

News To Hold Election Party Saturday Night

The Mitchell County News will have an election party again this year and all the people in the territory are invited to attend. To fill the need of complete races The News will issue a special edition Saturday night giving the results so far as they have been tabulated. The edition will be on the streets Sunday morning by carrier and will carry just as complete returns as can be secured.

PUNDT SEEKS VOTES FROM HOSPITAL BED

This is a strange form of campaigning for a healthy, vigorous man, but John Pundt, Railroad Commission candidate, finds it more comfortable until his broken ribs mend. He will finish his speaking engagements by radio. Pundt was injured near Victoria a week ago when his car overturned as the result of a blowout. His publicity director, Preston Sneed of Dallas, was killed in the crash, and Eugene Smith his campaign manager was cut severely on the head.

Hamilton Palmer Thompson Walker Frazier

Three men under sentence of death—Raymond Hamilton, J. E. Palmer and Blackie Thompson—made their escape from the Texas State penitentiary death house at Huntsville Sunday afternoon leaving three less fortunate prisoners behind them—Whitey Walker dead, Charlie Frazier and Roy Johnson wounded. This is the first successful break from the penitentiary death house. In the pictures above are shown five of the six men who figured in the break and the wall which they climbed by ladder. A guard, H. E. George, was slightly wounded by the killers as they went over the wall. The three convicts wounded or killed had life sentences. (Texas News Photos.)

LORAIN HAS OUTSTANDING BASEBALL TEAM

Loraine has an outstanding baseball team. Every member of the team is hitting above an average of 300 except three and the team average for the 19 games in which they have played is 343. This is a record that few teams, even in the leagues, can equal and perhaps none can surpass.

Sheron Adams is leading in home runs with seven. Ira Coffee has hit safely in each of the 18 games he participated in.

Below is the average:

All who attended the concert Monday night highly praised the beautiful music rendered by the band.

Regular weekly concerts will be held at the band stand in the future until it becomes too cold to hold them in open air.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Richey returned Monday from Odessa where they have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Crownover.

When you need adding machine paper come to The News office Two rolls for a quarter.

LORAIN DEFEATS MIDLAND SATURDAY

The fastest baseball game of the season was played on the local diamond last Saturday afternoon when Loraine defeated Midland 6 to 1. The game was errorless on the part of the local team and almost so on the part of Midland. Only three errors were made in the game and they were all made by Midland players. It looked more like a league ball game than an amateur game.

The locals pounded the ball hard and gathered 12 hits while the visitors got only 6. Lefty Jones, pitched for Loraine, really pitched a good game Saturday. He struck out several Midland men and kept their hits so well scattered they could not get more than one run across the plate.

METHODIST REVIVAL

The Revival meeting has just closed and it was one of the best the "Old Timers" say, that we have ever had. The Church was greatly helped, and many people were saved. We do not know how many were converted, but there were about forty to join the Methodist Church, and a number signified their desire to join the Baptist Church. Rev. Jim Sharp of Stanton did the preaching and it was well done. The spirit of cooperation of all denominations, was splendid. We were one in our prayers and desires. As pastor, I want to thank every one for your cooperation, for it was this that gave us such a splendid Revival. I also thank those who were so faithful in planning the music and giving such splendid help in song and with instruments. I am sure I was never in a Revival where we had better music. We all rejoice at the splendid results. C. B. Meador Pastor.

FIFTH SUNDAY SINGING

The regular fifth Sunday singing will be held at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon, beginning promptly at 2:30, according to Bud Richburg. C. C. Nace of Big Spring will be here with a generous supply of new books. He will also have a delegation of singers with him. If you love good singing do not fail to attend Sunday.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES

Sunday was a record breaker for there were 336 present at Sunday School, with 25 visitors whom we were real glad to have with us. We were especially glad to have Rev. Gist and family, pastor of the St. Mark Methodist Church of Oklahoma City, with us.

Philip Smith sang a solo at the morning hour. Rev. Sharp delivered two wonderful messages Sunday. The theme for the morning service was "To Him that Overcometh", and the night service was on "Neglect". Rev. Sharp brought some fine messages and those of you who missed them certainly did miss some blessings. We had a wonderful meeting, there being about 45 who gave their lives to Christ. 23 joined the church by baptism. The church has been wonderfully blessed by Rev. Sharp coming our way.

We hope you will continue to come each Sunday so we may continue the good work of the Lord. There will be prayer meeting Wednesday night. Let's have a fine crowd present.

G. W. Lee DIED SUNDAY MORNING

Funeral rites were held at three o'clock Monday afternoon for G. W. (Uncle Tobie) Lee, 74, whose death occurred Sunday morning at his farm home near Bauman. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. H. N. Baldree, pastor of the Bethel church, assisted by Rev. W. D. Green of Sylvester and Rev. A. C. Hardin of Loraine, both former pastors.

Mr. Lee was born in Kentucky December 25, 1859, and died July 22, 1934. He was married to Miss Mollie Mills October 13, 1878, near Dallas, Texas. To this union was born the following children all of whom are living near Loraine: E. F. Lee, C. L. Lee, J. W. Lee, J. C. Lee and G. O. Lee. Besides his wife and children he is survived by 29 grand children and 9 great grand children and a host of other relatives and friends.

Mr. Lee was a pioneer citizen of Mitchell County having moved here in December 1897. He was a member of the Baptist Church at Bethel and was a faithful Christian from the time of his conversion until his death.

Out of town relatives who attended the funeral were Boss Mann and Mrs. Quinn of Ackerley, Mrs. Lee Box of Stamford, Mr. and Mrs. Davis and daughter of Sonora and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Garrett and daughter of McCamey.

Pall bearers were Ben Wiggins, Dee McCollum, Clifton Henderson, Les Collier, Floyd Thomas and Luke Finley. Flower girls were his granddaughters.

Interment was made in the Loraine cemetery under the direction of G. W. Hendrick of the Loraine Undertaking Company.

The esteem in which Mr. Lee was held in the community was shown by the large concourse of friends who accompanied the body to the cemetery.

EDWARD K. RUSSELL WITHDRAWS FROM RACE

Edward K. Russell of Annona, Texas issued a statement on July 18 that he was withdrawing from the race for Governor of Texas. Mr. Russell in his statement said in part:

"With the release of this statement I am withdrawing my candidacy for the governorship of Texas. This decision has been reached after carefully weighing the facts in connection with our political situation today. Due to the shortness of time remaining before primaries, it will be impossible for me to get my candidacy before all the people, and I would not want them to pass judgement on me without a hearing."

"My chief objective in entering this race was to serve the people of Texas, and I hope the contribution I have made to the cause of good government and the frankness and fearlessness with which I have presented my program has been of some service. To my mind, the big issue before our people today is the unemployed, and affording opportunities for homeless families of becoming becoming home owners."

"Because of the great problems confronting our state, I feel that it is but fair, and anything less would be unbecoming of me, that I permit my friends to have some voice and expression in determining who will be the two leading candidates in the first primary, since my being one of these is in doubt. It is my belief that the welfare of Texas comes first and personal aggrandizement thereafter."

"I want it definitely understood that I am not withdrawing from this race in behalf of any other candidate; and I want to urge upon the people of Texas to weigh carefully the qualifications of the candidates in this race and on election day vote their sincere convictions."

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking the people who were so kind to us during the sickness and death of our father and grand father. May God's richest blessings be bestowed upon you. Mother Lee and family.

