Salvadoran election tally stalled

Runoff still anticipated

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Bickering among election officials stalled the vote-counting, but moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte and rightist Roberto d'Aubuisson appear headed for a runoff in their bitter contest for the presidency of El Salvador.

A runoff will be required if no candidate gets a majority of the vote from Sunday's election, and by Duarte's own count, that won't happen.

The first round of balloting was seen all along as a showdown between Duarte and d'Aubuisson, who differ sharply on how to end a civil war that has claimed more than 50,000 lives and shattered the nation's economy.

In the absence of an official tally, only Duarte's Christian Democratic Party was providing unofficial election returns, and these figures showed him without a majority.

The official results were delayed by squabbling within the Central Election Council, a supposedly nonpartisan supervisory agency.

By 8 p.m. Monday, not a single vote from the 6,598 ballot boxes had been officially counted. Asked when tabulating would begin, council vice president Roberto Meza Delgado replied, "I haven't an idea."

The council is composed of representatives from six of the eight political parties which fielded presidential candidates. The two unrepresented parties had not been formed at the time the council was created.

Each party had representatives at polling places Sunday, and it was from its own poll watchers that the Christian Democrats tabulated an unofficial count.

Monday night, the Christian Democrats were claiming 45 percent of the vote for Duarte and 27 percent for d'Aubuisson, with the other candidates splitting the remaining 28 percent.

Those figures, the Christian Democrats said, were based on returns from about 80 percent of the precincts. They conceded that Duarte was unlikely to exceed the 50 percent needed to win without a runoff.

By law, a runoff would be held within 45 days of the first election, which would mean May 9 at the latest.

D'Aubuisson, 40, who has been linked to right-wing death squads, has said he would never talk with the leftist rebels who have been waging war against the government for 4½ years, vowing instead to crush them militarily.

A cashiered army major, d'Aubuisson is founder and leader of the far-right Republican Nationalist Alliance party.

Duarte, 58, favors dialogue with the insurgents, and has said his government would represent all factions of the divided nation.

Duarte lost a presidential election in 1972 that was generally thought to be fraudulent, but served as president of a ruling junta from 1980 to 1982. In that two-year term, he initiated land and social reforms that d'Aubuisson strongly opposes.

In his campaign, d'Aubuisson called Duarte a leftist sympathizer and usually referred to him as "Crazy Duarte."

For his part, Duarte seldom hesitated to point out that former U.S. Ambassador Robert E. White had called d'Aubuisson a "a pathological killer" and the mastermind behind death squads responsible for thousands of slayings.

So deep is the rift between Duarte and d'Aubuisson that some U.S. officials fear a victory by either man will heighten tension to such an extent that new political violence or even a coup attempt might result.

Sunday's election was marred by bureaucratic foulups and rebel interference that prevented thousands from voting.

In one attack Sunday, 35 miles northeast of San Salvador at Tejutepeque, guerrillas killed 30 soldiers. The regional military commander, Lt. Col. Carlos Alfredo Rivas, said it appeared some of the troopers were slain after they were captured.

Other scattered clashes were reported Sunday, but the rebels, who boycotted the election, tried to disrupt the balloting more by harassment and sabotage than by major military moves.

Loeffler trip 'memorable'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

WASHINGTON — A plunging helicopter. A 12-year-old boy forced into the guerilla camp. Hundreds of people standing in line to see "La Paz" returned to their country.

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler spent the "most memorable 48 hours" of his life last weekend as a U.S. observor of El Salvadoran presidential elections. He returned convinced the El Salvadorans want the communists out of their country and that the United States should continue its military assistance.

"I saw a nation striving to promote democracy...literally hundreds of thousands of people standing in lines in 90 degree weather, sweating, but with a smile," said the congressman from the 21st District that includes Midland.

Loeffler was one of the 30-member U.S. team that traveled throughout the country, watching as the citizens cast their ballots. By late Monday, a winner still had not been declared and the congressman suspected there will be a runoff.

The delay, he contended, comes from their elaborate system of checks and balances to avoid fraud and ballot stuffing.

The United States provided $3.5 million worth of computer hardware and another $3.5 million for technical assistance. "The money we spent had nothing to do with the election process," said the congressman, adding that the U.S. remained neutral. "Once the people of El Salvador decide who they want for president, then we as a nation will work with their leader."

Sunday's election, he said, "not only moves forward democracy in El Salvador, but sets the standards for presidential elections later this year in Nicaragua and Guatemala — free, fair and open elections."

The elections, however, were marred with the rebel guerrillas infiltrating 44 municipalities and setting off bombs. After landing at a military installation at San Miguel for refueling, Loeffler said his group was told that an army helicopter had been hit by guerrillas shortly before they arrived. And while their helicopter was refueling, the U.S. observors were warned to stay away because the guerrillas usually would aim for the fuel. At one point when the helicopter was in the air it banked and appeared to head straight for the ground.

On the east side of the island, the congressman visited with three captured guerrillas being held at La Union, a military garrison. They told the same story. All had been stopped on a street by guerrillas and forced to join the group or face death. One was 19, another 21. But the third was 12, said Loeffler. The older two probably will join the El Salvadoran army. The commander said the youngest will be turned over to Red Cross in hopes of finding his family.

Loeffler said he walked through the crowds of people lined up to vote, asking why they would wait so long. "I got the same response: La Paz, which means the peace. What I saw was a situation where the people of El Salvador turned out in vast amounts to say they wanted democracy to bud and flourish."

Loeffler denied that the people had turned out because it is a national law to vote. He pointed out that the fine for not voting ranges from 50 cents to $10.

The biggest disappointment came from Mexico, according to Loeffler. Out of 60 countries asked to send advisers, Mexico was included. But Mexico refused, making it one of two countries in North and South America that wasn't represented. The other was Nicaragua.

"If democracy fails in El Salvador, the dominoes will tumble. Mexico is a pearl for an aggressive nation. It's economically unstable and has vast resources of oil and gas," Loeffler said.

Mayoral candidates meet at Young Democrats forum

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Innovation and imagination may be fine, "but you have to know something about it before you start it," Mayor G. Thane Akins said Monday night during a debate in throwing out the first criticism of the evening.

Akins and Frank Lasater, the two seeking election to the mayor's seat, appeared together in a forum before the Young Democrats Club at First City National Bank.

While Akins criticized inexperience, Lasater hammered repeatedly that the old ways are not necessarily the best.

Each gave a five minute opening statement and then responded to questions from the audience. While the mayor focused on "the best times are yet to come," Lasater talked of what could have been. Questions from the audience centered on why streets in south Midland aren't paved, how to get more federal funds and setting up single member districts to get minority representation.

Pointing to his record of involvement on the Planning and Zoning Commission and City Council prior to becoming mayor, Akins said the work prepared him for being mayor.

"If someone is going to operate on you, you'd better hope it's not the first time he's done it," said Akins.

Lasater hasn't served on any city commission, but pointed out that a previous mayor (Ernest Angelo Jr.) hadn't been to a City Council meeting before being elected to head the city.

"One gauge of success," countered Lasater, "is not whether you have a tough problem to solve, but whether it's the same problem. I believe the mayor can do no greater service than to represent every citizen. It can be done by sincerely listening."

He suggested that a mayor should become more visible in seeking industrial and commercial prospects to the city.

Burned man's wife, stepchild charged

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A man's wife and teen-aged stepdaughter have been charged with attempted murder after he was doused with gasoline and set on fire while he slept, officials said.

Nick Eugene Oates, 38, was in critical but stable condition Monday at Lubbock General Hospital, said a hospital spokesman. The spokesman said Oates suffered second- and third-degree burns over 50 percent of his body and will probably need skin grafts on his back.

Investigators said the family told them Oates had threatened them and that a family argument had been going on for about two days.

Charged Monday were Cheryl Kay Oates, 38, and her 17-year-old daughter, Robin Renee Elliott, said Justice of the Peace Sam Matta.

Both were released on $10,000 bond. The attempted murder charge carries a possible penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Mrs. Oates' 14-year-old son was being held by juvenile authorities, who were seeking to place the boy in supervisory custody.

Police said the three told investigators that they set fire to Oates at 5:50 a.m. Sunday by pouring gasoline on him and igniting it as he slept.

Investigators said the family accused Oates of physically and verbally abusing them over a long period of time.

The family said Oates came home at about 1 a.m. after drinking and threatened the family, which also included three girls aged 18, 12 and 11 and a 9-year-old boy.

Investigators said the family contended that Oates frightened them on numerous occasions to the point that they would arm themselves with kitchen knives, bats or sticks for protection.

Police said they were told the two women and the boy ran from the house after setting fire to Oates, and that when they left the house they looked back to see Oates standing in the doorway, his body burning and his arms raised.

Rain from the Midwest to the Carolinas and New Jersey, showers for the Mississippi Valley and southern Plains, snow and flurries from the central to northern Plains and cold weather for the Northeast are forecast through Wednesday by the National Weather Service.

Chance for showers may calm area's wind, dust

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland, which seems to be overdoing its reputation as desert country, may be getting some relief from the drought and blowing dust tonight and Wednesday.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has predicted a 20 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms tonight and just showers on Wednesday.

The weatherman is calling for a low in the mid-30s, some blowing dust and northwesterly winds at 15 to 25 mph tonight.

On Wednesday, the weatherman is offering a 20 percent chance of showers and a high in the upper 50s. Winds are to be northwesterly at 20 to 30 mph and gusty. He noted the likelihood of blowing dust.

Monday's peak temperature of 79 degrees wasn't close to the record high of 90 degrees for a March 26 in 1956. The overnight low was 51 degrees, while the record low for a March 27 is 14 degrees in 1931.

STATE

Heavy thunderstorms and large hail pelted wide sections of North Texas early today.

Some of the worst weather was noted in Dallas, Tarrant and Collin counties, where golf ball-sized hail and hard downpours hit the area after midnight. High winds also accompanied the severe storms. However, there were no reports of injuries or serious damage.

Most of the severe weather had moved into Louisiana and Arkansas by 4 a.m., but forecasters warned of the possibility of more heavy thunderstorms over North Texas through early Wednesday.

In the High Plains, rain was possible tonight, along with snow accumulations of up to one inch, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

A major spring storm spread snow today from the Rockies to southwestern Minnesota and thunderstorms covered the ground with golfball-size hail in parts of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Up to 8 inches of snow was expected in the Rockies and by morning 5 inches was on the ground at Lander, Wyo., and about 3 inches covered many places such as Colorado Springs, Colo. and Beaver, Utah.

Temperatures dipped as low as 4 degrees below zero at Lake Yellowstone in Wyoming and freezing rain was mixed with the snow in eastern Colorado.

Guinea's president dies in surgery

Sekou Toure

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Ahmed Sekou Toure of Guinea, a black African Marxist who led his country to independence in 1958, died on an operating table after a 5,000-mile flight for emergency surgery on his deteriorated aorta. He was 62.

Sekou Toure was rushed to the Cleveland Clinic early Monday on a special plane arranged by King Fahd of Saudi Arabia after a team of four physicians from the clinic examined him in Guinea on Saturday, clinic spokesman Frank Weaver said today.

The flight to the famous U.S. heart clinic, which has treated many other heads of state, was required because the African leader's health was failing, Weaver said. The decision was made after consultation with physicians for King Hassan II of Morocco.

When Sekou Toure arrived at the hospital, massive internal bleeding was discovered from an aneurysm in the aorta, the main blood vessel from the heart, Weaver said.

Doctors had to replace the aorta from the heart to the abdomen in an operation that began at 10 a.m. Monday.

"He was in serious condition when he arrived, and the decision was made immediately to operate," Weaver said. After the aorta was replaced, internal bleeding continued.

"For more than 2½ hours, the physicians tried to save his life, but the cardiac action failed. The president literally suffered cardiac arrest and he was not able to be revived," the spokesman said.

Sekou Toure was pronounced dead at 3:23 p.m. Monday, according to Weaver.

In Guinea, Prime Minister Lansana Beavogui announced the death of Sekou Toure over Radio Conakry today, and the ruling Guinean Democratic Party met in emergency session.

Born in Farandah in central Guinea, Sekou Toure was one of seven children of a poor, illiterate Moslem couple. He claimed he was the grandson of Almamy Samoury, the legendary figure who fought the forces of France in West Africa long after most areas had capitulated to French colonial rule.

Sekou Toure was a founding member in 1946 of the African Democratic Rally, an umbrella group of West African parties seeking independence from France.

He was widely admired by militant Africans for his often stormy anti-colonial posturing, but critics were shocked by his ruthless communist-style dictatorship. His years in power were marked by economic paralysis and bloody purges in reprisal for countless plots against his rule.

Sekou Toure came to power in 1958 when President Charles de Gaulle offered France's colonies in Africa a choice between partial autonomy in a French community or full independence.

When a referendum was held; Guinea cast the lone vote for immediate independence. Sekou Toure's defiance of France was explained in his remark, "We prefer poverty in liberty to riches in slavery."

Guinea became independent on Oct. 2, 1958.

The angry French reacted by abruptly halting all aid to the West African territory, pulling out thousands of colonial administrators. French aid and technicians were recalled so quickly that Guinea's economy and essential public services virtually stopped functioning.

Guinea turned to the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, the United States and China for help.

Although the country was for a time closely aligned with the Soviets, Toure met with President Reagan in 1982 and said he found a "great disposition toward cooperation" with the United States.

Sekou Toure was to host the Organization of African Unity summit in his capital in May. He had been involved in intense diplomacy in preparation for the event designed to get Guinea back into the African mainstream after years of isolation.

He was due to become OAU chairman for the next year.

Former President Jimmy Carter speaks to about 2,000 people at Southern Methodist University in Dallas Monday. It was the fifth anniversary of the Camp David accords and Carter voiced his disappointment with the Reagan administration, citing a deemphasis on such negotiations with foreign countries.

Carter expresses his disappointment

DALLAS (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter says he is disappointed that — on the fifth anniversary of the Camp David accords — the settlement he worked out with then-Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and and then-Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has yet to be fully implemented.

"I don't think either nation would allege that the other has violated terms of the accord, but both would say that the other has failed to carry out the spirit of the agreement," Carter said Monday during a speech at Southern Methodist University.

"That was a great step forward. My prayer is that it will eventually be put in full effect. Still, a cold peace is better than a hot war," Carter added.

He spoke to about 2,000 people at Southern Methodist University Monday night. After a half-hour speech, he participated in a question-and-answer session for 40 minutes.

There were signs of progress, Carter said, noting that Begin dismantled Israeli settlements along the West bank, as he promised, despite a failure by his party to ratify the accords, which were signed on March 26, 1979..

"But Begin has never offered any measure of full autonomy, as required by the accords. And I had hopes Jordan would join the peace talks. They did not because they would have to recognize the right of Israel to exist," Carter said.

None of the three principals in the agreements is still around. Carter was defeated in his reelection bid, Sadat was assassinated, and Begin resigned.

The talks were an example of a role he sees vital for a U.S. president, but one that President Reagan has forsaken, Carter said.

"There is a way to handle controversy," said Carter. "Bringing disputing parties together, try to wipe out prejudice, listen to arguments of others, use your influence and power to bring differing parties together. This is the approach I took."

Carter said he was constantly negotiating with foreign leaders on topics such as the Panama Canal, SALT Talks, normalizing relations with China, the Camp David talks or the Iranian crisis.

"That philosophy has changed dramatically the last three years, not because the office has changed, but because President Reagan's attitude, emphasis and priorities are different from mine and my predecessors, both Democratic and Republican alike."

Midland mayoral candidates debate

"Midland needs to diversify. The chamber needs some help from the mayor's office. Midland is a dynamic city of the future. It has outgrown its old ways. It's time to take it out of the 70s and put it in the 80s where it belongs."

In response, the mayor said his opponent wasn't aware of the work going on behind the scenes in seeking new industries to the city. Akins said he has signed "over 500 letters" a year that are sent to prospects, and he has made trips to cities such as Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio to speak to presidents of other companies.

Questioned what would be new about the city in the coming years, Akins said that Air Park would be moved to a new site obtained in a land swap. The city will build a "state of the art" airport and sell Air Park land, now about 540 acres that is estimated to bring $20-50 million for the airport fund.

And negotiations should guarantee the city's water resources for the future, he added.

The mayor prefers resorting to local help and resources rather than calling on federal grants, while Lasater said that if taxes are paid then the city "should require services from the federal government."

The challenger noted the city budget reflects a deficit of about $2 million this year and that he is calling for hiring another 25 police officers which would require $1 million. But the city has a surplus of $9 million, he said, which could be used.

"You can just do that for so long," Akins said of the suggestion to keep pulling money out of the surplus. "You don't come out of a deficit in one year. We're projecting deficits for the next two to three years. In a city, revenues are very limited. Sales tax dropped last year by 40 percent and you do things differently until you can get back on track."

The mayor denied the city was paving streets of citizens on the north side while ignoring the unpaved roads on the southside. According to Texas law, he said, whoever owns the land on either side of the street pays for paving it. With a penetration paving program funded by a federal grant, streets in south Midland can be paved. But on the north side, "the paving is being done at the request of the owners and they're paying for it."

Lasater called for a "good strong preventive maintenance program" for street repairs.

Single member districts is an old issue in Midland where the council is elected at-large, according to the mayor. When he first ran for council, one of the topics was converting to single-member districts. But he opposes the idea, saying it can cause divisiveness on the council.

"If you have good people serving, they'll represent everyone. There are hazards, disadvantages, when you go to that kind of system," said Akins.

When someone in the audience said that most of the councilmen live in the northwest part of Midland, the mayor replied, "Why does where you live keep you from representing someone? Tell us where something wasn't done. If something is not working, tell us what it is. If we have the money and it can be done legally, we will."

Lasater said that some of Akins' replies to his suggestions that "they couldn't be done" reflects a "negative attitude."

