MISD bemoans going by book, facing annual shortage of texts

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"Why doesn't my child have a school textbook?"

It is a question being fielded by teachers, school-board trustees and even state representatives.

On Tuesday evening, Midlander Larry Goodwin posed a similar question to school-board trustees.

"Why can't we have 100 percent of the books for every child when school starts?" Goodwin said.

"We are dealing with a complex, cumbersome system," said Dorsey Rushing, executive director of elementary operations for Midland Independent School District.

Rushing said the Texas Education Agency's system requires that school districts order textbooks in April for the upcoming school year. The district orders books based on peak enrollment of the current year.

Deadly plague spreads to New Delhi, Calcutta

Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — A huge banner proclaimed "Plague Control Room" at the capital's train station, and police stood by Tuesday to rush the sick to the hospital. There, feverish sufferers shivered while awaiting care; one ailing man tried to sneak away.

■ Pneumonic plague is more deadly form of bubonic plague — the disease that ravaged 14th century Europe and Asia as 'the Black Death.'

Officials urged calm, but as plague spread from western Surat to New Delhi and across the nation to Calcutta, authorities also escalated efforts to find the sick, rush antibiotics to pharmacies and spray insecticide to

'Bird lady' claims partial win in vote

■ Council allows some wildlife rehabilitation inside city limits.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Zoning and other specifications required to operate a wildlife rehabilitation center within the city were laid down by the City Council on Tuesday. But that doesn't resolve whether Midge and Woody Erskine can continue to operate their home-based Eos Wildlife Refuge Center.

The code amendment — which requires a second reading by the council on Oct. 11 — does pave the way for the Erskines to apply for a permit to run a wildlife rehabilitation center.

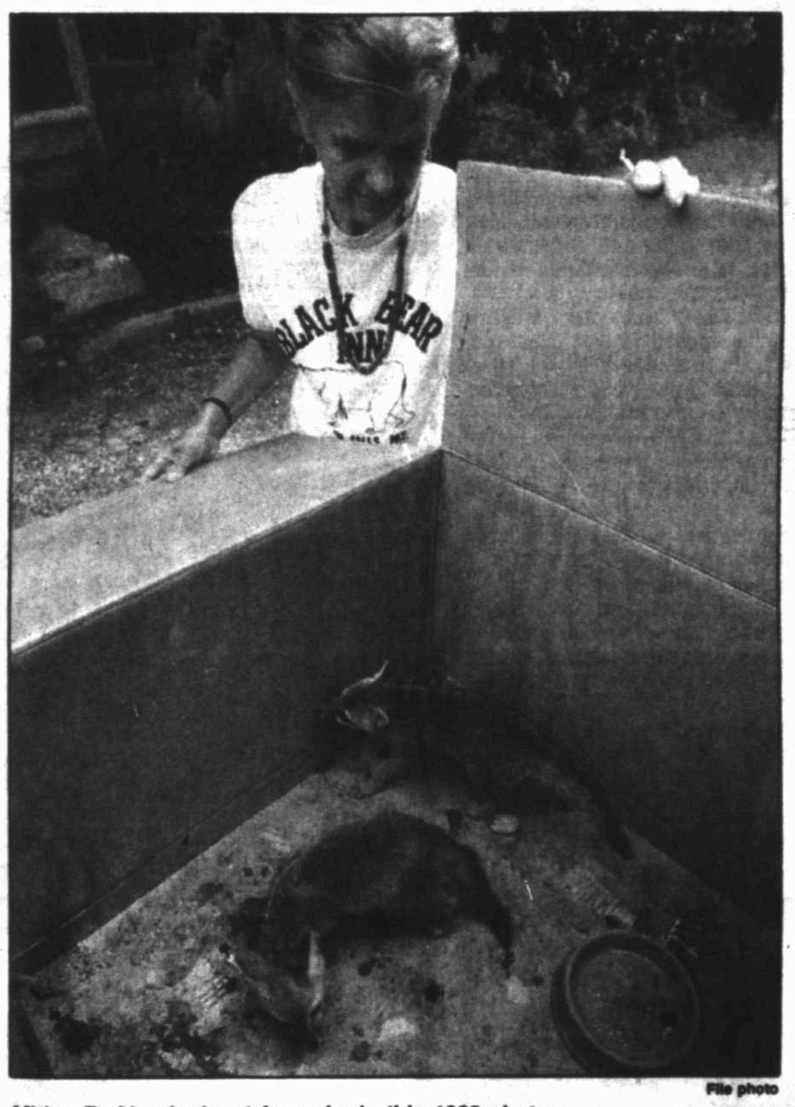

The council voted 4-2 — Jose Cuevas and Claudia Egan dissenting and Ed Vogler absent — to pass an ordinance that allows wildlife rehabilitation centers on property generally zoned for residential, agricultural estate, retail and some commercial use.

Except in a commercially zoned area, a special-use permit with term will have to be granted by the City Council.

A wildlife rehabilitation center will be required to be within a "sanitary, completely enclosed facility," treat only birds, and be on a minimum of two acres of property. The applicant also will have to submit an acceptable site plan.

Ms. Erskine declined to say whether she would apply for a spe-

Water pipeline nears; officials tap in

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The availability of lake water and the virtual completion of the 157-mile Colorado River Municipal Water District pipeline from Lake Ivie to Midland-Odessa offer testimony to CRMWD officials' "foresight, ingenuity, hard work and persistence" former Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth said Tuesday.

"West Texans will go a long way for a cold drink of water," Faircloth said during the ceremony marking the near-completion of the $124 million project.

Water from Lake Ivie — which is near Ballinger in West Central Texas — is to be flowing into the Midland-Odessa reservoir by early next year.

"A lot of times we take for granted" the water provided through the development of CRMWD's lakes, Faircloth said.

Other CRMWD lakes are Thomas near Colorado City and Spence near Robert Lee.

Faircloth said the Lake Ivie project has been in planning or under development during the administration of four Midland may-

Residents won't foot new stadium bill, city poll finds

Cityline Community Pulse

Staff Report

Maybe football isn't king after all.

At least not when matched head-to-head with the threat of new taxes or the idea of spending money on a new football stadium meant academics would suffer as a result.

Sixty percent of the 887 callers to this week's Community Pulse poll said they would vote "no" to building a new football stadium if a bond election were held and taxes were increased to meet the expense.

A group of Midlanders is passing a petition around town that calls for a bond election for the building of an athletic facility to replace the aging Memorial Stadium.

Of the total response to Cityline's poll, 532 would oppose a bond election to fund a new facility; 355 say Midland is in need — and deserving — of a new high school stadium.

"In a school system where teacher salaries would qualify them for food stamps and budget cuts stifle the education of our children," said an anonymous caller, "I would find it ludicrous to spend money on a stadium. Let's put this money in the classroom where it's needed."

'Get out!' Cockpit tape pins boy at controls before airbus crash

By Julia Rubin
Associated Press

MOSCOW — "Daddy, can I turn this?"

The cockpit tapes record a chilling scene: the pilot's children getting a flying lesson just before the Airbus jet crashed, killing all 75 people aboard.

The transcript of the desperate final minutes before the March crash, published this week in the magazine Obozrevatel, reveals that the Aeroflot crew almost succeeded in saving the plane.

But the presence of the children and the crew's unfamiliarity with the foreign-built Airbus helped doom the flight, according to the tapes and an aviation official's analysis.

"Get out! Get out!" Captain Yaroslav Kudrinsky shouts more than a dozen times to his 16-year-old son, Eldar, who was in the captain's seat when the plane began to plunge.

The magazine would not identify its source for the black box

New flow of Rwandan refugees in flight from violence indicates crisis isn't over

■ Latest arrivals in Zaire tell stories of killings, arrests, harassment by new government's army.

Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — In a grim sign that the Rwandan crisis is far from over, the flow of refugees fleeing violence in their country is picking up again.

After weeks of trying to convince refugees it is safe to leave the squalid camps in Zaire and return home, U.N. officials say more refugees are now coming out of Rwanda than are going back.

The latest arrivals tell similar stories of killings, arrests and harassment by the army of the new Tutsi-led government.

Martin Semanza, a 20-year-old with bloodshot eyes, told The Associated Press on Tuesday that Tutsi soldiers killed his parents and three younger brothers as they fled toward Zaire.

Another young refugee, Sebuhinja Rukeratabaro, said he saw a truck filled with the bodies of Hutus arrested by Tutsi troops. Gabriel Sekabanza, 29, said Tutsi soldiers shot and killed about 30 Hutu men, women and children trying to escape across the border.

It is impossible to verify the stories of the three young Hutus, who are among the newest refugees to arrive in Zaire. But their stories are consistent with a recent internal report by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, which found an "unmistakable pattern of killing and persecution" of Hutu refugees returning to Rwanda.

The report caused such a furor that Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali imposed a gag order on U.N. officials Tuesday to stop them from discussing it. Boutros-Ghali also ordered a full investigation of the alleged revenge killings.

Diplomats in Geneva who have seen the report said it contained estimates of about 30,000 killings by government troops and their supporters.

Hutu militias massacred at least 500,000 Rwandans, most of them minority Tutsis, earlier this year. Fearing retribution, more than a million Hutus fled to Zaire and Tanzania after Tutsi-led rebels seized power in July.

The Tutsi-installed government in Rwanda said there is no proof of revenge killings by Tutsi soldiers and accused the UNHCR of trying to discourage Hutu refugees from returning home. But Damacene Nagasanzwe, 31, a Hutu refugee who arrived in Zaire on Monday, said the government was lying.

Drive-by shooting kills 2 Egyptians, tourist in resort town on Red Sea

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Two Egyptians and a German tourist were killed Tuesday night when a gunman opened fire in a crowded downtown square in the Red Sea resort town of Hurghada, the Interior Ministry said.

Another German tourists suffered a gunshot wound in the stomach, and an Egyptian woman was hit in the foot, the ministry said in a statement.

An official at the ministry, which is responsible for state security, said the attack appeared to be the work of Muslim extremists but that police had not ruled out a criminal motive. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Muslim militants have waged a 2½-year campaign of violence to try to overthrow Egypt's secular government and replace it with strict Islamic rule. The militants are not known to have carried out attacks in the Red Sea beach areas.

Hurghada, 260 miles southeast of Cairo, is a popular resort area for scuba diving and other water sports. It draws thousands of foreign tourists.

Meanwhile, suspected Muslim radicals opened fire at a passenger train in southern Egypt Tuesday night, injuring two Egyptian passengers, the ministry said.

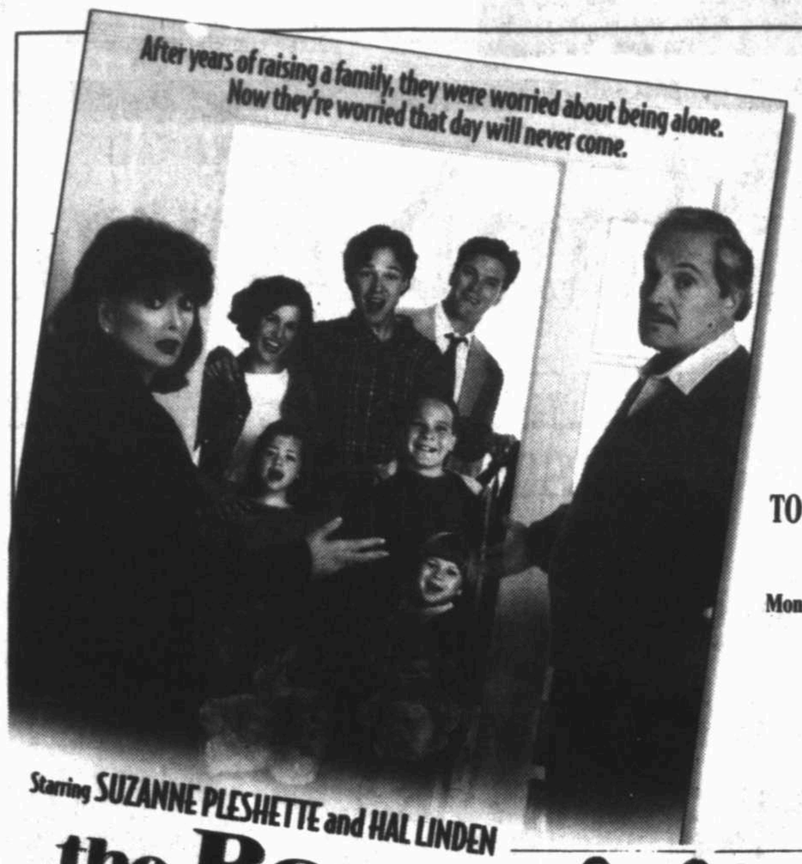

The attack occurred near the town of Melawi, 160 miles south of Cairo and the site of recent clashes between police and extremists.

Extremists such as the Islamic Group have been blamed for a number of attacks on tourists, including bombings at Cairo cafes and museums as well as shooting attacks on tourists buses, trains and Nile cruisers in southern Egypt.

At least 415 people have been killed since 1992, many of them police and militants.

Mandela fights charges by critics, supporters of self-enrichment

■ Archbishop Desmond Tutu says nation's first black president is 'showing he's just like any other politician.'

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nelson Mandela campaigned for president on a promise his African National Congress would stop the "gravy train" of government corruption and special privileges.

Now critics, even his supporters, are charging that the ANC only wanted to stop the train long enough to get on.

Mandela's uncharacteristic prickliness on the issue shows his sensitivity at being perceived as just another politician raiding the public coffers.

On Monday night, he lashed out at longtime ally Archbishop Desmond Tutu for complaining about the new parliament's approval of large salary increases for itself.

"A respected leader was unable to resist the temptation to jump on the bandwagon," Mandela said of Tutu, a fellow Nobel Peace Prize winner for his work against apartheid. "I consider it an act of irresponsibility on his part."

Tutu shot back quickly, telling The Associated Press on Tuesday that the nation's first black president was "showing he's just like any other politician."

"I'm sad, but in a way you've got to say it is good for democracy that even people who like one another can differ," he said.

The salary plan, devised by an independent commission appointed before the first all-race election in April, set the president's salary and benefits at the equivalent of $221,000 a year.

Under the former white-led government, President F.W. de Klerk was paid about $81,700 a year. However De Klerk paid no income taxes, an exemption lifted by the new government. After taxes, Mandela will take home about $115,400.

Members of the new parliament get salaries of about $54,400 — up from $37,300 under the old government.

While such figures don't seem excessive by Western standards, they stand out in a country where millions of impoverished blacks living in shacks without power or running water voted for Mandela to change their lives.

"In terms of the people out there, it was one of the most inappropriate things to have done," Tutu said. "It's filled people with some disillusionment."

Other complaints have focused on a plan, since withdrawn, for government officials to pay personal aides well above the normal civil service salaries. And a decision to give political parties $845 per parliament member to set up constituency offices was condemned as plundering tax dollars.

"The scheme is a major blunder from a government trying to persuade a sceptical public that it will stop the gravy train," said an editorial by Business Day, a Johannesburg newspaper.

Mandela has tried to show he isn't interested in self-enrichment, setting up a special children's fund with $42,250 of his own money.

Bosnian president accepts U.N. delay in lifting of arms embargo

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Bosnia's president dropped his longstanding demand that the United Nations immediately lift its arms embargo againt his government and said Tuesday he would accept a six-month delay.

Speaking to the U.N. General Assembly, President Alija Izetbegovic said he would agree to the delay if U.N. peacekeepers remain in Bosnia, the Serb blockade of Sarajevo is lifted immediately and U.N. safe areas for Bosnian civilians are expanded.

If Bosnian Serbs continue to reject an international peace plan, Izetbegovic said he wants the Security Council to pass a resolution that would lift the embargo against his Muslim-led government in six months.

"We consider that as all other nations, we have the inalienable right to self-defense," Izetbegovic said. "Should . . . our compromise proposal on the arms embargo be rejected, we will then seek from our friends that this embargo be lifted immediately, and even unilaterally."

Bosnia's change of heart reflects its desire to win cooperation from Russia, France and Britain.

Britain and France, which have the largest peacekeeping contingents in Bosnia, have threatened to withdraw their troops if the embargo is lifted, saying more arms would only fuel the conflict. Russia, traditional ally of the Serbs, also opposes lifting the embargo.

Bosnia also is worried that if the embargo is lifted, U.N. peacekeepers will withdraw and Bosnian Serbs will overrun eastern Muslim enclaves like Bihac and Srebrenica.

A withdrawal would also hamper efforts this winter to feed and care for about 2.7 million Bosnians who are dependent on outside assistance.

The need to lift the embargo is not considered as urgent as it once was because the Bosnian army is manufacturing arms and receiving smuggled weapons through Croatia, now its ally against the Serbs.

President Clinton had promised to ask the Security Council to exempt Bosnia from the U.N. arms embargo imposed on all of former Yugoslavia in 1991 if Bosnian Serbs did not accept the peace plan by Oct. 15.

U.S., North Korea report no progress in nuclear talks

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and North Korean negotiators made no headway Tuesday in talks on easing nuclear tensions, and North Korea's military staked out its own position ruling out inspections of suspected nuclear sites.

"We can report no progress," an American statement said after a 3½-hour session at the U.S. Mission to the European headquarters of the United Nations.

The two sides agreed to try again in a sixth day of talks today, officials said.

In Pyongyang, North Korea's military made a rare public intervention in the communist-run country's foreign policy by declaring it would refuse to open its nuclear facilities to U.N. inspectors.

The statement by the Ministry of the People's Armed Forces, carried by the official Korea Central News Agency, appeared aimed at heading off any concessions by North Korea's delegation in Geneva.

But a North Korean official in Geneva, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he thought the purpose was more to get the United States and Japan to end joint naval maneuvers off the Korean coast.

The military statement said the maneuvers were a U.S. attempt to pressure North Korea.

An American official said over the weekend that the maneuvers, which began last week, are routine exercises and pose no threat to North Korea.

Washington is taking the diplomatic lead in pursuing demands by the International Atomic Energy Agency to inspect two suspected nuclear waste dumps at North Korea's Yongbyon nuclear complex.

The U.N. agency, which monitors use of nuclear fuel at power plants around the world, wants to check whether North Korea is diverting plutonium that could be used to make nuclear weapons in violation of Pyongyang's treaty obligations.

Pyongyang maintains the suspected sites have nothing to do with nuclear weapons, but says they are military facilities and therefore off-limits to the inspectors.

Pencil in a sunny 90s rerun

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 90s and variable winds at 5-10 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low near 55, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be sunny with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 60, Tuesday's high reached 96, compared to the record high for that date of 102 set in 1977. The record low was 41 set in 1936.

STATE

Low humidities and southerly winds allowed temperatures to rise into the 90s across most of Texas on Tuesday, triggering thunderstorms in parts of the state.

Scattered thunderstorms developed around noon along a trough in West Texas and moved into South Central Texas by midafternoon.

North texas was experiencing mostly clear skies with a few middle to high clouds. Winds were south to southwesterly between 5 and 10 mph. Temperatures in North Texas and Central Texas ranged from 87 degrees at Paris to 96 degrees at Waco, Mineral Wells and Fort Worth.

A high of 96 at El Paso tied the record for the highest reading ever for Sept. 27, equaling a mark set in 1981.

NATION

Stormy weather moved through the Northeast on Tuesday, dropping as much as 3 inches of rain and hail as big as golf balls. A few isolated storms were scattered over the West.

A low pressure system moving slowly eastward across the Great Lakes produced unsettled weather during the afternoon from the Ohio Valley through New England. It was pushing a cold front across much of the East and showers and thunderstorms developed along that front as it bumped into warm, humid air.

Locally heavy rain extended from parts of Pennsylvania into Connecticut, the National Weather Service said.

Heavier rainfall in the six hours up to noon CDT included 2.27 inches of rain at Mineola, N.Y.; 2.15 at Hainsville, N.J.; 1.77 at East Haven, Conn.; 1.53 at New York City's Kennedy airport; 1.18 at Oak Ridge, N.J.; and 1.18 at Bridgeport, Conn.

For the 24 hours up to 7 a.m. CDT, 1.56 inches fell at Watertown, N.Y., with 1.52 at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; and 1.33 at Williamsport, Pa.

Overnight, 3 inches of rain fell in upstate New York's Chemung County, near Elmira.

PARTIAL: Council allows some rehabilitation

(From 1A)

cial-use permit.

Attorney Gregg Owens, who represents the Erksines, said he and his client will review the council's decision in written form and make a decision from there.

"I think it (the council decision) is a step in the right direction," Owens said.

The Erskines and Owens have maintained that current wildlife rehabilitation efforts at the 3306 W. Golf Course Road home already are formally recognized and permitted by the city.

That's in conflict with contentions by Dennis and Vanessa Baker, who own the property next door. They claim — in complaints to the city and in an August 1992 lawsuit against the Erskines — that the facility violates zoning and health codes.

Attorney Patrick Gerald, who represents the Bakers, said the Erskines continue to operate the rehabilitation center illegally.

Gerald said the city should have enforced city code violations at the Erksine property a few years ago when the controversy began.

