The signs of steady improvement in the packing business are unmistakable. There is just one discouraging feature about existing conditions, namely unequal liquidation among all industries and industrial elements," says the Monthly Review of Armour & Co. "It is the belief of Armour & Co. that the greatest good would result if the management of every business in the United States would honestly and unselfishly take the full measure of their losses, wipe the slate clean and start over again on the basis of today, rather than of yesterday or of last year," J. Ogden Armour is the author of the Review. His contention is the value of a commodity, whether it be goods or service, is the price that it will bring today. He says there is every reason to believe that the market for raw materials which the packing industry processes for public consumption has seen its lowest level and that it will be unnecessary at the end of this coming year to make a lower valuation of the commodities for which these packers have paid a higher cash price. He says corn hit the bottom and is climbing; the price of live stock generally has risen and he insists that the people make prices. These are his words, "The people of this country and of the world, by their ability and willingness to buy, are the only factors which can regulate prices and any industry which will not adjust itself to the current ability and willingness of the people to buy is in for pretty hard sledding for the future and it is also acting as a handicap to other industries along the road to progress." J. Ogden Armour and his associates confessed losses of 31 million dollars last year. Now J. Ogden Armour and associates are positive that they are going to make a good showing at the end of the present year.

Poisonous gas has been outlawed by the four-power pact and all civilized nations are invited to subscribe. This treaty, a separate one, bans the use of poisonous gas and restricts the use of submarine warfare. It appears that the representatives of the four great powers called together to prevent future wars, traveled half the way.

Ben F. Looney, former attorney general of Texas, was in Dallas and when asked by a newspaper man whether he would be in politics this year said: "Some of my friends recently asked me to enter a political race this year, but I told them I was reminded of a story I had heard, a negro version of Jonah and the whale. An old negro, telling the story, recited an incident after Jonah's escape, saying: "'Den he wuz in a great hurry ter git ter Niniveh. He run erc'oss de san' and he race erlong de road twel he wuz passin' de house er uh ole frien'. De frien' say 'Stop en res' erwhile' but he say 'Suh, I'ze in er hu'y. En de frien' say, 'We'ze got good eatin', yuh better stay.' He 'spon' 'I loves good eatin', but I'ze on muh way.' 'Huccum, his frien' say. 'Why man, us got fresh feesh.' 'Yuh ain' talkin' tuh me,' Jonah say, 'I'ze plumb fed up on feesh.'"

HENRY FORD BUYS LINCOLN MOTOR CO. PLANT AT AUCTION

By Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 4.—Henry Ford formally came into possession of the Lincoln Motor company at Detroit late today when Judge Arthur J. Tuttle in United States district court confirmed sale of the property, effected at public auction this morning. There was no protest to the confirmation.

Mr. Ford, through his representatives, bid $8,000,000 for the Lincoln holding, being the only one to offer a bid. The price was the lowest that could be accepted, Judge Tuttle had ruled previously.

DAVIDSON TO ENTER RACE FOR SENATE

Prominent Local Democrat Receives Information of Intention From Reliable Source on Saturday.

Evidence Presented That South Texans See Opportunity to Break North Texas Succession.

Lynch Davidson, lieutenant governor of Texas and owner and director of large lumber interests will be a candidate for the United States senate this year, while Former Governor William P. Hobby will not be in the race, a prominent local democrat learned on reliable authority Saturday.

This information bears out information recently obtained by another Wichitan to the effect that a South Texan would enter the race which already has drawn three from North Texas.

The effect of Davidson's entering the race is not expected to be an adverse one on the candidacy of Congressman Parrish, who, in spite of the reference in the below quoted bit from the political writer of the Houston Chronicle, is regarded by many South Texans as essentially a West Texan, and who indicates an inclination to support him for this reason.

The speculation of the Chronicle on the evtn of the entry of Davidson or Hobby is given in the following excerpts from an interview with "Jag Stone" given below:

"Well, it just splits the Dallas and North Texas vote all to pieces. I am sure Cullen Thomas won't get out so that gives Dallas at least two candidates. Lucian Parrish probably will stay it, so that makes three candidates from North Texas.

"With North Texas divided up that way it looks to me like either Will Hobby or Lynch Davidson, or both, will get in, although I doubt if one gets in after the other does. But I know that Hobby has ha his eye on that desk in the senate ever since he left Austin and I know that a lot of Davidson's friends are after him to get in the race. It looks to me like that either one that gets in, if the other stays out, will have a fine chance for a place in the second primary, because of the bad split in the North Texas vote. I kinder believe that the South Texas man would have to run against Cullen Thomas in the second primary, or it might be Culberson, Parrish or Colquitt. There's no tellin'. But a cinch on a place in the second primary is too

"HE'LL NEVER READ HIS TOMBSTONE WHEN DEAD"

To The Record News.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 1.—I have just read in Commerce and Finance and with much interest an account of "Kemp Day" and the respect your city paid to one of its citizens upon his return from a severe illness to health. For some years I have use of a short poem (which was published unsigned, but was, so I have been told, written by the former Potentate of the Los Angeles Shrine, "Daddy" Silverwood) on all occasions where respect has been shown to a man when he was still with us. It fits the case of Mr. Joseph A. Kemp so admirably that I will give it to you, feeling that you might care to publish it:

TELL HIM NOW.

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing;
If you like him, if you love him,
Tell him now.
Don't with-hold your approbation
Till the parson makes oration,
And he lies with snowy lilies
On his brow;
For no matter how you shout it;
He'll not care a rap about it;
He'll never know how many tear drops
You have shed;
So, don't wait 'til life is over
And he slumbers neath the clover,
For he'll never read his tombstone
When he's dead.

More than fame, and more than money,
Is the hearty, warm approval
Of a friend.
For it gives to life a savor,
And it makes you stronger, braver;
Aye, it gives you heart and courage
To the end.
If he's earned his praise, bestow it;
If you like him, let him know it;
Let words of true encouragement be said;
If there's anything that's due him
Now's the time to slip it to him,
'Cause he'll never read his tombstone,
When he's dead.

I am writing this from memory, so I may not have gotten it exactly as it is written. Yours truly, GRIDLEY ADAMS.

ARMS PARLEY ACHIEVEMENTS ARE REVIEWED

Delegates Express Satisfaction Over the Results of History-Making Twelve Weeks' Negotiations.

"No Nation Can Violate Principles Without Sacrificing Confidence of the Powers," Says Balfour.

THE OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENTS OF ARMS CONFERENCE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The results of the conference are, principally:

Final approval of the four-power Pacific treaty with a supplement excluding the homeland islands of Japan from its terms.

Final approval of the Far Eastern treaty affirming anew the open door in China and providing for her integrity against foreign exploitation and encroachment.

Final approval of a treaty revising the system of Chinese customs charges—a measure described as vital to the rehabilitation of China by herself.

Formal announcement of a declaration of principles on the Siberian question, pledging the territorial integrity of that land.

Formal announcement of the agreement by Japan to hand back Shantung to China—a conclusion of a subject that almost wrecked the peace conference of Versailles.

Formal announcement of a declaration of Japan's famous twenty-one demands on China and formal announcement of Japan's abandonment of the much attacked "group five."

A provision to the naval limitation treaty that none of the powers pledged may sell any of their warships between now and the time they are scrapped.

A resolution to improve the protection of the Chinese Eastern railway.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The arms conference made the last entry on its record of achievements today and prepared for sine die adjournment on Monday.

At a four-hour plenary session two more treaties and half a dozen supplemental resolutions were passed through the final stage of conference approval and then the delegates exchanged farewell courtesies in a series of speeches expressing universal satisfaction over the results of the history-making twelve weeks negotiations just ended.

Monday's session will be devoted entirely to formal signature of the conference treaties and to an address by President Harding, voicing his appraisement of the work accomplished by the conference he called into being. Most of the foreign delegates plan to leave Washington on Monday night or Tuesday.

The two treaties accepted formally at today's session both relate to China one providing for a revision of the Chinese customs system and the other embodying Elihu Root's "four points" and the amplified open door. Some of the separate resolutions put on the record deal with collateral Chinese questions but included in the lot was a supplement to the four-power Pacific treaty excluding from the scope of the agreement the principal islands of the Japanese empire.

A few hours after the plenary session adjourned, the Japanese and Chinese met and affixed their signatures to the treaty by which Shantung is to be returned to Chinese control. Although the long-debated Shantung questions occupied a key position in the conference program, the negotiations by which it was settled proceeded outside the conference proper and only the two oriental powers were made parties to the resulting treaty.

Spokesmen predicted that the negotiations would bulk large in the history of the world. Secretary Hughes for the United States and Arthur J. Balfour for Great Britain, hailed the conference acomplishments as ushering in a "new era" of international understanding and Albert Sarraut for France eulogized the record of achievement as constituting the "loftiest precedent of mankind." Similar expressions came from all the other national groups.

What the negotiations had done for China and for peace in the crucial area of the Pacific and Far East was the keynote of nearly all the concluding addresses. Japan renewed her pledges of fair treatment for China through Baron Shidehara, who declared his government wanted only to aid in bringing the Chinese nation to its proper place in the world, and Minister Sze of the Chinese delegation, asserted that his people would look on the decisions reached here as the animus of a new inspiration to go forward to orderly development.

Mr. Balfour gave warning that no nation in the future could violate the principles laid down in Washington without sacrificng the confidence of the powers. Hereafter, he said, selfish aggressions at China's expense, could not be excused upon a plea of ignorance, or of private "understandings" with minor Chinese officials.

He is shown here at Allentown, Pa. The Legion chief was wounded himself in France. His program calls for higher compensation for sick and wounded and prompt payment.

G. O. P. LEADERS OPPOSE SALES TAX FOR BONUS

Opposition Among Majority Members Threatens to Defeat Tax Plan for Financing Payments.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Republican house leaders are understood virtually to have abandoned the idea of financing the soldiers bonus by means of a general sales tax, a program which has been freely discussed with more or less favor at both ends of the capitol.

Opposition among the majority members, mostly from the middle and far west, to a sales tax, is said to be so strong as to threaten defeat of such a program. The alignment against it is understood to be practically that which forced acceptance of the 50 per cent income surtax voted into the revenue bill by the senate.

Developments at further hearings today before the house ways and means committee disclosed that in spite of Secretary Mellon's opposition to the plan, a number of the majority members favor the use of part of the proceeds from the refunded British debt in helping to finance the adjusted compensation.

The belief that this would meet with a greater measure of the public approval than would a program involving the raising of the entire amount by means of special taxes.

Arguments on both sides of the question were heard by the committee. Representative Ramseyer, republican, Iowa, opposed the proposal arguing that such use of the money would be a breach of contract with the holders of liberty bonds, who he said, had been told in the law adopted by congress that the proceeds from the foreign debt would be used to retire the liberty bonds issued to raise the money advanced to the debtor nations.

Chairman McFadden of the banking and currency committee, favored the financing of the bonus through the sale in this country of the refunded British bonds with the principal and interest guaranteed by the American government as well as the British government.

Increased inheritance taxes as another means of financing the bonus were advocated by Mr. Ramseyer, who said such taxes could not be passed on and would not be a penalty on initiative and enterprise.

Now that the arms conference has approved the naval limitation treaty some committeemen are studying the subject of naval and army reductions as one means of providing revenue for the bonus.

This phase of the situation is expected to be among those to come up at the forthcoming bonus conference between President Harding and house and senate leaders.

MANY BALLOTS FAIL TO ELECT POPE AT ROME

Sunday Will Be Great Day for People of City Notwithstanding Uncertainty of Proceedings.

By Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 4.—The balloting of the members of the sacred college for the successor of Pope Benedict XV today again proved fruitless. Shortly before sundown the vast crowds which had assembled around the vatican and St. Peter's dispersed with even greater disappointment than on the previous evening when failure to select a pontiff was announced by the black smoke issuing from the sistine chapel.

Gendarmes and troops had difficulty in untangling the immense assemblage of pedestrians and vehicles of all sorts that were massed together awaiting throughout the day the final announcement. Although there was considerable disorder, only a few minor accidents occurred.

Interest in the balloting is increased as each succeeding vote shows that the cardinals have been unable to reach the necessary two-thirds. The crowd this afternoon in St. Peter's square were by far the largest since the office of pontiff became vacant. And while the attitude of the people has been marked by patience, signs of nervousness and high tension are not lacking. Both yesterday and today there was confusion owing to the issuance of white smoke, when the ballots were first set on fire, interpreted by many of the watchers that a selection had been made.

There is a feeling by some of the prelates that the sacred college will adhere to precedent and not announce its choice in the evening, on the ground that morning is more solemn for such an occasion. Some lean to the belief that by the withdrawal of a large sum from the bank, the camerlengo, Cardinal Gasparri, is preparing for a long siege as divergence develops within the conclave walls and no compromise is visible.

Notwithstanding the uncertainty of tomorrow's proceedings, Sunday will be a banner day for the people of Rome, the most of whom probably will await in the vast piazza the possibility of some announcement.

The result has been to fill the air with radio reports to the detriment of necessary commercial service.

POLICE VAINLY WORK CLUES IN TAYLOR KILLING

Possibility That Jealousy Was Motive for Murder of Film Director Is Being Considered.

Mable Normand Testifies to Leaving Taylor's Home Shortly Before Fatal Shot Was Fired.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 4. Miss Mabel Normand, the motion picture actress, who was with William Desmond Taylor shortly before he was shot and killed in his home here last Wednesday evening, tonight stated that a package of letters, written by her to Taylor at different times, was missing from his home, Miss Normand said that the letters were there a few weeks ago. The letters, she said, were friendly and there was nothing "to be ashamed of" but she was unable to account for their disappearance. The police detectives place much weight on this development, saying it was the first real sign of an indication pointing to a possible motive for the shooting.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—The entire force of detectives investigating the slaying of William Desmond Taylor, motion picture director, formerly known as William Desmond Deane-Tanner, was sent out late today on a mission, the nature of which was not divulged at police headquarters.

Up to this time the investigators said they were still unable to express an opinion concerning the identity of the person who shot the director Wednesday night in the living room of his apartments in an exclusive residence section near West Lake Park.

The inquest held today, lasted less than 45 minutes and resulted in an open verdict, the jury declaring Taylor came to his death from a gunshot wound inflicted by an unknown person with homicidal intent.

Practically the only new development in the inquest testimony was that the bullet which ended Taylor's life ranged upward after entering the body on the rear of the left side about four inches above the hip, and lodged near the shoulder. This indicated, according to detectives, the slayer fired from a reclining position or that Taylor was bending over when the shot was fired.

Actress Testifies.

Miss Mable Normand was the only one of a number of motion picture actor and actresses supoenaed who was called to the stand. She testified she called upon Taylor Wednesday night, leaving at 7:45 or about 15 minutes before a shot was heard by the neighbors. Mrs. Douglas MacLean, one of these who told of hearing the shot, was at the inquest but was not called to the stand. A detective, however, testified Mrs. MacLean told him that after she heard the shot she went to her door and looked across a court and saw a man standing at Taylor's door.

The detective named two others who he said told him they heard a shot. The coroners jury asked him if they gave any explanation why they made no investigation at the time. He replied that they said they thought the sound might have been made by an exploding tire.

The deceased was referred to as "Taylor" throughout the inquest.

Search for the person described by Mrs. MacLean and for Edward F. Sands, former butler and secretary for Taylor, continued and the police ran down numerous fruitless clues. It was admitted for the first time by the investigators that Sands is believed to be in or near Los Angeles. He had been sought for several months on a grand larceney charge made by Taylor, who alleges Sands stole some of his effects and disappeared. Investigators said they had the word of a witness they believed unimpeachable that Sands was in this city last Tuesday.

The detectives said the statement of Sands would be an "important element" in the case if he had one to make, in the interest of narrowing the scope of the investigation.

Motive Unknown.

The investigation today, it was said, was devoted largely to the subject of motive. The police have been from the beginning of the opinion that Taylor was slain for revenge, but it was admitted that up to late today it had not been determined that any one entertained animosity for Taylor of such a degree that would appear to be incentive to murder. The possibility that jealousy might have been the cause of the slaying was still receiving attention, it was declared. The discovery that Taylor had once gone by another name was received by the police with much interest and it was said that this might prove an important element in the case.

Inspection of the Taylor residence was completed by finger print experts who announced they had found no impressions or other clues.

The bullet which was taken from Taylor's body was produced at the inquest, then returned to detectives who were endeavoring to learn its history.

Funeral services for Taylor will be held Tuesday afternoon in a local church, the motion picture directors association announced.

CISCO AFFRAY MAY BE PROBED BY GRAND JURY

Legion Post Asks Prompt Prosecution of Men Who Attacked L. J. Starkey, Service Car Driver.

By Associated Press.

EASTLAND, Texas, Feb. 4.—The grand jury probably will be asked to investigate an affray at Cisco yesterday in which L. J. Starkey, was cut seriously, it was said here today. Newt Mahaney, a service car driver, was brought to Eastland, and placed in jail, charged with assault, but later was taken to an unknown destination by the authorities. Three men from a crowd estimated at 200 from Cisco went through the jail in the night, but Mahaney was gone.

After the affray, Sheriff Nolley, against whom bitterness also was expressed, said Starkey and Mahaney had some words and he (Nolly) tried to act as peacemaker. He said he was struck in the face, and then struck Starkey with the butt of his revolver. Sheriff Nolley was not here today, it was said, the information being that he was in Ranger.

EASTLAND, Texas, Feb. 4.—Resolutions calling for the vigorous and prompt prosecution of those guilty of attacking L. J. Starkey, American Legion member, at Cisco, Friday afternoon, were unanimously adopted by the John William Butts Post at Cisco today. A copy of the resolutions have been wired to Governor Neff and a copy is to be presented in person to Sheriff Sam Nolley, of Eastland county, whose alleged action in connection with the affray were also censured in the resolutions. Starkey is reported to be at the point of death.

Several Cisco citizens, including prominent attorneys, are reported to have pledged their assistance in prosecuting the case, a movement having been launched to raise by popular subscription funds for defraying expenses.

The grand jury of the 80th district court will be convened in special session by Judge Hill Tuesday morning for the purpose of investigating the affray.

ARBUCKLE MAY BE TRIED AGAIN DURING MONTH

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.—District Attorney Brady announced today that he wanted the third manslaughter trial of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle set for some time next week or at the latest February 13, a week from Monday. Twice juries have disagreed as to Arbuckle's guilt or innocence.

He is accused of having caused the death of Miss Virginia Rappe.

The district attorney intimated that he would ask that Alice Blake and Zey Provost, two of the prosecution witnesses, be subpoenaed and placed under bond to insure their apearance at the third trial.

The two jurors who voted throughout in the second trial for Arbuckle's acquittal, declared today they felt the prosecution had not presented a convincing case and that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of a reasonable doubt.

LIQUOR SOURCE IS THOUGHT TO BE DESTROYED

Heavy Rains in Freestone County Cause Cessation of Raids on Moonshining Area Near Teague.

Spoils of Officials' Spectacular Expedition Are Exhibited Before a Curious Crowd of Citizens.

By Associated Press.

TEAGUE, Texas, Feb. 4.—Heavy rains which fell over Freestone county most of today caused a halting of the raids in moonshine territory east of here since early yesterday have netted 57 prisoners and 11 stills having a combined daily production of 1,000 gallons.

The spoils of the expedition, which has been one of the most spectacular and successful ever conducted in Texas, were brought here this afternoon and exhibited before a curious populace.

Eighty-five arrests have been made by state rangers and military and prohibition enforcement authorities since the martial law area was enlarged to include all of Freestone county at 5 a. m. yesterday. However 28 of these have been released, leaving 57 in custody. Major Machen, judge advocate general of the martial law district, and Clifford L. Stone, assistant attorney general of Texas, spent a busy day at Fairfield, county seat of Freestone county, examining witnesses. Charges against those under arrest are expected to be filed in the federal court at Waco within the next few days.

A still was captured this morning in the vicinity of Coolidge, 10 miles west of Mexia, and an arrest made. A large quantity of mash was confiscated.

With the prisoner and liquor-making apparatus thus far taken authorities believe they have virtually destroyed the production end of the illicit liquor industry which has done a thriving business in this section since the opening of the Mexia oil fields and which was largely responsible for the declaration of martial law on January 12 last. Following the declaration, first attention was given to the apparently well-organized ring whereby the liquor was sold and distributed. But even after the ring had seemingly been broken up, liquor continued to flow in and around those parts in copious quantities. Then it was that authorities directed their attention to the back woods of eastern Freestone county which thus far had so well concealed the distillers and their operations. Surveys of the tracts were made, maps drawn from aeroplane observation and plans laid which resulted in the unexpected and successful raids of the last two days.

As soon as weather conditions permit, the moonshine area will be further canvassed by authorities in hope of making further seizures and possibly more arrests, although it is believed that those alleged moonshiners who escaped during the first raids have made a clean get-away from this section. Martial law will be maintained here for several weeks at least, Brigadier General Jacob F. Wolters, commander of the military forces said today.

SENATOR KENYON MAY NOT ACCEPT PLACE ON BENCH

By Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 4.—Governor N. E. Kendall received a telegram from W. S. Kenyon today stating that he will not resign his seat in the United States senate to accept the appointment of circuit judge of the eighth district until the constitutional question raised has been settled.

The objection was said here to be the provision against acceptance by a congressman of an office in which the salary was increased during his congressional services. Senator Kenyon's friends said they thought he could accept the judgeship at the old salary and congress could pass special legislation later increasing his pay.

WICHITA COUNTY TEACHERS BEST PAID RURAL TEACHERS IN STATE, DECLARES REPORT

Wichita county pays its rural school teachers higher average salaries than any other county in the state and double that of some counties. In return during the last year 60 per cent of the men and 67 per cent of the women were teaching their first year in their present positions. Forty per cent of the women teachers have never taught school before and their average experience is 1.6 years.

Approximately 12 per cent of the men teachers and 42 per cent of the women teachers hold second-grade certificates. First-grade cerificates are held by 70 per cent of the men and 50 per cent of the women; permanent certificates by 18 per cent of the men and 8 per cent of the women.

The above are in part the findings of E. E. Davis, rural-life specialist of the extension department of the University of Texas. In a letter received Saturday and addressed to the county superintendent of schools and the county board of education, Mr. Davis gives in part his findings and conclusions regarding the rural schools of this county, based on a several days inspection made here several weeks ago.

The report to the county superintendent and county board is to be followed with additional data regarding the conditions of the rural schools. The reports will include the survey made by others from the extension department.

Says Should Have Best.

Basing his recommendation on the fact that the county pays higher salaries than any other county in the state Mr. Davis says that he believes that it is possible to secure also the highest grade of teachers in the state. He recommends in the future only new teachers be hired who have the proper grade certificate and have had the desired experience.

The letter received by Burl Bryant, county superintendent of schools is as follows:

"It was your desire that I report to you the full and complete results of the recent survey of the rural schools of Wichita county. The report is not yet completed but I should like to call your attention to one portion of it; viz., the teacher situation in the county.

"All of the teachers, trustees and laymen of your county, I am sure, desire better schools. They want to know the facts about their schools. They want to know the plain unvarnished facts. They want to know where Wichita county stands educationally. Without a knowledge of the true facts forward steps for improvement can not be taken except with the greatest of hazard and uncertainty. It would be like stumbling about trying to find one's way in the dark. To find where the rural schools of Wichita county are at present, where they want to go and how to get there were some of the purposes of this survey. In this relation, I beg leave to call your attention to the present teacher situation as follows:

Teacher Statistics.

