Ring of Honor

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry today will be named to the team's Ring of Honor where he will join seven of his most honored former players, media reports say.

The Cowboys have called a 5 p.m. news conference to make an announcement regarding the honor. Team officials declined to confirm reports that Landry would be named.

Landry, who coached Dallas for 29 years, has declined several invitations from Cowboys owner Jerry Jones to be inducted to the Ring of Honor.

Freeh named to head FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton today selected federal judge Louis Freeh, a former FBI agent and federal prosecutor, to head the FBI. The announcement came a day after Clinton fired William Sessions as the agency's director.

Clinton called Freeh "a law enforcement legend."

Freeh is 43-year-old U.S. district judge from Manhattan who has spent nearly his entire career in government service,

Clinton made the announcement at a Rose Garden ceremony attended by family and friends of Freeh.

"He is experienced, energetic and independent. He will be both good and tough — good for the FBI and tough on criminals," Clinton said in announcing his nomination.

Although it took Clinton months to fire Sessions, who steadfastly resisted administration entreaties that he retire, the president was quick in naming a successor.

Clinton interviewed Freeh at the White House last Friday and aides said he had been the only candidate for the FBI post under active consideration.

Freeh was appointed to the bench by President Bush in 1991 after five years as an FBI agent and a decade as a federal prosecutor. As a prosecutor, he specialized in investigating organized crime.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said today that swift confirmation was hoped for, in part because "he went through the process only two years ago."

"I pledge my total commitment to an FBI whose only beacon is the rule of law, whose sole task is protecting all our people from crime and violence," Freeh said.

"Our country must be made safe again, in cities, towns, villages and the countryside," he said.

Clinton noted his earlier appointments of Attorney General Janet Reno and drug czar Lee Brown. Along with Freeh, Clinton asserted, "our administration has a street-smart front line against crime."

Clinton said hoped for Freeh's "speedy confirmation" to the 10-year term.

Clinton's firing of Sessions on Monday ended a long confrontation between the administration and the embattled FBI chief. In dismissing him, Clinton cited "serious questions" about Sessions' conduct and leadership. And Attorney General Janet Reno cited "deficiency in judgment" on the part of the director.

Search for airport manager narrowed

Scurry County commissioners court, meeting this morning, approved routine items and announced it was nearing a decision on employment of an airport manager.

C.D. Gray Jr., Precinct 3 commissioner, said some 40 applications have been received and nine persons interviewed. "We have it narrowed down to two or three and are in the process of checking out references."

Gray reported to the court that a job description will be finalized after employment, but a primary duty at Winston Field as county airport manager will be as a mechanic.

The court took no action on bid work for welding at the Scurry County ag annex. Judge Bob Doolittle reported that the bids were not advertised as required by law and that only one unsigned and undated bid was received.

Commissioners Jerry Gannaway, Precinct 4, and Ralph Trevey, Precinct 1, said they would get together on the project and determine what direction needs to be

Former tax collector, Don Adams, dies at 73

Don Adams, a long-time Scurry County resident who served 12 years as county tax collector, died Monday evening in the Shannon Medical Center in San Angelo after a long illness.

Services are pending at Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

Mr. Adams, 73, served as Scurry County Tax Collector-Assessor from January, 1965 through December, 1976. After leaving office he owned and operated Don Adams Maytag Laundry for several years and later operated Don's Used Cars.