General Strike in San Francisco Area Collapses—North Dakota's Hot Political Row—Mrs. McAdoo Divorces the Senator.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union

ONCE more it has been demonstrated that the general strike is not a successful weapon in the hands of organized labor in the United States. The San Francisco unions, dominated for the moment by radicals, undertook to use this weapon, and within two days were forced to admit their failure. Governor Merriam, Mayor Ross and other officials, strongly backed by public opinion, were determined that San Francisco and the surrounding communities should not be deprived of the necessities of life, that the embargo on food shipments should be broken and that transportation should not be stopped. Nearly 8,000 members of the National Guard were mobilized to aid the police, and their efforts were seconded by hastily formed bands of vigilantes which raided the headquarters and gathering places of the Communists. The central committee in charge of the strike soon realized the movement was collapsing and the conservative members, regaining control, relaxed the restrictions, and made an offer of arbitration under certain conditions.

On Thursday the general strike was formally called off and the men ordered back to work.

General Johnson, NRA administrator, acting as spokesman for the federal maritime dispute board there, was on hand determined to bring about a peaceful settlement. The Pacific coast maritime strike, on behalf of which the mass walkout was called, remained a difficult problem, for the longshoremen and maritime workers were insistent that the main dispute in their case, control of the "hiring halls," should not be subjected to arbitration.

To the average person the whole thing looked unreasonable and unnecessary. The longshoremen, like their fellow workers all along the west coast, have been on strike for changed working conditions, and were joined by the marine workers and stevedores. Then Joseph P. Ryan, national president of the longshoremen, signed an agreement that the men would return to work pending arbitration and a labor dispute board was appointed by President Roosevelt. But Harry Bridges, an Australian radical who is head of the local maritime workers, gained control of the situation and absolutely blocked the move for arbitration, persuading the men to repudiate the Ryan agreement. In the unions of the San Francisco metropolitan area it is said the conservatives outnumber the radicals, but the latter are trained in the tactics of intimidation and are seeking to wreck the trades unions for the benefit of the cause of Communism.

Mayor Angelo J. Rossi announced a pledge to run every "Communist agitator" out of San Francisco. The pledge, announced through an emergency citizens' committee, said: "I pledge to you that I, as chief executive in San Francisco, to the full extent of my authority, will run out of San Francisco every Communist agitator, and this is going to be a continuing policy in San Francisco."

THERE was disquieting strike news from many parts of the country. The unions of Portland, Ore., were pushing their plans for a general strike, and their officials said nothing could now be done to prevent it. The truck drivers of Minneapolis and their helpers voted for a renewal of their strike which in May tied up transportation and resulted in fatal riots.

Representatives of 40 out of 42 locals of the United Textile Workers in Alabama decided on a state-wide strike which will affect 18,000 operatives. The date was not announced. Demands made to the employers include: Thirty hour week with $12 minimum pay, abolition of the "stretch-out" system, reinstatement of all jobs abolished under the stretchout system; re-employment of all workers discharged for union activity and recognition of the textile workers' union for collective bargaining under provisions of the NRA.

Employees of Walter J. Kohler in Kohler village, Wisconsin, are on strike and began picketing the plant, though it has been closed down since July 4. These workers for whom Kohler built and maintained an "ideal" industrial town and who have been treated with remarkable generosity by the company, demand recognition of their union, a minimum wage of 65 cents an hour and a 30-hour week. The company has its own employees' union, a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour, and a 40-hour week.

CONSTITUTIONALITY of the Bankhead cotton act is to be tested in the federal courts. Gaston Therrell of Columbia, Miss., has served notice that he will bring the suit in the United States district court at Meridian, directing it against Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, and internal revenue and extension officials.

in the state charged with execution of the act's provisions.

HOUSING conditions in the United States amply demonstrate the need for new housing. Acting Secretary Dickinson of the Commerce department said in making public results of a national "real property inventory," now being conducted by the Commerce department.

Sixteen per cent of 1,811,462 dwellings in 99 cities are in crowded condition "or worse," Mr. Dickinson said. An additional 16.6 per cent are in need of structural repairs and 44.7 per cent need minor repairs. The incomplete returns show 32,442 houses, or 2.34 per cent of the total, as "unfit for human habitation."

NORTH DAKOTA was in a state of political chaos, with two men battling for the governorship and the control of the state government and National Guard. William H. Langer, according to a ruling of the State Supreme court, was no longer entitled to hold the office of governor because of his recent conviction on charges of conspiracy to defraud the federal government. The court decreed that he must give up his office to Gov. Ole H. Olson. Langer defied the court, refused to move out of office, summoned the National Guard to support him and called a special session of the legislature, which he dominates.

Olson countermanded these orders, and Adj. Gen. Earle L. Sarles sided with him, though he kept two companies of the National Guard on duty in Bismarck to quell possible disorders. It was reported that thousands of farmers were on their way to the capital city determined to support Langer in whatever action he might demand. It was believed the legislature would vote wholesale impeachments of state officials, possibly including the members of the Supreme court, who voted to oust Langer.

State Senator A. B. Bonzer, in an address at Bismarck, declared the jurists had "pretended to base their decision as though interpreting the constitution of this state."

"The Supreme court of this state," he said, "has linked itself with the federal courts in an endeavor to continue the persecution of one who has dared to be a leader for the common people—namely, Gov. William Langer."

Langer and several co-defendants were convicted in June. The federal government charged that the Langer group forced federal employees to contribute to a political fund. This fund, it was said, was collected supposedly for a newspaper. The government contended that the money eventually went into the campaign chest. Langer, after a long trial, was re-nominated by an overwhelming vote, and following this he was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

SENATOR WILLIAM G. MCADOO of California was too fond of politics and travel to suit his wife, whose interests were in sculpture, painting and home life. So the former Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the war-time President, went before a judge in Los Angeles with her complaint and in 42 minutes had been granted an interlocutory divorce decree. "Mental cruelty" was the charge, and Mrs. McAdoo testified that the senator had been living almost entirely in Washington for two years, and that it was impossible for her to reside in the National Capital because the climate there was injurious to her health.

Senator McAdoo did not contest the divorce, and there was a property settlement the details of which were not made public. The custody of the two children was vested in both parents. It was revealed that the McAdoos have been separated since last December.

DAYS of torrential rain in the mountains of southern Poland resulted in raging floods that poured through the valleys, drowning perhaps as many as three hundred persons. More than 55,000 were without food and shelter. The property loss was tremendous, and the crops just harvested being ruined.

Many popular resorts crowded by summer vacationists were cut off. Eighty-three camps of Boy and Girl Scouts were evacuated, after the youths experienced harrowing difficulties.

FOR several hours earthquakes shook all Panama and Costa Rica, but the Panama canal was unharmed. The most serious damage was at David, Panama, not far from the Costa Rican border. There many buildings fell and scores of persons were injured. Considerable losses were sustained also at Puerto Armuelles, the United Fruit company's Pacific side banana headquarters. One American soldier was killed by jumping from a barracks window at Fort Davis.

PRESIDENTIAL SECRETARY MARVIN MINTYRE announced that the President had created a special committee to formulate a new federal policy concerning the generation and distribution of electricity, and in Washington this was looked upon as a probable move for the nationalization of the power industry.

In a letter to Secretary Ickes asking him to lead the committee, Mr. Roosevelt said: "It is my duty to develop a plan for the closer co-operation of the several factors in our electrical power supply—both public and private—whereby national policy in power matters may be unified and electricity be made more broadly available at cheaper rates to industry, to domestic, and, particularly, to agricultural consumers."

