Candidates: No new ground in meeting

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

Opponents for the vacant 69th District legislative seat broke little new political ground in a tightly structured measure-the-candidate meeting Tuesday night on the campus of Howard College.

The meeting — sponsored by the Howard County Farm Bureau — featured Republican Troy Fraser and Democrat Johnnie Lou Avery.

Under the directive of moderator Joe Maley, director of state affairs/State Farm Bureau, candidates were allowed five minutes to make opening and closing statements and two minutes to respond to each of the seven questions posed in advance.

Neither candidate was allowed to answer questions from the audience following final comments.

During an opening statement, Fraser, who called himself a small businessman and economic developer, said he would "hold the line" on spending, expressed concern about increasing insurance rates, advocated a strong educational system and advised if voters chose him as their legislator he would represent "agriculture's best interests."

Avery, who termed her candidacy "brand new," said she entered the race with strong credentials, buyoed by her educational and business background.

"I have long years of public service and political involvement," she said.

Avery said she would keep an open mind on all issues and has gained invaluable political experience from "good mentors" like Congressman Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; state representative John Montford, D-Lubbock; U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bensten, D-Texas, and state representative Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield.

"I've learned how to build bridges to bring people together to get things done," she said.

Although admitting that she wasn't an expert "on anything," Avery said she is a "master at doing my homework and I listen to my constituents."

When asked what his position is on future state spending and taxes, Fraser criticized recent Texas legislatures for increasing spending by 33 percent.

He also chided former 69th District Representative Larry Don Shaw, who withdrew from the race on Aug. 11, for being responsible for voting in favor of $10.5 billion in tax increases during his four terms of office.

Stating he was "totally opposed" to a state income tax, Fraser said he would co-sponsor a constitutional amendment against any future tax hikes.

Avery also said she generally opposed to a state income tax, although she would consider the possibility of voting for one if it would improve the quality of life in Texas — especially exemplary education.

She advised that any cuts in spending should be made equally.

Asked what priorities the state should assign to water usage, Avery said water is "the number one long-range priority," and that legislators must "protect the rights of property owners."

"If the local communities take care of their own problems we won't have to have regulations from the state level," she said.

Fraser said emphatically that property owners should have unrestricted rights to underground water and should be protected from "seizure in eminent domain."

Fraser blasted Judge Harley Clark's ruling that the state's system of public education is unconstitutional, saying "As long as

Farm Bureau delays endorsement

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Exercising one of its options, the Texas Farm Bureau chose Tuesday night not to immediately endorse a candidate for the 69th legislative district seat.

Following the bureau's "measuring of the candidates" forum, word circulated among attendees that the bureau would announce its endorsement after interviewing Republican Troy Fraser and Democrat Johnnie Lou Avery.

However, at 10:15 p.m., after each of the candidates had been interviewed privately, Joe Maley, director of state affairs for the Farm Bureau, announced that the bureau's endorsement would not be made public until Sept. 19.

The bureau's local candidate evaluation committee, which had five members voting, chose to cast secret ballots instead of endorsing a candidate immediately, Maley said.

Committee representatives casting votes were: Don McKinney, Howard County Farm Bureau; Alan Dierschke, Howard County Farm Bureau; Larry Turnbough, Reeves County Farm Bureau president; Mike Moates, Howard County Farm Bureau president; and Maley.

The local committee serves in an advisory capacity to the state bureau, Maley said.

The state bureau "places an awful lot of emphasis on what our folks here suggest," he said, but added that the final endorsement decision will be made by the state bureau.

Fraser, Avery draw full house; reactions diverse

The first public discussion of issues involving the candidates for the 69th legislative district seat attracted an audience of approximately 200 local residents on Tuesday night.

By the time the Texas Farm Bureau "measure-the-candidate" meeting began at 7:30 p.m. most of the 200 seats in the Cactus Room at Howard College were occupied, and a few people stood in the back of the room.

The event — that allowed Democrat Johnnie Lou Avery and Republican Troy Fraser to answer questions provided to them in advance — attracted community members from all walks of life.

Educators, business executives, homemakers, farmers, and government officials were among the audience members.

Reaction from those in attendance to proceedings was similarly diverse.

"I thought it was a real good discussion," said Raul Marquez, president of the Big Spring chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens. "The candidates offered good responses to the questions, and were very knowledgeable of all the topics."

Marquez — who has yet to decide who he will support for the legislative position — said the candidates' positions on educational and agricultural issues would strongly influence his decision.

H.E. Tubb said he thought "both of the candidates did about the same."

Tubb said he has not decided who he will support yet, but added, "I did hear one of them say they might raise taxes. When your running for office you don't mention raising taxes."

Avery said she was against a state income tax, but she did not rule out voting for a tax increase as Fraser did.

Partisan opinions were expressed by avid supporters of both candidates.

"I thought Troy Fraser did an excellent job," said Billie McLaughlin, a member of the Fraser campaign team. "I know that Johnnie Lou is just getting started, and she'll have to strengthen her presentation."

Mack Underwood, founder of the Howard County Democrats Club, lauded Avery's performance and criticized Fraser for misrepresenting Avery's association with Larry Don Shaw, the 69th district's former representative.

Avery was not Shaw's campaign manager as Fraser said she was, Underwood said.

"(Fraser) has gotten away with saying that . . . , but it's not true," he said. "She's always been (Shaw's) good friend and landlady

Tough issues before elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is taking up a politically potent anti-drug bill as Congress returns from vacation to face a long list of troublesome issues made all the more contentious by election campaign tensions.

Among the issues that remain to be settled before lawmakers quit to campaign for re-election are spending levels on Star Wars, arms control issues, a major overhaul of the welfare system, competing proposals on child care and aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Many of those same issues are being debated by Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis in their contest for the presidency. Their running mates, Sens. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, left the campaign trail — at least for the day — to be on hand for the resumption of a congressional session that broke in mid-August in advance of the Republican National Convention.

Both chambers convened Tuesday for what was expected to be the final congressional session of the year.

Leaders of the Democratic-controlled Congress hope to finish their work by Sept. 30 to permit members time to campaign for re-election Nov. 8. All 435 House seats will be up for grabs along with 33 of the 100 Senate positions.

Legislators from both parties say the imminent election could affect both rhetoric and votes in Congress.

For example, Democrats may push for votes on their legislation to increase the minimum wage from $3.35 per hour to $4.55 hourly over a three-year period, an increase opposed by President Reagan.

"If the Republicans try to dream up some vote to try to embarrass Sen. Bentsen, they have to be aware that whatever they do could also catch Sen. Quayle," said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

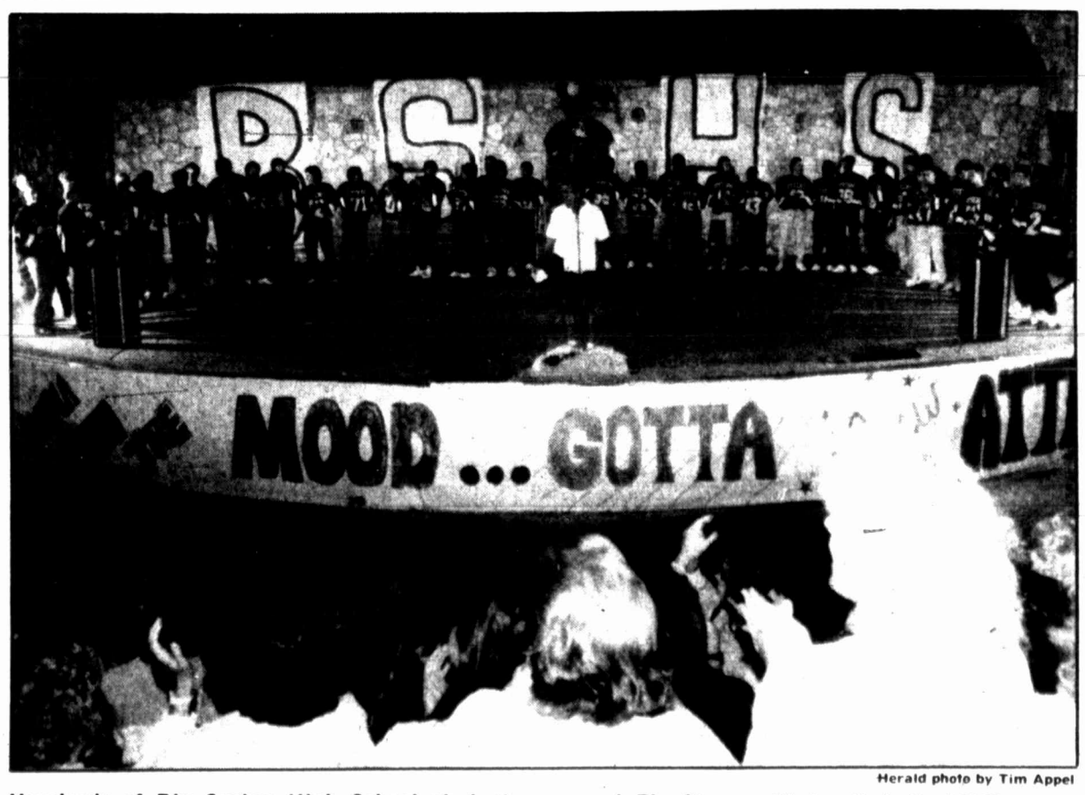

The Pentagon budget is likely to be the most contentious issue, they said. Reagan vetoed Congress' first military budget bill last month because he didn't like its arms control policy restrictions or cuts in his proposed Star Wars budget.

Another campaign issue, child care, is the subject of numerous bills in both chambers. The fastest-moving bill is the Democratic-backed $2.5 billion Act for Better Child Care Services to provide an array of services for children and parents.

Though Reagan and other conservatives oppose the measure, Democrats have declined to compromise. Democratic leaders in both chambers could bring the measure to a vote, setting up an election-season confrontation with the White House.

In addition, Congress has passed and Reagan has signed only two of the 13 appropriation bills needed to pay for the federal government when the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1. But the other 11 have been passed separately by each chamber and are now in House-Senate conference committees to resolve differences.

The Senate version of the military spending bill also includes a Democratic-backed Contra aid proposal, which the House is likely to approve with few changes. The current Contra aid package expires Sept. 30. The new plan calls for $27 million in "humanitarian" aid — food, clothing, and shelter — and sets up procedures for a subsequent vote on releasing $16.5 million in frozen military supplies.

Floodwaters recede but more rain feared

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Floodwaters were receding in most of Mexico on Tuesday but communities in northern Veracruz, hit by Hurricane Debby last week, feared rain in the mountains would send rivers out of their banks again later in the week.

"It takes five days for the water from Mexico City rains to arrive here. That's what we're afraid of," said Fortunato Guzman Rivera, mayor of Panuco, 190 miles northeast of the capital on the Panuco River.

At least 34 people have been swept away by swollen rivers or died in mudslides and thousands were evacuated during more than a week of rain dumped by two hurricanes, Debby in the Gulf of Mexico and Kristy in the Pacific. An undetermined number of poorly built homes were damaged or destroyed.

Remnants of Debby continued to cloud skies over parts of southern Mexico on Tuesday, Kristy, which never crossed land, moved out to sea earlier.

More than 200 people were evacuated from the banks of the Panuco and the town of La Barranca on Tuesday, and several hundred U.S. tourists stranded in resort areas of the south for three days were flown out to Mexico City.

Along the shattered 220-mile southern coast road between the resorts of Ixtapa and Acapulco, a motley fleet of buses, trucks and jeeps provided transportation in relays. Passengers had to carry their luggage past army troops across damaged or washed out bridges before starting the next leg of their journey.

He said 10,000 people had been evacuated from nine communities near the point where the Santiago empties into the Pacific.

Tens of thousands of acres of flooded cropland were being surveyed to determine losses, said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Veracruz state officials estimated that half the corn crop in the northern part of the state was lost.

Rescue teams continued to take food and medical supplies to northern Veracruz by both truck and helicopter. Guadalupe Lopez of the state government office in Xalapa.

Stranded tourists began finding ways out of the Ixtapa-Zihuatenejo resort, where the airport runway had been flooded and covered with mud since Saturday.

GALVESTON — This is an artist's rendition of the victim of an unsolved death in Galveston that occurred over the Labor Day weekend. The only clues police have is that the female was in her mid-20s, 5 feet 7 inches, 180 pounds. Police say the victim's face had been burned beyond recognition

Police seek name of homicide victim

GALVESTON (AP) — Authorities hoping an artist's rendering of a woman's face will help them identify a partially burned body found behind a department store.

Police said an 11-year-old boy discovered the nude body of a woman in a field behind a K mart store about 9:30 a.m. Monday. The woman's face had been burned beyond recognition.

Sgt. Leo Singleton said the police investigation has been "severely handicapped" with few clues to the woman's identity and no final report from medical examiners on what caused her death.

A full report from the Galveston County Medical Examiner's office is expected to be completed today, he said.

The boy who found the body said when at first he thought it was a "bunch of boxes," but as he got closer, he realized it was a person.

"I knew it was dead," he told the Galveston Daily News. "But I didn't want to get close to look."

Houston police artist Lois Gibson spent several hours Tuesday afternoon examining the body and devised what police hope is an accurate depiction of the victim.

The woman is described as a 5-foot-7, 180-pound white female who could be in her mid 20s. She has hazel eyes and shoulder-length brown hair. She had a mole below her right nostril, a small scar on the right side of her lip and a long scar on her lower right abdomen.

Police believe the woman had been dead for less than 12 hours when the body was found. Authorities determined the woman's assailant had placed a cloth on her face and shoulder and set the cloth ablaze. But aside from the burns and some scratches, police said there were no other wounds on the body.

The body was nude except for one sock. Another sock was found about 20 feet from the body, police said.

Laborer drowns in water trench mishap

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin construction laborer drowned in a trench when an underground water pipe on which he was working was inadvertently opened, officials said.

Police say Eluterio Tomayo, 49, was connecting a 16-inch pipe to a 24-inch water main when the accident occurred Tuesday. The force of the rushing water shoved a partly connected, 500-pound metal valve against Tomayo, pinning him as the 10-foot-deep trench flooded.

A second worker, Eustolio Vasquez, scrambled out of the trench, near the intersection of U.S. 183 and Farm-to-Market Road 620 in Williamson County.

"All I heard was a scream and I turned and got out," Vasquez, 46, told police.

Williamson County Justice of the Peace Jennifer Mattingly ruled that Tomayo drowned, based on an autopsy by Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo.

"It's just one of those tragic incidents," said Austin Police Sgt. Ed Balagia. "Whoever turned on the water didn't realize the two men were still in the hole."

Tomayo and Vasquez were employees of the Haegelin Construction Co. A company spokesman declined to comment on the accident until the police investigation is completed.

A series of fatal construction accidents in recent years prompted Texas legislators to enact tougher standards for trenching. Travis County Attorney Ken Oden has prosecuted several construction contractors for criminal neglect related to fatal cave-ins.

"Like any case we have of this type, I'll be running this by the district attorney's office," Balagia said. "They'll look and see if any law has been violated."

Federal inspectors from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration also are investigating.

Hispanic population growing, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Hispanics has grown by more than one-third since 1980 and now represents 8.1 percent of the nation's population, the Census Bureau says.

In a report issued Tuesday, the bureau also said the rate of Hispanic growth is nearly five times that for the rest of the population, and more than half of all Hispanics in this country live in just two states, California and Texas.

The bureau estimated there were 19.4 million Americans of Hispanic background as of last March. That is 34 percent more than the 14.5 million people who listed themselves as Hispanics in the 1980 census.

The nation's non-Hispanic population increased by about 7 percent in the same period.

About half the Hispanic increase was a result of immigration and half resulted from birth rates exceeding death rates.

While people of Spanish ancestry made up a growing share of the nation's residents, they are extremely concentrated geographically, the bureau found. About one-third, or 33.9 percent, live in California, and 21.3 percent live in Texas, meaning those two states account for well over half of all Hispanics in the United States.

Other findings of the report include:

—The unemployment rate among Hispanics was 8.5 percent, compared with 5.8 percent for non-Hispanics.

New plastic market may inspire cleanup

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Beaumont plastic company hopes to make beachcombing a more profitable enterprise in a pilot program that will pay volunteers to gather garbage along Galveston beaches.

In conjunction with Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's Adopt-a-Beach program, Lewis Plastics Inc. this fall will recycle plastic trash deposited at a collection site in Galveston and shipped to the Beaumont plant.

The company will take such items as milk jugs, grocery bags and antifreeze bottles and grind them up to produce high-density plastic pellets that can be used to manufacure plastic pipes, garbage bags, flower pots and hardware fixtures.

The company pays 7 cents a pound for pure plastics and 5 cents a pound for plastic with paper labels, because of the cost of removing labels. The plant is not equipped to recycle such products as polystyrene disposable cups.

"It's not a lot of money, but it is better than throwing it away," Eddie Lewis, president of Lewis Plastics, told the Beaumont Enterprise.

In September, plastic made up 56 percent of the 305.6 tons of trash collected during the Texas Coastal Clean-Up.

"We needed someone to get the plastic to, and there are not too many people who do plastic recycling," said Angela Farias, director of the beach cleanup program similar to those conducted along Texas highways.

The Beaumont company is also taking part in a program to recover plastic waste from ships. A federal law effective Dec. 31 prohibits ships from dumping plastic scraps at sea.

Lewis said he would lease land from various ports so ships could drop off their plastic scraps, hiring workers to sort through and compact the trash before sending it to the Beaumont plant.

"A ship goes to sea for 30 to 40 days; they have a lot of milk bottles, Coke bottles and other plastic debris," he said.

Lewis quit a plant management job in Orange nine years ago to start his own business packaging plastics, which he says is still struggling.

Airline announces expansion

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines has announced plans for another international expansion, this time into Latin America, by turning San Juan, Puerto Rico into a major connecting hub.

Plans to more than double the size of the airline's hub at San Juan, the smallest of its five hubs, were announced Tuesday by American Chairman Robert Crandall.

Announcement of the expansion sent the price of AMR Corp., parent of American, up 1 and five-eighths to 44 and seven-eighths on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday.

American plans to spend up to $100 million to turn San Juan into a major connecting hub for travel between Latin America and Europe, Crandall said. Currently, nearly all travel between Europe and Latin America flows through other airlines' hubs in Miami or New York.

Helicopter returned to pilot

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A Texas flying service operator accused of conspiracy in the airlift escape of three state prison inmates may get his helicopter back this week, a prosecutor says.

Charles Bella of El Paso insists he was hijacked during the July 11 breakout at the state penitentiary and that he had believed he was hired for a routine flying job connected with a real estate deal. However, he was charged with assisting the escape and with conspiracy, and his French-made Aerospatiale Gazelle helicopter was kept by the state police in lieu of bail.

Assistant District Attorney Lloyd Drager said Tuesday his office won't oppose releasing the helicopter to Bella. Drager said the chopper isn't worth much because it's not airworthy and needs several repairs to correct safety violations.

He also said he doesn't believe Bella would fail to appear in court.

County ignores AIDS plan

DALLAS (AP) — Faced with no money in the proposed county budget for combating the deadly disease, members of the 143-person Dallas County AIDS Planning Commission have criticized county commissioners for ignoring the panel's recommendations.

"It just seems like the report dropped into a bottomless well," said Rex Shannon, chief executive officer of Fidelity Union and chairman of the commission's insurance task force.

Appointed by Dallas County commissioners, the panel worked 8,300 hours over a period of six months before issuing a much-hailed report in June that mapped out the county's response to the epidemic.

Panel members unanimously called for the creation of a county board of health and recommended increased funding for the health department to establish that board.