"Then we wouldn't have been in the situation we are today," he said.

After the vote Tuesday, Gerald appealed to the council to enforce the laws now so the Bakers could move into their house next to the Erskines.

"It seems logical and it seems traditional that one applying for an exception or change remain in compliance with existing laws," Gerald said.

Owens strongly objected, saying it was inappropriate for Gerald to extract a legal determination from the council's ruling.

City Council member Bill Morrow said he believed the Erksines had until Jan. 11 to comply with city code. That date ends a six-month extension the council granted this summer for the Erksines to file an application for the city to determine the proper zoning classification for a wildlife rehabilitation center.

At an initial hearing before the council in March, the council prohibited the rehabilitation operation but gave the Erskines six months to make substantial relocation efforts or seek proper zoning.

Since there was no zoning classification for a rehabilitation center to apply for, the city had to first decide whether such facilities should be permitted and, after answering affirmatively, decide under what guidelines.

In light of Tuesday's determination of requirements that a rehabilitation center must operate under, City Attorney Keith Stretcher was asked the current legal status of the Erksine property. He declined to answer.

FOOT: 60 percent would vote 'no,' poll finds

(From 1A)

School District said she is opposed to a new stadium.

"I encourage those who would like to build a new stadium to raise funds using methods other than increased taxes," she said. "Every day I see students making due with inadequate facilities. There are students who actually have to eat lunch in the same room and at the time as students who are in P.E. class. Our tax monies should be used on day-to-day necessities first."

William Jowell suggests that we "poll 100 percent of the teachers at Midland Lee and Midland High schools and ask if they prefer a new stadium or better educational facilities and supplies, and then base your census on that result, and build the stadium on that result."

There were respondents to the poll who felt a new stadium would enhance the city's image and attract new business to town.

"If Midland is going to depict itself as a progressive city then it's going to have to show advancement in this area," said a woman identifying herself only as Susan. "It's OK to support athletics in our schools. Athletic achievement is not met without scholastic achievement. A new stadium could bring commerce to Midland with playoff games, band contests, track meets and a lot of other things people don't think of."

Another female caller said: "If we can build a new high school (Coleman High School) for those who, for various reasons, can't finish high school in the traditional manner, then we can certainly build a new stadium for those who go above and beyond what is required. Every football player, band member, cheerleader, pep squad member and track participant are passing all their classes plus putting in extra hours for these activities,

"It's high time we reward their efforts. Just for the record, my child is in choir and swimming and would not utilize a new stadium," she said.

Another teacher who called said she was "very opposed" to a bond election for a new stadium. "Our schools need to be updated. I teach in an older school that needs a lot of work. I'm also continually spending my own money for things I need in my own classroom. A stadium is totally unnecessary at this time."

One anonymous caller said it was "greed and divisiveness by a certain group of citizens that want to build a stadium. It would be inappropriate at this time, particularly with the economy of our city."

Another opponent said: "I believe that all the folks who are proponents of a new football stadium should form a cooperative and build the stadium, and when the indebtedness is paid off, they can start reaping the dividends that they see coming from this new stadium."

Rick Busby said Midland deserves a new football stadium, preferably one "with AstroTurf for our athletes," and Ray Pearson said, "Our football programs are as good as they get in this part of the state and that includes at (Odessa) Permian. I don't see why our kids deserve anything less than what the kids in Odessa get."

One anonymous caller said the Haitian soccer fields are in better condition than Memorial Stadium and another said he was totally ashamed of the facility, saying he would "just as soon go to Stanton and get a better seat."

Robert Lafarelle had a compromise plan.

"I would vote for a new stadium only if $3 would go to new schools and $1 to a new stadium. Our schools are decaying. A lot of older schools don't have facilities to promote educational well being for our students," Lafarelle said.

"We need to spend our money on educational facilities, and by that I don't mean football," another caller said. "Football is a bone-breaking, brain-scrambling, so-called sport appealing only to morons. Our society needs educated citizens, not gladiators."

Another anonymous caller said, "I am opposed to a new stadium. I am opposed to tax increases and I am sick and tired of it and indulgent politicians who want more frills for the money. Let's spend more money to educate our kids and put them to work."

BOOK: MISD fields text-shortage questions

(From 1A)

"The problem is, enrollment keeps increasing," said Larry Lusby, MISD executive director of computer and pupil services.

He said 500 more students have enrolled since the first day of school; enrollments usually peak in mid-October.

Administrators said the TEA has waffled on its allowance for districts to order up to 10 percent more than their peak enrollment.

"This happened to the eighth-graders last year. It's happened to them in ninth grade this year. Can't we do something so it doesn't happen in the 10th grade?" Goodwin said.

School-board trustees expressed frustration and discussed ways to circumvent the bureaucracy. They even asked state Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, for help when he joined the board during their dinner break.

"People all over the state are screaming about this. It's not just MISD," Craddick said.

He said a majority of legislators are in favor of scaling down the TEA, but trustees are uncertain that would solve the red tape of getting state funds for books in a timely manner.

Trustee Michael Dobey suggested that eliminating the middle man would solve the problem.

"If we could just get our money and buy the books (from the publishers). Or buy the books and get reimbursed," he said, rather than going through the TEA.

"The problem starts in September, goes on through April and we just aren't in control," said trustee Dianne Anderson.

In other action items:

Trustee James Fuller asked the board to vote on discussing unitary status litigation in open session, instead of in executive session, which is closed to the public.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said, "We have our attorney here, so I would suggest we meet in executive session."

Trustees voted 4-2 to keep the session closed. Fuller and Adela Marmolejo opposed the motion.

The board also voted 4-2 in favor of organizing a broad-based community task force to look into teaching character/ethics education. Fuller and Ms. Marmolejo opposed the motion.

Fuller said attempting to teach character education failed in the past and ended in controversy.

"The question immediately comes up: 'Whose values do we teach?'" Rushing said. "We are considering this because of home situations. There are a lot of single parents ... and there is a significant decline in the amount of time parents spend with kids."

He said adolescents are faced with a wide range of issues including homosexuality, drug abuse and racism.

"And where are young people getting their ideas of right and wrong? ... There seems to be a gathering consensus that ... maybe it is time for the schools to do this. Those are questions for the task force to answer."

Baressi said the task force should include people of various religious faiths including Jews and Muslims.

The superintendent said he didn't think the type of values being considered would be offensive to any one group. "This type of list is universal," he said.

Trustees said a list of eight traits, considered by another school district, could be a starting place. The eight traits are compassion, forgiveness, responsibility, initiative, cooperation, perseverance, integrity and respect.

Trustees heard a report on the American College Testing (ACT) program. Midland seniors who took the test in May met the national average and topped the state average.

The board honored the district's 10 National Merit Scholar semifinalists and heard a report on the long-range planning meetings.

CRASH: Cockpit tapes record chilling scene transcript. Aeroflot and Airbus officials said they could not comment until investigation of the March 22 crash in Siberia is complete.

(From 1A)

A source close to the probe, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the transcript appears accurate, though not complete or official.

The tapes show that in the half-hour before the crash, Kudrinsky gave up his seat to his 12-year-old daughter, Yana, and then his son.

Russian International Airlines, Aeroflot's international arm, has disputed that children were in the cockpit during the flight from Moscow to Hong Kong.

"Daddy, can I turn this?" Yana asks as she sits at the controls.

"Daddy, raise me up," she asks, apparently trying to see better. Her father points out stars and city lights, and warns her not to push any buttons.

The scene quickly turns terrifying, however, when the captain's son takes the wheel.

"Turn it! Watch the ground as you turn," the captain says. "Let's go left. Turn left! (pause) Is the plane turning?"

"Great!" says Eldar.

But four minutes later, he asks, "Why is it turning?"

"It's turning by itself?" his father asks.

"Yes!"

Then the copilot shouts, "Guys!" as the plane begins to dive.

There is a low whistling sound and a roar. For the next two and a half minutes, the tapes record the crew's frantic efforts to regain control of the plane.

State air-safety investigator Vsevolod Ovcharov was quoted in the Rossiiskiye Vesti newspaper Tuesday as saying the children were just one factor in "a chain of events and fateful circumstances."

Turning the wheel apparently shut off the automatic pilot, Ovcharov said. He said that would not have happened in a Russian-made plane, and that the crew apparently didn't notice it immediately.

He also said the controls were hard for the Russian pilots to read and that they lost their bearings when the plane began to dive.

The transcript shows the copilot finally shouting, "There's the ground!"

The final straw, Ovcharov said, came when the boy's foot "accidentally pushed the right pedal, sending the aircraft into a spin. ... The situation became irreversible."

The crew pulled the plane out of the spin, but too late — they were just 1,300 feet off the ground.

The pilots apparently thought they had averted an accident.

The last words are the captain's. "Giving you more speed," he says.

WATER: Hookup is near

(From 1A)

ors: G. Thane Akins, Carroll Thomas, Faircloth, and Bobby Burns.

Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman said people who live in the deserts of West Texas do not take water for granted, while people in other parts of the state often do.

"We know every day what a blessing it is to have the leadership, as we have had for the past 45 years, of CRMWD to bring water to this part of our state," Ms. Perryman said.

While surveys show the taste of water is a primary concern of Odessans, Ms. Perryman said "Our No. 1 concern at City Hall is not only for the water to taste better but that we have an ample supply of water to build our community into the future."

The availability of adequate water helps "attract business and industry" for the benefit of the people, Ms. Perryman said.

CRMWD President John L. Taylor of Big Spring emceed the brief ceremony, which included a pipelaying demonstration by the contractor — John D. Stephens of Stone Mountain, Ga.

Each concrete and steel joint, made by Gifford-Hill American in Grand Prairie and Lubbock, weighs six tons and is 30 feet long.

The pipe segments are 60 inches in diameter from Lake Ivie to San Angelo and 53 inches in diameter from San Angelo to the Midland-Odessa reservoir.

Water from Lake Ivie — named after O.H. Ivie, CRMWD's general manager — is to be lifted 1,400 feet in elevation over 157 miles by a series of electric-pumping stations to the 100 million-gallon reservoir west of Midland International Airport.

Lee Freese, the project's Fort Worth-based engineer, said "a quality piece of work like this is the result of the efforts of a lot of quality people."

Freese praised the workmanship and skills of Stephens' crew and the quality of the 27,500 pipeline joints.

"I've been in this business for 35 years and I've never seen a job that had a better combination of imagination and quality and value," Freese said.

The pipeline will have a flow capacity of 90 million gallons a day from Lake Ivie to San Angelo and a flow capacity of 65 million gallons a day from San Angelo to the Midland-Odessa reservoir.

PLAGUE: Deadly epidemic spreads kill disease-carrying fleas.

(From 1A)

TV broadcasts advised that plague can be treated with common antibiotics like tetracycline — drugs available in India without a prescription.

But some pharmacies in New Delhi and Bombay ran out of antibiotics, and New Delhi officials released a list of 200 stores that were well-stocked and would be open 24 hours a day. In Bombay, officials raided two pharmacies because they were selling antibiotics at black-market prices.

For the first time, confirmed cases of pneumonic plague were reported outside Surat, the port in Gujarat state that an estimated 400,000 people fled after the disease struck a week ago. Nine cases were reported in New Delhi and Calcutta, hundreds of miles east of Surat.

At least 54 people have died in Surat, including three on Tuesday. Unofficial estimates put the death toll as high as 300.

Twenty people, most of them from Surat, were admitted to the Infectious Diseases Hospital in New Delhi, and two tested positive for pneumonic plague, Dr. R.C. Panda said.

People shivering or sweating with fever arrived at the hospital's emergency room and were examined by doctors whose faces were covered with surgical masks.

"We fled Surat because most of the private doctors were gone," said Ramesh Aggarwal, a businessman whose 9-year-old son, Varun, developed a fever after the family left Gujarat. "I rushed him here before I even reached my relatives in Delhi."

Another man from Surat with a high fever tried to sneak out of the emergency room to phone his family, but doctors stopped him.

At New Delhi's train and bus stations, loudspeakers ordered arriving passengers with any ailment to report to doctors working there for free around the clock.

Pneumonic plague is a more deadly form of bubonic plague — the disease that ravaged 14th century Europe and Asia as "the Black Death." The current plague outbreak is the first in India in 30 years.

Indian officials and the World Health Organization urged people not to panic. They said there was no evidence of a widespread epidemic, but many nations announced plans to monitor travelers from India.

United States begins 3-week program that exchanges Haitians' guns for cash

■ First day produces only a handful of weapons although by some accounts 75 percent of population is armed.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Under camouflaged shelters on a scorching Haitian airbase, American soldiers waited patiently Tuesday for Haitians to turn in anything that shoots in exchange for cash.

Patience was required.

Only a handful of weapons dribbled in during the first hours. But in a country where by some accounts 75 percent of the population is armed, the United States sees the program as a key to stability.

Prices ranged from $50 for a pistol to $300 for a machine gun — huge sums in a nation where the average daily wage is $1.20. But prices on the street can run up to 10 times what the Americans are offering.

The program, publicized by radio, loudspeakers and leaflets, is supposed to last three weeks, but may be extended.

A similar program in Panama after the 1989 American invasion brought in thousands of weapons, from modern military rifles to museum-piece muzzle loaders.

"We don't know how to gauge it this early," said Capt. Andy Mazur of Youngstown, N.Y. "We suspect people will go back and tell their friends that there is credibility here, that we have the cash."

"We don't ask them who they are. You have a gun that shoots, we'll buy it, no questions asked. You have a gun? We'll buy it. Peace," said Pvt. Amos Brown of Honolulu, a Haitian-born Creole speaker working with the program.

"We're getting some junk," whispered another soldier who wouldn't give his name.

The haul in the first few hours included pistols, a World War II-vintage M-1 Garrand rifle and a 9mm Uzi submachine gun, the soldiers said.

Col. Barry Willey, spokesman for the American forces in Haiti, said payment may be increased if the program seems to lag. He urged that it not be judged too early.

"We'll have to wait and see for the first few days," he said.

Some Haitians questioned the effectiveness of the "Gourdes for Guns" program, named after Haiti's currency, the gourde.

Haitians on the street speculated there may be a reluctance to turn in weapons until Haiti's situation shakes itself out and they know who is likely to remain in power.

"In Haiti, there are guns like there are grains of rice. They won't even get a quarter of them," said Jean-Michael Louizaire who works in downtown Port-au-Prince.

"They (military leaders) arm their partisans so that the population cannot talk," he said.

There has been pressure to try to disarm the "attaches," Haitian army-backed civilians who are a holdover of the Ton Ton Macoutes thugs who helped keep the Duvalier family in power for more than 30 years.

"We hope that that will happen," Willey said.

U.S. forces take over Haiti's political institutions

■ Troops also suffer first fatality when American soldier is found shot to death.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — American troops expanded their mission Tuesday from disarming the Haitian military to taking up posts around the Parliament building and City Hall in anticipation of Haiti's return to civilian rule.

The U.S. forces suffered their first fatality Tuesday. An American soldier was found shot to death at hillside mansion being prepared for legislators returning to Haiti for today's Parliament session.

Pentagon spokesman Dennis Boxx said the soldier's death was being investigated as "an apparent suicide." He was part of the 10th Mountain Division from Fort Drum, N.Y., and his identity was not immediately released.

Military police strung concertina wire in front of the white colonaded Parliament building, a day before the Haitian legislative body was to begin discussing a bill authorizing amnesty for the country's top military leaders.

The amnesty measure was part of a deal worked out Sept. 18 between the U.S. delegation led by former President Carter and Haiti's military junta.

A soldier posted on the roof of the Parliament scanned the area with binoculars, and others took up posts at the gate. Army vehicles stood watch in front of the building.

U.S. Army soldiers stretch out concertina wire while securing the area around the Haitian Parliament building Tuesday morning. The Parliament is scheduled to go into session this afternoon.

Small crowds of Haitians gathered in front of the building, and others sat under trees in a park across the street, watching the U.S. Army activity.

At City Hall, U.S. military police in armored vehicles were posted inside the compound and Army Humvees, machine guns mounted on their tops, took up guard just outside.

Mayor Evans Paul, exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's former campaign manager, is expected to come out of hiding and return to his office on Thursday, U.S. officials said.

Paul, who had been targeted for assassination, has been out of sight for most of the three years since Aristide — Haiti's first democratically elected president — was overthrown by the military.

The first U.S. fatality came as American troops were refurbishing the Villa d'Accueil, a Haitian state guest house during the dictatorship of Jean-Claude Duvalier that now houses the independent Electoral Council, which is to oversee elections.

"They found him dead," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager. "They don't know if this was a sniper or self-inflicted."

But Boxx said in Washington that the shooting was being investigated as "an apparent suicide."

Witnesses said they heard two shots about 11 a.m. on the northern side of the Villa d'Accueil, adjacent to a private golf course and country club.

Helicopters hovered over the area after the shooting, and platoons of American soldiers stood guard behind twin rows of concertina wire. They walked openly, however, showing no signs of the tension that would follow a sniper killing. They refused to talk about the death.

Another 142 refugees from camps at the U.S. base in Cuba came home voluntarily Tuesday. One, Vilia Picant, said she had mixed feelings about returning.

"I spent all my savings, $60, to leave and now we'll have to start all over," said the young woman, her 2-year-old son by her side and another baby due soon.

In the capital, not all welcomed the U.S. preparations for Wednesday's special Parliament session.

The lack of a quorum prevented the discussion of similar amnesty legislation last year, and contributed to the breakdown of the U.N. accord that was to have brought Aristide home.

Deputies and senators refused to attend because they felt their lives were in danger if they did. Some Aristide supporters left the country or went into hiding.

Jury selection speeds up; Simpson talks of missing his children

AP Laserphoto

O.J. Simpson's attorney, Robert Shapiro, iprepares to enter the Criminal Courts building in Los Angeles Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson explained Tueday that he softly sang the song "Memory" on the first day of his trial because it reminds him of his children, whom he misses.

"That song really gets to me because it says, 'Touch me' and I can't touch my kids," Simpson said of the song from the musical "Cats."

The song's last verse is: "Touch me, it's so easy to leave me. All alone with the memory of my days in the sun. If you touch me, you'll understand what happiness is. Look, a new day has begun."

Simpson has been jailed without bail since June 17, the day he was arrested on charges of killing his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend, Ronald Goldman.

His children from his first marriage, Jason, 24, and Arnelle, 25, visit him in jail. His children with Ms. Brown, Sydney, 8, and Justin, 6, are living with their maternal grandparents and haven't visited him at Simpson's request.

■ SIMPSON UPDATE: Call Cityline, 560-2400, enter 6202

Simpson's unusual public remark, made to pool reporters covering jury selection, came just before the second set of potential jurors started filing into a small room for questioning in front of Simpson, attorneys and the judge.

Once again, would-be jurors stood just a few feet away from Simpson across a conference table when they were asked why they didn't think they could serve on the three- to six-month trial.

Simpson, 47, appeared more relaxed as the trial entered its second day. He took off his coat and put on an off-white V-neck sweater over his dress shirt and tie.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, who earlier expressed pleasant surprise at the relatively fast pace of jury selection, also was informal, even finding room for humor as he told potential jurors to avoid exposure to media coverage of the case.

"If you see it on TV, switch to 'The Simpsons' — the TV show, I mean," Ito said. "If you hear it on the radio, switch to Howard Stern."

That line prompted laughter in the jury assembly room.

"On second thought," Ito continued, "don't do that because he's talked about it, too."

Earlier, Ito said in court that the number of those willing to serve is 25 percent to 30 percent higher than he anticipated when he summoned 1,000 prospects.

Ito had four sets of roughly 250 people on call this week, but said the last batch may not be needed. His goal is to find 250 people who pass the so-called hardship phase of jury selection and can proceed to the next portion, where they will be asked about their personal lives as well as their attitudes toward the Simpson case.

The first wave of prospects Monday yielded 100 people who could participate in the trial, which could stretch through February. Initial screening Tuesday of the second group, which included 241 people, showed 72 could serve, 79 said it would be a hardship and 90 would be questioned further.

"Given the number of people who indicate they can stay, we may come to the conclusion Thursday," Ito said of the initial screening process.

The "survivors," as Ito calls them, fill out a 75-page questionnaire and must return to court next month to be quizzed by the judge and lawyers.

U.S., Japan open last round of talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Japanese negotiators sounded tough bargaining positions as they began a last round of talks Tuesday aimed at averting possible American trade sanctions against Japan.

Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto arrived from Tokyo and quickly went into discussions with U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Commerce Secretary Ron Brown.

Hashimoto told reporters in Washington that it was "important for both countries to get an agreement where they can get an agreement."

Refusing to predict the likely outcome, he said, "I can only say I will make an effort."

However, before leaving Tokyo, Hashimoto had sounded a blunter theme, saying it was not likely that the United States and Japan would be able to arrive at a trade agreement before the U.S.-imposed deadline on Friday.

"I have no intention of making any new proposals or changing Japan's current position," he said in Tokyo.