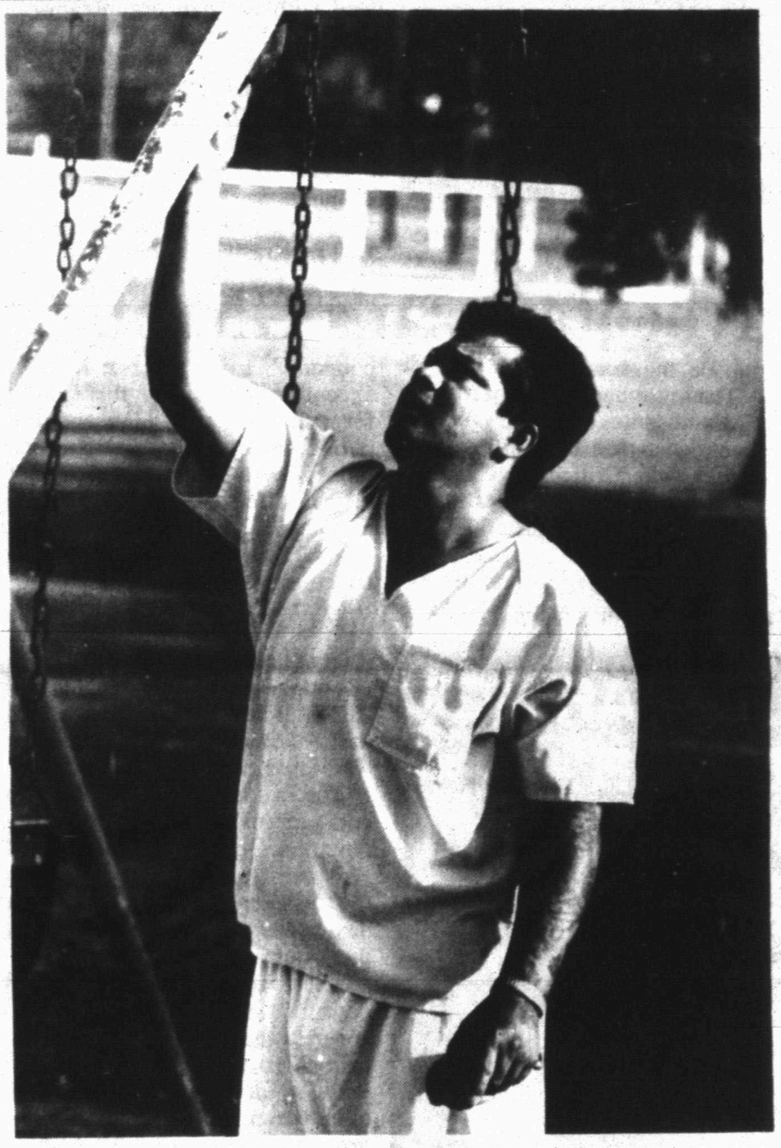

Prior to being elected county tax collector, he worked as a postal employee, in the oilfield, built fences and operated Lake Thomas Marine Supply.

He was a former member of the Snyder Kiwanis Club, serving as president in 1967. He was a member of the Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

Born in Mansfield on Sept. 3, 1919, he came to Snyder with his family in 1920. The family lived in the Union community. They moved to Lamesa in 1924, and he attended school there until the completion of football his senior year, when they returned to Union. He graduated from Snyder

EPA regs to force garbage bill hike

There was good news and bad news at Monday night's city council budget workshop.

First the good news: New, stringent federal regulations for operations of landfills were delayed for six months. Also, the possibility of an alternative liner, a possible savings of 30 percent, was revealed.

The bad news is the bottom line. Environmental Protection Agency regulations, enforced by the Texas Water Commission, will result in higher garbage bills for all customers.

The budget workshop centered solely on sanitation costs and the impact of the new federal regulations. Both residential and commercial refuse customers will likely see their rates double starting with the city's new fiscal year on Oct. 1.

During the current year, the sanitation department operated on a budget of some $617,000. Next year, fueled by massive federal regulations, the sanitation budget could exceed $1.4 million.

Mayor Paul Zeck, who along with City Manager John Gayle attended a day-long meeting with water commission personnel in Abilene last Tuesday, said "There are no easy, black and white answers." Zeck told the council he had reached the conclusion that it is in the best interest of the city to keep its landfill operation "until it becomes financially unbearable."

Zeck recommended that the city continue with its application to receive a Subtitle D landfill permit and modify the application for a Type 4 pit for construction debris.

Other options include contracting garbage collection to a private company, hauling Snyder's trash to an approved landfill, operating a regional landfill to obtain additional income from other cities or doing nothing.

Zeck was quick to point out that doing nothing was not a viable option. Council Dayton Robertson concurred. "I think the city could be fined as much as $5,000 a day."

Zeck added that any of the options would result in a rate increase. Rates quoted to the city by BFI for the next five years would result in rates comparable to those discussed Monday night — about double current charges.

Zeck said Snyder's location, some 100 miles from another approved landfill, makes transportation of Snyder refuse impractical. "No matter what we do, the cost is going to go up," Zeck lamented.

Even though the federal requirements have been delayed until April, Zeck said establishing sanitation rates prior to the adoption of the 1993-94 budget is a "pressing matter."

In a question from Councilman Jack Denman, city staffers said they did not anticipate any bond indebtedness to establish an approved landfill. City Finance Director Jeanne Johnson said the proposed budget calls for borrowing $200,000 from the general fund to be paid back in future years.

Included in the proposed santitation budget is on-going engineering costs of $25,000 per year. pit construction expenses, from five to eight wells to monitor water and gas, rising state inspection costs, construction of scales, an office at the landfill, and additional personnel.

The council instructed staff to develop a sanitation rate schedule based on the number of times a container is picked up. The council agreed to meet at 5:30 p.m. Monday to look at the proposed rates for inclusion in the 1993-94 budget.

Council members present in addition to Zeck, Robertson and Denman were Mike Post, I.E. Martin, Ron Shaw and Vernest Tippens.

Strategic workshop slated

Snyder chamber of commerce board members, meeting Monday, made plans to attend a planning workshop later this month.

The board also voted to sign a resolution opposing the Pushbutton Strike bill, and briefly discussed the July 4th Celebration, Little Dribbler's tournaments and the Main Street Program.

Chamber board members and committee chairpersons were encouraged to attend a strategic planning workshop from 4-7 p.m. July 26 and 27 at the chamber. The workshop will be directed by Dr. Don Stebbins, extension economic development specialist from College Station, and is sponsored by the local county extension office.

In other business, Chamber Manager Ricky Fritz said that the Pushbutton Strike bill, which has already passed in the House, threatens to give union bosses "unprecedented power." He said the Texas Chamber of Commerce and U.S. Chamber of Commerce are asking local chambers to sign resolutions opposing bill.

The resolution claims the bill would "send the message that a prosperous economy and the rights of working men and women are less important than satisfying the demands of Big Labor."

After brief discussion, the board unanimously approved the resolution.

Travis Bunch, chairman of the July 4th Celebration committee, reported that funds for this year's event are currently about $400 short. He said more funds are anticipated, however.

The board noted that attendance at the celebration, including the annual Prayer Breakfast, was down this year. Members cited strong winds, and the fact that the celebration was held on a "working Saturday" — meaning that many people worked Saturday and took the following Monday off as a holiday — as reasons for hindering attendance.

