Heat-related deaths noted

Dallas area sweltering in triple-digit temperatures

By The Associated Press

A 77-year-old Dallas woman and an 85-year-old Denton woman have become the first deaths attributed to recent triple-digit heat that has baked North Texas throughout the Fourth of July holiday.

Officials also were investigating Saturday whether heat played a role in the death of an elderly Fort Worth woman who was found inside her "unbelievably hot" home on Friday.

Verne Bownds was found dead Thursday afternoon in her home in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. The Dallas County medical examiner's office has attributed her death to heatstroke.

For reasons that weren't immediately clear to neighbors and investigators, the air conditioning in her home was not turned on.

Her house "was hotter than an oven," said neighbor Jerald Walraven.

In Denton, Catherine Starr was found dead in her one-bedroom apartment Thursday morning by her son and daughter-in-law. She died of heat-related causes combined with heart- and lung-related disease, an investigator in the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office said Saturday.

Living on Social Security and worried about the cost of utilities, Starr never used the air conditioner in her apartment, family members said. Two weeks ago she refused her daughter-in-law's offer to pay her utility bill.

"She didn't believe in air conditioning. She always used fans," said Charles Starr, her son.

His mother's body was found in a recliner in her living room, with the front door propped open, police said. Two 12-inch fans were running but the air conditioner was off, a relative said.

An autopsy was scheduled Saturday for Iva M. Fortenberry, 93, of Fort Worth. Her body was discovered after a volunteer delivering a meal to her home became concerned when the woman didn't come to the door. Fortenberry had an air conditioner but it wasn't on, police said.

Thursday's high of 105 recorded at the National Weather Service office at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport set the official record for July Fourth. However, the high temperature at Dallas Love Field reached 108 that day.

Weather service meteorologists said Friday's official high of 103 degrees merely tied the record for the date, set during the 1980 heat wave. The highest Texas temperature recorded by the National Weather Service was in Wichita Falls, which posted 108 degrees.

Triple-digit temperatures were expected to scald parts of North Texas into next week.

King's Manor announces Founder's Day activities

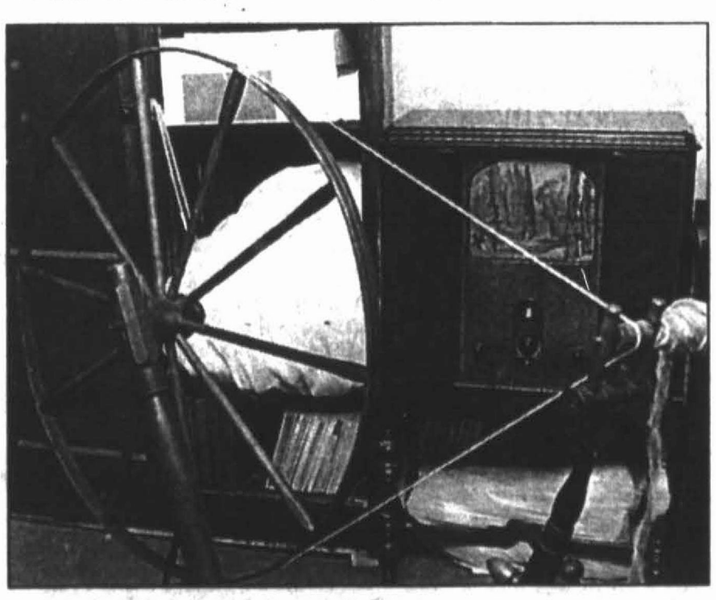

The annual Founder's Day Barbecue will be held at King's Manor on Saturday, July 13, highlighted by a quilt auction, 5K runs, and entertainment.

The 5K events begin at 8 a.m. and awards will be presented immediately after the 5K runs and walks. The barbecue starts at 6:30 p.m., and the quilt auction will begin at 7:30.

The menu for the barbecue will be brisket and Polish sausage, beans, potato salad, cole slaw, pickles and onions, Texas toast, peaches and apricots, and cold drinks.

Tickets for the barbecue are $10 a person, or $30 for a family of four. Entry fee for the 5K events is $12, if entered by July 1, or $15 after July 1. The fee includes the barbecue dinner.

The 5K run will offer awards to the top three places in six age divisions for both men and women. Awards in the 5K walk and Senior walk will go to the top three overall male and female winners. All race participants will receive tee shirts.

Unseen treasures

The Deaf Smith County Museum is home to a treasure trove of items of historic value that show what life was like in this area around the late 1800s and early 1900s. Many items are kept in storage until they are needed for display, or because they are too fragile to show publicly. Among the items in storage are this spinning wheel, which pre-dates the county, and this 1930s radio, which was owned by early resident and museum supporter Mrs. Bess Werner. See story, additional photos about the museum's treasure trove of history on Page 1B.

Hereford teens ready for trip to carry Gospel to Olympics

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

For 16 days every four years, people around the world focus their eyes on the Olympic games.

This year, First Baptist Church in Hereford has its sights set on Atlanta and the centennial Games.

The church is sending several members on a summer mission trip as part of Lay Witnesses For Christ International's "Reach-Out '96, Atlanta Olympics."

The church has been planning this trip since last November.

Jacob Brewer, First Baptist Church youth director, said the youth group has been praying, planning ahead and preparing for its part in this Olympic outreach.

Mission trip youth participants are: Craig Ames, Matt Baird, Janet Beavers, Clay Cosby, Matt Cosby, Emily Curtis, Michael Davies, Kyle Goldsmith, Cindy Harder, Lisa Huckert, Laura Jesko, Bryan Matthews, Ted Peabody, Seth Pietsek, Scott Shaw, Karen Smith, Jerry Taylor, Jodie Wilburn and Jessica Wuerflin.

Adult sponsors are Brewer, Doris Huckert and Bonnie and Ed Wuerflin. Buddy Young, Baptist Student Ministries director at West Texas A&M University, also will participate in the endeavor.

The purpose of a mission trip is to share the Gospel in unique ways, other than by preaching, Brewer said.

In order to go on the trip, the youth must participate in Youth Evangelism Training Conference, a Dawson McAllister program, Youth Musical, Youth Camp, Vacation Bible School and mission trip training meetings every Wednesday and Sunday.

Brewer said the trip costs $450 per person.

"We gave God lots of room to work," Brewer said.

And work He did.

Brewer received a check for $1,700 from First Baptist Church in Hurst.

The group also has been blessed by monetary gifts from First Baptist Church in Morse, as well as from the local church budget, he said.

A further financial benefit is that, throughout the trip, the group will sleep in Baptist churches.

Despite the support from other corners, the youth must raise the rest of the money, Brewer said.

* * *

The youth group will leave Hereford on July 17. They will spend the night in a Baptist Church in Little Rock Arkansas, then head to Georgia. They will arrive in Atlanta on July 19, in time for the opening ceremonies of the Olympics.

Brewer said the Hereford kids will do a lot of service work.

Not only will the group witness and share Jesus Christ with those in Atlanta, he said, they will assist in "More than Gold" rallies at four Atlanta churches.

The group will have the opportunity to hear testimonies from Olympians during the rallies, he said.

The students also will distribute literature and assist in the LWFC Hospitality Center.

Several youth will participate in drama, vocal and band presentations at "The Tent."

Three months ago, group members Taylor, Shaw and Goldsmith, which Taylor said plans to perform at several locations in Atlanta.

"I just hope God can really use us," he said.

"It's amazing how God can change people through music," said Shaw, who begins pursuing

Ready for Atlanta

Several young people from First Baptist Church are heading to Atlanta for the Olympic Games, not as competitors, but as volunteers on a summer mission trip in conjunction with the Centennial Games. The group will leave July 17, ready to participate in mission activities in Georgia. Shown here are some of the participants with posters they have made for the trip. Among those going are: standing, from left, Jerry Taylor, Scott Shaw, Matt Cosby, Ted Peabody III, FBC youth director Jacob Brewer, Seth Pietsek, Brian Matthews and Janet Beavers; and kneeling, from left, Lisa Huckert, Clay Cosby and adult sponsor Doris Huckert.

Fund-raisers scheduled to benefit trip to Atlanta

For a group of Hereford teens heading off on a mission trip in Atlanta this summer, the opportunity exists to share the Gospel with the world and see God in action at the same time.

But members of the First Baptist Church youth group must first get to Atlanta and, despite providential financial donations from their own church and other churches, there is still a lot of money to be raised.

FBC youth director Jacob Brewer said the trip will cost $450 per person.

To help raise money to go to Atlanta, the youth have scheduled a number of activities next weekend.

On Saturday, July 13, they will hold free car wash in the alley behind the church.

Even though the car wash is free, members will make money. Each young person has asked 10 people to sponsor [illegible] at 10 cents for each car washed.

The group set a 100-car limit, so each sponsor will only be obligated for a maximum donation of $10.

Along with the car wash, the group will have a garage sale in the Fellowship Hall.

Youth have collected furniture, household appliances, clothes, books, toys and miscellaneous items to sell to raise money for the trip.

The next day, churchgoers can feast on a potato luncheon sponsored by the young people. It will be held following the morning worship service.

All funds raised will be used toward the mission trip, which is being held in conjunction with Lay Witnesses for Christ International's "Reach-Out '96, Atlanta Olympics."

Scientists on lookout for elusive cyclospora

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Government disease detectives know it's a single-celled parasite called cyclospora that's made an estimated 1,000 people miserable but they're still puzzled about its source.

Scientists say the outbreak that began in May is an example of how vulnerable the United States is to new diseases - especially ones that catch a ride on the food supply.

Cyclospora invades the small intestine and causes diarrhea, vomiting, weight loss, fatigue and muscle aches. Although treatable with antibiotics, it can last several weeks and cause dehydration while symptoms last. Some patients have been hospitalized.

The parasite first made headlines two weeks ago when Texas health officials blamed a new outbreak of diarrhea on California strawberries. But the CDC then backed off strawberries, saying laboratory tests hadn't found any that were contaminated.

By this week, illness reportedly had reached 1,000 people in the United States and Canada. Fresh fruit, including raspberries and other berries, is a suspect because clusters of patients who were sickened at weddings, catered luncheons and even at restaurants all say they ate fruit mixes.

The good news: Washing all fresh produce - a must to fight any germs - will clean away cyclospora. If it really lurks on fruit, cooking would make jams or jellies safe.

Some more good news: A few alert doctors sounded the alarm early. "We did get lucky," said Dr. Stephen Ostroff of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. But he added that cyclospora is a reminder that "the potential for a massive outbreak is certainly there."

And while the CDC still is getting new reports of patients, most are well by now - it just took their doctors a while to suspect cyclospora and report them. That means the outbreak probably is waning, Ostroff said.

Still, scientists at the CDC and the Food and Drug Administration are working around the clock this holiday week at laboratories in five states. They are using the "DNA fingerprinting" process to find any trace of cyclospora on hundreds of samples of produce, or the soil and water used to grow it.

To date, they haven't found cyclospora on a single piece of food, nor in soil or water, said FDA Deputy Commissioner Mary Pendergast.

The tracking is hard because it takes longer to get sick from cyclospora - about a week - and testing each food sample can take more than 14 hours.

Cyclospora had never been seen in humans until 1977, and then it wasn't thought to cause disease.

In this country, about 20 people in Chicago were sickened by cyclospora from contaminated drinking water in 1990; two other small outbreaks were reported in New York and Florida last year.

Local Roundup

HISD sets meetings

The Hereford ISD board of trustees will hold three meetings on Monday and Tuesday, including the first regular meeting of the month. At 5 p.m. Monday, trustees will walk through the recently-completed air conditioning project at Bluebonnet Intermediate School. They will adjourn that special meeting and convene the regular meeting at 6 p.m. Monday in the school board chambers, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue. There are no action items scheduled for the meeting, but there are six discussion items -- substance abuse policy for athletes, health curriculum, Gifted/Talented guidelines, Student Code of Conduct, school board training and District 1 board member appointment. The third meeting will be a budget workshop at 6 p.m Tuesday in the board room. All meetings are open to the public.

Reading program to end

The Deaf Smith County Library reminds all local youth enrolled in the Summer Reading Club that it will soon be coming to an end. Summer readers are earned to "be a finisher" before it ends for the year.

a degree in music education at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene this fall.

Speaking of the band's progress over the past few months, he said, "It can only be explained by God. He's taken over control of our band."

The mission trip is an opportunity for the group to share in a global witness of God, Brewer said.

He said he hopes the youth group will learn how to show their faith and grow closer together in God's family.

When they return, he said, they will be able to share their experiences with the church.

"It's a chance for God to be spread around the world in like five minutes," Pietsek said.

"It's like a real high with God," Pietsek said, "like being totally fulfilled."

"Whether we're singing or walking around town, our sole purpose is to tell people about God's love and Jesus' death and resurrection," Shaw said.

Peabody, who will be a freshman at Hardin-Simmons University this fall majoring in Bible and Business Management, hopes the trip will serve as special training for his studies.

"Not only does God want us to talk to our friends about Jesus; He wants us to take it to the whole world," he said.

"I really enjoy going on mission trips because it's not just a time to get away from the routine of work, it's more of a time with you and God," Peabody said.

Doris Huckert, one of the adult sponsors, will participate in the same activities as the youth.

"To go with a group of young people whose sole goal is to share Jesus and be a servant of God is a rare opportunity," Mrs. Huckert said.

She credited Brewer for the youths' involvement in the mission trip.

"The young people love him," she said.

The group will leave Atlanta on July 26 and spend the night in a church in Garland. On July 27, the group will participate in Baptist Youth Day at Six Flags over Texas. They return to Hereford July 28.

One member of the group, Clay Cosby, not only will experience the Christian mission, but also the Olympic games -- he has tickets to three events.

His father, the Rev. Terry Cosby, First Baptist pastor, will join him at the games for those events.

Clay Cosby has two tickets to the men's 100 meter dash, two tickets to a basketball game on July 27 and four tickets to a baseball game on July 29.

He said he has not been notified about which basketball and baseball games he will see.

"It seemed impossible at first," Cosby said. "It's really getting exciting now."

Despite his shot at watching Olympians in action, Clay Cosby said he will concentrate on sharing the experience of the Lord's power.

"I want to grow more with the Lord," Cosby said.

Dole wants search for VP to be private

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - As Bob Dole's team works to find the right running mate, the candidate made it clear he does not want a public search with prospects brought in for high-profile meetings.

"We're not going to go through the embarrassing process of parading people around," Dole campaign manager Scott Reed said after Dole held a 90-minute meeting with his vice presidential search team.

Dole had no public comment after the meeting at his campaign headquarters, where he also taped the weekly Republican response to President Clinton's Saturday radio address. He was taking the weekend off from campaigning.

While Dole and his vice presidential search team are likely to meet with prospects once the list is winnowed to a few, former Kansas Rep. Robert Ellsworth, the team leader, said this would take place "not in public, out of consideration for the dignity of potential candidates."

"This is going to be a private process - it is not going to be an open, cattle call process," Ellsworth said.

He said names of prospects were discussed but added that Dole had not yet asked for background checks on any potential candidates.

"The process continues," he told reporters. "It is picking up speed. It is picking up momentum."

Ellsworth said Dole did not have a hard list of candidates but instead had a "pool" of prospects that has grown and shrunk from meeting to meeting.

"There are a lot of good men and women who should be considered, are being considered. ... We talk names all the time," he said, refusing to provide any.

With Dole saying nothing about the search, and with Ellsworth talking more about the process than the prospects, there were few clues as to Dole's current leanings, if he has any.

Ellsworth did say the pick has "to be someone who will be seen to be presidential" and someone who "reinforces Bob Dole's conservatism." Neither comment was particularly remarkable, but Dole faced criticism from social conservatives last week when he said his choice would not necessarily have to be an opponent of abortion rights.

At the time, Dole called New Jersey Gov. Christine Whitman "fantastic" and abortion foes speculated he was considering her for the ticket. But several Dole advisers suggested she was not under serious consideration. She not only supports abortion rights but publicly praised President Clinton for vetoing legislation that would have outlawed certain late-term abortions.

Among others mentioned as prospects are several GOP governors, including Pennsylvania's Tom Ridge, and former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. Ellsworth said well-known figures from outside of politics also were being considered.

Ellsworth heads a team that includes former Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin and attorney Roderick DeArment, a former top aide to Dole in the Senate. Reed also plays a key role.

But for all that structure, Dole has said he plans to make most of the decisions. Ellsworth reinforced that Friday by calling it a "nonlinear process" with no firm timetable for a decision. Dole has told associates he might wait to announce his decision until a day or so before the Republican National Convention, which opens Aug. 12 in San Diego.

"The process continues in Bob Dole's head and in his heart," Ellsworth said.

Some aides had wanted a list of prospects so the campaign could conduct at least preliminary research. But Ellsworth said no background investigations were under way - presumably because Dole has not authorized any.

Lawmaker cries foul over Austin lobbyist

AUSTIN (AP) - The man lobbying Gov. George W. Bush on behalf of Lockheed Martin Corp. and IBM for a possible $2 billion government contract has an unfair advantage as the governor's former aide, one legislator alleges.

Nothing is illegal about Dan Shelley's involvement in the process leading up to the contract or even about his lobbying the governor. But Rep. Glen Maxey, D-Austin, contends that Shelley's former job with Bush gives him an edge over contract competitors, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

"IBM didn't hire Dan Shelley because he's bright," said Maxey, who pushed ethics reform in the 1991 and 1993 legislative sessions. "They hired Dan Shelley because he has contacts. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure that out. There are probably a million people in the IBM organization as bright as Dan Shelley."

Bush and other state officials must decide which bidder deserves the lucrative task of operating a revamped system for determining who is eligible for a range of social services benefits, such as welfare and Medicaid.

The Texas Workforce Commission is bidding in a partnership with IBM and Lockheed Martin. Their competition is the Department of Human Services, which plans to bid jointly with Electronic Data Systems and Unisys Corp.

The winner will be selected by Bush, Comptroller John Sharp, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, House Speaker Pete Laney and Alphonso Jackson, Bush's appointee as General Services Commission chairman.

Shelley argued that he could not lobby at all if every issue he worked on for the governor were off-limits. And Bush has said he'll pick the contractor based on the bidder's merits, nothing else.

Political consultant Bill Miller of Austin, a spokesman for IBM and Lockheed Martin, said the companies hired Shelley because he is a bright lawyer with experience as a former senator and Bush's former legislative director.

"You always try to hire the best you can," Miller said, "and he's the best you can get with this."

Since 1991, the state's "revolving door" law has forbidden former state board members, agency directors or regulatory agency employees from lobbying former bosses on matters directly involving their work while on the state payroll. Later attempts to extend the 1991 law failed to include legislators and executive branch aides.

"Unfortunately, this is business as usual," said Tom "Smitty" Smith, executive director of the government watchdog group Public Citizen. "Highly placed ex-legislators or aides are frequently hired to lobby their former bosses because they still have access that average citizens would never have. It should be against the law."

Shelley is not the only IBM and Lockheed Martin team member with links to a high state official voting on the welfare reform contract. The companies also hired Greg Hartman, Sharp's campaign treasurer and until last October one of his highest-ranking employees.

Hartman, who runs the Southwest office of MGT of America Inc., said he's helping IBM and Lockheed Martin prepare their bid at no charge. But if the companies land the bid, his benefit will be an $800,000 contract to evaluate how they perform on the state job.

"I don't think I should be punished for working for John Sharp," Hartman said.

Jury sentences Reid to 40 years in prison

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A former nurse was sentenced Friday to 40 years in prison for the smothering death of her 8-month-old daughter 12 years ago.

Tanya Reid, 38, could have faced life in prison for the death of her daughter Morgan in 1984.

Ms. Reid was convicted on Wednesday in what was her second trial in the case. A jury in Hereford had convicted Ms. Reid of murder in 1993 and sentenced her to a 62-year prison term, but an appeals court overturned the verdict last year on a technicality.

Attorneys for Ms. Reid are expected to appeal again. They contended that the baby died of natural causes and that prosecutors never presented any evidence to the contrary. The defense theorized that the 17 prosecution witnesses, most of whom were medical experts of doctors involved with the Reid family, had an "agenda" and simply testified around the facts.

Deaf Smith County District Attorney Roland Saul said Ms. Reid suffers from "Munchausen syndrome by proxy," in which a parent harms a child to gain sympathy or attention.

Morgan died at an Amarillo hospital on Feb. 8, 1984, after suffering the last of nearly two dozen breathing attacks the day before.

The Reid family's son, Robert Matthew Reid, also suffered apneic seizures, or breathing spells, which eventually led Iowa authorities to suspect the mother in 1988. A jury there convicted her the following year of endangering the boy and sentenced her to 10 years in prison.

The Iowa conviction prompted Deaf Smith authorities to re-examine Morgan's death and indict Ms. Reid.

Shuttle crew practices Hubble-boosting move

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Columbia's astronauts Saturday tested maneuvers that could help another shuttle crew boost the Hubble Space Telescope into a higher orbit next year.

During a 10-minute demonstration, the crew moved Columbia in a manner similar to moving a refrigerator: by rocking it back and forth.

Flying with the shuttle's payload bay in the direction of travel, the astronauts swayed it vertically to a point two miles higher. NASA flight director Jeff Bantle said the test went just as expected and confirmed computer models.

The method would allow the crew aboard Discovery, set to launch in February 1997 on a Hubble maintenance mission, to elevate the telescope without folding up its big, fragile solar panels.

Other ways of raising the instrument would require that the panels be rolled up. Shuttle managers, concerned that the panels might jam, would rather leave them alone.

Columbia's crew fired the low-impulse jets for just minutes, but Discovery's astronauts would need to perform the task for an hour or more to move the telescope.

Meanwhile Saturday, the seven Columbia astronauts began wrapping up experiments from their lengthy medical-research flight.

The U.S., French and Canadian crew was on track to break the shuttle endurance record with its 17-day mission. Columbia is scheduled to land Sunday morning at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Perry relates steps to beef up security

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - With Congress waiting to query top Pentagon officials about the bombing in Saudi Arabia, Defense Secretary William Perry sought to deflect some criticism by outlining security steps the military had taken before the terrorist attack.