Kantor, asked about Hashimoto's tough talk, told reporters that he did not intend to negotiate in public. Asked whether he believed a deal was possible, he said, "That's up to Japan."

Health-care need hasn't gone away

The death of the health-care bill for this session of Congress, announced by Sen. George Mitchell (D-Maine) on Monday, was expected. The bill proposed by Mitchell was the latest of several attempts to craft an acceptable national health-care plan, and it died a slow death because it essentially attempted to accomplish too much too quickly and generated too much resistance throughout both the Congress and the American public.

In fact, when Mitchell conceded that the plan was dead for this session not only were most Republicans opposing the measure but many in President Clinton's own party, the Democratic Party, had also withdrawn their support.

The big strike against a health-care plan was that in crafting an all-encompassing health-care bill, proponents were destroying a good workable system of health care used by the majority of Americans to provide coverage to the nation's 39 million uninsured people. In the process, proponents were suggesting a number of alternatives that the public was dead-set against such as taking away a person's freedom to select his health care provider. That suggestion likely will never be accepted.

Tragically, health-care reform is still a major need in this nation and the need will only grow more acute. Both political parties share in the blame for not getting a bill approved this session; both used scare tactics and sought to use the health-care debate to their personal advantage.

In a larger sense, now that the initial attempt to design a bill has been defeated the health-care issue can be brought back again perhaps in 1995 and debated intelligently. There are numerous facets to it that should not be overlooked. Some are:

- Rather than trying to design a plan that will cover all Americans, why not focus on one that will address only those without medical insurance coverage?
- A large part of the problem of escalating medical costs is a direct result of medical liability costs that have been growing out of control. Why not attempt to bring those costs under control first through medical malpractice reform that will ensure the right of injured parties to seek redress through the judicial system while providing a degree of restraint in malpractice suits?

Health-care reform is still needed, but it needs to be enacted to improve — not worsen — the present system.

ANOTHER VIEW

GOP hypocrites should let global trade agreement pass

What a difference a president makes.

During the heyday of the Reagan and Bush administrations, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and other Republicans were the biggest supporters of a global trade pact. It was in 1985 under Reagan that the Uruguay Round got started on its reformation of the world's trade rules. The North American Free Trade Agreement would not have passed without Republican support.

But now, Dole and other Republicans are reversing themselves, giving President Clinton a hard time and blocking approval of the sweeping world-trade agreement.

Opponents must move aside and allow the Uruguay Round treaty to be ratified by Congress. The sooner the better. Opponents argue that the World Trade Organization would impinge on U.S. sovereignty and lead the world government, a false argument. It threatens nothing of the sort.

The new treaty only clarifies the rules for the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, GATT, and makes enforcing them easier.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 28, the 271st day of 1994. There are 94 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 28, 1066, William the Conqueror invaded England to claim the English throne.

On this date:

In 1542, Portuguese navigator Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo arrived at what is now San Diego, Calif.

In 1781, American forces in the Revolutionary War, backed by a French fleet, began their siege of Yorktown Heights, Va.

In 1787, Congress voted to send the just-completed Constitution of the United States to state legislatures for their approval.

In 1850, flogging was abolished as a form of punishment in the U.S. Navy.

In 1892, the first nighttime football game took place, in Mansfield, Pa., as teams from Mansfield Teachers College and the Wyoming Seminary played under electric lights to a scoreless tie.

In 1920, eight members of the Chicago White Sox were indicted for allegedly throwing the 1919 World Series against the Cincinnati Reds in what became known as the "Black Sox" scandal. (Even though they were acquitted at trial, the players were banished from the game.)

In 1924, two U.S. Army planes landed in Seattle, having completed the first round-the-world flight in 175 days.

In 1939, during World War II, Germany and the Soviet Union agreed on a plan to partition Poland.

In 1961, "Dr. Kildare," starring Richard Chamberlain and Raymond Massey, and "Hazel," starring Shirley Booth, premiered on NBC.

In 1967, Walter Washington took office as the first mayor of the District of Columbia.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Simple loyalty could do a lot for America

LONDON — Years ago, I brushed my teeth with Kolynos toothpaste. Then Harry Von Zell or somebody got me to switch brands to Ipana, for the "smile of beauty." I felt vaguely guilty about deserting Kolynos, especially after Ipana squeezed its last.

Safire

More recently, I was swept up in the wave of private brands. No more Bayer, the aspirin that cooled my childhood fevers; I was persuaded by consumerists that the same product sold for less under the name of my drug store, People's; that outfit has since been sold to some chain with forgettable initials and now my medicine chest is filled with strangers to which I feel no attachment and from which I get no sense of familiarity or security.

Nobody's fault but my own. The seduction of the generic fad made me brand-disloyal. Having slipped my moorings, I now drift from brand to brand.

That is symbolic of the New Disloyalty that afflicts us at every level.

Corporate loyalty, once an asset of both management and labor, is now a phrase that elicits a snicker. Little more than a generation ago, the average worker could expect to work for three bosses in a lifetime; now we start our careers expecting to work for seven different companies.

Middle managers hop around like pro ballplayers who sell their services with no team spirit, while top executives leap from peak to peak, happy to do battle with the companies that gave them their start.

Public policy encourages this corporate disloyalty. A company's attempt to bind its employees to itself with incentives to stay is scorned as paternalism.

Management gurus, deriding as inefficient companies that cling to experienced workers in slack periods, advise instant layoffs to stay lean and mean; when business picks up, employers turn to loosey-goosey temps. In response, workers made insecure by the threat of loss of promised security look to government to make pensions personal — and less binding to the institution that used to be a "home." As a result, the longing for belonging has been replaced by a dependence on independence.

In politics, the New Disloyalty manifests itself in the glorification of the maverick and the vilification of the regular. The once-revered phrase party loyalty is now remembered only in JFK's line, "Sometimes party loyalty asks too much." True enough, but other times party loyalty asks too little. No loyalty, no discipline; no discipline, no victories of legislative action.

What about national loyalty — allegiance to one's country? The amalgam of nationhood that holds a diverse people together is being eroded by ethnic and religious separatists.

Some empires, like the one ruled from Moscow, were properly broken up. And some peoples with distinct identities and no recognition deserve a separate nation, like the Kurds, Palestinians and Tibetans.

But only national loyalty will keep the Scots and Welsh from pulling away from Britain, and the Quebecers from pulling out of Canada. The absence of national loyalty is what keeps the Serbs, Muslims and Croats at each other's throats in Bosnia.

I make no case for blind loyalty. In Poland, President Lech Walesa recently appointed a top Communist spy — once jailed by the U.S. for stealing secrets of our Patriot missile system — to head his intelligence agency.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

MIKE ROYKO

Bar fly backs Clinton's 'anti-foreigner policy'

"What's happened to this country's backbone, our spunk, our patriotism, our old get-up-and-go spirit?" asked Slats Grobnik, glaring at the bar's TV set. "Just listen to all those slackers talking about why we shouldn't have invaded Haiti."

Royko

It is not a matter of courage. The vast majority of Americans didn't believe it was in our national interest to launch a military operation.

"Then they don't know what's going on. Have you ever seen Haiti on TV?"

Of course.

"Then you know they're a pretty scruffy bunch, right? There's about 7 million of them, and most can't read or write, got bad teeth, and spend most of their time just hanging out."

It is a troubled society, I would agree.

"Well, you want 'em around?"

Around where?

"Around here, that's where. You want 7 million Haitians moving into the neighborhood? You want them showing up in your back yard, peeking in through your windows, dropping down the chimney into your parlor? Think about that."

Why should I think of a Haitian dropping down my chimney?

"Because that's what's gonna happen if people don't rally around Clinton and the invasion. There's 7 million Haitians, and they got one goal in life — to sneak into this country. You know how many Haitians 7 million of them is?"

Well, a lot of Haitians, I suppose.

"I'll tell you how many. That's the same as the population of the whole city of Chicago and all the suburbs from Gary, Ind. to the Wisconsin border and out to the Fox River. Imagine the kind of traffic jam they'd cause because most of them can't drive, and those that can would be asking for cab licenses, which there ain't enough to go around. And they do that voodoo."

They do what?

"Voodoo. I read about it, sticking pins in dolls, putting curses, making zombies. They know all the tricks. Yeah, how would you like to be sitting in your house when all of a sudden you get a terrible pain in your belly because the Haitian guy next door is sticking a pin in a doll that looks like you? What are you going to do when you cut your grass and see the Haitian guy next door waving a dead chicken at you?"

That seems highly unlikely.

"Yeah, that's what they said about a baseball strike. The trouble with you and most people is that you don't see the big picture like me and President Clinton do."

And what is this big picture?

"It's as plain as the funny nose on your face. The big picture is we're being invaded. You got 7 million Haitians just waiting to jump in orange crates and rum barrels to paddle to this country."

Then we will turn them away.

"Can't. The bleeding hearts and do-gooders won't let us. And even if we tried, what would happen? We'd be so busy with the Haitians that the Cubans would sneak in. And if we chased the Cubans, nobody would be watching the border and a couple of million more Mexicans would sneak in. So if we chased the Mexicans, here come the Haitians and the Cubans. And what happens if all those Frenchies in Canada decide to come down here?"

Why would they want to do that?

"You never know with Frenchies because you don't know what they're talking about. That's why they talk French, to confuse the rest of us. So tell me, you want this country invaded by 7 million Haitians, a few million Cubans, millions more Mexicans and a lot of Frenchies? There wouldn't be a cabbie in America who could speak English. Boy, talk about having your lifestyle goofed up."

And that is the big picture? That we are being invaded?

"Sure, and Clinton knows because he's from Arkansas, and people in that state know a foreign invader when they see one. You can go from one end of Arkansas to the other and you won't catch nobody doing voodoo. In Arkansas, they know what to look out for. So that's why we had to invade Haiti first, to stop them from invading us."

Then what? Do we invade Cuba and Mexico?

"Why not? I've been saying for years that we ought to just march in and take over Mexico.

I really think your approach to foreign affairs is unrealistic.

"OK, but when some guy shows up on your front porch waving a dead chicken, don't say I didn't warn you."

ART BUCHWALD

New administration talks tough, acts wimpy

The two questions that the American people have at this time are: "Does the United States have a foreign policy?" And if so, "What is it?"

The answer is, "Of course, we have a policy. How else could we have humiliated such major powers as Panama, Somalia, Iraq and Haiti?"

Buchwald

Ever since the Soviet Union went down the tubes, the United States has turned its attention to other totalitarian regimes around the world to dramatize the fact that we will not be pushed around — no matter what the cost.

Our policy requires top planning, careful examination of all our options and a former President of the United States to persuade Third World despots that this country means business.

This is how it goes. Every so often the United States decides to show everyone that it supports democratic forms of government even if they aren't exactly what we had in mind.

Once every armored division, aircraft carrier and fighter is in place, the President goes on TV and tells the dictators that they are finished and we will no longer allow them to make fools of us.

The President dispatches an ex-President to make sure that the message is loud and clear.

"General, I speak on behalf of the President of the United States. We want you to relinquish power immediately and get out of the country so that your legally elected president can take over the palace."

"I can't leave now. My wife is having a cocktail party for the first families of our nation."

"Why didn't you say that in the first place? How about you and the other two generals leaving next week?"

"That's impossible. We're all scheduled to go on the 'Today Show' next Thursday."

"Well, how about some time this month?"

"It would be very inconvenient because we had plans to beat up all the opposition politicians with baseball bats this month. Hunting them down is not going to be easy."

"General, you have a lovely wife and she is very beautiful. I personally lust in my heart for beautiful women. But this doesn't mean that we can permit you to continue doing all the bad deeds you have been noted for in the past. I must insist that you resign before Thanksgiving or at the latest Christmas."

"Does this mean that I have to give up my country chalet, my yacht and my private plane?"

"We didn't say that. You can remain in the country and drive your Maserati around any place that you want to."

"I think that President Clinton owes all the military an apology. He has accused us of terrible human rights' violations. We have feelings, too."

"I'll talk to him as soon as I get a chance. I find you a very reasonable person, surrounded by some of the most attractive women I've seen in all my years of peace negotiating. I will return to the United States and report that you are a man of honor and will keep your word and resign by the first of the year."

"Thank you, Mr. President. If you'll excuse me, I have some mopping up to do."

"Are you going to continue to mop up civilians?"

"I have no choice since you promised me amnesty."

Doctors debate mild drinking for heart patients

CHICAGO (AP) — Get some exercise, quit smoking, skip the double cheeseburgers — and have a couple of beers every day?

Doctors are debating whether moderate alcohol consumption should be part of the prescription for a healthy heart in light of another study that suggests drinking can reduce the risk of a heart attack.

The new study found alcohol consumption was directly linked to increased levels of an enzyme, t-PA, that helps break down blood clots. But even its chief researcher, cardiologist Dr. Paul Ridker of Harvard Medical School, is reluctant to recommend patients drink.

"I certainly don't want to be quoted as saying patients should be drinking alcohol," he said. "What would really be exciting would be to find a way to stimulate t-PA production but without the side effects of alcohol."

However, an editorial accompanying Ridker's study in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association suggests that doctors can steer a middle course, working with selected patients to give them the benefit of alcohol's heart-protecting qualities while avoiding the risks associated with heavy alcohol consumption, including liver disease, cancer and drunken driving.

"The key theme is to tailor the message to each individual, in the same way that counseling is given on diet, physical activity, sexual practices and so on," the editorial said.

One of the editorial's writers, Dr. Thomas A. Pearson, a cardiologist with the Columbia University School of Public Health, said more elaborate studies are needed to confirm Ridker's work, but there's already enough evidence to offer some guidance to doctors.

The study of 631 doctors found a direct link between alcohol consumption and the level of t-PA, which is produced by the body and breaks down blood clots. Blood clots that lodge in the coronary arteries can cause heart attacks.

The enzyme was at its highest among people who had two or more drinks a day. It declined progressively among people who had one to six drinks a week, one to three drinks a month and those who rarely or never drank.

The editorial recommends carefully screening out potential problem drinkers, limiting consumption to one to two ounces of alcohol a day, ruling out alcohol for patients with a variety of diseases that could be worsened, and insisting on follow-up visits.

Other doctors say the dangers of drinking are so grave doctors should never weigh in on the side of using alcohol as preventive medicine.

Flint GM workers walk out in protest of stress injuries

N.Y. Times News Service

DETROIT — About 11,500 workers at a General Motors manufacturing complex in Flint, Mich., walked off their jobs Tuesday in a union-led protest, asserting that the strain of keeping up with a robust demand for cars was ruining workers' health.

"We have more than 1,000 workers on sick leave," said Dave Yettaw, president of Local 599 of the union, the United Automobile Workers. "At some point, organized labor has got to get off its knees. We haven't learned the lessons of our forefathers, that an injury to one is an injury to all."

The union is demanding that the automaker hire more full-time workers to reduce the number of overtime hours that union members are working. The extra work, the union says, is causing repetitive stress injuries. It said that the company had agreed to hire more workers but that talks on the issue collapsed Tuesday when the two sides could not agree on the number to be hired.

The strike began at 10 a.m. at the sprawling 123-acre Buick City complex. Spokesmen for the union and GM, the nation's No. 1 automaker, acknowledged that the strike could quickly force more GM factories to shut down as they run short of critical engine and transmission parts made at Buick City. In addition to making full-size Buick and Oldsmobile models, the complex in Flint also produces a torque converter used on many GM automatic transmissions.

GM workers in Flint are covered by a three-year contract.

Clinton, Yeltsin smile, hug, set Bosnia aside

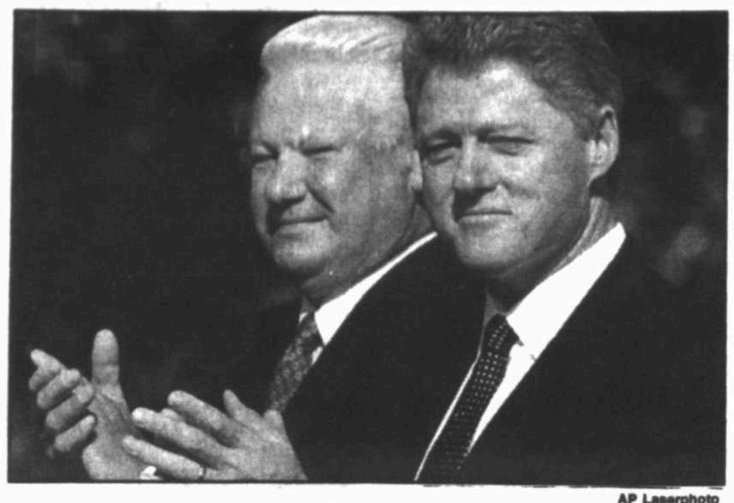

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton and President Boris Yeltsin of Russia on Tuesday tried to sidestep disagreements on sticky issues between them, including what to do next in Bosnia, and put on a public display of shared affection as they opened a two-day summit.

The meeting between the Russian and American leaders is the first in the capital in more than two years, and from the moment Clinton threw a bear hug around Yeltsin at the diplomatic entrance to the White House on Tuesday morning, almost everything about it seemed designed to project warmth and goodwill.

"The Russian-American relationship is at last, remarkably, a normal one, full of real accomplishment and genuine promise," Clinton declared in a welcoming ceremony on the South Lawn.

He later showed off campaign memorabilia and other knick-knacks to Yeltsin in the Oval Office, then escorted him to a garden patio from which the two leaders banished their aides and spent two hours swapping views on politics, both foreign and domestic.

■ SUMMIT UPDATE: Call Cityline, 560-2400, enter 6203

Administration officials said that Clinton tried privately to persuade Yeltsin to halt weapons sales to Iran that amounted to $1 billion last year, and said Tuesday night they believed he might have succeeded.

They also expressed some discomfort about Yeltsin's recent talk of a Russian sphere of influence in the former Soviet Union, particularly his aggressive view of how to bring peace to Nagorno-Karabakh.

But now that Russia has withdrawn its last troops from the Baltics and Central Europe, there was finally no need for the American president to issue somber declarations about how important such a step would be, aides to Clinton noted with delight. And for the first time, they said, Clinton had no plans to complain about what he now regards as Russia's satisfactory progress toward building a market economy.

It was clear Tuesday, however, that Russia and the United States remain at least publicly divided on whether it is nearly time to allow weapons to flow freely to the Bosnian Muslims, a plan that Clinton and Congress have long endorsed.

But as a compromise took shape Tuesday that would postpone such a step until next spring, it appeared that the two leaders might maintain — at least for the duration of the summit meeting — an appearance of common cause on Bosnia that aides to the two leaders say it is vital to maintain.

"The United States is a strong partner and not an easy one to deal with, just like Russia," Yeltsin said at Tuesday morning's ceremony on the South Lawn. The Russian government maintains close bonds with the Bosnian Serbs, and Yeltsin declared during a photo session in the Oval Office later that his "response would be negative" if the United States moved on its own to arm the Muslim-led Bosnian government.

Average four-year college tuition increases at double inflation rate

BOSTON (AP) — The average tuition at America's four-year colleges rose 6 percent this year, twice the rate of inflation, and studies show a growing share of the money is going toward public relations instead of teaching.

Although the increase was twice the inflation rate, it was also the smallest since 1989, according to the College Board, an association of 2,800 higher-education institutions. The figures were released Wednesday.

According to the College Board, average tuition is now $11,709 at four-year private schools and $2,686 at four-year public schools.

both 6 percent increases over last year.

The cost of two-year private institutions rose 5 percent, to $6,511, and two-year public colleges, 4 percent, to $1,298.

When room, board, books, supplies and transportation are added in, the average total cost of a college education comes to $18,784 for resident students at four-year private schools and $8,990 at public schools.

Separate government statistics also show that the proportion of money used by colleges for instruction, libraries and maintenance is shrinking, and the amount spent on public relations, marketing and fund-raising is increasing.

"We're paying more and getting less than we got 10 years ago," said Stephanie Arelonio, president of the U.S. Student Association.

Defense rests in Blair murder trial

■ Michael Blair takes stand in own defense, claims he didn't murder 7-year-old Ashley Estell of Dallas.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Defense attorneys have rested their case in the capital-murder trial of Michael Blair, charged with kidnapping and murdering 7-year-old Ashley Estell of north Dallas on Sept. 4, 1993. A Midland jury may begin deliberation today.

Dallas journalists were again out in force as the highly publicized case draws nearer to a verdict. The case sparked massive public concern in the Dallas area, leading Judge Nathan White of Plano to move the trial to Midland.

Defense attorneys rested at 11:10 a.m. Tuesday after a marathon 10-plus hours of watching videotapes of Blair being interrogated several days after the victim's death.

Prosecuting attorneys then regained control of the proceedings in the rebuttal phase.

The tapes showed Collin County officers trying to elicit a confession from Blair. On the last tape, investigators apparently believed Blair was about to confess to the killing.

"Do it Micheal. You've got to do this," an interrogator said. "Do it for Ashley. Do it for her family . . . Do it for yourself . . . You can't have this inside you forever," he said.