Board members praised the efforts of Randy Perkins, Ricky Daniels and Rick Hall for securing the Girls' Little Dribblers National Tournament in Snyder for the next two years. The board noted that Snyder may be considered to host the boys' national tournament in the future as well.

Fritz reported that Tim Riggan has indicated that Edward D. Jones is interested in co-sponsoring a Main Street Program in Snyder. The program is directed toward beautification, particularly of the downtown areas of a community.

Chamber board members will be discussing the project further in the future.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A frequent flyer is a person who has been to almost as many places as his luggage."

A little food for thought: if you want to come across as "professional" during a meal and job interview, hold your fork properly and don't lean back with a toothpick afterwards.

A University of California business school has included a course in fine dining for prospective graduates planning on entering the corporate world.

The unique course was prompted by one of the school's top grad's failure to land a job despite superior recommendations and an almost perfect grade-point average.

A check on why the grad wasn't chosen for employment centered on table manners exhibited during the interview. The university then hired an etiquette column writer to conduct a short course for students on fine dining during a seven-course dinner costing $250.

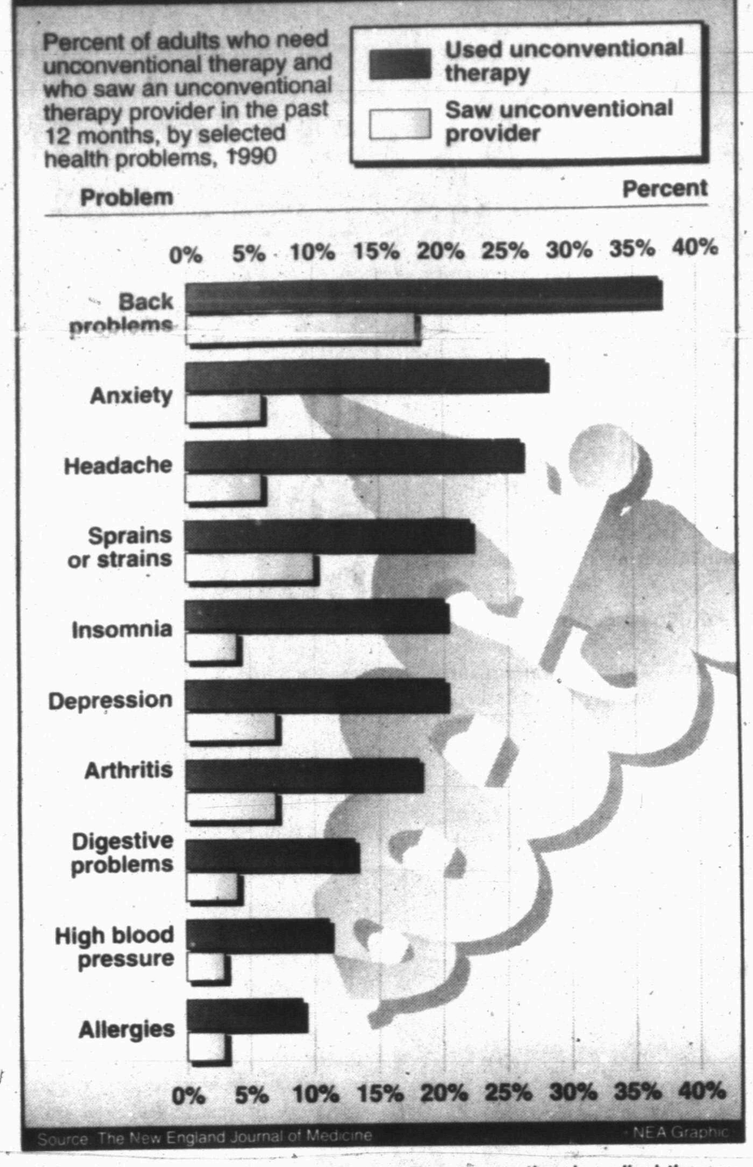

Some of the information includes such taboos as talking with your mouth full, using your napkin as a flag, and slicing rather than breaking bread.

In the dog-eat-dog business world, students are instructed to do their eating with style and grace. That means that even the most clever business tycoon doesn't use his thumb to push the rice onto his fork.

One prospective applicant going after a $75,000 "entry-level" position missed the job because he never put his napkin in his lap. Job candidates also get demerits for food leaping off the plate while cutting something, or using the wrong fork.

We don't know about the need for a toothpick, but we know some folks who would need some cool water splashed in their face should they ever be handed a $250 tab for one dinner.

Russia's new legislation on religion causes controversy

MOSCOW (AP) — Hare Krishnas sell books in the Moscow subway. A placard at a train station advertises a Jehovah's Witnesses' convention. A TV commercial announces the "Festival of Jesus" conducted by a Canadian preacher.

A flood of missionaries has infuriated the Orthodox Church and prompted lawmakers to propose a ban on foreign proselytism. But foreigners and Russians are joining forces against what they call a resurgent "Orthodox lobby."

"Russia is choosing the path of open struggle against pluralism of ideas and beliefs," seven of Russia's major Protestant leaders wrote President Boris Yeltsin in a letter released Monday.

The Russian-American Association for Spiritual Renewal said the law would deny religious liberty for up to 3 million Russian Protestants.

The Supreme Soviet amended Russia's 3-year-old law on religious freedom last week to ban missionary work, publishing and advertising by foreign citizens or religious organizations.

The legislation requires foreign religious groups to become affiliated with Russian organizations or to obtain government accreditation.