In a letter to lawmakers, Perry also said the Air Force is moving personnel away from exposed rooms and installing blast-resistant material on military apartments. His letter was made available to reporters Friday.

Perry's explanation of the security steps taken before the blast is sure to be a subject of tough questions at a hearing next week of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Perry noted that guards posted on the roof of building 131, which bore the brunt of the explosion, saw the attack unfolding and managed to clear the top two floors before the truck exploded.

"Security measures in place kept the truck 35 yards away from the building, which significantly reduced the number of casualties," according to the documents accompanying Perry's letter. The letter notes that a building 100 yards away also was damaged and one person inside was killed, suggesting that a larger buffer zone may not have prevented casualties.

The military men and women Perry met on a quick visit "clearly understand that the security of the region is vital to the United States," he said in the letter addressed to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"I saw firsthand the appalling devastation of the bomb attack," said Perry, who will testify before the panel along with Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. Binford Peay, head of the U.S. Central Command.

Since the bombing, Perry said, additional security steps include:

-Extending the concrete Jersey barrier line at the Khobar Towers apartment complex in Dhahran out to about 400 feet.

-Removing troops from buildings near the perimeter of the complex or to rooms that do not face the perimeter.

-Extending buffer zones "to the maximum extent possible" at other U.S. military residential and work sites in Saudi Arabia.

-Installing blast-resistant Mylar in exposed buildings.

-Taking additional security measures at Bahrain, a small Persian Gulf nation just off the Saudi coast, and Jiddah, a major Saudi city on the Red Sea.

Criswell College head quits over differences in doctrine

DALLAS (AP) - Criswell College's president resigned unexpectedly this week over what has been described as a theological dispute about the time before Christ's second coming.

Officials told The Dallas Morning News for Saturday's editions that Richard R. Melick Jr. surprised his staff and faculty by quitting after almost four years in charge of the seminary. It is named after W.A. Criswell, pastor emeritus of First Baptist Church in Dallas and the college's chancellor.

All involved agree that Christ's return will be preceded by a time of great tribulation. But church officials said Criswell believes that before the seven-year time of tribulation, the church will be taken to heaven in a process called the rapture; Melick believes that the rapture will occur afterward.

Neither Criswell nor Melick could be reached for comment Friday, the paper reported.

Gary Groat, vice president for administration at the college, said the disagreement had been handled in a "very amicable way" and that Melick did not want his beliefs to interfere with the message of the college.

The statement from the school announcing Melick's resignation said the college's board of trustees had offered him a "two-year extension to his employment" at the conclusion of his first four years. Instead, the release stated, Melick voluntarily resigned "out of respect for Dr. W.A. Criswell ... and its trustees."

As the Years Turn

(From the files of The Hereford Brand)

5 YEARS AGO

July 3, 1986--A variety of entertainment, including a huge public fireworks display, will be featured Thursday as Hereford hosts its first July 4th Celebration in almost 20 years. ...A few inches of rain in May(2.55) and June(4.6) made a big difference in the amount of water used in city homes and businesses.

10 YEARS AGO

July 5, 1986--Hereford firemen made more than a dozen calls yesterday, most of them caused by fireworks. Fire Marshal Jay Spain said firemen didn't get to bed until 2 a.m., "and the blazes cost the city several thousand dollars." ...Ouida Halbert was presented a Bull Chip award at the Fun Breakfast today.

25 YEARS AGO

July 4, 1971--A new wave of building permits in June sent the 1971 total past the $2 million mark, spurring an optimistic outlook for Hereford's future. ...Construction will start this week on a new, modern-design, $40,000 airport terminal to replace the small, inadequate one now being used, said City Mgr. Dudley Bayne.

50 YEARS AGO

July 10, 1941--The county wheat harvest is still in the "guessing stage" this week due to delay caused by wet weather. Some elevator men estimated the crop is one-third completed...Hereford's two banks reported total deposits of $889,147--down $87,248 from the same time a year ago...Club officers are asked to meet this week to make plans for a scrap aluminum drive to be held in conjunction with the nation-wide drive sponsored by the Administration of Civil Defense.

75 YEARS AGO

July 4, 1921--The Chamber of Commerce sponsored Tourist Camp House has been completed. It is a 14 by 42 structure, including one tight room with windows and doors. The roof extends out over a dirt floor in a pavilion area with tables. If a tourist asks you where the camp ground is, tell him to go seven blocks east and one block north of the First National Bank, and you will steer him right.

Water supplies dry up in pair of towns

By The Associated Press

With North Texas already fighting problems with drought and heat, residents of two small Denton County communities are facing woes from their water supplies.

Saratoga, a subdivision of about 150 homes near Little Elm, went without water from June 30 through Wednesday, then again all afternoon July Fourth.

"People have been bathing their children and shampooing their hair with bottled water," said resident Sandy Hill. "It's been very hard for a lot of the families."

Meanwhile, the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission is investigating what people in the unincorporated community said is a continuing problem with their water system's lack of pressure and periodic failures.

Meanwhile, officials in Sanger are asking the town's 4,200 residents to use tap water only for drinking and emergencies after two of the city's five wells stopped working Friday.

Mayor John Coker said the city ran out of water about 7 p.m. Friday. The supply replenished itself slightly during the evening, but Coker said he expected the problems to persist into the weekend.

"We've got to conserve what water we've got," the mayor said. "The people of Sanger understand what's happening and they'll work with us any way they can."

Saratoga's water was back Friday, but residents were told to boil it as a precautionary measure before using it for cooking or drinking.

Residents say Central Texas Utilities, the system owner, doesn't keep the equipment in good repair. They have photographs taken Tuesday, while customers were without water, that show water spewing from pipes in the neighborhood's pump house and flooding a nearby ditch.

"That's our drinking water right there," said homeowner Charles Hampshire. "We would have had water all along if he was maintaining the equipment."

But Billy Green, owner of Central Texas Utilities, said homeowners are often to blame. He said that the homes have gone without water at times because of constant high usage, prompting the company to ration the neighborhood's water.

Each house now is allowed to water lawns, fill pools and wash cars only every other day.

"They use more water than any system I've every had," said Green, who owns about 25 water systems in Denton, Tarrant, Parker, Wise and Cooke counties. "These people have plush yards, swimming pools and shrubbery they want to keep green."

Asked about the water spewing from the pipe, Green said that the water system's pump house had been mysteriously damaged.

"We found the valves tampered with; some were open that should've been closed, others closed that should've been open," he said. "We secure the place every time we leave."

Homeowners denied tampering with the pump house.

Sanger's problems began Wednesday when the town's wells experienced problems and culminated Friday when two of the wells gave out and a third pumped at less than capacity.

It was unclear whether the wells were low on water or the pumps weren't working properly, the mayor said.

City workers covered the area Friday with fliers telling residents not to water lawns, bathe or wash clothes. The fire department is shipping water in from nearby cities, the mayor said.

Coker said he did not know what caused the two wells to stop functioning.

Big money needed more to get elected

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Millionaire software entrepreneur Tom Bruggere spent more than $800,000 of his own money to catapult himself from political unknown to Oregon's Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate.

But it's unlikely his Republican rival will accuse Bruggere of trying to buy a Senate seat. Gordon Smith, the owner of a frozen foods company, used $2 million of his own to rev up his political career last year.

Oregon hardly has cornered the market on deep-pocket candidates.

At least 134 Senate and House candidates have dipped deeply into their own wallets to lend or give their campaigns $50,000 or more this election cycle, according to a computer analysis of Federal Election Commission records through the end of May. Seven Senate candidates helped themselves with at least $1 million.

The totals for the first 15 months of the 1996 election cycle already are well above those at the same point in 1994, when Californian Michael Huffington made history by spending $27.5 million of his money in an unsuccessful bid for the Senate.

This year's free spenders run the gamut, from TV Guide fortune heir Douglas Kahn, who has spent at least $400,000 of his own for a California House seat, to 27-year-old Michela Alioto, a former aide to Vice President Al Gore. She has lent her California House campaign at least $300,000 from the settlement of a lawsuit after a ski lift accident left her unable to walk.

Congress has always attracted wealthy candidates. But with the price of campaigns rising, the political parties are increasingly seeking out candidates who can compete financially on their own.

"They ask you can you raise a million dollars or can you write a check for a million dollars?" said retiring Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., an advocate of campaign spending limits. "Money is determining not just who wins an election but who runs."

So far this season, Senate candidates have given or loaned their campaigns $13.8 million, compared to $9.3 million during the same period in 1994. Self-financing in the House is up to $15.7 million from $12.6 million, the FEC reported.

Many candidates loan their campaigns money, knowing if they win a seat in Congress they can easily raise the contributions to pay themselves back.

"If I'm going to use my own money I don't see any conflict in paying myself back," said attorney Max Sandlin, a Texas Democrat who has loaned his campaign $626,000, the most of any House candidate this year. He called the cost of campaigning "outrageous." But he added: "Whatever it takes to win the race, I'm going to do."

Other candidates make donations to their campaigns that won't be repaid. A few also have refused contributions from political action committees, arguing that by using their own money they remain independent of special interests.

But reformers trying to break the union of money and politics say wealthy self-financers are part of the problem.

"I just don't believe that a rich man's wallet is the equivalent of a poor man's soapbox," Bradley said.

The Supreme Court has ruled, however, that candidates have the right to pay for their own campaigns under the free-speech guarantee in the First Amendment to the Constitution.

Nearly all those bankrolling their own campaigns this year are either challengers or candidates vying for open seats. Incumbents have a tremendous advantage in fund-raising and rarely need to spend their own cash.

"A no-name candidate like myself has to do it one of two ways, fund it yourself or go out and find someone to fund it," said South Carolina Democrat Elliott Close. An heir to a textile fortune reportedly worth $480 million, Close expects to spend $1.5 million of his cash in hopes of unseating the nation's oldest senator, 93-year-old Strom Thurmond.

Big spenders, however, don't always win.

This year in Alabama, two candidates for the Republican Senate nomination spent $1 million each, only to lose to state Attorney General Jeff Sessions, who kept his own money in the bank but benefited from a name well-known across the state and generous contributors.

In North Carolina, Charles Sanders, a doctor and former drug company executive, spent about $1.7 million in the Democratic primary and lost. That's a lot, even for a man worth $15 million, said his former press secretary, Sally Stohler. "When you lose, it's an expensive year."

Even winners aren't crazy about the high cost of campaigning.

In Oregon, this time around, Smith doesn't plan to put any of his money into the current race, a spokesman said. The Republican had spent $2 million - more than any other Senate candidate during the election cycle - in a losing bid for the state's other Senate seat in a January special election.

Bruggere, the Democrat who beat him in that primary, said he was a reluctant spender, too. "I'm a businessman, my goal has been to put as little of my own money in as possible."

Unlike the premier theater (Tony) and movie (Oscar) awards, the Emmy isn't named after a person. In 1948 when Charles Brown, president of the budding National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences formed a committee to select outstanding achievement in television that year, he also looked for suggestions for a name and symbol for the award. Harry Lubke, a pioneer television engineer and future president of the Academy offered "Emmy," a nickname for the image orthicon tube (state of the art at that time) and it prevailed.

People are recognized with all kinds of awards across this country--some not so flattering. We read recently about the Darwin Award, which recognizes the person who was killed in the most extraordinary stupid way.

Last year's winner was the guy who was killed by a Coke machine which toppled on him as he was attempting to tip a free soda out of the machine.

This year's winner was turned in by the Arizona Highway Patrol. The troopers came upon a pile of smoldering metal embedded into the side of a cliff rising above the road. The wreckage resembled the site of an airplane crash, but it was a car.

The type of vehicle was unidentifiable at the scene, but the lab finally figured out what it was and what happened.

It seems that a man had somehow gotten hold of a JATO unit(Jet Assisted Take Off), a solid fuel rocket that is used to give heavy military transport planes an extra push for taking off from short runways.

The man had driven his Chevy Impala out into the desert and found a long, straight stretch of road. He attached the JATO unit to his car, jumped in, got up speed, and fired off the JATO unit!

The facts, as best as could be determined, are that the operator of the Impala hit the JATO ignition at a distance of about three miles from the crash site. The JATO ignition, if operated properly, would have reached maximum thrust within five seconds, causing the Chevy to reach speeds well in excess of 350 mph, continuing at full power for an additional 20-25 seconds.

The driver(soon to be pilot) most likely would have experienced G-forces usually reserved for F-14 jocks under full afterburners, basically causing him to become insignificant for the remainder of the event.

However, the car remained on the straight highway for about 2.5 miles before the driver applied the brakes, blowing the tires, and leaving thick rubber marks on the road, then becoming airborne for an additional 1.4 miles and impacting the cliff face at a height of 125 feet, leaving a crater three feet deep in the rock face.

Most of the driver's remains were not recoverable. It's not funny, but that is a stupid way to die!

A very special Independence Day

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

I hope everyone had a very good Independence Day, full of family time, relaxation and remembrance of the founding of our nation 220 years ago.

Independence Day in my wife's family has been special for years now, since it is the birthday of niece Kayla Miller.

This year, however, another event occurred that will make the Fourth of July even more special.

This past Thursday my nephew (it's hard to say "nephew" about a man who's 31 years old, but he married my wife's niece, so ...) took the oath and became a U.S. Citizen.

Henry Gonzalez -- who is known to many people here from his stops to preach at Bible Baptist Church and Iglesia Bautista Fundamental -- was born in El Salvador and didn't move to the United States until he was 18 years old.

Henry tells his story often -- how his mother came to the States, how he lived on the streets as he grew up, how an uncle led him to faith in Christ and how he finally moved to America to be with his mother.

He didn't speak English when he came to this country and learned as he finished high school.

Finally he was able to enroll in Hyles-Anderson College in Hammond, Ind., where he met Tammie.

They married one Christmas, then returned to Hammond to finish college.

After college, Tammie and Henry realized God was calling them to the mission field and they have spent the past two years traveling all over the United States raising support for their work.

The incredible irony of the whole situation is that Henry's mission field is the country of El Salvador -- that's right, he's returning to his homeland as an American citizen and independent Baptist missionary, ready to establish a church and begin preaching the Gospel there.

I am (in true uncle-ly fashion) very proud of this young man.

He has overcome so much to get where he is today.

As for Tammie, she is not going into the work unprepared -- she was raised in Mexico, the daughter and granddaughter of missionaries.

She understands the culture into which she will be moving, she speaks the language and she is ready for the life of a missionary.

What's more, they will take with them their son, Daniel, who represents the fourth generation of missionaries from the Ashcraft family.

(By the way, there are a few people here who may know my brother-in-law, who is Tammie's dad.

(Tommy Ashcraft also is an independent Baptist missionary. He runs a work in Monterrey, Mexico, and has made several preaching trips to Hereford in the past.

(Tommy has served on the field his father, the late Dr. L.H. Ashcraft, started more than 40 years ago.

(The ministry in Monterrey includes Mount Hebron Baptist Church, a training institute for new preachers, a children's home, a medical/dental clinic, a foreign language school and more.)

We rejoice with Henry in his citizenship and look forward to hearing from them of their success on the mission field.

America has benefitted so much over the years from immigrants and now an immigrant to this country is going back to the country of his birth with a message of hope and freedom.

America truly is the greatest nation on earth.

Guest column

America overcomes all of its calamities

BY JAMES ROBERTS
Andrews County News

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them to another...

Unless you're an eternal optimist like us, it would be rather easy to get down on the country on this July Fourth, 1996.

Revelations that, following the Jennifer Flowers airing, Hillary made a deal with Clinton that she'd run the domestic scene and he could run foreign affairs, that temper tantrums in the private sector of the White House were normal occurrences, and that 400 FBI files on private citizens floated around the White House unsupervised, unwatched, and unprotected is disturbing, to say the least.

A militant group in Arizona is nabbed that supposedly was planning, and rehearsing, to blow up federal buildings in that state; Texas attorney general files suit against another group that claims neither Texas nor the federal government has jurisdiction over them, and churches are being set afire in the South.

Add in that daily we are subjected to news about mothers killing offsprings; siblings killing each other; wives and girlfriends hiring hitmen; business partners killing each other; and drugs, sex, homosexuality and lesbianism daily airings on the evening news--and it's easy to see how far we've strayed from our forefathers signing of the Declaration of Independence.

We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness...

But before you hit the ceiling over the turn of events that permit you to buy a ticket for a $20 million lottery at a gas station--but can't get your windshield washed or your tires checked--you might flip the pages of history about our presidents over the past 220 years.

Of the 42 presidents, 4 were assassinated, three died in office of pneumonia, one continued to rule through his wife after a stroke. We tried to impeach two and succeeded on one; two were alcoholics; one was hopeless cripple, and the mental capacity of two others was seriously questioned...and the nation survived.

Take Andrew Jackson, our 7th president and a born rebel. He deliberately destroyed the national banking system. Our 9th president, Harrison, only served 31 days of his term before dying of pneumonia. Old Rough and Ready Zachary Taylor got to serve only 16 months.

Millard Fillmore, 13th president, was elected by the know-nothing party but was not renominated. Our 17th president, Andrew Jackson, under impeachment proceedings, was acquitted by the Senate by one vote. Another president, Rutherford Hayes, won a disputed election that got tossed into the electoral college and he became our 19th president by one electoral vote.

That, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

James Garfield was shot and killed his first year in office; Benjamin Harrison was shot by an anarchist; William Taft dissolved Standard Oil and fought the League of Nations. Woodrow Wilson continued in office after a stroke by running the country through his wife, and the nation suffered through Warren Harding's Teapot Dome scandal and he died in office of pneumonia.

The terrible crash of 1929 came during Herbert Hoover's term, and Franklin Roosevelt was hopelessly confined to his wheelchair during his last two terms of office. Harry Truman faced off prima donna MacArthur during his term; Nixon was impeached over covering up the Watergate affair; Gerald Ford vetoed 52 bills in 21 months; Jimmy Carter was done in over 52 hostages being held by Iran and 18 percent interest...and our country survived.

...and that, as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude pease, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent states many of right do...

The country is too big, too great and too many people are inherently good and decent folks for one president, on group, one sect, one party, or one disaster or calamity to stem the tide of a form of government set in motion 220 years ago on July 4.

And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Editorials from around the State

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

San Antonio Express-News on campaign finance reform:

A U.S. Senate vote June 25 killed campaign-finance reform for the year.

A day later a U.S. Supreme Court decision effectively opened the door to more political party spending.

This was a double whammy to those who think that money and special interests have too much influence over Congress.

Unfortunately, in the Senate, Texas Sens. Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison voted to keep things as they are. Shame on them.

Both Republicans voted not to halt a filibuster by Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., designed to halt passage of the Bipartisan Clean Congress Act. The vote to override the filibuster failed, 54-46.

So money will continue to roll in, skewing the playing field toward incumbents. In an election year, it was doubtful that members of Congress would limit their intake.

Almost as bad, the Supreme Court created a new loophole in campaign spending June 26 with a ruling that essentially allows political parties to raise and spend as much money as they are able to get their candidates elected.

The only limit, the court ruled, is that candidates cannot determine how and where this ""soft money" is spent. What a laugh that is.

The only solution, therefore, is for Congress to reform campaign spending. In light of recent foot-dragging on the issue, people have good reason for pessimism.

It will take a new Congress - early in its term and before members are hooked on special interests - to do it.

Austin American-Statesman on righting prison wrongs:

Lawmakers, the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and the agency's new director, Wayne Scott, continue to storm the citadel of cronyism within the state agency.

They deserve commendation for stepping into strong oversight roles in contract negotiations and for forcing out high-level administrators. Investigations continue into the agency's purchasing practices. ...

The board and director's leadership is welcome. They should continue to revamp the agency and scour its procedures until public confidence in its financial and operational integrity is restored.

The Amarillo Daily News on sentencing:

Why do we pass laws to impose tough sentences on known criminals and then refuse to enforce them? What kind of message does that send?

It tells criminals that the law is plastic - something they can manipulate. It tells them sentencing is based on circumstance. Just come up with a good excuse. It wasn't your responsibility.

We're listening.

Just last week, the California Supreme Court decided a mandatory 25-year-to-life sentence under the state's "three strikes and you're out" law is too harsh.

Judges now may ignore a sentencing law enacted by the state assembly in 1994 to get habitual felons off the street. The seven justices said their decision applies to past cases, thereby allowing thousands of prisoners to seek resentencing.

The ruling was based on the case of a San Diego man, Jesus Romero, 32, whose previous "strikes" were for a residential burglary and a second attempted residential burglary. After he pleaded guilty in 1994 to possessing .13 grams of cocaine, a Superior Court judge ruled that 25 years to life would be cruel and unusual punishment and sentenced Romero to only six years. A Court of Appeals overruled the sentence, and Romero's lawyers appealed to the Supreme Court.

Romero knew under what rules he was playing. Yet he stepped up to the plate and chose to swing a third time. It's quite probable that his past burglaries went to feed his cocaine habit. How many people would the court allow this man to victimize before it took him off the street? The answer is out there somewhere.

The problem is not just in California.

Two weeks ago, our Board of Pardons and Paroles announced that it is attempting to clean up a system that has allowed 800 parolees to remain free after they had been convicted of new crimes.

The entire point of parole is that people convicted of crimes can be released early, but under observation. The system is supposed to send them back to the slammer for subsequent violations.

It turns out that officers in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Parole Division failed to notify the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles when people were convicted of new crimes.

Under new guidelines taking effect Monday, the parole division must tell the parole board if a parolee is arrested, charged or convicted of a new felony or misdemeanor.

What were the old rules?

The parole division was allowed to use "wide discretion in whether to report new criminal and technical violations to the parole board," state officials said.

Houston Chronicle on the increasing cost of education:

Fees charged students attending Texas colleges and universities have skyrocketed in recent years to a level where they exceed the cost of tuition at many state universities.

Who would have thought that could happen?

Not only have student fees gone through the roof, they vary from school to school and are complex and confusing to most students. For what are the fees being used?

State schools are allowed by law to charge a general use fee of up to $32 per credit hour. College students may also be hit with a host of other fees depending on where they attend, pretty much at the discretion of the particular college or university.

