Shooting suspect is named

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A 36-year-old Colorado City man remains in jail today in lieu of $50,000 bond on charges of suspicion of attempted murder, following a shooting incident Sunday at an Interstate 20 truck stop, authorities said.

John Frank Emmerson was arrested Sunday after firing six shots from a .22-caliber weapon at the El Toro Truck Stop and wounding 24-year-old Daniel Velasquez in the melee, according to Police Chief Ed Wheat.

According to hospital spokeman at Root Memorial Hospital, Velasquez is doing well and should be released soon.

Wheat said Velasquez, a California truck driver, had picked up Emmerson about 6 a.m. Sunday after Emmerson had apparently run out of gas about a mile from the truck stop.

After arriving at the truck Emmerson refused to leave the truck, Wheat said. Velasquez then tried to eject Emmerson from the cab, whereupon the suspect fired six rounds at the trucker, hitting him once in the back, the chief said.

Officers later arrested Emmerson who had barricaded himself in the bunk room of the truck stop.

Harrelsons are convicted

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal court jury convicted Charles V. Harrelson today of killing U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. here in 1979 for a $250,000 fee.

The jury also convicted Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Jurors convicted Elizabeth Chagra, wife of the man who the government contended hired Harrelson, of conspiracy to murder a federal judge and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

None of the three defendants showed any emotion when the verdicts were read but several of the nine women jurors sobbed as they looked at the defendants.

Harrelson turned to reporters as they were getting ready to take him away and said, "This is just a necessary step in the progression of things."

Mrs. Chagra held her head up and even smiled at the jurors as the verdicts were read.

Charles Campion, representing Mrs. Harrelson, had red eyes when leaving the court room and said, "I wish we could have had a severance and separate trial for Jo Ann."

Presiding Judge William S. Sessions set sentencing for 9 a.m. March 8 and informed each defendant he or she would have an opportunity to speak before final sentencing.

Defense lawyers requested the jurors be polled and Sessions called each juror's name and each one stood and answered "yes" when asked if they agreed with each of the six guilty verdicts.

One juror, Patricia Schultz-Ormond, was trembling and weeping when she responded.

Harrelson faces a mandatory life sentence for murder, up to life for the conspiracy to murder conviction, and up to five years for the conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Mrs. Harrelson faces a maximum five-year sentence.

Mrs. Chagra faces up to life in prison on the conspiracy to murder charge and up to five years on the conspiracy charge.

Tylenol suspect is arrested

JAMES LEWIS
...found in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — James Lewis, the Tylenol extortion suspect arrested after a librarian spotted him at a reading table, will be taken to Illinois to determine whether he was involved in the seven Tylenol murders, authorities say.

Lewis, 36, charged with trying to extort $1 million after the seven poisoning deaths in Chicago, was arrested without incident Monday. An employee in the midtown annex of the New York Public Library called police and said, "There's a look-alike of Mr. Lewis here," said Kenneth Walton, deputy assistant director of the FBI.

Lewis was reading a listing of newspapers from around the United States when he was caught, Walton said. Authorities said they had been on the lookout for Lewis at libraries and newstands because of his penchant for writing to out-of-town newspapers, and agents had given pictures of Lewis to the library staff.

Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said Monday night that officials want to determine "if, in fact, he was responsible" for the poisonings. Fahner said Lewis is one of several suspects in the killings, but Walton said there is no evidence to link Lewis to the crimes.

The whereabouts of Lewis' wife, Leann, 35, remained unknown although she was believed to have been in New York City with her husband. She is wanted on a federal warrant charging misuse of a Social Security card while trying to obtain work in Chicago.

Clean-shaven and dressed in a tan raincoat, Lewis was arraigned in Manhattan late Monday on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution and extortion. U.S. Magistrate Ruth Washington set bail at $5 million and ordered a preliminary hearing on Dec. 23.

Lewis allegedly demanded $1 million from Johnson & Johnson, the manufacturer of Extra-Strength Tylenol, to prevent more poisonings after seven people in the Chicago area died from taking capsules laced with cyanide. No one has been arrested in the deaths that occurred between Sept. 29 and Oct 1.

The FBI said Lewis admitted his identity when arrested. But at his arraignment, the suspect refused to identify himself as Lewis.

Salvation Army has more cheese

The Salvation Army will be giving away cheese and butter the qualified applicants Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the SA's office at 308 Aylford.

Applicants must bring proof of residency in Howard Country, income and family size.

The SA will hand out 3,000 pounds of cheese and 3,000 of butter, according to SA officials.

New York robbers net $8 million

NEW YORK (AP) — Two masked men who pulled off the largest cash heist in U.S. history by robbing $8 million from an armored car company left $20 million behind and may have been working an "inside job," police say.

The heist was aided by a flat roof on the Sentry Armored Car Courier Co. that opened like a can of beans, a lone guard, dogs that didn't bark and a security system that failed to sound the alarm, authorities said Monday.

"We are investigating the possibility it was an inside job," said Alice McGillion, a deputy police commissioner.

The loot stolen Sunday, including $1 million in weekend receipts from Yonkers Raceway, had been picked up by Sentry over the weekend from several clients.

At first, Sentry officials told the police $8 million was taken, a figure the FBI has used consistently. But city police Monday revised their figure to $5.3 million after a "very detailed count."

However, as Sentry officials countinued to count their losses today, police said they, too, agreed at least $8 million was taken.

A police investigator who asked not to be identified said the entire amount taken in the holdup was insured.

Sentry officials could not be reached for comment Monday; a secretary said company officers were not available to talk to reporters.

After interviewing the guard and collecting evidence at the two-story brick warehouse, Bronx chief of detectives Francis M. Sullivan and other investigators pieced together this account of the robbery:

Two holdup men, wearing ski masks, used a screwdriver or similar tool to pry a two-foot hole through the flat roof of steel and tar paper. They lowered themselves with a rope, removed a panel from a false ceiling, then dropped to an office.

In the next room the only security guard in the building, Christos Potamitis, 25, was watching television. At 11:15 p.m., the two men burst into his office carrying a double-barreled shotgun and saying, "Don't move or we'll blow you away."

After disarming the guard, the robbers handcuffed him to a stairwell railing, then went downstairs to the money room, where about $25 million sat behind a heavy metal door in bags of $50 and $100 bills. The robbers snapped open two locks with a crowbar, then apparently used bolt cutters to cut through a floor-to-ceiling chain link fence and reach the money bags.

None of the bags was in a safe or vault. The robbers took 10 to 12 bags piled near the door, activated the electronic system that operated the garage door, then apparently loaded the money into a truck parked outside.

Before the gunmen left, they wrote on a dusty mirror, "Robbers was here."

Sullivan said it was unclear why the robbers passed up $20 million stacked in bags on handcarts. Detectives said the thieves may have thought the other bags contained coins that were too heavy to carry, or may have feared discovery.

The guard was found when other employees came to work at 5 a.m. Monday. He could give only a poor description of the robbers, police said.

Investigators found an electronic bypass device on the roof, which they believed was used to neutralize the alarm system. The device is frequently used by safe crackers.

Two watchdogs in the building also failed to bark, Sullivan said, and tests were being made to see if they had been drugged.

The holdup came four years after the largest robbery in U.S. history, where thieves took $5 million in cash and $800,000 in jewelry from a Lufthansa cargo area at Kennedy Airport. A cargo agent, the only man convicted in the heist, was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

County may hire janitor

Citizen and public complaints about unsanitary conditions in the courthouse and its rest rooms has led the Howard County commissioners to consider hiring a full-time janitor instead of using a janitorial service.

The commissioners decided yesterday during their regular meeting to compare the costs of a janitorial service and an individual and make a decision on the issue at a special meeting set for Dec. 20, according to Commissioner Louis Brown.

During their meeting Monday morning, commisioners discussed complaints they had received from citizens and county employees. Commissioner David Barr pointed out the problem was the one-year contract "without any teeth in it." He suggested a six-month contract.

The current county courthouse janitorial contract is held by Hernandez Janitorial.

Brown suggested hiring an individual to handle the work on a day-to-day basis. The other commissioners, Paul Allen and William Crooker, agreed with the possibility of a county employee handling the work.

Commissioners had received bids today for the 1983 janitorial contract for the courthouse and library. The monthly bids were as follows: Ring Enterprises, $4,560; Nu-Wa Janitorial, $2865; Hernandez Janitorial, $1,800 and Albert Ramirez, $1,700.

Disabled vets get a raise

Veterans suffering from a service-connected disability and their dependents are getting a 7.4 percent increase in monthly Veterans Admnistration compensation checks as one of numerous improvements in veterans' benefits, according to a press release from the Waco VA Regional Office.

The increase and other improved benefits are the result of the Veterans' Compensation, Education and Employment Amendments of 1982, signed into law by President Reagan last month.

The rate boost meant an increase from $58 to $62 per month for a veteran with 10 percent disability. A veteran with 50 percent disabilitiy now receives $352 a month, up from $328. A 100-percent disabled veteran now is receiving $1.213 a month, up from $1,130.

The legislation also increased the annual allowance made to certain veterans whose artificial limbs or wheelchairs cause wear on their clothing. This allowance went from $305 to $327. Also, the bill provided a compensation rate increas to veterans who suffer from service-connected blindness in both eyes and who also have incurred the service-connected loss of use of an arm or leg.

The bill also:

—Authorizes payment of a $300 burial allowance for unclaimed bodies of certain wartime veterans for deaths occurring after Sept. 30, 1982.

—Removes the bar against payment of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance and Veterans Group Life Insurance proceed in the event a claim is filed more than four years after the insured's death.

—Authorizes the VA to guarantee loans made for the purpose of refinancing a lien on a manufactured home, or for purchasing a lot for such a home.

—Provides that burial benefits are payable if a veteran dies while a patient in a nursing home under VA contract.

—Terminates the Veterans' Representative (Vet Rep) program and allows outstationing of veterans benefits counselors at schools and other locations.

—Repeals the current GI Bill requirement that vocational schools report on the number of their graduates who, during a specified two-year period, have obtained employment in the field for which the school has provided training.

—Improves on administration by the Department of Labor on the provisions of employment and training opportunities for disabled an Viet Nam-era veterans.

Full details of those changes in the compensation regulations and eligibility requirements are available by contacting the nearest VA Regional Office, veterans' county service office or one of the national veterans' organizations.

Applications now being taken for Angelo State scholarships

Angelo State University is now accepting applications from high school seniors for approximately 400 Carr Academic Scholarships for 1983-84 ranging in value from $1,000 to $3,500.

Supported by a growing multi-million dollar trust established in 1978 by Robert G. Carr of San Angelo, the undergraduate scholarships may be renewed annually by the school and can be worth from $4,000 to $14,000 during a four-year course of undergraduate study.

The priority deadline for submitting application for the coming year is March 15, 1983. However, outstanding students may be considered up until July 1, 1983 if funds are available.

Applicants who are high school seniors must normally have a high school average of 90 or above, rank in the top 10 percent of their class and present a composite score of 21 or more on the ACT or a combined math and verbal score of 900 or more on the SAT.

For applications write: Carr Academic Scholarship Program, Angelo State University, Box 11007-C, ASU Station, San Angelo, Texas, 76909.

Police Beat

Suspect arrested on DWI charge

Police said they arrested 22-year-old James K. Harmon of 106½ W. 18th last night on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest. Harmon was released after posting $1,000 and $3,500 bonds set by Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt.

The suspect resisted arrest by grabbing a police officer's shirt and ripping off a button and a badge, police reports said. The arresting officer said another officer assisted in subduing the suspect.

Police reports also showed the following:

- Flora H. Nobles, 58, of Sterling City Route Box 95 was arrested last night on suspicion of theft over $20 and under $200. Ms. Nobles was released after posting a $1,000 bond set by Peace Justice Lewis Heflin.

Furr's Super Market Assistant Manager Randal Clark told police he saw the suspect take eight packages of Dramamine from a counter and place it in her purse. The woman later walked out of the store without paying, police reports said.

- Carol Scaggs, 35, of 905 N. Goliad was arrested last night on traffic warrants. Ms. Scaggs paid a bond and was released.
- Betty Lepard of 700 Tulane told police someone stole a purse set on a table at Howard College Library yesterday. The purse contained a billfold, checkbook and credit cards.
- Yolanda Trevino of 3215 Auburn told police someone stole $106 from the glove box in her unlocked car parked at United Health Care, Inc., 901 Goliad, between 6:30 p.m. and 8:05 p.m. yesterday.
- Glynn Day, a student at Howard College, told police someone stole a $270 Seiko watch from his dormitory room between noon and 9 p.m. Dec. 9.
- Jose Ontiveros of 711 N.W. Eighth told police someone stole a graphic equalizer from his car parked at McDonald's Restaurant between 10 a.m. and noon yesterday.
- Harlan Huibregtse of 514 Scott told police someone fired at least four gunshots at Bauer Elementary, 108 N.W. Ninth, between 4 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. yesterday. Two rounds hit the west side of the building and another two hit through a window screen and glass in the teachers' lounge.
- Marilee Kamery of 1603 Sycamore turned over a bottle of Excedrin capsules to police officers. She told police the capsules may be contaminated because she found two capsules on top of the cotton when she opened the bottle. Lt. Alvis Jeffcoat said police will send the bottle to a state lab for tests.
- Vehicles driven by Raul Flores of 304 N.E. Eighth and Veneta H. Kincheloe collided at East Fourth and South Birdwell about 4:15 p.m., police said. Ms. Kincheloe was treated and released from Malone Hogan.

Police cited Flores for running a red light, failure to control speed and no insurance.

Flores remains in fair condition at Malone Hogan after suffering injuries in the accident, a hospital spokesman said.

- Cosmo J. Fusco of 2401 Marcy was treated and released from Malone Hogan last night for injuries received in a traffic accident. Police said Fusco veered off Wasson Road and into an embankment at Wasson and Randolph about 11:20 p.m. Police cited Fusco for running a stop sign.
- Vehicles driven by Mary A. Gary of 209 Washington and Clayton T. Franklin of 2806 Apache collided at South Gregg and West 17th about 4 p.m. yesterday. Franklin was cited for running a red light.
- Vehicles driven by Dora S. Guterrez of 707 E. Sixth and Alejandro Rios of 700 Douglas collided at West 18th and Main about 8:25 a.m. yesterday. Guterrez was cited for failure to yield right-of-way, no driver's license and failure to maintain financial responsibility.
- Vehicles driven by Emma G. Spivey of 1301 Madison and Maria F. Leal of 3701 W. Highway 80 collided about 1:20 p.m. yesterday. Police cited Ms. Spivey for failure to yield right-of-way.