"Twenty-seven per cent of the teachers in the county are men and 73 per cent of them are women. The median age for the men teachers is 31.6 years; for the women teachers 22.9 years, or 8.7 years younger than for the men. The median age at which they began teaching was 20.2 years for the men and 17.9 years for the women. The number of years of actual teaching experience gave a median of 6¾ years for the men and 1.6 years for the women. Thirty per cent of the women teachers were teaching their first year. Of the seventeen men teachers employed, one was teaching his first year. Sixty per cent of the men and 76 per cent of the women were teaching their first year in their present positions.

"One of the distressing things about the above figures is the youthfulness and lack of experience on the part of so many teachers. Especially is this true of a very large per cent of the young women teachers. Since the median for the teaching experience of the women teachers now employed is 1.6 years, we may reasonably infer that it was not very far different from this figure for last year and the year before. Forty per cent of the women teachers employed at present have never taught before this year. Substantial buildings are not constructed by amateur workmen. A first-class system of schools can not be had with so many inexperienced teachers.

Experience

"The median teaching experience for the men teachers was found to be 6.75 years. That is some better than for the women. But if the median experience for the doctors and lawyers of Wichita Falls were only 6.75 years, where would the profession of law and medicine be in that city? What sort of pay would the doctors and lawyers receive What sort of respect would the general public have for them? Before the public schools and the teaching profession can fully come into their own, there must be more men and women of mature years and adequate training attracted into the business of school teaching.

"Sixty per cent of the men teachers and 76 per cent of the women teachers were teaching their first year in their present positions. The natural inference is that most of them shift about from place to place from year to year. This is a very bad thing for the schools. It would be infinitely better if they had capable teachers as permanent residents, citizens and community leaders.

Qualifications

"Second-grade certificates were held by 12 per cent of the men teachers and 42 per cent of the women teachers; first-grade certificates by 70 per cent of the men and 50 per cent of the women; permanent certificates by 18 per cent of the men and 8 per cent of the women.

"The percentage of second-grade certificates is entirely too high for the best interest of the schools. It is true that some of the teachers holding second-grade certificates are very efficient as executives and instructors in the elementary grades. But as a general rule that is not the case. The average of the quality of teaching service rendered next year could be raised very materially, no doubt, by the employment of more teachers of higher certificate.

School Terms.

"The average length of all the school terms in the county was 8.9 months. The median salary for the men teachers was $1330.55 per term of 8.9 months and for the women $1124.33 per term of 8.9 months. The author is inclined to believe that the salaries paid to the rural school teachers in Wichita county are the best paid by any county in the state. If there is another county in the state where the average length of school term is greater than in Wichita county, the author does not know about it. The length of school term and the salaries paid are infinitely better than those paid in East Texas and in Central Texas. The average salaries paid in many of the counties is less than half what is paid in Wichita county.

With the funds to maintain the schools for practically nine months per year and pay teachers the salaries that it is possible to pay in Wichita county, there is no reason why that county should not have the very best corps of rural teachers of any county in the state. I can have them if the county superintendent and the boards of trustees will go after them. For that reason I shall take the liberty to recommend that the trustees employ none but well-trained men and women of experience to teach their schools for the ensuing year. I do not mean to be understood as recommending the dismissal of all the teachers of second-grade certificate now in the service of the schools of the county for there are some good ones. But I would advise most emphatically that there be no other teachers of that grade employed than the ones now in the service in the county. This will eventually mean much for the permanent betterment of the schools."

Sincerely yours,
E. E. DAVIS,

good a thing for either Hobby or Davidson to pass up.

"Then, so far as Davidson is concerned, there's this angle to it. If he should be defeated by Culberson it wouldn't be any particular disgrace, for a good many other men have had that happen to them. And it would line up a partisan element in his favor that might carry him into the governor's chair two years from now.

"Yes, sir; you can just look for another candidate in the field now, and he will be from South Texas. That will add another angle to it, and it will take some figurer to figure out what will happen then."

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 4.—The collection of United States internal revenue taxes is a big job. The Civil Service Commission said in a statement issued today that more than 20,000 government employes are engaged in this work, 7,800 of whom are attached to the Income Tax unit. This latter figure includes more than 5,000 auditors and inspectors of income tax returns who are employed in Washington and in the field.

Notwithstanding this large force, the Civil Service commission states that the Bureau of Internal Revenue needs several hundred more auditors and inspectors for the Income Tax unit, and that an examination to fill these positions will be held throughout the country on March 8. The entrance salaries offered range from $1,800 to $3,000 a year. Advancement will depend upon demonstrated efficiency.

New appointees are given a six weeks course of training in the technicalities of the income tax law and are paid full salary during such instruction.

Full information and application may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or from the Civil Service Board at the post office or custom house in any city.

Make Progress In Drilling on Panhandle Test

Drilling steadily, without any shut down on account of the cold weather, the Carson county test being drilled by W. W. Silk, Jerome Stone and Orville Bullington, was down 1,400 feet on Saturday, according to reports from the Panhandle. This well is believed to be the only Panhandle test which has not been interrupted at some time in drilling by the cold weather. This is also an unusual record for a cable tool test in the Panhandle.

The Waggoner test being drilled by Cullum, Stone, et al, between the new south Electra field and the older producers of West Electra, is down around 700 feet, according to Saturday reports from the field. This test has been drilling about a week.

SEYMOUR SCHOOL BONDS SOLD TO KANSAS BUYERS.

Special to the Record News.

SEYMOUR, Texas, Feb. 4.—The Seymour Independent school district report the sale of $25,000 six per cent forty-year bonds. These bonds were voted in 1921 for the purpose of repairing the ward school and completing the auditorium in the new high school building. Buyers from Wichita, Kansas, took the issue at $25,540.

Bids will be asked for within the next few weeks and work is to be done during the coming vacation.

LARGE ORDER PLACED WITH LOCAL PLANT

An order for 100 Wichita trucks equipped with passenger bus bodies was received Saturday by the Wichita Motors company from their branch representative at New Orleans, La. The order came from a firm which operates a large number of passenger busses in New Orleans and its suburbs. The placing of the order with the local concern is highly gratifying to officials of the company, testifying to the mark made by the Wichita Falls trucks in New Orleans where several hundred are in service.

The order was received on Friday and prompt delivery had been guaranteed on the first chassis to New Orleans. It will be shipped from the local plant tomorrow, the finishing touches being put on it today.

In addition to making these passenger busses, which in a number of cities are supplementing the street car service, and providing transportation to outlying sections, the company is busy with its experiments on a gasoline propelled railway passenger car, which is designed to replace the heavy and unwieldly trains on local service, allowing the railroads to give additional local service at less expense.

The first car will be finished in a couple of weeks and it, with a trailer, will be run on an excursion to Graham and return on the Wichita Falls & Southern under a regular train schedule, if arrangements can be made.

The gasoline car with trailers can handle local business for the roads at a much lower cost and with a much lower dead weight to pull per passenger, it is the contention of motor company officials.

PRESIDENT EBERT AGAIN THROWN OUT OF WORKERS' UNION

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—President Ebert on his 51st birthday today was again thrown out of the saddlemaker's union. Action was taken on the ground that his actions had been damaging to organized labor. The Rote Fahne (Red Flag) today attacks President Ebert.

"Ebert earns 300,000 marks yearly, and has 400,000 more to entertain—but not the workmen. You you wonder that he forbids the Lungry railroad workers to strike? Stand by your fighting brothers!"

French railways will reserve special cars for mothers and babies traveling alone, if a bill now before parliament becomes a law.

They Helped Harding Win Reputation of Being the Best Dressed President

Mr. Harding has been called the best dressed president the United States ever had. Here are two of the men who have helped him to gain that reputation. At right is Paul Gettum of Toledo, Ohio, Mr. Harding's tailor. The above photograph was made after he had visited the White House while he was attending the Tailors' Convention in Washington. The cobbler is E. A. Spady of Emporia, Kan. Although the president dresses well, he is thrifty and does not cast aside a pair of shoes merely because the soles are worn. He sends his shoes to Spady at Emporia and Spady says he puts soles and heels on the Harding shoes that outlast the uppers.

COLLEGE GIRLS FURIOUS OVER CAMPUS JOKES

Northwestern Co-Eds Declare Jokes in School Publication "Grossly Misrepresent" Them.

(By International News Service)

First Co-Ed—What are you going to wear to the prom?
Second Co-Ed—I don't know, I've decided on nothing.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—It is such jokes as this in campus magazines that "grossly misrepresent" the fair co-ed, according to the co-eds themselves—and who should know if they shouldn't?

At Northwestern university 300 co-eds held a mass meeting to protest against the literary output of the campus publications, the chief offenders, according to the young women students, being The Purple Parrot and The Daily Northwestern.

Members of the faculty readily agreed with the co-eds. Prof. Franklin Bliss Snyder said, "The Purple Parrot is insane and not humorous" and that he couldn't get a laugh out of any of the suggestive jokes.

These Are Jokes.

Some of the squibs printed in the latest issue follow.

"What are you thinking of?

He—The same thing you are dearie.

She—I won't let you, and if you try to I'll slap your face.

And this—

"According to Prof. Pooley, some of the students are so ignorant they think the Battle of Brandywine was fought in a barroom."

And this one, which the co-eds insist is "grossly" misrepresentative:

First Co-Ed—You've been drinking whiskey.

Second Co-Ed (amateur distiller)—Thank you.

Called Too Snappy.

President Walter Dill Scott, who has received letters from alumni protesting against stories as "too snappy" and "too highly sophisticated," announced that some action will be taken in the immediate future.

James W. Egan, a senior, business manager of the Purple Parrot, professed unconcern about the furor the publication has created.

"Watch our smoke," he said. "They haven't seen anything yet."

Society Matron Married Few Hours After Winning Divorce, and Daughter

A few hours after obtaining a divorce from Lincoln R. Peabody, Mrs. Peabody was married at West Palm Beach, Fla., to A. Kinnaird Tod, of Scotland. Mr. Tod has been a close friend of the Peabodys for years but there had never been any talk of an attachment between him and Mrs. Peabody. The divorce was granted in Florida on the ground of desertion. Mrs. Peabody alleging that her husband left her two years ago and that he lived at the University Club, New York City, for that period. The above photograph, showing Mrs. Tod (at left) and her daughter, Miss Constance E. Peabody, was made at Palm Beach. Miss Peabody was the only witness in the obtaining of the final divorce papers.

SCHOOL DAYS By DWIG

PROPAGANDA IS BEING SPREAD AGAINST CITY

J. G. Culbertson Reports Concerted Loose Talk Move Against Wichita Falls in Other Cities.

Propaganda, mis-information, or whatever else it may be called, is going the rounds that Wichita Falls is headed straight for the "demition bow wows," if it isn't already there, according to J. G. Culbertson, who returned Saturday from a trip to various Texas cities. And a bad feature of it is, according to Mr. Culbertson, the fact that Wichita Falls citizens have been quoted as authorities for many of the most absurd of the statements. Some of his questioners, he says, have convicted some folks, whom he preferred not to name publicly, of forgetting their civic pride, if not of actual disloyalty.

Loose talking, not all of it intended to be taken seriously, can do a great deal of damage, Mr. Culbertson stated he was convinced, after hearing various stories that were evidently in circulation with regard to various businesses in Wichita Falls. A remark, carelessly heard, and carelessly repeated, led a business friend of his to make a mistake that would do real damage to the entire city if the report gained circulation, he said.

This friend was in the city attending to business and while talking to him, after concluding the deal, remarked that the closing of such and such a bank was a great pity.

"The bank isn't closed," Mr. Culbertson said. But the out-of-town man insisted, that he knew it was, that he passed by it that morning, and the doors were closed, and a notice up.

"I drove by the bank he mentioned, with him later and pointed out the doors opened and the usual crowds inside," Mr. Culbertson continued.

"Then the visitor said, 'That's not the bank I meant,' and he named a bank that was bought by another institution some months ago. He would have gone on to Fort Worth with the absurd idea and might have started reports that would have had damaging effect on all the town simply because he listened to mis-information carelessly and repeated it as carelessly as he listened to it."

MANY MASONS GO TO BOWIE HOME COMING

Local Masons, more than 100 strong spent Saturday in Bowie adding to the serious and the social aspects of the Masonic home-coming celebration in that city—and at a late hour Saturday night none of the automobiles in which the Wichita Falls citizens departed had returned to the "home grounds."

The Bowie celebration, widely advertised among the Masons of Texas, brought together one of the largest gatherings of distinguished Masons ever held in the state. The celebration was in honor of L. G. Hawkins, of Vernon, grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Texas, and D. F. Johnson, grand master of the Masonic lodge of Texas, both of whom were formerly residents of Bowie.

Mayor Walter D. Cline, potentate of Maskat Temple, headed the delegation from this city, which included a host of the more widely known Masons of Wichita Falls.

MAY EXTEND TIME TO PAY FOR PAVING

A recommendation that the Eleventh street paving be so arranged that the property owners will have four years instead of three to complete the paving of their property, making five equal payments for the paving, will be submitted to the city council at its meeting Monday night by Street Commissioner Curlee, he said Saturday.

This action is taken, Mr. Curlee said, on account of the difficulty which some property owners would have in making the larger payments and due to the belief that the money situation is such that the paving contractors could easily dispose of the notes for the longer term.

COUNTY HAS OVER 9000 AUTOMOBILES

With the enforcement of the state law requiring licenses to be inaugurated at once Wichita county had 9,150 automobiles registered Saturday night. The number of machines registered is in excess of the number at the same time last year. Based on the usual number of cars purchased during a twelve month period it is expected that the number will be in excess of 12,000 before the end of the year.

City and county officers announced recently that beginning February 1, they would arrest all automobile owners who had failed to secure their 1922 license tags.

Canada has an area of 3,729,665 square miles.

Frank S. Stone of Westboro, Mass., says the Boston Globe, has worn the same overcoat for thirty-five winters and he says it is good for ten more. For bitter cold days he has a heavier coat which has been in service for only twenty years. Stone says styles travel in a circle, returning, on the average every five years, his thirty-five-year-old coat having been in the hight of fashion seven times.

FRANK REEDY SPEAKER FOR KIWANIANS

Frank Reedy, of Dallas, who knows the wild animals and wild plants of the Yellowstone Park region better than a far Western ready-to-wear buyer knows the wild life of New York city, is going to tell the Kiwanians a few things at the club's weekly luncheon tomorrow noon. He may describe the night-blooming "serious" or the manner in which the wild waffle iron feeds its young—but no man knoweth in advance exactly along what pleasant lanes Frank Reedy's talk will stroll.

Pat Jarrett is responsible, however, for the statement that Reedy's discourse to the members of the Kiwanis club will be "surcharged with pep, optimism and quaint information about animal life." Which, come to think of it, is rather an unnecessary observation on Pat's part insofar as many Kiwanians are concerned, as Frank Reedy spoke before the club here some time ago and made a "whale of a hit." Reedy has been called "nine-tenths of Southern Methodist University," which is a further guarantee that he can wag a waggish tongue on occasion. Southern Methodists being naturally gifted in juggling the king's English.

Vaughn Ray, who rates as one of Clint Wood's favorite "vons" a fact brought out at the annual Chamber of Commerce dinner, is going to team up vocally with Miss Trenholm Doyle soloist at the First Baptist church, and with the aid of Mrs. Lucile Brooks Huff at the piano, these two will sing until the more or less widely advertised welkin rings.

Another interesting feature of the meeting will be the "silent boost." "Tex" Scheurer is going to give a safety razor to every Kiwanian present, and according to Pat Jarrett, this razor will "shave anything from the ordinary house cat to the fretful porcupine." If it fails to work, return it to Tex who will exchange it for a roll of bicycle tape.

That seems to be about all the program committee of the Kiwanis club had to report, when the committee, clothed in their cutaway clothes and silk hats, waited upon the lordly reporter barricaded behind his evil smelling pipe and air of proud disdain.

EXPORT TRADE ACTIVE AGAIN— CULBERTSON

"People are still blaming general business conditions on the conditions in foreign markets and there I believe they are missing their guesses," declared J. G. Culbertson, president of the Wichita Motors Co.

Our factory here, which has always done a large export business furnishes an instance of this. Not since the middle of 1919 has our export mail attained anything like the volume it has today—orders, inquiries as to prices and shipping, and notices of approaching orders.

"Only today we got an order for five trucks to be shipped to Japan, a market which has not been active for months, but is now showing signs of revival.

"We shipped two trucks today on an order we got recently from South Africa. We recently filled an order for trucks on the West coast of Africa. In addition to this we recently got an order for additional trucks from a South American dealer who only a few months ago did not think that business conditions sufficiently for him to sell the trucks he [illegible]

"These orders are from markets which are beginning to be active again after a several months dullness and can only indicate one thing—real improvement in general conditions.

"I am sure that our case is typical of other houses doing an export business and that their experiences of improving trade will bear me out in my contention of general improvements."

Jitney Will Serve People Across River

Announcement was made Saturday that beginning Monday morning a jitney service would be inaugurated from the down town section to the north side and the Southland addition. The ten passenger cars which will start Monday morning will be operated by Walter Pritchard and Gentry Johnson.

According to owners, it is planned to operate the car so as to best serve the two sections of the city which at present have no street car service. Mr. Johnson said that a definite schedule would be worked out as this was determined.

Beginning Monday the car will start at Seventh and Indiana streets and alternate in runs to the two sections. Going to the Scotland addition the car will go down Seventh to Burnett, out Burnett across the Burnett street bridge stopping for the return at the railroad crossing on North Broadway street.

Going to the north side the car will follow the pavement on Indiana street across the bridge stopping for the return trip at the Katy shops.

YATES SEARCHES FOR FATHER OF RUNAWAY BOYS

Juvenile Officer Yates Saturday night made a fruitless search for Ed Smith said to be the father of two runaway boys who are being held at Gainesville, Texas. According to a wire received Saturday from that city, officers there have in their custody Walter Smith and a younger brother.

The telegram said that the boys claimed to come from this city. They gave the name of Ed Smith as their father. They said he was employed at a refinery. Mr. Yates said that no report had been made to him of any runaway boys during the last few days.

Building Real Ice Palace for Ottawa Carnival

Here is a real ice palace nearing completion. The annual ice carnival will soon be held at Ottawa, Canada and the Palace of Ice that is the headquarters of the celebration, is being made ready. The palace is made inside and out, of solid blocks of ice, hundreds of tons of clear crystal building material being used for the purpose. When illuminated at night, the effect is remarkable.

Not Unusual for Wives to Have Suspicions of Husbands, Judge Says in Refusing Man Divorce

Wives may accuse their husbands of straying from the family hearth and paying undue attentions to "other women." It may be aggravating to the husband but as long as the wife confines her activities to this method of torture there is nothing unusual about their relations.

So held Judge Ed Napier of the 78th district court Saturday in the trial of the divorce of R. H. Honnoll against his wife Viola. The plaintiff husband testified that his wife accused him of being more interested in other women than herself, citing the fact that she at one time alleged that condition of affairs in a divorce petition filed by herself.

Judge Napier in refusing the divorce said in the absence of proof showing the unfaithfulness alleged, he did not believe a cause for legal separation had been cited. He added that it was not unusual for wives to be suspicious of their husbands.

COUNTY NOT TO WAIT FOR COURT ACTION

Work will start the first of the week on the laying of pavement across the Frieberg cut-off of the Burkburnett road north of this city, according to announcement Saturday. The south mixer of Potts and Prentice has completed the paving to the cut-off and it has been decided to pave the mile and quarter stretch at once rather than wait until the court of civil appeals has acted on the appeal of the injunction suit which was brought to restrain the county commissioners court from paving it in preference to the old route.

The injunction suit was argued before the appeal court Saturday and it is expected that a decision will be announced by the court within a few days although a period of two or three weeks might elapse it is said.

With unfavorable weather still prevailing only 2,200 feet of paving was completed on the Burkburnett road during the last week at the two mixers. A little over a mile an dhalf of the road has now been completed.

Three Jailed On Charges Of Burglary

F. M. Smith, B. M. Stout and Ralph Ferguson, the latter a juvenile, were arrested Saturday afternoon by Constable Frank Morgan and Deputy Constable Lay in connection with alleged burglary of the home of Mrs. Irene Mixon, 1402 Sixth street Friday night.

According to officers, all of the loot which consisted of clothing, and a clock with an approximate value of $200 has been recovered.

Charges of burglary were filed against the three men and they are being held to await the action of the grand jury now in session. According to attorneys connected with the county attorney's office, the three men made signed statements in which they had taken the property from the home early Friday night.

Ferguson is a relative of Mrs. Mixon who was not at home at the time the burglary occurred. According to their alleged statements the three said they gained entrance to the house with akey. They were arrested at a residence on Wichita street.

Frank H. Swartz, a young New York artist who could not pay his room rent, has won a fellowship in the American academy in Rome, which gives him three years' education and an allowance of $100 a year for expenses.

NOTED WOMAN EXPECTED AS VISITOR IN WICHITA FALLS SOMETIME DURING NEXT MONTH

Miss Anne Morgan, one of America's foremost women, and better known for her own activity in the restoration work for devastated France since the war, than she formerly was for being the daughter of J. P. Morgan, the noted financier, will be in Wichita Falls early in March, acording to word received by Jack Culbertson, the Texas chairman for Devastated France Relief campaign. Miss Morgan's visit to Texas is in connection with the relief work.

Tentative plans have been formed for a noon day luncheon at which the business men will be asked to meet Miss Morgan and hear her talk, a meeting of the Civic League, the City Federation of Women's clubs, and other women's organizations for the afternoon, and a public program in the evening. Miss Morgan will be in Wichita Falls two days.

Motor Cop Is Injured When Struck by Car

K. B. Kinsner, motorcycle officer sustained painful injuries Saturday afternoon when the motorcycle which he was driving collided with a Ford automobile at the corner of Ninth and Burnett streets. Kinsner was thrown from his machine and when picked up in a semi-conscious condition he was lying underneath the automobile.

He was taken to his home 304 Adam street. Late Saturday night it was stated that his injuries were not considered serious.

According to spectators the collision could not be blamed entirely on either the driver of the motorcycle or the automobile. Kinsner was coming toward the downtown district on Ninth street whe nthe driver of the Ford crossed Burnett street in front of him. The motorcycle struck the machine near the center resulting in damage to the running board and one fender. The motorcycle was badly wrecked. The name of the drive of the Ford was not known by the police.

Unless she foregoes her official income, Princess Mary will continue to draw, after her marriage, the annual sum of $30,000. This is provided under the civil list act of 1910 for each daughter of the sovereign "who attains the age of twenty-one years or marries." She draws it as long as she lives.

LARGE CROWD ATTEND ALAMO MOTHER'S CLUB.

One of the largest crowds this year attended the meeting of the Alamo Mother's club held at the building Friday afternoon when an informal program was rendered. Devotionals led by Mrs. Bernard opened the meeting which was presided over by Mrs. L. R. Buchanan, the president and an interesting and instructive talk on "Who Is Jane's Teacher" by Mrs. J. C. Berney was a feature of the program. Miss Gertrude Ray, gave a vocal number; little Miss Georgiana Davidson, a violin selection and Miss Kate Burgess, principal of the Travis school, a talk. Miss Burgess expressed the appreciation of the Travis school to the Alamo Mother's club in her talk, for the help received from them on their piano fund, and told how much the children enjoyed the new piano recently purchased.

During the business session, small bags containing a dime, were given each member with instructions in it to invest the money in a way that would multiply and report at a social meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. M. J. Basilara in April.

Financial reports given by the various committees, showed that the cafeteria had been run with a small profit since the last meeting.

In the report from the teachers of the various rooms, the low third with Miss Cliburne, teacher, proved to have the largest attendance of mothers present and was awarded the picture for this month. The high fourth with Miss Margaret Morgan, teacher, reported the highest percent in the punctuality and attendance of pupils for the month.

UNIVERSITY STUDY CLUB MEETS TUESDAY.

Members of the University Study club met in regular session Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs. J. C. Berney on Ninth street and studied the characterization and atmosphere of the novel "Victory". The lessons on this subject will be completed at the meeting this week.

