Regulatory Power Bill Hearing Is Attended By Many

A number of Rockport citizens attended a hearing last night on the regulatory power bill introduced last Wednesday to start a "pilot program" of regulation by the Texas Game and Fish Commission over wildlife resources in Aransas County which might have far-reaching effects along the entire coast.

They were unanimous in their support.

The opposition came from Rep. Paul Haring of Goliad, who represents Refugio County. He had letters and telegrams from Refugio County officials and citizens objecting to opening part of Copano Bay to netting.

Dr. J. E. Bauer of Refugio, president of the Copano Sportsmen's Club, presented the objections and showed a film of oil field pollution of Chiltipin Creek and Mission River, but the committee suspended its rules to give the bill a favorable report.

The measure, HB1021, would provide the first state regulatory authority in the state's tidal waters. It would exclude shrimp, covered in a separate bill in the current Legislature.

Rep. Leroy Wieting pointed out the Game and Fish Commission has a Marine Research Laboratory at Rockport in Aransas County, the only one on the coast.

"If it (state regulatory authority) can be administered anywhere, it will be in Aransas County, if it can't be done at Rockport, how can you do it anywhere on the Coast?"

"If it will work on salt water, it will be the answer on opening and closing of our salt water bays," Wieting said.

The bill calls for state regulatory authority for an experimental period of two years. If approved by the Legislature, it would take effect next Sept. 1 and would expire Sept. 1, 1965. It would thus come under legislative scrutiny in the 1965 session when the results could be evaluated.

Wieting pointed out the bill has the endorsement of sportsmen in the area, city officials and the county judge and members of the commissioners court.

The Game and Fish Commission would fix seasons on game birds, game animals and fresh and salt water fish and shell fish, excluding shrimp.

It would not apply to the Copano Bay fishing pier area where a net-free zone would be established, in which it would be illegal to use nets or seines except a minnow seine not more than 20 feet long.

The net-free zone, as defined in the bill, would be the water area of Aransas Bay within one-half mile from this line:

From Hall Point on the Lamar Peninsula, then direct to the eastern end of Goose Island, along the southern shore of Goose Island, along the causeway between Lamar Peninsula and Live Oak Peninsula, along the eastern shoreline of the Live Oak Peninsula past the town of Fulton, past Nine-Mile Point, past the town of Rockport, to a point at the east end of Tally Island.

It would include that part of Copano Bay within 1,000 feet of the causeway between Lamar Peninsula and Live Oak Peninsula.

The bill would apply to those parts of Aransas Bay, Copano Bay and Mesquite Bay lying within Aransas County, but not to the part of San Antonio Bay lying within the northeast part of Aransas County, the Aransas River where it forms the boundary with Refugio County, nor to Cedar Bayou where it forms a boundary with Calhoun County.

ARTHUR DAVIS SAYS RUMOR IS INCORRECT

Arthur "Unk" Davis, long time County Commissioner for Precinct Three, stopped by this morning to scotch a rumor.

"A lot of people have the mistaken idea that I'm not going to run for commissioner again," he said. "This is completely wrong. I intend to run next time, but so many people have asked me about it that I wish I could get them straight. When the race is made for Commissioner of Precinct Three next time, I'm going to be right in the middle of it, fighting for re-election."

Remains of Empresario's Mausoleum Found On Copano Shore

Recently Emory M. Spencer, local oil operator and realtor, made a discovery of considerable interest to area historians, when in a cut opened by an oil company bull dozer, he spotted the remains of a mausoleum in which apparently James Power, one of the early empresarios was buried.

Power, who was instrumental in bringing many Irish colonists to Texas in the early part of the 19th Century, formerly owner of a home overlooking Copano Bay, west of the present site of the causeway. This long since was away, and his mausoleum, constructed of red brick, also disappeared.

However, recent excavations along the shore of the bay left a cut, the walls of which were eroded by rain, and in which Spencer noticed the remains of some building, built of brick of a type not now known in this area.

Consultation with Attorney Hobart Huson of Refugio, premier historian of the area, disclosed the fact that these red brick were brought over from England as ballast in the holds of sailing ships that landed near where the Power house was originally situated, and were of the type the empresario used in building the mausoleum in which he was buried, behind his home.

"Anyone seeing the location can readily understand why there are no traces of the house left," Spencer said. "If there was anything left at all, it would be beneath waters of the bay, but both Mr. Huson and I are satisfied that the bricks that I found are the remains of his tomb."