The total dollars collected in fees by state higher education institutions amounts to big money.

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board has told a legislative subcommittee looking into school fees that they total $358 million a year. Some $250 million of that was in fees charged at the discretion of the various colleges and universities.

In many cases, the student fees are used to subsidize athletic programs. At the University of Houston, for example, $2.3 million in student service fees last year went to reduce the athletic department's $7.4 million loss - leaving a $5 million deficit for UH's long-troubled athletic program.

The problem of ever spiraling fees has gotten out of control and needs to be reined in. The state has an obligation to get a better handle on the fee situation at Texas colleges and universities. Fees should be made more uniform, and there should be no confusion about how the fee money is spent.

Since students have no option in paying fees, they should at least have a clear understanding about where their money is going and what they are supposedly receiving in return.

Even Mensa members have problems

Super-smart people admit to difficulty meeting people

By TERRI LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Being a genius ain't all quantum physics.

Even the smartest 2 percent among us admit problems with, well, meeting people.

"I've learned that I'm not particularly outgoing," said Laurie Berg, 50, of Thousand Oaks, Calif. "It's still hard. Smart people are just as insecure as others."

Berg is smart. Very smart. So a year ago, she decided to join Mensa, the Fort Worth-based international organization of brainy folk, where a score of at least 132 on an IQ test is the only membership requirement.

To those of us with merely average gray matter, Mensa evokes the haughty ivory towers of academia or a group of white coats huddled around scientific notation furiously scribbled on a blackboard.

But Mensa's mission is anything but rocket science. Its members - some of the 1,500 who gathered in Houston this week for the group's 50th annual convention - say Mensa is just a great way to meet people and socialize.

"I wanted a way to meet men who wouldn't be intimidated by the fact that I was smart," said Ms. Berg, who co-manages Tom Anderson Guitarworks, a company that manufactures electric guitars.

For more living proof, there's S. Gail Skvarenina and her husband Gary Maycroft. The two met at a Mensa conference in Chicago in 1977. Five months later, they were married and now live in Scottsdale, Ariz., where they both work for Motorola in manufacturing operations.

"A lot of people think 'they're smart' and that we do everything well and that's not true," said Ms. Skvarenina, 47, and a Mensa member since 1971. "A lot of people are insecure ... some of us don't have a lot of common sense."

Ms. Skvarenina says she was more shy when she joined more than 20 years ago. Maycroft, looking over the raucous hospitality room at downtown's Hyatt Regency, nods in agreement with some members' assertion that growing up smarter than the pack can sometimes hamstring social development.

And as any junior high school student can tell you, appearing different is not an admirable quality.

"Here, there are no social outcasts," Maycroft said.

Dick Martin, 55 of Fairborn, Ohio, works in military sales as a civilian for the U.S. Air Force.

"I had a very lonely life until I joined Mensa. All of a sudden, I had a very rich social life," Martin said. "We are essentially a social club."

And it's a social club that is less on facts and figures and IQ test results and more on fun. Oh, there's the seminars on "Shifting Paradigms Into The Third Millennium" and Japanese netsukes (miniature sculptures), but there's also one informing members about the joys of owning ferrets as pets.

As for IQ talk, it's kept at a minimum.

"The only ones that talk about it (IQ test results) are new members," explains Keith Brown, 43, who writes software for NASA in Clear Lake and joined Mensa in 1980.

When asked her IQ, Ms. Berg laughs.

"Haven't a clue."

The only flying mammals are bats, of which there are about 950 species.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, July 7, the 189th day of 1996. There are 177 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 7, 1865, four people were hanged in Washington D.C. after being convicted of conspiring with John Wilkes Booth to assassinate President Lincoln.

On this date:

In 1754, King's College opened in New York City. (The school was renamed Columbia College 30 years later.)

In 1846, 150 years ago, U.S. annexation of California was proclaimed at Monterey after the surrender of a Mexican garrison.

In 1896, 100 years ago, the Democratic National Convention opened in Chicago.

In 1898, the United States annexed Hawaii.

In 1930, construction began on Boulder Dam (later named Hoover Dam).

In 1946, 50 years ago, Italian-born Mother Frances Xavier Cabrini was canonized as the first American saint.

In 1954, Elvis Presley made his radio debut as Memphis, Tenn., station WHBQ played his first recording for Sun Records, "That's All Right (Mama)."

In 1969, Canada's House of Commons gave final approval to a measure making the French language equal to English throughout the national government.

In 1981, President Reagan announced he was nominating Arizona Judge Sandra Day O'Connor to become the first female justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1983, 11-year-old Samantha Smith of Manchester, Maine, left for a visit to the Soviet Union at the personal invitation of Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov.

Ten years ago: The government of South Africa said it had lifted all restrictions against anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down a key provision of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

Five years ago: Responding to President Bush's call for stepped-up efforts on arms control talks, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told the White House he was sending Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh and other officials for talks with Secretary of State James A. Baker III. Michael Stich defeated Boris Becker, 6-4, 7-6, 6-4, to win the men's singles title at Wimbledon.

One year ago: The space shuttle Atlantis landed at Cape Canaveral, Fla., bringing back American astronaut Norman Thagard, who'd spent three-and-a-half months aboard the Russian space station "Mir."

Today's Birthdays: Composer Gian Carlo Menotti is 85. Blues musician Pinetop Perkins is 83. Fashion designer Pierre Cardin is 74. Musician-conductor Doc Severinsen is 69. Country singer Charlie Louvin is 69. Historian-author David McCullough is 63. Rock star Ringo Starr is 56. Actor Joe Spano is 50. Actress Shelley Duvall is 47. Actress Cree Summer is 26. Figure skater Michelle Kwan is 16.

Marine Corps to teach recruits moral values

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Concluding that too few parents and teachers instill moral values, the Marine Corps is planning to expand values-based instruction in boot camp.

"We're just seeing a decline in the amount of time spent teaching values out there in society," Marine Capt. T.V. Johnson said Friday. "People aren't coming in with those basic values that were taught in school and church."

The problem, Johnson said, stems from "both parents outside the home at work, spending less time with their children, more single-parent families - and they're not having time to spend with their families."

The program is still in the draft phase. But according to Johnson, it involves having the legendary Marine Corps drill sergeants temporarily drop their tough-guy role and serve as mentors to young recruits.

Under the plan, the Marines would add a 12th week of basic training, with the extra time devoted to values discussion and training.

"The drill instructor pulls up a foot locker and instead of speaking in a firm voice, he may take off his Smokey Bear hat and bring up some scenarios," Johnson said.

They might include a pair of Marines on leave finding a wallet with a large amount of cash. Do they keep the money and return the wallet? Or return the money and the wallet?

The additional training is being pushed by Gen. Charles Krulak, Marine Corps commandant who has made morality a major theme in his first year in the top post.

Krulak said he seeks not only to improve the Marine Corps but also to heighten moral awareness in the military that will spill over into a society he sees beset by drug abuse, teen pregnancy and drive-by shootings.

"I believe that the Marine Corps, if we really hold the line, if we can extend boot camp, if we can extend the development of our ethos and our values, can literally transform the youth of America," Krulak wrote recently. "When our Marines return to our cities and towns, they will be drug-free, not alcoholics. They will take care of their families and so on."

Some 40,000 to 45,000 Marine recruits go through basic training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depots at Parris Island, S.C., and San Diego each year.

The additional week of value-based instruction for enlistees expands a relatively new Marine Corps program of values discussion put in place two years ago, according to Johnson.

The Ambassadors Program

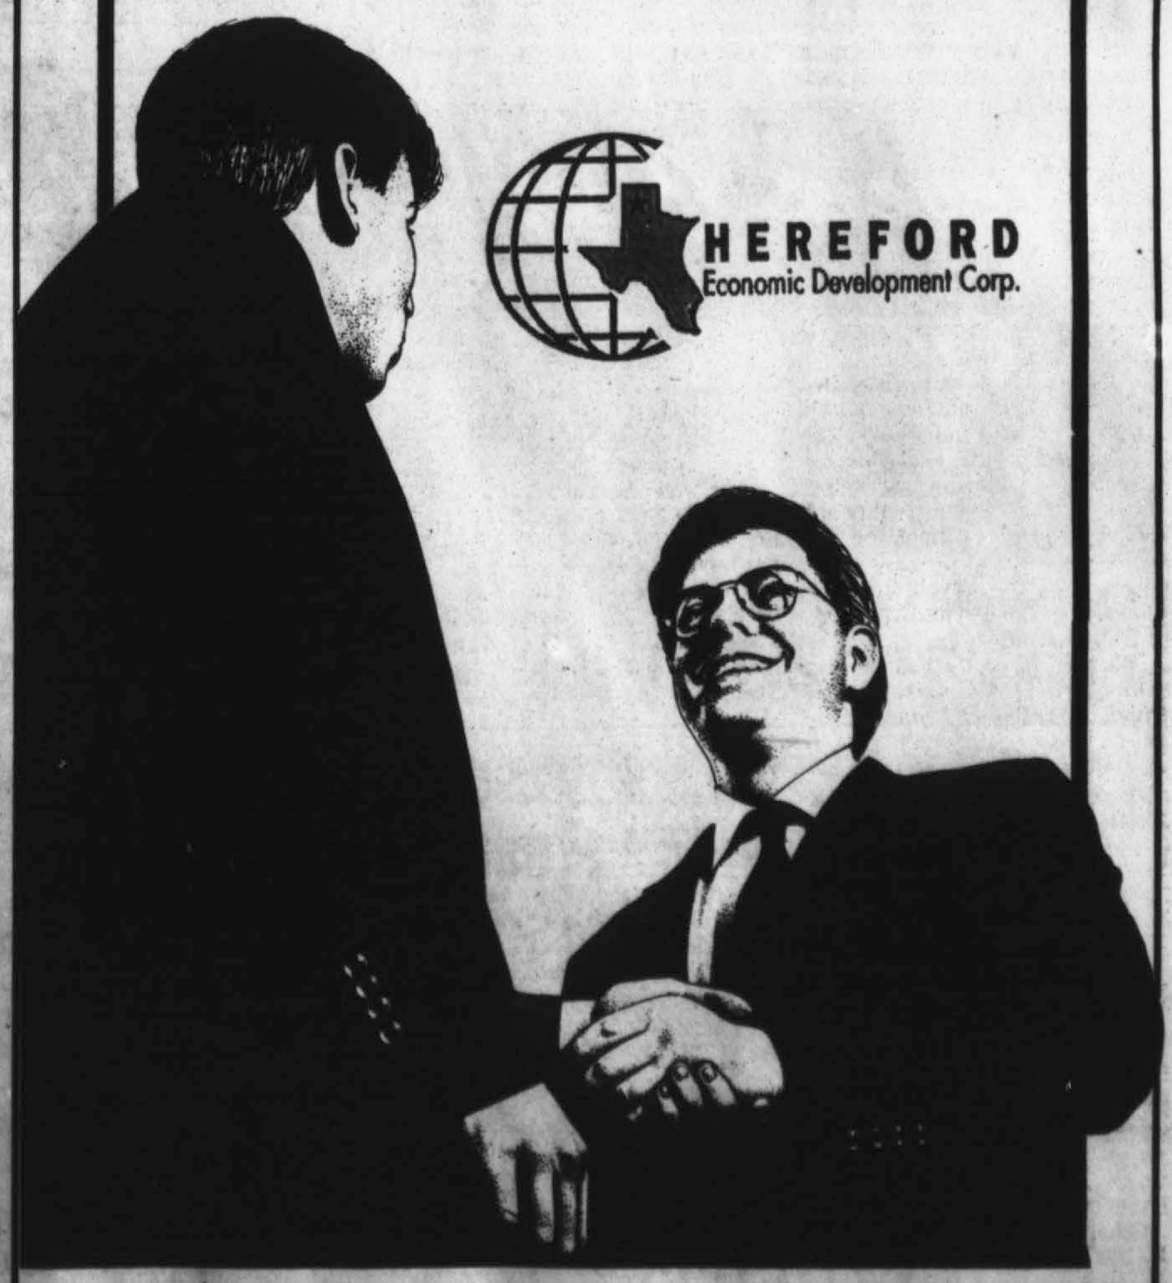

The Ambassadors Program has been implemented to broaden the business recruiting efforts of the HEDC, encourage volunteerism and promote the aggressive business perception of Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Their program is designed to encourage local citizens who travel outside Deaf Smith County to assist the HEDC in recruiting businesses from outside the area.

The HEDC will pay a fee to any local citizen responsible for recruiting any basic business that locates in Deaf Smith County. A basic business is one that derives at least 75% of its revenues or sales from outside Deaf Smith County.

Local All-Stars clip Canyon

Hereford's 13-year-old Babe Ruth League All-Stars bombed the Canyon stars 13-2 Friday at the Kids Inc. Complex in Hereford.

The local kids won the first game of a best two-out-of-three series. The second game was to be played at 5 p.m. Saturday, with a third game, if necessary, following immediately.

Canyon took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second after neither team scored in the first. Then Hereford exploded in the bottom of the second.

It all started innocently when Isaiah Valdez drew a walk. Kyle Artho singled, then George Castillo drove them both home with a double, and Freddy Garcia followed with an RBI double. Slade Hodges reached on an error and Toby Torres doubled, and both scored on two more Canyon errors.

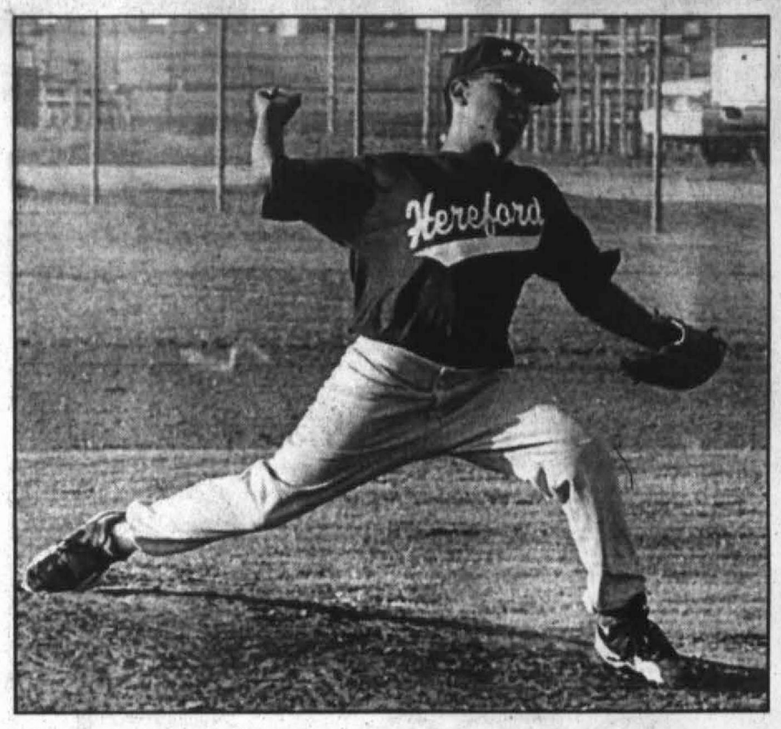

Canyon got only one run back in the top of the third against Torres, Hereford's starting pitcher. Hereford broke out again in the bottom of the inning.

Artho started it off with a single and went to third on an error, and he scored on Thomas Maldonado's ground out. Castillo doubled again and Richard Salinas brought him home with a single. Torres' double scored Salinas, and J.P. Holman's double scored Hodges and Torres.

Hodges made a leaping catch in center field to save a couple of runs in the top of the fourth, keeping the Hereford lead at 11-2.

Hereford got two more in the bottom of the fourth. Artho doubled and Nathan Horrell was hit by a pitch. Artho stole third and scored on an error, which sent Horrell to third. He later scored on a wild pitch.

Holman pitched the fifth and got out of a jam, allowing Hereford to win by the 10-run mercy rule.

Hereford hurler

Toby Torres of the Hereford 13-year-old Babe Ruth League All-Stars delivers a pitch to the plate. Torres pitched four innings and gave up only two runs, and Hereford beat Canyon 13-2 Friday night at the Kids Inc. Complex.

Guzman, Walker lead Tarheels to nationals

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Valerie Guzman, your team's just qualified for the National 13-under AAU Basketball Tournament this week in Cocoa, Fla. What are you going to do now?

"We're planning on going to Disney World," Guzman said before a workout Monday.

Sure, basketball is on the minds of Guzman and Tori Walker. But the two Hereford girls, who join with other Panhandle girls to form the Texas Tarheels, want to enjoy their summer vacation, too.

They're nervous about the tournament - this is their first national AAU appearance - but they're excited about the whole experience.

"One girl on our team went (to a national AAU tournament) last year," Walker said. "She said that after the opening ceremonies, they exchange things from all over the country."

Walker and Guzman, two freshmen-to-be at Hereford High School, are in their third year of playing AAU basketball. This year, they and two old teammates from Vega, Kimberly Artho and Kyla May, joined the Texas Tarheels.

The combination has worked for one tournament championship and three runner-up spots - and in most of those tournaments they played up in the 14-under age group. One of the second-place finishes came at the

Self paces Hereford Open

Mike Self of Amarillo shot a 72 Friday to lead the Hereford Open after the first of three rounds.

James Salinas of Hereford, the defending champion, was in second place and two strokes off the lead after shooting 74 at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Amarillo's Price Barton also shot 74.

The Open was to continue Saturday afternoon and conclude with the third round Sunday, which starts at 9 a.m.

The tourney has four flights with 53 golfers, with 15 in the championship flight.

Unseeded Washington, Krajicek make men's finals at Wimbledon

By STEPHEN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Mali Vai Washington overcame a 1-5 deficit in the fifth set, a controversial line call and yet another rain delay today to beat fellow American Todd Martin and reach the Wimbledon final.

The unseeded Washington served out the rain-suspended match in the 18th game of the fifth set to win 5-7, 6-4, 6-7 (8-6), 6-3, 10-8.

Washington, 27, became the first black to reach the Wimbledon men's final since Arthur Ashe won the title in 1975.

Washington, in a Grand Slam final for the first time in his career, will face Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands for the title Sunday.

Krajicek overwhelmed Australians Jason Stoltenberg 7-5, 6-2, 6-1 to also advance to his first Grand Slam championship match.

Washington's victory over Martin, the 13th seed, meant that Wimbledon will have its first unseeded champion since Boris Becker in 1985.

In Saturday's women final, defending and six-time champion Steffi Graf was to face Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in a replay of last year's championship match.

The Washington-Martin match, which was suspended by rain for the fourth time at two sets apiece Friday, ended 25 hours after it began following 3:49 of actual playing time.

After Washington hit a high backhand volley for a cross-court winner on his first match point, he dropped to both knees, clenched both fists and looked towards his friends and family in the players' box.

Martin, who played tentatively on many big points, said he never felt tighter during a tennis matrch.

"I froze up a little bit and Mal played well when he needed to," he said. "It's a game I've practiced a lot of times but I've never felt a feeling like today."

While there was little suspense during Friday's four sets, today's fifth set was full of drama.

Martin raced out to a 5-1 lead but couldn't convert. Twice he served for the match and both times Washington broke him and eventually evened the set at 6-6.

Stockton takes over Senior Open

BEACHWOOD, Ohio (AP) - Dave Stockton has been here before - in first place in a U.S. Senior Open with two rounds down and two to go.

"You know, I've led this tournament before with 36 holes to go and I don't have my name on the trophy yet," Stockton reminded everyone Friday.

Bob Charles, victimized as Stockton made up four strokes on the last three holes to grab a 1-shot lead, was about ready to call the engraver on Stockton's behalf.

Stockton holed four long birdie putts on the back nine, including a 22-footer on 18, to catch and overtake Charles. Stockton ended up perched in the same spot he occupied in 1992 at Saucon Valley, where he ended up tied for third.

Founder's Day 5-K planned Saturday

The annual King's Manor Founder's Day barbecue and 5K Run, Walk and Senior Walk will be held Saturday, July 13.

Entry fee for the 5K event is $15. The fee includes a ticket to the barbecue.

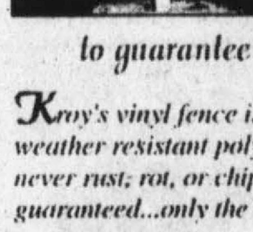

Medals will be awarded for the top three places in each age division, male and female, in the 5K run. Age divisions are 13-and-under, 14-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-and-over.

Medals will go to the overall male and female top three places in the 5K walk and Senior walk (55 and over). All participants will receive tee shirts.

Check-in and registration will be at 7:30 a.m. on race day, and events start at 8 a.m. The barbecue starts at 6:30 p.m.

Athletics bombard Angels

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The fireworks at the Coliseum started with the first pitch.

In the most explosive first inning in major league history, Oakland scored 13 runs and California three in a game the Athletics wound up winning 16-8 Friday night.

Matt Stairs tied a big league mark with six RBIs in an inning, hitting a grand slam and a two-run single. In all, the A's sent 18 batters to the plate in the highest-scoring inning in team history.

"That was unbelievable," winning pitcher John Wasdin said. "I've never seen anything like that. We scored seven, eight runs and kept getting hits. That's nice to see."

The first sellout crowd of the season at the Coliseum was lured by a postgame fireworks show. The 36,129 fans saw the Athletics post the biggest first inning in the majors since May 21, 1952, when Brooklyn scored 15 against Cincinnati.

It was the biggest first inning in the AL since Cleveland scored 14 against the Philadelphia A's on June 18, 1950.

The record for runs by one team in an inning is 17, set by Boston against Detroit in 1953.

Oakland combined for nine hits, five walks and a hit batter. Stairs' big game came a day after he was promoted from Edmonton.

"I was working down in Triple-A," Stairs said. "I changed a lot of things about my swing."

"I'm happy for the chance to share a major league record," he said. "I've been struggling with the bases loaded, so I was excited about my first grand slam."

Stairs became the 12th player in major league history to drive in six runs in an inning. Boston's Carlos Quintana was the last to do it, on July 30, 1991.