"It's our old ways of doing things that has given us potholes and no stripes in the streets," he said.

Hawaii's largest active volcano continues erupting

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — The world's largest active volcano continued pumping out 1 million cubic meters of lava an hour, but rivers of the molten rock posed no threat to people or property.

Molten rock was fountaining 50 to 100 feet into the air Monday along a 300-foot-long vent at the 9,400-foot level of the volcano, said Reggie Okamura, a staff geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

"It's pretty fogged in, but when it clears, you can see it really nicely from here," Okamura said of the scene 14 miles away.

The fountains fed four rivers of lava that flowed over a desolate section of Hawaii Island, well away from populated areas, he said.

The longest flow, an eight-mile river of liquid rock with a front edge measuring 900 to 1,200 feet across, was traveling to the northeast at about 500 feet per hour, Okamura said.

It was that flow that knocked down a main power line that linked generators in Hilo, the state's second largest city, with the other side of the island. Service was not interupted, however, because Hawaii Electric Light Co. rerouted power through alternate lines Sunday night.

After traveling the country for two days, the congressman said he "absolutely" supports the U.S. giving military assistance to El Salvador and Nicaragua. For the short term, Congress has been asked to give $21 million to Nicaragua and $63 million for El Salvador, with the latter country needing ammunition and medical supplies.

"More than 65 percent of their troops wounded in fighting die," he said, comparing it to the U.S. involvement in Vietnam when the death rate stood at 10 percent.

Without the aid, Loeffler expects the country to fall to the communists, saying that Cuba and the Soviet Union are assisting the guerrillas.

The trip was a learning experience for Loeffler. But if an advisory team is needed for the runoff, Loeffler said, "I'll go down again."

Mondale sets sights on New York

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart looked for a victory today in Connecticut's Democratic presidential primary while Walter Mondale, after widening his lead for delegates in Virginia's caucuses, focused his sights on New York's big delegate prize next week.

Hart and Mondale debated at a distance on the eve of Connecticut's voting, voicing distinctly different views on the use of U.S. troops in Central America. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, also vying for Connecticut votes, told Yale University students he would end poverty in three years if president.

Hart, the Colorado senator, accused Mondale of backing a Central American policy that will lead to "the rather large loss of American lives" by the end of the decade. Mondale countered that Hart was wrongly trying to link him to President Reagan's policies in the region.

"I believe my opponent is getting frantic," Mondale said.

Polls were opening at 6 a.m. across Connecticut today; they close at 8 p.m.

Connecticut Democrats will decide 52 of the state's 60 national convention delegates through their primary, and Hart hopes the voting will provide more momentum going into neighboring New York's primary next week. There will be 252 delegates at stake then.

Party officials expected a turnout of only about one-third the state's 660,000 Democratic voters.

Hart is hoping to complete a clean sweep of the six New England states. It was the surprising victory in New Hampshire one month ago that started Hart's surge and put him alongside Mondale as a top contender for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mondale, meanwhile, appeared headed toward another caucus victory based on incomplete results from Virginia, which held its second night of statewide Democratic "mass meetings" Monday.

With 3,382 of the 3,500 state and congressional district convention delegates already chosen, the former vice president had 31 percent, Jackson 27 percent, uncommitted 27 percent and Gary Hart 15 percent.

Total popular votes weren't immediately available, and party officials were still figuring how the 68 national delegates that were at stake would be divided.

O'Bryan seeks 90-day reprieve from execution

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorneys for Ronald Clark O'Bryan are asking the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant a 90-day reprieve for the man scheduled to die Saturday for the Halloween 1974 poisoning of his young son.

The board, after learning that the U.S. Supreme court had rejected the condemned man's appeal, voted 6-0 to allow O'Bryan's attorneys and the state to present their cases at a hearing today.

Board Chairman Ruben Torres said each side would get 50 minutes to present arguments.

O'Bryan's attorney, Charlotte Harris, said the defense would ask for the delay so the Supreme Court will have time to "clarify" the issue of jury selection.

State prosecutors called O'Bryan's appeal "meritless," and said the 39-year-old inmate had raised that same argument in two previous appeals, both of which were unsuccessful.

The Supreme Court, voting 7-2 on Monday, refused to let O'Bryan file an appeal aimed at winning a new trial in the Oct. 31, 1974, killing of his 8-year-old son, Timothy, who died shortly after eating candy spiked with cyanide.

Meanwhile, the attorney who represented O'Bryan at his trial said he asked Texas Gov. Mark White to commute the sentence to life and to offer his former client a chance to take a polygraph examination. Richard Harrison of Dallas said he firmly believes that O'Bryan is innocent.

In the appeal rejected Monday, O'Bryan's attorneys argued that he is entitled to a new trial because three potential jurors were excluded from his original trial after voicing only general reservations about the death penalty.

O'Bryan asked the Supreme Court to overturn his state court conviction, without first seeking help from a federal trial judge and a federal appeals court. Such maneuvers are rare.

Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall, who oppose capital punishment under all circumstances, voted to set aside O'Bryan's death sentence.

Stefan Presser, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer working with O'Bryan's attorneys, said the high court's decision was not surprising. Presser vowed to keep fighting to have O'Bryan's life spared.

Clouding O'Bryan's immediate fate is a ruling by a federal appeals court in Washington. The appeals court essentially barred states from using lethal injections to execute death row inmates until the federal Food and Drug Administration determines whether the drugs used are "safe and effective" means of killing someone.

In Texas, the deadly injection is a mixture of sodium thiopental, also known as sodium Pentathol, or truth serum; Pavulon, and potassium chloride. It last was used to execute James David Autry on March 14.

The appeals court ruling was to take effect last Wednesday.

Defense lawyer claims many in prison due to misidentification

HOUSTON (AP) — Many innocent people are in prison today because, like Greenville engineer Lenell Geter, they were misidentified by witnesses, says the president of the Harris County Lawyers Association.

"I think that (misidentification) happens all the time," Jack Zimmermann said. "I think a lot of innocent people are in prison on the basis of misidentification."

Zimmermann's statement came in the aftermath of the sensational case of Geter, 26, who was sentenced to life in prison after five witnesses identified him as the man who robbed a Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet in Balch Springs near Dallas in 1982.

Charges against Geter were dismissed when four witnesses who originally identified Geter identified another man similar in appearance who was being held in a Houston jail.

Rusty Hardin, chief prosecutor for the district attorney's office, disputed Zimmermann's contention.

"It's inevitable that eyewitness idenfitication will sometimes be wrong, but it's also inevitable that most eyewitness identification is going to be right," Hardin said.

Officials on both sides of the issue agreed that eyewitness identification is often necessary in robbery or rape cases, where there is often little else for police to go on except a witness's description of a suspect.

Houston police robbery Lt. Allen Tharling says his detectives take great care in making certain that the identification process is handled fairly.

Tharling says a witness is asked to look at pictures of six potential suspects. He said officers also check out any alibis and conduct polygraph examinations and fingerprint tests when possible to further try to determine the suspect's innocence of guilt.

"We try to make sure we're right," Tharling said. "In a majority of our cases, the identifications are correct."

Defense attorney Ken Sparks, said however, that police "almost never" go beyond an investigation if they have an identification.

"They are so overloaded with cases, they are forced to take shortcuts," Sparks said.

'Black cloud' gone from Geter's life

DALLAS (AP) — Lenell Geter had known since last week that armed robbery charges against him were going to be dropped.

On Monday, the "black cloud" finally disappeared, said Geter, when a state district judge formally granted a prosecution motion to drop the charges for which the 26-year-old, black engineer served 16 months of a life prison sentence.

Geter, who attended the five-minute afternoon hearing with his attorneys, thanked State District Judge John Ovard.

Said Ovard, "There has been some negative experience, but we still have the finest criminal justice system that allows you to have rights, and I hope the people continue to have faith in the jury system."

Later, outside the courtroom, Geter told reporters, "Two or three tons have been lifted and the black cloud is gone."

Geter was released from prison last December after his supporters gained national publicity for him with their contention that his arrest and conviction were the result of shoddy police work and racism.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade said he would seek a new trial for Geter because of the public attention, which included a segment on CBS' "60 Minutes" news show.

Geter was to have been retried next month. But last week, Wade agreed to drop the charges after four of the five eyewitnesses who had identified Geter as the holdup man identified another man — an inmate in the Harris County jail who resembles Geter. Wade said he was convinced Geter was innocent.

Geter served time for the 1982 holdup of a fast-food restaurant in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs. He had also been charged with another similar robbery, but had not been tried for it.

At Geter's trial, his co-workers at E-Systems Inc. in Greenville, north of Dallas, testified the engineer was at work at the time of the robbery.

Though the South Carolina native had no prior police record, he was given a life prison sentence.

Geter's lawyers say they are still deciding whether to file a civil rights lawsuit on Geter's behalf. Geter is perusing book and movie offers for the rights to his story.

"Do you have a Valentine's card for a guy who's six weeks late but his wife hasn't noticed yet?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, March 28, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of artist Santi Raphael, crusading Illinois Sen. Paul Douglas and music's Paul "Pops" Whiteman. Also sharing your birthday: beer magnate and St. Louis Cardinals owner August Anheuser Busch Jr., actor Ken Howard, former Maine Sen. Edmund Muskie and author Nelson Algren. Stop trying to conform and concentrate instead on those projects that suit you best. The employment picture will take on a special glow in October. A romance with a Leo promises to be highly rewarding. Think about going into business with a relative or close friend who shares your aims. Fewer compromises mean greater gains. Stand firm.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An ego-boosting career success helps you see yourself in a new light. Monetary pressures begin to subside. Romance could be somewhat unstable. Postpone making a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A clever Capricorn helps you uncover the answer to a financial problem. You and mate could find yourselves sparring at social events. Make an effort to correct this immature habit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone at school or work may be testing your loyalty. Stick to your guns. Music helps you calm down while pondering a difficult decision. Seek advice from trusted friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A lively day lies ahead. Business picks up and you emerge as the hero/heroine of the hour. You could attract the attention of a visiting celebrity. Resist an urge to gamble.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Refuse to get hung up over trifles. One way to enlarge your sphere of influence is to learn new skills. Complete routine work before beginning a major project.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sprucing up your home will add to family members' comfort. Think twice about asking employer for more money. Do not push for what you want unless absolutely certain you must have it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have a firmer grip on your money now. Investments bring better returns than in the past. A friend pushes you to become more active socially. Be receptive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance is linked to financial security. You turn to friends or neighbors who have leaned on you in the past. Be diplomatic if you want to avoid a showdown with a close associate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A gamble shared with loved one could yield a bonanza. Career obstacles are overcome, thanks to a former employer's intervention. An authority figure gives you a vote of confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pay more attention to both old and new relationships. Vital questions are raised. The pairing influence is strong in business as well as romance. A marriage or merger deserves further thought.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Jot down your thoughts and dreams; they could provide missing pieces to a puzzle. Your ability to work calmly when under fire impresses those in authority. A raise or promotion is possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lucky you! Friends and family members stand ready to help in a crisis. A chance meeting turns out nicely. Romance is tempting. Former partner wants to get together for "old times' sake."

Oscar results not always kept secret

LOS ANGELES (AP) — During the 56-year history of the Academy Awards, the Oscars given for acting tied twice — one legitimate, one less so.

In 1969, Katharine Hepburn, who appeared in "The Lion in Winter," and Barbra Streisand, who was in "Funny Girl," were both given Oscars as best actress. Vote counters tallied the ballots several times to assure themselves that it was a genuine tie.

In 1932, the honor for best actor was bestowed on Fredric March for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and Wallace Beery for "The Champ." But was it truly a tie?

"They announced the awards early in those day, and I learned that I was the winner," March said in an interview at that time. "But then Wally Beery told Louis B. Mayer that he wouldn't sign a new contract at MGM unless he won the Oscar. Since Mayer was one of the men who ran Hollywood, Wally got his way."

Shortly afterward, the prestigious accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse, which had been auditing the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science's books since its founding in 1927, took over the award voting. The secret ballot has prevailed ever since.

But the Academy remained casual about releasing the results, informing the press beforehand to facilitate late-night deadlines. In 1940, guests arriving for the banquet at the Biltmore Bowl were greeted with early Los Angeles Times editions headlining: " 'GONE WITH THE WIND' SWEEPS OSCARS."

"That was the start of the sealed envelopes," says Frank Johnson, the Price, Waterhouse man responsible for keeping the Academy voting sacrosanct. He and his associate, Steve Kaplan, are the only ones who know the results before the envelopes are opened onstage at the Music Center.

During most of the year Johnson works for engineering and aerospace clients. But on April 9 he'll be in a tuxedo and spotlight, dispensing the all-important envelopes.

"The Academy prepares the ballots and the envelopes, along with the membership list," said Johnson in an interview with The Associated Press. "We scan the list, test a number of the names to make sure they are legitimate. Then we put the ballots in mail bags and take them to the post office ourselves."

Ballots for out-of-state members are mailed a few days earlier, so they'll have more time to meet the deadline. Ballots and envelopes are numbered to prevent counterfeiting. As the ballots return, they are placed each day in the office safe. Those arriving after the deadline are discarded. Some members deliver their ballots by hand to beat the deadline.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

When the opponents' bidding has lacked confidence and you can see from your hand that they are going to run into a misfit, a double on scattered high cards can be profitable. But to do so when the opponents have shown strength is the height of folly, and can draw a blueprint of the hand for declarer.

East had no reason to suspect that he could defeat six hearts, let alone four. His double came back to haunt him, for it allowed declarer to make a contract that would otherwise have been defeated with normal play. Even with a club lead, he could not be sure that he had two tricks in that suit, and where he expected his side to get two more tricks is a mystery.

West led the jack of clubs. East won the king and he was, in effect, end played at trick one. He could do no better than continue with the ace of clubs and another. Declarer won and cashed the king of trumps. Had West followed to this trick, the contract would have been a laydown.

When West showed out, declarer would quite likely have adopted a losing line had he known nothing about the hand. The natural way to tackle the hand is to draw trumps and lead a diamond toward the queen, playing West for the king. The double, however, marked East for all the missing cards, so declarer cast about for another method. He came up with a pretty solution.

He continued with the ace and a low trump. East won a trick he did not expect with the jack, but he was faced with losing alternatives. A spade would allow declarer to sluff two diamonds on dummy's spades, and a diamond would be away from the king and declarer would run it to the table's queen. Either way, the contract was in the bag.

Note that it would not help East to unblock the jack of trumps. That would simply make the board's ten an entry, and declarer would make an overtrick.

This idea stinks!

A number of Panhandle residents have their dander up about a proposed electrical plant that promoters say would employ about 80 people and have an annual payroll of $2.5 million.

Despite the fact that this new power plant would provide additional electricity for an energy-hungry world, would provide jobs and perhaps a new energy industry, Panhandle residents around Hereford think the proposal stinks — literally!

In at least one respect, they're right. Valley View Energy Corporation's proposed plant isn't fueled by nuclear power; that isn't the problem. It is expected to burn 1,500 tons of manure daily and residents, anticipating an unpleasant odor from the stockpiled raw material don't want any part of it regardless of the potential benefits.

Those benefits could be significant for the Hereford farming region. The Hereford Chamber of Commerce has estimated 300 people would be employed during construction of the plant, expected to take two years.

Valley View President Don Lieb says the manure stockpiles would be kept dry and odorless. "It's just like a pile of dirt," he said, noting the manure piles would form a crust hard enough for trucks to drive on. "I really think their concern is more emotional," he added.

Perhaps. But this is an emotional issue. Residents shouldn't merely sit around and let some new industry come in and downgrade the neighborhood. Fortunately they're not. Residents already have contacted the Texas Air Control Board for a ruling.

That's a good start toward clearing the air!

Friend and ally

The meetings this week between President Reagan and French President Francois Mitterrand made surprisingly little news. But then, maybe that was the news: That two governments with sharply different views on domestic issues and on such regional trouble spots as Central America could nonetheless agree on so much.

In fact, relations between France and the United States are now so warm that a State Department official was quoted this week as saying there were fewer problems between Washington and Paris than between America and Britain.

Since his election in May 1981, President Mitterrand has proved to be an outspoken champion of the Western alliance, despite the fact that France remains outside of NATO's formal military structure. The Mitterrand government boosted military spending, committed itself to modernization of France's nuclear deterrent, and vigorously supported the NATO decision to deploy new American missiles in Europe.

All this was in refreshing contrast to the doubts, divisions, and neo-neutralist sentiments that beset NATO elsewhere in Europe. In France, Mitterrand rallied the public in support of a revitalized commitment to the defense of the West.

Mitterrand still wants an East-West "dialogue" and a renewal of Soviet-American negotiations on nuclear arms. But he and President Reagan agreed publicly Friday that "no concessions should be made" as the price of persuading the Soviets to return to the bargaining table. That is a position at once tougher and more likely to obtain results than anything being suggested by the would-be Democratic presidential candidates.

Not everything is well, of course, between Paris and Washington.

But on the central issue of the time, the struggle between the democratic West and the totalitarian East, Mitterrand and the France he leads are more firmly than ever on the side of freedom. Reason enough, then, for President Reagan and his countrymen to welcome Francois Mitterrand as the friend and ally he is.

Never cry 'bat'

One needn't be a parent familiar with end-of-the-school-day stampedes and scout jamborees to sympathize with the plight of the poor Mexican free-tailed bat. In spring, the female of this species can find herself living in a cave in Texas with as many as 70 million other bat mothers and babies — some 40 of the latter clinging to every 15 square inches of cave wall, and every one of them screaming in hunger by the time the mothers come back from work at dawn. Yet each bat mother is supposed to find in that horde her very own pup to nurse.