Yeltsin must sign before it becomes law. The objecting organizations are pressuring him to send it back to the legislature for softening.

But presidential spokesman Anatoly Krasikov said he saw "no reason" for Yeltsin to oppose it.

Sergei Kovalev of the legislature's human rights committee; lawmaker Gleb Yakunin, an Orthodox clergyman, and other critics say the law is discriminatory and may serve only the interests of the Moscow patriarchy.

"It was adopted under pressure from the Orthodox lobby," said Alexander Firisiuk, executive secretary of an organization that unites Baptists in the former Soviet Union.

Although the legislation would have no immediate effect on Firisiuk's congregation of Russian citizens, he said, "Today, they ban foreign Protestant missionaries, and tomorrow they may ban Protestant churches with the same ease."

The Russian Orthodox Church under Patriarch Alexy II strongly supports the law. It was drafted by a legislative committee on freedom of conscience, headed by Vyacheslav Polosin, an Orthodox priest.

Polosin told reporters Monday that the law corresponded to international norms and will protect Russians from "people with criminal pasts, crooks, fanatics and adventure-seekers" arriving in religious disguises.

Last November, American evangelist Billy Graham — who insists he has not engaged in proselytism — drew 30,000 people to a widely advertised prayer meeting in a Moscow sports arena.

Other American preachers such as Robert Schuller, Jimmy Swaggart and Pat Robertson have appeared on Russian television. The Hare Krishna movement has members across the former Soviet Union.

The Mormon Church began sending missionaries last year. The Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church has conducted regular seminars and lectures. Dozens of smaller foreign churches and sects are also active in Russia.

But all are dwarfed by Russian Orthodoxy, which claims more than 60 million believers and once wielded enormous political power as the nation's official religion until the Bolshevik revolution in 1917.

Evangelical Patriarch Bartholomeo, the visiting Eastern Orthodox Church leader who met Monday with Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, praised the legislation, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

It said Chernomyrdin assured Bartholomeo the government will do everything possible to preserve Orthodox tradition here.

Consumer advocate assails GM offer

DETROIT (AP) — A consumer advocate accused General Motors Corp. of trying to "paper over its exploding pickups" by offering owners $1,000 coupons toward the purchase of a new GM truck.

The coupon offer, announced Monday, settles 36 class-action lawsuits over GM's 1973-87 pickups with twin gas tanks mounted outside the frame.

The settlement does not resolve GM's dispute with the government, which has asked for a recall of the trucks. Critics claim that the tanks are prone to explode in a crash and that more than 400 people have died as a result.

"GM can't paper over its exploding pickups with worthless coupons," said Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety. "GM and the public would be better off if the money were spent on repair, not on an offer to buy more GM products."

Wall Street analyst John Casesa hailed the proposal.

"For a company that since the early '80s was the last to figure out what the customer wanted, I think this suggests they know what the customer wants better than even their domestic competitors," Casesa said.

The settlement is subject to court approval. Hearings are scheduled for October in Houston and Philadelphia. The central claim in the lawsuits was that the gas tank design reduced the resale value of the trucks.

The Center for Auto Safety and consumer watchdog Public Citizen said they will ask for modifications in the settlement, which they say does nothing to get the older trucks off the road. The groups want incentives for owners to repair or scrap the vehicles.

An estimated 5 million to 6 million of the trucks are still on the road.

Attorney for Tilton does not plan appeal

DALLAS (AP) — Televangelist Robert Tilton, the loser in his latest round of legal wranglings, will not appeal a federal judge's rejection of an effort to keep ABC News from rerunning an expose on his ministry, his attorney says.

J.C. Joyce said Monday in Tulsa, Okla. he would file a "very brief, very limited request" that U.S. District Judge Thomas Brett reconsider.

Brett ruled Friday that Tilton did not meet the standards required to keep ABC from rebroadcasting its "PrimeTime Live" episode on Tilton, which first aired in November 1991. A follow-up was shown in July 1992.

The report alleged Tilton deposited contributions and trashed prayer requests, that he falsely claimed to support an orphanage in Haiti and that he bought holy items from Taiwan.

Joyce said he still can seek a permanent injunction against a rebroadcast when a libel lawsuit is tried. Tilton filed the libel lawsuit in November against ABC News Inc., anchor Diane Sawyer, producer Robbie Gordon and Capital CitiesABC Inc.

On another front, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders in Dallas Monday denied Tilton's request for a restraining order against State District Judge Eric Moye, clearing the way for Friday's contempt hearing against him.

Moye scheduled the hearing earlier this month after Tilton refused to turn over some requested church records.

Sanders also dismissed a lawsuit Tilton and his church filed against Moye and Norma Smith of Dallas, whose civil lawsuit contends Tilton's ministry harassed her by soliciting money from her husband, Tommie Smith, after he had died.

Tilton and Word of Faith World Outreach Center Church, based in Dallas, had contended that the plaintiffs' civil and constitutional rights had been violated.

But Joyce downplayed Sanders' ruling as a minor setback.

"What he (Sanders) said was, 'You are premature ... You don't know what Judge Moye will rule.' He's right," said Joyce.