"As time goes on, there undoubtedly will be legislation on the subject of holding companies and for the regulation of electric current in interstate commerce. This committee should consider what lines should be followed in shaping up this legislation. Since a number of the states have commissions having jurisdiction over intrastate power matters, it is necessary that whatever plan is developed should have regard to the powers of these various state commissions as well as of the states in general."

Besides Mr. Ickes, who is to act as chairman, the committee will consist of Dr. Elwood Mead, bureau of reclamation; Frank R. McNinch, federal power commission; Morris L. Cooke, of the PWA Mississippi valley committee; Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of army engineers; Robert E. Healy, of the federal stock exchange commission; David E. Lillenthal, Tennessee valley authority, and T. W. Norcross, assistant chief of the forest service.

KING GEORGE of England officially opened the Mersey tunnel connecting Liverpool and Birkenhead, the largest underwater highway of its kind in the world. More than half a mile longer than the Holland tunnel of New York, the tube under the Mersey river stretches 11,380 feet from the main entrance in Birkenhead. In addition to the main tunnel, which accommodates four vehicles abreast, there are two-lane tributaries connecting the docks which give the whole undertaking a length of 15,465 feet.

The engineers responsible for the design of the $35,000,000 tube, chief among whom is Sir Basil Mott, concede they owe much to the experience American engineers gained on the Holland tunnel. They waited until the American tunnel had been operated before completing their plans for the Mersey project's ventilation plant.

TAMMANY HALL has a new chief-in-the person of James J. Dooley, elected at the urgent demand of Postmaster General Farley. He took his seat at the head of the once great Democratic organization and announced that he would undertake to do two things. The first is to restore harmony within the society by eliminating factional disputes; the second, and perhaps harder task, is to change the New York point of view toward Tammany.

ALL Germany and most of the rest of the world heard Adolf Hitler justify his bloody purging of the Nazi party, involving the violent deaths of 77 persons, and his defiance of his enemies within and without the Reich.

The chancellor in his speech before a complaisant reichstag employed his well known gift of oratory to the limit, and unless the Berlin correspondents are mistaken, he won to his support the great majority of Germans who were wavering in their allegiance to him.

Hitler not only defended the slaughter of the alleged conspirators, but also gave warning that a like fate awaits all those "traitors."

"Every one is to know for all future times," he said, "that, if he raises his hand for attack against the state, certain death will be his lot."

Far from apologizing for the killings, he shouted: "I gave orders to shoot those who were mainly responsible for treachery. I gave further orders to burn out into the raw flesh the pest boll of our internal will poisoning and the poisoning of foreign countries. I was the supreme court of the land for 24 hours."

His indictment of the surrounded him was terrific in its details and convincing to most of his countrymen.

Just before the delivery of his address, Hitler and his government were notified by Great Britain and Italy that they approved the eastern European security pact that France is fostering. These would include Russia, Poland, the Baltic states and Czechoslovakia, and unless Germany also signed up the result would be the forging of an iron band around the Reich.

Hitler alluded to this plan in defiant language. He said: "If our trade balance, through economic barriers in foreign markets or through political boycott, becomes a passive one, we shall, through our own ability and thanks to the genius of our inventors and chemists, find ways of making ourselves independent of those raw materials which we ourselves are in a position to manufacture or find substitutes for."

Hitler Keeps His Grip
Baby Lama Is Found

Clarence Darrow, most successful criminal lawyer, says NRA is led by amateurs that do not understand political economy.

Who does understand political economy?

Mr. Darrow rebukes the President for "failing to call in men versed in statesmanship."

Who are those men in this country? Mr. Darrow should name them.

You can do things, when you control a country absolutely, as Stalin controls Russia, with all money, earned by everybody, spent to carry out government plans.

Having trained millions of young men and women in aerodynamics, as preparation for flying, the Russian government plans to train one million parachute jumpers, not ten thousand or a hundred thousand, but one million, by the end of this year.

Russia does things in a big way.

That Hitler still retains his power in Germany and his grip on the German imagination is shown in his latest reichstag speech. Hailed with frantic acclaim in the streets of Berlin, loudly applauded by the subservient reichstag, with army and people under his thumb, it is difficult to see what can destroy his power short of a collapse in Germany's economic resources. The plot that, according to his own statement, Hitler punished with seventy-seven "traitors" deaths, evidently did not have the people back of it.

Thibetan Buddhists have discovered the reincarnation of their late lamented Dalai Lama.

The last Lama, ruling Thibet as spiritual and temporal head from the crimson and white palace of Lhasa, died last December. It then became the business of Buddhist priests to find a baby born at the exact minute of the Lama's death. The baby must have certain marks on his head to prove that he is the reincarnation of the dead man and contains his spirit.

The right baby with the right marks has been found in a humble home far from Lhasa. A clever Buddhist priest will rule until the baby Lama reaches the age of eighteen. Meanwhile, the baby will be carefully looked after and highly honored.

Unlike the ancient Buddhist reincarnations, he is not expected to sit in the air without any support and deliver a sermon at birth.

The wise merchant tells his clerks: "The customer is always right." James J. Dooley, new leader of Tammany hall, tells those under him, the entire human machinery of the biggest city: "If public opinion is against anything there must be changes, because public opinion is always right."

Mr. Dooley as leader of Tammany is very young, only forty-one. Tammany has always thought a leader should be over fifty. Some Tammany men feel that Mr. Dooley is "too highly educated." At Fordham college, he studied Greek and Latin as well as law.

We have troubles in this country, but look at China. Her chief wheat regions are burning up under a temperature as high as 115 degrees, many are dead, cholera is killing others. Locusts in many places destroy what intense heat and drought have left of the crop. Widespread famine next winter is inevitable.

Here, we manufacture our troubles. To unfortunate China, providence or nature sends them.

Bertrand Russell says the British, ruling India, "act like Nazis." For the crime of desiring self-government, according to Bertrand Russell, Hindus have been deprived of "the elementary liberties that make life tolerable."

You wonder when the Hindus possessed any such liberties, except, to a limited extent, among Hindus of the highest class. Among them "liberty" included the right to inflict horrible injustice on the miserable outcast untouchables, also the right to marry little girls ten years old and younger, and the right to have young widows burned alive with the corpses of their old husbands.

The big telephone company in the first six months of 1934 earned $61,900,000, net, after charges and federal taxes, which seems a good deal of money. But it is only $3.32 a share on the company's 18,662,275 shares of stock.

Prospects are improving for the telephone, however, and a net income of $61,000,000 for six months is "something."

Mr. John Jacob Astor, interesting youth of Newport, cutting short his travels, returns to New York unexpectedly and announces that he will take a job and go to work "just as soon as the hot weather ends." Arriving in New York's Grand Central terminal, he was met by "forty railroad detectives and six private detectives." This seems a good many detectives for one young gentleman, who, so far as the world knows, has never done anything to make detectives necessary.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Unless all signs fail there is going to be a determined stand by many of the country's business interests for a limitation on the provisions of the national industrial recovery act when that question comes up for congressional action next January or February. An undercurrent of information, to the effect that a movement to that end is under way, has begun to seep into Washington in a growing volume. It indicates that we will hear much about NRA during the coming campaigns. Indeed, some observers are convinced that President Roosevelt already is attempting to get the administration's side of the story to the country by sending General Johnson, recovery administrator, out for a tour of speechmaking to sell the blue eagle to the country.

The President, it will be remembered, already has declared that NRA must be made a permanent part of our economic structure. I have found few persons who disagree with that. There is a difference of views, however, and it is emphatic, as to the extent to which NRA should go in managing the country's business on a permanent basis. It is upon that question, therefore, that the battle apparently will be waged.