Individuality Most Valuable Asset in Dress

INDIVIDUALITY is more and more coming into its own, in the matter of clothes. No longer are we satisfied with the dictates of the fashion experts, but at last rely on our own sense of the fitness of things. Many interesting and unique designs have been the result of this situation.

It has been especially noticeable in the evening wardrobe. As evening frocks and gowns are invariably simple these days, it follows the natural trend of individuality finds outlet in magnificent wraps. Take for example the one sketched here. Many points of interest surround this voluminous cape of gleaming gray satin, which a skilful hand has effectively trimmed with triple bands of gray chinchilla fur, and given the soft folds of the huge shawl collar. It can be worn not only by the tall slender woman, but also by tiny persons, for its many narrow bands tend to emphasize height in such a way as to make its wearing possible for even such a tiny person as Mary Miles Minter, star in Paramount pictures, now appearing in "Tillie," shown in the photograph. It is suggested that should this type of cape be adopted, the coiffure should adhere to the piled arrangement of curly loops, such as Miss Minter is seen wearing here.

Needless to say, next to the importance of the cape and gown, comes the exacting selection of accessories. There are times when even the most beautiful of necklaces are not desirable, and it is for such times that such a uniquely designed bracelet, as illustrated in the sketch at the upper left, is suggested. If this exquisite piece is worn, it more than compensates for the lack of more obvious fancies. It is unusually distinctive, and one may well dispense with other jewels. Made of platinum, with banding circles of small diamonds and sapphires, with large cut sapphires tipping the horns, it forms a most alluring touch to any costume.

MRS. FULLER HOSTESS TO SMART SET CLUB.

Mrs. George Fuller of Brook Manor was hostess to a delightful meeting of the Smart Set Bridge club Thursday afternoon when two tables composed of club members enjoyed the games.

In her honey-moon's sweet hour.

And called him a different flower.

But her Babe did she think the aforesaid "pink."
And He was "Poppy" merely.

I'm also very fond of me."

Hygiene and Care of the Baby

HABITS AND TRAINING.

Habits are the result of doing the same things a great many times. If a small action is repeated often enough, the person does it without thinking, and it becomes a habit. If the habit continues for a long time, it may become very difficult to break.

It is best that a baby should have only good habits. Sometimes he learns or some one teaches him a bad habit. These bad habits should be corrected as soon as possible, or before they become difficult to correct.

One of the bad habits which is taught the baby is that of sucking a "pacifier" or other object. The baby does not teach himself this disgusting practice, and he should not have to suffer for it. The pacifier never is really clean and may carry germs of disease to the baby's mouth. All pacifiers should be destroyed immediately and no such object ever should be put into the baby's mouth under any circumstances.

The baby may teach himself to suck his thumb and fingers. Continual sucking of the thumb, like sucking a pacifier, will spoil the natural beauty of the mouth by causing protruding of the upper jaw and teeth. It also causes a constant flow of saliva and spoils the child's appearance.

To cure the thumb-sucking, fasten a wooden tongue depressor (obtained at a drug store) or small piece of wood padded with cloth or cotton on the inside of the elbow over the sleeve. This will prevent the child from bending his arm to get his hand in his mouth. An aluminum mitten to prevent thumb sucking, has been designed which may be purchased at most drug stores. The use of this causes no discomfort and is preferable to other methods. This treatment should be continued day and night until the habit is entirely cured.

Some babies may be taught to control the bladder and stool during the day by the end of the first year. To do this, it is necessary to put the child on the chamber at regular intervals and immediately after each meal, and on rising and going to bed.

To punish a child for persistent bedwetting is as cruel as it is worse than useless. A child should not wet the bed after one year of age. If he does, a physician should be consulted. Many a young person has had his childhood spoiled by this disorder, which if not cured while he is young, may persist even to his old age.

To cure bedwitting, first ask a physician to make a thorough examination of the genitals and the urine to determine whether there is some condition which needs to be corrected. Also to examine for adenoids, enlarged tonsils, decayed teeth or other source of nerve irritation. Any physical defects discovered should be corrected.

Limit the liquids taken at the last meal at night. Take away the pillow and raise the foot of the child's bed several inches. Provide an alarm clock and set it twice each night, one at about 10 and again about 2 a. m. Require the child to get up and empty the bladder. This treatment should be continued every night for a month or longer until the habit of voluntary control is substituted for the involuntary action.

Most children will occasionally handle or play with the genitals. They never should be shamed for doing this, but should be told that it is wrong and then give a toy or game so as to turn their thoughts to other matters. The genitals always should be kept clean and free from soil or discharge. Drawers or diapers should be loose fitting and clothing should not be permitted to rub or chafe.

Crying: A child may be taught to cry when he is only a few days old. He likes to be held and rocked. When he is put down he cries and so he is taken up and carried. He soon learns that if he will only cry hard enough some one will come and get him.

A child needs a short period of crying every day to develop his lungs, but the habit of crying to be rocked, or whenever denied anything should be corrected promptly. A baby can be broken successfully of this habit by letting him cry it out. Once or twice will suffice.

Learning to Walk: The average child begins to want to stand at about the tenth month and to walk from the twelfth to the fourteenth. Earlier efforts at standing and walking should not be encouraged. A child never should be urged to stand and walk, especially if he is heavy. He will want to stand and walk of his own accord so soon as the little legs are strong enough to bear his weight.

Learning to Talk: A child learns to talk by hearing older people and other children speaking. At first, speech to him is but a jumble of sounds as a foreign language is to us. Later, he begins to learn that certain sounds mean certain people or things or movements.

It is very necessary that he should hear these words and sounds correctly spoken and that when he begins to talk he should hear correct English. Do not use the so-called "baby talk" in speaking to a child. Otherwise he will learn it and other improper methods of speech, only to have to unlearn them later with much effort.

Toys: Since a baby wants to put everything in his mouth, his toys must be those that can be used safely in this way. They should be washable and should have no sharp points or corners to hurt the eyes. Painted articles, or hairy and woolly toys, also toys having loose parts such as balls or objects small enough to be swallowed are unsafe and should never be given a small child.

A baby should never have too many toys at one time. A handful of clothespins, or a silver teaspoon or tincup, will please just as much as an expensive doll or other toy. It is a good plan to have a box or basket in which to keep empty spools and other household objects with which the baby may play.

Moral Training: A little child does not know right from wrong until he is taught by older persons. He follows his own fancy and lets his little hands and feet do mischief, not knowing that he is doing anything which will cause others or himself to come to grief. For this reason, older persons must be ready to guide the baby and teach him the right method of behavior.

But that does not mean that he should be forbidden continually to do this or that or the other. A child should have, from his very early infancy, the opportunity of choosing to do things himself. If he is not allowed to do this, he won't know how to reason and choose for himself when he grows older and is obliged to do it.

On the other hand, it is necessary for a child to learn obedience, and a wise mother will train her child to obey; not, however, to obey a command "because I told you to do it," but to obey because it is a pleasure to do so.

Harsh treatment or punishment has no place in the proper upbringing of the baby. If a baby's inclinations lead him in the wrong direction, some one must be at hand to guide him into another and better one and to turn his eager interest and his energy toward something that will amuse but not harm him. This is the golden rule for the training of babies and one which applies to the training of children of all ages.

Usually there is some reason for the naughtiness of babies. The babies who are fussy, restless and fretful are usually either uncomfortable in some way because they have not been fed properly and taken care of, are sick or ailing, or have been indulged too much. On the other hand, babies who are fed properly, who are kept clean and have plenty of sleep and fresh air, and who have been trained in regular habits of life have no cause for being "bad" and therefore are "good."

KNICKERS

As to knickers, will women wear them? We are so used to wearing IT that it will seem very singular to wear something plural. Of course, some women will wear them—are now, in fact—for fashion never decrees a new style, however ultra-ult, but some are ready to rush into the breach—in this case it is proper to say into the breeches.

But this is no attempt to knock knickers—which are innocuous—also necessities instead of knick-knacks.

Radical styles are usually adopted first by frivolous females who seize the opportunity to attract attention; but bifurcated garments are unique in that they are ushered in by especially highminded women; the thorobred English lady with her riding habit, the traveler with her mountain climbing togs, the efficient bicycle woman, the college girl with her gymnasium bloomers, the Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls, the farmerette, the war worker, the athletic woman of today who is keeping fit.

The motives of these are unquestioned. It is this, perhaps, which has made us adapt our minds so easily to the new mode. No fashion plate is now without those garments which are a frank acknowledgement of the fact, no longer a secret, that woman has two legs—and intends, too, to use those God-given members as harmoniously as the rest of her body.

Proof that we have accepted knickers is found in our shortening the word knickerbockers to knickers, as we did automobile and bicycle to auto and bike when we appropriated them into practical life.

Are knickers immodest? Think how, in the circus, we give a little anxious grasp when the skirts of the horse-back rider fly capriciously about, but we never bat an eye when the trapeze performer appears in tights. Appropriateness is the prime essential of proper dress. To exercise in the narrow suit-skirt is like entering the "sack race." It is a handicap, and is it not more uncertain, in winds and sports, to trust to the irresponsible skirt than to don knickers which will "stay put?"

Knickered women tourists at the hotels receive every courtesy—as is due. The next generation will come up accustomed to them from the romper days of infancy. Until the first shyness of this generation has worn off, it may be necessary for the more conservative of us to have within easy reach a skirt to slip on over the knickers.

Knickers afford the advantages of ease, freedom, security, health, and athletic development. Without a doubt they are here to stay.

SMILES.

"Who was the king at that time?"
The history question read.
At first Johnny was puzzled,
And scratched his aching head;
But suddenly he thought it out
And calmly he replied,
"At that time there sat on the throne
King Louis, the Cross eyed."
"Why, Johnnie," said the teacher,
"Whatever, under heaven...."
"It's right here in the book, Ma'am."
And he showed her—"Louis XI."

MOTHER!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Adv.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy, white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.—Adv.

WINTER RECIPES

Corn Chowder.

Simmer slowly for one hour one pound chopped beef or half pound bacon or salt pork, then add two large sliced potatoes, two sliced onions, a green pepper, two cups canned corn, one cup canned tomatoes. When the vegetables are tender add salt and pepper, thicken with flour, and lastly add cup of rich milk or cream. Serve hot with toast. Rice may be used in above instead of the corn flour and the result then called chop-suey.

Winter Salads.

Several cans of fruit may be opened at one time and salad made by placing pieces of each on lettuce leaf and covering with mild flavored salad dressing. There is no limit to the combinations which may be served, but it is well not to have too many at one time. Better vary the fruits at different serving. Halved cook prunes will add variety, also slivers of dry figs or dates or chopped raisins. A sprinkling of prepared bran is healthful and appropriate to put on top. Cheese may be served with this salad.

Escalloped Cheese.

Chop stale bread as for dressing; soften with milk, add half pound cheese, one or two eggs, salt and pepper, and bake in moderate oven half an hour. Hominy (first cooked tender) macaroni or rice may be used in this recipe instead of bread crumbs.

Meat Souffle.

Chop meat (about two cupfuls) with one onion. Add cup of white sauce and one egg yolk, salt and pepper. Cook one minute then add the stiffly beaten white of the egg and bake half an hour.

Potatoes au Gratin.

Slice raw potatoes. Place in layers in baking dish, seasoning each layer well with grated cheese, salt and pepper. Cover all with milk and bake one hour or until tender.

Baked Pudding.

Beat two eggs and add cup sugar, cup chopped nuts, cup chopped dates, half cup milk. Sift a teaspoon baking powder into a half cup flour and add. Bake in moderate oven half an hour.

French Potatoes.

Slice raw potatoes, drop into corn meal, fry carefully.

Prune Blanc Mange.

Heat two cups milk. In a bowl mix one egg, three tablespoons cornstarch, two tablespoons sugar, half teaspoon salt. Pour the hot milk over this and then cook all fifteen minutes in double boiler. Add cup of cooked prunes which have been cut into small pieces, and flavor with vanilla. Remove from fire, pour into molds and chill. Serve with sweetened cream. Raw chopped dates or figs may be used instead of prunes.

AGED WOMAN PASSES ON.

SEYMOUR, Texas, Feb. 4.—Mrs. J. M. McKinney, age 74, died at her home following an extended illness. She is survived by her husband and two sons, Wm. J. and Tom McKinney, of Graham, Texas. Funeral services were conducted at the residence Saturday afternoon and burial in the Seymour cemetery.

WOMAN-I-TORIALS

Have we become so efficient that we have learned to do everything about the house except to enjoy ourselves? "Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" are three of the most universal human desires. Let us not forget to be happy.

Why Federate?

With numerous great Federations of women's organizations, there still are scattered over the country, many clubs not affiliated with any state or national organization. Why, they ask, not remain isolated? Why join a federation.

This is the answer: Organization makes practical the dream of the individual or the club. Women have dreamed a great dream of social, industrial, educational and spiritual welfare. Only combined effort can bring it to pass. Unfederated you lose the inspiration and aid of others and they lose the inspiration and aid you would be to them.

WHAT TO DO

For Ringworm or the Presistent Sore—Paint spot every few days with tincture of iodine, using clean cotton or gauze wrapped about a toothpick.

For Ingrown Toe-Nails—These are generally caused by too tight shoes, which press the nail into the toe. 1. Buy better fitting shoes with room for toes to spread. 2. Scrape top of nail thin with a piece of glass or sharp knife or scissors. 3. Raise the grown-in point gently and press wad of cotton under it. Renew this from time to time. 4. To prevent ingrown toe-nails, cut the nails square across the top and wear wide enough shoes.

RECIPES

Canapes.

A Canape is something you not only can ape, but want to. Originally a canape was a couch with a mosquito curtain or canopy. Foodwise speaking, it is a piece of bread, either toasted or fried, upon which may be disposed any number of various spreads. The word is pronounced kan-a-pa, long a and accent on the last syllable.

Your toast, freshly made or warmed up, is to be served hot and well buttered. The canape may be made from round loaves or cut round with the biscuit cutter, but will taste as good whatever the shape. It is dainty laid on a crisp lettuce leaf or with water cress. Some cooks chop very fine, a white onion and lay a dab of it beside the canape.

As to what goes on the prepared toast, its name is legion—anything taste decrees or fancy devises. The first canapes were made with anchovies, or what we, in this democratic country, would call "fish gravy," highly seasoned.

To a white, brown, or tomato sauce, as a foundation, add minced salmon, tuna, cod, herring, sardines, or any other kind of fish; or chopped ham or other meat; or beans, peas, or spinach; or dip the toast in grated cheese and brown in the oven; or use mincemeat, jam, apple-butter or any pie filling.

The trend of canapes is to decoration. Chopped olives, pickles, beets, hard boiled eggs (yolk and white kept separate) are frequently used to make fancy designs: stripes, circles, or borders. A line of egg yolk alternating with a line of egg white is an old favorite. Red pepper or paprika may be added.

Canapes are an excellent supper or luncheon dish.

BURKBURNETT NEWS
SOCIETY AND PERSONAL

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Feb. 4—On Wednesday evening, the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. F. Gill was the center of a gathering of happy young ladies in celebration of Miss Pauline Gill's birthday with a "Little Kid's Party." It was hard to realize that the group of little girl friends were really grown-ups, so sweet and child-like were they in their little girl dresses with flowing curls or braids, ribbon bows, socks and slippers.

Little folks games: A doll dress contest, in which Miss Agnes Grennell won first prize; speeches, songs, jokes and giggles, filled the hours. Ice cream cones and stick candy were served, and the "Little Girl's Party" was concluded with the cutting of the birthday cake, decorated with six little candles and bearing the usual birthday mysteries, which fell, in the cutting, as follows: The ring for matrimony, little Cora Knaught; button, Jake Kramler; wish-bone, Alice Vaughn; dime, for riches, Ione McMahon; thimble, Odell Majors; silver heart, Laura Logan. Mrs. T. A. Freeze and Mrs. J. M. Pogue assisted the hostess Mrs. Gill in entertaining the little girls, all of whom said they "had a good time."

Among the recent entertainment, none were more enjoyable than the birthday party given by Douglas Moody in celebration of his twelfth birthday. There were 38 guests present, all members of the host's Sunday school class. There were stunts and music and jolly games in doors and out; and Miss Hallie Moody, Doug's popular sister saw to it that everybody had a good time. The eats too were fine, being rich chocolate and good cake served by Doug's mother, Mrs. D. A. Moody. The fellows departed wishing their host many more birthdays, and hoping he would have a party every year.

PAINS SO BAD WOULD GO TO BED

Two Women Tell How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped Their Suffering

Iron Mountain, Mich.—"I had terrible pains every month and at times had to go to bed on account of them. I saw your advertisement and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with very good results. I can work all day long now at my sick time. You may use these facts as a testimonial and I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends."—Mrs. A. H. GARLAND, 218 E. Brown St., Iron Mountain, Michigan.

Xenia, Ohio.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of my abdomen that I could not lie quietly in bed. I suffered for about five years that way and I was not regular either. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women, so I decided to try it. It surely has helped me a lot, as I have no pains now and am regular and feeling fine."—Mrs. MARY DALE, Route 7, Xenia, Ohio.

If you suffer as did Mrs. Garland or Mrs. Dale, you should give this well-known medicine a thorough trial.

"CHERRY" JOHNSON'S GANG SLIPS NAWSTY JOLT TO DEVOL HIGH BASKETEERS

Local High School Cagers Take Oklahoma Boys Into Camp 34 to 10. Gerald Coffey, Last Year's Captain, Adds Strength to Red and Black Team's Defensive Play.

By O. F. C.

Playing a brilliant passing game, and making practically every shot count, the Wichita Falls high school basketball team played rings around the Devol, Okla., high quintet yesterday afternoon at Legion hall, winning handily 34 to 10. After the first five minutes of play, the issue was never in doubt, and it became simply a question of how large a score the local boys would collect.

Gerald Coffey, stellar guard of the Knights of Columbus five in the City league, played his first game of the season for the high school and his presence on the court had much to do with the one-sided victory. Coffey, captain of last year's high school team, repeatedly smothered Devol rallies and sent the Red and Black attack flowing back again toward the Devol goal. He will be a tower of defense for the local school when the district championships open here this month.

As usual, the flaming-haired Captain "Cherry" Johnson led the Red and Black offensive. As cool as the proverbial cucumber, covering the entire floor as the tide of battle flowed back and forth between the two hoops "Cherry" bossed his followers' activities in an artistic fashion. He slipped in seven goals from the field, several of which smacked of the sensational and he was the pivot around which the team play of the high school cagers revolved.

"Dummy" Deems was a close runner-up to Johnson with six baskets from the floor, several being of the b r e a k-your-back-and-shoot-'em-backwards variety for which Dummy is acquiring a reputation. Palmer Harrod, playing his regular speedy game of getting tangled joyously in every play, "kicked in" with the four other goals from the field that made up the Wichita Falls total. "Dutch" Anderson, steady ol' Dutch, was right on the job as a guard and completely stopped his man and kept him stopped from the time the opening whistle blew. Ben Howle and Park Mackechney also took a whirl at the gentle pastime before it was over, and each gave a good account of himself.

The game was remarkably clean, only four fouls, either technical or personal, being called by Referee Ferguson. Deems, Howle and Coffey each was guilty of one personal foul, while J. Johnson, of the Devol cagers, committed one technical breach of the rules. All four attempts from the foul line were missed.

Despite the cleanliness of the game, and the lopsided score, it was played fast and hard. Devol repeatedly showed flashes of good team play, and at no time did the Oklahoma boys stop trying desperately to stem the tide of defeat. The score:

BOB M'DONALD WINS TITLE AT OPEN TOURNEY

CAGE "BRITCHES" GIVEN TO HI FIVE BY LITTLE FIRM

Basketball "britches" of dark maroon edged with black silk have been donated to the high school team by the Little Sporting Goods company, the gift being made by Hunter Dempsey, manager of the store, yesterday through Coach Tate. There is real class to each pair of "panties," which form a beautiful match to the team's jerseys, and the high school cagers gave three lusty cheers when they donned 'em yesterday for the Devol game.

CHARITY LAWN TENNIS MEETS DISAPPROVAL

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A resolution adopted by the United States Lawn Tennis association today expressed overwhelming disapproval of so-called "charity" matches for which an admission fee was charged and voted to sanction such matches only when the case was "extraordinarily deserving."

The resolution was passed following a statement by Julian Myrick, president, that "it simply was meant to emphasize the danger of promiscuous matches and the disapproval of the association."

A proposed amendment to the amateur rules prohibiting players from writing newspaper accounts of the tournaments in which the play was defeated.

The "seeded" draw was made manpionships in a resolution passed unanimously.

MERCER'S CLOSE-UPS

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

"Funny thing," mused Jack Kearns recently during a yarn spinning at Dan McKettrick's pugilistic clearing house, "how dubs will rush in and try to cop a sneak on a champion to get a cheap reputation. Experienced fighters shy away from Jack Dempsey, but on our tour of the West we had to take precautions to prevent local champs from putting something over on us. Yes, Dempsey had to stiffen more than one of those birds.

"Remember how Jack Munro became famous over night by staying four rounds with Jim Jefferies? Munro was an unknown Butte miner who captialized his little adventure with Jeff to the extent of a real fight with the bollermaker and other heavyweights. Well, I can tell you an interesting sequel to that story. This winter the wise lads in Butte tried to pull a 'Munro' on Dempsey, but we were tipped off and the local gladiator was flattened.

"Had the unknown landed a sock on Dempsey—and he was a giant—you would have heard about it back here. As it is, I don't even remember his name.

Crowd Aroused Suspicions.

"We did not advertise to meet all comers, but barred nobody. Dempsey, as a rule, sparred three rounds with one of the boxers we carried with the show. This night in Butte I became suspicious when I noticed the stage was crowded with local sporting men and the front of the house was packed. I remembered then we had agreed to take on an unknown boxer.

"Dempsey and I had a scene in the show which ended with a change to full stage with a gymnasium setting. Previous to going on that night I was called aside by a Butte man I knew.

"'I just want to tell you,' he said, 'that you better not take any chance with this fellow tonight. He is big and strong, and they have ribbed him up that he can beat Jack with one blow. Don't trifle with him. I don't suppose he knows anything, but you never can tell.'

"I told Dempsey about it as we were waiting for our cues to go on. He laughed and then he scowled. I knew that Mister Man had trouble coming to him then.

Mountain Man Turned Silly.

"We didn't see the fellow until Dempsey appeared in ring costume and I introduced his opponent. Believe me, he was a whale—as big as Fred Fulton and not awkward. As they shook hands the chap asked Dempsey to 'let him down easy.' He hoped to take advantage of a careless moment. But when they squared off I knew our friend was not going to be there long.

"They feinted, and as the giant came in Dempsey stepped to the right as if he intended to let the big fellow slip by. But just as they were passing each other Jack brought up his left and hooked the guy on the chin. It was no love tap, either. You know how hard the champ can hit with that short left.

"Mister Mountain Man turned silly and crumbled up. He slid to the floor, got up on one knee, took a drunken look at Dempsey and fell down again. He was all through for the evening, so I rang down the curtain.

"Another night in Vancouver a young policeman who had quite a local reputation went on with Dempsey. He had a lot of friends there to see him make a sucker of the champ, but inside of a minute he was on his back. A lot of folks in the house enjoyed the sight of a cop stretched out and they gave Jack quite a cheer."

WORLD CHAMP ON CLAY BIRDS VISITOR HERE

R. A. King of Delta, Colo., formerly a resident of Wichita Falls, whose trapshooting honors include possession of the world's championship in singles, doubles and handicap and the Colorado state championship, was a visitor in this city yesterday.

