Consumers to enjoy low prices; oil producers to suffer from OPEC decision

By Ryan Holeywell & Rhiannon Meyers
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — One of the biggest discounts on Black Friday wasn't at retail stores but on energy markets, where the price of a barrel of crude oil fell to its lowest level in more than four years following news that 12 major oil producing countries won't cut back on their planned output.

For U.S. shale producers, the development probably will mean more spending cuts in 2015 than they already have signaled, and a push for more efficiency in the oil patch.

Even before the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries decided Thursday to maintain its 30 million barrel per day quota rather than cutting production to push up oil prices, several U.S.-based exploration and production companies had announced spending cuts for 2015.

Houston-based Apache Corp., for one, said earlier this month it would cut its North America onshore budget by $1.4 billion next year to $4 billion. ConocoPhillips, also based in Houston, announced a 2015 capital budget that's below $16 billion — a $700 million drop from this year as it considers slowing down development in the Permian Basin, Western Canada and Colorado's Niobrara Shale.

But what's bad news for oil producers could be good news for consumers. The average national gasoline price probably will fall to $2.70 per gallon within the next week, and consumers will soon be

Black Friday shoppers browse the many stores and deals at Midland Park Mall on Friday

Shopper: Black Friday has 'lost its punch'

■ Deal hunters lament that Thanksgiving has better sales

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Despite the nearly full parking lot and the cramped walking space between stores, some shoppers at Midland Park Mall on Black Friday wondered about the day's lessening significance to Thanksgiving, a day that is increasingly more popular and viable for deals.

Gabriel Cardenas, one Midlander who shopped on both Thanksgiving and Black Friday at the mall, wondered why some sales ended early Friday morning, negating the point of Black Friday. He was disappointed that a storewide 50 percent-off sale at a clothing store ended at 3 a.m. Friday.

"It's kind of crazy that at lot of the sales are stopping on Friday," Cardenas said. "And I saw that it is twice as busy now as it was last night (Thanksgiving.)"

According to the Associated Press, two research firms found that retailers put out more sale items on Thanksgiving than on Black Friday. Researchers found there were 86 tablets and laptops on sale at major retailers on Thanksgiving and nine on sale on Black Friday.

Opening hours for stores also reflected the shift of making Thanksgiving the new Black Friday. The majority of retailers opened its stores either 5 p.m or 6 p.m. on Thursday, and only a few opened early Black Friday morning.

"I think they should keep the sales on Black Friday because that was the initial holiday," Cardenas said. "A lot of people used to wake up at midnight on Black

Lawmakers, officials debate use of Proposition 1 funds

■ Decline in oil prices results in lower tax revenue than originally expected

By Aman Batheja
Texas Tribune

Eighty percent of Texas voters approved a measure earlier this month to increase transportation funding without raising taxes or fees. Proposition 1 is expected to add billions to the state highway fund by dedicating some of the tax revenue being collected from the oil boom to road construction and maintenance.

The first payment, an estimated $1.7 billion, is likely to be deposited in the state highway fund in December.

In the meantime, lawmakers, state officials and local stakeholders are working out how they plan to spend the extra dollars. According to the language on the ballot, the money can go toward "the completion of transportation construction, maintenance, and rehabilitation projects, not to include toll roads."

For state Rep. Joe Pickett, a Democrat from El Paso who chairs the House committee on transportation finance, those who backed the proposition are expecting spending on projects that address congestion on local highways.

"I wouldn't like to see trolley projects, bike lanes, bike shares," Pickett said at a recent hearing on transportation funding. "What I'm looking at is why people voted for this."

The Texas Department of Transportation puts its annual budget shortfall at $8 billion. State officials have warned that Proposition 1 will, at best, perpetually relieve a fraction of that for as long as the drilling boom endures.

About half the money is likely to go

Death row inmate's case headed to US appeals court

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Attorneys for a Texas death row inmate set for execution next week have said they will ask a federal appeals court to halt the punishment, arguing the prisoner is too delusional for lethal injection.

Lawyers for Scott Panetti, 56, filed notice they would appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals after a district judge late Wednesday rejected their request to delay the execution, scheduled for Dec. 3 in Huntsville. They're seeking a new round of mental evaluations to bolster claims Panetti is incompetent for execution. Texas courts earlier this week also refused to stop Panetti's lethal injection.

Panetti

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks ruled new claims that allege Panetti's mental condition is deteriorating are similar to those he considered and rejected in 2008.

Sparks said while Panetti's behavior "is certainly strange, it is not measurably different from behavior documented in the records scrupulously examined by this court" nearly seven years ago. He noted that he's twice approved money for expert examinations of Panetti's mental condition and twice held competency hearings.

One of Panetti's attorneys, Kathryn Kase, said that during a two-hour visit with her early this month he couldn't carry on a coherent conversation and talked of hearing voices.

"The symptoms of his psychotic mental illness have grown worse," she argued.

State attorneys said Panetti's competency has been thoroughly examined and his lawyers could have raised their issues earlier instead of waiting until his execution was approaching.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that a condemned inmate must have a factual and rational understanding of why he's facing execution.

Sparks, in his ruling, referred to arguments from state attorneys pointing out Panetti's interactions differed when the inmate spoke with mental health experts, cooperating with those representing his interests but refusing state experts.

Panetti also has a clemency petition before the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles. No action is expected on that until at least Monday.

Panetti was convicted of fatally shooting his in-laws, Joe and Amanda Alvarado, in front of his estranged wife and young children. His wife was living with her parents, and a week before the 1992 shootings she obtained a court order to keep Panetti away.

His 1995 trial attracted notoriety when he chose to be his own lawyer, insisting only an insane person could prove insanity, then wore a cowboy outfit to court and sought to subpoena dozens of witnesses, including Jesus Christ and John F. Kennedy. He ignored a standby attorney ordered by his trial judge to be available to provide assistance.

Black Friday

From 1A

Friday, go shopping, come back at 6 in the morning, and that was it. I'm seeing a lot of people stopping Thanksgiving early just so they can catch some sales."

Sticking to tradition, Abel Abundez said his family had a family Thanksgiving dinner on Thursday and did not shop until the afternoon on Black Friday. He spoke of family arriving from Dallas and having a quiet, relaxing dinner, a contrast to the hectic grab-fest for discounted items Thursday evening at local stores.

Abundez said he is all for Black Friday as the day for shopping and Thanksgiving the day for family and dinner.

"I think Black Friday has lost its punch," Abundez said. "I would say Black Friday starts at midnight, now it starts hours before on Thanksgiving."

Sitting on one of the couches in front of a department store at the mall while his family shopped, Abundez also noted the positives of Black Friday shopping, namely the economic stimulus it has on the community.

"People are making money and spending it, supporting the local economy, which is good for the city of Midland," Abundez said.

And another advantage Abundez noted about shopping on Black Friday was that that shopping gets completed early.

"For us, we like to come in early and get it over with, because I hate to wait until the very last minute," Abundez said. "If you wait, you can't find what you want because everything will be gone."

Oil

From 1A

paying about $1 less per gallon that they paid in June, said Tom Kloza, head of energy analysis at Oil Price Information Service.

In many parts of the country, Kloza said, pump prices could fall to $1.99 per gallon at low cost chains like Buc-ee's, RaceTrac or Costco. Americans haven't paid less than $2 for gas since 2009.

"It's just another form of economic stimulus for the country," said Andy Steinhubl, energy and natural resources strategy leader at the auditing firm KPMG. "Gasoline prices are a big share of out-of-pocket spending. From a consumer standpoint, it's a huge uplift."

U.S. domestic benchmark crude, West Texas Intermediate, fell to $66.15 a barrel Friday on the New York Mercantile Exchange — down $7.54 from the close of trading Wednesday. U.S. markets were closed Thursday for Thanksgiving.

In the two days since OPEC's announcement, international benchmark Brent crude fell by $7.60 to $70.15 on the London-based ICE Futures Europe.

With crude oil prices plunging more than 38 percent since the summer, gasoline prices have followed suit, tumbling 91 cents since the high in April to a national average of $2.79 per gallon on Friday, according to AAA. Houston-area motorists are filling up for even less, with the average sitting at $2.59 on Friday.

But even as consumers enjoy cheaper gasoline prices just in time for the holiday shopping season, the broader effect on the economy could be cause for worry.

"U.S. oil production has been a real boon for the U.S. economy," said Phil Flynn, senior market analyst at the Price Futures Group in Chicago "It's created a lot of jobs. It's added to the gross domestic product. If indeed these prices continue to collapse, we may lose some of that momentum that we got from the U.S. energy sector."

Energy stocks plummeted Friday, even though the broader market mostly was flat.

The S&P 500 Energy Index was down 6.26 percent on a day when the S&P 500 itself was down only 0.25 percent. Shares of Houston-based exploration and production companies Apache, Anadarko Petroleum Corp. and Marathon Oil Corp. fell more than 10 percent.

Refiners' shares fell too, even though lower crude prices reduce their costs of raw materials

Andrew Lipow, president of Lipow Oil Associates in Houston, said refiners will produce more because of the market's crude oversupply, which will cause prices for refined products to sink.

Shares of Valero closed at $48.61, down $2.33 a share, while Tesoro's stock closed at $76.62, down $1.73. Both are independent refiners based in San Antonio.

Flynn said the boom in production from shale and other unconventional plays has been central to the nation's economic recovery. If weak oil prices force companies to lay off employees, lay down rigs and defer drilling plans, the U.S. economy could take a hit, he warned.

In a report issued two days prior to OPEC's decision, ratings agency Moody's said it expected exploration and production companies to cut capital spending budgets by about 20 percent in 2015, with room for more cuts if low oil prices persist. OPEC's move could contribute to deeper cuts. "I think you'll see further doubling down on capital discipline, to get more out of what they've got," Steinhubl said.

The effects of a continuing fall in the price of oil would extend beyond oil and gas employees. Millions more who work in sectors that support the industry could feel pain too, said Bud Weinstein associate director of the Maguire Energy Institute at Southern Methodist University.

"While $60 oil may be a net plus for the economy overall, it's going to have a net negative effect on lots of places — and it's not just Texas, Louisiana and North Dakota," Weinstein said, referring to states with large amounts of oil production.

Spending cuts probably won't lower oil production next year, said Jamie Webster, a senior director at research firm IHS Energy. "We'll still see production growth," Webster said, "but the question is how much does it slow down?"

Production could decline in 2016 and 2017, however, if producers continue to cut spending after next year, Wells Fargo analysts said in a note to investors Friday.

A silver lining for oil producers, Webster said, could be that lower crude prices will give them leverage to renegotiate terms with oil field service companies that do the nuts-and-bolts work of drilling.

Even before crude prices started dropping earlier this year, a few producers — in some cases facing pressure from investors — acknowledged the industry's spending had gotten out of control.

Steinhubl suggested U.S. shale plays won't be affected by the cuts as much as offshore projects in Southeast Asia and the Gulf of Mexico, where oil production costs more than in shale plays. "A lot of light, tight oil is doing just fine down to even $40, and plenty are fine down to $50 or $60," Steinhubl said.

But some firms may feel severe pain — or might not survive — in a low-price environment. Especially at risk are those that took on heavy debt to purchase acreage and won't have the cash flow to pay it back if crude stays well below $100, said Kloza of Oil Price Information Service.

Meanwhile, anyone counting on OPEC to reverse course and cut production will be out of luck, said Jean-François Seznec, a visiting associate professor at Georgetown University. The cartel set its next meeting for June.

Part of the reason OPEC opted against production cuts is that its dominant producer, Saudi Arabia, has a reported $750 billion in cash reserves and can afford to weather low oil prices to maintain market share. OPEC members that want higher prices to shore up their economies lack the output to have as much influence.

Obituaries

Gladys Lilly "Memaw" Smith

Gladys Lilly "Memaw" Smith, beloved wife, mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother, went to be with the Lord on November 26, 2014, in her home in Midland, Texas.

Gladys Lilly Brown was born in Oklahoma, and moved to Texas at an early age. She grew up in San Angelo, and met the love of her life, Eddie Lee Smith, in 1948. After dating only three weeks, E.L. "Bus" asked for her hand, and they married at the Four Square Church, on 19th Street, in San Angelo, Texas.

After a military career (stationed in California), E.L. and Gladys moved back to San Angelo, started a family, and moved to Midland in 1957. Gladys was driven to help with family expenses alongside her husband, and opened Valley View Mobile Home Park in 1970. She took great pride in running a well-kept park, and valued the relationships with her tenants over the past 44 years.

Gladys was a successful entrepreneur, and a true example of class to numerous young families in Midland/Odessa. She was never afraid to share her secrets of a lasting marriage, as well as keeping a family close. After all, these are the things that mattered most to her in life. Above all things, Gladys valued family, hard work, honesty, loyalty and respect. She and E.L. passed on these values to their children and grandchildren. She has worked hard her whole life, and is the definition of a strong woman, with solid morals and values, who loved and respected the outdoors.

Gladys was preceded in death by her loving husband of 63 years, E.L. Smith.

She is survived by her greatest pride and joys, her three sons, Danny, Don and Rick.

Danny, his wife Connie, Don and his wife Debbie, and Rick and his wife Mary, all reside in Midland.

Gladys was blessed with nine grandchildren, Stephanie Alsup and husband, Mark, of Del Rio, Wendy Smith of Midland, Bucky Smith and wife, Donya, of Midland, Andy Smith and wife, Kandace, of Mason, Wes Smith of Midland, Stacy Smith of Midland, Chris Smith and wife, Alishia, of Midland, Sally Crunk and husband, Dane, of Midland, and Sarah Wilber and husband, Colton, of Colorado. She meant the world to her 16 great grandchildren.

We will honor her life at 1:00 p.m. at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel on Saturday, November 29, 2014. Burial will immediately follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

To honor Mrs. Smith, memorials can be made to the Show of Support Hunt for Heroes Project.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home in Midland. Online condolences can be made at www.npwelch.com.

The family will be accepting guests from 3:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, November 30, 2014 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home. Funeral services will be held on Monday, December 1, 2014 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home Chapel at 11:00 a.m. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Survivors include his wife, Sandy Houston; son, David Houston; and one brother.

Prop 1

toward transportation projects in the state's large metropolitan regions of Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, according to John Barton, deputy executive director for the transportation department. State officials have proposed spending 15 to 20 percent of the money in the oilfield regions of South and West Texas, where drilling-related truck traffic has badly damaged rural roads and contributed to a spike in wrecks.

In Austin, where voters approved the statewide proposition but rejected a local one that would have expanded a fledgling light rail system, the Capital Area Metropolitan Planning Organization has pledged its share of Proposition 1 funds toward relieving congestion on the city's main artery, Interstate 35.

The Houston area will likely use the money on a variety of road projects to address congestion and reduce "our high vehicle crash rate," said Alan Clark, director of transportation planning at the Houston-Galveston Area Council. Since the money is explicitly barred from going toward toll projects, none of it will pay for a portion of U.S. 290 that is being reconstructed with a toll lane, he said. However, some money could go toward work on other portions of the highway that would not have tolls.

Knowing how much money will be coming in under Proposition 1 could be a challenge, Clark said, given that the amount will vary with oil drilling activity.

"We're a little bit unsure how we're going to anticipate the availability of those funds and make sure that we have really high-value projects ready for their use," Clark said.

State officials have had trouble accurately predicting how oil activity will change. In 2013, when the Legislature approved putting Proposition 1 on the ballot, supporters said the first payment from oil production taxes might total $900 million, about half of what officials are now expecting.