On the tapes, Blair, who had been silent, mumbled something unintelligible and then said, "I don't know how it happened."

"But it did happen. Didn't it?" the interrogator said.

"I don't know," Blair said.

Following the tapes, testimony continued as the defense's final witness — Blair — took the stand in his own defense. Blair maintained he did not kill Ashley.

Under cross-examination, prosecutors brought up Blair's confession that he sexually molested his younger sister for two years.

"She was 6-years-old when you began raping her,"

Restitution center opens new building

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

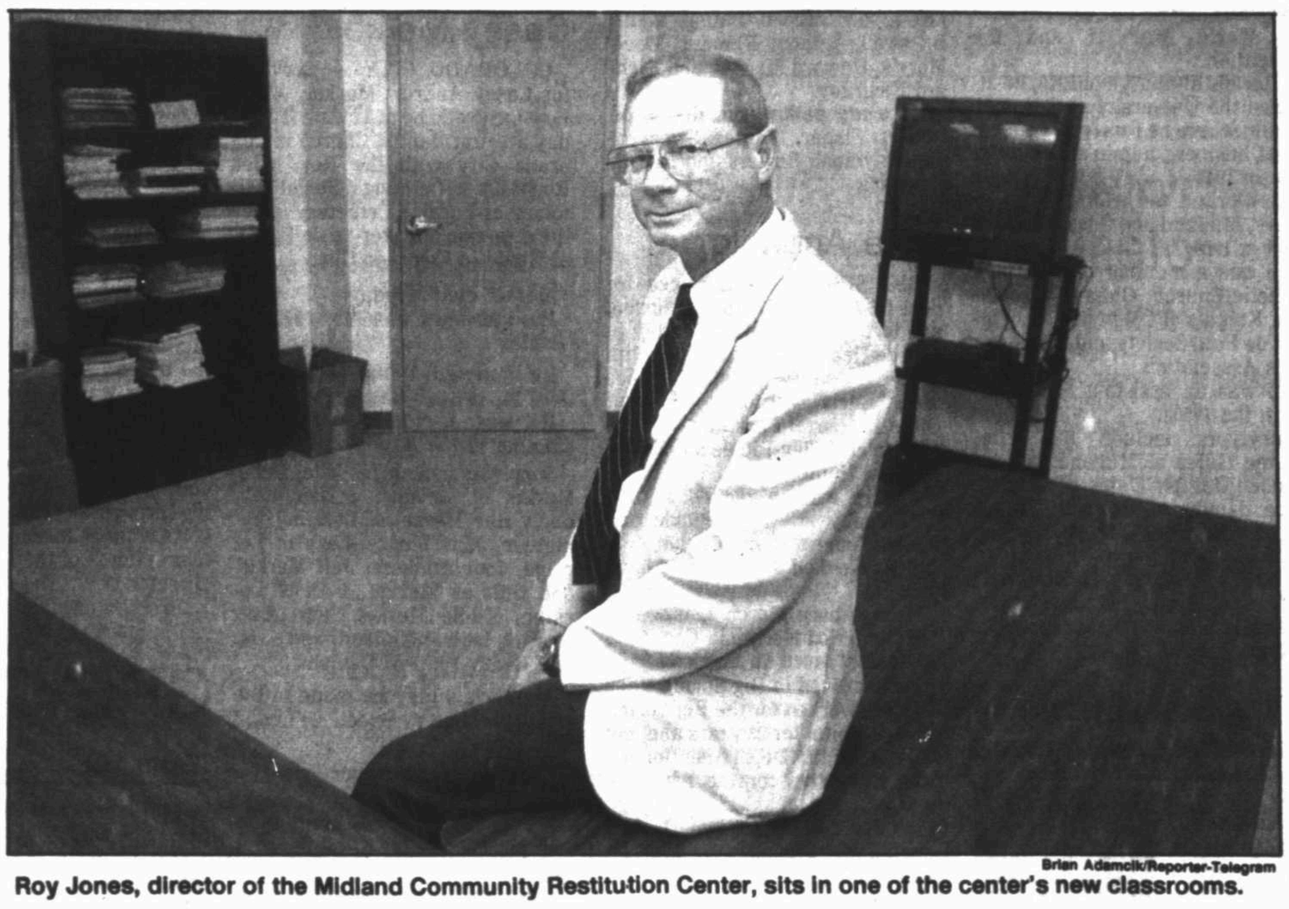

The Midland Community Restitution Center is a place to start over for probationers who were ordered there instead of to prison, District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles said Tuesday at the dedication of the center's new classroom building.

Gilles is the administrative judge of the three-judge Midland Judicial District, which sets policies for the district's Community Supervision and Corrections Department and the restitution center.

For district judges Dean Rucker, John Hyde and Gilles, the center's concept "gives us the ability to send people over here" rather than to prison so that they might learn job skills, responsibility and values in a structured environment for up to two years, Gilles said.

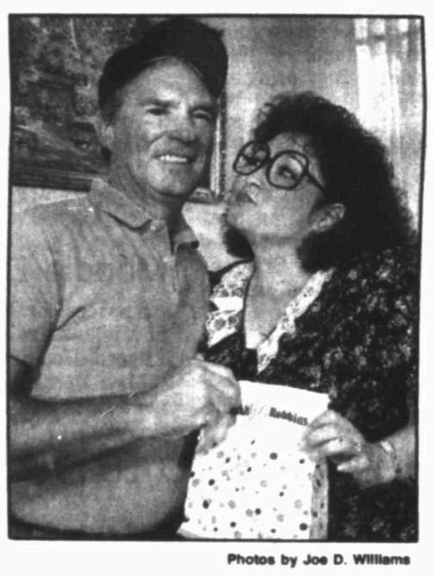

The efficacy of the program is a credit to the entire CSCD and to the center's staff, Gilles told a gathering at the dedi-

TU Electric signs contract for wind power

Staff Report

DALLAS — One of the natural wonders of West Texas — its wind — will be turned into electricity by a new wind energy plant proposed for construction near Big Spring, TU Electric announced Tuesday.

TU Electric has signed a 15-year renewable energy contract with New World Power Corp. of Lime Rock, Conn.

New World Power proposes to build a 40,000-kilowatt wind power project southeast of Big Spring to produce electricity to sell to TU Electric, which has a total generating capacity of about 22 million kilowatts.

The contract is part of TU Electric's Integrated Resource Plan for meeting its customers' future power needs. The plan was developed as part of TU Electric's IRP Pilot Project, which included participation by representatives of a cross-section of the company's customers.

The complete IRP Pilot Project will be submitted with the Public Utility Commission in the fall.

If approved by the PUC, the windpower project will be built on an 11,000-acre ranch-land site and will include 80 state-of-the-art wind turbines, each with a generating capacity of 500 kilowatts.

When fully operational, the wind project will produce about 113 million kilowatt-hours annually, or enough electricity to power about 8,500 homes. The facility is expected to be in service by the fall of 1996.

Greytok accuses Mauro of 'ethical lapses'

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's ethics were again under attack by Marta Greytok, Republican candidate for land commissioner, during a campaign stop in Midland on Tuesday.

Ms. Greytok called on Mauro to release results of an independent investigation he conducted into allegations that oilman and rancher Clinton Manges tried to bribe a General Land Office official with $10,000.

Ms. Greytok urged Mauro to release the report — "if there is one" — and release documentation involved in the case.

Manges was indicted earlier this month on federal conspiracy, mail fraud and bribery charges in connection with a state oil and gas mineral lease in Corpus Christi Bay.

She also said she would like to see an independent investigation of the Land Office, especially in light of a recent report that Mauro used campaign funds to pay off a personal loan for a project to grow pistachios in West Texas.

She said what she perceives as a lack of ethics on the part of Mauro led her to run for office.

Council lays obstacle in front of school parades

By Michael Kashgarian and Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writers

With less than 48 hours until Lee High School's homecoming parade is set to take to the streets, the students' pompons were all but trampled upon by the City Council.

The Midland Independent School District's board was informed — during Tuesday's regular meeting — that the City Council had voted earlier in the day to deny granting liability insurance waivers for both high schools' homecoming parades.

"But don't push the panic button," said MISD administrator Wilson Heidelberg. "We will get the money and have the parades one way or another."

Other MISD officials agreed the parades would take place as scheduled.

Heidelberg said one price quoted to the district for $1 million in liability insurance — for one day — was $370.

"We're looking at what we can do to accommodate that (insurance) requirement," said George Cooper, Lee High School principal.

'Are we going to have to tell our high schools the school board canceled their parade?'

— Parent

"There's been a lot of planning and a lot of work going into it (the parade) by our students," he said.

LHS' homecoming parade is scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday. Midland High School's homecoming parade is set for Oct. 14.

In the past, the schools have had the $1 million insurance coverage — required for a city parade permit — waived by the City Council.

Some MISD officials speculated that the insurance coverage had been waived for the past five years, and no one had notified them this year would be different.

Other organizations staging parades have had their insurance waived as well.

The Midland Shrine Club's Christmas Parade was initially canceled last year due to lack of liability insurance. The City Council later granted a waiver.

The Christmas parade episode led the council to vow in February to strictly enforce insurance requirements.

That pledge was not forgotten when the council came upon the waiver requests on Tuesday's council agenda.

The council unanimously denied the requests.

"We take this as indication the council doesn't want to waive anymore," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

Several school administrators expressed surprise that they were not warned insurance coverage would no longer be waived.

Now LHS has one day to come up with the money and coverage for Thursday's parade.

"Are we going to have to tell our high schools the school board canceled their parade?" a parent said.

"No, that would be the City Council that canceled their parade," came a reply at the board meeting.

Administrators assured attendees the parades won't be "rained on" due to lack of insurance.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi said, however, the high schools will have to come up with the insurance money.

Some parents at the MISD board meeting said the City Council "would be hearing from" them.

CENTER: Education rehabilitates

(From 1B)

cation. "Without you, it wouldn't work at all."

Through the center's programs of rehabilitation through education, Gilles said the probationers' new start in life will enable them to re-enter the community.

Gilles expressed appreciation to Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer and other members of the Commissioners' Court for their efforts in securing $85,000 in state funds for construction of the 1,440-square-foot metal building.

State funding of the project depended on Coats Construction Co. completing the building before Sept. 1.

"We have had to convince lots of folks that this needed to be done," Gilles said about the classroom addition.

Gilles cited Seltzer and Commissioner Guy McCrary for their support and persuasion in backing the project.

Seltzer was "throwing everything he had into the completion of this project on time," Gilles said. "Without him, it couldn't have been done."

Seltzer — who recalled this year's reopening of the once-beleaguered center — said continued state funding through the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Criminal Justice Assistance Division "was a total team effort" of the Midland judiciary, former CSCD Director G.W. Thompson, and the commissioners.

"We had enough people down there (in Austin) to really 'pack the court' " and win a victory for justice in Midland County, Seltzer said.

In focusing on the educational role of the center, Seltzer said rehabilitation is not likely without education.

"If we are going to rehabilitate someone, let's educate them at the same time."

The "alternative-sentencing" option offered to judges through statewide restitution centers is "going to be the wave of the future ... in Texas criminal justice," Seltzer said.

"As the cost of keeping a prisoner in the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice continues to increase and as the taxpayers continue to resist increased taxes at the state level and the state continues to force prisoners down on the county, I believe you are going to see more and more of these types of institutions and centers throughout the state of Texas," he said.

Seltzer said "the concept is wonderful. It gives an individual a chance to rehabilitate.'

Currently, 48 men and women probationers live at the center.

Roy Jones, center director, said the dedication of the classroom building was a celebration of "what is possible when everyone works together toward a common objective.

"Management experts call the phenomenon 'synergy'," Jones said. "Psychologists call it 'Gestalt': The whole is greater than the parts. When everyone works together, the outcome is greater than the individual efforts."

GREYTOK: Landowners join forces ethical lapses and that's unfortunate," she said.

The primary stimulus for her seeking the office was attempts by the federal government to designate parts of Texas as sanctuary for endangered species such as the golden-cheeked warbler, Ms. Greytok said.

She said she participated in the recent "Take Texas Back" landowners' rights march in Austin, and vowed that, if elected, "I plan to be a commissioner who speaks for the landowner."

Ms. Greytok — who was within five points of Mauro in the latest Mason-Dixon poll — said she had recently received endorsements from the Texas Farm Bureau and the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association.

She said the Cattle Raisers' association puts out approximately 3.2 million slate cards of endorsed candidates, "and I'm proud to be included."

Ms. Greytok, of Houston, is former chairwoman of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, a former mayor of Taylor Lake Village and served as chairwoman of the Harris County Central Appraisal District.

WIND: Company cites clean technology

(From 1B)

Tom Baker, TU Electric executive vice president, said the company has supported the development of wind and solar power for many years.

"The wind power industry has made progress, and today we feel this environmentally clean project can make a contribution to the evaluation of this resource for the future," he said. "We are pleased to join with New World Power to bring this exciting new energy project to West Texas."

The wind power project will produce electricity for TU Electric's customers for about four cents a kilowatt-hour.

"Although this is slightly higher than our marginal cost to produce electricity, it is reasonable for the proposes of evaluating the resource, encouraging development of the industry and contributing to efforts to further reduce wind power costs," Baker said.

General contractor for construction of the project will be Westinghouse Electric Corp.

TU Electric provides electric service to more than 5.6 million people in a 53,000-square mile, 88-county service area in Texas.

TRIAL: Prosecution points to tape, hairs said Collin County assistant District Attorney Bryan Clayton.

(From 1B)

"She was a little younger than that," Blair replied.

Clayton also questioned Blair about the day of Ashley's disappearance. Blair originally said he was home all day; later it was discovered that he went to a grocery store.

"You didn't tell the investigators about that, did you?" Clayton said.

Blair also testified that he broke into a house and accosted an 11-year-old girl in 1988. He was imprisoned for this offense but was on parole at the time of Ashley's death.

The remainder of the day, prosecution witnesses rebutted testimony by defense witnesses.

Collin County Medical Examiner William Rohr and hair and fiber specialist Charles Linch were recalled to reinforce their testimony. Hair and fiber samples were used by the prosecution to link Blair to the girl's body.

Hairs from the girl's body were found on a stuffed animal found in Blair's car, Linch said. A hair with Blair's racial characteristics was found on the girl's body, he said.

If found guilty, prosecutors intend to seek the death penalty for Blair.

Some protest topless dancers as golf caddies

CLEBURNE (AP) — Some members of the Riverview Country Club are upset that their club was the site of a private golf tournament featuring topless dancers as caddies.

"We don't want them here," said Chris Carter, president of the men's golf association at the club.

"Members have been resigning," he said after Monday's tournament.

Carter and others were upset by two charter buses and two stretch limousines that arrived Monday full of golfers and their caddies, who work at New Orleans Nights, a Fort Worth nightclub.

Having ex-president dad helps, hurts, Bush says

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press

AUSTIN — He's running on his own. But gubernatorial challenger George W. Bush can drop a mighty big name whenever he chooses.

As the eldest son of the former president, Bush gets a chuckle from audiences when he mentions his father.

"I knew I had a big job ahead of me when I first got going, because I had to show people in Texas there was another George Bush," he says.

"All the time my friends in the press are saying, 'What's it like to be George Bush's son in the Texas political arena?' I'll tell you what it's like. Starting off, I inherited every single one of his enemies and half his friends."

Bush is one of two former first sons on this year's ballots. Younger brother, Jeb, is the GOP nominee for governor in Florida.

In Texas, the elder Bush's appearances on behalf of George W. have been limited to fund-raising events. But the name gives him a leg up, and that's handy when challenging one of the nation's biggest Democratic stars — Ann Richards.

"I'm running against a well-liked person and I know how tough it will be," Bush says. "Our disagreement is not personal. It's with her views, her record, her liberal philosophy and her failure to lead."

Bush, 48, says his business background helped shape his philosophy that personal responsibility should guide the actions of all citizens.

After growing up in Midland and Houston, he attended Yale and Harvard. He served as a fighter pilot in the Texas Air National Guard. In 1975, he founded Bush Exploration, a Midland-based oil and gas company, and in 1978 he lost a bid for Congress.

His best-known enterprise is the Texas Rangers baseball team, of which he is managing general partner.

Besides giving him visibility, the job gives good stump speech material, including: "I'm one of those rare politicians — I've actually got a job at the end of this deal that I like."

Bush hopes the end won't come the night of Nov. 8.

He's counting on a platform of issues he believes strike a chord with Texans — tougher crime laws, more local control of public schools, welfare changes and slowing the growth of state government spending.

Burglars break into Rios campaign office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The campaign of Democratic congressional candidate Rolando Rios is assessing its losses after a break-in at campaign headquarters.

Four computers, a videocassette recorder and television were taken during the break-in that occurred during the night Monday at the campaign's headquarters in northwest San Antonio, San Antonio police said Tuesday.

More damaging to the campaign is that internal campaign documents — including polling results, donor lists, strategy and schedules of media buys — appear to have been taken, Rios and campaign manager Carol Butler said.

The office in a strip shopping center was ransacked, with furniture overturned, computer disks strewn on the floor and desks searched, Ms. Butler said.

It was the only office in the shopping complex that was broken in, said police Sgt. David Ramos. Entry was apparently gained after someone threw a rock or brick through the office's glass door, he added.

"Obviously it's a tough blow to take," Ms. Butler said of the break-in. "We have no choice but to pick up and fight harder from here."

Rios, who is challenging Republican Rep. Henry Bonilla for the 23rd District that spans from San Antonio across West Texas, was in Washington on Tuesday to meet with party officials.

Last Vietnam-era POW is declared dead at family's request

■ Airman shot down over Laos on his 33rd birthday in 1965 is declared dead by children who endured decades of anguish that led to their mom's suicide.

By Sally Streff Buzbee
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In the end, the five children of Col. Charles E. Shelton felt driven to their decision by a relentless seesaw — the dizzying up-and-down of hope then despair, trust then suspicion, of rumors that never came true but always came back.

It took their mother, dragging her down into alcoholism and depression.

When she shot herself four years ago, with the black and white POW-MIA flag flying outside the house, her rosary draped over her husband's POW bracelet, they decided it must end.

Hard as it was, guilty as it made them feel, the time had come to declare that their father, the nation's last Vietnam-era prisoner of war, whereabouts unknown for 29 years, was dead.

It was time to push the war out of their lives.

"It was for our own sanity, for our own futures," John Shelton, 38, says slowly, staring at the photo of a young man who looks just like him, the photo of his Dad climbing into a plane.

"It's hung over us for so long."

Last week, at the children's request, the Air Force changed Shelton's status from prisoner of war to killed in action. Next Tuesday, his children will gather at Arlington National Cemetery in Washington to place his name on their mother's gravestone there.

None of this is easy, even now, three decades after their Dad was shot down over Laos.

The Pentagon says it will continue to push for a full accounting of all servicemen missing in Southeast Asia. But among the nation's POW-MIA activists, the children say, their decision has left bitterness.

"We hope they understand that this is not about politics, that this is very private," Shelton says.

But on his face, as he talks, are the same confusion and guilt, the same feeling of inadequacy, that bedeviled his mother for 25 years.

"There's one woman active in the POW groups who I've been trying to reach, to tell her why we've done this, to try to explain," he says.

"She's not been answering my calls. I know she's upset, that she thinks because we're doing this, that we're abandoning all the men who might still be over there."

He looks up, and his face is twisted.

"Even if he was over there, even if he'd been there all that time, do you think he'd still be alive?" he asks, restating an argument he's clearly had with himself many times before.

"I mean, we can't think we're deserting him, anymore. He could have died of old age."

Charles Shelton would now be 62.

He was shot down over Laos on his 33rd birthday, April 29, 1965, while flying a secret reconnaissance mission. He parachuted safely onto a ridge and got a radio message out that he was in good shape. A rescue helicopter got within sight of the downed airman but had to pull back when encroaching mists swallowed the ridge.

Marian Shelton was told six days later that villagers had reported him captured by communist Laotian forces.

At first, she had real hope. She moved her five children — LeaAnn, Charles Jr., John, Michael, and Joan — from the base on Okinawa back to Kentucky, where she grew up.

John, then 9, remembers the sheltering care of a mother who quickly learned to pay her own bills and make her own way, after being sheltered herself since marrying at 17.

Marian Shelton had loved being a military wife — traveling the world, raising her babies, joining the social whirl. A photo catches her at a party, dressed in a skimpy bunny suit with arms wrapped tight around her husband, her dimple exploding off her face.

"They were very close," John Shelton says.

The years dragged on, but Marian Shelton seemed never to waver. She traveled to Laos, talked to villagers, showed them Shelton's picture. She traveled the United States as spokeswoman for the POW activists.

In the early 1980s, she fought the Pentagon over changing the status of many POWs. Other servicemen were declared dead or missing in action; the Air Force agreed, as a symbol, to keep Shelton listed as the sole POW.

But such symbolism was taking an internal toll on Marian Shelton, and her children knew it.

She became more cynical, viewing government officials as liars. Her children share that distrust and also resent the people who "would call Mama and get her all riled up, make her crazy telling her these wild rumors," John Shelton says.