Asked to predict what would be done with the recommendations in the report, County Commissioner Jim Jackson said, "Not much.

"This is not a year in which there are going to be a lot of new programs simply because we just don't have the money," he said. "The report hasn't even been a real subject of deep conversation."

Hundreds line up for jobs

AMARILLO (AP) — Hundreds of Amarillo-area residents have lined up for jobs as laborers, carpenters and equipment operators as construction begins on a new maximum-security prison.

More than 500 people picked up applications Tuesday for employment as construction workers at Amarillo's new state prison, and about the same number of applicants is expected today, officials said. Tuesday was the first day the jobs were offered to the public.

Most of the construction workers for the 2,250-bed, maximum-security prison will be hired locally, said Mike Riley, local Texas Employment Commission supervisor.

Common practice is for out-of-town companies to bring in supervisors and equipment and then hire workers from the area, Riley said.

So far, TEC is only handling the hiring process for Clearwater Constructors of Austin. But, Riley said, four subcontractors, also out-of-town companies, are likely to be using TEC services.

Grand jury will review death case

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The investigation into the death of 26-year-old Jimmy Carrillo will probably not be completed until a Howard County grand jury convenes next month, Detective Sgt. Bill King said.

Carrillo's body was found early Saturday in the parking lot of the Ritz Theatre, 104 N. Main St.

King said they will be taking statements from four additional witnesses and gathering evidence for a grand jury to review.

The process of interviewing witnesses began the day Carrillo's body was discovered, King said.

He said he is waiting for the results of toxicology tests and said that process will take at least two weeks.

A preliminary autopsy conducted on Saturday by Dr. Robert Rember revealed Carrillo died from aspiration — inhaling of foreign objects or materials into the lungs — after his head struck the pavement following a fight.

Services for Carrillo, 1014 Bluebonnett Ave., will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Interment will be in Mt. Olive Cemetery.

Government attempts to seize defective condoms

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The federal government has gone to court to try to confiscate nearly 50,000 condoms it says are defective.

The case is believed to mark the first time the federal Food and Drug Administration has sought to seize a batch of condoms for destruction.

The U.S. Attorney's office filed suit in U.S. District Court here on Tuesday asking the court to order the U.S. Marshal to seize the condoms from the warehouse of Mentor Corp. of Minneapolis.

The seizure would include about 44,350 condoms from a batch of contraceptives made for Mentor by an East Coast factory, said assistant U.S. Attorney Roylene Champeaux.

The FDA routinely tests condoms every three months before they leave manufacturers' warehouses. If more than three condoms of a batch of 1,000 leak, the batch is declared substandard, said Mentor spokesman Al Mannino.

Previously, manufacturers were allowed to destroy the condoms and file affidavits with the FDA stating they had been destroyed, he said.

But the FDA is now taking a much tougher approach to condom quality control. Government health experts have advised use of condoms as a preventive measure against the spread of AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Judge Paul Magnuson is expected to sign the seizure order later this week, Champeaux said. Mentor will have until Nov. 10 to contest the seizure, according to the government's complaint. If Mentor does not file a claim for the return of the condoms, the government will destroy them, Champeaux said.

FDA inspectors declared the Mentor batch defective Aug. 1.

Although he said "there is no doubt in my mind there is inequity in funding for education," Fraser stated that local school boards should have control of the educational system.

He called education a "terribly serious issue."

Avery said property owners cannot continue to "bear the burden" of public education and noted that 40 select committees are meeting to find alternatives to the current system.

"Until the committees make their recommendations in October, I would defer on any inflammatory rhetoric on this issue," she said.

Avery did note that it is her goal to have quality education throughout the state.

Asked her views on the role of state government in farm employer/employee relations, Avery said she has recently noticed elected officials "putting more of government at the local level."

She called for "moderation" and for those involved to "see both sides of the issue."

Labor and management are currently working on a select committee to "come up with an answer," Avery noted.

Fraser said the workmen's compensation system "is out of control in the state of Texas," and advised that employers are required to contribute twice the rate of any other state in the union.

He said trial lawyers are finding "loopholes" in the law to win outrageous damage awards for "pain and suffering."

Asked his position on what regulations should be imposed on the use of pesticides, fertilizer and other similar compounds, Fraser said he favored keeping the workplace safe, but criticized Texas Agriculture Commissioner's Jim Hightower's "emotional" stand on pesticide restrictions.

He called Hightower's mandates on pesticides "totally unrealistic."

Avery expressed moderate disagreement, stating "some of the regulations have been brought about by use and misuse of fertilizers."

She encouraged "open dialogue" between state officials and farmers as a way to reach a compromise.

On the issue of agricultural use/valuation of property, Avery said the present laws, with some modification, must be kept intact to ensure property is not taxed into non-production.

Property owners could lose favorable agricultural treatment "if the public perceives abuse," Avery advised.

Fraser said he supports "value based on production."

In closing statements, Avery said a good legislator must listen to constituents and possess leadership qualities.

"Leadership is problem solving and hearing different perspectives. I would listen and know what the public expects and be capable of delivering," she advised.

Admitting she "doesn't have all the answers," Avery said she would attempt to bring about unity that would result in strength for West Texas interests in Austin.

Fraser's said his convictions are basic:

"I'm an extremely conservative person and my voting record in Austin would reflect the same."

He criticized Avery for refraining from speaking about Shaw, although she served as his campaign manager and adviser, and said that it is imperative to "keep the family farm profitable."

"As agriculture goes, West Texas goes," he said.

Following the meeting, Fraser said he addressed the same issues Tuesday night that he has been espousing to voters throughout the 69th district since he began campaigning in January.

"We must send someone strong who can be effective in Austin," he noted.

Avery said she was "delighted" with the responsiveness of people who attended the forum and characterized her showing last night this way:

"I expressed my view, Troy expressed his, and they're not that much different. The voters will have to decide who they want."

and that's all she's ever been to Larry Don Shaw."

Joe Reed, biology teacher at Big Spring High School, said he thought both candidates performed well.

Asked if he thought the candidates delivered contrasting messages, Reed said: "They differed in approach to the issues. It wasn't that they differed in the sense their solutions were diametrically opposed. But their approach to the solutions differed."

He said he thought the large turnout demonstrated an increased political involvement in Big Spring. He credited the Texas Farm Bureau for its role in bringing about the discussion.

"I appreciate the Farm Bureau for organizing this," he said. "We wouldn't have had any way else to hear them."

Jay and Beverly Warren also appreciated the opportunity to listen to the candidates.

"We just recently moved back to Big Spring, and we learned a lot about the candidates' stands on the issues," Jay Warren said.

Beverly Warren said she came to the event with an open mind, and left feeling that Fraser presented a stronger message.

"You knew where Troy Fraser stood a little more than Johnnie Lou Avery," she said. "I was real unsure of where Mrs. Avery stood. I felt like she was kind of creamy."

Jay Warren said the "canned format" benefitted the candidates, enabling them to prepare their answers to the questions. But the format was without "the element of surprise," he said.

"I would like to see some open type forums, especially ones where the people can question the candidates on the issues," he said.

Nancy Patrick praised both candidates for their performances.

"I don't believe I have ever seen two more excellent candidates working toward the same office," she said.

Patrick said she was especially impressed with Avery's presentation.

"I think Johnnie Lou is very knowledgeable of the issues," she said. "And she has a long history of being involved in community, state and national affairs."

Cameo closes for good

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Cameo Energy Homes is in the process of closing its doors permanently in Big Spring, Mike Bowers, president of Sunrizon Homes, Inc., said.

The local manufactured home plant closed July 19 as a result of an involuntary bankruptcy filed against its parent company, Sunrizon, but in mid-August Terry Wolfe, a member of Cameo's management, said the company was open and hiring back some employees.

Bowers had refused to comment on the status of the local company at that time.

Bowers said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Dallas that he has been debating whether to reopen the plant in Big Spring or keep a plant in another city open.

Bowers said he decided on the latter option.

"We have a few employees there (Big Spring) now stripping the plant," he said.

Sunrizon has five plants currently in operation — four in Texas and one in Louisiana, Bowers advised.

Asked if any Cameo Homes employees from Big Spring would be hired at the other plants, Bowers responded:

"There's always that possibility, but they are all fully staffed at the present time."

Before its closing in July, Cameo employed about 150 people and had a weekly payroll of between $35,000 and $40,000.

The plant at 11th Place and FM 700 has existed since 1971 but went through several owners before being purchased by Cameo Energy Homes in 1981.

Cameo officials announced in January plans to expand production by 25 percent and add at least 40 new employees to its workforce.

The company built what generally was considered a high-quality manufactured home.

"I certainly hope that Big Spring can attract another industry to replace us. The city has been a good friend and good business neighbor," Bowers said.

Debate issue is open for all

The question of presidential candidate debates has been in the news, and we have summary statements from both camps:

George Bush insists that the two face-to-face meetings his staff has offered, along with one between Dan Quayle and Lloyde Bentsen, is clearly quite enough. Michael Dukakis, on the other hand, says that three are needed between the main players in this 1988 presidential battle.

The Democrats' candidate has established a reputation for being a solid, on-his-feet speaker. George Bush has never been known for any such prowess, but he's hardly as poor as he paints himself — not a bad strategy in case he slips when the two share the same stage.

We don't believe that either George Bush or Michaal Dukakis (Lloyd Bentsen or Dan Quayle, for that matter) should have any more to say about this than you or I. It really is not a question of what these people insist is best for us.

It seems to us that because we are the ones who are putting 42 million U.S. dollar bills into each of their budgets, we all should have a voice in deciding what's best for you and me — which is both a right and a responsibility.

One of the ideas that might come forth on this matter, given some thought, is that standing before a podium, live audience and television audience, all in the glare of bright lights, is not the best quality possible in a president.

Wouldn't you feel more comfortable knowing that Michael Dukakis and George Bush can sit at a round table with their ties loosened and shirt collars open and carry on a normal conversation with, say, Ted Koppel, for instance. It would help them both to relax, just a little.

It seems rational to expect one of the two will be doing exactly that in the Oval Office next January, when tough decisions are to be made.

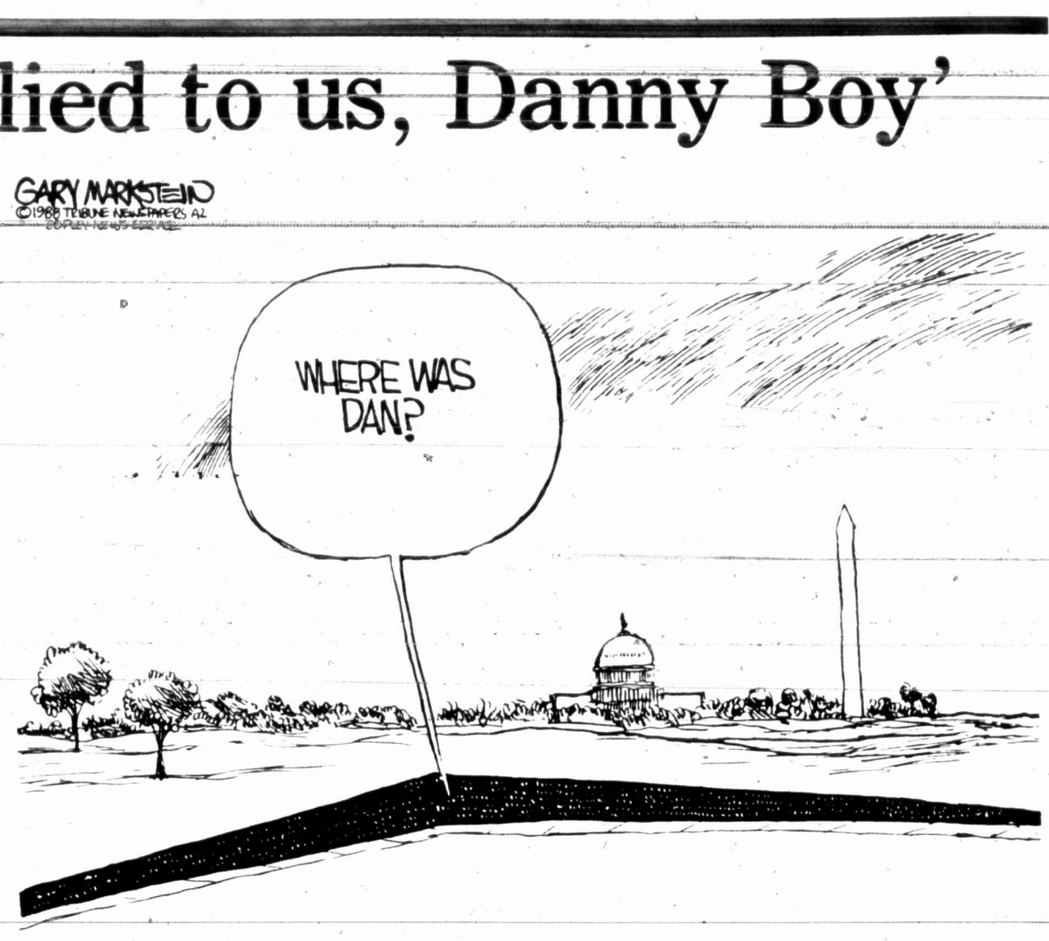

Surely they could do the same thing in front of us and show just how they would rationally discuss issues that confront this nation. And kid yourself not, there are very serious issues before us.

Such discussions, conducted three or four times during the course of the campaign with distinguished, apolitical individuals or pairs, would give us an excellent illustration as to how these people function in a way we've not yet seen.

The ease of criss-crossing this country and shouting at partisan audiences tells us little about the men. We pay the ticket for the performance; what type of performance are we willing to buy?

'You've lied to us, Danny Boy'

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

Danny Quayle, boy wonder Republican vice presidential candidate, might be able to get away with that high sounding "I was proud to serve in the National Guard" with some people, but not with all the other guys his age who were willing to try just about anything to keep their butts out of Vietnam 20 years ago.

I'm one of those guys. I'm Danny's same age, 41. The last thing in the world I wanted was to go to Vietnam. People were getting killed over there and nobody could quite figure out what for.

I didn't run off to Canada, and I didn't know anybody who could pull National Guard strings for me, but the doctor who examined me said, "Jump and down a few times," and then he listened to my heart.

What he discovered was that I had a heart valve that leaked. The draft board back home classified me 1-Y — instead of the dreaded 1-A — and I was to be called to duty only if the gooks made it to Chattanooga.

Since then, I've had two heart surgeries to repair leaking valves.

People say to me, "Two heart surgeries and you're only 41. How terrible."

Bull. My faulty heart probably saved my life. If it hadn't been for that, I likely would have stepped off a helicopter and into a rice paddy in 1968 and somebody wearing black pajamas with a name I couldn't pronounce would have put a bullet right between my eyes.

Figuring a way to stay out of Vietnam consumed guys my age.

I hear students now talking about how difficult it is in college. When I was in school, if you didn't take a full load or you flunked out, you'd be drafted and sent to war. Try that kind of pressure.

I can't tell you how many of my acquaintances were able to get into the National Guard. Socres, at least. They had basic training to go through and then there were all those weekends they had to play soldier, but as one brand-new National Guardsman told me back in '69, "It's a helluva lot better than walking around where there are land mines."

They weren't drafting schoolteachers back then, either. Suddenly, there were a lot of young, male, recent-graduates interested in being educators.

I can count at least four of my friends who got strings pulled here and there and had good words put in for them and were hired as schoolteachers. That's how they dodged the Vietnam bullet.

The entire system for picking men and boys for service in Vietnam was rotten and unfair. Why should college students get deferments?

And why was the National Guard available to some and not to others?

I don't blame Danny Quayle for wanting out of Vietnam. It was a lousy, stinking war that didn't accomplish a thing but get a lot of good people maimed and killed.

But admit it, Danny. Don't try to kid us. You didn't want to go and you knew the right people who could keep you from going.

You've lied to us, Danny boy. Or at least you've tried to put the shuck on us.

And I don't care what your politics are, you don't deserve being a heartbeat away from the presidency.

Get out now. The doo-doo is just going to get deeper and deeper.

"By any measure of rational analysis, marijuana can be safely used within a supervised routine of medical care." — Francis L. Mailbag

A pet to some, animal to others

To the editor:

I recently had a very disappointing experience with the city of Big Spring. My daughters, who are 8 and 6, and allergic to dogs, cats, and fur, have five small, Bantam chickens for pets. I stress the word "pets." We are not "raising" poultry, have a 6-foot privacy fence around our property and live only a few hundred yards from the city limits. We have no roosters that crow and our neighbors on both sides do not object.

I was recently sent a letter from the city saying I needed a permit to keep our pets, so I promptly obtained an application and filled it out. May I add that I asked for an application and City Hall gave me one.

Then, one week later, I received another letter, stating the city was "no longer accepting such applications." It seemed odd that they gave me one and then "suddenly" changed their minds.

Although maybe a little unusual, my kids feel about their pets just as any other child does about their dogs, cats, hamsters, etc. Our five hens are harmless, quiet, clean and stay in our yard at all times. This is much better, in my opinion, than other pets who are allowed to bark all night long and disturb everyone, cats that roam, howl, and raid dumpsters — and both that mess up everyone's yards and flowerbeds.

It is no wonder that America is in the shape it is today, when the major issue on the city council meeting agenda is to decide whom and what a citizen can keep as a pet on their own property. The city of Big Spring would do much better to concern itself with the important issues of cleaning up and revitalizing their decaying downtown area, attracting new industries, improving the quality of water in Big Spring, and ridding the community of drugs, crime, and poverty.

There are exceptions to every rule and I think each case of this kind should be decided individually. It should depend upon the proximity to neighbors, whether a fence is there, how many animals are being kept, and whether the neighbors object. I would certainly have no objections to the city health department inspecting my property regularly, if they felt the need. I can assure you that there is no problem in my situation.

This may not sound like an important issue to anyone else, but it is to my children, and these are their pets. I see a bleak future ahead indeed for Big Spring if this is the kind of issues the city of Big Spring discusses at council meetings.

Hey, editorial: Beware for all

To the editor:

While it may be difficult for the editorial writer of Sunday's Herald lead editorial to believe that "two grown-ups running for president in this perilous age have nothing better to argue about than whether school children should recite the Pledge of Allegiance," it is even more difficult for me to believe that a (presumably) grown-up, enlightened, and constitution-fearing editorial writer would narrow the focus of his concern over the issue to school children.

But, I realize that space is a consideration, so I am expecting any day now to read in the Herald a similar piece inveighing against that odious (and surely unconstitutional) practice of our national government in requiring foreign-born aliens to pledge their allegiance to our flag and the republic it stands for upon becoming naturalized citizens. Yes?

Although I have not heard of a single case where an immigrant coming to build his future here in the United States objected to making that pledge, surely it is a travesty of liberty to require it of him, and the practice must jeopardize what little liberty of belief remains in this country.

After all, it induces the immigrant to believe "in an ideological conviction (one nation, under God, with liberty and justice for all) by forcing him to identify himself intimately with that conviction through compelled expression of it." Is not this, also, in violation of the First Amendment?

Come on, Herald editorial staff. Let's hear it for the unconstitutionally oppressed immigrants!

Whistle-blower's win a loss for others?

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A victory that could give $800,000 to a fired government whistle-blower sets precedents that he and his lawyers fear will make it riskier for other federal employees to expose waste and hazards.

Bertrand G. Berube, fired in 1983 after he accused the General Services Administration of becoming "the nation's slumlord," said he will take early retirement in a settlement with the agency. He had been GSA's top regional director, overseeing all major government buildings in the Washington, D.C., area.