Sheriffs Log

Three arrested on warrants

Three people were arrested yesterday on issuance of bad checks warrants, according to sheriff's office reports.

Charles Noble of 3716 Hatch paid a $110 for his checks and a $26 fine and was released.

Rita Jo Hull, 32, of 538 Westover paid her checks and a $106 fine and was released.

Rosalinda B. Garcia, 21, of 1500 Sycamore was released on a $1,000 personal recognizance bond set by Peace Justice Bobby West.

- Kenneth Lee Murphy, 22, of 500 Young was arrested on a peace bond by warrant. He was released on a $1,000 surety bond set by Peace Justice Lewis Heflin.

killed a person who was undeserving of it," was charged with shooting Wood in the back on May 29, 1979, in the driveway of the judge's San Antonio townhouse.

The nine-woman, three-man panel, which had been sequestered since last Thursday, worked nine straight days and deliberated 18 hours over four days before reaching the verdicts. They heard 40 days of testimony from 131 witnesses.

During the course of the deliberations, jury foreman Mary Kathleen Mills, a medical records technician, asked Sessions to reread his charges on conspiracy to murder and conspiracy to obstruct justice, and to replay secretly recorded conversations between the Harrelsons.

Prosecutors described Harrelson as "highly intelligent and cunning," and said he killed the judge for a $250,000 fee from Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 39, now serving a 30-year federal prison term without parole.

Chagra was scheduled for trial before Wood in 1979 when the judge was killed. The indictment charges that Chagra, who will be tried on a murder charge later, feared Wood would sentence him to life in prison on a criminal enterprise charge.

Mrs. Harrelson, 41, who met and married Harrelson shortly after he was paroled from prison on Sept. 1, 1978, was convicted in December 1981 of using the fictitious name Fay L. King — or "faking" — to purchase the alleged murder weapon, a deer rifle, 12 days before Wood was shot.

SWCID gets new class okayed

The SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf recently received approval for a new program entitled "Paraprofessional for the Hearing Impaired" to begin in the spring.

The program is the first class designed for both hearing and deaf students to be offered by SWCID, according to Bernhardt Jones, director of studies at SWCID.

The program will prepares students for positions as classroom aides, dormitory supervisors or similar jobs in the deaf community.

Students who take the two-year course receive an Associate of Applied Science degree, and students who take the one-year course receive a certificate.

The two-year degree plan includes 63 hours of study. The coursework includes sociology, English, psychology, sign language, fingerspelling, introduction to deafness and elective courses.

The one-year certificate program includes 30 semester hours of study.

Jury assesses $1 fine for clerk in porn shop

HOUSTON (AP — A jury found Jesse Diablo guilty of selling obscene material, but assessed the 65-year-old man a fine of only one dollar after he testified that he took the job in an adult bookstore because he could find no other work.

Prosecutor Lynn McClellan said the jury determined the penalty Friday after taking into account Diablo's age, the absence of a previous criminal record and the fact that he had worked in the store for only three days.

Diablo was convicted of selling to an undercover agent a copy of a film that the jury decided was obscene. The jury deliberated for only an hour before deciding on the $1 punishment.

McClellan said Diablo no longer works in the store.

Cleaning woman charged

MARBLEHEAD, Mass. (AP) — A cleaning woman was caught with cash and stolen goods worth about $600,000 and that could be "only the tip of the iceberg," authorities said.

Marblehead Police Inspector James Elliott said Monday that a substantial amount of additional cash was found Saturday in a safe deposit box at a Lynn bank.

"This case is mushrooming," said Elliott. "I feel we have seen only the tip of the iceberg and we will continue to follow every lead we uncover."

Police already had discovered at least $500,000 in jewelery and appliances and $100,000 in cash and checks in the Lynn apartment of Dianna Jablonski, 34, according to Elliott.

Ms. Jablonski, who worked as a domestic in a wealthy North Shore neighborhood, was arrested Thursday after an investigation into thefts from area homes and department stores, police said.

She was arraigned in Lynn District Court on Friday on a charge of larceny of over $100, and was released on her own recognizance pending a hearing Jan. 26.

A turbulant year for Poland finishes

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — As chants of "Solidarity!" echoed in the streets, Poland ended a troubled, turbulent year of military rule with the government promising it would suspend basic martial-law edicts by Jan. 1.

The Communist government on Monday presented the rubber-stamp Parliament, the Sejm, with plans for relaxation of martial law imposed exactly one year earlier, but said the military would remain in power and could reimpose martial law if it became necessary.

Government press spokesman Jerzy Urban said the Sejm will reconvene Saturday to give final approval. But many of martial law's harshest features already had been lifted when Sejm President Henryk Jablonski said Monday the remaining provisions would be lifted Dec. 31, apparently at the stroke of midnight.

The name of the outlawed labor union echoed in the streets Monday night near Warsaw's Old City as about 400 people gathered at a floral cross outside a Roman Catholic Church to pray and sing protest hymns.

Security squads kept a discreet distance and did not intervene when the crowd chanted "Solidarity!" and the name of Lech Walesa, Soladarity's leader freed from government internment Nov. 12. He was seized Dec. 13, 1981 — the day martial law began.

There were no reports of violent protests on the anniversary of the sweeping military crackdown against the independent labor movement that spearheaded a 16-month challenge to the Communist authority.

Earlier Monday, about 2,000 people ended a Mass at another Warsaw church by standing silently for a minute to commemorate the deaths a year ago of workers battling authorities to protest martial law's imposition. Nine striking workers were slain Dec. 16, 1981, at the Wujek coal mine in Silesia, the bloodiest single incident after the military crackdown.

As the Mass ended, the people sang, "God Who Watches Over Poland" and raised their hands in V-for-victory signs — a common gesture of defiance to martial law.

Jablonski told the Sejm that suspension of martial law "means a radical limitation of lifting of the rigors introduced" last December. While not all parts of the government's proposal will be known publicly until they are implemented, some mentioned by Jablonski included:

— Removal of many criminal cases from summary military tribunal jurisdictions. But he said cases involving violent crimes, corruption and extreme threats to state security will remain with the military courts.

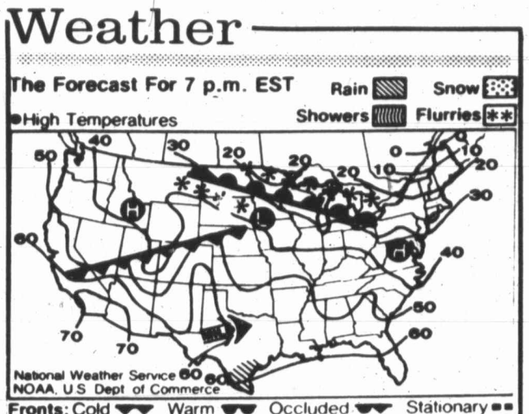

— Limited amnesty to some jailed union activists, whose cases will be examined separately after martial law's suspension. Additionally, the 200 union members and dissidents held without charges will be released, except for an unspecified number of exceptions.

— Special permission no longer will be needed for "holding meetings, artistic, entertainment, sports events" and public gatherings. Public gatherings will be allowed starting Jan. 1.

— Military officers will be withdrawn from many state enterprises where they had been posted to prevent occupation strikes like those that led to the creation of Solidarity in August 1980. However, the officers will remain in some, unspecified plants.

— Press censorship will ease, but to what extent is unclear.

Weather

West Texas has fair weather

By The Associated Press

Cloudy skies covered the eastern half of Texas today, while the westrn portion remained mostly clear.

Showers dotted wide areas stretching from the Lower Rio Grande Valley to the upper coast.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 36 at Junction to 54 at Brownsville and Victoria.

Winds over the Guadalupe Mountains were blowing from the west at speeds of up to 35 mph. Westerly winds near 10 mph were noted over the rest of West Texas. Southerly breezes at 10 to 15 mph dominated Central Texas, while light winds from the north and east were reported along the coast.

The forecast called for cloudy to partly cloudy over much of Texas through Wednesday. There was a chance of rain over East and South Texas through tonight. A clearing trend and slightly cooler temperatures were expected from the west and northwest Wednesday.

High winds howled through much of the Midwest and central Rockies as more snow fell today from central Montana across North Dakota and into Minnesota.

In flood-ravaged parts of Missouri and Illinois, cold temperatures hampered cleanup as rivers receded below flood stage.

Thousands of residents left homeless by last week's flooding were returning to find frozen mud in their living rooms, bedrooms and basements, said Mike Emken of the St. Louis County Emergency Preparedness Office.

FORECAST

West Texas — Partly cloudy and cooler north and fair south today. Clear and colder tonight and fair and cool Wednesday. Highs 48 Panhandle to 62 south. Lows tonight near 20 mountains and panhandle to 32 big bend. Highs Wednesday mostly in the 40s.

Rate on the peso is still very high

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

Hectic peso trading has subsided, but rates for Mexico's punchless currency remain about 10 percent higher than before an announcement that the government will float the peso to determine a free market rate, officials say.

Rates along the U.S.-Mexico border from California to Texas showed Monday that pesos are being pegged at about 135 to the dollar, up one-tenth over last week's black market figures of about 122 to the dollar.

Three El Paso banks set individual ceilings of 10,000 pesos per transaction Monday at rates of about 135 to the dollar, with commercial transactions at the El Paso National Bank fixed at a maximum of 75,000 pesos, said bank international department spokesman Jesus Rios.

Local traders in El Paso said peso transactions slowed from Friday's hectic activity, when many Mexicans lined up at exchange houses to trade pesos for stabler dollars because they feared a third devaluation of the year.

"Things have slowed down now to about where they were last week," Valuta Corp. peso trader Willie Martinez said. "The peso just went wild this weekend, but now we'll see whether this will stick. The government may decide to change its mind — it's happened before."

The battered peso started the year worth about 26 pesos to the dollar, but has been devalued twice, in February and August.

Friday's announcement of the Dec. 20 floating of the peso in Mexican banks implies a de-facto devaluation if the peso rate is pegged anywhere higher than about 120, the peso's worth last week in the black market along most of the 1,700-mile U.S.-Mexico border.

Preferential exchange rates for multinational businesses also are to be pegged at 70 pesos to the dollar, up from 50 to the dollar, government officials announced Friday.

PRINCE AND THE DOCTOR — Prince Talal of Saudi Arabia, special envoy for UNICEF, meets with famed surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley during a visit to Texas Children's Hospital in Houston Monday.

Saudi prince ends Houston visit

HOUSTON (AP) — Saudi Araian Prince Talal bin Abdul Aziz Al-Saud flew to Paris after a four-day visit here in which he briefed Houston businessmen and educators on the United Nations Children's Fund.

Talal ended his visit Monday with a tour of the Texas Children's Hospital during which he donated four "magnificent wooden hobby horses," spokeswoman Hazel Haby said.

The prince said he also underwent a brief examination at the Texas Heart Institute.

He said he consulted Dr. Robert Hall, medical director of the heart institute, about a swelling in his left hand.

"He said there's nothing wrong, absolutely," said the 51-year-old brother of King Fahed of Saudi Arabia.

Ms. Haby said Talal spoke with a group of about 10 children, telling them about his robes and answering their questions.

Talal was in Houston as a special envoy for the United Nations Children's Fund.

Two masked men get away clean with $5.3 million

NEW YORK — Two masked men who pulled off the largest cash heist in U.S. history by robbing at least $5.3 million from an armored car company left $20 million behind and may have been working an "inside job," police say.

The heist was aided by a flat roof on the Sentry Armored Car Courier Co. that opened like a can of beans, a lone guard, dogs that didn't bark and a security system that failed to sound the alarm, authorities said Monday.

"We are investigating the possibility it was an inside job," said Alice McGillion, a deputy police commissioner.

The loot stolen Sunday, including $1 million in weekend receipts from Yonkers Raceway, had been picked up by Sentry over the weekend from several clients.

New York police said company officials initially reported on Monday that $1 million had been taken, then revised the count to $5.3 million after "a very detailed count."

But FBI spokesman Edward Gerrity said Monday that the company told the agency it was an $8 million theft.

A police investigator who asked not to be identified said the entire amount taken in the holdup was insured.

Sentry officials could not be reached for comment Monday; a secretary said company officers were not available to talk to reporters.

After interviewing the guard and collecting evidence at the two-story brick warehouse, Bronx chief of detectives Francis M. Sullivan and other investigators pieced together this account of the robbery:

Two holdup men, wearing ski masks, used a screwdriver or similar tool to pry a two-foot hole through the flat roof of steel and tar paper. They lowered themselves with a rope, removed a panel from a false ceiling, then dropped to an office.

In the next room the only security guard in the building, Christos Potamitis, 25, was watching television. At 11:15 p.m., the two men burst into his office carrying a double-barreled shotgun and saying, "Don't move or we'll blow you away."

Many savings and loans run low on capital

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More than a quarter of the nation's 3,533 federally insurd savings and loans were running low on capital in the first half of 1982, a sizable increase from the end of last year, according to industry figures. Most of those institutions were losing money.

The figures, filed with the federal government and obtained by The Associated Press, showed that nationwide 971 S&Ls had reserves, or net worth, under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's regulatory requirement of 3 percent of liabilities.

In comparison, 694 out of 3,743 S&Ls had a net worth below the required level at the end of 1981, similiar industry figures showed.

Net worth is the excess of assets over liabilities. Mortgages held by an institution are considered assets while its savings accounts are liabilities because they can be pulled out at any time and also draw interest.

With the industry in its worst financial turmoil since the 1930s, a greater number of S&Ls have been running low on capital because they must pay more in interest than they are taking in from mortgages, many of which were granted at low rates in years past.

Congress approved an aid package this fall designed to help troubled institutions. But at the same time the bank board — chief federal regulator of the savings industry — changed rules that will make a large number of S&Ls ineligible for the help.