Teen sues Michael, claims van hit him

NEW YORK (AP) — A teenager is suing Michael Jackson for $20 million, alleging he was struck by the pop star's van as Jackson fled a crowd of children outside a toy factory in Brazil.

The federal lawsuit filed Tuesday on behalf of Alberto de Paolo, 16, says Jackson promised financial help after the October 1993 crash, but only gave him a toy car set.

Jackson lawyer Howard Weitzman said although he hadn't seen the lawsuit, "it appears to me to be another opportunistic attempt to cash in on Michael's success."

John E. Durst Jr., the boy's lawyer, said negotiations with Jackson's lawyers broke down last week. Weitzman, however, said he hadn't heard about the complaint before.

The boy suffered a compound fracture of the thighbone, underwent three operations that cost about $20,000, and now lives with one leg an inch shorter than the other, Durst said.

After posing for hospital photographs, Jackson promised to cover medical expenses, provide a scholarship and money for pain and suffering, Durst said. Instead, Jackson later sent only a toy car set, he said.

Wonderbra mania infects women in New York

By Felicia R. Lee
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — THE New York woman knows what she wants.

She wants rent control, good restaurants, a seat on the subway and — apparently — better cleavage. And so it is that in this hardhearted, troubled city, there is joy to be found as women greet the Wonderbra.

"Ah-h-h-h" exclaimed Mary DeLaCerda the other day on the third floor of Macy's. She was strolling past a flock of Wonderbras displayed under a sign that said "One Little Push."

That "push" was exactly what Ms. DeLarCerda, a 33-year-old AT&T manager, said she wanted.

Four months after the bra was introduced to great fanfare in New York, its popularity apparently still is on the rise.

"Everyone has been talking about it and everyone is in a rush to get it," Ms. DeLaCerda said of the Wonderbra. "This is neat! I need cleavage! I need some help!"

After trying on several to get the size right, Ms. DeLaCerda bought a white Wonderbra with lacy cups. In the meantime, women strolled over to touch or gaze at this new phenomenon. Several men did cruise-bys.

Mind you, this is a bra with a persona and a past.

This is the bra that Kate Moss, the waiflike model, says gave her cleavage. This is the bra said to have inspired thousands of second glances, none directed toward the windows of the soul. If ever there was a bra made for a fame-hungry city, this is it.

The Wonderbra's debut in New York was on May 9, pursued by an entourage of local and national news media. Macy's had a fashion show with twin models, one natural and one Wonderbraed. Lord & Taylor executives brag that the bra arrived in an armored truck at its flagship Fifth Avenue store.

The most popular sizes quickly sold out. The excitement over the $26 contraption continues among a generation of women in their 20s and 30s who missed the peculiar delights and tortures of girdles and padded bras.

"I was at a party and I swear every woman there was pushed up," said Jean Stewart-Robbins, a secretary who was at Macy's to buy her sister a Wonderbra for her birthday. She herself has three, all beige.

"Once you get one, you'll never go back," said Ms. Stewart-Robbins, who is 25 and wears a 32B. "Nothing looks the same. Until all the designers tell us that flat is in."

Ms. Stewart-Robbins said she is not concerned that the appetite for curves represented a throwback to a more repressive area. It is simply a fashion statement in a time of clingy clothes, she said. And women in New York are nothing if not fashionable.

Child poverty hits suburbs, researchers say

BOSTON (AP) — The number of children living in poverty is going up faster in suburbia, once a world of prosperity and promise, than it is in big cities or rural areas, researchers say.

For the population as a whole, the proportion of children living below the poverty line rose 49 percent from 1973 to 1992, say researchers at the Tufts University Center on Hunger, Poverty and Nutrition Policy, who examined Census Bureau data.

In rural areas, the share of children in poverty grew 36 percent, and in the inner city, 56 percent, they said. But in the suburbs, the increase was 76 percent.

"There's been a wholesale transformation of the American economy," Tufts researcher J. Larry Brown said. "Half of our families are experiencing declining wages, and the other half are those who have always been struggling near poverty."

Brown and co-author John T. Cook cited three reasons for the increase in poverty among children in the suburbs: declining real wages; families moving from inner cities to suburbs; and larger suburbs, extending out into what previously had been rural areas.

In 1973, about 8 percent of suburban children were members of families below the poverty line, defined then as $4,540 for a family of four. In 1992, when the poverty line had risen to $15,355 for a family of four, that had risen to 13.8 percent.

The poverty rate overall is higher for children than adults, according to census figures. In the United States, 15 percent of the population lives below the poverty line, but 25 percent of children are poor. In suburbs, 9.7 percent of people are poor, compared with 13.8 percent of the children.

"Children are just bad off in our country. It could be single-parent households, it could be lower wages over time," said Kathleen Short, chief of the poverty and wealth statistics branch of the Census Bureau.

Arloc Sherman, a researcher at the Children's Defense Fund, cautioned that the increase in poverty among suburban children was not caused by more minorities moving out from the inner city. Of poor suburban children in 1992, 70 percent were white, he said.

"The broader message," Sherman said, "is there is child poverty everywhere in this country, and yet one more group we thought was safe from child poverty is not, if it ever was."

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.
From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.
I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make work a top priority even when tempting distractions come your way. Business investments look more promising than in the recent past. A romantic relationship that has lasted for a long time deserves respect. If planning to marry, think about having the ceremony next May or June. Those of you who feel restless this winter will find a welcome respite in travel or artistic endeavors.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Brigitte Bardot, actor Marcello Mastroianni, basketball player Johnny Dawkins Jr., musician Ben E. King.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A business trip may have to be postponed. You are needed at home to make important decisions. A member of the opposite sex shows real integrity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let your pleasant personality shine through during a telephone conversation. Kind words will work miracles! An older person provides you with confidential information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A desire to serve your community may be in conflict with your personal needs. Wait a few weeks before starting a major project. You soon will have a better idea of what you want to accomplish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Everything you touch today could turn to gold. Take advantage of this lucky period by investigating any job opportunities that arise. An introduction by an old friend could lead to a new romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Watch your spending or you soon could be in need of a loan. Reaching an understanding with an older person may be more enjoyable than expected. Let your mate know what is bothering you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a chance! Good luck is on your side in both career and financial matters. Health problems improve with a new diet and exercise regimen. Show an estranged loved one that you really care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A change in your work environment boosts your productivity and self-confidence. Admit a secret longing to your mate if your relationship is more harmonious than in recent days. A parent offers sound advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Modernizing your home office will make you more efficient. Following a financial hunch will result in cause for celebration. Gifts come from those who hold you in high regard. Reward these admirers' lasting loyalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Leave for work early to avoid a traffic snarl. Extra effort will be needed to impress someone influential. Attend a speech or lecture that could provide valuable inspiration. Guard against the ploys of manipulative people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although you cannot afford to totally let down your guard, you can learn to worry less. Travel gives you a fresh perspective on an old disappointment. Grant your romantic partner more breathing room.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Handle career and business matters with extra care. Information previously withheld suddenly becomes available. Use it wisely and you will be in a position of power. Romance flutters but does not fly. Look elsewhere.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some parental advice comes in handy when making a tough career or business decision. Avoid acting on impulse. The unexpected could happen where romance is concerned. If worried about your weight, join an exercise group.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

Some years ago Dr. John Fisher of Dallas suggested that, when the bidding went one no trump - three no trump, a double by the defender not on lead requested partner to attack with a spade. This hand, from a rubber bridge game at New York's Regency Whist Club, makes a sound argument for extending the principle to contracts of six no trump where no suit has been bid.

North-South were employing a range of 21-22 (or a good 20) for two-no-trump opening bids. North's raise to four no trump was quantitative and South, Bob Hamman of Dallas, went on to slam on the strength of the excellent five-card suit. East's double would have been perfect for Dr. Fisher's idea.

After much thought West elected to lead the nine of diamonds. Declarer won in hand with the king, cashed the king and queen of hearts and ace of diamonds, then ran off five club tricks, reducing the hand to this position:

A heart to the ace ruined East. Forced to hold two diamonds, East tried the bluff of discarding the ace of spades. But Hamman coolly led a spade, and East was forced to lead away from the jack of diamonds into dummy's Q 10 tenace.

Sex symbol turned animal-rights crusader Briggitte Bardot turns 60

PARIS — Brigitte Bardot, who turns 60 Wednesday, wants to be remembered as an animal activist instead of a movie star.

Bardot wants to be remembered as an animal activist.

The French actress retired in 1973 having made 48 films in 21 years, including the one that made her famous, "And God Created Woman."

In the last two decades her name has become synonymous in France with a crusade to prevent animal cruelty.

She has helped ban ivory imports, rescued baby seals from slaughter and saved horses from becoming hamburger meat.

"The woman who made those movies, that's not me. She's someone else," she told Jeffrey Robinson, author of a biography published this week in Britain and France.

"Bardot: Two Lives" portrays Bardot as a free-spirited teen-ager who is molded into a sexpot by Roger Vadim, her first husband. The book will be published in the United States next spring.

"I have nothing to do with her or that entire period of her life," Bardot told Robinson. "My life today is only about animals. Nothing that came before is me."

Bardot lives with her fourth husband, Bernard d'Ormale. She divides her time between homes in St. Tropez and Paris.

IRVINE, Calif. — "Schindler's List" writer Thomas Keneally is leaving the faculty of a California university to spend more time in his native Australia.

Keneally began teaching at the University of California at Irvine in 1991. He will leave in June for Sydney.

"The commute has become onerous and I've found it difficult to extricate myself from Australia," he said. "They've asked me to come back on an occasional basis, and hand on heart, this is not based on rancor."

PHILADELPHIA — Stevie Nicks has often felt that Greta Garbo desire to be alone.

On her latest album, Nicks wrote the song "Greta" just for her.

"I have often thought, maybe I'll just go paint, or maybe I'll go and write that book that everybody wants me to write about my life, or maybe I'll just go do something else really creative for a while, and I have never been able to quite do that," said Nicks, who made her name with Fleetwood Mac.

"So I've always been fascinated to know why. What drove her away?"

The song is on the album "Street Angel."

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Why did Ken Burns give the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill mounds of papers and miles of tape from his documentary projects?

"We asked," said David Moltke-Hansen, director of the school's Southern Historical Collection.

"I'm sure he also recognized that we're a major repository for many of the subjects he's pursued — notably the Civil War."

Burns gave the school the complete working papers and footage from eight of his projects, including the acclaimed PBS series "The Civil War." Nothing from his current PBS series, "Baseball," was included.

Burns donated the collection last fall, but the university didn't announce it until Tuesday.

NEW YORK — Pamela Digby Churchill Hayward Harriman can keep her dough.

Ambassador Harriman can keep her dough, judge says.

A federal judge Tuesday refused to freeze the assets of the U.S. ambassador to France after her late husband's heirs accused her of squandering their inheritance. Judge John S. Martin found no evidence of impropriety.

W. Averell Harriman, a U.S. ambassador and New York governor, left a $65 million estate when he died in 1986. His children and grandchildren alleged that Mrs. Harriman was giving away assets or transferring them overseas.

Mrs. Harriman, a former daughter-in-law of Winston Churchill, has been more than generous with her late husband's relatives, said her lawyer, Roy Reardon.

"What the world hasn't heard yet is that she gave hundreds of thousands of dollars to the children and grandchildren," he said.

In a Life magazine issue that focuses on the perennial war between cat-lovers and dog-lovers, Bill Clinton recalls Harry Truman's famous remark about Washington: "If you really want a friend in this town, get yourself a dog."

"I wish someone had told me that," said the president, "before I showed up with a neutered cat."

Adams out 6 weeks

AUSTIN — Texas Longhorns receiver Mike Adams, who missed the first game of the season for violating NCAA rules, has now been sidelined for three to six weeks with a knee injury.

Texas coach John Mackovic said Tuesday that Adams, an All-Southwest Conference performer last season, has a sprained medial collateral ligament in his right knee.

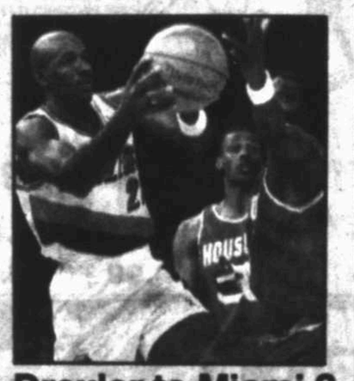

Adams was hurt while returning a punt in the third quarter of the Longhorns' 34-18 victory Saturday at Texas Christian.

Mackovic said tests showed no cartilage damage and indicated the injury will not require surgery.

"He has begun rehabilitation. It could take as few as three or as many as six weeks," Mackovic said.

The 16th-ranked Longhorns (3-0) play host to No. 5 Colorado (3-0) on Saturday.

Adams has been unable to get his season going, catching only three passes for 35 yards in limited action against Louisville and TCU. Last year, Adams had 52 receptions for 908 yards and seven touchdowns.

Drexler to Miami ?

MIAMI — Portland Trail Blazers All-Star Clyde Drexler will be traded to the Miami Heat for Harold Miner in a deal said to be in the works.

Drexler said he heard about the negotiations from "a good source" and he added that he wouldn't oppose such a deal. See story/6C.

Thomas' status

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — It will be another three days before the Buffalo Bills know if Thurman Thomas can play Sunday against the Chicago Bears.

"We haven't ruled him out of the game right now. But he's going to have to be OK for us to finally say he's going to be able to go," coach Marv Levy said. "It didn't appear to be a really serious injury."

Thomas ran for 103 yards on 17 carries and scored his first two rushing touchdowns of the year Monday night in the Bills' 27-20 victory over Denver. But he left the game after getting banged in the right knee early in the third quarter and did not return.

Tuesday was the players' day off. Thomas was at the stadium to see doctors, but was not available to talk to reporters.

He had X-rays on Monday night that were negative. Levy said Thomas would not need an MRI test for soft-tissue damage.

Dawgs blister AHS

■ Midland High takes less than one hour to defeat Abilene High in District 4-5A volleyball action.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

It took less than one hour for the Midland High Lady Dawgs to get back on track in the District 4-5A volleyball race.

MHS, led at the service line by Jamee Stennett and at the net by Toya Zachery and Elisabeth Mathiassen, disposed of the Abilene High Lady Eagles 15-5, 15-11 Tuesday night in the MHS gym.

With the win the Lady Dawgs end a two-match losing streak and improve to 3-2 in league play and 12-8 overall while Abilene falls to 0-5, 5-13. Also Tuesday, Midland Lee fell to Abilene Cooper and league-leading Odessa Permian defeated San Angelo Central. This puts MHS in a three-way tie for second place with Cooper and San Angelo. MHS travels to San Angelo Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

The match would have been even shorter had the Lady Dawgs been able to put away AHS after taking a huge and, what seemed at the time insurmountable, lead at 11-3 in the second and deciding game.

MHS coach Terri McColloch said her team became "a little bit" complacent during the waning moments of the second.

"We gave up on a couple of points too early," McColloch said. "But they gained their composure really well."

MHS built their lead with strong kills by Stennett and Mathiassen behind the steady serving of Jennifer Allen. In fact, it was sort of a coming out party for the duo.

"This was one of Jamee's best games," said McColloch. "She served well and she hit a few good balls. (Elisabeth) got some good ones tonight. Hopefully, that's a sign of things to come."

Also recording several sideout kills during the MHS run in the second game was Deshawn Berry, who did not play against Odessa Saturday because of a family funeral.

The Lady Eagles, down by eight points, nuckled down and wrestled control of the net from MHS.

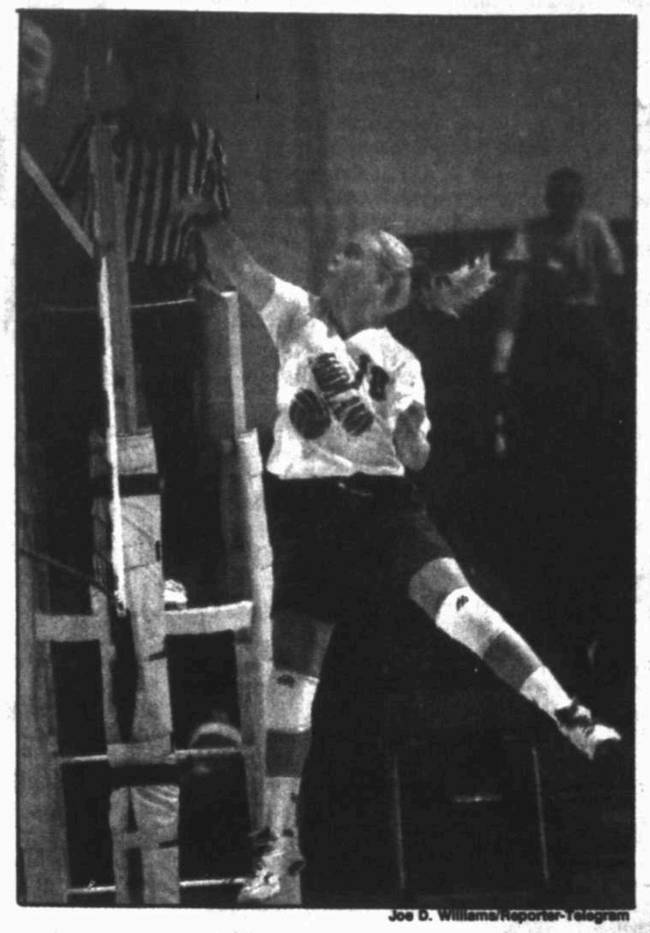

Kills from Cecilia Renteria and Kelly Armbruster along with strong serving by Sara O'Shields pulled the Lady Eagles right back to an 11-11 tie and chance to force a third game. A serving error by AHS finally stopped the run and Mathiassen got four of the next six kills to end the match. With that spree, Mathiassen, a foreign exchange student from Norway, ran her game-leading kill total to seven.

The Lady Dawgs started a little shaky against the Lady Eagles and fell behind 4-1 to begin the first game. Strong net play by Zachery and serving by Sara Pritchett and helped MHS to a 6-4 lead before four service errors stalled the Lady Dawg attack.

That's when Stennett gave the Lady Dawgs some stability at the service line. The junior middle blocker, who finished with two service aces and two winners, served off the final nine points to win the first game.

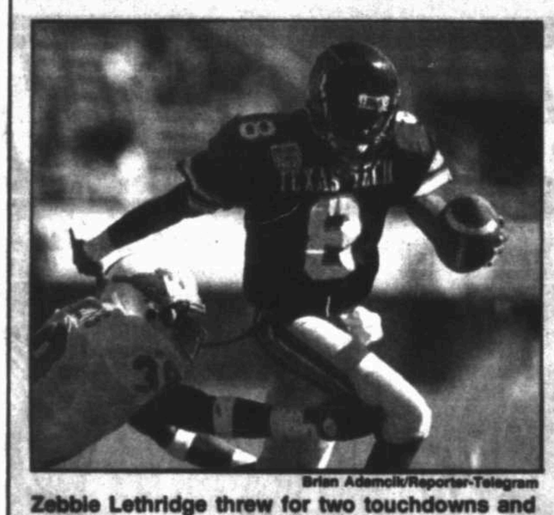

"We needed this win," McColloch said. "We need-

Lethridge starts Tech offense, captures honor

■ Texas Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge, making his first collegiate start, earns weekly accolade.

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Talk about grand debuts.

Redshirt freshman Zebbie Lethridge fired off two touchdown passes and ran for another in his first start for Texas Tech.

He was cool under pressure, elusive to Southern Methodist tacklers and professed "one of the better feelings that I've had all year" en route to Tech's 35-7 victory Saturday.

The Associated Press named Lethridge the Southwest Conference's Offensive Player of the Week.

Defensive honors went to Reggie Graham, a Texas A&M senior linebacker credited with 10 tackles, one sack and one pass broken up in the Aggies' 41-17 blowout of Southern Mississippi.

Lethridge has settled the three-way quarterback quandary Tech experienced earlier this season, coach Spike Dykes said Monday.

His performance against Southern Methodist — completing 14-of-26 passes for 148 yards — sealed

Cowboys look for lost offense...

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Dink, dink, dink. Fumble, fumble, fumble.

That was the Dallas Cowboys offense a week ago in a 20-17 loss to the Detroit Lions.

Deep passes were almost non-existent. The wide receivers seldom saw a ball.

"We were trying to take what the defense gave us," said offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese. "They were doubling our wide receivers. You have to go to your running game and your tight end. That means you have to handle the ball a lot of times without turnovers. We lost three fumbles. That killed us."

Zampese has come under heat because the man he replaced, Norv Turner, was the offensive coordinator on two Super Bowl champions. Zampese trades wits with Turner this week when the Cowboys travel to Washington.

"We'd like to get the ball to the wide receivers more, but teams are taking them away from us," Zampese said. "Maybe we need to start throwing deep anyway to loosen things up."

Three games into the season, tight end Jay Novacek leads the team in catches with 15. Of the top four receivers on the team, only one is a wideout, Michael Irvin, who has 14 catches.

