Agency considers identifying lesser prairie chicken as a 'threatened' species

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Months after Permian Basin residents successfully put together a conservation effort that prevented the dunes sagebrush lizard from being listed as "endangered," a second effort is under way.

Dan Ashe, director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, announced Friday a proposal to list the lesser prairie chicken as "threatened."

"It's no surprise to anyone the lesser prairie chicken is in peril and has been for some time," Ashe said during a media call.

He said the species was identified as a candidate for listing as endangered in 1998. Since then, the agency has worked with a number of stakeholders, such as state wildlife agencies and land owners, to help protect the habitat. Progress has been made, but Friday's proposal "reflects the fact we have more to do to reverse the decline," he said.

Publication of the proposed listing in the Federal Register in the next couple of weeks will launch a 90-day public comment period.

The animal's plight, "shows the prairie ecosystem is in trouble," Ashe said.

Benjamin Tuggle, the service's southwest region director, said conservation of native prairie grasslands is necessary because they support not only the lesser prairie chicken and other species but local economies and communities. He said state and private partnerships will play a major role in conservation efforts. He said a final decision will be announced Sept. 30.

The lesser prairie chicken's habitat covers five states: Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and Kansas.

VETERANS REMEMBERED

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Sandy Dunlap, Ron Masters, Krista Fowler and Georgia Scott, with Patriot Guard Riders and Midland VFW Post 4149, place crosses at the railroad crossing where a train hit a Show of Support parade float on Nov. 15. Four veterans died, and 16 other people were injured. Dunlap, a member of the Patriot Guard, had made wooden crosses the night of the crash and brought them to the site on Nov. 17. She then took the crosses home to wood-burn the names of those killed and their respective military branches. Scott, also a member of Patriot Guard Riders, said leaving the crosses at the site is a way the veterans' organizations are helping to support those killed and their families. The VFW post is hosting a low-rider car show, jam session and cook-off sponsored by Baker-Hughes to raise donations for those injured and killed. The fundraiser is noon to midnight Dec. 15 at 409 Veterans Airpark Lane. All of the funds raised will be donated to the families of the 24 veterans who were in Midland for the parade and Hunt for Heroes Banquet, Scott said. For more information, call 254-7542.

STAAR results won't count toward students' grades

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas high school students are getting a reprieve for a second consecutive year on a controversial requirement that would have made the state's new and more difficult standardized tests count toward 15 percent of their final grades in key courses.

Education Commissioner Michael Williams announced Friday he was continuing the suspension of the rule at least until the 2013-2014 school year.

The move comes a day after Gov. Rick Perry, who appointed Williams in August, suggested ending the practice of including the test in final grades.

Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst and Sen. Dan Patrick, a tea party favorite who chairs the chamber's public education committee, also wrote Williams a letter backing a proposal to leave application of the so-called "15 percent rule" up to local school districts.

Williams' announcement at an Austin conference of experts on standardized testing caused the hundreds packed into a hotel ballroom to rise to their feet and applaud.

The state's highest-ranking public-education official then held a copy of his

Ski resorts, retailers hit by warm weather

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

A warmer November has affected the ski industry on both the retail and resort fronts.

Midlander Scott Ragan, owner of Ski Skeller, said Thanksgiving has traditionally been the day when ski resorts begin operating.

But this year, resorts remain closed because of high temperatures and no snow.

According to onthesnow.com, only one out of nine ski resorts in New Mexico was open as of Friday.

The weather is also causing ski equipment to remain on the shelves at Ski Skeller.

"The ski business is our only business," Ragan said.

He said customers wait to buy equipment until ski resorts, such as Ski Apache, open.

Ski Apache in Ruidoso, N.M., will open Friday when the forecast calls for low temperatures to hit the Sacramento Mountains area as well as Midland.

The Friday opening will be for two beginner lifts; the other lifts will depend on weather, said Ski Apache spokesperson Dorsey Grover.

Grover said the resort tries to stay open from Thanksgiving to Easter, but now operations are dependent on low temperatures keeping snow frozen.

"We open as soon as we can," Grover said. "We can only pray for snow."

According to the National Weather Service Forecast Office in Midland, a cold front is expected to bring snow to Ski Apache and other Rocky Mountain-area ski resorts as early as Wednesday.

Kurt Kotenberg, a forecaster for the National Weather Service, said higher temperatures are trending across the

AUSTIN

Governor's Mansion honors military

The Texas Governor's Mansion has a military theme with holiday decorations saluting the nation's armed forces.

Gov. Rick Perry said Friday that each public room in the historic structure in Austin honors a different service branch.

The Army is featured in the library. Marines and Navy are honored in the state dining room. The Air Force is recognized in the conservatory. Christmas decorations in the entry hall salute the Coast Guard.

Stars placed in the garland on the staircase represent the 72 Texans who have received the Medal of Honor.

Perry in July announced the mansion was fully restored after renovations that began in 2007 and then a 2008 fire blamed on an unidentified arsonist.

The mansion has been the official residence of Texas governors and their families since 1856.

Driver dies in fiery gas tanker wreck

Investigators say a gasoline tanker truck driver was killed in a fiery Southeast Texas wreck.

Tyler Cunty Sheriff David Hennigan told KFDM-TV that the fatal accident happened Friday morning on Highway 69 in Hillister. The Department of Public Safety identified the driver as 58-year-old Bertis Wood of Jasper.

Authorities did not know late Friday what caused the rig to overturn and start on fire.

The crash forced traffic to be diverted from the roadway in Hillister, a town of about 250 located 100 miles northeast of Houston.

Lubbock woman's murderer dies in prison

Texas prison officials say a man serving a life term for the 2006 killing of a Lubbock State School co-worker has died of apparent natural causes.

Jason Clark, of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said Friday that 62-year-old Mickey Patterson died Wednesday in the infirmary at the Clements Unit in Amarillo.

Patterson was convicted last year of murder in the August 2006 death of Kay Harrelson. He was also charged with killing another co-worker, Peggy Merimon, but wasn't tried in that case.

Harrelson's body was found in a ditch near Shallowater less than two weeks after the trio had lunch together and she disappeared.

Patterson was arrested in 2009 in Bend, Ore.

Merimon's remains were located in 2010 about 13 miles from where Harrelson's body was recovered.

Stamp to honor Lady Bird Johnson

The smiling face of Lady Bird Johnson will be on a U.S. postage stamp as the U.S. Postal Service dedicated a souvenir Forever stamp to the former first lady in Austin.

The Friday dedication took place at the Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center of the University of Texas at Austin. The dedication came on the 47th anniversary of the signing of legislation Johnson promoted to beautify America's highways.

The souvenir sheets consist of six stamps, each with a quote from Johnson on her belief in environmental protection of the nation's countryside.

Johnson was first lady from Nov. 22, 1963, to Jan. 20, 1969, during the administration of her husband, Lyndon B. Johnson.

Portions of Texas back in severe drought

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A dry fall that is on track to making the record books has sent portions of Texas, including Houston and Fort Worth, back into severe drought, raising concerns about wildfires and the health of wheat crops and tree farms, climatologists said Thursday.

September and November could be the driest of those months since 1950 and among the top five driest on record, State Climatologist John Nielsen-Gammon said. And not much more rain is expected this winter or spring since the El Nino pattern meteorologists had counted on for some moisture fizzled out almost before it began.

El Nino is characterized by unusually warm temperatures in the equatorial Pacific Ocean. La Nina comes from unusually cool temperatures there. El Nino usually brings rain to Texas and dryer conditions to the North. La Nina typically does the opposite.

While Texas had largely been spared by the devastating drought that has parched much of the Midwest and areas in the South, it never fully recovered from the historic dry spell in 2011 that forced ranchers to sell off their cattle, made hay prices skyrocket, turned reservoirs into muddy puddles and prevented rice farmers in South Texas from getting enough water to irrigate their fields. Now, the lack of rain again puts the state in a perilous situation.

"Normally, by this time in most of the state, the ground is taking up a lot of moisture and the temperatures are cool enough for the ground to stay moist for most of the winter," Nielsen-Gammon said. "But in a lot of parts of the state, it simply hasn't rained much in the past couple of months, so things are as dry as they are during the summer."

"We climbed up on the fence, but we never really got off the fence. It's a very fast tumble off of recovery back into the depths of drought."

Mark Svoboda, climatologist

As a result, reservoirs are not refilling, and some are even dropping, which is unusual for winter in Texas, Nielsen-Gammon added.

The lingering impacts of 2011, when Texas endured the worst one-year drought in state history, are part of the problem, said Mark Svoboda, a climatologist at the National Drought Mitigation Center at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

"We climbed up on the fence, but we never really got off the fence," he said of the drought. "It's a very fast tumble off of recovery back into the depths of drought."

All it took was a couple of months of below average rainfall for the U.S. Drought Monitor map Svoboda helps put together each week to begin registering significant problems for a state that is the nation's No. 1 cattle producer and a significant agricultural machine.

The latest map released Thursday, shows nearly 55 percent of Texas in severe drought, up from just over 40 percent last week. A severe drought is the third of five stages of drought reported by the Drought Monitor.

About 24.5 percent of Texas, including Houston and Fort Worth, is now in an extreme drought, the fourth stage, up from 23 percent last week. Overall, more than 80 percent of the state is in some form of drought, a 5 percent increase from a week ago.

"We keep waiting for a decent rainstorm to appear in the forecast, but it doesn't look like there's any in the next week," Nielsen-Gammon, the state climatologist, said.

Food prices are going to be impacted by the drought in Texas as it combines with the problems caused by the widespread dry spell plaguing the Midwest, Central Plains and the South, Svoboda added. Beef prices could rise to $6.75 a pound by next month, and the price of hay — crucial forage for the cattle industry — is skyrocketing. Concern among Texas planners that water may be a problem in 2013 is also justified, he said.

Denise Gutzmer, a drought impact specialist at the National Drought Mitigation Center, said winter wheat crops are suffering in Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska, and outright dying in parts of the Texas Panhandle. And ranchers in Texas who started restocking their cattle herds after getting some spring and summer rains are rethinking that move.

"Now they're looking out the windows and their pastures are brown and they're starting to destock again," Gutzmer said.

As the drought spreads through Texas, and continues across other parts of the United States, it feeds on itself and recovery becomes more difficult and distant, Svoboda added. There is no rain, and the soil is so dry, moisture doesn't rise from it, further hindering cloud formation.

"This drought is so large and so intense the spatial footprint of it won't change markedly between now and February," he said.

Order lets Boy Scouts keep new abuse files private

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Boy Scouts of America will not immediately have to turn over 27 years of so-called "perversion files" the group keeps on sexual abuse complaints against adults involved in the organization, a Texas appeal court has ruled.

A former scout who says he was sexually assaulted by a now-imprisoned former scoutmaster has filed suit in San Antonio against the national Boy Scouts and the local group in San Antonio. His attorneys want the Boy Scouts of America to turn over internal files on scout leaders dating from 1985 to last year.

State District Judge Martha Tanner ruled in August that the Scouts would have to release those files to the teenager's attorneys. The 4th Texas Court of Appeals on Thursday granted the Scouts' request to stay that portion of her order.

The public release in October of files dating from 1959 to 1985 revealed a cover-up of decades of sexual abuse, as Scout leadership sought to shield scoutmasters and other adult leaders from criminal charges. The national Scouts organization, based in the Dallas suburb of Irving, has said it now requires any suspicion of abuse to be reported to law enforcement.

Attorneys for the former scout are expected to file a response to the appeals court sometime next week.

Paul Mones, a Portland, Ore., attorney who is one of the lawyers representing the teen, said on Friday that he didn't know what the more recent files might contain.

"We do know, as does the rest of the United States, what's contained in 1959 to 1985," Mones said. "So over the last 27 years, obviously that's something that we believe ... will be important."

Kelly Clark, who worked with Mones on a successful $20 million lawsuit against the Scouts in Portland, said he thought the newer files could show whether the national Scouts group had kept its promise to enact measures that better protect children.

Among other measures, the Scouts now prohibit one-on-one activities between adult and youth and require criminal background checks. Also, the handbook issued to new Scouts will include an insert for parents about child protection.

Adults are told to report any suspected child abuse to authorities, even if doing so would not be required by state law.

Clark said he wanted to know if the number of reported abuse incidents had declined in the last few decades.

Boy Scouts spokesman Deron Smith said in a statement that the files are maintained "solely to help our organization remove and keep out individuals deemed to be unfit leaders."

The teen's lawsuit, filed last year, accuses the national and San Antonio Scouts of not doing enough to keep him safe.

The teen alleges he was abused for two years by a former assistant scoutmaster, James Hiatt, who is serving multiple 60-year sentences for four counts of aggravated sexual assault with a child and five counts of indecency with a child. The Associated Press typically does not identify victims of sexual assault.

