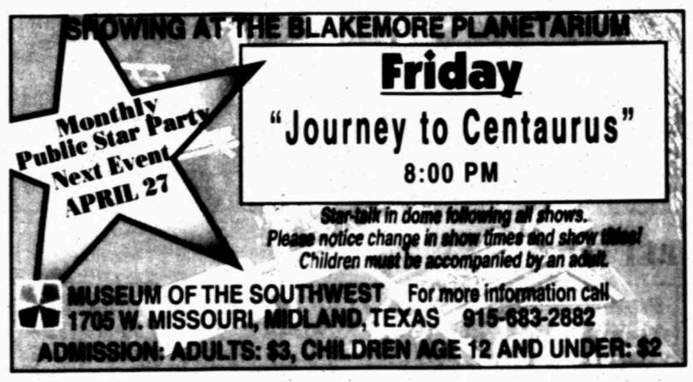

The choreographer was Sarah Pilgrim, a junior at Midland High School. Dance in a play like this is more movement than any particular style, much like a music video style — effective.

There was a great deal of talent on the stage of the Yucca on Friday night. Trinity School has a lot of which to be proud. The cast was made up of more than just its choir members. The sound from the stage was strong and committed to the words and emotions of the script. One could comment Hartman sounded a lot like Ted Neely, the Jesus Christ from the movie, who was called by critics "the screaming Jesus." You have to remember this is not opera, not a musical in the traditional sense; IT IS A ROCK OPERA. What did you expect — Gilbert and Sullivan? Hartman does a good job with the lead. There is good dynamic between him and the rest of the cast. I mention this because in a role like his it would be easy to hog the limelight, it is almost hard not to.

Vocally Hartman, Dan Wilson as Judas Iscariot and Kelly Rathbone as Mary Magdalene, Nic Vascocu as Pontius Pilate, Jay Rathbone's King Herod, and Aaron Timko's menacing Caiaphas show the audience a great deal of talent. The rest of the cast is right up their in the same category. These are only some of the wonderful cast members. All in all, a well-done production.

Pamela C. Allen, a 15-year member of the Midland Reporter-Telegram staff, has been involved in all aspects of live theater since 1963 from finding and making props to producing.

'60 Minutes' man says campaign finance should be called bribery

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. — "60 Minutes" founder and executive producer Don Hewitt thinks a change in semantics would help eliminate the influence of big money in politics.

Terms like "campaign finance reform" are too mind-numbing, he said. "If you dealt with it as bribery, you could probably put an end to it."

Hewitt, 78, will be in Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo on Tuesday for a media forum entitled "Television Under Fire."

In a telephone interview with The Tribune of San Luis Obispo, he said the three major networks should combine their news staffs to avoid repeats of November's election-night debacle, when all three called Al Gore the presidential winner, then switched to George W. Bush before calling the race too close to call.

Competition to be first to call the election led to the mistakes, Hewitt said. Combining news staffs would lead to better decisions and expand the networks' ability to report, he said.

Hewitt began working for CBS in 1948 and started "60 Minutes" 20 years later. Among the television news innovations credited to him are the use of cue cards, the use of two cameras to avoid talking-head monotony and the term "anchor."

LOS ANGELES — Leonard Nimoy is doing his part to ensure that Griffith Observatory lives long and prospers.

The actor best known as Mr. Spock on "Star Trek" and his wife, Susan, have donated $1 million to refurbish the 66-year-old Los Angeles landmark.

"I think it's of cosmic consequence," said Griffith Observatory Director Edwin C. Krupp. "There's something really appealing about Leonard Nimoy's professional career and being able to bring it into this space."

The donation is the first contribution by an individual to the renovation effort, which has acquired about two-thirds of the $63 million it needs from corporations, foundations and public money. The face lift is scheduled to begin next year and be completed by late 2004.

"By observing the sky and pondering our place in the universe, people gain a new perspective on their daily lives," Nimoy said in a statement. "Griffith Observatory gives its visitors that opportunity. It is a Los Angeles icon, one which we need to ensure will be here for generations to come."

About 2 million people visit the observatory each year to view the universe through its 12-inch Zeiss refractor telescope and planetarium. Millions more have seen its bronze art deco dome in a multitude of films, including the switchblade scene in James Dean's "Rebel Without a Cause" in 1955.

LOS ANGELES — A former girlfriend of Keanu Reeves died when she lost control of her Jeep Cherokee, struck three parked cars and was tossed from the sport utility vehicle as it overturned.

Reeves' publicist, Cheryl Maisel, said the actor will not comment publicly on the death of Jennifer Syme, 28, of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles County Coroner's Office investigator Lt. Cheryl MacWillie said Reeves called the office after hearing of Syme's death on Monday. He offered to identify the body, but was told positive identification already had been made using her driver's license, MacWillie said.

Syme was alone behind the wheel of the Jeep at 6:15 a.m. when she was killed near Highway 101 outside Hollywood, MacWillie said. She wasn't wearing a seat belt, was thrown from the vehicle and died at the scene.

The cause of death has not been determined, pending toxicology test results, said Lt. Fred Corral of the coroner's office.

Syme was an actress who had a small role in the 1997 David Lynch film "Lost Highway." She and Reeves reportedly broke up last year.

PARIS — British actress Charlotte Rampling will open this year's Cannes Film Festival and present the awards when the nearly two-week extravaganza closes May 20.

Rampling is bilingual and last month received an honorary Cesar, France's equivalent of the Oscars. She stars in the French film "Sous Le Sable" ("Under the Sand"), now in theaters here.

Director-actress Maria de Madeiros will preside over the jury of the Golden Camera prize awarded to the best full-length first film, Festival President Gilles Jacob said in a statement released Wednesday.

Erick Zonca, who directed "The Dreamlife of Angels," will preside over the jury of the Golden Palm of short-length films, the statement said.

LOS ANGELES — Actor-director Billy Bob Thornton says he's cutting a country album.

"I'm not doing this as a hobby," Thornton said. "I really love music. And really care about it. I hope everybody listens to it in the right spirit. I mean I wrote the songs right out of my gut."

Thornton, who directed and starred in 1996's "Sling Blade" and won an Oscar for writing the screenplay, said he's always been interested in music. He cast country singer Dwight Yoakam as an abusive boyfriend in "Sling Blade."

"I play with a lot of friends of mine and stuff, just messing around, and write a song every now and then. I had always wanted to do it but I wanted to wait for the right time. I wanted to wait until the music business was interested in me doing it. ... I wanted it totally separate from the movies."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, April 6, 2001:

Others recognize your talent for leadership this year. Success can become a reality when you lay the groundwork, so pay attention to details. You can include others in your plans without relinquishing control, but keep your best ideas to yourself until you work out the details. Negotiations take on a keen edge in the fall. Wait for the right time to present your case. Work takes up much of your time, but the rewards should be satisfying. Whether single or committed, relationships can pleasantly surprise you in November. Indulge that special someone in December to make up for past neglect. VIRGO keeps you on track with mundane details.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You'll enjoy taking the lead. Authority figures might object to risky or daring enterprises. Though you usually prefer independence, a partnership might suit you now. Focus on a talent. Speak up when you must, but speak gently. Tonight: Let romance fill the air.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Indulge your sweet tooth a bit if you have a craving. You could be so wrapped up in your own pleasure that you neglect a loved one. Be sensitive about it. Perhaps you can find an activity you both enjoy. Share generously. Tonight: Conversation lightens the mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Rushing through your work can cause confusion. You want to do everything in a big way now. Finish one project before beginning another. You can only juggle so many things at one time. Take time to smell the roses. Tonight: Someone needs to have a serious talk with you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ If you're patient with a difficult project, even complex subjects won't get you down. Answers come when you least expect them. Expect interruptions, but don't spend too much time away from your main focus. Tonight: Necessary choices.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You might have to make peace with someone before you can focus on your goals. Then, get busy and do your thing. Recognition pleases you, and rest assured that your accomplishments will be acknowledged. When you call the shots, others will follow. Tonight: Your temper could get you in trouble again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Your charm and wit get you through the day, and speed and accuracy help you wrap up matters for the week. If you encounter delays, you should be able to handle them graciously. Someone must put the stamp of approval on your work, but you can wait patiently. Tonight: Laugh at yourself first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ An experience might make you feel reticent in social situations. Avoiding people will not help your situation right now. What are you afraid of? Take a chance and join the group. Relationships are your forte. History does not always repeat itself. Tonight: You need a break.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ If work needs to be done, tackle it early. Chipping away at that big project will bring it down to a manageable size. Avoid people who make you feel uncomfortable. Someone might be jealous about what you have accomplished. Tonight: Consider the alternatives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ With determination, you can get the job done. Rely on your subconscious or your spiritual side for help. A social engagement awaits, but you have work to do first. Take small breaks when you notice your mind wandering. Tonight: Tie up loose ends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You might have to take care of unpleasant duties. Make sure you have all the facts before you act. Shortcuts can come back to haunt you. Knowledge breeds confidence. Being in control works if you don't act prematurely. Tonight: Get past your emotions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Others can hamper your ambition. Jealousy might be a factor. Success requires someone to embrace your point of view. You need another person on your side. A breakthrough occurs when you least expect it. It might be a steppingstone toward your goal. Tonight: Work on important relationships.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Inspiration can reach a new level. Visualize, and carefully consider ideas that pop into your head. If you expect technology to stump you, it will. Seek out an expert. You don't have to be all things to all people. Trust in yourself. Tonight: An "a ha!" experience.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

Looking at all four hands, it is easy to see that three no-trump is unbeatable on this lie of the cards. Win the opening lead with the king of diamonds, lead a club to the king, which holds, and continue with a low club to the ace. That gives you one spade trick, two hearts, two diamonds and five clubs, and the opponents can do nothing about it. But what if East holds the 10 of clubs, not the ace? West ducks the first club lead and East wins the low club continuation to return a diamond, and down you go. If, however, you play clubs from the top and the cards are as in the diagram, West's diamonds will be established while that defender still has a club entry.