Human scientists, probably reflecting on their own difficulties at even a moderately full playground, have generally assumed that the task was impossible — that, in fact, bat babies were nursed communally by whichever females got to them first. But Dr. Gary F. McCracken of the University of Texas recently tested the hypothesis, by plucking nursing couples off the walls and taking samples of their genes. He found that only 17 percent of the females were nursing pups demonstrably not their own, and under the circumstances, he considers that success rate remarkable.

The next question is obvious: How do they do it? The studies aren't complete, but McCracken is working on the theory that each mother calls for her pup and listens for the distinctive sound of her own offspring's response. In the cacophony of 70 million mothers and babies all calling and responding at once, that doesn't seem to be quite enough of an explanation. Neither does McCracken's backup theory of a final sniff test.

Clearly, this is research that will be going on for some time, but think of its applications. McCracken may yet isolate a method of locating one's own charges in a dark, crowded children's matinee. Perhaps after that, the bats can teach us how to reach them without spilling popcorn on everybody else.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, March 27, the 87th day of 1984. There are 279 days left in the year.

In 1945, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower declared that German forces on the Western Front had been defeated.

In 1964, Alaska was rocked by an earthquake that killed more than 100 people and caused $750 million dollars in property damage.

Thought for Today: "When good natured people leave us, we look forward with extra pleasure to their return." — Henry Wheeler Shaw, American writer and humorist (1818-1885).

JACK ANDERSON

VOA accredited, agent booted

WASHINGTON — The Kremlin has devoted considerable energy to denouncing the Voice of America and jamming its broadcasts to Eastern Europe. But the Soviets unwittingly did VOA a favor last year. Here's the untold story:

Jack Anderson

For 33 years, VOA correspondents had been denied access to congressional press galleries. Longstanding rules barred government officials from accreditation — a move intended to prevent them from using press passes to buttonhole members of Congress in the Capitol corridors.

But correspondents for foreign government press agencies — like the British Broadcasting Corp. and the Soviet news agency, Tass — were exempt from the exclusionary rule. The correspondents' committee that handles accreditation had accepted them at the urging of the State Department back in the 1940s.

Enter Boris Ivanov, a Tass correspondent who had held congressional credentials for several years.

On April 22, 1983, Sen. John East, R-N.C., sent a letter to Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., chairman of the Rules and Administration Committee. East stamped his letter "secret." He wrote:

"An employee of the Soviet news agency Tass, and an accredited member of the Senate press gallery, Boris Ivanov, is in fact an officer or agent of the Soviet intelligence service, the KGB." The senator added that he didn't think it was "appropriate for a Soviet spy to enjoy the privileges of the members of a free press."

Then East got to the point: "Nor do I believe that it is appropriate for an arm of the Soviet propaganda machine such as Tass to have representatives in the press gallery of the Senate, especially since the Voice of America itself has never been granted such privileges on the grounds that it is a government news agency."

East concluded: "Tass is also a government news agency, yet it has full press credentials in the Senate, even though some of its employees, and Ivanov in particular, have long been known to be intelligence officers under cover."

On May 4, Mathias got another letter — from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and 49 other senators, urging a waiver of the Senate rule banning VOA correspondents. They pointed out that denying VOA press credentials hampered its congressional mandate to be an "accurate, comprehensive and objective source of news."

Mathias held a hearing that didn't resolve the matter. The correspondents' committee raised its long-standing fear that VOA accreditation could open the floodgates to flacks for every government agency in Washington.

But, faced with the confrontation East and Helms were obviously threatening — Tass vs. VOA, Soviet spies vs. American patriots — the committee prudently agreed to a compromise. VOA correspondents were accredited, though without a vote in the correspondents' association and other privileges the Soviets enjoy.

And Ivanov? Mathias relayed East's charges to the FBI. Last fall, Ivanov discreetly departed.

A Soviet Embassy spokesman shrugged off East's accusation as a routine allegation, and said Ivanov did not leave with "any embarrassment at all." He told my associate Dale Van Atta, "Boris left for good because he had completed successfully his duty here."

OLD TRICKS: The judicial screening committee of the American Bar Association recently squawked about pressure from Jonathan Rose, then an assistant attorney general, on behalf of J. Harvie Wilkinson III. The latter was appointed to the federal appeals court.

The lawyers' committee ultimately found Wilkinson "qualified" — the lowest passing grade for a judicial candidate.

Rose, now in private practice, told my associate Les Whitten: "It could be construed as pressure, but I don't construe it as providing additional information to the committee."

Twelve years ago, when he was just a young whippersnapper in the Nixon White House, Rose pulled a similar trick. The White House was furious at me for uncovering the notorious "Dita Beard memo," which implied that International Telephone and Telegraph's antitrust problems were being taken care of in exchange for a big donation to the 1972 Republican convention.

So young Rose slipped up to the office of Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., with a speech that would make me look bad and ITT look good. To Rose's embarrassment, I exposed his role in the backstage maneuver. Rose would probably describe that ploy, too, as simply "providing additional information" to the senator.

EVANS & NOVAK

Reagan swallowing tax increase

WASHINGTON — When a low-key Ronald Reagan traveled to Capitol Hill last week to promote his fourth tax increase in less than four years, he was peddling a product important only for election-year politics.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Nobody close to the president pretends that the $150 billion, three-year deficit-reduction package, including the $48-billion tax hike, has any relevance to the $3 trillion economy. Lingering hope that the package would induce Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker to ease up on interest rates has all but vanished.

The reason Reagan swallowed another tax increase was to prevent formation of a Senate coalition of Democrats and establishment Republicans incessantly hounding him on the budget. That re-election-year nightmare has now been precluded, but deeper economic fears at the White House persist.

Those fears concern what Volcker will do to the recovery in his anti-inflationary fervor, specifically at this week's Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting. The hope of Reagan's men is modest — that the central banker will not raise interest rates still higher now that Fed policy has forced up the prime rate charged by commercial banks.

Only a week ago, hopes persisted at the Treasury that Volcker could be brought around to a more relaxed policy by upping the ante on the deficit-reduction package from $100 billion to $150 billion. It was felt that move, if coupled with signs the economy was not "overheating," might have more impact on the Fed chairman than his past talks with the president.

During the last such private meeting, Feb. 15, Reagan made clear that he wanted the central bank to supply ample credit to preserve the recovery. Volcker's response was so prolix that the president later asked the other two officials present — chief of staff James A. Baker III and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan — exactly what the Fed chairman had said. They didn't know either.

However wrapped in cigar smoke and ambiguity Volcker's words may be, his actions are unequivocal. "We have failed to influence him," is the blunt assessment by one administration policymaker, pointing to the rising federal funds rate (the borrowing rate for commercial banks, who were thereby forced to raise the prime rate).

The Treasury's most recent hope has been that Volcker would be appeased by a combination of two events: a "flash" report March 20 on first-quarter economic growth no higher than 6 percent and the new deficit reduction package. But the growth-rate projection turned out to be 7.2 percent (very good news transmuted into bad news by the financial world's alchemy), and Volcker wants much more austerity than a trifling $50 billion tax hike.

Doubt exists in high administration circles whether Volcker cares in the slightest what the president says to him in private, or if their dialogues eventually escalate in public. According to this analysis, Volcker sees his historical role as suppressing inflation, no matter what the cost in unemployment — a Phillips Curve trade-off avidly supported by his financier admirers.

Indeed, the new deficit-reduction package was accepted by the Reagan team to appease not Volcker but the Senate Republican College of Cardinals — specifically, Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici and Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole. The prospect of the Republican president and the Republican-controlled Senate locked in combat all year over the budget, to the delight of Democrats, was too much for the White House to accept.

Actually, Reagan's newest tax increase is no threat to the recovery and is incomparably less noxious than the president's ill-advised, ill-fated contingency tax proposal of last year. The $48 billion in added revenue derives mostly from tax revisions drafted by the industries that will pay them. The remaining revenue is generated by postponing miscellaneous tax cuts — including the estate tax rate — passed in 1981.

Before accepting this package, the president sought repeated reassurances from advisers that it was no tax increase. Their answer, though not entirely accurate, soothed Reagan. Still, when he addressed the House Republican Conference last week he seemed a little off his game — another example of the Great Communicator's superiority on offense, as opposed to defense.

No revolt will be raised by conservative Republicans, who prefer to join the White House on future tax simplification rather than fight it on the present tax increase. But they want the president in a populistic mode —talking about lower tax rates, treating 7.2 percent growth as a good rather than an evil, publicly challenging Paul Volcker. They also hope the president's signature on any bill passed this year is accompanied by a pledge that this is the last taxpayer mugging to be tolerated by Ronald Reagan.

CHARLEY REESE

Politics more than selling soap

Banal bunk. That's a fit description of most of the political analysis which followed Super Tuesday. Frankly, political analysis is mostly the art of making the simple appear complex.

Charley Reese

Election campaigns are simple cause and effect operations. If there is any mystery involved, it is how the nation has managed to survive them — so far, at least.

The Gary Hart phenomenon was not a phenomenon at all. Hart did what everybody except Walter Mondale was trying to do: run ahead of expectations in New Hampshire.

• • •

By doing that, Hart received a tidal wave of media attention. Any one who had beaten Mondale in New Hampshire would have. With that attention comes money, new volunteers and a big jump in name recognition.

In Florida, Hart spent about $250,000 on media advertising over a short span of days. Advertising works. It sells soap and beer and it will also sell a candidate, especially if the paid space is backed up by plenty of free news coverage.

Mondale was a victim of a media-polls system trap. Early polls, which reflected nothing really but name recognition for a former vice president, caused the media pundits to pronounce Mondale the front runner long before the first voter had seriously thought about actually casting a vote.

Similarly, Mondale's endorsements by organizations were overvalued. The AFL-CIO, for example, may be able to motivate its members in the general election when the alternative is Reagan. But in the primaries, the alternative to Mondale is another Democrat who is also pro-labor even if he doesn't have the official endorsement.

Consequently, when Mondale failed to meet the media's expectations, the media pundits decided his campaign was falling apart. After all they had said he was the front runner and since he wasn't running in front, it was obviously his fault — not the fault of their early pronouncements which, in fact, were assumptions based on flimsy evidence.

And the system of polling and speculating on polls really is a trap. Mondale couldn't very well go around the country denying he was a front runner. Being human, he probably believed it because he wanted to believe it. But it was a no-win situation. If he had won in New Hampshire it would have been no big deal, but for anybody who beat him, it would be a very big deal indeed.

For the same reason, polling done now, pitting Ronald Reagan against this candidate or that candidate or even measuring Reagan's popularity is not worth much as far as predicting the outcome in November.

That outcome will be determined by how voters feel then, not how they feel now. In today's world, lots of things can happen to change people's minds two or three times between now and November. Thanks to mass electronic communications, a person can go from hero to goat in less time than it takes Superman to change his clothes.

The political problem for the Democratic nominee, whoever he is, is to provide a reason for a majority of the turnout to vote against the incumbent. That's not as easy as it sounds.

I don't think Reagan did it in 1980, but he was lucky. The incumbent, Jimmy Carter, did it for him by convincing a majority of Americans that he was incompetent. Reagan may return the favor before November but so far he has not made it all that easy for the Democrats.

You should remember that he didn't get the vote of those who are most vocal in opposition to him — blacks and feminists, for examples — in 1980. Their oposition by itself in 1984, no matter how vocal, won't do the trick for the Democratic nominee.

Another factor to keep in mind is that politics is based on perceptions, not on reality. It matters not so much what a candidate is as what people perceive him to be. In Florida, some voters voted for Hart because they thought he was liberal and some voted for him because they thought he was conservative. No doubt some voted for him because they thought he had a nice smile.

It's funny that the fate of mankind may be determined by a process used to sell soap. Somehow you expect people aspiring to lead a nuclear superpower to say more than, "I've got a new idea," or "Where's the beef?" or "There you go again."

Democrats working on party's platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the race for the Democratic presidential nomination still wide open, party leaders are approaching the drafting of a 1984 party platform with caution, hoping to avoid the bickering among rival candidates that plagued the 1980 platform debates.

"What we're doing on the platform is not focusing on differences among candidates but on our differences with the administration," said Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro, D-N.Y., who chairs the Democratic Party's platform committee.

The 184-member panel today was beginning the process of crafting a party issues document to be adopted in San Francisco in mid-July at the Democratic National Convention.

The committee was to hear from party leaders and interest groups at today's session. Regional hearings are then planned for New York, Birmingham, Ala.; Springfield, Ill.; Los Angeles; Cleveland, Ohio, and Houston.

In 1980, forces loyal to then-President Carter fought a fierce sentence-by-sentence war with supporters of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., over the wording of the party document, a struggle that was only resolved on the convention floor when delegates approved a mixture of planks penned by each camp.

"We're trying to figure out how not to have the same problems as we had in 1980," said Ms. Ferraro. She said putting together a consensus platform, one that the current candidates can all endorse, will be easier now that there are three candidates left instead of eight.

She said she personally has no preference among former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart or the Rev. Jesse Jackson. "I'm perfectly content with any one of the three."

Jesse Jackson

At least the preliminary draft of the party platform will contain nothing that can't be embraced by any of the three contenders, party leaders said.

In 1980, Carter pretty well had the nomination wrapped up before the bulk of the platform drafting occurred. Kennedy forces, having lost the main battle, then focused their energy on influencing the platform.

"If we have a nominee (before the convention), that individual will have a say on what the final platform with look like," Ms. Ferraro said at a briefing on the platform process.

"I want a different platform than what we saw in 1980," said Democratic party Chairman Charles T. Manatt.

California official accused of graft

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The head of the California Department of Veterans Affairs has been accused of promising promotions to state workers in exchange for contributions to George Deukmejian's campaign for governor, and of pocketing some of the money, court records revealed on Monday.

An investigation by the state Fair Political Practices Commission of Andres (Andy) Mendez, 39, was revealed Monday in more than 50 pages of investigators' reports and other documents filed in Sacramento County Superior Court.

Mendez could not be reached for comment Monday night by The Associated Press, but The Los Angeles Times quoted him as saying he was "aware that a disgruntled and dismissed former employee is making those allegations," which he said were "groundless."

Kevin Brett, a spokesman for Deukmejian, also described the charges as "allegations...by a disgruntled employee." The governor's office is monitoring the investigation, Brett said, but Mendez is continuing in his post during the inquiry.

There is "no evidence of violations by anyone in the governor's office," said Lynn Montgomery, a spokeswoman for the commission.

The Mendez investigation is still incomplete, and no civil or criminal charges have been filed, she said.

The first public hearing on the investigation is scheduled Tuesday in Superior Court.

Mendez was promoted by Deukmejian from a civil service job in the Department of Veterans Affairs to the $49,980 executive secretary's post two weeks after he became governor last year.

He is the second high-ranking Deukmejian appointee to come under investigation in recent weeks. The other is Gilbert Montano, who resigned earlier this month as director of the state Office of Economic Opportunity during an audit by Deukmejian fiscal deputies of his "management practices."

A confidential investigation of Mendez was started last November, and is still technically confidential, Ms. Montgomery said.

Investigators' reports were filed with the Sacramento County Superior Court last Friday by the commission in response to a motion by an attorney representing Mendez to block a subpoena of Mendez's personal bank records.

The commission response to that motion, which is a public record, quotes memos by commission investigator Carl Vega recounting allegations that during 1982, when Deukmejian was running against Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley for governor, Mendez "received numerous contributions for the Deukmejian campaign" during state work hours and "spent more than 50 percent of his time on political activities."

Cookie probe shifts to plant in Kentucky

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Reports of needles and paper clips in Girl Scout cookies have prompted federal officials to order an investigation of the plant where the cookies are made following suspension of distribution throughout Maine.

Robert C. Fish, director of compliance for the Food and Drug Administration's regional office in Nashville, Tenn., said Monday his office will inspect the Louisville, Ky., plant where over 50 million packages of the cookies were baked. He said the possibility of sabotage had not been ruled out.

Cookies baked at the Louisville facility were distributed in 43 states, the District of Columbia and West Germany, a company official said.

"Every kook in the country is starting to make claims," James Yowell, president of Mother's Cookies, said in a telephone interview from his office in Augusta, Ga. "All of a sudden, people are starting to come up with claims all over the place...some of them in areas we do not service."

The company's Louisville, Ky.-based Little Brownie Bakers division makes about half of the Girl Scout cookies sold annually around the nation.

Police in several Maine communities have reported discoveries of pins in the cookies, and there also have been reports of tampering in several other states.

Lawyers protest sentences

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — Attorneys for four men sent to prison for raping a woman on a barroom pool table are protesting the sentences as "hard time," but the victim's lawyer says the woman's sentence is "exile."

Judge William Young sentenced the four men to terms ranging from six to 12 years on Monday, saying they "brutalized a defenseless young woman and sought to degrade and destroy her human, individual dignity."

The men, all Portuguese immigrants, received support from many in the area's Portuguese community, and the victim's lawyer said demonstrations in their favor convinced the woman to move from her hometown.

French diplomat shot in Beirut Moslem area

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A French diplomat was shot and seriously wounded today in Beirut's Moslem sector, and at least 20 civilians were reported wounded in an artillery barrage on Christian neighborhoods.

Spokesmen at the French Embassy identified the wounded diplomat as cultural attache Sauveur Gliozzo, but would not give details about how he was shot or how serious his condition was.

At the American University Hospital, spokesmen said Gliozzo underwent emergency surgery to remove at least two bullets from his stomach and arm. They also declined to classify the seriousness of his condition.

There was no immediate responsibility claim for the attack, and local radio stations said the assailant or assailants escaped.

Lebanon's state radio said Gliozzo was shot as he was on his way to work at the French Embassy. It said he was hit four times and rushed to the hospital "in serious condition, suffering from a severe internal hemorrhage."

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said Gliozzo was shot in front of the Hotel Cavalier in west Beirut's Hamra shopping area at about 8 a.m.