Lawmakers want answers on faulty grant

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Key lawmakers demanded answers Friday on why Texas' troubled $3 billion cancer-fighting agency gave $11 million in taxpayer funds to a biomedical company without scrutinizing the merits of the proposal.

It's the second time this year the Cancer Prevention and Research Institute of Texas has acknowledged that a project wasn't fully vetted before receiving a lucrative award. But the agency's improper grant to Peloton Therapeutics Inc., which was revealed Thursday, has reaped the most publicly stated concerns yet from state leaders.

CPRIT has doled out more than $700 million in taxpayer funds, making the state-run agency home to the nation's largest pot of cancer research dollars next to the federal National Institutes of Health.

The two Republicans who filed the bill creating the groundbreaking agency in 2007, state Sen. Jane Nelson and Rep. Jim Keffer, said they want a written explanation as to how Peloton's application was approved despite never going through the required peer-review process.

"CPRIT cannot succeed in its effort to fight cancer without the public's trust, and right now that trust is in serious jeopardy," the lawmakers wrote in a joint letter sent to the agency Friday. They asked the institute for a "prompt" response.

Gov. Rick Perry's office echoed their letter. Josh Havens, a Perry spokesman, said the governor expects the agency to apply rigorous review standards and that lawmakers and the public "deserve to have the full background of this situation."

Former Indian prime minister I.K. Gujral dies

Associated Press

NEW DELHI — Former Indian Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral, who gave a new impetus to improving India's relations with its neighbors during a term in office that lasted less than a year, died Friday after a yearlong illness. He was 92.

Home Minister Sushil Kumar Shinde said Gujral died in a hospital near New Delhi, where he was admitted 10 days ago with a lung infection.

Gujral joined India's freedom movement in the early 1940s and was imprisoned in 1942 for opposing British colonial rule.

He spent many years in the Congress party and was a minister under Indira Gandhi's Cabinet. Later, he was India's ambassador to what was then the Soviet Union. An erudite and well-read leader, Gujral quit the Congress party in the mid-1980s to join the Janata Dal, or the Peoples' party.

Gujral became India's 12th prime minister when he headed a shaky coalition government in 1997.

Ben Shepperd, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, estimated that a listing could impact as much as 18 million acres in oil-and-gas-producing regions in the Permian Basin, Texas Panhandle, western Oklahoma, western Kansas and southeastern Colorado. In addition to oil and gas operations, he said that area also hosts wind energy, transmission lines, agriculture and ranching operations.

"If the lesser prairie chicken is listed, as would have been the case with the lizard, we would have to go to Fish and Wildlife to get permits to 'take' the birds or habitat, and that could take 18 months to three years, delaying or preventing operations," Shepherd said.

He said industry associations would take a two-pronged approach to the issue: one would be acceleration of conservation efforts, and the second would be pointing out that best available science shows the lesser prairie chicken does not merit listing.

A recent regionwide aerial survey undertaken by the five states found more birds and nesting areas than anticipated, Shepperd said.

Any voluntary conservation effort should be overseen by the state wildlife agencies of the states impacted because they have the biological and range management expertise necessary, he said.

"We don't think the feds need to take action when the states have been doing a good job for decades," he said.

Shepperd said working with the Fish and Wildlife Service agency showed "they have a willingness to hear our concerns and evaluate the scientific evidence."

Ashe expressed hope that a voluntary conservation effort similar to that for the sand dunes lizard could be put together before a final decision is made.

"Our goal is to work with partners before the species is listed," he said. "Today I would view as a call for action. I am optimistic we can find a way to make a difference. We want the lesser prairie chicken to coexist with those who make their living from the land."

"We don't think the feds need to take action when the states have been doing a good job for decades."

Ben Shepherd, Permian Basin Petroleum Association president

"The lesser prairie chicken will disappear forever without the protection of the Endangered Species Act.

Jay Lininger, Center for Biological Diversity ecologist

"Our goal is to work with partners before the species is listed ... I am optimisic we can find a way to make a difference.

Dan Ashe, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service director

The Environmental Defense Fund echoed Ashe's sentiment, proposing a "habitat exchange" between energy companies and ranchers to protect the species. EDF is working with landowners, developers and energy companies to design a new, cooperative approach to conservation that promises ample habitat protection at low cost — potentially enough habitat to reverse dwindling populations and avert a final listing under the law. This approach, known as Wildlife Habitat Exchanges, enlists private landowners, such as ranchers and farmers, to create and maintain vital habitat, which energy companies and other developers can in turn use to meet their obligations to protect wildlife.

"There's an energy boom in the West, and Wildlife Habitat Exchanges allow for thoughtful, well-planned mitigation strategies that will result in measurable conservation benefits for wildlife species like the lesser prairie chicken," said Eric Holst, senior director of EDF's Working Lands program.

This cooperative approach is essential to achieving long-term results, as 90 percent of the bird's habitat exists on private lands. Many states, farmers and ranchers are already throwing their weight behind the model. Texas used it to protect the golden cheeked warbler, and the Texas and Kansas farm bureaus want to see it used for the lesser prairie chicken.

Environmental groups praised the decision, calling the lesser prairie chicken among the most imperiled on the federal candidate list.

"Listing cannot come soon enough for the lesser prairie chicken," said Taylor Jones, an endangered species advocate with WildEarth Guardians. "Threats are increasing, the species' range is contracting, and current conservation efforts are too little, too late to conserve the species."

"The lesser prairie chicken will disappear forever without the protection of the Endangered Species Act," said Jay Lininger, an ecologist with the Center for Biological Diversity. "Voluntary measures that preserve a little remaining habitat may be more convenient for industry, but they won't save the species from extinction."

Today in history

Today is Saturday, Dec. 1, the 336th day of 2012. There are 30 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On Dec. 1, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln sent his Second Annual Message to Congress, which was read aloud by the secretary of the Senate. In it, Lincoln called for the abolition of slavery, saying that "in giving freedom to the slave, we assure freedom to the free," and toward the end of his message, wrote: "Fellow citizens, we can not escape history. We of this Congress and this Administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves."

On this date:

In 1955, Rosa Parks, a black seamstress, was arrested after refusing to give up her seat to a white man on a Montgomery, Ala., city bus; the incident sparked a year-long boycott of the buses by blacks.

In 1969, the U.S. government held its first draft lottery since World War II.

In 1992, in Mineola, N.Y., Amy Fisher was sentenced to five to 15 years in prison for shooting and seriously wounding Mary Jo Buttafuoco. (Fisher served seven years.)

order over his head and grinned while many in the room snapped pictures.

"Applause always makes you feel good," Williams joked to reporters moments later. "But we're not trying to pat ourselves on the back. We're trying to do what we think is the right thing for kids and moms and dads, and I think, in that regard, it is the right decision."

Federal data released this week showed that Texas tied with five other states for the third-highest on-time graduation rate in the nation for the Class of 2011 — though the high rank was due in part to a change in the way states report their data.

The 15 percent rule has been backed by statewide business groups who say Texas is not producing students who are prepared for today's high-tech workforce and that cementing standardized test results in their grades is the only way to ensure kids will take the test seriously.

But lowering the stakes when it comes to how students fare on the exams — known as the State of Texas Assessments of Academic Readiness, or STAAR — has bipartisan support in the state Legislature. Parents have backed the idea, too, afraid that lower test scores could hurt their kids' grades enough that they won't be accepted by top colleges.

Created in 2009 and implemented last school year, STAAR replaced the much-maligned Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills exam.

Amid a firestorm of controversy last year, Williams' predecessor gave high school students a one-year break from the requirement this school year after more than 50 percent of freshmen failed the STAAR writing exam.

Friday's deferral gets them off the hook this year, too. Students still must take the test and score well enough in order to graduate down the road.

Williams' decision — backed by Perry, Dewhurst and Patrick — gives individual school districts the option of waiving the 15 percent rule for their students, but more than 1,100 out of the roughly 1,200 statewide districts did so last year.

Williams said he expects at least that many to do so again.

Midland Memorial shows media, public new tower

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Midland Memorial Hospital staff have been busy putting the final touches on its new Scharbauer Patient Tower.

Staff members on Friday could be seen installing new lights, mopping floors and hanging artwork in preparation of the building's Dec. 19 opening.

Russell Meyers, president and CEO, said there will be multiple tours this weekend, including an open house for the public from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

"The public donated about $60 million for the tower," Meyers said. "This is the public's hospital; this is our hospital."

Members of the media toured the nine-story building Friday and saw the many new improvements that Meyers said are family-oriented.

A nursery for 16 newborns could be seen near the fourth-floor front elevators.

The in-patient rooms are larger than the old rooms and feature a couch that can fold out into a bed.

"In the old days, a family member would have to bring their own bedding or sleep on a chair," said spokeswoman Iris Foster.

Patients can choose to have room service and access to the Internet, TV controls and the phone next to their beds.

"The rooms have all the comforts of home," she said.

Check it out

Midland Memorial Hospital will hold an open house from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. The public is welcome and may visit any floor. There will also be an open house on Monday for expectant parents. To register, visit midland-memorial.com.

See more pictures from inside the tower at www.mywesttexas.com.

Another new addition is a food court that will feature a Starbucks service counter and a cafeteria-style serving area that will feature both healthy and unhealthy options. Foster said the healthier options will cost less.

The tour also included a stop at the garden and fountain at the tower's front entrance. Also in front is a stone wall that lists some of the tower's donors.

Patients will not be transferred into the tower until 6 a.m. Dec. 19, said Marcy Madrid, director of marketing and media relations.

Expectant mothers will be the first to transfer, followed by pediatric patients, she said.

"The move-in won't affect operations," Madrid said. "We planned a very structured and organized move-in."

A truck traveling east on Interstate 20 caught on fire after striking a guardrail Friday. The driver was able to escape from the vehicle.

Tractor-trailer catches on fire after hitting guardrail

From staff reports

A tractor-trailer caught on fire early Friday afternoon near the Rankin Highway and Interstate 20 intersection, according to Midland's interim public information officer Ryan Stout.

Kul Deep Singh, 38, was driving eastbound on I-20 about 1 p.m. and swerved into the guardrail near the Rankin Highway overpass. The guardrail then punctured the tractor-trailer's diesel tank, Stout said.

A combination of the leaking diesel on the road, friction from the tires on the road and sparks coming from the tractor-trailer's contact with the guardrail caused a fire in the tractor-trailer's diesel tank.

Singh then swerved further to the right off the highway until the vehicle stopped to the north of the I-20 service road. By then, the fire grew and charred the entire left side of the tractor-trailer, Stout said.

Singh wasn't injured and no other vehicles were involved.

The Texas Department of Transportation and the Midland police and fire departments were present at the scene.

A bystander, Gabriel Rios, said he could see a cloud of smoke from the Farm-to-Market Road 1788 and I-20 intersection.

Marvin Flores, who witnessed the fire after the vehicle had stopped, said the fire encompassed the entire length of the semi-truck.

"He's a very lucky driver," Flores said.

Colorado ski resorts unveil changes in 2013

By Pam LeBlanc
Cox Newspapers

Somewhere in Colorado, the snowflakes are flying.

If the thought of schussing down a mountain on a pair of skis or tramping through a glistening white landscape on snow shoes makes you giddy, start planning now. All across ski country, resorts are boasting about new ski runs, new terrain parks and new restaurants. We checked in with as many as we could, and sifted through the news to bring you the highlights.

Among the most exciting changes? Runs that require rappelling to reach, free skiing for kids and a program that lets you test your skills against those of World Champion skier Lindsey Vonn. Here's what else we uncovered:

Breckenridge Resort

Breckenridge celebrates its 50th annual Ullr Fest, a winter festival that features revelers in Viking helmets, a frying pan-flinging competition, a massive parade and hot tubs gliding down Main Street. It all happens Jan. 6-12.

Vail Mountain

Vail marks its 50th birthday this year, too, and debuts a speedy new heated gondola (with WiFi, no less) to whisk guests to mid-mountain. It also unveils a new edition of EpicMix, a social media application that automatically tracks vertical feet at Vail, Beaver Creek Resort, Breckenridge and Keystone Resort. Starting this year it also lets you see how you stack up against World Champion skier Lindsey Vonn on designated race courses.

Copper Mountain

Forget swinging through jungle tree tops. Copper unveils the Alpine Rush zip line, where two guests can soar side-by-side above an ice skating rink at speeds of up to 30 mph. While you're in Copper, pop by the U.S. Ski Team Speed Center, where America's top skiers get in their early season downhill training each November.

Silverton Mountain

Adrenaline junkies should make a beeline to Silverton, which will open new hike-to or helicopter-to runs. Leave whiners (and beginners) at home. You'll have to rappel in or out of couloirs or big snowy aprons to reach these stashes.