Despite the settlement ordered by the Merit Systems Protection Board, Berube said laws are needed to prevent the government from punishing other employees who disclose overspending and dangerous conditions and that the federal system to protect such whistle-blowers actually worked against him.

Berube, who says he is the highest ranking civil servant ever fired for whistle-blowing, said federal employees should not think they can duplicate what he did unless they have several hundred thousand dollars to spend on attorneys. He was defended by a public interest group that can afford to back only a fraction of those who go against government employers, he said.

"If a government employee has that kind of money, they're usually not working for the government," said Berube. Those who think they can get help from the special government counsel set up to protect whistle-blowers may find "they're going to the executioner when they think they're going to the doctor," he said.

The special counsel for the merit board refused to take his case and ended up testifying in Congress against him, saying there were other grounds for firing him besides his criticism of waste, fire danger and health hazards in federal buildings, Berube said.

The GSA had claimed that Berube, who earned $64,000 a year overseeing 7,000 employees, engaged in "irresponsible sensationalism" in describing GSA's problems.

Herb Koster, a spokesman for Gerald Carmen, former GSA administrator who fired Berube, said Carmen would not comment on the settlement signed Aug. 18. Carmen now heads the Federal Asset Disposition Association.

GSA spokesman Paul Costello said GSA officials also had no comment on the agreement.

Thomas Devine, legal director for the Government Accountability Project that represents Berube and other government and private industry whistle-blowers, said rulings by the merit board during its consideration of Berube's case further inhibit whistle-blowing.

"Under the Berube standards, agencies have everything to gain and nothing to lose by opening up a witch hunt on a whistle-blower," he said.

Devine said that under the precedent, government agencies are allowed to look after-the-fact for reasons to justify a dismissal.

The Berube settlement agreement with GSA precludes further appeal by either side and says the settlement does not assume any "unlawful personnel practice, discrimination, reprisal or any other unlawful or illegal acts" by the agency or its officials.

Devine said neither the merit board nor the courts have done anything to discourage government reprisals against whistle-blowing employees.

The merit board's office of special counsel, which was set up to represent whistle-blowers, "actually has been a Troan horse for civil servants who commit the truth," he said.

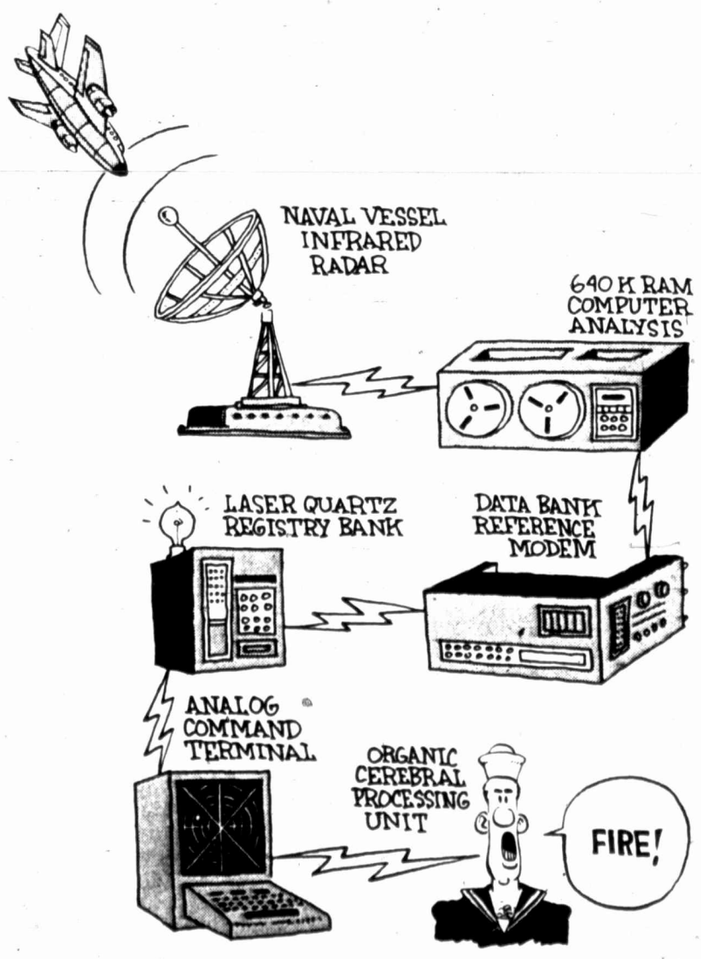

Berube said in a telephone interview over the weekend that problems with government buildings have gotten "worse rather than better" since he was fired, with many buildings in serious disrepair while money is wasted. In a May 1983 memo, he had said 25 percent of GSA buildings were unsafe and "for all practical purposes, we're becoming the nation's slumlord."

Berube said he agreed not to go back to the agency so he could continue his successful woodworking business in Washington and continue to fight for whistle-blower legislation.

GSA spokesman Costello said Friday that a check for $530,000 would shortly be made out to Berube and his lawyers.

Berube, 55, said that after legal fees he will get about $350,000, along with up to $430,000 in additional retirement pay based on his normal life expectancy. Lawyers said GSA also will have to pay $24,000 into Berube's retirement account and reimburse the $6,000 paid him in unemployment compensation.

Berube said he would retire with a $32,500 annual pension, based on 26 years of government service, including the five years since he was fired. Berube said that without the settlement he would have received annual retirement pay of $18,000 when he turns 65.

Three dead after police standoff

NEW YORK (AP) — An immigrant apparently distraught over money and family problems killed his two children and wounded 14 police officers before he was shot dead during a day-long standoff, authorities said.

A gunbattle between police and Cho Mun Chu, 45, closed Manhattan's FDR Drive during Tuesday morning's rush hour, tying up thousands of motorists as negotiators tried to coax Chu into laying down his birdshot-loaded 12-gauge shotgun.

Helen Chu, 8, and her 9-year-old brother, Warren Chu, were apparently both shot in the head by Chu during the nine-hour siege, police said. The standoff ended when police shot Chu twice in the chest; he died later that night at Bellevue Hospital.

The 14 officers were treated at hospitals for minor injuries involving wounds from shotgun pellets and released.

Judge OKs pot for medical use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Drug Enforcement Administration's chief administrative law judge says marijuana should be legalized as a prescription drug because smoking it helps cancer patients control nausea after chemotherapy.

Francis L. Young recommended reclassifying marijuana as a Schedule II drug so that it could be prescribed by physicians to treat the often severe nausea accompanying chemotherapy as well as muscle spasms caused by multiple sclerosis.

Young, whose findings are not binding on DEA's head, John Lawn, acknowledged that "strong emotions are aroused on both sides of any discussion concerning the use of marijuana."

"Nonetheless it is essential for this agency, and its administrator, calmly and dispassionately to review the evidence of record, correctly to apply the law, and act accordingly," he wrote in an opinion released Tuesday.

Earthquake rattles five states

A moderate earthquake centered in eastern Kentucky shook homes and rattled residents in five states but caused no major damage or reports of injuries, officials say.

"It practically shook me out of the chair," Betty Raines of Huntington, Ohio, said after Tuesday night's quake, which registered 4.5 on the Richter scale and was also felt in Kentucky, Indiana, Tennessee and West Virginia.

The quake struck at 10:28 p.m. EDT, and was centered about 40 miles northeast of Lexington, Ky., and 65 miles southwest of Ashland, according to the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

An aftershock was recorded a few minutes later, said Greg Steiner, technical director of the Center for Earthquake Research and Information at Memphis State University in Tennessee.

Wildfires threaten two towns

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Visitors were ordered out of the Old Faithful complex today as a wind-blown wildfire roared less than a mile away, and firefighters at Yellowstone's northern border battled to save two towns.

The 500 to 600 visitors and non-essential employees at the hotel and campground complex near the park's most popular attraction were told to leave for safety reasons and to allow firefighters the access they need to protect structures, says spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo.

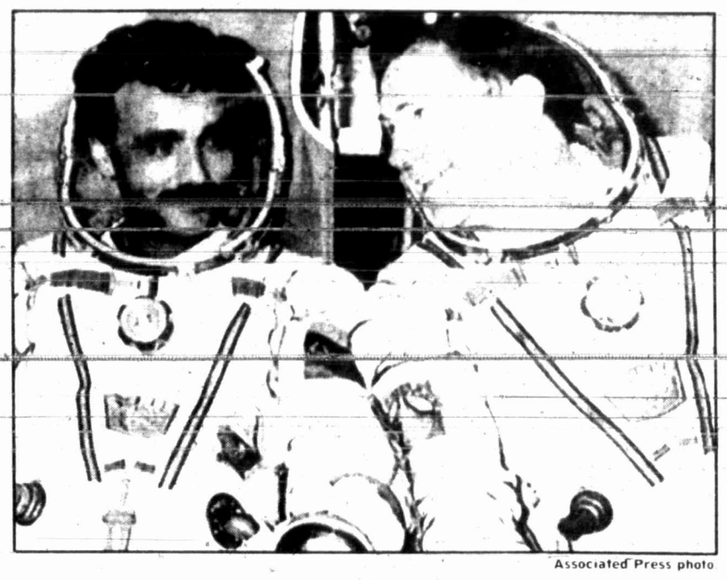

"This is not a panic at all," she said.

Winds gusting to 30 mph pushed the 147,000-acre North Fork blaze to within three-quarters of a mile of the complex early today. Embers carried by the wind started spot fires even nearer to the famed geyser.

Although officials had earlier said they did not believe an evacuation would be needed, Anzelmo said the fire did not calm down during the night as it usually has.

"We just feel that for the public's safety, we will never take any chances," she said.

Officials are confident they can protect structures from the advancing flames. These include the historic, wooden Old Faithful Inn.

Cosmonauts safe on third return try

MOSCOW (AP) — Two cosmonauts landed safely on Earth early today after guidance system malfunctions twice forced them to abort their descent, trapping them in orbit as food and oxygen supplies dwindled, Tass said.

Twenty-six tense hours after separating from the space station Mir, Abdul Ahad Mohmand, the first Afghan in space, and Soviet crewmate Vladimir Lyakhov touched down in Soviet Central Asia, the official Soviet news agency said.

"Both cosmonauts feel fine after the landing," Tass said.

Soviets awoke this morning to a television announcer who said: "We'll begin this newscast with a report we've all been waiting for with great impatience." He then read the Tass dispatch on the landing.

In a tape from mission control near Moscow, Soviet television showed a red star flashing on a map where it said the Soyuz TM-5 capsule parachuted to the ground at 4:50 a.m. Moscow time (8:50 p.m. EDT Tuesday) 100 miles southeast of the town of Dzhezkazgan in the republic of Kazakhstan.

Officials gathered in the center applauded after an announcer pronounced the landing a success.

According to Radio Moscow, the capsule touched down in the prearranged landing area. It said physicians found the men "in good health."

About 50 minutes before landing, the guidance system's computer automatically started an engine that braked the capsule, pulling it out of orbit and bringing it safely through the atmosphere, Tass said.

Soviet news reports said earlier that neither Mohmand, a 29-year-old pilot, nor Lyakhov, a 47-year-old pilot on his third space mission, was in immediate danger but that the situation soon could become critical.

The reports said life support systems aboard the capsule would last just two days, which would have put the cosmonauts in danger Thursday morning.

"If they cannot make the burn tonight to push them back into the atmosphere, they will probably only live another 24 to 48 hours before the carbon dioxide building in the capsule will kill them," James Oberg, a U.S. expert on the Soviet space program, told The Associated Press in Houston.

NASA officials said they had volunteered help but the Soviets declined.

The Soyuz capsule is designed for transporting cosmonauts to and from space, and carries few supplies. A Soviet space official said the cosmonauts could have stretched supplies of oxygen, water and food for up to a week, after which the Soyuz capsule would have become like "a lone boat in the ocean."

Officials can't get aid to victims

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Government officials said today they have no way to distribute millions of dollars in foreign aid to the more than 20 million victims of floods that still cover three-fourths of this impoverished nation.

Railroads and highways were washed away, bridges were mangled and the Dhaka Airport was still partly under water today and unable to receive large planes.

The floods have claimed at least 1,267 lives, according to newspaper reports. The government put the death toll at 412.

About 21 million people — nearly one-fifth of the total population — have lost their homes, according to the government.

With wells and pumps throughout much of the low-lying nation under water, people have resorted to drinking the very flood water that has marooned them. Thousands of new cases of diarrhea were reported each day.

Troops given shoot-to-kill orders

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Army trucks loaded with armed troops patrolled the capital's main streets today with orders to shoot looters, who were sacking government buildings, factories and warehouses.

The U.S. Embassy in Rangoon ordered an evacuation of 95 American dependents as a "precautionary measure," said Ross Petzing, the U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bangkok. There were no reports that any of the approximately 55 U.S. Embassy staff members would leave.

Diplomatic sources said the Italian, Israeli and several other small embassies sent out dependents in recent days and that the Japanese and larger Western embassies were considering evacuations.

Petzing said the first group of 45 Americans would arrive in Bangkok on Thursday if the airport in Rangoon was open.

Labor Party begins campaign

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres kicked off the Labor Party's election campaign by calling on Palestinians to end their uprising and start a peace dialogue with Israel.

"We do not wish to oppress them, humiliate them or deport them. The road is open before them. Instead of fighting, there can be dialogue," Peres told 3,000 banner-waving supporters Monday night in a concert hall.

"The Palestinians will come (to negotiate) because a military option does not exist for them and they still do not have a political option of their own," Peres added and was wildly applauded.

The Palestinian revolt in the occupied territories is the major campaign issue in the Nov. 1 elections, billed as the most crucial in Israel's 40-year history. At least 258 Palestinians and four Israelis have died in the unrest, which began Dec. 8.

Police seize second Tutu tape

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Security police today seized a second recording of a defiant sermon by Archbishop Desmond Tutu, and a pro-government newspaper said authorities should not be reluctant to prosecute him.

Officers with a search warrant came to the Argus, a Cape Town morning newspaper, and seized a tape recording its religion reporter made of a sermon Sunday in which Tutu called for a boycott of local elections slated for next month. State-of-emergency regulations forbid such calls.

On Tuesday, two plainclothes officers went to the Anglican archbishop's official residence in Cape Town and seized a recording of the sermon that Tutu's press aide, John Allen, had made.

In the sermon at St. George's Cathedral in Cape Town, Tutu urged whites and blacks to boycott nationwide municipal elections scheduled for Oct. 26. Many blacks oppose participation in any local or regional elections until the black majority is allowed to vote in national elections.

A pro-government Johannesburg daily, The Citizen, said Tutu "has invited the government to prosecute him . . . to achieve the status of a martyr."

Fair '88

New name for an old division

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A new name will appear above six long-time favorite entry divisions for contestants during the Sept. 19-24 1988 Howard County Fair — Creative Arts Division.

Called the Women's Division for years, according to division superintendent Zula Rhodes, the name has been changed to emphasize what has always been the case: "We welcome all exhibitors — men, women and youth.

"We have always accepted entries other than women's. We're now on record 'open to everyone,'" Rhodes said.

Although the name is new, the focus is the same — goodies baked, made or created, with several categories for judging. "Speaking of judging, anyone willing to sample 60 or more cookies has a job," said Rhodes. "Judges for Bake Days are in demand. Call Ireba Griffith if you're interested at 267-7825."

She summarizes Creative Arts Division categories as follows:

- Hobbies and Crafts — Six divisions with more than 50 classes have been announced, and Rhodes says the guidelines are flexible: "If your hobby or craft doesn't fit, another class will be made."

The categories are holiday crafts; pictures; dolls; flowers; handcrafts and kiln products.

- Over 60 — This is for persons wishing their entries to compete with persons of the same age group, with entries open in hobbies and crafts, clothing, needlework and handwork. Canned and baked goods must be entered in regular divisions for judging.
- Bake Days — Just like last year, with cake judging on Monday, pies on Tuesday, breads on Wednesday, cookies on Thursday and Friday a combination of candy and decorated cakes.

Place cakes on cardboard rounds and cover with plastic wrap; name and recipe must be written on the bottom of the round.

Entries open at 10 a.m. and close at 1:30 p.m. for judging.

Pies, breads, cookies and candies can be packaged in plastic bags; decorated cakes may be covered loosely with plastic wrap.

Prizes vary: although open to all good cooks and encouraging entries from men, women and children, the winners among youth will receive trophies while adults will receive Adams Awards, Rhodes said — flavorings, spices, and vanilla.

- Canned goods — Rhodes said the fair will again offer Ball awards in four categories. Grand Champion and Reserve Champion winners will receive coupons for fruit jars, plus canning and freezing booklets.

Those four categories are fruit, vegetables, pickles or relishes, jams, jellies or preserves. To be eligible for awards, all entries must be in Ball jars with Ball lids and rigns.

Rhodes emphasizes that all entries must be in regular canning jars with lids — Ball, Kerr or Mason jars. "No entries in mayonnaise jars will be accepted or judged. No exceptions," she said.

"Last year we had entries in jars that had Ball or Kerr on the bottom; mayonnaise, salad dressing or pickles were placed in these jars. They are not acceptable and will not be taken for judging. Use regular canning jars and lids for all entries, label entries for content and year canned. No names, please," Rhodes said. "We will add that information on your entry card."

For those who preserve by drying, she said, more information will be available in the Fair Catalog.

- Sewing —These clothing entries cover four divisions this year: infant wear, children's wear, women's wear and men's wear, and men, women and youth are eligible to enter.
- Needlework and Handwork A dozen divisions cover many classes, from quilts to afghans, with baby accessories, bedspreads, pillows, tablecloths, tea towels to potholders, Rhodes said. "Crochet and knitted, if you make it by hand, it goes here."

All entries are welcome.

Too much Mom at home for daughter

DEAR ABBY: My mother bought me a mobile home as a gift, so I gave her a set of keys for emergency use only. Two months ago my boyfriend moved in with me. Bernie is 36, I'm 38.

One night, my mother came into my home without any warning, so Bernie suggested that I change the locks. I told him that rather than just change the locks, I would speak to my mother and ask her not to use her keys. Well, before I had a chance to talk to her, she let herself in again and walked right into my bedroom! Bernie and I were in bed watching TV. She scared us half to death as we didn't even hear her come in. Bernie was furious.

I asked Mom why she didn't ring the bell or knock instead of just barging in. She claimed she did but we didn't respond, so she used her key. She became indignant, said she would never set foot in my home again, then left in a huff!

I have called her and left messages on her answering machine, but she didn't return my calls. Bernie has called her and she's ignored his messages, too. I don't want to lose my mother's friendship. My dad died four years ago and she's the only family I have.

Who is right in this situation? And what should I do?

DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Your mother had no right to enter your home unannounced. (The fact that she gave you the mobile home as a gift does not entitle her to invade your privacy.)

Don't give up. Keep calling her. Life is too short. In time she will realize that in an attempt to punish you, she is also punishing herself.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to "56 and Still Learning" on how to measure success. I would like to offer still another description of success:

"A successful man is one who can lay a firm foundation with the bricks others have thrown at him."

SHERRI MELSBY

Food Diversity

Key word to pleasing Yuppies, Cocooners and Couch Potatoes

HERALD STAFF REPORT

So your next party is going to include a cross-section of all of the most popular sociological stereotypes: Yuppies, Cocooners and Couch Potatoes.

As you may know, the Yuppies will likely drive to your door in their BMWs, right on time with their Rolex watches. The Cocooners are the ones who would really prefer to spend their time wrapped in their family, content on the homefront, while the Couch Potatoes are the first to glue themselves in front of the television and blink their eyes only at commercial breaks and station identification messages.