French diplomats in Lebanon have been the target of frequent attacks since the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war in 1980. Extremist Shiite Moslem groups loyal to Iran's Islamic revolution claim France has helped the Iraqi war effort.

The Voice of Lebanon said several Christian residential neighborhoods in east Beirut and its suburbs came under new shelling attacks at midmorning.

The radio said at least 20 civilians, including six children, were wounded and hospitalized as a result of an hour-long bombardment.

The command of the Lebanese Forces, a Christian militia, charged in a statement that Shiite gunners in west Beirut's suburban neighborhod of Chiyah were responsible for the barrage and threatened to retaliate if the bombardment continued, the radio said.

Earlier today, police said four people were killed and eight wounded in fighting overnight around Beirut.

Much of the fighting centered on the residential neighborhoods adjacent to the "green line" separating Moslem west Beirut and Christian east Beirut, as well as around the strategic Lebanese army mountain garrison at Souk el-Gharb.

The 1,300-man French contingent of the multinational force, which has been guarding parts of the "green line," has begun a withdrawal that is expected to be completed Saturday.

A French spokesman, Capt. Jean-Yves Blouin, said 205 soldiers left Beirut today, the third day of the evacuation, aboard two boats.

Lebanese newspapers reported today that French Ambassador Fernand Wibeaux told a security committee charged with consolidating a cease-fire agreement that 40 French truce observers were expected to arrive in Beirut on Wednesday.

Experts find evidence of chemical bombings

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Four experts dispatched to Iran to investigate charges of chemical weapons use by Iraq say they found evidence that aerial bombs containing chemical agents had been dropped near the Iranian border.

But their report, issued Monday, does not suggest who was responsible for the bombings.

The four, appointed by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, spent a week in Iran, from March 13-19. They visited a sector of the Iranian war zone, examined alleged victims of chemical weapons in Iranian hospitals and the bodies of victims who allegedly died from exposure to chemical weapons.

They did not visit Iraq, where much of the war's recent fighting has taken place.

The specialists — from Sweden, Spain, Australia and Switzerland — said they unanimously concluded that "chemical weapons in the form of aerial bombs have been used in the areas inspected in Iran."

Their 28-page report, which was sent to the Security Council, described the weapons as a form of mustard gas and a nerve agent identified as Tabun. It said the specialists could not determine "the extent to which these chemical agents have been used."

Iran claims Iraq has been using chemical weapons in the 3½-year-old war.

The U.S. State Department issued a statement March 5 saying "available evidence indicates that Iraq has used lethal chemical weapons."

Iraq consistently has denied using chemical weapons.

A spokesman at Iran's U.N. mission said there would be "no comment today," and Iraqi Ambassador Riyadh S. al-Qaysi told reporters he had not read the document.

world in brief

Curfews imposed

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military government imposed overnight curfews and strict press censorship in an effort to curb a planned nationwide protest today by foes of President Augusto Pinochet.

Opposition leaders vowed to proceed with the "Day of National Protest" and told Chileans to keep their children out of school, boycott stores, and bang pots and pans together to show their disapproval.

Rodolfo Seguel, the 30-year-old copper workers union leader who took charge of the protest movement last May, urged restraint, saying,"We repudiate violence. We are going to protest in a truly peaceful way."

The Democratic Alliance of five non-communist parties and the Marxist-led Democratic Popular Movement joined Seguel's National Workers Command in urging the new protest. At total of 62 demonstrators have been killed in the series of monthly protests that started in May.

Queen sees memorial

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II, on the second day of her visit to Jordan, today visited a memorial honoring Jordan's war heroes, including those who died fighting Israel.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, drove to a wooded glade on Amman's northwest outskirts to visit the Martyrs Memorial and view its exhibits — snapshots, clothing, military hardware and models depicting the great battles of Arab history.

One exhibit she saw was devoted to Lawrence of Arabia, a Briton who helped lead the Arab uprisings against the Ottoman Empire. Another, taken in 1948, depicted the battle for Jerusalem after Israel's creation that left the city divided. The names of those who fell fighting the Israelis are inscribed in gold on the monument's walls.

Steel to be buried

MEXICO CITY (AP) — About 200 tons of radioactive steel, much of it returned from the United States, will be buried in a pit next month, the head of the Mexican Nuclear Safety Commission says.

But the official, Roberto Trevino, said Monday that several thousand tons of tainted metal poses no health threat and may be used in public works projects.

Irish, Michigan win NIT semis

NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame basketball Coach Digger Phelps is still enjoying the Christmas present given him by Irish football Coach Gerry Faust — wide receiver-turned-point guard Joe Howard.

Phelps went to the 5-foot-9 Howard as a last resort when the Irish lost their only point guards on the roster to academics and injury. Howard is still paying dividends and the latest is a trip to the championship game of the 47th National Invitation Tournament.

Notre Dame, 21-11, beat fellow independent Southwestern Louisiana 65-59 Monday night to advance to Wednesday's title game against Michigan. The Wolverines, 22-10, eliminated Virginia Tech 78-75 in the opening game of the semifinal double-header played before a Madison Square Garden crowd of 9,049.

Howard, who scored six points, 20 fewer than senior forward Tom Sluby, was the catalyst in a 15-6 Irish spurt over the final 6:07 that lifted Notre Dame into its second NIT championship game.

"He's been doing those things since he joined the team," Phelps said of the man who has led the Irish football team in receptions each of the past three seasons. Howard arrived at Phelps' sideline after the football team's 19-18 victory over Boston College in the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 29.

With Notre Dame leading 58-55, Ken Barlow of the Irish was called for an offensive foul that nullified a successful dunk. The Ragin' Cajuns came downcourt and Alonza Allen missed a jump shot that Howard rebounded. Nine seconds later, Howard fed Barlow for a three-point play and a six-point lead. Howard then made two free throws with 1:20 remaining and six seconds later he stole the ball as USL tried to get back in the game.

The Irish enjoyed a fine night on the free-throw line to keep the Ragin' Cajuns at bay.

After not attempting a free throw in the first half, Notre Dame made it first 15 in the second half and finished with 17 of 20.

"I don't want to talk about free-throw shooting until Thursday morning," Phelps said in his best superstitious coaching voice. "I've said all along the three things that got us here were defense, rebounding and free-throw shooting."

Southwestern Louisiana Coach Bobby Paschal agreed that those three factors sent his team into the consolation game.

"We didn't handle ourselves very well," Paschal said. "Their defense had a lot to do with that. They made us impatient with their aggressiveness and their offensive rebounding hurt us as much as missed free throws."

The final rebounding total was 38-30 for Notre Dame and the offensive numbers read 12-9 for the Irish.

"Tim (Kempton) and (Jim) Dolan did a great job on the boards," Sluby said. "That made it easier for me to take my shots."

Sluby finished at 50 percent from the field, 11 of 22.

"We wanted to keep Sluby on the perimeter and we did," Paschal said. "They just continued to get the big baskets."

The big points for Michigan came from the free-throw line and they were two of sophomore center Roy Tarpley's 23 on the night.

With 45 seconds remaining, Tarpley made two foul shots that gave the Wolverines a 76-75 lead. After two timeouts were called by Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir, the Hokies missed their last chance at victory when a 15-foot jumper by Tim Lewis missed. Tarpley grabbed the rebound and fed freshman guard Antoine Joubert who went the length of the court for a layup that provided the final margin.

"I took a deep breath and just made them," Tarpley said of the winning free throws. "I missed one and made against Texas-El Paso in a Christmas tournament and we lost that game by one point. I thought about that when I went to the line."

Michigan Coach Bill Frieder credited his team's defense, especially guard Eric Turner and Joubert with the semifinal victory.

"We struggled in the first half defensively," Frieder said. "We usually play better than that. We didn't give them the transition baskets in the second half. Eric turned in a great six-to-eight minutes on (Dell) Curry and Joubert pushed him out the rest of the way."

Michigan was rightfully concerned with Curry as the sophomore guard had 16 points at halftime on eight of 13 shooting. He finished with 24 as he got just six shots in the second half.

"They were bigger than we were," Moir said. "They are big and physical and took advantage of it."

Virginia Tech, 21-13, will meet Southwestern Louisiana, 23-9, in the consolation game Wednesday night.

ACC's 6th team nets Final Four

By The Associated Press

Somehow, Virginia just doesn't fit.

The Cavaliers finished sixth in the Atlantic Coast Conference and lost in the first round of the ACC tournament to Wake Forest.

They entered the NCAA tournament with a 17-11 record. Only Nevada-Reno had a worse mark among the 53 tournament teams.

"People didn't really respect us," senior guard Othell Wilson says.

Now, as a member of college basketball's elite — the Final Four — Wilson says Virginia should have earned "as much respect as we want."

Next Saturday in Seattle, the Cavaliers meet fifth-ranked Houston in one semifinal game, while No. 2 Georgetown takes on third-ranked Kentucky, the winners to meet for college basketball's national championship.

In one other respect, the Cavaliers do not fit. This has turned out to be a Final Four of big men, ironically one year after Virginia lost 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson to graduation.

But in the four years of Ralph, the Cavaliers never were able to win the title, making only one trip to the Final Four, in 1981.

"The key," says Virginia Coach Terry Holland, "is to know how bad we felt when we lost in 1981. The closer you get to the national championship, the worse you feel when you lose. That's crazy, I know, but that's the way it is. You can't say, 'Well, we had a great season, we got to the Final Four. I want to make sure they know that before Saturday's game is played, not after."

The dominant force on Houston, 31-4, is 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon, a native of Nigeria who scored 29 points in the Cougars' Midwest Regional triumph over Wake Forest on Sunday. Virginia, now 21-11, upset Indiana 50-48 to win the East Regional Saturday.

Many fans are hoping for a dream matchup in the final of Olajuwon against 7-footer Patrick Ewing, who led Georgetown, 32-3, to a 61-49 romp over Dayton in Sunday's West Regional title game. Kentucky fans have other ideas.

Kentucky, 29-4, beat Illinois 54-51 in the Mideast final Saturday, getting a lot of help from the twin towers of 7-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin.

"It'll be a whale of a game," Dayton Coach Don Donoher said of the Georgetown-Kentucky matchup.

Hargrove, Moreno fighting pine time

Exhibitions

By The Associated Press

Mike Hargrove and Omar Moreno, two veterans who have played regularly for most of their careers, are trying to send messages that they aren't ready for bench duty.

Moreno, hitting .195 this spring and ticketed for spot duty until Monday, had three hits and knocked in two runs to lead the New York Yankees to a 7-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Monday night.

The sparkling performance by Moreno came after it was announced by the Yankees that Ken Griffey was being moved from center field to first base, where he played last year.

Meanwhile, Hargrove, after learning that he had lost his starting first base job for Cleveland to Pat Tabler, had two hits Monday in the Indians' 5-4 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. Tabler was 0-for-2 with an RBI groundout.

Hargrove is batting .394 in exhibition games, with 12 walks.

In other games, Lee Lacy hit three singles and a home run for the second game in a row, giving him a .516 spring batting average, as a split squad of Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Minnesota Twins 11-5. Lacy hit a three-run homer in a five-run fifth inning for the Pirates, who had 18 hits and now are 12-5 in the exhibition season, best in the majors.

Another team of Pirates lost 4-3 to the Chicago White Sox as Tom Seaver pitched six scoreless innings, giving up four hits.

Bobby Grich singled in the only run of the game in the fourth inning, and Mike Witt pitched seven scoreless innings as the California Angels beat the Milwaukee Brewers 1-0. Despite the loss, Paul Molitor of the Brewers went 2-for-3 to raise his spring average to .551.

Ray Knight's 12th-inning single drove home Jose Cruz with the winning run as the Houston Astros outlasted the Detroit Tigers 5-4.

Frank Tanana scattered four hits in six innings and a seventh-inning error by third baseman Todd Cruz opened the door for three unearned runs in the Texas Rangers shut out the Baltimore Orioles 3-0.

Sixto Lezcano hit a two-run homer and a pair of doubles to pace the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Boston scored all of its eight runs in the fourth inning, two of them on a homer by Tony Armas as the Red Sox beat the Montreal Expos 8-3.

Gorman Thomas, Phil Bradley and Barry Bonnell drove in two runs each as the Seattle Mariners pounded 17 out hits in a 14-7 triumph over the San Diego Padres.

Frank White hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning to give the Kansas City Royals a 5-4 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

Greg Brock drove in two runs with a single and a double to help the Los Angeles Dodgers post a 4-2 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals, who lost for the 15th time in 19 spring games.

Joel Youngblood hit his second home run in two days and drove in three runs as the San Francisco Giants downed the Oakland A's 5-3.

Panthers scrambles Gamblers; Stallions bust Bandits

Hebert record paces slugfest

HOUSTON (AP) — The humidity of the Astrodome on Monday night reminded Michigan quarterback Bobby Hebert of his home in Cutoff, La.

Hebert looked right at home Monday night, passing for four touchdowns and a United States Football League record 444 yards in leading the Panthers to a 52-34 victory over the Houston Gamblers.

"At halftime, I was pretty tired," Hebert said. "With all this humidity, it was kind of like home. I knew we were in for a dog fight because Houston would score some points."

Hebert, who erased of the previous record of 440 yards set Sunday by New Orleans' Johnny Walton, completed 9 of 12 passes for 230 yards and three touchdowns in the second half.

"I didn't even know about the record," he said. "Winning's the main things. I knew if we kept playing well offensively we'd keep in the game."

Hebert engineered a touchdown and a field goal in the last five minutes of the first half to give Michigan a 24-21 advantage.

Hebert hit Derek Holloway on a 72-yard pass with 9:52 left in the third quarter, a score matched two plays later by the Gamblers, 3-2, on a 63-yard touchdown pass from Jim Kelly to Clarence Verdin.

The Panthers, 5-0, broke the game open when Linnie Patrick rushed 11 yards for a touchdown and caught a 19-yard pass from Hebert for another to give Michigan a 38-21 lead with 1:12 left in the third period.

Anthony Carter reeled in a 55-yard pass from Hebert and Patrick added a 14-yard run for a 52-21 margin with 7:41 remaining in the game.

Holloway caught six passes for 133 yards for Michigan.

The Gamblers took a 14-7 lead with 14:50 left in the first half on Kelly's two 9-yard scoring passes to Scott McGhee and Richard Johnson.

Novo Bojovic kicked a 22-yard field goal and Hebert hit Carter with an 11-yard pass with 23 seconds left in the first half to put the defending league champions ahead 24-21.

John Wiliams tallied Michigans first touchdown on a 1-yard run with 1:22 to play in the first quarter.

The 86 points scored by the two teams was a new USFL mark. The previous record was set earlier this season when Houston defeated Chicago 41-36.

Patient offense doom Bandits

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Birmingham Stallions rolled to their fourth straight United States Football League victory Monday night, crushing the Tampa Bay Bandits 27-9 with a ball-control offense that consumed nearly 42 minutes of the clock.

Cliff Stoudt ran for one touchdown and set up another with a 47-yard pass to Joey Jones as the Stallions remained one game behind the New Orleans Breakers in the Southern Division standings.

The triumph also spoiled the professional debut of Tampa Bay's rookie quarterback Wayne Peace, who made his first start in front of a crowd of 37,899.

Stoudt ran 2 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter and used his 47-yard completion to Jones to set Leon Perry's 1-yard plunge for a 20-9 advantage with 2:11 left in the third period.

Birmingham, who controlled the ball for 41:36, used 11:10 of the final quarter to march 59 yards to complete the rout with Joe Cribbs' 2-yard TD run.

The loss left Tampa Bay with a 3-2 record.

"We were soundly whipped as most everyone can tell," Bandits Coach Steve Spurrier said. "It was the most lopsided time of possession game I think I've ever been involved in.

"We're just not very good right now, and don't know what it's going to take to get better," he added.

Stoudt, meanwhile, attributed the Stallions' success to a powerful offeensive line.

"If there's a better line in the league, I haven't seen it," the former Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback said.

Stallions defensive tackle Jackie Cline sacked Peace for a 6-yard loss and safety on Tampa Bay's first possession of the game, but the Bandits led 3-2 after one period on Zenon Andrusyshyn's 43-yard field goal with 12 seconds left in the quarter.

Birmingham took command with a 15-play, 68-yard touchdown drive that consumed the first 8:51 of the second period. Stoudt completed the march with his 2-yard run and then flipped a two-point conversion pass to Jones for a 10-3 lead.

Danny Miller's 22-yard field goal with 52 seconds remaining in the half boosted the Stallions lead to 13-3.

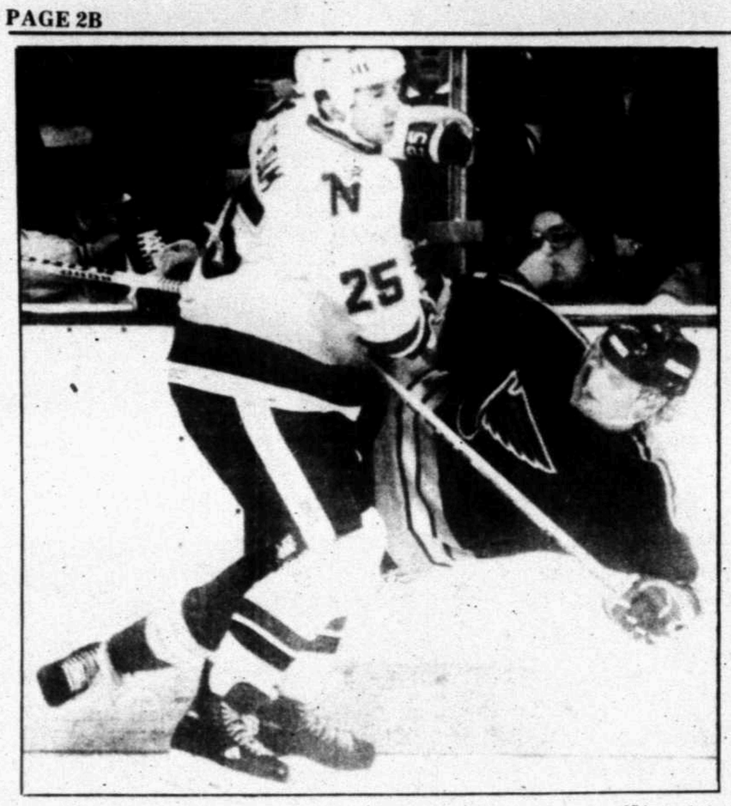
Rookie Lawton pulls weight



AP Laserphoto

Minnesota's Al MacAdam (25) greets St. Louis Blues wing Mark Reed in Monday NHL.