Keystone Resort

All season long, children 12 and under can ski or snowboard for free, with no blackout dates. To qualify, families must stay two or more nights at a Keystone property. Make sure your trip includes a visit to the world's largest snow fort, and dinner at Der Fondue Chessel, accessed via a gondola ride, where you can cluck along to the house polka band's nightly rendition of the "Chicken Dance."

Monarch Mountain

This throwback resort doesn't have any base lodging or snow-making equipment. What it does have is awesome snowcat skiing and a hike-to bowl. This year, its season pass expands to include entry to 33 resorts in Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, California, Michigan, Arizona, North Carolina, British Columbia, Germany, Austria and Spain. We dare you to try to hit them all.

Wolf Creek

Besides a new race hutch, this homey resort, which always seems to score more snow than any other resort in Colorado, opens a new on-mountain espresso cafe and on-mountain bar.

Arapaho Basin

Another of Colorado's no-frills resorts, A-Basin adds a new conveyor lift on the bunny slope, and a new beginner-level terrain park.

Winter Park Resort

Known for the mogul-studded Mary Jane area, Winter Park adds a new four-lane Tube Park with a conveyor lift and a toasty new warming hut. Can you say "Bombs away"?

Aspen

The posh and swanky Little Nell Hotel is showing off a complete remodel and reinvention of its restaurant. If you're into pampering (and heated boots), this is your place. The people-watching rocks, too.

Snowmass

With 230 acres of new terrain on Burnt Mountain, Snowmass becomes the second largest ski area in Colorado, behind Vail. Your tongue will be flapping as you cruise its rolling meadows and glades. Then kick back at the new Elk Camp restaurant and sundeck.

Crested Butte

Look for renovations at the Paradise Warming House, then hitch a ride on the five zip lines, which stay open all winter long.

Telluride

Foodie alert: Telluride opens a new on-mountain restaurant, Bon Vivant, and adds a private dining room to Tomboy Tavern.

Steamboat Springs

Get your cowboy on at Steamboat, where the 100th annual Winter Carnival, complete with an array of horse-drawn skiing contests and a slopeslide parade featuring a guy in a flaming costume, unfolds Feb. 6-10.

country, including in Midland. He said November was the warmest on record in Midland, with an average temperature of 58 degrees, 5 degrees lower than the all-time average November temperature. Previously, November 2011 was the warmest.

"It's interesting thinking back to how warm it was in 2011," Kotenberg said. "Depending on December's average temperature, this could be the warmest year on record."

Ragan, who said his store is keeping busy by selling winter apparel, waits for next week to begin selling skis again.

"Snow is on order, just in time for Christmas," he said.

Deadly, destructive 2012 hurricane season ends

Associated Press

MIAMI — The 2012 Atlantic hurricane season that spawned the destruction of Sandy and Isaac has come to an end as one for the record books.

There were 19 named storms in what meteorologists consider an above-average year that tied as being the third most-active season since 1851. The season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30, although tropical storms can and do sometimes develop outside those dates.

Even without a so-called major storm reaching the U.S., there was plenty of damage. A storm is classed as major once it becomes a Category 3 hurricane, with top sustained winds of 111 miles per hour and more.

Seven years have now gone by without a major hurricane making U.S. landfall, the longest stretch on record.

Dennis Feltgen, a spokesman for the National Hurricane Center, said a persistent jet stream pattern has steered storms away from the U.S. in recent years.

It wasn't enough to keep away Sandy, which morphed from hurricane to superstorm as it slammed into the New Jersey coast in October and wreaked havoc across the Northeast. It left millions without power and killed at least 125 people in the U.S. and 71 in the Caribbean.

The storm is estimated to have caused about $62 billion in damage and other losses in the U.S., most of it in New York and New Jersey. It is the second-costliest storm in U.S. history after 2005's Hurricane Katrina.

Hurricane Isaac struck southern Louisiana in August on the eve of Hurricane Katrina's seventh anniversary, swamping the Gulf Coast after trudging through the Gulf of Mexico and delaying the Republican National Convention in Tampa, Fla.

Sandy combined with an early winter storm and blast of artic air from the north to create a deadly brew meteorologists coined "Frankenstorm" and struck two days before Halloween.

A somewhat similar phenomenon occurred with the so-called Perfect Storm off the coast of New England in 1991, but that storm did not strike a major metropolitan region like Sandy.

"This was certainly one for the record books," Feltgen said.

A typical hurricane season has 12 named storms, six of which become hurricanes and three major storms. This year 10 storms became hurricanes and just one a Category 3 or higher, though it remained in the Atlantic Ocean.

Four storms in all made landfall, including Tropical Storm Beryl, which struck Jacksonville, Fla., with 75 miles per hour winds, the strongest tropical storm to strike the U.S. before hurricane season officially starts.

Whether next year's hurricane season will bring another calamitous strike is still too early to predict.

"You can't use this year as a gauge for next year," Feltgen said. "You have to go into each season thinking, 'This is the year I'm going to be hit and I have to be ready for it."

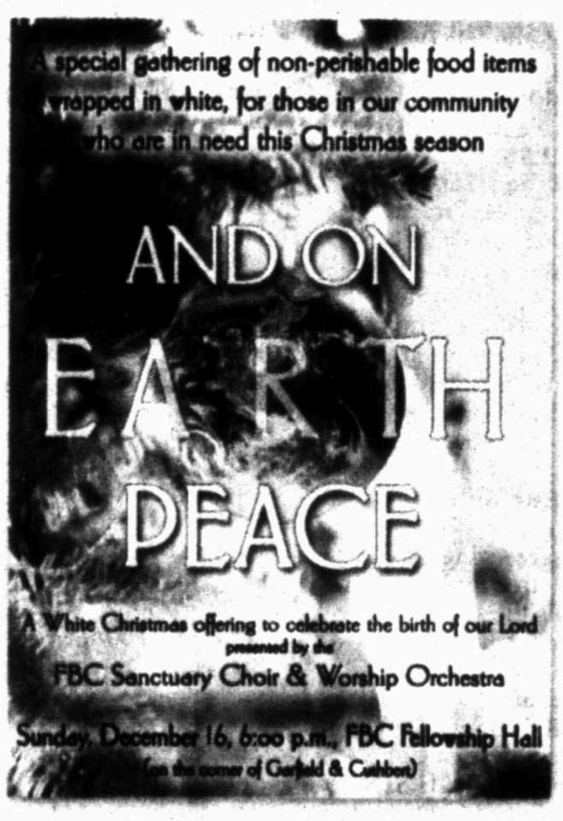
The CHRISTMAS Banner
A weekly publication of First Baptist Church Midland

Join us at First Baptist Church throughout the month of December as we joyfully celebrate the true meaning of Christmas.



"HOPE OF GLORY"

We invite you to join with us in celebrating the hope of Christ through the many activities of First Baptist Church throughout the Christmas season. The idea of hope is experienced in every aspect of our lives. We hope our football team will win. We hope it will rain. We hope that we will see our families during the holidays. We hope our soldiers will be safe. We hope we will recover from illness or find strength in grief. However our hope is conflicted with our awareness that life doesn't always go the way we had hoped. We still face droughts, illness, and even death. Yet in Christ we have found a hope that does not disappoint. "For I am convinced that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other created thing, will be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord (Romans 8:38-39)." First Baptist Church will be celebrating this hope in Christ through worship services, musicals, living nativity and Christmas Eve services at 4, 6, and 8 PM.. We hope you will join with us in this celebration.

ENERGY BRIEFS

FROM WIRE REPORTS

HOUSTON

US rigs exploring for oil, gas down this week by 6

The number of rigs actively exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. fell this week by six, to 1,811.

Texas-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes Inc. reported Friday that 1,386 rigs were exploring for oil and 424 were searching for gas. One was listed as miscellaneous. A year ago, Baker Hughes counted 1,993 rigs.

Of the major oil- and gas-producing states, Texas gained two rigs, with a total of 855.

New Mexico, North Dakota and Wyoming each lost two rigs while Colorado, Louisiana and West Virginia each lost one.

NEW YORK

Oil up 1 percent; weather outlook sinks natural gas

The price of oil rose 1 percent Friday. U.S. benchmark crude rose 84 cents to close at $88.91 per barrel.

Natural gas continued to tumble on forecasts for a warm beginning to December. It fell 2.4 percent to close at $3.56 per thousand cubic feet and has dropped 5.5 percent since Tuesday.

Oil had its first monthly gain since August, but is still trading below the 2012 average of $94.65 per barrel. The price wavered between $84 and $89 per barrel in November with few dramatic moves up or down. Analysts say oil would be even lower if not for events in the Middle East.

US to sell wind energy leases off 3 states

Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The federal government plans to sell leases for wind farms off the coasts of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Virginia, marking the first time it has sold competitive leases for wind energy on the outer continental shelf, officials said Friday.

The leases for the two areas, which total more than 430 square miles, will be sold next year, the Department of Interior and its Bureau of Ocean Energy Management said.

"Wind energy along the Atlantic holds enormous potential, and today we are moving closer to tapping into this massive domestic energy resource to create jobs, increase our energy security and strengthen our nation's competitiveness in this new energy frontier," Interior Secretary Ken Salazar said in a written statement.

The announcement was hailed by the conservation group Oceana, which called it a major step in developing domestic clean energy.

"We're getting a step closer to seeing real turbines out there in the water," said Nancy Sopko, the group's ocean advocate. "The more progress is made, it sends that signal out to the rest of the world that the U.S. is serious about developing wind energy here."

The zone off Rhode Island and Massachusetts, which sits about 10 miles off Rhode Island's shore, will be leased in two parcels. The Virginia area, about 27 miles off the southern part of the state, will be available as a single lease, the Department of Interior said. Officials said each area could be developed to generate enough electricity to power 700,000 homes.

The plan is part of an Obama administration strategy to focus energy development in areas with the greatest potential and to work with states, commercial fishermen and other stakeholders early in the process to address possible conflicts, said Tommy P. Beaudreau, director of the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management.

There are no offshore wind farms in the United States, although several are already in development off Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Delaware. The Rhode Island and New Jersey developments are in state waters, while the Delaware lease was not awarded in a competitive process, Sopko said.

Seeking renewable energy, Poland looks to wind farms

Associated Press

SOPOT, Poland — Seeking renewable energy to meet EU recommendations and cut dependence on Russian energy imports, Poland is looking to offshore wind farms as part of the answer.

The government has granted 14 licenses for development of wind farms on the Baltic Sea and will review more than two dozen more this year. Transport Minister Slawomir Nowak said Friday at an energy conference in the Baltic resort of Sopot.

Nowak said northern Poland could be the nation's energy hub and exporter as wind, nuclear, liquid and shale gas projects are being pursued in the region.

Poland is overly reliant on Russia for its energy, importing nearly 70 percent of its gas and 90 percent of its crude oil from its historic foe that has used energy as a political tool. The two countries share a difficult history, including decades of control by Moscow over Poland during the Cold War.

Now, the Polish government is trying to decrease Russia's control over its energy market, and at the same time meet European Union recommendations to increase renewable energy sources by 2030. Poland is also phasing out coal production to meet goals to reduce carbon emissions.

Nowak said legislation is being amended to allow floating wind farms to be installed on the Baltic Sea, where wind conditions are "very good." There is no date for opening the first farm, because experts need to test their possible effects on the environment. They also must convince residents and fishermen that artificial islands on the Baltic will offer new workplaces and won't ruin the region's fishing industry or its value for vacationers.

So far, five of the license holders have paid their fees to the state budget, totals $29 million.

Part of oil royalty bill vetoed

Associated Press

SAO PAULO — Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff on Friday vetoed part of a bill that will give a greater share of royalty revenues from the country's vast oil fields to non-producing states.

Rio de Janeiro state officials had warned that without a veto, the measure would deprive Rio of $1.7 billion in 2013 alone, endangering preparations for the 2014 World Cup and the 2016 Olympics. State Gov. Sergio Cabral had threatened to appeal to Brazil's Supreme Court if the state's royalties were reduced.

The legislature's lower house in early November approved legislation for distributing oil royalties more evenly among all of Brazil's 27 states instead of favoring the country's top producers like Rio and neighboring Espirito Santo.

'Fiscal cliff' provides a real-life civics problem

Steve Rosen
Kansas City Star

At the dinner table tonight or the next time you're driving the carpool, you might ask your teen a question: Is anybody at school talking about the fiscal cliff?

Be prepared for sudden, deep silence and perhaps a roll or two of the eyeballs. Or, if you're blessed, a couple of grunts from the back seat about something mentioned in social studies or civics class.

There's not a teenager I know who gives a care in the world about the debate going on in Washington right now aimed at preventing the nation from going into financial shock early next year.

Spending cuts? Tax increases? Controlling the deficit? I can already hear teens saying, "It's not my problem."