Federal regulators measure an institution's financial health on the basis of its capital cushion. Once an institution falls below a 3 percent cushion, regulators monitor its activities more closely and can take action to try to strengthen it.

However, Home Loan Bank Board officials caution against concluding that S&Ls falling below the requirement by the institutions' own reports are troubled ones in need of supervision. They note board rules provide leeway in determining if an institution meets the minimum.

The board does not make public the number or names of its problem S&Ls, and in many states revealing figures on individual savings and loans that contain errors can be illegal. The board does not take responsibility for the "completeness, accuracy, or adequacy" of the figures.

However, an overall picture can be gained from the board's figures, and to gain such a view the AP bought a computer tape from the bank board that contains reports filed by 3,533 federally insured associations on their finances in the first half of 1982.

Montgomery Data Systems Inc. of Kensington, Md., culled from the tape information on assets, income and liabilities for each S&L.

Some of the institutions pointed to in the record check have undoubtedly found healthier merger partners by now as part of the accelerating trend in the industry toward mergers. Federal insurance of S&Ls also means no saver has ever lost a cent in the failure of such an institution.

In the AP record check, of the 971 S&Ls below the 3 percent level, 875 were losing money. Savings and loans having a net worth below 2 percent of liabilities numbered 481, and 211 had reserves under 1 percent, the reports show.

Seventy-nine technically had no back-up cushion, although seven still reported making money in the first half of the year, probably because their mortgage payment income remained greater than savings interest.

A state breakdown of the figures shows that 416 of the S&Ls below the 3 percent cushion were in California, Florida, Illinois, Louisiana, New Jersey and Texas.

On the other side, the data showed six states where either no associations or only a small percentage had a cushion below 3 percent. Those were Alaska, Colorado, Idaho, North Carolina, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Congress' aid package for troubled S&Ls was adopted this fall, but the bank board's rule changes mean many will not be eligible for the help.

Parade sponsors are congratulated

The end result of hard work usually is success. And through much hard work and planning, Saturday's Big Spring Christmas parade was a stunning success.

Spearheaded by parade chairman Bill Nehls, the parade not only brought the usua! Yuletide sights to spectators but also managed to have several twists.

Miss Texas USA Lisa Allred, the Hardin-Simmons Cowboy Band, the 2nd Armored Division Band from Fort Hood, dignitaries from Indonesia and the Philippines and martial arts masters graced the parade, making it an outstanding event.

The local community also gathered behind the parade by building floats and getting involved with the planning and funding of the procession to make it a true team effort.

It makes us proud to see something like this brought off with true community spirit.

Oftentimes the Christmas season is a time of cynicism and plastic sentimentality, but the parade cut through that to put Big Springers in a resonant festive mood.

Hats off to the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, Nehls, area business, school and civic leaders and all those behind the scenes who helped to warm us with Christmas joy on a cold Saturday morning.

Billy Graham

Why should I believe?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I would really like to believe in God, but somehow I just seem to be filled with doubts. Why can't I be like most people and believe in God? — S.B.

DEAR S.B.: There are all kinds of reasons why some people find it hard to believe in God — but I am convinced that all of these reasons fade away when we are really open to God and his truth. The reasons for this is that God wants us to know him in a personal way, and he has done everything that is necessary for us to come to know him.

The first important thing you need to understand is that God has come down on this earth to show himself to us! We don't have to sit around and wonder what he is like (or even if he exists) — he has revealed himself to us. How did this happen? It happened in Jesus Christ, God's only Son, who came to show us what God is like. Do you want to know what God is like? I invite you to read carefully through the Gospels, and examine who Jesus Christ is and what he shows us about God.

When you do that, I am convinced you will make a surprising discovery — not only that God exists, but that he loves you and wants you to be part of his family! To believe in God is not only to believe in your mind that God exists, but to commit your life to him and trust him. By his resurrection from the dead, Christ demonstrated beyond doubt that he "was declared with power to be the Son of God" (Romans 1:4).

There is one thing that separates you from God — not only from believing in him, but from coming to know him in a personal way. That thing is your sin. And that is why Christ came — to take away your sin. Don't let your pride get in the way. Realize that you need God, and accept the fact that Christ died to make your forgiveness possible. Yes, it takes a step of faith to come to Christ, but it is not a blind leap in the dark. As you look at Christ, you will realize there is every reason for you to turn to him and commit your life to him.

The pull of soap

THE COUCH — Sitting here eating my stale ham-and-cheese sandwich and watching "The Guiding Light," while the news that soap operas have become America's favorite programs runs through my head.

I would love to make some clever comment about The Current Shallowness of Our Times but I cannot. For I too have felt the Fierce Pull of Soap. I am sitting here watching the talentless cast of "The Guiding Light" go through their paces — which is what I do everytime I make a stale sandwich and lie on the couch at this time of day.

Mind you I don't like it. In fact I loathe it; that is precisely why I watch it. When I come home for lunch after a hard morning at work, I want to loathe something.

WHAT COULD BE better than "The Guiding Light"? Look, here comes Morgan Nelson, an ignorant little 18-year-old who is the show's catch-all. Everything happens to Morgan and it's all bad. She's been kidnapped by pimps and has learned all sorts of little nasties about her mother. And that was just two episodes.

She was in a car wreck about a month ago. The guy who was driving had been drinking. When they wheeled her into the emergency room there was a lot of blood and a big bandage around her head. The doctors were talking brain surgery and "probable paralysis." Really awful stuff. But I tuned in two days later and Morgan was up and about without so much as a Band-aid. They have good doctors on "The Guiding Light."

Morgan has a friend called Nola. Nola's about as much fun as brain surgery, only a lot cheaper. Morgan and Nola aren't friends any more because Nola tried to steal Morgan's boyfriend. She was also responsible for Morgan's escort being drunk that night a month ago.

NEXT TO THAT, Nola's favorite pastime is sleeping around. That's what I'm watching right now. Only they're not sleeping. I don't know about you, but I think sex as a spectator sport is vastly overrated.

But back to the story. Now we see Morgan's mother, talking to a man who wants to see his wife Amanda, who is living in Morgan's mother's attic because she's losing her mind. Amanda was happily married and expecting a child when she found out that Morgan's mother was also her mother by a man she hates. Or something like that. Anyway Amanda's trying to get her head together.

Here's Allen Spalding, the show's big villain. Allen has a wife, Hope, Allen has been cheating on Hope since God made Man, but Hope is still telling her father that she's giving Allen "one more chance." Good for Hope. Better for Allen.

Hope's father by the way is a know-it-all lawyer named Mike (of course), who has his finger in everybody's business. He's quite a boring fellow, but up against the morons that populate this soap opera, he's the closest thing we have to hero. Good ol' Mike.

AND FINALLY the credit roll, accompanied by the mention of "The Guiding Light" being an Emmy award-winner. Emmy award-winner for what?! God only knows and He'd probably like to forget.

But I do have a clue as to why so many people make these video garbage-sacks a part of their day. After an hour of watching Morgan and her mother, Nola, Amanda, Allen, and Mike trying to stumble through an afternoon, I feel a whole lot better about going back to work.

Bonzo in the White House

It has been one of the best-kept secrets of the administration. When the Reagans first moved into the White House they brought "Bonzo," the President's favorite chimpanzee with them. Bonzo keeps to himself playing in the attic or down in the basement, and swinging on trees on the south side of the White House lawn at night when no one is around.

When the Reagans are alone in their upstairs living quarters, Bonzo might sit in the President's lap while they reminisce about their days on the old Warner Brothers lot.

Bonzo has never caused the President any embarrassment until recently.

What happened was that the Reagans had decided not to take Bonzo to California for their Thanksgiving holidays because he had a cold.

Bonzo was very angry about this and as soon as everyone in the White House was gone, he managed to get out of the attic where he was locked up, and started exploring the West Wing, a place he had never been before. The West Wing is where the Oval Office is and where all the President's top administration officials work.

The Chimp walked into an empty office and saw a computer standing in the corner. Bonzo hit a couple of keys and the words MORE BUDGET CUTS came up on the screen. This delighted him and he started to hit some more keys. The words UNEMPLOYED came up on the screen and Bonzo clapped his hands and hit the keys again. The words TAX UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS appeared and then Bonzo hit a communications key and the message was dumped into a computer that prints out White House Press releases. The printer immediately went to work: THE WHITE HOUSE ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT IT WAS CONSIDERING TAXING UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS AS A WAY OF GETTING PEOPLE TO LOOK FOR JOBS.

An AP man picked up the press release and sent it out on the wires and that night on all the news shows it was announced as the lead story of the day.

When the news got to the West Coast White House headquarters in Santa Barbara, everyone was confused as to what had happened. There had been some talk about taxing unemployment benefits, yet it was just one of many options the OMB was going to show the President. But since the word had been officially released, the staff assumed that someone had given the green light to send it out.

Larry Speakes, the White House press secretary, didn't want to look ignorant, as he confirmed to reporters that the unemployment tax was being given serious consideration.

Ed Meese, one of the President's top aides, had a tough decision to make. He could either defend the tax that afternoon or wake up the President. He opted for defending the tax rather than interrupt the President's nap.

In the meantime Bonzo was back at the White House having a great time. He got the hang of working the computer and pretty soon he was feeding it stuff like BUDGET CUT IDEAS FOR CHRISTMAS, TAX ALL MEDICAL BENEFITS AS INCOME, RECOMMEND USER TAX ON WHEELCHAIRS, PUT SURCHARGE ON SALVATION ARMY, DO AWAY WITH TAX SHELTERS FOR UNMARRIED MOTHERS, and ADD 10 PERCENT EXCESS PROFITS TAX FOR BLOOD BANKS.

After a while Bonzo got bored, and started jumping around. He saw a Telex machine which said HOTLINE TO THE KREMLIN and started hitting the keys. The screen lit up with HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO AMERICAN CAPITALISTS. THIS IS A TEST. Bonzo responded, ANDROPOV IS THE BIGGEST TURKEY IN THE SOVIET UNION. THIS IS NOT A TEST.

Fortunately, at that moment a Secret Service man walked into the West Wing office and grabbed Bonzo away from the hot line and gave him a banana. The agent then called the Western White House and told them that he caught Bonzo working the hot line.

Someone asked the agent to check the budget computer. When he reported what was on it, the pieces all started to fall into place concerning the unemployment tax announcement on Thanksgiving Day. The next morning the President had to assure everyone there would be no such tax and also had to send an apology to Andropov.

But when someone on its staff suggested they move Bonzo out of the White House and send him to the Old Actor's Home in Hollywood, President Reagan wouldn't hear of it. "He's the best friend I ever had," the President said. "And just because he was in show business doesn't mean he can't come up with some good ideas."

Spending cuts endanger intelligence

WASHINGTON — In the tricky business of espionage, the United States has — or should have — an enormous advantage over the Soviet Union: our superior technology. The intelligence-collective devices we have positioned around the world and in space are far ahead of anything the Russians have in that line.

But U.S. intelligence gathering has been falling behind the Soviets' for one simple, inexcusable reason: lack of funds. The result of this false economy by recent administrations — particularly the Jimmy Carter White House — is that our intelligence agencies may be effectively blind in a few years, groping helplessly for information on Soviet military activity.

The degrading of our intelligence technology is a shocking problem that needs to be talked about. At a time when hundreds of billions are being spent on military hardware, some of it of dubious value, it makes no sense to pinch pennies on the technological "eyes" that would tell our leaders where these costly new weapons can best be used.

Yet it is precisely the fact that technical gathering of vital intelligence is conducted in secret that has put the programs in jeopardy. It's always easier to cut budgets in areas the public can't see.

IN FAIRNESS, it should be pointed out that the Reagan administration has increased spending for technical intelligence. But some CIA sources argue that it's still not enough.

A top-secret review by a CIA oversight group issues this grave warning about one sophisticated information-collection system: "The failure of a single launch in the early to mid-1980s could negate all of our capability for (that system) for a protracted period of time." As for the space shuttle, from which some spy satellites are launched, the report added that "a failure of the space shuttle could be disastrous for the entire technical intelligence collection effort."

Who's to blame? The review says the collection systems were "grossly underfunded during the Carter years as continuation of budget cuts initiated during the Ford Administration." Until the CIA's budget increase under President Reagan, the agency was spending only about $1 billion a year on technical collection — an amount the document describes simply as "not adequate."

In 1977, President Carter halted production of the best satellite system for high-resolution (that is, extremely sharp) photo reconnaissance, and only a few such satellites remain in inventory. In another area, too sensitive to detail here, Carter economies left the CIA able to make only one launch per year through 1984. The result will be a five- to six-month interval when the United States will be blind.

Only two high-altitude telemetry satellites — which pick up Soviet communications — are in operation, and "both are dying," the oversight review warns.

An improved version of a fourth spy-satellite system is being prepared for a 1985 launch, but the CIA study warns: "Any problem in the space shuttle could prevent the launch of the improved system on schedule, and since there is no backup whatsoever, the United States could be completely blinded with no overhead photo-reconnaissance capability at all in the mid-1980s."

The report, a copy of which was obtained by my associate Dale Van Atta, emphasized that "all satellites in the new system must work or the United States will be blind."

Nothing that "ground and sea collection stations are grossly inadequate" as well, the report concludes that the only way to "catch up for losses" in our intelligence-collection arsenal from 1975 to 1980 is an annual increase of $1.5 billion for the program through 1985. Some of the report's recommendations are now being acted on, I am told.

DOUBLE FAULT: Tennis is so popular in the upper reaches of the Environmental Protection Agency that the taxpayers sometimes get trampled as top officials rush to the courts.

I've already reported that Deputy Administrator John Hernandez flew to San Francisco for a tennis tournament, squeezing a little official business in between sets. The EPA inspector general recently investigated that incident.

Hernandez' regular tennis partners include John Horton, an assistant administrator, and Lou Cordia, director of EPA's office of federal activities. They get together frequently for early-morning games at Hains Point, a few blocks from EPA headquarters, picking up a fourth player on the way.

John Crumrine, an agency employee who used to be an intern in Cordia's office, said that twice Cordia had him drive to Hains Point — in a government car, on government time — to make the required in-person reservations. "I was in sort of a 'go'fer' position," explained Crumrine. "I was used to doing that kind of work."

