Egypt: Soldiers stormed plane to prevent massacre

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Egypt said today its commandos stormed the hijacked jet at Malta's airport to prevent a massacre, and claimed the terrorists lobbed phosphorus grenades that touched off fires killing trapped passengers.

At least 46 people were killed by "bullet or fire" during the assault, said Maltese government spokesman Paul Mifsud.

Mifsud said today there were "still some corpses aboard" the Egyptian Boeing 737, which became a blood-bath when Egyptian soldiers blew in two doors and surged aboard Sunday night.

An American woman shot dead by the hijackers after the plane landed in Malta Saturday night was identified today by the State Department in Washington as Scarlett Marie Rogenkamp, 38, a civilian U.S. Air Force employee stationed in Greece.

Defense Department spokesman Cmdr. Bob Prucha said she was from Oceanside, Calif., and was on vacation when the Athens-to-Cairo flight was hijacked Saturday and forced to Malta, a Mediterranean island.

The two other American passengers were wounded and thrown from the Egyptair plane before the assault, said U.S. Embassy deputy chief Joel Levy. Mifsud said 30 people were being treated in Malta hospitals.

The American passengers on the Egyptair flight were Jackie Nink Pflug, 30; Ms. Rogenkamp, 38; and Patrick Scott Baker, 28. The U.S. Embassy in Athens said Ms. Rogenkamp was from Oceanside, Calif.

Relatives of Baker and Mrs. Pflug said the two were hospitalized. Members of Ms. Rogenkamp's family contacted in the United States declined comment.

June Pflug, of Minnetonka, Minn., said her son, Scott Pflug, was married to Jackie Nink Pflug, who is from Pasadena, Texas, and he had put her on the plane in Athens.

Mrs. Pflug said her son had called her and said his wife had been shot in the head and was undergoing surgery at a Malta hospital.

"She was shot in the back of the head but she was able to say her name so that sounded well," Mrs. Pflug said. "We're just waiting to hear when she gets out of surgery."

"They both taught at the American College School in Cairo," she added. "He was in Athens for a vol-

Administration backs Egypt's, Malta's actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is supporting the bloody assault that ended the latest hijacking crisis in the Middle East, saying it grieves for the victims but believes in going after terrorists "with both barrels."

"We are saddened by the tragic loss of innocent lives resulting from this act of terrorism and extend our deepest sympathy to all those who suffered through this ordeal," the State Department said Sunday night after the storming of a hijacked airliner in Malta.

Maltese officials said as many as 46 people were killed by gunfire and an explosion during the assault. A U.S. diplomat said the terrorists killed one American and wounded two others before the plane was stormed.

"The United States supports the difficult decision of the governments of Malta and Egypt to end the brutal terrorist hijacking of Egyptair 648," the State Department said. "Those who direct and support these despicable acts must know that we remain determined that justice be done."

Local man dies in ultra-light accident

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

As his friends watched in horror, a 32-year-old Midland man fell 700 feet to his death Sunday when the seat of his ultra-light airplane broke off in mid-flight.

Kelly Joe Preston, Star Route A,

Box 101 in rural northwest Midland County, was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine after the 4:10 p.m. accident.

Preston had been flying over a field just south of the Sky Ranch airport, which is on Midkiff Road about seven miles south of Midland. According to Pine, Preston's body was found still strapped to the seat. "He was doing a loop," said Richard Myers, owner of the 1984 Condor ultra-light craft which his friend Preston was flying. "The seat harness broke in two. It was just a freak accident."

Preston was an experienced ultra-light pilot who had performed aerial acrobatics "hundreds of times," said Myers, who was visibly upset by his friend's death.

"We had just looked away," he said. "The next thing we knew the back parachute had deployed and he was falling out of the plane."

Car bombing at U.S. facility in Germany injures 35 people

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Leftist terrorists are believed responsible for the car bombing at a U.S. military shopping center that injured 35 people, mostly Americans, but no one has claimed responsibility, West German authorities said.

The blast at 3:20 p.m. Sunday shattered windows, damaged 42 cars in a parking lot behind the store and blew a gaping hole in the back wall of the shopping center.

"We suspect leftist terrorists because the attack was similar to the car bombing at the U.S. Air Force base in August," said Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for the West German federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe.

The Aug. 8 car bomb attack at the U.S. Air Force Rhein-Main Air Base killed two Americans and injured 20 people. A leftist terrorist group, the Red Army Faction, claimed responsibility for that attack.

Bill Swisher, a spokesman for the U.S. Army's 97th General Hospital in Frankfurt, said 34 injured people were treated at the hospital. He said 27 people had been released from the hospital by late Sunday evening, including a 3-year-old child.

The seven remaining in the hospital were listed in fair to good condition, Swisher said.

The 35th victim, a Polish national employed in the military store, was treated and released from a nearby Frankfurt hospital.

Police said they were looking for a man, described as having "Moroccan features," who is suspected of buying the silver-blue metallic BMW 525 sedan used in the bombing.

Police spokesman Kurt Kraus said the car was bought Saturday at a second-hand auto dealership near Frankfurt, where the car used in the August bombing was also purchased.

He said police were looking for witnesses who may have seen the car or the man since Saturday. The car was carrying West German license plates and disintegrated in the blast.

"It was a very powerful blast," said U.S. Army spokesman Christopher Chalko. The explosion shattered windows in buildings within a 100-yard radius and damaged a military laundromat and a car wash. Gasoline at a service station about 30 yards away did not ignite.

The injured, whose identities were not immediately available, included 19 U.S. military personnel, 11 American civilians, a West German civilian and a Filipino, Swisher said.

"For the other two who were treated here we still don't have any personal details," he said.

The bomb went off shortly before the post exchange was due to close at 4 p.m.

"There were not too many people in the store but the laundromat and the car wash were busy," said Maj. Cecil Green, another Army spokesman.

Only U.S. soldiers and their families can shop at the store, but the parking lot where the explosion occurred can be used by civilians. People entering the center must pass through a military police checkpoint located five yards from the blast site, Chalko said.

He would not comment when asked if security measures had been stepped up following the August attack against the Rhein-Main base.

West German police and U.S. guards carrying M-16 assault rifles sealed off the area after the blast. The store is on a busy avenue a few blocks away from the headquarters of the U.S. Army's V Corps.

In May 1972, the Bader-Meinhof terrorist gang set bombs near the post exchange, killing a U.S. Army lieutenant colonel.

About a week later, the gang set off a car bomb inside the U.S. Army Europe headquarters complex in Heidelberg, killing three soldiers.

Cardinals say Vatican II's reforms remain 'valid'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Two leading cardinals said today the liberal reforms of the Second Vatican Council remain "completely valid" for today's Roman Catholic church and there could be no going back on those changes.

"The implementation of the council reforms exceeded great hopes that many of the members of the council had at that time," said U.S. Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia.

The cardinals met on the first working day of an extraordinary synod of bishops convened to assess the impact of the 1962-65 council, also known as Vatican II. The two-week meeting was called to chart the course of Catholicism and sum up the state of the church.

Belgian Cardinal Godfried Danneels of Brussels, a keynote speaker at the synod, said "The council remains valid, completely valid...it's impossible to regress."

Krol, one of the synod's three co-presidents, and Danneels discussed

Court travels to Turkey in pope murder plot probe

New York Times
News Service

ROME — The court investigating a purported conspiracy to kill Pope John Paul II four years ago returned from Turkey this week, but it brought back little evidence to support the prosecution's central contention that Bulgaria was behind such a plot.

Witnesses from Turkey, West Germany and Austria have come to Rome in recent weeks to testify, and the court has taken the unusual step of traveling to Switzerland and Turkey and plans trips to Bulgaria and West Germany. The court plans to leave no stone unturned in the trial of three Turks and three Bulgarians accused of conspiring to kill the pope at the behest of Bulgaria's secret service.

Close questioning of these witnesses has become particularly pressing ever since the prosecution's chief witness, Mehmet Ali Agca, tarnished his credibility with apocalyptic pronouncements before the court, such as that he is Jesus Christ and that the world is coming to an end. Agca was convicted of the 1981 shooting of the Pope. It was largely because of Agca's testimony to Italian magistrates after turning state's witness that charges were brought here against three Bulgarians and four Turks for complicity in the purported plot.

the general thrust of the council's reforms at a news conference to explain the work of the two-week gathering of 165 Roman Catholic bishops from around the world.

They were repeatedly asked if a battle was shaping up between conservative and progressives at the synod. Krol replied, "It's not a boxing match we are conducting."

Asked to comment on suggestions that conservative prelates might try to fight the council's liberalizing reforms, Krol said: "The reality is, even from a juridical standpoint, the synod cannot change, overturn, re-trench or amplify the ecumenical council."

Opening the synod with a Mass on Sunday, Pope John Paul II called for frank discussion at the extraordinary synod. Danneels said the synod participants were "struck" by the pontiff's gesture which, he said, assured "extremely and completely free" deliberations at the synod.

Danneels said the bishops had differences along geographic lines. For instance, he said, the issue of the role of women in the church was considered important by churches in North America and Western Europe but less so in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Many theologians say the Vatican Council injected vitality and dynamism into the religious institution of 800 million followers, and recast the church's image from an unchangeable monolith to one ready to modernize its structures and ways of teaching.

SYNOD

But the reforms have also bred dissent and challenges to church teaching by many Catholics.

Since his election as pontiff in 1978, the Polish-born John Paul has sought to tighten discipline, ordered priests and nuns to keep out of politics and has restated traditional church prohibitions against contraception, abortion and divorce.

In large numbers, according to surveys, Catholics ignore church teachings on sexual morality. Women are demanding a greater role in the male-dominated church.

"The council gave the church a burst of optimism and a modern image, but in the process it also created confusion and gave rise to certain exaggerations," said Monsignor Corrado Balducci of the Vatican Congregation for the Evangelization of Faith before the synod began.

"So the synod will take another look at those reforms and if needed, suggest to the pope a fine tuneup," Balducci said.

Although the synod is an advisory body that can only make recommendations to the pontiff, the current meeting is considered crucial because it represents the first official Vatican forum for the bishops to air their views on the effects of Vatican II.

The visits to Turkey by Chief Judge Severino Santapichi and a prosecutor and defense lawyers for some of the accused were considered critically important after a key defendant, Bekir Celenk, unexpectedly returned there from Bulgaria in early July.

Celenk had fled to Sofia, Bulgaria, from West Germany in 1982 to escape an arrest order issued after Agca denounced him to Italian magistrates as the man who paid a group of right-wing Turkish activists the equivalent of $1.2 million from Bulgaria to assassinate the pope. Bulgaria consistently refused to hand Celenk over to Italy.

Turkish officials arrested Celenk, a 51-year old shipping magnate and suspected racketeer, and brought smuggling charges against him that, upon conviction, would have brought the death penalty.

Celenk, however, who had always denied Agca's charges, died of heart failure in a military prison in September, before the Italian judges could hear him.

But Santapichi and the state prosecutor, Antonio Marini, did question Abuzer Ugurlu, another Turkish crime figure, and a convicted associate in Celenk's smuggling operations who Agca says also helped establish links with the Bulgarians.

According to Italian officials, however, Ugurlu's testimony led the court into a revolving door of overlapping statements by several Turkish witnesses that cast little light on Agca's ties with these men.

Ugurlu's testimony had seemed promising, the officials said, because at an earlier session in Rome a Turkish business partner of his from Munich, West Germany, had acknowledged that, at the behest of Ugurlu, he had paid Agca the equivalent of about $750 in the summer of 1980, when the young Turkish exile was living in the Hotel Vitosha, in Sofia.

That seemed significant, the officials said, because it was then, according to Agca's pretrial testimony, that Bulgarian intelligence agents hired him, through the Turkish underworld leaders, to assassinate the pope.

But the Munich businessman, Omer Mersan, insisted that he paid Agca, whom he said he knew only as Metin, at the insistence of Ugurlu.

Ugurlu, questioned last week by the Italians in a Turkish military prison outside Ankara, said that he had asked Mersan to pay Agca the money as a favor to a friend from Istanbul, a former customs official.

Indicating in the closed hearing that the payment was harmless aid for a young Turkish political exile he thought was in need, Ugurlu, who is serving a 14-year jail sentence for smuggling, told the judges that they had been led astray by Agca.

When the court traveled to Istanbul, three days later, to question the former customs official, he told them, similarly, that he had paid the money to Agca, who came from his own hometown of Malatya, in Anatolia, because he thought Agca was innocent.

The official, Yildirim Dogan, who had once shared a jail cell in Istanbul with Agca, called him a "solitary Gray Wolf," referring to the right-wing Turkish terrorist organization, and denied that Agca even knew Celenk or Ugurlu.

A daily newspaper in Rome, Il Messaggero, lamented in a headline that the judges' mission to Turkey had ended "against a wall of lies."

But none of the witnesses could explain why the Bulgarian authorities allowed Agca, who was sought by Turkey at the time on murder charges, to pass several weeks unmolested in Sofia, or who paid his expenses, including the price of a hotel room at the expensive Vitosha hotel.

The trip to Turkey seemed at the outset all the more important, because the court said it was unable to obtain from Turkey transcripts of the questioning of Celenk, before his death, by Turkish authorities on a number of subjects, including Mr. Agca.

The trial resumes here today.

Her father said she was treated immediately by a doctor at the site.

"They delivered some food to the plane and they took a doctor along and he determined that she was alive. They removed her and she's in the hospital now," Nink said.

Baker's mother, Lois Baker, was contacted in White Salmon, Wash., which she said was her son's hometown. She said a bullet grazed the back of her son's head and he feigned death by lying in a pool of blood.

"He slumped forward and pretended he was dead," she said. "When they turned their backs, he rolled off of the plane somehow."

The pilot, Capt. Hani Galal, described the hijackers as "first-class killers" and said the ringleader had singled out Americans and Israelis "for execution."

Gilbert Briard, a 36-year-old Frenchman injured in the raid, told Europe 1 radio in Paris that the hijackers called the Americans "and tied their hands behind their backs.

They first shot the boy, then waited about an hour to shoot the second person and then...shot the third."

Levy said initial reports indicated all of the hijackers, said to number at least four, were killed. But the state-run Egyptian newspaper al-Ahram, without giving sources, reported today that one of the sky pirates was wounded and recovering in a Valletta hospital.

Mifsud said the hijackers threw the grenades when they realized they were being attacked, and that the victims "were trapped inside and couldn't get out." All eight children aboard the jetliner were killed, the pilot said.

Charred remains of luggage and puddles of water were beneath the airliner, parked on a tarmac runway. Some passenger windows and those in the cockpit were smashed and burn marks were etched on the emergency exits and the rear cargo door.

Malta's state-run television said about 80 people were aboard the jetliner when the commandos attacked. On Sunday, Mifsud said seven people injured before the raid were already undergoing treatment after being released or thrown onto the runway, and 11 women were released unharmed by the sky pirates early Sunday.

The plane was hijacked while on a Saturday evening flight from Athens, Greece, to Cairo, Egypt, and forced to land on Malta, a Mediterranean island. In radio conversations, one of the sky pirates said they were members of the group "Egypt's Revolutionaries."

Egyptian aviation authorities said "Egypt's Revolutionaries" is an extremist group opposed to Egypt's 1979 peace pact with Israel.

A group using a similar name — "Egypt's Revolution" — claimed responsibility for the Aug. 20 assassination of an Israeli diplomat in Cairo and the June 1984 wounding of another Israeli envoy in Egypt's capital.

In Kuwait, newspapers today said they received letters purportedly from an obscure group calling itself the Egypt Liberation Organization claiming responsibility for the hijacking. There was no way to immediately authenticate the claim.

Mifsud quoted Galal as saying the hijack leader, who never identified himself, was "a madman" who sang and danced each time he shot a hostage.

The pilot, his head bandaged and his uniform bloodstained, told a news conference about three hours after the raid that when the commando assault began, the leader of the hijacking, who had been guarding him, tossed a grenade into the cabin from the cockpit.

The hijacker then spun around and shot at the pilot. But Galal, whose skull was grazed by the shot, said he grabbed a fire ax and struck his attacker, apparently killing him. Tony Lyons, a 46-year-old Australian hijack survivor who spoke from his hospital bed on Britain's TV-AM morning news show, claimed the commandos shot passengers as well as the hijackers.

"There were people lying on the floor who had been shot and people running all over the place and guns going off. There was a lot of indiscriminate shooting," he said.

In a television interview several hours before the aircraft was stormed, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said, "The way to get after these people is to get after them with both barrels."

"These people are not worth the time of day," Shultz said as the hijacked airliner stood at the Valletta, Malta, airport and a radio message to the airport tower said its hijackers had killed seven passengers.

"They're not even people, doing what they're doing," Shultz said during an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press."

White House spokesman Michael Guest said the State Department's statement was issued on behalf of the administration. Guest said President Reagan, spending the weekend at the White House, was being kept abreast of developments.

The State Department said the terrorists "murdered and wounded innocent passengers, including Americans."

Joel Levy, the deputy U.S. Embassy chief in Malta, told reporters there that one of the three Americans aboard the jetliner was killed. He said the two others were wounded. The dead and wounded Americans were tossed off the airplane before the assault, Levy said.

"It's not a very happy ending after all," Levy said.

State Department spokesman Daniel Lawler said U.S. forces took "no part in the rescue operation" but "we have said we were prepared to offer all appropriate assistance."

Lawler said he did not whether any U.S. forces were sent to the Valletta, Malta, airport, but added, "Certainly it was considered and it was prepared for."

A Pentagon spokesman, Maj. Greg McGuckin, declined to say whether any U.S. forces were sent, telling a reporter, "I don't have anything to say."

In Valletta, Maltese government spokesman Paul Mifsud said the assault on the hijacked plane was totally an Egyptian operation, but was approved by Maltese Prime Minister Carmelo Mifsud Bonnici.

The Egyptian anti-terrorist force that stormed the jetliner suffered serious casualties during its only other known foreign operation. At least 15 Egyptians were killed when the unit was sent to Cyprus in March 1978, to rescue victims in an airplane commandeered by Palestinian terrorists.

Neil Livingstone, president of the Institute for Terrorism and Subnational Conflict in Washington and a writer and teacher on terrorism, said, "What they have done basically is have a second disaster which was even worse than the original one."

Livingstone said that in one of his two books on terrorism, the Egyptian operation in Cyprus was "the example that I used of how not to seize a hostage aircraft."

"They went in like the cavalry," he said, arguing that successful hostage rescues generally involve the use of stealth.

Shultz, endorsing the use of force, said, "We must stamp out this terrorist activity."

Lawler said, "We knew for eight hours this (the use of force) was an option."

The plane was hijacked Saturday on a flight from Athens, Greece, to Cairo, Egypt, with more than 90 people on board. Athens International Airport was also the departure point for the TWA jetliner commandeered June 14 by hijackers who killed a Navy diver and held 39 Americans for 17 days.

The U.S. government warned Americans after that incident to avoid the Athens airport. But the advisory was lifted July 22 after a Federal Aviation Administration security team reported that the airport had been well secured.

"Greek officials really paid attention this time in a way that they hadn't before and brought the Athens security arrangements up to what has been a good international standard," Shultz said. "Whether there has been any relaxation since that time, I can't tell you."

Passengers give account of jetliner hijacking

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — One passenger aboard Egyptian flight MS848 remembers seeing a nattily dressed, handsome man about 28 years old in seat No. 4.

"Then I saw him stand up and take his gun from a plastic bag," said Eagle Fyana, 23, of Manila, Philippines.

Ms. Fyana and 10 other women — six other members of a Philippines dance troupe and four Egyptians — were freed from the Boeing 737 early Sunday, before it was stormed by Egyptian commandos. Up to 50 people died in the cabin crossfire and in fiery explosions ignited by the terrorists' grenades.

After the hijackers forced the plane to land in Malta, they shot two Israeli and three American passengers, according to a 36-year-old Frenchman who survived the commando assault.