Regardless, it's still good to talk about the collection of tax increases and spending cuts known as the fiscal cliff because so much is at stake, and the ramifications will still be felt as your kids enter the workforce a few years from now. (I think everyone could use further insight into our country's financial problems — not just high schoolers.)

The challenge for parents may be how to make the topic relevant.

It's challenging but by no means impossible.

Parents, start by searching online for a textbook definition of the fiscal cliff.

You can't talk to your 17-year-old without a grasp of the issues. Unfortunately, a recent poll indicated that about 30 percent of adults weren't sure what the fiscal cliff refers to.

The term became popular after a February appearance by Federal Reserve chairman Ben Bernanke. In congressional testimony, he described "a massive fiscal cliff of large spending cuts and tax increases" that would take place on Jan. 1, 2013.

You can also cut through all the political doublespeak by breaking down the country's financial problems in very simple terms.

Instead of explaining the mismatch between spending and tax revenue and the effect on the country's debt load and credit rating, remove some zeros and pretend you're talking about the household budget.

It might put things in better perspective by reviewing (in real or imaginary numbers) annual family income, money spent, credit card debt and the amount that will need to be cut from the household budget to pay the bills. Or the conversation could shift to the second job you might need to bring in more income — since, unlike Uncle Sam, your family can't print more money.

Should parents stay neutral on the topic in front of their kids? Frankly, most people can't help but show a bias toward one solution or another — consider this as face to face a teaching opportunity as you can get.

Even if your kids' eyes glaze over, at least you can say years from now that you did your best to alert them to a real-life civics problem.

Obama, Boehner seek leverage in 'fiscal cliff' talks

Analysis

By David Epso
Associated Press

Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio — President Barack Obama

WASHINGTON — One month before the deadline, negotiations between President Barack Obama and Republicans to save the economy from a plunge over the fiscal cliff are still in the throat-clearing stage. Serious bargaining is on hold while the two sides vie for political leverage.

Deal or no deal, nothing is likely to become clear until far closer to the year-end deadline, when the lure of getting away for the holidays will sharpen the focus of negotiators.

"There's a stalemate. Let's not kid ourselves," House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said Friday, punctuating the end of a week of political theater by divided government. "Right now we're almost nowhere."

He spoke as Obama all but called Republicans heartless louts from a Charles Dickens story. Their failure to pass an extension of middle class tax cuts would amount to a Christmas "lump of coal" for millions, Obama said in Hatfield, Pa. "That's a Scrooge Christmas," added the recently-re-elected president, who claims a voters' mandate to extend existing tax cuts for all but upper incomes.

Boehner, too, claimed a mandate after voters renewed the House Republican majority on Nov. 6. But the speaker's political hand was weakened — witness his postelection announcement that the GOP would put revenues on the bargaining table. His control seems to have eroded further in the weeks since, as a smattering of the GOP rank and file let it be known they could support the president's tax plan under the right circumstances.

"Rate increase, if the package includes significant entitlement reform that gets you to $4 to $6 trillion (in deficit savings) over 10 years, I would vote for that," a retiring Rep. Steve LaTourette, R-Ohio, told reporters on Friday.

Rep. Charles Bass made similar comments. "If it gets us past the fiscal cliff and the president is willing to consider meaningful savings in entitlements, it's a legitimate solution," said the New Hampshire lawmaker, who was defeated for re-election this fall.

Yet the speaker also made a little-noticed move this week to shore up his bargaining position.

He issued a statement noting that Senate Democrats are threatening to weaken the Republicans' ability to block legislation in their chamber in the new Congress that convenes in January.

"Any bill that reaches a Republican-led House based on Senate Democrats' heavy-handed power play would be dead on arrival," he warned.

Democrats have declined to identify a single spending cut they are willing to support; Republicans avoid specifics on revenue increases they would swallow.

Once each side moves beyond opening gambits, Republicans will have to decide whether they are willing to raise income tax rates on upper incomes, as Obama wants, or hold fast to closing loopholes as a means of producing increased tax revenue.

For their part, Democrats will decide how much savings to pull from benefit programs like Medicare, Medicaid and possibly Social Security without cutting guaranteed benefits, a line they vowed not to cross in earlier budget negotiations.

Obama's opening proposal, delivered to Boehner and other Republicans by Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner on Thursday, calls for $1.6 trillion in higher taxes over a decade, hundreds of billions of dollars in new spending, a possible extension of the temporary Social Security payroll tax cut and enhancing the president's power to raise the national debt limit.

The new federal revenue would include $950 billion generated by raising taxes on families with incomes over $250,000 and by closing certain tax loopholes by the end of this year, according to administration officials who described the offer Friday only on condition of anonymity. The remainder would be achieved through an overhaul of the tax system next year and would not become effective until 2014, said the officials, who were not authorized to provide the details by name.

Obama is seeking new spending to help the unemployed, homeowners whose property's value is less than their mortgage, doctors who treat Medicare patients and wage-earners.

In exchange, the president would back cuts of an unspecified amount this year, and savings of as much $400 billion from Medicare and other benefit programs in 2013.

The White House plan also counts about $1 trillion in spending cuts agreed to last year, as well as about $800 billion that the administration claims as savings because of the drawdown of troops from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Republicans said they were surprised at the plan, and Democrats wondered aloud why.

"Each side said they'd submit a down payment. We have. Our preference is revenue. What is theirs?" said Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y.

While agreeing to new revenue, GOP lawmakers want to extend expiring income tax cuts at all levels, including the top brackets. They also want to raise the age of eligibility for Medicare and curtail future cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security and other benefit programs. The same adjustment would raise revenue for the government by making a change in annual adjustments of tax brackets.

UN nuclear chief expresses concern for inspectors

Associated Press

VIENNA — The head of the U.N. nuclear agency suggested Thursday that his inspectors in Iran are coming under increased duress amid fears that Tehran might be aspiring to make atomic arms. He would not say what kind of pressure they face.

Yukiya Amano's International Atomic Energy Agency has a team of experts monitoring known Iranian nuclear programs and probing suspicions that there might be other, undisclosed activities focused on nuclear weapons research and development.

Iran denies any interest in such arms and says it has never tried to develop them. It also dismisses concerns that it is enriching uranium for possible use as the core of a warhead, saying it wants only to produce reactor fuel.

The agency said that its attempts to probe for evidence of suspected weapons research have been rebuffed for more than three years.

Israel in particular said the diplomatic window is closing as Tehran increases its capacity to enrich to a point that is only a step away from production of weapons-grade uranium. It said it will never tolerate an Iran capable of making such warheads, heightening fears that it may opt to strike the Islamic republic's nuclear facilities.

Amano told reporters that diplomatic efforts still have some traction. At the same time, it was the first time he expressed concern for the IAEA experts in Iran, telling reporters that his agency is "giving high priority for the safety of our inspectors and we are taking all the measures needed to protect them."

North Korea rocket preparations might be a bluff

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Rocket sections are apparently being trucked into North Korea's northwest launch site, but some analysts are asking whether it's just a calculated bluff meant to jangle the Obama administration and influence South Korean voters ahead of presidential elections in three weeks.

There are questions about whether North Korean scientists have corrected whatever caused the embarrassing crackup of its last rocket shortly after liftoff in April, and whether Pyongyang is willing to risk another failure — along with U.N. condemnation and more sanctions.

"It's possible, of course, that Pyongyang knows its preparations will be seen and discussed in the West, and they are intended to be a signal rather than signs of an imminent launch," David Wright, a physicist with the Union of Concerned Scientists, wrote on the organization's website this week. "Preparing for a launch less than a year after a failure calls into question whether the North could have analyzed and fixed whatever went wrong."

Before its last two launches, North Korea notified international organizations of its plans to send a satellite into orbit aboard a rocket. Neither the International Maritime Organization nor the International Civil Aviation Organization has responded to requests from The Associated Press for information. But South Korea and analysts say North Korea has yet to provide such notification, something that usually happens weeks in advance.

Even if a launch never comes, the mere preparations could be an attempt to influence the Dec. 19 presidential election in rival South Korea and raise Pyongyang on President Barack Obama's list of foreign policy priorities as he prepares to be inaugurated for his second term in January.

North Korea has repeatedly tried to interfere with South Korean elections, according to government officials and analysts, and there's speculation that Pyongyang's rocket work could be an attempt to raise worries as campaigning heats up.

North Korea presumably prefers the liberal candidate, Moon Jae-in, the argument goes. Another provocation, or simply heightened tensions, could be seen by voters as evidence of a failed North Korea policy by the current conservative leader in Seoul.

Both Moon and the conservative contender, Park Geun-hye, have signaled a softening on North Korea policy. But Moon has suggested a return to an accommodating policy of engagement and aid for Pyongyang that has been missing during the five years of President Lee Myung-bak's rule, which ends in February when his single term expires.

"If indeed a new satellite launch is North Korea's next provocation, it will be an early test of South Korean candidate commitments to reopen dialogue with the North," Scott Snyder, senior fellow for Korea studies at the Council on Foreign Relations, wrote this week.

Pyongyang could also be trying to send a message to Obama following his re-election. Pyongyang has previously staged what Washington and Seoul consider provocations around elections in both the United States and South Korea. North Korea conducted a rocket and nuclear test within months of Obama taking office in early 2009.

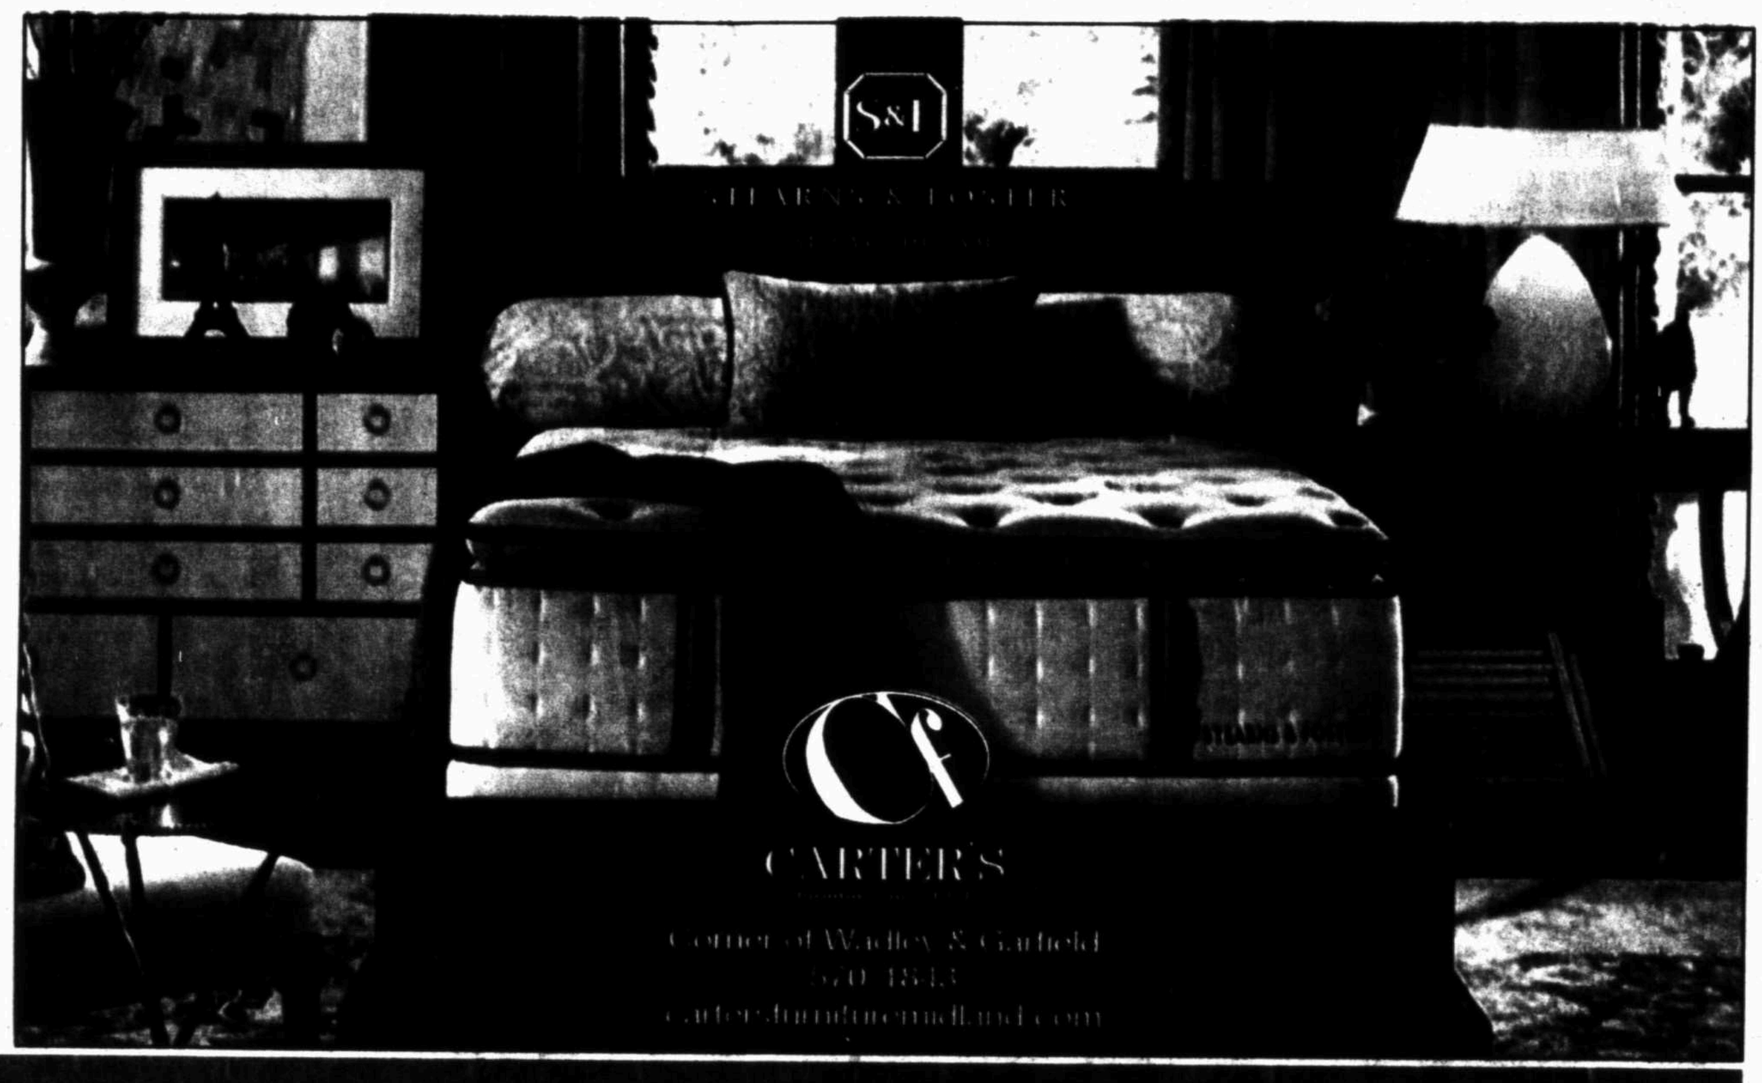
Washington worries about North Korean launches because long-range rocket technology can be easily converted into use for missiles that could target the United States.