Austin police: Man fired 100-plus rounds downtown

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — A gunman fired more than 100 rounds at downtown buildings in Austin and tried to set the Mexican Consulate ablaze early Friday before he died during a confrontation with police, authorities said.

Some of the targeted buildings are near the popular Sixth Street entertainment district, where bars close at 2 a.m., about the same time the shootings began. Thousands of people are typically on the street at that time, Austin Police Chief Art Acevedo said.

"Many, many rounds were fired in downtown Austin," Acevedo said. "With all the people on the streets, we're very fortunate. I give thanks that no one but the suspect is injured or deceased."

Investigators identified the shooter as 49-year-old Larry McQuilliams of Austin. Police said he had a criminal record but didn't release details, and said they were still trying to determine a motive.

Mexico's Foreign Relations Department issued a statement expressing "profound concern and condemnation" of the attack, but also said "there is no evidence the shots were exclusively directed at our facility."

Other targeted buildings included Austin police headquarters and the U.S. courthouse.

Acevedo said a sergeant, while holding the reins of two police horses after his patrol, shot the gunman just outside the main entrance to police headquarters. But Acevedo said it's not clear if the shot was fatal or if McQuilliams took his own life.

His targets were located throughout downtown Austin and officers received multiple reports of gunfire, though the entire incident lasted about 10 minutes from the first call, Acevedo said.

Officers approached McQuilliams after he had been shot, but noticed cylinders in his vehicle, which was nearby. They also discovered he was wearing a vest they thought may have been rigged to explode. Officers retreated and a bomb squad was called, but it was later determined that the items were not explosive.

The shooter's white van was still on the street outside police headquarters several hours after the shooting. Its doors, the trunk and hood were open as investigators looked it over.

The fire at the consulate was extinguished before any significant damage was done to the building. The federal courthouse's guard house was shot several times, as was police headquarters, which Acevedo said was "extensively damaged."

As a precaution, a police tactical team later went to the Austin apartment complex where they believed the gunman lived. Some homes close to his apartment were evacuated.

Officers at the scene were seen removing about a dozen small tanks of propane, the type used in camping and the type police said was used in the attempt to set fire to the Mexican Consulate.

Adam Peyton, who lives in the area, said he awoke Friday to see SWAT vehicles and police officers on motorcycles in the southwest Austin neighborhood near the city's well-known Zilker Park. He said the area was "really laid back" and close-knit, where residents know each other and are often out walking their dogs.

Associated Press

In this photo provided by Claudia Hernandez, police tape marks off the scene after authorities shot and killed a man who they say opened fire on the Mexican Consulate, police headquarters and other downtown buildings early Friday in Austin. The gunman fired more than 100 rounds at downtown buildings early Friday before he died, Austin authorities said.

After death, Michael Brown's legacy continues to evolve

By David Crary
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For some Americans on opposite sides of a national debate, Michael Brown has become a symbol, epitomizing their polarized views on who bears the blame for the toll of young black men killed by police officers. Brown was a gentle giant, in one version. A defiant troublemaker, in another.

Yet as more details of the 18-year-old's life and death emerge, his legacy in the eyes of many is more nuanced, reflecting the ups and downs and challenges faced by many young Americans.

"He was someone trying to come into his own, trying to grow up in a world that's not that friendly to young people," civil rights lawyer Barbara Arnwine said.

"Other young people see themselves in him. They're not looking for someone who's perfect. It's his vulnerabilities that appeal to them," said Arnwine, president of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law.

In the days after Brown's Aug. 9 shooting death at the hands of a white police officer in Ferguson, Missouri, a warm, upbeat portrait emerged.

After academic struggles in high school, he had buckled down to get his diploma last summer and was soon to enter a technical college. Friends and family recalled a sizable young man — 6-foot-5, nearly 300 pounds — with a gentle, joking manner, a fan of computer games, an aspiring rap musician.

"His biggest goal was to be part of something," said Charlie Kennedy, a health and physical education teacher at neighboring Normandy High School. "He was kind-hearted, a little kid in a big body."

Subsequently, some less flattering details surfaced. A toxicology report showed that Brown had marijuana in his system on the day he died. Ferguson police released a video showing Brown snatching some cigars in a convenience store and shoving the store clerk earlier in the day he was killed.

Then came the release of evidence and testimony presented to the grand jury that decided not to indict Darren Wilson, the police officer who shot and killed Brown. Wilson testified that Brown scuffled with him while he was in his patrol car, trying to grab his pistol, and moments later — after stepping away from the car — started to charge back at him.

"The only way I can describe it, it looks like a demon, that's how angry he looked," Wilson testified.

Some grand jury witnesses disputed Wilson's testimony, saying Brown did not make a charge. But to Brown's detractors, the officer's account reinforced negative feelings about the young man and further fueled their efforts to make him a symbol for their pro-police arguments.

"Here's the lessons from Ferguson America," wrote rocker and conservative activist Ted Nugent on his Facebook page. "Don't let your kids grow up to be thugs who think they can steal, assault & attack cops as a way of life & badge of black (dis)honor."

The Rev. E.W. Jackson, a conservative black pastor based in Virginia, depicted Brown as "in many ways a typical kid growing up in the black community."

"He imbibed a lot of negative attitudes about what manhood is all about," Jackson said. "I wish this kid could have been redeemed to go on to live a wonderful life."

"But something is wrong when you start wrestling with a police officer over his gun," Jackson added. "I have nothing but sympathy for his parents, but you can't absolve Michael Brown of responsibility for this situation."

Arnwine, the civil rights lawyer, was infuriated that Wilson's negative testimony had been made available to the grand jurors and to the public.

"It was meant to portray Michael Brown in the worst possible way, as a foul-mouthed, violent, rude, aggressive person," she said. "It was meant to give people the impression of this scary black man who deserved to die."

She said the turnout of throngs of young people of all races at rallies and protests nationwide gave a truer picture of Brown's legacy.

"When you see their passion, hear the pain in their voices, you can see they honestly relate to this young man," Arnwine said. "They feel that he absolutely embodied the struggles that they are going through."

"He was someone struggling to create his identity, make his music, hang with his friends," she said. "You're caught betwixt and between, trying to be an adult but still in your teens."

The president of the NAACP, Cornell William Brooks, said he met Brown's parents and some of his young friends in the aftermath of the shooting.

"Michael Brown contained all the virtues and all the flaws of a great many young people, irrespective of race or class," Brooks said. "There was something about him, and what happened to him, that inspired young people to transform a local social-justice challenge into a global civil rights issue, something that spoke to their sense of conscience."

The intense scrutiny of Brown's life and the accompanying moral judgments have angered some of those following the case.

"It's not for us to say if he was angel or if he would have become a billionaire after he got his college degree," said James Peterson, director of Africana Studies and an associate professor of English at Lehigh University.

"I hate the narrative that it's more sad that he was two days away from starting college. What if he wasn't?" Peterson asked. "It doesn't matter what we think his legacy was. He was a human being who didn't deserve to have his life snuffed out."

Immigrants' chances tied to their state's policies

By Josh Christie
Associated Press

PHOENIX — If Christian Avila lived a few hundred miles to the west, he would have a driver's license and qualify for in-state college tuition and a host of other opportunities available to young people granted legal status by President Barack Obama two years ago.

But Avila lives in Phoenix, and the 24-year-old immigrant who was brought here from Mexico by his parents at age 9 still has to navigate the sprawling city in fear as he drives to school or work.

"You get nervous, your legs start to tingle a little bit when there's a cop behind you, when you're doing nothing wrong by driving to work," said Avila, a community college student and immigration activist. "You're not breaking any rules; you're following the law. But, unfortunately, it's where we live."

With last week's action by Obama that expanded the deferred action program and added millions of other immigrants, Avila's plight highlights a harsh reality about the president's changes. The president may be allowing them to remain in the U.S., but it doesn't mean their state will let them drive a car, get an education at an affordable rate or obtain health insurance.

A patchwork of rules began to form in states — largely along political lines — after the president allowed some young immigrants to stay in the country. Conservative states like Nebraska and Arizona kept them from getting driver's licenses while liberal locations were much more welcoming in terms of state services and benefits.

Now, states must make new decisions on how to respond to the president's action that allows millions more immigrants to remain in the U.S.

In California, Democrats, immigration groups and health care advocates are pushing for the immigrants to receive health care under the state's version of the Medicaid program. The California Department of Health Care Services is deciding how to proceed. The president's action excludes immigrants who came to the country illegally from qualifying for federal health benefits.

In Nevada, officials are drawing up a bill for the Legislature making clear that unauthorized immigrants can become teachers in the state. Current rules specify that a prospective teacher must be a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident before they can receive a teaching license in Nevada.

A new gubernatorial administration in Arizona will have to decide whether to continue a hard-line approach toward state benefits that outgoing Gov. Jan Brewer took.

After Obama took action in 2012 granting legal status to 1.8 million young people brought to the U.S. as children, Brewer issued an executive order denying them driver's licenses or other state benefits, including in-state tuition at the state's public universities. A federal appeals court ruled the license ban was unconstitutional, and Brewer is considering an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Our position is unilateral action by the president does nothing to change the fact that an illegal alien's presence is the United States is not authorized under federal law," Brewer spokesman Andrew Wilder said.

NYC panel nears decision on chokehold death

Associated Press

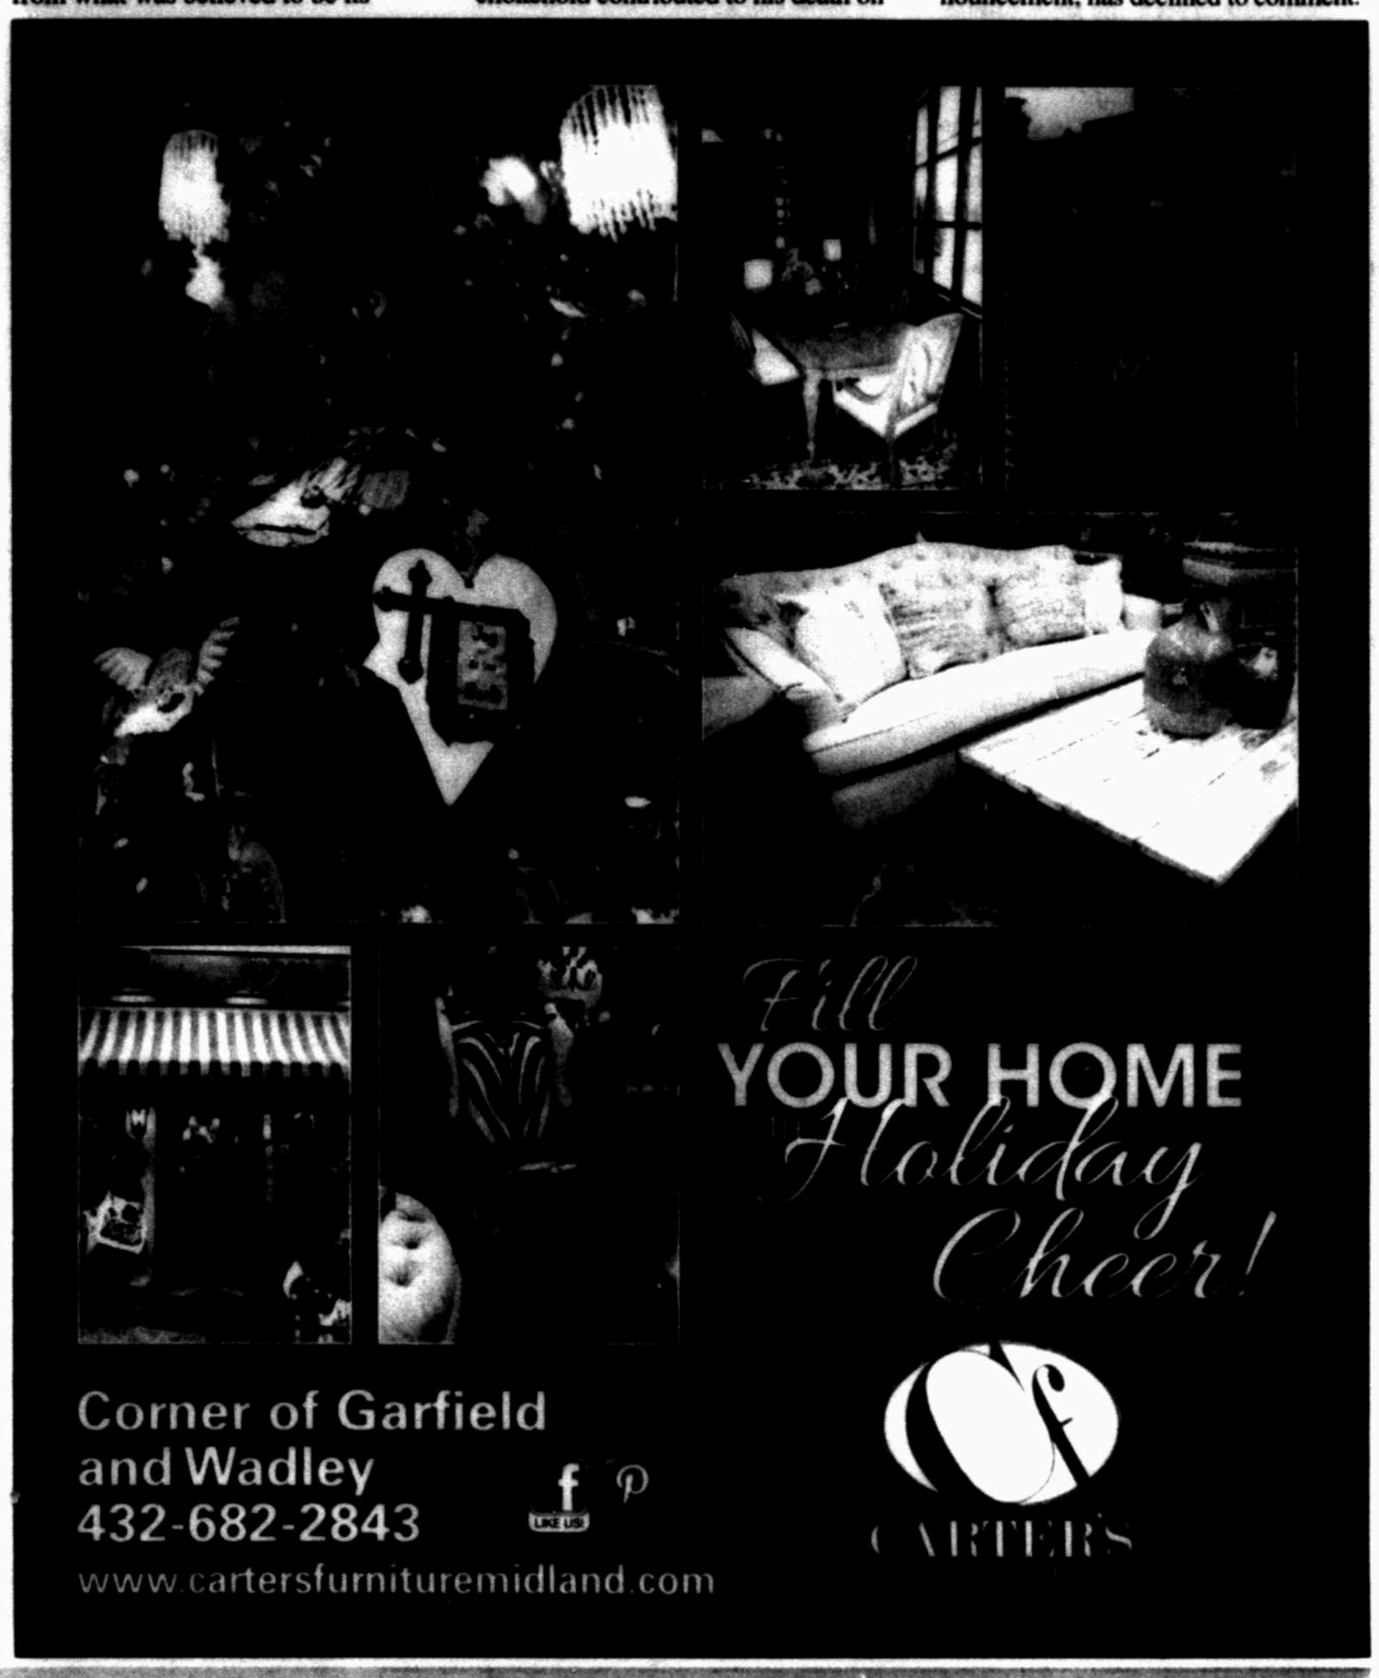

NEW YORK — Amid the fallout from a grand jury's decision in the fatal police shooting of 18-year-old Michael Brown in Missouri, a panel in New York City is quietly nearing its own conclusion about another combustible case involving the death of an unarmed man at the hands of police.