What to feed such a diverse group, if it were to actually come together in your Big Spring dining room? Keep it diverse. Should the prospect ever face you, these recipes should suffice, argues George A. Bay, director of marketing for Bays Corporation. Some of this comes from the heart, since Bay freely admits to his personal empathy with Cocooners.

So, should you need to feed such an assembly, consider the following for diversity dining success.

ROASTED RED PEPPER AND GOAT CHEESE APPETIZERS

Serves 4-5 yuppies, dinks or flyers

1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 small shallot, minced
1 tbs. olive oil
2 tbs. soft butter or margarine
1 tsp. tomato paste
1 tbs. chopped fresh basil (or 1 tsp. dry)
2 English muffins
3 ounces soft goat cheese
1 tbs. mayonnaise
½ large roasted red pepper (available in jars, or see directions below)*
Freshly ground black pepper

Heat oven to 375 degrees F. In a small pan, saute garlic and shallot in oil over medium-low heat just until soft. Remove from heat. Combine butter or margarine, tomato paste and basil in a small bowl, mixing until well blended. Add garlic mixture, mixing well. Spread each English muffin half with tomato-basil mixture; dividing evenly. Place on a baking sheet and bake for 4 minutes. Remove from oven and set aside. Combine cheese and mayonnaise in small bowl. Cut 16 strips of red pepper for garnish; dice remaining pepper (about 2 tbs.) and add to cheese mixture. Spread on muffin halves, dividing evenly. Cut each muffin into quarters, making 16 appetizers. Place on baking sheet, sprinkle with pepper, garnish with pepper strip and return to oven for 4-5 minutes. Serve hot or warm.

*To roast pepper: Cut pepper in half, lengthwise. Remove stem, seeds and white membrane. Place on a lightly oiled baking sheet, cut sides down. Roast in a preheated 450 degree F. oven for 15-20 minutes, until skin of pepper is blistered and blackened. Remove from oven and place immediately in a brown paper bag; twist bag neck closed and allow to stand 15 minuters. Remove from bag. Slip skin off by "plucking" blister open and slipping fingers under skin. Refrigerate until ready to use.

APPLE MUFFIN MACAROON COBBLER

Serves 6 cocooners

¾ cup sugar
2 tbs. cornstarch
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
½ tsp. ground nutmeg
5 cups thinly sliced apples
½ cup apple juice

TOPPING

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
⅔ cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup ground almonds
½ cup half-and-half
2 tbs. grated orange rind
3 English muffins, cut into ½-inch cubes

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. In medium medium-sized bowl, combine sugar, cornstarch, cinnamon and nutmeg. Mix in apples and juice. Arrange in greased 9x9-inch baking dish. Bake for 25 minutes. Remove from oven. While apples are baking, in medium-sized bowl, cream butter and sugar until smooth. Add eggs; mixing well. Stir in almonds, half-and-half and orange rind. Fold in English muffin cubes. Spoon over apples. Continue baking for 20 to 25 minutes or until top is golden brown and apples are tender. Serve warm.

BAYS HOT DOG ROUND-UPS

Serves 1 latchkey child

½ English muffin, lightly toasted
1 hot dog
1 slice bacon
1 slice or 2 tbs. shredded American or Cheddar cheese
Mustard, ketchup or relish
Pickle slices

Slice hot dog at ¼-inch intervals about ¾ of the way through, making sure not to slice all the way through. (It should resemble a comb.) Place on a plate and micro-cook uncovered on 50 percent power for 2 minutes, turning once. Hot dog will curl and form an "O," or circle shape. Remove from oven and set aside. Line the same plate with paper towels (2 sheets.) Place bacon strip on the towel and cover with 2 more sheets. Micro-cook at 100 percent power for 2 minutes. Remove from oven and set aside. Place lightly toasted English muffin half on a plate. Cover with a slice of cheese. Top with the hot dog circle. Fill center of the circle with mustard, ketchup or relish (about 1 tablespoon). Break bacon in half and place an "X" on top of the hot dog. Garnish with pickle slices. Micro-cook for 1 minute at 50 percent power.

Shredded cheese variation: Place lightly toasted English muffin half on a plate. Crumble bacon slice and sprinkle on muffin. Top with hot dog circle. Fill the center of the circle ith mustard, ketchup or relish (about 1 tablespoon). Top with 2 tbs. shredded cheese and micro-cook for 1 minute at 100 percent power, or until cheese melts.

Pleasant dining can be provided through diversity when serving a variety of sociological stereotype groups.

118th District court filings

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Allied Energy Products has sued Ricky Stone Jr. in 118th District Court, alleging that Stone fraudulently applied for home improvements via a contract April 9, 1985.

The suit, transferred to Howard County and 118th District Court by an order from Dallas County's 101st District Court Aug. 3, was filed here Aug. 26.

In the suit, Allied Energy Products alleges that Stone misrepresented himself as the owner of property to be improved by the company's goods and services.

In an original answer filed June 9, Stone denied the charges. The suit seeks $11,885.12, plus $25,000 in exemplary and punitive damages, plus interest, attorneys' fees and costs of court.

In other recent filings:

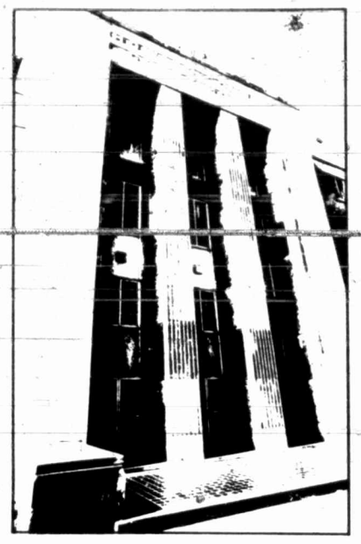

CARPETING

● Burlington Industries, Inc., has filed suit against Moffatt Carpet and Furniture, a Texas corporation.

The suit seeks $4,771.45 on account, plus $715.72 in attorney fees, plus interest at 6 percent per year on the total, in addition to costs and postjudgment interest of 10 percent annually.

VEHICLES

● The State of Texas has filed a suit against Emanuel Miguela, alleging that a Chrysler automobile identified by Texas tag No. 903TWM, seized from Miguela Aug. 25 during his arrest, was "intended and or used to transport and or facilitate the transportation, sale, reception, possession, concealment, delivery of a controlled substance."

According to the suit, Permian Basin Drug Task Force officers seized the automobile for purposes of forfeiture during the arrest.

Other forfeiture suits filed, under the same conditions, by the State on behalf of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, include:

Alan Carson, 1203 Lloyd St., a 1982 Harley Davidson motorcycle;

James Troy Nelson, 614 Ridgelea St., a 1977 Ford automobile;

Shawntina Marie Thorpe, Forsan, a 1983 Ford pickup truck;

Eugene Moten, arrested; lienholder Security State Bank of Big Spring; and registered owner Florance Moten, a 1983 Buick automobile.

The suits seek forfeiture of the seized vehicles to the drug task force, and cite investigative evidence provided by its investigator, officer Dale Stanley, to prove the alleged use of the vehicles in connection with trafficking in controlled substances.

KITCHENWARE

● Richard E. Smith, doing business as International Homes, filed suit against Edith Ashley, Big Spring, Aug. 30.

The suit alleges that International Homes sold and delivered assorted kitchenware to Ashley on Aug. 11, 1983, and that the price of the kitchenware and its accrued interest now amounts to $1,077.47, which the suit seeks to recover along with $500 in attorney fees, costs and pre- and postjudgment interest.

TRESPASS

● C.D. Read filed suit Sept. 1 against D.L. Ray, individually, and D.L. Ray, a corporation, in reference to Ray's operation of leases on lands owned by Read in Howard County.

The suit seeks damages for trespass upon Read's lands, both between and around leases operated by Ray. Additional damages for willful and intentional trespass are sought, and the suit seeks payment for revocable licenses.

According to the suit, Ray individually and Ray as a corporation operate leases in Howard County on lands owned by Read, described as portions of sections 37, 38, 47 and 48 of Block 30, Texas and Pacific Railway Survey, Township One North, Read owns certain interests in the minerals under those lands, according to the suit.

Ray has operated the leases for several years prior to 1988, according to the suit, and also operates leases in parts of sections 42 and 43 of Block 29, same survey.

Soon after Dec. 1, 1987, according to the suit, Ray contacted Read and his attorney, George Finley, and indicated Ray's intention to continue to operate the leases in question; for ingress and egress to the leases, Ray indicated intentions to continue using existing private roads on the lands, and would consider leasing additional surface land, according to the suit.

On or about Jan. 11 Finley notified Ray that any implied consent given Ray by Read to continue operating those leases, using those roads or otherwise using Read's lands, or any implied consent Ray thought Read had given, was revoked and withdrawn and cancelled, the suit said.

According to the suit, Ray received notice of that revocation and paid no attention to it. Without consent of the owner of the lands, according to the suit, Ray entered the land and trespassed and permitted heavy equipment to remain on the land as a trespass and continued to send officers, personnel, trucks and equipment into the property.

The suit also alleges Ray maintained a yard on the property and serviced several leases from the surface of one lease, and centered operations on one lease, and otherwise further trespassed on Read's property.

The suit alleges Read notified Ray by letter that if Ray continued such operations, that continuance would indicate Ray's acceptance of a revocable license to do so issued by Read, for which Ray must pay Read $500 per day, since Ray ignored Read's demand prior to Jan. 25 that Ray cease and desist from such acts.

The suit alleges Ray has willfully, maliciously and intentionally trespassed on Read's lands, and that Read is entitled to $5,000 exemplary damages.

The suit alleges that should Ray not be found liable by a jury for trespass, the reasonable value for the use of Read's lands is $5,000.

The value of the unpaid revocable license is $500 per day, according to the suit, and has amounted to $113,000 damages as of Aug. 28. The suit alleges Read is entitled to that $113,000 plus $37,833.33 in attorney fees, or if the jury should find Ray not liable for payment for the revocable license, $113,500 is fair value for the use of Read's lands, and the suit claims Read is entitled to payment of $5,000 damages, $5,000 exemplary damages, $113,500 for use of lands, and a lien on and foreclosure against all Ray's pipe, compressors and other assets now located on Read's lands, attorney's fees and costs of suit.

Wise buy.

Crossroads Chalk Talk

Crossroads Country football teams broke even in the first week of the season, winning four and losing four.

In the battle of area teams, Garden City defeated Forsan 28-6. In six-man action, Sands defeated Hermleigh 26-2, New Home downed Borden County 40-22 and Wilson nipped Klondike 37-32. The Grady Wildcats were open.

In Class 3A action, the Colorado City Wolves steamrolled Alpine 27-0 and Seminole defeated Coahoma 28-6. In 2A play, Stanton pitched a shutout at Seagraves 2-0.

Here is what area coaches had to say about last week's games and upcoming opponenets.

Steve Park, Coahoma, on his team's loss to Seminole, and this week's game against I-20 rival Stanton — "We broke down on our execution. We scored first and then we had a letdown. They had negative eight yards offense in the first quarter.

STEVE PARK

"They scored two times but we were still in the game. Then we had a good punt that went to their one-foot line. On the first play we thought we had a safety. On the second play, they went 99-and-two-thirds yards. That took all the wind out of us.

"We shouldn't have a problem getting up for Stanton. No matter what this is always a good rivalry. They have a better team that last year. They have so much speed and experience."

Randy Roemisch, Sands, on a win over Hermleigh and this week's game versus Buena Vista — "We like to win, but of course everybody likes to win. The defense looked good, we held them to 85 yards total offense. Offensively, we looked good the first quarter-and-half. We had seven penetrations, and only scored four times. We got ahead early and just relaxed.

"Buena Vista has 18 kids. They have a good middle linebacker and he is their key ballplayer. They run a lot of multiple sets. Our defense will be the key."

Leandro Gonzales, Grady, on his team's season opener against New Home — "They (New Home) are way up there in the state ranking. They run a power I and they run it well. They have three fast kids. It will be a tough challenge.

"I'd prefer to have an open week just before district play starts. But you can't have everything in life you want. The kids are ready to play."

Tom Ramsey, Colorado City, on his team's shutout of Alpine — "We were pleased with the team's play. The first quarter was pretty even, but the last three quarters belonged to us. I think the defense looked good all four quarters. They only got 127 yards total offense.

"Seminole (next opponent) is an improved ballclub. They have size and speed, and will create problems for teams in their district."

TOM RAMSEY

John Bond, Borden County, on his team's loss to a tough New Home squad — "I'm not dissapointed with the way the kids played. New Home has a real good ballclub. I feel the kids played good defense. We had some turnovers and we held them three times on fourth and short.

"Wellman (Friday's opponent) is runner-up to the state champion. They've had some problems with injuries, kids moving off, but I'm still expecting a good team."

Sam Scott, Garden City, on his team's surprisingly easy win over Forsan, and this week's game against Grandfalls — "We're tickled to death. We got a win and rain at the same time. We've been talking about winning since Christmas. The win will give us lots of confidence. We're right on schedule.

SAM SCOTT

"Everybody tells me that Grandfalls has improved from last year. I haven't seen them personally. They've got quickness and more speed than we do. If we eliminate the turnovers, we'll put some points on the board. I don't think they can stop us from scoring."

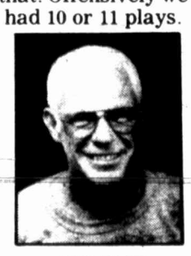

Dale Ruth, Stanton, on a win over Seagraves and this week's contest versus Coahoma — "It was a close game, too close. Our defense really came through late in the game. We gave up some big runs but we didn't break.

"We contained their big play man, the quarterback, in the last minutes of the game. Our offense needs to polish up on things a little bit. We need to work on our technique. It was the typical first game mistakes.

"Coahoma is always a tough game and big rivarly. It can go either way. We're looking for a good battle. They always play pretty well at home."

Jan East, Forsan, on a loss to Garden City — "We didn't play well, period, but Garden City had something to do with that. Offensively we moved the ball a little. We had three drives that had 10 or 11 plays.

"But I was real dissapointed with the defense, though. I thought that would be our strong point, but it sure wasn't Friday night. We're not going to panic though, we won't change anything. We'll just try to do better this week.

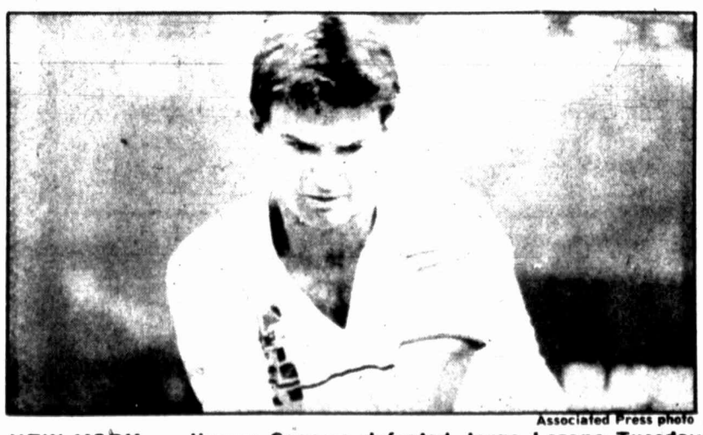

JAN EAST

"Rankin (next opponenet) runs a Veer and their quarterback, Doug Braden, is the best athlete in the program. The key is to stop Braden, make him pitch the bal'. They've got two 130-pound backs, and I'd rather them have the ball."

Tom Ham, Klondike, on a narrow loss to Wilson, and this week's encounter against Amherst — "We kept shooting our ownselves in the foot with turnovers. We dropped two deep punt snaps and fumbled quite a bit. While we were driving 60-70 yards for our scores, they had to drive 20 and 30 yards.

"They just had too big of a ballclub for us to stop them in that short distance. We felt like we should have won the game, though.

"Amherst has good speed. They are not as big as Wilson, but they have two backs that are speed burners. They have super speed for a six-man ballclub."

OHS drops Lady Steers

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Lady Steers did a good impression of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in their non-district volleyball game against Odessa High Tuesday night at Steer Gym.

The Lady Steers' play was lackadaisical in the opening 15-7 loss. Then the Black and Gold perked up and soundly whipped the Lady Bronchos 15-2 in the second game. In the rubber match Big Spring began like a ball of fire. But the fire soon fizzled out and the vistors won the game 15-8, thus winning the match.

"I really don't know what to say," said Big Spring coach Lois McKenzie after the loss. "We should have had the momentum after that second game. But that one girl kept serving to the corner, and we didn't have anybody that could handle it."

The player McKenzie was referring to was Odessa High's Amy Moore, who she was a thorn in the Lady Steers' side, especially in the final game.

Moore kept picking on the left side of the Big Spring defense, and it resulted in five service points, breaking a 7-7 tie in the third game.

Big Spring Lady Steers sophomore Rene Reinhart prepares to serve to the Odessa High Lady Bronchos.

It appeared the Lady Steers did have the momentum early in the third game. OHS scored first on a point by Jesusita Mancha. Big Spring then took control behind the service of senior Melissa Martinez. Martinez served an ace, and the Lady Steers got another point on a block by Tracy Schaffner.

A few minutes later, Big Spring stretched the lead to 4-1 on two service aces by Ronetta Fryar. Odessa scored another point and Big Spring answered with three points by Rene Reinhart, thanks to kills by Schaffner and Debbie Pulver.

But Odessa crept back into contention, and tied the game at 7-7. That's when Moore went to work on the left side of the Big Spring defense. When Moore wasn't serving aces, junior hitter Tammy Bradley was slamming spikes at the Lady Steer defense.

The end result was an Odessa High victory. Ironically Big Spring won its first game of the year last week against Odessa High in Odessa.

"Last week Odessa had us down and we came back. Tonight we broke down mentally," said McKenzie. "Odessa played a lot better tonight though. They played much better defense."

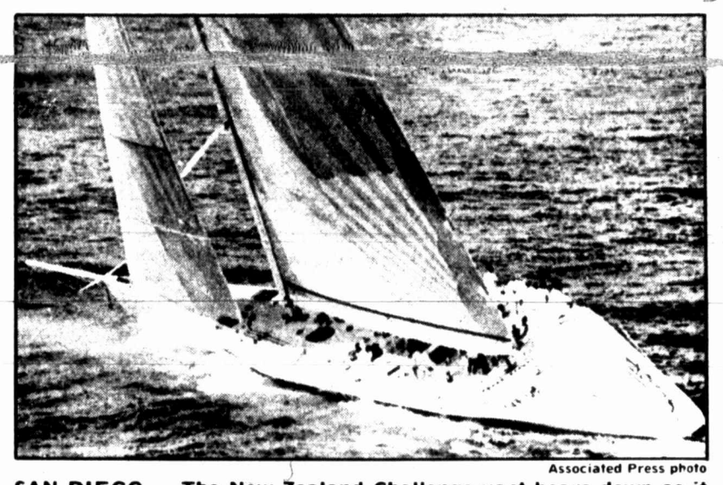

It seemed Big Spring couldn't do anything right in the first game. Odessa had scored six points before Big Spring got on the scoreboard with a serve by Dorothy Viassna. But OHS quickly stretched the margin to 12-1, and the game was practically over. The Lady Steers made a slight run as Martinez served four points, including an ace.

In the second game it was a different Big Spring team as Viassna, Pulver and Tracy Schaffner began pounding away at the Odessa front line. This game, it seemed OHS couldn't do anything right.

Martinez started things off for the Lady Steers by serving seven points. Her low hard serves resulted in three aces against the OHS defense.