"At the very beginning, there were two young Israeli women," Gilbert Briard said in an interview with Europe 1 radio in Paris from his hospital bed in Malta.

"One of them thought she was going to get out. She got up and was shot down. They threw her on the ground outside, then demanded the second young Israeli woman who did not want to get up. They took her and shot her too."

"There were three young Americans, a young man and two young women. They (the hijackers) called them and tied their hands behind their backs. They first shot the boy, then waited about an hour to shoot the second person and then at noon shot the third."

The passengers gave this account of the hijacking:

The ordeal began when the elegant-looking man rose from his seat as stewardesses were passing out newspapers and magazines on the Athens-to-Cairo flight Saturday.

One of the sky pirates pulled a gun and pointed it at crew members in the front of the plane. Another, at the rear, jumped up and shouted: "Don't move!"

The Arabic-speaking hijackers, which authorities number at four or five, carried automatic pistols and hand grenades.

Passengers reacted with shock and silence and raised their arms over their heads as ordered. They were checked for weapons and had their passports taken.

It was during the tense search that shots were first fired, some 10 to 20 minutes after the hijackers took over.

Elham Dirad, 29, of Cairo, said she saw an Egyptian security guard stand up and fire at one of the hijackers toward the front of the plane. When the hijackers returned fire, hitting the guard and possibly a neighbor, passengers ducked.

"We all just put our heads down and prayed," said Julie Males, 33, the leader of the dance troupe from the Philippines as she sat in her hotel room. There were no screams and no tears, they said.

"Everyone was so shocked nobody said a word," said 20-year-old Egyptian Loretana Chafik.

Four or five shots were fired, and then crew members spoke on the public address system.

Pakistan, India may enter nuclear fray, Carnegie report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan is on the threshold of having atomic weapons and there is evidence that India may respond by building its own nuclear arsenal, according to a study released today.

Actions taken by both of the long-time enemies mean the threat of nuclear proliferation "in South Asia grew substantially during the past year, concluded the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The private, non-profit organization pointed to the India-Pakistan situation as one of the most threatening to the effort to stem the spread of nuclear weapons around the world.

The study was written by Leonard Spector, author of the group's first non-proliferation study issued in 1984 and a former Senate staffer who helped draft the 1978 U.S. law prohibiting American nuclear aid to countries which might use it to develop weapons.

There are five nations which have admitted possession of atomic weapons: the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain, and France. A sixth, India, exploded a single nuclear device in 1974 but has always maintained that it was for "peaceful" purposes.

Meanwhile, several other nations are widely considered to have or be near possessing nuclear weapons, including Pakistan, Israel and South Africa.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars since 1947 when the two nations were created out of the partitioning of the former British colony. After India exploded its device in 1974, Pakistan responded by starting an aggressive effort to develop a nuclear capability.

NATION

While Pakistan has since denied it is trying to develop weapons, it has taken a number of steps consistent with such a goal.

In the past year, the report noted, Pakistani President Zia ul-Haq has announced that his nation has succeeded in enriching uranium at its Kahuta enrichment plant outside the capital, Islamabad.

While the enrichment level was only 5 percent rather than the 90 percent needed for weapons, "the ability to produce it amounted to a declaration that Pakistan was, in principle, capable of producing weapons-grade uranium," the study noted.

"Owing to the peculiarities of the enrichment process," the most difficult part is getting started, it said, and "upgrading this material to the high-enriched level (needed for bombs) requires far fewer steps."

The 5 per cent level is also significant because reactors which produce power are fueled by 3 percent enriched uranium, the report noted. Uranium enriched beyond the 3 percent level has no use except in weapons.

In light of the Pakistani actions, Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi declared that he was reconsidering his nation's policy of not building a nuclear arsenal, the study noted.

Neither India nor Pakistan has signed the 1968 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

There have been reports that China has helped supply Pakistan with technology needed for weapons, but both nations have denied that. The allegations helped delay congressional approval of a U.S.-China nuclear agreement that finally passed the Senate last week, 18 months after it was first initiated.

The study said Israel "probably added one or two Nagasaki-size atomic bombs to a pre-existing nuclear arsenal of 20 to 25 aircraft-deliverable weapons."

Israel has never acknowledged possessing nuclear weapons, but has taken the position that it would never be the first nation to introduce atomic weapons into the Middle East.

The study also noted that there were unconfirmed reports last year that Israel may have a much larger atomic arsenal and possibly has deployed nuclear-tipped Jericho II missiles, which have a range of about 400 miles.

Of other Mideast states, the report noted that "the image of a nuclear-armed Saddam Khadafi, contemptuous of world opinion and the value of innocent lives, has become a symbol of the dangers posed by unrestrained proliferation."

But it said "Libya has made little progress toward this goal, as an international embargo of nuclear transfers to Tripoli has appeared to gain strength over the past year."

AFL-CIO splits on Central American unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO is embroiled in an increasingly divisive debate over its stand on U.S. intervention in Central America, with the labor federation's leaders accused by some of their member unions of being too supportive of the Reagan administration.

The focus of the current controversy is a just-completed month-long tour of the United States by half a dozen trade unionists from Central America, including a Sandinista from Nicaragua.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland urged members to boycott the tour, saying several of the Central American labor representatives are from organizations associated with the communist-led World Federation of Trade Unions based in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

However, the East Coast trip was endorsed by seven presidents of AFL-CIO affiliates. The trade unionists from Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala urged an end to U.S. intervention in the region, and the AFL-CIO presidents who backed their tour want U.S. aid stopped.

"We ask that you not endorse, sponsor or in any way support the Central American trade union tour," Kirkland wrote 2 1/2 months ago to state and local officials of the AFL-CIO.

"We would no more accept and welcome WFTU trade unionists than we would accept and welcome Gen. Jaruzelski's appointed successor to Lech Walesa," AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty said last week. Jaruzelski is Poland's Communist Party leader and Walesa is the founder of Solidarity, the Polish trade union movement outlawed by Jaruzelski's government.

"Rather than encourage the growing debate, Mr. Kirkland issues directives attempting to chill debate and discourage union members from thinking for themselves," said Mike Urquhart, president of Local 12 of the American Federation of Government Employees in Washington. "Trade unionists here are affected by what happens there, and have a right to dialogue with Central American trade unionists and to hear all points of view and decide for themselves."

The ongoing tension over the federation's stand on U.S. intervention in Central America spilled over into the recent four-day AFL-CIO convention in Anaheim, Calif.

Several of the 1,000 union delegates told the convention the federation should urge an immediate cutoff in all U.S. aid to the Contra guerrillas fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua.

"The Contra war is supported by Ronald Reagan and Joseph Coors and every right-wing nut case in the United States," said Edward Clark of the New Bedford and Cape Cod Labor Council in Massachusetts. "This organization should be on the side of no additional military aid to El Salvador and no aid in any form to the fascist Contras."

Military turns away 66 recruits with positive AIDS tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has barred 66 civilians from military service during the past month because they tested positive for exposure to a virus associated with the disease AIDS, according to informed sources.

The 66 were among 71,683 recruits screened since mandatory testing was started on Oct. 15 for evidence of the fatal, primarily sexually transmitted disease, the sources said.

"We are coming in lower than our best 'guesstimate' among the health people, and the actual numbers are, indeed, small," one source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"That is not to minimize the severity of the problem, but it is not an epidemic," the source said. "And it is certainly not a rate for those (already) in the military; it's a rate for job applicants, for civilians trying to join the military."

The Defense Department has completed a statistical breakdown on 34,996 of the 71,683 recruits already tested. Of those 34,996, 40 had been exposed to the AIDS virus, producing an incidence rate of 1.14 per 1,000.

No actual cases of AIDS were reported, although an undetermined percentage of people exposed to the virus later became infected with the disease itself.

That is below the rate predicted by Pentagon health officials last August when they decided to begin screening all recruits. It is higher, however, than that reported by civilian blood banks, although Defense Department officials discount the validity of such a comparison.

"On Aug. 30, based on what we knew, Dr. (William) Mayer predicted the services would see a rate of two or three out of a thousand," said one source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The source said the figures would be shared with the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, because no government agency or private firm has embarked on a screening program as massive as that of the Defense Department.

Gay politicians meet in 'summit'

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A weekend summit meeting of homosexual politicians and elected officials ended with a pledge to fight for rights to adopt children and obtain legal recognition for partners they live with.

"We ask not only to be seen and heard, but also to be acknowledged for the work we are doing to provide fair and effective government and be supported in our demands that gay and lesbian people be given the respect and justice we deserve," said a statement from officials participating in the conference.

The West Hollywood Conference of Lesbian and Gay Elected and Appointed Officials and Prospective Candidates was hosted by the city of West Hollywood, where 35 percent of the population is homosexual and the majority of the city council is openly homosexual.

Participants included Chris Smith, an openly homosexual member of Britain's Parliament; Minnesota state Rep. Karen Clark; Boston City Council Member David Soudras; Minnesota state Sen. Allan Spear; Laguna Beach City Councilman Bob Gentry; Harry Britt of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors; Santa Cruz Councilman John Laird and West Hollywood Mayor John Heilman.

Senate farm policy scrutinized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is taking a wary look at the new farm policy carved out this weekend by the Senate, one that gives it major policy victories, but at costs that threaten to make this year's record spending an annual event.

"Right now we're trying to figure out how to get the deficit down," White House chief of staff Donald Regan said Sunday. "And everyone in Congress is saying that, and yet they come in with a farm bill that will spend more than $50 billion over the next four years," he said.

"Now, that's an awful lot of money we're spending in that farm area, and the question is, is it wise?" Regan said on CBS-TV's

"Face the Nation."

When House and Senate negotiators get together early next month to work out the differences between their versions of the long-term policy plan, they will be compromising between the House draft, which the administration has labeled unacceptable, and the Senate bill, which it regards as closer to something President Reagan could sign.

Both bills accomplish a key administration goal: lower price-support levels for major crops like grains, cotton and rice that should help bring those commodities closer into line with world prices and enhance their attractiveness on overseas markets.

Stolen child escapes from car thief

HOUSTON (AP) — A 5-year-old Channelview girl is safe at home after getting away from the man who stole her mother's car with the child inside, officials say.

The parents of Elizabeth Ann Elzey had told their daughter to run and hide from strangers if anyone ever tried to kidnap or harm her. On Friday, Elizabeth did just that.

Her mother, Linda, left the family car running at a northeast Harris County gas station about 9 p.m. Friday while she phoned her husband. When Mrs. Elzey turned around a few minutes later, the car and her daughter were gone.

"I felt total panic. I didn't think about the car. I just thought somebody had taken my baby. Then I went into the middle of the parking lot and started screaming," Mrs. Elzey said.

The youngster "screamed and hollered because she was scared," said her father, Robert Elzey. "The guy slapped her and told her to shut up. He choked her and hit her."

About an hour later, Elizabeth saw her chance to escape when the car caught fire and the man stopped the vehicle.

"She jumped out of the car and hid," Elzey said. "She knew the car was on fire and jumped out and hid behind the bushes. He never looked for her."

The barefoot youngster wandered along the road for more than three hours until she got to the SDS Biotech Inc. chemical plant, where a guard found her.

Officials said it appeared the man who stole the 1978 Oldsmobile Cutlass did not at first see the girl in the car. The man was still at large, a Channelview Sheriff's Department spokeswoman said Sunday.

Dogs maul woman in 'bloody massacre'

HOUSTON (AP) — A 43-year-old woman mauled by two pit bull terriers in "a bloody massacre" in her front yard was in good condition after five hours of surgery, but will need further plastic surgery for her injuries, authorities said.

Raylene Smith, who was bitten on her arms and legs in the attack Saturday, broke free when the pit bulls were driven off by a neighbor's son, who fired a pellet gun at them and hit them with the gun butt.

The dogs, which tried to attack paramedics and officers when they arrived, were shot to death by a police officer armed with a shotgun, police said.

"It was a bloody massacre. There was blood everywhere," Houston Police Department spokesman Sgt. Craig Newman said. "I couldn't believe two dogs could do this much damage."

The dogs first attacked Frankie Trahan, 41, Ms. Smith's neighbor. She said she saw them attacking her cat in Ms. Smith's yard and turned on her as ran inside her house in northwest Houston.

"When they got to my driveway I yelled at them to get out of here," Ms. Trahan said. "When I yelled, the first one was airborne," coming at her.

One dog jumped and bit her arm pit, knocking her down, and the other attacked her leg. Ms. Trahan said she called Ms. Smith, telling her she needed to go to the hospital, but warning her about the dogs.

When Ms. Smith, carrying a crutch to fight off the dogs, stepped out of her house, they attacked her and knocked her down.

LBJ aide Jenkins dies

AUSTIN (AP) — Walter Wilson Jenkins, an aide to Lyndon Johnson for 25 years before he resigned amid a scandal, has died at the age of 67.

Jenkins died Saturday night at St. David's Hospital where he had been hospitalized since he suffered a stroke June 27.

Funeral was set for 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at St. Austin's Catholic Church.

Jenkins joined the Johnson staff in 1939, when LBJ was a state representative in the Texas Legislature.

He served as Johnson's office manager, personnel chief, and administrative assistant and in 1951, at Johnson's urging, ran for a U.S. House seat, finishing second in a field of eight.

Pinkerton's execution stayed

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The Supreme Court today indefinitely delayed the scheduled execution of a death row inmate Jay Kelly Pinkerton.

Pinkerton, 23, who was scheduled to die just after midnight, would have been the youngest person executed since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to resume in 1976. In August, he came within 26 minutes of dying before Justice Byron White issued a stay.

White also issued today's stay, saying in a brief order that the Pinkerton execution would be halted "pending the filing of a formal appeal."

Pinkerton's attorney, Dean Roper of Amarillo, filed an appeal this morning challenging the exclusion of people opposed to the death penalty from juries in capital murder cases.

Within the past month, the high court has stayed two other executions on those grounds while it considers the matter in an Arkansas case.

"The systematic exclusion of jurors that have scruples against the death penalty denies a defendant of a right to a trial by a cross representation of the community in which he resides, which is guaranteed by the 6th Amendment to the Constitution," Roper said today.

Roper also had a written request prepared for Gov. Mark White, asking for a 30-day reprieve. In previous executions, however, White never has granted such a request.

The baby-faced Pinkerton, an apprentice meat cutter, faces lethal injection for the 1979 mutilation death of Sarah Donn Lawrence. He also was convicted of the similar slaying five months later of Sherry Welch.

Pinkerton was 17 at the time of the killing.

"I hate thinking about it — and him," says Virginia Royer, whose daughter, Sarah, was raped, stabbed more than 30 times, had her throat slashed and body mutilated during the burglary of her home Oct. 28, 1979. "There will be a certain amount of relief when it's over."

"I just wish people knew how hard it hurts us — day after day after day," says Joe Hales, whose daughter, Sherry, was slain in a similar attack five months later.

"I can honestly say I grew up in prison," Pinkerton says. "I've been incarcerated for five years. I've established a life in prison."

Pinkerton dodged the lethal needle on Aug. 14, when the Supreme Court spared his life just 26 minutes before he was to be executed. The court, however, subsequently refused to consider his appeal and the new death date — his third — was set.

Experts testified at his trial that the bloody palm print found on the inside of Mrs. Lawrence's thigh and a partial print on a coffee table belonged to Pinkerton. A bite mark on Mrs. Welch's breast linked Pinkerton to her slaying, Randall County District Attorney Randy Sherrod said.

"The murders were very, very similar," he said. "It appeared to us the same knife was used in both offenses."

Officials say hijackers' weapons weren't smuggled in Athens

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — For the second time since June, Athens airport has been linked to a jet hijacking in which passengers have died. But Greek officials, who insist the airport is safe, say the sky pirates smuggled their weapons aboard elsewhere.

An Egyptair jet was commandeered Saturday after leaving Athens on a flight to Cairo, Egypt. The Boeing 737 flew to Malta, where Egyptian commandos stormed it, leading to a bloodbath in which up to 50 people were killed and 28 hospitalized for injuries.

On June 14, a TWA flight departing from Athens for Rome was also seized by terrorists. One passenger, U.S. Navy diver Robert Dean Stethem, 23, of Waldorf, Md., was shot dead during the ordeal.

In both cases, Greek officials have countered criticism by saying the weapons used might have been put on board in Cairo before the planes arrived in Athens.

Under fire from British legislators and the French National Airlines Pilots Union, which called for a boycott of Athens airport because of a "certain laxity," the Greek government on Sunday said security was "exercised with the highest international standards."

Quoting "heads of security," the government announcement maintained that the weapons used to hijack the Egyptair Boeing 737 were probably hidden aboard the plane in Cairo before it flew to Athens to pick up passengers and return.

However, an Egyptian Embassy spokesman said, "Obviously, the hijackers boarded in Athens." He spoke on condition he not be identified.

Passengers released by the hijackers in Valletta, Malta, said they were carrying small arms and at least one hand grenade. In radio conversations, they had identified themselves as belonging to the group "Egypt's Revolutionaries," which has opposed Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel.

The Greek Civil Aviation Authority said passengers boarding at Athens were subject to five checks, including examination by a "special security firm" employed by Egyptair and electronic devices operated by Greek police to perform body checks of passengers.

Greece also insisted that weapons used by hijackers to commandeer the TWA jetliner after it left Athens in June were hidden aboard the aircraft in Cairo. But one of the accomplices who was later arrested, Ali Atwa, said the weapons had been smuggled aboard the plane in Athens.

The Shiite Moslem hijackers of the Trans World Airlines plane, which had 153 people on board and ended up in Beirut, held 39 Americans hostage for 17 days. They were demanding the release of Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners held in Israel. In response to the TWA incident, the State Department issued a travel advisory on June 18 warning Americans to avoid Athens airport.

As a result, many Americans canceled vacations in Greece, causing millions of dollars in lost tourist revenue.

The travel advisory was lifted July 22 after stringent airport inspections by the International Air Transport Association and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Both air groups praised the new security measures put into effect after the hijacking and described Athens airport as "probably one of the world's best guarded airports."

The TWA hijacking prompted Greek officials to adopt new security measures, especially in the airport transit area.

Police double-checked hand luggage after it passed through X-ray machines and restricted movement between the departure and arrival halls by closing off many exits.

Many international airlines also employ their own security guards.

Egyptair passengers departing for Cairo Sunday reported that Egyptian air marshals conducted body searches of everyone who boarded the plane.

Glaciers concern to scientists

MANIZALES, Colombia (AP) — A possible breakup of glaciers on Nevado Del Ruiz has become the major concern of a team of international scientists now studying the volcano that erupted and caused an estimated 25,000 deaths.

Pablo Medina, coordinator of the scientific team studying the Andean volcano, said Sunday that six glaciers on the edge of the snowpack are badly fractured.

"Before the eruption they had some degree of fracture," he said. "Now there are many more fractures. It is our principal concern now."

President Belisario Betancur on Sunday declared a "state of social and economic emergency" because of the eruption and the takeover of the Palace of Justice by left-wing guerrillas earlier in the month. Troops attacked the palace and 97 people were killed, including 11 of the nation's 24 Supreme Court justices.

The decree, which is to remain in effect for 35 days, declares, "The economic and social order of the country has been disrupted." It empowers the president to take extraordinary measures without parliamentary approval.

The Bogota daily newspaper El Tiempo reported Sunday that four more looters were shot to death by security forces in the city of Armero, which had been home to about 28,000 people before being buried by a mudslide triggered by the eruption. Five other looters had been killed earlier, it said.

Ash and pumice as hot as 1,300 degrees from the eruption melted 5 percent of the ice and snowpack.

Each glacier on the 3-mile-high mountain creates a small river. Two glaciers triggered mudslides that thundered down Lagunilla River, burying Armero 29 miles east of the mountain, where most of the victims were.