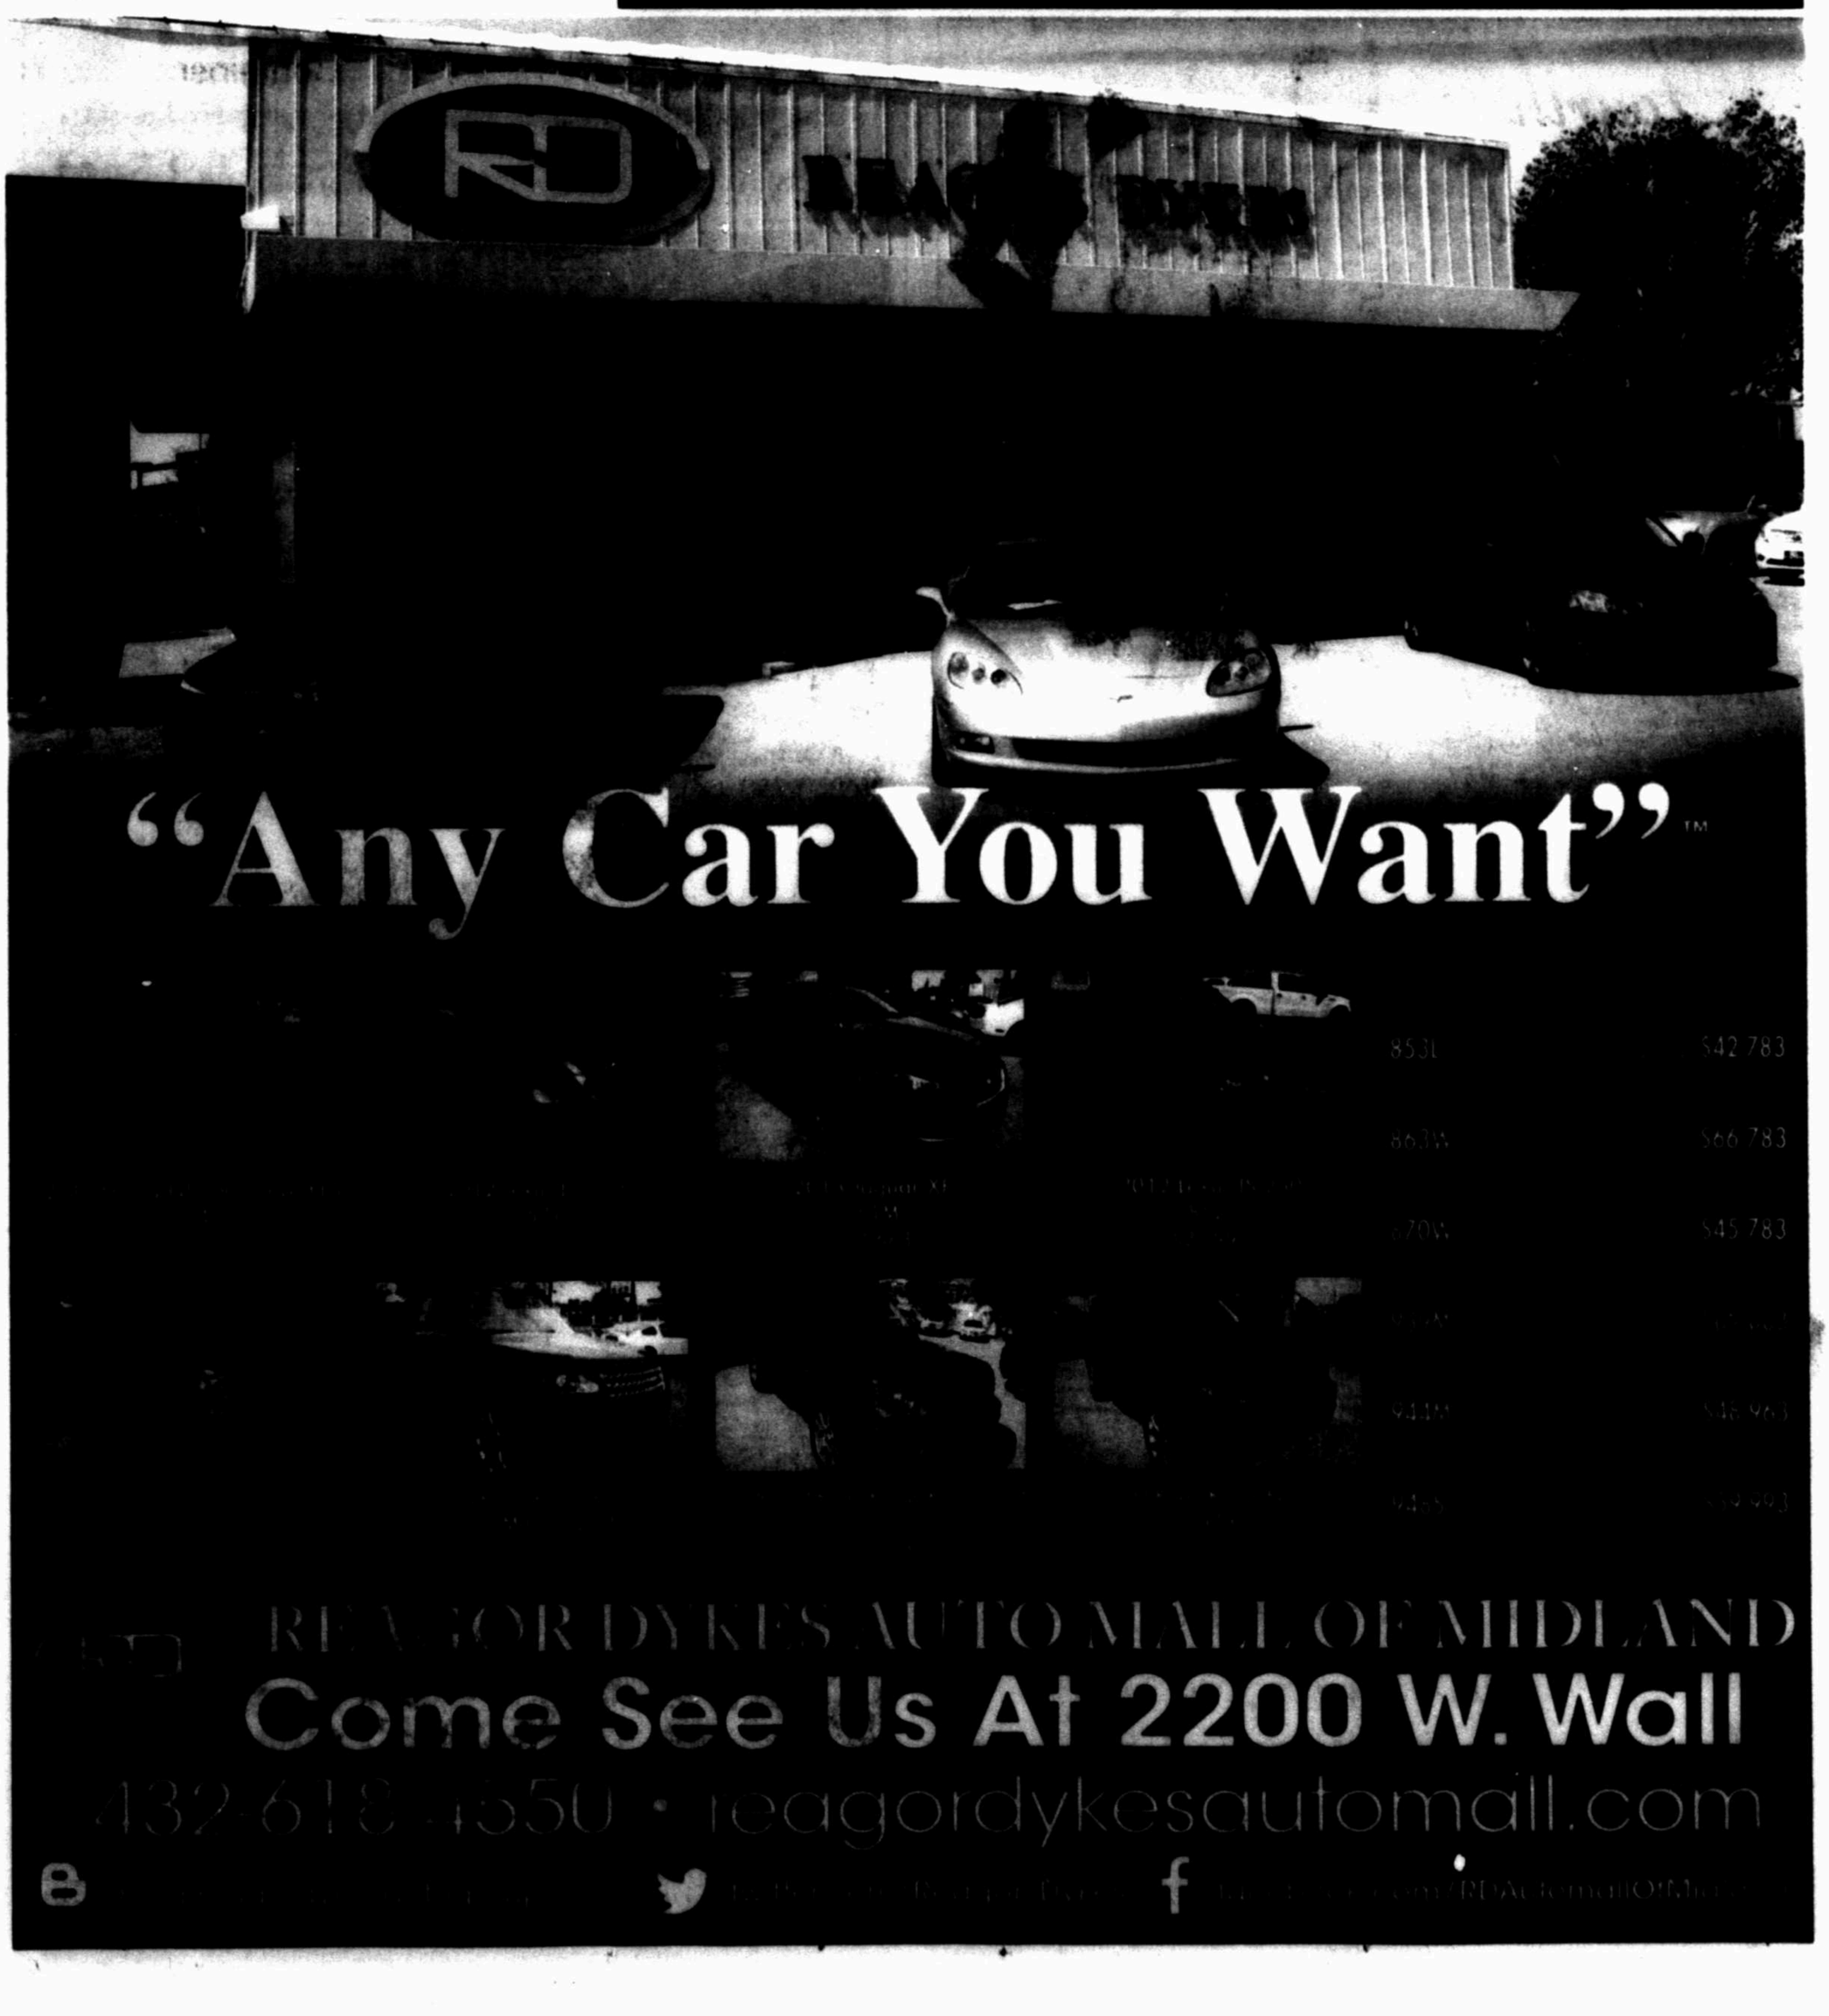

The grand jury that began investigating the chokehold death of Eric Garner in September heard last week from what was believed to be its final witness — the New York Police Department officer seen on a widely watched amateur video showing him wrapping his arm around Garner's neck. Before the end of the year, authorities are expected to announce whether the officer will face criminal charges in a case that sparked outrage and grabbed headlines before it was overshadowed by the killing of Brown in the St. Louis suburb of Ferguson.

The Garner video — along with a medical examiner's finding that the chokehold contributed to his death on the streets of Staten Island — should give a grand jury ample reason to indict, said Garner's mother, Gwen Carr.

"You'd have to be blind to not see what happened," Carr said in a telephone interview. "I can't see why it should take so long to reach a decision. ... The wait is making me very anxious, of course. But there's nothing I can do about it."

Staten Island District Attorney Daniel Donovan, who has control over the timing of a grand jury vote and an announcement, has declined to comment.

Range Resources sued over Penn. drilling

Associated Press

MCDONALD, Pa. — A couple who say their water was contaminated by natural gas drilling and leaks from a drilling wastewater pond near their property have sued oil and gas company Range Resources.

The lawsuit by Christopher and Janet Lauff, of McDonald, contends they had to forgo well water and connect to a public water line, for which they've not been compensated by Range Resources Corp.

The Fort Worth-based drilling firm was still evaluating the lawsuit but had "not seen any evidence of health or environmental impacts," its spokesman Matt Pitzarella said.

"In a more broad sense, we always look for ways to address concerns of the community as it relates to our work, and this location is no different," he said.

The Lauffs contend they lost use of their well water in 2010 after Range began a drilling process called hydraulic fracturing at several wells within 1,000 feet of their property in McDonald, in southwest Pennsylvania. The Lauffs said a wastewater pond next to their property amounted to "a regional toxic waste dump site for over 190 wells."

The Lauffs said there were collateral problems from the nearby drilling operations ranging from excessive truck traffic and noise to flooding and erosion they blame on stormwater runoff from the drilling complex.

The wastewater pond, also known as a drilling impoundment, is one of several that prompted a consent decree with the state Department of Environmental Protection under which Range agreed to pay $4.15 million in fines.

The Lauffs contend the impoundment that affected their property was built incorrectly and too close to a creek.

The lawsuit also targets some property owners who leased their land to Range and several other companies connected to the drilling or a pipeline that carries natural gas from the Range drilling site.

Park new front in pollution fight

By Matthew Tresaugue
Houston Chronicle

Federal regulators are taking their fight with Texas over pollution from coal-fired power plants to an unlikely new front: Big Bend National Park.