From what I can pick up around here, it is certain that a considerable portion of the business interests is desirous of a limitation on the recovery act provisions so that they will apply really just to establishment of maximum hours of labor and minimum wages, and to abolition of the sweat shop and elimination of child labor. They are determined in their opposition to retention in the recovery act of provisions that give power to fix prices, to control production and to grants of authority that bring private business books into the limelight when ever snooping government agents want to dig into private affairs of individuals or corporations. Frankly, I think that feature has done more to discredit NRA than any other phase of the law under which it operates. On the other hand, only the meaneast and cheapest of individuals can oppose any move that is designed to provide better working conditions and hours of labor for those who live by the sweat of their brow.

While obviously none can foretell the result of this issue at such an early date, the opinions that I gather among observers here make me believe that there is quite a popular appeal in the argument which is being advanced for revision of the recovery act and limitation of NRA control. Folks generally will go along with propositions that work for betterment, but which do not at the same time include invasion of what they believe to be their personal rights. The administration contends, however, that extension of the recovery act powers—or at least, retention of the powers now existing in NRA—are not an invasion of personal rights beyond the necessity for creating greater human happiness. But the hard-headed business man, great or small, is going to be hard to convince, it seems to me, that government control to the extent of fixing his prices and doing some of the other things now permitted is not an undue meddling with his personal affairs.

The lessons of the four-year depression have been so severe that there is little evidence of important opposition to curtailment of hours of labor. Likewise, sound business leaders cannot justify opposition to minimum wages nor can they find a safe ground upon which to propose use of child labor or operation under sweat shop conditions. Politically, therefore, labor will be interested only in those four items; the women vote of the country probably will be interested only in accomplishment of those ends, and business interests worthwhile will not object.

Attention was called above to the tour which General Johnson is making in behalf of the blue eagle of the NRA, and it will be recalled that some months ago I reported on the probability of changes in NRA management. During General Johnson's absence, a board of five men constitutes the administrative authority of NRA. It seems to be in the nature of an experiment. If it works out satisfactorily, we may expect to see the veteran army officer retire to private life. He has said as much. He wants to get back into private business. Mr. Roosevelt, however, likes the fighting qualities of General Johnson, and it is still possible that he will remain on the job. He is responsible for the general plan of NRA administration and the theories embodied in the various codes. It would seem, therefore, that the man who worked out the codes should stay along and sift them down to the permanent level, if permanency be the goal.

Whether General Johnson continues at the helm, or whether the management of that work is entrusted finally to General Johnson's hand-picked group of five, it is certain that the summer and autumn will witness elimination of many petty features of codes that have proved to be only annoyances. I believe there is agreement among unbiased thinkers that development of codes at the rate necessary to make the initial drive for recovery naturally brought many provisions of a worthless character. Many times, it has been shown, those provisions have very nearly upset the good that was obviously going to result from fair practice agreements. The job the five-man board has to do, if it remains as a successor to General Johnson, is to go through the codes with a fine-toothed comb and eliminate all of the questionable and useless provisions. My opinion is, if this were done, there would be much less opposition to the codes and consequently to continuation of the industrial recovery act.

The prevalent thought in Washington, then, is that as a result of the annoying features contained in the codes, the administration is likely to pull hard to revise as many of them as is possible before next winter. Much of this work obviously will have to be done before election and such political effect as may be will be reaped in the ballot boxes.

It always has been true that an invalid who is convalescing passes through a stage on the way to recovery where he develops a genuine grouch. Everything hits him wrongly. Food is not right and medicines are no good, and a thousand and one other things furnish grounds for complaint. This condition nearly always precedes the time when the patient gets out of bed and takes a few steps again.

The circumstance to which I have referred is such a common occurrence that it seems to me there is no better illustration of the condition in which American business now is represented to be. It is highly significant. In the first instance, it shows, according to the experts, that business has enough new life blood to start fighting back against administration plans and policies that cramp its style, and, secondly, vigorous opposition never has failed to be a healthy thing for the country as a whole.

From the information I get in many quarters, it is yet too early to tell whether commerce and industry is going to be a unit in any one course of its opposition. The strictly recovery phases of the New Deal are not going to be attacked, even by the Republican national committee. That question apparently is settled. But business interests apparently and quite logically are distinguishing between recovery and reform. Take the legislation that created the commission for control of security sales and policing the stock exchanges, as an example. I frankly do not see how the Republican leadership or business interests can expect to get far in criticism of that, even if it is solely a reform proposition. On the other hand, business interests can and will attack such projects as the government manufacture and sale of electric power in open competition with private plants, such as is taking place under the experiment in the Tennessee valley.

Not the least of the problems that are arising out of the work so speedily done in creating NRA and other recovery agencies are the horde of legal questions now on the horizon. One of these stands out. It relates to the rights of citizens after they have signed the codes of fair practice, and legal lights tell me it runs straight back to a base in the Constitution of the United States.

It is an old legal maxim that after a person has accepted benefits from a statute or regulation, which means a voluntary action, that person may not be heard to question the validity of the provision from which those benefits accrued. Now, business men signed the codes under what NRA lawyers claim was a voluntary act. Having done that, it is claimed they cannot test the constitutionality of the law or regulations (or the codes) written under that law.

Legal Questions

It seems, however, that there is a difference of opinion between the lawyers of NRA and the lawyers at the Department of Justice. Many lawyers outside of the government are understood to be gathering up all of the pieces of argument they can find respecting the positions of the two governmental groups.

As I understand it, lawyers representing code signers have put forth the argument that the signing was not a voluntary action. They contend that throughout the making of codes, General Johnson and his aides consistently stressed the point that unless those to whom the code was to apply, agreed the administrator would write a code for them and they would be bound by it. I never heard it used as a threat. It nevertheless is a fact that most of those who had dealings with the NRA were afraid they would suffer from the licensing of their plants if they failed to sign the codes.

These technicalities may appear inconsequential, but they are of the greatest importance. There are going to be court tests of some provisions of the recovery act and the authority exercised by NRA. The consensus here seems to be that these tests will include many suits that ought never to have been brought as well as some that will serve to clarify the law if they result in real court consideration.

"And I never dreamed," Mary said a few minutes later, "that a mere bowl of soup could make a stomach feel as if it had died and gone to heaven. But don't be feeling sorry for me. I needn't have been hungry. And—I'd not have let myself starve."

"You have friends," Mrs. Dale stated. "I've noticed them with you at the hotel."

"Mr. and Mrs. Stark," Mary assented. "They've insisted that I stay with them until I find a job. But—the old determination showing in her eyes—" "I wanted to stand on my own. You see, my slogan happens to be, 'No quarter.'"

"Mr. Stark hasn't been able to point you to anything?"

Again Mary's cynical smile. "He has let me know of several openings. But—some one else always got them first." She didn't add that she had stood aside to let some one else get them first, that the old obsession which had prevented her from taking work in Paradise Valley and followed her here, like a crime she had committed from which she never would get away.

"What's your line?" Edna Dale was asking.

"I'm a civil engineer. But I'd wash dishes, or sell flowers on a corner."

"See here. How would you like to come out with me for a time?"

Tears rushed to Mary's eyes. Kindness was so overpowered after weeks of having it hammered into her that she was just another person looking for a job. "You're not called upon to adopt me, you know, Mrs. Dale."