A glacier on the other side of the crater sparked the avalanche that killed 1,500 to 2,000 people along Chinchina River in the town of Chinchina, 22 miles west of the volcano.

Medina said earthquakes, swelling of the volcano, or even heat from inside the volcano could melt or break up the glaciers, causing more avalanches.

"It will not necessarily take another eruption," he said.

He said a Swiss rescue and seismological team member who returned home was asked to find a glacial specialist to study the situation.

Using controlled dynamiting to prevent melting of the glaciers is being considered, he said, "but we're afraid of it. Without the presence of an expert in that, it's a very big risk."

Medina, a civil engineer, is coordinating the team of about 65 foreign and Colombian scientists monitoring the situation from offices 25 miles northwest of Nevado Del Ruiz.

Aerials are set up by a window in one corner of a room filled with trunks of equipment to receive radio signals from seismographs on the mountainside. The equipment is sensitive enough to show the movement of helicopters landing with team members to set up new equipment.

Worth the cost

Congress is justifiably concerned about air safety, given the unprecedented string of commercial airline accidents this year that have claimed more than 1,600 lives. So is the average air traveler who hops a plane in Midland or Dallas and reasonably expects his trip to be the safest possible.

Now Congress is turning its attention to the Federal Aviation Administration, which is responsible for the air-traffic controller system that guides planes through the skies and the inspectors who check their condition.

Although FAA Administrator Donald Engen insists his agency is on top of the air-safety situation, recent evidence suggests otherwise.

Three months ago, a U.S. Department of Transportation task force criticized the FAA for not implementing safety rules in a timely manner, citing delays of as much as eight years. In fact, six years after 273 persons perished in the crash of an American Airlines DC-10 near Chicago — the worst commercial aircraft accident in U.S. history — the FAA still has not implemented most of the safety recommendations following that disaster.

The Transportation Department's findings came on the heels of a critical Government Accounting Office report that suggested the FAA is careless in inspecting commercial aircraft. According to that report, some U.S. passenger planes underwent few, if any, inspections between mid-1983 and mid-1984.

The FAA has since drafted tough new safety-inspection regulations and plans to add 500 new inspectors during the next two years. Nevertheless, nagging doubts persist about the agency's capacity to monitor airline safety effectively.

In 1979, the FAA had 2,000 inspectors who were responsible for monitoring the operations of 237 air carriers, commuter, and air taxi operators. Last year, the number of inspectors had dwindled to slightly more than 1,300, while the number of operators had increased to 407.

FAA inspectors have simply been unable to keep pace with the proliferation of commercial carriers in the wake of airline deregulation.

That deregulation has produced competitive pressures among carriers to pare costs, including such safety-related services as training and maintenance. Combine this relatively new hazard with too few inspectors who, according to a government report, often have a "very gentlemanly" relationship with the airlines they are supposed to monitor, and the margin for fatal error is even more alarming.

And yet another weak link in the safety system is the shortage of air-traffic controllers. Before the 1981 strike, there were 16,000 controllers. Of the 14,000 controllers currently on duty, only about 8,000 are fully qualified. This despite the fact that deregulation has increased the number of flights around hub cities and underscored the need for more controllers. The FAA plans to add another 1,000 controllers during the next two years, but that step should have been taken some time ago.

Finally, there is the FAA's foot-dragging on the development of a Doppler radar system that could reduce, if not eliminate, the danger of wind-shear accidents. Wind shear is an abrupt shift in wind velocity or direction that, at low altitudes, can cause even the largest commercial airliner to crash. During the last 15 years, wind shear has been cited as the cause of 17 accidents, which have killed 440 persons including the crash of a Delta Airlines plane in Dallas last August that killed 136 people.

With all this evidence that the FAA has not been performing its duties responsibly, the Congress should demand a change.

Of course, the FAA is not to blame for all of this year's airline catastrophes. But it's obvious the agency has failed to assume the leadership role Congress intended for it. Instead of reacting to problems, the agency ought to be anticipating them and then acting to prevent potential disasters.

That role demands scrupulous attention to safety procedures, which in turn will cost millions of dollars. But, the millions of persons who place their lives in the hands of commercial air carriers each year deserve nothing less.

Dutch seek downfall of Marxist

WASHINGTON — If you think the CIA plays hardball when it tries to undermine a hostile regime like Nicaragua or Libya, consider the Dutch, of all people. They have, in effect, put a billion-dollar price on the head of Lt. Col. Desi Bouterse, the self-proclaimed Marxist who has controlled their former colony of Suriname for the past five years.

Practically singlehandedly, Bouterse has made his obscure, Georgia-sized country on the northeastern shoulder of South America a trouble spot worthy of Washington's attention. Bouterse has achieved this dubious status by conspiring with Fidel Castro to stir up trouble in Latin American countries struggling to remain free and democratic.

Suriname's previous claim to fame was as a footnote in colonial history. In one of the shrewdest bargains ever made, the British gave Suriname to the Dutch in 1667 in exchange for Manhattan and the Hudson River Valley.

It took the Dutch more than three centuries to acknowledge how badly they had been stung, and exactly 10 years ago today they granted Suriname its independence — even agreeing to pay $1.5 billion over the next 15 years to be relieved of the burden.

But when Bouterse, in December 1982, arrested the 15 most prominent opposition leaders and had them tortured and executed, the Dutch abruptly cut off their subsidy. Our sources in the Netherlands say the remaining money — nearly $600 million — has been put in trust against the day when Suriname becomes a democracy again.

In fact, highly placed Dutch officials we talked to recently in The Hague said that if Bouterse and his gang are ousted, the Dutch parliament will raise the aid ante to a full $1 billion.

"This is the highest price ever set on a head of state," agreed one Dutch source, after we pointed out that the huge aid pledge had in effect made bounty hunters out of coup plotters.

It would be hard to argue that Bouterse doesn't deserve the "wanted" poster the Dutch have put up for his demise. His petulant ferocity was shockingly demonstrated the day of the 15 opposition leaders' execution. The chief target of his wrath was labor leader Cyril Daal, who had upstaged a Bouterse welcome for a visiting Marxist by calling a rally that drew 10 times as many people as the official ceremony.

"I will pay Cyril Daal back in cash and he can keep the change," Bouterse proclaimed, and five weeks later he made good on his threat. He had Daal, already broken and trembling from torture, dragged into his presence and forced to kneel. Then the enraged dictator castrated his rival with a bayonet and shot him dead.

An uncomfortable eyewitness to the atrocity, Maj. Roy Horb, the No. 2 man in the regime, was imprisoned two months later and found hanged in his cell. No one believed the official claim of suicide.

We have now learned that Bouterse's homicidal tendency is not confined to individual rivals, but embraces the bulk of his long-suffering countrymen. According to information from a recent defector, Rewpat Ghiraw, Bouterse has laid plans (and explosives) to blow up the Affobaka dam in the event of a coup.

The dam is upriver from the capital city, Paramaribo, where most of the 360,000 population lives. Its destruction would devastate the city.

Ghiraw said he took part, as a member of Bouterse's elite "Echo Company," in three separate exercises simulating the destruction of the dam. "We were told that this flooding would be necessary to create confusion and permit an easy escape of the regular Surinamese army," he explained. "Nobody outside the Echo Company knows for sure that Bouterse has made preparations for blowing up the dam. We were the only ones they let in on this secret."

BANKERS' BLUES: The apparently unending soap opera of America's overextended bankers has gone from one cliff-hanging situation to the next: energy loans made on the expectation of a continuing rise in oil prices, farm loans made in the hope of an agricultural boom. The latest mistake to catch up with the banks is the loans made to the maritime industry on the strength of its short-lived prosperity in the early 1980s. But the shippers are sinking, and they're dragging the banks with them. In the third quarter of 1984, for example, First Chicago lost $71.8 million in its overseas maritime loans.

RATING REFUGEES: The State Department is keeping a close watch on Guatemalan refugees who return home from exile in Mexico. If they are being persecuted by the government as suspected guerrilla sympathizers, it would lend credence to the claims of many refugees that they are entitled to entry into the United States as political refugees. But reports from the embassy in Guatemala state that "interviews by embassy officers ... demonstrate that those persons have been able to return to their native villages ... without suffering reprisals."

MINI-EDITORIAL: A House subcommittee, much to the consternation of the banking industry, has approved a bill that would require banks to make most check deposits available for use the day after deposit, instead of up to 10 days later. This time differential, or "float," has been giving the banks free use of billions of dollars a year. It has also earned them lucrative fees when the customer writes checks on perfectly good deposits that haven't been officially cleared. It's high time this float was sunk.

Questionable award

It's the biggest corporate breach-of-promise suit on record.

The Pennzoil Company claimed that it had a binding agreement to buy the Getty Oil Co. The Getty directors had voted, there had been a handshake, and there had even been a press release. The engagement, so to speak, had been announced. But marriage?

That, as a certain type of novel puts it, was not to be. Texaco made an offer that the Getty directors decided they liked better, and they sold their company to Texaco. Pennzoil sued in a Texas court, and the jury has now awarded it a swinging $10.5 billion in actual and punitive damages.

It's an absurd verdict — the kind of verdict that is bringing the whole American tort system and its wide-open verdicts into disrepute. It's also a killer verdict, intended to put the defendant out of business.

The amount is a good deal larger than the total value of all of Texaco's stock and comes to three-quarters of the company's net worth. The jury held that the actual damages suffered by Pennzoil were $7.5 billion.

How that figure can be justified is unclear, since the total price for which Texaco bought Getty was $10.1 billion. No doubt Texaco can be accused of having alienated the affections of Pennzoil's betrothed. But it is hard to see any very substantial commercial damages in the usual meaning of the term.

Addressing a Houston jury, Pennzoil's lawyer laid heavy emphasis on the point that his client is a Houston company while Texaco's headquarters are, notoriously, in suburban New York.

Heart-rending, wouldn't you agree? The honest, unsuspecting local boy proceeds happily toward the wedding when along comes big bad Mr. Moneybags from the city and snatches the girl from the very altar.

To a sufficiently sentimental jury, $10.5 billion would be barely sufficient compensation in such a tragic affair.

No doubt the verdict will be reduced on appeal. No doubt a smaller figure — and perhaps much smaller — will eventually be negotiated between plaintiff and defendant. You can safely leave the rescue of Texaco to its well-paid and highly motivated lawyers.

But this case reaches interests far broader than these oil companies.

Has not something gone seriously wrong in a legal system when it develops the custom of spilling out, at random intervals, this kind of jackpot award unrelated to any real damages? Does not the rising threat of this kind of verdict put a severe burden on business in general and consequently on consumers?

The answers are, respectively, yes and yes.

New realism survives baptism

GENEVA, Switzerland — Although it was touch-and-go until 4 a.m. Thursday whether any joint statement could emerge from the summit, President Reagan's new realism in superpower relations, avoiding false hopes, survived its baptism.

So contentious were the 20 straight hours of drafting between operatives of Mikhail Gorbachev and the U.S. president that shortly after midnight the Soviet team threatened not to sign the new cultural exchange program.

When the two leaders finally accepted realistic language stripped of euphoria to describe their cautious hopes on nuclear arms, Reagan adroitly finessed concessions to Gorbachev. Soviet fears of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), so-called Star Wars, were not dimmed here. Nor did Reagan diminish Soviet concerns about whether the U.S. will adhere to SALT II and about American interpretations of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty (ABM), both of which have been violated by Moscow. Barring secret protocols, the U.S. arms-control position emerged intact.

Indeed, U.S. drafters were meticulously imaginative in protecting the president's SDI position. For example, the joint statement commits both sides to "early progress" on arms control, particularly "in areas where there is common agreement." There is no such agreement on Star Wars.

Similarly, Reagan's men managed to separate the differing nuclear issues of heavy ICBMs and shorter-range European missiles — Soviet SS-20s and U.S. Pershing IIs. That makes Euro-missiles the likeliest arms-control area for productive negotiations in the near future.

Similarly, Reagan's men managed to separate the differing nuclear issues of heavy ICBMs and shorter-range European missiles — Soviet SS-20s and U.S. Pershing IIs. That makes Euro-missiles the likeliest arms-control area for productive negotiations in the near future.

Soviet acceptance of these positions implies that Gorbachev is now fully aware of Reagan's commitment to SDI, which borders on the idealistic. Convinced that Reagan is immutable about SDI, Gorbachev's intention is clear: play for it to self-destruct at the hands of an unfriendly U.S. Congress. "I doubt he will extract much more from Congress on Star Wars," a Soviet intellectual told us here. "It is peaking now and will flatten when Reagan leaves office." The president disagrees.

Reagan's success in holding fast to SDI and making explicit his dangerous disagreements with Gorbachev strengthened his pursuit of a new realism in superpower relations. For his part, Gorbachev played well to the new policy.

Sharp but uncommonly friendly during the unprecedented four-plus hours he spent alone with Reagan, Gorbachev caught the president's mood when he told his Thursday press conference here that there is "no more hiding from the truth when you talk face to face." That "truth" is the great divide between Washington and Moscow. Gorbachev followed his charge that Reagan "is not ready yet to take any big decisions" with a disclaimer: No such decisions were possible in a mere two days.

The contrast between Reagan's new realism and dewy-eyed diplomatic verbalisms from routine State Department position papers was profound. One such proposal advised him to tell Gorbachev: "Many of our problems have been the result of misunderstandings." That contradicts Reagan's conviction and the historical record that U.S.-Soviet "problems" result from what Secretary of State George Shultz himself on Oct. 14 called "basic differences" in the two societies, their backgrounds, culture and politics.

At higher levels, however, Shultz's operatives in the sweaty, all-night drafting sessions, particularly Assistant Secretary Rozanne Ridgway, won high marks from Pentagon arms-control specialists who worked with them. That points to possible diminution of costly arms-control frictions between policy-makers at State and Defense. It was duly noted that Shultz awarded hawkish Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle a conspicuous front-row seat during the signing ceremony at the summit's close.

But Reagan's new realism, whatever follows this first infinitesimal step in the direction of better U.S.-Soviet relations, stands alone in pointing the way. Derided by some Soviet apparatchiks here as an elderly ex-actor who has not recovered his health from last summer's cancer operation, Reagan was serenely self-confident throughout.

When an aide warned him after his first cordial private one-hour session with Gorbachev that the Soviet leader might be "a lot tougher" later on, Reagan placed his hands on his hips, smiled and said: "Well I'll just ask him how about all those nice things you said to me when we were alone."

That was a fleeting thought, perhaps, but a realistic one.

Zane Grey novels good cold remedy

The best cold remedy I've found is a combination of vitamin C and Zane Grey novels.

At the first onset of the cold, you swallow a bunch of vitamin C tablets, get yourself into a comfortable prone position, and lose yourself in one of Grey's classic western novels like Thunder Mountain or Wild Horse Mesa.

Grey, who was a dentist from the east, invented the West that Hollywood later reflected.

What I love about Grey's works, however, is the man's sense of life which they reflect.

To Zane Grey, the world was a beautiful, exciting place peopled with men and women who were always fascinating and most often admirable. Grey's love of life and love of the outdoors jump off every page he wrote. That's why his novels are a psychological tonic.

Grey himself must have been a remarkable man to stay so in love with life. I've never detected in any of his works any hate, bitterness, malice, or cynicism.

Even Grey's villains — and he created some pretty evil folks — are written with the sympathy that comes from knowing how good people go bad and from recognizing that even a villain may have some admirable traits.

Despite the fact that Grey probably ranks close to the top of most widely read authors in all of history, he is naturally scorned by the literary set in the early part of this century. It became fashionable to equate good literature with depressing literature. This is one of the mental diseases of the 20th Century. Psychiatrists make people pay them a fortune to listen to the kind of garbage many of today's authors expect people to buy. Well, I long ago determined never to pay good money to be depressed by some author or screenwriter who is trying to get psychotherapy on the cheap.

Now I wouldn't be telling you about Zane Grey if he didn't have something to say that is applicable to our civic life today. He has a lot to say and what he says is what wise men throughout the ages have always said.

There are no groups or classes on this planet — only individuals. There are no social problems — there are only individual moral problems.

We got way off the trail when we confused cooperation with collectivism. Individuals may cooperate to help other individuals solve their individual problems, but there are no collective problems amenable to collective and institutionalized solutions.

Grey's fiction reminds us that each of us is an individual responsible for his or her own life and that with that responsibility is the freedom to make choices. No matter what the economic, geographical, or social circumstances are, every individual retains both the responsibility and the freedom to shape his own life.

Even in circumstances of unavoidable suffering and imminent death, the individual retains the freedom to choose how he will face his fate — with dignity and courage or with cowardice and complaints.

I keep a stack of Zane Grey paperbacks handy, not only for colds, but for those times when the silliness of the modern world puts me in a black and dangerous mood. They are good medicine, pard.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 25, the 329th day of 1985. There are 36 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 25th, 1783, the British evacuated New York, their last military position in the United States during the Revolutionary War.

On this date: In 1758, in the French and Indian War, the British captured Fort Duquesne at what is now Pittsburgh. In 1881, Pope John XXIII was born Angelo Roncalli in a village near Bergamo, Italy.

In 1884, John B. Meyenberg of St. Louis patented evaporated milk. In 1885, Vice President Thomas A. Hendricks died at the age of 66, eight months after taking office.

In 1920, radio station WTAW of College Station, Texas, broadcast the first play-by-play description of a football game, between the University of Texas and Texas A&M.

In 1957, President Dwight D. Eisenhower suffered a slight stroke. In 1973, Greek President George Papadopoulos was ousted in a bloodless military coup.

Today's birthdays: Baseball Hall-of-Famer Joe DiMaggio is 71. Actor Ricardo Montalban is 65. Actress Kathryn Crosby is 52. John F. Kennedy Jr. is 25.

Thought for today: "No trumpets sound when the important decisions of our life are made. Destiny is made known silently." — Agnes de Mille, choreographer.

NATION IN BRIEF

Lawyer 'out to get' cigarette industry

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — When a 106-foot yacht steamed into harbor last week, word spread quickly in this seaside town that its bulky, white-haired passenger was Melvin Belli, the famed "King of Torts," ready to wage courtroom war against the cigarette industry.

"Every place I go it's like 'High Noon,'" the 78-year-old Belli complained of his latest legal challenge. "You have to be alert. They all want to shoot down the fastest gun alive, which I'm not."

Belli's reputation and the trial's central issue — whether cigarettes cause cancer — are drawing standing-room-only crowds of lawyers, spectators and reporters to Galbraith vs. Reynolds.

"I tried one of these cases 20 years ago," says Belli. "I knew the cigarette companies were lying. They knew more about the carcinogenic aspects of smoking. I knew they were lying and I said, 'I'm going to get 'em. I'm out to get 'em now.'"

Belli claims he can prove that smoking causes cancer, that it is addictive and that it killed John Mark Galbraith, whose family filed the $1 million suit. He says cigarette manufacturers are liable for the illness or death of those who smoke its products.

The R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., makers of Winston, Salem and Camel cigarettes, says that there is no scientific link between cancer and smoking and that cigarettes are not addictive because millions of Americans give them up every year. Everyone has the free choice to smoke or not, the company asserts.

Accident slows Diablo

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Unit 2 reactor at Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant was reduced to 30 percent power after a construction accident, a utility spokesman said Sunday.

The unit, which has not yet gone into commercial operation, was brought up to 75 percent power to resume testing at that level Sunday, a day after the accident, said John Angius, spokesman for Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

A cable supplying power to one of the unit's two ocean water cooling pumps was damaged near the cooling water intake area, Angius said. The damage was minor, he said.

Sunken barge to stay

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — A sunken barge laden with 840,000 tons of heavy oil may remain upside down at the bottom of Long Island Sound because Coast Guard officials don't want to risk pulling it up and causing a massive oil spill.

The barge dropped to the bottom early Sunday, hours before marine salvors were to tow it to calmer, shallow waters where they had planned to right the vessel. But Coast Guard officials decided not to try to bring it to the surface immediately, said Chief Petty Officer Doug Bandos.