Andy Everett opened up the 8th inning, getting to first on the overthrow by Austwell-Tivoli short stop and went on in to second, took third and with not out, scored the winning run on Manuel Lugo's grounder to second.

Martin Garcia was the winning pitcher, giving up six hits, eight walks and striking out 12.

The following players suited up for ACHS:

Sportsmen Hear Wildlife Director

An illustrated lecture on the Rob and Bessie Welder Wildlife Foundation and the value of conservation to the country as a whole was presented at the regular meeting of the Aransas County Sportsmen's Conservation Association by Dr. Clarence Cottam, Foundation director and international authority on wildlife, Tuesday night at the Woman's Club.

Dr. Cottam told the members of the club that the value of conservation in this country was not appreciated as it should be. Using the story of a buried civilization where conservation was neglected, he went on to say that this nation had gone through its wildlife resources probably more rapidly than any other in history.

"Three quarters of our virgin forests have been destroyed," Cottam said, "and we probably have only about a third of the grazing we once had a hundred years ago."

Last year, Cottam said, approximately $4,000,000,000 was spent by hunters and fishermen in America, and fishermen spent four billion man days at their favorite sport.

Bringing the matter into a more local focus, he estimated that during 1962, the whooping cranes were responsible for more than a million dollars spent in Texas by outsiders who came here because of the birds, and said that the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce estimated $100,000 was spent in this area by members of the Audubon Society during their annual convention last November.

He emphasized that only about four or five states still are so archaic that they control their fish and game resources by legislative action and suggested that only trained biologists operating through an efficient fish and game department were competent to handle the conservation of the wildlife in a state.

Legislation is often too outdated, he said, or too politically inspired, to be trusted for this important duty, and cited the explosion of quail in Texas several years ago as an example. If there had never been a gun fired, Cottam said, 80% of those quail would have been lost from natural causes, and went on to suggest that the best meaning of conservation was wise use of resources. Such use might require a more flexible set-up than can be obtained under rigid legislative control, rather than by giving game departments regulatory powers.

He also showed a very interesting series of slides on the work now being done at the Rob and Bessie Welder Wildlife Refuge. Cottam said that the late Rob Welder, who founded the Refuge, was convinced of the fact that decline of wild life was due to two things—too much clean farming and too much overgrazing.

Cottam said that since inception of research on the refuge by the foundation, approximately 1,300 species of plants, 400 species of birds, 50 species of reptiles and amphibians and 50 species of rodents had been collected and cataloged, and that research was continuing, both by the Refuge staff and by picked students to whom scholarships for research were given.

Water Developments May Affect Aransas County's Future

Developments that may have far reaching effects on Aransas County came this week when the San Antonio River Authority announced that SARA and the Guadalupe-Blanco River Authority have reached accord on all major points of a plan for joint development of the two basins, and that only minor details remained to be worked out.

A major part of the proposed plan is a water exchange between the two basins to provide water for the City of San Antonio from the giant Cuero Dam, which has still to be built.

The two authorities will sponsor construction of both phases of this dam, and have agreed that it is of paramount importance for the first phase to begin at the earliest possible date after federal authorization is received. Construction of the second phase will be deferred until a time mutually agreeable to both authorities.

The two authorities will split the costs and share the benefits of these dams, along with costs of maintenance and administration of the reservoirs impounded by both Cuero I and Cuero II dams.

However, the San Antonio River Authority will bear the complete cost of the pipeline necessary to transport water from Cuero to San Antonio.

Recreational facilities at the reservoirs will be under jurisdiction of GBRA, and revenues derived from use of the recreational facilities are the sole property of GBRA.

Water diverted from the Cuero reservoir or reservoirs is to be replaced by other water from a reservoir to be constructed at Goliad which, under present legislation only SARA can develop.

However, the two river authorities have agreed that if this situation can be remedied by further legislative action, a more desirable alternative is that SARA and GBRA jointly sponsor the construction of the reservoir at the earliest date financial and other arrangements can be completed. In such case, practically the same provisions of ownership and operation would apply to the Goliad Dam as those already set forth for the Cuero reservoirs.