Analysis of recent satellite images written for 38 North, the website for the U.S.-Korea Institute at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies, suggests Pyongyang could be ready to launch a three-stage rocket by the end of next week.

The timing of the preparations has some analysts expecting a launch.

North Korea's April rocket firing came during celebrations of the centennial of the birth of national founder Kim Il Sung, current leader Kim Jong Un's grandfather. Pyongyang has declared 2012 a crucial year for its scientific and economic development, and there has been speculation that it could do something extraordinary to mark its conclusion.

Dec. 17 also marks the one-year anniversary of the death of Kim Jong Un's father, Kim Jong Il.



Mustangs' secondary faces big test in Dallas Christian

Midland Christian's Chase Standard hangs on to Brook Hill's Will Weathers as they both trip over Blaine Perkins on Nov. 16, at Mustang Field.

By Len Hayward

The Midland Christian secondary has seen its share of tests this season.

But the challenge it will face tonight against undefeated Dallas Christian in a TAPPS Division II state semifinal will be the toughest it has faced this season.

The Chargers have a quarterback who has thrown for more than 2,000 yards, and his top receiver is a Texas Tech commit who averages more than 22 yards a catch.

Statistically, it's the best passing team the Mustangs have faced this season. But for the group of players that play in Midland Christian's last line of defense facing challenges and tests is nothing new.

Even when the season started, the secondary was a major question mark for Midland Christian's defense after losing two key players. But after 12 games, another district title and two playoff wins, the Mustangs' secondary is playing with as much confidence as they have all season.

The next test begins for Midland Christian's defense and its secondary at 6 p.m. today at Shotwell Stadium in Abilene, and the Mustangs are ready.

"It's growing and knowing that we are progressing," said senior cornerback Blaine Perkins, who has 45 tackles and nine pass break-ups this season. "And it's the confidence the coaches have in us because they drive us and

Graham cracks Rangers

Greenwood's Brackston Buck reacts on the sidelines in the final minutes of play during a Class 3A Division II regional round game against Graham Friday at Mustang Bowl in Sweetwater. Graham beat Greenwood, 41-23.

Steers' defense stops Greenwood in 2nd half

Steers	41
Rangers	23

SWEETWATER — As Greenwood senior defensive end Garrett Carlisle reflected on end of the season for the Rangers, he had no regrets but knows that there is only so long a defense can be on the field before wearing out.

Despite Greenwood getting five turnovers against Graham, the Rangers had their own share of mistakes and couldn't move the ball in the second half.

Thanks to 37 unanswered points — including 20 in the second half — the Steers defeated Greenwood 41-23 in a Class 3A Division II regional round game at the Mustang Bowl on Friday night.

With the victory, Graham (12-1) advances to play Gatesville in the state quarterfinals as Gatesville ousted Greenwood's District 4-3A foe Monahans, 37-34 in overtime.

Greenwood ends its season at 9-4 and enjoyed its deepest playoff run since 2006.

The Rangers at one point led 23-14 in the second quarter, but their offense could never get going after that, especially in the second half when they were held without a first down until the fourth quarter.

Even when they got a first down on a drive, they had a costly turnover as a Kam Williams' pass in the end zone was intercepted and returned 100 yards for a score by Bryce Reeves for the 41-23 advantage with 9 minutes, 20 seconds remaining in the game.

"It was a tough game, emotionally, physically, and we were out there for a long time," said Carlisle, who also had a fumble recovery. "I felt we held our own. The offense gave up some points on turnovers and you can only play for so long. We had a bunch of turnovers and a bunch of stops. It just comes down to how long your team is going to be on the field."

Added Greenwood coach Shad Hanna, "We had our opportunities and we gave ourselves a chance to win this ballgame. We just didn't capitalize."

Thanks in part to turnovers, Greenwood jumped out to a 14-0 lead in the

Rangerettes overcome distractions to top Lee JV

Rangerettes	68
Lady Rebels	31

By Jonathan Hull

Distractions were everywhere for the Greenwood girls basketball team Friday.

The Rangerettes managed to get past each diversion, though, and pull away in the second half for a 68-31 victory against Lee's junior varsity squad in the semifinals of the Rangerette Shootout at Greenwood High School gymnasium.

"Coach said, 'Nothing else matters but this game right here, so go play like you know how,'" senior Courtney Waters said of what Greenwood coach Quint Anthony told the Rangerettes in the locker room at halftime. "Everything going on was a little bit distracting. We kind of had to switch gears."

Waters

At the forefront of many minds in Greenwood was Friday night's football playoff game against Graham. Several of the Rangerettes double as cheerleaders for the football team and knew they had to make it to Sweetwater for the playoff contest right after their basketball game.

Bell

Not to mention, the Rangerettes were coming off an impressive victory against Fort Stockton in the opening round and were playing a junior varsity team in the semifinals.

Greenwood still managed to open the game with a 14-2 lead at the end of the first period but missed seven free throws in the period, as well as several good looks at the basket. Anthony pulled his starters less than two minutes into the game from a lack of energy being shown on the floor.

The Rangerettes' missing intensity finally caught up with them in the second period when Lee went on a 10-0 run, cutting Greenwood's lead to 22-16 with 35 seconds left in the first half.

Four different Lady Rebels scored during the rally with Alyssa Daniels, who led Lee with 11 points, sinking a 3-pointer to cap it. But Lee was greeted by a different Greenwood team in the second half.

"I hope it was my halftime speech (that made the difference). It wasn't very nice," Anthony said with a grin. "It's one of those deals where we tried to avoid coming out flat with the big win last night and the playoff

Dallas Cowboys running back DeMarco Murray (29) gets past Tampa Bay Buccaneers linebacker Mason Foster (59) during a game on Sept. 23 in Arlington. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Murray might be able to play Sunday against the Eagles.

Signs point to Murray returning Sunday night

By Tom Orsborn
San Antonio Express-News

Tailback DeMarco Murray likely will return to action this weekend after the Dallas Cowboys listed him as questionable on Friday's injury report.

Murray has sat out the last six games with a sprained left foot. He was limited in practice this week, but owner Jerry Jones indicated he'll play against Philadelphia on Sunday night.

"We'll see how he does in the next couple of days, but it looks like we'll have him," Jones told Dallas' KRLD-FM.

Murray's backup, Felix Jones, is questionable with a pair of sore knees. The fifth-year pro from Arkansas has averaged just 38.3 yards per game during Murray's absence.

Three other offensive starters are questionable: wide receiver Miles Austin (hip), center Ryan Cook (knee) and left tackle Tyron Smith (ankle). Those three, like Murray and Jones, failed to go through a full practice this week.

Pro Bowl nose tackle Jay Ratliff is doubtful with a groin injury that sidelined him in last week's 38-31 loss to Washington. Backup safety Charlie Peprah (foot) is also doubtful for a defense that's been decimated by injuries, including season-ending ones to standout inside linebackers Sean Lee (toe) and Bruce Carter (elbow).

In all, five defenders have lost their season to injuries, including a total of four starters. Defensive coordinator Rob Ryan was asked if all that bad luck has led him to indulge in some self pity.

"I do that at home but nowhere else," Ryan told reporters in Irving. "It gets a little upsetting, it does. That's just being realistic. It says four

LEE TAKES TWO IN MANSFIELD

MANSFIELD — Thanks to two strong second halves, and some lat-game heroics from senior Grant Coffman, Lee won both of its games at the Spring Creek Tournament on Friday.

Coffman knocked down a corner three-pointer with 4.4 seconds to play to give the Rebels a 54-53 win against Iriving in their first game, and Lee outscored A&M Consolidated by 11 in the third quarter to pull away for a 54-44 win in its second game. Lee also helped its cause by knocking down nine three-pointers as a team against A&M Consolidated.

Grant Coffman led Lee with 18 points in the first game while Takaies Polk and Talor Nunez added 12. Anthony McCoy was the leading scorer in the second game with 18 to go along with 14 from Coffman.

MCA KNOCKS OFF TRINITY IN CRANE

CRANE — Crosstown rivals Midland Classical and Trinity met for the first time on the hardwood this season at the El Ave Shootout as a preview to their two district meetings later this season.

Midland Classical had a big fourth period to come away with a 77-63 victory in bracket play. MCA outscored the Chargers 21-12 in the fourth.

Four players scored in double figures for MCA with Kade Wilkens leading with 19 points, while John Stallings score 18. Haydon Rogers added 17 and Garrett Mindrup had 11.

Taylor Coy led Trinity with 17 and Ethan Samuels scored 15. Brett Womack added 10.

The Chargers and Knights could meet a secod time later today if MCA can defeat Wink at noon. Should the Knights win that matchup, they'll meet the Chargers at 4 p.m. in the consolation final.

game later today. We had a pep rally this morning, it was just a little lack of focus."

Focus wasn't an issue in the third period, though, as the Rangerettes forced Lee into 11 turnovers with their full-court pressure defense and held the Lady Rebels to just three points in the frame.

The Rangerettes, meanwhile, had their most prolific period on offense, scoring 26 points in the frame for a 51-20 lead heading into the fourth. Waters had eight of her game-high 16 points in the third, while Bailey Ray sank two 3-pointers in the period on her way to a 10-point night.

The Rangerettes then used sophomore post Amanda Bell to close out the win in the fourth period. Bell scored eight of her 14 points in that period. Junior Morgan McKee also hit double figures with 12 points, while also pulling down seven rebounds to go with four steals.

The win now puts Greenwood a win away from winning its home tournament for the first time since 2007. The Rangerettes play Grady at 6 p.m. today in the championship game.

"It's awesome to have a chance to come into our own tournament and win it all," Waters said. "It's going to make a statement for us."

Jacks' losing streak continues vs. Tornado

From staff reports

Tornado	6
Jackalopes	1

ODESSA — The Texas Tornado scored four goals in the third period to put the Odessa Jackalopes away for a 6-1 victory at Ector County Coliseum.

After playing a scoreless first period, Odessa and Texas each scored less than four minutes into the second period. Justin Greenberg put the Tornado on the board at the 16:26 mark only to see Odessa respond eight seconds later with goal from Pat Thompson.

That was the only time Odessa mounted a response, though, as Texas went on to score five unanswered goals, including two from Scott Conway.

Odessa (4-17-2, 10 points) and Texas (18-9-1, 37 points) play again at 7:05 p.m. today at Ector County Coliseum.

NBA fines Spurs $250,000 for sending starters home

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

Gregg Popovich sent his best players home, deciding they reached the end of the road before the trip was over.