"I know. And I'm not being entirely unselfish. I have an apartment in what used to be a swell house. It's not bad. We might hit it off together. If you wouldn't mind sleeping on a cot in the living room—or a little boy about six—"

"I'd love a little boy about six," Mary said, chokily. "I'll jump at a chance to come—and to stay, if I can find something to do to hold up my end."

So it came about that Mary, checking out at the hotel, wrote fits to four disillusioning weeks. Weeks which had begun as a gay adventure—sallying forth each morning with worlds to conquer, going the rounds of the engineering offices, meeting the other engineers from Paradise Valley at Coffee Dan's to compare notes over dinner or a late lunch, returning to the hotel, eyes questing through the lobby for Denis—he would have come today!—falling to single out the little figure, the laughing boyish face, the fair hair, failing to hear his teasing voice in greeting; asking, finally, at the desk for mail, running through the letters for the one which had not come.

"So endeth the first chapter of the thumb-worn melodrama about the innocent girl jilted by the cruel city and her cruel hero," she said wryly to Mrs. Dale as they were about to set out for their quarters. "By the way, when Mr. Stark calls up, give him my new address, and tell him I've taken a temporary job (for at least I shall be your housekeeper) but am still interested in any opening he may know about."

"Does that message hold for the slow young man, too?"

"That slow young man," Mary laughed, "has also been just steady enough to have saved up a sufficient stake so that he can sit pretty and wait for something to turn up. No, you won't need to give Wait-a-Minute, as we called him on the job where we both worked, any message. Here he comes, now, to help me move—a veritable 'Johnny-on-the-Spot.' I don't know," she added uncertainly, "how I'd have worried through these weeks without Nell."

Nell piloted the two to a taxi, looked a little uncertain as Edna gave the address, and still a little more uncertain as they stopped before the large old house. But a dark plump little boy had dashed joyously from the yard to Edna's arms.

"My Dickie," Edna said.

As she shook hands with the child Mary noticed that he had his mother's vaguely familiar eyes. Then she observed that Edna actually smiled as Nell Goodenough stooped and said, "Climb on, son. I'm the old pack-horse, and it looks to me as if we were about to climb a mountain."

With Dick on his back and bags and bundles under his arms, Nell followed Edna up the steps through a fog of odors to the third floor; and Mary, bringing up the rear, tried to cheer herself by asking facetiously what sort of wild flowers bloomed in these mountains.

"That's cabbage," giggled Dickie. "And this is onions. And this—oh, boy! Beefsteak! Qiddap, packhorse!" But there were no odors in Edna Dale's two high-ceilinged rooms. "The closets are large," she told Mary, "and there's a bath down the hall. Now while you're unpacking your bags I'll run out to the store on the corner for some chops."

"If I went, and bought my own chop," ventured Nell, "would I rate an invitation to dinner?"

"Oh, bully! Ask him, mother!" cried the child. "And I'll take him to the store!" And without waiting for the invitation that might or might not have been forthcoming, he dragged his new idol out of the door.

They were back again shortly, not with chops, but with steaks, and with various intriguing bags and boxes.

"Know anything about art, Mary?" demanded Edna over their coffee.

"Nothing to brag about. Why do you ask?"

"I was wondering if you could run blunt enough to get the job my roommate had to give up yesterday. They probably haven't filled her place yet—she was taken so suddenly. If you knew her line well enough to make them think—"

"Lead me to them," said Mary, with visions of keeping from flying the white flag. "I really have been around to the museums a little." She did not add, as she was thinking, slyly, "all over the world."

"Well, you girls can plan your attack while I tackle the dishes," Nell drawled. "I'm a thoroughly domesticated man."

Mary watched him, in her eyes that tenderness she never ceased to feel for Wait-a-Minute.

After he had finished his task with the same thoroughness and neatness with which he kept his field book, after he had crawled around on his knees being a big black bear in a bed-time frolic with Dick, after he had taken his departure, Edna gasped, "I never knew men like him existed."

"They don't make many like him," Mary assured her.

"And yet you'll be a little fool about a letter! You'd better—"

The following day Mary acquired a position as clerk in an exclusive art shop, the only thing about it which was not exclusive, she found, being the manager. He was obnoxious and intrusive, but Mary still had her way of looking at a person as if he weren't there at all, if need be. And she also had the correct way, the manager found, of meeting the wealthy patrons, and an almost unbelievably convincing line about the objects of art.

And in the ensuing days Mary Brown quit listening for a telephone which doesn't ring, and looking for a letter which does not come. Finally she even went so far as to cease to ask Edna for mail which still might have come to the hotel.

No word of a job came from John Stark, so she clung tenaciously to the one she had. Once a week Nell Goodenough took all three of them out to dinner. One night a week he dined with them. But quite often he picked Dickie up after school for an excursion to the park or the dime stores.

Sometimes this genuine affection of a man for a child—especially for her own child—seemed to soften Edna Dale's hard attitude toward the other sex. At first Mary wondered how any experience could have so embittered a person toward life. As time went on, she did not wonder quite so much. One evening Mary dined with the Starks in their comfortable apartment overlooking the city center. She regaled the couple with the experiences of a civil engineer selling cloisonne. It was not until she was about to leave that John Stark said, somewhat cryptically, "I wanted you to come tonight especially, Mary, because I have a job for you. One more in your line than an art shop."

"Really? Tell me where?" Mary's dark eyes leaped with excitement.

"At a place called Paradise Valley." "Oh," The light ran out of her eyes. "Oh," she said. Then she added, lifting a face that tried to be gallant, "Pass it on to some one else, Mr. Stark."

"No need," studying her closely. "Denny wants all his old force back. All that I can get hold of, he wrote me. That—includes you, Mary. See here, child! Haven't you been silly long enough? Whatever has happened between you and Denis is surely just a misunderstanding. Go back to your old job, and give things a chance to work out."

But Mary, unable to speak, shook her head with finality. Mrs. Stark threw her arm about the girl's shoulder, searching her face with sympathetic and motherly eyes. "It might need only a word, my dear!"

"Mrs. Stark," Mary managed, "It— isn't my move."

"You're a couple of young idiots!" blustered John Stark. "I've a notion to order you to report at Camp C, just as I did the day you had the impertinence to spring your feminine self upon me demanding a job! That's not a bad idea. M. Brown—"

But his wife silenced him. "After all, John, a girl can't throw herself at a man's head!"

But guiltily wishing that John Stark had thrown her at a man's head, Mary made her escape to a taxi. Denny was sending for his old force—and he had not sent for her!

Nell Goodenough was at the apartment when she reached home.

"I waited for you, Mary," he said. "I thought surely you'd have one of these," drawing a letter from his pocket; "but Edna says you haven't mentioned it."

He spread it out on the table. Mary bent over it. She didn't dare pick it up—her hands trembled so. She kept them behind her.

Denny's large writing—like Denny, frank, and easy but firm. Thoroughbred. The message, like Denny, breezy and optimistic and affectionate: "We're on again, old scout! Chase yourself back down here. You were a regular guy to wait for me."

But—no summons to her! Denny would start his project again without asking her to come back to him.

Dark Sheer Prints for Midseason

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WITH the waning of the good old summer time when the clothes you have on hand begin to take on that sort of a "has been" look which happens in even the best regulated wardrobes and when it is too early to don new autumn regalia, what then? Every woman who aspires to an up-to-the-moment appearance knows the baffled feeling which comes when this nagging disturbing-of-the-peace question comes up.