A former secretary of Cordia's, who wants to remain unidentified, said she too made tennis reservations for the boss and other EPA officials — by telephone at private tennis clubs.

Roughnecks finding God among rigs

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Bill Scott says images of atheistic roughnecks who work on Texas' oil derricks and worship only their next drink have proven unfounded since he and his friend started searching the oilfields for fellow Christians.

To prove his thesis, Scott and fellow worker David Ross have founded the Oilfield Workers for Christ, a first-of-its-kind group that offers godly solace for the rig workers, whose reputation formerly rested on ungodly actions.

The religious group, based in the heart of the Permian petroleum basin, first appeared here at this fall's biennial oil show, which attracted 500,000 spectators. The group's rally gave it widespread publicity and showed that the picture of the cussing, grease-smudged oilfield worker is out of focus, Scott said.

"Most think the oilfield worker is all dirty and trash, but they're not. What we're finding out is overwhelmingly to the contrary," he said.

Officials say the estimated 1.5 million to 2 million workers employed nationally by oil-related industry should not be categorized only as rowdies and rabble-rousers.

"Sure, they're cussers, fighters, carousers, hell-raisers and roughnecks, but they're also a good group — they're good people, too," said Ed Thompson, executive vice president for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland.

Scott, a 32-year-old father of three, also has discovered that efforts to bring Christ into the oilfield isn't an impossible task.

"Oh, I've been that way — foul-mouthed and telling dirty jokes. But I've reached the point in life where I decided either to be a Christian all the way or not at all," said Scott, a Southern Baptist.

Oilfield Workers for Christ members hope their fellow workers will try to find God on the rig as well as at church on Sunday.

Still, Scott acknowledges the effort to win over most of the oilfield workers will be difficult.

He and Ross say they often find resentment in the oilfield from workers who dislike being approached about religion.

"All we try to tell them is that, hey, Christ is in the oilfield," Scott said.

Oilfield Workers for Christ already has attracted about 1,000 supporters across the oil belt and has accumulated $10,000 from rig workers' contributions. The group also has acquired the services of Wanda Jackson, a country-turned-gospel singer who appeared on the group's behalf at the oil show rally.

Scott and Ross, who work for a petroleum service company called Taylor Power Tongs in Odessa, wear Oilfield Workers for Christ stickers on their hard hats.

While in the field, they often give away bumper stickers with Christian sayings such as "Try Our Bit ... the Bit Lord. Believe in the Lord."

They also have Oilfield Workers for Christ business cards.

"Now, we're not trying to force anything down anybody's throat," Scott said. "But we've found the guys want us to pray for them."

Ross, also a Southern Baptist, agreed: "We are finding there are godly men in the oilfield."

But the venture to bring religion into the oilfield has met with resistence because "any time you are trying to do something godly, there are going to be adversities," Ross said.

Scott said the idea to bring religion into their roughneck workplace came in messages from God. But both insist they have no intention of pushing anything on those who might react poorly to their drive.

The 700 Club, a nationally televised weekly religious program, already has approached the group about making an appearance on the show.

"The response has just been tremendous," Scott said. "This is unique, it's different, and we seem to be succeeding."

Utility fund for poor, elderly urged

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace has asked gas utilities to start a fund that would help pay heating bills for the elderly and poor this winter.

Wallace said in a letter to 60 utility executives that a number of other states have initiated energy assistance programs, and he added, "I ask a simple question — why not in Texas?"

Wallace said the average residential price per thousand cubic feet of gas has risen over the last eight years from $1.16 to $4.06, or 350 percent, and Texans face higher natural gas bills this year than ever before.

In such states as Arizona, Missouri, Minnesota, Louisiana and Tennessee, Wallace said, energy assistance programs started with contributions from utilities.

Utility employees are asked to chip in, and their contributions are matched on some basis by the company. The company seeks additional donations from its "able customers" by allowing them to overpay their bills by $1, $2 or $5.

"There is no reason why pipelines and producers associated with the utility's service could not also be contacted," Wallace said.

All contributions would be tax deductible.

He suggested that the money could be placed into an account — subject to independent audit — then placed under the control of a social service agency such as the Salvation Army or American Red Cross.

Prison reform group asks death change

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An Austin-based group that lobbies for prison reform announced Monday it would ask the 1983 Legislature to guarantee the families of death row inmates a chance to visit condemned convicts in the final hours before execution.

Charles Sullivan, director of Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants, said Texas Department of Corrections officials unfairly denied Charlie Brooks Jr.'s sons a final visit. Brooks was executed on Dec. 7.

"We believe that even many who support the death penalty would at least for the sake of his children have allowed the condemned man to say goodbye to his loved ones and to do this in a private and familial setting," said Sullivan.

Jittery robber shoots self

HOUSTON (AP) — Police were looking Monday for a robber who was so nervous he shot himself in the hand, wounded a cashier and then escaped with no money.

Robbery detective R.A. Armbruster said the robber laid a gun on the cashier's counter at a Pizza Hut restaurant after demanding money Saturday night. The gun went off and a bullet passed through the robber's hand before striking the cashier.

The robber fled, leaving a trail of blood that ended a short distance away.

The 21-year-old cashier was struck in the chest by the bullet and was listed in good condition at a Houston hospital. Police did not identify the cashier.

PRACTICING UP — Twelve-year-old ballet student, Tiffanie Evans, warms up prior to practicing for her number in the upcoming Y.M.C.A. Dance Classes Christmas Recital. The recital will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the City Auditorium. It will feature 35 performances by more than 50 students. No admittance fee will be charged, and the public is invited to attend. Students are instructed by Ora Burson with assistance from Janet Paige. Tiffanie has studied ballet for five years under Mrs. Burson.

Joan Harper acts as HCD service provider

Joan Harper recently was named service provider for the Highland Council for the Deaf, a civic organization which serves the deaf and hearing impaired individuals in Howard and surrounding counties.

HCD was incorporated with the Texas Commission for the Deaf in 1981 and is one of 19 councils sanctioned by the TCD.

To request interpreting services in medical, legal, economic and governmental situations, the hearing impaired person contacts Mrs. Harper, who in turn will assign an interpreter.

JOAN HARPER

She must match the skills and abilities of interpreters with the situation.

Mrs. Harper also relays messages from deaf individuals using telecommunication devices who wish to communicate with hearing people not possessing compatible devices. Hearing invididuals can leave messages for deaf persons who have telecommunications devices through Mrs. Harper.

Receiving information and referral calls is a third function of the service provider. A hearing person wishing to obtain information about deafness or telecommunication devices can contact Mrs. Harper. She can also assist a deaf person requesting information from businesses, industries and government agencies.

Mrs. Harper has regular office hours but is available on a 24-hour basis for emergency calls. Her office hours are Mondays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Tuesdays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Wednesday, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Thursdays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.; and Fridays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Her phone number is 267-6779.

HCD is governed by a board of directors consisting of 11 individuals representing parents of deaf children, professionals working with the deaf and deaf consumers.

The board includes Marcus Myers, president; Madeline Foster, vice-president; Delores Erlandson, secretary; Angel Ramos, treasurer; and Diane Linhart, Bonnie Matthies, Debbie Jones, Teresa Eckstein, and Beatrice Burke.

HCD meets the third Thursday of every month with the governing board and the general membership alternating. The next membership meeting is Jan. 20.

Dr. Donohue

Grandson has heart valve abnormality

Dear Dr. Donohue: My 5-year-old grandson has been diagnosed as having bicuspid valve. Can you please tell me what is done for this, and what is wrong with him? — M.M.

You are referring to an abnormality of the aortic valve, the one that prevents blood from backing up into the heart following the pumping of it out into the body (into the aorta, the large vessel emerging from the heart).

It's difficult for most people to visualize a heart valve. If you can visualize a round pie slit into three equal sections, you get a pretty good idea. As the heart pumps, the valve slits permit passage of blood, then close to prevent the backup. Cardiologists reading this will be blanching now.

As to your grandson's problem, instead of having his valve in three sections, there are only two. He has two cusps (slices) instead of three, hence his valve is described as bicuspid.

A biscupid aortic valve is the most common of heart abnormalities, occurring in about 2 percent of all newborns. On the scale of anatomical defects, that's a lot of people. I'd need a good deal more information about your grandson in order to comment about specific treatment. Is he having symptoms, and is his valve narrow in addition to being bicuspid? If so, he might need surgery to correct the anomaly. However, for many it may present no problem.

Another consideration involves possible future narrowing of the valve. In a bicuspid condition, it may not be able to withstand the pressures from the duties it must carry out. It might become scarred, calcified and narrowed. In some children, antibiotics are given before certain medical and dental procedures to ward off potential infection of the valve. I'm sure, however, that your grandson is in the good hands of doctors who know a great deal about bicuspid valves and about your grandson's case in particular.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have what is called a pingueculum on my left eye. Please define. — L.P.

A pingueculum is a benign growth of yellow tissue that appears on the white of the eye, next to the pupil. It usually causes no problem. You ask (another part of your letter) about diet. Diet will not alter it. The growths are usually permanent. Are you thinking about the yellowish deposits frequently occurring on the eyelids, usually near the nose? Those are different.

They are xanthelasma, a kind of fat deposit. And they can be removed. Sometimes they occur when blood levels of cholesterol or triglycerides are high. See the booklet "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly" for a discussion of that problem. Other readers may order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Mononucleosis is primarily a disease that hits young people. To learn more about it, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.o. Bo 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Mononucleosis: What It Is; What To Do." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters.

Dear Abby

Gay visitor for holiday

DEAR ABBY: To get right to the point, I'm gay. I am 30 and my lover (I'll call him Bill) is 36. We've lived together for three years — long enough to know that we belong together.

Last summer I introduced Bill to my parents and told them the truth about our relationship. My mother has accepted Bill, but my father barely tolerates him. It's a terrible strain for me to be in my father's company with Bill, although Bill has been very sweet and understanding.

My parents want me to come home for Christmas. (They live in another state.) They said, "Bill is welcome, too." He will accompany me if I ask him to, but I'm afraid Dad will act cool and unfriendly again.

I'd like to spend Christmas with my parents, but I also want to be with Bill. What should I do.

TOUGH DECISION

DEAR TOUGH: Since your mother appears more willing to accept the realities of your lifestyle, call her and ask her if she thinks your father will have difficulty handling a visit from you and Bill.

To subject someone you care about to a chilly reception, followed by a strained and uncomfortable Christmas, would be both unwise and unkind.

DEAR ABBY: I am an inmate at the Attica Correctional Facility in New York. Now that the Christmas season is upon us, I have a small favor to ask.

Will you please ask your readers to send a card to someone they know in prison? There are many of us here who would love to hear from our relatives and old friends. It would mean so much to know that we haven't been forgotten. A card or note during the holiday season would really give us a tremendous lift.

Merry Christmas, Abby, and may the good Lord bless you.

BILL

Tax tip: reduce income for 1982

By LOUISE COOk
Associated Press Writer

There are 19 tax-trimming days left in 1982.

If you act now, you can increase the size of the refund or decrease the amount you will owe on the federal income tax bill due on April 15, 1983.

Tax rates are going down on Jan. 1 as part of the 1981 tax cut. Assuming your income doesn't change drastically, you'll get to keep more of it next year.

That means you should try to reduce your taxable income for 1982 — when rates are higher — and increase it for 1983 — when rates are lower.

The easiest way for most people to cut taxable income is through itemized deductions. And careful timing can boost the value of those deductions.

Assume you're married, filing a joint return, and have a taxable income of $40,000. The marginal rate — the top rate you pay — is 39 percent for 1982. It's only 35 percent for 1983. Each additional $100 of deductions is worth $39 in 1982 and $35 in 1983.

Here are some things you can do to boost 1982 deductions:

Suppose you own a house. The monthly mortgage payment that is due early in January probably includes interest accrued in December, and that interest is a deductible item. If you pay your January bill by Dec. 31, you can deduct the interest on your 1982 return.

Tax planners at the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. also say that homeowners who want to trim their 1982 taxes should try to prepay their real estate taxes which are normally due in 1983. Check local authorities to see if they accept an early payment; most are more than willing, according to Thomas W. Crawford, a partner at Peat Marwick.

Consider bunching your charitable contributions for 1982 and 1983 into a single donation in 1982. The contributions are deductible in the year in which they are made. If the charity accepts credit cards — and many do these days — you can charge the contribution in December and take a deduction for 1982 — even if you don't actually pay the bill until 1983. The same holds true for credit card payments for other deductible items.

Review your medical expenses. This category of deductions is affected not only by the overall tax cut, but also by the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act. In 1982 you can deduct medical expenses which exceed 3 percent of your adjusted gross income. There is a separate deduction for health insurance premiums — you can deduct half of your premiums up to a maximum of $150; the remaining premiums are counted in with other medical expenses. Beginning in 1983, you will be able to deduct only those expenses which top 5 percent of your adjusted gross income; there will be no separate deduction for insurance premiums. If your medical bills for 1982 are at or near the 3 percent level, therefore, you should consider getting — and paying for — any needed treatment before the end of the year. If you're over the limit already, the extra expense will be completely deductible; if you're near the limit, it may be enough to push you into the deductible range.

Do you expect to owe money for 1982 state and local income taxes? Pay the balance due before Dec. 31 so you can claim credit for the payment on your 1982 return.

If you're planning a major purchase — like a car or an appliance — make it in this month and deduct the sales tax from your 1982 income. And while you're at it, do a few calculations to see if a lot of your expenditures are subject to sales tax. The amount you actually paid may be higher than the amount listed in the standard tables included with your return. Keep receipts so you can back up your claim.

If you traditionally get a Christmas bonus, for example, ask your boss to pay you the money in January instead of December so the income will be taxed at 1983 levels.

Burned toy center for poor opens with Santa

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A toy center for poor kids that burned to the ground was rebuilt in five days and more than 1,000 children climbed to Santa's knee Sunday for the 28th straight year.

"I can't even begin to express how I feel; I have tears in my eyes," said Sandy Mirsky, a volunteer of the local Police Athletic League, which has made its Christmas Village a holiday fixture in Bridgeport.