The Environmental Protection Agency on Monday proposed costly new scrubbers and other pollution controls at eight coal plants in an attempt to restore natural visibility on federal lands, including Big Bend, whose majestic vistas have been steadily obscured by a hazy smear of smog and soot.

The decision comes more than five years after the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality set the year 2155 as a target for returning clear skies to the parks. The state's plan, which the EPA rejected, did not require any new controls for the plants — a primary source of haze-forming sulfur dioxide — because of the potential price tag.

While the EPA touted the public-health benefits of its latest plan, it was based on a section of the Clean Air Act that provides the exceptionally remote Big Bend and other national parks with the highest level of protection for air quality.

Deep in a southwestern corner of Texas, Big Bend's rugged beauty was once visible from as far away as 100 miles. These days pollution from diesel trucks, coal-fired power plants and crop-clearing fires in Mexico is reducing visibility in the park.

The TCEQ blames sources south of the Rio Grande for more than half of the dirty air on Big Bend's haziest days. The agency sent a federally mandated plan to the EPA that doesn't require the state's power generators to make any cuts in emissions of sulfur dioxide.

"We only have so much flexibility," then-TCEQ Chairman Buddy Garcia said at the time, adding that the plan is the best the EPA would get from the state agency.

The TCEQ said the plan would remove the haze from Big Bend by 2155, missing the federal goal by 91 years. Even then, the EPA's analysis found that natural visibility wouldn't return to the iconic park before 2207 under the state's plan.

The EPA said its plan would bring blue skies to the park at least 20 years before the state's proposal would. But that means the federal goals still won't be met for generations.

Beyond bringing clear views back to national parks, the EPA's plan is a way for the agency to get desired pollution cuts from Texas, the nation's top coal-burning state. Texas is suing the EPA over another federal rule that would sharply reduce sulfur dioxide emissions from the state's oldest and dirtiest power plants.

The proposal would scrub about 230,000 tons of sulfur dioxide from the Texas skies — about the same amount that would be removed by the hotly contested Cross-State Air Pollution Rule, which is before a federal appeals court.

"The pollution control technologies are the same, but EPA will exceed the cross-state rule with this plan," said Tom Smith, the Texas director of Public Citizen, which is pushing state officials to drop coal in favor of renewable sources, such as wind and solar.

The TCEQ criticized its own clean-air plan as "somewhat of a charade" before approving it in 2009. But it found fault with the EPA's alternative, saying the federal plan would cost utilities more than $2 billion without a noticeable improvement in visibility at the national parks.

The commission said in a statement that the costs of the EPA's 267-page plan "would invariably be passed on to consumers, either directly or indirectly, and could have consequential impacts on the state's power grid."

Some companies may decide to retire older plants rather than invest in new control measures, experts said. The proposal covers coal-fired plants operated by Luminant, NRG Texas Power, Coleto Creek Power, San Miguel Electric Cooperative and Xcel Energy.

Permian Basin adds one rig this week

From staff reports

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin increased one this week to 566, according to the weekly rotary rig count released Wednesday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

District 8, which includes Midland County, shed three rigs for a total of 332.

Texas shed five rigs for a statewide total of 901. In other major Texas basins, there were 209 rigs in the Eagle Ford, unchanged; 59 in the Granite Wash, unchanged; 39 in the Haynesville, unchanged; and 25 in the Barnett, unchanged.

There were 470 rigs in the Permian Basin and 834 rigs in Texas at this time last year.

The U.S. shed 12 rigs for a nationwide total of 1,917. There were 1,572 oil rigs, down two; 344 natural gas rigs, down 11; and one rig listed as miscellaneous, up one.

By trajectory, there were 352 vertical drilling rigs, unchanged 1,371 directional drilling rigs, down one; and 194 directional drilling rigs, down 11.

The U.S. had 1,763 rigs a year ago this week.

The top five basins by rig count this week were the Permian; the Eagle Ford, the Williston with 191, up three; the Marcellus with 82, down one; and the Mississippian with 74, down one.

The top five states by rig count were Texas; Oklahoma with 214, unchanged; North Dakota with 180, up three; Louisiana with 110, down one; and New Mexico with 99, up one.

In the U.S., there were 1,851 rigs on land, down 13; 12 in inland waters, unchanged; and 54 offshore, up one. There were 52 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, up one.

Canada added four rigs this week for a nationwide total of 438. There were 229 oil rigs, down 14; 209 natural gas rigs, up 18; and zero rigs listed as miscellaneous, unchanged. Canada had 385 rigs a year ago this week.

The total number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the North America region — which includes the U.S. and Canada — decreased eight to 2,355. There were 2,148 rigs in North America at this time last year.

North Pole sues over contamination

Associated Press

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — The city of North Pole is suing two recent owners of an oil refinery over groundwater pollution.

The lawsuit filed Wednesday blames current refinery owner Flint Hills Alaska Resources and previous owner Williams Alaska Petroleum for releasing hazardous substances into the groundwater beneath the refinery.

Sulfolane is one of the substances identified in the lawsuit, Fairbanks Daily News-Miner reported.

"The presence of sulfolane contamination in the city's groundwater has rendered that groundwater unfit for human consumption and endangers the public health or welfare, or fish, animals, vegetation or any other part of the natural habitat in which it is found," the lawsuit said.

Flint Hills spokesman Jeff Cook said the company has no comment. "It's not appropriate in view of the lawsuit to discuss additional details outside of court," he said. "We look forward to our day in court."

Williams representatives couldn't immediately be reached for comment on the Thanksgiving holiday.

The lawsuit said the contamination has damaged the local real estate market and development efforts, resulting in revenue losses. The city wants the companies to pay for the cost of cleaning up the contamination. The city is also seeking restitution.

"Based on the information we have, there was some reckless disregard while Williams was in control of that facility," North Pole Mayor Bryce Ward said. "Flint Hills at this point has been willing to work with the community and do so to clean things up. There was a short period of time from when they owned it to when they started with those actions."

Flint Hills acquired the refinery from Williams Alaska in 2004.

GOP govs starting to strut their stuff for 2016

By Jill Colvin
Associated Press

BOCA RATON, Fla. — A half-dozen potential Republican presidential contenders spent last week peacocking across the sprawling grounds of a pink-hued luxury resort, schmoozing with donors and sizing up the competition in the party's most fractured field in decades.

They rarely criticized each other in public, but there were subtle jabs.

Within hours of New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie gracing the cover of a magazine in an illustration of him kissing a baby's head, Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal suggested the party needs bold leaders, not showmen.

"We have enough politicians who try to be celebrities and kiss babies and cut ribbons," Jindal said.

Whether it was an intentional shot at Christie or not, the looming 2016 contest changed the context of every speech, interview and panel discussion at the Republican Governors Association's annual conference. The summit at the oceanside Boca Raton Resort & Club felt like a test run for what is increasingly shaping up to be a brutal showdown for the GOP presidential nomination among more than a dozen potential contenders, including a cluster of governors.

In contrast, Hillary Rodham Clinton has spent recent weeks basking in the glows of grandmotherhood and applause at a few public events — without any major challenger for the Democratic nod, should she choose to pursue it.

While the potential GOP field appears stronger than four years ago, the Republicans are without a front-runner.

"There are, like, 16 people who could run," said former Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour, who downplayed the potential risk of so many candidates at each other's throats. "They won't all run, of course, but a lot of quality in there."

The candidates aren't expected to start formally declaring their intentions until the first quarter of next year. But the developing tensions were already apparent as five potential candidates appeared together on stage in a packed, grand ballroom to answering questions from moderator Chuck Todd, the host of NBC's "Meet The Press" — a dress rehearsal of sorts for the looming primary.

Ohio Gov. John Kasich, a former congressman, repeatedly crossed words with Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker, challenging Walker's telling of the history of the Bill Clinton administration. On another panel, Walker mentioned that he'd been in high school at a time when Kasich had voted on a piece of immigration legislation.

"Well, you don't look that much younger," Kasich quipped.

Gov. Rick Perry left little doubt that the race is on.

"I think the campaign has engaged. We're talking about issues here that are going to affect the presidential election in 2016," Perry said. "I think we need to have this conversation with America."

The governors who would be president agreed on one thing: their superiority as candidates over their nongubernatorial competition. Those in attendance repeatedly stressed that the party's best hope for reclaiming the White House lies with a chief executive at the top of the ticket.

But they dismissed the idea of any kind of advance pact to ensure they don't inflict too much damage during the primary.

"Um, no, no pacts, at least none that I'm involved in," said Christie, joking that he'd be closely watching Indiana Gov. Mike Pence, another potential contender, to make sure he wasn't forging any deals.

Behind the scenes, however, that's exactly what the contenders were aiming for.

Dozens of the party's biggest donors enjoyed private audiences with prospective candidates. They mingled in hotel corridors, at fancy dinners, on a nearby golf course where basketball great Michael Jordan was spotted.

Ginsburg back home, expected at court next week

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg has returned home after undergoing an operation to implant a heart stent to clear a blocked artery and is expected to hear oral arguments on Monday.

Ginsburg, 81, experienced discomfort during exercise with a personal trainer Tuesday and was rushed to MedStar Washington Hospital Center. The stent procedure came after doctors discovered a blockage in her right coronary artery, court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg said.

Stents, a kind of mesh scaffolding, are inserted into about half a million people in the U.S. each year to prop open arteries clogged by years of cholesterol buildup. Doctors guide a narrow tube through a blood vessel in the groin or an arm, inflate a tiny balloon to flatten the blockage and then push the stent into place.

Ginsburg has had a series of health problems, including colorectal cancer in 1999 and pancreatic cancer in 2009. She was hospitalized after a bad reaction to medicine in 2009 and suffered broken ribs in a fall two years ago. Still, the court's oldest justice has not missed any time on the job since joining the high court.

Official Christmas tree arrives at White House

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas at the White House now that the official tree has arrived.

A horse-drawn wagon hauled the 20-foot white fir up the driveway to the North Portico for inspection on Friday morning. Receiving the tree were first lady Michelle Obama, daughters Malia and Sasha and family dogs Bo and Sunny.

The family circled the tree, smelled it and conferred before the first lady said, "Thumbs-up. It's a go. We're taking the tree."

Malia, holding Bo's leash, said of the tree: "It's great. It's big."

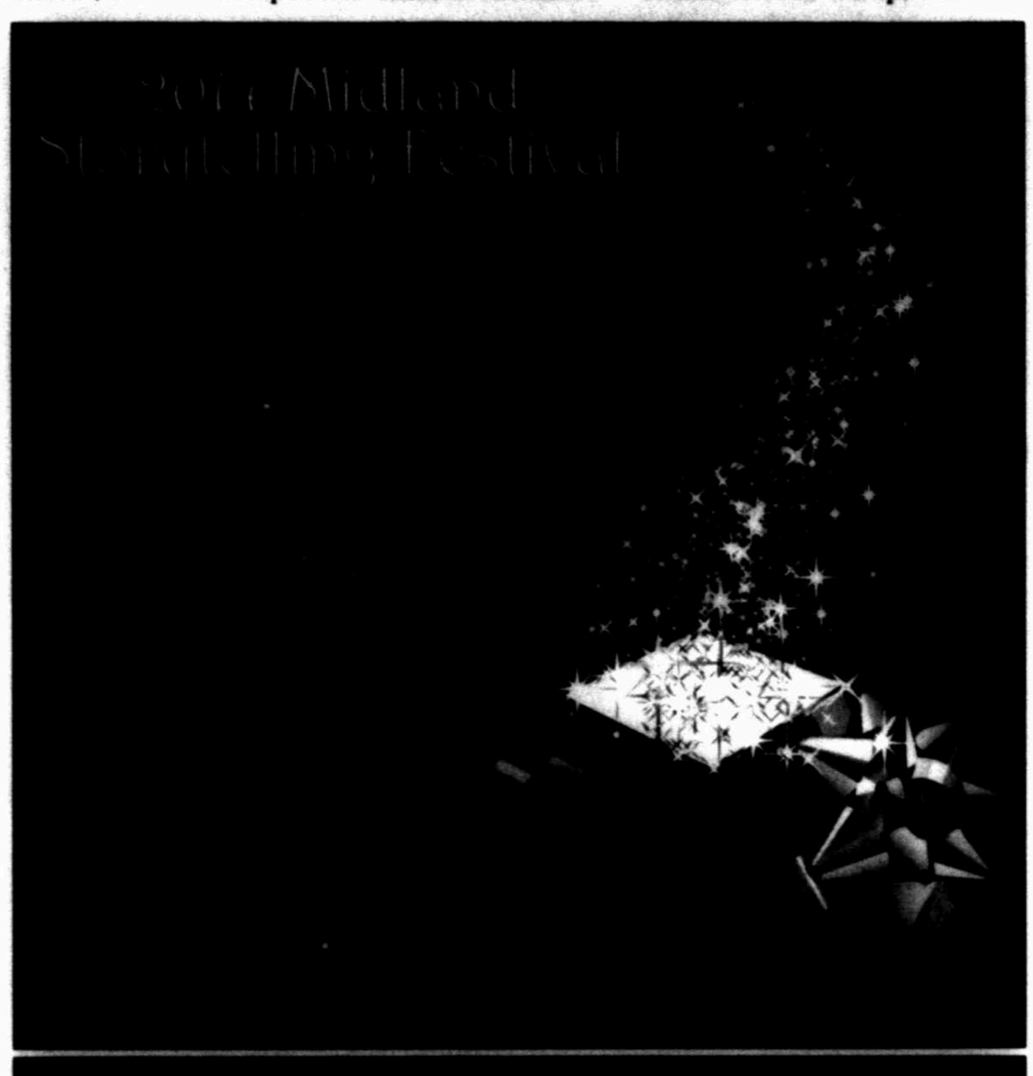

It's tradition for the first lady to preside over the tree delivery on the morning after Thanksgiving.

Odds are slim to none that it would ever be rejected. The tree is chosen weeks in advance at the farm that wins the National Christmas Tree Association contest. The winner has presented the official White House tree since 1966.

In late September, a group of White House staffers including the chief usher, groundskeeper and chief horticulturist traveled to the Crystal Spring Tree Farm in Lehighton, Pennsylvania, to search for a tree they agreed is perfect enough to stand in the Blue Room, albeit tethered to its ceiling, as the main attraction throughout the White House holiday season. The Blue Room tree cannot be taller than 8 1/2 feet, so this tree will be trimmed to fit.

The farm, run by Chris Botek, a second-generation Christmas tree farmer, also provided the official White House tree in 2010 and 2006.

The delivery kicks off an intense few days of round-the-clock tree trimming, wreath laying and other decorating by an army of volunteers who help turn the White House into a winter wonderland. Many of the decorations honor military families, a group that Mrs. Obama is trying to support through a nationwide initiative.

'It's a nightmare'

Stephenville quarterback Jarrett Stidham (1) runs the ball during a 59-32 victory over Big Spring in a 4A Regional Championship at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene on Friday.

Stidham propels Stephenville past Big Spring

Yellow Jackets	59
Steers	32

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

ABILENE — Jarrett Stidham lasted just three plays because of an injured hand the last time Stephenville played Big Spring.

Stephenville ended up losing that district game to the Steers in late October in a wild shootout.

But Friday afternoon, Stidham made his presence felt with 277 yards passing, 166 yards rushing seven total touchdowns in a 59-32 victory over Big Spring in a Class 4A Division I regional round game at Shotwell Stadium.