North-South were playing that a two-over-one response was game-forcing, hence South's rebid of two no-trump. Since North's spade rebid usually shows a six-card suit on this sequence, North chose to raise to three no-trump rather than bid such a moth-eaten suit a third time.

Declarer correctly won the opening lead in dummy with the king, East following with the four, leaving the ace-10 tenace in the closed hand. Since South needed only four club tricks to come to nine tricks, the contract was assured if East could be kept off lead — West could not attack diamonds without giving declarer an extra stopper in the suit.

As is usually the case, once you have diagnosed the malady, the cure is simple to find. At trick two declarer led the table's club and, when East followed low, inserted the nine! East won cheaply enough but, since a diamond return was out, West shifted to a spade. Having found the winning line, declarer was not going wrong now. Since the defenders could collect only two spade tricks, dummy's ace was called for, the closed hand was entered with the king of hearts, and the king of clubs was led to force out the ace. The diamond return was taken by the ace, and declarer cashed out nine tricks.

Prescription bills rise for elderly as HMOs retreat

By James Hannah
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio — Martha Beery takes 25 pills every day. The 87-year-old woman, who broke her back in 1999, has osteoporosis and emphysema. She spends her days at her daughter's house breathing with the aid of an oxygen tank.

Beery is one of millions of Medicare recipients who get no reimbursement for prescription drugs.

"I don't have any help from anybody," she said. "I don't know how people do it."

Her predicament — and the thought of older people doing without medicine — is the crux of a national debate over whether Medicare should be overhauled or given a quick fix proposed by President Bush.

On Jan. 1, Beery and 70,000 other elderly or disabled Ohioans were affected by health-maintenance organizations either dropping out of the Medicare program or reducing their service areas. The insurance companies that run HMOs blame the pullback on inadequate federal reimbursement, competition, a lack of enrollees and the inability to maintain a network of doctors.

Beery paid an average of $226 a month for prescriptions, with an Aetna U.S. Healthcare HMO providing some drug coverage. Now that the HMO has withdrawn from the Medicare program in Ohio, Beery's out-of-pocket prescription bill is about $700 a month.

Her daughter, Barbara Dudrow, has spent a lot of time trying to find a better plan.

"It has been a problem," said Dudrow, a retired schoolteacher who has been battling cancer. "But who I really feel sorry for are the people who don't have the help, don't know where to go to get coverage."

Bush released a budget proposal Feb. 28 that includes money to start immediately helping some seniors pay for prescription drugs.

The coverage is limited to people 65 and older who have incomes below $11,600. For elderly who live off less than $15,000, the government would pay a portion of the drug coverage fees. Some seniors who spend more than $6,000 a year on medicines would also get their premiums covered — regardless of their incomes.

Bush's plan would not help Beery because Social Security, earnings from a rental property, plus interest and dividends put her annual income at about $22,000.

Congressional Democrats are pushing a broader proposal to cover 80 percent of prescriptions for all Medicare recipients. Bush promised a Medicare overhaul in his campaign, but maintains that the quickest way to help the most vulnerable seniors pay for medicine is to give money to the states to fund their own drug-assistance programs.

In his State of the State address, Gov. Bob Taft proposed making a discount prescription drug plan available to seniors through the state's Golden Buckeye Card program. Under the proposal, which was introduced in the Ohio House in February, seniors could get up to 30 percent off the price of prescriptions by using the card's customer base to negotiate lower prices.

Last year, 118 of the nation's Medicare HMOs chose to drop or reduce coverage

'Golden Rule' can help establish a happy marriage

By Jim May

DEAR FAMILY: I read your article in the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Friday, and I find the articles interesting and sometimes discuss some aspects of an article with my wife and/or daughter. As a father, grandfather and now a great-grandfather who has been married for nearly 52 years (all to the same woman), please let me pass on to you a copy of a short article I found in a tract publisher's magazine a few years back.

May

I think the article presents information that will help any couple, from those courting on up to those of us who have been married a long time. Please read and consider the article, "How To Have A Happy Marriage." If possible, print it in your column. As indicated at the bottom of the write-up the author is not known and the material has not been copyrighted.

Actually the essence of the wife's ideas is well covered in Matthew 7:12, the "Golden Rule" as spoken by Jesus Christ. No wonder her idea works so well! HAPPILY MARRIED

DEAR HAPPILY: Thank you for your letter and the article. I do not have the space to share it in its entirety but I can share an edited version.

"At first it (my marriage) was pretty bad. My husband's every action was inconsiderate — or at least I thought so. How is an unloved person supposed to act? I gave much thought to this word 'love.' Would God expect us to love one another if it is not in our power to do so, or, if so, would He enable us?

"One day I began to realize what God could do for me. I finally faced the facts that I might not feel loved, but why could I not show love to others? From that moment on I began to behave as if I did feel loved. 'What will I do for my husband today?' I would ask myself. I began doing little kindnesses. I tried to comfort him when he came home tired and harassed. I met him at the door with a smile. I listened to him.

"He began behaving as though he were living with someone who loved him. And I began to notice a change in my own feelings. He was not at all like I had concluded. I was beginning to feel a new kind of love for him. When I began to obey God by showing love, it was really I who benefited. Only this week my teen-age son said, 'All of my friends say that I have it so good.' 'Why?' I asked. 'Because you and dad really like each other,' he said. 'You would be surprised how many of their parents don't get along too hot.'

"So my answer to people who are stuck in a marriage that is loveless is show love. 'Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap ... And let us not weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.'"

There is much wisdom in this author's writing, and it is not restricted by gender — it works as well for husbands as for wives. Henri Nouwnen elegantly conveys the idea of God's gift of love for us in his book, "Life of the Beloved." Treating our spouses, children, family, friends, co-workers and so on as we want to be treated will change us and can change them. As someone else observed, "This law (the Golden Rule) of Jesus demands a standard of conduct that surpasses what is normally expected because it is addressed to those who possess a fullness of life which is the gift of God's spirit."

The Center for Children and Families offers the following tips on effectively listening to our children:

■ Communication begins by listening and indicating you hear the child's feelings and meanings.

■ Effective listening involves establishing eye contact and posture that clearly indicate you are listening.

■ Avoid nagging, criticizing, threatening, lecturing, probing and ridiculing.

■ Treat your children the way you treat your best friend.

■ Mutual respect involves accepting the child's feelings.

■ Reflective listening involves hearing the child's feelings and meanings and stating this so the child feels understood.

■ Learn to give open responses that accurately reflect what the child feels and means.

■ Avoid closed responses that ignore the child's feelings, relaying that we have not heard or understood.

■ Let the child learn. Resist the impulse to impose your solutions.

BILLS: 39 Ohio counties don't have Medicare HMOs beginning Jan. 1. That affected 934,000 — or about 12 percent — of the beneficiaries. Ohio had 70,000 recipients affected, trailing only Texas, Pennsylvania and Florida, according to the U.S. Health Care Financing Administration.

Currently, 39 of Ohio's 88 counties have no Medicare HMOs.

Although everyone dropped from a Medicare HMO can return to the basic fee-for-service Medicare, it generally does not cover prescriptions outside a hospital. Supplemental Medicare policies, so-called Medigaps, either do not cover prescriptions or charge high premiums for coverage.

The average premium for moderate Medigap coverage that includes prescriptions is $1,917 a year, according to the Commonwealth Fund, a nonprofit foundation for health. Extensive coverage carries an annual premium of $3,252. Those willing to pay have to find an insurer that will accept them.

Fred Wood, 86, of Wilmington, has been looking for insurance coverage for his wife, Kathryn, since the couple's Medicare HMO pulled out at the start of the year.

The couple receive $900 a month in Social Security and pay $350 in rent. Wood, a retired real estate salesman, said he managed to find insurance coverage for himself but not his wife, who has Alzheimer's disease and requires about $125 worth of prescription drugs a month.