President Reagan called the village Sunday from Camp David, Md., congratulating Bridgeport Mayor Leonard Paoletta for the reopening.

"I called to thank and congratulate the mayor and the hundreds and hundreds of citizens of Bridgeport," Reagan said Sunday night in Washington. "They had gathered to reopen that institution which had been rebuilt in those few days."

Reagan, who made his comments at the taping of a Christmas television special, noted that many volunteers worked around the clock on the effort and added, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

More than 100 plumbers, electricians, carpenters and other volunteers went to work around the clock and scores of businesses from around the country rallied to help the Christmas Village after an arson fire leveled the chalet-style building Tuesday.

Toys valued at $11,000 were destroyed, but by Sunday more than 7,000 replacements had arrived.

More than 2,500 people were on hand for the reopening at 1 p.m. Hours earlier, workmen were still installing carpeting in the new 40-by-70-foot, six-room building as city crews cleared construction debris in falling snow and 20-degree temperatures.

A $1,000 reward was posted by the Connecticut Insurance Placement Facility for information leading to an arrest or conviction of the arsonist, and the company said it would deliver a $62,000 check for the loss of the insured building.

Santa sat on a donated red velvet upholstered chair in front of a $3,000 donated brick fireplace.

"Christmas trees are coming in from all over the state," Mrs. Mirsky said. "We have a real home Christmas with a braided rug in front."

The new toys included 1,500 from the Police Athletic League chapter in Torrington, which opened its own toy shop for disadvantaged kids Sunday.

A day before the reopening, toy companies, community organizations and individuals had donated enough toys to replenish about two-thirds of the original stock, Mrs. Mirsky said. Contributions came from as far away as San Francisco.

"We had a call from a book company in Florida that's sending up a thousand books ... people we never knew existed. It's really heartwarming," said former police Capt. George Wesche.

Included among the donatations was a 1½-foot granite monument that will be set in front of the new chalet. Its inscription reads: "Miracle at Christmas Village From the Concerned People of America 1982."

Brazil bank bailed out

NEW YORK (AP) — Brazil's government-controlled Banco do Brasil ran out of dollars to pay more than $175 million in foreign exchange commitments and was saved from default by several major New York banks, the New York Times said Monday.

At a special meeting at the New York Federal Reserve Bank last week, American banks including Morgan Guaranty, Chase Manhattan, Citibank, Banker's Trust and Manufacturers Hanover agreed to a credit arrangement for the Brazilian bank, the newspaper said, quoting unnamed sources.

The bank, the South American country's primary institution for financing international trade, had deposits of $27.1 billion at the end of 1980, the latest year figures are available. It is ranked the world's 56th-largest bank by American Banker, a trade publication.

Banking officials maintain that Brazil's economy, unlike others in Latin America, has been well run, the Times said.

The newspaper quoted banking sources as saying they were sure the Banco do Brasil is sound, and was being hurt by lack of confidence because Brazil's foreign debt, at $80 billion, is one of the largest in the world.

Brazil was granted a $1.2 billion U.S. loan early this month when President Reagan visited Latin America.

Because of its financial problems, there has been speculation about dropping the bank from the international clearing system in New York, which is known as the Clearing House International, or CHIPS, the Times said.

Dollar transactions throughout the world move through the clearinghouse.

New savings account yield will equal money-markets

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A savings and checking revolution begins this week for anyone who has at least $2,500.

New accounts will provide high interest — about double what you're getting now — and low risk. And you will have easy access to your money.

Starting Tuesday banks and savings and loan institutions will offer money-market savings accounts which will pay interest comparable to money-market mutual funds.

Beginning Jan. 5, they'll be offering high-interest SuperNOW checking accounts.

Unlike the money-market funds, both new bank accounts will be insured by the federal government for up to $100,000 each.

Federal officials have set certain regulations for the money-market and SuperNOW accounts, and individual institutions can, within limits, add their own rules. Some institutions, for example, may charge monthly service fees, while others may not. Some may compound interest daily; others may choose to do it less often.

Here is how the new savings accounts will work:

You must deposit at least $2,500; individual institutions can set higher minimums if they want. At least one New York City bank requires an initial deposit of $5,000.

There is no ceiling on interest; each institution is free to set its own rate. The rates are expected to be about the same as those paid by money-market funds and usually will be tied to what are called "market interest rates" — the rates paid on things like government securities. James Kendall of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions said he expected initial rates of about 10 percent. The current interest on conventional passbook savings accounts is a maximum of 5¼ percent at commercial banks and 5½ percent at savings institutions.

Some banks and S&Ls offered premiums to customers who signed up for money-market accounts in advance and advertised initial rates of up to 11 percent to lure depositors.

The interest rate will fluctuate — depending on market conditions. Government regulations prohibit financial institutions from guaranteeing the money-market account rate for more than one month. Some banks and S&Ls will change the rate weekly; a few will change it every day. Each institution will set its own rate; some will tie the rate to a specific financial index, but others won't. The rate theoretically could be the same for several months if market conditions are stable, but there are no guarantees.

You can take your money out and close the account at any time, subject to restrictions imposed by the individual institution.

You can make withdrawals in several ways. There is no limit on the number or size of withdrawals you can make in person. You can make up to six other withdrawals each month — by check, by telephone or by the kind of preauthorized agreement you sign for an automatic bill-paying service. No more than three withdrawals may be by check.

There is no limit on the number of deposits you can make. Nor is there a limit on the size of deposits. Unless the institution has its own rules to the contrary, you can switch money from existing accounts into a money-market account by telephone.

If your balance falls below $2,500, the interest rate will drop. Some banks will pay no interest at all. The maximum interest allowed by the government on money-market account balances of less than $2,500 is 5¼ percent.

Because of the fluctuating interest rates, money-market accounts will mean some uncertainty for the consumer. You won't know what the interest rate will be for longer than one month.

Based on current market conditions, however, the money-market account will give savers the chance to earn substantially more than the current maximum on passbook accounts which is the 5½ percent paid by savings and loans.

Here are some examples:

Suppose you have exactly $2,500. At 5½ percent, compounded daily, you earn $141.34 in interest in one year.

Take the same $2,500. A 10 percent rate, compounded daily, would give you $262.89 in interest in one year.

Today's gifts may be tomorrow's pain

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Today's gifts can turn into tomorrow's debts if you're not careful with your Christmas shopping.

"In general, people are very responsible in managing their credit, but the probability that you could get in trouble is higher at Christmas," said A. Charlene Sullivan, the associate director of the Credit Research Center at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind.

Ms. Sullivan said most people carry around several credit cards. If you spend to the limit on all the cards, "you're going to be in big trouble after Christmas," she said.

Ms. Sullivan noted that more than a dozen states have recently raised the maximum allowable interest rate on credit card debts; a few states have eliminated usury ceilings completely. "With higher rates, financial institutions may make more credit available," she said.

Higher interest rates could leave consumers owing more than they expect. But the increased charges also could motivate people to pay more quickly.

Ms. Sullivan said about 40 percent of people who use charge cards do not incur any interest at all; they pay their bills, in full, each month and use the cards for convenience rather than credit.

She also said that fears about the economy and unemployment have led people to restrict their use of credit and said that the increase in outstanding consumer credit so far this year generally has been lower than the increase in consumer prices.

"More and more people who you wouldn't expect to be losing their jobs are worried," Ms. Sullivan said. "When your job looks uncertain, borrowing against future income can be pretty risky."

Figures from the Federal Reserve Board show that the annual rate of growth in outstanding consumer credit during the third quarter of 1982 was 2 percent, down from a 4¾-percent growth rate in the second quarter. Extensions of consumer credit during the July-to-September period equaled 15.1 percent of disposable income, down from 16.3 percent in the previous three months.

How can you stay out of trouble?

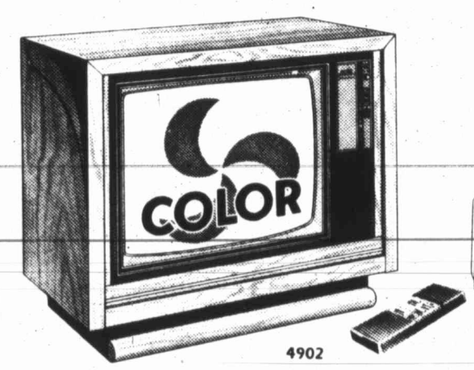

"A good rule of thumb to keep from overextending yourself is to limit the total monthly payments required on credit obligations (not counting mortgage payments) to 15 percent of monthly after-tax income," Ms. Sullivan said.

Keep track of the number of credit cards you're using. The minimum payment required on each one may be small — $15 or 20 — but the total can add up quickly. Ms. Sullivan said "many card issuers recently have raised the size of the minimum monthly payment, making the decision to carry balances on several cards a significant burden on the household budget."

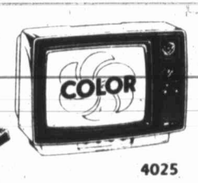

You may be heading for problems, Ms. Sullivan said, "when you find yourself borrowing from one source to pay another source."

In-flight psycho-dramas

Who wants horror films in winged flight?

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

OVER THE ROCKIES IN THE DARK AT 32,000 FEET — "In a few moments we shall begin our in-flight movie ... please lower your window shutters for the convenience of passengers who might want to enjoy today's feature presentation: 'Return of the Killer Slime.'"

Here we go again. Another two hours imprisonment in a dark flying tunnel. Farewell snow-tufted Canadian Rockies and the shimmering silver of Banff and Lake Louise. Hello Giant Sludge or Man-Eating Slime or whatever is the torture being administered in the dark today by our tyrannical flight attendants.

I have nothing against Jamie Lee Curtis or Anthony Perkins or any other habitues of Hollywood's horror sets. I probably would enjoy having any of them sit next to me on a cross-country flight, especially the delectable Miss Curtis. I just don't relish eyeballing their hysteria for a couple of hours in captivity when I could be enjoying the superb passing panorama below or dealing with my own palm moistening tensions as we are buffeted about by head winds and clear air turbulence. These always seem more menacing in darkness split only by the flickering movie screen and the eerie glow of the FASTEN SEATBELTS sign.

The federal aviation bureaucrats are going to have to do something about the arrogance of the airlines in forcing in-flight films upon the passengers or dooming those who spurn the Howard Cosell ear muffs to sit in solemn silence in a dull dark dungeon. They have successfully dealt with the smoking menace aloft. Airlines are required by law to provide a protected area for each and every passenger desirous of avoiding noxious nicotine fumes. As a result, smoking sections on domestic aircraft have shrunk almost to the vanishing point. Boeing may soon be building benches on the tail of the fuselage to accommodate the hard core who do not heed the surgeon general's warning, an outdoor area rather like the observation deck on the old Broadway Limited.

The ostracism of the smoker aloft has been so ruthlessly enforced thatthe puffer's plight has even inspired a sad country and western song in Dan Jenkin's latest novel "Baja Oklahoma":

"Lord, I hate to let you go.
Your body drives me wild.
... But I'm a smoking window,
And you're a non-smoking aisle."

There you have it, a new American tragedy — Tristan and Isolde cut off in the springtime of their love by the computer at the check-in counter.

Well, those of us who would prefer to read a book, look out the window or finger a pocket calculator must have some rights at 32,000 feet. This whole business of airline seating needs some careful looking into by the Congress. Why should only non-smokers be protected?

Actually I don't mind sitting next to a hacking, wheezing chain smoker as much as I dread being seated beside a crying infant or, far worse, a drunk on a crying jag.

Surely there must be some way for the seat selection computer to spare me from talkative Texans, lacrimose ladies en route to Las Vegas for a divorce, electronics software salespeople of either sex, dudes in three-piece suits scribbling diligently on a yellow pad (they always lay a guilt trip on you when they refuse the proferred cocktails), losing high school teams returning from a championship game, Army inductees going off to camp.

Some veteran travelers of my acquaintance aggressively avoid sitting near senior citizens on a package tour. I find their conversation fascinating. Most of them have been everywhere and have their own unique view of where it's coming from.

On a recent flight to New York from Seattle, I overheard these snippets of random dialogue that beat anything coming from the sound track of the in-flight flick:

"If you really believe in reincarnation, Clyde, what do you think our nephew will come back as? He makes boomerangs."

"No wonder the panda is an endangered species. Wifey's only in the mood for love three days out of the year, the rest of the time she pleads a headache high up there in the Himalayas."

"We were embarrassed, but our Chinese guide was delighted when Bert gave him that spoon and fork he lifted from the Erewon Hotel dining room in Bangkok. That Bert is a panic."

On my last three flights, I have found myself sitting next to a shy, subdued but eventually talkative preteen-ager traveling alone. All three journeys loom now in memory as among the saddest I have taken in many years. My seatmates were all the lonely refuse of recent divorces, packed aboard a plane to comply with court ordered visitation rights. A pretty blonde girl with enormous amber eyes was on her way to Charleston, S.C. to visit her father and his new girlfriend, who were going to take her on a fishing trip. "I suppose it will be fun," she said, more to the rain splattered window than to me, "but when we were all together you didn't have to do anything special to be happy. You just were."

The 11-year-old boy who took the adjoining seat out of Minneapolis had been put aboard by his grandmother on a discovery flight to discover whether he would prefer living with his mother and her new husband in Port Angeles or wait until his father in St. Paul had sorted out his lifestyle. "They both say they want me," he blurted out, "but only grandma really loves me, so I don't care how it all comes out."

Then there was the pert 9-year-old seasoned traveler, who had just come from visiting her father and half brother in Boston and was putting on her makeup, waiting for the stewardess to put her aboard a connection to Omaha, where she would meet her new stepsisters. "Visiting Daddy," she sighed, "killed the summer. I wish the'd sent me to camp like last year."

Quarrel with actress described

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Dominique Dunne and a former boyfriend quarrele outside her house just before she was found strangled in a neighbor's driveway, a friend of the actress has testified.

David Packer testified he was inside Miss Dunne's home when he heard screams. He said he looked outside and saw John Sweeney "on his knees with his back towards the street. I locked eyes with him and he said to call the police."