King recently took part in the "Sunny South" shoot at Houston, where Bill Herr of Guthrie, Okla., hung up the beautiful mark of 596 shattered clay pigeons out of 600. King averaged slightly over 97 per cent in the Houston event, but he was unable to catch "Wild Bill."

The former Wichita Falls marksman, who still holds his membership in the local gun club, came to this city to have Hunter Dempsey of the Little Sporting Goods company, make some alterations in his gun stock. From here he is going to Kansas City to take part in a big live bird shoot.

Walrusses have sometimes been so tamed as to follow sailors on decks of Arctic ships.

Experiments at the University of Oregon showed that one fruit fly produced 145 female offspring and no males.

ARCHER CITY HI LICKS PETROLIA QUINTET 45-20

"Wilson, that's all." Ever hear, in the dim days before the Volstead amendment, that famous cry inviting a rally around the brass rail. Well, the high school basketball teams of Archer City and Petrolia yesterday afternoon staged a tussle in the American Legion hall, and "Wilson, that's all" appeared to be the battle cry of Archer City.

Every time someone yelled, "Wilson," the right guard of the Archer City team whose name was Wilson took it as a personal invitation to seize the ball and sling it through the hoop. The final score was 45 to 20 in favor of Archer City, and Wilson durn near defeated the Petrolia boys singlehanded. He fed the large round ball through the basket nine times from the field, running wild in the last half and shooting seven baskets in a row before the Petrolia crew could check his "crazy streak." As a guard, he was one of the shootin'est forwards for a few minutes that these parts have seen. He made the easy ones look hard, and the hard ones look simple. "Wilson, that's all."

The first half gave promise of an evenly fought battle throughout the entire game, a promise that was not fulfilled. Archer City led at intermission 18 to 15, but she "trompled" all over the Petrolia boys in the second half and made a runaway race of the game.

Huffman, center of the Petrolia team, played a pretty game for the losers, making 13 of his team's 20 points with 5 goals from the field and three from the foul line. But his efforts and those of Jones, Petrolia's lanky left forward, were not sufficient to offset the superior speed and team work that the Archer City quintet uncorked in the final chapter.

SALM STARTS DEAL FOR "ONE OF BEST SPITBALL PITCHERS IN COUNTRY"

Skipper Walter Salm announced yesterday that he had opened negotiations for "one of the best spitball pitchers in the United States," and tacked to that the additional information that the deal "might be closed in a day or two." The spitball artist Walter is seeking is a Class AA flinger, and several other clubs are after him.

"He'll cost us a lot of money if we get him," Salm said, "but he's worth the price."

Salm is not counting very heavily on Barney Dreyfuss's promise to turn over a couple of promising young twirlers to the Spudders when the Pittsburgh Pirates break camp this spring. At least Walter does not intend to carry his pitching eggs all in that one basket, and is quitely scouting around for good hurlers who can be counted upon to make good from the jump.

J. Will Gray, secretary of the club yesterday began the annual job of mailing out contracts to the scattered Spudders. How soon the gang will report is still pather problematical, as Salm is dickering for exhibition games to fill the dates of March 11 and 12. If he can fill those dates, the players will probably be ordered to report here March 5. If he fails to get games for March 11-12, Salm won't assemble his men until in the neighborhood of March 10. At present the Spuds have only five exhibition games scheduled, the Kansas City Blues of the American association, on March 24, 25, 26, and the St. Louis Cardinals on April 1-2. An effort is being made to bring the Oklahoma City club here for April 7-8-9. Altogether it is hoped to play some ten or a dozen exhibition games at Athletic park before the Texas league season opens.

Secretary Gray reports that there are still about sixty boxes for the season to be sold. The sale of season boxes, however, has been far more brisk than last year at this time, and fans who are figuring on box seats should make their reservations early. The boxes sell for $100 for the season, and are good for all the spring exhibition games as well as the Texas league battles. As there are seventy-seven games on the home schedule of the Spudders this year, a six-chair box for $100 will average roughly, with exhibition games included, about 19 cents per chair per game.

Another week should see the completion of the new sixty-foot addition to the grandstand, which will seat some 700 additional spectators. Workmen also have constructed a very "fawncy" flight of stairs leading to the press box on the roof of the main stand, and have doubled the seating capacity of the scribes' den.

BAYLOR GAZES AT CONFERENCE BALL CROWN

With Infield Hitting .300 and Strong Pitching Staff Coach Bridges Has High Hopes for Championship.

By JOHN SPARKMAN.

WACO, Texas, Feb. 4.—Baseball prospects are looking bright for a championship team for Baylor University this coming season. When Coaches Bridges and Harston call out their candidate about the middle of the month, only two men from last year's squad will be missing. Their places will be filled by the best material from the Cub team of last year. The University has an experienced man working on a grass infield, which should be in the best of condition for the conference season. This improvement will give to Baylor one of the best diamonds in the conference.

Coach Bridges probably has the best string of pitchers of any team in the conference. Theo Lyons was one of the most feared twirlers in the southwest last year, and won a majority of his games. This last summer, pitching for Lake Charles, Louisana. Lyons won twenty-three out of twenty-six starts. John S. Tanner is also a good bet. Although he was a bit wild at the first of last season, he showed splendid form in his closing games. He pitched excellent ball for Pittsburg this summer. This should be John's best year on the college diamond. Butler and Frank Wilson are also two men who can step into a box and give accounts of themselves. Still speaking of pitchers, Carl Freeze, who hails from Fort Smith, Arkansas, and who was under the coaching of Frank Bridges in Fort Smith High School has entered Baylor and will be a demon on the mound when he becomes eligible.

PLAN PROBE OF WAGES PAID ON WATER PROJECT

An informal investigation as to the rates of pay being paid for work on the irrigation dam will be instituted by directors of the project following the complaint at a mass meeting of laborers on the North Side where it was alleged that the wages being paid are under living wages for white men and that negroes and Mexicans are being imported for the work by sub-contractors.

A delegation appointed by the mass meeting for this purpose called on directors Saturday and made the complaint voiced at the meeting. While directors are uncertain of their power to do anything with the situation which has been contracted for with a general contracto rand by him in turn to sub-contractors who hire the labor, they are investigating the situation.

One director reiterated previous declarations that the work had been let at a figure and with the intention that a fair wage be let to laborers of all degree and color, and at a figure to enable a white man to live and keep his family clothed and fed.

Another mass meeting is to be held on the North Side Wednesday night.

PERSHING POINTS OUT ADVANTAGE OF ARMY REDUCTION

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Passage by congress of the war departments bill for reduction to approximately 12,000 the number of commissioned army officers would permit, General Pershing explained today, the assignment of highly efficient officers of the regular establishment with national guard organizations and the organized reserve. He said, in addition, the regular army would be greatly improved by training and administration under officers who remain in that service.

"Only officers fit for any duty," the general said, "will remain, and of course, that is what we want. They will be used for development of the citizen army, which I consider the most important thing from a military country."

Countess Accuses Millionaire Of Being Father of Her Child

Michael Paterno

Countess Constantinvitch — Mrs Marie Paterno.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—"He is the father of my child."

After uttering these words in a dramatic court scene Countess Ursa Constantinvitch, with a little cry, pointed to Michael E. Paterno, millionaire building magnate, who had caused her arrest on the charge that she "annoyed" him.

The Countess, only twenty-six and beautiful, had spent a night in jail on Paterno's charges.

"The Countess Constantinvitch annoys me to death," said Paterno, thirty-two and dark and handsome.

In court it was revealed that the Countess had been named co-respondent in a divorce suit filed by Paterno's wife three years ago. Mrs. Paterno had charged that Paterno was the father of the Countess's child, now four years old.

Says She Annoyed Him.

According to Paterno, the Countess has "annoyed" him ever since the divorce suit, stopping him on the street and demanding money.

"I felt very sorry about the Countess staying in jail over night," Paterno said. "It was an awful thing for a woman of her type to do. It began in a joke, although I have been annoyed to death by her for the last year. She calls my mother and my sister and hangs on to my telephone and my car, and the car is so yellow she can see it a mile off."

Paterno then looked serious.

"I know I have made my mistakes, but I have repented. I'm willing to do anything I can to straighten things out. Once she brought the baby in this office and pointed me out as its father. I told her I would keep the baby and take care of it if that would help any. I wanted to see her straightened out.

"Won't Mary Her."

"I won't go to the extent of marrying her, and nothing short of that seems to count. She doesn't need money. She has some, and I give her one hundred ond twenty-five dollars every month. I feel awfully sorry for her, and I think a lot of her. But why will a woman hang on like a leech?

"The Countess gets furious every time she hears of me being out with another girl."

At the time of the divorce trial Mrs. Paterno charged her husband was the father of the Countess's child. When the alimony was being fixed the Countess signed an affidavit that the child was not hers. Later the Countess refused to testify in court against Paterno and gave as her reason that she expected Paterno to marry her and therefore could not testify.

The Countess was then twenty-three. Paterno thirty-two. The friendship between the Countess and the wealthy contractor had begun in the girl's twentieth year.

Pretty, But Sad Now.

The Countess at twenty-six is still pretty, but wan and sad. Her little girl, Nell, is four years old.

Michael Paterno is a swarthy, dark man, with quick, blue eyes and a gracious manner.

Magistrate George W. Simpson sat on the bench. Attorney Joseph said:

"We have no desire to punish this woman, but we ask that she be put on a peace bond and ordered not to annoy this complainant (Paterno). This woman thinks she can collect hush money. She jumped on Mr. Paterno's automobil, and fell off. She may be severely injured in this way, and we would be held responsible."

Judge Simpson then said to the weeping woman standing before him:

"Must Leave Him Alone."

"You heard this man's words. He is entitled under the law to be left alone. Unless you leave him alone I shall put you under a five hundred-dollar peace bond for six months."

The woman smiled weakly through her tears and said:

"How could I get five hundred dollars? I gave up all my friends for this man, and I have nothing left. My baby is sick up in the country and will die unless I get the money which he promised to send me every month. He hasn't done it. Why doesn't he do what he said? Oh, my baby!"

The woman ended in a little cry:

"He is the father of my child!"

All through the trial the woman kept crying and saying from time to time: "What about my baby? My baby sick in the country!"

"That," said the magistrate, "is an unfortunate circumstance."

The magistrate gave a suspended sentence.

MELLON ANNOUNCES LARGEST OFFERING FARM LOAN BONDS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The largest offering of farm loan bonds ever made was announced tonight by Secretary Mellon.

The twelve federal land banks will make a combined offering on Monday of $75,000,000 of five per cent federal farm loan bonds at the price of 102 3-8 and accrued interest at which price they will yield approximately 4.70 per cent to callable date and 5 per cent thereafter. The bonds, Mr. Mellon said, would be dated November 1, 1921, due November 1, 1941, and callable at the option of the issuing bank after November 1, 1931. They will be issued in coupon form, exchangeable for registered bonds. Interest will be payable May 1 and November 1.

This is the largest offering of farm loan bonds ever made, Mr. Mellon said.

Junior College Plan Endorsed By Speakers at School Board Annual Banquet for Teachers

Full endorsement of the plan for the building of the new high school so that it can give two years of college work—a public junior college—was voiced by a number of speakers at the annual banquet given by the school board to teachers in the local schools at the Kemp hotel Saturday night. A capacity crowd was in attendance. Brief talks by members of the school board and prominent Wichitans who were in attendance featured the program. Judge A. H. Carrigan acted as tosatmaster.

Among those making talks were C. H. Clark, W. B. Chauncey, Judge P. A. Martin, Mayor Cline, G. C. Wood, Dr. Green, a visitor from Kentucky; Mrs. M. M. Adickes, W. M. Priddy, and Lee Clark, school superintendent. In voicing his approval of the junior college idea W. M. Priddy, one of those who spoke on this subject, expressed the hope that the building could be completed in time to offer college work to members of the present graduating class.

The musical numbers of the program were particularly good, each number being warmly applauded and encores called for by those present. The entrance music was rendered by a violin trio composed of Mrs. T. B. Greenwood, Miss Marion Maer and Miss Cecilia Adickes, accompanied by Miss Anette Walsh. Misses Maer and Adickes also played a violin duet, and Mrs. Greenwood a violin solo, both numbers being accompanied by Miss Walsh. Ben Neal rendered a vocal solo, creating considerable amusement by sallies directed at various teachers in one of his songs. He was accompanied by Miss Walsh.

Many Wichita Falls people have their eyes on the business situation in Electra. Many of them realize that Electra is a little city with a firm foundation and since the roads have been completed these people have learned more about Electra. Good business locations are in demand, or would be if there were any. There is not a vacant store building of any consequence in Electra. If conditions improve the only solution will be to build more. It is predicted that construction work will be under way in Electra in sixty days or less.—Electra Star.

The Hon. Lucian W. Parish, representative in congress from the Wichita Falls district, will fire his first gun in the senatorial campaign at Sherman, February 11. The reason Sherman was selected, it is said, is due to the fact that Mr. Parrish was born in Grayson county. Well, that is something in his favor, the fact that he is not afraid to come back, which is more than can be said of some other Grayson county sons who left early in the game.—Denison Daily Herald.

The Tribune is convinced that the man for the people of this section of the state to support is Lucian W. Parrish of Henrietta. He is a western man and understands the needs and problems of this section. It cannot be argued that Senator Culberson has not had the office long enough. He is more or less in feeble health and twenty-four years in the senate is enough honors for one man. It is time for a change and in congressman Parrish the people have an opportunity to elect a man who is well fitted for the task.—Amarillo Tribune.

The above photograph was made while policemen, firemen and volunteer rescuers searched the ruins of the Knickerbocker theater in Washington, D. C., from which the bodies of more than 100 victims were taken and more than that number were injured. Soldiers from Fort Myer held back crowds of the curious and anxious relatives and friends of persons reported missing. The roof of the big movie theater collapsed under a tremendous burden of snow, brought by a record breaking storm, caving in on an audience of more than 500.

HEADQUARTERS S. C. V. ARE MOVED HERE

Acceptance of the proposal of the Chamber of Commerce for removing the national headquarters of the Sons of Confederate Veterans to Wichita Falls was announced Saturday by Judge Edgar Scurry, commander in chief of the order after a conference here with Carl Hinton of Denver, adjutant in chief.

Mr. Hinton will move his residence to Wichita Falls right away.

He will have an office in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, and an office assistant there will have charge of the affairs of the order during his absences from the city.

The removal of the headquarters here will mean that the voluminous mail in connection with the national membership campaign and the promotion of the Jefferson Davis highway throughout the South, will be dated and postmarked from Wichita Falls.

CREW OF SINKING SHIP SAVED AFTER PRAYING FOR DAYS

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The story of a three days of prayer in a raging sea and of prayers answered in the nick of time was told by two women and six men of the crew of the Nova Scotian steamer Donald L. Cook, who arrived today on tankers from Mexico. The battered, water-logged bulk of the Cook went down less than two hours after they had been taken off.

The women, Mrs. May Oxner, wife of the skipper, and Mrs. Bennett Peeler, the Cook's wife, were unanimously voted "hoodoos" by the crew and captain Oxner declared they would never go along against. The schooner was coasting down toward Jamaica with a cargo of lumber when she was struck on December 14 by a terrific storm. Her sails and her masts were carried away, the cabins wrecked, and the vessel's hold filled with water. The food supply was ruined so that all went foodless three days.

Mrs. Oxner said the crew prayed for three days for succor and just as they were at the point of abandoning hope, the British steamer San Eduardo, appeared she said.

The party was landed at Puerto, Mexico, when they were taken to Tuxpam and thence to Port Arthur, Texas, where they boarded tankers for New York.

SHAKE-UP IN DIPLOMATIC FORCES AT CAPITAL MAY FOLLOW ARMS CONFERENCE

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—A sere shake-up in Washington's Diplomatic Corps is expected to follow in the wake of the armament conference.

Unless the tea-table strategists are all wrong in their surmises—and they seldom are—some of the most familiar figures in the Capital's foreign colony are due to be relieved when the armament conference finally melts away. They will either be assigned to other posts, put on home duty, or retired. It is not improbable that some of them will be found in Genoa when the powers meet there on March 8 to settle those world problems which Paris and Washington failed to settle.

All the envoys of the so-called "Big-Four"—Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan—are due for early relief from their American assignments, according to expectations that prevail in diplomatic quarters.

Jusserand to Be Retired.

Jules J. Jusserand, the ambassador from France, who is dean of the corps, is to be retired, according to reports. Ever since the war ended M. Jusserand has been the target of considerable criticism in his own country. Some of his opponents have laid the blame at his door for the loss of French prestige in America. He is also blamed for failure to put the French position in the Armament Conference "in a better light." He is advanced in years, and there is demand for younger blood.

If M. Jusserand is retired it will leave the Spanish ambassador, Senor de Riano, as the dean of the Washington corps. And if anything should happen to him Washington would be in a terrible predicament, for that would leave the deanship with M. Bakhmeteff, the Russian ambassador, who hasn't had a government to represent for more than four years now, but who still is the accredited Russian envoy, in spite of that fact.

Reports recently were printed in London that Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, was to be withdrawn, but these were subsequently denied. The impression prevails, however, that Sir Auckland's tenure of the American office is soon to expire. He has made a notable record in Washington, according to diplomatic observers, and it was due in no small measure to his efforts that Great Britain emerged from the Armament Conference without having met defeat in a single issue.

The British ambassador is more "American" than any of his predecessors in the picturesque old British embassy here. He has a direct speech, almost blunt sometimes, and has little of the characteristic British accent. As a matter of fact, he is a Canadian, which may account for most of it. His critics in Great Britain find fault with him because he does not have the worshipful regard for family trees that many English diplomats possess.

Vittori Roiandi Ricci, the Italian abassador, is reported scheduled for an early departure from Washington. M. Ricci is understood to be anxious for relief. He is said by his friends to want to devote his time to the betterment of Italy's economic system.

Jap Envoy Is Blamed.

Kijuro Shidehara, the Japanese ambassador, who has had a great number of controversial problems to settle with the American state department, will in all probability return to Tokio soon after the conference ends. Shidehara is understood to be "in bad" with the powers in Tokio, and there has been much criticism in his own country of his work in the Arms Conference.

It is recalled that at one critical juncture of the conference proceedings Ambassador Shidehara became acutely ill and did not participate in the affairs of the conference for some time. It was facetiously suggested by some irreverent observers at the time that the Japanese ambassador was suffering from "congestion of the cables."

In any event, it was an open secret that there were strong differences of opinion within the Japanese delegation, with Shidehara and Prince Tokugawa on the one hand and the military and naval figures, headed by Admiral Baron Kato, on the other. At one time Kato was conducting all of Japan's negotiations almost single-handed.

Supposedly Staid New England Becomes Greatly Agitated by Much Talked of Garland Case

By MARGERY REX.
(Written for International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Do women, particularly wives, take things too seriously? The question is prompted by statements made in the Garland case, now agitating supposedly staid New England. The story is one of wealth, soulmates and philosophy.

"Every time you assume some one else's responsibilities you take that much out of your own life, and out of the other person's, that is essential to your own, or to his own, development."

So much for the newer and free love, as lived and preached by Charles Garland, of North Carver, Mass., the youth who once rejected a fortune of a million, but finally accepted it to give away.

Garland is not interested in accumulating dollars. The personal equation diverts him more, and in it he finds adventure not to be equalled by the hoarding or spending of wealth.

Because of his insistence upon living as he thinks best Mrs. Charles Garland, who was Mary Wrenn, has left her idealistic husband. Is she selfish to leave, or is the blame to be placed elsewhere?

Garland's Feminine Triangle.

Miss Lillian Conrad, Boston art student and once secretary to Garland's mother, is the chief cause of marital discord. With her Garland lived for some time and will live again, he says.

Miss Doris Benson is another young person who has "problems of her own." To work them out she will try to breathe the rarefied atmosphere that surrounds Garland by moving to a nearby farm. With Miss Benson Garland's relations have been merely friendly, not intimate, as in the case of Miss Conrad.

To his wife the idea of sharing the millionaire idealist with another woman is abhorrent. So she left him. Probably her eccentric husband would say she takes life too seriously.

Marriage contracts are but emptiness, Garland says he has found out in the last few years. Every sentence of the ceremony is replete with hypocrisy—and of all poor human promises the one which pledges to forever love and cherish is the most misleading.

No man or woman, he contends, can make such promise, since it is not within the mind's power to foretell what the heart will do.

Soon Expects Child.

Mary Wrenn Garland (how wife-like her own simple name sounds?) has one child and expects soon to become a mother again.

What must she think of it all? The refusal of her mate to accept a million-dollar estate, his denial of the value of money, any money; and his attachment to an amazing young woman who says she asks nothing from him except his companionship; and his platonic friendship for another girl who finds it necessary to live near him.

For some one all this talk of freedom and soul sympathies and throwing away money must be heartrending.

This man who shuns responsibilities seems to be putting himself in the way of securing a great many of them. Hear his defense:

"Lillian (Miss Conrad) has considered what it would mean for her to come to live with me, and that is her business.

"I want you to understand that we are not turning our backs on consequences and probabilities when we take the step we do. We have considered what may happen and are prepared to face our problems when they come up. I cannot tell you what I would do, but I feel that I can find the solution if the occasion arises.

"Hypocrisy for Me."

"I don't say that the marriage ceremony is a hypocrisy for everyone, but it would be for me. Every line of it more or less, contains an underlying hypocrisy, but the promise to love and cherish is the most deceitful. It is not within a man's power to promise to love and cherish, because his emotions are not within the control of his intellect.

"And it is hypocrisy to say that it is God's will that two people should be united just because some man reads the marriage service to them.

"From the legal point of view marriage must have some temporal value. It has no lasting value. I think the time will come when all laws and conventions will be abolished. They will be abolished when people become self-respecting."

What is new about that? Simply a doctrine of selfishness, and goodness knows that unpleasant human quality has no novelty about it.

And what has Miss Conrad to say for herself?

"Love Him for Ideal."

"I love him for his ideals, not for the man himself," she states.

"I will sacrifice my love at any moment for those ideals. I know that Mary Wrenn Garland, Charles's wife, looks on me a thief, a vampire who has stolen her husband. She has denounced me to my face as a traitor."

This strange girl can find happiness in an intimate relation with Garland at a time when his wife is expecting another child. And to add insult to injury she says:

"I pity Mrs. Garland."

Pity is one form of contempt. But Mrs. Garland is not to be pitied. People who are apt to feel this emotion for her had better save it for Miss Conrad and Miss Benson, who are searching for the "Bluebird" and seem to have found nothing better than a Bluebeard.

"My first duty is to Charles," continues Miss Conrad, and one is surprised that the word "duty" is in her 100-per-cent-for-freedom vocabulary!

"Free to Go Back."

"Charles is free to go back to his first wife, whom he still loves. He is free to go to any other woman, even as he came to me. I will share him with anyone else, or I will give him up forever."

None of these, woman, wife or sweetheart or platonic friend, seems to feel that money means much in her young life. Mrs. Garland, as mothers will, may feel that it would be nice for her husband to provide for his children, and it is said that a settlement has been made for them.

Does Lillian Conrad care what anyone thinks? She does not, thank you just the same! She says:

"I do not live according to the standards of the world, and therefore I do not care what the world thinks."

That's all very well as long as Miss Conrad is the heroine of the unusual affair. But she may not always play that stellar role. Like Mrs. Garland, she may be supplanted. Charles says so himself. Miss Conrad has returned to her art school at Boston temporarily to meditate affairs.

STOLEN AMERICAN AUTOS FLOODING MARKET IN MEXICO

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Stolen American automobiles are overrunning the Mexican market according to a report to the commerce department today from Consul John W. Dye at Juarez.

The report said so many automobiles stolen in the United States were being sold in Northern Mexico for about half their market value that the legitimate automobile sales business was seriously affected. The cars, the report added, come principally from California and points near the Mexican border, although some have come from as far as Chicago.