Running back Emmitt Smith is next with 13 and fullback Daryl Johnston is right behind with nine catches.

Wide receiver Alvin Harper is fifth with six receptions.

The stumbling offense has caused shouting matches between players and Smith to throw his helmet.

But a week off has restored some calm.

"We're going to be OK," Irvin said. "Everyone is together on this team."

Irvin joked he went to Las Vegas during the bye week "to get all the losing out of my system."

Coach Barry Switzer had a long off week to examine his team.

"It's been a little frustrating, but we have our focus back," Switzer said. "We need to start doing the little things. We've got to catch the ball and not jump offsides. We have to play up to our ability. If we do that we'll be OK."

The Cowboys (2-1) are ranked fifth in the NFL in total offense and first in rushing offense.

"We're still not doing things the way we know how," Smith said. "We're still not there yet."

Smith spent the bye week nursing a turf toe and was expected to be fine by Sunday.

The Cowboys got some good news from the trainers when third-down receiver and kick return star Kevin Williams was cleared to play. Williams had been nursing a knee sprain and missed the Detroit game.

"Having Kevin back will really help our kicking game and our third-down passing situation," Switzer said. "Kevin has a lot of speed and will help us on third down. Troy (Aikman) was developing a lot of confidence in him before he was injured."

ASHBURN, Va. — Norv Turner never made it a secret Heath Shuler was going to be his quarterback. On Tuesday, Turner made it official.

Shuler, the Washington Redskins' first-round draft pick (third overall) this year, will replace veteran John Friesz as the starter against the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday.

Turner said he based the decision on a combination of Friesz's recent performances and his feeling that Shuler is ready to play.

"Even though we've been very productive in the passing game, and gotten a lot of positives out of it (with Friesz), we're still making the errors that are keeping us from getting done what we want to get done," Turner said. "And if we're going to have those errors, I'd just as soon be having those errors with Heath and making progress that way."

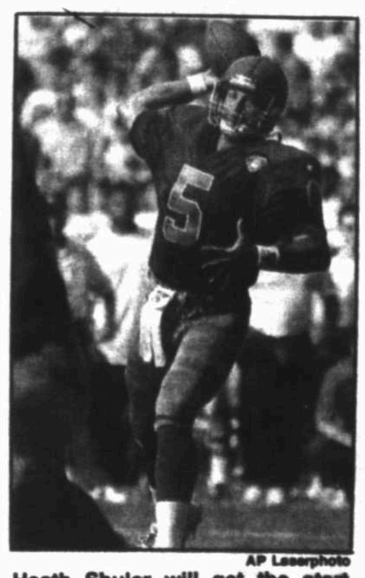

Shuler said he was glad finally to get the chance to start.

"I'm just glad to get the opportunity to play and step in and get on the winning side again, and give it all I can and give it 110 percent," he said. "It is not going to be something that will happen overnight. There will be some ups and downs, but we're going to overcome it."

The Redskins are 1-3 after four games with Friesz as the starter. Friesz's strong showing in Game 2 at New Orleans caused Turner to postpone plans to start Shuler in the third game.

Shuler remained on the bench as Friesz threw for 476 yards and six touch-

4-5A weaves wicked web on fans

The District 4-5A football race is weaving a wicked web of deceit on its fandom. Do we really deserve this kind of treatment ?

Williamson

Never before in the history of 4-5A have so many games been played where we know so little. Knowledge is a dangerous thing to have because knowledge changes from week to week in an ever crashing blow to the confidence level of those who follow these Friday Night warriors to the heights of ecstasy and the depths of despair. There seems to be little in between.

If there is sanity in the league, it has come from No. 2 state-ranked Abilene Cooper where the comfortable confidence level climbs with each and every outing. But in this age of multiple playoff berths, watching the rest of 4-5A go through its weekly grind is like eating sweet and sour pork. We can't decide which taste should be the predominant factor of our understanding.

For instance, Odessa Permian is outscored 57-10 on consecutive weekends while cross town rival Odessa High goes 4-0. "This is the year," claim the Broncho faithful. Permian 22, the Other High School (OHS) 6. Thirty years and counting. But, hey, the Bronchos still have Midland Lee to play. They can't beat Permian, but Lee has almost becomes OHS' very own patsy.

And while speaking of Lee, the Rebels tease us with a perfect 4-0 start to the season. They bomb cross town rival Midland High 37-0 and leave half of its offense on the field.

Lee's season took a turn for the worse in that huge victory Friday night as Melvin Dunson broke a shoulder blade, a rare injury in football. Dunson is just about half of the Rebel offense and the explosion waiting to happen. His explosions are over now as Lee gets the unwanted gut check with a season ending injury. The "Help Wanted" sign is now out at Lee. It reads: "Running back needed with great speed. Hero and star status a must, otherwise, don't apply."

And talk about teasing the fans. Midland High scores 101 points in three games, just six points shy of the entire season production of a year ago. The troubled days of history past is just that — history. Or so we thought. Then comes Lee and the Zippo lighter of flames. Zippo points to 37. Not exactly how you wish to start district play. Not exactly how you wish to treat your fans after a couple of victories. And to think, Cooper and Permian are next on the list.

Then, of course, there is San Angelo. The Bobcats are on the verge of taking over the dark horse role that was firmly planted on OHS early in pre-season talks. But no one knows where to rate the Bobcats just yet. They are 1-1-2 against what may be the toughest schedule among the 4-5A brethren. Right now, the Bobkitties are still waiting in the wings before becoming public and on stage this Friday against Odessa High. That is the key game of the week. Everyone is watching, waiting and making no predictions. Predictions this year make you eat mush on Saturday mornings. It is even getting to where you like it.

Coaching must be a great profession. Your livelihood depends on the outcome produced by 16 to 18 year-old kids. There is a surprise around every corner — and mush to eat every Saturday morning. This is District 4-5A football as we know it in 1994.

Huskers remain hopeful for Frazier's return to backfield

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — With Nebraska's Tommie Frazier still hospitalized, coach Tom Osborne was hopeful Tuesday that the second-ranked Cornhuskers would not lose their quarterback for the remainder of the season.

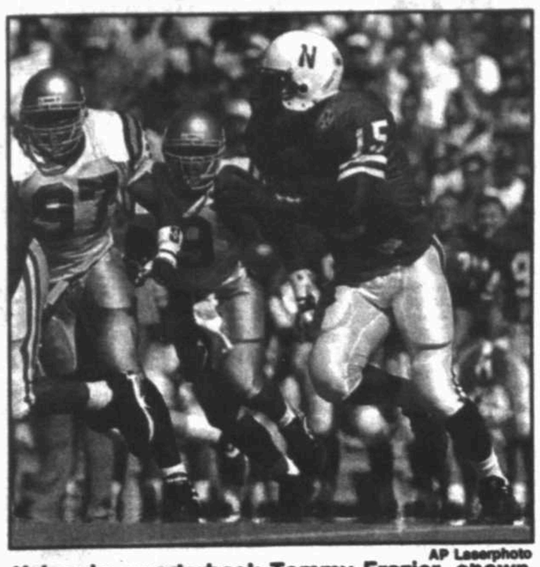

Frazier was undergoing treatment to dissolve a blood clot behind his right knee. The junior quarterback probably would remain in Bryan Hospital at least a few more days, Osborne said.

"Tommie Frazier is one of those people I'm positive will not play this week," Osborne said. "I don't think it's a done deal that he'll miss the rest of the season necessarily."

It still was not certain how Frazier developed the clot, Osborne said. Such injuries generally result from a blow that later develops into a clot.

But Frazier couldn't recall taking a hit to the calf area. The clot was discovered Sunday.

Nebraska's medical staff has been in contact with several NFL teams to discuss treatment and length of recovery for such injuries. Osborne said there have been several situations, ranging from one Green Bay player being forced out for six weeks to other players on blood-thinners early in the week, then be taken off late in the week and allowed to play.

him as starter, Dykes said.

"He did a good job," Dykes said. "He made some good plays out of some bad plays. The people who can make plays are the people you've gotta have to win."

Lethridge said he felt more comfortable as a starter than as backup to fellow freshman Tony Darden.

Lethridge put the Red Raiders up 7-0 in the first quarter with a 12-yard TD scamper around several would-be Mustang sackers. He later hit Jerod Fiebiger from 6 yards out and Sheldon Bass on an 8-yard score.

"I thought Zebbie looked great, and we just couldn't tackle him today," SMU coach Tom Rossley said. "He is a great scrambler and a great passer."

Defensively, Graham levied much of the punch behind the "Wrecking Crew" force of the No. 10 Aggies.

The 6-2, 233-pounder from League City has posted seven tackles for losses.

"I'm really proud of what Reggie has done with our defense," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "He played some last year, but he's really taken on a leadership role this season.

"He's always had good speed and now he's got the strength to go with it," Slocum said. "I think he worked harder in the off-season than any of our players. He hasn't reached his peak. He'll get better."

Graham, one of the team's strongest players, put on 31 pounds since his freshman year.

BAYLOR (3-1, 0-0 SWC) at TCU (2-2, 0-1 SWC), 12 Noon (CDT), Raycom regional telecast — The series: See below for complete all-games' and SWC-only records for the Bears and Horned Frogs. The Bears have a 6-4 edge in the last 10 meetings, but in 1993 TCU scored its most resounding victory (38-13) over the Bears since a 47-14 win in 1968 at Fort Worth. Baylor had captured four straight games from the Purples prior to last year's fracas ... . The coaches: Bears' mentor Chuck Ready is 8-7 (second season, both at BU) overall, 3-4 in SWC contests, 0-1 against TCU, and 0-0 in bowl battles. Horned Frogs' boss Pat Sullivan is 5-16-1 (third season, all with TCU) overall, 3-12 in SWC matches, 1-0 vs. the Bears, and 0-0 in postseason encounters as a head coach. Ready helped the Bears advance to the 1991 Copper Bowl and the '92 John Hancock Bowl (20-15 triumph over Arizona) as offensive coordinator under Grant Teaff. Sullivan was associated with Auburn as a standout quarterback, broadcaster, businessman, and assistant coach for almost 25 years from 1968-91 prior to his induction into the National Football Foundation College Hall of Fame in Dec., 1991 ... . The teams: BU has finished its West Coast road odyssey to San Jose and Los Angeles, Calif., while getting prepared for important SWC business at hand. The Horned Frogs are meeting their third opponent which has appeared in 1994 Top 25 polls and are bracing for a midseason stretch run. The Bears have a rugged defensive front threesome and quick linebackers while the Frogs' offensive line has played well in on-the-job-training roles ... . Key individuals: Baylor's Jeff Watson has the ability to throw the long ball (36-of-73 for 670 yards, five TDs and SWC's second-best 140.8 passing efficiency) while RB Kalief Muhammad (48 carries, 237 yards) has been an offensive sparkplug. LBs LaCurtis Jones (40 stops) and Tony Tubbs (22 hits, four for losses) are steady. Frogs' punter Beau Stephens (42-yard average) has added hang time and distance to TCU specialties. OLB Vincent Pryor (five TFLs) and injured NG Hayes Rydel (34 tackles) pressure QBs for CB Mikyha Martin (two interceptions) ... . Incidentally: The Bears-Frogs' series is tied with Texas-Texas A&M (101st meeting this fall) for the longest-running rivalry in the SWC. The teams are deadlocked for the third-most-contested series in NCAA Division I-A.

TEXAS TECH (2-2, 1-0 SWC) at TEXAS A&M (3-0, 0-0 SWC), 1 p.m. (CDT) — The series: Tech and A&M battle for the 53rd time since 1927 in one of the SWC's most hotly entangled rivalries. The Aggies have built their longest streak of consecutive wins in the series with four since 1990 while the Red Raiders prevailed six straight times from 1968-73 over the Aggies ... . The coaches: Tech's Spike Dykes is 43-40-1 (ninth year, all with the Raiders) overall, 30-22-1 in SWC bouts, 2-5 vs. the Maroon and White, and 1-2 in bowl games. A&M's R.C. Slocum is 52-12-1 (sixth season, all with the Aggies) overall, 33-4-1 in SWC battles (including a SWC-record 22 conference wins in succession), 4-1 against the Red Raiders, and 1-4 in bowl tilts. Dykes and Slocum have met across the stadium eight times in addition to their five previous engagements as head coaches. The pair faced off as assistants (Dykes at Texas in 1972-76 and with Tech in 1984-86, Slocum at Texas A&M as an aide in 1972-76 and in Aggieland in 1984-86) throughout the previous two decades ... . The teams: These traditional competitors have prided themselves in rugged defenses and fast-hitting offenses. Tech brings one of its youngest teams in several seasons to College Station while the Aggies have gained stamina and experience in both lines after losing nine starters from the 1993 SWC title team. Tech came closest of any visiting team since 1989 of downing the Aggies when in 1992 A&M's Terry Venetoulias booted a last-second field goal to edge the Raiders 19-17 ... . Key individuals: Red Raiders' LB Robert Johnson (37 tackles, five TFLs) and cagey DT Chris Ori are overachievers for the defensive unit. TB Alton Crain (51 carries, 210 yards) already has surpassed his 1993 cumulative rushing total while soph SE Field Scovell (14 grabs, 209 yards) is the fifth-leading receiver in the SWC. A&M DE Brandon Mitchell (eight of his 15 stops have been for losses) and LB Antonio Armstrong (four QB sacks, nine TFLs) form a rugged defensive twosome. FB Clif Groce (five catches, 63 yards) is a tough target to defend while Aggies' Calvin Collins has worked through viral problems and injuries ... . Incidentally: Three of the last five A&M-Tech jousts have been decided by four points or less. The Red Raiders' most recent win was a 27-24 triumph in 1989 at Lubbock. The teams first played in 1927, Tech's third year on the gridiron.

NORTH CAROLINA (2-1) at SMU (1-3, 0-1 SWC), 2 p.m. (CDT) — The series: See below for complete standings between the SWC and the Tar Heels. UNC has been a frequent visitor to the Sun Bowl in El Paso with appearances against Texas, Texas Tech and Mississippi State there since 1972. North Carolina's most recent gathering against a SWC foe was a 1994 season-opening 27-17 triumph over TCU at Chapel Hill ... . The coaches: UNC's Mack Brown is 68-63-1 (12th season) overall, 36-35-1 with the Tar Heels, 1-1 against SWC teams at Tulane and Carolina, and 1-2 in bowl tilts. SMU's Tom Rossley is 9-26-2 (fourth year, all with the Mustangs) overall, 3-19-1 in SWC encounters, 0-0 vs. the Tar Heels, and 0-0 in college bowl action. Brown, a player and student coach under Florida State's Bobby Bowden and one-time Vanderbilt RB, has tugged Carolina back from football lethargy to a pair of bowl appearances since 1992. Rossley, also assigned the task of rejuvenating SMU football fortunes following the move of coach Forrest Gregg to director of athletics, has kept the Mustangs competitive in such recent outings as a 24-16 loss to Wisconsin and in a 17-10 squeaker at UCLA in 1994 ... . The teams: The 18th-rated North Carolina bunch comes at opponents with a solid, 1-2 rushing punch and one of the most talented interior groups on both sides in school history. The Mustangs, hampered by some key injuries last week in a loss to Texas Tech, have been quick to regroup as evidenced by last year's 42-13 win at Navy to highlight a late-season surge ... . Key individuals: Tar Heels' QB Jason Stanicek (40-of-67 for 569 yards, two TDs, .597 completion percentage) operates in front of talented RBs "(Curtis) Johnson and (Leon) Johnson" with a combined 2,046 yards on 352 carries with 25 rushing TDs last year. SMU's John Biggins (six catches for 87 yards against Tech) and Mick Rossley (SWC-best 32 catches, third nationally) help the Mustangs' air barrage. Sophs OT Jason Holz and DE Wilbert Mitchell are two of several second-year men making an impact for the Ponies while true soph Chris Bordano tops SWC tackling charts with 54 (32 unassisted) ... . Incidentally: This is SMU's initial meeting with UNC and the first Atlantic Coast Conference member that the Mustangs have faced since a 14-7 triumph over Wake Forest in 1975. Since 1946 SMU is 4-4 against ACC schools and 88-75-5 against all outside opponents. SMU is 9-8-1 against non-SWC foes since returning to the gridiron in 1989.

COLORADO (3-0) at TEXAS (3-0, 1-0 SWC), 2:30 p.m. (CDT), ABC regional telecast — The series: See below for all-time series records with the SWC for the Buffaloes. Coach Bill McCartney's crew seeks to even its mark against all-time SWC foes at 11-11 with a win Saturday in the Buffs' first match with this loop since a 36-14 opening triumph over the Longhorns in 1993 ... . The coaches: Colorado's McCartney is 65-54-5 (13th year, all in Buffland) overall, 3-0 against the Longhorns and 2-6 in bowl contests. He has guided Colorado to all eight bowl contests in the last nine seasons. Texas chief John Mackovic is 58-46-2 (10th season) overall, 10-5 in SWC meetings, 0-1 against the Buffaloes, and 1-3 in bowl action. McCartney has accomplished one of the great turnarounds in Big Eight Conference annals after his first three teams were 7-25-1 from 1982-84. UT's Mackovic has aided the Longhorns to their best start since 1985 (3-0), and a win Saturday gives the Steers their best start since the 1984 group opened up at 6-0-1 ... . The teams: The Buffaloes have one of the most physical teams in America and displayed it in a 55-17 victory over defending Rose Bowl and Big Ten Conference co-champion Wisconsin.

Lee volleyball falls to Cooper

ABILENE — Midland Lee dropped its second straight District 4-5A volleyball match here Tuesday with a 15-10, 15-8 loss to Abilene Cooper.

The Lady Rebels fell to 2-4 in league play and 6-11 overall and are currently in sixth place behind Odessa High, which was idle Tuesday. Lee is open Saturday.

Lee coach Anita Corder called the match a "comedy of errors."

"It was one of those times — like that old saying goes — we just never got off the bus," Corder said. "The girls said it felt like they were in quick sand. You keep trying to get out, keep trying and trying but you're not getting anywhere. I felt like both teams were like that.

"I just kept asking my team to keep their shots in play and be more consistent," Corder said. "The four losses that we have, I feel like if this team would just level out and decide to be consistent, we could beat any tema in the district."

In the seventh grade Midland-Odessa conference, Abell, Goddard and Crockett are all tied for first place with perfect 3-0 starts. Alamo and Nimitz are a step back at 2-1. Bowie and San Jacinto own 1-2 marks while Bonham, Ector and Hood are all 0-3.

UIL audit recommends acountability, UT overview

AUSTIN (AP) — The University Interscholastic League needs to improve its accountability and should be under the direct purview of the president of the University of Texas at Austin, according to an audit released Tuesday by state Comptroller John Sharp's office.

"In an effort to increase public confidence in the organization, we recommend that UIL be under the direct responsibility of the president of UT-Austin," Sharp said. "This will increase the league's accountability to the Legislature, the governor and, most importantly, the public."

The comptroller's office, carrying out a mandate from the Legislature, began an audit of the UIL in May with public hearings in Austin, Odessa, Lufkin and San Antonio.

The audit recommends several changes in the way the UIL conducts its business as the organization that oversees academic, athletic and music competitions among public schools.

The study by Sharp's Performance Review Team marked the first time the UIL has undergone a comprehensive review in its 82-year existence.

The most sweeping recommendations include:

- Refining the UIL's system of punishment so that students aren't needlessly victimized by rules violations committed by coaches and administrators.
- Instituting fines for schools and individuals who violate UIL rules and regulations.
- Establishing hearings before an administrative law judge for persons reprimanded under the complaint and investigation process.
- Rewriting the UIL Constitution and Contest Rules Manual to make it more user-friendly.
- Broadening corporate sponsorship of events to include academic and musical competitions, in addition to a few athletic events.

SHULER: Rookie bumps Friesz from 'Skins lineup downs in two games, against the Saints and the New York Giants.

(From 1C)

He was 17-for-29 for 230 yards and a touchdown against the Falcons on Sunday, but threw three interceptions and fumbled once. Turner replaced him with Shuler for the final two possessions of the game.

"I'm disappointed for John, because I think John Friesz has played awfully well and given us a lot of positive things, gotten our offense off to a good start," Turner said. "I just felt at this time it was the right thing to do now."

Shuler was at a disadvantage to compete for the starting job because he missed 13 days of training camp getting a contract worked out. He signed an eight-year, $19.25 million deal, the biggest in team history, on Aug. 2.

Friesz, a five-year veteran who lost his job in San Diego to Stan Humphries, was signed by the Redskins before the April draft. Turner said the luxury of having Friesz kept pressure off Shuler while he learned the Redskins' offensive scheme.

"He's four weeks further along than when we had this discussion last time," Turner said. "That's been a plus. I think he's a lot more focused in and zeroed in on what we're doing. I think he's a lot further along and ready to play."

Turner said he didn't think he was trading short-term success for the long-term gain of developing his quarterback of the future.