The testimony came Monday at a hearing for Sweeney, Miss Dunne's former boyfriend, who is accused in the fatal attack Oct. 30. Testimony was to resume today.

Miss Dunne, 22, who appeared in the Steven Spielberg movie thriller "Poltergeist," never regained consciousness. She died Nov. 4 after five days on life-support systems.

Sweeney, 26, a former day chef at the fashionable Ma Maison restaurant, had moved out of the home he shared with Miss Dunne shortly before her death. The actress was killed during an argument over Sweeney's wish to move back in, Packer said.

Packer, a 20-year-old actor who said he shared agents with the victim, told Judge Pro Tem David Kidney that he went to Miss Dunne's West Hollywood home the night of the attack to discuss a film script.

He said the actress showed him boxes she had received that day from Sweeney containing pumpkins, a face carved in chocolate and three pink flowers.

"She told me she was going to tell him she could not live with him any further," Packer said.

Shortly after Packer arrived, Sweeney knocked on the door and told Miss Dunne "We have to talk about this," Packer said. Miss Dunne went outside, and several minutes later, Packer said he overheard the pair arguing.

"I heard Mr. Sweeney say, 'but this is my house also' in a voice loud enough so I could hear it," Packer said.

He said Miss Dunne's sobbing reply was unintelligible. Soon after, Packer said he heard a "banging" noice and then screams.

Senate likely to vote for MX

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Supporters and opponents of the MX missile agree that the Senate is likely to go along with President Reagan and vote money to buy the new nuclear weapons.

"I think we are close to working something out," Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told reporters Monday after he and other senators met with Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn.

But Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., leading opponent of the MX and Reagan's controversial "dense pack" basing method, said he still has the votes to deny money for the missile until Congress approves a basing plan.

The dense pack method would house, within a 20-square-mile area near Cheyenne, Wyo., all 100 of the missiles Reagan says are central to improving the nation's strategic nuclear force.

Baker said earlier, "I think one way or the another we will have funding of the MX."

A vote on money to build the first five of the 100 missiles Reagan wants is likely later this week when the lame-duck Senate considers the Pentagon spending bill.

Reagan's MX procurement request was defeated by the House last week but he has lobbied hard to win support in the Senate. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said a victory is "within reach."

Tower and other administration supporters have proposed a compromise which would allow the money to be spent unless Congress vetoed it within a specific period of time.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., an opponent of the missile, conceded Monday that "It is not likely we can achieve a complete cutoff of the program this year."

At a news conference in Madison, Wis., Cranston said he will try "to kill the MX missile program once and for all" when Congress meets again next month.

The "real question," Baker said, is whether the Senate will bar the Pentagon from spending $988 million to buy the first five missiles until a basing plan is approved.

Senators urge natural gas program

WASHINGTON (AP) — After ten years and $1 billion, Congress is again deciding if it should build the Clinch River breeder reactor.

The House is scheduled to vote today on whether to continue appropriations for the $3.6 billion nuclear plant as part of a stopgap bill to keep providing money at last year's levels to federal water and energy projects.

A separate vote aimed at cutting off financing for Clinch River was approved late Monday by the House Rules Committee.

An attempt in the Senate to stop funds for the embattled project at Oak Ridge, Tenn., failed by one vote last September. But Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, the project's biggest booster, has promised Senate opponents another chance this week to cut off its money.

Despite former President Carter's opposition to Clinch River and orders not to proceed with its construction, Congress voted three times during his administration to keep spending money on it. Those funds were used primarily to complete the plant's designs and manufacture some of its components.

President Reagan reversed Carter's nuclear policies and vowed to complete the project when he entered office. But since then, environmentalists opposed to Clinch River have been joined by conservative groups such as the Heritage Foundation and the National Taxpayers Union who view it as a "boondoggle" subsidy to the utility and nuclear industries.

So far, construction has yet to start on the plant.

The opponents — led by Reps. Lawrence Coughlin, R-Pa., and Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., in the House and Sens. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., in the Senate — contend that utilitiies should be picking up more than a 10 percent share of the project's cost.

The also say new discoveries of uranium to power conventional light-water reactors, along with decreases in energy demand brought about by a worldwide recession make the breeder technology unnecessary.

Other opponents, including Carter, are more worried that the plutonium Clinch River uses will be diverted into making atomic weapons if other countries decided they want breeder reactors, too.

The Reagan administration, utilities and American reactor manufacturers argue that the United States already is behind France, Germany and the Soviet Union in developing breeder power plants and will be unable to compete with them when the technology is needed to meet energy needs in the 21st century.

Cowboys smoke Oilers in shootout

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Dallas' Danny White was in quarterback heaven Monday night.

First, White was playing against the porous Houston Oilers defense, and second, he had Cowboys' receivers fighting for his passes.

White burned the Oilers with three touchdown passes, two to Butch Johnson, en route to a 37-7 victory that assured the Cowboys of a record straight 17th winning season.

Dallas' computer-efficient offense started sluggishly, but Johnson caught two circus touchdown passes in the second quarter and for the rest of the game Cowboys dominated the hapless Oilers.

"When you have got two receivers who are hungry for the ball, that's heaven for a quarterback," White said.

White referred to Johnson's second TD catch in which he outmaneuvered Cowboy receiver Tony Hill to catch the pass.

"It was pure luck when I caught it," Johnson said. "I have to take every opportunity I get and make everything of it that I can."

Dallas safety Michael Downs also smoked the Oilers with an 86-yard fumble return in the third quarter.

There was no denying the obvious for Oiler Coach Ed Biles.

"The best team won tonight," Biles said. "But I thought we played well.Certainly we didn't play as capable as we could play. At certain points in the game, we almost played too hard."

Houston quarterback Archie Manning, sacked five times against the New York Giants a week ago and six times by the Cowboys, said, "We got behind and they knew what we were going to do and that front four just came after us."

White, the NFC's No. 3 passer, completed 10 passes in a row at one stretch and finished the game completing 21 of 27 passes for 279 yards.

The underdog Oilers stunned Dallas in the opening minutes with a 54-yard touchdown bomb from quarterback Archie Manning to wide receiver Mike Renfro for a 7-0 Houston lead. It was all downhill after that for Manning who was sacked six times for 39 yards in losses.

By halftime the Cowboys led 17-7 on White's touchdown shots to Johnson and the first of Rafael Septien's three field goals, a 22-yarder.

Johnson leaped high in the corner of the end zone and stretched to remain in bounds with his 21-yard catch that tied the score with 13:20 to go in the half. Johnson beat Oiler cornerback J.C. Wilson on the catch.

Septien booted a 22-yard field goal with 8:27 to go giving Dallas the lead for good. With 31 seconds left in the half, White scrambled out of the pocket, flipped into the end zone where Johnson and wide receiver Tony Hill both leaped for the ball and Johnson came down with it for the score.

Downs took the wind out of any Houston hopes with 1:48 left in the third quarter with his scoring run and White tacked on his third TD shot, a 46-yarder to Newsome with 14:41 left in the game. A 53-yard field goal by Septien late in the final quarter completed the scoring.

The Oilers dropped to a 1-5 record with the loss.

The Cowboys started their first-half surge after a series of three fumbles, two by the Oilers.

The Oilers drove to the Cowboy 32 before Earl Campbell fumbled and Dallas tackle Randy White recovered. Tony Dorsett fumbled back to Houston with Mike Reinfeldt returning the miscue seven yards to the Cowboy 34. But three plays later, Manning and Campbell collided on a handoff and Cowboy safety Mike Downs recovered at the Dallas 36.

The Cowboys moved ahead 20-7 late in the third quarter on Septien's 36-yarder that came after White's incomplete pass ended a string of 10 straight completions.

The Oilers were angered moments earlier when defensive tackle Malcom Taylor apparently intercepted a pass by White. Officials ruled, however, that White's forward progress had been stopped prior to the pass, setting up the field goal.

The Oilers fought back later in the quarter, driving to the Cowboy 7-yard line before disaster struck again.

Facing second down and three, Allen, a rookie from Hawaii, fumbled on a sweep and Downs picked up the ball without breaking stride and race for the touchdown with 1:48 left in the quarter.

Newsome, who caught three passes for 92 yards, turned his third reception into a touchdownearly in the fourth quarter, breaking three tackles en route to the end zone with 14:41 to play.

Campbell had another disappointing rushing performance, gaining 17 yards on seven carries. Dorsett left the game briefly with a twisted ankle, but returned in the second half and finished with 65 yards on 18 carries.

Manning finished with 12 completions on 33 attempts for 199 yards and one touchdown.

Missed chances haunt Lady Steers

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

When a team has its chances to score and doesn't, chances are the missed opportunites will haunt it in the end.

The Big Spring Lady Steers learned that lesson Monday night.

Blowing a 12-point in the second and falling behind by 12 in the final period, Big Spring hit just three of 15 foul tries in the last period and dropped a 64-54 nondistrict decision to the Midland Bulldogs in the BSHS gym.

The loss drops Big Spring to 6-7 for the year and propels Midland to an 8-5 mark. The varsity is idle until next Monday when it travels to Odessa to open District 4-AAAAA play against Permian.

For a quarter and a half, Big Spring looked unbeatable. With 5:05 left in the first half, Paula Spears hit a shot from the lane to give the Lady Steers a 25-13 lead. But like falling off a steep cliff, it was downhill for that point.

Midland spent the remainder of the quarter closing the gap and Orvetta Johnson's three-point play with four seconds left before intermission boosted the Bulldogs into a 29-29 deadlock at half.

If the second had gone bad for Big Spring, the third quarter was a disaster. Sally Seal's bucket underneath put Midland ahead 33-31 with 6:20 to go and the closest Big Spring got the rest of the game was 39-38 on a layup by Monette Wise.

A technical foul on Shell Rutlege for the slapping the ball while a player was trying to toss it inbounds began the fatal slide.

Penny Griffin hit the bonus shot and Midland reeled off a 12-1 spurt that gave the visitors a 52-39 lead after three quarter.

Despite the comfortable lead, the Bulldogs did everything in their power to let Big Spring rally. The Lady Steers pushed the ball inside hoping for the short-range jumper or foul. They got both but could convert on neither.

Fifteen times Big Spring shot a foul shot. Three went in. There were 12 misses and the Lady Steers lost by 10.

"It's been our downfall all year," coach Annette Fowler moaned after the game. "It's not like we don't practice them. I don't understand it. I don't think they have confidence in their free throws. They better get some quick."

Meanwhile, when the foul weren't falling, nothing else was either. On two separate occasions, Big Spring had four shots at the hoop and came away with nothing.

The score got as close as 58-51 with 2:25 to play on a bucket by Rutledge — who finished with a game-high 24 points — but Johnson scored downcourt and Griffin hit moments later to seal Midland's come-from-behind win.

The big difference in the game — besides the forgettable evening at the charity line — were the presses employed by both teams. Midland made it difficult for Big Spring to move downcourt. Going the other way, Big Spring couldn't contain the quick Bulldogs in the trap and sharp passes led to easy bucket after easy bucket.

"I have to get them in better condition," Fowler added to her list of "Things to Do Tomorrow in Practice." "They ran out of gas. I think they tried hard but they just got too tired."

When the Lady Steers were fresh, they were awesome.

Midland looked as inept in the first 12 minutes of the game as the Steelers did Sunday against Buffalo. Big Spring roared off to an 8-1 start and led 16-9 after one quarter.

Sylvia Randle and Rutledge scored to open the second quarter to give BSHS an 11-point led. That grew to a peak of 12 on a shot by Spears. But Johnson stepped into the game for Midland and scored eight points in the last four minutes to rally the Bulldogs back into contention.

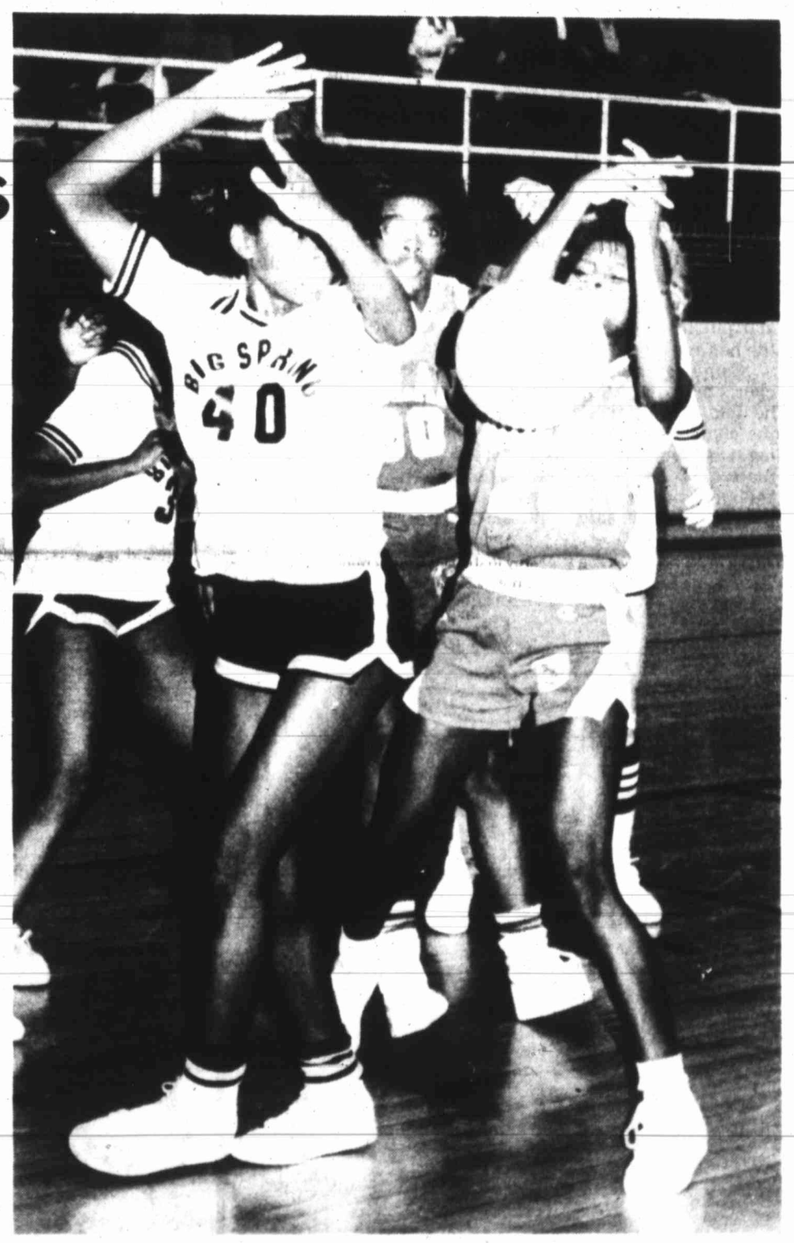

Joining Rutledge in double figures was Randle with 11. For the night, Big Spring hit 10 of 25 foul shots as Midland was charged with 21 fouls. If it's any consolation to Fowler, her team fouled just 11 times.