For that, and for keeping it a secret, the San Antonio Spurs were fined $250,000 by the NBA on Friday.

Commissioner David Stern said the Spurs "did a disservice to the league and our fans" when they didn't bring Tim Duncan, Tony Parker, Manu Ginobili or Danny Green to Miami for the final game of the six-game trip.

"The result here is dictated by the totality of the facts in this case," Stern said in a statement. "The Spurs decided to make four of their top players unavailable for an early-season game that was the team's only regular-season visit to Miami. The team also did this without informing the Heat, the media, or the league office in a timely way. Under these circumstances, I have concluded that the Spurs did a disservice to the league and our fans."

Teams are required to report as soon as they know a player will not travel because of injury.

The league's statement said the Spurs were in violation of league policy reviewed with the board of governors in April 2010 against resting players in a manner "contrary to the best interests of the NBA."

The Spurs didn't comment on the penalty.

The issue of resting healthy players has been debated before, though usually at the end of the season, not a month into it. And the Spurs have been right at the center of it, Popovich using the rest strategy for an aging team that could use more time off than the NBA schedule often allows.

They even made a joke out of it last season, the box score listing "OLD" next to the 36-year-old Duncan's name as the reason he didn't play.

Stern wasn't laughing Thursday.

He has a nearly $5 billion a year industry to protect and can't like it when teams aren't willing to put their best product on display in a marquee game televised by national TV partner TNT. Fans and viewers were excited about seeing the Spurs try to complete an unbeaten road trip against LeBron James, Dwyane Wade, Chris Bosh and the NBA champions, so there was an understandable letdown when they learned of the absences.

But there's never a guarantee that any players are going to play, and Stern himself has previously made it clear he wasn't going to impose rules to change that.

The Cleveland Cavaliers rested a healthy James for four straight games at the end of the 2009-10 regular season. Owners discussed the issue later that week at a meeting in New York, and Stern reported that there was "no conclusion reached, other than a number of teams thought it should be at the sole discretion of the team, the coach, the general manager, and I think it's fair to say I agree with that, unless that discretion is abused."

In the NFL, the Indianapolis Colts rested a healthy Peyton Manning even with an undefeated record late in the 2009 season, and the league eventually started trying to schedule as many division matchups as possible for the final two weeks of the season in an effort to make late-season games matter.

Popovich doesn't wait until the end of the season to start resting players.

He was both praised and ripped for the way he navigated the lockout schedule last season, twice surrendering 11-game winning streaks by playing without his Big Three. Even those who didn't like it conceded that a coach who had won four championships with what's long been considered the NBA's model organization probably knew what he was doing, and more defense came Thursday night.

"Popovich has done this before and he knows what's best for his team," former NBA star Shaquille O'Neal said on TNT. "It's his job to manage his players and do whatever he'd like. He's thinking about the big picture."

Last game: Midland Christian 28, Dallas Parish Episcopal 16; Dallas Christian 28, Fort Worth Christian 20

Last meeting/series: Midland Chrisitan 48, Dallas Christian 10 in 2010 TAPPS Division II playoffs

Weather forecast: A game-time temperature of 71 degrees is expected with no chance of precipitation.

Directions to the game: Follow I-20 to Abilene and take exit 290 toward TX 36/TX 322 Loop/Cross Plains, and merge onto E. Stamford Street; turn right onto TX-322 Loop South/Jake Roberts Freeway and take TX 36 to the Expo Center and follow signs for TX 36 and merger on N/E South 11th street and turn left on Expo Drive/Play Street.

Notes

■ This is the second meeting in three years between these two teams in the playoffs. The last meeting was in 2010 when the Mustangs won, 48-10, at Mustang Field.

■ The Mustangs faced their first deficit of the district season or in the playoffs last week when they were down 10-7 to Dallas Parish Episcopal in the third quarter of last week's game in Brownwood. But Midland Christian came back to score 21 unanswered points to eventually take the victory. Justin Fender rushed for 154 yards on 21 carries and had three touchdowns, while Midland Christian's defense held the Panthers to two points in the first half.

■ Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon said Dallas Christian is one of the best, well-coached teams the Mustangs will play this season, and he said it will be interesting to see how well the teams match up against each other. "Football is a game of matchups, and Dallas Christian has certain teams they match up well with, and Midland Christian has certain teams they match up well with," McClendon said. "It will be interesting to see how we match up with each other. The tell tale of the game will be how we match up with their speed."

■ The Chargers have a balanced offensive attack that is led by quarterback Alex Craig, who is listed at 6-foot-5. Craig has thrown for 2,259 yards this year and 29 touchdowns to eight interceptions. D'Andre Cannon leads the Chargers' running game with 1,152 yards and 23 touchdowns.

■ Craig's top target this season is senior Justis Nelson, who has 35 catches for 783 yards and nine touchdowns. Nelson is committed to play at Texas Tech, and various reports said he also had offers from Harvard, Colgate, Bucknell and Air Force.

■ Wheeler said his squad has 21 seniors, the core of which played on the team that lost to Midland Christian two years ago, and that experience made a difference in its victory against Fort Worth Christian last week. Dallas Christian was down 20-0 at one point before coming back to win.

"The one thing about this group of kids is that they realized they have the ability to do that," Wheeler said. "They have done it before, and if we hadn't been in that situation before we might not have done it."

Next: Winner will play Houston Northland Christian-Houston Second Baptist, TAPPS Division II State Championship, 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, Floyd Casey Stadium, Waco

MUSTANGS

they set the bar."

Perkins is one of four players in the secondary for the Mustangs who had limited experience playing last season.

The Mustangs had to replace a starting safety, and two cornerbacks, plus it looked as if an early-season knee injury might limit Elias Aguirre's ability to play on defense, and Midland Christian assistant coach Kenneth Hines had a long list of players that could play back there.

As the season progressed, though, Perkins and Jarrod Koym emerged as starters at the cornerback positions (they have a combined 15 pass break-ups), and Matt Ramirez (team-high six interceptions) and Chase Standard (10 pass break-ups), a Midland High transfer, moved into the safety spots.

Perkins had played some safety last year, and Koym was a linebacker, and there was some transition time for both of those as well. Meanwhile, Aguirre is used in different packages at safety while Standard moves into an outside linebacker position.

Hines said there were some communication issues early in the season among the four, especially Standard who was learning a new defensive scheme, but as the season went on those communication issues subsided, and now Hines said they are a tight-knit group.

"That confidence just comes from playing," Hines said.

Hines said the group continued its growth last week when Dallas Parish Episcopal went from its base offense of the run-oriented double-wing to a spread in the second half, and Hines said they spent much of the week focusing on stopping the double-wing.

But he said the players' willingness to adjust on the fly, and having worked on some spread during the week, helped them in crunch time against the Panthers.

"The tempo changed tremendously, and the good thing was it was something we worked on throughout the year," Hines said.

In this week's game, though, the Mustangs will face a Chargers passing game that Hines said uses the whole field, and a quarterback, Alex Craig, who can make all the throws needed to be successful. Perkins said reading their keys will be important but even bigger will be making sure no one breaks for a big gain.

"We are going to have to wrap them up because they are versatile," Perkins said. "You are seeing other teams letting them get away from them and they are turning short routes and running for more than they should have."

This week, though, is just one more challenge for a secondary that has become accustomed to facing them.

"We had a great secondary last year, and it's hard to replace guys like that," Koym said. "We've all been pushing each other, and coach Hines has been helping us tremendously and each game we are getting better and better."

Beckham bows out in LA-Houston rematch for MLS Cup

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

CARSON, Calif. — David Beckham wraps up his six seasons with the Los Angeles Galaxy today in the MLS Cup.

He just hopes fans realize they'll miss an excellent game if all eyes are focused only on him.

Los Angeles goes after its second straight MLS title in a rematch with the Houston Dynamo, which lost 1-0 to the Galaxy last season at Home Depot Center. The field was soaked with rain last year, and it's likely to be soggy again this weekend.

They're perfect conditions for the Galaxy's attempt at replicating last season's result in a watershed game for their franchise and MLS, which is losing Beckham's magnetic appeal after a half-decade of impressive league-wide growth.

"I know I'm quite an emotional person," Beckham said. "I'm just really excited about the game, to be in a third MLS Cup final, especially the second one that's being played in our own stadium. It's going to be special. ... I'm happy the team are in the position we are, and the reason we've done well this season is because we're a complete team. We've got character."

Los Angeles' late-season run to another championship game has carried a certain sense of destiny for a franchise that's in for big changes in the offseason. Beckham could be joined in departure by U.S. star Landon Donovan, who's thinking about walking away from the Galaxy in an apparent mid-career case of burnout.

Even if the Galaxy's core is breaking up, they're eager to go out with the franchise's fourth MLS Cup, tying D.C. United's league record.

"It's been quite a ride, and with one more win, it will all be worth it," said Los Angeles defender Omar Gonzalez, who also might leave in the offseason. "We're similar to last year, but they're a totally different team. They're going to be tough."

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Greenwood's Colin Sullivan is hit by Graham's Josh Stelzer after catching a pass Friday in a Class 3A Division II regional round game at the Mustang Bowl in Sweetwater.

RANGERS

first quarter.

Williams scored on a 5-yard run after bad snap to Graham quarterback Ben Davis gave the Rangers excellent field position at the Graham 24. Williams later added a 1-yard quarterback sneak for the two-touchdown advantage.

The Rangers were looking for more in the second quarter and were in Steers territory when Williams lost the ball at the Graham 45. Hunter Hughes scooped up the loose ball and then ran 54 yards to score on the fumble recovery to get the Steers back in the game, cutting it to 14-7. That was one of three turnovers the Rangers had on the night.

Greenwood took a 23-14 lead with 1:43 remaining in the second quarter after Williams dove five yards for a TD, capitalizing on a Jody Lively interception at the Graham 25.

Graham, however answered quickly. A 43-yard pass to Dillon Gonzales helped set up a 3-yard TD run by Gonzales with 24 seconds remaining, cutting Greenwood's lead to 23-21 at the half.

The Steers took that momentum into the second half and grabbed their first lead of the game, 28-23, when Gonzales scored the second of his three TDs on the night on a 3-yard run 1:23 into the third quarter.

"That's what you want to do. You want to score right before the half and then when you get the ball (to start the third quarter), you want to score again," Hanna said. "That was huge for them to do that. That took the wind out of our sails and we never recovered."

Hanna added that his offense got frustrated when it couldn't move the ball in the second half and that maybe compounded his team's mistakes.

It also didn't help that Graham heated up on offense as a 30-yard TD run by Gonzales midway through the third gave the Steers a 35-23 advantage.

That followed an 83-yard punt return for a touchdown by Hunter Jones that was called back because of a block in the back penalty.

Gonzales, the 5-foot-9, 160-pound speedy junior running back, finished with 131 yards on 22 carries and also had three receptions for 60 yards.

Gonzales credited the defense for keying the comeback.

"Our defense gave us fire and gave us hope," Gonzales said. "We were down, but the defense gave us the momentum and made plays. They gave us all those three-and-outs, and we just started moving the ball."

Meanwhile, Williams finished his great high school career, carrying a big load for the Rangers offense, going 15-of-31 passing for 111 yards, rushed for 83 yards and three TDs on 24 carries.

"The kids played hard," Hanna said. "I'm proud of them. They had a great season, and I love them. But Graham's a good football team."

guys out, but it's always six or seven. All of these guys have roles and it gets a little annoying.

"But that's the way it is. We're not making excuses. We want to win football games."

Three players are out: center Phil Costa (concussion), defensive tackle Ben Bass (ankle) and slot cornerback Orlando Scandrick, who is expected to miss the rest of the regular season after undergoing surgery this week to repair a broken hand.

QBs in SEC Championship have eyes on big prize

By John Zenor
Associated Press

SEC Championship
No. 2 Alabama vs. No. 3Georgia

- When: 3 p.m. today
- Where: Georgia Dome, Atlanta
- TV: CBS

AJ McCarron's standard reply about handling big-game pressure is a shrug and a look that says, What's the big deal?

It's an attitude that has served No. 2 Alabama's quarterback pretty well so far. McCarron and Aaron Murray, his counterpart for No. 3 Georgia, have played on plenty of huge stages with varying results and a couple of performances they wouldn't mind forgetting.

The nation's two top-rated passers will square off in Saturday's Southeastern Conference championship game with the winner moving on to face No. 1 Notre Dame for the national title.

McCarron has been MVP of the BCS championship game, shaken out of a second-half slump to lead the winning touchdown drive against LSU and also thrown his only two interceptions of the season in a loss to No. 9 Texas A&M. His only other career defeat came against LSU in 2011 before his superb showing in the national title rematch.

Like Murray, he's no stranger to the spotlight of big games.