Your Birthday

Wednesday, July 21, 1993

In the year ahead you might do better in joint endeavors than you will in situations where you're operating independently of others. Seek allies if what you're attempting to do is too much for you alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's imperative you manage your money prudently today so that you'll have what you'll need when the weekend rolls around. Extravagance will be penalized. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Being your own person is admirable, but be careful you do not carry this inclination to extremes today. There are times when you should be a team player rather than a lone eagle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you failed to take care of previously might vy for immediate attention again today. Why don't you take care of this thorn in your side once and for all?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be tolerant of your friends today and accept them as they are, faults and all. If you are intolerant, this could cause them to start looking for your shortcomings as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your chances for success are only fair to middling today, not because you lack motivation and ambition, but because the tactics and procedures you'll use might be self-defeating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Have all your facts at your disposal today if you're promoting issues you want others to endorse. If they aren't convinced you know what you're talking about, you won't be believed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It might be necessary today to make a few adjustments and tighten up your budget a bit more than you already have. Prudence is a good preventive measure against extravagance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today if you have to deal with several people who appear to be uncooperative and self-seeking, be honest and ask yourself if they are emulating your example. There's a chance they might be.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Self-induced problems are likely today if you fly by the seat of your pants without having a proper game plan. Take time to figure out your moves before making making any moves.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't impose yourself upon any group or situation where the welcome mat is not out for you. If you assert yourself where you're not wanted, negative results are likely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you do not express yourself carefully today, there is a very strong chance what you say could be misinterpreted and difficult to repair. Think before you speak.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It could be a big mistake today to test your ideas out on someone you know from experience is a negative thinker. He/she might cause you to alter your ideas into something ineffective.

Cold sores caused from allergies?

CHICAGO (AP) — People who suffer from recurrent cold sores may be experiencing food allergies, according to the Academy of General Dentistry.

''About 10 percent of all cold sores could be caused by an allergy to food,'' says Dr. Michael Goldstein, spokesman for the academy.

Goldstein says researchers at the Glasgow Dental Hospital and School in Scotland conducted patch-testing for food allergies on 21 patients with repeated cold sores, and 20 of the patients exhibited allergic reactions.

Eleven reacted to benzoic acid, a common food preservative.

Play bridge by remote control

You are at home, wanting to play some bridge, but you don't have three friends handy. Fear not. If you have a computer and a modem, you can log onto The Sierra Network, usually with a local phone call, and play not only bridge but a host of other games. (For details, call 1-800-SIERRA-1.)

The rate of play is slower than with four people around a table, but you may interact with the other players: discuss system with your partner, alert bids you think partner might not understand, watch partner's card-play when you are the dummy. You even see pictures of the other players — which might not be accurate likenesses.

On today's deal, Richard Aaronson, who works for Sierra, found a great opening lead. East was playing in Dallas, dummy in Venice, Calif., and declarer in Chicago.

From the Blackwood auction, Aaronson knew that all four aces were coming down in the dummy. Deciding to put immediate pressure on declarer, Aaronson led the diamond nine.

With 12 top tricks, South could finesse the diamond queen. But he saw that the spades offered more chances. There might be a 3-3 split, or East could have a singleton 10 or jack, or either opponent could hold J-10 doubleton, or East could have a doubleton honor and South could guess the position. Also there was one other factor. If West had underled the diamond king and held four or more spades, he could be squeezed.

So South put up dummy's diamond ace at trick one and went down in his grand slam.

Jazzed-up ice cream

By The Associated Press

There's nothing like ice cream on a hot summer day — and with just a few ingredients, you can make your own shakes and sundaes. All it takes is some milk, maple syrup and walnuts.

VANILLA-MAPLE MILK SHAKE

1/4 cup milk
1/4 cup maple syrup
1 pint vanilla ice cream, softened
Ground cinnamon or nutmeg, optional

Pour milk and syrup into a blender container; add ice cream and cover. Blend on medium speed about 1 minute or until smooth. Pour into two glasses. Sprinkle with cinnamon or nutmeg, if desired. Serve immediately. Makes 2 servings.

MAPLE-NUT SUNDAE

1 cup walnuts
1 cup maple syrup
1-3rd cup butter or margarine

Toast walnuts by spreading them in a shallow baking pan. Bake in a 400-degree F oven for 6 to 8 minutes, stirring frequently, until golden brown.

Heat syrup and butter in medium saucepan on low heat until butter is melted. Remove from heat. Stir in nuts. Cool until slightly thickened. Serve over vanilla ice cream. Makes 11/2 cups.

Scurry County Genealogical Society News

Scurry County Genealogical Society advises an essential area of research is microfilm census and soundex. When tracking ancestors, if a migration state is known but not a county, soundex coding is the solution.

Soundex was created during the Depression years to index census records for 1880, 1900 and 1910, and is a listing of people from censuses whose surnames sound alike, but have different spellings. A soundex code is needed to determine the correct roll of film. The Soundex Reference Guide takes the guesswork out of coding. To locate the call or shelf placement number of this book in the county library, the card file subject heading is Genealogy.

States with complete census microfilm for 1850 and 1860 are Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee; Louisiana, 1860 only. Georgia, Illinois, Missouri, North and South Carolina, are available in 1850 only. Also, the 1900 Oklahoma census is complete along with a few miscellaneous rolls for 1910 and 1920. There are some other states represented by various rolls.

Texas census is complete for the years 1850 through 1910 and the soundex for 1880 and 1900, with varied rolls in the 1910 and 1920 series. To look for roll numbers, there are three subject headings in the library's card file: census, then the state of interest; microfilm on U.S. census; then the state.

Because microfilm takes little space, and has a long lifespan, it makes a lasting memorial to a loved one. Also, it can be given to honor a speaker, friend, or for a special event. SCGS sends a card of acknowledgement for any of these occasions. Members of the genealogy group are entitled to a Matching Film Fund to help with their purchase, but does not include memorials.