Stairs hit his slam off Ryan Hancock (4-1), who faced 10 batters and allowed eight runs. Reliever Brad Pennington walked all three batters he faced, and Jim Abbott gave up hits to his first four batters.

"I just got off on the wrong foot and stayed there," Hancock said. "They buried me. I never had an outing like this in my career."

Mariners 6, Rangers 3

Sterling Hitchcock tied his career high with nine strikeouts in 8 1-3 innings, and Seattle beat Texas for the 27th time in 33 meetings.

Jay Buhner hit his 22nd homer and Edgar Martinez had three hits for the Mariners. Juan Gonzalez hit his 21st home run for the host Rangers.

White Sox 7, Indians 0

Wilson Alvarez and Roberto Hernandez handed Cleveland its first shutout of the season as Chicago closed within two games of the AL Central leaders.

The Indians were the only team in the majors that had not been blanked. But Alvarez (10-4) won for the eighth time in nine decisions, allowing five hits in eight innings at Jacobs Field.

The White Sox stopped a five-game winning streak by Orel Hershiser (9-5). Frank Thomas and Harold Baines each had three hits for Chicago, which scored five uncarned runs in the ninth.

Twins 9, Royals 8

Kansas City lost pitcher Mark Gubicza to a broken leg when he was hit by Paul Molitor's line drive in the first inning, then lost the game when Minnesota rallied for five runs in the ninth at the Metrodome.

Gubicza will be sidelined for up to eight weeks. He was hit in the lower left leg, and was taken off the field on a golf cart.

Gubicza, looking to break his six-game losing streak, had a 3-0 lead when the injury occurred.

Jeff Montgomery (1-6), the Royals' struggling relief ace, blew a save for the fourth time in his last five chances. He has allowed 14 runs and 17 hits in his last 11 outings, and lost this game when Chip Hale hit a two-run double.

Yankees 12, Brewers 3

Mike Aldrete, whose job might be in jeopardy when Darryl Strawberry arrives, homered and drove in four runs at Yankee Stadium. New York increased its lead in the AL East to a season-high six games.

Aldrete had three hits. Primarily a DH since New York got him last month in a trade with California, the 35-year-old role player could wind up in the minors or on waivers when Strawberry is promoted from Triple-A Columbus after the All-Star break.

Strawberry homered Friday night, his third shot in two games since joining Columbus.

Dwight Gooden (8-4) improved to 8-1 in his last 12 starts despite throwing 105 pitches in only five innings.

Mariano Duncan homered for the Yankees. Kevin Seitzer and Jose Valentin connected for Milwaukee.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 3

Jose Canseco hit his 26th home run and rookie Jose Malave also hit a three-run homer as Boston beat Baltimore at Camden Yards.

Aaron Sele (3-5) won for the first time since May 19. The Red Sox ended a three-game losing streak and avoided falling 15 games under .500 for the first time this year.

David Wells (5-8) could not hold an early 3-0 lead and dropped to 4-13 lifetime against the Red Sox.

Tigers 4, Blue Jays 3

Detroit matched a season high with its third straight victory by defeating Toronto at Tiger Stadium.

A.J. Sager (1-1) overcame seven walks, six of them in the first four innings. A day earlier, Tigers starter C.J. Nitkowski won despite seven walks. The Blue Jays stranded 14 runners, 10 in scoring position.

Astros pitchers stay hot

By The Associated Press

Atlanta has the best pitching staff in baseball - maybe ever. And Houston's is pretty good, too.

The Astros beat the Braves for the second straight night and extended their winning streak to seven - the team's longest in five years - with a 7-1 victory Friday night.

"Our starting pitching has been high quality for a month," Houston manager Terry Collins said. "There's only been two or three games where it wasn't a quality start."

Darryl Kile (8-5) scattered nine hits, becoming the first Houston pitcher to throw complete games in consecutive starts since Doug Drabek in May 1994. He struck out five to increase his total to 128 in 122 innings, and walked only two.

"Control makes it easier for me," he said. "I had two good pitches tonight, and they went where I wanted them to go."

Houston's winning streak is its longest since a nine-game spurt in 1991. The visiting Astros scored in five straight innings beginning with the fourth to overcome a 1-0 deficit and knock out Jason Schmidt (3-4). Braves fans, upset at the sloppy play, booed the defending World Series champions.

"That was pretty ugly," Braves third baseman Chipper Jones said. "Obviously, we didn't play real well tonight, and I'm sure they enjoy kicking our butts on the other side."

In other NL games, Los Angeles defeated Colorado 8-1, San Diego edged San Francisco 7-6 in 11 innings, St. Louis beat Pittsburgh 7-4, New York outscored Montreal 9-6, Philadelphia beat Florida 7-4 and Cincinnati blanked Chicago 3-0.

At Atlanta, Jeff Bagwell's 22nd homer evened the score in the fourth, then the Astros went ahead for good in the fifth when John Cangelosi hit a two-out, two-run double.

Dodgers 8, Rockies 1

Hideo Nomo pitched eight strong innings and Mike Blowers extended his career-best hitting streak to 18 games with a three-run homer at Dodger Stadium.

After giving up a season-high five earned runs in Sunday's 16-15 loss at Colorado, Nomo (9-7) allowed five hits, struck out nine and walked one.

Padres 7, Giants 6

Pinch-hitter Brian Johnson singled home the winning run with two outs in the 11th inning, and San Diego won its seventh straight over visiting San Francisco.

Rickey Henderson doubled off Jose Bautista (1-1) leading off the 11th, and Steve Finley was walked intentionally with one out. Rod Beck relieved and struck out Ken Caminiti, and Johnson's single scored Henderson, who slid home ahead of Barry Bonds' throw.

Sean Bergman (4-7) pitched two hitless innings.

Cardinals 7, Pirates 4

Gary Gaetti drove in three runs and St. Louis roughed up Zane Smith (4-6) for the second time in six days.

Brian Jordan had a two-run single in the fourth at Three Rivers Stadium, giving him six RBIs in two days.

Todd Stottlemyre (8-6) allowed three runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings, and Tony Fossas got the final out for his second save. Smith gave up seven runs and eight hits in 3 2-3 innings. He lasted just 1 1-3 innings last Sunday.

Reds 3, Cubs 0

Barry Larkin homered twice off All-Star Steve Trachsel at Wrigley Field.

Dave Burba (3-9) allowed four hits in seven-plus innings to win for the third time in four decisions.

Jeff Branson also homered off Trachsel (7-5), whose three hits allowed in six innings were all solo home runs. Trachsel, who had won four straight decisions, blanked the Reds for 13 innings in two previous starts this season.

Mets 9, Expos 6

Carl Everett singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning, and the visiting Mets won their third straight.

Jerry DiPoto (3-1) pitched one inning for the win, and John Franco got three outs for his 19th save.

'Wild Thing' coming back

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Although he surrendered the most infamous home run in team history, erratic reliever Mitch Williams is getting another chance to pitch for the Philadelphia Phillies.

General manager Lee Thomas said the Phillies, with the NL's worst record, aren't trying to recapture the magic of their 1993 NL pennant team, which featured Williams and a host of other colorful characters.

"We're just giving a guy a chance, that's all," Thomas said Friday after the team announced Williams, who retired last year, was reporting to the Phillies' spring training base in Clearwater, Fla..

Major League All-Star Game lacks star power

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Sorry to spoil the big event, baseball. Hate to be the one to break the bad news.

The way it's shaping up, the All-Star game looks a little short on star power.

No one like Hideo Nomo to create excitement this time around. Instead, the buzz is about Ken Griffey Jr., Tony Gwynn, Randy Johnson and Kirby Puckett, all of whom will be absent Tuesday night.

They're injured, and so are Philadelphia's two most popular players, Lenny Dykstra and Darren Daulton. In a bleak year for the Phillies, that leaves the hometown crowd with the bare minimum of one person to root for: reliever Ricky Bottalico.

No new park to explore, either. A couple of seasons ago, the site was Camden Yards, and last summer it was The Ballpark in Arlington. Jacobs Field and Coors Field are on deck for the next two years.

This game, though, is stuck at Veterans Stadium. The Vet is still its concrete, symmetrical self, just as drab as it was in 1976 when Mark Fidrych and the All-Stars last visited during the nation's bicentennial.

There will, however, be a special speaker. Former Phillies ace Steve Carlton is serving as the spokesman for FanFest, the party run in conjunction with the game. Never mind that he's the guy who was famous for never talking to the press.

Nice, but not likely to inspire the same kind of emotion as Mickey Mantle last summer. Though the Mick did not look well when he appeared at a hospital in Texas, the fact that he was able to speak at all brought a sense of encouragement, at the time, to baseball fans everywhere.

That said, there is something to look forward to in the next few days, although it won't happen on the field, if it happens at all.

"If anything, it seems like they're getting pretty close to a negotiated deal between the union and ownership," said NL manager Bobby Cox of the Atlanta Braves. "If they get that done during the All-Star game or the Monday before it, that would be something."

Yes, it would. Yet true baseball fans want more from an All-Star game than just a signed piece of paper.

They want to see Johnson blow fastballs past Barry Bonds, Fred McGriff and Ron Gant, as he did last year. They want to see someone new and unique, like Nomo, who bowed to his NL teammates and then used his unusual windup to strike out Kenny Lofton, Edgar Martinez and Albert Belle.

This year's matchup might be a reprise of Game 3 of the World Series last October - John Smoltz of the Braves against Charles Nagy of the Indians.

Then again, AL manager Mike Hargrove may pick Andy Pettitte or Roger Pavlik or the other starter on the roster, Chuck Finley. Fine pitchers, all of them, but minus the star status of past staffs.

While the NL staff includes four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux, who was injured and missed last year's game, there's some power missing.

Sammy Sosa, who led the league with 26 home runs when the team was chosen, and runnerup Henry Rodriguez and his 25 homers were bypassed by Cox.

"I guess I need to hit 40 home runs and get 100 RBIs by the break next year," Sosa said.

"To be the National League leader in home runs I guess means nothing. This is something I don't understand. I deserve to be there. I play hard every day, and have the numbers to go. I'm supposed to be on that team, and everybody knows that."

There's carping every year, which is why Cox says the job of choosing the reserves is a thankless one. Along with NL president Len Coleman, Cox picked four of his own pitchers - a record for an All-Star game, and all of them deserving - yet was forced to pass over Braves outfielder Ryan Klesko.

Hargrove and AL president Gene Budig did an extremely fair job of spreading the honors. The Indians placed five players on the team, although shortstop Omar Vizquel was left off in favor of Seattle's Alex Rodriguez, and Cleveland outfielder Manny Ramirez was bumped, too.

TARHEELS

regional tournament in Amarillo, which qualified the team for the national tournament.

The Tarheels have some good bloodlines. Jodi Ogletree of Panhandle is the younger sister of University of Texas player Angie Jo Ogletree. Kimberly Newland of Dimmitt is the daughter of Bobbie basketball coach Jan Newland.

Kelli Mitchell of Borger is the lone Tarheel with national AAU experience, but what an experience it was. Mitchell played last year with the West Texas Flyers and helped them finish second at the 12-under national tourney. (The WT Flyers, by the way, was the team that beat the Tarheels at this year's regional tourney.)

Rounding out the Tarheels are Whitney Brinkley of Panhandle and four girls from Amarillo: Sasha Moore, Montana Curtis, Darcee Sherrod and Keelie Sherrod. The latter two are the daughters of the Tarheels' coach, Mark Sherrod.

The coach has praise for the Hereford girls.

"In the qualifying (regional) tournament, both kids played well," Sherrod said. "They had to for us to go on.

"In the game that decided whether we'd be able to go, Valerie was playing the forward position," Sherrod said. "In the last four minutes, she took the game away from the other team. Whenever we got her the ball, she'd either score, or get fouled, or both."

Walker also is an important member of the team.

"Tori plays mostly as a ball-handler and a power forward," Sherrod said. "Her athleticism allows her to do a lot of things: blocking shots, rebounding, and taking the ball to the interior and scoring over bigger players.

"As a pair, they bring a lot of basketball savvy and maturity," he said. "The Hereford girls are good kids to work with."

Sherrod also had praise for the Hereford community - its fans and its financial support. The Hereford Sports Association donated $500 to each of 16 young basketball players - including Walker and Guzman - who are going to national tournaments this summer.

"The support we see from the Hereford community as a whole is strongly admired," Sherrod said. "Few kids have the opportunity to get that kind of support. If we didn't have that kind of support, some of these kids couldn't make this trip."

Sherrod has high hopes for the Panhandle teams' performance in the national tournament. He predicts that the West Texas Flyers will win it.

He also said that the Tarheels have a chance to finish high. Last year, the Lubbock Lady Bulls were the regional runners-up to the WT Flyers, and the Bulls finished in the top 12 at the national tournament.

"He just wants us to do the best we can," Walker said. "Just get out there and play."

The opening ceremonies will be held Friday in Cocoa, which is near Jacksonville.

The first pool games will start Saturday. The top two teams in each pool of four advance to the championship bracket, with the other teams getting to play in a consolation "Shootout" bracket.

The championship game will be played July 20.

Local students attend Farm Bureau seminar

Three Hereford High School students attended the Texas Farm Bureau's 33rd annual Citizenship Seminar June 17-21 in San Angelo.

Rachel Bezner, daughter of Frankie and Jeri Bezner; Justin Betzen, son of Tom and Cheryl Betzen and Joanna Brumley, daughter of Mike and Janice Brumley; participated in the seminar.

Sponsored by the Deaf Smith/Oldham County Farm Bureau, they were among approximately 400 high school junior and senior students from over 150 counties across the state.

The purpose of the seminar is to provide the students with a better understanding of their American heritage and the capitalistic free enterprise system, according to Larry Malamen of Hereford, county FB president.

Charles Benton, TFB field representative; Ann Leslie, 1995 Miss TFB and Taylor Bledsoe, 1995 TFB Speech contest winner; presented a program on "Farm Bureau Youth Activities."

Speakers at this year's seminar and their subjects were as follows: Dr. John Pisciotta of Baylor University, "The Private Enterprise Economy: Foundation of Freedom and Engine of Opportunity;" Earl Taylor of the National Center for Constitutional Studies, "The Making of America;" and Kurt Swanda, Fort Worth, "America."

The video tape "A More Perfect Union" was shown to the students and there was a special presentation by Dale Minnick, a motivational speaker.

The students were welcomed to the seminar by Dr. James Hindman, president of Angelo State University.

PLN to host seminar July 12

The Promised Land Network (PLN), a regional rural development organization, will host the first annual West Texas Micro-enterprise Seminar Friday, July 12, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Hereford Community Center.

The seminar will feature nationally-known micro-enterprise program director Rose Jasperson from the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill, Neb.

The Promised Land Network was founded in 1993 by Father Darryl Birkenfeld. Lydia Villanueva is the PLN office manager.

In addition to Jasperson, a four-member panel will discuss possibilities for micro-enterprise projects in West Texas. Panelists will be Rob Kennedy, deputy assistant commissioner of the Texas Department of Agriculture; Leland Beatty, Texas Rural Communities; Victor Hernandez, Lubbock City Councilman; and Perna Strickland, Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

Booths highlighting small business development will also be featured at the seminar. Cost of the seminar is $10 a person, including a noon luncheon. County Judge Tom Simons will welcome participants to the one-day event.

A micro-enterprise is defined as "a sole proprietorship, partnership, or family business that has fewer than 10 employees, does not generally have access to the commercial banking sector and can initially utilize a loan of under $15,000," said Birkenfeld.

The underlying philosophy is that small businesses will stabilize and contribute to local communities.

PLN hopes to help form a local association to administer such a program.

Since 1987, between 200 to 300 micro-enterprise programs have formed and dispensed over $52 million in loans to 52,000 businesses.

One goal of the program is to assist businesses in developing an adequate credit history, enabling them to qualify for traditional commercial loans.

The Rural Enterprise Assistance Project(REAP), operated by the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill, Neb., is one of the oldest micro-enterprise programs in the nation. REAP serves rural communities in Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, supporting over 200 small businesses in 90 communities.

Jasperson, the featured speaker for the Hereford seminar, reports that businesses helped by REAP "cover a broad range of possibilities, including accounting firms, ag and auto repair shops, carpentry, florists, upholstery, bakeries, bed and breakfasts, arts and crafts, day care services, antique dealers, beauty salons, and much, much more."

These rural economic development programs have been implemented in 47 states with Arizona, North Carolina, Montana and Nebraska developing some of the most innovative models. By combining business training with loans, these programs have succeeded in helping fledgling entrepreneurs thrive and prosper.

Pre-registration and further information on the seminar is available by calling the PLN office at 364-4445. Registration at the door is also possible.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent -- AG

Horn flies are the most important insect pest of cattle nationally and occur in damaging numbers throughout Texas every summer.

Horn fly problems are normally limited to pasture and range situations and are usually very minor in feedlot operations. Present throughout the country, these bloodsucking flies are the smallest of the commonly recognized livestock pest flies. They are about half the size of the ordinary house fly.

Generally, in the Texas Panhandle, the flies have a two peak periods -- May-June and September-October. During July an August, hot, dry weather usually keep horn fly populations at a relatively low level. The reason for this is because horn fly larvae develop only in manure with sufficient moisture levels.

In July and August, unless there is above average rainfall, the manure pats dry out before the larvae can develop to maturity.

Adult horn flies of both sexes spend most of their time resting on the bodies of animals during the day as well as at night, feeding intermittently. The female leaves the animal just long enough to lay eggs in fresh cow manure. The eggs hatch in 12-48 hours. The larvae feed in the manure and develop to full size in from 3-5 days, and the pupal stage requires from 6-8 days before adult emergence.

In warm weather, the horn fly can complete its life cycle from egg to adult in 10 days. Several generations occur each summer.

Horn flies are usually found on the backs of cattle, out of reach of the animal's head or tail. During the day, they move to the shaded area or underside of the animals to escape the heat. The sensitive skin around the naval and central midline often become covered with sores from horn fly feeding.

Each fly feeds from 20-40 times within a 24 hour period, piercing the cow's skin each time. Thus, a cow with 1,000 horn flies may be "bitten" from 600,000 to 1,200,000 times in a 30 day period. It is no wonder that these bloodsucking flies reduce weight gains and milk production in mother cows with calves.

A number of strategies of insecticide use are available for horn fly control. Producers may use insecticidal ear tags, sprays, pour-ons, dust bags, backrubbers or self-oilers and oral (through feed) larvicide or some combination of these.

Through the use of pyrethroid insecticide ear tags, stockman have encountered the most widespread problem of resistance to insecticides with livestock pests. The longevity of the tags' action made them desirable from a control standpoint, but also meant that selection for resistance occurred over several horn fly generations with each application of ear tags.

Resistance occurs as season long use of the same insecticide kills the insecticide susceptible horn flies, leaving only resistant flies to reproduce. Soon resistant flies dominate and the insecticide is no longer effective, often after only two seasons of use. Resistance to one pyrethroid causes resistance to other pyrethroids -- a phenomenon called cross resistance.

Other ear tags contain the organophosphate insecticides. Entomologists fear that a similar problem could arise with resistance to organophosphate compounds because in recent years, tags containing these compounds have become popular to replace those containing pyrethroids.

Several states have noted that organophosphate ear tags that provided from 18-22 weeks of horn fly control in the first year of use now often provide control for much shorter periods. Producers that have used organophosphate insecticide ear tags for three or more years should switch to a control program using sprays, backrubbers or dust bags or use an ear tag with pyrethroid insecticide.

It is recommended that producer alternate procedures for horn fly control to achieve the best long term results.

The following is a list of some of the brand names in each insecticidal category. Organophosphates include Terminator, Optimizer, Optimizer-calf, Dominator, Patriot, Cutter Blue and Warrior. Pyrethroids include Ectrin, Atroban, Gardstar and Permacide. Third generation pyrethroids include Saber Extra, Cutter Gold and Python.

Ear tags sold through veterinary outlets include Excalibur, Bovagard, Zetagard, Rotator, Expar and Diaphos Rx.

Third generation pyrethroids are listed separately from other pyrethroids because of their relative effectiveness and their relationship to quickly building high levels of horn fly resistance. The third generation pyrethroids to date have provided the longest and most effective control of horn flies.

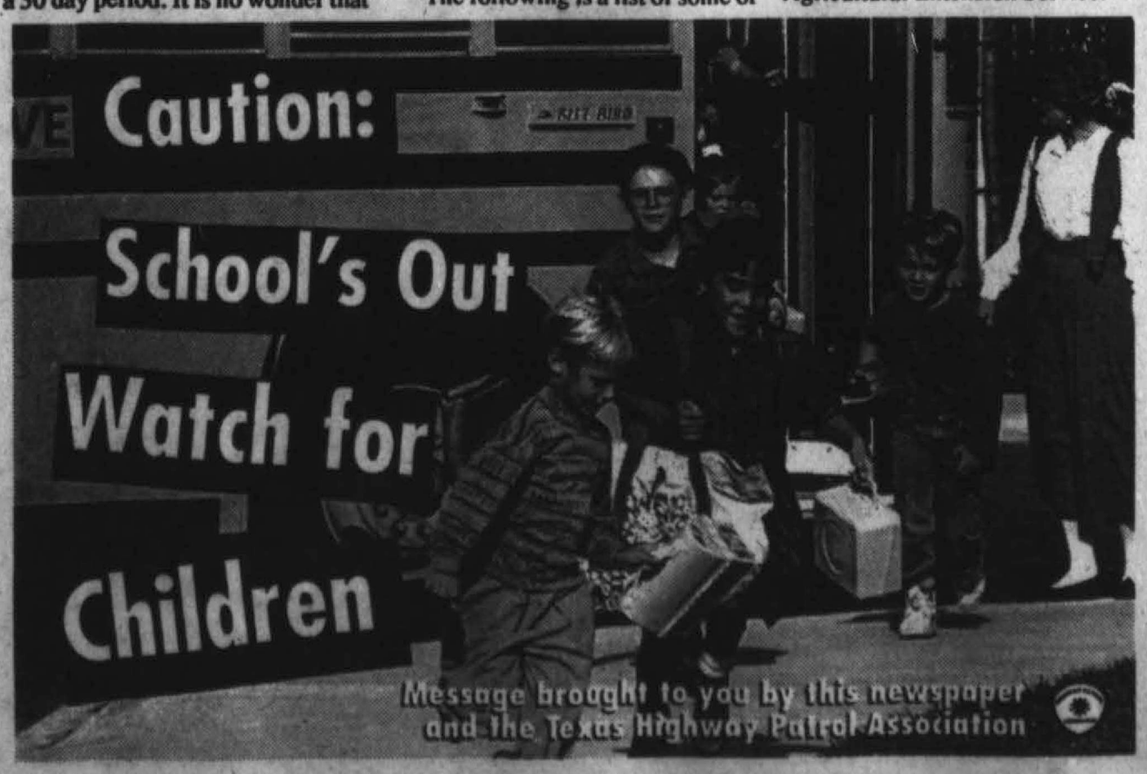

They do, however, cause pyrethroid resistance levels to increase at a very rapid rate. Widespread use of these tags year after year will result in super-resistant flies which may be very difficult to control with any pyrethroid tag. Even a few years of consecutive use may render the other pyrethroid tags ineffective.