"I don't think there's a big key in anything," said McCarron, who's 23-2 as a starter. "It's another game. I think that's what hurt us back last year in the LSU game, we tried to make the game bigger than it was. It's just another game, just another Saturday. Go out and play, do our job, execute plays and let the chips fall where they fall."

This game is a chance for Murray to shine against the nation's top defense and maybe cancel out some bad memories from an otherwise sparkling career.

Murray is the nation's highest rated quarterback — McCarron is second — and the SEC's active leader in a number of categories, including passing yards (9,399) and touchdowns (89). He's already passed for 3,201 yards and 30 touchdowns against seven interceptions this season and boosted his win total as a starter to 27.

A title or two would polish off the resume nicely.

Avoiding costly mistakes will be key in a game featuring the SEC's two top pass defenses.

"I think all QBs want to make a big play in a big game," Georgia coach Mark Richt said. "All players want to make a big play in a big game. There's a time and place for everything. You have to understand when a play presents itself, then you make the big play. If it doesn't present itself, burn the ball, get rid of it. "

No. 23 Texas at No. 7 Kansas State

- When: 7 p.m.
- Where: Snyder Family Stadium, Manhattan, Kan.
- TV: ABC

MANHATTAN, Kan. — There will be a time not long from now that Kansas State's players will gather to reflect on the season, one that's brought unimaginable joy along with soul-crushing heartache.

It's not that time just yet.

Despite a loss two weeks ago to Baylor that knocked the seventh-ranked Wildcats from national title consideration, they still have plenty to play for today against No. 23 Texas: The third conference championship in school history and an automatic BCS bowl berth.

Not a bad consolation prize for a team expected to finish somewhere in the middle of the Big 12, but that rose to No. 1 in the BCS standings before that lousy night in Waco.

It certainly hasn't been on No. 12 Oklahoma, which plays TCU earlier today.

If the Sooners lose to the Horned Frogs, the Wildcats (10-1, 7-1) will already have wrapped up at least a share of the Big 12 championship and, because of tiebreakers, the BCS bid, long before Collin Klein and the rest of the senior class is introduced to a sellout crowd.

"It's going to be an emotional day for me," said Klein, who is widely expected to be invited to New York City next week for the Heisman Trophy ceremony.

"I know being around here now for, this is my fifth year, you see a lot of players enter and exit in their tenure, and now my time has come in that sense, and that's not an easy thing," Klein said. "I have so many fond memories of my time here. It's going to be hard."

The Sooners are comfortable favorites to beat TCU, which means the Wildcats are certainly preparing for the Longhorns (8-3, 5-3) as if they'll need to win themselves.

Kansas State's only Big 12 title came in 2003, when it beat then-No. 1 Oklahoma when the conference still had a championship game. Its only other league title came in 1934, during the old Big Six days, when Lynn "Pappy" Waldorf was the coach.

More common have been the kind of losing seasons that brought Snyder to Manhattan, Kan., in the late-1980s, and brought him back from a brief retirement a few years ago.

"We've just been fortunate, and it's been good fortune," Snyder said. "We've played well most of the time, but again, Texas is the dominant football program and you have to have good fortune to beat teams like that, and particularly in this conference."

No. 12 Oklahoma goes to TCU with chance at Big 12 title

No. 12 Oklahoma at TCU

- When: 11 a.m. today
- Where: Amon Carter Stadium, Fort Worth
- TV: ESPN

FORT WORTH — Oklahoma receiver Justin Brown and his teammates know the clear-cut scenario that will guarantee them getting into a BCS game.

That would include the Sooners being in the unusual position of having to pull for decades-long archrival Texas.

First things first for 12th-ranked Oklahoma (9-2, 7-1 Big 12), which plays its regular-season finale Saturday with a pre-noon kickoff at TCU.

"We have to go out there and take care of business," Brown said. "We can't really worry about the Kansas State-Texas game. We have to make sure we can get this one. ... We can't start talking about BCS right now. We've got to just stay focused on TCU."

The Sooners are assured at least a share of the conference title with a win over the Horned Frogs (7-4, 4-4), the two-time BCS buster that has done just fine in its first Big 12 season.

If the Sooners win their game, they should be back in Norman in time to watch tonight's game between No. 7 Kansas State and the 23rd-ranked Longhorns.

Wins by Oklahoma and Texas would make the Sooners outright Big 12 champs and send them to their ninth BCS game under coach Bob Stoops, even though another national title is out of reach.

"They play later at night. All I know is we've got to win at 11 o'clock and there's opportunities for championships," said Stoops, 148-36 in his 14 seasons at Oklahoma. "Who knows what will happen in their game and who knows what will happen in ours. So, in the end, that's where it's at right now."

The Sooners have won seven Big 12 games in a row since losing their conference opener 24-19 against the Wildcats on Sept. 22. That loss more than two months ago gave K-State the head-to-head tiebreaker if that's needed to determine which team gets the league's automatic BCS spot.

Their only other loss was 30-13 a month ago against No. 1 Notre Dame, which is already set to play in the BCS national title game.

Even while playing an FBS-high 28 freshmen, including starting quarterback Trevone Boykin and several key defenders, the Horned Frogs are headed to another bowl game under coach Gary Patterson after making the long-awaited move to a major conference.

TCU has won four Big 12 road games.

"We have a chip on our shoulder, we always play our best games on the road, know we have to go to go in there and beat the crowd," said cornerback Jason Verrett, the Big 12 leader in interceptions (six) and passes defended (19).

Strangely enough, though, the Frogs have lost all three of their conference games in their completely redone stadium that debuted this season. TCU had won 27 of 28 home games before that.

This is their last chance to shade in at least part of a very noticeable unblemished spot on their pyramid of goals — the square about winning conference home games.

"We've got to find a way to win at home," Patterson said. "If I could have changed uniforms, probably would have. You have to request that before the season, but we would have worn white at home. It seems like we play better in white."

Baylor, OSU ready to put on offensive show

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

WACO — Oklahoma State coach Mike Gundy and Baylor's Art Briles sounded like the mutual admiration society talking about each other's offense, even when they were at their respective campuses unaware of what the other was saying.

"They have good skill players on offense. They've had them over a number of years," Gundy said this week when asked about Briles and the Bears. "It's a challenge in this league for everyone to slow those guys down each week."

Briles? He talked about how 24th-ranked Oklahoma State has been "good for a long time, definitely the last seven or eight years since coach Gundy has been there. They probably aren't throwing the ball as much as they did — but their offense is still very good."

Oklahoma State (7-4, 5-3 Big 12) is averaging 548 total yards per game, just above the single-season school record the Cowboys set only last year. Even while using three different quarterbacks, including two freshmen, this time.

Yet, the Cowboys are second in the Big 12 behind Baylor (6-5, 3-5), which in the season after the departure of Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Robert Griffin III is still averaging 576 yards a game.

In a league with plenty of big scores and five overtime games this season, fittingly the Big 12's two most productive offenses play each other in the regular-season finale today.

Both the Cowboys and Bears, already bowl eligible, are coming off overtime games in which nearly 100 points were scored. Baylor beat Texas Tech 52-45 at Cowboys Stadium, and Oklahoma State lost 51-48 to Oklahoma in a wild Bedlam game.

Texas/Big 12

NO. 23 TEXAS (8-3, 5-3 BIG 12) AT NO. 7 KANSAS STATE (10-1, 7-1), 7 P.M. (ABC)

LINE: Kansas State by 10 1/2.

SERIES RECORD: Kansas State leads 7-5.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: Kansas State can claim its second Big 12 title and earn the league's automatic BCS bowl berth by beating the Longhorns, something they've done four straight times. In fact, the Wildcats could have both wrapped up by kickoff if Oklahoma loses to TCU earlier in the day. Texas, meanwhile, is playing for pride — and a better bowl destination — after losing to the Horned Frogs last week.

NO. 12 OKLAHOMA (9-2, 7-1 BIG 12) AT TCU (7-4, 4-4), 11 A.M. (ESPN)

LINE: Oklahoma by 6 1/2

SERIES RECORD: Oklahoma leads 7-4

WHAT'S AT STAKE: Oklahoma can clinch at least a share of the Big 12 title with a win, and then would go to a BCS game if Kansas State loses to Texas on later Saturday night. The Sooners are seeking their 11th 10-win season under coach Bob Stoops. Bowl-eligible TCU is looking for its first Big 12 home victory, and trying to reach at least eight wins for the eighth consecutive season.

NO. 24 OKLAHOMA ST. (7-4, 5-3 BIG 12) AT BAYLOR (6-5, 3-5), 11 A.M. (FX)

LINE: Oklahoma State by 4

SERIES RECORD: Oklahoma St. 18-12

WHAT'S AT STAKE: Oklahoma State can still finish third alone in the Big 12 with a win over the Bears and a Texas loss at Kansas State. Baylor is trying to win at least seven games in three consecutive seasons for the first time since 1949-51, and is already set for its third consecutive bowl trip.

Top 25

SEC CHAMPIONSHIP NO. 2 ALABAMA (11-1, 7-1) VS. NO. 3 GEORGIA (11-1, 7-1), 3 P.M. (CBS)

LINE: Alabama by 7.

SERIES RECORD: Alabama leads 36-25-4.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: This is, in essence, a national semifinal game. The winner is assured of moving on face top-ranked Notre Dame in the BCS championship game at Miami on Jan. 7. Alabama is the defending national champion but would like a double title this season. A year ago, the Crimson Tide finished No. 1 without even making the SEC final. Georgia is trying to win its first SEC crown since 2005 and make up for a disappointing performance in last year's title game, a 42-10 loss to LSU.

ACC CHAMPIONSHIP GEORGIA TECH (6-6, 5-3) VS. NO.13 FLORIDA ST (10-2, 7-1), 7 P.M. (ABC)

LINE: Florida State by 14.

SERIES RECORD: Florida State 12-9-1.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: Atlantic Division winner Florida State has won a dozen league championships since joining the league in 1992. Georgia Tech, which qualified after Miami officials decided to skip the game in anticipation of NCAA sanctions, defeated Clemson in the league's championship game in 2009, but was forced to vacate the title because of NCAA sanctions. Georgia Tech's string of 16 straight seasons being bowl eligible may also be in jeopardy if it loses.

BIG TEN CHAMPIONSHIP NO. 14 NEBRASKA (10-2, 7-1) VS. WISCONSIN (7-5, 4-4), 7:17 P.M. (FOX)

LINE: Nebraska by 3.

SERIES RECORD: Nebraska leads 4-3.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: Legends Division champion Nebraska, which won the teams' September meeting 30-27, is playing for its first conference title since winning the Big 12 in 1999 and its first BCS bid since playing for the 2001 national championship in the Rose Bowl. Wisconsin gets to play for a third straight Big Ten championship by default because the teams ahead of the Badgers in the Leaders Division, Ohio State and Penn State, are ineligible.

NICHOLLS STATE (1-9) AT NO. 16 OREGON STATE (8-3) 1:30 P.M. (PAC-12 NETWORK)

LINE: No line.

SERIES RECORD: First meeting.

WHAT'S AT STAKE: This game was supposed to be the season opener for both Nicholls State and Oregon State, but it got postponed when Hurricane Isaac took aim at the Colonels' Thibodeaux, La., campus and closed down the school. Nicholls State is struggling with a seven-game losing streak, while the Beavers are coming off a 48-24 loss to intrastate rival Oregon in the Civil War.

NO. 25 BOISE STATE (9-2, 6-1 MOUNTAIN WEST) AT NEVADA (7-4, 4-3), 2:30 P.M. (ABC)

LINE: Boise State by 9 1/2

SERIES RECORD: Boise State leads 25-13

WHAT'S AT STAKE: Boise State — which is off to the Big East next season — can share the Mountain West Conference title with Fresno State and San Diego State, its fifth straight league title. It also would clinch the Broncos seventh consecutive 10-win season — the longest such streak in the nation. Nevada, which already has accepted an invitation to play a Pac-12 opponent in the New Mexico Bowl on Dec. 15, could claim only its second win in the last 12 games against the Broncos after upsetting then third-ranked BSU at Mackay Stadium in 2010 in overtime, 34-31.

Domineering mother keeps her son on a short leash

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend "Alex's" mom is the most controlling person I have ever encountered. We only get to see each other on weekends because he lives an hour away from me. When we do see each other, it's for one-third of the day. Alex has to spend the other two-thirds with her. I'm 22, and he is 21.

He is also not allowed to stay with me. Alex has to lie to her about where he's staying in order to be able to spend time with me. His mom has added a feature to his cellphone in order to see where he is 24/7 and would cancel his service if he refused it.