NHL

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Brian Lawton isn't bothered by the critics who say the Minnesota North Stars made the wrong move by picking him first in the National Hockey League draft.

"They can write that now, but we'll see if they write that a couple years down the road," said Lawton, after his breakaway backhander gave the Minnesota North Stars a 4-3 victory over St. Louis Monday night in the only NHL game.

Lawton, 18, became the first American drafted No. 1 in the NHL draft last June. He bypassed the Olympics to sign with the North Stars for about $600,000 for four years.

But shoulder and knee injuries have taken the luster off his rookie season, Lawton said. His game-winner against the Blues was only his 10th goal of the season.

Meanwhile, last year's No. 2 pick, Sylvain Turgeon of Hartford, has 70 points; Olympic whiz Pat LaFontaine has scored 11 goals in 12 games for the New York Islanders, and Detroit's Steve Yzerman has a rookie-high 85 points.

"It's been a very disappointing year and people have the right to compare me with other rookies," Lawton said. "I have 30 points now and with the injuries, I have only skated on a regular line for about 28 games. It doesn't take a mathematician to figure out how many points I would have had if I was in all 80 games."

Lawton said if he delayed turning pro and joined the Olympic team and suffered the same injuries, "Who knows where I'd be now?"

Minnesota Coach Bill Mahoney said Lawton's overtime goal proves that he "has the makings of a star for a long time to come."

"To have the cool to break through with a head of steam, go to your backhander and throw it up high at 18 and in the stress of an overtime situation, that shows what Mr. Lawton's all about," Mahoney said.

Mahoney said Lawton has kept his rookie year in perspective and not let the injuries and limited ice time affect his play.

"There's no question Brian had a lot of pressure on him," Mahoney said. "It was a disappointing year in that he wasn't as healthy as he expected and didn't have the kind of year he would have liked. But he's a strong, stable team player and he'll be around a long time."

Joe Mullen sent the game into overtime with only 18 seconds left, taking a faceoff from Doug Gilmour and rifling the puck past Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche.

But Lawton's goal 2:41 into overtime handed St. Louis its first OT defeat of the season.

Minnesota took a 2-0 lead with a first-period backhander by Keith Acton and a 45-foot shorthanded slapshot by Al Macadam in the second period.

St. Louis rallied with power-play goals from Doug Wickenheiser and Rik Wilson 2:20 apart late in the second period.

But with 18 seconds left in that session, Minnesota's Brian Bellows banged in his 39th goal from point-blank range and the North Stars led 3-2.

That lead lasted until Mullen's 30-footer with 18 seconds left sent the game into overtime.

Lawton's game-winner ended Minnesota's regular season at home. The Norris Division-champion North Stars have lost only once in their last 11 games and finished 22-14-4 at the Met Center. That's nine points worse than last year's home ice record.

St. Louis, meanwhile, remains in second place in the Norris Division, four points ahead of Detroit.

Hockey champs had humble start

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — The story of ice hockey at Bowling Green State University traces to a pair of ambitious students, one from Canada and one from New York, who approached Sam Cooper about starting a team at the university in the early 1960s.

Were it not for the lure of a free lunch — the students were buying — Cooper may have rejected the idea.

Two decades later, a club sport that once rented playing ice anywhere it could has come full circle with a national collegiate championship, the first in the school's history.

"We had a hockey team here before we had a rink, but I never really thought anything like this would happen," said Cooper, retired director of health, physical education and recreation at the northwest Ohio university.

"We were kind of a do-it-yourself outfit. We'd rent ice on Sunday morning at the old Cleveland Arena and play against anybody who wanted to play us," Cooper said.

That first year, Cooper set aside $900 from the intramural sports budget for hockey. It was strictly a club sport that had to earn its way to varsity status. That happened in 1969, two years after the school's ice arena opened.

"Those students who came to me wanted to take me to lunch. You should always be wary when students want to take you to lunch," Cooper said with a laugh. "I asked a lot of hard questions, but they had all the answers. At that point, most the people at this school didn't know a puck from a grapefruit."

Twenty years have changed that. Some 2,000 people filled the ice arena late Sunday night to welcome home the championship team.

"This has been the best unifier of town and gown that there could be," he said.

Cooper, better known for his swimming accomplishments than for hockey, was in the jubilant crowd.

The pool at the student recreation center is named for Cooper, a diver on the 1936 U.S. Olympic team and swimming coach at Bowling Green.

Cooper said he's never wielded a hockey stick, although he's often taken the ice with figure skater Scott Hamilton, an Olympic gold medalist and four-time world champion who hails from Bowling Green.

"When people ask me, I just tell them I'm still in the water, only it's frozen," Cooper said.

Cooper, 71, followed the Falcon hockey team throughout the season, ending with Saturday night's 5-4 victory in four overtimes over the University of Minnesota-Duluth at the Olympic Arena in Lake Placid, N.Y.

"Hockey and ice skating is putting Bowling Green on the map," Cooper said. "But this program was built up, nurtured and supported over the years," he said. "Flowers don't just bloom from the head of Zeus."

Phi Slama Jama hits FT practice

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Cougars will try to unlock the secret of shooting free throws this week as they prepare for their third straight trip to the NCAA Final Four tournament.

The Cougars have reached the Final Four three straight years without being able to hit free throw consistently, including Sunday' 10 fo 21 performance in a 68-63 victory over Wake Forest in the finals of the NCAA Midwest Regionals at St. Louis.

"Some nights we hit free throws and hit free throws and some nights we miss free throws and miss free throws, and miss free throws," said guard Alvin Franklin, who hit five of his six free shots.

The Cougars missed what could have been crucial free throws in the closing minutes against the Deacons but lone tower, Akeem Olajuwon turned in a dominating performance with 29 points and 12 revounds.

Olajuwon hit 14 of 16 shots from the field for 29 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

Although Olajuwon lifted his self-imposed vow of silence following Sunday's game, but most of the talk was about the 7-foot Nigerian's performance.

Anthony Teachey, who tried to guard Olajuwon said, "He's the best center I've played against. Yes, that includes Ralph (Sampson) He's better than Ralph. He's strong inside and bigger than Ralph. He stays inside more than Ralph."

Young, Houston's most consistent scorer throughout the regular season, could not explain his sudden slump. He hit only 5 of 22 shots in the Midwest semifinals against Memphis State and was 7 of 18 against Wake Forest.

"Never in my life have I shot that poorly," Young said. "I don't know what the problem was. I just lost my technique. Maybe I was thinking about it too much.

"I need practice right now. I should have stayed out and practiced free throws when the game was over."

Young had two points and halftime. He finished with 15 points and hit only one of six free throws.

Knight aims for Olympic Games

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Knight says his philosophy in coaching any basketball team "is never to lose."

And this is especially important in his role this summer as coach of the U.S. Olympic team, the Indiana Hoosiers coach says.

"You coach a college team and you get beat, and sometimes it doesn't hurt too much," he said. "Here, it is paramount to finish with an undefeated record.

"I don't expect anything. What I want to do is to put a team together that for two weeks is the best in the world. There is no next year. It is a team put together solely for today, and the only reward is a gold medal."

Knight was in New York Monday to accept the Kodak-National Invitation Tournament Man of the Year award. A morning news conference, however, centered on his Olympic involvement, and he was asked if his controversial off-court behavior made him the right selection as Olympic coach.

Knight nearly lost his job at Indiana in 1979 when he went to trial in Puerto Rico for assaulting a police officer during the Pan American Games, for which he was the U.S. coach basketball. He later offered to resign, but the university refused to accept.

Then, in 1981, he again was surrounded by controversy as his team was on its way to a second NCAA championship under Knight. On the eve of his team's ultimate victory in Philadelphia, Knight pushed an irascible fan into a garbage can at his team's hotel in nearby Cherry Hill, N.J.

Despite these and other cage-rattling incidents, Knight was selected unanimously two years ago.

Rice knocks off Hogs

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Third baseman Scott Johnson hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning Monday as the Rice Owls defeated Arkansas 7-2 in a Southwest Conference baseball game.

The victory gave the Razorbacks a 2-1 split in the three-game series. Arkansas won both games of a doubleheader Sunday.

David Hinnrichs, 6-0, pitched 10 strikeouts for the Owls, now 23-4 overall and 3-3 in the SWC.

Arkansas' Kevin Campbell, 3-1, took the loss. The Razorbacks are 4-2 in the SWC and 25-5 overall.

Rice contested a call in the fifth inning. A two-run homer by first baseman Carl Mikeska was disallowed because his bat was not marked 18 inches from the bottom as required.

Israel may become oil producing state

Israel is not known as one of the world's great oil and gas producers, but a Colordao geologist is betting sedimentary rocks beneath the Negev Desert might yield hydrocarbons for the Jewish state.

J. Jerome Williams is president of Isramco Inc., the U.S. company that along with its Israeli joint venture partners, made Israel's first commercial oil discovery in 25 years. Others have reported "oil shows," Williams said, but the Gurim No. 4, tested in January, is the first well with commercial potential.

"It's too small to attract the attention (of large companies)," he said. "They go after the Mukluks (a large Alaskan area)."

But the find is not too small for Isramco. "If we had two or three fields like that after we finished the total project, we'd be ecstatic," he said.

Williams hopes the discovery will lead to a 50 million barrel field, which would would mean production of 10,000 to 15,000 barrels per day.

Israel had found substantial quantities of oil and gas in the Gulf of Suez and in the Sinai, but returned that territory to Egypt in 1982.

Israel's major oil find was the Heletz Field, discovered in the mid-1950s. It yielded a total of 16 million barrels, but dwindled to about 400 barrels of oil a day, Williams explained. Israel also found some "significant gas fields" in the late 1950s, "but most of these are on the downside, too."

That is a tiny amount compared with the 150,000 barrels of oil per day the highly industrialized country consumes. Most of that oil comes from Mexico and Norway, he said.

Williams conceded that when he was asked to look at Israel, he did so with "a jaundiced eye" because conventional wisdom said that the Mediterranean country was not very promising. But advances have been made in geology and geophysics since the last burst of Israeli exploration in the 1960s, Williams said.

The potential is there, he noted, because Israel has the "key" sedimentary rock layers needed to produce oil and gas — the Lower Cretaceous and the Jurassic — that have produced more than 75 percent of the world's oil.

The area has "complex geology," he said, and "you've got to have good data and good geology and good concepts to unravel it."

About 300 wells — exploratory and development — have been drilled in Israel since the 1950s, Williams said, and about 100 have been development wells.

He also observed that Israel's wildcat efforts have been concentrated near old productive areas, and vast regions are largely unexplored.

Even though the Isramco group has a discovery, there is still, as Isramco's prospectus pointed out, "a high degree of risk and investors should therefore be prepared to lose their entire investment."

Isramco became a publicly held U.S. company through an August 1983 offering, underwritten by Quantum Capital Group Inc., which raised about $6.5 million with 4 million units.

ARCO heads see big future for recovery

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Energy Editor

ARCO Oil & Gas Co. will be looking strongly toward developed and not-yet developed recovery technology to help build its reserves, according to R.O. Anderson, chairman of the board, and W.F. Kieschink, president and chief executive officer.

Anderson, Kieschink along with other ARCO executives from Los Angeles, Dallas, and Midland were honored Monday at a reception hosted by the Midland Wildcat Committee, at Midland Petroleum Club.

'ARCO has a long tradition for getting the second and third crop of oil from reservoirs,' said Kieschink. 'If you were to ask for our position now, I would say we are engaged in squeezing-squeezing more oil from formations.'

Kieschink said he was particulary excited about ARCO's position in Alaska, and the fact that it would be able to apply so much newly developed recovery technology to the first crop. 'Reservoir engineering is where its at today,' he said.

'We are getting more from reservoirs now than we every dreamed of,' said Anderson. It's not unheard of today to get 65-75 percent recovery, but a few years back we would not even have dreamed of such through recovery.'

Anderson said that the Permian Basin would continue to share in ARCO's faith in secondary and tertiary recovery and more CO2 projects could be expected.

'Who knows,' said Anderson, 'probably when we are through with this tertiary phase of recovery, another fourth phase of technology will be coming off the drawing board to give Permian Basin reservoirs many more years of life.'

Kieschink said that back in 1947, when he was a young reservoir engineer, ARCO's share of Block 31 in Crane County was 15,000 barrels of oil per day; and today, the share is more than that due to improved recovery technology.

Analysts predict more interest rate increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve policymakers, winding up two days of secret talks, most likely agreed earlier this month to start clamping down on credit conditions as a means of cooling off economic expansion, private analysts say.

As evidence, the analysts point to the recent round of interest rate increases and say the policymakers have done little to ease the pressure on those rates.

But because they believe the tightening actions were taken earlier, they don't foresee a further hike in interest rates right away.

Those rates, though, could rise more later in the year, the analysts said in advance of the discussions Monday and today by the Federal Open Market Committee.

Indeed, the president's chief economist, Martin Feldstein, said in a speech Monday, "It is certainly possible that there could be some further increases in interest rates this year in response to the increasing demand for money and credit."

The Reagan administration declined to offer advice to the Fed policymakers. Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes would only say, "The Fed meets. The Fed does what it does. We don't tell it what to do."

Private analysts weren't so close-mouthed.

Most said they thought that in recent weeks the inflation-minded Federal Reserve tightened its grip on money and credit in an effort to cool down the economy. Such a move tends to lead to higher interest rates which can slow economic activity somewhat.

Congress attacking FTC's deceptive business policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Trade Commission Chairman James C. Miller III is being attacked by Congress and state attorneys general who don't like an FTC definition of deceptive business practices.

Miller's actions constitute "the most fundamental attack on consumer protection" in the last half-century, Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said Monday.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, charged that over the last two years Miller "has conceived and executed a plan to narrow the commission's authority over deceptive practices."

Critics said that by asking Congress to define deceptive practices, Miller, in effect, sought a drastic limit on the 45-year-old FTC's authority. The definition would have overruled court precedents and forced states to bring many new cases to establish what is legal, they said.

When Congress refused to pass the bill Miller wanted, the FTC adopted the Miller proposal anyway, they said.

The FTC said in October that deception is "any representation, omission or other practice that is likely to mislead the consumer acting reasonably under the circumstances to the consumer's detriment."

Miller insisted that it was neither a radical departure from precedent nor a retreat from vigorous enforcement of the consumer protection laws.

He didn't win over the congressmen or Attorneys General Thomas J. Miller of Iowa and John J. Easton Jr. of Vermont. The attorneys general said this requires them to bring new cases to have courts interpret what is "misleading," "reasonable" and "to the consumer detriment."

"We have limited resources to decide if the law is as it has been for the last half-century," Miller said. "We don't want to have to litigate every part of the law."

Many states have consumer protection laws requiring state courts to look to the FTC policies in order to define what is a deceptive act on the state level.

Dollar dips in early trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar dipped sharply against key currencies in early trading today as U.S. interest rates eased and concern continued for Washington's trade and spending deficits. Gold prices were up.

Lower U.S. interest rates make the dollar less attractive to investors.

Eurodollar deposit rates fell by 1-8th of a point overnight, Frankfurt dealers reported. The U.S. Federal Funds rate, the interest on overnight loans between banks, slipped Monday to about 10 percent from a 10.5-percent level last week.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 223.95 yen

NOW YOU CAN PUT YOUR IRA ON THE NYSE.

And that makes a big difference.

Until now, most bank IRAs have been invested in savings certificates. But suppose you want greater investment flexibility?

Opening a First City Self-Directed IRA is the answer.

Then you can begin investing your IRA funds in stocks, bonds and covered call options carried on the NYSE and other major exchanges. Plus, you can save up to 70% on broker commissions since you make your own investment decisions.

Here's how it works: Once your account is open, simply call First City Brokerage Services, whenever you want to trade. An experienced trader will handle your order quickly and efficiently. Then at the end of the month, you'll receive a statement of all trades, as well as the value of securities held in your IRA.

All uninvested IRA funds earn a high rate of interest in a First City Money Market Savings Account.

And like any of our IRAs, you can invest as much as $2,000 annually, and earn up to $1,000 a year in tax deductions.

In addition, you have until April 16, 1984 to open the IRA and apply your entire contribution toward the 1983 tax year.

Rollover IRAs are also available. If you have an IRA elsewhere, or have recently received a lump sum distribution from a qualified plan, you can invest these assets in a First City Self-Directed IRA.

To open your account, stop by First City, or phone First City Brokerage Services at 1-800-392-8989 (685-5292 in Midland), and we'll mail you our sign-up kit.

Then you'll have an IRA that can be invested more ways than ever before.

Boy's death motivates woman to form statewide organization

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

STANTON — When Stephanie Boucher moved from Corpus Christi to Forestburg in Montague County (population 200), she thought she would be able to escape the horrible news that clogged nightly broadcasts and stained the pages of the press daily.

As the wife of a 13-year veteran policemen, she was tired of always hearing bad news.

But when her husband came home one day and told her the outcome of a trial involving a woman who was accused of beating her 5-year-old son to death, Ms. Boucher got mad.

The woman had been found guilty and sentenced to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. But the sentence was probated "so she would not be separated from her other two children."