The organophosphate, pyrethroid or a combination of the two tags will normally provide 10-12 weeks of good control in this area. Pyrethroid tags sell for about half of the price of third generation pyrethroid tags. Prices for organophosphate tags generally lie somewhere between the price for the pyrethroid groups.

Assuming the tags are put in May or June, this will get cattle through the peak fly seasons. However, if populations are heavy in late August or early September, retagging may be necessary to maintain the level of control as desired. Another alternative is to use spray, dust or a pour-on or spot-on for fall fly control.

Insecticide resistance management is an important component of horn fly management. If resistance to pyrethroids continues to increase, producers will have, for all practical purposes, lost an extremely important class of insecticides for horn fly control.

Producers with questions concerning horn fly control or desiring more information, may contact the Deaf Smith County Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Any farmer or gardener who grows corn, cucumbers or squash probably has run across a couple of fungi that can devastate a crop. Agriculture Department scientists hope to control the menaces with friendly bacteria.

Chemicals provide mixed results against the fungi, Pythium ultimum and Fusarium. Daniel P. Roberts and colleagues at the Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville, Md., believe better results can be obtained by coating seeds with living bacteria.

They are operating on a theory that the bacteria shield vulnerable young seedlings from the fungi as they grow, and might even protect mature plants in late season.

Pythium attacks seeds in cool, moist soil. Fusarium thrives in warmer, drier soil and often late in the growing season.

"Pythium ultimum is a big problem for a short period, while Fusarium is more of a long-term problem," Roberts told Agricultural Research magazine. "Both of these pathogens can occur in the same agricultural field."

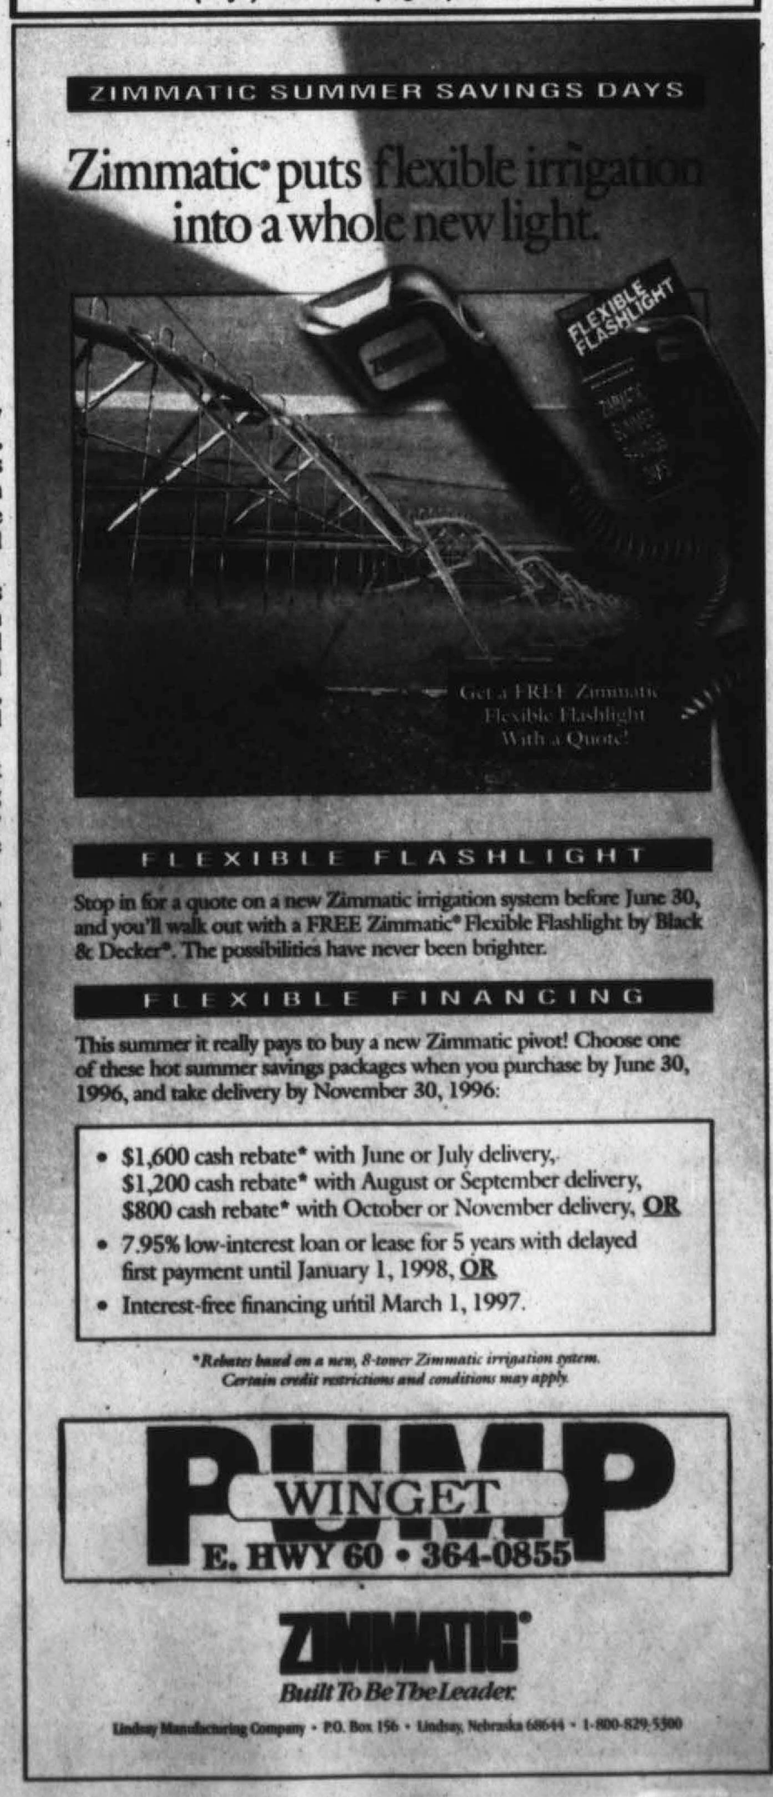

Two types of bacteria have been found to compete with the destructive fungi for space and plant sugars and other nutrients in underground root zones. But the bacteria don't harm the plant.

The research team produced millions of the bacteria in the laboratory, added them to sterile peat and applied the mixture in a sticky coating to the seeds. The seeds and others that were untreated were planted, then examined eight days later.

"The difference was striking," Roberts said. Most of the untreated plants couldn't even poke through the soil; those that did soon died.

But 90 percent of the treated seedlings grew normally and vigorously, and they fared better than seedlings from seed that had been treated with only one form of bacteria.

Mother's story of lost child may help others

Woman founds network to help others locate children who are missing

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

MANCELONA, Mich. (AP)--Janice Rott sits tensely in the back seat as the car bumps along a dirt road, clouds of dust rising in its wake. Her eyes dart back and forth, scanning trees, marshes, ramshackle trailers, fishing huts.

"My baby, my poor baby," she murmurs in a low, gravelly voice. "Oh, God, was she crying? Did she cry for me? She must have been so scared."

Somewhere in these remote northern Michigan woodlands, a killer dumped the body of Rott's 16-year-old daughter nearly two years ago. Mushroom hunters found the remains of Kathey Lynn Horn in May near the Otsego-Charlevoix county line.

Rott had been obsessed with finding her daughter, quitting her job as a waitress to devote full time to the quest.

It's over now, but she cannot let go.

She and a group of supporters founded the Missing Children's Network of Michigan a year ago to help parents and law enforcement agencies track down lost youngsters.

Law enforcement agencies across the country reported 969,264 missing persons to the FBI's National Crime Information Center in 1995. The agency estimates 85 percent to 90 percent were children. All but 4,921 of the cases, or more than 99 percent, had been solved by year's end.

Rott, 44, is devoting her life to the cause, hoping to spare other children Kathey's fate.

And she vows to bring her daughter's murderer to justice.

Police say they are questioning a suspect. They won't identify him for the record, but Rott knows well who he is.

She wastes no opportunity to learn more about him - and anything else connected to Kathey's death.

A few days after the May 24 funeral, Rott joined a reporter tracing her daughter's steps on what probably was the last night of her life. With her was David Ufer, a private investigator and president of the Missing Children's Network.

It's nearly dark as they spot a place where the suspect once lived. One of his former in-laws, whom Rott has met previously, is working nearby. She invites him to join the group in the car.

She fires question after question at the man, who answers readily but provides no "smoking gun."

On to the Gaylord coffee shop where Kathey and a friend hung out the night she disappeared - another place Rott has visited before in her quest for answers. This time, she doesn't know the guy behind the counter. He has just closed, but Rott persuades him to sell one more cup.

She lights a Newport, then takes out a picture of the suspect. Does the worker know him? Yes, he used to come in now and then. He would sit at the bar and sip coffee. Kept to himself.

Again, nothing spectacular. But Rott is pleased with the evening's work. Every scrap of information enhances the mental profile she is developing of the man she is convinced brutalized her daughter.

"He's not getting away with this. No way," Rott says through clenched teeth, fighting back tears. She shakily lights another cigarette, mutters a curse, as the car pulls away.

Kathey was a pretty girl, short and slender. Her brown hair just reached her shoulders. She had an impish grin and a bubbly personality. Friends called her "Jibber" because she talked so much.

She was born in Mount Clemens. Her 22-year-old brother, Jim, still lives in the Detroit area. Rott divorced their father 15 years ago; he is not suspected in Kathey's death.

Rott and Kathey moved to Traverse City in 1991 to make a fresh start, living in a small apartment above a muffin shop. Money was tight, but they got along. Kathey made friends easily at school.

"She was always really happy, always shining. She would have had an awesome life," says Autumn Kelley, 16.

"She wanted to be free. She wanted to be in the oceans, swimming with the dolphins. She wanted to save the dolphins and whales."

And people. As a child, she gathered cans of food and a bottle of milk to send to starving Ethiopians.

She sometimes brought homeless people and destitute teens to the apartment, demanding that Rott take them in.

"I'd say, 'Don't bring those bums over here,' " Rott recalled. "She'd say, 'They're not bums, they're HOMELESS!' She wouldn't let me send them away without giving them something to eat."

Longing to be different, she talked her mom into letting her insert an "e" into her name, which had been spelled "Kathy."

But with adolescence, a darker side of her free spirit emerged.

She rebelled against house rules, experimented with drugs, got tattoos, even lived with her boyfriend a few months the year she disappeared. Rott disapproved, but decided experience would be the best teacher for her strong-willed daughter.

They quarreled often, yet remained so close that Rott immediately feared the worst after learning of the girl's disappearance. Kathey wasn't the type to run off without a word.

"Even if she was mad at me, she'd have at least called and said, 'Hey, I'm outta here,' " Rott said. Besides, she had taken no extra clothes, money or personal belongings.

Rott had dropped her daughter at school the morning of Sept. 23, 1994. It was a Friday, and Kathey had permission to spend the weekend with a friend.

That night the teens went to a dance, then to the Gaylord coffee shop, where they chatted with other young people - and a man in his 30s known to some in the group.

About midnight, Kathey wanted to go home. Three other youths were looking for a ride to Mancelona, about halfway between Gaylord and Traverse City. The older man offered to take them.

The threesome from Mancelona later told police they got out at a party store there. The driver said he drove about 100 yards, then dropped Kathey off because she had decided to rejoin them.

No one saw her alive again.

Rott suspected nothing until Monday, when the friend she was supposed to spend the weekend with stopped by the apartment and asked, "Where's Jibber?"

"I said, 'What do you mean? She was with you.' I was freaking out," Rott said.

She rushed to the Traverse City police station and filed a missing--person report.

"They patted me on the back and said, 'Go on home, she's probably just a runaway,'" Rott said.

"God, I hate those words. 'Just a runaway.' Does that mean we shouldn't try to find them? Don't they realize if a kid's out alone on the streets and nobody knows where they are, they're in danger?"

Ralph Soffredine, city public safety director, says police had to consider the possibility Kathey was a runaway. Most missing youths leave home on their own, he says, and most eventually return.

But he insists his department - and neighboring police agencies - took the case seriously from the beginning and quickly suspected foul play. Officers chased down hundreds of leads and interviewed every witness they could find.

"If something happened to one of my kids, I'd be the most impatient guy in the world," Soffredine said. "I understand that victims' families want things to happen real quick ... like a one-hour TV program. It doesn't happen that way in real life.

"But I can promise you, when everybody else has gone away, we'll still be here. This investigation will never die."

Still, Rott and many of her supporters felt police were dragging their feet, said the Rev. Nathan Rose, who conducted Kathey's funeral service. "They felt pretty bitter about it at first."

Police rejected Rott's plea to comb the countryside around Mancelona and Gaylord, saying it was too vast and rugged. So she organized her own searches, appealing for volunteers through the local media.

Sometimes dozens of people showed up, sometimes a handful. Throughout the fall they tramped through marshy woods and open fields, checking barns, abandoned buildings, gullies, waterways.

They held candlelight vigils and plastered trees and telephone poles with posters. During the November deer season, they asked hunters to keep their eyes open.

Rott hired a professional searcher from Texas with $580 in donated funds.

"I had been so angry when Kathey disappeared and I couldn't get any answers, couldn't even find out how many other missing kids there were in Michigan," she said.

She founded the nonprofit organization and became its executive director, running it out of her apartment. A nine-member board was chosen. Wal-Mart chipped in $20,000 for expenses.

The network keeps records of missing children, reports possible sightings to law enforcement agencies and offers families advice and support. Rott bought a computer and is learning how to share information via the Internet. She hopes to open a separate office and get more sophisticated equipment.

"God, there's so many needs! I want to help so much. But I'm just a mom, what can I do? But you know, this must be what God wants me to do. I've got a lifelong mission ahead of me, and that's that."

Saturday, May 18, 1996.

Less than two weeks have passed since police summoned Rott to identify Kathey's tattered clothing, found 25 miles northeast of Mancelona. A crushing blow.

Still, she joins members of the Missing Children's Network for a child identification clinic at Grand Traverse Mall. They photograph and fingerprint more than 100 kids, who squirm and giggle at McGruff, the crime dog.

A state police detective approaches. Rott's mouth is dry; she knows what is coming.

He gently breaks the news: Mushroom hunters have found human remains. They're believed to be Kathey's.

"I didn't scream or pass out," Rott remembers. "I just sat quietly, asked him a few questions ... then there was this incredible, overwhelming sadness.

"You know, I'd always figured that once I knew for sure, I'd feel relieved. But I wasn't. When I looked at that casket, dammit, I didn't feel one bit better."

The funeral was packed. Police were there, as were adult volunteers who had scoured the woods for Kathey. Teens, some with spiked hair and grunge clothing, sobbed and held each other.

Propped on easels were collages of pictures and mementos from Kathey's life - notes to Santa Claus, Batman comic books, a dolphin poster, a tiny white baby shoe.

A few days later, Rott sits in the apartment, grieving and exhausted but still thinking of the future. She figures it may be time to clean out Kathey's room, which has been kept mostly untouched.

She opens a scrapbook. Near the back is a handwritten note from Kathey, dated a few months before she disappeared:

"Mom - I know I seldom say I love you, And I sometimes act like I don't care. But the truth is, I really do. I'm sorry for all the problems I've given you and all the hurt. Please accept my apologies. And love me for who I am."

Below, Rott has scrawled her reply:

"Kathey, I love you more than life itself. Mama."

A safe haven

County museum staff takes care of historical collection

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Walk through the Deaf Smith County Museum and you will see recreated scenes of typical life in the Panhandle around the turn of the century.

In the basement, mannequins stand at attention, displaying a changing series of clothing styles from the past.

In one corner of the basement is a display of hats, while children's toys occupy another display case.

Outside are antique farm implements, a model of the first half-dugout in Hereford, a railroad car and display of outdoor items from the same period.

They are all, in the words of former director Lois Gililland, part of the museum's purpose to "show the way our pioneers played and worked" from the time they settled here in the 1880s until the 1930s or so.

But the museum does not stop at displaying items of historic value.

Behind locked doors, in an office -- and in storerooms lie treasures that seldom -- if ever -- are seen by the public.

For it is not just the work of the museum to display the history of Deaf Smith County, it also preserves historic documents and artifacts.

Director Donna Brockman, joined by Mrs. Gililland -- the first full-time director of the museum -- recently opened up the basement storeroom and its cache of hidden treasures.

Inside the white sliding doors lies a wonderland of clothing, paintings, newspapers, photographs, toys, hats, shoes -- and much, much more.

The museum opened in 1967 and, until 1975, was operated totally by volunteers.

At that time, Mrs. Gililland took over as full-time director.

She stayed on until 1985, when Juanita Phillips Koetting took the helm.

Mrs. Brockman assumed the role in 1989.

The museum, located at 400 Sampson, accepts items from residents based on a standard set in the early days of the facility.

Items donated are given a number.

Mrs. Gililland said a contract between the museum and the donor is executed. The museum and donor each keep a copy of that contract.

A donor card is then created, listing by name all donors to the museum and the items they gave.

Donors are identified by number, with the items they give reflecting that number, a dot, then the item number of their gift.

An accession card records the collection by item number.

"We have limited exhibit space, so we have to be selective" about what is put on display, Mrs. Brockman said.

In addition, because of limited storage space, the museum must be selective in items it accepts from donors.

In the basement, just to the left of the storeroom door, is a large black safe filled with small items.

But the safe itself holds great historic value -- it came, the women said, from the former E.B. Black Furniture and Undertaking.

Mrs. Gililland said the store operated as both a funeral home and furniture store until after World War II. At that time, Matt Gililland and Jesse Stanford, Black's son-in-law, split the funeral home away from the furniture store.

That funeral home still operates today, run by Matt Gililland's grandson, John.

The safe came to the museum in 1976, after the Black Furniture Store closed its doors at Second and Main.

1. The memory of Stanton Junior High School lives on -- a megaphone, several cheerleader outfits, a football jersey, a sweater, pompon and warm-up pants are part of the museum collection.

2. Director Donna Brockman, right, shows a blue silk crepe wedding dress worn by Frances Wilson, daughter of pioneer John L. Wilson, on her wedding to Sam Steele in 1928. Former director Lois Gililland shows the black going away dress the new Mrs. Steele wore.

4. This quilt was made by students at Tierra Blanca School in 1976 to celebrate the nation's bicentennial.

5. Kenneth "Doc" Cowan owned these clubs, which date to about 1919. The origin of the John Pitman Golf Course cap is unknown.

6. Just a few of the museum's many hats, which are stored in boxes along one wall. With them is a second-day wedding dress worn in 1990 by Frances Hennen's sister-in-law when she got married in New York.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Tolstoy once said, "All happy families have certain similarities. Each unhappy family is miserable in its own way."

Some similarities of a happy family include having a variety of leadership patterns, expressing affections and having a story teller and a story to tell. A happy family will enjoy their "rituals." They will accept and cope with their problems -- the happy family will have a divine foundation!

Keep in mind the First Baptist Youth activities to fund their trip to Atlanta. Saturday, the 13th, is their day for a garage sale and car wash and the following day is their baked potato meal. They will appreciate all of your help.

Several teachers will be missed at HJH this fall due to moves to other districts and retirement. Among those moving are Ron Gray, Denise Mason, Jane Radford, Nikolyn Williams and Terry Zimmerman. Those who retired at midterm were Marian Goodin, Doug Morris and June Owens. Billie Hale retired in May.

Names of HJH's new teachers will be listed possibly as early as next week.

Junior Historians interested in taking the trip to see "TEXAS" should notify us as soon as possible. We may also be attending an air show on the 17th, the day after seeing "TEXAS." Those plans are pending.

Teachers and coaches who plan to transport students by van or bus will be attending a 20-hour workshop. The first one begins tomorrow.

Junior Historians have received their copies of the New Handbook of Texas. This is a six volume "Texas Bible" that has been long overdue. We have used the old three volume edition extensively and are looking forward to the use of the new set.

It is good to see so many HHS students working this summer. Many of our HJH students are also working in areas of yard work, babysitting and other "pre-16" jobs. The experience gained will be valuable.

Although I feel sure that no parent or child that any of us know, can, or will, relate to the following, I feel there may be a time you know someone else who it would relate to -- "'There's nothing to do' is a form of terminal boredom characterized by whining that strikes children from the ages of two to seventeen. Victims never suffer in silence. They entwine themselves around your leg, throw themselves on the bed or on the hood of a car or call you at the office. Offering suggestions for 'something to do' only aggravates the condition." -- Erma Bombeck

Couple exchanges vows in Cedar Hill ceremony

Laura Ann Wolf of Cedar Hill and Robert Lynn Jones of Hereford exchanged wedding vows June 29 in the First Baptist Church of Cedar Hill.

The bride is the daughter of Larry and Cherry Wolf of Cedar Hill. The bridegroom is the son of Lynn and Elane Jones of Hereford.

Dickson Rials of Duncanville officiated at the ceremony.

The church was decorated with floral arrangements in the bride's chosen colors of red and white and accented with tulle and fern.