America spends a billion a year for the movies and a like amount for schools.

STRIKE PREVENTS GERMANS GOING TO SOCIALIST MEET

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—Because of the strike of the railroad men, the German delegates to the socialist conference which begins at Paris today, were unable to leave. Representatives of only five countries—France, England, Belgium, Italy and Germany—were invited to the conference.

It is understood the Germans, asked for a postponement but that this was refused by the French and in this connection Vorwaerts remarks:

"The French invited us voluntarily, assuring us the opportunity for a discussion of reparation problems by delegates of the chief entente countries and Germany before the Genoa conference. Unfortunately, this invitation now loses its original aim and purpose, which from the standpoint of the German proletariat is much regretted."

However, the paper adds the Germans have not received permission from the French government to attend the conference, which opens today.

A letter from the Ukraine was received by D. Salvadow, of Baltimore, which contained 105 stamps valued at 9104 rubles. The envelope could not hold all the stamps, so a strip of paper was pasted on to it to carry the leftovers after the face and back had been completely covered.

YESTERDAY

TODAY

INVITATION

A large number of patients and friends of the Chiropractic system of healing, whose health has been benefited by this science and who desire that their gratitude for its benefits should be proclaimed by them, have formed a committee, to act on the occasion of the finishing of the jail sentence of P. L. Myers, Chiropractor, at half past twelve o'clock on Monday, February 6, 1922.

His sentence of thirty days in jail and fine of $500 for practicing Chiropractic, seems to those who have received only benefits from the science, an undeserved penalty for doing good and furnishes an example of suffering in a good cause, that the patients desire to take advantage of in order to voice their disapproval of existing conditions and to register their desire for the passage of a Texas law to legalize the practice of Chiropractic in the state.

They know they have been helped and not hurt by Chiropractic and they want the right to have same continued everywhere in the State of Texas, and by making a strong showing of this feeling, it is believed a great many others will become enlightened to its merits and the work of Getting Chiropractic legalized be made easier.

As a demonstration, a reception parade has been arranged to consist of a large number of automobiles, headed by a band of music, to meet P. L. Myers at the county jail at half past twelve o'clock Monday, February 6th, and escort him to the Kemp Hotel, where an informal reception and buffet luncheon will be enjoyed and all can get together.

All patients and friends are invited to bring automobiles and join in the parade from the jail and to enjoy the reunion at the Kemp.

If you feel any appreciation of the benefits of Chiropractic, now is the time to show it and by your presence help impress the public and the world in its favor.

Respectfully,
THE COMMITTEE

The Newest Theory About Laughing

Psychologists Now Hold That Laughter Is Caused by Lack of Sympathy, and That the Comic Does Not Exist Outside of the Human Family.

A Picture That Needs No Title.

The Corner Urchin Proves the Laugh Is Provoked by Degradation.

Above—in Real Life Nothing Is More Humorous Than to See Someone Slip on a Banana Peel.

At Right—"It Is Discovered He Has Forgotten to Put on His Trousers."

WHY do human beings laugh? What delicate mechanism of the mind has to be touched before a person is stirred to mirth? What is the origin of this phenomenon? What physiological or psychological processes are involved?

These questions are as old as mankind. And no complete or satisfying answer has ever been given in all the years that men have been laughing.

The comic artist has learned by a patient study of his public's reactions just what he must make his characters do, in order to provoke a guffaw at the end of the strip. The professional clown knows by a sort of instinct what gestures or situations will invariably bring a laugh. The humorous writer learns by long trial and much experimentation, to juggle words in a way to cause a few intermittent chuckles. But none of these funmakers can tell you scientifically why people are induced to laugh at him.

Dr. David Orr Edson, well-known psychoanalyst, now advances a few theories of his own regarding laughter and illustrates them with certain well-known comic figures. Dr. Edson takes certain bits of popular pantomime and shows how it manages to make a direct thrust at the risible.

The search for humor's origin began with the first orderly thinking of mankind. We find Aristotle speculating on laughter in his "Poetics." He said in one place: "Comedy is an imitation of characters of a lower type—not, however, in the full sense of the word bad." And again he declared that the essence of the comic was "some defect or ugliness which is not painful or destructive."

Later on in history Thomas Hobbes declared: "The passion of laughter is nothing else but sudden glory arising from some sudden conception of some eminency in ourselves by comparison with the inferiority of others—or with our own formerly." Somewhat the same thought was expressed in other words by Prof. Alexander Bain, who thought that "the occasion of the ludicrous is the degradation of some person or interest possessing dignity in circumstances that excite no other strong emotion."

These definitions of laughter have been grouped under what has been called "The Theory of Degradation"—the theory that some sort of perception of debasement was necessary to mirth. Many thinkers have supported this belief in spite of the fact that it presupposes in humanity a rather disgusting sort of meanness. George Eliot, the novelist, went so far as to say that "laughter probably originated in the cruel mockery of a savage at the writhings of a suffering enemy."

But Immanuel Kant, the German philosopher, challenged this theory boldly and offered new definitions. Kant originated the "Theory of Contrariety or Incongruity." One is used to seeing a man wear a top hat and a frock coat. When a child appears in this garb, the incongruity excites mirth.

Kant spoke of laughter as "an affection arising from the sudden transfiguration of a strained expectation into nothing." Schopenhauer spoke of laughter as "the sudden perception of an incongruity between a conception and a real object." Schopenhauer's illustration was an old story: Two soldiers make a prisoner of a man and engage him in a game of cards to while away the time. They catch him cheating and become so incensed at his knavery that they kick him out of jail.

In the following article Dr. Edson gives a full analysis of certain fundamental appeals to humanity's feeling for humor.

By David Orr Edson, M. D.

(Noted Psychologist and Author of "Getting What We Want.")

THE answer to the question, "Why do we laugh?" can probably best be brought home to the great majority by putting it in this fashion:

"Why do we laugh at Charlie Chaplin?"

By what magic does he create that grotesque picture personality which is better known over the world than that of any other man, living or dead? Wherein does he differ from other comedians, who, while doing practically the same kind of thing that he does, never arouse more than a faint smile?

The psychology of laughter has interested philosophers since man first began to think in an orderly, connected way—and at the same time began to laugh at the little incongruities of their lives. The basic element of the comic has proved to be a most subtle and elusive quantity. Its definitions have varied widely.

The comic does not exist outside of humanity. When we laugh at an animal, it is because he suggests human attributes. Then again, an analysis of the human reaction during laughter has invariably shown that the person laughing is, for the time, devoid of what we call sympathetic feeling.

When we laugh our pity is not stirred, nor our feelings shocked at all. Our intelligence is assaulted, we feel a certain superiority to the object of our laughter, we feel a joyous relief that we are not so deficient as he.

Other hypotheses are advanced, which are, approximately, the same thing in different words. But we get well along our way by considering Charlie Chaplin and finding that he gets at our risibles by the device of representing himself as an automaton, with rigid posture or set expression that contrasts violently with the normal human expression; by getting into various uncomfortable situations, thus arousing an observer's self-congratulatory instinct; by bringing about the belittlement of somebody who is posing as an august and dignified personage; by giving his audience one result when it has been expecting another one totally different.

He uses these devices singly and in combination. But in all his eccentricities you can always find the element of surprise and the element of shock to one's intelligence.

There is nothing funny in the fact that a man slips on a banana peel and falls to the street. What makes us laugh is the shock which our intelligence receives when it perceives that the man, in question, was not looking where he was going. When the average slapstick comedian imitates this act, he so plainly signals his intention to the audience and so plainly labels the act itself—that laughter is not spontaneous. When Chaplin slips and falls he does it with an air of reality, because he has already submerged his personality in the strangely incongruous little fellow with the swagger, the cane, the trick mustache and the splay shoes.

Above—The Laugh Lies in the Fact That "Friend Husband" Is Right Behind.

At Right—"Charlie Seems Overcome with Grief. He Turns Around. He Has a Cocktail Shaker in His Hand."

"Charlie Is Seen Hanging Over the Rail. He Seems Sick. He Straightens up! * * He Has Been Fishing!"

Again, Charlie goes to sea. Out on the briny he is seen hanging over the rail. He heaves and shakes, convulsively. He seems sick. The audience laughs. Then suddenly he straightens up. He has a fish. He has been fishing when . . . The audience roars!

He enters high society. He arrives with all the swells at their golf club destination, the only difference being that they step down from the interior of a Pullman while he crawls out of a tool box beneath the car. Nevertheless, he arrives with them just the same.

In a gesture Charlie Chaplin seems to say that class distinctions are spurious; that the difference between high and low are more apparent than real. The greatness that we have envied seems no longer a desirable thing. Ordinary men now feel that according to real values they are as good if not better than these pretentious, dressed-up people. Such is the magic of Chaplin.

In a double exposure film Chaplin plays the dual role of the tramp and the bibulous husband of the society leader, who is the tramp's double.

As the fashionable husband he is seen putting the finishing touches to his toilet in front of a dressing table. He appears in a frock coat and tall hat, apparently groomed with immaculate care. Only the upper part of his body is shown. When he appears in full view it is discovered that he has forgotten to put on his trousers. Civilized audiences the world over will laugh at this. The laugh is repeated and doubled when he discovers his plight in the foyer of a fashionable hotel.

Surprise Element a "Knockout"

Farther along in the film, Charlie, as the bibulous husband, receives a letter which says: "Unless you will promise to stop drinking, I will leave you."

Charlie seems overcome by grief. He turns his back and his whole frame quivers. His shoulders move up and down in spasms. He turns around and he has a cocktail shaker in his hands in which he is vigorously rectifying.

The surprise element here has double strength. In the language of the profession it is a "knockout." Everybody naturally thought he was weeping. Then, for husbands, there is another kick. They know something about quarrels with wives and like to feel that they are superior to being dominated. This is the basis for the extra chuckle they get when they witness this scene.

Charlie the Tramp wanders into the place where a masquerade ball is being given and is mistaken for the master of the house. Again Chaplin's genius for creating an effect of reality saves a stereotyped situation.

Humor is fed through the ego. There is a subconscious craving for eminence in all persons. This can be achieved either by their own elevation or the descent of somebody else. A human weakness which only an extreme type of self-development can overcome is the weakness which demands that one of our fellows be pulled down.

It is to this weakness that Charlie Chaplin consistently panders. He is eternally calling upon us to witness the fact that the greatness of some individual or other is rather hollow, after all.

And, considered even more broadly, he is, in microcosm, a perfect study of Man making his way through an uncertain and somewhat terrifying world. He never knows exactly what is going to happen to him and feels that he may be brought down at any moment. Yet he is ever trying to persuade himself to the contrary.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The market for coffee futures remained quiet but showed continued steadiness today on the steadier showing of the Brazilian cables and talk of a slowly improving trade demand. The opening was 2 to 4 points higher and active months sold 5 to 9 points above last night's final figures with May touching 8.56. Last prices were the best of the day with the market showing a net advance of 8 to 10 points. Cable advices stated that the German government was expected to impose a new coffee duty of 32 marks per pound which would make coffee a luxury article, but the report had little or no apporent effect on the market. March 8.63; May 8.38; July 8.49; September 8.48; October 8.47; December 8.43. Spot coffee firm; Rio 7s 9 to 9 1-8; Santos 4s 12 to 12 1-2.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Unsettled wage conditions in New England were given as an added cause for unsettled cloth market today. Grey goods were easier under a light demand. Silk goods were quiet. Wool goods were unchanged but the volume of new business developed more slowly than was expected for fall. Burlaps were quiet and linens firm.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Equipments, oils and motors were the conspicuous features of today's brief but active stock market session, those shares registering gains of 1 to 4 points. Shippings, sugars, tobaccos, American ice and Famous Players common and preferred contributed to the rise, but specialties which recently displayed unusual prominence were relegated to second place with rails.

The advance was again accompanied mainly at the expense of a stubborn short interest, but the end of the week effected a marked diminution in the contracts of that element. Sales amounted to 475,000 shares.

Bonds were dull and irregular. Liberty issues reflected the trend of federal legislation, while rails eased under realizing. European bonds retained much of their better tone, however, higher foreign exchange rates being a factor in that quarter. Total sales of bonds, par value, aggregated $9,350,000.

Sterling demand bills made the new high of $4.32 1-2, their maximum quotation since August, 1919. All continental bills were better by 3 to 20 points, the German mark proving the only exception.

Payments by local banks incidental to February requirements caused no material alteration of loans and discounts by clearing house institutions. The actual cash loss of about $18,000,000 effected a decrease in excess reserves to $20,736,000.

Business reviews referred to brighter prospects in general lines of merchandise at distributing centers and the disposition of the banks to lend more freely on merchant's paper.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The recoveries of the last three or four days were followed by reaction in the cotton market this morning. The disposition to take profits on recent purchases was probably increased by nervousness over labor conditions among New England mills and the unsettled ruling of the cotton goods market. Otherwise no special news feature was mentioned on the decline which carried May contracts off to 16.40, or 34 points below the high level of yesterday and 24 points net lower. That delivery closed at 16.41, with the general market closing barely steady at a net decline of 15 to 23 points.

The opening was irregular at a decline of three points to an advance of 2 points. There were overnight buying orders around the ring and the firmness of foreign exchange encouraged some scattered buying in anticipation that the increased buying power of foreign money would revive export demand. Realizing for over the week-end supplied the demand, however, while there was also some selling by houses with southwestern connections and the market gradually worked lower during the late forenoon. March sold off to 16.70 and July 16.00, or 20 to 24 points net lower and last prices were approximately the lowest of the day. Sales of print cloth in the Fall River market were estimated at 90,000 pieces for the week, and curtailment of production at 60,000. It is reported that manufacturers at Fall River and some of the other larger textile centers are likely to announce wage reductions in the near future in line with those reported at other New England points. Labor leaders are quoted to the effect that a strike of 150,000 textile workers will be called on February 13, and that it may eventually involve half a million men.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 4.—A small market prevailed in cotton today and prices were depressed from the opening. The undertone was soft under persistent selling with offerings heavest toward the end so that the close was at the lowest of the day at net losses of 23 to 27 points, with March at 15.60 and October at 14.76.

For the selling the mill situation in New England was mainly responsible and much of it came from longs who did not care to carry their cotton over Sunday because of possible adverse development among the mills.

Another reason for the selling was the disappointment felt over the tone of week-end reviews of trade in general and this was increased by accounts from wholesale cotton goods markets stating that buyers were operating in a highly conservative way.

Grain

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Slackening of the rush to buy had a tendency today to ease down prices in the wheat market. Closing quotations were unsettled, 1-2c to 1 1-8c net lower, with May at $1.25 to $1.25 1-8 and July $1.08 1-4 to $1.08 1-2. Corn scored a gain of 5-8 to 1 1-8c. Oats finished unchanged to 1-8c off, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 5c.

It was evident from the start that demand for wheat had become less urgent than has been the rule of late. Even apart from the usual week-end disposition to realize profits on holdings, there were signs of lessened confidence that the advance of prices was to continue, and many traders were apparently inclined to dwell upon supposed indications of a pause in the upward course of foreign values.

Interest rather lagged regarding the crop outlook southwest in the absence of any striking fresh development.

For the first time in a long while, the corn market showed independent strength as compared with wheat.

Oats were steadied by the action of corn.

Provisions at first advanced in line with the hog market, but later receded on acount of realizing sales.

"INSURANCE WITHOUT A KICK IN IT"

CHIROPRACTIC

Consists Entirely of Adjusting the Movable Segments of the Spinal Column to Normal Position

How Does Chiropractic Differ From Other Methods?

—Chiropractic is unique and distinct from every other method. No simon pure Chiropractor uses a single method or movement taught in any other school. Its principle was discovered by a layman, and its science, art and philosophy developed not only without the aid of any other profession, but in spite of their utmost effort to prevent. It stands squarely on its own merits, scorning every device or method which would serve to conceal its wonderful efficiency.

—While its philosophy can be easily understood, the science and the art can only be acquired in a reputable resident school. For this reason it cannot be taught by mail.

—A good baseball fan, one understanding all the rules and regulations of the game, may not be able to catch, toss or bat a ball, and so it is with Chiropractic.

—There are some very essential facts which can be learned only by experience while the art of adjusting can be learned only by practice under a most efficient instructor, and THEN it comes slowly, requiring much intelligent, painstaking effort.

—Chiropractic can be distinguished from massage by the sureness with which the exact vertebrae is adjusted. While the Masseur rubs, kneads and massages the entire body, the Chiropractor does NOT rub, knead or massage at all. He gives but a single quick thrust and confines his efforts to the spine.

—In the same way Chiropractic can be distinguished from Osteopathy. The Osteopath manipulates the muscles, bones and ligaments of the entire body, while the Chiropractor confines himself to the segments of the spinal column and does not manipulate at all. There is an abundance of documentary evidence in the form of signed statements from leading Osteopaths which clearly proves the variance between the systems, as well as the fact that Chiropractic has been recognized as a separate science by the legislatures of twenty states.

—While Christian Science is purely spiritual, Chiropractic adjustments are purely physical. Any Christian Scientist, as well as any Chiropractor, will at once disclaim any similarity of method.

—It differs from suggestive therapeutics in that no suggestion is given and no attention is paid to the mental attitude of the patient, which may range anywhere from extreme skepticism to absolute optimism.

—While medicine has been variously defined, no THEORY or PRACTICE of medicine ever yet included spinal adjustments. In fact you can easily find good medical authority to prove that the segments of the spine cannot be moved. A very unsuccessful attempt has been made to so define medicine as to include everything used for the cure, relief or alleviation of human suffering, from Christian Science to Optometry, but no definition has ever been made broad enough to include Chiropractic. Chiropractors do NOT give medicine of ANY kind under any circumstances. They want their science to be judged on its own merits.

VALVE-IN-HEAD Buick MOTOR CARS

First Place at the New York and Chicago Shows

For the fourth consecutive year Buick has been awarded first choice of space at the National Automobile Shows. This honor is conferred each year by the automobile manufacturers who are members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, upon the member having done the greatest volume of business during the previous year.

That Buick has retained this position year after year reflects convincingly the high regard in which Buick is held by the American public. Such regard is a logical outgrowth of Buick policy which has been rigidly maintained for twenty years—that every car which leaves the Buick factory must first, last and all the time give that thoroughly dependable and trustworthy service which will make every Buick owner a Buick enthusiast.

LETTER BOX
From an Advertiser

Wichita Falls, Texas.
February 4th, 1922.

Mr. Walter D. Cline,
Mayor, Wichita Falls, Texas,
Dear Mr. Mayor:

It is unnecessary to establish with argument and proof our contention that a citizenship composed of home-owners is a citizenship of high moral average and civic pride.

Every intelligent man and woman realizes that when a renter becomes a home-owner, he automatically changes his point of view; he comes to advocate paved streets and good roads; he supports the movement to improve the system of schools; the officials of the law can rely upon him to back them up in their effort to preserve peace and order; he develops a desire to have a voice in choosing public officials and pays his poll tax cheerfully; the idea of strikes becomes abhorrent and industry becomes a virtue; he wants his city to be a city beautiful, abounding in parks and play grounds; the church and its influences takes on a new and sacred meaning and his home becomes dear to his heart, something to demand his loving care and protection.

All this and more happens to the man who invests in a home for his family. We all understand why this is true, for when he makes such a change, there comes a feeling that he is a partner in all city affairs; landlords take their position with other unpleasant and distant memories that belong to the limbo of the past; he has a feeling of permanence and becomes ambitious to assist in everything that will make his community a better place in which to rear his children. He becomes a substantial builder in all things worth while, a citizen to be depended upon to do right.

And so, Mr. Mayor, we feel that our ambition to encourage and assist as many as possible in owning their own homes is a worthy and laudable ambition; that we are justified in suggesting to the renter on every possible occasion that he does himself and his family an incalculable wrong if he continues to pay rent after having saved enough to make a first payment.

We bring this to your attention at this particular time because we are anxious to assist as many as possible to take advantage of the opportunity that is theirs if they act quickly. Real bargains can be had today for the asking. And the suggestion we are trying to get over, Sir, is that you ask us about these bargains; that you tell to any of your friends who are rent weary, that we have something to offer them that should be investigated without delay.

As far as listings are concerned, we are not interested in having anyone ask that we sell their property unless the price is a selling price. You realize, of course, that it is a waste of time to show property that is priced higher than would be the cost of duplication. If you know of anyone, however, who is really anxious to sell, we will be glad to make inspection, with the view of advertising it, provided the price asked is reasonable and in line with other bargains on our list.

Your kind offices in this matter will be greatly appreciated, Mr. Mayor. If a sufficient number of renters will act on the suggestion, ours will be a better city.

Thanking you in advance, Sir, for any favor you might show us, we are,

Most sincerely yours,

BEN NEAL, Real Estate.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

"I am sorry," murmured the patient for at least the sixth time that morning, as the bell rolled off the bedside table and under the bed.

Her sister, engaged in caring for her, emerged from beneath the bed presently, clutching the bell. There was a set expression about her mouth as she went into the sewing room. When she returned she carried a long piece of ribbon, to which she tied the bell with almost unnecessary firmness. The other end of the ribbon was tied to the head of the bed. The bell then hung within easy reach of the sick woman and where it could not possibly assume again the traits of the elusive collar-button.

"Now, dear, I'm going down to prepare your mustard foot-bath," said Mrs. Dean, starting toward the door.

Asks Series of Questions.

"Oh, dear, why must I have a mustard foot-bath? Don't have it too hot, will you? Will it blister my feet?" wailed the sick woman, after the manner of sick folk who ask many questions which cannot be answered satisfactorily.

"No, indeed. Because it's good for you. Certainly not," said Mrs. Dean a trifle incoherently, trying to answer all the questions at once.

Downstairs she enlisted the help of Hetty, her little maid, as she assembled the equipment for the foot-bath, to be given in bed.

There was a foot-bath, into which she measured two gallons of hot water; a bath thermometer, two towels, a folded blanket and a hot water bottle (covered.) Hetty, gazing on the work of preparation, sighed.

How Hetty's Mother Does It.

"Land sakes, Mis' Dean, you makes yourself a heap of trouble," she said. "When my mother gives us a mustard footbath she just heaves some hot water into a pail, takes the lid off the mustard can, tips in a lot of mustard, sticks our feet in, and the redder they got the better it is—my mother says. She has a lot of luck, too, taking care of sick people. It's all luck, my mother says." Hetty spoke with pardonable pride.

"I dissolve the mustard in cold water first, Hetty," said Mrs. Dean, who was used to the child's philosophies, alarming as they were at times. "And I like to use a table spoonful of mustard to a gallon of water for an adult, though I would use half the quantity for a child. Very hot water lessens the strength of the mustard, and it is apt to float around in little lumps on the surface of the water and burn the patient by sticking to the skin. So it is better to dissolve it first in cold water and add it the last thing."

"Yes, ma'am, and what are the towels and things for?"

Real Care Versus Luck.

Mrs. Dean, wrapping the towels around the hot-water bottle and placing it in the folded blanket, explained that one towel was to fold over the edge of the tin bathtub to lessen the pressure of the rim of the tub upon the patient's legs, because the bath would have to last thirty minutes, which was rather tiring. The other towel was to dry the feet after the bath. Warm towels, she explained, were more absorbent. The blanket was to fold over the patient's feet after they were immersed in the hot water, and the bath thermometer was to insure the correct temperature of the bath, which, she said, should be between 110 and 115 degrees Fahrenheit. The hot-water bottle was to place near the patient's feet after the bath.

Proceeding upstairs with the bath, Hetty marveled. "But you do set yourself a heap of trouble, ma'am, takin' care of Miss Ellen. My mother says it's mostly luck, takin' care of sick folks. And luck isn't half the trouble!"

HORRIBLE THOUGHT.

"Just think! I've just discovered I've lost my appetite."