For a limited time, census and soundex film can be bought for $10 per roll.

Scurry County Genealogical Society, with money from garage sales, bake sales, Matching Film Fund and memorials is purchasing a total of 95 rolls. This includes the remaining 65 rolls of 1920 Texas census and 10 rolls of the 1900 Indian Territory series.

These films will supplement the county library holdings and will benefit locally interested individuals as well as out of county researchers.

Snyder Daily News, as a public service, prints a date, time and place of the society's monthly meetings and visitors are welcome. Questions regarding research or membership may be sent to SCGS, P.O. Box 195, Snyder 79549.

"SHE'S A GREAT BABY SITTER. SHE ONLY WATCHES THE TV, THE REFRIGERATOR AND THE CLOCK. SHE NEVER WATCHES ME."

Cowboys impressed with Bates' tenacity

AUSTIN (AP) — You just can't get rid of Bill Bates.

You can bring on younger, faster, muscular players out of the college football factories.

You can tear up his knee and put him in the hospital.

You can tell him his playing days over.

Bates won't listen and he won't quit.

Expect him to make the roster of the world champion Dallas Cowboys for the 11th consecutive season.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson just marvels at his gritty warrior.

"Three weeks ago I would have given you 10-to-1 odds that Bill Bates wouldn't have a chance to make the team," Johnson said. "But he's an amazing person. It really is incredible what he has done.

"Now I'd say with the expanded roster there's no way he won't make the team. He's too valuable on special teams."

The 32-year-old Bates missed the final 11 regular season games, the playoffs and the Cowboys' Super Bowl victory over Buffalo when he tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee last year.

It happened while he was covering a kickoff against the Seattle Seahawks. And it cost him $125,000 in bonus money.

"I didn't think it was that a bad, a sprain or something," Bates said. "Until that injury, I had been fortunate to never miss many games. I was mad. I wasn't going to let them cut on me."

But reason prevailed as Bates, who has battled to make the Cowboys roster every training camp, decided he wasn't going down without a fight.

"I could have put my head in the sand and said it was the end of my football world," Bates said. "I chose to accept it. And I decided to give everything I had to come back."

Bates began workout schedules that would have maimed a lesser athlete. The Cowboys road games were hard for him to watch.

"I'd sit on the couch and say 'OK, they're lacing up their shoes right now and just about to walk down the tunnel,'" Bates said. "I could just visualize what was happening in the lockerroom before the game. It almost drove me crazy watching those games on television."

Bates got to go to the Super Bowl as a spectator.

It made him even more determined to come back.

"All I wanted them to do was give me a chance to play again this year," Bates said. "I've always done well with slim chances. A slim chance is all I need."

Bates' physical improvement has stunned most of the team.

His 40-yard dash time increased and had coaches double-checking their stop watches.

"I ran a 4.58 in the 40 and the best I had ever done was 4.6," Bates said. "For some reason I can run faster. It has amazed even me."

Bates' body fat level has dropped and he can still vertical jump 30 inches.

"I trained hard for nine months to be ready for testing day because I knew that would mean so much," Bates said.

Until training camp Bates wasn't sure how his knee would hold up.

"I got hit and looked around to see if I still had all the pieces," Bates said. "The knee felt great. It felt good to hit and be hit again.

"I'm back. My confidence is way up. I ran all those dashes in the heat and didn't even get tired."

Bates got a Super Bowl ring but he still hasn't played in one. He vows to be around this year if the Cowboys make it again.

"It drives me," Bates said. "It drives me. I'm not bitter because I didn't get to play in the Super Bowl. I earned my ring for all the hard years I put in. I just want to be sure I play in the next one."

Leads Rangers to 5-3 win...

Ryan enjoys successful return

ARLINGTON (AP) — Nolan Ryan was out of action so long, he was wondering whether his hurting hip might ultimately break his heart.

"Tonight was a special night for me because three weeks ago I didn't know if I would pitch again," Ryan said Monday after leading the Texas Rangers to a 5-3 victory over Milwaukee and to within two games of division-leading Chicago.

Ryan's comeback from his longest stay on the disabled list was triumphant. Mixing 94 mph fastballs with sharp curves, he gave up just three hits — all doubles — in 5 2-3 innings for his 321st career victory.

More importantly, he reported no physical problems.

Ryan gave up two earned runs, struck out six and walked one, leaving with a 4-2 lead after throwing 91 pitches, 57 of them strikes.

Ryan, 46, is trying to salvage his record 27th and final major league season after a 72-day layoff. He began throwing again three weeks ago.

Ryan struck out four of the first nine batters he faced, including Darryl Hamilton leading off the game, in his first start since May 7, when he strained a hip muscle in his first start back from arthroscopic knee surgery.

His comeback was further delayed when he sliced his foot on the blade of a water ski. The last of seven stitches was taken out June 13.

"The hip has recovered to a point where I don't even think about it anymore," Ryan said. "I felt good about my hip. I felt good about my conditioning."

And the Rangers felt good about Ryan, and about their second-half chances.

"He did everything we had hoped he could do," manager Kevin Kennedy said. "He got us in the sixth inning and his pitch count was in the low 90s. He had great command.

"I thought getting through the first inning was the big key. He had good bite on his curveball and his fastball improved as he went on.

"This was a great start for him for his good and for our club in the second half."