"I just have to pay them out of my pocket," Wood said. "That can go on for a while, but it can't go on forever because I don't have too big of savings."

Sue Bloom, director of the Senior Center in Wilmington, sees many seniors in similar straits.

The center, which is funded by state, county and private money, provides transportation, meals and benefit-assistance to the elderly of Clinton County.

"It's just been a nightmare for us," Bloom said. "A lot of the seniors will go without their medicine. They keep hoping Medicare will come through, and the new president will pass something."

In December, then-President Clinton signed a law that earmarks $10 billion for Medicare HMOs over the next five years. The money is to be used to either reduce premiums, increase benefits or retain doctors used by the HMOs.

Four HMOs have since returned to the Medicare program and began offering coverage March 1, a move that will result in coverage for 240,000 potential beneficiaries.

Amber Bloom, who visits the elderly in their homes for the Senior Center in Wilmington, said many are reluctant to use lifetime savings to pay for prescription drugs and some are forced to choose between food and medicine. During one visit, she said, a diabetic man complained of nausea and dizziness, but told her he just could not afford to pay for his prescriptions.

"It's sad," she said.

Alice Black, 73, of Wilmington, and her husband were among those who lost their HMO coverage Jan. 1. They were able to enroll in a Medigap plan for $254 a month that increases their hospital coverage from 80 percent to 100 percent. But they must pay for prescriptions themselves. Black takes pills that cost $6 apiece.

"We have a neighbor lady that pays $375 a month for her prescriptions," Black said. "We try to look at the bright side. If it uses all of our money, we can get on Medicaid. It could happen to anybody."

Black said she hopes the government acts soon.

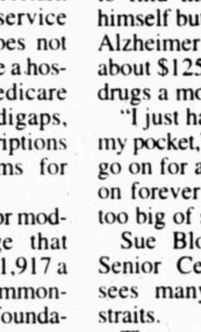

"If they don't do it before very long, we're all going to be dead," she said.

Exercise is most effective for treating fibromyalgia

"How sick I am, how sick I am; nobody knows how sick I am."

This lament can literally be true if one has a condition termed fibromyalgia (aka fibrositis). For many years 2 percent to 5 percent of the populace were negatively classified as being neurotic because they continuously complained of pain in muscles and joints along with stiffness, insomnia and headache without any demonstrable physical disorder or laboratory evidence of abnormalities.

Page

Around 1990, the criteria for diagnosis were finally established, namely: widespread pain in all four quadrants of the body for three months and pain in at least 11 of 18 specific tender points. These sites clustered around the neck, shoulder, chest, hip, knee and elbow. The consensus is that considerably fewer than 11 points are acceptable for diagnosis if accompanied by some associated symptoms such as fatigue, irritable bowel, sleep disorder, chronic headaches, jaw pain, numbness and tingling sensation or light headedness.

The cause remains unknown and it occurs seven times more frequently in women. Elderly patients are less likely to have headaches, anxiety, weather aggravation of symptoms, mental stress or poor sleep. Such diseases as hypothyroidism, lupus, rheumatoid arthritis and chronic infections can mimic fibromyalgia. The saving grace lies in the fact that the latter does not damage tissues and can be managed.

No specific medications exist but muscle relaxants, anti-depressants and mild tranquilizers are often used as indicated by one's physician. The best and most effective thing one can do is exercise. Start by walking slowly for five minutes and subsequently adding two minutes daily until attaining 60 minutes at least three times a week. Reduce the amount if you feel uncomfortable at any time and then gradually increase again. Dedicated souls can jog slowly or ride exercise bicycles, but the important thing is exercise in one form or another. It is this one thing that can make fibromyalgia pain go away. Extra dividends are a noble feeling plus the knowledge that you are helping your heart, lungs, bones and brain by so doing.

L'envoie: "Yesterday I do declare I felt a pain some say was never there.

It wasn't there again today — My I wish it would go away."

DEAR ABBY

'Turn it down' is battle cry for those sick of public din

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Why do television and movie directors think they must fill every moment of a show with background music? I know many others feel as I do. I am particularly bothered when the wonderful nature shows have such loud background music that it's difficult to understand the commentary. What would be wrong with simply hearing the natural sounds of nature, like the sea or the forest?

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

Many people I know dislike going into restaurants because, again, the "background" music level is so high it is impossible to converse. And forget about sitting in a movie theater. Any sound level about 90 decibels does permanent damage to one's hearing — yet studies show that practically every movie theater exceeds this damaging level by a huge margin. Ask a theater manager to turn down the volume, and you'll be told the public likes that noise. We are permanently damaging the hearing of our people. — NANETTE FABRAY MACDOUGALL, PACIFIC PALISADES, CALIF.

DEAR NANETTE: You're absolutely right, of course. But restaurants use music to discourage patrons from lingering over their meals so the table can be "turned" to accommodate another seating, which equals more profit for the restaurant. Call it modern restaurant management.

If one were to ask theater owners and managers why the volume is raised so high in movies, I'm sure the reply would be that it adds to the realism for audiences whose hearing is already impaired from rock concerts and dance clubs.

Speaking as someone with a degree of hearing loss of my own, I agree that television shows are sometimes marred because the background music overpowers the dialogue. But whether or not it will be altered depends upon the demographic the producers and station executives are trying to appeal to.

Sad to say, but the situation probably won't improve until people are able to prove in a court of law exactly where they were when their hearing was damaged.

DEAR ABBY: I am responding on behalf of the Vermont State Judiciary Committee to a recent letter from "Needs to Know," who plans to "marry" in Vermont. We would like to clarify a potential misunderstanding of our landmark civil union law. In Vermont, the institution of marriage is available only to couples of the opposite sex. However, same-sex couples may establish a "civil union," which entitles them to benefits and privileges, as well as the responsibilities, equal to those afforded to married couples.

We hope "Needs to Know," her partner, their families and friends enjoy their stay in Vermont. — JOHN F. CAMPBELL, SENATOR, WINDSOR COUNTY, CLERK, SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

DEAR SEN. CAMPBELL: Thank you for the clarification. Regardless of what you call it, your landmark civil union law is sensible and forward-thinking. I wish other states would follow your lead and allow same-sex couples who wish to be officially committed to each other the privilege of doing so. It poses no threat to "traditional" marriages and promotes responsibility and accountability between the partners.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips, aka Abigail Van Buren, and daughter Jeanne Phillips. Their column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

M.Y. Two Cents: a teen perspective of the movies

By Mike Yager

This Week: Someone Like You

There are some movies whose respective endings you just don't give away. Movies like "The Sixth Sense," or "The Godfather:Part II" need to be fully experienced from start to finish. "Someone Like You," however, is not one of these esteemed films. I'm going to go out on the limb here, ruining the movie's ending, and just flat out tell you all that Ashley Judd and Hugh Jackman end up together. I do apologize to any who are, in fact, shocked by this revelation (any who are shocked must not have seen the trailers, or any previous romantic comedy for that matter), but the movie is much more enjoyable simply knowing that fact.

The movie centers around Jane Goodale (Judd), a talent producer for an up-and-coming talk show starring Diane Roberts, played by Ellen Barkin. Jane soon falls in love with fellow producer, Ray Brown (Greg Kinnear), only to be dropped like a newborn giraffe shortly thereafter. She then begins to contemplate the physiological connection between the mating characteristics of man and their animal counterparts, taking her anguish into the print form and passing herself off as a Ph.D. in a magazine column. Her writing becomes aided by the exploits of her womanizing colleague and new roommate, Eddie (Jackman), who in turn, attempts to elevate Jane to a new understanding of the nonexistence of romance. To the audience's "surprise" however, Jane and Eddie slowly fall for each other amidst several will-they, won't-they moments.

I think a move to this type of movie was a good choice for Judd, who has her moments, but definitely shows an inexperience in comic timing, which hopefully she'll learn. For as cute and precocious as Judd seems in her first comic outing, she's inconsistent in character and attitude throughout. This is all not to mention the mediocre voice-over narration, which might as well have been a 3-year-old with a copy of The Cat in the Hat (no offense intended to any 3-year-olds reading my column).

In short, Judd falls short of leading this movie and is mainly carried by a fairly good supporting cast. Marisa Tomei, as Jane's best friend, and Barkin were both extremely under-utilized, as was Greg Kinnear, who has yet to see a worthy successing performance to "As Good As It Gets." The real star of this show, however, is Hugh Jackman, who adds all of the comic bite the rest of the cast lacked. Jackman, who most know as Wolverine in last summer's "X-Men," is calm and loose, the most natural member of the ensemble. I only wish he was in more of the movie.

As for the direction, Tony Goldwyn handles the material moderately well, but overall, it's nothing we haven't seen before. A romantic comedy really has to differentiate itself from the norm to be anything worthwhile, and Goldwyn merely sticks to the formula. The script, based on the Laura Zigman's Animal Husbandry, is intelligent enough for its purpose, but natural cliches still abound (it's hard to find a new way to say "I Love You" in every movie, so I sympathize).