"That got me involved," Ms. Boucher said. She began digging into the case and found the boy had been hospitalized five months before that. "He'd been severely beaten," she said. "It was so bad they had to take him to a Waco hospital."

While the child was hospitalized, an investigation by the local Department of Human Resources began. It was found both parents physically abused the boy.

"But no criminal charges were brought against them," Ms. Boucher said. "They decided to leave him in the home because removing him would be more traumatic."

The child was placed under the protective supervision of the DHR and a caseworker made monthly visits to the home at an appointed time to check on the child's safety.

After four visits, four months later, the caseworker went to the district attorney and recommended the family be released from DHR supervision. Eight days later, before a judge could do the paperwork and two days after the parents had thrown the child a fifth-year birthday party, he was dead.

That was in June. By August, Ms. Boucher chartered Mothers (and others) Against Murder (MAAM). By October, she was traveling the state, investigating complaints and organizing local chapters. By the time she took a break at Christmas, 46 chapters had been formed around the state by people who are tired of the way investigation and prosecution of child abuse cases are conducted. Last fall, more than 9,000 persons joined the organization, which is applying for tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service.

Severely abused six-month-old 'smiling on his last day in hospital'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

STANTON — Virginia Thomas of Big Spring was recruited by her church to sit with an abused, hospitalized baby. "He was a six-month-old baby and needed round-the-clock supervisors," she said.

He didn't weigh nine pounds and his body was one solid bruise. "He was in preemie diapers and they were too big."

The infant was in the hospital for a little more than two weeks. Toward the end, he began responding to those around him. "He was smiling on his last day in the hospital," Ms. Thomas said. "By then the IVs had come out and he was starting to look up and at the people with him. The light that came into his eyes when we held him...I don't think he'd ever been held before."

The baby was put into a shelter for abused children. At the end of the maximum 30 days, he would be returned to his mother, the Department of Human Resources caseworker told Ms. Thomas.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. She wrote letters to everyone — the president, senators and legislators. The ones who replied said they had contacted the DHR. But the caseworker said she still could do nothing about it.

"It's a vicious cycle."

The rights of the natural parent exceed the rights of the children, according to a group of more than 30 people that gathered in Stanton Monday night to form a local chapter of Mothers (and others) Against Murder (MAAM). According to Knott resident Tim Winn, who with his wife Beverly, were foster parents, "when the child goes into the welfare system, he loses all rights."

Commissioners will seek grants to aid 'windowpane' area

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

County commissioners will be seeking a federal grant to alleviate "potential health problems" on the southside's "windowpane" area, which is dotted with illegal cesspools and poorly maintained water wells.

The decision to apply for a grant came after local health officials told commissioners during an otherwise routine meeting Monday that 13 of 29 wells tested last week were contaminated with human and animal waste.

Eleven of the wells showed no contamination, while test results on the remaining five were inconclusive.

The coliform bacteria found in the wells could produce diseases such as hepatitis and typhoid fever, according to Dr. James Humphreys Jr., acting director of the Midland-Ector-Howard County Health Department.

Asked by Commissioner Durward Wright if the potential for an epidemic exists in the 12-block area, Humphreys said: "Yes." He later said "a lotta luck" is probably what has kept residents of the area from becoming sick so far.

Humphreys pointed to test results showing that not all the wells are contaminated as evidence the groundwater itself is not contaminated, and said in a written report to commissioners:

"What these findings suggest is poor care of the wells, such as lack of chlorination, inadequate casings or poor methods of delivering water from the wells to the house. The findings do not suggest that there is actual sewage contamination of the water-bearing formation in the (wells themselves).

"Sewage disposal for the area consists of a few septic systems and numerous cesspools, most of which have not been properly maintained. The picture of this 'windowpane' area is that of substandard housing, water supply and sewage disposal, amid considerable organic and inorganic refuse, and roaming livestock."

Among recommendations for correcting the problem are a door-to-door education campaign on chlorinating and maintaining the wells, and providing the area with city sewer and water services.

"Annexation of this area by the city would necessitate major changes regarding the resident livestock, among other things, and such changes probably would not be well received by the inhabitants," said the report.

"Consequently, annexation is not recommended for health reasons, providing municipal water and sewage service be made available."

The "impact" of annexing the area, which is an unincorporated island within the city limits, was spelled out for commissioners in a report by Don Goodrum, chief sanitarian for the city-county health department:

"Annexation would increase the population of the city by 290. The area appears to be low income, but objects such as new cars and new mobile homes were observed. With relatively few exceptions, the mobile homes constituted the only desirable housing in the area.

"Cesspools are located too near water wells. Rubber hoses are attached to water wells, some running through open sewage. These are used to supply drinking water for many of the houses in the windowpane area.

"The general nature of the garbage and debris in the area (would) create an immediate and costly expense for the city. Removal of steel, tin cans, lumber, cinder blocks, deserted shreds of buildings, tree stumps and abandoned autos would be the major components of this expense.

"All residents of the area seem adamant concerning retention of their livestock and poultry. Annexation probably (would) conflict with this attitude. The stray dogs and cats observed in the area (would) undoubtedly contribute to an increase in the workload for city animal control (personnel)."

Area resident Bill Price, who attended the meeting and whose well is one of those that showed no contamination, said he maintains his own well and indicated he wasn't impressed by the potential health hazard:

"We've been through this for 20 years now. I'm not interested in annexation and the people I know aren't interested in it because of the extra regulations involved. I believe the wells can be chlorinated and brought to standards."

Saying that neither the city nor the county have the nearly $1 million it would take to upgrade water and sewer services in the area, Commissioners Wally Craig and C. DeWayne Davis said they would visit officials in Austin to see about federal grants available through state agencies.

While a municipality can't legally provide services to unincorporated areas, according to Davis, he said the city "could grant a variance" that would allow residents to link their homes to the city sewer and water lines that surround the "windowpane."

Noting the lack of available local money for the project, Davis said, "If we don't get the grant money, nothing will be done."

The deadline for grant applications is April 15.

Ohioan promotes scholastic skills which develop students' 'fourth R'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Rick Little

Everybody seems to agree these days that something important is missing from our schools. Some call for more money, or more discipline, or more prayer, while H. Ross Perot calls for less football.

But a 28-year-old Ohioan named Rick Little is proposing something different, and a lot of educators have been listening carefully.

It's called Skills for Living, a course designed by Little to help high school students build self-esteem.

"I call it the fourth 'R' — responsibility and self-esteem. Without it, the other three don't do much good," said Little in an interview Monday. He was scheduled to speak at Theatre Midland this morning under the sponsorship of the Junior League of Midland.

Little got the idea for his project after being severely injured in a car accident when he was 18. It occurred to him that while obviously troubled kids were targeted for counseling, "normal" kids like himself were expected to cope with life's pressures on their own.

"But there have been fundamental changes over the past two decades," Little said. "For example, only 38 percent of kids live with both natural parents today. They're under more pressure, but they get less support, and that's reflected in the problems and teen suicides we see."

After recovering from the accident, Little began traveling around the country talking to students, and he found that what they wanted more than anything else was to be loved. "More than health, more than a good career, they wanted love. So self-esteem is obviously a big problem," said Little.

Little then took his findings to educators, who responded enthusiastically. With the help of people like comedian Bill Cosby, who has a doctorate in education, Little developed his program, which treats character development as a subject to be taught in a classroom like history or chemistry. The next step was to get some funding.

"I applied to 155 foundations in a nine-month period, and received 155 rejections," Little said. But the 156th application, to the Kellogg Foundation, was successful, and Little's Quest National Center is now supported by 32 foundations and corporations, and his ideas are being used by 900 school systems in 44 states and several foreign countries.

Many states are now toughening their educational standards, and several, including Florida and Louisiana, have added Little's course to those required for a high school diploma.

In a way, the success of Little's program is the logical culmination of the '70s "human potential movement," when many people were proposing that things like Transcendental Meditation and "self-actualization" be taught in the classroom. But Little said his theories are solidly grounded in research and meeting a demonstrated need, and apparently a lot of parents and educators agree.

Odessa panel proposes annexation of property at end of Highway 191

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The proposed annexation of 146 acres of property at the Odessa end of State Highway 191 marks another step toward Midland/Odessa becoming one continuous metropolitan area.

The Odessa City Council will be holding the second and final public hearing Tuesday on the annexation of the piece of property owned by the Odessa Savings Association.

In addition to squaring off the city's limits and completing annexation of land owned by the bank in that area, the annexation would put the ends of the link road within each city's limits. It would also place developments at both ends of the road that provides northside connection between Midland and Odessa.

While the coming together of the two cities' development on the northside could be expected sometime in the future, "The 191 opening adds impetus," said Odessa City Manager John Harrison.

"Highway 191 opens up another corridor for development," he said.

Along with the development that will take place on the west end of Highway 191 once the city has approved the developer's plans, there are two major projects at various stages already under way along the highway.

The 2,500-acre Mission Dorado development, part of which Odessa obtained from Midland, lies along the Midland-Ector County line almost exactly at the halfway point of the link road.

Gambling on meaning of life can be costly

On a recent Saturday I learned the meaning of life.

A. Life is a gamble.

B. The government will get you.

It was one of those Saturdays where I remembered on my way to work that I needed to buy stamps and get an important document in the mail. Ms. Panther, my car, raced down Main Street and, in her hushed purring tones, pulled up to a stop in front of the Main Post Office.

Although there is no window service on Saturdays, I figured I could get the job done just as quickly at one of those "fully-automated, 24-hour service machines." I pulled out a dollar bill, pressed out the wrinkles and pushed it into the change machine.

The machine growled a bit, then spit out 60 cents — two quarters and a dime. My hand went up the machine's mouth, trying to feel if any change had been caught on an unseen tooth. But there was none. I stood there perplexed for a moment, trying to figure out how the government can charge 40 cents for changing a dollar bill. This isn't (any longer) the days of double digit inflation, and, even if it were, 40 cents is a bit outrageous.

Or, I wondered, is this the government's answer to solving the deficit problem? It surreptitiously takes 40 cents out of every dollar for providing services?

I gave up on the change machine and was pushing the two quarters into a stamp machine when a man came up to try his luck on the slot machine.

I warned him about the 40-cent loss I had to take.

"Oh, I'm a gambler," he said, pulling out a dollar bill. "I'll give it a try."

In went the dollar, out came three quarters, two dimes and a nickel — an even $1.

I complained about his luck, and he laughed. "This is more fun than Las Vegas," he said. He fed the machine another dollar. It spit out 40 cents.

He tried again. Out came 50 cents.

"A good gambler knows when to quit," he said, and folded up his billfold.

I went to a nearby table to paste on my two over-priced stamps and began to watch others. Another man went up to the machine, put in a dollar bill and got 40 cents. He looked around at the almost-empty building and said to no one, "Hey, this machine only gave me 40 cents."

Chuckling quietly, I turned back to my stamp-pasting.

A woman walked up to the machine, put in $1 and 60 cents was thrown out. "I only got 60 cents," she grumbled to a friend.

By this time, I was having a hard time containing my laughter. I picked up my stamped mail, pushed it through the slot and left.

At least I wasn't the only one ripped off by the government, I thought. And the usually mundane trip to the Post Office had turned into a roll of the dice.

The important document I had needed the stamps for was my income tax return. I wonder who I should complain to for my 40 cents — the Postal Service or Uncle Sam?

Boy's death spurs woman to action

During a membership drive at a discount store in a Texas town, Ms. Boucher said she saw people who eyed the MAAM sign, and abruptly hurried past. Some cast doubtful looks back at the members.

"One man, well, I could just see him thinking, 'Leave me alone, I don't want to know about it, you'll ruin my day,' " Ms. Boucher said at a organizational meeting in Stanton Monday night. "I just looked at him when he turned around and said, 'We're trying to save kids' lives here and we need your help.' "

She admits she has been criticized for the name of the organization. According to some, the name is blown out of proportion and really tells little about the group and what it is fighting.

"But I tell them it says everything about child abuse," she said. "Everytime a child is abused, a part of that child dies. The severity of it can no longer be denied."

Statistics show that one of every four girls will be abused by the time she is 10 years old. One in every 10 boys falls in the same category.

Two-thirds of all physical child abuse occurs in children under the age of three. One-fourth of all permanent disabilities in children, including brain damage, is the result of abuse. Child abuse is the second most common cause of death in children.

"But that's been disputed by some leading authorities who say it's the number one cause of death," she added.

Although 70 percent of all sexual abuse cases involving children occur in the home, "the average sexual abuser, the one that picks up little children off the street, will never be cured, ever. That type of violent, sexual abuse will never be cured. The person can learn to live with and handle it, but that's it.

"On the average," she continued, "that type will sexually abuse 68.3 different children in his lifetime. And that's only the average."

Seventy-five percent of prisoners in Texas institutions were abused as children, she said. "And they aren't in there only for child abuse; they are in there for rape, robbery and murder."

Even if one is not an abusive parent, the chances one's child will be abused are high. "You can't tell me this doesn't affect everyone," Ms. Boucher said.

"And when that happens, parents will find there is little, if anything, that will be done about it."

Severely abused six-month-old returned to parents

"He becomes a piece of paper," said Stanton resident Toya Hall, who with her husband Pat, was a foster parent. The Halls cared about the six abused children who lived in their home over the years. They rebelled when those children were placed back in the home in which they were abused or into another foster home that did not provide a decent living.

Then the Halls were told they were no longer acceptable as foster parents.

"We got too emotionally involved," Ms. Hall said with a sarcastic smile.

According to Stephanie Boucher, founder of MAAM, Texas leads most states in child abuse laws. "They're there — they just aren't enforced."

Lack of public awareness and involvement is one of the main reasons, Ms. Boucher said. "Every child abuse story we read, every picture we see, we'll cry over it and then we go on.

"People are tired of the injustice all the way across the board," she said. "But when we're talking about children, that's the bottom of the barrel. We're the ones who have let it slide by. We're the ones who have turned our backs and shut our eyes."

But the purpose of MAAM is not just to educate the public, she said. Those in power also must be educated. "I hear story after story," she said, "and they get worse and worse. I feel the only way we're going to get a change made, because we never got them made within the system, is for the public to demand it.

"Some of the most ignorant people about child abuse are in the legislature," Ms. Boucher said.

On her own, she has enlisted the help of House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga and Speaker of the House Gib Lewis in sponsoring legislation in 1985 aimed at creating a new state agency that would be responsible for thorough, initial investigations of all child abuse cases.

Reported cases now are not thoroughly investigated, she said. Many of the members of the 46 MAAM chapters around the state are DHR caseworkers who are tired of returning children to abusive homes and of people who are "appalled" at the way child abuse investigations are conducted, she said.

According to many of those in attendance, DHR does not give caseworkers any training in investigations other than that received on the job. The ones who are good at their job usually suffer from burn-out and get out of the business. The department can only do so much on its budget.

According to Ms. Boucher, there is no communication or cooperation between the local law enforcement agencies and DHR offices. All suspicions of child abuse are required by law to be reported to either agency, which, in turn, is required to notify the other agency.

But the interpretations of policies are completely different from the way the policies are written on paper, she said.

The Office of Investigator General (OIG), under the DHR, is the one already-established agency Ms. Boucher said would qualify to investigate child abuse cases. Ninety percent of those in OIG are trained investigators.

The office investigated some child abuse cases until a year and a half ago, when the department turned them over to investigate welfare and food stamp fraud. According to Ms. Boucher, 75 percent of the state's welfare and food stamp program comes from the federal government and the state is allowed to keep half of all funds recovered from the investigations.

"But the OIG would have to be separated from the DHR," she said. "It would never work otherwise because they also are responsible for investigating problems within the DHR."

Taxpayers would be willing to spend more money for an agency that hired trained, specialized people, Ms. Boucher said. She said much of the DHR's budget goes to other programs and nice offices. "They get an empty check (as a budget) and a lot of times it doesn't get written out in the right place.

"That's why people don't like giving more taxes," she said. "It's because they never see where they go."

Under Ms. Boucher's proposals, the DHR or local law enforcement officials would be responsible for child abuse cases once the new state agency had completed preliminary investigations. Also, the new agency would place priorities on preventative counseling.

Those wishing to contact Ms. Boucher about MAAM or any specific case of child abuse that has been ignored, can contact her at Route 1, Forestburg, Texas 76239, or call (817) 964-2444.

Odessa proposes annexation of property

In exchange for approximately 2,000 acres previously within the city of Midland's extraterritorial jurisdiction, Odessa shifted its ETJ line to give Midland jurisdiction over 640 acres of commercial property further south along State Highway 80.

Phase I of the project involves 600 acres that will be a combination of residential, commercial, retail, church, apartments and schools centered around a country club. HBF Corp. has committed $40 million to development of this first phase of the project, with the five phases expected to take 20 years to complete.

HBF has a master plan for 10,000 acres in this area, formerly part of the 40,000-acre Faudree-Parks Ranch, but immediate plans are to develop only the 2,500.

Scharbauer Bros. & Co. has committed to development of 315 acres of property west of the present city limits of Midland along Loop 250 at its intersection with Highway 191. The final public meeting, set for June 24, should decide the annexation, zoning and platting of the development.

This is part of the land holdings of the Scharbauer Bros., estimated at more than 19,000 acres by their adviser, Doug Henson. Until the Scharbauer's request for annexation in January, Loop 250 had been the boundary between Scharbauer ranchland and residential development.

Henson said a master plan has been completed on the entire Scharbauer property with sections developed under a neighborhood concept, but projections indicate the 315-acre first phase of this original "neighborhood" should handle growth for 3-5 years. As for future development, "The growth will dictate how long it takes," said Henson.

The present projects, on the loop between Highway 191 and Wadley Avenue, will also be a combination of residential, commercial and office development. The Midland Independent School District has paid Scharbauer Bros. $525,000 ($17,500 per acre) for 30 acres for a elementary and junior high school.