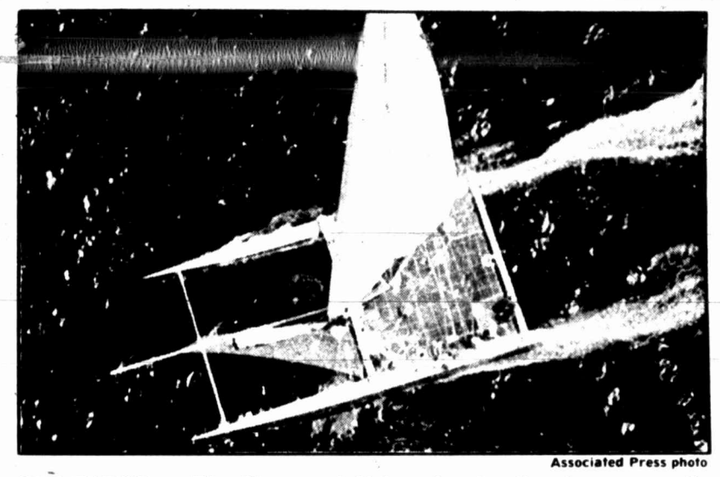

Mancha served a point for Odessa, but Big Spring rallied for five more points before Odessa could score again. Rene Reinhart served the final three points of the game by serving an ace, and Pulver and Schaffner got kills.

The Lady Steers downed 18 of 52 kills in the match, with Schaffner leading the way, downing five of 10.

SAN DIEGO — The New Zealand Challenge yact bears down as it goes through its final practice run Tuesday for the America's Cup race.

SAN DIEGO — The Stars and Stripes hard sail catamaran sails through the waters off San Diego during a practice run Tuesday. Stars and Stripes defends the America's Cup beginning today.

America's Cup begins today

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The New Zealand challenger yacht and the U.S. defending catamaran were to begin racing for the America's Cup today in a best-of-three regatta that shapes up as the calm between two storms of litigation.

Winds of 10-18 knots were predicted over the 40-mile windward-leeward ocean course off Point Loma, "catnip" conditions for the heavily favored cat-skippered by Dennis Conner.

"I think you'll find the type of race that you probably expected when you came here," Conner said Tuesday, the eve of his first confrontation with the massive New Zealand challenger, a single-hulled 133-foot sloop.

The second race, a 39-mile triangular course with equal legs, is scheduled for Friday. If necessary, a third race is scheduled for Sunday on a similar course to the first.

Though the Kiwi boat is regarded as the fastest monohull in the world, Conner's catamaran with a solid wing-sail can fly over the Cup courses about an hour faster than New Zealand's KZ1, according to its skipper, David Barnes.

Still, Conner said, the maverick New Zealand challenge that forced an early defense of yachting's greatest prize as well as the unprecedented reliance on a space-age catamaran to repel it, has left him in a virtual no-win situation.

"If for some reason we're not successful here, the only reason we couldn't have won is because Dennis must not have done his job right," Conner said. "It we win, the boat is faster, because you've (the media) all told me that. If we lose, old Dennis has lost the America's Cup again."

A veteran of five Cup campaigns, Conner last year skippered the 12-meter Stars & Stripes '87 to victory over Australian defender Kookaburra III. In 1983, Conner's loss to the Aussies, who developed the breakthrough winged keel to defeat Liberty, ended 132 years of American dominance in the event.

The current two-nation regatta arises from New Zealand Challenge chairman Michael Fay's surprise challenge in 90-foot waterline boats, a radical departure from the 12-meters used in Cup competition since 1958.

The San Diego Yacht Club initially spurned Fay's challenge, delivered in July 1987 as the club and its defense manager, Sail America, were planning for a multinational regatta in 12-meters in 1991. Fay then took the issue to the New York Supreme Court, arbiter of Cup disputes, obtaining a ruling that validated his challenge and forced San Diego to either meet him on the water or forfeit the Cup.

San Diego's reply to Fay was to meet him on the water, but to defend in a dual-hulled catamaran.

Generally considered faster than a monohull, catamarans had never before been used in 137 years of Cup competition. San Diego claimed the right under design freedoms in the Deed of Gift, the so-called constitution of the America's Cup.

Fay went back to court to try to oust the catamaran as an illegal defender, but on July 25, the same court that validated his challenge ordered the two sides to stop their bickering long enough to race then return to court to resolve any outstanding disputes.

Fay, a wealthy merchant banker from Auckland, says he will return to court to protest the catamaran issue, win or lose.

Though conditions and design may favor the catamaran, Conner said he cannot afford to take anything for granted because of the capricious nature of the elements and the boats.

"There's never been a sure thing in a sailboat race," Conner said. "There's a lot of things that can happen ... even if a faster boat were involved in the contest.

"You can go the wrong direction, you can rip a sail, you can have a breakdown or the other person can outsmart you. Until the race is over it's never over."

Barnes said the New Zealanders had "a few tricks up our sleeve" but acknowledged that the winds would have to fall well short of predictions for the Kiwi boat to be competitive.

"We can sail that boat as well as anybody could possibly sail a 90-foot waterline boat around that course," Barnes said. "Unfortunately for this regatta, we do have to look for something unusual" in the weather to have a chance at winning.

The New Zealand boat performs well in extremely light airs while the catamaran's efficiency drops in light, shifting winds.

"Both boats are very exciting boats in their own right," Barnes said. "They're both very well done engineering-wise. The speed potential of these boats is something the world has never seen before (in sailboats).

"But we are well aware that the catamaran can be up to an hour or hour and a half faster than we can be in the same conditions. And if the cat is sailed to its full potential, they could beat us by that much."

Agassi wins battle of the teens

NEW YORK (AP) — Andre Agassi, say hello to Jimmy Connors. America, say hello to your tennis past and future.

Which one owns the present might be decided Thursday night in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open.

Agassi, ranked fourth in the world and the hottest player on the men's tour, beat 16-year-old Michael Chang 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 Tuesday night. The 18-year-old sensation from Las Vegas, Nev., winner of six tournaments this year and riding a 22-match winning streak, will take on Connors, at 36 the grand old man of the game.

Connors blitzed Jorge Lozano of Mexico 6-1, 6-2, 6-0 on Tuesday. The five-time Open champion has been the steadiest of the remaining men's seeds.

"I guess if you sit back and look at it," Agassi said, "with all the Opens and Wimbledons he has won, it is new versus used. But he's still very capable out there."

Connors and Agassi have never played an official match; last year, Connors quit in the first set of an exhibition because of heat exhaustion.

But when Agassi was 4 years old, his birthday present was a session of hitting balls with Connors.

"If I played with him when he was 4, great, I had a good time playing with him," Connors said. "If he is 18 now, I will have a good time playing with him again."

The only non-American to advance to the quarterfinals on Tuesday was top-seed Ivan Lendl, a native of Czechoslovakia who lives in Greenwich, Conn., and is seeking U.S. citizenship. Lendl beat Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland 6-4, 5-7, 6-2, 6-4.

"I'm on and off," said Lendl, who is after an unprecedented fourth consecutive Open crown. "I hit the ball extremely well for a couple of games, and then for a handful of games I don't hit it that well.

"But, on the other hand, I'm still fit and quick and I'm competing well."

Lendl faces Derrick Rostagno of Brentwood, Calif., in the quarters. Rostagno beat Ronald Agenor of Haiti 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3 on Tuesday.

In men's quarterfinal play today, No. 2 Mats Wilander of Sweden faced Emilio Sanchez of Spain, and Aaron Krickstein, the other remaining American, continued his comeback against Darren Cahill of Australia.

Women's quarterfinals included No. 1 Steffi Graf against No. 14 Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria; No. 2 Martina Navratilova against Zina Garrison; third-seed Chris Evert vs. No. 6 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria; and No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina against No. 16 Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union.

Graf is just three victories from completing the first Grand Slam since 1970.

Agassi and Chang's combined ages don't equal that of Connors. In fact, Chang finds it strange that Jimbo is still on tour.

"Jimmy's weird," he said. "The guy is 36, his feet are killing him and he's still out here in the U.S. Open quarters. That's so uncommon. I guess it's his love for the game that is so great."

Chang never got into the match with Agassi. Still, he termed his second Open a success.

"I think I've improved a lot and, if you had seen me last year, you would notice the improvement," he said. "My serving has improved, my volleying, conditioning have improved, my groundstrokes are more solid.

"There's no telling how good I can get."

Agassi, who has gotten so good that he is the youngest American ever rankd in the top five.

Need a good laugh? Check out channel 11

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

This year I've found the perfect remedy to cure the blues. When I'm feeling down and out — and need a good laugh — I turn on the TV and catch an Atlanta Braves baseball game.

The Braves are the perfect example of how a group of professionals are not supposed to play baseball. Why Turner Broadcasting System shows 100 Atlanta games each season, I don't know. Can you believe these guys get paid for playing the way they do?

Which brings up the subject of playoffs. What if they had a playoff for the worst teams in baseball? That would be a doozy.

Currently it would be the Baltimore Orioles from the AL East and the Seattle Mariners from the AL West. As of Tuesday, the Orioles were 48-88 and the the Mariners were 55-83. In the National League, it would be the Philadelphia Phillies, 55-81, and the 46-89 Braves in the West.

I'll give the worst team in the league edge to the Orioles, mainly because they have the highest earned run average (4.53) and the lowest batting average (.238) in the majors.

Billy Lyons received a champagne exit Wednesday from the Louisville Redbirds, the St. Louis Cardinals AAA farm team.

Lyons, the ultimate utility player for the Redbirds since 1982, played all nine positions in the team's final game of the season. Lyons had played all eight positions at one time or another, but never pitcher.

Since this was the 30-year-old's final game of his career, he started the contest at pitcher and ended it at catcher.

Now that's what I call versatility.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Things are loooking better and better for the Big Spring Lady Steers volleyball team. New coach Lois McKenzie inherited a very inexperienced squad that has to play in the toughest Class 4A district in the state.

When the Lady Steers defeated Odessa High last week, they snapped a 26-game losing streak, dating back to last year. Even more impressive were three successive victories over Lubbock Monterey, Miles and San Angelo Lake View. The Lady Steers had their four-game winning streak snapped by San Angelo Central, though.

A four-game winning streak might not sound like much, but when you're trying to rebuild a program, it's a bright sign.

The Lady Steers, 4-9 for the season, have already won as many games as they did all of last year. Somehow, I get the feeling Big Spring won't be considered a volleyball pushover much longer.

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

My co-worker Steve Reagan has drummed up some interest with recent columns about changing the mascot at Big Spring High School.

I'll admit Steers is not the most desireable name a team could have. But it will do for the fellows.

But the Lady Steers has to go. In the first place, there is no such thing as a Lady Steer, thus making it totally inapporiate for females to be called that.

At my alma mater, Eastern New Mexico University, the female athletes got tired of being called the Greyhoundettes. So they went to the board of regents and voiced their opinion. The name was soon changed to Zias. A Zia is an Indian word for the sun symbol on the New Mexico state flag.

Maybe the female athletes at BSHS should take heed to the story.

Lady Steers

Pulver and Martinez had four kills each, and Viassna had three kills.

OHS downed 19 of 41 kills. Bradley was seven of 11 while Jennifer Antherton was five of 11.

"I told the girls it doesn't matter what they've done up until this time. The real season starts Saturday," said coach McKenzie, referring to the Lady Steers' district opener against Monahans Saturday afternoon in Monahans.

Big Spring falls to 4-10 for the season while Odessa High goes to 4-4.

In junior varsity action Big Spring defeated the Lady Bronchos 15-8, 15-12. The junior varsity Lady Steers are now 2-6 for the season.

Baylor players get top honors

WACO (AP) — The first question you ask after seeing Eldwin Raphel run is: How did Baylor get this guy away from the University of Oklahoma?

After all, he rushed for 1,542 yards his senior season at Lawton (Okla.) Eisenhower High School. It's not like the Sooners' Barry Switzer didn't know he existed.

The answer is plain and simple. The Sooners didn't offer Raphel a scholarship. They wanted him to walk-on.

And is Teaff glad he accepted the collect call.

Raphel, a sophomore, rushed 16 times for 142 yards including a 53-yard run on Saturday night in the Bears' 27-3 non-conference victory over Nevada-Las Vegas. The performance earned him The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award.

Others considered for the weekly laurel were Texas Tech receiver Wayne Walker, who scored on two long touchdown passes; Arkansas running back Barry Foster who scored on three touchdown runs; and Baylor freshman placekicker Jeff Ireland, who kicked a school record-tying four field goals.

The AP's SWC Defensive Player of the Week award went to Baylor weakside linebacker James Francis, who led a Bears' defense that held the Rebels to only two first downs, a school record.

Raphel is a 6-foot, 177-pound slashing type runner in the style of Marcus Allen of the Los Angeles Raiders.

"He does remind you a lot of Allen," said Baylor coach Grant Teaff. "He's always going forward like Allen. And he has good speed. He won three state track titles in Oklahoma."

He was the 1986 state champion in both the 110 meter high hurdles and the 300 meter hurdles and was on a state champion 1600 meter relay team.

The Shreveport, La., native carried only 22 times for Baylor last year in his redshirt freshman season, gaining 84 yards.

"We just kind of fell into this kid," Teaff said. "We're lucky Oklahoma didn't want to offer him a scholarship. We were surprised when we checked him out. We thought he was a really good player after we saw him on film. We were the only school to offer him a scholarship."

Raphel was named to the 5A all-state team by the Daily Oklahoman and played in the All-star game.

Raphel said "I'm glad Baylor took a chance on me. I feel like I'm learning the game better. Sitting out my freshman season really helped. I feel like things are really coming together for me. I think I'm improving."

He said he liked Baylor's switch to the I formation.

"I can read the blocks and use my ability," Raphel said.

Francis was devastating against the Rebels.

He sacked the UNLV quarterback once, broke up a pass and tackled runners twice for eight yards in losses. He made five tackles as the Baylor defense gave up only one first down. The other game on a penalty.

"We took control of the game early," said Francis, a 6-4, 225-pound junior from LaMarque. "I know what kind of defense we can have this year and people got to see our potential against UNLV."

Francis, the younger brother of Dallas Cowboys' cornerback, Ron Francis, was the sixth man on Baylor's NCAA playoff basketball team last year.

"James Francis is a dominant player," Teaff said. "He could end up being the best in the country. He has tremendous speed and agility for a linebacker."

Akeem says girlfriend lied

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets star center Akeem Olajuwon is denying claims by his ex-girlfriend that he once promised to marry her.

Olajuwon's denial of Lita Spencer's claims was included in a response his lawyers sumbitted Tuesday to a lawsuit filed by Ms. Spencer last month.

Ms. Spencer, who had dated Olajuwon for years, filed a suit claiming the 7-foot NBA all-star promised to marry her if she could prove she would bear children.

When Ms. Spencer was seven months pregnant, her suit said, Olajuwon took back that promise. She gave birth to a daughter on July 6.

Richard Miller, her attorney, said Olajuwon's answer was expected.

"We filed the original suit (Aug. 3) with the hope it would provide an opportunity for him (Olajuwon) to come forward and deal with us" out of court, Miller said. "That didn't happen, so we filed an amended suit."

That suit, filed Aug. 26, said Olajuwon beat Ms. Spencer and was planning to play basketball in Italy. Olajuwon's attorneys have two more weeks to respond to the amended suit.

Astros can't make up game on Los Angeles

By The Associated Press

Don't blame Jim Deshaies if he doesn't show up for his next college reunion with Tom Browning.

Browning and Deshaies, college teammates while attending LeMoyne in New York, have met three times this season and Browning has won each time.

Kal Daniels hit two home runs to drive in four runs and Browning won his seventh game in his last eight decisions as Cincinnati beat Houston 10-3 at the Astrodome on Tuesday night.

"I'm sorry Jimmy had to take the loss," Browning said. "Jimmy had a rough early going, and it was a situation where you can't get down by much."

Browning, 15-5, has a 13-2 record since June 1, and the Reds have won six of their last seven games to move within 6½ games of first-place Los Angeles in the National League West.

Browning, who allowed eight hits, lost his shutout when Glenn Davis hit his 27th home run with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

Braves 2, Dodgers 1

Jeff Blauser hit his first home run of the season with two outs in the eighth inning off reliever Jesse Orosco as Atlanta beat visiting Los Angeles.

Paul Assenmacher, 7-6, got the victory in relief of starter Pete Smith. Bruce Sutter got the last three outs for his 13th save and 299th lifetime.

Smith, who entered the game with two shutouts in his previous three starts, allowed three hits and one run in 7 2-3 innings.

Padres 4, Giants 3

Tim Flannery's two-out, pinch double in the ninth inning scored Roberto Alomar from first base to lift visiting San Diego over the San Francisco and extend its winning streak to five games.

Pirates 3, Mets 2

John Smiley allowed five hits in 8 2-3 innings and Glenn Wilson hit a two-run double in the first inning as Pittsburgh defeated New York at Three Rivers Stadium.

The loss cut the Mets' lead to nine games over second-place Pittsburgh in the NL East. The Pirates are 5-11 against the Mets this season.

Cardinals 1, Expos 0

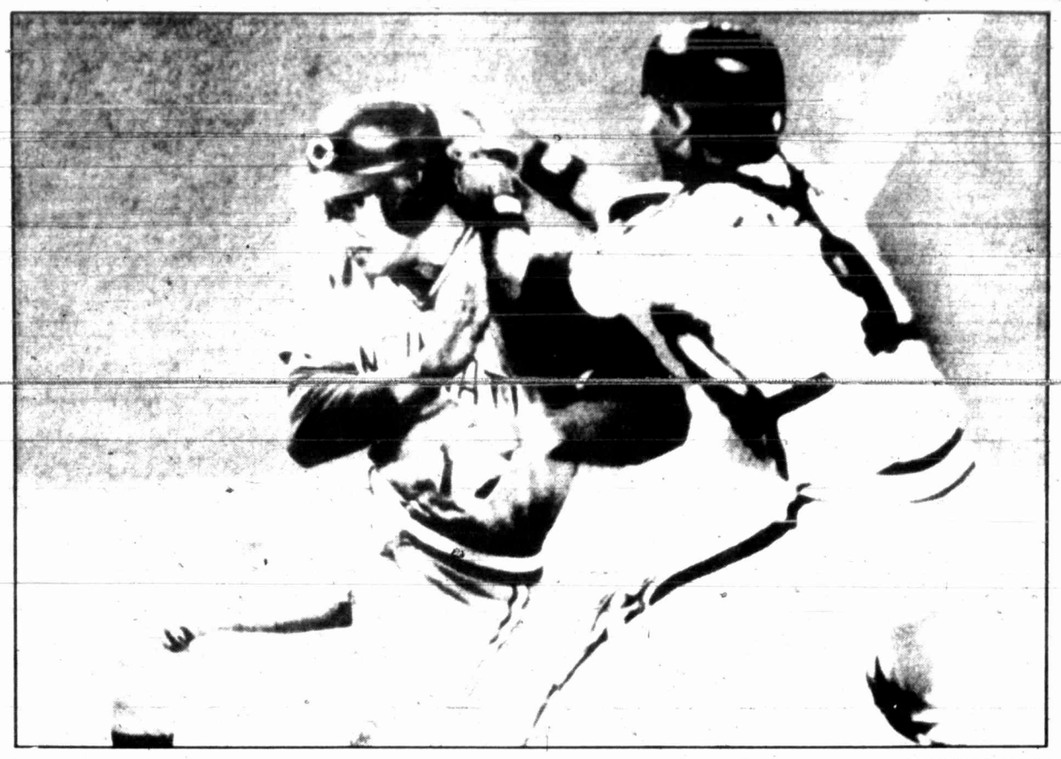

Jose DeLeon pitched a three-hitter and struck out a season-high 12 batters to lead St. Louis past Montreal at Busch Stadium.