Another spy held

WASHINGTON (AP) — A boat salesman formerly employed by the National Security Agency was accused today of conspiring to pass secrets to the Soviet Union, becoming the fourth person arrested on espionage charges in the past five days.

Ronald William Pelton, 44, was arrested at about 12:10 a.m. today at a hotel in Annapolis, Md., an FBI spokesman said.

West Texas: Partly cloudy Wednesday and Thursday, turning colder Friday with scattered rain and snow Panhandle and scattered rain elsewhere Friday.

High temperatures forecast for Monday.

Thunderstorms in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms may wet the Midland area tonight and Tuesday but continued warm temperatures are expected in the area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms and a low in the lower 50s. Winds will blow from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

Cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms are expected to continue Tuesday with a high warming to near 70. Winds will be gusty from the west at 15 to 25 mph, shifting to a gusty northwest wind at 15 to 25 mph.

Sunday's high of 76 was 7 degrees below the record set in 1965. This morning's low was 30 degrees above the 1938 record of 18.

STATE

Another round of nocturnal thunderstorms early Monday morning prompted the National Weather Service to issue more flash flood warnings in the southeast and south central sections of the state.

The weather service also posted travelers' advisories from the Panhandle to the Permian Basin and into North Central Texas because of dense fog.

Rain pelted the area from the eastern Hill Country into deep East Texas as moist tropical air collided with a stationary front. The flash flood warnings covered Grimes, Walker, Comal and Guadalupe counties.

The heaviest thunderstorms fell about 40 miles east of Austin near Caldwell and from College Station to northwest of Huntsville. Other very heavy thunderstorms were in East Texas between Lake O' The Pines and Mount Pleasant.

The front stretched from near Paris southward to Waco, then westward to San Angelo and Amarillo Monday morning.

NATION

Snow blanketed northern states from Washington to the Plains today after a day of near-blizzard conditions in Utah, while rivers in southern Texas were rising after rainfall of up to almost 11 inches.

Winter storm warnings for heavy snow were posted for most of the Sierra Nevada, the Lake Tahoe basin and the mountains of northern Utah.

More than 18 inches of snow was reported at 8,500 feet near Bishop, Calif., and an additional 8 to 12 inches of snow were expected by midday in Utah, where near-blizzard conditions prevailed Sunday evening.

Cowboys shake humiliation with win are playing on a high note and we are up and down each week," said Landry. "But now is the time to move forward. We have as good a chance as anybody if we play well."

The Cowboys' "redemption" victory over the Eagles came off White's three touchdown passes and a ballhawking secondary that picked off three Ron Jaworski tosses.

Jaworski had a career-high 380 yards against Dallas in a 16-14 victory in Philadelphia. But he came into the game here both-ered by a bruised shoulder and connected on 23 of 42 passes for 285 yards.

White, who suffered a concussion and a jammed neck against the Bears, completed 75 per cent of his passes, hitting 20 of 28 shots for 243 yards.

He nailed tight end Doug Cosbie with a fourth and inches 2-yard scoring pass and found him again on a 23-yard scoring strike, all in the second period.

In the fourth quarter, Mike Renfro shagged a 19-yard touchdown pass over the middle.

"It was like night and day compared to last week," said White.

"I haven't been 100 per cent physically all year but I got out with a headache today."

He added, "St. Louis will play us tough on Thursday. They always do."

Landry said, "We're very happy. It was a big game, a must game if we had a chance to get into the playoffs."

"We had to make some big plays. Danny was just excellent."

Landry continued, "This was a critical game. We had to bounce back on the positive side."

Dallas is 8-4 and the Eagles dropped to 6-6 in the division.

The Cowboys play St. Louis Thanksgiving Day.

"We are in the stretch drive now," said Landry. "We have some tough teams to close with."

Almost lost in White's bombardment were Tony Dorsett's touchdown runs of two and 10 yards and his 86 yards rushing on 30 carries. Dorsett also broke the 1,000 yard rushing barrier for the eighth time in nine pro seasons.

The Eagles got a 74-yard scoring run from rookie Herman Hunter but the overhead game was limited to Jaworski's late 11-yard scoring pass to Mike Quick.

Eagles' Coach Marion Campbell was proud of Jaworski's effort.

"He hung in there all the way," said Campbell. "He's a tough guy."

Campbell said the Eagles still had a playoff chance.

"We're not going to die because of this one," Campbell said. "We're going to keep trying our tails off. We've worked too hard to make ourselves a respectable football team."

Jaworski said, "The Cowboys played outstanding football."

'Fridge' scores again for Bears

Associated Press

Walter Payton, William Perry and the Chicago Bears' defense worked some more of their routine magic — and Jay Schroeder displayed some more, too.

Payton, gaining 102 yards — 40 of them on a touchdown run — tied the mark of seven consecutive National Football League games with 100 or more yards rushing, a record set by O.J. Simpson and matched by Earl Campbell.

Perry, the 308-pound "Refrigerator" who switches from defensive tackle to running back when the Bear offense nudges up against the goal line, rumbled for his third TD of the year after Steve Fuller and Willie Gault teamed on a 50-yard pass to the Atlanta 1-yard line.

And the Chicago defense, not content to rest on its 44-0 demolition of Dallas a week ago, recorded its second shutout in a row, a feat the Bears last achieved in 1942.

It all added up to a 36-0 crushing of the visiting Atlanta Falcons that put Chicago's record at 12-0. Only the Miami Dolphins of 1972, who went 14-0 en route to a Super Bowl victory, and the 1934 Bears, who started off 13-0, have had better records this far into an NFL season.

"Don't talk about the 1934 team," Coach Mike Ditka sniffed. "They lost the championship."

In Pittsburgh, Schroeder, who rode to Washington's rescue last Monday night, showed he was no one-week wonder as he quarterbacked the Redskins to a 30-23 victory over the Steelers. It was his first full game since high school and he threw for a touchdown and completed eight of 10 second-half passes.

"This team has not reached its peak," Payton said of the Bears. "We're capable of scoring 60 points. We don't know how good we are and that's kind of scary." It might also give the Dolphins cause to pause. Miami takes on Chicago next Monday night.

Ditka said the Chicago defense "couldn't play any better. The way our defense is playing, nothing is too hard and they're taking everything away from the other team."

Then, turning to Payton, who already owns the NFL career rushing record, Ditka said: "I was determined to see Walter getting his seventh 100-yard game. I'm also determined to see him get his eighth and ninth. When his name goes down, I want it to stand alone."

That, too, should give the Dolphins something to think about — and Indianapolis, the Jets and Detroit as well. They're on the Bears' menu for the rest of the season.

Redskins 30, Steelers 23
Ken Jenkins returned a kickoff 95 yards to the Pittsburgh 3-yard line, setting up one Washington TD, and Otis Womley blocked a punt to pave the way for Schroeder's 18-yard touchdown pass to Clint Didier.

NFL Roundup

Schroeder finished with 15 completions in 28 passes for 163 yards without an interception.

"He's big, has a good arm and he's very smart," Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said. "What I like best is he's very calm. He's faced two good defenses the past two weeks and has shown great poise."

"I felt good going into the game," Schroeder said. "I slept like a baby. Last week, I just had to react. This week I was able to prepare and consequently read the defenses more."

Jets 16, Patriots 13

Kurt Sohn sprinted 46 yards with a punt to the New England 15-yard line and, not wasting any time, the Jets called on place-kicker Pat Leahy, whose 32-yard field goal 10:05 into overtime boosted the Jets into sole possession of first place in the AFC East, a game ahead of the visiting Patriots and the Dolphins.

Tony Franklin, who missed a 41-yard field goal in the first half, kicked a 28-yarder with 16 seconds left in the fourth quarter to send the game into overtime. That came shortly after Tony Eason, playing in place of injured Steve Grogan, passed 26 yards to Derrick Ramsey to the New York 30 on a third-and-9 situation.

Grogan, who had replaced the injured Eason earlier this year and led the Pats to six straight victories, sustained sprained left knee ligaments late in the first quarter against the Jets and will be out for the rest of the regular season, the team said.

Bucs 19, Lions 16

In Tampa, Steve Young, in his first NFL start following his switch from the United States Football League, established himself as a team leader with the Bucs as he engineered a 10-point rally to force overtime against the Lions.

Donald Igwebuike then kicked his fourth field goal of the game, a 24-yarder with 12:31 into the extra period.

"In the huddle, Steve was really motivating us and getting the team moving," offensive tackle Ron Heller said. "He'd come in there and you could see steam coming off him. Gee, it was almost like you don't want to take a chance on disappointing the guy."

"It always feel good to win," Young said. "Like I told everyone, that's the bottom line. Our only goal is to go out and win. What I'm proudest of is that I didn't have any fumbled snaps, no delay-of-game penalties, no mistakes. That's really what worried me going into the game."

Oilers climb back to coaster top

HOUSTON (AP) — The emotional roller coaster the Houston Oilers have ridden this season reached new heights Sunday.

"It's incredible how the emotions change from week to week in this locker room," Oilers wide receiver Tim Smith said. "We're lucky to be in the AFC Central where a two-game winning streak can put you back in the race."

The Oilers built a 17-0 first-half lead and then had to come from behind three times to defeat San Diego 37-35 on a 51-yard field goal by Tony Zendejas with two seconds left in regulation play.

Houston quarterback Oliver Luck, starting for injured Warren Moon, dueled San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts score for score.

Luck drove the Oilers to the Charger 33 with seven seconds left to set up the game-winner by Zendejas, who earlier hit field goals of 47 and a career long 52 yarder.

"I don't think I've had a better game than this," Zendejas said. "When I lined it up, it looked between 50 and 51 yards. When I kick those in practice, they don't seem that far away. I just think the same way when I kick."

It was the second time in as many weeks that the Chargers had been struck down so suddenly.

They were lining up in overtime a week ago to kick a winning field goal against Denver. But the kick was blocked and then returned 60 yards for a winning touchdown.

The Chargers had more time to watch Sunday's time bomb.

Luck, starting his first game since 1983, hit a 24-yard pass to Drew Hill and completed a 25-yard pass to Smith to set up Zendejas' game winner.

Luck said the final seconds were fun.

"We'd had success moving the ball the whole game," he said. "I told the guys in the huddle, just because we had 22 seconds left doesn't mean we can't drive down and let Tony kick a field goal."

The Oilers faced second down and 15 yards to go at their own 42 when Luck admonished his offense, two plays before the big catch by Smith.

"We were scoring so much it opened the whole field," Smith said. "Everyone was having success and they realized they had to cover everyone."

The Oilers built a 17-7 halftime lead on a 16-yard run by Larry Moriaty. Luck's 8-yard touchdown pass to Drew Hill and Zendejas' 47-yarder.

The Chargers started their comeback shortly before the half with a one-yard run by Tim Spencer following an 11-yard interception return by cornerback John Hendy.

The offensive battle grew intense in the second half.

El Paso Andress quarterback Byron Wofford (in white) surely has better things to do with his Saturday afternoon than this. This stingy Midland Lee defense now turns thoughts to Irving's MacArthur Cardinals in Texas Stadium Saturday.

It's reunion time at Texas Stadium

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Rebels and Irving MacArthur's Cardinals took different paths over the weekend to reach Saturday's Texas Stadium Class 5A Region football battle, but a meeting of the minds is expected once more when these two teams square off.

You could call this one a reunion since MacArthur head coach Ray Overton was last seen in these parts at head coach at Abilene Cooper in 1982. This clash might contain some old District 4-5A warfare. It might be tempting to call MacArthur the Cougars.

WHILE THE reunion angle is good for West Texas, Overton sees nothing new in the situation. After all, every game he has played in the playoffs in 1985 has been an old home week affair.

"We played Trinity and John Reddell in the first round. When I was at Cooper, we used to play against John when he was at Midland High. We played Wichita Falls this weekend and I used to play against Joe Bob Tyler when I was at Haltom and again at Cooper," said Overton. "Now we're back to Midland Lee and I guess all this isn't so unusual. After all, if you've been in the coaching business as long as I have, you're bound to meet some old friends along the way."

Lee coach Jack Tayrien said, "It will be like old times with a Lee team going against a Ray Overton team, but I'm just glad we have the opportunity to play again — against anyone. There are only 16 5A teams left in the state that are playing and we feel very fortunate to be one of them."

This weekend's Area playoff experience, however, was different as night and day. Lee had an easy 45-7, fun-filled, romp over El Paso Andress while the Cardinals won a narrow 28-24 decision over Wichita Falls with a 74-yard screen pass the decider with just over one minute left to play in the game.

"WICHITA FALLS played the heck out of us," noted Overton. "We had to fight for our lives to get out of that one and the screen saved us."

"I think we were tense in the Trinity game. It was the first time many of our kids have played in a playoff game and they were excited and made a lot of mistakes," said Overton on his 16-7 win over Trinity in Bi-District.

Both coaches were in the midst of preparations for Saturday's 2 p.m. kickoff at Texas Stadium. They will have more to say about each other when that process is completed.

In Midland, tickets for the Thanksgiving weekend contest went on sale at 8 a.m. today. Tickets will remain on sale through 5 p.m. Wednesday with the Memorial Stadium ticket office open daily through that period from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., including the noon hour.

Since Thursday and Friday are school holidays, the ticket office will sell tickets only through Wednesday in Midland. Tickets are $3 for students and $6 for adults. All tickets, including students, will be $7 if purchased at the gate Saturday at Texas Stadium.

SATURDAY'S WINNER will play the winner of the Odessa Permian-Denton contest, which is also slated for a 2 p.m. kickoff Saturday in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Lee will finally get a chance to meet another district runnerup. MacArthur was runnerup to Grand Prairie in its district. Grand Prairie has been eliminated from the playoffs. It is also the first time Lee has had a chance to meet a team with a worse record. MacArthur is 8-2-2 while Lee is 10-2.

But don't let that thought throw you. MacArthur is considered a top-notch team, one that could give the Rebels a handful of trouble.

A&M, Texas pull for Turkey bone

Winner earns chance at Auburn

Associated Press

For the first time since 1943, the Texas Longhorns and Texas Aggies will collide with the Cotton Bowl on the line.

Thanksgiving night's nationally televised (ESPN at 8:45 p.m. CST) Southwest Conference battle between the two old rivals will determine the host team New Year's Day in the 50th Cotton Bowl Classic.

The guest team will be Bo Jackson and the Auburn Tigers.

The Aggies haven't been to the Cotton Bowl since 1967.

Each team has one conference loss, and the meeting was set up by Texas' 17-10 victory over Baylor and the Aggies' 53-6 triumph over Texas Christian.

The loser will play in the Bluebonnet Bowl against the Air Force.

"This is what we've worked for all year," said Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "This is the reward."

Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker, who lost to both teams, said, "I'd have to select Texas A&M. They are on a roll and have a lot of talent."

Texas overcame three critical lost fumbles to keep alive a 34-year Memorial Stadium hex over the Bears. Baylor got a consolation prize — the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 27, probably against Louisiana State in Memphis, Tenn. LSU beat Notre Dame 10-7 on Saturday.

In other SWC games, Arkansas beat Southern Methodist 15-9, and Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore and his hard luck Red Raiders were snakebitten again, losing 17-16 to Houston when a last minute two-point conversion failed.

Texas Coach Fred Akers said he hopes his team can heal from the Baylor bruises.

"The game is a big drain on us physically but we'll have to get ready in just four days to play the Aggies," said Akers. "Our team is really excited but we have some bruises and strains that will have to heal."

SWC Spotlight

"I doubt that you have to remind our guys of last year's A&M game" when the Aggies won 37-12, Akers said.

The only other time Texas and A&M have met head-up for a Cotton Bowl berth was in 1943, with Texas winning 27-13.

"We played our best game of the year against Baylor. Our fumbles gave them 14 points but we made a great goal line stand," Akers said. "It was a proud moment for our team."

He praised Baylor, saying "nobody wearing Orange (Texas colors) or Green could leave here today and not feel proud. It was two good football teams going at it."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said, "I'm not feeling good."

"We set our goal for the Cotton Bowl and when you don't get there, it hurts," he said. "We're proud and happy to be going to the Liberty Bowl. I've wanted to go to that bowl for a long time."

Texas' defense was led by James McKinney, who says the Longhorns will be ready for the Aggies.

"This was one of our best games, but we're saving the best for next Thursday," he said. "We were rated low at the start of the year and nobody has given us much of a chance. But we've got the biggest hearts of anybody."

Arkansas received a bid to play in San Diego's Holiday Bowl Dec. 22 against Arizona State.

"It's a great bowl and our kids deserved to go some place nice like San Diego," said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield. "It's a real players' bowl."

Auburn still has a game left against Alabama. "We're going to have two wars this week," said

Auburn Coach Pat Dye. "There's going to be Texas-A&M on Thursday night then Alabama-Auburn on Saturday."

Trailing SMU 9-7, time winding down in the fourth quarter, the Razorbacks had third-and-23 on their 27. Quarterback Mark Calcagni, a fifth-year senior, got good protection and found Bobby Joe Edmonds crossing from the left side. Edmonds made 48 on the play and four plays later Calcagni scored the winning touchdown from the 4 with 3:47 to play.

The play, Hatfield said, was the same one Arkansas ran a month earlier, trailing Texas 15-13 with 22 seconds remaining. Calcagni, under pressure, threw an interception. Hatfield also said Edmonds was the player who dropped a sure TD pass in the 21-15 Liberty Bowl loss to Auburn last year and was guilty of an infraction that negated a 40-yard pass play in a 10-6 loss to Texas A&M on Nov. 16.

"A bunch of ironies," Hatfield said. Some of the top SWC performances over the weekend were:

Texas vs. Baylor — Edwin Simmons of Texas rushed for 90 yards on 22 carries and scored his first touchdown of the year in a 17-10 victory over Baylor. For the Bears, Derrick McAdoo had 90 yards on nine carries, including a 50-yard run.

Texas A&M vs. Texas Christian — The Aggies had 545 yards total offense and Kevin Murray hit 15 of 22 passes for 246 yards. TCU's Ken Oze set a school scoring record with two field goals, giving him 205 for the season.

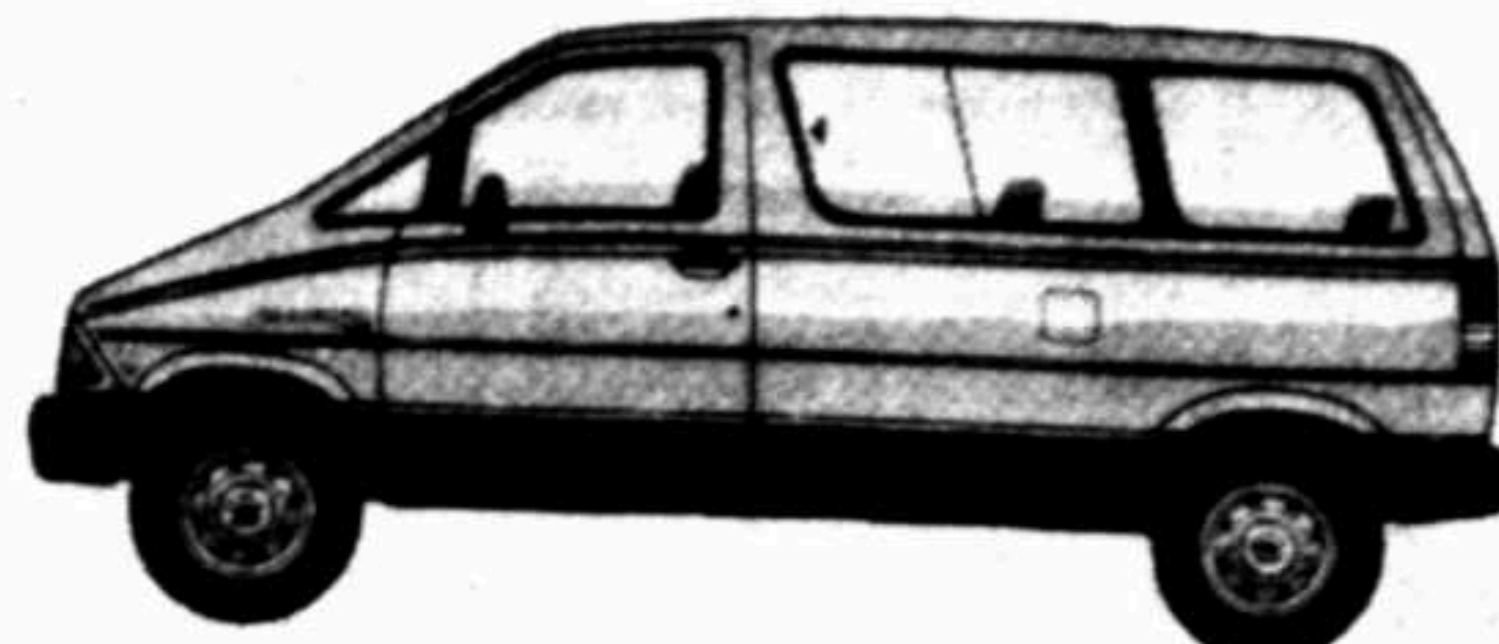

Arkansas vs. Southern Methodist — Arkansas' Mark Calcagni came off the bench to hit seven of nine passes for 93 yards. SMU's Brandy Brownlee kicked three field goals.