But why worry, for here's encouraging news in regard to this very problem. Briefly told, it's the good looking jacket suits of dark triple sheer print which are now showing in leading style shops and departments wherever one may turn. You can rest assured that an ensemble such as any one of the stunning models here pictured, will plot you victoriously through that dreaded stretch of time which spans from the burning, scorching days of summer to weather bearing cool breezes which hint that autumn is on its way hitherward.

The beauty of these triple sheer costumes which are now playing so conspicuously a role on fashion's stage is that they are being given a styling so absolutely up to the instant in chic, the moment you don one you are apt to experience thrills as exultant as a mannikin at a style show as she pirouettes back and forth before the eager and admiring eyes of her audience.

Then, too, these sheers are cool when you want them to be and with their jackets they provide just the degree of comfort and protection necessary for the erratic changes of a fickle thermometer. By the way, had you noticed that scarcely a one-piece dress is to be seen this season, be it day or night, without a matching or related jacket? Everything with a jacket, is the new slogan and just because the idea is so thoroughly practical the vogue is moving on of its own momentum.

Turning to our illustration we know that you will agree that the jacket dress on the standing figure is of unerring style appeal. It is fashioned of triple sheer of benberg in the new Vionnet bowknot print. The crisp organdie jabot is worked in two colors of the print. The slim little jacket with its voluminous and graceful cape sleeves conveys a message of high-style distinction.

Cool and comfortable for the young girl is the little jacket-frock to the left. The bright monotone print in triple sheer of benberg employed in this winsome outfit carries an animated patterning of wee gay monotone posies—a perfect complement to youth. The link-button fastening at the waistline accents the modish slimmness of this young modern. The pleated frill which collars the jacket also speaks a youthful note.

The insistent call of the mode for white accents on dark prints is answered in the swagge, jacketed dress to the right. This model is a bit more grown-up than the one just described, which should make it of special interest to the matron. As a matter of fact it is a type which times to most any age from teens on. This distinguished ensemble, like its companion models in the picture, is also made of benberg triple sheer. It again reminds that the polka dot vogue is still going strong. The huge wide collar and flaring cuffs are of white taffeta.

USE SAILOR COLLAR NOW EVEN ON SHOES

And now they're wearing sailor collars on shoes. Already they've put sailor collars on everything from bathing suits to nightgowns. So now you may literally be nautical from head to foot.

Your gab hat and your middy shirtwaist dress will find their reflection on the toe of your novel sports sandal, which may combine red patent leather and white linen, and undoubtedly will sport a little sailor collar design on the toe.

Shoes must match your costume nowadays not only in fabric and color, but in atmosphere. The dress trimmed with rows of stitching demands a stitched pump to set it off. The suit with pearl buttons has its matching pump, with a button instead of a buckle.

Velvet Used on Big Hats Late Paris Development

One of the interesting developments in millinery shown by French creators is the use of velvet. This in many instances reflects the influences of the prewar years which is so strong at this time. Molyneux uses velvet ribbon to finish a crown, make a bandeau and a large bow on a yellow mat taffeta hat.

Large straight cartwheel sailors faced with black velvet on the brim top and in some instances, underneath. Velvet is also cited as evidenced in the Descat and Maria Guy collection, these houses presenting velvet berets in green, red and blue. Mme. Suzy introduces velvet crowns in black or brown with contrasting straw orims.

Organdie is cited in a Molyneux creation in pastel shades to match summer dresses.

IT'S ORGANDIE BY CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here surely is one of the prettiest organdie frocks brought out this season. It is black and white, which gives it a Paris look, for smart-dressed French women continue steadfast in their favor for black-and-white. Flame red shoulder flowers supply the dash of color which glorifies the whole scheme.

Lesson for July 29

MICAHIAH SPEAKS THE TRUTH

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 22:1-40. GOLDEN TEXT—And Micah said, As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak, 1 Kings 22:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Told the Truth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Dared to Tell the Truth.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Telling the Truth Under Difficulties.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courageous Truth-Telling.

I. A League Between Two Kings (vv. 1-4).

1. Who these kings were (v. 2).

a. Jehoshaphat, king of Judah. He was for the most part a good king, having done much to put down idolatry and restore the worship of the true God.

b. Ahab, king of Israel. He was a weak and wicked king.

2. The occasion (v. 2). It was on a visit of Jehoshaphat to Ahab, perhaps for the cultivation of a friendly relationship in case of an attack by the Syrians, or it may have been because of a social relation incident to the marriage of Jehoshaphat's son to Ahab's daughter, the wicked Athaliah.

3. The purpose of (vv. 3, 4). It was a merger for the purpose of conquest. The fortified city of Ramoth-gilead had been ceded to Ahab as the result of a previous war, but it had not been actually turned over. Jehoshaphat pledged unreservedly the support of his people, without seeking the mind of God.

II. Advice From the Lord Sought (vv. 5-28).

Even though the merger had been formed Jehoshaphat was unwilling to go into battle without inquiring of the Lord.

1. Through a group of prophets (v. 6; 9-12). Some four hundred prophets responded to the call of Ahab. Who these prophets were are not told. Evidently they were not prophets of Baal (1 Kings 18:19); neither were they true prophets of the Lord. They knew Ahab's wish and therefore sought to curry favor with him by encouraging him to follow out his desire. Zedekiah, their leader, symbolized the success of the joint campaign by the use of horns of iron. Jehoshaphat sensed the falseness of these prophets.

2. A message from the Lord's prophet desired (v. 7). The king of Judah was unwilling to carry out his contract with Ahab without knowing the mind of God as to the matter. This he should have sought before consenting to the merger.

3. Micahiah speaks the truth (vv. 13-28).

a. He first speaks in irony (v. 15). The king's messenger who brought Micahiah from prison advised him to speak that which would be pleasing to the king, but Micahiah was not a manservant but God's faithful servant. He courageously declared that his message would be what God told him to say (v. 14). Regardless of result he would do only as God directed.

b. Micahiah speaks plainly (vv. 16-28). Ahab detected the prophet's ironic speech and demanded of him the plain truth. To this demand Micahiah responded by making clear the peril which awaited them. He also told Ahab that through lying spirits he would be lured to a place of death. This faithfulness on the part of God's prophet was rewarded by flouting and snubbing by the false prophets and with imprisonment from the king. The true prophet will speak God's word regardless of consequences.

From Micahiah's experience we should learn:

(1) The inevitable opposition between God's message and the purposes of evil men. This explains why true preachers of the Word of God are unpopular, and are called narrow and glum.

(2) The folly of the attitude of hatred against those who truly witness against them. Ahab hated Micahiah because Micahiah told him what would come to him for such a course of action. God's prophet did not make the evil but only made it known.

III. The Doom of Ahab (vv. 29-40).

1. He went forth to battle in spite of Micahiah's warning. The issue proved that Micahiah was right.

2. He disguised himself as a common soldier. He thought to escape the predicted fate through disguise, but an arrow from the enemy pierced him in spite of his armor. Ahab died as predicted and his blood was licked by the dogs as Elijah had said (1 Kings 21:19). There is a bitter end coming to those who will not heed God's warning. The only way to escape doom is to turn away from sin.

Greatest Happiness

There is only one thing greater than happiness in the world, and that is holiness, and it is got in our keeping; but what God has put in our power is the happiness of those about us, and that is largely to be secured by our being kind to them.

Promise of God

I would sooner walk in the dark, and hold hard to a promise of my God, than trust in the light of the brightest day that ever dawned.—O. H. Spurgeon.