DeLeon, 10-8, walked only one as he outdueled Dennis Martinez, 15-11, who also allowed three hits.

Phillies 3, Cubs 2

Marvin Freeman won for the first time in nearly two years and Juan Samuel had a bases-loaded single to drive in two runs in the fifth inning as Philadelphia beat Chicago in a night game at Wrigley Field.

Freeman, 1-2, allowed four hits in seven innings.

HOUSTON — Cincinnati Reds Chris Sabo and Houston Astros Alex Trevino are on a collision course as Sabo was able to score while knocking the ball loose from Trevino. Trevino was called for an error on the play.

Red Sox cling to slim lead in East

By The Associate Press

Mike Greenwell, who figures in more rallies than most players in baseball, also figures the Boston Red Sox are in the driver's seat in the American League East.

"I think we're the team to beat because we're in first place," Greenwell said Tuesday night after driving in three runs to lead Boston to a 6-1 victory over Baltimore, giving the Red Sox a two-game lead over slumping Detroit.

Greenwell's homer — a two-run shot that gave the Red Sox a 5-1 lead in the fifth inning — and a run-scoring single, gave him 107 runs batted in, second in the majors to Oakland's Jose Canseco.

The homer, however, was his first since Aug. 13.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 3

George Bell doubled to trigger a four-run Toronto second inning as the streaking Blue Jays won their sixth straight game to remain 6½ games behind Boston.

Detroit, 23-30 since the All-Star break, has lost 13 of its last 15 games. The Tigers had not endured a six-game losing streak since 1985 and hadn't dropped six consecutive games at home since 1984.

Jimmy Key, 10-4, struck out five and walked one in seven innings plus. Two of the Detroit runs came on Chet Lemon's 10th and 11th home runs. Duane Ward, the third Toronto pitcher, got out of a bases-loaded jam in the Tiger eighth with a double-play ball and finished for his 13th save.

Detroit's Doyle Alexander, 11-11, was tagged for five runs on six hits in two-plus innings. Alexander, 8-4 at the All-Star break, is winless in his last six starts, going 0-5 since his last win Aug. 6.

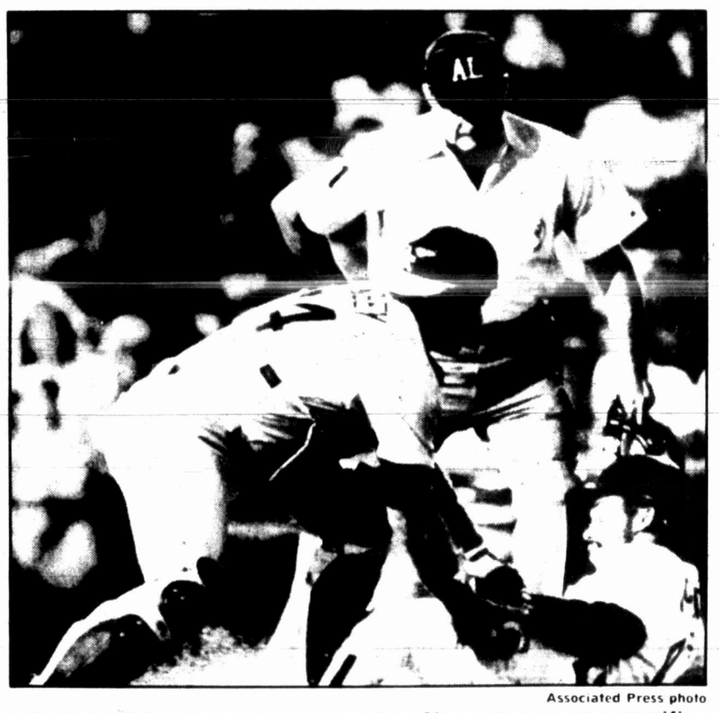

Indians 1, Yankees 0

New York has lost three of its last four games and nine of its last 12. The Yankees trail the Red Sox by five games.

Al Leiter, 4-4, making his first appearance since June 21, gave up three hits in five innings, throwing 80 pitches. He struck out five and walked two, allowing a leadoff homer to Kittle in the fourth inning that hooked inside the left-field foul pole. Kittle has hit his homers in 212 at-bats, an average of one per 11.8 at-bats.

Swindell, 15-13, struck out eight and walked three in pitching his fourth shutout and 12th complete game of the season.

ARLINGTON — Texas Rangers Ruben Sierra scores on a sacrifice fly after Oakland Athletics catcher Ron Hassey drops the the throw to home plate during first inning action.

Mariners 8, Twins 3

Mike Campbell, 6-8, allowed five hits and two runs in 6 2-3 innings for the victory. Mike Schooler pitched the final 1 2-3 hitless innings for his 11th save, striking out three.

The Mariners scored three runs in the second inning off Bert Blyleven, 9-14. With one out, Scott Bradley and Mickey Brantley singled and Jim Presley drove in a run with a single. Rey Quinones walked to load the bases and Reynolds singled to make it 3-0.

The loss left the defending World Series champions 9½ games behind Oakland in the AL West and reduced the Athletics' magic number for clinching the division to 15.

Rangers 3, Athletics 1

Charlie Hough, struggling with a 3-8 record since July 4, scattered seven hits over 8 2-3 innings to lead Texas over the Oakland and break a six-game losing streak by the Rangers.

Hough, 12-15, had command of his knuckleball, which has been erratic over the last two months. Since July 4, Hough had a 4.59 earned run average and had allowed 16 runs in his previous 17 2-3 innings.

Hough, 15-5 lifetime against Oakland and unbeaten in his last eight decisions against the Athletics, struck out four and walked six. He gave way to Cecilio Guante, who got the final out for his 12th save.

Pete O'Brien led the Texas attack with two RBI as the Rangers took a 3-1 lead with runs in each of the first three innings off Todd Burns, 6-2.

Royals 3, Angels 2

Frank White's single up the middle drove in two runs to give the Kansas City the victory over California.

After the Angels had scored twice in the top of the ninth to go ahead, the Royals loaded the bases on a single by George Brett, a double by Willie Wilson and an intentional walk to Bill Buckner. The loser was Greg Minton, 3-4, who relieved Terry Clark,

The winner with one-third of an inning of relief was Steve Farr, 5-2.

Rookie Brian Dorsett hit a two-run single to climax a two-out ninth-inning rally that put California ahead 2-1.

UT back may miss opener

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Texas officials waited today for a ruling on their appeal of a decision by the National Collegiate Athletic Association to declare running back Eric Metcalf ineligible for the season opener against Brigham Young.

The Houston Post reported in a copyright story today that Metcalf, a Heisman Trophy candidate, had been declared ineligible for Thursday night's game against Brigham Young.

The Post reported that the action was taken because of a minor rules violation this summer.

The decision was appealed by the University of Texas to the NCAA Eligibility Commmittee, the Post reported.

Texas was expecting a final decision today, but Metcalf was not scheduled to be on the team plane when the Longhorns left Austin for Provo, Utah today. If the appeal is successful, he will fly to Provo later today.

Texas, ranked No. 19 in the latest poll by The Associated Press, just finished two years of NCAA probation, reduced to one year for compliance with guidelines, in June.

Metcalf, a senior who ran for 1,925 all-purpose yards last year, accepted money from the UT athletic department to pay for summer school this year, the newspaper quoted sources as saying. Then, he did not attend either summer session at UT.

The money was apparently paid back to the university by Metcalf in mid-July. But it is still a violation of NCAA rules since he accepted the money but did not attend summer school. It is not a violation for a university to pay for a full-scholarship athlete to attend summer school.

Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds confirmed late Tuesday that Metcalf's eligibility remains up in the air.

"At this time I can't say he will be ineligible and I can't say he will be eligible," said Dodds.

Texas reported the infraction, not considered a major violation, to the NCAA, Dodds said.

"It was a minor mistake and the money was paid back to the university out of his own pocket," said Dodds. "Still, it is a violation. We turn in all violations to the NCAA and will continue to do so."

If Metcalf does not play against BYU, it would be a blow to his Heisman hopes. The game will be televised nationally on ESPN and he was expected to do well against the Cougars' weak defense.

Metcalf's suspension could be a blow to Texas, heading into the season with high expectations. He was the team's main offensive weapon last year. He rushed for 1,161 yards, caught 33 passes for 238 yards and scored 11 TDs.

Metcalf, voted the Southwest Conference offensive player of the year last season, had to regain his academic eligibility in summer school in 1987. He was declared academically ineligible by UT in June, 1987, but regained his eligibility by completing class work in summer school.

Stanton may make Bulldogs yelp

Buffalos 'mudder' Seagraves, 2-0

Stanton Buffalos proved they are good "mudders."

But can they win on a dry field?

This question will be answered Friday beginning at 8 p.m. when the Buffs battle the Coahoma Bulldogs at Coahoma.

Stanton sloshed to a 2-0 victory over the Seagraves Eagles in a muddy season opener in Stanton Friday.

Fumbles, interceptions, penalties and mental errors marred the contest.

It was Seagraves' center Billy Joe Moore's snap over Brian Legan in his own end zone to punt that produced the winning margin. The football from center sailed over the punter's head and out of the end zone for a safety and the only score in the game.

"We saw the typical first game mistakes," Stanton coach Dale Ruth said. "But our kids played hard and never let up. I'll take any kind of a win."

A fumble by Stanton's Kevin Barnes mid-way through the quarter at the one yard line led to the two pointer.

The Buff's defense held the Eagles on three downs, then the bad snap happened.

Late in the battle, Seagraves mounted a serious threat. On fourth down and 11, Legan hit Eliot Allen with a 12-yard pass completion. Aided by a 15-yard penalty against the Buffs gave the Eagles a first down on Stanton's 27.

Legan bounced his way to the 20 with 17 seconds to go. After two fast incomplete passes, Legan was smacked down on the final play.

Seminole's Jerrold Hill rushed for 167 yards and three touchdowns, including a record 99-yard scoring dash, as the Indians scalped the Coahoma Bulldogs, 28-6, Friday night in Seminole.

Coahoma's Brad Madry flashed five yards to give the Bulldogs a short-lived lead with 11:17 to play in the second quarter, but the point after kick was missed.

Wildcats must stop Paul to defeat New Home

If the Grady Wildcats want to chew up the New Home Leopards they will hvae to stop senior running back Darrell Paul.

The 3-A All-District selection in '87 raced for 205 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Leopards past the Borden County Coyotes at Gail Friday, 40-22.

The Wildcats begin their six-man football action at 8 p.m. Friday at New Home!

The 5-9, 180 pounder Paul scored the first points with 6:35 to play in the first period against the Coyotes. He plowed 10 yards and 1-yard in the final stanza to put the game out of reach.

Other Leopards to watch All-District Jerry Speckman (6-0, 185) senior center and Tyrone Watkins (5-10, 160) senior running back and nose guard.

Leandro Gonzales, new head coach, is convinced the Wildcats will be a contender in District 6-A. He has 17 lettermen returning.

Scott Terrell, last year's leading receiver, hopes to snag touchdown tosses this year.

On denfese, Julian and Danny Valle are returning at the corners, with Glaze and Stone attacking as ends.

Chad Wells will be hitting from the safety position.

Order of Eastern Star hosts annual Western Dinner

WESTERN DINNER MUSIC-MAKER — Mike Payne and his band provided the music for the diners at the Western Dinner sponsored August 27 by the Stanton Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star.

By PEGGY LUXTON
Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc.

Barbecue brisket, beans, potato salad, cole slaw and cobbler. And if that's not western dinner enough, there are homemade cakes to be auctioned. Western music is played by one of Martin County's home-grown bands. The traditional report of "a good time was had by all" certainly fits the occasion.

This was the scene for the 1988 version of the Western Dinner, hosted yearly by Stanton's Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. The local chapter is Chapter #409, and it has been in existence for over 75 years.

The yearly dinner is an event at which all members pitch in and help out. All the food is cooked and served by chapter members. All the cakes in the auction are homemade by chapter members. Approximately 168 citizens of Martin County and the surrounding area were fed at this year's event, August 27. Mike Payne and his band supplied dinner music in a western vein.

Funds raised by the dinner will be used to carpet the chapter room in Stanton's Masonic Lodge. Other worthy causes to which the chapter donates time and money are to their Grand Chapter, which is the state chapter, to ministerial college scholarships, to the Order of Eastern Star Retirement Home in Arlington, Big Spring State Hospital, the American Cancer Society and various Stanton community causes.

The Stanton chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star is a fraternal organization under the wide umbrella of the Masonic Lodge. To be an Eastern Star member, one must have a father, brother, or husband who is a member of the Masonic Lodge. Each chapter has a Worthy Matron. Stanton's Worthy Matron is Mrs. Marie Woody. It is her responsibility to preside at the chapter's meetings much as a president presides over a club meeting. Worthy Patron is Prentiss Hightower. His duties are to assist the Worthy Matron. Georgia Welch is the Conductress and the Deputy Grand Matron of District 2, Section 8. She oversees chapters in the section, which runs from Coahoma to Odessa and from Crane to Seminole. There are both male and female members in the chapter.

The Stanton chapter has 79 members. These members are from Stanton, Midland and Odessa. Some hold dual memberships in more than one chapter. There are many non-residential members who have moved, but have kept their membership here. The Western Dinner is the chapter's main fund-raising event.

Kelly, Cruse exchange wedding vows in Midland

Kerry Gay Kelly and Mark Thomas Cruse, both of Midland, were united in marriage July 30, 1988 at a 7:30 p.m. ceremony in the Garden of the Groom's Parents, with Homer Lankford, great uncle of the Bride officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Joyce Ellis, Stanton, and the late Tommie Kelly.

Bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Cruse, Midland.

The couple stood before a white lattice canopy accented with Boston Ferns, Pink Begonias and pink caladiums. White periwinkles placed in planters and unity candle accented the setting.

Vocalist was Sandra Kelly, sister in law of the Bride, Alabama.

The bride, escorted by her brother, Randal Kelly, Alabama, was given in marriage by her mother. The bride wore a white chantilly lace gown trimmed with embroidered lace and pearls. The Victorian gown featured a high neckline edged in lace and pearls. The fitted waistline featured a pleated A line sheer organza skirt with a sweep train. She wore a head piece featuring a wreath of silk flowers and pearls.

Best Man was Robert Banter, Midland.

Ushers were Sam Ellis, brides brother, Stanton and Gary Snell, Dumas.

After the wedding, a reception was held in the garden. The brides table draped with a white tablecloth featured a two tiered wedding cake, decorated with pink roses. The brides bouquet served as the center piece. The groom's table featured a german chocolate cake in the shape of a horseshoe and was decorated with a silver coffee service.

After a wedding trip to South Padre Island, the couple will make their home in Midland.

Chamber notes

Last week's Yard of the Week honors go to L.D. and Lyn Porter at 1109 North St. Peter Street. This attractive, colorful yard on the curve is most eye-catching.

The Randy Moore yard at 405 Sixth Street is the winner of this week's award. This street has a large number of very well-kept yards, making a pleasant neighborhood atmosphere.

★ ★ ★

From our two Chamber in-service get-togethers for teachers at Stanton and Grady, we came away with a definite feeling of well-being for our schools. The students and the community are very fortunate to have such quality people connected with our school systems.

★ ★ ★

As our younger children entered kindergarten last week, some reluctantly, we have seen many of our graduating seniors turning to challenging endeavors. They are scattering to colleges, near and far, taking jobs, and entering the service. We look forward to hearing of their progress.

★ ★ ★

An out-of-state trucker visited the Old Jail recently and was very interested in our county history. He had been a history teacher in his home state for many years, but with two children in college, he had to leave his profession for one that would provide more income to help on rising college costs. We continue having many interesting visitors.

The Chamber of Commerce is serving a Pre-game Baked Potato and Salad Supper, Friday, Sept. 16, from 5:30 to 8:00 at the Stanton High School Cafeteria. Advance tickets are available from Chamber directors or at the Chamber office in the Old Jail. Proceeds will be used for Chamber of Commerce activities.

Stop signs to be renewed on Sept. 15

The overpass on SH 191 at FM 1788 will open Wednesday, according to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The project started in October, 1987, as a joint venture of Strain Brothers from San Angelo, Texas and Jascon from Uvalde, Texas. The project took 11 months to complete. Teh bid cost was approximately $2.9 million.

"Changes in the traffic pattern on SH 191 will cause other changes," said Dee Phillips, traffic safety specialist from Odessa. "On Sept. 15, 1988, the stop signs on FM 1788 at SH 191 service roads will be removed," he said. Traffic from Midland Odessa enroute to Midland International Airport will still be required to stop for traffic on FM 1788.

The four-way stops with additional warnings will remain at service road locations until Sept. 15 to allow for public acceptance of the change.

Area Residents Reap Many Benefits From H&R Block's Tax Course

Many successful Big Spring tax preparers have begun their careers by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax Course. Others have taken the course to increase their ability to accurately prepare their own returns.

H&R Block, the nation's largest tax preparation firm, has been teaching income tax preparation for 22 years. This year the basic income tax course starts on September 7; morning, and evening classes are available.

Students look at the course as a way to save money and make money by picking up or polishing up tax return preparation skills. The 13-week course progresses from simple to complex tax problems. Students learn through a combination of classroom discussion, hands-on problem solving and homework. This year's classes will introduce participants to the latest tax laws.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible scheduling a real benefit. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes all materials, supplies and textbooks. Successful graduates receive a Certificate of Achievement and 7.5 units of continuing education credit.

Texas Democrats organize early

Democratic campaign workers from around the state met Saturday for an organization, training and strategy session that Land Commissioner Garry Mauro called "historic" because of its early timing.

Mauro and Railroad Commission member John Sharp told campaigners their efforts are crucial for Democratic candidates, including the presidential ticket of Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen.

"If you do your job right, there is no way in the world that the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign will not win," said Sharp, Texas chairman of that campaign.

Mauro, noting that important races have been decided in Texas by several votes per precinct, said, "If you do your work, you will elect not only the enxt president and vice president of the United States, you will elect a new generation of Democratic courthouses in the state of Texas ... You can put Democratic power back in those courthouses.

"We are far ahead of the game," Mauro said. "There has been no time in the history of this state when we've had an organization like this before Labor Day."

About 100 people, including organizers, staff members and volunteers, attended the meeting.

Quality of water threatened

CRMWD OKs appropriation

The Colorado River Municipal Water District will continue to explore possible actions to mitigate the threat that Natural Dam Lake west of Big Spring poses to the quality of water supply.

In the meantime, an appropriation of $255,000 was approved to raise a 36-inch pipeline inundated by the lake so that it will be above the maximum potential elevation of the lake. The pipeline will be cross-connected with a 27-inch line that also is inundated in order that water deliveries will not be disrupted to the Midland-Odessa area.

Several alternatives concerning Natural Dam Lake, which has experienced unprecedented rises in the past two years, were discussed by the Long Range Planning Committee of the CRMWD.

The committee suggested that studies be continued while the CRMWD continues to hold discussions about the problem with the Texas Water Commission and the Texas Water Development Board.

The lake contains more than 20,000 acre-feet of extremely poor quality water, some of which has had to be spilled into the Beals Creek course to protect the integrity of the natural dam across Sulpher Draw.

To offset any negative effects to Lake Spence, the district has increased the mix of Lake Thomas water in Big Spring with Spence water so that water quality to various cities has actually improved during the period.

Also approved was $33,840 from the contingency and improvement fund for the district's share of stream gauging on the Colorado River above Stacy reservoir in cooperation with the U.S. Geological Survey.

Presentations were made to the board concerning self-insurance for liability and hospitalization insurance, but no action was taken. A minor amendment was made to the retirement plan to conform with new Internal Revenue Service regulations. State National Bank in Big Spring was selected as the district depository for the biennium beginning Jan. 1, 1989.