An interesting provision in this portion of the agreement applies to the possibility of using the San Antonio River as a barge waterway. Water transported from Goliad Reservoir to a diversion point in the Guadalupe River downstream from its confluence with the San Antonio River may be used to facilitate operation of the necessary locks in the navigation system, provided that SARA makes appropriate arrangements at the last lock downstream to prevent salt water pollution of the fresher waters of the river.

Recreational facilities on the Goliad reservoir will be under the jurisdiction of SARA, and all revenues from this source are to be used by the San Antonio River Authority.

David Brune, attorney for SARA, said, in discussing the Goliad Reservoir, said this will have an ultimate yield of 400,000 acre feet, and looms as a tremendous source of water to satisfy growing water markets in Refugio and Calhoun Counties, Rockport and Aransas County, Sinton, Taft, Reynolds Metals at Ingleside, Portland and Corpus Christi, at such a time as the Lake Corpus Christi reservoir is no longer adequate for growing domestic and industrial needs.

Brune says that Corpus Christi could obtain water from the Goliad site at far less cost than it would take to enlarge the reservoir behind Wesley Seale Dam at Mathis.

All convenants with the GBRA depend upon the ultimate and timely availability to GBRA of replacement water to be impounded by the proposed Goliad Dam.

The two river authorities will share in planning and designing of all reservoirs in which they have a mutual interest, and SARA has agreed to help GBRA seek needed legislation to implement their agreement.

The two authorities will join together in seeking the earliest possible Federal authorization of the various projects covered by the agreement, and have agreed that established water rights will not be nullified or encumbered.

V. H. Brauning, general manager for SARA, and R. H. Vahrenkamp, GBRA general manager, agree that implementation of this over-all plan for development of the two river basins is, without qualification, the cornerstone for economic development in South Texas.

The development of the Guadalupe and San Antonio River basins on a coordinated basis and in a spirit of harmony and friendship is, they say, in the best interest of all the citizens of Bexar, Karnes, Wilson, Goliad, Hayes, Comal, Guadalupe, Caldwell, Gonzales, DeWitt, Victoria, Kendall, Refugio and Calhoun counties.

Water Bill Out of House Committee

A bill creating the Aransas County Water Conservation District and authorizing it to issue bonds up to $70,000 to finance a thorough study of the county water resources gained approval of the House State Affairs Committee Wednesday.

The committee approved SB299 by Sen. William Patman of Goliad. A companion bill in the house was sponsored by Rep. Leroy Wieting of Portland.

Witnesses at an earlier hearing on the proposal said Aransas County is in dire need of a water program. The proposed water district would cover all of Aransas County and would have the power of "eminent domain" limited to the district area.

The bill would have the power to issue revenue bonds.

The bill was reported to the House floor on the motion of Rep. David Crews of Conroe, member of a subcommittee which studied the measure. He said a compromise committee substitute bill was accessible to all parties interested in the water problems of Aransas County.

Crews said proponents had estimated $35,000 would cover the cost of a water study and the subcommittee wrote in the figure at $70,000 to make certain the study could be made adequately.

Two Local Men Honored By 1,000-Hour Club

Pat Greene and Bill Bardwell are two of the men in Texas to be honored as members of the Thousand-Hour Boating Club enthusiasts, it was announced here by Homer V. Faber of Marineland.

The awards were presented to the two men by Ralph Evnirude, president of the Evnirude Boating Foundation, and Faber explained that it is not given to "just anyone" but is a cherished honor.

Pat Greene is past president of the Rockport Sportsmen's Conservation Association, and before his retirement in 1958 was superintendent of schools for Aransas County.

He is known as one of the area's most ardent fishermen, and has been featured in various articles and stories for his knowledge of the fishing spots in this region. Bill Bardwell, well-known fishing guide, pioneered the use of small outboard charter boats for area fishing. His vast knowledge of the bays embraces fishing spots

CRABS GET NEW DRESS

Ron Schultz, Marine biologist stationed at Game and Fish Commission Regional Headquarters in Rockport, has reported and is using a new way to hold identification tags on blue crabs. After the crab becomes an adult and will no longer be shedding its shell periodically, a length of monel wire with a loop on each end and a plastic tag in the center is slipped over the two projecting points of his shell. The tag in the center is twisted until the wire draws tight and Mr. Crab will carry his tag until some fisherman reports where and when he caught this strangely decorated creature.

The reporting of such information will assist the biologists in determining growth rates, migration pattern, and population density.