Rebecca Wolf, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Nichole Kyle was matron of honor.

Lynn Jones served his son as best man.

Bridesmaids were Kelly Kemp and Maranda Clark.

Serving as groomsmen were Ryan Caperton, Keith Kelso and Gary Jones.

Guests were seated by Warren Curtis and Dwight Davis.

Taylor Douglas, daughter of Jennifer Douglas, was flower girl and Bryce Bonhert, son of Charla Bonhert, served as ring bearer.

Organist was Carolynne Grant and pianist was Terri McHargue. Connie Grorghan provided vocal selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a ball-gown style dress of silk-face satin trimmed in alencon lace and beaded with seed pearls and sequins. The bodice had a deep V-neckline, with short pouf off-the shoulder sleeves accented with large satin roses. The full skirt fell from a natural waist into a cathedral train.

Her three-tiered veil of illusion was attached to a headpiece covered with silk flowers.

She carried a cascading bouquet of red and white roses, ivy and baby's breath.

Bridal attendants wore floor length dress of red satin with an empire waist.

The couple was honored with a reception in the Community Center of Cedar Hill.

Cake was served by Karen Curtis while Chaisty Stemm served punch and coffee. Melissa Wolf attended the guest register, assisted by Suzie Jones.

The couple is at home in Hereford.

The bride attended South Plains College and was employed by Cedar Hill Independent School District.

The groom attended West Texas A&M University and is currently the landfill supervisor for the City of Hereford.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a resident of Alaska. On every map I've seen, our great state has been shrunk and relocated down in the Gulf of Mexico. If that's not bad enough, many statistical maps do not even include Alaska and Hawaii as part of the nation.

I am astounded at the number of people I have spoken with on the telephone who confirm my address as Anchorage, Arkansas, thanks to the AK abbreviation. And that's not the worst of it. They apply the same formula to time zones. Many callers on the East Coast telephone at the ungodly hour of 8 a.m. their time, which is 4 a.m. where we are. Even with the incredible amount of daylight we are now experiencing, we do need some sleep up here.

Please, Ann, tell your readers that AK stands for Alaska, not Arkansas. You may use my name. -- C.J. Kukoski in Anchorage

Dear C.J.: Here's your letter. I hope it helps, but don't underestimate the ignorance of some people.

I recently received a letter from a woman who said she would like to move to Alaska but was reluctant to sell her new Acura and travel by dog sled. She had heard the weather in Juneau is so cold nobody has automobiles because the gasoline freezes in the tanks. And people accuse me of making up letters! I could never make up letters as good as the ones I get.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife's brother, "Reg," was divorced a year ago. He and his ex-wife, "Valerie," had been married for five very difficult years, during which he abused her repeatedly. My wife and Valerie had been only casual acquaintances as sisters-in-law, but after the divorce, they became very close. My wife was able to give Valerie understanding and support. You see, Reg abused my wife in the same way when they were growing up together. Valerie said that when they were married, Reg always discouraged her from being friendly with us.

Recently, my wife and I went on a week's vacation with Valerie and her boyfriend. We did not think it was inappropriate since the divorce was granted a year ago. When we returned, however, my wife's brother and her mother and father all but disowned her.

My wife is very upset and has no one to turn to except me. We want your opinion, Ann. Were we wrong to befriend Valerie? -- Edmonton, Alberta, Canada

Dear Edmonton: Reg sounds like a petulant spoiled brat. His attempt to punish your wife for befriending his ex is juvenile. Your wife should tell that control freak to take a long walk on a short deck. If she thinks it would help, she should send this column to both Reg and her parents.

Dear Ann Landers: Our community just had another fatal auto accident because a driver fell asleep at the wheel coming home after working the night shift. I want to pass along a remedy given to me by a truck driver.

He said that you will not fall asleep while eating. His solution was to eat crackers when sleepy. I use crackers and corn chips and munch on them slowly. I've worked 32 years on the night shift and must drive 14 miles to my home. This works for me. -- Concerned in Beaumont, Texas

Dear Beau.: I was just about to thank you for your fine suggestion when one of my assistants said, "It doesn't always work. My son has fallen asleep eating at the table more than once -- with his head in the soup."

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Rural background helps in life overseas

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

Growing up in rural Deaf Smith County, Rebecca Rudd Dockery learned lessons which have proven invaluable while living in Georgia -- not the state of Georgia in the United States, but the country of Georgia in the former Soviet Union.

Dockery, the daughter of Homer and June Rudd and an 11-year employee of the U.S. State Department, is on assignment in Georgia as regional security officer.

"That means I am in charge of security for the embassies in Georgia, Azerbaijan and Armenia, the countries just south of the Caucasus Mountains, between the Black Sea and Caspian Sea.

"In the private sector, my job would relate to that of a corporate security director," Dockery said. "It covers embassy employees, government officials such as the Secretary of State and foreign dignitaries, classified information, non-government organizations and private volunteer organizations, and American citizens who are in my region."

It seems a highly unlikely position for a college music major, but when the Hereford High School graduate of 1979 graduated from Texas Tech in the spring of 1984 with a degree in music, Dockery knew she did not want to teach as a career.

So she applied for the job with the State Department, simply because the ad stated that a college degree was required, but did not indicate a degree in any specific field of study.

Dockery did teach at Northwest School in Hereford for one year before being accepted by the State Department and going to Washington D.C., where she met the man who would later become her husband.

Her first overseas assignment came in January 1987 when she went to Dakar, Senegal, in Africa.

After her return in the summer of 1988, she married John Dockery and was assigned to a small State Department office in Houston, where the Dockerys lived for six years.

Her present assignment in Georgia began in July 1995, following seven months of intensive study of the Russian language.

Georgia is about the size of West Virginia and its economy is 85 percent agriculture, according to Dockery.

"We live as normal an American lifestyle as possible in a country which has so many problems, including problems with its infrastructure. We have water and electricity but sometimes service is available for only a few hours a day," said Dockery.

Her Georgian home is equipped with a water holding tank and a generator, along with such American appliances as a dishwasher, refrigerator, washer and dryer, television and VCR.

"Some of the local homes have TV and some have washing machines, but very few have dryers. But the appliances they have are only usable when there is electricity," said Dockery.

Grocery shopping is not just a matter of going to the local supermarket.

"There are a few stores where we can buy canned items and some dairy products, but things like meat and fresh produce must be purchased in the market. It's an open area with individual stalls that each sell a different item," she said.

The Dockery's daughters, Camille, 5, and Emily, 3, don't have the advantages of a nearby super center or shopping mall.

"The girls have a lot of toys, but they are learning to take care of them. If they break something we can't just run to Wal-Mart or Toys-R-Us to replace it," said Dockery.

Camille has completed her first year of school. She was the youngest student in an international school with a total of 12 students.

Dockery admits her family lives a much better lifestyle than many where they are, but it still isn't like home.

"It gives you a much better appreciation of where you came from," she said.

— YOUR EYES —

What Kind of Sunglasses?

Though your eyes need protection from the sun all the time, most people pay more attention to sunglasses as spring turns to summer and they will spend more time outdoors–especially at the beach where sand and water reflect the sun's glare.

Make sure your sunglasses offer the protection you need. The FDA has approved a standardized sunglass rating system. Cosmetic-purpose lenses block less than 60 percent of visible light and at least 70 percent of ultraviolet-B (UVB) and 20 percent of ultraviolet-A (UVA) rays. General purpose lenses block 60 to 92 percent of visible light and at least 95 percent of VUB and 60 percent of UVB and rays. The greatest protection comes from special purpose lenses that block as much as 97 percent for visible light and at least 99 percent of UVB and 60 percent of UVA rays.

Count on your optometrist to help you choose the right protection in quality glasses that don't distort colors or lines.

MRS. RUSSELL DON SANDERSON
...nee Natalie Nicole Andrews

Andrews, Sanderson united in marriage

Natalie Nicole Andrews and Russell Don Sanderson were united in marriage in an evening ceremony June 29 in the Hereford Church of the Nazarene.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Andrews of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Doug Sanderson of Hereford and Becky Smith of Amarillo.

Rev. Ted Taylor, of the church, officiated at the ceremony.

Decorations in the church included archway brass candlesticks accented with tulle and ivy and lighted fichus trees. Large ivory satin bows with English ivy served a pew markers. A pair of white wedding doves was released at the end of the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Casie Urbanczyk. Best man was Richard Sanderson, brother of the groom.

Serving as bridesmaids were Megan Sanderson, sister of the groom, and Shanna Heaster, cousin of the bride.

Groomsmen were Travis Kall and Doug Heaster, who also served as usher with Mike Galvan.

Music was provided by Keith Ann Gearn on the piano, Merlee McWethy on keyboard and Becky Silva on flute.

Vocalists Leslie Woodard and Margaret Williams sang "Household of Faith" and "Endless Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory regal satin, sheath-style gown encrusted with pearls and jewels. Her cathedral length train was of ivory satin.

Her multi-layered veil of illusion was beaded with seed pearls and attached to a halo of lilies.

She carried a cascading bouquet of lilies, made by her mother.

Bridal attendants wore floor length black sleeveless dresses and carried nosegays of peace roses.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

Tory Ponder served the bride's cake. The three-tiered ivory cake was surrounded by four single layer cakes and all were decorated with peace and pale pink silk roses. Table appointments were of sterling silver. Guests served themselves punch from a flowing fountain.

Casie Urbanczyk served the groom's cake and Shanna Heaster served almond tea. The four-layered chocolate basket weave cake was topped with a basket overflowing with chocolate dipped strawberries which flowed onto a silver platter.

Courtney Heaster, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register.

Following a wedding trip to Cozumel, the couple will be at home in Hereford.

The bride is employed as an abstract clerk for A.O. Thompson Abstract Co., Inc.

The bridegroom is a machinist at Winget Pump.

Out-of-town guests represented California, New Mexico, Borger, Canyon and Amarillo.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent-FCS

Now more than ever before, the nutritional needs for macronutrients -- water, fiber, carbohydrate, protein and fats -- are very important.

Why worry about it now? Mainly because by the year 2000 there will be approximately 40 million people in the United States over the age of 65. Many will remain active and healthy. Others will suffer from one or more chronic diseases, live alone or have varied backgrounds and living situations. That's why knowledge about the macronutrient needs of this over 65 age group is important.

Not to be forgotten is the nutrient water. When it comes to the elderly, water consumption is of special concern since they have inadequate water intake. This is caused by a decrease in the antidiuretic hormone with aging and more water loss through their urine.

Memory loss or physical incapacity may prevent the ability to satisfy their thirst or inability to express their need for fluids. For whatever reason, dehydration is a common problem for the elderly. Dehydration can be prevented by consuming approximately 1-1/2 to 2 liters of fluid per day, or more if there is vomiting, diarrhea or other increased fluid loss.

For a variety of reasons, fiber in our diet is important for all of us. Water-holding fibers, such as found in wheat bran, along with adequate water intake, are helpful with reducing constipation and in decreasing formation of diverticula in the colon. Soluble dietary fibers -- those in oats, legumes and fruits -- have been reported to improve control of blood sugar in diabetes, lower total cholesterol, the "bad" cholesterol (LDL cholesterol) and triglycerides without changing HDL cholesterol (the "good" cholesterol). Both types of fibers are found in fruits and vegetables. Be cautious of more than two to four servings of fruits which can cause an increase in blood sugar, especially in persons with diabetes.

High quality protein found in meats, poultry, fish, dry beans, eggs and nuts group are of special interest for this age group for maintaining fitness since a wasting away of muscle each decade after age 45 occurs. Protein requirements remain constant as for other ages with the exception of stress from an illness or infection, thus requiring additional protein.

Energy intake needs to be enough to maintain a normal weight and prevent undesired weight loss. Overeating fats and carbohydrates results in protein used for energy draining necessary amino acids. Decreased muscle mass and less physical activity reduce the need for calories so fat intake is usually decreased in the elderly to about 25 percent to 30 percent of total calories. protein, 10 percent to 15 percent, and carbohydrate, 55 percent to 60 percent, intakes are about the same as for the general public.

Moderation in eating and changing the diet such as reducing cholesterol to reduce risk factors are good for any age. Following a balanced meal plan such as the USDA Food Guide Pyramid which promotes good health without creating undue hardships or decreasing their quality of life is the type of dietary recommendations being made by most of the health organizations.

So find out more about changing your eating habits the pyramid way to promote health and well-being, contact your local county Extension agent in family and consumer sciences or a local dietitian.

Wedding vows repeated in afternoon ceremony

Rasamy Pharasavath and Michael Melendrez were married Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Khamphay and Somleth Phrasavath of Amarillo. The groom is the son of Paul and Gail Melendrez of Hereford.

Monsignor Orville Blum, of the church, officiated at the ceremony.

Sonemaly Phrasavath, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Best man was Fred Melendrez, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Sarah Melendrez and Deborah Melendrez, sisters of the groom; Thiam Phommavong, Sou Douangdara and Syp Champa, all of Amarillo.

Groomsmen were Augustine Melendrez, brother of the groom; Bonsack Phrasavath, brother of the bride; Jim Hillwig of Amarillo; Juan Torres of Plainview and Kyle Hansen of Lubbock.

Serving as ushers were Raul Lopez and Ramiro Davalos Jr., both cousins of the groom.

Clara Beth Rodriguez, cousin of the groom and daughter of Roy and Lucy Lopez, was flower girl.

Ring bearer was Alexander Melendrez, nephew of the groom and son of Augustine Melendrez and Iris Diaz.

Candle lighters were Roy Lopez Jr. and Julian Lopez, cousins of the groom.

Music was provided by organist Cheryl Betzen and violinist Angeline Reinart.

The bride was escorted to the altar by Charles Scavo, Chief of the Naval Recruiting Station in Amarillo.

A reception in St. Anthony's School followed the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to San Antonio, the couple will be at home in Amarillo.

The bride is currently a medical lab technician major at Amarillo College. She is employed by Footlocker.

The groom is a junior accounting major at West Texas AM& University. He is employed by the United States Postal Service in Amarillo.

Special out-of-town guest was Mamie Battice of Hart, Mich., grandmother of the groom. Other guests represented Tularosa, N.M., Carlsbad, N.M., Amarillo, Canyon, Plainview and Lubbock.

JENNIFER STOWERS, BLAKE ELLIS

August wedding is set at E.B. Black House

J.D. and Janet Stowers of Hereford are proud to announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Jennifer Ann, to Robert Blake Ellis of Easter.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of James R. and Cindy Ellis of Dimmitt.

The couple will be married Aug. 24 at the E.B. Black House.

The bride-elect is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School. She is employed by Hereford Cablevision.

Ellis graduated from Dimmitt High School in 1994. He attended Clarendon Junior College and Western Texas College. He is currently employed by Circle E Feedyard.

Of the years 2000, 2050, and 2100, only the year 2000 will be a leap year.

Military Muster

Marine Cpl. Lewis Zepeda, the 22-year-old son of Domingo Zepeda Sr. and Blanca Sanchez, both of Hereford, was among forces from the 13th Marine Expeditionary Unit (MEU) who hit the beach in Thailand as part of Exercise Cobra Gold 96.

The exercise was designed to enhance U.S. and Thailand combat readiness and interoperability, and demonstrate U.S. resolve to support the security and humanitarian interest of our allies in the region.

Cobra Gold, the largest of the U.S. and Thailand exercises scheduled this year, involved Navy, Marines, U.S. Army and Air force units. During the three-week exercise, the 13th MEU participated in a combined airborne landing force exercise, conducted an amphibious landing and operated ashore with elements of the Royal Thai Marines.

The Navy and Marine Corps team routinely conducts combined training with many nations throughout the Western Pacific. This combined training enhances the ability of the Navy-Marine Corps team to conduct prompt and sustained operations in the Western Pacific. It also gives Marines like Zepeda the chance to work with members of a foreign military.

The Faith Community of San José expresses, once again, its heartfelt appreciation to the many volunteers, contributors and patrons who supported our annual June Fest Jamacia, June 30th.

Your generosity has made it possible for the Jamaica to be a success.

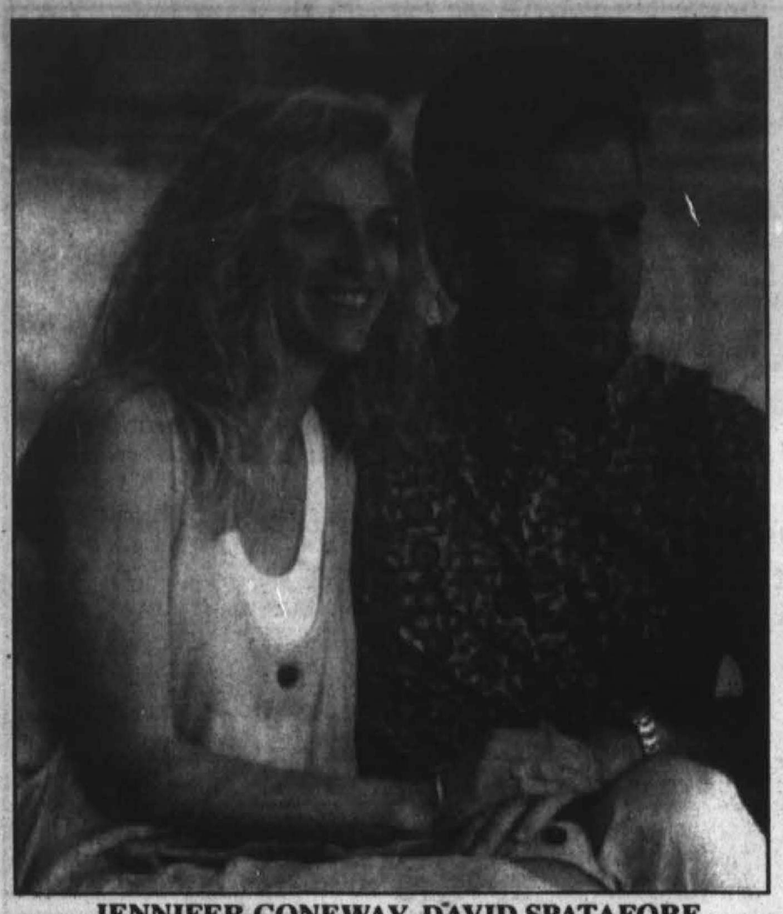

Your generosity will help us to not only pay for the new San José Community Center that was constructed, but allow us to maintain the new building as well.

Soon a Director for the Center will be hired, which means that more programs will be brought in to benefit not only the Faith Community of San José, but the Community of Hereford.

Once again, thanks to all who helped, it would not have been possible without your time, talent and gifts.

JENNIFER CONEWAY, DAVID SPATAFORE

Engagement announced

Capt. and Mrs. Clint Coneway of Amarillo announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Jennifer Kaye of Pt. Loma, Calif., to David Edward Spatafore, also of Pt. Loma.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Paul Coneway of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Sara Weed of Coronado, Calif.

The wedding is planned for July 27 in Founders Chapel University of San Diego in San Diego, Calif.

Miss Coneway received her B.A. in liberal studies with an emphasis in math from Sonoma State University in Rohnert Park, Calif. She was a member of Alpha Xi Delta sorority. She received her teaching credential in special education from Cal State University, San Marcos, Calif., and plans to teach in San Diego.

Spatafore received a BBA degree in business with an emphasis on marketing from Sonoma State University where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He is employed as business manager for Schreiber Foods, Inc., in San Diego.

Grandson of residents will marry in Branson

Sarah Barger and Jason Paetzold, both of Bolivar, Mo., plan to be married Aug. 10 in Branson, Mo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of George and Patricia Barger of Columbus, Ind.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Gary and Kathy Kuhne of Northeast, Penn., and the late Joe Paetzold. He is the grandson of Willis and Rosalee Hawkins and Bud and Teresa Paetzold, all of Hereford.

Miss Barger graduated from Oakmont High School in Roseville, Calif., in 1993. She is a 1997 candidate for graduation from Southwest Baptist University in Bolivar with a double major in elementary and secondary education in physical education and health. She is active in campus ministry.

Paetzold, who lived in Hereford from 1975 until 1991, graduated from high school in 1993 in Northeast. He is scheduled to graduate from Southwest Baptist in 1997 with a double major in history and discipleship.

Welcome to Hereford

Fellowship meets Thurs.

Pat Stanton of Shallowater will be the guest speaker when Hereford Flame Fellowship meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Hereford Community Center.

Stanton has spent 11 years ministering through the organization of the Rays of Hope Prayer Ministry. She has had her own television and radio programs. She now spends her time in prayer, study and public ministry.

The public is invited to attend.

To clean a countertop, never use an abrasive cleaner on a plastic-laminated surface. Clean these easy-to-scratch areas with the gentlest product possible.

Local student set to attend career camp

Lyndi Carlile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Carlile, has been selected to attend the 1996 Camp Sea World Careers Camp in San Antonio.

The camp is for high school students who are interested in pursuing careers in the marine zoological sciences. The campers will be involved in animal care and animal training activities, working side-by-side with Sea World zoological and training staff.

The will be a part of in-depth educational instruction sessions on animal anatomy, physiology and behavior. They will also attend lectures by Sea World curators, veterinarians and Sea World researchers.

Miss Carlile is a sophomore at Hereford High School were she is in the top five percent of her class, is class vice president, and plays Herd volleyball, basketball and runs track. She is a former student of Nazarene Christian Academy and is presently employed by Bubbles Aquarium in Amarillo.

Hurry! It's almost over. Summer Reading Club is almost history, but not quite. You still have time to sign up and get some reading time in. Prizes are just waiting to be claimed. If you get busy you still can be a finisher and earn all those prizes.

Don't miss next week's activity on Tuesday, The Wonderful Water Park Olympics. I think we'll be able to do this activity outside, rain or shine. Be sure to dress to get wet. Participants are guaranteed to get wet! Don't forget to bring a towel with your name on it.

The results of the bookmark contest are in. Out of many creative entries, Chelsea Walker and Brady Matysek were declared the winners. Their bookmarks will be printed and distributed at the Tri-State Fair this fall and eventually be available at the Deaf Smith County Library. Congratulations to Chelsea and Brady! And thank you to all who entered.