Although the movie really drags when Jackman isn't there to save the day, it's a safe distance away from rubbish. An unpolished Judd earns her stripes in an unfamiliar territory, and really shows potential for the future. As for now, however, only see "Someone Like You" if you're in the mood to know exactly how the obvious transpires.

Bottom Line: C+ A predictable, but halfway entertaining fix for your romantic hunger.

Midland Reporter-Musicgram

By Max Howard

Many years ago I saw Glenn Yarbrough in concert at Odessa College. It was a good presentation, excellent music and a most enjoyable evening in the realm of good listening. However, Glenn Yarbrough not with the Limeliters placed that concert in a separate division of music. It was good but the Limeliters, with Glenn, fortunately had a gimmick that separated them from other folk groups at the time. I can't define the difference and who cares anyway. Their gimmick was a good and distinctively different as the Kingston Trio's and The New Christy Minstrels' in that same musical era.

But the Limeliters survived Glenn's departure from the group and many fans may have assumed with Lou Gottlieb's passing in 1996 it would be the end of that particular blend of music. Well, "not so" we are told and members of Midland's Community Concerts will have the chance to use their own judgment April 21st when the Limeliters, of today, are in concert at the Midland High School Auditorium.

Alex Hassilev is the only original member still with the group and he will be singing with Rick Dougherty and Bill Zorn as they continue presenting the traditional music associated with the group. I, again, am told "the trademark sound is still there" and it was a musical product that made the group a household name. I expect an excellent evening of listening as the Limeliters' saga continues.

Midland Community Concerts will have their 2001-2002 schedule posted and memberships for next year will be available. Community Concerts is traditionally one of the best entertainment values pricewise and is for the entire family. Also, if you are not a member but join for next season at this concert you will be the guest of the group for this offering.

A few weeks ago the West Texas Jazz Society presented the Keter Betts Trio to a most appreciative audience at the Yucca. I hope you were in attendance as the entire evening offered a good variety of entertainment encompassing a lot of good music, spotlight offerings and musician personality samplings that made the end product one very pleasant and exciting "Evening at the Yucca." The WTJS calendar of concerts for the remainder of the year is still being processed but the tentative offerings promise as rousing a summer and fall as the first of this year has been.

Also, on the subject of the West Texas Jazz Society, the annual Collaboration Jazz Festival is on schedule. The sessions will begin May 18th and continue through the 19th at the Midland Hilton. This full-fledged jazz festival with 18 musicians from around the world has ticket information available at 800-458-2878.

You may not be aware this festival is "hand tailored" for the West Texas audience by the board members of the WTJS who are all from Midland-Odessa or Odessa-Midland depending on who is telling the story. That is to say "it is not your regular touring group presentation" but represents the taste of our area when good jazz is offered.

Now a quick-in-quick-out opinion of a recently re-released Sarah Vaughn album: Wonderful. It is called Sarah Vaughan's Finest Hour (on Verve) and contains some of her best recording from the Emarcy, Mercury, Roulette and Verve labels as well as some smaller independents. Selections cover the years from Misty to Dreamsville and is a very good hour-plus of sit back, relax and enjoy listening atmosphere.

Until next time remember: The world has music for those who will listen.

I am,
Max—

Red Sox teammates do their part in Hideo Nomo's no-no

By David Ginsburg
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — Pedro Martinez clicked off his cell phone and walked out of the clubhouse. When he reached the dugout and glanced at the zeros on the scoreboard, Boston's ace gasped and retreated to the dressing room.

Just doing his part to avoid jinxing Hideo Nomo's no-hitter.

"I went back in, dialed the number and kept talking," Martinez said. "I didn't want to do anything to mess it up."

When a no-hitter is in progress, tradition calls for the pitcher's teammates to avoid him in the dugout, and even saying "no-hitter" is strictly taboo.

The Red Sox adhered to all the rules Wednesday night.

Nomo sat alone, inning after inning, as he drew closer to completing his second career no-hitter, a 3-0 masterpiece against the Baltimore Orioles.

Nomo, a star in Japan before joining the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1995, speaks very little English. But he sure knows how to pitch, and his split-finger fastball was far more important against the Orioles than his ability to generate small talk.

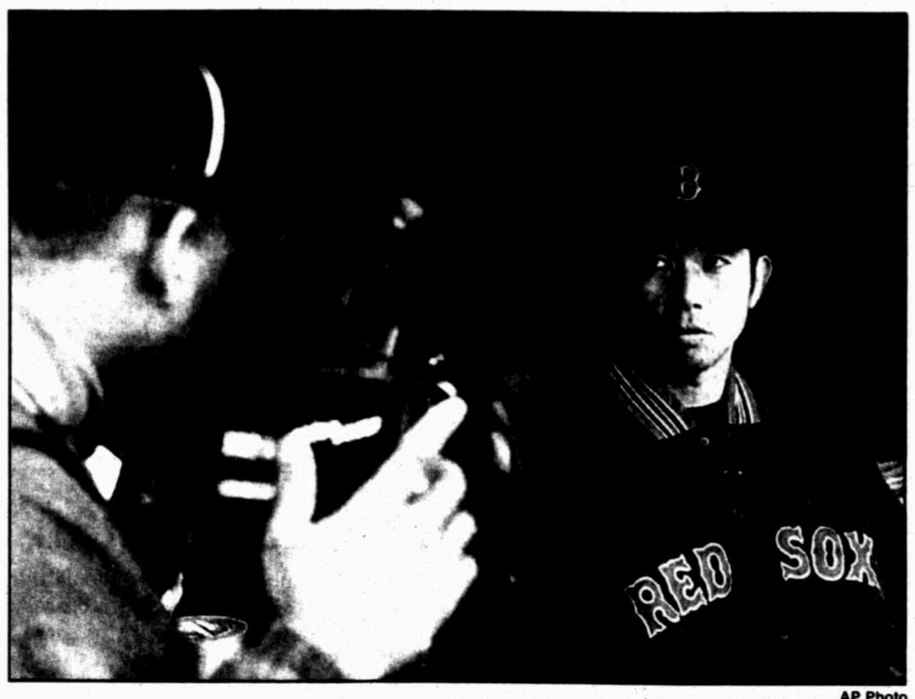

"I let him alone so he could concentrate," Boston catcher Jason Varitek said. "Our fingers did the talking. His pitches did the talking. We don't have much to talk about anyway."

Nomo has always let his hesitation windup and wicked forkball do the talking for him. He was a sensation early in his career, winning the 1995 NL rookie of the year award and reaching 500 strikeouts quicker than any pitcher in major league history.

But he appeared to lose his touch in recent years while moving from the Dodgers to the Mets, Brewers and Tigers. The Red Sox carefully weighed all other options before signing him as a free agent in December.

At 32, it seemed that his best days were behind him. But now his name stands next to Hall of Fame members Cy Young, Jim Bunning and Nolan Ryan as the only pitchers to throw no-hitters in both the American and National leagues.

DiMarco shoots 65 at Augusta as Woods' run at history takes detour

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods' run at history began with a bogey. The guys with smaller galleries and lesser-known names were left to master Augusta National on Thursday.

Chris DiMarco, who played the course for the first time three days before, shot a 7-under-par 65 for the first-round lead in the Masters.

"I don't think anybody expects me to win," he said, "except me."

Just about everyone expects Woods to win. He started out with a 70 — a bit of a letdown for the world's greatest player, considering the greens were moist and the wind barely blowing.

DiMarco was followed by Steve Stricker and Angel Cabrera, both at 66, with Phil Mickelson and Lee Janzen at 67. Then there was James Driscoll, a 23-year-old amateur and recent graduate of the University of Virginia.

He shot 68 to surprisingly find himself among the leaders.

"I'm trying not to think too much," Driscoll said. "That's what I did today. No expectations. Just line up and hit the shot."

No one faced more expectations than Woods, trying to become the first player to hold all four major professional titles at the same time.

Woods' second shot landed in a bunker, and he wound up two-putting from about 8 feet. He bounced back with three birdies on the front nine, but there was another bogey at No. 10 when his 3-foot putt did a 180-degree spin around the edge of the cup.

Mickelson, expected to be one of Woods' leading challengers, took advantage of the prime scoring conditions with four straight birdies on the back nine.

"I waited till I felt good with my swing before I attacked the hole," Mickelson said. "Today was the day to score low if you were going to score low. I'm sure it's going to get progressively more difficult as the week goes on."

Stricker made a run for the lead with an eagle at 13, knocking a 5-iron to 15 feet and making the putt. He followed with two straight birdies.

"I really didn't expect to come in here and shoot 6-under," said Stricker, who posted his best score in 13 rounds at Augusta.

Driscoll made the turn with a 32, equaling the lowest nine-hole score for an amateur in tournament history. He got back to 4-under by chipping in from the bunker at 16.