"It's a nightmare," said Big Spring coach Phillip Ritchey about trying to stop the Texas Tech commit. "You can try everything in the book. You can pressure him and they get rid of it quick. He's athletic enough that he can scramble and keep plays alive. Their receivers are good, their offensive line is good. I don't know how somebody is going to stop them."

Stidham had missed four weeks — two weeks earlier than projected — because of that hand injury, but since then he's been on a tear as he accounted for nine touchdowns in last week's 69-60 win over Lubbock Estacado.

Stidham said because his team only lost by seven (64-57) the last time the Yellow Jackets (9-3) played the Steers, he was confident that his team could be successful this time around.

"We knew we could do some things on offense that would work, and sure enough it worked out for us," he said. "I'm just glad to be playing in December."

Stephenville advances to the state quarterfinal round and will play Graham.

Big Spring ends its season at 9-3, and for the second consecutive year, saw its season end in the third round of the playoffs because of Stephenville.

Big Spring's Matt Yanez (5) looks for running room as quarterback Tobyn Tannehill (12) blocks a pair of Stephenville defenders during a 4A Regional playoff game at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene Friday.

Big Spring jumped out to a 7-0 lead when Tobyn Tannehill scored on an 11-yard run on the opening drive of the game.

But Stephenville was quick to answer, as a 47-yard kickoff return set up a 21-yard TD pass from Stidham to Austin Stufflebean — one of the three times they connected in the game for a touchdown — to tie the game at 7 just two plays after Big Spring's score.

Then a series of disastrous plays occurred for the Steers.

First, a lost fumble led to a touchdown pass by Stidham. Then, a blocked punt led to a 14-yard touchdown run by Stidham. In a matter of 1 minute, 44 seconds, Stephenville had jumped out to a 21-7 lead.

"The first 4 and a half, 5 minutes of the ballgame were played very well with the exception of that first drive," Stephenville coach Joseph Gillespie said. "We felt like we were in position there (to make a play on that first drive), we just didn't tackle, for whatever reason. We just had to calm our nerves down."

Parker leads San Antonio over Sacramento

Associated Press

Spurs	112
Kings	104

SAN ANTONIO — Tony Parker had 27 points and the San Antonio Spurs held on to beat the Sacramento Kings 112-104 on Friday night, —their second straight victory without Gregg Popovich.

Popovich missed his second straight game following a recent undisclosed minor medical procedure. The veteran coach's status is unknown for the team's upcoming four-game road trip, which begins Sunday in Boston, but he did visit with the team Friday morning.

Assistant coach Ettore Messina led San Antonio to its sixth straight victory. Messina said everything he is doing has Popovich's seal of approval.

Kawhi Leonard scored 19 points, Tim Duncan had 18 and Danny Green 11 for San Antonio (11-4).

Darren Collison and Ryan Hollins had 15 points each for Sacramento (9-6) and Ben McLemore had 14 points.

The Kings were without leading scorer and rebounder DeMarcus Cousins, who woke up "feeling sick," according to Sacramento coach Michael Malone.

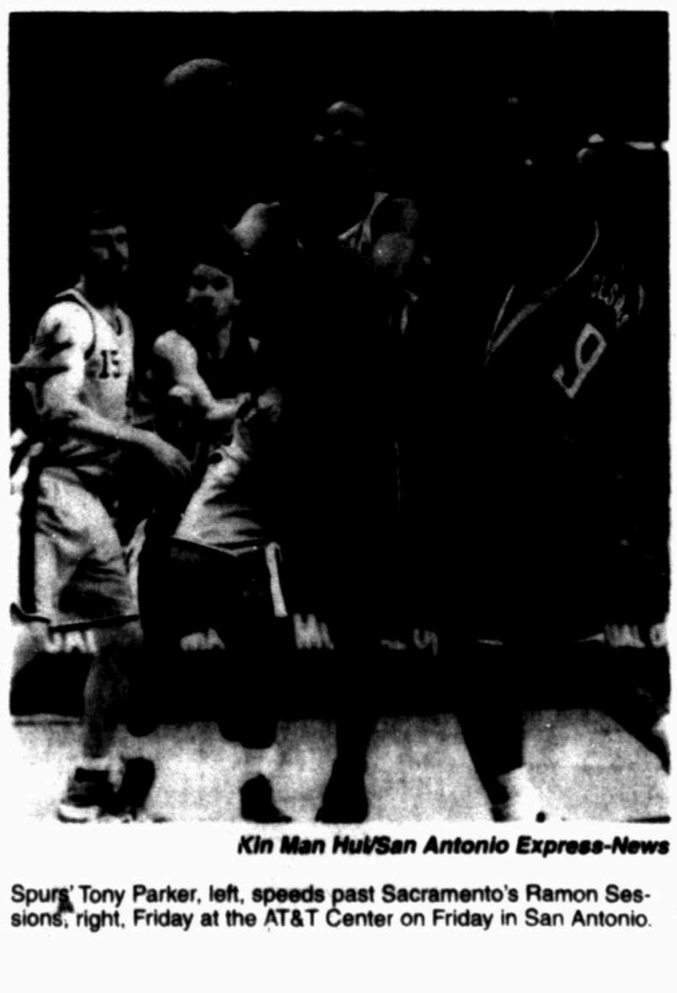

San Antonio allowed Sacramento to shoot 51 percent, but countered by shooting 12 for 24 on 3-pointers and dishing out 29 assists on 42 baskets.

TIP-INS

Kings: Hollins made his first start since 2012, when he started once in 15 appearances for the Miami Heat. ... Sacramento plays 10 of its next 11 games at home after completing their road trip Friday at 2-2. ... The Kings are 8-0 when outshooting an opponent, and led in field goal percentage until about midway through the third quarter Friday.

Spurs: Duncan has four 20-point, 20-rebound games in his career against Sacramento — the most he has had against any NBA team ... Parker made Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo (9) is sacked by Philadelphia's Brandon Graham (55) Thursday, Nov. 27, 2014, in Arlington.

Cowboys get Eagles again, but Bears come first

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

IRVING — Dez Bryant was ready to play Philadelphia again as soon as the Eagles finished blowing out the Cowboys in a Thanksgiving battle for the NFC East lead.

At least the star Dallas receiver mentioned that a trip to Chicago comes first.

"I'm really not mad at all," Bryant said after Thursday's 33-10 loss, the third straight at home for Dallas. "They beat us. I'm going to accept that. But I cannot wait to go up there and play them again."

Cowboys coach Jason Garrett has a unique challenge to his mantra of next practice, next day, next game. The Cowboys (8-4) were a bust in the first of two games against Philadelphia in 18 days, all the more reason to be anxious for a do-over.

The Bears (5-7) also were flattened on Thanksgiving, losing 34-17 at Detroit. Instead of the usual extra time off, both teams are playing the rare Thursday-to-Thursday set.

"We'd be saying the same thing if the outcome would've been the reverse," Garrett said. "We got to get focused on beating Chicago. We have to learn from this game, build on the good stuff, correct the bad. It wasn't perfect. Let's get back to work."

Tony Romo will get a normal week of rest for his surgically repaired back, which didn't appear to respond very well to the first quick turnaround since the December procedure to fix a herniated disk. He sustained a separate injury

Fitzpatrick gets trim and job back

Associated Press

Houston quarterback Ryan Fitzpatrick finally shaved the bushy and overgrown beard he'd been sporting the entire season this week.

And on the day he debuted his closely trimmed facial hair, he scolded reporters for not telling him how terrible his old look was.

"I'm kind of mad you guys didn't tell me I looked like that," he said. "I finally had time to look in the mirror and thought it was disgusting and decided to trim it down a little bit."

He said getting rid of the wild look was not an easy task.

"We had to chop it down piece by piece," he said. "It was definitely a significant amount of time to take it off."

He said a bonus of the change is that his young daughters aren't scared of him anymore. One of his sons remarked that he had "the longest neck in the world."

Fitzpatrick, who was benched two games ago, will return to the starting lineup Sunday at Tennessee with Ryan Mallett out with a season-ending chest injury. Some wondered if he decided to get a new look to go with his fresh start on the field.

"It was more just me getting tired with having to pick corn out of it," Fitzpatrick joked. "When I eat pancakes in the morning with the syrup and stuff, it would be there for days. My wife asks me, 'Did you have pancakes this morning?' (I say) 'No, it was four days ago.' No more of those questions, which will be good."

I KNOW THAT GUY: Zach Mettenberger had an up-close view of Odell Beckham Jr. and his great hands at LSU. For the record, the Titans quarterback wasn't surprised by that three-fingered grab Beckham made Sunday night for the Giants.

Wild blow lead, rally to beat Stars in OT

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

DALLAS — Marco Scandella scored the winning goal 2:04 into overtime, after Thomas Vanek pulled Minnesota even late in regulation, and the Wild beat the Dallas Stars 5-4 after blowing a three-goal lead on Friday night.

Scandella poked a loose puck past Kari Lehtonen from close range to hand the Stars their eighth straight overtime loss at home.

Minnesota improved to 6-0 against Central Division teams, and Dallas remained winless at 0-6-2 in the division.

The Stars came up short in what would have been their biggest comeback since rallying from 3-0 to beat Chicago 4-3 in a shootout on Feb. 11, 2011, according to STATS.

Vanek's tying goal came with 1:52 left in regulation from the right circle on assists from Ryan Suter and Zach Parise, his second assist of the game.

Alex Goligoski put Dallas ahead 4-3 by beating Darcy Kuemper over the top of his glove off a pass from Tyler Seguin with 6:31 remaining.

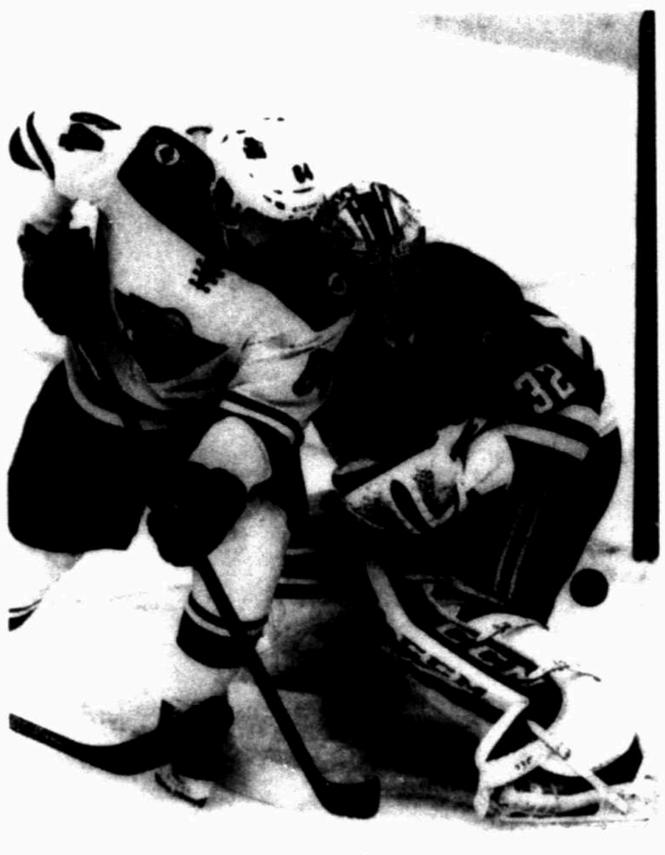

The Stars scored three goals in the last 4 minutes of the second period to wipe out a 3-0 deficit. Ales Hemsky started it with his first goal in his 22nd game in Dallas since signing a 3-year, $12 million contract in the summer.

About a minute and a half later, Seguin got his NHL-leading 18th goal on a shot that was stopped by Kuemper before the puck slid past the goalie. Erik Cole beat Kuemper from the top of the left circle with 11 seconds left in the period to make it 3-3.

The flurry of goals from the Stars came two nights after Kuemper was pulled after giving up four goals in the first period of a 4-0 loss to Los Angeles. He had 41 saves on a season-high 45 shots by Dallas.

Nino Niederreiter got his seventh goal in eight games and team-leading 11th of the season to start the scoring for Minnesota.

Jason Zucker poked in a rebound off Lehtonen's pad on a shot by Nate Prosser for a 2-0 lead in the first. Mikael Grandlund made it 3-0 midway through the second when he beat Lehtonen on Jason Pominville's feed.

Royals trade Crow to Miami, give Frasor $1.8M deal

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Former first-round draft pick Aaron Crow was traded from the Kansas City Royals to the Miami Marlins for left-hander Brian Flynn and right-hander Reid Redman.

In another move Friday, Jason Frasor and the Royals agreed to a one-year contract with a 2016 mutual option that guarantees the reliever $1.8 million.

Crow, a 28-year-old right-hander taken with the 12th overall pick in 2009, was 6-1 with a 4.12 ERA and three saves in 67 relief appearances this year. The Topeka, Kansas, native did not pitch in the postseason.

Crow was a starter in college and in the minor leagues, and the Marlins plan to consider him for their rotation.

"We're not sure how the rest of the offseason will unfold in terms of what else we add to our pitching staff," president of baseball operations Mike Hill said. "But we love the flexibility. We love the thought he could possibly be a starting option for us. At a minimum we know he'll be a valuable bullpen piece and add to the overall depth of our staff."

Crow, who made the All-Star team in 2011, said starting in the majors is something he has always wanted to do.

"It's a little more taxing on your body, and I think a little more challenging, too," Crow said. "As a reliever you only face guys one time. Facing them three times in one game is a little bit different. It's a little more challenging. It's something I'd like to see if I could be successful at."

Flynn, 24, was 8-10 with a 4.06 ERA in 25 starts at Triple-A New Orleans and also had one start and one relief appearance for the Marlins, a year after making four starts for Miami in his first big league season. He played at Wichita State in 2009 and '11.

The 26-year-old Redman was 5-1 with a 2.04 ERA and seven saves at Class A Jupiter and Double-A Jacksonville.

Frasor gets $1.25 million next season, down from $1.75 million this year. The 2016 option is for $2 million with a $550,000 buyout.

FROM STAFF REPORTS

CLASS 5A DIVISION II REGIONAL
SAN ANGELO CENTRAL VS. SOUTHLAKE CARROLL

When/Where: 1 p.m., today McLane Stadium, Waco
On the air: KIXY (94.7 FM) San Angelo
Weather Forecast: High of 75 with no chance for rain
Records: San Angelo Central 11-1; Southlake Carroll 12-0
Last game: San Angelo Central 50, Lubbock Monterey 14; Southlake Carroll 58, Denton Guyer 42
Last meeting/series: This is the first meeting between the two schools

Three things you need to know

■ This is the furthest San Angelo Central has made it in the playoffs since 2003, when it lost to Arlington Lamar in the third round. This is only the ninth Bobcats team to advance to the third round of the playoffs, and only two Central teams have made it past that hurdle. Central won a state title in 1966 when the playoffs were only three rounds.

■ Southlake Carroll has had no such issues in the playoffs. The Dragons have won eight state championships in their history, and consistently make deep runs in the postseason. This Carroll team appears to be yet another contender, as it enters the game unbeaten.

■ Recent history isn't on Central's side either. Since 2010, the Dragons have faced a member of District 3-6A on six occasions. In those games, Carroll owns a 6-0 record with a combined score of 340-82. Southlake has already beaten Abilene High and Lee this year.