Houston vs. Texas Tech — Houston's Raymond Tate rushed for 176 yards on 23 carries and Sloan Hood got 100 yards on 20 tries. Tech's Billy Joe Tolliver hit 19 of 39 passes for 183 yards.

MRT Winner

Midland's Jo Ann Boulter, 4807 Crenshaw, took first place in the weekly Reporter-Telegram football contest, but there were no second and third place winners this past week.

Pitt ax falls on Foge Fazio

Search for replacement begins

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The University of Pittsburgh fired Foge Fazio as head football coach today and began a search for a replacement.

University Athletic Director Edward Bozick said Fazio was fired "in the long-term interest of the football program."

"We decided a coaching change had to be made at this time," Bozick said. "Fazio represented this university in the best possible way."

Serafino Dante Fazio compiled a 25-18-3 record in four seasons at the University of Pittsburgh. He replaced Jackie Sherrill as head football coach in 1982 when Sherrill became head coach at Texas A&M University.

Fazio, who attended the Pitt Stadium news conference, said he had no plans for the immediate future. He said his toughest job now would be to tell the players of his firing today.

"This is Thanksgiving week and I'm just thankful to be alive and to be happy," Fazio said.

Fazio's 1982 team was ranked the nation's best in preseason polls. But it ended with a 9-3 record, including a 7-0 loss to Southern Methodist University in the Cotton Bowl.

The Panthers struggled offensively the entire 1982 season despite star quarterback Dan Marino, who later was drafted by the Miami Dolphins of the National Football League.

Pitt followed with records of 8-3-1 in 1983, 3-7-1 in 1984 and 5-5-1 this season. It lost to Penn State 31-0 in Pitt's season finale Saturday night at Pitt Stadium.

Bozick said there was a chance Fazio would have been kept on if Pitt had beaten Joe Paterno's No. 1-ranked Nittany Lions. Bozick said the team's 1985 goal was a winning season and a postseason bowl game.

"When I talked to Mr. Bozick yesterday," Fazio said, "I was more ticked off about the Penn State game than I was this, and I still am."

Fazio's last two teams failed to win postseason bowl bids. Pitt had played in nine straight bowl games from 1975 through 1983.

Sherrill, who coached from 1977 through 1981, compiled a 50-9-1 record. Sherrill's predecessor, John Majors, compiled a 33-13-1 record from 1973 through 1976.

At the end of the 1985 season, Fazio had three years remaining on a five-year contract extension given him several weeks after the Panthers lost to Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl at the end of the 1983 season.

Fazio was the Panthers' defensive coordinator and assistant head coach under Sherrill and was considered one of college football's top defensive coaches.

Pitt officials took less than an hour to hire Fazio as head coach when Sherrill resigned.

Fazio, son of a grocer in suburban Coraopolis, was nicknamed "Foge" as a boy because of the way he pronounced the word "fudge."

Fazio played center and linebacker for Pitt from 1967 through 1969. He also played briefly in the old American Football League before he began his college football coaching career.

He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from Pitt. The last football coach to be fired at Pitt was Carl A. DePasqua after the 1972 season. DePasqua, who was replaced by Majors, posted a 13-29 record from 1969 through 1972.

Fazio served as an assistant coach under DePasqua.

Tar Heels deal UCLA worst loss

Associated Press

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith was not sure whether his club's 37-point, season-opening victory over UCLA held any particular message. But if it did, Bruins Coach Walt Hazzard was sure it wasn't the obvious one.

The second-ranked Tar Heels handed the Bruins the worst defeat in their history Sunday night, 107-70, with the help of a career-high 31 points from Brad Daugherty.

"I don't know what this tells us," Smith said. "We can't get too excited. UCLA is not what they're going to be."

The 37-point winning margin represented North Carolina's largest lead of the game, and the 107 points were the most scored by the Tar Heels since a 121-69 defeat of Niagara in 1978. UCLA's worst previous loss was by 31 points to Kentucky, 84-53, on Dec. 26, 1951.

"My team is not that bad," Hazzard said. "We just got beat, got swamped by a good team."

Three Top Ten teams were in action in the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament, which moves to New York's Madison Square Garden next Friday night for the semifinals. In the quarterfinals, fifth-ranked Kansas beat Washington 69-64. No. 6 Duke downed Alabama-Birmingham 66-54. No. 9 Louisville beat Tulsa 80-74 and unranked St. John's defeated West Virginia 65-58.

The semifinal pairings have Duke against St. John's and Kansas against Louisville. The championship game will be played Sunday at the Garden.

Top Ten

UCLA actually held a 24-16 lead in the game before going cold from the perimeter as North Carolina's height advantage began to tell. The 6-foot-11 Daugherty hit all 13 of his field goal attempts, including a short jumper at 6:44 of the first half to tie the score 28-28. The Tar Heels ran off to a 59-48 lead by scoring the first six points of the second half, and a 21-8 run later in the half put the game away.

Reggie Miller led UCLA with 20 points.

Tournaments

In the Denver region of the NIT, Kansas rallied twice to beat Washington as swingman Ron Kellogg scored 14 of his 22 points in the second half. The Jayhawks scored 12 straight points — six in each half — to take a 40-35 lead. The Huskies followed with a 6-0 run for a 41-40 lead, but, after the lead changed hands one more time, Kellogg hit a fast-break bucket that gave Kansas the lead for good, 52-49, with 8:47 left. Christian Welp paced the Huskies with 21 points.

Cotton gets Heisman 'Bo'wl

DALLAS (AP) — Auburn Coach Pat Dye says he is "excited and happy" for his 10th-ranked Tiger football team to accept a bid to the 50th annual Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

"We have been trying to build a program that would be attractive to New Year's Day bowls and going to the Cotton Bowl is definitely a step in that direction," Dye said in Auburn, Ala., on Saturday.

Auburn running back Bo Jackson "gives the Cotton Bowl the chance to have back-to-back Heisman trophy winners," team selection chairman Field Scovell said. "Our Southwest Conference champion and Auburn will be a great matchup."

The other Heisman winner, Boston College's Doug Flutie, played against Southern Methodist in last year's Cotton Bowl.

Auburn, 8-2 on the season and 3-2 in the Southeast Conference, was idle Saturday. But Ohio's 38-17 loss to Bowling Green and Iowa's 31-9 win over Minnesota gave Auburn a berth in the game.

Who their opponent will be depends on the Thanksgiving night

Basketball

In Houston, Duke also had to rally to beat Alabama-Birmingham. Johnny Dawkins scored 14 of his 18 points in the second half to assist the comeback, which began with the Blue Devils trailing 44-38 with 14 minutes to play. A basket by Dawkins tied the score 47-47, and Billy King made a three-point play that gave the Blue Devils the lead for good. Jerome Mincy topped UAB with 21 points.

"I put too much pressure on myself early," Dawkins said. "I just settled down and played my game in the second half."

In Cincinnati, Billy Thompson led four Louisville players in double figures with 21 points, and the Cardinals turned back a late Tulsa rally to earn a trip to New York. Louisville outscored Tulsa 10-2 to take a 45-41 lead with 15:57 to play, then built its lead to as many as 11 points before the Golden Hurricane began to respond. Tulsa cut the lead to 70-65 with 2:50 to play, but Pervis Ellison hit two Cardinal baskets to put the game out of reach. Tracy Moore led Tulsa with 18 points.

In Hartford, Conn., Walter Berry scored 18 points, including eight in a 16-1 game-opening burst, then St. John's held off a late West Virginia surge. West Virginia pulled within five points with a minute left, but Shelton Jones blocked a shot that was converted to a breakaway basket by Willie Glass to shortcircuit the rally. Dale Blaney had 25 points for West Virginia.

"In the first half we played like a violin," St. John's Coach Lou Carne-secca said, "but in the second half we were more like a banjo — with three strings."

New Mexico won the Lobo Tipoff Classic in Albuquerque, N.M., beating San Diego 61-46 with the help of 14 points and six assists from guard Kelvin Scarborough. Long Beach State, with Vince Jefferson scoring 16 points and getting 17 rebounds, defeated Bucknell 65-45 in the consolation game.

Unranked

Harold Jensen scored 24 points, and defending national champion Villanova led from start to finish in beating Vermont 101-61. The Wildcats shot 71.7 percent from the field.

Nolan Richardson made a successful coaching debut at Arkansas as the Razorbacks opened their season with an 86-72 victory over Southern Illinois. William Mills came off the bench to score 20 points for Arkansas. Richardson took over from Eddie Sutton, who went to Kentucky to replace the retired Joe Hall.

matchup between Southwest Conference rivals Texas and Texas A&M. The SWC Cotton Bowl berth was left open Saturday when Texas beat Baylor 17-10.

"Auburn playing Texas A&M would have a certain flair, with two great institutions of agriculture and engineering playing each other," Dye said.

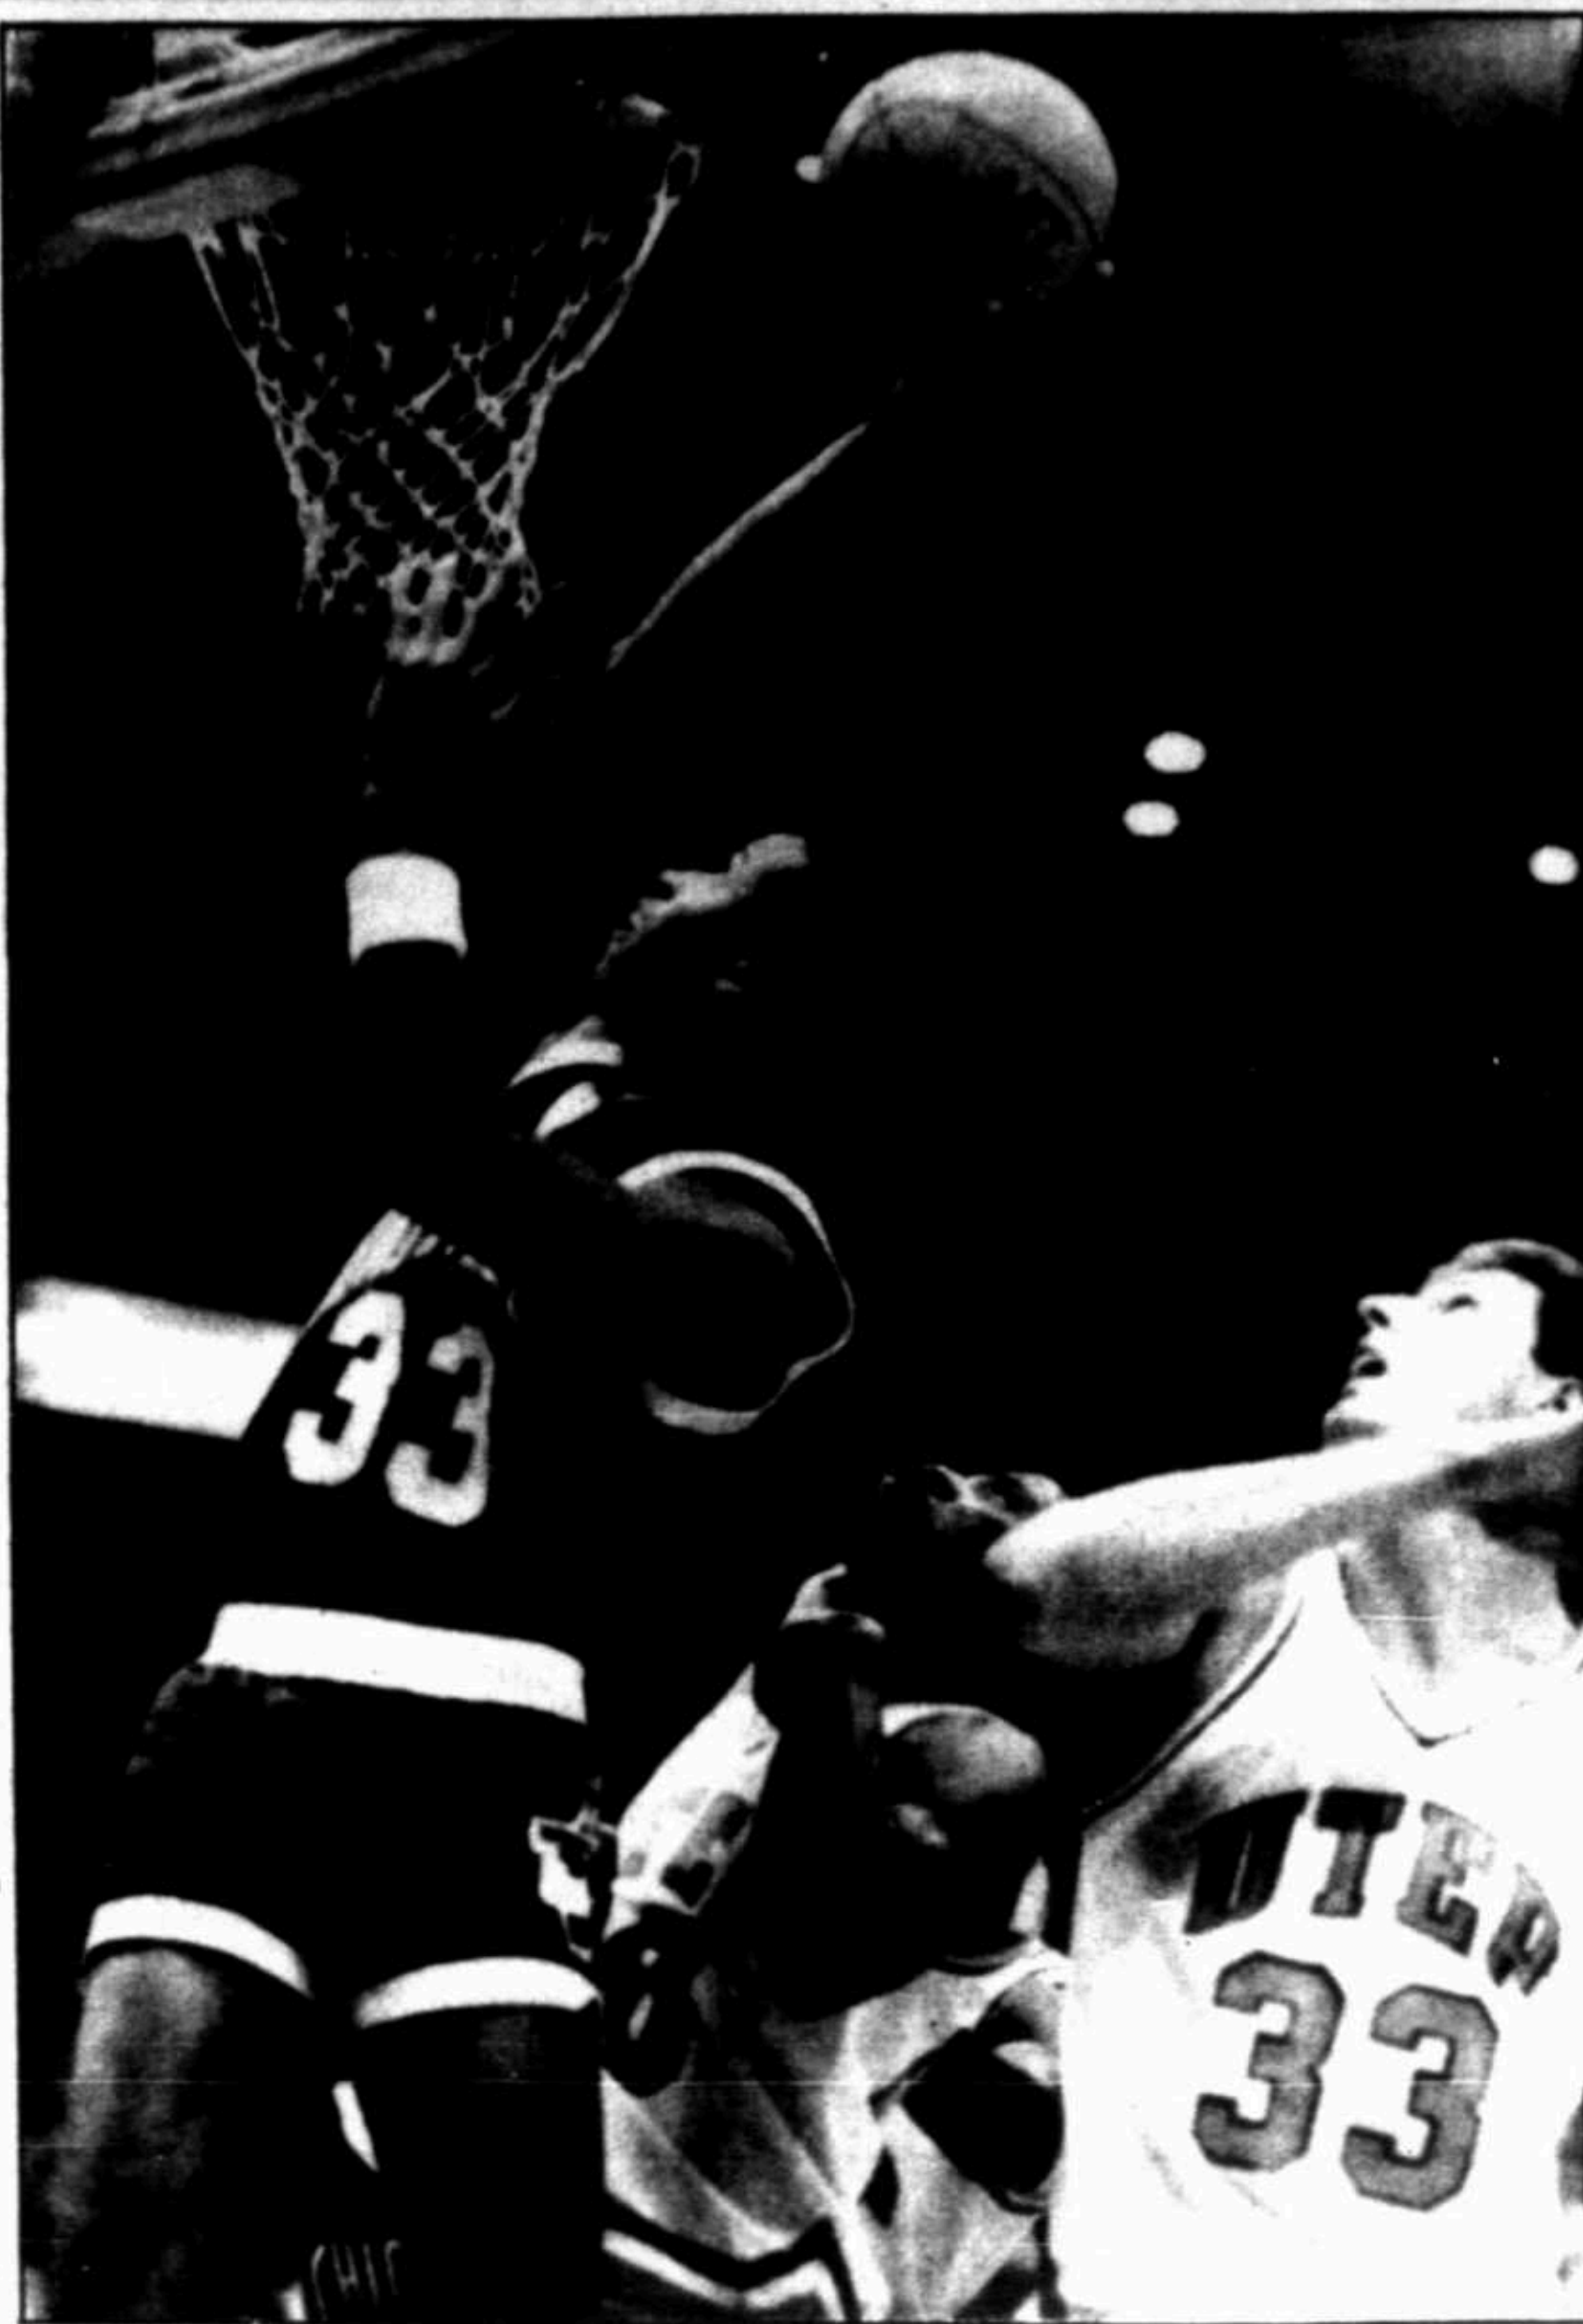

"I know the players would be excited about playing Texas also since they have already played them twice," he added. "I am not convinced that we cannot beat Texas."