"That's bad. But wouldn't it be worse if some poor man had found it?"

Roosevelt's first appearance in the editorial columns of a New York newspaper was probably that in the Evening Post of February 25, 1873. Roosevelt was then a sophomore at Harvard, eighteen years old. The Evening Post devoted a long editorial to the question whether the English sparrow had been a benefit or a pest. It mentioned a recent discussion of the subject at an ornithological club in Cambridge, Mass., saying: "Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., of this city, gave the birds credit for doing some good, but thought that they often ate the buds of fruit trees, and he says that in Egypt they are wasteful devourers of grain." In Roosevelt's "An Autobiography" a good deal is noted of his ornithological interests during these years; these interests, of course, persisted throughout his life.

CITY COLLECTS BEAUCOUP JACK

H. J. Anderson, city tax assessor and collector, is almost ready to pin a bouquet on himself, if some appreciative sould will only furnish the corsage decoration. H. J. is entitled to at least a floral horseshoe, it seems for his department announced with pride yesterday that approximately 80 per cent of the city's 1921 taxes have been collected—and that is considered in collecting circles quite some feat.

Tax Collector Anderson has separated the public from $455,305.55 of the current city taxes of 1921, the collections covering the months of October, November, December and January last. In January alone, $290,065.70 was collected, while in addition to the city taxes the department also gathered in $214,596.59 in school taxes. Anyone with half an eye for figures can see at a glance that the sums of 55 cents, 79 cents and 59 cents in these totals show clearly what a demon collector H. J. is—he overlooks nothing, and goes after everything.

The total city tax to be collected was $576,992.30, and the total school tax $270,080.01. Only 20 per cent of the city taxes are today delinquent.

On top of all this, the department proudly reports that in January a record mark for sewer collections, close to $8,500, was established.

Sheriff Smith Candidate for Re-election

Sheriff Fred K. Smith Saturday, announced his candidacy for renomination in the democratic primaries next July. Coming here when six years old, Sheriff Smith has been a resident of this city and nearby section for 38 years.

He served as motorcycle officer for four years and was then elected chief of police. He was the last chief to secure the office through election. In 1920 he was nominated and elected sheriff.

"Coming into office when the oil fields were the scene of daily crimes I believe our department has been largely instrumental in bringing those sections of the county to their present status where we have a minimum of trouble," Sheriff Smith says in connection with his announcement.

WILBARGER COUNTY BUDGET HEAVY COURT DOCKET

By Associated Press.

VERNON, Texas, Feb. 4.—February term of district court will open here Monday, February 6 and the docket is a very heavy one. Non-jury cases will be held the first week of court and criminal cases the second. Civil cases will occupy the third and fourth weeks.

It is expected that vaccination in the Vernon schools will be completed in a few days. Most of the teachers of Vernon are submitting to vaccination.

Moist weather experienced throughout this section was of material help to wheat that was up, according to the county agent. Moisture in the air was likewise absorbed by the growing plant life.

It is estimated that 90 per cent of both county and city taxes were paid when the books were closed. There are about 4,000 poll taxes paid in Wilbarger county. Last year in round figures 2,100 were paid in the county.

Captain Barnard McMahon, field director of the Colorado-to-the-Gulf Highway, went into the ditch three times on his run from Fort Worth to Vernon. Highway of Wichita Falls was designated "as especially bad by the tourist." Perhaps he started on the wrong road.

Forty dollars a month will be contributed toward the maintenance of the Wilbarger County Red Cross nursing service by city and county authorities. An office free of rent will be provided for the use of the Red Cross nurse.

A Poland China hog sale conducted by A. M. Bourland and Marvin Sharp at the Bourland farm, four miles east of Vernon drew buyers from all sections. Twenty pedigreed hogs were offered and the bidding was brisk and the prices high.

Drilling in Pyramid No. 11 has begun after a lapse in operations for nearly a week. It is said that any hour of any day may bring results in the event that the hole is to be a producer.

Soldier Bonus Plan Would Provide Many With Business Start

WHAT THE BONUS MEASURE PROVIDES FOR THE VETERAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Here are figures showing at a glance what the former service man would get for varying periods under the proposed soldier bonus act. The figures show what he would get on the cash basis or under the four options, which include insurance, vocational training, farm or home aid and land settlement. The periods are calculated on the maximum period of service and also on the basis of one year and of six months and will serve to give the soldier an approximate idea of what is "coming to him," according to his length of service.

Most an overseas soldier could get—Cash, $958.25; other options, $1,342.25.

Most a home service soldier could get—Cash, $755; other options, $1,057.

A soldier who served one full year overseas would get—Cash, $396.25; other options, $554.74.

A soldier who served one full year at home could get—Cash, $305; other options, $427.

A soldier who served six months overseas would get—Cash, $175; other options, $245.

A soldier who served six months at home would get—Cash, $128; other options, $178.20.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—To the "Yank" who got into the war early and stayed late the soldier bonus bill, which now seems certain to pass the Senate speedily, would mean a sum sufficient to set him up in business in a small way and to secure his future independence if he invests it judiciously.

If he served overseas the full period of war he could draw a maximum, in cash, of $958.25. If he served at home he could draw a maximum of $755. This is figured on the full period from April 6, 1917, to June 30, 1919, inclusive, the maximum period for which a soldier will be able to draw adjusted compensation if the bill is passed. If he served overseas he would get $1.25 a day less the $60 bonus already paid, and if he served at home he would get $1 a day less the same $60.

But there are features to the proposed bill by which he could draw nearly half as much more if he doesn't take it in cash. He could even get this additional amount in cash if he uses it to pay his way through school.

Five different plans of compensation are provided. The four, in addition to the cash plan, are the "adjusted service certificate" or paid-up endowment insurance plan; the "vocational training aid" plan; the "farm or home aid" plan and the "land settlement aid" plan.

Insurance Plan Is Explained.

The "adjusted service certificate," or insurance plan, is in the nature of a twenty-year insurance policy. At the end of twenty years the veteran would receive in cash 140 per cent of what he would receive if he took a cash payment at once, plus 4 1-2 per cent interest.

That means if he served overseas, the maximum period of the war he would draw at the end of the twenty years $1,342.25 in cash, plus 4½ per cent compounded semi-annually.

If he served at home for the maximum period he would draw $1,057 plus the same interest.

If he died before twenty years his estate would receive the full amount that would be due, ordinarily, at the end of twenty years.

If he wished to borrow on this certificate he could get, in the third year; 90 per cent of his adjusted service pay at 4 1-2 per cent interest.

As the certificate grew "older" he would be enabled to borrow continually increasing amounts.

Vocational Training is Optional.

If the veteran chose the vocational training plan he would also receive 140 per cent of what he would ordinarily receive in cash. He would receive this monthly at the rate of $1.75 a day for the period of training. As in the insurance plan this would mean the overseas man could receive a maximum of $1,342.25 and the home service man could get a maximum of $1,057.

The "farm or home aid plan" would authorize the veteran to receive from the Government the adjusted service pay plus an additional 40 per cent if he applied the money toward the purchase of a farm or home. As in the insurance and the training plans the maximum amounts would be $1,342.25 and $1,057 for the two classes of veterans.

The "land settlement aid" plan would give the veteran the preference right to take lands on the opening of public or Indian lands or of reclamation projects. He would be permitted to file on such lands as early as sixty days prior to their opening for general public entry. In addition, under this plan, the veteran would be entitled to his adjusted compensation plus 40 per cent, but would have to apply it entirely in making payments "in connection with the lands" on which he has made entry.

Majority Will Not Get Maximum.

Of course, the majority of former service men would not receive the maximum amount due for either home or overseas service. The latter group would include soldiers and sailors who were on foreign service at the outbreak of the war, mostly regulars.

The "full period" home service men would be very considerable and would include, in addition to the regular army and navy men who were in the service at the time the war broke out, many national guardsmen who had not yet been mustered out after Mexican border duty and many who "jumped into the game" when it seemed that war was imminent.

However, even the veteran who served only one year or six months would receive amounts of tidy proportions.

If he served one year overseas he could draw $396.25 cash or $554.74 on either of the other four plans. If he served one year at home he could draw $305 in cash or $427 on one of the other four plans.

If he served six months overseas he could draw $175 cash or $245 on any of the other four plans. If he served six months at home he could draw $128 in cash or $178.20 on one of the other four plans.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 4.—Management of the city here was today placed in the hands of Boy Scouts for an hour. Following an election in which complete tickets were voted by the boys, the chosen officials took office and conducted the affairs of the city. MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

Attorney-General Walter A. Keeling will not resign. He will be a candidate for election to succeed himself. Governor Neff has given out a statement in which he said he is partially responsible for Judge Keeling deciding to remain in the service of the state. Before the resignation of the Hon. C. M. Cureton, his successor in office, had decided to become a member of a Houston law firm, attorneys for large oil interests and was to have been in charge of their offices in the Mexia oil field. It is a great honor to be attorney general of Texas but the man who accepts the honor and the office is compelled to make financial sacrifice. Keeling has decided to make the sacrifice although those close to him say that he is a man of wealth and has a private income. Regardless of this he has made the sacrifice. He will continue in the service of the state if the people nominate him in the July primary and promises to maintain the record of efficiency established by the Hon. C. M. Cureton and others who have filled the high office of attorney general of Texas.

Roscoe Fatticus Arbuckle is to be given a third trial. His first jury stood ten for acquittal and two for conviction; his second ten for conviction and two for acquittal. His third—the man who bets on a petit jury is a man who gambles for the love of the game. Rosoe Fatticus Arbuckle will be as poor in pocket as a church mouse when he emerges from the toils of the law. There was no direct evidence against him in the first trial; the cause of the state was weak in the second trial. There is no telling what will happen to the man of a million smiles and a hundred million laughs if another jury passes on his case. In days gone by he was "THE LIFE OF THE PARTY." Now he is the pocketbook of the defense. Every time they squeeze him he groans.

Lest we forget 525 midshipmen are to be graduated from the Naval Academy in June and high naval department officials say the 525 will lose their jobs due to the reduction in naval armament and economical plans of the government. If there are to be no future wars why worry about the fate of the midshipmen?

Texas is on the voting map this year. More than a million poll tax receipts or exemptions are in the hands of that number of voters, or an increase of almost 300,000 over the showing made in 1920. Three cities of Texas have a voting strength of more than 50,000 each with Dallas in the lead, San Antonio second and Houston third. Cities and towns of Texas have a voting strength of 350,0000, perhaps 400,000. There is going to be something doing in the primary elections this year.

According to United Press James R. Howard has been agreed upon to succeed the late Senator Kenyon of Iowa. Howard is the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, for years an agricultural leader and the United Press says that he is expected to step in the shoes of Kenyon who was virtually leader of the farm bloc in congress. He is a dirt farmer. He was born in Iowa, he is forty-eight and he owns a farm of 480 acres. Another Washington News association sent out a story that Colonel Hanford MacNider is to be appointed to the vacancy by the governor of the Hawkeye state. Howard represents the farm organization; MacNider represents the American Legion. Really the G. O. P. national leaders are up in the air. Kenyon's appointment to the federal bench led to a lot of adverse criticism. Now a soldier representative or a farmer representative must be sent to the senate to dissipate the criticism.

Senator Harry New of Indiana is the closest of all the political friends of President Harding. New was for Harding long before the bosses of the Republican party agreed to support the statesman and editor from Marion. Now the women are very active in Indiana and they are backing Albert J. Beveridge for the senatorial toga held by the Indianapolis newspaper published. Beveridge is one of the brilliant writers and orators of America, he led the Roosevelt forces of his state when New was the leader of the reactionary forces and the old guard Republican politicians are fearful that New will meet his Waterloo in the Republican primary this spring. Should he go down in defeat the old guard leaders say that the Hoosier friend of the president will "be taken care of."

Harve Loomis of Ardmore, consulting geologist of Oklahoma City, who recently returned from a trip to the Mexia district says that, although big gushers are being continually reported, the total production of the field has not been increased, and indications are that the total production will not be increased to any degree in the future, but will possibly be diminished. Total daily production of the Mexia field during five periods was as follows:

		Barrels.
December	16	121,000
December	27	161,000
December	31	135,448
January	10	165,522
January	16	153,930

The top production was reached on January 10. A decline of 11,592 barrels is noted during the period of Jan. 10 to 16, though fifty-four thousand barrels of new production was brought in during that period. The Mexia pool is well defined with possibilities of extension southwest and northeast, Mr. Loomis says. It is one mile wide in some places and three and one-half to four miles in length. A large number of wells are showing salt water. The famous Roller well, brought in with initial production of twelve thousand barrels on November 15, declined to two thousand barrels on January 16. Six producers on the Duessenberg lease are making a total much less than did the original well, which reached as high as 12,843 barrels, and held above ten thousand barrels for more than six weeks. The Atlantic company's No. 4 Roller, completed with initial production of four thousand barrels on January 11, was making one thousand barrels on January 16. Houston company's No. 5 Liles, completed with initial production of five thousand barrels on December 27, was making fifteen hundred barrels on January 16.

Oklahoma is on the map. Oklahoma justice sent nine men to the penitentiary for life for the lynching of a negro. Now R. L. Moore, editor of the Drumright Post, has a grievance. He was seized by six masked men and severely flogged by a blacksnake-whip. He asked the reason why. His masked assailants told him it was because he had been printing radical editorials advocating the overthrow of the city, county and state governments. There are prominent citizens of Ardmore who have been advocating the overthrow of their city and county governments and making it impossible for Boss Buck Garrett to rule the Ardmore roost. Should these prominent citizens be given the blacksnakewhip treatment?

Mind Culture

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

News of the death of Samuel Curry, educator of voice and mind and soul, must have brought to thousands of people scattered through the United States and Canada a poignant sense of personal loss. For in his long career of useful effort thousands had been in close contact with Dr. Curry, and the lives of every one of these had been enriched by the contact.

It could not have been otherwise, so radiant was he of vitalizing thought. The finer realities were unmistakably his possession, and both consciously and unconsciously he labored all his days to help others gain possession of them likewise.

And he labored tirelessly. No man among all my acquaintances was a harder worker.

When the institution which he had created in Boston—the School of Expression—was not in session, Dr. Curry traveled far to teach in other schools. He conducted summer schools in various cities. At different periods of his life he taught in some of the largest of American universities. When not teaching he was writing. A score of helpful books remain to perpetuate his name.

Their dominant note is a stressing of the basic truth. "As a man thinketh, so is he." This also was the dominant note in all of Dr. Curry's educational endeavor. Unceasingly he warned his pupils:

"If you really wish to speak well, think well. Expression must always be from within out. Voice training can do much for you. But it cannot do all that is possible unless there is cultivation of the mind and spirit, too.

"Without such cultivation there are sure to be defects in expression, no matter how carefully the voice is trained. The mind always governs, and is revealed through the voice. The more generously, the more courageously, the more sympathetically, the more graciously and intelligently one speaks, the finer the expression will be."

This being his educational creed, Dr. Curry strove to make, and notably succeeded in making, his School of Expression something more than the conventional school for voice training. He made it a school wherein got men and women were exceptionally well prepared for life.

His pupils gained more than a surface acquaintance with the best in art, in literature, in philosophy. Their aesthetic taste was developed, their moral sense quickened. They learned, that is, not only how to express themselves well, but how to be worthy of expression.

Is it any wonder that, long before they graduated, they came to look upon Dr. Curry as one of America's truly great educators? He was that, beyond the slightest question. And his influence, it is equally certain, will not cease with his departure from earth, but will continue through those whom he has taught.

Whether his School of Expression will survive as a source of illumination and inspiration for young people is, of course, another question.

There are many among its graduates well qualified to conduct it in complete accordance with the principles of its founder. It would be a real loss to Boston, a real loss to the country, if the passing of that founder were permitted to mean also the cessation of the school so effectively carried on by him for nearly thirty-five years.

And now the packers strike is a thing of the past. Thousands of employes walked out and these employes have been ordered to return to work if the big packers will give them employment. Five thousand walked out in the city of Fort Worth. Now they are willing to go back on the terms of the packers. Seven thousand men in Kansas City walked out. The strike started December 5 after packers had negotiated an agreement with employes through a plan of plant representation and after wage reductions had been put into effect, the packers refusing to recognize the unions in their negotiations. Conditions considered, the men made a mistake. Now they are at the mercy of the packers. There was a vast army of unemployed workmen when the strike was ordered. There were thousands ready to become strike-breakers. The unions were warned by their conservative leaders that it would be a mistake to declare a general strike. These leaders were overruled and outvoted. Now all that they predicted has come to pass: The packers won; the men lost.

According to a New York financial newspaper the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation earned last year $8,135,000 or a little more than $2 a share on the outstanding 4,067,698 shares of stock. The company at the close of the year had on hand 12 million barrels of oil. Present market prices for the bonds and stock figure a total of 122 million dollars. Officials of the company said that the assets on December 31, 1921, were conservatively figured, worth 261 million dollars with net quick assets $53,789,000. On the basis of this asset valuation the book value of the stock is about $64 a share. The market price is around $19. Regardless of the pessimist or the croaker there appears to be money in oil.

Postmaster General Will Hays has accepted a job that carries with it a salary of $150,000 a year for three years. He is to be the general spiritual guide and morality director of the United Movie Producers of America. And the movie combination has insured his life for $2,000,000 for the benefit of the organization should the Lord call the postmaster general before his contract shall have expired. Flowers for the living. Will Hays is the ablest organizer in America and one of the foremost executives today on the stage of action. He devoted four years to the organization of the people against the Wilson administration and he directed the publicity campaign which made his organization so effective. Warren G. Harding did not put the Democratic party out of business. Hays is entitled to the credit. Now he will make Federal Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis look like a piker in the spiritual sphere which he has entered as the representative of a $250,000,000 movie combination or aggregation. Hays had an asset. He has cashed it in.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

DRY CLEANING THE HAIR

The woman who had been ill so often in her life that she was discouraged, looked wanly at the nurse, who approached her bed and said:

"You needn't come near me with a hair brush. I'm not going to have my hair combed or brushed either. My head hurts all the time. Leave me alone."

The nurse, who was very young and frightfully in earnest, placed the basket she carried on the table and said:

"I don't suppose you have ever had your hair dry-cleaned, have you? I thought I would do it for you. It's so comfortable, when one is lying in bed, to have one's hair well brushed and one's scalp massaged gently, and——"

Interested in Spite of Frowns.

"Dry-cleaned?" snorted the woman in the bed. "I hope you are not trying to make fun at my expense. Whoever heard of having one's hair dry-cleaned?" But she looked interested, in spite of her words.

Spreading a big towel across the patient's pillow under the aching head, the nurse, with gentle hands, proceeded to demonstrate the gentle art of dry-cleaning the hair for a person who is sick in bed.

Carefully she separated the strands of hair, brushing it well with long, even strokes.

The sick woman, every nerve in her body tense, waited for the pulling and the untangling of snarls—and was disappointed. There was no pulling. Presently her body relaxed and a wintry smile flickered across her face.

"You don't hurt a mite," she said. "What's in the little muslin bag?"

"Orris root. About a tablespoonful." And as she spoke the nurse took the little muslin bag of powder from the tray and, taking a well-brushed strand of hair in her hand, gently patted the powdered orris root into the hair and the scalp around it. Placing this powdered strand of hair where it could not be mixed with the remainder of the uncombed hair, she repeated the procedure, brushing separate strands, powdering them, and laying them aside, until one entire half of the woman's hair had been cared for.

Then she went around to the other side of the bed and repeated the procedure. Then, pressing a thin layer of absorbent cotton over the hair-brush, she smoothed it over the entire head, gently. The absorbent cotton took up the faintly fragrant powder and any accumulation of oil that was on the hair.

Then, from a bottle, with the medicine dropper about which the patient had been wondering, she took some lotion, and squeezed it along the scalp where the orris root had been.

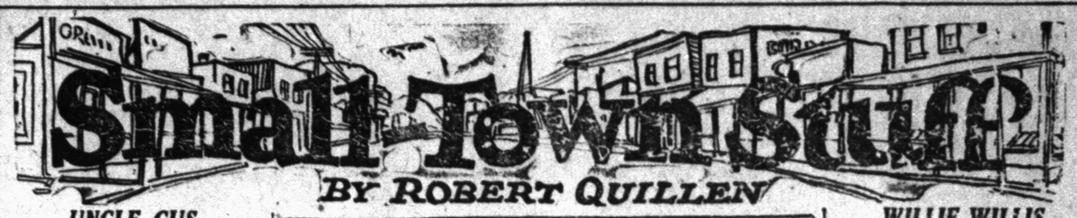

Reason for Two Braids.

Presently, when the whole head had been powdered and smoothed and dampened with lotion, and brushed gently dry, she separated the shining and fluffy locks into two parts, one on either side of the woman's head. These she braided loosely, tying them with ribbons.

"The reason I am braiding your hair in two braids instead of one," she explained, "is that it is more comfortable for you when you have to lie on your back so much."

"It feels grand," sighed the woman who had not wanted her hair "touched." Some day I'll get the recipe of that hair lotion from you."

And she was surprised to learn that the lotion was simply witch hazel and sodium bicarbonate, diluted with water and mixed with bay rum.

UNCLE GUS

"Heard bad news this mornin'," said Uncle Gus as he reached into his hip pocket for the inevitable twist of natural leaf. "Sallie Hawkins an' her ole man busted up, an' Sallie went back to her folks. Sallie says Jim has been a-naggin' at 'er for goin' on a year, an' she has bore it meek an' patient without sayin' nothin'; till finally at last she couldn't stan' no mo', an' she up an' quit him. She makes out it was all Jim's fault, but my notion is she was right sharp to blame. I don't mean she done nothin'; what I blame her fo' is keepin' her mouth shet an' takin' Jim's sass. If she had talked back an' eased her feelin's, like as not she wouldn't o' lef' him.

"Folks make out like it's a sign o' Christian charity to bear things without talkin' back, an' maybe it would be if they could do it without boilin' inside; but my notion is the longer folks holds in an' fails to say what they're thinkin', the mo' damage they does when they bust loose.

OUR DELICIOUS POISONS

We enjoy bragging. We enjoy elevating our chins and informing the world that we have come a long way since the day when men lived in caves; that we have invented wonderful medicines to heal the sick, and perfected the art of exploring man's interior in quest of worn-out organs, and learned dentistry, and become a race of exceedingly clever people.

But in spite of our bragging and our cleverness, we wear out somewhere around forty years of age and return to Mother Earth. We lose our teeth before we are thirty, or carry a mouthful of fillings; and we develop the habit of taking something after every meal to ease the discomfort.

Clever people we are; but we haven't a lick of sense.

Our trouble is that we are too clever, by far.

Nature provides fresh air to keep us fit, and we shut it out of doors. We are clever you will remember, and have learned to build air-tight houses.

Nature provides certain hardships to toughen up and develop resistance to disease. But, being clever, we have invented ways to trick nature, and now we pet and coddle ourselves and grow fat and flabby.

Nature furnishes foods that contain every element needed to support our bodies and keep them in trim. But again our brilliance has thwarted her. We have learned to polish our rice and refine our flour and rob our other foods of essential elements.

We fill our stomachs with delicious, denatured, devitalized trash and throw away the health-giving essentials, and then we invent a few medicines to prolong the agony, and die in spite of them before we have reached middle age.

Clever folk we are—too darned clever. We know so much more than nature knows. But we haven't yet learned how to scorn nature and keep on living in spite of it.

FREEDOM

There are two ways to enforce laws. The first is to build gallows and announce to the world that all who violate laws will swing in the breezes at the end of a bit of hemp; and the second is not to enforce them at all, but to cultivate a respect for laws and thus persuade citizens to observe them. The first method has been employed for many thousands of years, without conspicuous success; and the latter method grows in favor very slowly because its success depends almost wholly upon the degree of intelligence possessed by the citizenry.