Chris Perry also finished at 68, as did Miguel Angel Jimenez and Kirk Triplett.

Vijay Singh, trying to become only the third player to win back-to-back Masters, was in contention with a 69.

The 32-year-old DiMarco was brilliant with his irons, sinking all eight of his birdie putts from 15 feet in for a memorable Masters debut — the best by a rookie in 11 years.

At No. 5, DiMarco put his drive in the trees but recovered with a 6-iron that landed 12 feet away. He rolled in the putt, beginning a stretch of four birdies in five holes.

"Experience is obviously very big," DiMarco said. "I would love to have three or four years behind me Sunday afternoon, or even tomorrow afternoon. But I don't, so I can't harp on the fact."

DiMarco made a couple of nice saves from the sand. At 17, he blasted out of the right bunker — barely clearing the lip — to 2 feet of the cup. While he sank the putt, many in the gallery muttered, "Who is that guy?"

A native of Huntington, N.Y., DiMarco may be one of the more obscure players at Augusta but he is coming off his best

RockHounds win season opener

Staff Report

ROUND ROCK — Midland minor league baseball teams are not usually known for their pitching. But in the Texas League season opener Thursday, the RockHounds' Aaron Harang and Eric Thompson got off to a good start in changing that perception.

Harang and Thompson combined to limit the Round Rock Express to five hits in the 'Hounds 4-1 victory. Harang (1-0) started and went five innings, allowing only a solo home run by Jason Lane in the fourth inning. Thompson got the marathon save by pitching four innnings of relief. He gave up only one hit.

The 'Hound hitters didn't exactly bury the Express pitchers, but they got the job done. Jacques Landry provided Midland's first home run of the season with a solo shot to lead off the second inning.

The 'Hounds added a run in the fourth inning on Eddy Furniss' RBI single. Lane's homer in the bottom of the inning cut the RockHounds' lead to 2-1, but Midland got some breathing room in the seventh inning on Oscar Salazar's two-run double.

Harang

Salazar

Harang gave up only four hits, including the homer, in his five innings. Thompson and Harang each struck out five Express batters. Thompson gave up a leadoff single to Royce Huffman in the ninth inning, but Thompson finished off the game quickly with a pair of strikeouts and a grounder.

Chaparrals limp into series vs. Wranglers

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Going into a big series against the Odessa College Wranglers, Midland College baseball coach Steve Ramharter would have liked for his team to be at full strength. Unfortunately for the Chaparrals, that hasn't been the case this year.

Midland College Baseball

From arm injuries to bacterial infections, the Chaps have been hit by the injury bug and hit hard. By the end of last weekend's series at Frank Phillips, in which the Chaps won three out of four, Ramharter said there were 13 players who were out or limited in some way with various injuries.

"The most I've probably seen on a team is four or five players out," Ramharter said. "But if the question is have I ever seen something like this? No."

Despite being plagued by injuries last week, the Chaps walked away from Borger with their first series win of the year in the WJCAC.

"I'm very proud of their effort to win three out of four considering the circumstances," Ramharter said.

Ramharter and his Chaps, however, won't use any excuses against the Wranglers in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference baseball series this weekend at Christensen Stadium. The series kicks off today with a doubleheader starting at noon. Another doubleheader is scheduled for noon Saturday.

"When you play a team that's as good as Odessa, you wish you could go in there at full strength,"

Chinese player makes debut with Mavericks

Associated Press

DALLAS — Wang Zhizhi has a lot to learn about playing in the NBA.

DALLAS MAVERICKS

But he's already got down one key ingredient about playing in Dallas: The Chalupa Shot.

The first NBA player born in China overcame some early communication problems to score six points and grab three rebounds as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Atlanta Hawks 108-94 Thursday night.

Juwan Howard led Dallas with 20 points and reserve Shawn Bradley had 16 points and 15 rebounds as the Mavericks moved into a tie with Utah for the fourth spot in the Western Conference. The Jazz play in Dallas on Saturday night.

Wang's eight-minute debut was highlighted by a top-of-the-key jumper for his first basket and two free throws.

However, it was a short shot by the 7-foot-1, 255-pound forward that put the Mavericks over 100 points that meant to the most to the fans because it earned them a free chalupa from Taco Bell. The basket drew the loudest roar in a night filled with cheers for Wang.

"He went from the new guy from China to the Chalupa Boy, and that's pretty special around here," said Mavericks owner Mark Cubansaid, who earlier this season ran on the court to break up a chalupa-related brawl.

Wang, who said he'd been told about the Mexican food promotion, finished 2-for-5, including a miss on a 3-pointer.

"I felt so happy I could score," Wang said. "It made me feel I can score more in the future."

His first shot attempt was ruled a block, although it was as much a strip as the ball never came above his waist.

Mustangs win tourney

EUNICE, N.M. — It took a while, but Midland Christian's baseball team finally won the Eunice Tournament.

The Mustangs defeated Eunice (N.M.), 8-5, on Thursday in the championship game. The game was originally to be played on March 17, but it was rained out, and Thursday was the first chance the teams got to get together.

Coy Riley (1-0) was the winning pitcher in the title game, and Jamie Beeghley got the save. Offensively for MCHS, Jordan Wilson had two hits, including a two-run home run; Chase Feeler had two hits, including a solo homer; Shane Wright had two hits; and Beeghley had three hits, including a double.

Beeghley was named the Most Valuable Player of the tournament after batting .700 with two home runs and pitching for one win and the save in the title game.

MCHS' Drew Scott and Kacy Groves both made the all-tournament team. Scott batted .400 with seven RBI and seven stolen bases. Groves pitched a no-hitter against Ruidoso (N.M.) in an early round game back on March 16.

The Mustangs, now 12-4, will return to TAPPS District 1-4A play on Saturday. They host Fort Worth Temple at 2 p.m. at Simon Field.

Conradt steps down as women's AD

AUSTIN (AP) — Wanting to concentrate solely on coaching, Texas women's basketball coach Jody Conradt resigned Thursday as women's athletics director.

Conradt, the winningest coach in college women's history with 766 career victories, has served as the Longhorns' women's athletic director since 1992.

"It's purely personal," Conradt said.

"Being athletic director was never my dream job, but it was the right thing to do at the time," she said. "Plus, I'm really excited about the prospects of our basketball team. It's been my goal to get this program back to national prominence."

Conradt, 59, first came to Texas in 1976 as women's basketball coach. Last season she became the first women's coach to work 1,000 games in a career.

The Longhorns won the national championship in 1986 and won 104 consecutive Southwest Conference games from 1982-90. But the Longhorns have had a tougher time in the Big 12 and have failed to get past the first round of the NCAA tournament the last three seasons.

The school switched leagues during Conradt's tenure as athletic director. Since she took over the women's program, Texas teams have won six national championships — four in track and field and two tennis titles — and 39 conference championships. The women's program has 11 varsity sports.

Conradt also helped guide the athletic program through the controversy of a gender equity lawsuit filed in 1992.

The university settled out of court in 1993, agreeing to add varsity soccer and softball.

"It was a situation that could have torn us apart," Conradt said.

Conradt's coaching contract runs through 2004. She said she has set no timetable for when she will eventually walk away from the game.

NOMO: O'Leary grabbed final out

(From 1C)

Martinez has three Cy Young awards, but never has pitched a no-hitter. Watching Nomo, who was making his debut with the Red Sox, left Martinez delighted and helpless at the same time.

"I was nervous," Martinez said. "I know what it's like to be in that situation. And the worst part was I couldn't do anything about it. To me, it felt worse than if I were the one pitching."

Nomo walked three and struck out 11 in September 1996 against the Colorado Rockies, the only no-hitter at Coors Field. Now the right-hander also has the only no-hitter in the 10-year history of Camden Yards.

"I just followed the catcher," Nomo said through an interpreter. "I just tried to throw first-pitch strikes. ... I wasn't nervous."

Second baseman Mike Lansing saved the no-hitter with a backhanded, tumbling catch of Mike Bordick's soft looper to center field for the second out in the ninth. Nomo couldn't find the words to thank Lansing, but didn't have to.

"I can't speak to him and he can't speak to me, so what am I supposed to say to him?" Lansing said. "He pointed at me. I knew he appreciated it."

The catch supplied yet another element found in virtually every no-hitter.

"There's always one great play," Boston first baseman Brian Daubach said. "To that point, it really hadn't happened."

Two pitches after Lansing's grab, Delino DeShields lofted a routine fly to left field that Troy O'Leary caught for the final out. Nomo was lifted up by Varitek and mobbed by his new teammates as O'Leary ran in to give the right-hander the ball.

In his first game with the Red Sox, Nomo did what no Boston pitcher had done since three years before Nomo was born. The last no-hitter thrown for Boston came in 1965, by Dave Morehead.

"Hideo is the same every inning," said Daubach, who hit two home runs. "He's a real quiet guy with no emotion. He just pitches."