Sheila Christian led Midland with 16 points while Johnson added 14 and Rebecca Caton put in 10 from the two-foot range.

In the junior varsity game, Lydia Jackson took a long pass and hit a layup with 10 seconds to play to lift Midland to a 50-48 victory over the Lady Steers.

Down 40-36 entering the final quarter, Big Spring was working for the last shot when a 15-foot jumper fell short. Midland rebounded and Jackson raced downcourt, took the pass and hit the game-winner.

Her shot spoiled three good nights for Big Spring. Adrianne Allen poured in 17 points, Delia Correa 14 and Tris Clemons 13 — good for 44 of the team's 48 points. Lisa Bowers had 16 for Midland.

WHERE'D THAT COME FROM — Big Spring's Paula Spears (40) and Midland's Penny Griffin (24) look amazed as the ball bounces loose between them during last night's game. Looking on is Midland's Orvetta Johnson (30). Missed opportunities haunted the Lady Steers as they lost the game.

Walker now an off-field hero

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Heisman Trohy winner Herschel Walker of the University of Georgia now is being credited with heroism off the football field.

Walker, who was jogging here Sunday morning, came upon a two-car accident and helped rip the door open on a smoking, overturned car and pull Jessie Dye, 67, of Watkinsville to safety, authorities said.

"I heard the crash and ran outside," said Ted Shanks, who lives near the site of the accident. "At first I didn't even notice it was Herschel. I screamed for my wife to call an ambulance.

"Then," Shanks said, "Herschel told me to grab the door handle. He ripped the door (open) and glass shattered everywhere. And he pulled her out of the car."

Ms. Dye was treated and released at a local hospital.

Walker was taking a final exam Monday and was not available for comment.

But Athens Police Chief Everett Price, who talked

HERSCHEL WALKER
...hero on, off field

with Walker on Monday, said the athlete "was not trying to make a big issue or big to-do about it. He was just there, and he assisted.

Virginia, Kentucky hold top spots in AP poll

By The Associated Press

After strong performances over the weekend, the Virginia Cavaliers and Kentucky Wildcats continue to hold their ground as the nation's 1-2 teams in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Cavaliers held onto the No. 1 spot for the third straight week after a 68-63 victory over Georgetown Saturday night, pulling down 56 of the 61 first-place votes from a panel of the nation's sports writers and sportscasters.

The Cavaliers, 6-0, rolled up 1,215 points overall to 1,124 for Kentucky. The runner-up Wildcats, 5-0, received the remaining five first-place ballots after an impressive 76-57 triumph over Illinois.

Two teams appeared in the Top Twenty for the first time this season — Syracuse in the No. 16 spot and West Virginia at No. 20. The Orangemen, 6-0, profited from a 92-87 victory over Houston Saturday. West Virginia, 5-0, moved into the elite group after beating Ohio State 69-67 in double overtime.

Georgetown, 6-1, last week's No. 3 team, slipped into a tie for fifth place with Indiana, 6-0, with 896 points. The Hoosiers, 6-0, moved up one spot after beating Wyoming 78-65.

This week's No. 3 team, Memphis State, 6-0, polled 986 points after an 80-62 victory over East Tennessee State over the weekend.

Ali proposes charity bout in memory of Kim

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Muhammad Ali, three-time world heavyweight champion, has proposed holding a charity exhibition in the memory of Kim Duk-koo, the Korean boxer who suffered a fatal injury during a bout in Las Vegas last month, the Korea Boxing Commission spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said South Korea's sports ministry was informed of the proposal throught the U.S. Embassy here, which had been notified of a planned tour by Ali.

The spokesman said Ali had suggested the exhibition be held sometime after Christmas to help raise funds for a boxing foundation commemorating the late Korean boxer.

He said that Ali offered to donate 35 percent of the earnings from the fight to the foundation.

The 23-year-old Kim was pronounced dead four days after he was knocked unconscious in the 14th round of a World Boxing Association lightweight title fight against Ray Mancini on Nov. 13.

Basketball's Alabama doesn't need shot clock

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

With eight NCAA Division I basketball conferences featuring a shot clock this season, it's more prevalent than ever before.

But Alabama State and South Carolina State didn't need one, after scoring a total of 248 points between them Monday night.

"We broke loose and played the way we're capable of," said Alabama State Coach James Oliver after a wide-open 135-113 victory over South Carolina State. "We were due to break loose. After having a couple of tough games, we really put it together for our first game back home."

Alabama State, playing in Division I for the first time this year, came off a 99-76 loss to Georgetown last week when the Hoyas were ranked No. 3. The Hornets face another tough opponent Wednesday night when they play No. 13 Arkansas.

Lewis Jackson led the Hornets with 43 points and Melvin Armstrong scored 32, while Michael Freeney had a school-record 17 assists asAlabama State improved its record to 5-1.

Alabama State led at the half 60-45 and the Bulldogs, despite shooting a sizzling 88.6 percent from the free throw line, were never able to close the margin. The Hornets led by as many as 25 points in the second half.

Jackson said Alabama State's game with Georgetown gave him confidence.

"I felt confident when I went out on the floor tonight," Jackson said. "I just had all the shots open tonight and took them. I felt like I had the hot hand, so I kept shooting."

Eighth-ranked Missouri, the only Top Twenty team in action Monday night, beat Eastern Illinois 76-61 as Steve Stipanovich scored 21 points.Stipanovich's three-point play gave Missouri a 14-2 lead seven minutes into the game, and the Tigers surged to a 41-24 lead at halftime.

Eastern Illinois outscored Missouri 18-11 early in the second half to close the gap to 54-42 with 11:48 left, but the Panthers were unable to get closer than 10 points the rest of the way. Tim Dykstra led the Panthers with 16 points.

"They're a great basketball team," said Eastern Illinois Coach Rick Samuels. "They seem to always take advantage of the smallest miscues. We felt like we had an outside glimmer of a chance to win, but we would have had to play our very best game."

In other action, Sam Vincent scored 22 points, including crucial free throws down the stretch, as Michigan State beat Cincinnati 70-69; Peter Williams, Pace Mannion and Chris Winans combined for 34 points as Utah handed Weber State its first loss of the season, 62-52; Wayman Tisdale scored 25 points to lead the Oklahoma Sooners to a 99-75 rout over Idaho State and Anthony Welch scored 28 points, including two free throws with 15 seconds to go, to lead Illinois to a 79-77 double-overtime victory over Vanderbilt.

'Big fish' goes to White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Although Chicago White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk denies it, club owners credit him with being the bait that caught "the big fish," 27-year-old left-hander Floyd Bannister, the most pursued pitcher in major league baseball's re-entry draft.

White Sox owners Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn announced Monday night that Bannister, the American League strikeout leader last season, had agreed to a five-year contract with the Sox.

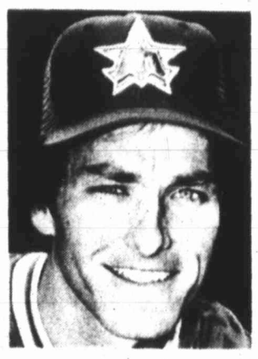

Although Reinsdorf and Einhorn declined comment on the terms of the pact, the Chicago Sun-Times reported that it was for $4.5 million.

"We weren't the high bidder," said Reinsdorf at an airport news conference.

"I think that this was the right deal for Floyd, and I don't think it was the finances that got him here," Reinsdorf said.

Einhorn agreed, saying "We didn't come close to matching the financial offers of two other clubs.

Bannister was selected by a total of 16 teams in November's free-agent draft in New York and was first-round selection of 10 of the participating teams. The Pierre, S.D., native led the American League in strikeouts this year, finishing the 1982 campaign with 209 in 247 innings and walked only 77 while pitching for the Seattle Mariners last season.

Bannister chose the Sox over the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, the Kansas City Royals and the Philadelphia Phillies.

Fisk played down the importance of his talks with Bannister.

"I may have helped persuade him to be here," said Fisk, who attended the news conference at O'Hare International Airport, "but I didn't have to negotiate his contract."

"I told him it's pitchers like him who make catchers like me look good," Fisk added.

Bannister finished the 1982 season with a 12-13 record and a 3.43 earned run average in a total of 247 innings pitched. He averaged seven strikeouts per game and had three shutouts in 35 games started with Seattle.

Roland Hemond, White Sox executive vice president and general manager, said Bannister will be arriving in Chicago later this week and is expected to sign a formal contract Wednesday.

The agreement came after week-long discussions in Hawaii and Los Angeles between Bannister ad his agent, Tom Reich, and White Sox management. Fisk was the last Chicago representative to speak with Bannister before the agreement was reached, Einhorn said.

Fisk, who said he knows Bannister only professionally, said the pitcher was most interested in the Sox' chances of being pennant contenders in 1983, the strength of their bullpen and pitching conditions at the home park.

"Comiskey Park's a pitcher's ballpark," Fisk said he told Bannister. As for the chances of the Sox being in contention: "It was a matter of five outs, one way or other, all year long" in 1982, he said. The catcher also said he praised the Chicago bullpen and pointed out that the Sox had some 40 saves last season.

Bannister pitched only seven games in the minors before being the first player in the nation picked in the June 1976 free-agent draft as the top choice of the Houston Astros. In his rookie season, 1977, he was 8-9 and finished the campaign with four straight wins.

He was traded to the Mariners for shortstop Craig Reynolds in December 1978. He has a career mark of 6.5 strikeouts per game.

Bannister's wife, Jana, said the reason for the couple's choice of the White Sox over the three other major contenders was the Chicago club's apparent interest in Bannister "as a person, not a commodity."

She added, "We had no idea what direction we were going in when he got into this. But we met with their owner, Mr. Reinsdorf, and Floyd's pitching coach at Seattle last year, Dave Duncan, and we've talked with so many others from the White Sox.

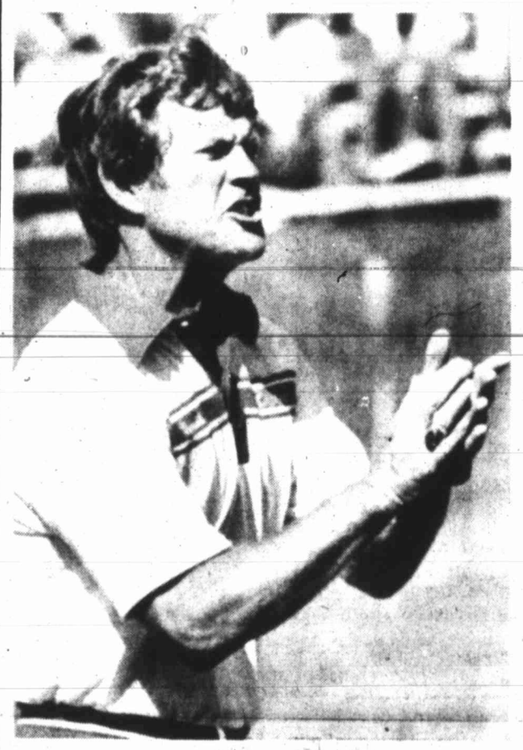

"Floyd feels he is fitting into a family situation in Chicago. His sister (Linda Carey of suburban LaGrange) is there, and our neighbors from Scottsdale (Ariz.) just moved there. We're not flashy, outgoing people, so having close friends around is very important to us."

Vermeil ponders Eagles' fall

PHILADELPIA (AP) — After a long tough climb to Super Bowl XV, a tumble to the bottom of the National Football Conference has left Philadelphia Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil with thoughts of handing in his clipboard.

Vermeil, brooding over a 23-7 loss to the New York Giants Saturday and a 1-5 season record, said Monday that he has considered turning over the team to defensive co-ordinator Marion Campbell.

"There have been times when I've felt like just walking out and saying 'Marion, I'm letting these guys down, you take it.' I feel a tremendous obligation to these guys. But you just can't do that as a coach." he said.

DICK VERMEIL
...wonders what happened

Vermeil built a National Football League power at Philadelphia, reaching the playoffs in each of the past four years. But the Eagles have won just two of their last 12 regular-season and playoff games, with only a 24-21 victory over Cleveland to their credit this season.

Now, with three games left to play, Philadelphia is guaranteed its first losing season in the NFL since 1977, when they went 5-9 in Vermeil's second year as coach.

"I kind of believe that we will end up playing a real good football game one of these days. I just don't know what day it's going to be," Vermeil said.

Two more losses out of the three remaining games (against Houston, Dallas and the Giants again) will give the Eagles their worst season record since they went 2-11-1 in 1972, a year that concluded with the firing of the entire coaching staff.

Last week, after a 23-20 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals, Eagles owner Leonard Tose gave vent to his frustration in the locker room, telling his players they might as well vote down the NFL Players Association contract and go back on strike.

Vermeil said Monday that he thinks his players all know and understand Tose, and that the owner's outburst probably is not on their minds.

But Vermeil bristled at a suggestion that he start thinking about 1983, using the rest of this season to test younger players.

"I sure wouldn't want my players to start thinking that," he said. "We'd have a hard time winning one or two or three games that we have left to play. And a lot of you guys, if you were in the same situation and thought that way, you'd probably get fired.

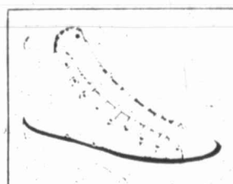

"You look into 1983 for me," he said. "I don't have any thought about 1983."