SEA OF GALILEE

Light on Biblical stories of the Sea of Galilee has been shed by Capt. Herbert J. Horsey, who has completed fifteen years of commercial flying. While flying in the Far East he frequently descended on that famous body of water. "Right across the sea runs a hidden reef, not far below the surface," he said on his arrival in London. "Other parts of the lake are hundreds of feet deep, and it seemed to me that this reef might account for the Bible story of the walking on the sea. Present-day weather conditions bear out the New Testament accounts of sudden storms raging off the lake. One moment it may be as smooth as a mill pond, the next, the water becomes troubled, and in a few minutes you have a rough sea, with a wind blowing at 80 miles an hour."

NOT A MAN-MADE DRUG

Tells why natural mineral water is so often beneficial for "rheumatic" aches and pains

On a recent Sunday afternoon broadcast on the National Broadcasting network the following discussion took place between Mr. Gene Arnold and Dr. W. E. Fitch, internationally known authority on natural mineral waters.

GENE ARNOLD: "I receive letters from people saying they heard that Crazy Water Crystals are made of nothing but salts—Epsom Salts or Glauber's Salts. These people want to know if it's true you can buy some of these salts for a few cents, and get the same effect as you do with Crazy Water Crystals."

Dr. Fitch: "No, it is NOT true." GENE ARNOLD: "I'm glad to hear you say that, because I know your opinion is worth a great deal. But will you explain a little more about it? What are the true facts?"

Dr. Fitch: "The facts are that it has always been true for a few doubtful Thomases and skeptics to believe that old Mother Nature knows how to prepare and compound natural mineral waters in a way that cannot be duplicated in a laboratory. In the course of my studies I have found that these same doubts were expressed two thousand years ago, in the early days of natural mineral water therapy. The truth is that natural mineral water and natural crystals from such waters are as different from synthetic or artificial salts as day from night. And that's why the medical profession has always been in favor of the Natural Waters — has always insisted that they are the one product of Nature that cannot be imitated successfully by man. People have tried for many, many years to make up synthetic concoctions to take their place but they do not have the same effect. The predominating chemical constituent of Crazy Water Crystals is sodium sulphate, but it is in its Natural State, and has a far different physiological effect than the synthetic salts made in a laboratory. When you buy salts for a few cents you get just what you pay for—a dose of salts. But when you use Crazy Water Crystals, you get undiluted minerals in their natural state, taken from natural mineral water by evaporation with nothing added."

That is why Crazy Water Crystals have proven themselves so beneficial in the treatment of "rheumatic" aches and pains. Thousands of people in all parts of the United States testify to this.

If you, or any of your friends, suffer from "rheumatic" pains we suggest you investigate Crazy Water Crystals immediately. Ask any of the millions who have used them. Then get a standard size box—it costs only $1.50 and is ample for at least three weeks treatment. Crazy Water Company, Mineral Wells, Texas.

VOTE SATURDAY

It is not only a privilege of every citizen but his duty to vote whenever the opportunity affords itself. Our government is made up of the people and those of us who vote are the ones who have a voice in our government. If you fail to vote you have no right to kick at the way the government is being operated.

Saturday is election day. On this day the people of Texas will select the candidates who will be in the race in the run-off primary in August and democratic nominees for various offices in the general election this fall.

Vote Saturday, and vote just as early as you can in order to help the election officials in their work. If we all wait until a late hour to vote it will be way beyond midnight and perhaps longer before the election board can count enough of the ballots to give any comprehensive standing of the candidates. Vote as early as you can.

We had rather see a good rain in this section right now than most anything we know of. Crops are suffering badly from the lack of moisture.

West Texas has been sweltering under unusually hot weather this summer because of the long dry spell. The days are hot but the nights are cool and pleasant. That is one advantage this wonderful country has over sections farther east. In some sections of Texas the nights are just about as hot as the days. Out here in West Texas you have to reach for cover every night to keep from getting too cool. Come to West Texas.

Candidate, as well as the people are anxious for Saturday to come so their suspense will be over. Some of the candidates are going to be sorely disappointed while others are going to be highly elated over their good fortune in getting a place in the run-off. Those who are defeated in the first primary should not take it to heart too much because there are so many good men and women in the race it is hard in some instances to decide just who to elect to the place. All cannot be elected.

Frank E. Gannett, Publisher of The Gannett Newspaper, Says: "In my opinion, one of the greatest forces in bringing about better business conditions is advertising. For many months the newspapers of the country have shown increases in advertising lineage. This is one proof that recovery from the depression is well under way. This increase in advertising sells more merchandise of every kind. The sale of products brings greater production in the factories. This means more employment, larger payrolls and more purchasing power.

Advertising, properly used, will promote the sale of any meritorious product. We need stimulation of consumption. We have been suffering not so much from over-production, but from a decrease in purchasing power. We have surpluses because various things are not being sold.

An outstanding example of this is the milk situation in New York state. Here we have had a surplus of milk since the depression began. The cows are not producing more milk, but the people are not drinking so much milk. If every child in New York state had a quart of milk a day and every adult a pint of milk a day, we would have no surplus of milk in New York. At my suggestion, the New York Legislature passed a bill appropriating half a million dollars for a campaign to advertise milk. This is a great experiment which the nation should watch. I am confident this campaign will increase the sale of milk so that the present surplus will disappear.

I believe that advertising is one of the greatest forces in our lives today. By using the printed page effectively, the thinking and habits of millions of people can be changed. If this were not so, our great business corporations would not be spending huge sums for advertising.

Of course newspapers offer the greatest possibilities in advertising. Ninety-five per cent of the adult population of the United States depend upon newspapers for their knowledge and information as to what is going on throughout the world from day to day. ADVERTISING, ATTRACTIVE TO THE EYE, CARRIED ON WITH STEADFAST CONTINUITY AND INTELLIGENCE, WILL ALWAYS GET RESULTS."

THE BEST WAY TO KILL YOUR CHURCH

Don't attend meetings. If you do, come late.

If the weather is a bit disagreeable, stay away.

When you attend be a grouch and find fault with the leaders, what they do and the way they do it.

Never accept any office—it is much easier to growl, criticize and find fault than to do things.

Get sore kick because you were not appointed on a committee. If you are, do not attend the committee meeting, then tell everyone how things really should be done.

When called upon by the chairman, act indifferent, be as disagreeable as possible and say nothing. If you do say anything, show signs of being bored and hurt.

Hold back your pledges as long as you can or don't pay them at all; and if asked to get a new member, act as if you were peevish and too big for such work—promise to do and don't do it.

When the church adopts a program ignore and belittle it—pretend it is for others and not for you, and when called upon, plead ignorance.

Don't do any more than you have to; what you do, do grudgingly, and when others get on the job, roll up their sleeves and willingly and unselfishly do their utmost to help and make these meetings and the church a success, set up a howl that the church is run by a clique.—Contributed.

STATEMENT OF MRS. McCLEARY TO PEOPLE OF MITCHELL COUNTY

I take this method of expressing to you my sincerest thanks for the many courtesies that have been extended to me throughout my campaign for County Clerk. It has been a pleasure to meet old friends, make new ones, to be in your homes and share your hospitality. If I have failed to see any one, it is due to the fact that you were not in when I called, and I did not have the privilege of seeing you elsewhere.

Again, I make the statement that appeared in my first announcement and have made repeatedly during my campaign. I have placed my application for the position of County Clerk in your hands. This was done because I believe that my technical training and clerical experience peculiarly fits me for the type of work and responsibilities the office carries, together with the necessity that I secure steady employment. I own no business interest in Colorado, or property from which I receive an income, and have not been employed since the close of the cotton season February 1, 1934.