The American is jealous of his freedom. His ego is bloated with self-determination. And long and earnest guardianship of his rights and liberties has made him suspicious of all authority that goes about with a chip on his shoulder, daring all and sundry to make any move that might be interpreted as a desire to disturb it. This bellicose spirit places a gulf between the citizen and the government that derives its power from him. The government is his servant, and yet by his suspicions and his quick antagonism he makes himself its enemy.

"I will reform," says the American, "and make a law to support me in my reformation." But once the law is made, his jealous love of liberty tricks him into the belief that it is a tyrant, and he says: "This law is trying to boss me; I'll circumvent the thing. Darn the officers who are trying to enforce it."

Thus the spirit of anarchy grows, not because of the oppression of a tyrant, but because of the too-great zeal of free men who lack sufficient confidence in the government that is themselves.

Failure to conform to the rules of the game isn't liberty, but only bad sportsmanship; liberty consists in the right to change the rules when experience has proved them unsatisfactory.

WELLINGTON, KANSAS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

(Copyright, 1922, by Frank Crane.)

In Wellington, Kansas, they have an organization known as the Wellington Home Foundation.

A number of citizens, rich and poor, have chipped in and established a fund, from which loans are made to any one desiring to buy a home.

The solidity and morality of a community is in significant proportion to the number of its people who own their own homes.

A home owner makes poor soil for the nourishment of the bacillus bolshevikus.

No means have yet been discovered more certain to make a man decent than to have a house and yard of his own, where he can be bossed by his own wife and look after his own children.

Mainly instrumental in establishing this foundation was H. L. Woods, who owns and edits the Wellington Daily News. In a recent letter to me Mr. Woods relates how it all started:

"The vision of the Foundation," he says, "grew out of my own experiences. In the first ten years of my married life I moved ten times—the last removal being because I could not pay the rent. When I was looking for a new habitation a friend came to me and suggested that I should have a home of my own; I confided that I was moving because I could not pay $10 a month and must have a cheaper house, by which he could see that owning a home was an impossibility for me.

"He said, 'I have a place you can have for $650 if you can raise $50 to pay down; it is a good deal of a shack, but it is the kind you are trying to rent.' I found the $50 and moved in. I had never had as much as $100 at one time since being married, and in the many removals I had seen Mrs. Woods trying to fit old carpets to new squares, old curtains to new windows, and so placing the pictures to cover the cracks in plastering to the best advantage that it nearly broke my heart and nowadays I never see a woman on a load of furniture moving across town that it does not cause a gulp in my throat.

"After making the first payment, we lived on almost nothing, and I astonished myself by paying out and getting a deed in one year.

"It taught me something I had not before known—How to Save. Also it convinced me that the age-old advice 'Save and get a Home' is not the best advice for most families, but should be changed to 'Get a home and save.'"

Two years ago Mr. Woods conceived the idea that others might be helped in a similar way. A number of business men started a campaign, a company was formed, and they now have a fund of over $15,000.

They lend to home seekers. So far no borrower has been so much as one day late in making his monthly payment and there has been no loss.

Wellington is a real American town. It has the largest park acreage per capita of any city in the United States.

It has the only municipal golf links that I know of west of the Mississippi. It is used by bankers, barbers, clerks, and everybody else except cripples.

It has a Park House, or Community House, where any woman can entertain. It is constantly in use.

It has a Stadium for athletic sports, and in it all the churches combine and worship during July and August.

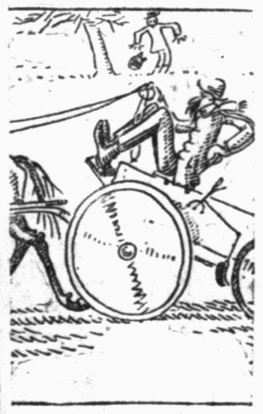

It is planning to take over a whole block for a civic centre and has voted $140,000 to build a new auditorium.

On the whole it is the kind of town that is peculiarly American, a kind found in no other country on earth.

Out of such towns come the boys and girls that are going to be the preferred stock of the human race.

IN THE MAIL BAG

REV. P. BONIFACE'S CHALLENGE.

To The Record-News.

WICHITA FALLS, Texas, Jan. 31.—I notice in The Record-News of January 30, 1922, that the last of a series of sermons on "The Church" was delivered by the reverend pastor of Floral Heights Methodist church, on Sunday night. If it were not for the direct blow the reverend gentleman delivers to my church I would pass it in silence, but since silence would leave the impression that said blow was a knockout, silence would cease to be a virtue. I do not intend to go into a lengthy discussion which would serve no purpose, but merely to point out an ethymological mistake he tries to bolster up as a proof and his wonderful lack of evidence in his case. First the ethymological mistake he tries to manipulate as argument. He says: "The neuter 'Petros,' meant "a splinter" off the rock." I challenge the reverend gentleman to prove that "Petros" is neuter. His Greek dictionary, if he has one, will give "Petros." The letter "o" with the aspiration is pronounced like "ho" and this is the masculine article. A neuter noun would have the article "to." Next I challenge the reverend gentleman to show me the Greek dictionary that gives his definition of the word Petros, viz: "A splinter off the rock." I venture to say that every standard Greek dictionary will give as a definition of "Petros, a splinter of rock, a stone." Why did the reverend gentleman add that extra "f" to the proposition? If you cannot trust a man in small things, look out for the great things. If his profound reasoning on Petros, a splinter off the rock, and Petra, the whole rock, holds any water at all, how will he wiggle out of his difficulty when he finds that Christ spoke the Syro-Caldean language and said: "Thou art Cephas and on this Cephas I will build my church." Simon was called "Cephas" in Syro Caldean, the same as "the whole rock," and in Greek "Petros," a splinter of rock, a stone, and not "Petra," "the whole rock." Why this difference. Because the Syro-Caldean had only one word for rock and the Greek had two, and the translator of Christ's words not intending at all the subtle reasonings of the reverend gentlemen, merely gave Simon the Greek word with a masculine ending in preference to one with a feminine ending.

Next comes the wonderful lack of evidence in his case. He says, "All the disciples shared in the blessings conferred upon Peter." I admit this. But did they all share equally with Peter? If he declares they did, I challenge him to prove it. He declares that Peter had no pre-eminence, and bases his statement on Gal. 2:11. "But when Peter came to Antioch I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed." I would ask the reverend gentleman whether he has ever criticized his presiding elder or bishop? If he did not, he must have had real angels as superiors of he must have been like a reed gently giving in to every wind whether from the right or the left. If he did stand for his convictions and defend them against his superiors, his argument taken from Gal. 2:11 falls flat. He says: "St. Paul, universally considered as the greater of the two." Would the reverend gentleman please give me the name of the dictionary he uses in defining the word "universally?" If he uses Webster I demand the roll call to determine whether he is right. He declares that the other apostles were given the keys just like Peter. I challenge him to deny that Peter beat all the rest of the apostles to the keys. Eliminate all these things and then present me with synopsis of his sermon.

And since this article has been delayed until now and since I have read the subject of the sermon to be delivered at the First Methodist church tonight, allow me to add one more challenge and this to the pastor of the First Methodist church. I challenge him tonight to state the truth as it is and as he should know it to be and then send me a synopsis of his sermon.

HAYS WILL BE GUARDIAN OF MOVIE MORALS

Producer Who First Approached Postmaster General on New Position Tells of Duties Involved.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 4.—There has been much speculation regarding the need of the motion picture industry which was so great that it caused organized film land to offer to Will Hays a salary so large that he could not afford to remain Postmaster General and caused him to resign to accept the bid of screenland.

Joseph M. Schenck, who recently transferred his motion picture holdings from New York to Los Angeles, was the first producer to approach Mr. Hays regarding the new post. Mr. Schenck, because of the fact that he helped to formulate them, is fully familiar with the duties which Mr. Hays will be called upon to fulfill.

By JOSEPH M. SCHENK.
(Written for International News Service.)

Will Hays will be the "traffic cop" of motion picturedom.

He will be the official umpire of the film industry.

He will organize the organizations and will see that they function smoothly and properly among themselves.

He will co-ordinate the various elements of the industry and will bring about harmony between the public, the exhibitor, the distributor and the producer.

Will Keep Tracks Clear.

Just as a traffic officer prevents "jams" at corners, he will keep the tracks clear in the motion picture world and will see that groups, cliques and coteries do not form a congestion which would impede the progress of the industry as a whole.

He has been employed for the major purpose of bettering the productions which are presented to the public. And to bring this about he will become the official clearing house of filmland, the arbiter of whatever differences may arise and the court of last resort among the magnates, managers and makers for screen success.

It has been suggested that Mr. Hays has been employed by the motion picture industry for the purpose of lobbying at Washington. Nothing could be further from the facts.

There is nothing in the way of national legislation that the screen industry desires to be enacted. We do not even take a vital interest in the matter of a high duty on films made in Europe. Experienced of those who have gone into the European markets to purchase films has been that very few pictures made over there are available for the American exhibitor.

Stand on Censorship.

There has been much agitation about censorship. One of the duties of Mr. Hays will be to organize the film industry so effectively that not even the most exacting critic can find cause for continuing this commotion.

We have opposed censorship because it can never be justly and intelligently administered by boards or bodies the individuals of which owe their appointment to politics, sectarianism or personal power. By this I mean that no member of a certain industry, sect or creed can be considered competent to be set up as a final judge. They all are more or less prejudiced, and many of them are subject to influence which may be exerted from certain quarters.

Now it is the essential purpose of the film producers to turn out pictures which will meet the full public support and indorsement.

Film stars today—and the producers who place film stars before the people—carry a tremendous weight of responsibility. They each have a strong following, a large number who are personally influenced by what they see these stars do. They fix the fashions in clothes, in manners, in customs; they teach great lessons in morals and in law enforcement.

Moral Guard Planned.

So if these film stars do things on the screen that ought not to be done in actual life these actions must be made of value by the pointing of a moral which will effectively convey to the public the fact that the following of such a course can lead only to disaster or disgrace.

It is as essential to the producer to keep his star clean and wholesome in the eyes of the public as it is for parents to guard their children against contaminating pictures.

With these facts clearly understood, it will be one of the chief duties of Mr. Hays to keep vigilant guard over not only the moral tone but the desirability of the films to be made and presented.

Better to bring this about, a plan already has been devised which it is felt will safeguard all elements concerned.

Beautiful mannequins of Bagdad in "Chu Chin Chow," an oriental extravaganza which will be presented at the Wichita Theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and on Wednesday afternoon.

All roads will lead to the Wichita theater this week, when, beginning Monday night, "Chu Chin Chow" opens its long anticipated engagement. It will be the most notable event in modern theatrical in this city, and the occasion is bound to attract a large and brilliant audience. The premiere is looked forward to as of social as well as of artistic importance, for it is long since we have enjoyed either play or opera that has come bearing the genuine stamp of metropolitan quality. Indeed, this "Chu Chin Chow" organization, now on its triumphal swing through the South, is the same that has won the applause of all the large cities in the country. For once we are to enjoy the rare privilege of seeing a production that has not been cheapened in any essential for "the road." We are doubly fortunate in having this famous musical spectacle, as owing to its magnitude it can play only those larger cities where the stages can accommodate the massive scenic production, with its fourteen elaborate settings, and where the seating capacity of the various theaters can accommodate audiences numerically sufficient to enable Messrs Comstock and Gest, the producers, to hazard the huge expense inevitable to a tour which carries an acting company of hundreds not to mention four carloads of scenery, properties, electrical effects and animals.

So it is hoped that our play-goers will respond to this unusual opportunity in such numbers and with such appreciation as will encourage the sponsors of "Chu Chin Chow" to send their other big attractions to us. This is their promise if our city does its part—and who will doubt that the Wichita theater will hold crowded and enthusiastic audiences, to give this magnificent Oriental extravaganza a genuine southern welcome.

Never in the history of theatricals has there been a stage offering with a continuous record to compare with "Chu Chin Chow." Written by Oscar Asche, with music by Frederick Norton, "Chu Chin Chow" is a musical extravaganza based upon fables in the Arabian Nights.

It was an enormous success in London from the start. In spite of the war, air-raids, business depression and a thousand other detrimental influences, it continued to play at His Majesty's Theater for five solid years and has only recently ended its run, although enormously popular to the end. Furthermore, Sir Herbert Tree died a rich man as the result of "Chu Chin Chow;" his executors sold his theater in which the play was presented, but the new owners were unable to take possession until three years after they bought the playhouse, assuming the management only when "Chu Chin Chow" was finally withdrawn last July.

F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, who bought the spectacle for America, presented it at the Manhattan Opera House, New York, on October 22, 1917; in January, 1918, they moved it to the Century Theater, New York, where it finished the season, and the following year they brought it back to the Century for a second engagement. Since then it has been presented on tour, always with remarkable success. It has been hailed everywhere as the crowning artists achievement of the decade, as well as one of the smartest, most brilliant and most alluring stage productions ever made.

A notable cast will appear here. It includes Henry Latimer as Chu; Virginia owell as Zahrat, the desert woman; Eugene Cowles as Abdullah, the steward; Don W. Ferrandou as the merry Ali Baba; John Jendrick as Nur Al Huda; John Renville as Marjanah, the singing girl; Edward Kiefer as the cobbler; Louis Le Vie as Kazim Baba, the mizer; Maud Files as Mahabah; Adelaide Mesmer as Alcolom, the wife of Kazim; Hattie Caromentell as the slave buyer, and many others, including a ballet of 60 dancers.

Patrons should particularly bear in mind that it takes three hours to unfold all the delights of "Chu Chin Chow." The evening performance will, therefore, begin promptly at 8 o'clock, and the matinees promptly at 2 o'clock. The audience should be in their seats before the rise of the curtain, as no one will be seated during the opening scene.

EMPRESS WILL SHOW MILLION DOLLAR FILM

Douglas Fairbanks Produced "The Three Musketeers," With Unequalled Lavish Expenditures.

For the first time since he became a screen actor, Douglas Fairbanks spent a cold million dollars in order to make "The Three Musketeers," which opens a three-day engagement at the Empress Monday. This masterpiece has proven to be the film sensation of the picture world, and was adapted by Edward Knoblock, from Alexander Duma's famous novel, and directed by Fred Niblo.

Never before in the history of the motion picture industry was a photoplay produced on so lavish a scale as was this forthcoming Fairbanks offering. Nearly a hundred thousand dollars was spent on costumes alone, and more than half that amount was expended in the building of exterior sets, not counting the ship and the pier which cost a small fortune besides.

The payroll for the stars and players was more than three times as heavy for this picture as it was on any previous Fairbank's film, owing to the fact that it was the aim of the star-producer to get the best talent available, regardless of cost.

More women play with Doug in important roles in "The Three Musketeers" than ever before appeared with him in any feature. Marguerite De La Motte, Mary MacLaren and Barbara La Marr, all stars in their own right, who are among the highest paid photoplayers on the screen, take the leading parts.

All told, there are one hundred and sixteen persons in the cast not counting the extras, and the weekly pay roll for "The Three Musketeers" reached the staggering figure of over $50,000 a week.

GEM TO SHOW "THE ISLE OF REGENERATION"

To be deprived of the comforts and luxuries of civilization has made many a person realize the blessings nature bestows upon human beings. This fact is brought out clearly in "The Island of Regeneration," which will be shown at the Gem on Tuesday. The heroine, a wealthy society girl, is at the head of a radical social cult. She puts her theories to practice and finds that they are not practical. In an effort to escape the results of her actions she becomes a castaway on a lonely island. Her only champion is a half savage man who can neither understand or speak. He provides sustenance for the girl in return for an education. Several times this man of the island saves her life. It is a story that will long be remembered. There are several thrills which are different from the average motion picture thrill. In fact, everything about "The Island of Regeneration" is different from the average. It is well worth seeing.

The course was adopted with the consent of the school board and on the advice of counsel that Bible study could not be prohibited under Nebraska's school laws.

OLYMPIC PLAY IS BEAUTIFUL STORY OF PALS

Excellent Cast, Headed by Anna Q. Nilsson and Norman Kerry Appears in "Three Live Ghosts."

Three pals who have escaped from a German prison camp and have been reported as "Missing" return to England as stowaways on the night of the Armistice celebration. They are Jimmy Gubbins, the Cockney, Billy Foster, an American, and "Spoofy," whose mind is still blank from shell shock. The three make an exciting getaway from the schooner that has brought them to London. Billy says he is wanted by the police, but agrees to meet his pals after they have been to the War office to make their claims for back pay.

Anna Q. Nilsson and Norman Kerry in the Paramount Picture 'Three Live Ghosts' A George Fitzmaurice Production

Ivis Ayers, an American girl, is entertaining some wounded soldiers at her London home. In passing the house Billy recognizes her voice in a song she used to sing when they were sweethearts in America. He climbs to a window ledge and sees Ivis with Peter Larne, for whose defalcations Billy is wanted by the police. When he sees Larne forcing his attentions on the girl he jumps through the window. Ivis' only thought as she clings to Billy is that the man she believed dead has been restored to her again, muddled brain, he walks in, steals up but Larne forces her from the room and locks the door.

Larne offers Billy a fabulous sum to leave the country and "stay dead," but Billy retorts that he has obtained evidence of Larne's guilt and refuses to be bribed. Larne is cornered and tries to shoot Billy. In the struggle for the possession of the weapon, Larne himself is shot, and Billy escapes.

At the appointed meeting place, Billy tells his pals that from now onward he must travel alone, but Jimmy succeeds in persuading him to come home with him and Spoofy to Whitechapel. Ivis, meanwhile, offers a reward of one thousand pounds for information concerning Billy's whereabouts.

Mrs. Gubbins reads this announcement and recognizes in the photograph Jimmy's guest. Billy decides to give himself up on condition that Mrs. Gubbins shares the reward with Jimmy and Spoofy.

Spoofy has been wandering about London alone. Attracted by a big house which seems familiar to his stairs unnoticed and finding himself in a man's bed-room, clothes himself in the more fashionable garments he finds there and helps himself to the money and jewelry in the safe. As he is about to leave, he is attracted by a child's cry in a neighboring room. He enters and discovers a baby. Spoofy decides to take the baby with him.

Spoofy effects a successful getaway with the child in his perambulator. Passing through the park, the baby shows interest in a lamb, which Spoofy captures for him, ties to the carriage, and reaches the Gubbins' home.

Meanwhile Mrs. Gubbins has telephoned to Scotland Yard. On the arrival of the detectives, Jimmy forces Billy and Spoofy to hide in a bedroom and refuses to allow the men to inspect the house as they cannot produce a search warrant. One man covers the party with a revolver, while the other telephones that they have got Billy. Ivis is informed that Billy has been found.

Spoofy has meanwhile escaped from his hiding-place, but falls while climbing down and injures his head. He is captured by one of the detectives and brought back to the house. The shock of the fall has dazed him and he begins to remember.

Ivis arrives in time to clear Billy by showing the detective Peter Larne's confession that he is guilty of the crime of which Billy was accused. Larne is in prison awaiting his trial. Spoofy is confronted with a titled woman and mother of the kidnapped child. She recognizes in him the husband she has mourned as dead. It was into his own house that Spoofy had broken.

There is a happy reunion of the three friends and their sweethearts in the ducal mansion. Billy and Ivis attend the dinner given in honor of his homecoming, and the toast they drink in silence is "Pals Always!"

This newest of "Doug's" productions, this most enchanting of all Dumas' vivid stories, this marvelous visualization of "The Three Musketeers" is truly a picture for everyone—for your family and every family. MARION DAVIES STARS IN "THE BRIDE'S PLAY"

Scenes of Paramount Production, Appearing at Olympic This Week, Are Laid in Old Ireland.

An exquisitely beautiful picture of ancient and modern Ireland is unfolded in "The Bride's Play," the latest Cosmopolitan creation for Paramount starring Marion Davis which will be seen at the Olympic theater beginning Thursday. Miss Davis again takes a double role, much as she did in "Buried Treasure," save that in this case she portrays two different girls—a lovely, fair-haired daughter of Erin of medieval times and a sprightly and winsome brunette beauty of today.

"The Bride's Play" was adopted to the screen by Mildred Considine from a story in Hearst's Magazine by Donn Byrne, author of "The Woman God Changed," a recent Paramount-Cosmopolitan success. Under the direction of George W. Terwilliger, the pictuer is a gorgeous unfolding of a charming love story about which is woven a delightful atmosphere of the rich romanticism of the Irish people.

Miss Davis is seen as an appealing, kindly girl, fresh from school, whose guileless heart is won by a worthless and worldly poet. How she learns of the duplicity of the poet and finds her true love forms a fascinating story that is staged amid marvelously fine medieval castles and chapels and majestic natural scenery.

Supporting Miss Davies is Wyndham Standing, an actor popular with all film fans. Others in the cast include Carlton, Miller, Jack O'Brien, Thea Talbot, Richard Cummings, Julia Hurley and Eleanor Middleton.

COUNSEL FOR BAND OF ALLEGED I. W. W. MEN ORDERED OUT

By Associated Press.

ELDORADO, Ark., Feb. 3.—H. S. Julian, a lawyer of Kansas City, Mo., following a mass meeting today was ordered to leave town. He came to Eldorado several days ago to represent seven alleged members of the I. W. W. held here.

Julian and his clients left town this afternoon. At the meeting, he was told charges of vagrancy against the seven would be dropped if they would depart.

When Julian arrived he presented a letter to the mayor, purporting to have been written by the mayor of Kansas City, it was said. His mission did not become known until late yesterday. He then was ordered to appear at a mass meeting last night and on his failure to do so, was taken by a number of citizens at 3 o'clock this morning and held for the meeting which was at the city hall.

NEW OPERA STAR GLEAMS AS GERALDINE SPURNS CONTRACT

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A new grand opera star, dazzling in her brilliancy, today holds first place in the firmament at the Metropolitan Grand Opera House.

It would perhaps be unfair to say the old star wanes.

But Geraldine Farrar, who for fifteen years has dominated the soprano roles at the most famous opera house on the American continent, is going on concert tour.

Her five-year contract has expired, and she has refused to accept a six weeks' contract for next season.

Mme. Marie Jeritza, who arrived seven weeks ago from Vienna, is singing "Tosca" and "Madame Butterfly"—the roles heretofore exclusively sung by Geraldine Farrar.

Songs in Farrar Role.

Mme. Jeritza refused to come to America unless she could sing "Tosca" in her first appearance. Negotiations lagged. Miss Farrar's propensities were known. At last officials of the Grand Opera company here decided to bring the Vienna blonde, who in real life is Baroness Popper, to New York. Her first appearance was a notable success. She could act as well as sing, naturally, beautifully, superbly.

Miss Farrar has decided to go on concert tour. She is told by her managers that she will take in $250,000 in one year—far more than she could hope to earn in grand opera here.

Miss Farrar has sung in fifty performances each season for fifteen years. Mme. Jeritza has been signed up for four seasons at fifty performances a season.

Farrar Declines Contract.

Miss Farrar turned down flatly the contract offered for a half-season here.

"In offering the short-term contract to Miss Farrar, Mr. Gatti-Casazza, the general manager of the Metropolitan, said, "I was simply following a procedure which is a matter of policy with me—to give as much variety as possible in a season in artists as well as in repertory. I hope that Miss Farrar will return to the Metropolitan for the season of 1923-1924."

Mme. Jeritza has grown up in a family of singers. She is the wife of Baron Popper, who is a son of Blanche Marchesi, a world-renowned singer and a grandson of Mathilde Marchesi, the famous Paris teacher, who numbered Melba and many other famous singers among her pupils.

"MASH" DUMPED IN PARKS TROUBLE CITY OFFICIALS

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 2.—The dry era is causing lots of extra trouble here for landlords and park superintendents.