Bowl president Jim Ray Smith said he was "pleased and proud to have Auburn University as our visiting team." Dye is "one of the most respected in the country and has a great record at Auburn."

Dye said it "has not been the easiest season" for his team.

"We started out with high hopes and high expectations, but during the course of the season we had a few misfortunes."

Auburn, which spent part of the season ranked No. 1 nationally, suffered tough SEC losses to Tennessee and Florida.

Washington's Paul Fortier (33) goes underneath for two points against UTEP Friday night in NIT tournament.

49ers set Monday night sights on Seattle's Dave Krieg

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers' pass rushers, thoroughly frustrated in the team's last Monday night game, will go after Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg tonight.

If Krieg has time to throw deep, veteran wide receiver Steve Largent is sure to be a frequent target. Largent has 55 receptions for 880 yards this year and is the only player in National Football League history to reach the 50-catch level eight times.

"It remains to be seen if we can get to their quarterback," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said. "Unless we break down the timing between those two people (Krieg and Largent), we'll be in for a very difficult evening."

The New England Patriots' defense put good pressure on Krieg last week, sacking him five times and intercepting three of his passes in a 20-13 victory over the Seahawks. That loss left Seattle with a 6-5 record, the same as San Francisco.

The Seahawks are third in the American Football Conference West but are close to the co-leaders, the Denver Broncos and Los Angeles

Islanders nip Rangers in New York shootout

Associated Press

Steve Richmond gave it away, and the New York Islanders were glad to take it.

"They say that one player can't lose a hockey game, but I feel I did," said Richmond after the Islanders defeated his New York Rangers 4-3 in overtime Sunday night.

Richmond had just hit the ice to relieve some tired defensemen when things fell apart for the Rangers, who had stormed back from a 3-1 deficit.

Tied at 3-3, thanks to Reijo Ruotsalainen's second goal of the game in the third period, the Rangers looked as if they were going to put the Islanders away for the second straight game when they peppered goaltender Billy Smith with three successive shots in overtime.

But one of the near-misses bounced to Islander center Pat LaFontaine, who batted the puck out to the blue line.

That's when Richmond attempted to control the puck, but fumbled it away to the Islanders' Greg Gilbert, who skated in all alone and scored the winning goal 1:57 into overtime.

"There's no excuse for giving up a puck for a breakaway goal at this level," Richmond said. "I sure picked a bad time to do it."

The Islanders' victory avenged a 5-0 drubbing by the Rangers Saturday night at the Nassau Coliseum.

"To lose here would have been devastating," said Gilbert. "It was an advantage to play them so soon. We had an opportunity right away to redeem ourselves."

Flyers 7, Penguins 4

Ikka Sinisalo broke a tie halfway through the third period and scored the game-winning goal seven minutes later as Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh.

Dave Poulin scored three goals for the Flyers, shooting his last short-handed at 19:55 in the third period after Pittsburgh pulled goalie Denis Herron.

Sinisalo's game-winner, his fourth of the season, came on a power play off a rebound shot from Tim Kerr 11:43 into the period. His first goal, which tied the score at 4-4, came on a rebound shot off a faceoff deep in the Pittsburgh end. Ron Sutter then gave the Flyers a 6-4 lead on a breakaway steal at 19:18 before Poulin's shot capped it with his empty-netter.

Kings 4, Black Hawks 4

Los Angeles left wing Phil Sykes drilled a 15-foot wrist shot with less than four minutes remaining in regulation play, lifting the Kings into a tie with the Black Hawks.

Sykes' goal, his fifth of the year and third in three games, came after Chicago's Eddie Olczyk had given his team its first lead of the night midway in the final period with his seventh goal of the season.

Midway in the final period, Olczyk punched in a seven-footer into a virtual open net to give the Black Hawks a 4-3 advantage. The goal was set up by Ken Yaremchuk, who had gone behind the Kings' net to control the puck.

Milwaukee saves 'can't win' game

Houston, San Antonio both lose

Associated Press

Things looked pretty bleak for the Milwaukee Bucks when they trailed 127-118 with 31 seconds left against the Phoenix Suns.

But the Bucks showed Sunday night why they lead the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division by rallying to force overtime and then winning 140-138 on Jeff Lamp's two free throws with four seconds left in the extra session.

"I don't think we had much business winning this game," Lamp said. "We just kept playing hard and got some breaks at the end."

Terry Cummings sparked the incredible comeback at the end of regulation with two baskets in the last 28 seconds, including a buzzer-beating 16-foot jumper that tied the game 128-128.

MILWAUKEE COACH Don Nelson was ejected with 7:42 left in the third quarter and Phoenix leading 73-70. The Bucks were coached the rest of the game by assistant Mike Schuler, who said: "Terry's hoop was a big, big hoop. We were looking for him and he came through."

Cummings scored 13 of his team-high 28 points in the fourth period, which started with the Suns leading 96-86.

"I was supposed to receive the ball in the post, but the Phoenix defense cut us off so I took it to the right side and shot it," Cummings said of his game-tying shot. "This one is real sweet."

Milwaukee made up the nine-point deficit on Cummings' slam dunk with 29 seconds left, Lamp's three-point play with 26 seconds to go, Ricky Pierce's three-point play with 11 seconds remaining and Cummings' jumper.

"We threw the ball away and made a few mistakes there toward the end," Coach John MacLeod said of the 2-13 Suns. "We had a big lead, but we were taking our shots too fast. We should have been icing down the time. We just shot too early."

The Bucks led 138-135 late in overtime, but Walter Davis, who had a season-high 38 points for Phoenix, hit a free throw with 19 seconds left and added two more with nine seconds to go. After Lamp's decisive free throws, Rod Foster missed a desperation 15-footer at the buzzer for the Suns. Lamp finished with 23 points and Sidney Mon-

Trail Blazers 125, Rockets 118

Mychal Thompson, Jim Paxson and Kiki Vandeweghe each scored more than 20 points for Portland, and Ralph Sampson had a game to forget for Houston.

Thompson had 29 points and 13 rebounds, Paxson 28 points and Vandeweghe 22, while Sampson scored only two points and fouled out in the third period. Akeem Olajuwon led the Rockets with 37 points and 10 rebounds.

The Trail Blazers, who snapped a three-game home losing streak, led by as many as 13 points in the first half and 71-61 at halftime. The Rockets closed the gap to three points in the fourth period, but Portland held on to win.

Lakers 118, Spurs 102

Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 23 points and 13 assists, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 12 points in the third quarter as Los Angeles broke open a close game by outscoring San Antonio 37-22.

The Lakers, 13-2, led only 61-55 at halftime, but they burst to a 98-77 advantage after three periods and the Spurs got no closer than 15 points the rest of the way.

Mike Mitchell led San Antonio with 24 points, while James Worthy had 21 points and Abdul-Jabbar 18 for Los Angeles.

SuperSonics 110, Nuggets 84

Seattle administered its second straight drubbing to a Midwest Division leader and snapped first-place Denver's five-game winning streak.

The Sonics, who beat second-place Houston 122-103 on Friday night, took a 60-44 halftime lead as Tom Chambers and Danny Vranes combined for 21 points in the second period. Seattle outscored the Nuggets 38-26 in that quarter and went on to lead by as many as 33 points in the fourth period.

Rookie Xavier McDaniel led the Sonics with 22 points while Alex English had 16, less than half of his league-leading average of 32.8, to pace Denver.

Cavaliers 98, Hawks 90

Mel Turpin scored a career-high 27 points and Cleveland survived a miserable second quarter to beat Atlanta and record its first victory at home this season.

The Hawks outscored the Cavaliers, now 1-5 at home and 5-4 on the road, 28-9 to take a 49-33 lead late in the second period. Cleveland got the last four points of the quarter to trail 49-37 at halftime.

Then, with Turpin scoring 17 points in the third period, the Cavaliers outscored Atlanta 35-17 to lead 72-64 going into the final 12 minutes. The Hawks closed the gap to five points twice in the fourth quarter, but 10 points in the period by Edgar Jones kept Cleveland ahead.

Cliff Levingston led Atlanta with 17 points, while Hawks forward Dominique Wilkins had only 11, 13 under his average.

Bullets 115, Bulls 106

Jeff Ruland scored 12 of his game-high 27 points in the fourth quarter as Washington pulled away to defeat Chicago.

Ruland had five points and two assists to spark an 11-4 streak that lifted the Bullets from an 86-86 tie to a 97-90 lead with 5:39 left in the game.

Guards Jeff Malone and Gus Williams added 26 and 25 points, respectively, for Washington, which won its fourth straight at home after losing its first four games at Capital Centre.

Quintin Dailey had 27 points and Orlando Woolridge 26 for the Bulls.

Nets 118, Kings 103

After losing their first seven road games, New Jersey has righted itself during a Western trip to win three straight.

The Nets led Sacramento 63-51 at halftime, but the Kings, who hit only 33.3 percent of their field-goal attempts to 64.9 for the Nets, rallied in the second half to close the gap to 97-92. But New Jersey pulled away again as Sacramento missed its next five shots from inside 10-foot range.

Otis Birdsong led the Nets with 21 points, while Mike Woodson and Reggie Theus had 16 each for the Kings.

Meet college Final Four

Associated Press

The chase for the national championship is down to four teams and two of them could fall by the wayside before New Year's Day.

Meet college football's Final Four: —Penn State, ranked No. 1 in the last two Associated Press polls, completed an 11-0 regular season by thumping Pitt 31-0. The Nittany Lions can wrap up their second national championship in four years if they win their Orange Bowl match with ...

—Oklahoma, the preseason choice for all the marbles and No. 5 last week but certain to move up following a 27-7 pasting of second-ranked Nebraska, which earned the Sooners a trip to the Orange Bowl. Oklahoma is one of only two teams to appear in the Top Ten every week this season. The other is ...

—Iowa, which captured its first outright Big Ten championship in 27 years by trimming Minnesota 31-9. The third-ranked Hawkeyes, who will meet UCLA in the Rose Bowl, are the only one of the four contenders never to have won a national championship. The most recent newcomer to that elite group is ...

—Miami of Florida, the only team to defeat Oklahoma this season. The fourth-ranked Hurricanes, who turned back Colorado State 24-3, are seeking to become the fourth team in the last five years to win the national championship after not being ranked in the preseason poll. Miami's 1983 national champs were one of them.

Penn State and once-beaten Iowa, the first team in the school's history to win 10 games, are through until Jan. 1. Meanwhile, 9-1 Miami winds up against Notre Dame on Saturday and 8-1 Oklahoma has games remaining against Oklahoma State and Southern Methodist.

"We won't be No. 1 this week so we've got to tend to our business and win the next two weeks," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. "We have the physical ability to win, but it will be up to the coaches to see that the players are mentally ready for those games."

"The Orange Bowl is not a cinch 1-2 situation, as it would have been if Nebraska had won, so our job is to take care of our situation the next two weeks."

It remains to be seen if Oklahoma can climb to No. 2 heading into the Orange Bowl, in which case Iowa and Miami would have to root for a tie.

While Oklahoma breezed past Nebraska, Miami struggled with Colorado State, which had the Hurricanes in a 3-3 dogfight as late as the third period.

"All the distractions, all the concerns bothered us," said Coach Jimmy Johnson. "The Sugar Bowl invitation, the game with Notre Dame coming up. We'll be sharp for Notre Dame."

Nebraska settled for a Fiesta Bowl date with sixth-ranked Michigan, which defeated No. 12 Ohio State 27-17. The loss sent the Buckeyes to the Florida Citrus Bowl against No. 11 Brigham Young, a 38-28 winner over Utah.

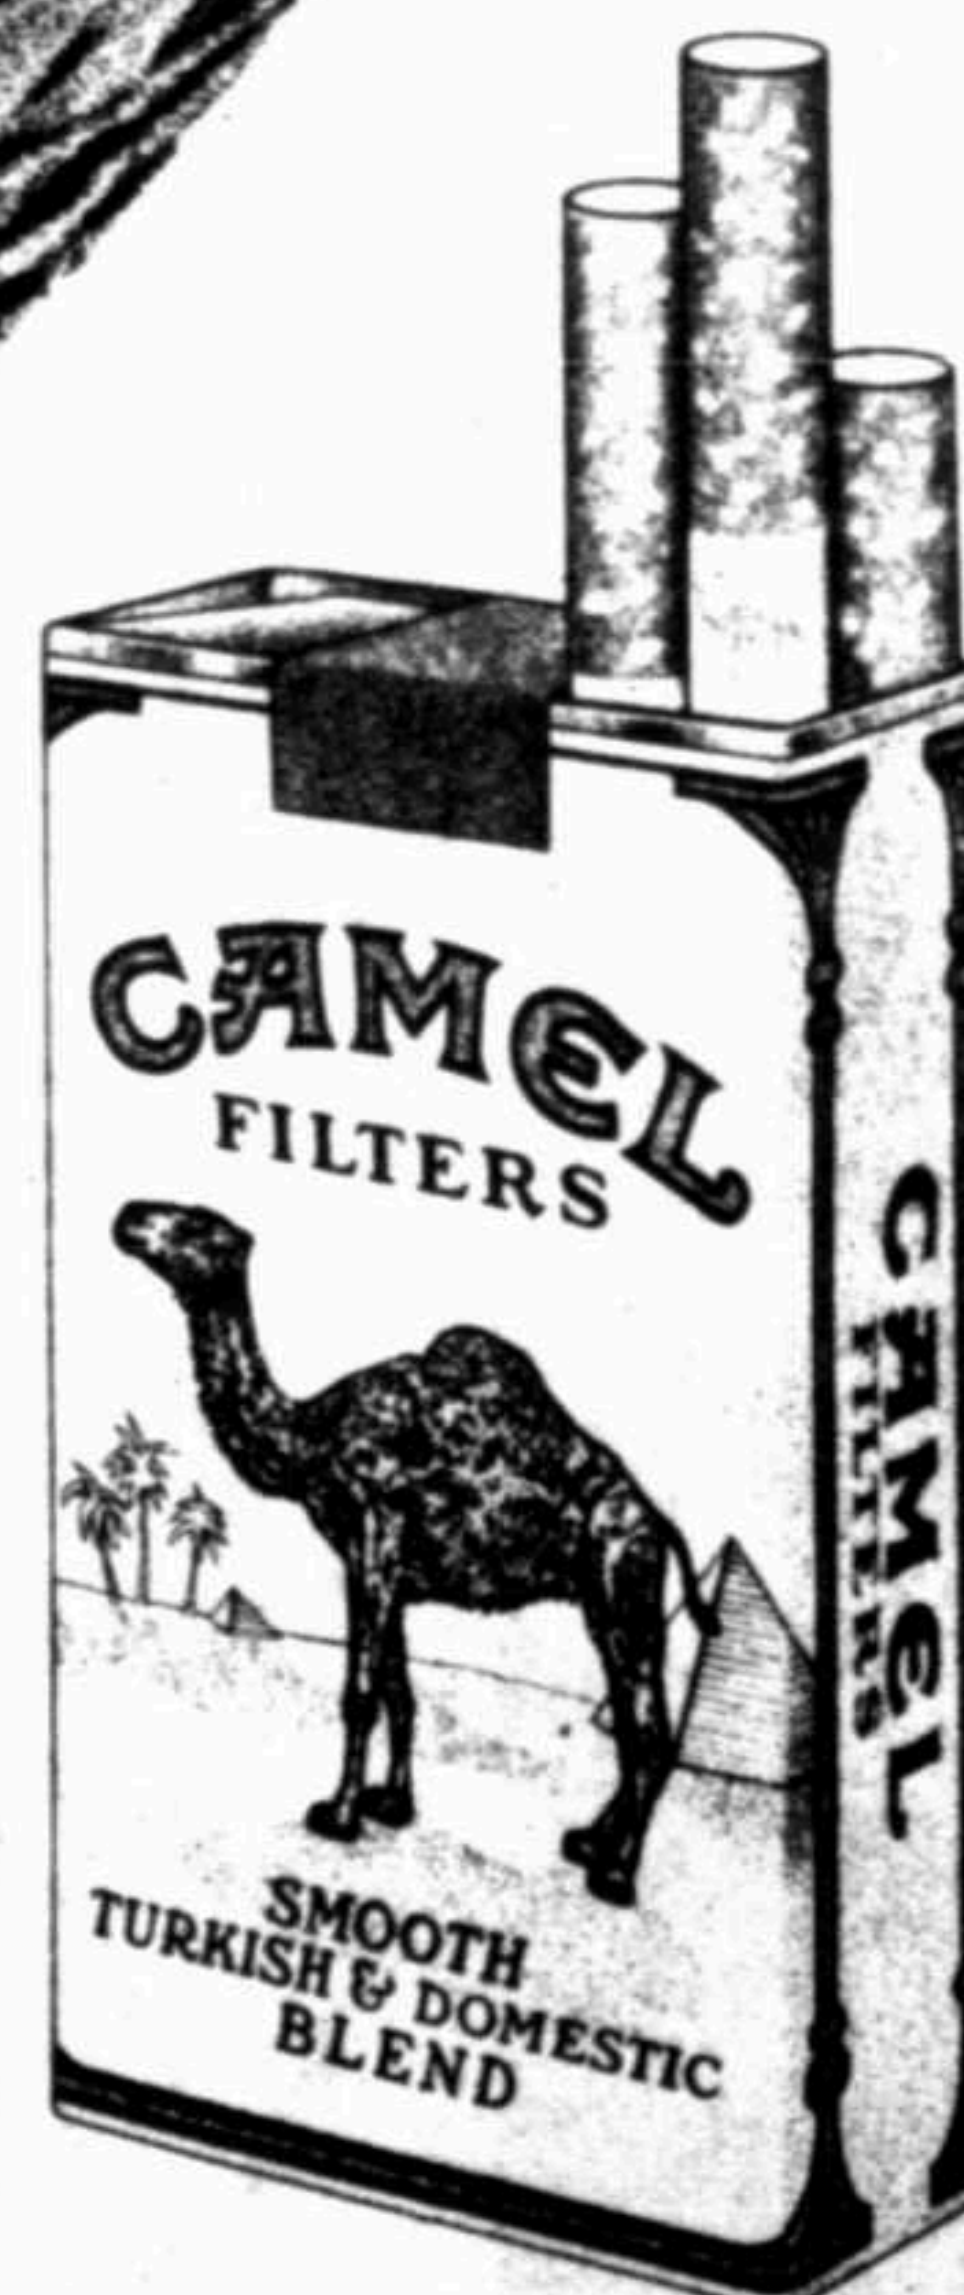

Seventh-ranked Oklahoma State blew its shot at the Orange Bowl by losing to Iowa State 15-10. The Cowboys will go to the Gator Bowl against No. 14 Florida State, which didn't play. Also idle was ninth-ranked Florida, No. 10 Auburn (Cotton Bowl) and No. 20 Georgia, which meets Arizona in the Sun Bowl.