Did you know that your county library has a collection of large print books? If you or someone you know has some visual limitations, or maybe you just like larger print, then we have the books for you. Just as with the talking books, we have our own collection, and also receive books on loan from the Texas Panhandle Library System. All kinds of books are available in large print: best sellers, science fiction, westerns, religious, biographies, and more.

Even though our book budget is short, we still have new books each week to share with you.

On the fiction side we have Lily White by Susan Isaacs. Lee White is a criminal defense attorney whose client, Norman Torkelson is, according to overwhelming evidence, obviously guilty. Torkelson is a man who crisscrosses America looking for unsuspecting women to scam. Love 'em. Liquidate their assets. Leave 'em.

He is accused of murdering Bobette Frisch, the dumpy, fiftyish bar owner who fell in love with him. But, what was his motive? Why would he murder her, when his pattern has always been to run, leaving behind a broke and broken-hearted victim?

Could it be that Torkelson is not merely not guilty, but covering for someone who is guilty?

In Michael Palmer's newest book, Critical Judgement, Dr. Abby Dalton has just left the fast track at a major San Francisco hospital to follow her fiance, Josh Wyler, to the picturesque town of Patience, where he has a new job with the manufacturing giant, Colstar.

Abby has just begun to feel at home in the small-town emergency room when undiagnosable patients begin to turn up. While she is baffled by these seemingly random cases, Josh is experiencing blinding headaches and pain-driven episodes of manic, even violent behavior.

Abby's suspicions that Colstar could somchow be poisoning the town are shared by her colleague, Dr. Lew Alvarez. It becomes a dangerous cat and mouse game as Abby finds out that her predecessor in the ER, a Colstar detractor, died in a suspicious climbing accident.

Torn From My Heart by Patsy Heymans is the true story of an innocent teenager who was swept off her feet by a handsome Israeli soldier. She married him, moved to Israel, and become the mother of three children.

There was a dark side to Chaim Yarden that included the religious fundamentalism of Satmar Hasidim, a violent temper, and a criminal record. After years of abuse, Patsy fled to her parents in Belgium with her husband's warning ringing in her ears, "Whatever it takes, whatever it will cost, I will destroy your life."

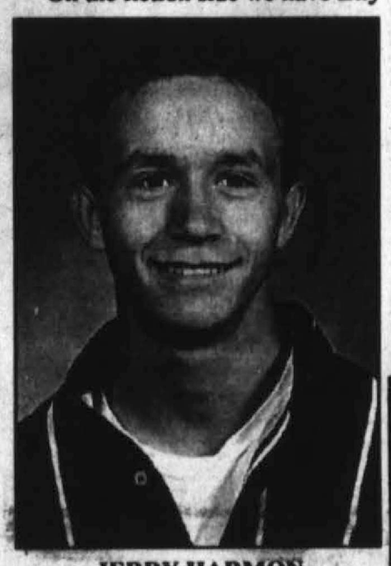

He was as good as his word. He kidnapped the children. Armed with a mother's fierce desperation, she battled impossible odds, single-handedly and painstakingly rallying the forces of American and international law to regain her children.

Also on the nonfiction shelf is Mars and Venus in Love by John Gray, Ph.D., another in his series of books about communication between men and women. Couples who have been helped by Gray's previous books share their stories.

The Fire Inside by Steve Delsohn is a collection of interviews with America's firefighters that give glimpses of the real world of men and women who risk their lives in fire rescues, natural disasters, and medical emergencies. In their own words, they explore what it is about themselves that drives them to run into burning buildings while everyone else is running out.

Ranching historians will enjoy A Bride Goes West by Nannie T. Anderson and Helena Huntington Smith, a biography of Nannie Tiffany of West Virginia who married Walt Anderson and went to Montana with him to start a small ranch. This is an account of ranching, ranching people, and most notably, ranch life from a woman's point of view.

Don't forget to be a finisher and pick up your prizes!

JERRY HARMON

Hammon is award winner

The United States Achievement Academy has announced that Jerry Harmon has been named a United States National Award winner in Honor Roll.

Harmon, who attends Hereford Junior High, was nominated by Myrna Buckley, an English teacher at the school.

The criteria for selection by the Academy are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability and recommendation for a teacher or director.

Harmon participates in football, basketball and track. He is also active in band and industrial technology. He is on the honor roll at Hereford Junior High. He mastered English, science, math, history and government on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills test.

He will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, which is published nationally.

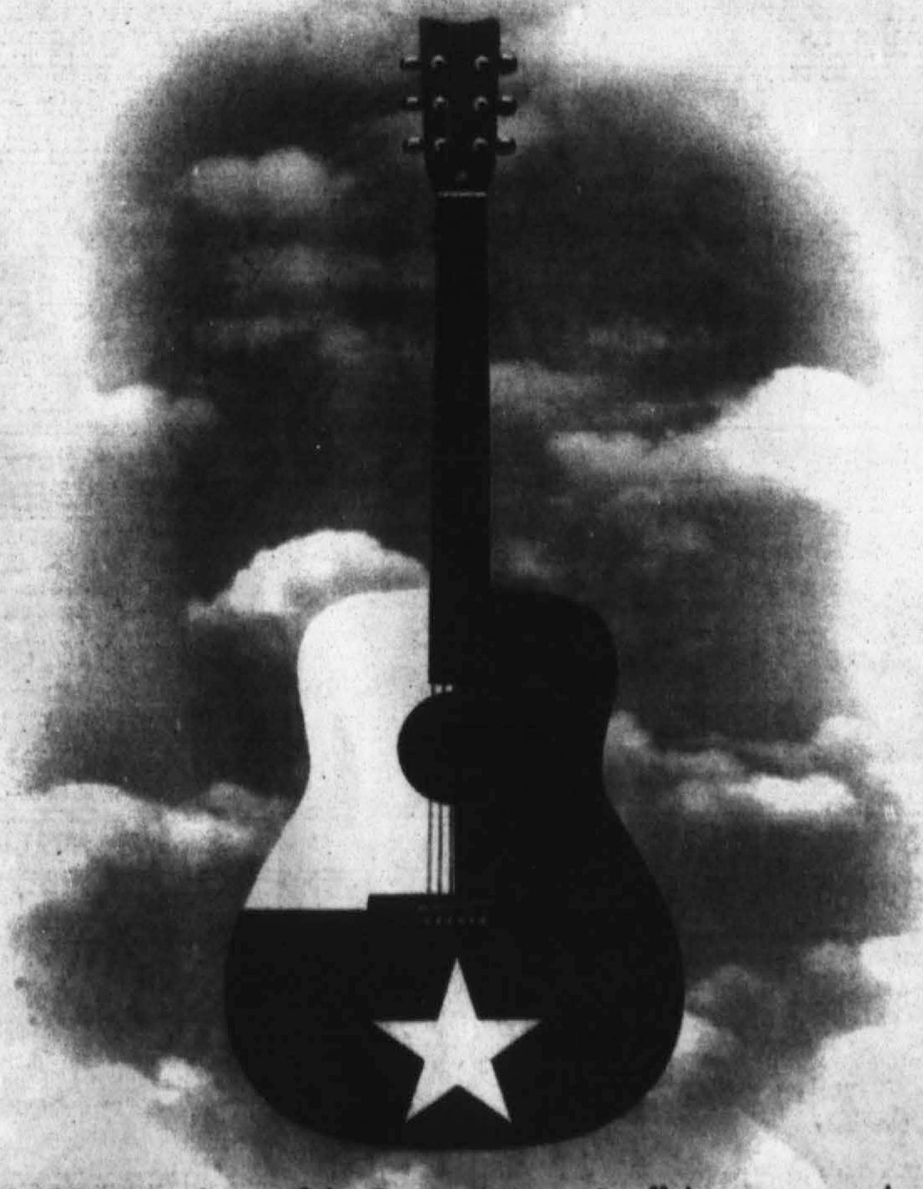

He is the son of Dan and Glenda Harmon. Grandparents are Freddie and Ann Harmon of Quanah, Luis and Juanita Vasquez of San Antonio, and special friends Charles and Linda O'Corr of Hereford.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

TAKE TIME TO....

There is something about turning 50 that gives one a different perspective on time. I remember so very well the decade between my 15th and 16th birthdays. Those 12 months separated me from a driver's license and freedom.

Then, later as I turned thirty and our daughter Christi was born, time began to accelerate. She will soon be 20 years old, and the last two decades have flown.

My analytical side knows that each day contains exactly 86,400 seconds. However, it seems that seconds turn into days, weeks, months and years more quickly as I grow older.

There are many things I regret not having done when I was younger. For example, I wish I had devoted more time to learning to play the guitar and writing songs. I wish I had attended college right after high school. I wish I'd purchased that 1962 Corvette for $2,400 back in 1975. I wish I'd taken time to develop my public speaking skills when I was 30.

One of the problems with youth is that we waste it while we're young. So here are some thoughts for you young readers - and those of you still young at heart - from the other side of old. This is my first column as a 50-year-old, fully-qualified-to-join-the-Association-of-Retired-Persons columnist.

Take it from me

- Take time to work. There is no easy path to success. Hard work, particularly if it is smart work, is the price of success. Many people work hard at learning the "tricks of the trade" rather than learning the trade itself. I believe if you're willing to pay your dues, you'll eventually collect more than what is actually due you.
- Take time to ponder. I know, the more popular work is "think," but I like ponder. Ponder means "to think deeply about" or to "consider carefully."
  Pondering is a source of power for me. Setting aside quiet time to ponder renews my mind and allows me to think clearly and objectively. Pondering a problem often give me a clear view of solutions quickly.
- Take time to dream big dreams. If you can't imagine is, it won't happen. Dare to dream big dreams.
  Yes, you write a best-seller one word at a time. Yes, you become wealthy one dollar at a time. And yes you succeed one goal at a time. However, you shouldn't allow the step-by-step process to squelch your dream. Dream it and do it.
- Take time to love. When you learn to love you learn to give. Since giving is more blessed than receiving, you'll be blessed and loved in return.
  Love is the power source for the soul. Nourishment for the inner you. There's an old song with lyrics that proclaim: "Everybody loves a lover ..." The song is true. To be loved you must love.
- Take time to play. Work hard when you work, play hard when you play. It's the only way I know to be forever young.
  Play is one of the very first things we learn to do. Why give it up? I may have to grow old, but I refuse to grow-up.
- Take time to laugh. Laughter is rest for a tired body, healing for a troubled mind and music for your soul. James Barrie said, "Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves."
  My favorite memories are the times I've spent with friends and family who make the laugh. I hope maybe I've made them laugh a little, too.
  Someone once said, "Time cuts down all, both great and small." So, while you've still got it, take time to work, play, dream, ponder, laugh and love.

Queen candidates are announced

Colorful dancers, music, mariachis, food and the coronation of the "reina", or queen, will highlight the events planned for Sept. 16.

El diez-y-seis de Septiembre has been celebrated every year since the early 1950's.

Four candidates are vying for the title of "reina." The candidates are Miriam Chavarria, Jessica Mondragon, Kimberly Robles and Crystal Zepeda.

Each of the candidates are very active in school, community and church activities.

CRYSTAL ZEPEDA

KIMBERLY ROBLES

Chavarria, 20, is the daughter of Jorje and Micaela Chavarria. She is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School and plans to attend Amarillo College this fall majoring in medicine.

Mondragon, 16, is the daughter of Jessie and Blanca Solano. She is a junior at Hereford High School and is active in cosmetology. She plans to pursue a career in the cosmetology field.

Robles, 18, is the daughter of Lydia Robles. She is a 1996 honor graduate of Hereford High School and plans to attend Amarillo College in the fall.

Zepeda, 16, is the daughter of Gregory Zepeda and Bertha Zepeda. She is a junior at Hereford High School and plans a career in the medical field.

Each "reina" candidate will collect money, and the candidate with the most amount of money will be elected as the "reina." The election will held in August, while the coronation will be held Sept. 13.

Hints from Heloise

IMPORTANT MAIL

Dear Heloise: When I get mail of importance, I write the month, day and year on the envelope. Example: 4-12-96 R.

R means I received it on that day. When I answer it, I write on the same envelope 4-14-96 A.

I hope this idea will help others. — Homer C. Bange, San Marcos, Calif.

WATER BEDS

Dear Heloise: Water beds have an odd rubber/plastic smell.

To overcome this odor, I put five fabric-softener sheets on top of the mattress before putting on the mattress pad.

Change each time you change bedsheets. — Pam Garrison, Cypress, Texas

DRYER VENT

Dear Heloise: I always had trouble cleaning out the lint trap on my dryer, as I have short fingers.

One day I tried using a foam-rubber paintbrush and it worked perfectly.

These brushes can be found in the paint department anywhere. Try it! — Maxine Diosi, Bonita Springs, Fla.

Another way of cleaning out the lint is to use a foam-type dryer sheet. Before throwing away a used one, try it on your dryer lint screen. — Heloise the top corner of the storeroom.

MUSEUM

Because they are so old, the bound newspapers cannot be put on display or handled without causing damage to the pages.

Photographs, negatives (including some old glass negatives) and newspaper clippings are stuffed in boxes and files, each carefully catalogued.

Across the room from the safe is a display that catches attention -- an odd by-chance arrangement of an old gas lamp, a spinning wheel and a radio such as might have been seen on "The Waltons."

The lamp was out front of the museum at some point in the past.

Mrs Gililland said the spinning wheel pre-dates Deaf Smith County. It was provided to the museum in 1967 by Christine Brooks.

In fact, she said, "probably the women in Deaf Smith County had other things to do" than spin yarn and make their own clothing.

The radio came from the home of Mrs. Bess Werner, an early proponent of the museum.

Mrs. Gililland said Mrs. Werner and her daughters opened a museum in their barn as a 4-H project.

They collected historic items from friends and neighbors and displayed them for interested parties.

When the Deaf Smith County Museum became a reality, Mrs. Werner donated that collection, "which formed the nucleus of this museum."

On her death, her daughter-in-law Johnnie Turrentine made the 1930s model radio available to the museum.

About half of the storeroom is filled with shelves and hanging racks for clothing covering virtually all of the 20th Century, plus examples from the last decades of the 19th Century.

Like children digging in a toy box for their favorite treasures, Mrs. Brockman and Mrs. Gililland open boxes and poke into hanging racks, looking for outstanding examples of clothing that is in storage.

Because the museum displays its collection in historical settings, some items are left in storage until such time as they are needed for a period display.

Other items -- such as wedding dresses, military uniforms and prom outfits -- are displayed in thematic collections on a short-term basis.

A look at a hand-made cradle made for the birth of Ben Farris in 1915 yields a search for baby clothes of a similar period.

All the outfits are white, although some sport colored ribbons.

The search of dresses shows the extent to which the museum cares for its artifacts.

Mrs. Brockman said acid-free tissue and plain fabric that has been washed several times are used to pack items in boxes.

Workers who must handle objects must wear plain white cotton gloves to keep skin oils from damaging the items.

Under the direction of Mrs. Koetting, the current hanging racks were designed.

Mrs. Brockman said Mrs. Koetting worked with Panhandle-Plains Museum in Canyon on the best way to store clothing.

"There's less stress on the fabric if the garments are hung on padded hangers," Mrs. Brockman said.

The museum makes its own hangars by stuffing cotton batting onto metal hangars, then covering the batting with unbleached muslin that has been washed several times. Washing removes sizing and any other chemicals that might be in the fabric, leaving a pure medium to make contact with antique clothing.

The hanging racks were constructed along long rows at the right-hand side of the storeroom.

They are completely surrounded by white cotton fabric, creating a cocoon for the dresses, which are stored by decade from the 1880s forward in time.

"In our fashions we are trying to get examples from every decade up to the 1990s," Mrs. Gililland said.

Mrs. Gililland and Mrs. Brockman brought out two treasures in the hanging collection -- dresses that will not be displayed, because fabric at the shoulders will not support being placed on a mannequin.

One is a wedding dress of blue silk crepe and the other is a black satin dress decorated in a red Chinese motif.

The late Frances Wilson, daughter of pioneer John L. Wilson, wore the blue silk when she wed Sam Steele on Dec. 28, 1928. She wore the black dress as a going-away dress.

The dresses were made available to the museum by Steele and his second wife, Daisy Allison Steele.

Another dress shown by the women was one from 1900 that belonged to the sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Hennen on her marriage then in New York. It is a two-piece dress with jacket in a blue floral print.

Along the back wall of the storeroom -- stacked floor-to-ceiling -- are scores of hat boxes, many containing several items that are inventoried on the outside of the cartons.

From a carefully-packed box comes a heavy paisley brocade cape that was worn by Minnie Earhart, who was the first wife of Chicago's Marshall Fields, founder of the department store chain of the same name.

The opera cape was provided by Mrs. Joe Reinauer Sr. Mrs. Fields was Mrs. Reinauer's mother's great-aunt.

Shoes are an important part of the museum collection.

Along the wall perpendicular to the hats are dozens of boxes of shoes -- some stacked on two display cases that shelter shoes from just as many different eras of clothing.

Men's clothing and miscellaneous items are stored in boxes on shelves in the middle of the storeroom.

Among these items are a collection of artifacts from Stanton Junior High School that were donated when that school closed.

Also in the collection is a 1976 quilt made by sixth-graders at Tierra Blanca School in honor of the Bicentennial.

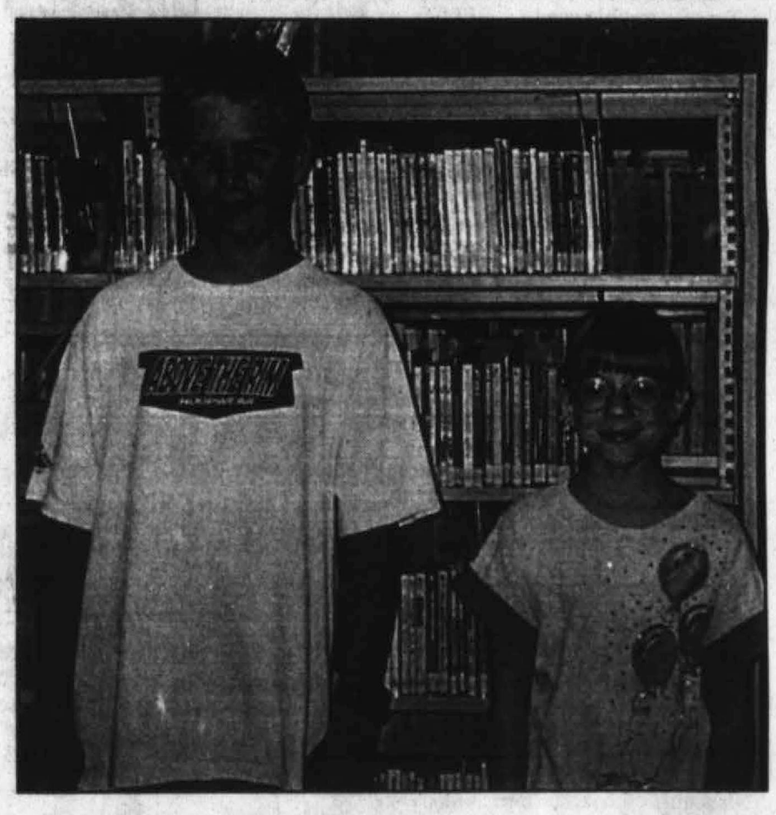

For the sportsman there is a set of golf clubs tucked behind boxes and cases.

The clubs date to about 1919 and were owned by Kenneth "Doc" Cowan, founder of Cowan's Jewelry. The two women said he didn't move here until sometime after 1919, however.

Back upstairs, the office of the museum also serves as a treasure trove of history, for it is there that Mrs. Brockman stores additional photographs of the history of Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

She also has on file oral and video histories from some of the area's pioneers and books about Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

They are just another one of the many pieces of history tucked in and about the Deaf Smith County Museum.

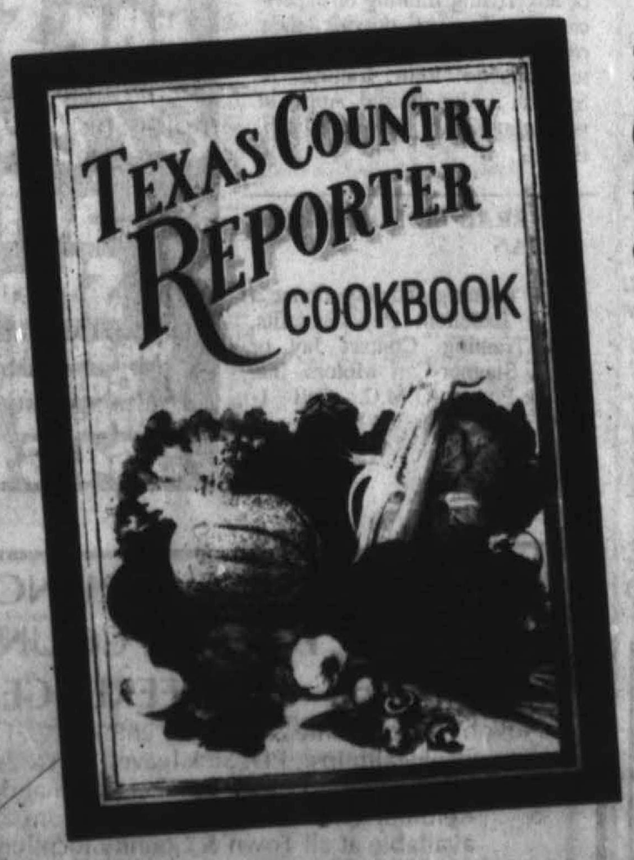

Contest winners

READY...SET...READ is the theme used by the winners of the Deaf Smith County Library bookmark contest, Brady Matysek and Chelsea Walker. Their winning entries will be printed and distributed at the Tri-State Fair and throughout the Panhandle. The contest was a part of the program for the Summer Reading Club.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband's mother went for many years with undiagnosed adult-onset diabetes despite the fact that she had numerous tests. Is one test for blood sugar better than others? My husband has experienced some of the same symptoms his mother had. He has had frequent urination and dimmed vision. Given the family history of diabetes, should we be concerned about testing? And which test do you recommend? — S.F.