Next: Winner vs. Abilene High-Cedar Hill, Class 6A Division II State Quarterfinal, TBA

ABILENE HIGH VS. CEDAR HILL

When/Where: 2 p.m., today Bearcat Stadium, Aledo
On the air: KZQQ (1560 AM) Abilene.
Weather Forecast: High of 71 with no chance of rain and 21 mph wind gusts
Records: Abilene High 9-3; Cedar Hill 10-2
Last game: Abilene High 55, Frenship 34; Cedar Hill 50, McKinney Boyd 28
Last meeting/series: Abilene High beat Cedar Hill, 41-17, in the area round of the 2009 playoffs.

Three things you need to know

■ This is the 11th time in 19 seasons under Steve Warren that Abilene High has reached the third round of the playoffs. Before Warren took over the program in 1996, the Eagles had only reached the postseason 16 times from 1920-1996.

■ Abilene High played a strong non-district schedule facing Colleyville Heritage, L.D. Bell and Southlake Carroll, but none of those Metroplex schools will completely prepare the Eagles for Cedar Hill.

Leading the way for the Longhorns is Damarkus Lodge, a five-star prospect with offers from school such as LSU and USC. He's not even the most productive offensive player on his team, however. That distinction goes to running back Aca'cedric Ware. A USC commit, he has rushed for 1,971 yards and 27 touchdowns this year. Cedar Hill's quarterback isn't bad either; Justin McMillan is a LSU commit.

■ Abilene High is beginning to roll offensively heading into the third round. The Eagles scored a season-high 55 points last week against Frenship in a game where quarterback Derek Scott was near perfect. The senior was 13 of 15 for 301 yards and three touchdowns against the Tigers. Senior wide receiver Reese Childress continued to do it all for the Eagles. Childress rushed for 128 yards and four touchdowns in the game to go along with 162 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

Next: Winner vs. San Angelo Central-Southlake Carroll, Class 6A Division II State Quarterfinal, TBA

CLASS 5A DIVISION II REGIONAL
CANUTILLO VS. AZLE

When/Where: 4 p.m., today Grande Communications Stadium
Weather Forecast: High of 70 with 14 mph wind gusts and no chance of rain
Records: Canutillo 11-1; Azle 11-1
Last Game: Canutillo 27, San Angelo Lake View 10; Azle 45, Burleson 20
Last meeting/series: These two teams have never met

Three things you need to know

■ Azle has had little issue thus far in the playoffs, winning by a combined margin of 118-44. It's a continuation of offensive success throughout the season, as the Hornets have averaged 42.3 points per game.

■ The Hornets will run the ball, and will do so often. They've run it five times for every time they've thrown it on the year, and average 318.3 yards a game on the ground. Quarterback Jamie King and running back Chase Smith carry the load for Azle. Smith has rushed for 1,475 yards and 15 TDs while King has rushed for 1,072 yards and 23 scores.

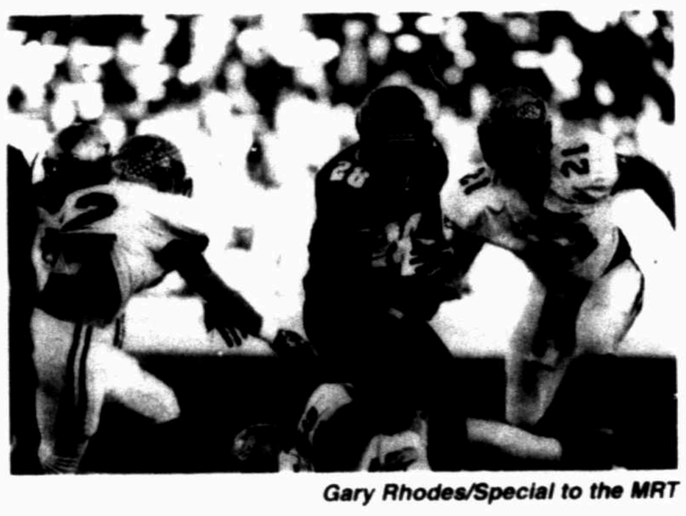

■ Canutillo opened up its season with a loss to El Paso Franklin, playing up a class, and has not dropped a game since. Defense is the Eagles' calling card, in the 11-game winning streak, they've allowed 11 points per game.

STEERS

Gary Rhodes/Special to the MRT

Stephenville's Nico Madrid, center, is caught between Big Spring defenders Victor Paniagua and Nathan Schneider during a 4A regional playoff game at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene on Friday afternoon.

Big Spring cut it to 28-20 midway through the second quarter. But once again, Stephenville's defense and made stops, and the offense capitalized to take a 38-20 lead at the half.

"I just think everything is working on all cylinders for us," Stidham said. "We're just going to keep rolling with it and pick apart the defenses as best as we can.

The Yellow Jackets did a good job of containing Tannehill and Hunter Hill. Tannehill threw for two touchdowns and rushed for two more, but he was held 19 yards rushing and was constantly pressured in the backfield. Hill finished with 98 yards rushing and was kept out of the end zone after scoring seven touchdowns in the win over Stephenville on Oct. 24.

"(Stephenville) made the plays," Ritchey said. "We made big plays the last time. We had trouble getting our guys loose today because of their defense. Hunter and Tobyn, I never want to make any excuses but they guys were gassed in the second half, playing defense and chasing those guys all over the field, and then turning around and trying to carry our offense. That's a tough load."

Preston Alexander added 154 yards rushing, 34 yards receiving and a touchdown for the Steers.

Trojans end Permian's season

From staff reports

BEDFORD — Odessa Permian traveled in mass for its regional matchup with Euless Trinity, but the Mojo fans went home disappointed as Euless Trinity pummeled the Panthers, 42-14.

Throwing only two passes the entire night, the Trojans (12-1) ran for 462 yards and seven touchdowns en route to a state quarterfinals appearance.

The Panthers (9-4) had the game to within 14-7 early in the second quarter, but from there, the Trojans attack wore down the Permian defense and the clock.

Tyler Natee led the way for Trinity with 21 rushes for 218 yards and a touchdown. Ja'Ron Wilson did not have a bad night on the ground either, piling up 179 yards and three touchdowns himself.

Odessa Permian quarterback Heath Wood passed for a game-high 224 yards, but it wasn't nearly enough as the Permian ground game was held to just 52 yards on 21 carries.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

MAVERICKS 106 RAPTORS 102

TORONTO — Monta Ellis scored 15 of his 30 points in the fourth quarter, Tyson Chandler had 11 points and 10 rebounds and the Dallas Mavericks won for the eighth time in 10 games, beating the Toronto Raptors 106-102 on Friday night.

Chandler Parsons scored 16 points, Dirk Nowitzki had 15 Ai-Farouq Aminu 14 as the Mavericks snapped Toronto's winning streak at six games.

Mavericks coach Rick Carlisle won his 300th game with Dallas. He's the third coach in team history to reach the mark, joining Don Nelson (339) and Dick Motta (329).

Kyle Lowry scored 25 points, Amir Johnson had 20 and Lou Williams 16 for the Raptors, who saw All-Star DeMar DeRozan leave in the third with a strained left groin.

CLIPPERS 102 ROCKETS 85

HOUSTON — Blake Griffin had 30 points and 10 rebounds and Jamal Crawford added 21 points to help the Los Angeles Clippers coast to a 102-85 win over the injury-depleted Houston Rockets on Friday night.

The Rockets were playing their fifth straight game without Dwight Howard (knee strain) and were also missing two other starters.

The Clippers took the lead at the end of the first quarter and didn't trail again. Houston got within 10 points early in the third, but a run by Los Angeles pushed the lead to 18.

An alley-oop dunk by DeAndre Jordan made it 94-73 with about six minutes remaining and the starters went to the bench soon after that.

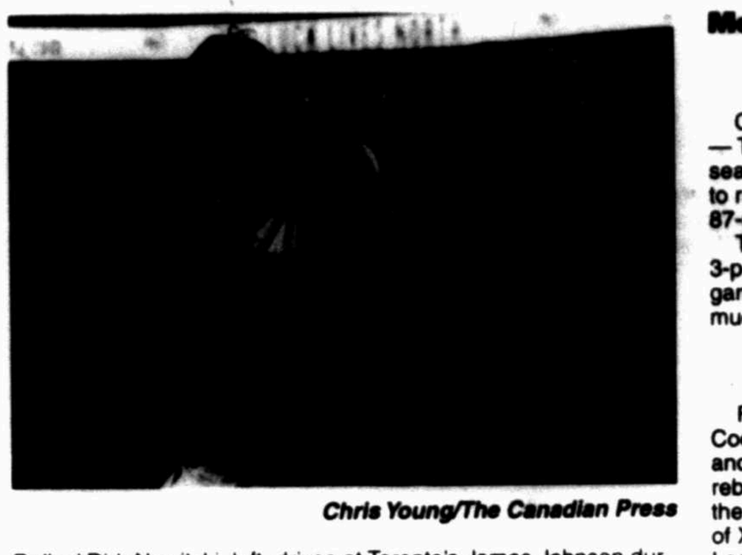

James Harden had 16 points to lead Houston.

BULLS 109 CELTICS 102

BOSTON — Jimmy Butler hit four free throws late in the game and finished with 22 points. Derrick Rose scored 21 points and the Chicago Bulls pulled out a 109-102 win over the Boston Celtics on Friday.

Pau Gasol had 15 points and 15 rebounds, and Joakim Noah added 15 points with 14 boards for the Bulls, who had lost four of their previous six games. Boston has lost six of seven.

Jared Sullinger led Boston with 23 points and 10 rebounds. Avery Bradley had 18 points and Brandon Bass

16 with nine boards. Rajon Rondo had eight points, seven rebounds and nine assists for the Celtics.

Butler's two free throws tied it with 80 seconds to play. Rondo missed two free throws and Sullinger front-rimmed an attempted 3 before Butler's two free throws put the Bulls ahead for good, 104-102, with 51 seconds left. Noah nailed a short jumper on Chicago's next possession.

WARRIORS 106 HORNETS 101

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Marreese Speights scored 16 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter, and the Golden State Warriors defeated the Charlotte Hornets 106-101 on Friday night for their eighth straight win.

Stephen Curry finished with 26 points despite a poor shooting night from 3-point range, and Klay Thompson added 17 points for the Warriors (13-2).

Brian Roberts scored 20 points and Al Jefferson had 18 points for the struggling Hornets, who have lost eight straight games and 10 of their last 11. Cody Zeller had 15 points and 14 rebounds and Kemba Walker had 13 points and 13 rebounds for Charlotte (4-13).

BUCKS 104 PISTONS 88

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Ersan Ilyasova scored 22 points and Jared Dudley added 16 points as the Milwaukee Bucks beat the slumping Detroit Pistons 104-88 Friday night.

Milwaukee didn't have a single starter score in double figures, but got 69 points off the bench to hand Detroit its seventh straight loss.

HAWKS 100 PELICANS 91

ATLANTA — Jeff Teague scored 26 points, DeMarre Carroll added 19 and the Atlanta Hawks held off the New Orleans Pelicans 100-91 on Friday night.

Ryan Anderson and Jrue Holiday each had 20 points for New Orleans. The Pelicans couldn't recover after being held to a season-low 28 first-half points.

PACERS 98 MAGIC 83

INDIANAPOLIS — Rodney Stuckey scored a season-high 24 points and David West had 18 points in his first game of the season to lead Indiana to a 98-83 win over Orlando on Friday.

Solomon Hill scored 11 points and Lavoy Allen had 10 points and 14 rebounds as the Pacers (7-9) handed the Magic (6-12) their fourth straight loss.

THUNDER 105 KNICKS 78

OKLAHOMA CITY — Russell Westbrook scored 32 points in his first game back from a broken right hand, and the Thunder rolled past the Knicks 105-78 on Friday night.

Westbrook was injured in the second game of the season and hadn't played since. He returned in grand fashion, making 12 of 17 shots, including 3 of 4 3-pointers, and adding eight assists and seven rebounds in just 23 minutes before checking out late in the third quarter because the Thunder were in control.

SPURS

his only 3-point attempt, raising his season average to a career-best 67 percent on 16-for-24 shooting. His previous best was 40 percent in 2007, when he was 15 for 38 on 3-point attempts.

Duncan has played in 1,268 games, two shy of tying Boston Celtics legend John Havlicek for third with the most games played with a single team. Utah's John Stockton (1,504) and Indiana's Reggie Miller (1,389) top the career list. Parker, Leonard and Duncan are all averaging at least 30 minutes. Last season there were held under that mark.

Ray Rice wins appeal; NFL suspension vacated

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

NEW YORK — An arbitrator Friday threw out Ray Rice's indefinite suspension by the NFL for punching his then-fiancee and now wife in a hotel elevator, freeing him to play again.

The NFL said Rice, a free agent, is "eligible to play upon signing a new contract." Whether any team will consider signing him is another matter.

Former U.S. District Judge Barbara S. Jones said Commissioner Roger Goodell's decision in September to change Rice's original suspension from two games to indefinite was "arbitrary" and an "abuse of discretion."

Jones was deciding whether the NFL overstepped its authority in modifying Rice's two-game suspension after video of the Baltimore Ravens running back punching Janay became public.

Rice was released by the Ravens when the video went public. Rice and the union contended he was essentially sentenced twice, and Jones agreed, saying Rice "did not lie to or mislead the NFL."

She noted in her decision that after Goodell increased the punishment for a first offense under the personal conduct policy from two to six games, "the commissioner called Rice to assure him that the new policy would not affect him — that it was forward-looking and his penalty would not be increased."

Rice

The punishment changed, though, after the video was released.

In her decision, Jones also wrote:

"Because Rice did not mislead the commissioner and because there were no new facts on which the commissioner could base his increased suspension, I find that the imposition of the indefinite suspension was arbitrary. I therefore vacate the second penalty imposed on Rice.

"The provisions of the first discipline — those regarding making continued use of counseling and other professional services, having no further involvement with law enforcement, and not committing any additional violations of league policies — still stand."

The NFL said it accepted the decision.

"We respect Judge Jones's decision to reinstate Ray Rice from his indefinite suspension for violating the league's personal conduct policy in an incident of domestic violence," spokesman Greg Aiello said in an email to The Associated Press.

"Ray Rice is a free agent and has been eligible to be signed by an NFL team since he was released by the Ravens. Based on Judge Jones' decision, he will be eligible to play upon signing a new contract."

But Rice has not played all season, and was coming off a weak 2013 season. And there is the immeasurable public relations issues that could accompany any team signing him — this season or in the future.

Rice said Friday in a statement released by the players' union:

"I would like to thank Judge Barbara Jones, the NFL Players Association, my attorneys, agents, advisers, family, friends and fans — but most importantly, my wife Janay. I made an inexcusable mistake and accept full responsibility for my actions. I am thankful that there was a proper appeals process in place to address this issue. I will continue working hard to improve myself and be the best husband, father and friend, while giving back to my community and helping others to learn from my mistakes."

COWBOYS

to the back a month ago on a sack against Washington.

Romo went down early on one third-down play with nobody in position to sack him, and didn't try to escape trouble a few other times on his way to four sacks, one shy of his season high.

"I thought there was a guy coming and I was probably wrong," said Romo, who had his worst passer rating of the season while the Cowboys were outgained by almost 200 yards. "That was a concession, but that was also because the way their defense guarded the play, more so than anything else."

Garrett said he didn't think Romo's back was the reason he threw two interceptions while a 38-game streak with at least one touchdown pass ended.

"Maybe bothered by a pass rush," Garrett said. "He's a human being. He's dealing with stuff. Everybody's dealing with stuff. He certainly missed some throws and just the overall environment, there were some tight throws he had to make."