CHAPS: Several key players injured

(From 1C)

said Ramharter, whose team is 23-16 overall and 5-11 in conference. "Odessa is the best team in the conference. We're just going to approach each game one at a time and do whatever it takes to win."

Some key players bothered by injuries this week include pitching ace Matt Overman (kneecap), designated hitter and leading RBI man Braden Conner (kneecap), infielder Abel Gonzalez (hamstring) pitcher Jared Birely (shoulder) and outfielder Chad Reeves (bulging disc). If any of these Chaps play it will only be in limited roles.

With that many players hurting, it has opened up some opportunities for others to step into bigger roles. One of those players who's stepped up for the Chaps is pitcher Joseph Llanas, who comes in with a record of 3-0, including an outstanding performance in an 8-2 win over Frank Phillips last weekend.

"He's not a big velocity guy but he's been doing a good job for us," said Ramharter, who will start Llanas in Game 1 today.

After Llanas, Ramharter will decide on the starting pitchers on game day against the Wranglers, who come in at 22-14 and 11-5 in the WJCAC.

"The Wranglers have terrific pitching and know how to win with their tradition," Ramharter said. "We'll just see what happens."

Hidalgo homers again to lead Houston past Milwaukee, 8-2

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Ben Sheets, who starred for the gold medal-winning U.S. team last year's Sydney Games, gave up five runs and six hits in six innings as he lost his major league debut.

Richard Hidalgo hit a two-run homer and Chris Truby got his third homer in as many games for Houston, 3-0 for the first time in 13 years.

Milwaukee headed home for Friday's opening of Miller Park with an 0-4 record, the worst in the major leagues.

Wade Miller (1-0) struck out a career-high 11, allowing two runs and six hits in 7 2-3 innings.

Angels 10, Rangers 3

ARLINGTON — Wally Joyner homered and hit an RBI single in his first start for the Angels since 1991.

Troy Glaus homered twice and Ramon Ortiz (1-0) struck out 10, becoming the first Anaheim pitcher to reach double digits since Chuck Finley in August 1999.

Ryan Glynn (0-1) gave up five runs and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings and left after he was hit on his pitching shoulder by a liner off the bat of Glenallen Hill.

Alex Rodriguez was 0-for-4, dropping to 4-for-16 with no RBIs.

Mets 7, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Rick Reed (1-0) pitched a three-hitter for his first complete game since October 1999 and delivered a two-run single in a three-run second.

Rey Ordonez added two RBI singles and Jay Payton went 3-for-5.

Odalis Perez (0-1), in his first game since July 22, 1999, allowed four runs — three earned — and eight hits in four innings. He missed last season following reconstructive surgery on his left elbow.

Orioles 2, Red Sox 1

BALTIMORE — Derek Lowe (0-2) walked Melvin Mora with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning, forcing in the winning run.

Held hitless by Hideo Nomo one night earlier, the Orioles managed six hits off Frank Castillo and three relievers. Buddy Groom (1-0) got two outs in the ninth after Jason Johnson, 1-10 a year ago, gave up one run and seven hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Rockies 11, Cardinals 2

DENVER — Pedro Astacio gave Colorado its third straight solid outing, and the Rockies routed the St. Louis Cardinals 11-2.

Ron Gant and Todd Helton each hit three-run homers for Colorado.

Astacio (1-0), following Mike Hampton and Denny Neagle, struck out 10 in eight innings, allowing one run, six hits and no walks.

Cubs 2, Expos 1

CHICAGO — Kevin Tapani gave up two hits in seven shutout innings and struck out nine, and Rondell White drove in another run against his old team as the Cubs got their first win this season.

Tony Armas Jr. (0-1) gave up two runs — only one earned — and four hits in five innings.

Reds 4, Pirates 1

CINCINNATI — Dmitri Young doubled with the bases loaded in the third off Jimmy Anderson (0-1).

Larkin walked twice and scored, ending a solid homestand. In his new role as leadoff hitter, Larkin set up the offense by reaching base in 13 of 18 plate appearances.

Elmer Dessens (1-0) allowed one run and seven hits in seven innings.

Yankees 1, Royals 0

NEW YORK — Mike Mussina made a sparkling debut for the New York Yankees, allowing five hits in 7 2-3 innings Thursday in a 1-0 win over the Kansas City Royals.

Paul O'Neill hit a solo homer in the first inning off Dan Reichert (0-1) to back Mussina (1-0). The three-time World Series champions have opened the season 3-0 for the first time since 1995.

Mariano Rivera got four outs for his first save of the season.

Blue Jays 11, Devil Rays 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Chris Carpenter (1-0) allowed four hits and struck out a career-high 11 in eight innings, improving to 5-1 against Tampa Bay.

Darrin Fletcher's two-run double keyed a four-run first inning after Ben Grieve misjudged Raul Mondesi's fly ball to right for a two-base error and Vinny Castilla misplayed Brad Fullmer's bases-loaded grounder to third, allowing two runs to score.

Twins 9, Tigers 5, 10 innings

DETROIT — Todd Jones (0-1) wasted a ninth-inning lead, then allowed three more runs in the 10th.

Doug Mientkiewicz hit a tying sacrifice fly in the ninth and, after Jones loaded the bases in the 10th, Corey Koskie hit a sacrifice fly off C.J. Nitkowski, who then threw a run-scoring wild pitch and allowed a two-run double to Denny Hocking.

Eddie Guardado (1-0) allowed an RBI double to Tony Clark in the bottom half.

Tiger Woods flips his putter after missing a birdie attempt on the 6th green during the first round of the 2001 Masters at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga., on Thursday.

MASTERS: Woods has tough start

(From 1C)

year on the PGA Tour. He won his first tournament, finished in the top 10 five times and earned more than $1.8 million.

DiMarco traveled to Augusta after playing 36 holes Sunday in the BellSouth Classic. Instead of resting, he got in a full round of practice Monday — his first time on the course.

The course was vulnerable as the tournament opened. Two days of rain softened the greens and there was hardly any breeze rolling through the Georgia hills on a cloudy day.

DiMarco went to 18 with a chance to equal the record for lowest opening round by a first-year player. A 20-foot birdie putt came up short.

"My only anxious moment was at 18," he said.

Lloyd Mangrum opened with a 64 in his first Masters in 1940, a record that was equaled by Mike Donald a half-century later.

Mangrum wound up second, four shots behind Jimmy Demaret. Donald soared to an 82 in his second round and wound up 47th.

As further proof that DiMarco doesn't need to get fitted for a green jacket just yet, the first-round leader hasn't won at Augusta since Ben Crenshaw went wire-to-wire in 1984.

"There are probably 500 DiMarcos who could come out and shoot 7 under on the first day," said Greg Norman, who had a 71. "You don't know the pressure of the golf course when you first come out here."

Woods was trying to complete his own version of the Grand Slam at the tournament he won in 1997 with a record 18-under-par score.

Last year, Woods started out with a 3-over 75 and wound up six strokes behind the winner Singh, keeping alive the streak of never breaking 70 in the first round at Augusta.

Woods has won every major since then, stringing together victories in the U.S. Open, British Open and PGA Championship.

The day began with Byron Nelson teeing off for the last time at the Masters. He joined Sam Snead for the ceremonial 8 a.m. start.

"OK, little ball," the 89-year-old Nelson said as he lined up his shot, surrounded by fans at the first tee box. "One more time."

Nelson, who walks with a cane because of an ailing left hip, decided to give up his duties as an honorary starter after this year. He faded his shot about 150 yards down the right side of the fairway, the ball coming to rest near a trash can that sits beside the giant scoreboard.

"Sure, I was still nervous," said Nelson, a two-time winner who last played a full round in 1966. "I was worried if I would even get it off the ground."

Nelson first played the Masters in 1935 and has been back every year since then except one.

"This has helped keep me alive in golf," he said.

After Nelson and Snead completed their duties, Charles Coody, Billy Casper and Doug Ford formally started the tournament.

But the 78-year-old Ford didn't last long. He double-bogeyed the first hole and withdrew.

Masters at a Glance

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A brief look at the first round Thursday in the 65th Masters at the 6,985-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club (all times EDT):

UNLIKELY LEADER: Chris DiMarco, who has won once on the PGA Tour but is playing in his first Masters. DiMarco shot a 65 in his first official round on Augusta National.

JUST BEHIND: Steve Stricker and Angel Cabrera both shot 66. Phil Mickelson, Lee Janzen and John Huston were another stroke back at 67.

EASY DAY: Augusta National, softened by rain in the days before play began, allowed 33 players to break par.

NOT THAT EASY: Even with the low scores, the field of 93 was still a cumulative 104 over par. That was inflated by an 87 from 69-year-old Billy Casper and scores in the 80s from Ben Crenshaw, Tommy Aaron, Gay Brewer and Arnold Palmer.