The view from the bottom has included some guesses about what went wrong. Outside linebacker Reggie Wilkes said old leaders are missed, like retired linebacker Bill Bergey and nose guard Charlie Johnson, traded to Minnesota during the preseason at his request.

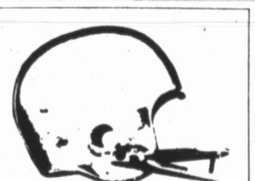

Quarterback Ron Jaworski recently suggested that the long players' strike had a lot to do with the nosedive, but a glum Vermeil had another view of the eight-week layoff.

"Maybe the strike saved us a lot of losses," he mused.

Save energy with a heat pump.

If you're planning to install a new heating or cooling system, consider a high-efficiency heat pump. It's an energy-saving, year-round alternative.

The heat pump provides year-round heating and cooling, using only electricity. During the winter, it extracts heat from the outside air (even very cold air contains heat) and brings that heat inside where it's needed. In the summer, the heat pump is a regular air conditioner, removing unwanted heat from the inside air.

The heat pump is the most efficient combination heating and cooling system that can be installed in your home today.

To learn more about the heat pump, call your air conditioning contractor. And when you call, ask about the year-round heat pump that qualifies for a bonus check from Texas Electric.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 15, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening for you to consider your most ambitious goals and to figure out just how they can be obtained. The goodwill of others can easily be attained now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Not a good time to discuss monetary affairs with friends, but excellent for consulting business experts for advice you need.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An outside affair could prove annoying early in the day. Make sure a credit matter is completed before the day is done.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) First handle routine duties and later take care of civic matters. Come to a fine accord with a new ally.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A new venture needs more study before it can be successful. Try not to argue with close ties.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Talk over with associates what changes should be made and then get busy and make them. Think constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Attend to regular routines early in the day and you will have extra time to engage in hobbies later. Take needed health treatments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do whatever will truly please the one you love and get excellent response. Express your special talent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure personal tensions are cleared up and then you can accomplish a great deal in the business world.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know what your true ambitions are and plan just how to attain them. Clear up any misunderstanding with a co-worker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take steps to improve your financial position early in the day. Stop taking loved one for granted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Calmly rid yourself of petty annoyances and then work on practical matters of importance. Strive for increased happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Handle personal matters that are vital to your welfare early in the day. Consult experts for advice you need.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be very inquisitive and will store up facts and figures from personal experiences that can come in handy upon reaching maturity. Teach a religious philosophy that will enable your progeny to be most successful.

Katharine Hepburn breaks ankle

OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. (AP) — Actress Katharine Hepburn suffered a broken ankle Monday when a car she was driving went out of control on a snowy road and hit a utility pole, police said.

Miss Hepburn, 73, was driving on a snow-covered portion of Route 154 near her summer home here when the car went out of control, police said. The accident was reported at 11:08 a.m.

Miss Hepburn's sister, Marion Hepburn Grant of West Hartford, said the actress suffered a broken ankle. She said Miss Hepburn didn't appear to have been speeding and that she apparently had been distracted. No charges were filed.

KATHARINE HEPBURN
...injured in wreck

Hartford Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said the actress and Ms. Wilbourn were both in good condition.

Miss Hepburn was en route to New York City in a rented car when the accident occurred, Mrs. Grant said.

The four-time Academy Award winner maintains a home in the Fenwick section of Old Saybrook in southeastern Connecticut.

Miss Hepburn decided to stay overnight at the hospital to allow doctors time to X-ray her ankle and set it.

"She was very lucky. I don't know why they didn't get more seriously hurt," Mrs. Grant said.

Also injured in the accident was Miss Hepburn's secretary, Phyllis Wilbourn, who suffered a broken wrist. They were both taken to the Shoreline Clinic in Essex and then transferred to Hartford Hospital, police said.

Lansbury got lucky fast

NEW YORK (AP) — Since 1966, Angela Lansbury has starred in four Broadway musicals — "Mame," "Dear World," a revival of "Gypsy" and in 1979, "Sweeney Todd." She won Broadway's top honor, the Tony award, each time.

On Wednesday, barring a postponement, the end of the world or something serious, she'll open in her first Broadway play since "A Taste of Honey" in 1962 — a comedy called "A Little Family Business."

She's playing a doughty New England woman forced to take over the family carpetsweeper business when the firm's chief, her husband (a chap with a soul of garlic who married the boss's daughter), is laid low by a heart spasm.

Four Tonys and 42 years on stage, TV and in films should give one a certain amount of confidence. So should a script — adapted from a French play — by Jay Presson Allen, whose film credits include "Funny Lady" and "Cabaret."

But Miss Lansbury sounds a mite nervous. She says she's taking a chance here, "really going out on a limb" — and not just because Los Angeles critics loudly booed "Family" in its Los Angeles tryout or because it lacked a director for four weeks.

She frets that some carpers will say the show is of little consequence and import, a comedown for an actress of her talent and stature. She denies the comedown rap. But she cheerfully admits "Family" is far from a piece for the ages. That's why she's in it, she says. She wants to try light comedy on stage again: "I really needed to get out and try my wings.

"Yes, it's a little bit of fluff, this play. It has no real substance to it. It's not a great piece of theatrical literature, it's not instructing the audience. it's not telling them anything.

"It's simply inviting them to come along, have a hell of a good time and laugh themselves silly. And that's all it is."

Another opening, another show for for the lady, born 58 years ago in England, the daughter of an actress. Her son, Anthony, born of her 33-year marriage to her manager, Peter Shaw, also is an actor and literally quite close to her these days. He plays her son in "Family."

She never prodded him to follow her into acting, unlike her mother who, when Miss Lansbury was a tyke, always tried to get her to perform with her: "I felt very self-conscious. But it's often that way with a parent, you know.

"It's much easier to perform to total strangers than it is to any member of your own family."

The actress, who recently finished making the film version of Joseph Papp's pop-flavored "The Pirates of Penzance," may be one of the most durable leading ladies of Broadway musicals. But she never planned it that way.

She never planned to sing on Broadway, for that matter. She got to Broadway by way of Hollywood, to Broadway musicals by way of an unexpected offer. All of it started when her family moved here from London in 1940 after the death of her father, a timber merchant.

She studied at the American Theater Wing, made the usual actors' rounds. Her mother, meanwhile, moved to California, then suggested Miss Lansbury join her there. She did, and got lucky fast in films.

Peckinpah misses horses

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I yearn for horses," mutters Sam Peckinpah, the fiery director of memorable westerns.

He's back at his profession of making films after a four-year absence. But his complaint seemed halfhearted. The director of "Ride the High Country," "The Wild Bunch" and "The Ballad of Cable Hogue" was perhaps nostalgic about the simplicity of working with cowboys, horses and wide open spaces.

But he was obviously pleased to be once more in charge of a movie company.

The new film is "The Osterman Weekend," based on the second of Robert Ludlum's labyrinthine suspense novels. It seems like a change of pace for Peckinpah, but he grumbled about the similarity to "Straw Dogs."

"Same thing," he said. "Here we have a dead dog in the refrigerator, in 'Straw Dogs' there was a dead cat in the closet. Both involve a house under siege."

The director's main problem was video. The script calls for scenes of the actors watching television, and the problems of capturing the video image on film were complicated. That's why Peckinpah hankered for horses.

"The Osterman Weekend" was filming in upper Mandeville Canyon in the Hollywood Hills at the ranch once owned by the late Robert Taylor. Peckinpah was directing a scene in which relations between longtime friends at a reunion start to unravel.

The men — Rutger Hauer, Dennis Hopper, Chris Sarandon and Craig T. Nelson — become deadly serious during a game of water polo. The women — Meg Foster, Helen Shaver and Cassie Yates — grow alarmed and try to stop them. The difficult part of their performances was acting comfortable in bathing suits on one of December's coldest days.

Peckinpah roamed around the pool, giving directions to the underwater camera operators and other members of the crew, all of whom accorded him total respect. Maybe awe. After his stormy career, he draws that kind of reaction.

His last film was "Convoy," which he described as making "a lot of money." What has he done in the last four years?

"I did a lot of writing and I had a heart attack," he replied. "I had some offers for films, but nothing I could get excited about."

He was excited about "The Osterman Weekend" when it was offered to him by producers Peter S. Davis and Bill N. Panzer. Although it is in a suburban setting — moved to California from Ludlum's locale, New Jersey — it contains elements of violence that have characterized Peckinpah films.

The plot starts moving when the CIA's Burt Lancaster and John Hurt tell television reporter Rutger Hauer that his three best friends are traitors. Then comes the murderous weekend.

Producer Panzer said he and his partner acquired "The Osterman Weekend" after a chance encounter with the previous owner of the screen rights. Like other owners of Ludlum books, he had been unable to get a credible screenplay from the complicated plot. Alan Sharp fashioned a script, and the producers approached Peckinpah.

The $9.1 million budget was raised by selling foreign, home video and pay-TV rights, with an assist from private investors.

"Sam's name was a big help in selling the foreign rights," said Panzer. "He's even more known abroad that he is here."

This has been a good and prosperous year for all of us except those who have been involved in house fires. The Fireman's Disaster Fund, established for those in immediate need of financial assistance, has helped these people in their time of need. All the funds donated to disaster victims comes from business and individual donations. From the $3,640 collected since September 1981 $3,340 has been used for disaster victims. It is time to replenish the Fund. Any amount that you can afford to donate will be greatly appreciated by those victims of fire who need it the most. Please give to the fireman that calls.

FIRST DAY BACK — Canadian Chrysler workers head home Monday afternoon after the first shift from the Plant 6 Annex in Windsor. This was the first day back for the workers, out for five weeks on strike from the No. 3 automaker.

Consumer confidence may be back

NEW YORK (AP) — The popular view is that the consumer is still timid and searching for his lost confidence. But an examination of the evidence suggests instead that at least some consumers might be pushing their weight around.

If you don't think so, ask the car dealer and the homeseller whose customers offer lowball figures instead of accepting the list price. Ask the airlines whose customers shop around for and obtain big discounts.

Ask the savings banks, some of which remain in bad shape because their customers transferred funds to higher-paying mutual funds. Ask the department stores, which are at their wit's end trying to please fussy buyers.

And most important of all, ask your next-door neighbor, the couple who keep saving their money because they're convinced that prices will be coming down, the very opposite of the "buy now" attitude that held sway in the 1970s.

As you continue your questioning you will eventually come to economists, those people who for the past year have been pointing out that the consumer has reduced his bills and raised his savings and so will soon begin to spend.

Ask them why the spending pickup hasn't begun. They will tell you, of course, that the consumer is worried about unemployment and concerned about the future of the economy. True, very true, but probably not the full story.

Today, any consumer reluctance to part with a nickel is interpreted as cautiousness, timidity, insecurity, a view that could rest on the mistaken view that any American able to make a telephone call ought to be placing an order.

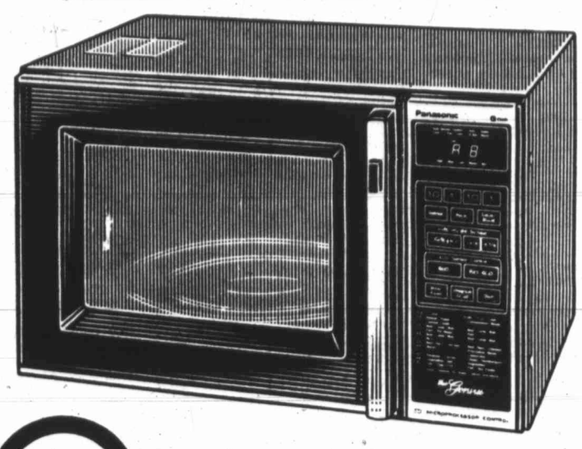

But rather than being listless and frightened, it seems that many potential buyers have chosen not to buy, and with just as much enthusiasm and vigor as they once chose to buy up a storm.

An illustration:

- During the 1970s, when prices were rising, many people advanced their buying schedules in order to avoid future high prices. Their behavior was described as robust, enthusiastic and confident.
- During the 1980s, when some — albeit not many — prices are falling, some people are delaying purchases so as to obtain future lower prices. Their behavior is called timid, cautious, and indicative of a lack of confidence.

SHOP BIG SPRING

FOR A VARIETY OF LOVELY GIFTS
...see Roy Peet at Inland Port 213

If it's beautiful it's at Inland Port

If it's a beautiful gift, you can be sure to find it at Inland Port 213, at 213 Main Street in Big Spring. Owner Roy Peet has the perfect gifts to complete your Christmas shopping expeditions.

For instance, he has another set of Whestones from Oklahoma City. The first set he obtained of the minature oil metallic sculptures went fast in Big Spring.

They include some minature derricks and oil scenes. He also has on hand some beautiful Bohemian crystal.

Inland Port has a selection of Goebel signed pieces in art objects from Germany that are extremely rare, beautiful and valuable.

The selection from Michael Gorman of Manatooth Springs, Colo. features some outstanding metal oil sculptures. Ask Roy, Iris, Brian, Sylvia and Carol to help find the item you want.

They have a selection of cuckoo clocks and two imported Italian clocks that look as if they belong in a palace.

Their wide selection of brass items include a fanned out fireplace screen. They also have perfume bottles, crystal, cut glass, candles in every shape and size, turquoise jewelry, diamonds and dinner rings.

It's really hard to comprehend how many items are in Inland Port 213. There are party napkins and joke gifts ... well the best thing would be for you to drop by the store and look around. If it's a beautiful gift item, they have it.

FALL FASHIONS ARE HERE
...find them at DeWees Fashions

Quality clothing at non-inflated prices

Billie DeWees, owner and operator of DeWees Fashions, wants everyone to know that her store at 4200 W. Hwy. 80 has a good stock of fall dresses for her customers.

Billie's store has grown since it opened in May of 1979, and she now has a store in Lubbock. She wants to bring fine quality clothes to Big Spring at good prices.

She strives to buy for all her customers as carefully as she can and tries to fit everyone. Her store's motto is "The Young Look for Every Woman."

Some of the lines of women's clothing she is carrying for this season include Abe Schrader, City Shirts by Melissa Lane, Shez Dresses, Missy H., Mr. Mench and Prairie Skirts.

Summer is almost gone and fall is on the way. Come out to DeWees and see for yourself.