If the Cowboys are tempted to look past the Bears, a quick history lesson will solve it. One of their two worst games from last season came in Chicago, a 45-28 loss after they trailed 42-14 early in the fourth quarter.

If Dallas finds a way to answer a sluggish showing in a game that started about 90 hours after a win at the New York Giants ended, the Cowboys will finally get the longer break to prepare for the rematch with the Eagles.

"We have the team that when we do it right, we can basically take where our personnel, where our assets are, where the talent is, and we have a team that can win games like this against Philadelphia," owner Jerry Jones said. "But certainly we didn't do it today and when we didn't, well, we got in trouble, and got in trouble good."

NFL

From 1B

"Him and Jarvis (Landry) used to have some pretty cool ones at practice," Mettenberger said of his former teammates. "I knew he could do that."

That was a loaded offense at LSU with Beckham, Landry, Mettenberger and Alfred Blue, who has been filling in for Arian Foster with the Texans. Mettenberger said it's cool to see them all having success now knowing they were all together a year ago.

But for all the great catches Beckham made at LSU, Mettenberger said he hadn't seen anything like what the wide receiver did for Eli Manning.

"He's a really special athlete," Mettenberger said. "Once in a generation really."

Another Manning was very impressed, too.

Peyton Manning studies film like he's cramming for the bar exam. He has a mental rolodex of all the plays and calls and games he's ever experienced or witnessed. And he's as big a student of the game as anybody in the NFL.

He said of all the receptions etched in his memory bank, none beats Beckham's.

"That's as fine a catch as I've seen," Manning said, before deadpanning: "I was watching it on TV and it's just what Newman graduates do. It's what happens."

The Mannings and Beckham all attended Isidore Newman High School in New Orleans.

MORE BECKHAM: Dallas cornerback Brandon Carr isn't the type to shy away from anything reporters want to ask him. But he hasn't taken kindly to questions about Beckham's spectacular catch, even if the Cowboys got a 31-28 win over the Giants last weekend.

Carr was on the wrong side of history on the play, captured in the many images and the viral video stumbling to the ground as Beckham holds the ball in the fingertips of his fully outstretched right hand.

"I don't really get into the hoopla with the media and whatever y'all be talking about," Carr said. "We won the game. In this league, you play long enough, you're on both sides of the fence. You're making plays, you get plays made on you."

By the third question two days after the catch, Carr was on edge.

"I won't address it anymore," he said. "If you all ask me, I'll just go lift weights in like three seconds."

Coach Jason Garrett believes Carr will have the same short memory for Beckham's catch that he's had throughout a seven-year career.

"He's a good football player," Garrett said. "The guys who are mentally strong enough to keep coming back and handle success themselves, but also handle the adversities that happen, are the ones that are the best players."

RUNNING RUSSELL: Before the big NFC West showdown on Thanksgiving night won easily by Seattle, 49ers defensive coordinator Vic Fangio was comparing mobile, running Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson to Barry Sanders.

That's just how hard Wilson can be to stop when he keeps the ball himself.

"When Wilson has the ball in his hand, he's like defending Barry Sanders with his quickness and speed and elusiveness," Fangio said. "He's a tough assignment. He's got more rushing yards than most of the running backs in the league."

Huckaba part of historic playoff win for ASU

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

As Midland High grad Quade Huckaba was doing a phone interview on Tuesday, Angelo State head coach Will Wagner walked by and joked, "Tell them, we've got some mojo working for us."

Huckaba responded, "I'd get in big trouble for that."

Using that phrase was not surprising considering Wagner wore Odessa Permian black and white as a high school football player. Huckaba also knew that, being a Midland High grad, saying that term might get him some grief from his Tall City friends, but there might have been a little bit of that needed for Angelo State in its NCAA Division II playoff victory last week against Michigan Tech.

Tech ready for chance to ruin Baylor's season

oleroy@mrt.com

Texas Tech coach Kliff Kingsbury doesn't get much sleep anyways, but considering that the Red Raiders continue to lose players in the secondary because of injuries, those sleepless nights will linger.

It won't help matters for Kingsbury when his Red Raiders (4-7, 2-6 in Big 12) face high-powered Baylor (9-1, 6-1) at 2:30 p.m. today at Arlington's AT&T Stadium as the Bears will look to move up in from No. 7 in the College Football Playoff rankings.

Last week in a 34-31 win over Iowa State, the Red Raiders started three true freshmen in the secondary along with someone who might be considered the old man of the group, sophomore safety Keenon Ward. Ward, actually left the game early with a head injury, while fellow safeties Jalen Barnes and Dorian Crawford also left the game with injuries. That left three true freshmen playing alongside a former walk-on and special teams player, John White, in the secondary.

Going into the game against a Baylor team that leads the country in total offense (584.5 ypg) and scoring offense (50.0 ppg), it is unknown what the status is of those injured players are as Tech coach Kliff Kingsbury continued to be as vague as his former mentor Bill Belichick during Monday's press conference.

"It's definitely a concern," Kingsbury said. "We'll see which one of those guys can get back and hopefully add some depth. But yeah, when you go against a team with this type of fire power at (wide receiver), and you're down some bodies at safety, it's going to be a matchup problem."

Considering the way this season went in a downward spiral for Texas Tech, it can't get much worse.

So what have they got to lose against Baylor, a team that has a ton to play for? The Red Raiders' season will end today, win or lose, so the players might as well treat this game as their bowl game. Sure, they want to send the seniors out on a good note and they're really tired of losing to the Bears — three straight heading into today's game — but to play the spoiler role would at least help the Red Raiders go into the offseason on a high note.

"At this point, I don't feel much motivation is needed," said Tech junior running back DeAndre Washington, who broke the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season last week. "Playing against a top 5 team, it's our last game and we got the opportunity to do something that hasn't been done in a while. Since I've been here I haven't had a chance to beat Baylor, so I take that as personal motivation."

Junior linebacker Pete Robertson is taking another approach to the game.

"We're going to take it as any other game," he said. "Just like in the past when we play OU, Texas. It will be very important to send these guys out on a good win."

The Bears are getting used to being an opponent's "bowl game" as they have become one of the teams to beat in the Big 12 Conference.

"This year we're used to getting every body's best shot," Baylor coach Art Briles said. "We're used to people coming out and swinging at us, not punches, but haymakers."

Added Bears defensive back Collin Brence, "Everybody is going to give us their best shot, especially this late in the season. In addition to that, it is their last game. I would not say they like us that much, and with that being the

Iron Bowl boasts typical high-stakes trappings

By John Zenor
Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — The Alabama-Auburn game is stocked with a Heisman Trophy candidate, a national title contender and the unrelenting passion of feuding neighbors.

In other words, it's a pretty typical Iron Bowl.

No. 2 Alabama (10-1, 6-1 Southeastern Conference) is still standing in the championship scrum going into tonight's rivalry showdown and can clinch the Western Division with a victory.

Onetime contender and defending SEC champion Auburn (8-3, 4-3) has been reduced to the spoiler role after two straight stumbles in league games. The Tide is a 9-1/2-point favorite, but a game that suddenly seems like a potential mismatch still has the same hold on the state.

"You just know there's a special level of intensity that goes with playing in a game like this and both sides are going to have it and that's what makes it a great football game," Alabama coach Nick Saban said.

The game

NO. 15 AUBURN
AT NO. 2 ALABAMA

When: 6:45 p.m. today
Location: Bryant-Denny Stadium, Tuscaloosa, Alabama
TV: ESPN/SEC

Led by Heisman candidate Amari Cooper and a smothering defense, Saban's team is No. 1 in the College Football Playoff rankings and like the rest of the state vividly remembers how last year's game ended. The Tigers won on a rare runback of a missed field goal on the final play.

"Been around a lot of crazy stuff in Iron Bowls," Tide right tackle Austin Shepherd said. "Always great energy. I know the stadium is going to be rocking for sure."

The state champion has been the national champ, too, four of the last five seasons. The only exception was Auburn's runner-up finish to Florida State last season.

The Tide is riding a six-game winning streak and might already be assured of a spot in the SEC championship before kickoff if No. 4 Mississippi State loses at No. 18 Mississippi.

Auburn has dropped its last two SEC games to Texas A&M and Georgia. A team that was once third in the playoff rankings has revised its goal to shooting for back-to-back 10-win seasons for the first time since 1988-89.

"We're trying to be as good as we can be, and finish this thing as strong as we can," Auburn coach Gus Malzahn said. "Our guys are committed to that, and I know our coaches are, too."

Here are some things to watch in the 79th Iron Bowl:

'BAMA'S OFFENSE: If there's a big mismatch in this game, it might surprisingly be Auburn's defense against Alabama's offense.

HOUSTON 35 SMU 9

DALLAS — Greg Ward Jr. and Kenneth Farrow combined for five touchdowns as Houston held SMU scoreless in the second half to win 35-9 on Friday.

Matt Davis threw a 67-yard touchdown pass to Jeremiah Gaines to put the Mustangs up 9-7 at the half. Farrow ran for two touchdowns — for 11 and 14 yards, respectively — and Ward added another to put the Cougars up 28-9 by the end of the third.

Houston picked up 185 offensive yards in the third quarter and held SMU to just 28.

Ward threw for 144 yards, and ran for 93 yards and three touchdowns. Farrow finished with 110 yards on 18 carries and two touchdowns for Houston (7-4, 5-2 American).

Davis had 145 yards passing for SMU, and led the Mustangs (0-11, 0-7) with 70 yards rushing on 20 carries.

STANFORD 31 NO. 9 UCLA 10

PASADENA, Calif. — Kevin Hogan passed for 234 yards and two touchdowns, and Stanford crushed No. 9 UCLA's hopes for the Pac-12 South title and a College Football Playoff spot with a 31-10 victory Friday.

Devon Cajuste and Michael Rector caught scoring passes for the Cardinal (7-5, 5-4 Pac-12) as the two-time defending Pac-12 champions salvaged from satisfaction from a down season by trouncing the Bruins (9-3, 6-3) for the seventh consecutive time.

With a dynamite 16-for-19 performance by Hogan and two rushing TDs from Remound Wright, Stanford snatched the South title away from UCLA, which needed a victory to advance to the conference title game.

Instead, the Bruins flopped in another big game and Stanford handed the division crown to Arizona or Arizona State.

Brett Hundley passed for 146 yards in likely his final home game for the Bruins, losing a matchup with Hogan for the fourth time in three years.

NO. 12 ARIZONA 42 NO. 13 ARIZONA ST. 35

TUCSON, Ariz. — Nick Wilson ran for 178 yards and three touchdowns and No. 12 Arizona claimed the Pac-12 South title by holding on for a 42-35 victory over No. 13 Arizona State on Friday.

Arizona (10-2, 7-2 Pac-12, CFP No. 11) needed to beat its biggest rival and have Stanford knock off No. 9 UCLA to win the Pac-12 South.

NO. 17 MISSOURI 21 ARKANSAS 14

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Marcus Murphy scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 12-yard run with 4:38 remaining and Markus Golden recovered a fumble to seal No. 17 Missouri's 21-14 victory Friday against Arkansas and send the Tigers to the SEC championship game for the second straight season.

Missouri (10-2, 7-1, No. 17 CFP) tied it at 14 early in the fourth quarter with a 98-yard drive capped by Jimmie Hunt's 4-yard TD reception and a reverse pass by receiver Bud Sasser to Darius White for the 2-point conversion.

Arkansas (6-6, 2-6) was driving for the tie when Kentrell Brothers stripped Alex Collins and Golden recovered with 2:13 to go at the Missouri 35 to thwart Arkansas' bid to tie it.

The Razorbacks had won two straight, both shutouts against ranked teams.

KENTUCKY 67 NO. 19 MARSHALL 66, OT

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Brandon Doughty threw a Conference USA-record eight touchdown passes, the last in overtime to Jarod Dangerfield followed by a 2-point conversion pass to Willie McNeal that lifted Western Kentucky over No. 19 Marshall 67-66 Friday.

Marshall's Rakeem Cato had seven touchdown passes but threw four interceptions.

Doughty broke the previous conference record of six TD passes set on eight occasions.

Western Kentucky (7-5, 4-4) foiled Marshall's bid for the fourth perfect season in school history.

AIR FORCE 27 NO. 21 COLORADO STATE 24

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Will Conant connected on a 39-yard field goal as time expired after backup quarterback Nate Romine completed a long pass, helping Air Force upset No. 21 Colorado State 27-24 on Friday to snap the Rams' nine-game winning streak.

Fullbacks Shayne Davern and D.J. Johnson scored for Air Force (9-3, 5-3), which has now won six straight over the Rams (10-2, 6-2) at Falcon Stadium.

Aggies fire defensive coordinator Snyder

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION, — Texas A&M defensive coordinator Mark Snyder has been fired the day after the Aggies allowed 491 yards in a regular-season ending loss to LSU.

Texas A&M gave up 384 yards rushing in a 23-17 loss on Friday night at Kyle Field.

Snyder has been at Texas A&M since coach Kevin Sumlin was hired at the school in 2012.

Sumlin says in a statement that Snyder: "understands the production needed to be better on the defensive side of the football."

The Aggies rank 103rd in total defense by allowing 449 yards a game. They allowed 223.5 yards rushing a game, which ranks 111th in the nation.

Linebackers coach Mark Hagan will be A&M's interim defensive coordinator for the team's bowl game.

attitude they have going in, they are going to lay everything out on the line. It is important for us to go out there with our best because we know they are going to give their best."

It wasn't so long ago that Baylor was on the other side of that as they were the ones that were gunning for teams at the top.

But in the seven years Briles has been in Waco, he has built up the program to an elite level. When asked to compare his team's depth now to when he first got there Briles said, "It's apples and oranges."

"It took us about four years to build up to Big 12 quality depth," Briles added, "and now I certainly feel like through recruiting and everything that's gone on over the last two or three years that we certainly have people that we can put on the field and perform at the level it takes for us to win on Saturdays."

That is something Red Raider fans can hope for with Kingsbury if he is given the time. Other than talent, the program needs some stability.

Until then, Texas Tech will have to settle for the role of playing spoiler.

program. But it wasn't unexpected. This week, the Rams will take on Colorado State-Pueblo at 1 p.m. in Pueblo, Colorado, and will look to keep breaking new ground with another playoff victory.

"It was a great win just because they were saying that Texas teams couldn't win up north," Huckaba said. "It wasn't that bad, it was like 37 (degrees). It wasn't that cold. It felt like a West Texas Friday night."

Huckaba's transition from Friday nights to Saturday afternoons has been tough, but also relatively quick. Huckaba, who is listed at 6-foot-1, 335 pounds, was redshirted as a freshman but traveled with the team to all the games. Then he played in 11 games as a sophomore, starting four.

He's started all 11 games for the Rams this season at right guard, and has been a key component for an Angelo State offense that is averaging more than 40 points and more than 480 yards of total offense a game.

Angelo State offensive line coach Jay Eilers said not being forced to pull the redshirt off Huckaba his freshman season helped him to grow as a player and get used to the game. But Eilers said Huckaba's physicality and strength is something that has stood out this season.

"No. 1, he's a physical guy and he plays offensive line like you want a lineman to play," Eilers said. "He gives us that identity in the run game. It's allowed us to get to where we are."

Huckaba said there was some transition moving from high school to college, and he said the major adjustment was the speed of the game. But he also said that you have to be more of a student of the game because defenses can be harder to read along with the players being better.