Ryan (2-2) averaged 94 mph on his fastball, and fastest pitch was 96 mph to Greg Vaughn in the fourth inning. He exited to a standing ovation from the sellout crowd of 40,676 and came out to doff his cap afterwards.

"I was ready. I felt that if I had stayed out there much longer, I'd have gotten into a deficit, and that might have affected my next start (Sunday)," Ryan said. "Really, I had accomplished what I'd hoped to."

Tom Henke, the fifth Texas pitcher, worked the ninth for his 20th save.

Ryan, who several times glared at home plate umpire Jim McKean when he called close pitches balls, was aided by 20 mph winds that kept doubles by Robin Yount and Tom Lampkin in the ballpark in the first and second innings and pushed a would-be homer by Vaughn just foul in the fourth.

A fourth-inning double by Kevin Reimer sparked a two-run rally and gave Milwaukee a brief 2-1 lead, but Gary Redus hit a two-run triple in the bottom of the fourth to put Texas back on top 3-2. Rafael Palmeiro added a RBI chopper to first base in the fifth.

Franco put Texas up 1-0 in the first with a 423-foot homer to center field off Ricky Bones (6-6). He added an RBI single in the seventh that chased Bones, who gave up eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. It was Franco's 11th homer.

Yount, who greeted reliever Mike Schooler with a solo home run, his sixth, in the eighth inning, said nothing Ryan does anymore surprises him.

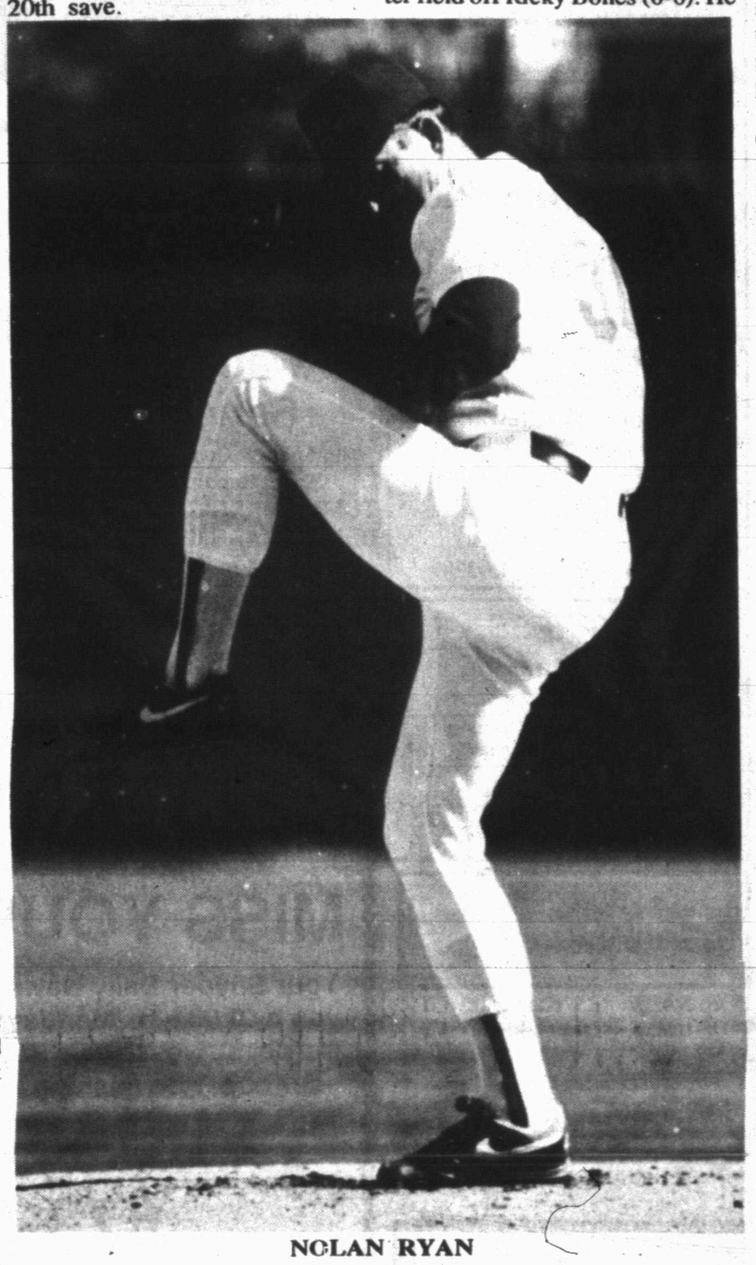

"It was the same guy we've been seeing the last few years," Yount said. "He certainly isn't going backwards. What's amazing is he's still such a power pitcher, not one of those guys who's hung around with the knuckleball."

The Rangers believe a healthy Ryan is the key to their having a shot at their first division title.

"I couldn't ask for a better situation to come back into, the way the team has recovered," Ryan said. "We're in the middle of the pennant race."

Before the game, as the sellout crowd gathered, abuzz about Ryan's return, Franco took a look around and asked "What is this, the first game of the World Series?"

"Wouldn't that be nice?" Ryan wondered.

NFL roundup...

Reeves, Giants begin drills

by The Associated Press

On Dan Reeves' first day of training camp, he let the New York Giants know that two years out of the playoffs is two too many.

The tackling and running drills uncommon for a first day of summer practice indicated to the two-time Super Bowl champs that their new coach was not about to allow a repeat of last season's 6-10 disaster.