Arizona is responsible for UCLA's being in the Rose Bowl. The eighth-ranked Bruins were upset by Southern Cal 17-13 but backed into the Rose Bowl when Arizona State lost to Arizona 16-13 and Washington was edged by Washington State 21-20.

Nutcracker

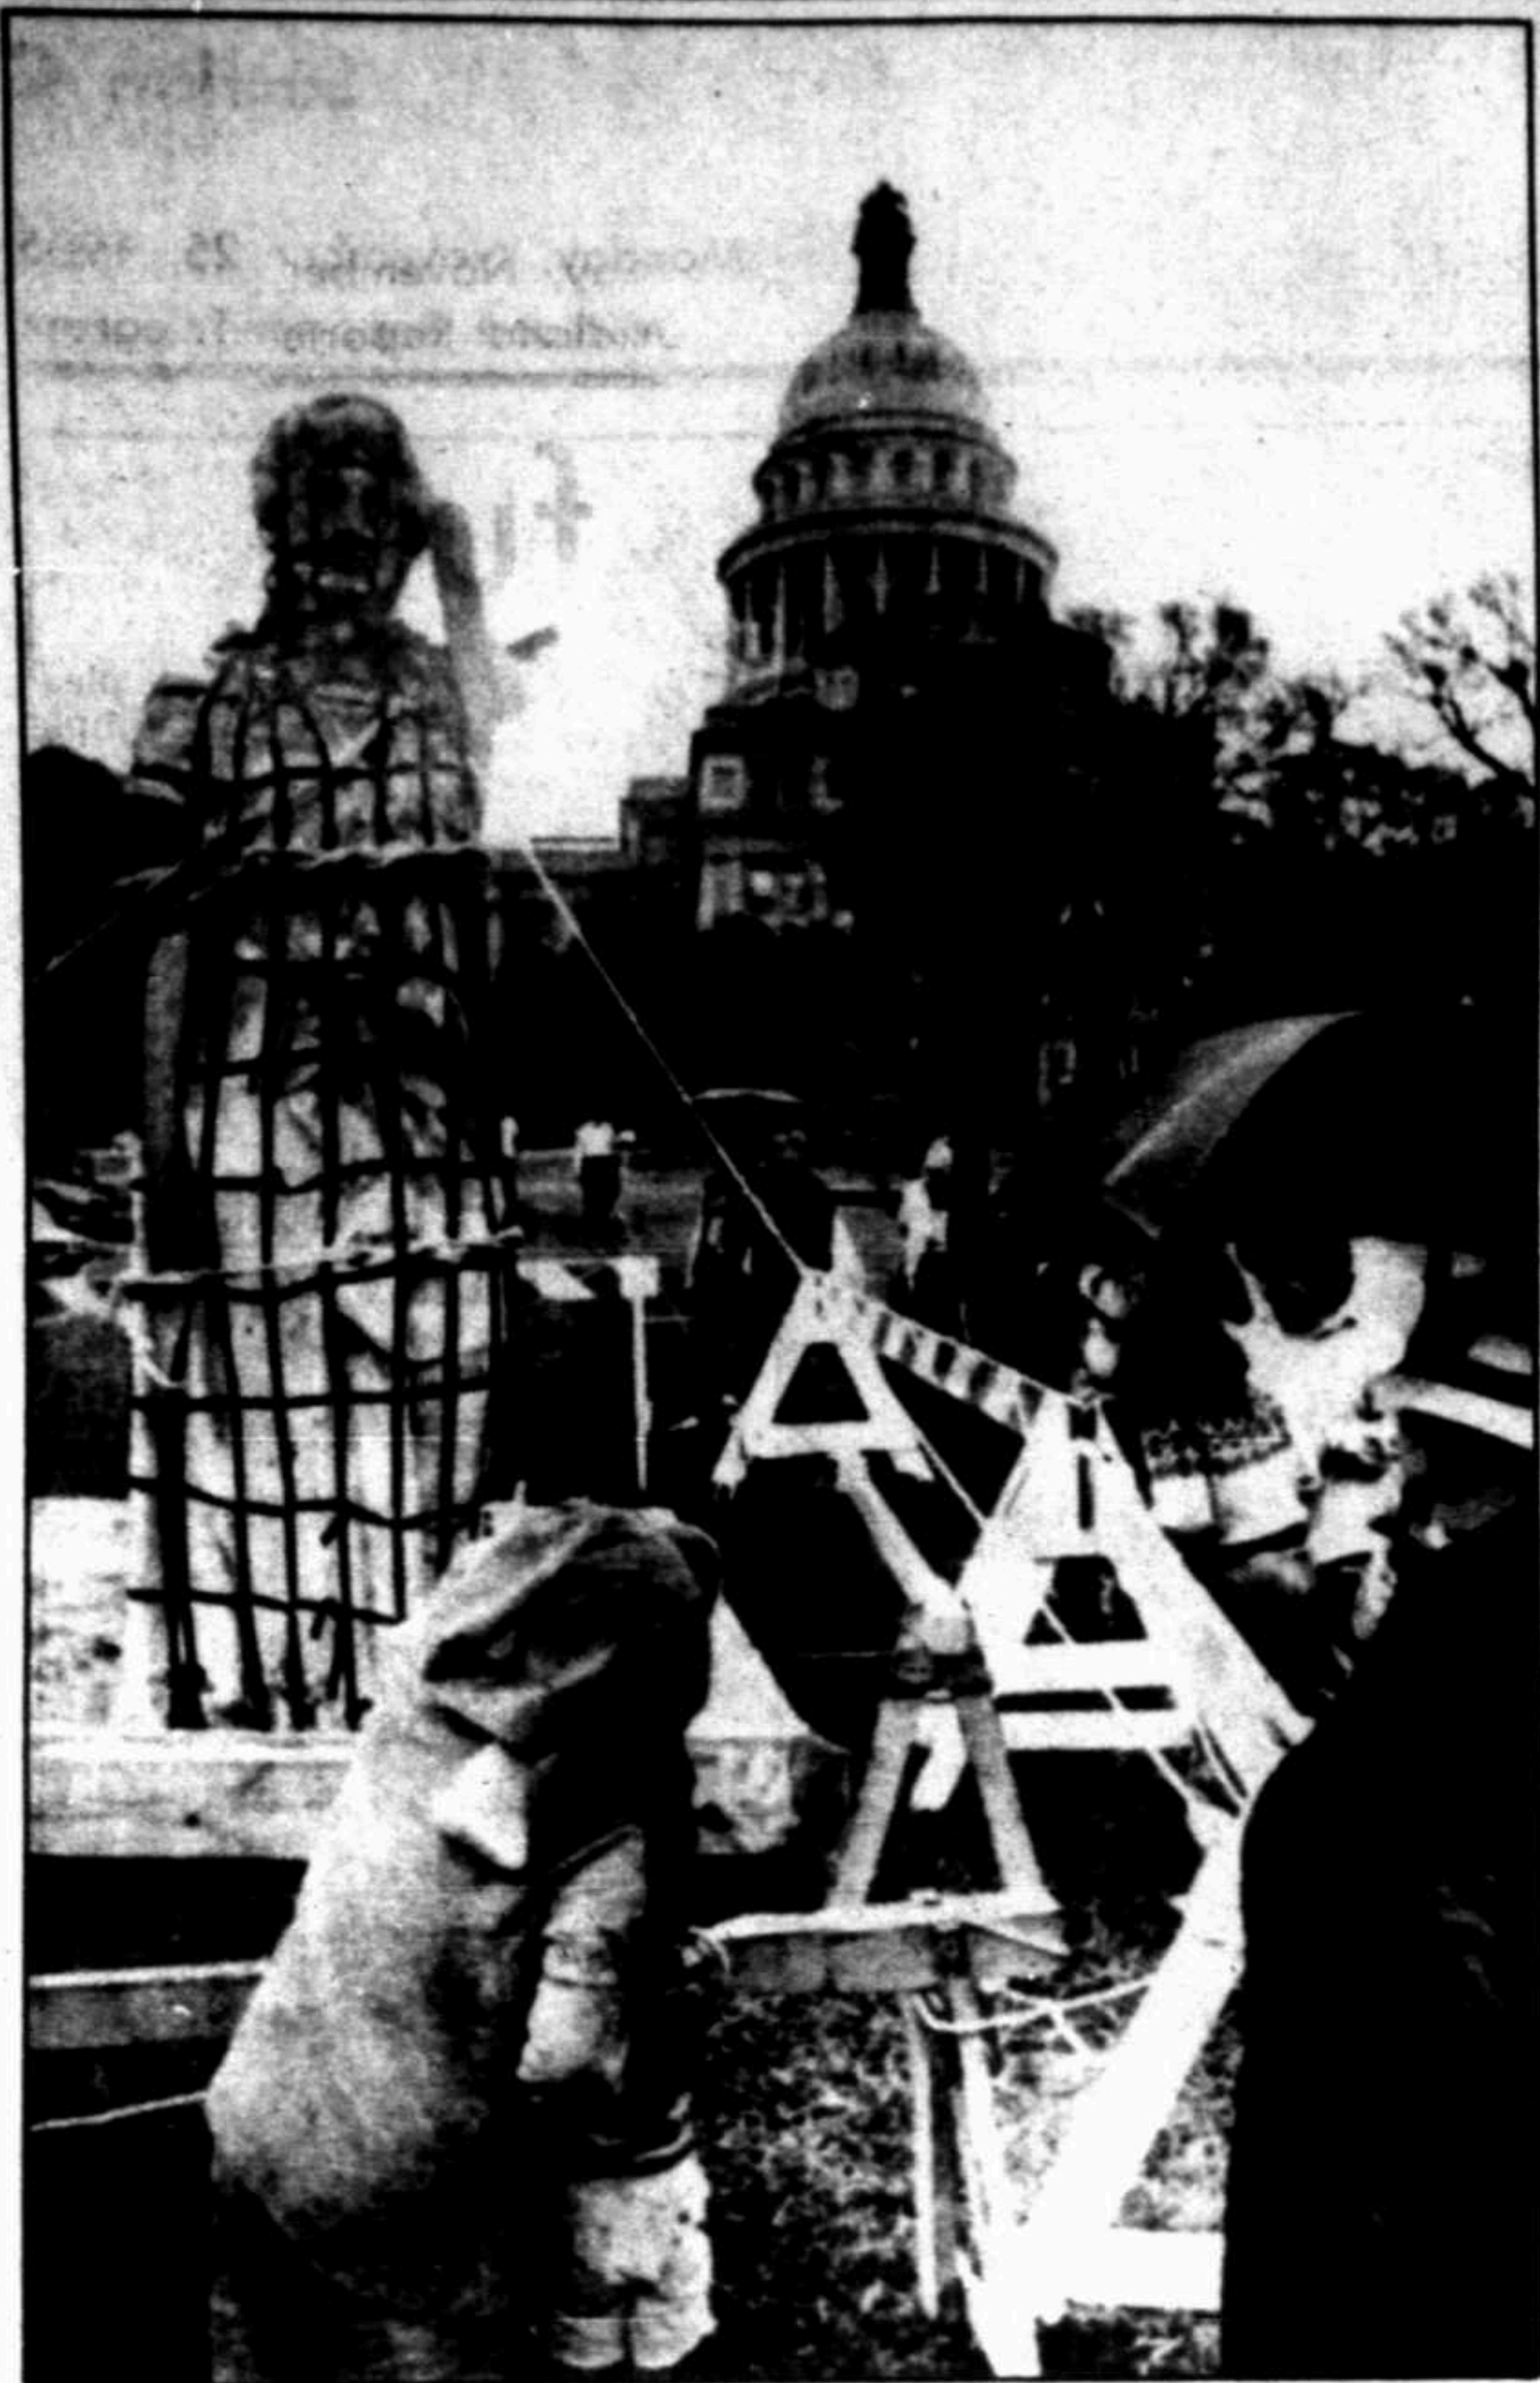

The Imperial Russian Ballet premiered the third and last of Tchaikovsky's ballets Dec. 17, 1892, at St. Petersburg's Maryinsky Theatre. From the aristocratic audience of balletomanes, the response was lukewarm. Dancers, choreographers and ballet masters began tinkering with the ballet following its initial performance, and, perhaps, less of the original choreography has survived than in any of the standard classics.

Still, the music and the dance live on, capturing the imagination of audiences young and old alike. Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo gave the New York premiere of Alexandra Fedorova's "Nutcracker" at the 41st Street Theatre Oct. 17, 1940. The first full-length American production was presented in 1944 by the San Francisco Ballet.

Today, in the United States and Canada, "The Nutcracker" has become part of Christmas. The holiday season seems incomplete for many Americans without the tale of Clara, the Nutcracker, the Land of Sweets and the Sugar Plum Fairy.

Ballet Midland has spent this fall updating its "Nutcracker" production, preparing for Tuesday's 8 p.m. curtain at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"It's our first year at the theater," said Tony Ferro, artistic director of Ballet Midland. "We're hoping for a success there."

Spectators stop for a close look at the Goddess of Liberty statue, wrapped in a netting of nylon straps, after she was lifted by helicopter Sunday morning and set on the ground for the first time since 1888.

Goddess gets her feet safely on the ground

AUSTIN (AP) — The Goddess of Liberty, back on solid ground after 97 years atop the Texas Capitol, is delighting onlookers as it stands on the Capitol lawn.

"How neat," said First Lady Linda Gale White, who checked out the 1 1/2-ton zinc statue after watching the delicate airlift that plucked it off the Capitol dome early Sunday.

"She's beautiful. I think it's great to have her safely on the ground," Gov. Mark White added.

The Goddess, which has made the Texas Capitol three feet taller than the national Capitol in Washington, was lowered to the ground at 7:53 a.m. in a rain-swept operation that took only 10 minutes.

"Just another day at the office. No problem," said Lt. Col. Jim Looney, 41, of Hitchcock, who piloted the twin-rotor CH-47 "Chinook" helicopter with CWO Craig Roberts, 38, of League City.

"I was worried because of all the rigging around there and whether it would hold, whether or not they would be able to get it loose without banging it up against the dome," White said. "The National Guard helicopter and the crew did a magnificent job."

The nearly 16-foot statue, with an uplifted Lone Star in its left hand, was erected in 1888. Exactly how it was placed atop the 311-foot dome remains a mystery.

Capitol architect Roy Graham said time and the elements so severely cracked and corroded the Goddess that it must be replaced. A duplicate will be made for the dome, while the original will be displayed in the Capitol complex, Graham said.

Preparations for Sunday's airlift took weeks.

The weather-beaten Goddess' arms were removed. Mounts were loosened. A special harness and lifting plate were built so the statue could be raised off its perch.

Under low-hanging clouds that split rain, the helicopter arrived at 7:45 a.m.

The aircraft hovered above the statue, as close as 4 to 5 feet at times, while a line was lowered to the harness.

The line was to draw the harness to the helicopter, where it would be attached to make the lift. The line was connected first at 7:48 a.m., but it snapped as the harness was being raised to the aircraft.

The harness dropped, and a crowd of some 700 spectators gasped.

"The harness got a little bit off-center. It was nothing serious," said one of two men working on the dome, metallurgist Patrick Rice of Washington University Technology Associates, consultants on the statue project.

The sling, being heavy and wet like it was, was part of the problem. They kind of had to pull away a little bit, and when they did the string broke and the sling fell. It was designed that way," added the second dome worker, Staff Sgt. Jerry Felty, 37, of Santa Fe.

At 7:50 a.m., the line and harness were connected again. It held. The harness rose to the helicopter. At 7:51 a.m., the aircraft lifted and the statue pulled free of its mountings. The spectators cheered.

Texas chemical spills releasing carcinogens

DALLAS (AP) — State records show mishaps at Texas chemical plants this year resulted in release of millions of pounds of dangerous substances, including almost 40 tons of known or suspected cancer-causing agents.

"Anything like this is of concern," said Herbert McKee, a former Texas Air Control Board member who now heads the environmental control division of the Houston Health Department.

Records examined by the Dallas Morning News showed most of the emissions occurred in the Houston area, the center of the state's huge petrochemical industry.

The chemicals ranged from more than 46 million pounds of carbon monoxide, a common air pollutant, to 45 pounds of hydrogen cyanide, which can be deadly in concentrations as low as one part per 10,000, according to the records from the Texas Air Control Board.

The newspaper reported in Sunday's editions that other chemicals including hydrochloric acid, sulfur dioxide, ammonia and chlorine escaped this year.

Texas could suffer a disastrous chemical leak such as the one at a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, that killed more than 2,000 people, or the pesticide leak at a Union Carbide plant in Institute, W. Va., in August that hospitalized more than 130, said McKee and other officials.

"I'm amazed, really, that we don't have more accidents like Bhopal or Institute," Jerry Crowder, an associate professor of environmental engineering at the University of Texas at Dallas, said. "But the potential is definitely there."

Air Control Board records show that some of the nation's largest oil and chemical companies — including units of Union Carbide, Dow Chemical Co., Shell Oil Co., Chevron Corp., Exxon Corp. and Diamond Shamrock Corp. — are among those responsible for the dangerous emissions.

The industry was defended by spokesmen for the companies and for the Chemical Manufacturer's Association. They said chemical manufacturers have an exemplary record.

"You can't eliminate the risk. Hazards are part of the chemical industry. But what we can do is reduce the risks," Ed Van Den Aemeele, Union Carbide's manager of media relations, said.

Tim Scott, spokesman for Dow Chemical USA's plant in Freeport, the largest petrochemical complex in the nation, said emissions from the plant — which included 14,000 pounds of chlorinated hydrocarbons, suspected carcinogens — "have had no impact on the safety of our workers or the environment."

It is difficult to assess the health effects of toxic air emissions in Texas, said scientists.

"The chronic effects are our biggest worry," Bob Love, chief of the Air Control Board's emissions inventory system, said. "No one knows for sure what happens when humans are exposed to small amounts of these toxic substances over a long period of time."

"We know there are effects," Love said. "How severe they are, we don't know with any certainty. Therein may lie the biggest danger."

Efforts to regulate toxic emissions are in their infancy despite the concern of state officials.

Air Control Board agents have been empowered to fine companies that violate its regulations against accidental emissions only since Sept. 1. None have been fined yet, said board officials.

Reports filed by companies on accidental emissions have been on file in a computer for only a year. The computerized system allows air control officials to track the records of individual companies, specific chemicals or clearly defined areas of the state.

"Until last November, these reports would come in, and they'd gather in a pile each year," Love said. "Then a summer temporary employee would file away as many of them as he could for three months. Then they'd collect in a pile again until the next summer."

Abandoned girl's parents sought

KERRVILLE (AP) — Officials say a search for parents of a newborn girl, abandoned in shopping cart at a local mall, is designed to speed up the adoption process, which can take months.

"Baby Doe," as she is called by hospital nurses, was scheduled to go to a foster home as officials continued searching for her parents. The child was found Thursday night, wrapped in newspapers and lying in a shopping cart at the River Hills Mall.