"You have to adapt (to the speed) because if you don't adapt, you lose," said Huckaba, who is majoring in international business. "There is a lot of study involved because teams do different things. There's a lot of different defenses that you have to get used to. You might play a team where you have four different defenses to prepare for."

Eilers said that Huckaba is part of a group on the front that is good at communicating with each other, and it's made a difference in their performance this season. He said if there is one thing Huckaba has to work on it's his lateral movement, but he said he's played consistent this season like the whole line has this season.

"I think I've always taught offensive linemen to be great football players you don't have to pancake someone every play," Eilers said. "He's a very consistent offensive lineman and we are blessed to have him and he helps us."

BIG12/TEXAS CAPSULES

FROM WIRE REPORTS

NO. 5 BAYLOR (9-1, 6-1 BIG 12, NO. 7 CFP) VS. TEXAS TECH (4-7, 2-6)

At Arlington, 2:30 p.m. (ABC)

Line: Baylor by 24 1/2.

Series Record: Texas Tech leads 36-35-1.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

Big 12 co-leader Baylor has to win to stay in contention for a spot in the first College Football Playoff, though a loss might not keep them from a second straight conference title. The Bears have won the last three times in this series played at the Dallas Cowboys' stadium. This will be the second time in four seasons the Red Raiders won't play in a bowl after 11 consecutive postseason appearances.

KEY MATCHUP

Baylor RBs Shock Linwood and Devin Chafin against the Big 12's worst rushing defense. There will be plenty of passing yards on both sides, and Texas Tech has a 1,000-yard rusher. But Baylor could really run wild. Linwood and Chafin both had 100-yard games last week, and against the Red Raiders last year. Linwood is only 23 yards shy of a 1,000-yard season. The Red Raiders have allowed 261 yards rushing per game.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Baylor: QB Bryce Petty has thrown a touchdown in 22 consecutive games he has played and is 10th in FBS with 14.74 yards per completion. He has thrown for 2,683 yards with 23 touchdowns and five interceptions.

Texas Tech: DeAndre Washington is the first Texas Tech running back since 1998 with a 1,000-yard rushing season, surpassing that total last week against Iowa State. The last 1,000-yard rusher was Ricky Williams in 1998.

FACTS & FIGURES

In their last three games in the climate-controlled stadium, Baylor and Texas Tech have combined to average nearly 101 points and 1,145 total yards a game. ... Baylor WR Corey Coleman has at least one touchdown catch in seven games in a row, the nation's longest active streak. ... Baylor has won 19 straight games played in Texas and is 30-3 in the Lone Star State over the last four seasons.

NORTH TEXAS (4-7, 2-5 Conference USA) at UTSA (3-8, 2-5), 11 a.m. (Fox Sports Network)

Line: UTSA by 5.

Series Record: UTSA leads 1-0.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

Season finale for two teams that expected much more this season. North Texas ended a long bowl drought last season, but has lost two of its last three games in coach Dan McCarney's fourth season. UTSA, coached by Larry Coker, has lost four of its last five. The Roadrunners wrap up the program's fourth season with 36 seniors, the most in the nation.

KEY MATCHUP

North Texas defense against UTSA offense. The Mean Green haven't allowed a touchdown in the last five quarters, and only six touchdowns over last 12 quarters. The UTSA offense is last in C-USA in scoring at just 15.5 points a game, and has scored only 26 points in past four games.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

North Texas: Linebacker Derek Akunne leads C-USA with 101 tackles, a career high. His 22 tackles for loss in his career are the ninth-most in school history.

UTSA: Safety Triston Wade is the team leader with 81 tackles, 13 pass breakups, four interceptions and two fumble recoveries. The two-year captain has started 39 times while appearing in all 45 games of his career.

FACTS & FIGURES

The North Texas defense held three straight opponents to less than 100 yards passing for the first time since 2002, allowing only 238 yards passing in that stretch. ... North Texas freshman Trevor Moore has made all 36 of his extra-point attempts this season. The school record is 37-of-37, held by two kickers. ... Both teams have been slow starters. North Texas has been outscored by 34 points in the first quarter while UTSA has been outscored by 36.

KANSAS (3-8, 1-7) AT NO. 11 KANSAS STATE (8-2, 6-1 BIG 12, NO. 12 CFP), 3 p.m. (FS1)

Line: Kansas State by 28 ?.

Series Record: Kansas leads 64-42-5.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

The Wildcats can earn at least a share of the conference title by beating the Jayhawks and winning at Baylor in the final weekend of the season. Kansas is trying to earn its second win under interim coach Clint Bowen in its season finale.

KEY MATCHUP

Kansas State's running attack against the Kansas defensive line. The Wildcats have struggled to move the ball on the ground consistently this year, but they'll be facing a Jayhawks defense that allowed Oklahoma's Samaje Perine to run for a record 427 yards last weekend.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Kansas: More like coach to watch in this one. Bowen has a chance to make a big statement in support of his candidacy for the full-time job by winning the annual Sunflower Showdown. The Lawrence native, Kansas alum and longtime Jayhawks assistant knows the rivalry well.

Kansas State: QB Jake Waters and WR Tyler Lockett have been one of the most prolific pass-catch duos in school history. The record-setting seniors will be playing their final home game in front of a sellout crowd.

FACTS & FIGURES

Kansas State has won five straight and 18 of the past 23 meetings. ... The Wildcats are 10-1 at home and 18-4 overall against Kansas under Bill Snyder. That includes a 5-0 mark since his return from a brief retirement. ... Mackey Award semifinalist Jimmay Mundine leads Jayhawks with 43 catches for 564 yards. ... Kansas LB Ben Heeney is first in Big 12 with 121 tackles. CB JaCorey Shepherd is first with 18 passes defended. ... The Jayhawks have 21 seniors who will suit up for the final time. ... Lockett is first nationally in punt return average (20.5 yards), sixth in all-purpose yards (166.9) and ninth in yards receiving (107.4). Lockett needs five receptions to pass his father Kevin Lockett (217) for most in school history. ... Kansas State is ranked 24th nationally in scoring defense. ... The Wildcats have been penalized 42 times, fourth-fewest nationally.

IRON BOWL

From 1C

Under first-year coordinator Lane Kiffin, the Tide has been especially potent in passing with the Blake Sims-to-Cooper connection. Pass defense has been Auburn's biggest weakness. But the Tigers have struggled all around defensively in the past five SEC games, giving up an average of 472 yards and 35.8 points to league offenses during that stretch.

YELDON VS. ARTIS-PAYNE: Cameron Artis-Payne came into the season with modest fanfare and is the SEC's leading rusher. Preseason All-SEC pick T.J. Yeldon has had a down season compared to his first two. Both are physical runners who, along with their backfield mates, can wear down opposing defenses. Yeldon has dealt with nagging injuries, but rested a sore ankle against Western Carolina. He gained 141 yards in last season's meeting. "He's smiling a lot so when T.J.'s smiling, I think a good game is going to come out of him," Sims said.

TIDE'S TURF: The Tigers are 7-2 in Tuscaloosa, including the largest comeback in school history in 2010. But Bryant-Denny Stadium was a house of horrors two years ago when Alabama roared to 42 first-half points and won 49-0.

Slumber party with mom is an every-night event

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has this odd habit that my younger sister, "Sara," and I don't agree with. It's only the three of us in our house, and Sara and I are in high school and college.

Our mother forces one of us to sleep with her in her room every night. Sara sleeps in Mom's room more often than I do, and rarely gets a chance to sleep in her own bed. On the few occasions when Sara is sick, I sleep with Mom. But if we're both sick, she picks one of us anyway.

Abby, this has persisted for years. I have tried many times to convince my mother to let us sleep in our own rooms, but she ignores me or accuses me of "not loving her enough." She says the same things to Sara.

I'm worried about my mother. I feel as though she's depressed or worried about being abandoned. At the same time, I don't want us sleeping in Mom's bed forever. We have our own lives and rooms. What would be the best thing to do in this situation? — SLEEPOVER IN MARYLAND

DEAR SLEEPOVER: Your mother is an adult who should long ago have learned to sleep alone. She should not be trying to "guilt" you and your sister into sleeping with her by accusing you of not loving her enough if you don't spend the night in her bed. The two of you should ask her together why she's doing this.

You young ladies are old enough to simply refuse if you would rather sleep in your own rooms. But breaking this habit may not be easy for your mother, so if she says she can't sleep without one of you with her, volunteer to stay with her until she falls asleep and THEN go to your rooms.

DEAR ABBY: I am divorced after a 38-year marriage. The divorce was the result of an affair my husband had. Needless to say, it was — and still is — very painful. The betrayal almost killed me.

I have been seeing a therapist who has helped me immensely, but I wonder if I will ever fully recover from the hurt. My ex has started a new life with this woman, who is almost 30 years younger than we are, and he acts like, "Oh well, it's over." Even though I have moved on, starting a new life at 60 wasn't easy.

Is it unreasonable to still have lingering pain and anger as a result of the lies and deceit I experienced from a man I loved and trusted? I can't seem to pretend that nothing happened. — STILL HURTING

DEAR STILL HURTING: I think your feelings are normal. Something DID happen to you, and it was cataclysmic. The question is, to what degree are you willing to allow this to rule your life?

You shouldn't pretend that nothing happened, but it's important that when your thoughts drift backward that you make a conscious effort to steer them back to the present. Devote the same energy that you spend nursing hurt and anger to focusing on the future and what makes you happy. WILL yourself to stay in the present and keep moving forward.

This takes focus, practice and determination, but it can be done. And continue to maintain a relationship with your therapist, because if you do, it will provide a much-needed "reality check" when you need one.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 29, 2014:

This year you might be more involved with family. Many consider you to be very gracious and caring, while others could see you as a wild card. You are a free spirit, and your behavior reflects that characteristic. Be aware of your finances. If you are single, as adventuresome as you typically are, you enjoy more quiet environments when dating. The person you choose to date this year might not work at a later date. If you are attached, the two of you love your downtime at home. You'll find endless activities to do together. PISCES has a tendency to waffle on his or her ideas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Slow down and handle a confrontation before handling other concerns. You could be dealing with someone who has a broad vision of life and another person who might be closed off. Your sensitivity and timing will open up the situation. Tonight: Enjoy some quiet time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You will zero in on what you want. Someone's attempt to use logic is likely to fail in deterring you. A call or token of affection from a loved one at a distance could please you to no end. Friends seem to surround you. Be spontaneous. Tonight: Only where the action is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ You usually don't like to take a stand, especially as you often can see the other side of the argument. However, at this point, you could feel as if it is expected of you. A partner might have a different solution. Tonight: If you're taking action, be ready to support yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You have unique perspectives, and you are able to detach from the here and now. Kick back with a loved one. Go where there is music, and you'll be able to relax. A loving gesture will go far. Be more open with a close friend. Tonight: Let your imagination call the shots.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ A new beginning suddenly becomes possible within an important partnership. A child or loved one will demonstrate the full dimension of his or her personality. You naturally support this person's self-expression. You also will be most appreciative of it. Tonight: Be a duo.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Defer to others, and appreciate the extra freedom. Spend time with an authority figure. You don't need to agree with this person, but you should try to indulge him or her. A loved one might move quickly to set plans for the two of you. Tonight: Go along with the program.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You'll be very concerned about getting the job at hand done. Some of you could have some errands to run or perhaps an important person to visit. Be careful, as you easily might become involved in a family decision while it is being debated. Tonight: Start your Christmas list.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Your imagination needs to be allowed more freedom. If you are involved in a romance, you can infuse more energy into this bond. Be aware of what kind of impact your first impression makes. Be sympathetic to someone who seems down. Tonight: Dance the night away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ Your independence might feel as if it is being threatened, but it's not. Try to find a point of agreement. You might need to funnel more of your energy into a family matter. Allow yourself to spend only a set amount and not a penny more. Tonight: Make it simple.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Ask yourself some pertinent questions before finalizing a decision. You'll want to please someone, but you're willing to go only so far, as this person can be rather demanding. You might express your feelings openly in a discussion. Tonight: Hang close to home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Be aware of your spending; otherwise, you easily could go overboard. Try to avoid this type of thinking: one for them, one for me, two for them and one for me. At least hold on to your receipts! You could change your mind at the last minute. Tonight: Let someone else treat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You appear to be more content than others right now. A friend could delight you with an important piece of gossip. You also might receive an early Christmas gift. Someone is likely to push you too far. Maintain a sense of humor. Tonight: Others follow your lead.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
Last weekend I bought a sheet of plywood and spent forty-five minutes tying it to my roof rack. Considering I only had some white nylon twine, it became a feat of engineering to strap it on. I ran twine over the hood, around the bumpers and through both the front door windows. Tightening the last knot, I realized I couldn't open the doors because I tied them shut! As I contemplated my stupidity, a guy pulled up with a small utility trailer. He loaded a dozen sheets of plywood, threw on a strap and took off before I could pull a Dukes of Hazard and slide through my twine-infested window. Needless to say, I was jealous. Now I want to buy a small trailer. It would be useful for the upcoming bathroom remodeling I promised my wife. However, I know nothing about trailers. How much can it carry? Can I pull one with a car or do I need a truck? Please help or I'll be strapping the new shower stall to my roof.

Cash: Unless you have a few extra hours to strap the bathroom supplies to your roof, a small utility trailer is a good idea.

Carry: Besides, I'm not sure the store would have enough twine for you.

Cash: As you can imagine, trailers come in all shapes and sizes, from small utility types to those designed to carry heavy equipment.

Carry: In your case, a small trailer like a 4' by 8' would work fine. Although their specifications vary, they will typically hold between 800 and 1000 pounds.

Cash: However before you buy one, first look at the owner's manual of your car to determine the vehicle's towing capacity or if it can be used to tow a trailer. For instance, a truck can pull 5000 pounds or more, but a small car may be limited to only 1000 pounds.

Carry: Now when buying a small used trailer, there are two main areas to investigate. As always overall condition is important, but you should also look closely at the lights and the tires. Be sure all the lights are in working order and the tires are in good condition, not suffering from any dry rot. It's best to find a trailer where the tires don't need replacing.

Cash: As you have experienced, a utility trailer can be very helpful. However with all the time you save, you wife may want you to remodel a few other rooms.

Fast Facts

Hitch Your Trailer

Normally, we think of trailers as something pulled behind a truck or a car. However in the movie industry, they have a slightly different meaning. Most motion pictures today have a trailer that is shown prior to the movie's release. The term was derived from the days when the coming attractions were shown at the end of a film, trailing the main feature. However, patrons often left the theater without watching them. In today's movie theatres, these clips are called previews and shown at the beginning of the movie for better visibility.

Good Old Boys

The original TV series The Dukes of Hazard made the bright orange 1969 Dodge Charger, known as The General Lee, an icon. While the car's endless stunt jumps seemed flawless, 309 General Lee's were used to produce the series. Each jump typically damaged the car's structural integrity sending it to the scrap pile. As the series progressed, finding more cars became increasingly difficult, so producers started using jump footage from previous episodes.

Camping for Two

Whenever my husband and I go camping, he's bound to forget something. One year he forgot our sleeping bags. That was a cold weekend. The second time he forgot the propane on our camping trailer. We ate out a lot on that trip.

This year he was determined not to forget a thing. For days he made a list, checked it twice, and made sure everything was packed before we left. He got in the car confident we had everything and pulled away. Less than a mile down the road, he made a u-turn and said, "I can't believe it."

"What did you forget this time?" I asked.

Glancing in the rear view mirror, he replied, "I forgot to hitch up the trailer!"

(Thanks to Leslie S.)