While the city of Odessa must still approve zoning and the developer's plat, plans are to develop 98 acres of the tract in a combination of residential and commercial construction. Dedication of 34 acres for Highway 191 and designation of 13.7 acres for drilling sites complete the proposed use of the 146 acres.

This breakthrough on the Midland side, the Mission Dorado development at the midway point and the expected development on the Odessa end of Highway 191 leave developers to fill the spaces in between to make the corridor a continous metropolitan area.

Harrison predicted the annexation hearings, two weeks after the official opening of the link road, are "just an indication of the interest that area is going to generate."

Businesses looking to move to the Petroplex will be more interested in a site that can easily draw from both economic centers, said Harrison, fitting into recent moves toward cooperative efforts by Midland and Odessa to attract other businesses.

While refusing to predict when all the land would be annexed into either city's limits, Harrison did say that "at some point in time" all the property along Highway 191 will be in Midland or Odessa.

Harrison discounted the possibility of either city contesting the other's rights to property now within its ETJ as the real estate becomes more attractive. "I think we both understand," he said.

Roy Allen, a vice president of Murphy & Rochester who is in charge of the pending Odessa project, stopped short of predicting immediate development all along the corridor.

"I think right now there's not going to be a lot of anything because of the market conditions," he said, adding that an improvement in the market would signal the active development of this corridor.

Local races draw absentee votes

From Staff Reports

Absentee voting in the local election planned for April 7 totaled 171 by the end of Monday, according to the Elections Administrator Janeice Builta.

This is the second municipal election being handled by the Elections Office, and absentee voting appears heavier this time.

"It is higher than normal from what I remember," said Mrs. Builta of the first week of absentee voting. Last week was spring break and she expects more people to be casting their ballot between now and April 3, the deadline for absentee voting.

Up for election this year are mayor, places 4 and 5 on the City Council, two seats on the Midland Memorial Hospital board of trustees, three on the Greenwood board, two on the Midland Independent School District board and three on Midland College board.

Mrs. Builta noted the office at 707 W. Washington Ave. is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for absentee voting. Greenwood residents who work in Midland also must vote absentee at her office, instead of at the Greenwood school.

There is one machine set up for Greenwood residents, two for Midland residents and one for rural residents, said Mrs. Builta.

Writer to speak at Odessa College

ODESSA — Gordon Weaver, author of more than 100 short stories and three novels, is scheduled to speak at Odessa College tonight.

Weaver received the O. Henry award for short fiction in 1979, was included in the 1980 Best American Short Story Collection and won the 1975 St. Lawrence fiction award. His novels have been praised by the New York Book Review and Hollywood producers.

Currently chairman of the English department at Oklahoma State University, Weaver has given seminars, readings and lectures in 22 different states and three foreign countries.

Weaver was to be in Odessa Monday to speak to students at the college. He is scheduled to present a video tape of his short story, "Hog's Heart," to Odessa public school students and community members in Electronics Technology, Room 119.

"Hog's Heart" is the story that won him the O. Henry award for short fiction in 1979. It is currently on reserve in the Odessa College Learning Resources Center.

Weaver will read from his fiction in a 7:30 p.m. meeting today, in Electronics Technology, Room 119, which will be open to the public. Admission to Weaver's talks is free.

PUC staff: Dismiss TUEC rate-hike request

AUSTIN (AP) — The staff of the Public Utility Commission has urged a state hearing examiner to dismiss Texas Utilities Electric Co.'s request for a $304 million rate increase.

Eddie Pope, staff attorney for the PUC, asked for the dismissal in a strongly worded petition that repeatedly criticized the new company for allegedly violating previous commission orders and fashioning its rate case to emphasize costs and mask company savings.

TUEC was created three months ago by the merger of Dallas Power & Light Co., Texas Electric Services Co., and Texas Power & Light Co. Its rate increase request was filed March 9.

DEATHS

Eddie Conner

Services for Eddie Frank Conner, 72, are to be at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday in the First Baptist Church of Midland with Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Conner, who died Monday in an Andrews hospital, was born March 28, 1911, in Roane. He spent his early life in Corsicana and was a graduate of Roane High School.

He moved to Midland in 1935 and became associated with his uncles, Bill and Ellis Conner, in the Hocus-Pocus Grocery. He had participated in several other businesses and retired from Selig Chemical Co. in 1976. He married Obera Hines on May 31, 1936 in Midland and was a member of First Baptist Church, where he was a deacon and Sunday school teacher.

Survivors include his wife, Obera Conner, Midland; two sons, Charles Conner, Brownwood and Bill Conner, Midland; one daughter, Mrs. John (Jeanne) Edwards, Dallas; two brothers, Leonard C. Conner, Kalamazoo, Mich., and Bob Conner, Midland; five sisters, Mrs. Martin Neill, Midland, Mrs. J.L. Deavenport, Houston, and Mrs. Oscar Sikes, Mrs. Jack Dill and Mrs. Earl Campbell, all of Corsicana; eight grandchildren and one great grandchild.

The family requests memorials be directed to the building fund of the First Baptist Church.

Mary Woodard

Mrs. Poe (Mary) Woodard, 69, of Midland died Monday in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church with the Rev. Allen Whitman, rector, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Woodard was born Aug. 7, 1914, in Celeste and moved to Big Spring in the early 1920s. She was graduated from Big Spring High School, attended Texas Christian University and was married to Poe Woodard in 1935. The couple lived in Stanton before they moved to Midland in 1953.

She was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Mrs. T.R. (Sandy) Farrell of Plano; a brother, Leonard Lawrence of San Antonio; an aunt, Alice Cravens of Waco; and three grandchildren.

The family has requested that memorials be directed to the Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, 79702.

May G. McNatt

Mrs. James Franklin (May G.) McNatt, 87, died Sunday in a Midland hospital.

She had been a resident of Midland since 1972.

Survivors include a son, James McNatt of Midland; a sister, Mabel Bulbock of Austin, two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Norman Marley

WELLMAN — Norman R. Marley, 67, of Wellman, died Thursday at a Greenville hospital.

He was the father of former Midlander Edna Allen of Commerce.

Services, directed by Brownfield Funeral Home, were Saturday. He was buried in Terry County Memorial Cemetery.

He was a retired employee of City Service Corp., where he worked for 31 years.

Other survivors include his wife, Rédah; three sons; one daughter; three brothers; two sisters; and eight grandchildren.

Police catch would-be revelers before they can pop the cork

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Three men were caught by police in the parking lot of the Holiday Inn Parkway early this morning with a keg of beer and four bottles of champagne taken from inside the motel's kitchen.

Awaiting arraignment on charges of burglary are three Odessa men arrested outside the motel by two officers who were at the hotel responding to a disturbance call.

The officers, C.A. Burns and K. Sykes, reported noticing two men wheeling a dolly across the parking lot to a dumpster as they arrived at the hotel about 1:30 a.m. today. After calming the disturbance, the officers returned and investigated further.

They discovered the bottles of champagne and beer keg behind the dumpster and decided to wait for someone to come for the goods. At 1:54 a.m., the officers arrested the three suspects after they pulled up in a pick-up and began loading the beer and champagne. The suspects are in the city jail awaiting arraignment later today.

Crime Stoppers seeks data on burglary of Odessa station

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information on an Odessa burglary.

On the morning of Feb. 15, Odessa police officers were called to the Gulf Service Station, 1601 S. Grant, to investigate a burglary. Officers found the service station had been entered after someone had broken a large plate glass window on the south side of the building.

After entering the building, the burglar located a small safe and removed it through the back door. The burglar also took a number of packs of cigarettes from a display shelf in the front of the station.

Odessa Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and grand jury indictment of the burglar. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information leading to indictments of felony offenders. Call Crime Stoppers at 333-TIPS in Odessa or 694-TIPS in Midland. Callers can remain anonymous.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Utilities Electric Company, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act, publishes this statement of intent to change rates applicable throughout the territory in which the Company provides electric service. All customers and classes of customers of the Company's Dallas Power & Light Company, Texas Electric Service Company, and Texas Power & Light Company divisions will be affected. The proposed rate changes are expected to result in a $304,196,722, or 7.98 percent, increase in the fully adjusted test-year revenues of the Company. The increase requested over test-year revenues, adjusted only for customer growth and rate changes approved prior to the filing of this statement of intent, is $343,512,112, or 9.95 percent. The effective date of the proposed rate changes is April 13, 1984, or as soon thereafter as permitted by law.

A complete copy of the proposed rate changes is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas and with each affected municipality.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Fashion may shift from rags to riches look

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — With French couture now bubbling again from champagne customers in the oil-rich Middle East, the fashion question of the moment here is: Will the classically elegant designs of haute couture affect the more experimental clothes usually found in Paris ready-to-wear?

Will the it's-OK-to-look-rich spirit spread to the young designers who have made fashion heroines of the poor, the punk and the post-atomic protester?

Many of the new fall clothes sneak-previewed here, clothes that will be shown to the rest of the world during the next 10 days, seem to suggest a new respect for classic conservatism. Tradition, not sedition, would appear to be in fashion.

While there are not too many hints of America's fashion minimalism, London's androgyny or Italy's Super Woman sportswear, this may change before the collections close next week. The Japanese design contingent here is being closely watched as retailers say that it is time for something more from Tokyo than tears, tatters and holes.

Speaking for the classicists, France's most distinguished designer, Hubert de Givenchy, says that his new ready-to-wear will be structured yet supple, with lengths just under the knees for day and descending to mid-calf for cocktails. The new Givenchy suit will be made of bicolored jersey and worn with a velvet-lined jersey scarf. Coats and dresses also will be scarfed for fall, Givenchy says, adding that his favorite new detail is the button, the fancy button in gold or metallic, and for evening, the button made of precious stones.

There is a lot of pre-opening talk about pants. If this talk turns into reality on the runway, there could be a change of hemlines. (Historically, designers often use pants as a hedge against hemline change when that change seems imminent, and longer skirts have seemed "imminent" for some time here. They are, indeed, a matter of fact at Claude Montana, Thierry Mugler, Sonia Rykiel, Issey, Miyake, Chloe and Jean-Paul Gaultier.)

Of all the pants previewed, the ones with greatest currency are the ankle-grazing, full-flowing variety that have long been a Rykiel trademark.

The Montana woman for fall is a voyager. She travels on the Orient Express in his almost ankle-length beige cashmere coat that could pass as a 1984 version of the old Pullman robe that movie stars used to wear on the 20th Century Limited. This almost-maxi coat could prove to be the most directional of the season — the first new long coat since Doctor Zhivago's swept off the steppes.

If Rykiel is right, the woman of '84-'85 will be what she calls a "trompe l'oeil" creation, "because from afar she seems sporting, but close-up she is sophisticated."

Show features baggy styles

PARIS (AP) — Some ready-to-wear winter fashions being strutted out this week would be perfect for a Pigalle call girl on a street corner, while other styles are so voluminous they looked like an unmade bed.

As the ready-to-wear fair progresses, with at least 80 shows in the next week, there should be styles to suit every taste.

In a tent in the Tuileries gardens today, Japanese designer Rei Kawakubo showed a variety of baggy looks made up of many layers.

The fashions featured an androgynous look, and models with spiky, asymmetrical hairdos strode down the runway in pale skin devoid of makeup — an improvement over recent Kawakubo faces that were spotted with angry color.

In charcoals, grays or blue tie-dyed cottons or jerseys, the clothes looked — as usual — like unmade beds. Young people apparently love them, although one wonders how they jet around to Tangiers or wherever in all this extra cloth without paying for two seats. Perhaps the wraps can double as caftans or blankets on the plane.

To complete the look, one must have hanging, voluminous jackets or coats, a few threads showing here and there, many wrap belts, even a drooping headdress. On the feet are flat sandals and loose bobby sox.

Mrs. Kawakubo's dreary and dark colors are a trademark, and when a group of models came out in draped burgundy, red and saffron silks and jerseys, the photographers screamed approval.

At the opposite end of outrage were the slinky looks shown earlier in the week.

Claude Petin showed a tarty line of showgirl clothes at the Alcazar nightclub. The fanny-hugging satins, knee-revealing, and fur-edged dresses with plenty of rhinestone details had perilously slashed necklines.

Japanese designer Kimijima struck a balance between the two looks, showing some fitted, long shirts in leather as well as asymmetrically-belted dresses with shoulder drapes.

Shocking pink ruffles are used to cinematic effect on slinky sequin sheaths by Kimijima. And the body-molding black and silver sequined evening dresses were anything but boring.

DEAR ABBY

Couple ponders packing pooch along

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are planning a trip to France and Italy in about six months and we want to take our dog with us. We have OKs from our dog's vet as well as from France, Italy and the airline we're booked on. We will be staying with friends and it's all right with them, too.

We have no one to leave her with, so our vet advised us to take her with us as she might grieve herself to death if she were left in a kennel. We will be gone from two to three months.

She will have to travel in a "cage" in the hold of the aircraft. We were told by friends that she would catch pneumonia or freeze to death, but we checked with the airline and were told that the temperature in the hold of the aircraft is the same temperature as in the passenger section.

Abby, will you please ask your readers if they have ever taken their dogs overseas?

We are even thinking of taking ours on a dry run to Fresno. We plan to keep the cage in the living room of our home so she will become accustomed to it. We know all about permits for her to enter Italy and France. Our vet is taking care of all that.

This is the vacation we have always dreamed about, and we are no spring chickens. It is now or never. Help us, please! — DOG LOVERS IN SAN MATEO, CALIF.

DEAR DOG LOVERS: If your vet approves, and the airline agrees, that seems sufficient assurance. If I hear from any dog lovers (pro or con), I will keep you posted. Dog lovers, send me your tales.

DEAR ABBY: I read with concern that yet another poor soul (a widowed senior citizen, no less) was put through unnecessary agony when her blood test showed a false-positive for syphilis.

I'm sure you gave much comfort to many by publicizing the fact that people who at some time in their lives have had malaria, scarlet fever, infectious mononucleosis and many other diseases are apt to show a false-positive for syphilis. But, Abby, you failed to mention another very common reason for this — the flu shot!

I didn't know this until my blood test showed positive for syphilis, and I knew it was not possible for me to have contracted that disease. Finally my dermatologist asked me if I had had a flu shot. I told him I had. Then he told me that could account for the false-positive in my blood test.

Please mention this in your column, Abby. Many people (particularly senior citizens) take flu shots as a matter of routine. I did. — BETTY S., MESA ARIZ.

DEAR BETTY: Consider it mentioned. And thanks for the input.

DEAR ABBY: I am 100 percent for car seats and seat belts for toddlers. Many parents have a difficult time buckling very young youngsters into car seats. Here's how I handled the problem:

When my child put up a fight, I simply told her that the car wouldn't start until all the seat belts were fastened. Then I "demonstrated" by wiggling the car keys without starting the engine.

Since we were going to Grandma and Pop Pop's house, a place she loved to go, she readily agreed to let me fasten her seat belt through her car seat.

It took a few screaming sessions (her, not me) before I hit on that idea. She tested me a few times, but when she learned the car wouldn't start unless all the seat belts were fastened, she gave in in a hurry.

My girlfriend tried it with her child, and it worked like a charm. — PENNSYLVANIA MOM

Male swimwear conservative

Copley News Service

While the trend for women's bathing suits leans toward the most revealing, it seems American adults prefer more traditional suits for men.

In a Merit Report survey, 44 percent of all adults said that, for male swimmers, they prefer the traditional boxer-style swimsuit; 25 percent, the traditional brief style; 14 percent, the much briefer European or bikini style.

Olympic divers plunging into Sassoon styles

Hearst Feature Service

Olympics-bound swimmers and divers have taken the plunge into a pool of shampoos, conditioners, scissors and blowdryers. And they've emerged with squeaky-sleek hairdos that are calculated to look smart either wet or dry.

But why all the primp when water-drenched hair will only go limp? Getting to the root of it all, why would medal contenders preen like peacocks?

"Athletes today are caught up with looking good and what it means. They realize that they're media personalities, and they want to look their best at all times — not just when they're competing," responds Steven Docherty, artistic director of the Vidal Sassoon salon in Beverly Hills, whose parent firm, Vidal Sassoon Inc., is the official hair-care consultant to the Olympic Games and personal stylist to the U.S. swimming, diving and gymnastics teams and coaches.

The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee is in apparent agreement, having chosen Sassoon one of its many official suppliers. To become one, according to the LAOOC, a firm must contribute money, goods or services deemed "essential to the Games."

Perhaps it could be rationalized that a haircut is nourishing to the scalp, but that's not the point, according to the Sassoon people. They say the athletes willingly submit to the makeovers for the enhancement of their self-image.

In addition, Docherty claims, the right haircut doesn't flop during the most acrobatic dives. For example, hair doesn't fall into the eyes with "the plunge," a very short cut on the sides and back, while the top is longer for a tapered effect. Inspired by a diver's motion — from the diving board, into the pool and up out of the water — the cut varies in proportion with each individual, based on bone structure, hair growth pattern and personal taste.

It was Docherty who performed a plunge cut on champion diver Greg Louganis' hair at the Diving American Cup Meet in Austin, Texas, last month. The stylist snipped off Louganis' naturally curly hair for a cleaner line that "complements his bone structure. Greg was really receptive," Docherty points out. It would appear that Louganis' new do didn't go to his head since the 24-year-old diver handily took top honors in the meet.

For swimmers, there's the "aqua cut," which is aimed at achieving the shortest hair possible at the nape of the neck and around the ears so that it tucks neatly into a regulation swim cap. The hairline may be shaved or buzzed, a hot style among fashion trendies. The "competition cut" is shorter yet, and designed to minimize friction. For those who won't part with long locks, the "American classic" or symmetrical bob cuts, which can be pulled back into a ponytail, will do.