WHERE'S TIGER?: Tiger Woods was five shots back after a 2-under 70 that included only one birdie on the four par-5s.

NICE PAIRING: Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer drew large galleries. Nicklaus and Player shot 73s, while Palmer had an 82 that included a nine on the 13th hole.

OLDER GENERATION: Byron Nelson hit his last ceremonial tee shot to open the Masters at the age of 89. Former champion Doug Ford played only one hole before retiring in his record 49th Masters.

QUOTEWORTHY: "There are probably 500 DiMarcos who could come out and shoot 7 under on the first day. You don't know the pressure of the golf course when you first come out here." — Greg Norman.

DEBUT: Wang has rocky moments

(From 1C)

"I was a little nervous," said Wang, whose parents and an estimated 300 million Chinese were watching on television. "I was trying to score as soon as possible, and that's why I got the turnover."

There were some other rocky moments. Such as with 5:55 left in the second quarter when Wang took off his warmup clothes because he thought he was being called into the game. Instead, coach Don Nelson was asking for "Juwan" Howard, not Wang (pronounced "Wong").

Then, with 26.8 seconds left in the first half, Wang really did get the call. He went in to a standing ovation.

His teammates wanted him to break the ice immediately. Michael Finley tried running a pick-and-roll, but Wang was too excited and lost the ball.

He didn't return until there was 7:40 left and Dallas was up 91-71.

Befitting the Mavericks' international flavor, he replaced Dirk Nowitzki, a 7-footer from Germany. And he was covering Atlanta's Hanno Mottola, the first NBA player from Finland.

Wang grabbed his first rebound immediately, but needed more than a minute before getting the ball on offense.

The Mavs again tried setting something up for Wang, so he huddled briefly with point guard Steve Nash and Nelson. They spoke in English and when Nelson walked away, he laughed and shrugged, unsure of whether his words got through.

It apparently worked as Wang ran another pick-and-roll, this one with Howard Eisley. He took a pass just inside the 3-point line and got nothing but net with his smooth left-handed stroke. The crowd erupted again and the usually blank-faced Wang even gave a mini-fist pump.

Wang was fouled on Dallas' next possession and time out was called. During the break, the song "Everybody Wang Chung Tonight" was played. Then Nash drove the lane, dished to Wang and he flipped in the magical 100th and 101st points.

"It's crazy to came all the way from China and get into an NBA game, and he did great," Nash said. "He's very talented."

Wang didn't feel totally out of place. There were two signs in Chinese, one that read "Your buddies are here," and another that read "China is proud of you," which was attached to a Chinese flag. Four kids painted Wang's name on their chests and chants of "We want Wang!" began in the second quarter.

"Thank you to all Dallas basketball fans for supporting me so much," Wang said. "This will help me to play harder."

Nazr Mohammed, who led Atlanta with 23 points, said he was impressed with Wang.

"The kid can play," he said. "You can tell he has good basketball skills. He has a nice soft touch."

Said Hawks coach Lon Kruger: "He's got the actions of a good basketball player. It was pretty courageous of him to make that first jump shot, then those two free throws."

Dallas won for the sixth time in seven games. The Mavericks finished 23-7 against the East, easily the best in franchise history. This is their 49th win, leaving them seven games to reach 50 for the third time in their history.

Atlanta, which had won two in a row, lost its 10th straight on the road.

Central boys extend lead; Rebels hold on to second

Staff Report

■ 4-5A Golf

ABILENE — Zach Drennan and his San Angelo Central golf team both tightened their grips on first place in the District 4-5A boys' golf race on Thursday.

The third round of the 4-5A Tour was played Thursday at the Diamondback Golf Club in Abilene. The fourth and final round will be played at Midland Country Club on Monday, and Omar Sanchez and his Midland Lee teammates have some ground to make up on the Bobcats.

Drennan and Sanchez entered Thursday's round tied for first place in the 4-5A medalist race, but Drennan took a three-shot lead as he fired a round of 72 and Sanchez shot 75.

In the team race, Central led Lee by six strokes before Thursday. After a hot round on Thursday, though, Central holds a 19-stroke lead. Central got a spark from Ryan Eastman, whose 68 was the best round of the day.

Central stands at 892 after three rounds, and Lee stands at 911. The Lee golfers are now threatened from behind by Odessa Permian (918), Midland High (923) and Abilene Cooper (also 923).

Similarly, Sanchez (221) has two golfers only one shot behind him. Midland High's Jason Lindgren shot a 74 on Thursday for a total of 222, and he is tied with Permian's Chad Hanchey.

The top two teams advance to the regional tournament, as do the top two individuals who are not on regional-qualifying teams.

The top performance of the day by a Midland golfer belonged to Les Freeman, who shot a 72 while playing on Lee's No. 2 team.

Here are Thursday's third round results of the District 4-5A Boys Golf Tour, which played at Diamondback Golf Club in Abilene:

Duncan hits for 36 in Spurs' victory

Associated Press

DENVER — Tim Duncan scored 15 of his 36 points in the third quarter and had 13 rebounds as the San Antonio Spurs beat the limping Denver Nuggets 101-80 Thursday night.

Derek Anderson added 17 points to help the Spurs maintain their 2 1/2-game lead over Sacramento for the top spot in the West. San Antonio (53-22) also is one game ahead of Philadelphia (52-23) in the push for the NBA's best record.

Robert Pack had 20 points to lead five Nuggets in double figures, but San Antonio's reserves outscored Denver's bench 40-12. Antonio McDyess, playing with a dislocated kneecap, had 13 points and 10 for the Nuggets, who had six players nursing some type of injury.

After beating the Portland Trail Blazers without McDyess and starting point guard Nick Van Exel (suspended) two nights earlier, the Nuggets failed to put up much of a fight against the Spurs.

Denver cut a 12-point halftime deficit to three by scoring the first nine points of the third quarter, but Duncan scored 11 points as part of 20-7 run over the next 6:18. The Nuggets never got closer than 13 points the rest of the way.

San Antonio, the league's top shooting team at 41.2 percent, finished 35-for-72 from the field and Duncan made 16 of 19 free throws. Fittingly, the Spurs have won 16 of 19 games.

Van Exel, who was suspended for the Portland game after missing two team workouts without permission, had four points in 27 minutes. He has been slowed by injuries to his foot, knee and back in recent weeks.

The Spurs trailed by six early but closed the half with a 13-4 run and took a 12-point lead into the half when Malik Rose hit a 3-pointer from the corner at the buzzer.

Rockets 91, SuperSonics 88

HOUSTON — Kenny Thomas blocked a Ruben Patterson shot with 10 seconds to play and then slammed it into the basket on the other end to seal the Houston Rockets' 91-88 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics Thursday night.

Cuttino Mobley had 21 points and Thomas had 17 points and 10 rebounds as the Rockets overcame a Sonics rally late in the fourth quarter.

Seattle trailed only 89-88 when Thomas blocked Patterson's shot after the Sonics had come from as many as 14 down. Seattle outscored Houston 8-0 in a 1:49 span late in the fourth to tie the game at 84.

Steve Francis had 16 points and Shandon Anderson 15 as the Rockets won for only the third time in their last nine games.

Gary Payton and Vin Baker each had 20 points, while Patterson had 12 for Seattle. After winning 10 of 11, the Sonics have now lost their last two.

Beginning with 6:38 to go in the first, Payton scored six straight points over the next 3 1/2 minutes to put Seattle up 18-13 before Mobley hit 3-of-4 3-pointers to help the Rockets forge a 22-22 tie at the end of the quarter.

Houston used a 15-2 run to move ahead 46-36 before taking a 47-41 halftime lead.

Futures climb

NEW YORK — Gasoline futures climbed for a third consecutive session Thursday as soaring spot market prices and historically low stocks continued to spark fears of supply crunches and price spikes this summer.

May gasoline futures rose .7 cent to 97.22 cents a gallon at the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday.

Gasoline stocks, which dropped by 3.3 million barrels to 193 million barrels last week, have never been lower at the start of the second quarter, according to a report by the Energy Information Administration, the statistical arm of the Department of Energy.

Data released by the American Petroleum Institute and the Department of Energy this week showed gasoline inventories had fallen sharply for the sixth consecutive week, to about 10 million barrels below year ago levels.

Gasoline futures prices hit the day's highs on reports of ongoing problems at Tosco's refinery in Trainor, PA, as Tosco traders stepped in to buy gasoline.

May crude futures rose 14 cents to close at $27.26 a barrel.

May heating oil rose .99 cent to 73.65 cents a gallon; May natural gas rose 24 cents to $5.422 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In London, Brent crude from the North Sea was unchanged to close at $25.32.

Some analysts had expected refineries to ramp up production after an early spring maintenance. However, ongoing problems have delayed unit restarts.

Although few analysts expect a repeat of last year's sustained high prices, analysts say thin inventories aren't likely to grow significantly if refinery runs stay at current low levels, and are setting the stage for price spikes during the peak summer driving season.