General manager O.H. Ivie reported satisfactory progress on the Stacy Dam construction. He said excavation has begun on the channel leading to the substructure for the San Angelo and Midland District pump station.

Plans call for raising the 37-inch line across Buzzard and Sulphur Draw crossings and supporting it on heavy-duty A frames. The distance involved is about 2,200 feet, according to engineers.

Another $125,000 was appropriated from the contingency and improvement fund to re-line the 15,000,000-gallon terminal storage reservoir at the Big Spring base station. That reservoir receives Lake Thomas and Spence waters and delivers it to Big Spring, Midland and Odessa.

Wheat variety selection critical

Wheat variety selection should be based on past performance data, said Dr. Travis Miller, Texas Agricultural Extension Service agronomist.

Particular attention should be given to yield, milling quality and disease resistance, he said.

Leaf rust resistance is critically important because the disease is a major problem in most years, Miller said.

Drunk Driving Around the World

In Australia the names of the drivers are sent to local newspapers and are printed under the heading, "He's drunk and in jail."

In South Africa the penalty is a 10-year prison sentence and the equivalent of a $10,000 fine or both.

In Turkey drunks are taken 10 miles from town by the police and forced to walk back under escort.

In Norway the penalty is three weeks in jail at hard labor and one year loss of license. Second offense within five years, the license is revoked for life.

In Russia license is revoked for life.

In England one-year supervision and $250 fine and one year in jail.

In France three year loss of license, one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

In Poland jail, fine and enforced attendance at political lectures.

Views of papers across the U.S.

Protecting national secrets

The idea of Americans passing along secrets to the enemy has always been an abhorrent one, and news of another such situation in West Germany makes one wonder about this nation's moral fiber.

It also raises questions about the government's counterintelligence capabilities. . . .

It's evident that too many people hold security clearances to handle classified documents.

And handing out clearances to so many young military people, most not mature enough to handle the responsibility, is a questionable practice. . . .

The government may have to consider draconian measures to stop the flight of secrets to Warsaw Pact nations and elsewhere.

More rigorous investigations and follow-ups as well as workplace surveillance are not pleasant prospects but it may be coming to that. In some instances, it's a matter of sloppy security practices.

Whatever the case, the nation's critical defense secrets must be protected better than they have been.

Lewiston (Maine) Daily Sun

Art of presidential campaigning

At the same time, the vice president and his friends have expended excessive energy trying to brand Democratic presidential contender Michael S. Dukakis as disloyal. . . .

Sadly, the vice president has squandered several opportunities to say something meaningful by instead dwelling on the fact that as governor of Massachusetts, Dukakis vetoed a bill that would have imposed criminal fines on teachers who failed to lead their class in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Dukakis correctly nixed the bill because of state and U.S. Supreme Court rulings that such laws are unconstitutional.

Bush claims he would have signed it anyway. Does this mean he has little respect for Supreme Court interpretations of the Constitution or that he holds the Constitution in as little regard as some other Reagan administration officials have?

Why has Bush insisted on beating this non-issue into the ground? He should be above such cheap shots.

Bush and Dukakis can show real leadership and character by rising from the mud and dwelling on the issues — and by doing so with specifics, not platitudes.

Flint (Mich.) Journal

Quayle: Instance of hypocrisy?

Sen. (Dan) Quayle's decision to write press releases during the Vietnam War is not, by itself, reason to question his suitability for the vice presidency. But repeated instances of hypocrisy are another matter altogether.

It seems Quayle holds two standards, one for the nation, and another for himself.

The public Quayle champions the family and war games, and opposes nuclear disarmament and negotiations with the Soviets, with a passion no doubt genuine.

But as Quayle's National Guard escapade reveals, there's another private man behind the public mask who does not live out the values he espouses.

Despite his heavy-handed war philosophy, given the opportunity to fight, he has dodged dangerous assignments. His rhetoric honoring the family sings pure Republican.

But the private man has felt no compunction against propositioning a Playboy model, or even carousing in that set of company.

There, Quayle the private man has revealed himself to be an opportunist, his personal politics and morality vulnerable to the convenience of the moment. . . .

That he has tried to rationalize the way he exempts his own behavior from the code he holds to the nation should disappoint the public. That he feels free to condemn anyone who points to the inconsistencies suggests he is too immature to face himself.

Herald, Everett, Wash

Pentagon contract prices

Taxpayers are well aware of — and understandably incensed by — the more spectacular cases of Pentagon contract price-gouging.

They should be equally upset by results of a four-year federal audit that proves overcharging is common on defense contracts.

The study of 95 contractors found that 365 of 774 pricing actions, a hefty 47.2 percent, were overpriced by $788.9 million.

A big chunk of that supposedly will be recovered with interest from offending contractors.

But how much more is being lost?

The Daily Ardmoreite, Ardmore, Okla

Some drug risks are justifed

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration's flexible, new approach to drug marketing brings hope to thousands of people afflicted with AIDS and other life-threatening illnesses.

After years of dogged resistance, the FDA has suddenly relaxed its rigid rules and bowed to logical demands that an experimental drug be made more widely available to sufferers of a severe form of pneumonia that is the leading cause of death among AIDS patients.

Under the new policy, the FDA has agreed to make the drug trimetrexate freely available to physicians throughout the United States, even though the drug has not passed all the tests normally required for marketing approval.

Naturally, the FDA should not relax its careful scrutiny of new drugs in ordinary circumstances. To do so would place the public at risk.

But where there is a chance of saving lives in otherwise hopeless situations, risks are justified.

CAPSULED COMMENTS reports the mayor of Muhldorf, Germany, has curbed the pigeon population with a unique method.

He hired men to climb the town's roofs, collect the pigeon eggs and take them home for hard boiling, after which they were returned to their nests.

The pigeons were kept so busy trying to hatch the eggs they forgot to lay more, which they would have done had the nest been empty.

A year later, Muhldorf has fewer pigeons and cleaner streets. Moreover the mayor saved money on the cleanup.

HISPANICS: Both parties making big plays for fast-growing minority vote

Despite the attention Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign has focused on black voters, some election experts say Hispanics — American's fastest — growing minority — could determine who will move into the White House next year.

Knowing that as many as 4.2 million Hispanics will vote in the presidential contest this year, the Democrats are stressing the fluency of Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen in Spanish as a way of appealing to Hispanics.

Vice President George Bush, the certain Republican nominee, is pledging to appoint a Hispanic to his Cabinet and speaks with pride of his three Mexican-American grandchildren when asked about his appeal to Hispanics.

Analysts say the presidential race will be tight across the country, so concentrations of Hispanic voters could prove crucial, especially in a handful of large states.

California and Texas, have an estimated 4.5 million of the country's 13 million Hispanics. Together the two states represent 76 of the 270 electoral votes needed to win the presidency.

"In Texas and California the Hispanic vote could be critical to victory," said Robert Brischetto, executive director of the Southwest Voter Research Institute in San Antonio.

Brischetto said Hispanics cast 7 percent of the votes in California's general election in 1986 and 8.1 percent of the votes in Texas that year.

The National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials, a nonpartisan research group, lists nine states as home to almost 90 percent of the country's Hispanics. Besides California and Texas, the association says, Hispanic votes will be important in Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Illinois, New Jersey, New Mexico and New Youk.

Those nine states have a total of 193 electoral votes, so a candidate could go a long way toward winning the White House capturing Hispanics' loyalty.

Dukakis took special pains to appeal to Hispanic voters during the convention. He met with members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, outlining his "Viva Dukakis" effort to attract 100,000 new Hispanic voters this year. And he made a direct appeal by speaking a few lines of his acceptance speech in Spanish.

Dukakis also scored with Hispanics with his selection of Bentsen of Texas as a running mate. Bentsen, speaking Spanish, has campaigned effectively in the barrios in Texas. "He has always treated Hispanics with respect and he has always been responsive to Hispanic elected officials," said Henry Munoz, finance chairman for Dukakis in San Antonio.

Even though non-citizenship and relatively lower levels of income and education tend to hold down Hispanic voter participation, a study released in June by the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials Education Fund showed the Hidpanic vote rising along with population.

The study said Hispanic voting increased 29.3 percent between 1982 and 1986. Between 1976 and 1986 the Hispanic share of the overall vote in the country increased from 2.4 to 3.6 percent.

The study also said Hispanics made up a significant part of both parties' votes in states with large Latino populations.

"In Texas, for example, from 23 percent to 27 percent of the 1984 Democratic Party's vote, and 5 percent to 7 percent of the Republican Party's vote came from the Hispanic community," the association's report said. In California, the range was 12 percent of 16 percent for Democrats and 4 percent to 7 percent for the Republicans."

Michael Giles, an Emory University political scientist who specializes in minority and ethnic voting, said politicians would be wrong to assume Hispanic voting will be monolithic: "There are Cuban Hispanics, Mexixan-Americans, Puerto Ricans. Their interests may differ."

Those differences are illustrated in a national poll of likely Hispanic voters taken earlier this month for the Presidential Hotline.

Among Hispanics as a whole, the poll showed, 59 percent favored Dukakis while 32 percent favored Bush. Among Mexican Americans and Puerto Ricans, Dukakis was a 2-to-1 favorite. But among Cuban Americans Bush led 80 percent to 14 percent. Dukakis led 56 percent to 41 percent among voters of Central and South American origin.

California and Texas have an estimated 4.5 million of the country's 13 million Hispanics. Together the two states represent 76 of the 270 electoral votes needed to win the presidency.

Earlier this month Bush spoke to the League of United Latin Ameican Citizens Convention in Dallas.

"If I become president, my Cabinet will be composed of the very best men and women — at least one of whom finally will be a Hispanic-American," Bush told the convention. "It's time. It's long overdue, and that's a firm pledge."

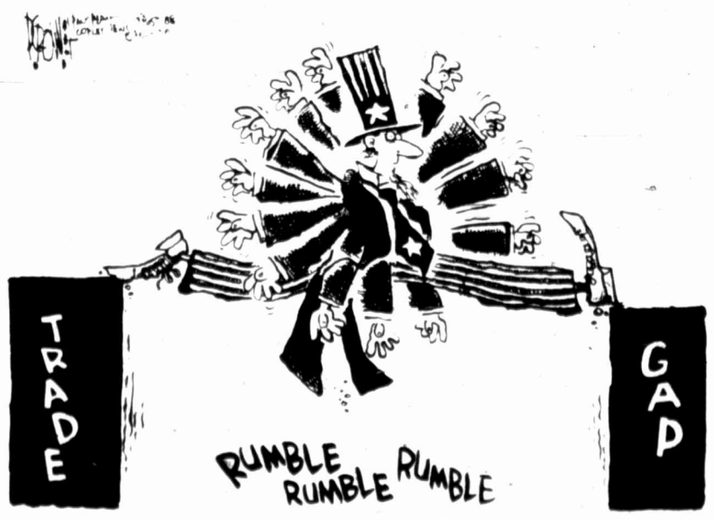

Bush's son, Jeb Bush, addressed the convention in Spanish, saying his Mexican born wife became a U.S. citizen this year so she could vote for his father.

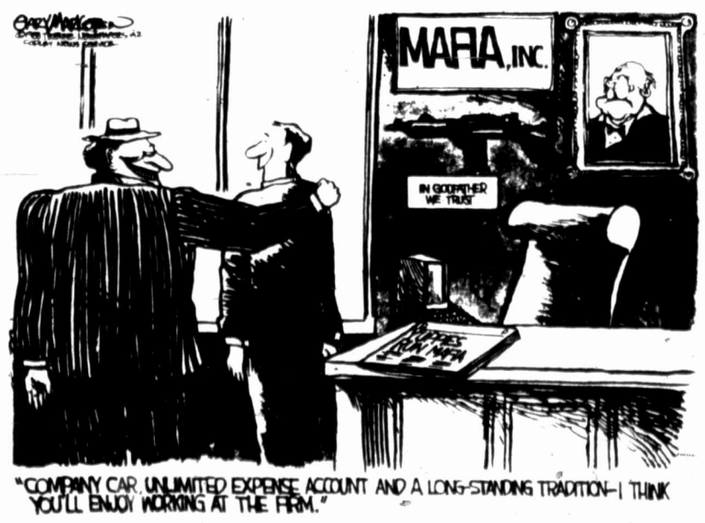

Dukakis sought to minimize Bush's pledge of appointing a Hispanic to his Cabinet, noting that he had made a similar promise in 1987.

Not surprisingly, Republicans are quick to downplay the Democrats' Spanish speaking.

"It's going to take a lot more than being bilingual to lock up any part of the American electorate," said Bush spokesman Mark Goodin. He said taking Hispanics for granted could backfire for the Democrats.

The Census Bureau projects the country's potential Latino voting population will have grown to slightly more than 13 million this year.

Cap Rock member will win pickup

By PEGGY LUXTON
Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc.

A lucky member of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative will be awarded the keys to a pickup at this year's Annual Membership Meeting. Door prizes will also be given and a free barbecue supper will be served.

The 1988 Annual Meeting of the Co-Op is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 10, 1988, in the Chaparral Center on the campus of Midland College. Order of business will include the election of three directors.

Directors to be elected at this year's meeting are from Districts #4, #5, and #9.

District #4 is that part of Cap Rock's service area located in Upton County and contained in the Rankin Independent School District. There are three nominees for this district. They are:

Carlos Dusek, who lives 25 miles south of Midland; Freddy Plagens, who lives 48 miles south of Midland; and Billy Eggemeyer, who lives a few miles southwest of Midkiff.

District #5 is the area located in the Klondike and Sands Independent School Districts, containing parts of Martin, Dawson, Howard and Borden Counties. Nominees for District #5 are:

A.D. Reed, who lives two miles south of Ackerly; and Kelly Gaskins, who lives a mile south of Knott.

District #9 is basically that part of Cap Rock's service area located in the Midland Independent School District. It is Midland County outside the Midland city limits, with the exclusion of that part of the county included in the Greenwood Independent School District.

Nominated as director candidates for District #9 are:

Russell E. (Rusty) Jones, who lives in southeast Midland; and George Anderson, Jr., who lives a few miles southeast of Midland.

The barbecue meal to be served to members will be supplied by Johnny's Barbecue of Midland. The grand prize is a refurbished service vehicle that has been fine tuned, repainted, with reworked interior and new wheels and tires. Door prizes will be electrical tools and small appliances.

Registration for the meeting will begin at 5:00 p.m. The business meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Members of the Cooperative are urged to bring their families. Children's entertainment will be in the Midland College gymnasium, located across the college street from the Chaparral Center.

Entertainment will be provided by Max Reneaux, a clown-magician, who will conduct magic shows. Cartoons will also be shown. Children are required to wear sneakers because of the gymansium floor.

Members will receive official announcement of the Annual Meeting, along with an annual report, pre-registration and ballot. They are urged to bring the ballot and registration to the meeting. If a member has his pre-registration, there will be no waiting in lines to be registered. If a member forgets the form, his membership will be checked and a ballot issued.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Edited by Lea Whitehead

Water is Tex-Pure's business — their only business

In their latest move to expand services, the company now operates the only commercial ice delivery routes in Big Spring — for restaurants, fast food outlets, hospitals and others on a regular or emergency basis. Emergency calls are handled 24 hours a day.

In addition Tex-Pure operates 18 ice merchandisers located at convenience stores, service stations and business firms which employ outside crews.

"We're a truly complete water store," says Ellouise Swinney, owner. "We handle anything connected with water or ice."

Tex-Pure's services include water delivery to homes or businesses. "We come at the customer's convenience," says Swinney. "You don't have to wait for a 'regular delivery date.' If you need water, we deliver it. Our water comes sealed in sterilized containers," says Swinney.

At the store, the staff will fill your containers, or you can buy new bottles there. Bagged ice in 10- and 20-pound bags is ready-to-go, or they'll bag any size from 5 to 50 pounds. A welcome addition is "curb service" for elderly or infirm customers, or mothers with infants.

For those who take their water drinking seriously, Tex-Pure leases or sells and installs reverse osmosis systems for the home. Under the leasing arrangement, Tex-Pure handles all maintenance.

Oasis water dispensers for home or office are available for sale or rental, with cold, hot andor tap (room temperature) water. Tap and hot water spigots are convenient for food preparation.

Swinney reminds home owners who re-use containers that water bottles and dispensers need to be sterilized periodically, because the reverse osmosis process removes the chlorine.

"Just use one capful of bleach and a few drops of liquid detergent with a small amount of water," she suggests. "Swish around and then rinse well with city water."

Tex-Pure Water Systems is home owned and operated by Ellouise and Don Swinney. Ella Carroll is office manager; Joe Chavez is service manager; and Keith Tucker is route man.

Testing assures quality

When you buy water or ice from Tex-Pure Drinking Water Systems, you can be sure that it is the finest quality available, prepared under the most sanitary conditions, says Ellouise Swinney, owner.

Tex-Pure submits a sample of its water product each month to the Howard County Health Department for testing at an independent laboratory in Midland.

"We think monthly testing of our product by an independent laboratory is the very best service we can provide our customers," says Swinney. "We can devote the time and attention necessary for a quality product because water services are our only business."

Depot News

By RAMSEY ABBOTT

We had a good crowd for games and potluck on Thursday and more delicious food than 40 people could eat.

Lora Bell Tom, her sister, Faye McDaniel of Comfort, Tx. and her brother and sister-in-law, Harold and Lenora Crow attended the worldwide family reunion of the Barton family in Burns, Tenn., about 20 miles from Nashville.

Sixty-one people from nine states were present.

Lora Bell's great grandmother on her mother's side of the family was a Barton and she bought two books on her family history.

The group traveled first to New Orleans, Natchez, Miss., then to Jackson, Miss., where they took the Natchez Trace to their destination.

The Trace is an Indian path going back to pre-historic times and was used by the Natchez, Chickasaw and Choctaw tribes.

After the reunion and a one-day trip to Memphis, Lora Bell and her party started at the other end and followed the old trail westward, toward home.

They saw sorghum being made the old fashioned way and Indian burial mounds and a large one called Emerald Mound which was used for ceremonial purposes.

It is interesting that Andrew Jackson once traveled the Trace in a stage coach to visit an Indian Chief, Choctec Fluer.

Of special interest to the group was a house in Florence, Ala. built in 1839 by a Crow ancestor. A doctor lives there now and it is in perfect condition.

The Natchez Trace has not been completed from Natchez to Jackson but is being worked on and this old Indian Trail sounds like a fascinating trip for history buffs.

A number of seniors attended the annual fund raising dinner given by the Eastern Star. They had a large crowd and the cake auction was a huge success.

The band is looking for new members. The instruments are simple and you don't need special talent.

They have a lot of fun playing for conventions and clubs in such places as the Midland Hilton but their primary purpose and deepest concern is to brighten the lives of those who need them.

They play for Stanton Care Center on the third Thursday of each month and also perform for nursing homes in Lamesa, Midland and wherever they're invited.

On the first Tuesday of the month, members from the Depot go to the care center to sing and visit with the patients.

Don't forget — the second Thursday of each month is bingo.

That is tomorrow night Sept. 8 starting at 6 o'clock.

We're inviting all our friends to join us.

The Martin County Convent Foundation needs your gifts and memorials. Box 1435, Stanton, TX 79782 or call 756-2838 or 756-2574.

Martin County area receives heavy rains

The Martin County area, along with much of the South Plains and the Permian Basin, received heavy rains late last Thursday and Friday. Most of the county received in excess of two inches from the wide-ranging thunderstorms.