"Our main trouble right now is that people are dumping 'mash,' the residue from hom-distilled liquor, in the city parks," declared James Underwood city park superintendent.

"A man told me that the way the bootleggers work now is to occupy a rented house for a month and moveaway," said City Service Director Duffy. "When the landlord looks over the property he finds all drains stopped up with 'mash' and the plumbing fixtures torn to pieces."

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

Odd, isn't it, how some trifles stick in one's memory, when things that are really worth while march through and out?

One passing tableau came to me today. It is all of thirty years since I saw it, I think. Even then it was of no consequence. It is true that in our little Mid-Western town we did not often see men wearing frock coats and high silk hats. Yet we did see such visions now and then. The picture is as brilliant in my memory today as it was before my admiring eyes then.

One reason, perhaps, is that he was the most brilliant man of his profession at the time. His name appeared in the New York papers. We heard of him meeting Presidents and Senators and great bankers on terms of social equality. His judgment was final in matters in which he was interested. No doubt it was because of these things that I remember how he looked as he strolled down our Main street that brilliant June morning, an adoring girl clinging to his arm.

As years went on one heard less of Frank Gordon. He was always a salaried man. It never seemed worth while to him to establish a business of his own, though he must have had numberless chances. Later on I learned to know him for a thoroughly selfish person. No doubt that was why he did not marry. A wife must have seemed a clog to the handsome youngster. He religiously spent all he made on himself, with the exception of the few dollars he sent his father from time to time. The father worshipped him. I can see now that his son's charity was inspired by selfishness. He expanded in the glow of his father's adoration. Beside, it would never do for the world to know that Frank Gordon's father suffered for the necessities of life.

He was square enough, then, and decent enough. But as time went on he lost his grip. He was handsome to the last and selfish to the last. His talents were of the highest order but his selfishness was all embracing and consistent. He never thought of any one but himself.

Last week he died in a lodging house. His body was taken to the city morgue.

DINING WITH CHARLIE

The day was as bad as it could be even before it began snowing at 4 o'clock. It was a wet, blankety snow. Harriet Bennett looked out at it despairingly. She had put off going to market all day because of a headache, and now it was too late. For Walter had left the last good umbrella at the club rooms the night before, and her rubbers were full of holes. One could hardly risk a cold even for the sake of providing the man of the house with a good dinner. She had no telephone.

"What can I cook for dinner?" Harriet thought. And she mentally reviewed her scanty resources. Invariably Monday left her without victuals. Walter was sure to come home ravenous. He was also sure to be cross if the food was not to his liking. When he has been married 20 years to an excellent cook a man looks forward to his meals and feels agrieved if they do not come up to expectations.

"I'll just have to risk pancakes and crystal syrup," Harriet said to herself. "Thank goodness, Walter likes pancakes! "I'll go and stir them up right now. If my head would only stop aching!"

A headache, a snowstorm, and the prospect of a grouchy husband was a perfect combination for the blues, even without the addition of other things, such as too much monotony and routine of existence. If Harriet's twin girls had lived her life might have been a different thing, even though there had been little enough on which to bring them up. Or if there had been more money she might have got out into the world more and found cheering, enlivening affairs. As it was she lived the life of thousands of women who must perform daily miracles in the way of economy, whose husbands are too tired usually to take them out and who, when they go, feel the great difference between their clothes and other women's.

Now, as she stirred the pancake batter she felt a loss of youth, illusion, and expectancy in her life that made it for that hour almost unbearable. Nothing ever happened to her that was gay and joyous. Every day was the same. A woman with better mental equipment and more energy would have pushed herself into some social place that was vacant and probably waiting for her. But Harriet was not that kind. Besides, habit and her husband's command were big things to be considered in her life.

At 6 o'clock Harriet had the griddle on and was ready to pour her cakes the instant she heard her husband's step. But half an hour passed before she heard him entering the front door instead of the back one, and he was not alone.

Company! Just for a minute she lost her head, then in response to her husband's call, "Harriet!" she went into the living room.

Her husband, small, gray, ordinary looking, like herself, stood there beside a young man who was neither of these things, but who was, instead, so tall, radiant, and beautifully groomed that Harriet's hand instinctively went up to her slightly ruffled hair.

"This is Charlie Marshall, Harriet," said Walter.

"Don't you remember me, Mrs. Bennett?" cried the young man. "Why, I've thought of you a hundred times since I saw you last, and those cookies you were always giving me!"

Then Harriet did remember perfectly the boy who, a few years before, had worked where Walter did, and had sometimes out of sheer loneliness, come home with Walter to sample some "real home-cooking."

"Charlie's with the A. I. people now," Walter said. "I never was so surprised in my life as when he came into our place looking me up. And nothing would do but he had to come home with me and invite you out to dinner, Harriet."

"Yes, Mrs. Bennett, I want you and Mr. Bennett to dine with me," Charlie said eagerly. "Where shall we go? Where's your best place here?" He turned to Walter.

"You'll get the best food at the White House Cafe," Walter said. "They put up some dandy grub. I go there every day for lunch, when I'm so busy I can't get home."

Harriet had never eaten anything at the White House Cafe, but she had sufficinetly visualized it from what she had heard and seen. A hurried, careless place, where one drank out of thick cups, and where there wasn't a pretty light, or flower, nor a bit of music.

"Which place do you suggest, Mrs. Bennett?" Charlie asked.

Harriet flushed. She knew where the lights and flowers and music and thin dishes were to be found, but it was an expensive place, and one does not dictate to the host.

"Harriet doesn't know anything about eating houses," said Walter, "I don't suppose she's eaten a meal out of her own house in three years."

"All the more reason, then, why we should consult her tastes," said Charlie. "Well, I've ordered a cab to be here in twenty minutes. Do you think you can get ready in that time, Mrs. Bennett?"

Could she? Harriet remembered to snatch the griddle off the fire and to turn off the draughts of the stove and lock the back door before she went upstairs.

When she came down she was neat and prim in her best black hat and remodelled coat. The only touch of gayety in her appearance was a slightly excited smile.

The cab came and Charlie helped her into it. Automatically it seemed they stopped at the florist's and Charlie alighted and went in. When he came back he had some long-stemmed pink roses which he insisted on Harriet pinning to her black silk blouse. This attention so surprised her that she almost forgot to look whither they were going. She gulped with thankfulness when they swung past the White House Cafe. They were headed for the place of flowers and lights and music! Her head fairly whirled.

It was a beautiful place, where youth and joy and success gathered. The waiter seated them at a table, where they could see all without themselves being conspicuous. In the vine-wreathed balcony the stringed orchestra began to play softly. The pink-shaded lights were very kind to little middle-aged women in black. The roses were kind, too. They drew attention from the home-made black silk blouse.

The food was served leisurely. Oyster cocktails came first, and then such a succession of delicious, unheard-of things as filled Harriet's housewifely soul with rapture. She tried secretly to discover how this and that was made while she tasted delicately. The parfait was a culmination. There was a recipe for parfait in her cook book. She wondered wildly if it could be achieved through the medium of her old ice cream freezer.

Long before they came to the parfait Harriet's headache had flown and she felt renewed in body and spirit; quite ready, indeed, for the play to which Charlie next took them. As it happened, the piece was a rollicking comedy. Even Walter laughed until he got quite a new set of creases in his face.

The storm had ceased and the moon was shining on a new-born world when Harriet stepped out of the cab and said good-bye to Charlie at her own door. "Seems to me you've made a big return for just a few cookies," she said tremulously.

As he lit a cigar to smoke on his way to his hotel the high-salaried representative of the A. I. people said to himself:

"Poor, little, old girl! I'm glad I was able to do it for her. And I hope the whole thing meant one-half to her what her cookies and kindness mean to me when I was trying so hard to get a foothold in life."

Young County Shows Several Hundred Daily Oil Gain

RUNS FROM BUNGER RAPIDLY COMING TO FRONT IN DISTRICT

Gaining several hundred barrels daily production in January, over the production for December, 1921, the Young county pools with a total production for the month of 318,500 barrels, is the only section of the North and Central Texas pools to show an increase in monthly production for this period, according to a comparison of production figures. Young county's daily average during January, according to the monthly report, reached 10,275, for the three pools, classified under the general head of South Bend.

The Bunger pool, the newest in the south part of the North Texas district, is rapidly encroaching on the production lead of the older pools, and next month should see the new producers making up more than half of the county totals, with the same proportion of increase that January showed.

Cosden Largest Production.

The Cosden interests have the largest production in the entire South Bend district, all in the new Bunger pool, where the Oklahoma operator has recently acquired the Rossell holdings. The Cosden's Owens lease had the largest production of any single tract, with 25,600 barrels for the month. The Cosden's Grimshaw lease produced 17,900 barrels during the 31 days of January, and the Lynn tract accounted for 24,000 barrels more. Two wells on the Brooks-Grimshaw tract, completed late in the month, one of them the 4,000-foot producer that has attracted considerable interest, added another 2,000 barrels to the Cosden total of 69,500 barrels, or better than 2,200 barrels daily.

The Sims Oil company was one of the heaviest producers in the field in January, the totals from the Owens lease being 22,800 barrels.

The Sun company's Grimshaw lease produced 18,000 barrels.

The Elk Basin Consolidated's Driver lease showed runs of 22,000 barrels for the month.

Older Pools Still Nice Producers.

Lacking the new completions that have boosted the Bunger pool production, the older pools in the county still showed nice production for the month, though some of the companies did not show as large totals as for the past several months, bad weather interfering with the steady operation of some of the old settled properties.

Panhandle Big Producer.

The Panhandle Refinery company continued to lead in production from the old pool, their McCluskey lease showing total runs of 25,700 barrels.

The North American Oil and Refining company's runs totalled 20,220 barrels. Of this amount 17,500 barrels came from the Scott lease, where the 3,500-foot producer is located.

The North American-Roxana production on the Ford totalled 8,800 barrels.

The McCluskey lease of W. E. Conner and others produced 18,100 barrels. The 2,600-foot producer which has attracted attention to this lease anew within the last two weeks, with new operations that have been started should put this lease close to the lead production in the coming month.

Other Producers.

The Seaboard Oil and Gas company's Graham lease showed the largest production on the west side of the Clear Fork, with 9,600 barrels.

The Texas Producing Syndicate's Kellar lease produced 6,900 barrels.

The M. R. Hemphill's Kellar lease showed a monthly total of 9,500 barrels.

These leases enumerated above account for about 8,000 barrels daily. The remaining 2,275 barrels is scattered among other companies, and divided between the producing areas along the Clear Fork, on the McCluskey and Graham tracts, the older producing leases between this pool and the town of South Bend, and the new Bunger pool.

The 3,500-foot lime, the new 2,600-foot sand in the McCluskey, and the extensions of the Bunger pool, in the 1900 feet and deeper levels may be reasonably expected to have an effect on the February production totals.

WATER SUPPLY STILL SERIOUS OVER COUNTRY

Some Companies Secure Water and Are Active; Bryan Has Good Completion in South Electra.

With the water problem yet unsolved the week's summary of all Wichita county pools continues to be marked by inactivity, with an unusually small number of new wells, and an increasing number of shut downs. Some of the companies with water to sell have found their supply diminishing to such an extent that they have adopted the rule of making no more water contracts, and selling water to outsiders only to complete the wells now under way.

In the new South Electra pool the Bryan Oil corporation has a good completion reported, their No. 1 making 300 barrels flush, from the 1,800-foot sand. This well is an old one which has been producing from one of the shallower sands. Other operations on this lease are now held up from lack of water.

Texas Co. Completion.

The Texas company is preparing to bring in it's first new well drilled in the Electra field in months, and the first to go to the new 1,600-foot sand in the South Electra pool. This well is the No. 212 Waggoner, and offsets the producers in the southeast corner of the Bridwell and Heydrick lease, which has been one of the principal centers of interest during the past few months. The No. 213 is now drilling.

The status of the various tests on the west and southwest outskirts of this new pool remains practically unchanged over last week, and the several weeks previous, because of the water scarcity.

The mists and sleets of the past ten days, while benefitting wheat fields, pastures and gardens, have not been of any material value to oil operators, in fact the only tangible result was to make the roads when off the paved highways, slick and skiddish.

Digging Shallow Wells.

However, many operators are taking heart from the little bit of cloudy weather, and are scraping out surface tanks, to be prepared if a rain does come. Some of the operators have resorted to digging shallow water wells, and are said to be meeting with success.

The Griswold Oil company, one of the most active in the new pool, has been busy this last week with an independent water supply, and reports a water line, and a big surface well about ready for use.

The Fowlkes pool, opened up by the Magnolia's Duke well, is also in a state of inactivity, for lack of water. The Gulf Production is preparing to drill two wells, one on the Powell and the second on the T. W. Roberts, and is rigging up a water line from it's Beaver Creek supply, but it is reported that they will be scarcely able to supply water to any other operations. The Magnolia has started it's second well in this new pool, the No. 1 Duke lease, and a number of other tests, as previously reported, are preparing to drill as soon as possible.

Other Wichita Co. Completions.

Completions in the various other pools of Wichita county during the past week include an 80-barrel producer in the South Burkburnett field, the No. 3 Cropper of Wirt Franklin.

A couple of shallow producers are reported from South Electra, the Harris and Winkworth No. 4 Burnett being reported a 15-barrel producer from the 500-foot sand and the Carter and Hall's No. 1 Burnett a 15-barrel well from the 680-foot sand. A twenty-five barrel well on the Lone Ellen Oil company's lease, South Iowa Park shallow field, is reported, this company's No. 4 Kemp and Kemmner. A couple of new 1,500-foot wells are reported for the west K. M. A. field, both drilled by Wallace and others and showing for 20 and 40 barrels, respectively.

Keathley, and the Texas company's No. 13 J. M. Gholson.

There are also a few new operations in prospect for Eastland county, although this part of the district, like the pools further north, can not hope for any great activity until there are heavy rains to replenish the water supply.

TWO STEPHENS COMPLETIONS DURING WEEK

The two best completions of the past week in South Stephens have been on offsets to the Fensland Oil company's Brown lease where the past month has seen some of the best producers of the district brought in. The new wells compare most favorably with these good producers of the Fensland company, the No. 5 Stoker of Parker and others being brought in for 650 barrels, after cleaning out and shooting the 3,200-foot lime.

The Humble Oil and Refining company's No. 1 Boone was boosted from 200 barrels to 400 barrels, according to reports, when the 3,200-foot lime was given an 80-quart shot.

The Fensland company has made location for it's No. 5 Brown and it is understood there will be several other new locations in this vicinity in a short time.

A total of eight new locations or rigs have been reported from South Stephens in the past week, these being additional to a large number. These include the Texas & Pacific's No. 2 Veale; Gulf Production company's No. 4 W. M. Cox; Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 10 McCarty; Bays brothers' No. 2 W. L. Yardell; Humble Oil and Refinery company; Sun company's No. 2 W. C. Boone; the Texas company's No. 1

Bunger Has Several Points of Interest For Near Future

With developments slowed up by the bad weather of the past ten days or two weeks, the Young county pools last week show very little new in actual developments, though with the improvement in weather conditions the latter part of the week, activity was getting back to normal, promising news of importance, particularly from the Bunger pool this week.

The Penn Cities well on the Herron is still waiting for a shot in the sand from 2,375 to 2,390 feet, it is reported. The well at present shows for about 50 barrels production, and the outcome of the shot is being awaited with interest. The Penn Cities is two and a half miles east of the pool.

About three-quarters of a mile east of the pool there is another test which will have bearing on future operations and which is due for some action in a few days. This is the Texas company's No. 1 Stoffer, which got the 2,600 feet sand at about the expected depth, reckoned from the Edgette discovery well, in the south part of the Bunger pool. A thousand feet of fluid was reported in the hole after the sand was first drilled.

Texas Company Extends Pool.

The Texas company's extension of the pool to the southeast by it's No. 1 Bunger, a nice completion the latter part of last week in the 1,900-foot sand, was the furthest extension accomplished by any one well, since the first extensions from the Rose and Tyrell discovery well, with the possible exception of the first producers on the Lynn.

South of the Edgette 2,600-foot well, and the Cosden 4,000-foot producer, two tests that failed to get production in the 2,600-foot level, are preparing to drill for deeper sands. The Planet's No. 1 Whittenberg failed to get even the gas sand, and is to drill deeper. The Chio Fuel company is also deepening it's gasser on the Grimshaw, the flow having gone off considerably.

Three New Wells.

Three new wells are reported from the Bunger pool this week, the largest being the No. 6 Driver of the Elk Basin Consolidated, 200 barrels, from the 1,900-foot sand. The No. 8 on this same lease is reported a 100-barrel producer, also in the 1,900-foot sand. This shallowest Bunger sand is also responsible for the third completion, the Ralco Petroleum company's No. 6 Driver, 75 barrels.

Five new rigs are reported in various stages on the Cosden leases. These new tests are: Nos. 2-M Owens, 3-B Owens, 4-B Owens, 3-C Grimshaw and 2-B Grimshaw.

The No. 2 Owens of the Pomona Mutual Oil company is reported reaming to set pipe at 1,900 feet.

The No. 1 Rhodes of the Ralco Petroleum company is reported running six-inch at 2,600 feet.

The Gulf Production company's No. 4 Grimshaw is reported drilling around 1,450 feet.

The Simms Oil company's No. 6 Owens is reported with casing set at 1,865 feet. The No. 8 is drilling around 1,500 feet and No. 9 is a new location.

The No. 2 Grimshaw of Edgette and others is reported drilling around 2,370 feet.

Miss Shallower Sands.

Several of the tests on the outskirts of the Bunger pool which have either missed the shallower sands, or have got only slight showings, are getting pretty well down towards the 3,500-foot South Bend formation. The New Domain test is reported drilling around 3,270 feet. The No. 1 Askew of Hodnett and Varbie is down around 3,200 feet. The No. 1 Lisle of Spoonts and Varbie is reported still fishing. The Cosden Oil and Gas company's No. 1 Askew is reported drilling around 3,160 feet.

The Monroe Production company's No. 1 Prichard is reported drilling around 1,180 feet. The same company's No. 1 Askew is reported drilling around 790 feet.

The No. 1 Horner of Eggers and others is reported drilling around 1,530 feet.

At South Bend.

The section adjacent to the town of South Bend is the scene of a very extensive drilling campaign by the North American and Roxana interests, with the preparations for a thorough testing of this vicinity for the 3,500-foot pay the feature.

Though the 2,100-foot sand has been shot, and is being thoroughly tested, it seems probable that the No. 3 Scott-Smith, of the North American Oil and Refining company, which created something of a sensation last week, when it started flowing at the rate of 450 barrels daily, from the shallower sand that had not been looked for in this location. Though still producing, the well has dropped off rapidly, and the company representatives state that unless the shooting and cleaning out develops as much as 400 barrels, the hole will be continued to the 3,500-foot pay, and other wells put down to the shallow sand.

Drilling Deeper.

The No. 3 Scott-Garrett showed a similar performance to the No. 3 Scott-Smith, with smaller production, and the sand was cased off and drilling continued.

In addition to these two tests, ten other wells are under way on the North American and North American-Roxana properties.

On the Ford lease, offsetting the McCluskey properties of the Panhandle and Conner interests, the No. 10 is being drilled from the 2,100-foot sand to the new 2,600-foot pay, opened recently by Conner.

The No. 7 Ford, this same lease, is a rig: No. 4 Scott-Harrett is digging the cellar; the No. 5 Scott Smith is reported around 450 feet; the No. 2 Payne is drilling at 500 feet; Nos. 3 and 4 Goode are rigging up; No. 1 Corbett is drilling at 2,000 feet; No. 1 J. W. Burgess is drilling around 360 feet.

The No. 1 McCluskey which was drilling to the 4,100-foot lime in the Scott-Ruidoso, has parted casing at 3,700 feet, where a gas sand was encountered.

Panhandle Deepening No. 7.

The Panhandle is drilling at 2,390 feet in it's No. 7 McCluskey, which is being deepened to the 2,600-foot sand. Nos. 18 and 19, on this lease, are due to start drilling immediately.

Conner has spudded in his No. 7 McCluskey, offsetting his 2,800-foot discovery well, the No. 6.

The Hobbs Oil company's No. 4 Scott is reported drilling below 2,300 feet.

There is nothing new reported from the several tests along the river, southwest of the producers on the Graham. The Bedford No. 1 Moore is down around 2,600 feet, and the No. 2 is spudding in. The Old Dominion test is reported down below 1900 feet, and the Rhodes Drilling company is reported drilling around 1,630 feet.

The Graham Tests.

The wildcat of Dalton and Bryan on the Alford, just south of Graham, is reported drilling around 1,700 feet.

The Casey and Mercier's No. 1 Jeffrey, three miles north of Graham, is reported still waiting on a shot and test of the 4,000-foot lime.

Panhandle Martin Test.

The Panhandle Refinery company has spudded in it's Martin test, in the Eliasville district.

Houses actually finished under the English government housing schemes number over 80,000.

Wichita County Runs Million and Half Into Pipe Lines in January

Wichita county ran a million and a half barrels of crude oil into pipelines during the month of January, according to the total of the weekly figures. Of this amount the various pools in the Burkburnett section ran a total of 1,037,550 barrels.

Young county's totals for January were 318,500 barrels. Young county shows a material gain, amounting to several hundred barrels daily during the month, in runs over December, while the Wichita Falls fields show a decline over last month. The difference can be accounted for in the fact that the shortage of water has stopped new drilling, and there have been but few completions during the month, to help offset the natural decline in the old wells.

Electra alone of the Wichita county individual shows an increase over December pools, amounting to about 300 barrels daily, the monthly average shows.

Electra's total runs for the month of January, 1922, were 324,300 barrels.

The Burkburnett pools totalled 1,037,550 barrels.

The Kemp Munger Allen and Iowa Park shallow pools ran a total of 82,000 barrels during the month.

The Texhoma pool in Archer county and the old Holliday pools ran 48,500 barrels.

Petrolia, in Clay county, the oldest pool in North Texas, produced 9,440 barrels.

At the posted price of $2.25 a barrel the month's output was valued at $3,378,827.

Leaders Stay In Top Places

Ford and Dodge Brothers Head List of Motor Car Manufacturers for 1921.

Present reports indicate that no changes occurred last year in the positions of the two leading automobile manufacturers, considering the total production of cars. As was the case in 1920, Ford ranked first and Dodge Brothers second.

The total number of passenger cars built during the year, according to an estimate published recently by the Wall Street Journal, was 1,535,000, as compared with 1,883,150 for 1920.

Commenting on the general condition of the automotive industry, just prior to the close of the year, the Boston News Bureau published the following, which was subsequently confirmed by Dodge Brothers:

"Because it is privately owned, relatively little in the way of figures ever appears in print concerning the activity of the Dodge Brothers motor organization of Detroit. Consequently its splendid and emphatic expansion in production this year and the maintenance even in recent weeks of a high output, which makes it one of the conspicuous bright spots of the industry, are not generally known outside of the trade."

"Dodge Brothers in the third quarter of this year ranked next to Ford among the world's automobile producers, with a monthly shipment record of better than 11,000 cars. This average is nearly maintained—within several hundred cars—in October, an unusual achievement in this year of unsettlement and competition in the motor industry."

"Considering that production the first quarter of the year was down to 3000 cars, less than one-eleventh of the same quarter in 1920, and less than any single month's subsequent production, that vitality that is Dodge Brothers is apparent. The company should end the year with a final output of between 91,000 and 92,000 cars, and probably hold its position as the leader of the industry next to Ford. The heritage left by the Dodge Brothers is thus splendidly upheld by the present management."

It is understood that Dodge Brothers finished the year with a total production of 92,476 cars, which is over 12,000 cars greater production than the next nearest competitor, not including Ford, thereby making good the News Bureau's prediction of Dodge Brothers continued leadership.