"I think we can be a good offense with Heath playing. I think we can be competitive. I think we can win games with Heath playing. And again, we're going to continue to improve, and four or five weeks down the road, we're going to be a lot better."

Shuler has completed 13 of 24 passes for 107 yards, with one interceptoin and no touchdowns.

Turner said he wasn't worried that Shuler's first start comes in one of the toughest games of the year.

"There's so much other things for him to be thinking about, I hope that happens naturally. We've talked about that," he said. "The Cowboys aren't the issue — obviously they are on Sunday — but during the week,it's the Redskins and us having good practices, and making sure we continue to improve."

Expansions teams may get leftovers next season

■ The league's expansion stocking plan will give new clubs little to choose from.

IRVING (AP) — The Carolina Panthers and the Jacksonville Jaguars, the NFL's newest teams, may get an inkling this week of just how bad they'll be when they get going next season.

The people doing the picking think very bad. They believe the expansion stocking plan — likely to be unveiled during league meetings this week — will leave them a choice of the aged, the unfit and the just-plain bad.

"I don't think we'll find much of value," says Bill Polian, the Carolina general manager. "I think a lot of the people we'll be able to pick will be players just signed off the street."

Other NFL people aren't so sure, suggesting that free agency will make available to Carolina and Jacksonville the kind of non-expansion players they never would get otherwise. Moreover, they will be far enough under the salary cap — starting at zero, in fact — they will be able to afford players others wouldn't.

In fact, it's already a foregone conclusion in Buffalo that Frank Reich, one of the NFL's best backup quarterbacks, will be playing for the Panthers next year under Polian, the GM in Buffalo through 1992.

Also expected to come up at these meetings is the realignment the league hopes to put into effect with expansion. Commissioner Paul Tagliabue has the right in a deadlock to insert Carolina and Jacksonville into the existing four-team divisions — AFC Central and NFC West — but would much prefer to realign at the same time.

The stocking plan has been complicated by free agency. No players whose contracts have expired will be made available. That can be a plus for the expansion teams if free agents like Reich can be persuaded to go to a team that won't be a winner in its first few years.

Because of free agency, there is unlikely to be a set figure teams will be allowed to protect — say 35 current members of the roster. Instead, they will be required to make available a certain number of players under contract, losing three of that number.

Some cynics like Polian suggests that teams will just dump into the pool the practice squad, marginal players and currently jobless players they sign at midseason. Carolina has the first pick and is interested in Steve McNair, the Alcorn State quarterback, but probably would want to sign a veteran to break him in slowly.

"I'd hate to start a rookie quarterback behind the kind of offensive line we're going to have," Polian says.

As for realignment, Tagliabue is hopeful enough teams will seek an agreement on new divisions this fall.

"Everyone has something to gain and something to risk," he says. "If you get everyone into the process, then there are risks for everyone."

Two obvious places to change are the NFC East and West.

The West has New Orleans and Atlanta, and would probably get Jacksonville if Tagliabue has to make the decision, making it the NFC West-Southeast. The East has two teams located farther west, Dallas and Arizona, than the Saints or Falcons.

Several of the scenarios unveiled by the league have Arizona switching to the West, Tampa Bay moving from the Central to the East and Carolina moving into the Central.

But more logical moves are stalled by politics.

Arizona doesn't want to lose Dallas, a big draw everywhere, particularly in Tempe. But Dallas doesn't want to end its divisional rivalries with the New York Giants, Washington Redskins and Philadelphia Eagles.

Similarly, New Orleans and Atlanta don't want to be broken up; nor does the NFC Central group of Minnesota, Detroit, Chicago and Green Bay. Also hoping to remain together are Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Cincinnati from the AFC Central, and the AFC West group of Kansas City, the Raiders, Denver and San Diego. They have been together since the start of the AFL, in 1960.

McCall names McNeeley his first opponent

NEW YORK (AP) — Oliver McCall says he wants to be a people's champion, and he'd like one of those people, a 25-year-old third generation fighter from Boston named Pete McNeeley, to be his first challenger.

"I'm definitely willing to give Pete a shot. I'm looking forward to a good fight," McCall said Tuesday at a luncheon in New York to introduce him to the United States as new heavyweight champion.

"I'm taking one week off and I'm getting back into the ring," he said. "I'm taking no one lightly. I won't be a Riddick Bowe. I won't be sitting around, 300 pounds, saying, 'Hey, what's happening, man.'"

Saturday night in London, McCall, a former sparring partner, stopped Lennox Lewis in the second round to win the WBC version of the championship.

Significantly, McNeeley was at the luncheon as well, although McCall's promoter, Don King, said nothing was definite. If the two do fight, it would probably be in December in Boston Garden, which is due to close shortly thereafter.

"I'd like it to be McNeeley. I'd like to give him a chance like I gave Oliver, but nothing is decided yet," King said.

McNeeley's grandfather, Tom McNeeley Sr., fought on the card that opened Boston Garden on Nov. 17, 1928. In the main event that night, Andre Routis of France, the world featherweight champion, lost a 10-round non-title fight to Dick "Honey Boy" Finnegan.

Pete McNeeley's father, Tom Jr., fought Floyd Patterson for the heavyweight title on Dec. 4, 1961 in Toronto, getting knocked out in the fourth round. That fight was supposed to have been at Boston Garden, too, but the state athletic commission wouldn't allow Patterson to bring in his own referee, McNeeley said.

"I was knocked down 13 times, he was knocked down once," the father said. "Some people say I was only knocked down nine or 10 times, but I say, hey, give the man his due. His speed was unbelievable. I thought the referee was sneaking in a couple of punches. That was Jersey Joe Walcott.

"But, hey, I ruined Patterson. In his next fight, he lost to Sonny Liston. He was worn out from knocking me down."

If McNeeley gets his shot, that would make him and his dad only the second father-son tandem to fight for the heavyweight championship. Joe and Marvis Frazier were the first.

McNeeley also would become the first white heavyweight challenger since Stefan Tangstad of Norway was knocked out by Michael Spinks on Sept. 6, 1986.

McCall's stunning victory over Lewis not only ended any possibility of a Lewis-Riddick Bowe fight, it shot King back into the heavyweight title picture. The IBF and WBA portions of the championship are held by Michael Moorer, who is controlled by promoter Dan Duva.

King's plan now is to have McCall fight a succession of King-controlled challengers, so he will have a heavyweight champion to offer former title-holder Mike Tyson when he gets out of prison in about May next year.

"Who will Tyson fight? He'll have to fight Oliver McCall unless Pete McNeeley beats him," King said, "and then he'll fight Pete McNeeley. Either way, we've got a champion for Mike Tyson."

The victory gave McCall a record of 25-5 with 18 knockouts. He's won his last six fights, all by knockout. McNeeley is 30-1 with 24 knockouts. His lone loss came on cuts to Stanley Wright last Feb. 18.

Report: Drexler heads to Miami for guard Miner

MIAMI (AP) — Portland Trail Blazers All-Star Clyde Drexler will be traded to the Miami Heat for Harold Miner in a deal said to be in the works.

The Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale reported today that the trade will be made.

Drexler said he heard about the negotiations from "a good source" and he added that he wouldn't oppose such a deal.

"After being in Portland for so long, it's not like I want to go, but it might be best for everybody," Drexler said Monday. "And Miami would be a good place for me. Nice young team, good climate and they need a two-guard."

Heat managing partner Lewis Schaffel refused comment to the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale late Monday.

"We don't comment on (rumored) trades," he said.

Trail Blazers' general manager Bob Whitsitt could not be reached for comment.

Citing unidentified sources, the paper said today the trade is getting mixed reviews in the Heat camp because the 32-year-old Drexler appears to be nearing the end of his career.

Drexler's scoring average and shooting percentages have dropped precipitously in the last three years, from 25 points on 47 percent shooting in 1991-92 to 19.2 on 43 percent last season. He has also been injury-prone the last three years.

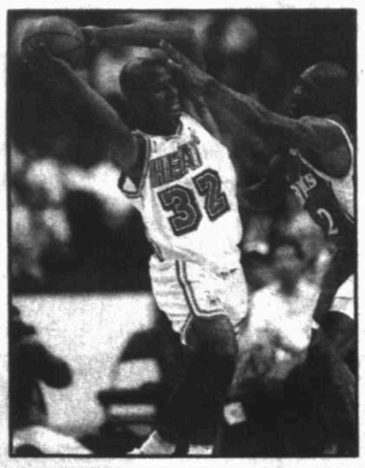

Drexler is scheduled to make $1.8 million next season, but has an $8 balloon payment due for the 1995-1996 season, and the Trail Blazers have said they'd trade Drexler when the balloon payment becomes due, the paper reported.

Miner, a first-round draft pick in 1992, has had problems with Heat coach Kevin Loughery. Monday, Miner's agent reaffirmed his client's dissatisfaction with the Heat.

"They're aware of how he feels," said Len Elmore, Miner's agent and a former NBA player. "I'm sure they don't want to inherit" Miner's dissatisfaction in the upcoming season.

The 6-foot-5 Miner averaged 10.5 points in 21.6 minutes last season.

The 6-7 Drexler, who's played in eight All-Star games, was part of the gold medal-winning "Dream Team", the U.S. Olympic team of 1992.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices edged lower Tuesday in quiet trading as dealers awaited the weekly report on the nation's energy inventories from the American Petroleum Institute.

After trading ended, the API said crude oil stocks had risen but gasoline supplies fell.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $17.55 per barrel, down 12 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The API reported that the nation's crude oil inventory rose to just over 328 million barrels during the week that ended Sept. 23, from 321.4 million a week earlier. But gasoline inventories fell to 209.6 million barrels from just over 211 million.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for November delivery settling at $1.715 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 0.1 cents.

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK — The dollar fell broadly against key currencies Tuesday as currency markets reacted to a sell-off in U.S. bonds that followed a decision by Federal Reserve policymakers to leave short-term interest rates unchanged.

Gold and other precious metals prices surged in domestic dealings after falling slightly overseas. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery rose $3.70 to $398.00 per troy ounce, while the heavily traded December futures contract shot above the key $400 level.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.5429 German marks, down from 1.5537 late Monday.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 98.12 Japanese yen, down from 98.85.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Monday: 1.2775 Swiss francs, down from 1.2870; 5.2670 French francs, down from 5.3060; 1,552 Italian lire, down from 1,565; and 1.3455 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3488.

The British pound rose to $1.5795 from $1.5720.

On the Comex, siver for current delivery rose 9 cents to $5.712 per troy ounce.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — Relief that federal policymakers apparently decided to hold interest rates steady helped selected stocks move ahead Tuesday as blue chips outperformed the broader market for the second straight session.

The market lurched lower in the afternoon when news came that the Federal Reserve's policy panel adjourned a meeting without announcing a change in interest rates.

But the Dow Jones industrial average managed to dig itself out of its deficit and ended up 13.80 at 3,863.04.

Fed lets interest rates stand

■ Fed takes wait-and-see posture through November.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve refrained from pushing interest rates higher on Tuesday, adopting a wait-and-see posture that analysts said would probably last until after the November elections.

While the lack of action had been widely predicted, financial markets still reacted adversely, at least initially.

Prices of stocks and bonds and the dollar all dropped sharply immediately following the midafternoon announcement, although they recovered most of their losses later in the day.

Analysts said the bond market, which is always worried about potential inflation, was disappointed that the Fed decided to put its credit tightening on hold.

"The market is off on a tangent, trying to read too much into whether the Fed does or does not tighten in any one month," said David Wyss, chief financial economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc. "Most people were not expecting the Fed to move and they didn't move, so nobody should have been shocked."

The yield on the benchmark 30-year bond, which moves in the opposite direction from its price, jumped to 7.84 percent.

The dollar fell against the Japanese yen and the German mark, although stocks rallied after initially following bond prices lower. The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 3,863.04, up 13.80 points, after a week of selling based on worries about what the Fed might do.

The central bank has increased interest rates five times this year with all but one of the rate hikes occurring in conjunction with a meeting of its policy-setting Federal Open Market Committee.

The last increase on Aug. 16 pushed both the federal funds rate and the discount rate up by one-half percentage point, to 4.75 percent and 4 percent respectively. The funds rate is the interest that banks charge each other while the discount rate is the Fed's charge for direct loans to banks.

Many economists said they still expected the Fed to hike rates by another half-point on Nov. 15, the date of its next FOMC meeting, although they said the panel may well have given Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan the power to move sooner than that on his own if the economic data warrant it.

But other analysts said Greenspan is not likely to utilize that authority so close to the Nov. 8 congressional elections, preferring to keep the Fed on the sidelines until after voters have gone to the polls.

Reed finds rig census fell by 12

HOUSTON (AP) — The number of available U.S. drilling rigs fell by 12 during the past year, continuing a 12-year decline, an industry survey reports.

The 1994 Reed Tool Co. annual rig census released Monday in New Orleans found 1,841 rigs available, down from the 1,853 at this time last year.

"Although this year's drop was less than 1 percent, the fleet is now only 4 percent higher than the all-time low level of 1,767 rigs back in 1973," Roy Caldwell, Reed Tool president, said.

The company has been conducting the census for 42 years.

"On the positive side, it could indicate that marginal rigs have already been eliminated from the fleet and the remaining rigs are in good condition," Caldwell said.

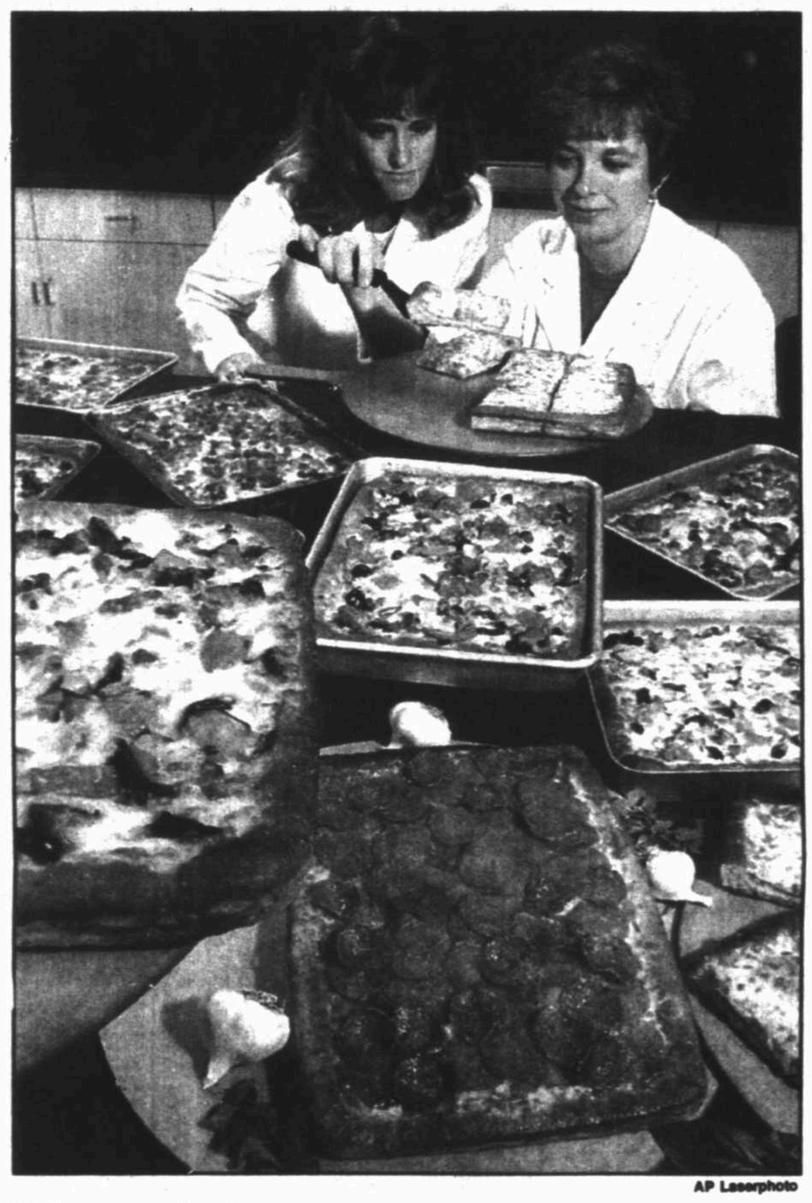

In the past two weeks, the U.S. count of rigs running has risen by 54, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

Caldwell said the Reed Tool survey this year showed 1994 was the first year more active rigs were drilling for gas than oil. In 1992, less than 45 percent of the rigs with a single definable target drilled for gas. In 1994, the percentage of rigs drilling solely for natural gas was up to 60 percent.

"In one sense, we can look on 1994 as a year of opportunity lost," Caldwell said. "We actually had a boom in drilling for natural gas, but the drilling community as a whole did not reap the benefits."

Weak oil prices late in 1993 and early in 1994, plus continuing uncertainty about prices, caused oil drilling to decline, Caldwell explained.

This is the first year since Reed began tracking international rig movement in 1988 that more rigs have entered the United States than have left, according to the survey.

New bill shifts burden of proof off consumers, on credit firms

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Legislation arming Americans with new power to correct inaccurate credit reports won House passage Tuesday.

The bill shifts the burden of proof from consumers to credit reporting companies in fighting a system in which lawmakers said erroneous information seems never to be deleted from computerized credit files.

Under the bill, consumers must be notified when action is taken against them because of information in their credit reports. Disputed information must be removed from credit files unless it can be verified within 30 days.

"If these reports are not accurate . . . then our whole society suffers," said Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, D-Mass., chairman of the House Banking consumer subcommittee.

"The promise of the information highway has given way to an Orwellian nightmare of erroneous and unknowingly disseminated credit reports," he said.

The measure, adopted by voice vote, is a compromise between the House and Senate. The Senate must approve the compromise before it can be sent to President Clinton for his signature.

Under the measure, credit bureaus will be required to provide a free copy of a consumer's credit report within 60 days of an adverse action such as a loan denial and at the conclusion of an investigation into disputed information.

Consumers also will be able to get one copy a year of their reports for $3 and additional copies for $8.

Lawmakers have been trying to enact credit reporting reform since 1989. The last effort, in 1992, fell apart over the issue of whether the new federal law should pre-empt tougher state laws.

First City holds three bids from third party investors

HOUSTON (AP) — First City Bancorporation of Texas on Tuesday announced it has three bids in hand from third party investors.

One of the three, 21 International Holdings Inc., owner of the trendy 21 Club in New York, filed a reorganization plan in federal bankruptcy court in Dallas on Sept. 16., incorporating its proposal.

The second proposal submitted last Friday was from J-Hawk Corp. in conjunction with Cargill Financial Services Corp. J-Hawk is a Waco, Texas-based firm specializing in the liquidation of distressed assets.

The third company submitting a bid asked First City that its name remain confidential.

Under each proposal First City would emerge from bankruptcy. The company will evaluate each plan to determine if any of the plans are worth supporting.

First City retains the right to sponsor a plan of its own.

Also, a timetable for the remaining bankruptcy proceedings was outlined Tuesday by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson. All proposed reorganization plans and disclosure statements must be filed in court by Nov. 1.

Breast Implants

A study in the New England Journal of Medicine reports no link between breast implants and connective-tissue disease, such as rheumatoid arthritis, lupus and scleroderma.

In January 1992, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) called for a moratorium on the use of silicone breast implants. This action was followed by individual reports of women developing connnective-tissue disease after having received breast implants.

This study was the first valid scientific study to examine the suspected link.

Mayo Clinic researchers compared the medical records of 749 women in a Minnesota county who received breast implants from 1964 to 1991 with the records of 1,498 similarly aged women who did not.

Over an eight-year period, five of the women who received breast implants developed connective-tissue desease compared to 10 of the women without implants. Because there were twice as many women without implants in the study, these numbers indicate equal risk.

The subjects in this study had received a variety of breast implants, including silicone, saline and polyurethane. All of these substances were encased in silicone envelopes, so all women were exposed to silicone.

Researchers also found no significant difference in the incidence of cancers between the groups.

So, if a woman has had an implant, this study offers some assurance that she has not risked her health.

Skin-to-skin caution

One item parents can add to their children's back-to-school list is prevention against a common skin infection.

Impetigo is a contagious bacterial infection that, left untreated, can go deeper into the skin and cause complications.

It is spread easily via skin-to-skin contact, especially in summer and early fall, said Dr. Andrea Dominey, a pediatric dermatologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Minor scrapes and skin cuts can contribute to the infection's spread. For this reason, small epidemics can occur in schools at teh start of the school year.

Two bacteria can cause impetigo. Group A streptococcus causes small red spots with honey-colored crusting; staphylococcus causes small to large red blisters on the legs, face and trunk.

Children who may have impetigo should see a physician.

'Bump' in the face

A morning shave does not have to be a grueling task for black men with shaving "bumps."

One in three black men suffer from the condition, pseudofolliculitis barbae.

"Pseudofolliculitis develops as a result of the repeated trauma of shaving," said Dr. Ted Rosen, a dermatologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "If you shave too closely, the hair doubles back into the skin."