The cuts are provided free to the athletes, along with makeup sessions for the women, where they're taught to apply Marie Augustine's waterproof mascara by Vidal Sassoon.

Just how much Vidal Sassoon Inc. paid in sponsor fees to the LAOOC is a secret well kept by the company and the publicist who came up with the idea of Sassooning the athletes. In addition to the Olympic Village Sassoon salons, which open two weeks prior to the start of the games, the Sassoon name will get plenty of TV and print exposure for its precision hair cuts and products at Olympic qualifying meets and others, such as the McDonald's Invitational held this month at the University of Southern California.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Marijuana can be harmful

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 17 years old and I am writing to you because I believe what you will tell me. If marijuana is used as medicine, why is it harmful for people to smoke it? — Jenny, Silver Spring, Maryland

Dear Jenny: Marijuana may be of value for patients with glaucoma or cancer. It decreases intraocular pressure and alleviates the nausea and vomiting that patients receivng chemotherapy often experience.

But using marijuana under controlled conditions is different from using it under uncontrolled conditions over an extended period of time. Dr. Stephen Szara, of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, notes that marijuana poses a clear risk to patients with high blood pressure and atherosclerosis. It can also lead to bronchitis and to obstructive lung disease. Whether or not it can cause cancer has not been determined.

The drug may be most injurious to adolescent girls, particularly in relation to their childbearing ability. And finally, people who use marijuana may actually be risking their lives.

I would urge you not to equate any drug that is used for medicinal purposes with its uncontrolled use outside a medical setting.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor has told me that if I continue to smoke, I could eventually lose all my teeth. He has a good sense of humor, but sometimes I don't know when he's serious and when he's pulling my leg. Can smoking really cause a person to lose her teeth? — Mrs. E.K., Chicago

Dear Mrs. K.: A California physician has reported an association between osteoporosis (bone loss) in women, smoking, and tooth loss. While these findings may not be the last work on the subject, they certainly provide another motive for people to stop smoking. If the results of this research are confirmed, women may be faced with the prospect of deciding whether to lose their habit or their teeth.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Actress to play Renee Richards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vanessa Redgrave, whose appearance in the TV movie, "Playing for Time" stirred up a controversy, will play tennis pro Dr. Renee Richards both before and after her sex change operation in "The Second Serve."

The new movie for CBS will be produced and directed by Linda Yellen, who cast Miss Redgrave as a half-Jewish inmate in a Nazi concentration camp in "Playing for Time." Her appearance in the film was widely protested by Jewish organizations because of her pro-Palestinian views.

Downtown Shell offers service and reliablity

As the temperature drops you must think about winterizing your car to protect it from freeze up. Downtown Shell is equiped to flush radiators and check your antifreeze. The experienced staff will make sure you are prepared for the winter months.

Downtown Shell does offer old time service. For those of you who do not have the time to take your car in, why not let Downtown Shell help you out by winterizing your car or repairing that flat tire while you are at work. They offer free pick up and delivery to the downtown area.

Convenience to the downtown area is a plus for Downtown Shell. They are located at 400 N. Big Spring. Also for your convenience, they have both self service and full service islands.

If your car seems run down it could be that your battery needs charged. Maybe your battery is beyond the point where a charge will help. If this is the case Downtown Shell can order a new battery for you.

Tire repair and rotations are more of the services offered at Downtown Shell. Whether you need a flat tire repaired or another tire they can be of assistance. They can sell you a used tire or order the type of tire that you need.

Darin Dingler, manager of Downtown Shell, explained that they are equiped to do oil changes and lube jobs to help you with the day to day maintanence of your car.

A unique feature of Downtown Shell is their car washing facilities. They offer a complete range of choices from a drive through all the way to a full service wash. All of the washes are done with soft water which is much nicer on your car. Also once your car is sparkling clean be sure to have Darin or one of the employees give your car a complete wax.

Is the inside of your car in terrible shape? Well, Downtown Shell can help you with that, too. They can shampoo your carpet at a very reasonable and competetive price.

Whether you need a car wash, a fill up or just some snacks and beer stop in to Downtown Shell at 400 N. Big Spring. Their hours are from 7a.m. - 7p.m. Monday through Friday, 8a.m. - 5p.m. Saturday and closed on Sunday.

Pull into Downtown Shell at 400 N. Big Spring for reliable service. Remember now is the time to winterize your car to avoid problems later on.

One Hour Fast Photo, located in the Town and Country Shopping Center, offers high quality photo finishing in just one hour. Slower service does not necessarily insure better quality print, so why wait to get your prints back?

Each print at One Hour Fast Photo is given individual attention. Each negative is printed by hand by an operator so that adjustments can be made on the computer to give you the best possible print.

The adjustments that can be made will compensate for over or under exposure. The computer also has a color balance for the different types of film. Each brand of film has different light characteristics so the computer adjusts to give the best print possible.

Besides one hour color processing, Fast Photo also does E—6 slide and one day black and white processing. Black and white enlargements can be made up to 16x20. A 20x30 is the largest color enlargement available.

Fast Photo also handles over 65 kinds of film. Kodak, Ilford and Fuji are just a few of the brands carried.

Replacement film can be bought at wholesale price with a VIP card. VIP cards cost you $3.00 initially but can save you a considerable amount of money as you continue to purchase your film at One Hour Fast Photo.

Besides print and slide processing they offer passport photos in less than five minutes.

Mats, framing and albums are also sold at One Hour Fast Photo.

Next time you need your film processed quickly take it to the only fast photo service that uses Kodak paper. Take your film to One Hour Fast Photo in the Town and Country Shopping Center. If you have any questions give them a call at 699-5041.

Cagney among medal recipients

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Actor James Cagney, his eyes filled with tears, received the nation's highest civilian honor along with a diverse group that included three men of great controversy during their lifetime — Whittaker Chambers, Anwar Sadat and Jackie Robinson.

In Cagney's case, it was life imitating art. In the 1942 movie "Yankee Doodle Dandy," — for which Cagney gave an Academy Award winning performance as George M. Cohan — there was a scene in which Cohan received the thanks of the nation from Franklin D. Roosevelt.

President Reagan gave Cagney the Presidential Medal of Freedom, read the official citation that called the 84-year-old actor "a giant in the world of entertainment," and added a personal tribute:

"As a great star in the same studio where I started, he was never too busy to hold out a hand to a young fellow trying to get under way."

Chambers' son, John, accepted the coveted medal for his father, a former communist whose testimony against Alger Hiss was the springboard for the career of an obscure congressman named Richard Nixon. Chambers died in 1961 at the age of 60.

"At a critical moment in our nation's history, Whittaker Chambers stood alone against the brooding terrors of our age," said the citation read by Reagan. "Consummate intellectual, writer of moving, majestic prose, and witness to the truth, he became the focus of a momentous controversy in American history that symbolized our century's epic struggle between freedom and totalitarianism."

The posthumous award to Sadat, accepted by his son Gamal, said the former president of Egypt, said he led his country in war as a soldier "but his greatest acts of courage came in the pursuit of peace ... (Sadat) was a peacemaker of monumental wisdom and tenderness who will remain forever a hero in the hearts of the American people."

Robinson's widow, Rachel, accepted the award for the Brooklyn Dodgers' second baseman. "His courage opened the door of professional sports to all Americans when, in 1947, he became the first black baseball player in the major leagues," the citation said.

Receiving a congratulatory kiss from first lady Nancy Reagan is actor James Cagney, who Monday was among recipients of the Presidential Medal of Freedom. President Reagan looks on.

Chambers was the celebrated witness before the House Committee on Un-American Activities who testified that Hiss, a trusted State Department aide, and others in government had passed him official secrets while he worked as a Soviet spy during the 1930s.

Hiss denied the charges, was twice tried for perjury and was convicted after his second trial in 1950 at the climax of a legal battle still being fought by some of its partisans.

Nixon, a junior congressman on the committee, seized Chambers' testimony as a national issue and rode it to a Senate seat and his selection as Dwight D. Eisenhower's vice presidential running mate in the 1952 presidential campaign.

Although Chambers was regarded by some at the time as a tattletale, and by others as a liar, Reagan said that "as long as humanity speaks of virtue and dreams of freedom, the life and writings of Whittaker Chambers will ennoble and inspire.

"The words of Arthur Koestler are his epitaph: 'The witness is gone; the testimony will stand,'" the president said.

Chambers' autobiography was entitled "Witness."

Others who received the award Monday were:

—Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

—Economist Leo Cherne, chairman of the board of the International Rescue Committee and longtime head of Freedom House.

—Heart surgeon Denton Cooley.

—Singer Tennessee Ernie Ford.

—Dr. Hector Garcia, founder of the American G.I. Forum, a Mexican-American veterans organization dedicated to achieving equal rights for all Mexican-Americans.

—Retired Army Gen. Andrew Goodpaster, a former NATO commander recalled from retirement to head the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

—American ballet promoter Lincoln Kirstein, who founded and still heads the School for American Ballet in New York and is director-general of the New York City Ballet.

—Louis L'Amour, author of Western novels.

—The Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," who was cited for his contributions to theology.

—Eunice Kennedy Shriver, sister of President John F. Kennedy, who was cited for her contributions in the field of mental retardation. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was there to see his sister receive the award.

Carrie Fisher takes on 'old' movie role

Carrie Fisher

LONDON (AP) — Light years away from her role as Princess Leia in the "Star Wars" films, actress Carrie Fisher has come back to Earth to take on Frankenstein, the British way.

Ms. Fisher, 27, has been signed to star alongside English actors Sir John Gielgud and David Warner in a Yorkshire Television version of the 19th-century horror tale, the production company has announced.

The daughter of actress Debbie Reynolds and singer Eddie Fisher will play the girlfriend of Baron Frankenstein, the castle-dwelling scientist who created a living monster.

Warner, who will play the monster, told reporters: "There will be no nuts and bolts in the monster's neck and he won't be seven feet tall. Our story will tell of a brilliant scientist who tried to push science to its limits and create the perfect man."

Red Skelton

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)— Comedian Red Skelton, with a worldwide reputation for making people laugh, found no happiness as he returned from a benefit performance in London to discover that his mountaintop ranch had been burglarized.

Items stolen were worth "more than $100,000" and included a $50,000 oriental statue that had been given to the 70-year-old comedian's son Richard, who died of leukemia at the age of 9 in 1958, Skelton's secretary, Anita Mykowsky, said Monday.

Also missing are other art objects and saddles and other gear owned by Mrs. Skelton, a horse breeder, she said.

"The burglars didn't get into the main house, which was equipped with an alarm," said Miss Mykowsky, "but they did break into the barn and garage. I had to break the news when the Skeltons arrived from London on Saturday."

Burt Reynolds

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds, whose many pictures include "Smokey and the Bandit," has tentatively decided to become a partner in a restaurant franchise to be appropriately named BanditTree Inc.

Reynolds, 48, has agreed in principle to purchase 50 percent of Poatree Inc., making him a full partner in the franchise with Buddy Killen, president of Tree International, a large country music publishing company.

With four restaurants in Texas and two in Georgia, Poatree Inc. is the largest franchise of the Nashville-based Po Folks Inc. chain.

Po Folks, which operates 102 restaurants in 17 states, features country cooking.

And Reynolds said in a statement issued Monday, "The down-home cooking is the kind of food I grew up on and love."

John Wooden

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Former coach John Wooden, who led UCLA's basketball team to a record 10 NCAA championships, charges that television may be "the worst thing that's happened to college basketball."

Though some have credited television with helping to boost the game's popularity, Wooden contends it encourages players to become "hot shots," causes too many timeouts and dictates the scheduling of some games.

Writing in the March 31 issue of TV Guide, Wooden says college players become flashier on television because they know large audiences are watching.

"We're seeing more dunks, behind-the-back dribbling and passing, trick stuff," he says.

Concerning extra timeouts for TV commercials, he says they "destroy the tempo of the game."

Jerry Lee Lewis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis was "resting comfortably" today at the Regional Medical Center after being admitted for observation, hospital officials say.

Lewis, 48, was admitted Monday after he took a muscle relaxant for a sore shoulder Sunday night and became ill at his home in Nesbit, Miss., said his road manager, J.W. Whitten.

The entertainer was in stable condition early today, said nursing supervisor Lorraine Donavant.

Whitten said Lewis complained of dizziness, swelling in his right hand and numbness in his right leg after taking the relaxant.

Medical Center spokeswoman Becky West said hospital tests conducted Monday indicated Lewis had not taken any drugs which might have threatened his life.

Lewis is best known for his rock 'n' roll hits, "Whole Lotta of Shakin' Goin' On" and "Great Balls of Fire."

NEW YORK (AP) — The mother of dancer Gene Anthony Ray, star of television show "Fame," has been sentenced to 15 years to life in prison for drug trafficking.

Jean Ray, 44, of the Bronx, was convicted of selling cocaine to undercover agents on four occasions. She was arrested last June.

Her son, who lives in California, plays dancer Leroy Johnson on "Fame." The show, based on the movie about New York City's acclaimed High School of the Performing Arts, ran on network television and is now being produced for independent stations.

Mrs. Ray was characterized as "a major narcotics dealer" by the prosecution. But her attorney, Paul Goldberg, called her a loving mother and a victim of circumstances.

Ray attended his mother's two-week trial in Supreme Court, New York state's trial-level bench.

NEW YORK (AP) — Poems written by a young William Faulkner and presented to his future wife will be published for the first time this spring, the University of Texas Press has announced.

The collection of 14 poems, titled "Vision in Spring," is part of some 200 poems Faulker wrote over a six-to-eight year period before declaring himself a "failed poet" and turning to prose. It will be published May 26.

Two volumes of Faulkner poetry have been published in the past, but scholars said the new collection should upgrade the author's reputation as a poet.

Faulkner died in 1962. His wife owned the manuscript until her death in 1972. The original has apparently disappeared, but scholar Judith Sensibar came across a photocopy of it among some papers owned by Jill Faulkner Summers, the author's daughter.

The University of Texas Press said it would publish the poems on the same day it publishes a book by Mrs. Sensibar, "The Origins of Faulkner's Art," which traces the influence of Faulkner's poetry in his novels.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — State lawmakers, who have named highways for such diverse Tennesseans as Sen. Howard Baker and singer Dolly Parton, will apparently miss a chance to name an interstate for Elvis Presley.

A resolution to name the section of Interstate 40 in Nashville for the late rock'n'roll singer would violate state and federal laws, transportation officials said Monday.

Renae Pickens, spokeswoman for the Department of Transportation, said the General Assembly is limited to naming state roads and U.S. highways if they have permission from the city or county.

"Under federal regulations you can't post signs on an interstate naming it something else. You can if it's rest areas or scenic overlooks but not if it's a directional sign that tells you it's Interstate 40," Ms. Pickens said.

State Rep. Victor Ellis, sponsor of the measure, says he introduced the resolution at the request of Ronnie Rondell, a 34-year-old unemployed Elvis impersonator who lives in Ellis' district.

MOSCOW (AP) — Garri Kasparov and Vasily Smyslov agreed to a draw in the seventh game of their 16-game match for the right to challenge Anatoly Karpov for the world chess championship, Tass said.

The two Soviet players agreed to the draw after only 56 minutes of play Monday, the official news agency said.

Kasparov, playing white, offered the draw on the 14th move, Smyslov accepted, Tass said.

Kasparov now leads the match by a score of 4½ to 2½. The next game will be Wednesday.

Monday's game produced the third consecutive draw. The first two matches also ended in draws before the 20-year-old Kasparov went two points ahead with two consecutive victories.

Smyslov celebrated his 63rd birthday Saturday, and is the oldest man ever to compete in a chess challenge final. Kasparov is the youngest.

STERLING HEIGHTS, Mich. (AP) — A guard accused of pulling a gun on two 11-year-old girls who tried to get singer Frank Sinatra's autograph will be asked to take a lie detector test to support his denial, police say.

If the guard's account of the incident holds up, the investigation will be closed, police Capt. Richard B. Oakes said Monday.

"As far as we're concerned, no gun was pulled," Oakes said.

Sinatra appeared Friday night at the Premier Center in this Detroit suburb.

Norma Lunsford, 34, of Detroit told authorities that a guard escorting Sinatra to his car pointed a gun at her daughter, Sandie, and the girl's friend, Tracy Belanger.

"No one wants to say a word against them (the Premier Center and the guards)," Mrs. Lunsford said Monday night. "My daughter came very close to being shot that night and I don't want that to happen to anyone else, that's all."

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Hoffman, 49, a writer and newsman, died Monday of injuries suffered in a fire.

Las Vegas gears up for strike against hotels

By ROBERT MACY

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Eight years ago when the 26,000-member Culinary Union went on strike, owners of 11 of the largest hotels on the glittering Strip turned out the lights and closed their doors for 15 days. The shutdown cost the city $131 million.

Now, facing a Monday strike deadline, the resort owners say they won't replay the 1976 scenario. They have promised to fight the union, Nevada's largest, by remaining open, hiring new workers if needed and spending extra on advertising in the city's top tourism markets.

Union leaders have said that anyone who wants to work will have to fight their way into and out of the hotels.

"If labor and management do take a hard line, you're going to have confrontation," said Steve Waugh, head of the uniform field services division of the 1,585-member Metro Police department.

Metro Police, preparing for a "worst case" situation, are being briefed in riot control training.

Behind the pre-strike rhetoric lies an industry emerging from the effects of the recession. Clark County casinos rebounded last year with the highest win level since 1980, raking in $1.9 billion. But the 7.7 percent increase is far below the double-digit returns hotel-casinos had become accustomed to in the late 1970s.

At the height of the recession in 1982, several thousand casino workers were unemployed. Unemployment in the area has since dipped from a high of about 11 percent to below 8 percent.

If the Culinary Union strikes, it would empty the hotels of kitchen employees, food servers, cocktail servers, cashiers, porters, change people, bellhops — most of the employees who make a hotel tick.