Officials at Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital said the 7-pound, 8-ounce infant was listed in satisfactory condition on Sunday.

Ballet Midland has all new sets, costumes and head pieces. Set design is by David Layman, Midland Community Theatre's set designer; costumes have been created by Ballet Midland volunteers directed by Karen McIntosh; and head pieces, by James Cramer. Special effects include fog machines for snow scenes and projected backdrops. Staging is by Ferro and Susan Clark, artist in education with Ballet Midland Academy and lighting by John Michael Warburton.

"We've really dressed up our production of 'Nutcracker,'" Ferro said. "I'm very excited about the sets. For example, the first act set will be on three platforms which create the intimacy of the drawing room. The fight scene is on a platform that will swirl off during the battle." He paused, then said, "I'm hoping for a Wizard of Oz effect with the house swirling away."

"I'm utilizing MCT at its advantages. Don Bachmann has been very generous with the ballet in allowing us time to rehearse and utilize the space at the theater."

The production itself is a little tighter, Ferro said, "because the students and adult dancers understand more my point of view. There's more clarity in their approach."

Adult dancers and their respective roles include guest artist Michael Job of Atlanta Ballet, the Nutcracker Cavalier; Miss Clark, the Sugar Plum Fairy; Desiree LaVigne, Dew Drop Fairy; James Cramer, snow pas de deux and Arabian; Amy Grant Wolfe, snow pas de deux and Arabian; Judy Coleman, snow pas de deux and Arabian; Brian Taylor, Soldier Doll and Arabian; Sandra Huxman, Chinese; Karen Keaton, Spanish; and Ferro, Herr Drosselmeyer and Candy Cane.

The ballet of "The Nutcracker" is based upon two long short stories, "The Nutcracker and the King of Mice" by the German fantasy writer E.T.A. Hoffmann and "The Nutcracker of Nuremberg," a French retelling of the same tale by Alexandre Dumas, pere.

In the December 1906 issue of Dance Magazine, Jack Anderson wrote a comprehensive article about the history of the ballet. In it, he explained that although Tchaikovsky's name is always associated with "Nutcracker," he was not the first to write a musical "Nutcracker." A piano suite by Carl Reinecke, which retold the adventures, achieved a certain popularity as salon music during the 1880s.

Tchaikovsky's initial reaction to writing the ballet was not unlike the opening night audience's response, unenthusiastic. However, in March of 1892, he chose to conduct excerpts from the ballet at a concert for the Russian Musical Society. The audience demanded encores of five movements.

Then, when he was visiting Paris that same year, he was charmed when he heard Auguste Musel's new invention, the celesta. He wanted to be the first to use it in Russia and gave the celesta a solo in the Sugar Plum Fairy variation.

Although the opening night audience response to his "Nutcracker" ballet was not what he had hoped for, Tchaikovsky seems to have been pleased. He called the staging "superb," and said that if there were fault to be found it was that the production was "too magnificent — the eye gets tired of so much gorgeousness."

American audiences have not tired of "Nutcracker." Perhaps, poet W.H. Auden summed up how many feel about "Nutcracker" when he called it "a festival of joy."

Focusing on 'here and now' makes life better, fuller

By RITA ROBINSON
King Features Syndicate

Have you ever been talking with a group of friends and find your mind drifting to the potted plants at home you forgot to water or to an argument you had with your mate earlier that morning?

Perhaps in the middle of a business meeting you start thinking about an important phone call you forgot to make and your mind skirts from the issues being discussed.

Before long, your mind is adrift with all sorts of problems and you're only catching bits and pieces of the conversation, adding nothing of your own.

Mind drift, or not having the ability to stay tuned to the here and now, is an occasional problem for most people, and a serious one for some. Whether it occurs infrequently or most of the time, it robs us of one of life's biggest pleasures — the ability to enjoy the moment.

And the problem may go deeper. Pat Allen, Newport, Calif., psychotherapist and frequent radio and TV talk-show guest, says that people who aren't focused on what's taking place in the present don't love themselves.

"Experience what you're experiencing at the moment, share it with someone else, and that's really living and loving," she says. "It's similar to the age-old problem of making out the grocery list while you're making love."

TUNING OUT is not only mentally unhealthy and draining, but it causes accidents, she points out. How many times have you nearly bumped into a car in front of you or run a stop sign because your thoughts were elsewhere?

Additionally, people who have a difficult time focusing on the issue at hand may be suffering mild to severe forms of depression, which have affected up to 70 percent of the population at one time or another in their lives.

Drifting out of a conversation may not seem as threatening as crashing into another car, but the outcome can be just as serious. It can be a lifelong habit that cheats one out of full participation in life, says Irwin Jay Knops, professor of psychology at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga.

Knops, who specializes in treating children with short attention spans, says people who want to break the mind-drift habit must convince themselves that it's important to stay focused, and that requires a change in attitude.

Too many people believe that what they have to contribute to our society, and this includes communicating, is unimportant.

"A person doesn't have to be a passive influence in the world," says Lewis Picher, clinical psychologist in Denver, Colo., who works with depressed patients.

"People's attitudes can pull them out of a seemingly boring situation. It's difficult to do it even when you're mildly depressed, but you can train yourself to pull out of it."

PITCHER RECALLS one woman he treated who was still hung up over a two-year-old divorce. She tried getting out with other people, but once with them her mind continually drifted to her ex-husband the bitterness she felt over the divorce.

He also worked with a woman who drifted out of what she perceived as boring conversations by turning inward and counting each breath she took.

Whether they realized it or not, the two women are living a passive life, and few seek help for what they believe is a minor problem. Who cares if they drift out of a conversation, they think.

In our fast-paced society, with its emphasis on communication, it's important to stay in tune, and it's up to the individual to find out how to do it. We need substitutes for the old hickory stick used during 19th century church services to jolt people into wakefulness when the sermons went on for hours sending parishioners into semi-dozes states.

Knops suggests a method not quite as harsh as the hickory stick, but one that he says works — bite your lip hard enough to jolt you back into the picture. Picher uses the STOP! technique.

"Simply shout loudly in your mind, 'STOP!' The word sort of jolts the consciousness and brings a person back to the here and now."

A person can use the technique to its fullest when alone. If the mind starts to drift to depressing thoughts, shout the word out loud.

There are exceptions and sometimes it may be healthy to tune out a tacky conversation. On the other hand, if the problem is frequent and persistent, something should be done about it.

LEARNING HOW to avoid mind drift, caused by depression, was a problem for Mary Natale of Claremont, Calif. But she says that learning how to overcome it helped her in the battle against cancer.

Natale, a hospice volunteer and speech instructor who was given six months to live as the result of cancer more than five years ago, says that a simple act like rubbing someone's feet can be a time of enjoyment if your mind is completely on the task at hand.

"I told this hospice patient I was working with that I was enjoying rubbing her feet, that it gave me pleasure. She asked me how something so menial could give me pleasure and I asked her to try a simple exercise.

"The woman was eating cottage cheese and pears and I told her to really concentrate on what she was eating, to think about the texture of the food, to delight in the sweetness of the pears and to really savor the taste of the cottage cheese."

"That's being in tune with what's going on now, and it adds immense pleasure to our lives," Natale says.

Not everyone is faced with a life-threatening situation like Mary's that jolts them into a deeper appreciation of their existence, but everyone can enjoy a better quality life when they're tuned to the here and now, but it takes discipline and commitment.

"Politicians are good at giving you that 'moment,' with that handshake that says, 'I'm connecting with you,'" says Knops. However, they train themselves to focus this way and seldom remember once they have moved on to the next person. But their skill at making the other person feel important enhances their popularity.

Ron J., who is successful at making friends of the opposite sex, has another form of this skill. "When we go out to dinner at a crowded restaurant, he acts as if I'm the only one in the room. That makes me feel very special."

WE'RE ALWAYS drifting into the future and into the past. We have to pay attention to the here and now, and it even helps to get angry at yourself for being a passive participant instead of an active one, according to the experts.

Enjoying the moment, despite the circumstances, affects the quality of our lives, and to do so is a conscious choice that has to be made and acted upon.

DEAR ABBY

Holiday should honor American Indians

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now that Congress has approved Mule Appreciation Day, perhaps they will consider designating a day to honor the native American Indian.

On Jan. 12, 1983, Public Law 97-445 was enacted directing President Reagan to designate May 11, 1983, as "American Indian Day." On April 14, President Reagan did so. However, that was a one-time designation only. I think there should be a national holiday every year to honor the American Indian instead of a one-day holiday.

Abby, you went to bat for a National Bachelor's Day, won't you please say a few words in behalf of the American Indian? — A PROUD SIOUX

DEAR PROUD SIOUX: A national holiday to honor our native American Indians is long overdue. If enough citizens get sufficiently fired up about it, perhaps we can send some smoke signals to Washington.

DEAR ABBY: "Ed P. in Richmond, Va." proposed we honor bachelors by having a National Bachelor's Day. And you said, "If Congress can approve Mule Appreciation Day, why not Bachelor's Day?"

Abby, what have bachelors done to deserve any form of homage or appreciation? They do not necessarily sow, nor do they reap. How can their accomplishments be compared to those of the mule?

The mule has justified its existence many times over. It has plowed our fields, provided us transportation (You wanna ride a bachelor?), pulled our borax ore, helped us through gold claims, and carried us down the steep slopes of the Grand Canyon.

I was amazed to learn that the bill was sponsored in Congress by Robert Garcia, who is not from an agricultural community — he's a Democrat from New York and lives in an apartment house in the Bronx. — BARRY V. IN CORAL SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR BARRY: Several of Rep. Garcia's constituents wrote to inform me that the Mule Appreciation

Bill was not sponsored by Garcia. I stand corrected. But since it was passed unanimously, it's safe to say that he did not oppose it.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to know how Thomas Paine made your list of famous bachelors. He was married first on Sept. 27, 1763, to Mary Lambert in Sandwich, England, who died of pneumonia while expecting his only child.

Then on March 26, 1771, Paine married Elizabeth Ollive in Lewis, England. They were subsequently divorced. — DEATRA G. ALAMEDA, CA.

DEAR DEATRA: The definition of a bachelor is "an unmarried man." At the time this survey was taken, Thomas Paine was apparently between wives, hence he was classified as a bachelor.

DEAR ABBY: Re "Bachelor's Day." It would certainly be a surprise to Andrew Carnegie's daughter, Margaret, to learn that her father was still a bachelor after marrying Louise Whitfield (Margaret's mother) in 1887. — JOHN A. CAMERON, MASSAPEQUA, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I read your column only as an appeasement to my wife of 43 years. You and Mr. Ed of Richmond may make light of Mule Appreciation Day to honor the hybrid who did man's bidding in the expansion of this country. But George Washington felt differently, no doubt, when he accepted a pair of jackasses as a gift from King Charles III on Oct. 27, 1785, and started breeding the mule.

I will gladly condone a National Wives' Day to honor women who work like a horse (especially mine), but what does a bachelor do besides avoid the responsibilities of marriage and a family?

Perhaps one day a year should be celebrated to recognize the importance of the jackass (four-legged and two), and that would cover everything. — BILL WADLEY, KIMBERLING CITY, MO.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: New technology helps you make wonderful financial strides early in 1986. A job offer comes at an opportune time. You change your specialty without breaking stride. A common-sense approach will bring you great success. Travel aids both business and romance. Follow your intuition when urged to invest in something that sounds too good to be true. Get-rich-quick schemes are not for you. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: impressionist Rich Little, actor Emlyn Williams, Chicago Cubs slugger Richie Hebner and left-hander Ron Meredith, newscaster-commentator Eric Sevareid, tennis' Wendy Turnbull, the Oakland A's Jay Howell, singer Robert Goulet, Harvard College founder John Harvard.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A most ingenious idea could fall into your lap. Make the most of an unusual opportunity. Handle your duties with precision and ease, and you will impress those who really count.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Self-discipline is the key to reaching a long-sought goal. A trim and stylish appearance helps you land a special job. Keep any diet resolutions. Romance enters an especially exciting period.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Losing your temper over a minor matter could jeopardize your plans for the future. Curb your fury. Students and parents receive good news. Truly "forgive and forget" and romance will blossom anew.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek a better understanding with a family member and life will seem more rewarding. A compliment opens your eyes to a new opportunity. Jot down clever suggestions for future use.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The secret to greater productivity is getting better organized. Personalize your approach to different players and you will win a career game handily. Mate's behavior may seem peculiar.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seeking retribution is not nearly as important as moving forward. Go after what is really vital to your future. Teamwork helps you develop a more cooperative and productive system.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A similarity you noticed earlier is important. It could be a clue to new personal or financial gains. Look at a situation from all angles before making a far-reaching decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your participation in a new project will be richly rewarded. Adopt a positive attitude when accepting a challenge. Others are counting on you to do your best.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your performance is rated by experts. Do your homework. Targeted goals can be exceeded if you buckle down to work. Good health and regular exercise go hand-in-hand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): No matter how good a program is, it can be improved. Keep an open mind. Listen to the experts. Someone's "free advice" may be worthless. Refuse to be deflected from your goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You record big gains when you take a chance on a newcomer. This person's past behavior was the result of the treatment he/she received. Good luck affects a romantic or financial situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You cannot afford to waste any time now. Concentrate on the things that really matter. Travel is best postponed. Do more research before signing a document.

A.—It looks as if this hand belongs to the enemy. Partner's two clubs does not show any particular strength—with a good hand, he would have redoubled. As a result, your ace-king of clubs might not score a single trick on defense. Jump to five clubs. Make it as difficult as possible for the opponents to judge the potential of the hand.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AJ76 ♠Q987 ♠8 ♠AKQJ

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—What can partner have for his jump to two spades? As little as six spades to the king and the ace of hearts would make the slam a virtual laydown. The key is your singleton diamond. Issue an invitation by cue-bidding three diamonds. If partner cooperates by showing the ace of hearts, bid six spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦765 ♠103 ♠AQ85 ♠AQ98

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—Don't expect much from partner—after all, his hand wasn't good enough to overcall one spade. He simply doesn't want to sell out to the opponents at too low a level, and he is bidding every point, and perhaps more, that you hold. Pass.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AKJ2 ♠A8 ♠J102 ♠AJ63

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—You have a very good hand, but nowhere to go! There is a possibility that partner has 9 points and another heart stopper, so that three no trump would be feasible. However, it is far more likely that partner's hand is considerably weaker.

Since he denied a four-card spade suit with his diamond response, we suggest you settle for the probable plus score by passing two diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦K1054 ♠AJ52 ♠Q9872

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—A difficult hand. Ideally, you would like to respond two clubs and then bid spades over partner's presumed heart rebid. However, in view of the potential misfit, that would be an overstatement of your values. Best is to respond one spade. If partner still rebids hearts, at least he has a six-card suit. And if he rebids anything else, you are perfectly placed.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦KJ10632 ♠AQ54 ♠A ♠93

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—You have a very good hand, but nowhere to go! There is a possibility that partner has 9 points and another heart stopper, so that three no trump would be feasible. However, it is far more likely that partner's hand is considerably weaker.

What do you bid now?

A.—You hand has gotten progressively worse as the auction proceeded. Partner is showing a sub-minimum two-over-one response with long, good diamonds. Although you have not yet shown your reasonable six-card spade suit, to bid the suit again now is fraught with danger. The hand is quite possibly a misfit. Pass, while you are still in a reasonable spot and not doubled.

Johnson, Eastwood among 'most-wanted divorced men'

NEW YORK (AP) — Actors Don Johnson, Clint Eastwood and Dudley Moore and singers David Bowie and Sting have been chosen by Harper's Bazaar magazine as among the 10 "most-wanted divorced men."

Others included fashion designer Calvin Klein, actor-playwright Sam Shepard, producer-director George Lucas, and actor William Hurt, with baseball player Steve Garvey the only athlete.

The magazine did not say how it chose the men. The list was published with accompanying photos in the December issue.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — As a child living in the city once described as "hell with the lid off," actress Barbara Feldon thought grass was black because of the soot spewed out by Pittsburgh's steel mills.

Still, she said, "I loved the steel mills. They were very exotic, always, the way the sky would get red at night. It was always a great adventure to come into the city."

Miss Feldon, who starred in TV's "Get Smart," now lives in New York, but she was one of several famous Pittsburgh natives who returned to their hometown for a weekend celebration of its designation as the nation's most livable city by Rand-McNally's "Places Rated" almanac.

Also among them was Dr. Jonas Salk, who developed the first polio vaccine while working here from 1947 to 1963.

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven times a bride, Elizabeth Taylor says she is sure she'll probably walk down the aisle once more but she won't rush into anything.

"I think maybe I'm finally growing up, and about time," Miss Taylor said in an interview published in the December issue of Vanity Fair. "Being alone doesn't frighten me."

"I'm being very cautious," she said, after two broken engagements. "I'm sure I will remarry once more, but only once more, and boy, it's going to be right. I'm taking no chances."

Miss Taylor, 53, who has fought alcoholism, drugs and a weight problem, said she found it difficult to talk about her problems while undergoing treatment at the Betty Ford Center for addictions in California.

"In the beginning, I felt like I was giving interviews, giving the version I would give to the press and keeping the true version to myself," she said. "And then I broke all those barriers down and told the truth. Like an onion, I was peeled down to the absolute core."

LONDON (AP) — Some British scholars say they remain skeptical over an American researcher's claim to have discovered an unknown love poem by William Shakespeare in an Oxford library.

The 90-line poem in nine stanzas that was printed in London's Sunday Times prompted John Wilders, a Shakespeare specialist of Worcester College, Oxford, to say, "It was so dreadful that at first I just read the early stanzas and then gave up."

Professor David Palmer of Manchester University said, "I don't think it adds much to Shakespeare's reputation. It is an overt display of ingenuity but it has poor poetic quality."

The poem includes such lines as, "In all duty her beauty
"Blinds me her servant for ever"

And: "Being set, lips met,
"Arms twined, and did bind my heart's treasure."

Gary Taylor, of Topeka, Kan., said he found the poem in the Bodleian Library, written by an unknown scribe in a 1630's anthology of English poetry and attributed to Shakespeare.

The volume, tied with pink ribbon, was among 5,700 manuscripts bequeathed by Richard Rawlinson, a book-collecting bishop who died in 1755.

Taylor, 32, said he ran the poem's contents through a computer to give it "every stylistic test" and checked the manuscript for possible forgery.

Countered Wilders: "I don't think computers are foolproof."

He said the poem "is so utterly conventional, the rhythm is so clumsy, the rhymes so forced. It's so typical of any number of minor Elizabethan lyric writers of the 1580's or thereabouts that I shouldn't be at all surprised if some Elizabethan specialist pops up and says 'Oh, yes, we know that poem, but it's by someone else.'"

DETROIT (AP) — If Lee Iacocca, chairman of the Chrysler Corp., throws his hat in the ring as a candidate for president of the United States in 1988, most Michigan residents say they would be surprised.

Iacocca is well known in his home state, with 79 percent of people polled by The Detroit News indicating they had heard or read about him.

But the poll published in Sunday's editions showed most respondents also were unsure if he is Republican or Democrat and doubted that he would seek the presidency.

Speculation about Iacocca's political plans usually places him in the ranks of the Democratic Party.

Of those who could identify Iacocca, 66 percent said they did not think he was seeking the presidency. Of the same group, 32 percent said they would support Iacocca if he ran, and 35 percent said they would not.

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Veteran comedian Jerry Lewis says he doesn't think much of today's young comics, mainly because they are too cerebral and because of their coarse language.

"I can buy their records and stay home," said Lewis, 59. "Some of the language they choose to use...My father used to say, 'If you have to use four-letter words, work in a brothel.'"

Lewis, here for a performance Saturday night, said he calls his style "visual hi-fi. It takes a lot more talent to do what I do. It's easy to stand up there and be cerebral. But the key requirement for a good comedian is that he has to sweat. Cool doesn't cut it."