Rosen said the problem can be minimized by shaving in only one direction with a single-edged razor, by using a moisturizing shaving cream and by avoiding electric shavers.

For some men, the only way to manage the problem is to grow a beard, Rosen said.

Learn about food

Children should learn there are no bad foods, only bad eating habits.

Instead of banning certain foods, parents can teach children to make wise choices by including them in menu planning, grocery shopping and meal preparation, said Dr. Corinne Montandon, a nutritionist at the USDA's Children's Nutrition Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Montandon encourages parents to use the new USDA Food Guide Pyramid for menu planning; it helps children visualize food groups.

Once the menu has been planned, children can accompany parents to the grocery store and help make selections. Choosing groceries with children is a good way to discuss which foods are healthy and why.

New therapy promising for autistic children

By Dr. Richard Perry
Associated Press

Applied behavior analysis, a promising new form of therapy, may improve the outlook for autistic children and their families.

Autism is a developmental disorder, associated in most cases with mental retardation, that affects relatedness, sociability, language and play. The disorder is believed to be caused by a neurological deficit often too subtle to be detected by such tests as MRIs or CAT scans.

Early diagnosis and intervention are crucial for these children because the brain is considered to be more adaptive and open to learning in younger children.

Autism is generally detected through observation by a medical professional who specializes in the disorder, combined with a complete parental history of the child.

Behaviors that signal autism include extreme withdrawal with both adults and peers, and little or no eye contact with others.

About half of these children do not speak; those who do, often do not use their speech to communicate. Instead they may echo words, or speak in jargon or gibberish syllables that sound like language.

Applied behavior is an intensive form of behavior modification in which a trained therapist works on a one-to-one basis with a child either in a school setting or in the home. The therapist also teaches parents and other family members how to work with and respond to the child, thus making them part of the therapy team.

During applied behavior analysis, the therapist brings a daily goal list that involves areas of language, sociability and interaction with others.

Each smaller goal is repeated numerous times to ensure that the child will understand and retain the activity. A language goal, for example, may have the child use and understand the meaning of the word, "chair."

First, the therapist gets the child to make eye contact and reinforces that with food or praise. Next, the therapist points to a chair and repeats the word, "chair," several times in an attempt to have the child understand its meaning and encourage the child to repeat the word.

Next, the therapist may point to the chair and ask the child to tell him or her what it is. After many correct responses to this question, the therapist then may go through the house with the child, pointing out chairs and repeating the question and answer session.

This helps the child understand that a chair is a chair everywhere, not just in one room. After the child achieves this goal, the therapist moves on to the next objective.

This form of therapy is based on research on 19 autistic children who were treated with intensive one-on-one behavior therapy for 40 hours a week for two years. Nine of the children entered a regular classroom by first grade. According to a follow-up report done six years later, eight of these children remained in regular classes and one new child had entered regular classes.

The therapy, while promising, is not equally effective in all children. More research is required to help determine the best predictors of success for this therapy.

Dolls help children deal with illnesses

CAMBRIDGE CITY, Ind. (AP) — They are young children with health problems that would scare and frustrate adults. So many hospitals use a specially made doll to help the youngsters learn about their illnesses.

Some of the dolls from Legacy Products have vinyl overlays of body parts, others are adapted so they can be used with real medical equipment.

"I can't tell you how much they've helped our kids," said Holly Schultz, a child life specialist at the Gillette Children's Hospital in St. Paul, Minn.

The dolls are used in a variety of ways at hospitals in more than 35 states. Often, they are used to help prepare children for surgery or other painful medical procedures.

After helping a young diabetic give an insulin injection to a Legacy doll, Methodist Hospital nurse Connie Shella said, "Sometimes my friend is angry. Why do you think he is angry?"

"Because it hurts," 5-year-old Jared Riley replied.

"But if I stop giving the injections, what will happen? He won't feel good," Shella said, holding up the frowning doll, which had a vinyl overlay of a pancreas.

The soft dolls are made of a fabric similar to the looped side of Velcro, which allows the overlays to be easily attached. They come in various sizes, but the standard is about 27 inches.

To help children identify with the dolls, they come with wigs that can be changed to match the child's hair color. "Mood masks" also allow the child to replace the doll's happy face with one that is sad, angry, sleepy or worried.

Children tired of being poked and prodded can express their frustrations through the dolls.

"I think it's positive for kids to express anger to a doll as opposed to hitting a sister or a staff person," Schultz said.

The dolls also can help parents whose children are sick. Anne Eccles used a "bleeding knee" doll to learn how to give injections to her 1-year-old son, Campbell, who has hemophilia. The doll's knee opens up, and red fabric surrounding the joint simulates a hemorrhage.

Practicing on the doll "made me feel a lot more comfortable," Eccles said.

The dolls reflect a variety of medical disorders and Legacy is in the process of developing a spina bifida doll and vinyl overlays that show a variety of cardiac problems.

Katherine Miller founded the Cambridge City-based company in 1988, after she and her sister made a washable doll and displayed it at a medical conference.

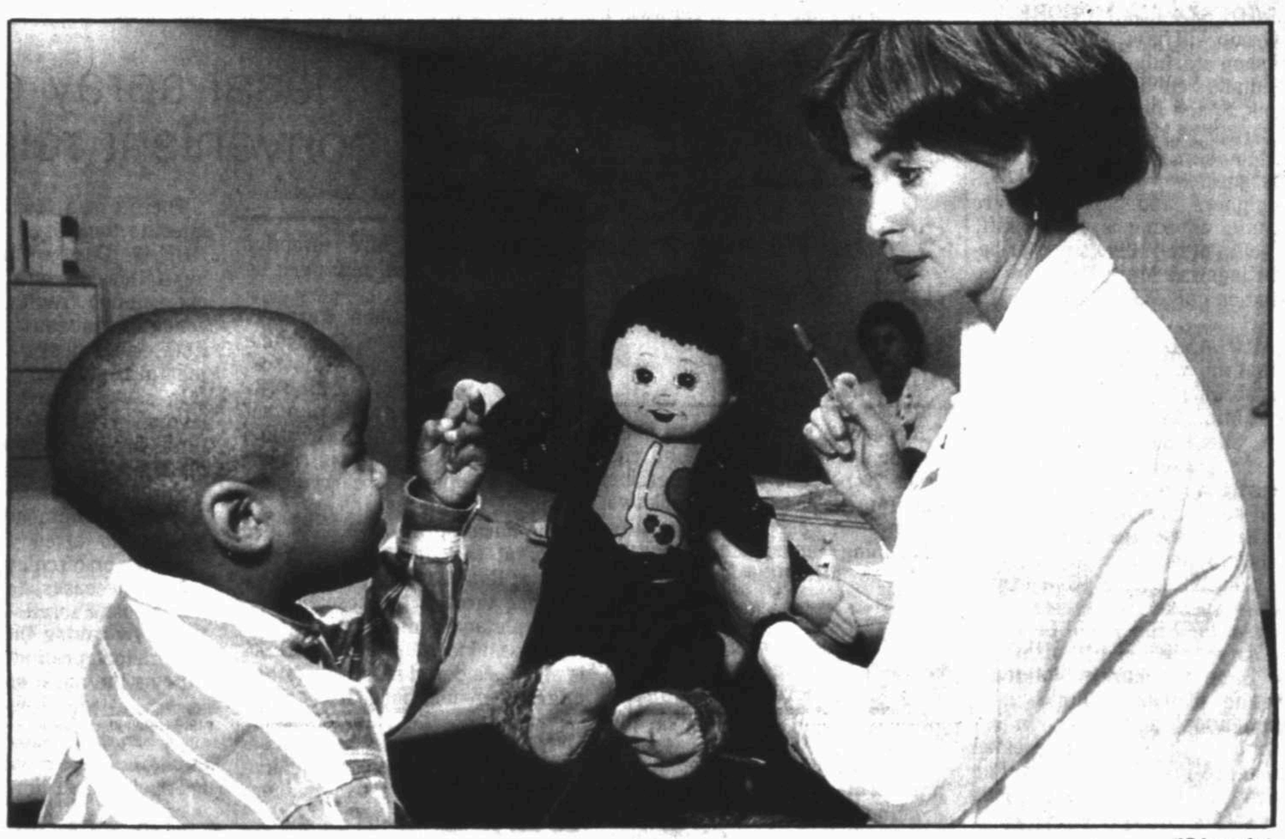

"Nurses would come by our exhibit and say, 'Have you ever put in a tracheostomy?' or 'Do you think you could put in an IV?'" Miller said. "We didn't see why we couldn't. And that's how the whole thing started."

Most dolls cost about $250, although the price varies depending on their features.

Miller and her sister now have about a dozen people working for them, although many employees make the dolls at home in their spare time.

"This has been a bittersweet experience for us," Miller said. "Just about all of us are mothers. That's why we dress the dolls in bright, happy clothes and try to make them look as normal as possible.

"We want to play a role in positive reinforcement with these children. We want them to hope they will be better."

New nasal spray may ease migraine

By Dr. Herman J. Weinreb
Associated Press

A new version of a medication used to abort migraine may give those suffering from that kind of a wrenching headache a safe and convenient way to nip these headaches in the bud.

Migraine is a recurrent headache syndrome that causes extreme pain and nausea. The condition is believed to be due to a lack of the brain chemical serotonin in some brain cells that in turn causes changes in the blood vessel wall in the brain and the scalp.

Medication used to control these headaches varies according to the frequency of the migraine attacks.

Preventive medications such as tricyclic antidepressants are generally given to those with at least two or more disabling monthly migraine attacks. Taken daily, these medications are believed to block factors that lead to migraine by changing the activity of serotonin within the brain.

People who suffer sporadic migraines currently have the option of using sumatriptan or DHE-45 (dihydroergotamine mesylate) to rapidly abort migraine pain.

A third option, which may soon be available in the United States, is a new formulation of DHE-45 to be taken by inhaling through the nose — and possibly offering several advantages over currently available medications.

At the present time, for any medication to be effective in aborting migraine, it must be taken at the first sign of its onset. Sumatriptan and the older

Local support group helps present free asthma program

Staff Report

The West Texas Asthma Outreach (WTAO), The American Lung Association of Texas and Region 18 Educational Service Center will present a free Family Asthma Program 9 a.m.-noon Oct. 8 at Golf Course Road Church of Christ's Family Center Building, 3500 W. Andrews Hwy. Sign-in will begin at 8:45 a.m.

This educational program is a family program. In one room, asthmatic children — in first through twelfth grades — will participate in age-appropriate activities led by school nurses and respiratory therapists designed to help them understand asthma basics, methods of treatment and ways to foresee and prevent asthma attacks.

In another room, parents and any other interested adults can learn about triggers, effects of medications and ways to manage asthma attacks from Dr. Robert Rogers, pediatric asthma and allergy specialist from Fort Worth.

"Parents have a chance to ask their personal questions," said Lil Serafine of the ALA. "They learn by sharing concerns with other parents, and they learn new asthma management skills."

The intent of the Family Asthma Program is to make a difference in the asthmatic child's life and to give peace of mind to concerned parents.

"The better parents and children understand asthma, the better they are able to deal with the disease," Ms. Serafine said.

Parents involved in other educational programs report that their children now notice the onset of an attack earlier which helps them prevent or better control asthma.

"We are very fortunate to have such fine doctors willing to give their time to this program," said Billie Petersen of West Texas Asthma Outreach, Midland's local asthma support group. "In addition, to Drs. Stephen Wiesenfeld and John Bray, will also be teaching the older children. We hope everyone in attendance has ample time and opportunity to ask questions and learn as much as possible about the control of asthma," Mrs. Petersen said.

Children will be coached on how to lessen negative feelings regarding asthma and how to increase self-esteem, control and confidence.

"This way, parents and children learn about asthma management in a fun and informative fashion," concluded Ms. Serafine.

Parents, grandparents, guardians or caretakers of children with asthma may attend.

"We also welcome any adult asthmatic eager to take advantage of this wealth of information," said Joanna Thomas, registrar for this event. "But, please, no children under first grade," she added.

For additional information on the Family Asthma Program, contact Billie Peterson at 694-1040 or Joanna Thomas at 682-4229.

Pre-registration is required and is being accepted on a first come, first serve basis.

Carnitine fails short-term tests in delaying fatigue

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — A couple of weeks of taking the popular food supplement carnitine doesn't improve exercise endurance, even when it's taken in high doses, a study indicates.

Carnitine carries fatty acids into the part of the cell in which they can be broken down for fuel. As a result, some athletes believe that supplements may help them burn more fat.

This, they believe, will make them leaner while giving their cells something to use besides glycogen, the form of sugar that's the muscle's prime aerobic energy source. The added fuel could theoretically delay fatigue.

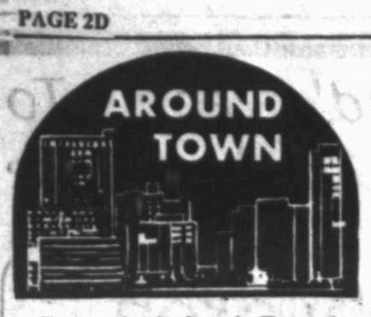

The study in the American College of Sports Medicine journal Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise looked at whether supplements would increase fatty acids in muscle cells.

Researchers at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., studied eight men with an average age of close to 27. All got 6 grams a day of carnitine, which they drank in orange juice. This dosage was high enough to produce a side effect — half of the men developed diarrhea, said former Ball State researcher Matthew D. Vukovich, now at Wichita State University in Kansas.

The men also got a hefty amount of potential fuel to digest — a shake of heavy whipping cream and chocolate ice cream, with 95 grams of fat.

The researchers wanted to see if carnitine might work better if the body was given extra help in metabolizing the fat. So the men also got heparin, which makes the body release an enzyme that breaks down fat.

DEAR ABBY

Divorced father of the bride sits down and rocks the boat

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A year and a half ago, my daughter (I'll call her Betty) was married in a beautiful church wedding. Although her mother and I have been divorced for seven years and we have both remarried, I paid for half of everything. My present wife urged me to make sure Betty had a first-class wedding, and I did.

Van Buren

Now the problem: Betty wanted me to sit with her mom during the ceremony. I thought it would look strange if her mom and stepfather and I, plus the groom's parents, all sat together, while my wife sat alone; so I sat with my wife.

Since then, Betty has been very cool to me. She hasn't called or come by — nothing.

Abby, I love my daughter very much. I sent her to a fine girls' college and saw to it that she had the best clothes and a car of her own. I apologized to her and told her I didn't realize it meant so much to her to have me with her mother. Was I wrong to sit with my wife? — SAD DAD, MEMPHIS, TENN.

DEAR SAD DAD: Don't let your daughter lay a guilt trip on you. You acted appropriately when you chose to sit with your wife rather than have her sit alone.

DEAR ABBY: Occasionally one hears someone described as a "good Christian" — or someone did the "Christian" thing. I think what is meant by this is that the person is of good character.

Abby, this type of person can be found among all faiths: Muslim, Buddhist, Hindu, Jewish, B'nai, and even atheists.

The use of the word "Christian" to mean "of impeccable character" is hurtful to those who are not Christian. If we all want to live together on this planet with respect and acceptance, we need to find a better way to describe good character.

I happen to be a good person, but I am not a Christian. If you use my letter, please sign me ... GOOD, BUT NOT A CHRISTIAN, IN LA HONDA, CALIF.

DEAR GOOD: You are right — Christians do not have a monopoly on good charcter. Better to say, "So-and-so is a good person," or "So-and-so did a good (or kind) thing." One can find people of good character — and bad — in every religion (and race).

DEAR ABBY: I bought my daughter a lovely wedding gown for her wedding 10 years ago. Unfortunately, that marriage didn't last very long.

My daughter is planning her second wedding, which will take place in our home. Many of the same friends and family members will attend.

I was aghast when she said, "I still have the wedding gown that I wore at my first wedding, and I want to wear it again."

What do you think, Abby? — AGHAST MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I think it should be your daughter's choice.

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

STUDY: Added fuel doesn't delay fatigue

(From 1D)

Researchers had the men exercise on a stationary bike, at a vigorous 70 percent of their aerobic maximums. The subjects took two rides of an hour each, one after consuming heparin and carnitine and one after taking carnitine alone.

The researchers took small samples of blood and of muscle tissue before, during and after exercise. They found more carnitine in the blood, but no more where it would do good — in the muscle.

There also was no drop in the amount of glycogen being used, indicating the muscles were getting no benefit from the extra fat, the study said.

This indicates extra carnitine doesn't help muscle cells feed, said Vukovich.

Nor did the men's ability to exercise on the stationary bikes improve, either in the carnitine alone or carnitine-with-heparin tests, the study said.

One 1991 study in Italy did find extra carnitine in the muscle, but that was with people taking the supplement for 120 days, Vukovich said.

That kind of usage would be unusual, Vukovich said. "People usually don't take it for that long. They want to take it for a short period, get the effect, and get off," he said.

Although carnitine has a wide following, especially in Europe, "We couldn't justify it was doing what they claimed," said David L. Costill, director of Ball State's Human Performance Laboratory.

That's probably because a healthy body already has plenty of carnitine, which people can get from red meat, said Vukovich. "It's very unusual for a person to be carnitine deficient," he said.

Loran L. Bieber, a veteran researcher on carnitine, agrees, saying most tissues already have an excess of carnitine.

If the body gets too much carnitine, the surplus is excreted, said Nancy Rodriguez, an assistant professor of nutritional sciences at the University of Connecticut.

SPRAY: Nasal spray offers simple, convenient relief form of DHE-45 are effective against attacks, but they must be taken by injection.

(From 1D)

Physical or emotional warnings that signal the onset of a migraine are common. But in some cases, migraine attacks may occur without warning and patients may not have access to an area in which they can administer the injection. They may not even be carrying the medication with them.

The nasal spray DHE-45 is also taken at the first sign of a migraine. But because it is taken by inhaling through the nose, its use is simple and convenient.

The nasal formulation of DHE-45 is also considered safer than other migraine medications. It is not associated with the side effects of high blood pressure that may occur when oral ergotomine medications are used to treat migraine.

There are a few limitations related to the nasal preparation of DHE-45. Dosage directions must be followed carefully because overuse can result in ergotism, a condition that causes nausea, vomiting, a feeling of clamminess, and mental confusion.

In severe cases, ergotism can lead to circulatory problems in the limbs or even ischemia, a lack of blood flow to the heart and lungs.

For this reason DHE-45 is generally not recommended for use by those who already have severe vascular or circulatory problems.

In some cases, the nasal spray may cause nausea. This can be relieved by taking the oral medication metoclopramide, at the same time as the nasal spray.

'Chili weather' brings thoughts of bowl of red

By Linda Anderson

Remember last week when the weather got so cold? It was, in fact, on Thursday, which was the last official day of summer, but it was fall in my house. And what ushers in fall better than an nice, hot bowl of chili. People don't call it "chili weather" for nothing, you know.

Anderson

It just so happened that I had a can of Wolf brand Lean Beef Chili that had been sent to us by the manufacturer. Sounded perfect.

A 15-ounce can of Wolf Brand Lean Beef Chili no Beans costs $1.49, according to information from the company. I know I'm going to offend some purists, but I've never objected to beans in my chili. In fact, if you want to know the truth, sometime chili without beans is just too rich. Wonderful, but too rich.

Label advertising claims the product is "New!" and contains "66 percent less fat than Original Wolf Brand Chili no Beans." On the side of the can is a picture of a wolf named Kaiser Bill (and over the picture are the words "Since 1895") and a story: "Since 1895, Kaiser Bill, the founder's pet wolf, has jealously guarded Wolf Brand's range cook recipe. And after nearly 100 years of making Texas' finest chili, we wouldn't dream of using turkey or chicken in an authentic bowl of red. That's why new Wolf Brand Lean Beef Chili, with a full 66 percent less fat, is made with prime cuts of lean beef and our unique blend of spices. So every big, thick, steaming bowl is brimming with that famous Wolf Brand taste."

That's a lot of words to fit on one little space on a can's label, but it sounds nice and folksy, which is what you would expect for chili advertising.

There's also a toll-free number "for questions or comments:" 1-800-414-WOLF (9653) 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday. That's such a nice, customer-friendly gesture for companies to make.

Nurition information reveals that each 1-cup serving (about half a can) contains 260 calorie, with 90 of those calories from fat. That's close to the American Heart Association's recommended 30 percent of calories from fat, but not quite.

I thought I was going to taste this one all by myself, but surprisingly enough, the young taste-tester (who had just finished a hamburger) said she wanted some chili too, so she joined me.

Wolf Brand Lean Beef Chili no Beans turned out to be tasty but not hot enough, so I added some salsa to mine to perk it up. Oh, and of course put some cheese on top. The young tester just ate the chili, and decided she didn't like it very much. I liked mine fine, but discovered that it is filling.

Sure did go down well on a semi-autumn evening though. I'll have to try it again. Probably soon, since it is now officially fall.

Look for the "It's 4 U" Game ad here and in the advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until November 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you will win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize.

You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4 U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, October 30, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending November 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win one of that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4 U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads page. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.