It is your privilege to do what you will with this application. For your favorable action at the polls next Saturday, I shall be very grateful.

TO THE PEOPLE OF LORAIN AND PRECINCT 4

I am making an effort to see each one of you personally to solicit your support in the race for District Clerk of Mitchell County, but my lack of time in the race makes it impossible for me to make a house to house canvas in this precinct. For this reason I am taking this method of reminding you of my candidacy and earnestly soliciting your votes.

I also want to thank you people for your hearty cooperation and encouragement, and to promise you that if I am elected I shall devote my entire time to the interests of the office.

BAUMAN NEWS

cars followed the body of Uncle Tobe to the Tabernacle at Loraine where the funeral services were held Monday afternoon. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. H. N. Baldree pastor of Bethel Church assisted by Rev. W. R. Green of Sylvester and Rev. A. C. Hardin of Loraine, both were former pastors.

Club Notes

With an actual expenditure of only $4.36 from her own pocket-book Mrs. M. A. Webb, bedroom improvement of the Looney club, has certainly worked hard for her results which will net her an enjoyment over a period of time. Words do not give as vivid pictures as the natural physical vision of the transformation wrought by the sweat of the brow. Dark fly-specked ceiling, water circled kalsomined walls, woodwork unfinished and no floor boards. A floor unfinished and very splintery. No clothes closet, just a curtain around a shelf, no floor covering and furniture that needed some repair and refinishing or going over were facts that stared Mrs. Webb in the face and it certainly is true that had not Mr. Webb helped in this big undertaking never would Mrs. Webb have had the wonderful results as enumerated. First a clothes closet made of discarded blackboards affording shelves and a rod for clothing and a storage of bedding above. Then came the kalsomining of the ceiling and walls, going over the woodwork with ivory paint and the floor with linseed oil, vinegar, kerosene and paraffin mixed. The making of a hooked rug of discarded woolen clothing. The chifferobe was converted into a storage place for linens by having shelves built in it. Then came the work on her better bedding, including the making of a spring out of old cotton socks, keeping the dust from the coils of the spring and off the mattress. Her new mattress cover made of 9 yards of unbleached domestic was copied from a commercial one and fitted perfectly. Next her mattress pad, made by stitching two worn sheets over a soft cotton blanket and placed just under the sheet that are required to be 108 inches long in order to have a well made bed. One of the proudest things to Mrs. Webb is her tufted colonial bedspread made on unbleached sheeting 10-4 using the unbleached thread with the 6 pointed star as her design. She made this in between times and has the inspiration to make another one. After the work on her bedding came the washing facilities. A stand was made out of lumber and painted ivory for her pan and soap dish and crockery pitcher with a towel rack above it. Repairing and refinishing furniture came next and the rearrangement of pictures. Mrs. Webb has a nice big study center in her room that is ideal for her writing and working on in the morning. All together with her expenditure and the gifts from the landlord the improvements cost $6.66. This work has also inspired Mrs. Webb to improve the rest of the house as it does everyone.

She held open house to her club members Friday and showed what she had done.

Mrs. Tom Daughter of Plainview, Mrs. Dewey Phillips of Latah, and Mrs. Harry Hyman of Hyman will have open house on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, respectively.

Growing chickens and turkeys, much of the needed feed and food for flocks and family, and depending on a variety of truck crops for cash is the way W. H. Nixon of the Henry Prairie community in Robertson county has weathered the gale of hard times. He tried an acre of cucumbers this year for the first time and the first picking paid all the expense of the crop except 10 cents.

A trench silo proved very profitable to H. F. Reist, Brooks county dairyman, because without it this feed would have been lost, due to the heavy rains but a number of dairymen are so impressed by his savings that they will follow his example this summer.

Conserving moisture that is already in shrub beds is more important than watering them, says Mrs. Charles Galloway, home demonstration club member of Shady Acres, in Harris county. A loose, finely pulverized soil around the roots of the shrubs will not only hold the moisture but discourages the growth of weeds.

Successful gardening depends upon shallow cultivation after every rain, according to Mrs. Monroe Reynolds of the Hastings home demonstration club in Shackelford county. Mrs. Reynolds has raised a garden every

Albany Interested in First Bank Holdup

Albany took an interest in the first bank robbery ever to occur in that little West Texas city. The scene above was snapped in front of the First National Bank of Albany after two robbers escaped with $12,000 in cash and travelers checks. James Lucas, 22, and Jack Hardin, 31, were arrested after a running gun fight in automobiles, and admitted the robbery, Lucas stating that he planned the robbery five years ago while he was a schoolboy depositor at the bank. (Texas News Photos.)

year for 25 years and this year 37 varieties of vegetables, five of which are new to her experience. Farmers in Bailey county have found that alfalfa is a good crop for the shallow water district. A large increase in acreage was made in 1933 and indications are that an even larger acreage will be planted in 1934. Several farmers are preparing their retired cotton acreage for seeding to alfalfa this fall.

In speaking of the remarkable Texas relief beef canning program cows were bought at higher than market prices last winter and put into 3,625,432 cans by the unemployed, this column erred last week in several figures. Total cost per can was about 18 cents instead of 16 1/4 cents. The gain or saving to the public was about $100,000 instead of the $226,000 indicated last week. The report was not misleading, only exaggerated. After corrections the program remains a monument to efficient public service in time of need. No wonder national relief agencies have adopted the Texas plan for drought areas.

Down in Cameron county the cotton committees have caused the corners of the rented acres fields to be marked with white stobs, a visible symbol of the New Deal in agriculture.

Mason county took time last month to see how home demonstration club members had changed surplus milk into cheese. At a cheese achievement exhibit it was found that 40 women in eight months had made 5070 pounds of cottage cheese, 2216 pounds of processed cheese, and 256 pounds of American cheese.

The value of hegari as a silage crop and the trench silo as a storehouse has been demonstrated in Comal county. In a demonstration with the county agent, one man made beef calves weigh 30 pounds more per head on an ensilage-cottonseed meal ration than a neighbor feeding similar calves could on a bundle hegari-cottonseed meal ration. Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Kuck were in Colorado on business Wednesday.

TO THE VOTERS AND MY FRIENDS OF THIS PRECINCT

As this will be the last issue of the paper before the election, I am taking this opportunity to thank you for the courtesies that you have shown me during my campaign for Public Weigher.

When you go to the polls Saturday, I am asking your consideration and if you cast your vote for me I will appreciate it very much. If I shall get in the runoff I will appreciate your support in the second primary.

Historians Stirred by Find of Ancient Coins

Coins that shed new light on an obscure period of Jewish history have been discovered in a private collection in Jerusalem.

The coins are of the Fifth century, B. C., which is 300 years older than any Jewish coins heretofore known. The money known to have been regularly used in ancient Palestine was foreign money, chiefly coins of nations which in turn dominated the Hebrew country. It has been supposed that the Jews were not allowed to issue their own coinage until a Syrian king granted that liberty about 130 B. C.

The discovery shows that after the Persians swept the Babylonians from power and allowed the exiled Jews to return to Jerusalem, the Persian king granted autonomy.

The Jerusalem coins are said to match a small silver coin which for the last 150 years has been in the British museum. It bears an inscription of three Aramaic letters, which it is said always have been wrongly interpreted by scholars and therefore the significance of the coin was not completely understood. He reads the letters as "Yehud," which was at one time the official name of the province of Judea. The coins bear the engraving of an owl, under which appear the three letters in the old Phoenician Hebrew script.