Dollar mixed

LONDON — The U.S. dollar was mixed against the other major currencies in European trading Thursday morning.

The euro was quoted at 89.60 cents in late European trading, down from 90.30 cents Wednesday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 89.75 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Wednesday, included 124.64 Japanese yen, down from 125.10; 1.7042 Swiss francs, up from 1.6910; 1.5767 Canadian dollars, up from 1.5670.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4282, down from $1.4334.

Based on euro rates, the dollar is worth 2.1819 German marks, up from 2.1647; 7.3177 French francs, up from 7.2602; 2.4584 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4391; 2,160.05 Italian lire, up from 2,143.08.

Gold falls

Gold closed in London at Irs 258.00 bid per troy ounce, down from $258.20. In Zurich the bid price was $257.45, up from $256.65. Markets in Hong Kong were closed for a holiday.

Silver closed in London at $4.35 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.30.

Conference to spotlight development

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Community leaders continue to keep the spotlight on Midland's economy, inviting the public to attend the April 20 State of the Economy 2001 conference.

"I hope we have a lot of people attend," said Ken Burgess, chief executive officer of First National Bank of Midland and vice chair of economic development for the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "The most important thing is to get people to come, to educate the community" about economic development efforts.

While more than 600 attended last year's State of the Economy conference, and organizers expect 600 to 800 this year. Burgess added "I'd like to have everyone in the community there because I think it's that important."

It will be an opportunity, he said, "for the community to come up to speed on the opportunities for development and what it will take to realize them."

A major focus of the conference, which will be at the Midland Center from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., will be the Midland Assessment and Action Plan (MAAP) study performed by AngelouEconomics of Austin, consultants hired by the chamber and local government.

The study, said Marvin Wynn, president and chief executive officer of the chamber, has added a sense of urgency to efforts to diversify and develop Midland's economy.

'The monthly economic indicators have shown that dependency — this (study) confirms it. The continued decline in oil and gas production and volatility in the world climate and that impact on oil prices means we need to move ahead with a great sense of urgency.'

— Marvin Wynn,
Midland Chamber president

"The study confirmed statistically what we've been saying, what we know, that Midland is the most dependent local economy there is on one single industry. We're 70 percent dependent on oil and gas," Wynn said. "The monthly economic indicators have shown that dependency — this confirms it. The continued decline in oil and gas production and volatility in the world climate and that impact on oil prices means we need to move ahead with a great sense of urgency."

Bobby Norman, president of First American Bank in Midland, will discuss the Midland-Odessa Regional Economic Index, prepared by Amarillo Economist Karr Ingham, who will participate in an afternoon panel discussion.

Angelos Angelou and his project manager, Dan Houston, will participate and discuss the MAAP's Community Assessment and Strategic Recommendations and Marketing studies.

Keith Weiser, former president of Arco Permian and now chief executive officer of Westwin Energy, will discuss current trends in the region's oil and gas industry.

Greg Gothreaux, head of economic development for Lafayette Parish, La. will discuss how his city, heavily dependent on the energy industry like Midland, has agreed to attend and tell how Lafayette worked to diversify its economy.

The luncheon speaker will be Economist Dr. Ray Perryman, giving an overview of the region's economy.

Following lunch, all the speakers will participate in a panel discussion.

The conference is free; tickets are available at the Chamber offices.

New CEO says he expects to make few changes at Southwest Airlines

By Renee C. Lee
Associated Press

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines' new chief executive officer, Jim Parker, won't be trading in his button-down shirt for a rhinestone-studded suit anytime soon.

Unlike Herb Kelleher, the man he will soon replace, "I don't look good in an Elvis suit," Parker said Thursday during a media day at the Dallas-based airlines' headquarters.

Parker, who will take over June 19, said he won't try to be another Kelleher, but he will try to maintain the fun corporate environment Kelleher developed over 30 years at Southwest.

"All we can do is be ourselves," Parker said, also referring to Colleen Barrett, who will become president and chief operating officer.

Parker said he doesn't plan to make many changes to the carrier. The airline has done a good job of developing an experienced management team that has provided depth and stability, he said.

"The most important thing we can do is continue to develop strong leaders. We want to train and develop leaders to keep people motivated," Parker said.

Parker, 54, was named chief executive officer two weeks ago after Kelleher, the airlines' co-founder and leader, resigned. Barrett, 56, was named president and chief operating officer, the first woman to hold that title at a major U.S. carrier.

Parker and Barrett were longtime associates of Kelleher, who will remain chairman of Dallas-based airline's board with a new three-year contract. Both worked at the same San Antonio law firm where Kelleher worked before leaving to run Southwest.

Parker joined Southwest in 1986 and was the airline's vice president and general counsel before becoming CEO.

Also Thursday, Southwest displayed its 100th Boeing 737-700, first introduced in 1997. The plane has a bright blue, red and yellow exterior and leather seats. It is one of 25 that Southwest will receive this year.

Another 27 are scheduled for delivery in 2002, and 26 more in 2003.

The carrier is adding to its fleet of Boeing 737-700s to allow it to continue to grow in new markets and serve new customers, said Jim Wimberly, executive vice president and chief of operations.

Neiman Marcus warns third-quarter profit will fall below Wall Street estimates

NEW YORK (AP)— The Neiman Marcus Group, citing a "challenging retail environment" and "volatile financial markets," said Thursday its fiscal third-quarter profit is projected to fall well below Wall Street estimates as a result of disappointing sales this spring.

The company, which operates Neiman Marcus stores, Bergdorf Goodman and Neiman Marcus Direct, said its profit may range between 80 cents and 85 cents for the third quarter ending April 28.

Analysts polled by First Call/Thomson Financial projected earnings of $1.03 per share.

The company said that sales at stores open at least a year, or same-store sales, declined 4.7 percent for the five weeks ended March 31. Same-store sales are viewed as a good indicator of a retailer's health.

Same-store sales in the specialty retail segment, which includes Neiman Marcus and Bergdorf Goodman, were 7.7 percent below the five-week period a year ago.

Same-store sales in the direct marketing segment rose 9.5 percent in the period, with each of the catalog divisions posting gains.

Total revenues for March were down 3.6 percent to $254.8 million. For the 35 weeks ended March 31, total revenues were $2.08 billion, up 4.3 percent from the year-ago period.

The company said it expects same-store sales for the third quarter to decline by one to three percent and is planning for same-store sales to be unchanged for the six-month spring season over the year-ago period, as more business shifts into the fourth quarter. That period is primarily for clearance and generates lower profits, the company said.

Neiman Marcus said it plans to increase its marketing activities and to reduce expenses to help offset higher fourth-quarter markdowns.

Neiman Marcus's shares fell 45 cents to close at $39.25 a share Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Use caution when moving from bonds to funds

By Eric Tyson

Q: When my husband and I changed investment companies, we placed approximately $200,000 in GNMAs. We kept the money in this account until the price went up so we could roll it over into something else. The price is now where we initially bought the GNMAs but we are unsure of the best investment for us at this time. My husband will retire in three years (57 years old), and I will retire in six years. I am 50. What do you advise?

Tyson

A: First, you've got to step back and look at your overall financial situation, including your entire investment portfolio. Presuming you're willing to be moderately aggressive, I would recommend that about 60 percent of your retirement dollars be invested in stocks, with about one-third of that in international stocks, and 40 percent in bonds.

Whether you're investing in stocks or bonds, I think you're best-served allowing a professional money manager to choose the individual securities. Seek out funds with low expenses and good track records.

That said, if these individual bonds are soon to mature (within the next few years), you could simply hold on to them until maturity and save yourself the brokerage commission from selling them now.

Bond index funds offer a tremendous amount of bond market diversification at a low cost — some of the leading bond index funds have annual operating expense ratios of less than 0.2 percent.

Q: With regard to paying off mortgage debt early, financial columnists and TV analysts never seem to consider the standard tax deduction that one qualifies for when he or she lacks sufficient deductions to itemize. This would seem to enhance the desirability of paying off a mortgage early. For a million-dollar mortgage this probably does not apply, but it does for the greater number of people who might have, say, $100,000 left to pay. Your comments?

A: Go to the head of the class!

If you've exhausted contributing to tax-deductible retirement accounts, paying off your mortgage faster can be a solid investment. If a homeowner has no mortgage interest at all because his mortgage debt is paid off, or not enough itemized deductions to bother itemizing, he still qualifies on IRS Form 1040 for the standard deduction, which for tax year 2001 is $4,550 for singles and $7,600 for married couples filing jointly.

For the homeowner whose mortgage balance is low enough such that the total of his annual mortgage interest payments and other itemized deductions is less than or only somewhat exceeds his standard deduction, it makes even more sense to pay off the mortgage more quickly.

It might also make sense to pay off your mortgage faster if your adjusted gross income exceeds $132,950. If you are such a high-income earner, you must reduce the total of your itemized deductions by 3 percent of your income above $132,950.