In the northeast part of Martin County, where in mid-summer there was widespread flooding from torrential rains, readings ranged from two to over four inches. At Knott, Clarence Ditto received 3.5 inches and was once again pumping water from around his home.

Ray Long in the Brown area reported 4.5 inches overnight. Long stated lake levels were up but that the slower rainfall did not cause the severe erosion problems experienced earlier. In the Ackerly area, Joe Dean Hall had received up to 2.5 inches. East of Ackerly, rainfall was lighter.

At Lenorah, Grover Springer reported 3.84 inches, while the Badgett area also received over three inches. North of Walcott, Ronnie Deatherage recorded 2.6 inches.

In the Lomax area of Howard County, where it has been bone dry most of the summer, Mrs. Bob Adkins reported they had received 4.5 inches.

Local farm observers feel that with warm clear weather the rest of the month, the rain could give a big boost to the area's cotton crop.

Attorney General hopeful meets with county officials

John Odam stopped over in Stanton Wednesday in his pursuit of the attorney general's job.

The Abilene native now practicing law in Houston vows to campaign in every 254 counties in Texas by Nov. 8. He has "talked with people in 186 counties" during the past year.

He is sure the present Attorney General Jim Mattox and Texas Treasurer Ann Richards will be running for governor in 1990.

Odam said he doesn't know who he will have to beat in his race.

"It's important to meet people," he said. "It's not my style to run on TV."

Odam talked with Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport, Sheriff Dan Saunders, County Attorney Jim McGilvray, Justice of Peace Shirley Scoggins, County District Clerk Virginia James and County Treasurer "Butch" Howard.

"People tend to focus on urbanized areas when they're running for a statewide office," he said. "I've been to counties where I've been told they can't remember anyone ever coming there who was running for the attorney general's office — or the governor's, or the U.S. Senate."

Odam is a former executive assistant, special assistant and chief of the insurance, banking and securities division for then-Attorney General John Hill from 1973-76.

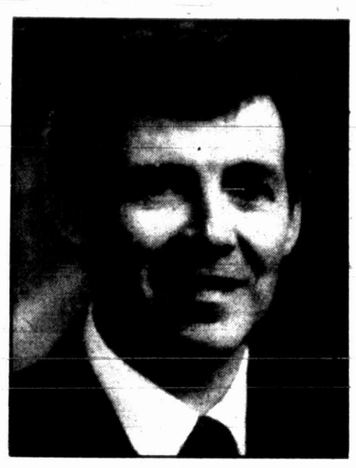

He worked in the governor's office in 1985-86 as chief legislative counsel; he is a Baylor law school honors graduate, a past chairman of the Harris County Democratic Party, and a U.S. Army veteran.

Odam, married and a father of two, is also a Baptist deacon.

His travels have shown him a different side of the issues before an attorney general — an education in the human element, Odam said.

"I was in Webb County, in Laredo, and there was a fellow there who was convicted of killing a deputy in connection with drugs. He had been convicted in Zapata County, in Hebbronville, and some people from across the border in Mexico came over and broke him out of the jail.

"They were expecting the same sort of thing when I was there, and to see the sheriff's deputies, the DPS and the Texas Rangers down there with submachine guns and shotguns and walkie-talkies preparing to defend the courthouse, it just really brought home to me that there's more to the drug problem than the statistics.

JOHN ODAM
Walkin', talkin' in Texas

"It's the same thing with the child support enforcement division," he continued. "It's one thing to read that they have 340,000 cases, and it's another thing to talk to a woman in Robert Lee and explain that she may be helped through the San Angelo office.

"I'm hearing about lots of people who are coming in to their local district attorney's office, when they should be coming to the attorney general's consumer protection division."

Almost everywhere he's gone, he said, people are looking for the same qualities in candidates for office: integrity, experience, professionalism, and accessibility.

"People — particularly in the Panhandle, the High Plains, the South Plains and the Trans-Pecos areas, where the population is so sparse — need to know that there's someone in office they can contact, someone who will listen to them," he said.

One recurring topic in the courthouses he has visited, particularly in West Texas, has been a feeling that no one living east of I-35 is paying any attention to the needs of Texans in other parts of the state, he said.

Odam said his West Texas boyhood — and his year-long journey across the state in an introductory and exploratory effort to determine whether he could run for statewide office from the private sector — had made him more sensitive to the issues and needs of people in those areas.

"In Harris County alone, we have five state senators whose districts have part of that county," he said. "In the Panhandle, there are state senatorial districts with 30 counties.

"There are some counties where they don't have a district attorney, or a county attorney," he continued. "They count on the attorney general's office for legal opinions.

"That's another reason if I'm elected I intend to run the attorney general's office with the same professionalism, and to the same standards, you would expect if you were hiring an attorney from the private sector," Odam said.

"People don't run for office like they did 100 years ago," he said. "Now, they tend to concentrate on the urbanized areas. Maybe they're right. But that's not the way I want to do it.

"I've found that people appreciate having someone come and listen to them, visit with them about the issues that concern them," he said. "And generally, the smaller the community, the larger the appreciation."

Cap Rock Connection

By PEGGY LUXTON
Member Information Advisor
Cap Rock Electric Co-Op

Nancy Swink is Payroll & Personnel Clerk for Cap Rock Electric Cooperative. In that position, she handles employees' major medical insurance, payroll, and capital credits.

Nancy was born in Kyle, Texas, near Austin. She is the daughter of Virgie Johnson of Stanton. She has lived in Stanton since she was three years old. She is a graduate of Stanton High School.

Employed at Cap Rock since March 1, 1962, Nancy will celebrate her 26th year of employment this year. She came to work for the cooperative soon after finishing high school and has been continuously employed there ever since. She has worked under all four of the Co-Op general managers: O.B. Bryan, James Eiland, Rodger Burch, and David Pruitt.

Nancy is married to Bill Swink, whom she met at Cap Rock. He is presently the cooperative's distribution engineer. The couple have one son, Brent, who is a junior at Stanton High School. The family are members of Stanton's First Baptist Church.

The first job Nancy held at Cap Rock was Capital Credits Clerk. Her job has not changed over the years, she has just gradually added more duties and responsibilities. She states that in her 26 years of employment, the biggest change was when the Cooperative obtained its computer system. Both payroll checks and capital credit checks are written by the computer, when by the old method, all checks had to be hand-written. The computer is used in all functions performed by Nancy, with the exception of insurance.

The Co-Op's 49th Annual Meeting has been scheduled for Saturday, September 10, 1988. Nancy has worked at 26 of the Annual Meetings which have preceded the current one.

PCA loss due to assessment

Although the Rolling Plains Production Credit Association posted a net loss for the first half of 1988, both the state and national systems posted gains.

The association headquartered in Stamford reported a net loss of $413,350 for the first half compared with last year's $217,877 midyear net income.

"The loss is attributed to the $743,305 assessment paid to the Farm Credit System in March 1988," said John S. Rike, association president. "Rolling Plains was one of nine Texas associations required to make this payment."

Under provisions of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, financially strong Farm Credit institutions were required to pay a one-time assessment to the Farm Credit Financial Assistance Corporation, he said.

The corporation will use the pooled capital to support the nation's ailing Farm Credit institutions.

Congress is considering legislation which could reverse the assessment and return a part of the $743,305 to the association.

Statewide, the Texas Farm Credit System, reported $900,000 in net income for the first six months of 1988, compared to a net gain of $6.8 million for the same period in 1987.

Nationwide, the Farm Credit Systems recorded a $336 million profit over the two quarters, compared with a loss of $201 million for the same period last year.

Women Enter the Business World Through H&R Block's Tax Course

Women across the country are entering the business world by learning how to prepare income tax returns. This skill has provided them with an effective key to new career opportunities. At the same time, it offers them information about how to save money at tax time.

H&R Block, the world's largest tax preparation service, offers its tax course starting September 7. Students may choose from morning, and evening classes. No prerequisites are required for enrollment. Classes take place over a 13-week period.

Experienced Block instructors teach all phases of income tax preparation. Classwork includes group discussions, practice problems, and hands-on experience preparing individual tax returns. This year's course will also cover the latest tax law changes.

For many women, skills learned in the H&R Block Tax Course pave the way to part-time positions as tax preparers with Block. The flexible hours constitute a definite plus for women with other obligations. Block, however, is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes materials, supplies, and textbooks. Students successfully completing the course receive certificates and 7.5 continuing education units of credit.

Referendum set Sept. 7-8

Ask the agent

By DON RICHARDSON
Extension agent

Pork producers in Howard County will have an opportunity to vote in a special referendum Sept. 7-8, as authorized by the Pork Promotion, Research and Consumer Information Act of 1985.

Purpose of the referendum is to determine the continuance of the 100 percent checkoff program which provides funds for prok research and promotion to enhance the pork industry. The checkoff is at the rate of 25 cents per $100 on all hogs and pigs as well as on all imported hogs and pork products.

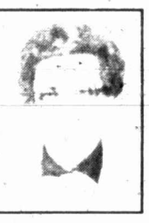

Referendum voting will be conducted in the County Extension Office during normal business hours.

All pork producers who produced and owned porcine animals in the United States for sale in commerce and who are subject to assessment during the representative time period of Nov. 1, 1986 through Sept. 6, 1988, are eligible to vote. Importers who imported porcine animals, pork or pork products during the representative time period also are eligible to vote. Also, eligible are 4-H, Future Farmers of America and other youth who owned porcine animals and are subject to assessment during the representative time period.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will count ballots, determine the eligibility of challenged voters and ballots, and report referendum results.

New trends in portable appliances

By NAOMI HUNT
Extension agent

Focus on family

The average American household contains 13 portable appliances and a lot of them arrived there as gifts. If you're planning on giving an appliance or requesting one — here are some of the newer features you may want to consider.

When you're shopping for someone who has little work and storage space, consider under-the-cabinet models. Coffeemakers, mixers, toasters, can openers, toaster ovens and microwave ovens all come in these space-saving forms.

Think about how the appliance will be used before you buy it. For a single person or a small family, a smaller-size version may be most appropriate. For example, you can buy a full-size food processor or one with just a two-cup capacity. Microwave ovens can be large enough to roast a whole turkey, or just the right size for cooking frozen entrees.

Cordless operation is another feature to consider in appliances. These appliances are run by rechargeable, nickel cadmium built into a storage-charger base. The appliance recharges overnight to full capacity in its special base, but can also be used on a partial charge after several hours.

The rechargeable batterless have a 5 to 7 year life expectancy and can be replaced at the company's service center. Cordless appliances perform as well as their cord-connected counterparts, yet get eliminate the unsightly and sometimes unsafe tangle of electrical cords.

Electronic controls are another innovation that makes small appliances safer. When an iron with automatic shutoff is left unused for too long — generally about 30 seconds in the flat position and 10 minutes in the heel — rest position — it shuts itself off. An automatic shutoff is available on curling irons also.

Other electronic controls that can be useful include speed controls, timers, "ready" lights and automatic operations set by a timer.

By carefully considering the needs of the person you're buying for, it's more likely your gift will both be used and appreciated.

Buying a portable appliance that winds up sitting in a cupboard is a waste of money. Before you purchase an appliance for yourself or as a gift for someone else, consider the following:

Do you really need the appliance? For example, a pasta maker may be wonderful, but the cost is justified only if you will use it frequently. If you want fresh, homestyle pasta only 2-3 times a year. You can pay the premium price to buy it at a deli and still be money ahead.

Where are you going to put it? If the counters are already crammed with appliances, you may not want to add another one — at least until you've removed some other appliance that's just taking up space.

Does it have the features you need? Is it big enough, or small enough for your family sized? Are there automatic features that will make its use easier?

What does it look — and clean — like? Are the lines simple and attractive? Are there hard to clean crevices and corners that will "attract" dust, grease or grime.

Is the appliance made by a reputable manufacturer who provides a warranty or guarantee? How long is the warranty and what does it cover — the entire appliance or only some parts? Is a repair service available?

Answer these questions and you'll have a better idea of whether you should spend your money on a portable appliance.

Democratic Club to hold meeting

The Howard County Democratic Club will have a special meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Howard County Courthouse in the district court room.

The purpose of the meeting is to introduce Johnnie Lou Avery to all the voters of Howard County, according to Mack Underwood, publicity chairman.

Avery is the Democratic candidate for state representative of the 69th District of the Texas Legislature, opposing Republican candidate Troy Fraser.

The meeting will afford an opportunity for all the people of the community to meet the candidate, and to learn of her views, Underwood said.

The meeting is open to the public.

Learning Center opens

The Howard College Learning Center, a service provided free to anyone who wants to participate, is now open from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday, for Adult Basic Education and GED students. It is also open on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. for English as a Second Language, ABE, and GED students.

The Learning Center provides assistance to members of the community who need to study prior to taking the General Educational Development (GED) tests; who want to learn to read and write; or who need to be taught English as a second language, according to college officials.

The Learning Center also provides help to generally increase basic skills for numerous reasons, including improving job performance and high school and college students who need to increase basic skills that may be causing them to fall behind in their coursework.

For more information, contact Janie Rodriquez at Howard College, 267-6311 extension 316 or visit the Learning Center in the south annex of the Howard College Administration Building.

Paula Sue Greer and Timothy Kyle Plew, both of Lubbock, were united in marriage Aug. 20, 1988 at a 7 p.m. ceremony at Sunset Church of Christ, Lubbock, with Russell McLaughlin, minister of Church of Christ, Huntsville, officiating.

Special prayer was led by Malcolm Pointon, minister of Church of Christ, and bridegroom's brother-in-law, Hastings, New Zealand.

Women Enter the Business World Through H&R Block's Tax Course

Women across the country are entering the business world by learning how to prepare income tax returns. This skill has provided them with an effective key to new career opportunities. At the same time, it offers them information about how to save money at tax time.

H&R Block, the world's largest tax preparation service, offers its tax course starting September 7. Students may choose from morning, and evening classes. No prerequisites are required for enrollment. Classes take place over a 13-week period.

Experienced Block instructors teach all phases of income tax preparation. Classwork includes group discussions, practice problems, and hands-on experience preparing individual tax returns. This year's course will also cover the latest tax law changes.

For many women, skills learned in the H&R Block Tax Course pave the way to part-time positions as tax preparers with Block. The flexible hours constitute a definite plus for women with other obligations. Block, however, is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes materials, supplies, and textbooks. Students successfully completing the course receive certificates and 7.5 continuing education units of credit.

Texas representative runs wild on airplane

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Tumbleweed Smith

My wife Susan and I are getting ready to make a trip to Korea and other places in that part of the world. China is on the agenda, too. And we may go to Singapore. I've always wanted to visit Sumatra and Madagascar just to say I had been there.

We're planning to attend an international Rotary convention in Seoul. The last time we went to one of those was in 1984 when we went to England. Most of the events were held in the big convention center between Conventory and Birmingham. You talk about a miniature United Nations. Wow.

The African dress was the most dazzling of all the clothing styles we saw. The brightly colored robes worn by both men and women were worth staring out. They even beat the kilts worn by the guys from the British isles.

At some event like this, people exchange little souvenirs. In addition to business cards, everyone carries some trinket that represents their home area.

The variety of items is rather amazing: bookmarks, key chains, pins of all descriptions, some really special things like a Chinese lantern, or a miniature Haitian voodoo doll. I prefer the pins. We're trying to decide between a jackrabbit or coyote.

My neighbor, Dr. Joe Bader, came over the other day and told me about the time he went to an international Lions Club convention. He was living in Jackson County then and he was looking for something to represent Texas.

This was sometime ago — before horned toads got scarce and were placed on the endangered species list. Joe got the idea of taking a bunch of live baby horned toads to the convention and giving them away as souvenirs.

He ran an ad in the local paper offering 25 cents for each little horned toad. He had a tub full within three days. He stopped his newspaper ad. The closer he got to his departure date, though, he thought he needed some more of the little critters. This time he offered a dime each. He got another tubful.

He put the choicest horned toads in a cardboard box and put it under his seat on the airplane that was taking him to New York, site of the convention. Prior to take-off he had placed a wet sponge in the cardboard box to provide moisture for the horned toads.

Somewhere over the eastern United States that sponge had somehow lodged against the corner and weakened the structure of the box. One of the little horned toads, seeing a chance to escape its confined quarters, left the cardboard box.

Sure enough, a little old lady from Arkansas, nervous about her first flight anyway, started screaming when she saw what looked like a miniature prehistoric creature scurrying down the carpeted aisle of the airliner.

The flight attendant who went to see what the commotion was all about was from Iowa, where they don't have any crawly creepy creatures at all. Nothing in her flight training had prepared her to handle a situation like this. In her desperation she started trying to kill the horned toad.

Now Joe had been watching all this with some amusement. But when somebody started trying to trample one of his pet horned tads, the ones especially sized to serve as Texas souvenirs, he got riled up. He burst out of his seat, pushed the stewardess out of the way and reached down and rescued his treasure. He gave it special attention all the way to his destination.

At the convention, the horned toads were a bit hit. Several people went up to Joe and asked, "Are you the man with the lizards?" And Joe would gladly give them one.

Joe wore a horned toad on a string pinned to his shirt collar. It was still because Joe had rubbed on it to put it to sleep. On the convention floor, curious people would ask, "Is that thing stuffed?" Joe said "No, it's just sleeping," and would coax the critter awake.

At the hotel he kept the horned toads in the bathtub. When the maid first saw them, she wouldn't even clean Joe's room. But before the convention was over, she made peace with them and asked for one to give to her daughter.

Joe gave them away to people all over the world. And said he could have used more. Maybe we oughta think about getting miniature horned toad pins.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Edited by Lea Whitehead

In their latest move to expand services, the company now operates the only commercial ice delivery routes in Big Spring — for restaurants, fast food outlets, hospitals and others on a regular or emergency basis. Emergency calls are handled 24 hours a day.

In addition Tex-Pure operates 18 ice merchandisers located at convenience stores, service stations and business firms which employ outside crews.

"We're a truly complete water store," says Ellouise Swinney, owner. "We handle anything connected with water or ice."

Tex-Pure's services include water delivery to homes or businesses. "We come at the customer's convenience," says Swinney. "You don't have to wait for a 'regular delivery date.' If you need water, we deliver it. Our water comes sealed in sterilized containers," says Swinney.

At the store, the staff will fill your containers, or you can buy new bottles there. Bagged ice in 10- and 20-pound bags is ready-to-go, or they'll bag any size from 5 to 50 pounds. A welcome addition is "curb service" for elderly or infirm customers, or mothers with infants.

For those who take their water drinking seriously, Tex-Pure leases or sells and installs reverse osmosis systems for the home. Under the leasing arrangement, Tex-Pure handles all maintenance.

Oasis water dispensers for home or office are available for sale or rental, with cold, hot andor tap (room temperature) water. Tap and hot water spigots are convenient for food preparation.

Swinney reminds home owners who re-use containers that water bottles and dispensers need to be sterilized periodically, because the reverse osmosis process removes the chlorine.

"Just use one capful of bleach and a few drops of liquid detergent with a small amount of water," she suggests. "Swish around and then rinse well with city water."

Tex-Pure Water Systems is home owned and operated by Ellouise and Don Swinney. Ella Carroll is office manager; Joe Chavez is service manager; and Keith Tucker is route man.

Testing assures quality

When you buy water or ice from Tex-Pure Drinking Water Systems, you can be sure that it is the finest quality available, prepared under the most sanitary conditions, says Ellouise Swinney, owner.

Tex-Pure submits a sample of its water product each month to the Howard County Health Department for testing at an independent laboratory in Midland.

"We think monthly testing of our product by an independent laboratory is the very best service we can provide our customers," says Swinney. "We can devote the time and attention necessary for a quality product because water services are our only business."