I love my boyfriend unconditionally, but his mom is driving us both crazy and turning our relationship into a trio. We have tried getting her to back off, but it just makes her worse. I am at a loss as to what to do. What do you think we should do? — EXTREMELY WORRIED IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR EXTREMELY WORRIED: Frankly, you should be worried. Your boyfriend is an adult who seems to be firmly under his mother's thumb. He is completely dependent. At 21, Alex's activities should not be monitored, nor should he be spending two-thirds of his day with his mother. If nothing else, he should be looking for a job so he can sever the umbilical cord before it strangles him. You can't fix this. HE has to do it.

DEAR ABBY: My former roommate and I took a short trip to Florida. We agreed we would split the hotel costs. I'd reserve the room; she would reimburse me after the trip.

She paid me a month later, and I deposited her check as soon as I could get to my bank, which was three weeks later. When the check went through, she attacked me because she said it drained her account! I apologized, but told her I was upset that she was making it seem like it was my fault.

I think that if someone is low on funds, the person should be more diligent in balancing his or her checkbook. Had I known she had money problems, I would have waited to deposit her check. It has been months, and my once-best friend still won't speak to me. Was I wrong? — AT FAULT? IN KENTUCKY

DEAR AT FAULT?: No, you were not. It was your friend's responsibility to make sure there were enough funds in her account to cover the check she gave you. She may be embarrassed, which is why she doesn't want to talk to you. People who are angry at themselves sometimes blame others. It's a sign of immaturity.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Kristen" for seven months. She is great as far as personality, physical chemistry, similar likes and dislikes, and patience go. She is ALMOST everything I have ever wanted in a girl. However, I have never called her "beautiful," although she has made a couple of "fishing" comments to try to get me to say it. In my eyes, that would be a lie.

Kristen is attractive, but not beautiful. I have always thought that anyone I'm planning on spending the rest of my life with would be "beautiful" to ME, and I'd let her know accordingly. I can't discuss this with family or friends because I'm afraid they will think I'm shallow. Your thoughts? — NOT SHALLOW IN PHOENIX

DEAR NOT SHALLOW: Candidly, I think that in spite of all of her wonderful qualities, Kristen is not "the one" for you. And you are not "the one" for her because what she needs is validation you can't give her.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Dec. 1, 2012:

This year you have the ability to expand your inner circle, and you'll get to know your friends even better. This closeness could result in you meeting someone significant; however, be aware that your introduction might take place through a quarrel. If you are attached, you will work on trying not to argue about money. Perhaps having separate checking accounts would help; it is worth a try. CANCER can be very caring and vulnerable. Be careful, as he or she could develop a hard shell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ You might not respond well to a power play, but that's not surprising. Tension could build, even among family and friends. You are likely to need a way to relieve stress. Try some exercise. Know that others might prefer some other type of release. Tonight: Make your world lively.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Your ability to see through someone's behavior makes all the difference in how you relate to this person. Perhaps, at the right moment, you might choose to explain this. It is likely that this individual doesn't have that kind of insight into his or her behavior. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Treat someone to dinner or a movie earlier in the day. For whatever reason, this person is feeling less than OK. Your caring makes all the difference and helps this person calm down. See what a little nurturing can do? Tonight: Your treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You might be taken aback by how difficult certain people are. Consider going off on your own until you find friends who are more easygoing. If you go shopping, you might have more than one reason to release some anger. Tonight: All smiles. Others will feel better soon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Others are not looking at life the same way you are. You are about living well; they are about being right — at least for today. And they are combative, too. Go off and do something you love until the situation calms down, and you will be better off. Tonight: Remain unavailable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Focus on a friendship, and try to avoid any heavy conflicts. Others can get stuck on expressing their different points of view. Through your gentleness, you have the ability to warm the hearts of loved ones. Look the other way if you encounter a tantrum. Tonight: Off with a jovial pal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You want to claim your power, and others let you know that your attitude is unacceptable. You might get into a conflict, or you could choose to ignore the situation. If a loved one doesn't want to do something you want to do, try to find a different mutually agreeable activity. Tonight: In the limelight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Speak your mind, and others will listen. Count on repeating the conversation at a later date. Unknowingly, you could be overbearing in how you express yourself right now. On the other hand, it could just be that others are being very sensitive. Tonight: Your smile is a winner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ A loved one makes certain requests. Ask yourself if you can respond positively. Do try; otherwise, you could be arguing for quite a while. At least try to postpone your response until later. Someone you meet today could be very different from what you think. Tonight: Stay calm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Defer to others, if possible. You might disagree about certain issues, so be careful. Expressing your feelings at this point could cause a control game to erupt. The less said the better. Save a discussion for a different day. Tonight: Sorting through invitations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ Get into a project and allow others to do their thing. Maintain a caring and neutral stance, as people easily could become triggered and very disagreeable. Listen to news from an older friend or a family member. Accept this person's offer. Tonight: Know that you don't need to do anything.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ While others moan and groan, you work to find solutions. Though many of your friends might not hear your ideas, some will. Allow more caring to flow between you and a loved one. Join this person and share a favorite pastime together. Tonight: Let the good times roll.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
Christmas is only a few weeks away, and despite the usual holiday stress of shopping and writing holiday cards, I have an additional problem. For weeks my son has been begging me for a pet. I could handle it if he wanted a puppy or a kitten, but he wants a snake. I told him no way, but he's been working on me. He keeps his room neat, gets A's on his math tests and even takes out the garbage without me asking! I hate the idea of giving him a snake, but his new attitude and hard work is tempting me to reconsider. I'm asking you guys if I should give in because I saw an ad in the classifieds offering free pet snakes. I have to make a decision soon, but I'm worried what will happen if my son looses interest in this thing. I certainly don't want to end up caring for it. Any ideas? Please hurry before my son makes me breakfast in bed and I give in.

Cash: If you cave-in after getting breakfast in bed, just make sure he does the dishes too.

Carry: Getting a child to do chores around the house is never easy, but your son seems to have found his motivation.

Cash: And he's carried it over to his schoolwork, studying to get good grades. With the holidays right around the corner, there's no doubt he's pouring on the good behavior.

Carry: Your thinking is correct in that his accomplishments should be recognized, but that doesn't mean you have to give in to getting him a pet snake. Consider another reward for his good deeds, like the latest version of his favorite video game or a trip to the amusement park.

Cash: As with any pet, you should think about it seriously before adding one to your family. People often get in the mood around holidays and give a pet as a gift. However, caring for that pet continues long after the holiday spirit subsides.

Carry: Now if your son is truly interested in snakes, don't let your fear prevent you from getting one. It's important to offer encouragement regardless of your concerns. Although snakes are drastically different from a dog or cat, they can be a great experience for you and your son. However, postponing it a few months until after the holidays may be a good idea to see if your son's interest continues.

Cash: In the meantime, enjoy his newfound behavior. You never know, you may wake up to the smell of french toast.

Fast Facts

Snake Doctor

Although poisonous snakes are often feared, they are proving to be very valuable creatures. Over a dozen diagnostic tests and drugs are derived from snake venom. Preliminary research has also found that a natural compound from some snake venom may prevent the growth of cancer tumors. Unlike traditional chemotherapy, these compounds can distinguish between healthy cells and the bad cancer cells. This has the potential to ease many of the debilitating side effects that go along with cancer treatment.

Being Unique

Snakes can make great pets, but look at the different species before getting one. For first time owners, experts recommend getting a corn snake, king snake or ball python. These snakes are generally gentle with simpler feeding needs than other species. However, a proper escape-proof enclosure is essential for any snake since these creatures are very persistent at trying to escape. Just remember that like any pet, snakes require commitment. With a life span of up to 20 years or more, you can expect a pet snake to be around for quite a while.

Major Mixup

I thought growing up with two sisters was a challenge, but it's nothing compared to being a Mom of two boys.

My first-born Tommy got a pet snake two years ago when he turned ten. Since I'm not a fan of snakes, he has to keep the 4-foot python in his room.

My younger son Jeremy, only six, wanted to keep up with his older brother, so we got him a hamster. Within the first week there was trouble. When I noticed the hamster missing from the cage, I panicked and asked Jeremy if it escaped.

I calmed down when he said he knew exactly where it was. However, the panic returned when he added, "He was lonely, so I put him in with Tommy's snake to play."

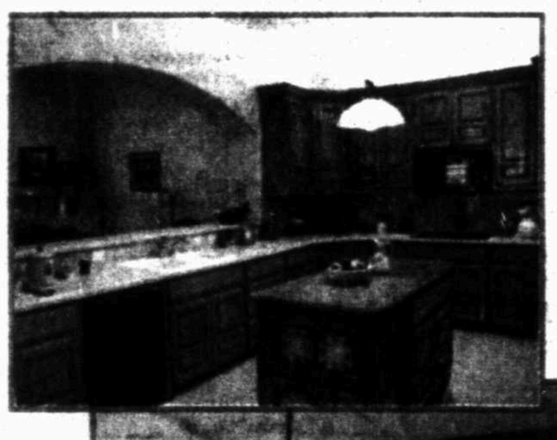
4701 Hilltop

Northwest Midland is one of the best locations in town to view the sunsets—there are not too many buildings obstructing your view. From this home located at 4701 Hilltop, you can enjoy the scenery from your front porch as there are several seating areas. This home, built in 2005 on a corner and featuring 2,486 feet (per appr.) has four bedrooms, three full bathrooms, one dining area, and two living areas. Schools for this neighborhood include Greathouse Elementary, Abell Jr. High and Lee High. It has quick access to shopping and dining. Once inside, you will think you are in a new house due to the care it has been given.

The home is built of reddish brick with stone accents and there are several brick-lined flowerbeds out front with an abundance of shrubs and plants. Wood floors greet you as you pass through the decorative iron front door. Plantation shutters, crown molding, vaulted ceilings and arched doorways and windows are just a few of the many unique touches to this home. All bedrooms in the home have walk-in closets, like-new plush carpet and ceiling fans. The first sequestered bedroom is to the left of the entry. A full bathroom is right outside the bedroom door making it convenient for guests as well.

Ahead of the entry is the open den, kitchen and informal dining area. A wall of windows looks out to the covered back patio and beautiful flowerbeds. The large den is warm and inviting and features a corner fireplace. The kitchen has a wide arched opening to the den allowing those in the kitchen to be included on the fun in the den. You may not want to leave this kitchen with the beautifully stained oak cabinets, black appliances, tile floor and backsplash and corner pantry. A granite topped island provides bonus prep area for your favorite recipes and adds storage with drawers and cabinets. An area over the cabinets allows for display. Pull up a chair to the kitchen counter for dining or move to the informal dining area. A hallway off the den takes you to two bedrooms that are joined by a Jack and Jill bathroom. One room faces the side of the house while the other has a view out front.



Another hallway leads to the sequestered master suite. A vaulted ceiling adds height and an airy feeling to this relaxing getaway. An exterior door is conveniently located here so you can enjoy the patio. Enter your new bathroom area to enjoy two dressing areas and sinks, a jetted tub and separate shower. A large walk-in closet with built-in shelves is ready and waiting to keep you organized. Outside the door of the master is the laundry room complete with sink, an area for hanging clothing and a storage closet. Access to the three car garage is nearby as well.

Additional amenities to this home include: reverse osmosis system, jetted tub, two sequestered bedrooms, corner lot, water softener, automatic garage door opener and fireplace. Listed at only $299,950, more information on this beautiful home may be obtained by contacting Sandy J. Hanson at (432) 638-3819. MLS# 92656

Lots & Land

HUNTERS PARADISE!!

In Coleman County.
600 acres of virgin land.
Never hunted!
Live creek,
Lots of deer & turkey.
Ranch house with all amenities.

325-518-3745.

SPORTSMAN'S OR HORSE LOVER'S DELIGHT!
116 Total acres with open pastures and woods located approximately 5 miles from the two premier lakes in Northeast Texas. 3 of the 6 ponds on the property (one over 3 acres) are stocked with bass, catfish and sunfish. Warm up your fishing trip with fishing in your own lakes then head to the big lakes with your boat! Rustic cabin with deck is the perfect place for that early morning cup of coffee. Or, if you prefer horses or cattle, there are over 50 acres of pasture land for grazing including 8 acres with in-ground irrigation to maintain your own hay crop. The main residence is a 2148 sq. ft. custom brick with 3 bedrooms, 2.5 baths, 2 car garage, custom cabinets, wood burning stove in living area with cathedral ceiling and a bay room breakfast area with a beautiful view of the East Texas sunrises. The other residence is an 1196 sq. ft. frame home with 2 bedrooms and 1 bath and would make an excellent ranch foreman's home or rental income property. There is a bunkhouse that could be used for a small residence. The property also has a large barn, equipment storage shed with RV parking, hay barn, loafing shed, working pen, 4 deep and 2 shallow wells, 1500 feet of county read frontage, 9 acres of Pecan trees and abundant deer and other wildlife. It is located 60 miles east of the Dallas- FT. Worth Metroplex and is the perfect home or week-end property. For info call 903-268-5934.