ANSWER: Diabetes can cause either of the symptoms you mention, but such symptoms also might reflect problems not related to diabetes.

In diagnosis, blood tests reign. We rely on two basic blood-sugar tests for reliable diagnosis. One involves blood drawn after an overnight fast. If fasting is impossible, another similar test can be done on a non-fasting blood sample.

For diabetes diagnosis, the fasting blood sugar levels would be 140 or higher on two separate days. In a non-fasting state, a blood level of 200 would strongly indicate diabetes.

Other tests are variations on that theme. I am sure you have been told of the glucose tolerance test, where the patient drinks a sugar solution beforehand. That test requires blood testing over three hours. The problem with the test is that it might overstate blood sugar status.

Another test can tell if blood sugar has been elevated in the past month no matter what testing shows at the time.

Because of your husband's family history of diabetes and his two suspect symptoms, regular blood checks are warranted.

Adult-onset diabetes is more likely to have a family history than would the juvenile-onset kind.

"Diabetes, the Sweet Sickness" discusses the topic in depth. Readers can order a copy by sending $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope to: Dr. Donohue — SR89, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been taking Zantac for heartburn and excess stomach acid. I prefer the less expensive Tagamet HB. Should I wait a few days to make the switch? — J.L.

ANSWER: You can change without a waiting period. Just follow the label instructions. Let your doctor in on your decision, though.

The House of the Week

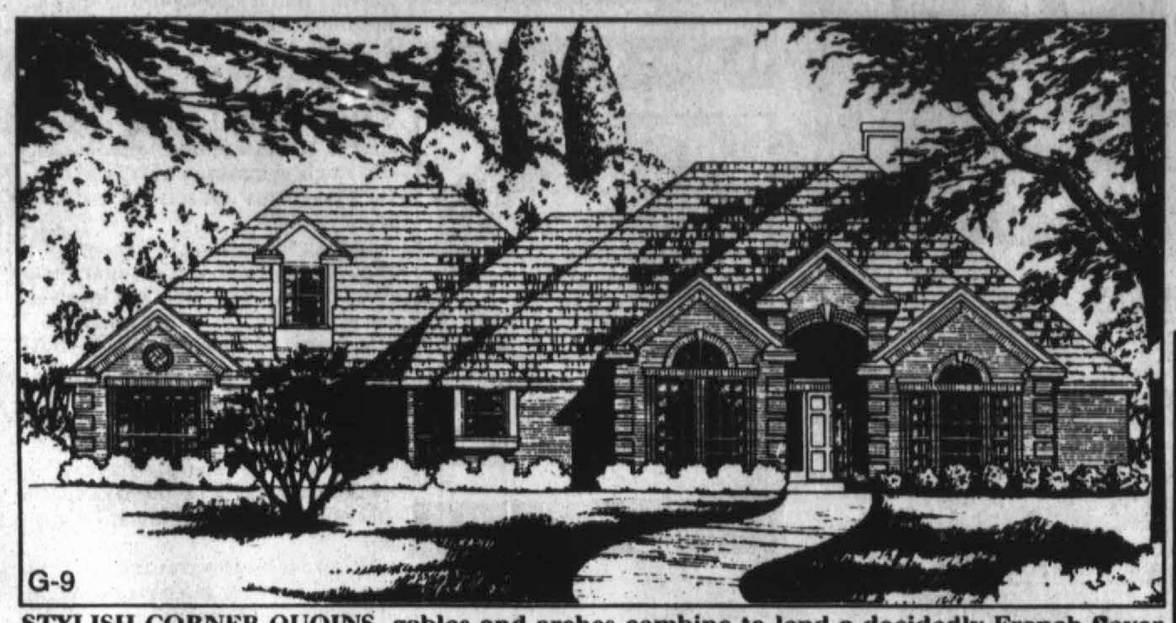

French-style Home Is Grand

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Plan G-9, a French-style home by HomeStyles Designers Network, offers large rooms and high ceilings. Ceiling fans lend atmosphere to the main living spaces.

Accessed by way of a 12-foot-high entry, the dining and living rooms feature 11-foot ceilings and windows with arched transoms. The living room has a fireplace and built-in bookshelves.

Double doors from the dining room lead to the kitchen, which has a large, angled serving bar, a built-in desk and a central work island with cabinets. A pantry allows ingredients to be close at hand. There are two boxed-out windows above the sink, and a breakfast nook with a bay window.

STYLISH CORNER QUOINS, gables and arches combine to lend a decidedly French flavor to this noble home. Keystones punctuate brick arches over the window arrangements and the sheltered entry area. The home's brick facade is crowned by soaring hip rooflines.

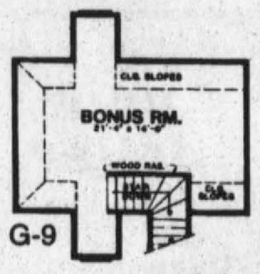

Near the nook is a utility room with laundry facilities and a sink for larger cleaning jobs, and there is a powder room next door.

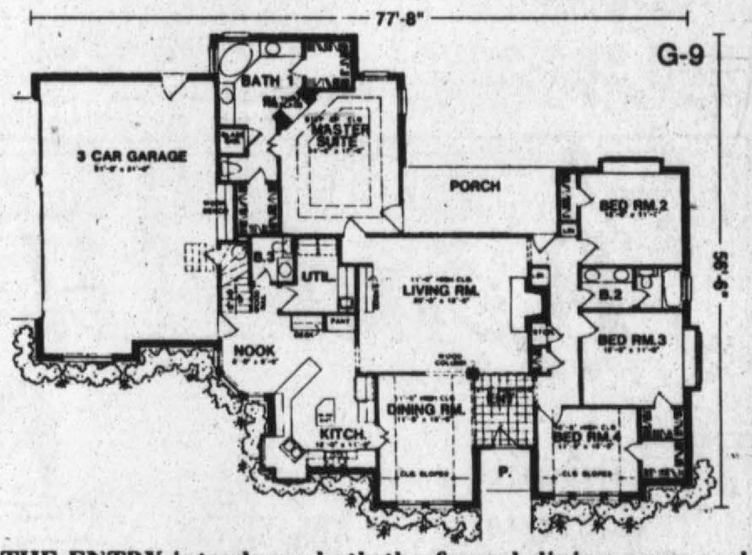

A 10-foot stepped ceiling crowns the secluded master suite, which offers private access to the covered backyard porch. Behind double doors, the luxurious garden bath features the bedroom's see-through fireplace.

The secondary bedrooms have 10-foot ceilings and share a skylighted bath. The two foremost bedrooms have walk-in closets. The middle and rear bedrooms have inviting window seats that provide a view.

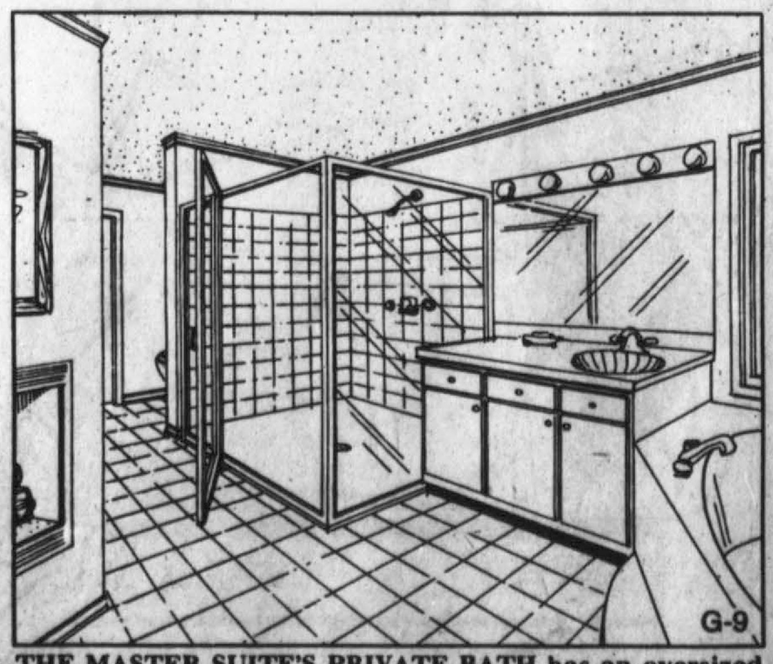

The bonus room above the garage provides options — it could be an additional bedroom or a quiet office space. With its two dormer windows admitting lots of light, it could even be used as an artist's loft.

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.)

THE ENTRY introduces both the formal dining room and the sprawling living room, where windows overlook a back porch. The island kitchen is accessible from both the dining and living rooms, and connects to the breakfast nook via an angled serving bar. From the nook, a utility room is steps away, as is the entrance to the three-car garage and the stairway to the bonus room above the garage. The secluded master suite is just off the living room. On the opposite side of the home are three secondary bedrooms and a split bath.

THE MASTER SUITE'S PRIVATE BATH has an oversized tub and shower, dual vanities and a spectacular see-through fireplace.

G-9 STATISTICS

Design G-9 has an entry, living room, dining room, an island kitchen, breakfast nook, utility room, four bedrooms, two full baths, one half-bath and a bonus room above the garage, totaling 2,589 square feet of living space. The plan is available with 2x4 exterior wall framing and a crawl-space or slab foundation. A three-car garage provides 737 square feet of space.

Costas plans to discuss issues during All-Star Game

Bob Costas (pictured) is looking forward to raising some hot issues, like the Marge Schott controversy and baseball's labor strife, when he anchors NBC's coverage of the All-Star Game on Tuesday, July 9. He'll be joined by Bob Uecker, Joe Morgan, Johnny Bench and Jim Gray.

By Jim Baker
©TVData Features Syndicate

Bob Costas is loaded with hot issues for NBC's broadcast of the 67th All-Star Game on Tuesday, July 9.

Just the raising of touchy subjects will be a refreshing departure because Fox makes a point of avoiding them in its goody-goody, low-rated warm-up show that smacks more of promotion than solid journalism.

But Costas, rejoining Bob "Front Row" Uecker and Joe Morgan, leads into such juicy topics as Albert Belle, Marge Schott and baseball's continuing attendance and ratings problems with these observations:

Belle (the Cleveland Indians' temperamental outfielder) – "His controversies will be brought up on the broadcast because he'll be an All-Star starter. He could find himself in another series of incidents if he doesn't get control over his temper."

Belle's most celebrated incident was a temper tantrum with NBC's Hannah Storm during last year's World Series, followed later by a baseline forearm shiver that flattened Milwaukee second baseman Fernando Vina and prompted a five-game suspension, which Belle appealed.

Schott (the embattled Cincinnati Reds owner) – "Freedom of speech rights had nothing to do with her situation. She's a member of a private organization and violated its code of conduct with her remarks (e.g. 'Adolf Hitler was good at first'). Baseball has a right to expel her."

Roberto Alomar (Baltimore Orioles second baseman) – "Baseball has as many stars as at any time in the last 20 years, and Roberto is a great example, flirting with a .400 batting average. There's a lot to celebrate in this game."

Poor pitching – "Such hitters as Alomar are taking advantage of it. The home run records of Roger Maris and Babe Ruth are in jeopardy. The way hits are coming, some records might stand 10 minutes. It makes me want to grab a bat. Scores of 14-8 and 10-9 used to be rarities. But now you see three-to-five of them most every day."

Nielsen woes – "Fox's baseball ratings have not been overwhelming and any reasonable person would think that's in reaction to the game's strife of the last two years. Things became better with a decent TV contract, Cal Ripken's consecutive game record and last year's great Seattle-New York series in a convoluted playoff structure. The game wasn't killed, but it was seriously wounded and it will be awhile before acceptance comes back to what it was."

No contract – "There's still no collective bargaining agreement and I'll be surprised if there's one before the season ends." (Costas didn't say it, but there's no full commissioner, either).

Club owners – "The owners left themselves legally vulnerable but were let off the hook by a federal judge who was looked upon as saving baseball. That was the worst thing that could have happened.

"The best would have been if the two parties had been left to their own devices and there would have been some pressure for a real deal."

Costas will be surrounded by a strong cast at the All-Star Game – Uecker with dry humor, Morgan with good insight, Johnny Bench and Jim Gray as reporters and Storm handling the warm-up show (stand by, Belle).

And he identifies with baseball so snugly that Costas couldn't pass up the opportunity to cover the All-Star Game, even though his Olympic prime-time host duties start 10 nights later on July 19.

Did You Know?

A DOG'S SENSE OF SMELL IS THOUSANDS OF TIMES BETTER THAN A HUMAN'S.

TRADITIONALLY USED BY THE BISON HUNTERS OF THE GREAT PLAINS OF NORTH AMERICA, TEPEE IS A SIOUX INDIAN WORD FOR "PORTABLE HOME." A TEPEE CAN BE AS LARGE AS 15 FEET HIGH AND 30 FEET IN DIAMETER!

BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW...APPROXIMATELY HALF OF THE WORLD'S PEOPLE ARE FARMERS!

Little Known or Not So Known...

FACTS

Getting lead into a pencil is quite a tricky operation. In fact, the "lead" is really a mixture of powdered graphite and powdered clay, fired like china in a kiln. Putting this mixture between pieces of wood requires 30 steps. First, matured wood is planed and grooved so that when one finished piece is placed on top of another, the grooves form the hollow centerpiece. Stripes of graphite "lead" are placed in the grooves, and halves of the wood are glued together and tightly clamped. Machines then cut the pencil.

Everyone knows that popcorn is popped -- but how? Pre-Inca Peruvians were reputedly the first to put corn over heat. They were amazed when it "exploded" to eight or 10 times its original size. The loud popping noise is produced when heat changes the tiny amounts of water in each grain into steam -- and all 10,000,000 grains of starch in an average kernel let go simultaneously. The same thing happens to your puffed wheat or puffed rice breakfast cereal.

HOROSCOPES

July 7-13

ARIES – March 21/April 20
It's impressive to make quick decisions — but only if they're the right ones. There's nothing wrong with thinking things through. Last minute invitations tend to be the more interesting ones this week. A love relationship will need some nurturing — especially if you're with Scorpio.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21
Something you've wondered about for a long time will finally become clear. You'll realize that life works in mysterious ways. A friend's change of heart may disrupt weekend plans. Instead of sulking, get out and do something you've always wanted to do! Don't be afraid to take a risk.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
Staying on top of investments and expenses will be a priority this week. Is there a bill you're forgetting about? On Thursday or Friday, something will happen to restore your faith in human nature. You'll be inspired to do good, too. A Cancer enters the picture.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
Shocking news on Tuesday will make you glad for what you have. You'll realize how precious life really is. You'll find that haste makes waste later in the week. Before rushing out of the house, make sure you have everything you need. A Libra helps you in some way.

LEO – July 23/August 23
You'll find out a surprising fact about a friend. Before you react, take a look at all sides of the story. You may be more understanding when you know all the facts. Stand your ground in an argument with a loved one. It may mean confrontation, but in the long run you'll gain respect.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
Someone with whom you've been angry will make a peace offering. But before all is forgiven, consider his/her motivations. Are they selfish or sincere? Show confidence when meeting new people — especially with prospective employers. Wednesday will be a lucky day.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
Put your iron fist in a velvet glove and you'll be much more effective in getting things done. Others are sure to take note of your diplomatic skills. A change in your routine will lead to unforeseen gains. Call on inner strength when faced with a conflict this weekend. Keep on your toes when dealing with Scorpio.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
Early in the week you may find yourself doing something you said you'd never do. You'll surprise yourself. At work, it's important to double-check all facts or something could go unnoticed. Overstepping your bounds in a love relationship will only cause problems.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
You may find that you're better off facing confrontation now instead of prolonging the inevitable. No matter how unpleasant, you'll be better off in the long run. A new friend will offer good advice on Thursday. Take a listen. (S)he could provide insight into an ongoing problem.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
Unless you know all the facts, don't talk freely about something you're not an expert on. Blurting out half-truths based on theory won't help you gain credibility no matter how convincing you sound. A love relationship will need some tender loving care. Work on your sensitivity.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
Feeling down in the dumps lately? A change of scene is probably all you need to bring back your usual enthusiasm. Even if it's just for a couple of days, new environs will do you a world of good. Long-awaited news will finally come with a surprising outcome. A Leo is involved.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20
Although you may feel capable of conquering the world solo, sometimes you do have to seek the help of others. Don't be afraid to ask for assistance. You have more to gain than lose. In matters of romance, there could be some unpleasant interactions later in the week.

POV* presents The Transformation, about the metamorphosis of Ricardo, a k a "Sara," from a homeless transvestite to a religious, married man. It airs Tuesday on PBS (check local listings).

Here's looking at you, PBS: fresh images from public TV

Leave it to PBS to take the road not taken.

In a week when network viewing is dominated by baseball's All-Star Game, PBS offers another summer event from the City of Brotherly Love: a visit to a Cezanne retrospective.

In a week filled with series reruns, PBS looks at the whole contorted TV landscape in Signal to Noise: Life With Television. For reruns, Middlemarch airs again on Masterpiece Theatre.

And who says nothing ever happens on PBS? This week, Jason Alexander (Seinfeld) is hanging out on Evening at Pops.

There are other choices, too. The only unifying theme is their mode of conveyance: PBS.

The journey begins Sunday, July 7 (check local listings), with Part I of Middlemarch, George Eliot's saga of a young woman who tries to follow her principles while neglecting her heart. Janet Aubrey stars.

Monday, July 8, Jason Alexander wows the Pops crowd with a bit of crooning and a little of the old soft shoe.

The Tuesday, July 9, edition of POV is The Transformation, a film about one man's metamorphosis from homeless, HIV-positive transvestite on the streets of New York to churchgoing, married man in the Bible-belt mecca of Dallas, where status symbols and the status quo rule.

While they're sweeping up the peanut shells in Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium, PBS steps across town to the Museum of Art to view a retrospective of the work of French post-Impressionist painter Paul Cezanne in its only U.S. stop. Cezanne airs Wednesday, July 10.

Signal to Noise, a three-part essay on the state of television, begins Thursday, July 11, with an hour that contrasts viewers' expectations for and uses of the medium with those of the world of advertising. A subjective view, Signal to Noise asks what's on our airwaves and why.

Friday, July 12, public radio's Robert Siegel reports on Occupied Japan: An Experiment in Democracy, recalling postwar policies.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Will Murder, She Wrote ever come back to TV? I am very disappointed that it is going off the air. –M.K., Burlington, N.C.

A: Angela Lansbury will indeed continue to play Jessica Fletcher in a series of Murder TV movies, although you may not see one this coming season (she'll be doing a sequel to Mrs. 'Arris Goes to Paris).

Q: Among the Mama's Family supporting characters, could you tell me the names of the daughters occasionally played by Betty White and Carol Burnett? –Francine Johnson, Charlotte, N.C.

A: White played social-climbing Ellen Jackson, while Burnett was the terminally frustrated Eunice Higgins.

Q: A quick correction to your May 26 column. The Champions was not an NBC series, as you reported, but a British series that had some of its 30 episodes carried by NBC. To the best of my knowledge, this highly original program is available on video only in the U.K. –Larry Oliver, Long Beach, Calif.

A: Thanks for the additional info, Larry. My source didn't indicate the British origin.

Q: On Jack Benny's old TV program, can you tell me the name of the man who was his sidekick? I believe his first name was Don. –Mary Bogle, Oakland, Calif.

A: Don Wilson, who played Benny's announcer and friend, and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson were the only weekly regulars who were with Benny for his entire TV run.

Q: Recently, Bruce Weitz from Hill Street Blues was a regular on Sisters. Would you please remind my friends and me of what his Hill Street character's name was? –L.L.K., Wurtsboro, N.Y.

Angela Lansbury

A: Weitz won an Emmy playing Detective Mick Belker, the slightly unbalanced undercover officer.

Q: Are Marina Sirtis and the actress who played the mother on Life Goes On sisters? What does CAG stand for on JAG? –A reader in Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

A: Sirtis is not related to Patti LuPone. The CAG is the Carrier Air Group commander.

Q: I'm looking for a movie called J-Men Forever and have had no luck through Movies Unlimited and other sources. Help! –Maria Elena Whiting, Layton, Utah.

A: Thanks for asking. If you have not been able to find a movie through Movies Unlimited (800-4MOVIES) or Critics Choice Video (800-367-7765), try calling the video detectives at A Million and One World-Wide Videos (800-849-7309).

Between these three companies, you should be able to find any video that CAN be found.

SOAP WORLD

Beradino dies; Locklear stays on MP

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: I was wondering what had happened to the actor who played Dr. Steve Hardy on General Hospital. He has always been one of my favorites on the show. He is never around anymore. –S.R. in Vacaville, Calif.

Dear Reader: John Beradino died of cancer on May 19. The actor was 79. He had been a regular on GH since 1963. The actor had suffered with the disease for several years.

Previously, Beradino played second base for the Cleveland Indians.

He is survived by his wife, Marjorie, their children Katherine Ann and John Anthony, and his children from a previous marriage, Toni and Cindy.

Dear Candace: I heard that Heather Locklear is leaving Melrose Place. Is that true? I think it would be a big mistake for the producers to let her go. –James G. in R.I.

Dear Reader: Locklear isn't leaving anytime soon. The actress has signed a one-year contract with the show. She has hinted she would like to leave when the year is up.

There are also several other series regulars who will most likely not return after next year.

Dear Candace: The actor who plays Dr. Ben Harris on As the World Turns looks familiar. Has he been on another soap opera? –Nancy in Orlando, Fla.

Dear Reader: It is no surprise the actor seems familiar to you. Peter Parros, who plays Dr. Harris, also played Dr. Ben Price on One Life to Live. Talk about typecasting.

Dear Candace: I heard that Billie was going to come back to Days of Our Lives, but I haven't seen her yet. Do you know what is going on? –G.M. in Huguenot, N.Y.

Dear Reader: Executive Producer Ken Corday, says the character will be back on Days within the next year.

Lisa Rinna, who originated the role, is busy working on other projects and is not ready to return. She has said in the past that she would like to come back to play Billie.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