Rockport's Helpful Citizens Complimented In Austin Man's Letter

The helpful citizens of Rockport were complimented in the following letter received by the Chamber of Commerce this week. The letter speaks for itself.

Manager
Rockport Chamber of Commerce,
Rockport Texas
Dear Sir:

My wife, my son, and I have just returned home from Rockport and Fulton where we spent the Easter vacation. On Easter Sunday morning we had unexpected car trouble about two miles out of Rockport on the Aransas Pass highway. Thereafter Rockport, might be interested. After our Volkswagen stalled help came within minutes from two young Latin American men in a blue pickup who had seen us and had retraced their way back to be of assistance. They towed us into the Humble Station across from the new post office and refused to take any remuneration for their trouble.

The owner of the Enco Humble service station proved to be the third helpful citizen of your community. He worked on our small car and even drove my wife back to Fulton; again he refused pay for his good turn.

The fourth "good Samaritan" of your city was the owner of the Surf Courts who is also a Volkswagen owner. This gentleman turned mechanic on Easter Sunday and expended two valuable hours to help another Volkswagen owner in trouble. He also refused pay for his help.

May I take this opportunity to commend you on your charming seaside city; however, the true value of your town lies in the high type of helpful citizens, of whom we apparently have met four. With this kind of helpfulness and solicitude for the tourist, I can easily imagine your area becoming one of the outstanding tourist meccas on the Gulf. We, for one family, shall visit again.

Sincerely,
K. H. Peterson

The Rockport-Fulton area 1963-64 candidate for District Governor of Texas District 2A3, Carl Osborn of Rockport has announced in the Lions Club district bulletin.

Few Lions in Texas have served the spirit of Lionism for the length of time (38 years) or in so many capacities. He has held every district and club level office up to District Governor, and has been chairman of every standing and project committee at the club level as well as many International and District committees. He has the backing not only of his own club, but that of the Fulton and Rockport Seamen's Lions Clubs, and also that of the other civic organizations of the area.

Osborn, whose many friends in all South Texas know him by the nickname of (Windy) is active in many other fields. He is the Volunteer Fire Marshal of Rockport; honorary member of the Aransas County Emergency Corps; past director of the Chamber of Commerce; Elder in the First Presbyterian Church; Boy Scout counselor; a Knight Templar; past director of Coastal Bend TB Ass'n, and a director of the Coastal Bend Rehabilitation Ass'n with a school at Cudahy Field, in Nueces County.

The improvements in the area vacation facilities guaranteed by the new Navigation District bond issue and the act of the Legislature, has encouraged him and his backers to place a bid at this convention May 30, 31, and June 1.

in Brownsville for the 2A-3 district Lions Convention in 1965, to be held in Rockport.

By 1965, this area will have something unique to offer conventions different than being cooped up in a large city. With our 2 mile natural sand beach with all picnic and bathing facilities; the longest fishing pier in the world; new luxury motels, night clubs, boating and meeting facilities, it is a natural for pleasure for whole families.

An information booth will be set up at the Brownsville convention to acquaint the visitors of our facilities and brochures will be distributed by hostesses.

In a later story, the hostesses and the hosts for the Rockport-Fulton hospitality Ass'n will be listed. The present plans are to serve boiled shrimp and coffee. Donations of frozen shrimp will gladly be accepted by the food committee as it will take over 300 pounds to serve this convention.

SOCIAL SECURITY WAGE REPORTS DUE THIS MONTH

Quarterly social security tax returns must be filed with the Director of Internal Revenue, Austin, Texas, by the end of April for the previous calendar quarter, H. M. Cleveland, Social Security Administration district manager in Corpus Christi, reminds all employers.

It is important that social security wage reports and tax returns be filed on time and that they be complete. The reports should show the correct amount of earnings paid to each worker during the quarter and his correct name and social security number. Otherwise, the worker and his family may not receive the full amount of social security insurance in the event of the worker's disability, retirement, or death.

The earnings of employees of a business must be reported each quarter regardless of the amount of wages paid. The wages of household workers must be reported by each employer who pays as much as $50 to any employee during a calendar quarter.

Employers who have questions about their wage reports, or who have need for the report forms, should get in touch with the Internal Revenue Service. Questions regarding social security benefits or other information on social security should be directed to the nearest office of the Social Security Administration.

Allen E. Thomas and Miss Carol Tulloch of Austin, were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Thomas, Easter weekend.