Reeves introduced the Giants to something he brought with him from the Denver Broncos, a drill wide receiver Mark Jackson called "Oklahoma." In it, defensive backs must shed a block from a wide receiver and tackle a running back. At full speed, of course.

"Whenever Dan wants to set the tempo, we have that little Oklahoma drill," Jackson said. "It gets everyone's nostrils to open a little bit. The blood flows after that. You can't do it every day, but as a tempo setter it's a great drill."

Reeves also has let everybody know almost every job is up for grabs.

"I think for the first day of practice, I was pleased with the tempo," said Reeves, who led the Broncos to three Super Bowls in 12 seasons before being let go at the end of last season.

Bills

Pro Bowl defensive end Bruce Smith reported to training camp Monday for his 10th season. He's not expecting to be in Buffalo for an 11th. Smith missed the opening of camp in a contract dispute that still hasn't been settled.

Smith is in the last year of a contract that pays him $1.6 million a year. He is seeking $4 million a year.

Bengals

Wide receiver Mark Duper, who starred with the Miami Dolphins for 11 years, has agreed to play for Cincinnati.

According to Tuesday's editions of The Cincinnati Enquirer and The Miami Herald, sources close to the negotiations say Duper has agreed to a one-year contract worth about $1 million.

Steelers

Tight end Adrian Cooper ended his three-day holdout and reported to camp late Monday. Cooper inherited the starting job when Eric Green was suspended for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy.

Seahawks

Seattle offered top draft choice Rick Mirer what a team official called "the best contract in Seahawks' history." And it's still not good enough.

Seahawks executive vice president Mickey Loomis said it was a five-year deal that would give Mirer an opportunity to earn the same kind of money that Drew Bledsoe got as New England's first pick in this year's draft. Bledsoe got a six-year, $14.49 million contract from the Patriots.

49ers

The 49ers are worrying about holdout running back Ricky Watters. Amp Lee, who narrowly lost out to Watters for the starting halfback job last season, is worrying about Amp Lee.

"I'm here and I have to do what I have to do to improve," Lee said. "The other situation with Ricky, the 49ers have to deal with that."

Bears

First-year coach Dave Wannstedt has his staff jumping up and down, running around and yelling encouragement. And the players enjoy it.

"Yeah, all the coaches are fired up. They're coaching on the move. It's fun to watch," starting quarterback Jim Harbaugh said.

Senate hearings for Ginsburg open

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nominate the Lord Almighty to the Supreme Court, the senator sighed, and somebody would try to dig up dirt at confirmation time.

While that habit has been a recurring headache for Sen. Joseph R. Biden and the Judiciary Committee he chairs, there may at last be a relatively smooth court confirmation at hand for Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

AP analysis

As her hearings opened today, there was no significant opposition, no replay of the old arguments about abortion as a litmus test issue. She's on record as a supporter of the constitutional right to abortion.

Not since the rejected Robert H. Bork, who now calls Ginsburg about the best choice conservatives could hope to get from President Clinton, has a nominee gone before the Senate with so clear a position on abortion rights. His was no.

Hers is yes, although on constitutional grounds differing from those the court used in its 1973 Roe v. Wade decision.

For more than a decade, the abortion question was a fixture at confirmation hearings, the answers purposefully vague.

The nominees were chosen by two Republican presidents who were pledged to overturn the abortion rights ruling. But the Senate, Democratic since 1987, favored abortion rights, and wasn't going to confirm justices openly committed to reversing the decision.

That led to a sort of semantic standoff, in which successive nominees avoided answers to the abortion question, Justice Clarence Thomas going so far as to deny that he even had a personal opinion.

President Clinton supports the abortion rights decision, and won't be nominating justices who do not, although he denies — just as Bush denied — that it is a litmus test.

Looking back, Biden said that as abortion became a dominant single issue in court confirmations, Democrats and moderate Republicans played into right-wing hands by letting it happen.

Then things got worse in 1991 with the sexual harassment accusation that forced Biden's panel to reopen hearings on Thomas. That episode led to his latest effort to reform the process. The Judiciary Committee will hold a closed session with Ginsburg on Friday to deal with any investigative or personal matters. Biden said that will be standard from now on, whether or not any questions have been raised.

"I can assure my colleagues that we could have the Lord Almighty be nominated and someone in this country will communicate ... something negative," Biden told the Senate last Thursday.

The Delaware Democrat said anyone who does so should know that it will be made available to every senator, not just to committee members, as the tip against Thomas was at first.

That deals with the sort of problem that erupted at the last confirmation. But there are more basic questions, unanswered and probably unanswerable.

There are, for example, no precedents to settle clearly whether confirmation should be based on fitness and experience alone, or should delve into philosophy and so into politics. It is a question argued both ways, sometimes by the same senators in altered political circumstances.

At the harassment hearing, Thomas said the accusation by a former aide was engineered by his opponents, and added that it would have been OK with him if they'd tried instead to block confirmation because of his views and conservative philosophy.

But his sponsors had insisted earlier that qualifications, not philosophy, should be the basis of confirmation.

'Disappointing' inflation news forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan delivered a stern warning to Congress today that the central bank stood ready to raise interest rates if necessary to squelch any signs of accelerating inflation.

Greenspan acknowledged in testimony prepared for delivery to the House Banking subcommittee on economic growth that price pressures moderated in May and June.

But, he said, worrisome price increases earlier in the year meant "on balance, the news on inflation must be characterized as disappointing."

The central bank chairman's economic assessment was delivered to lawmakers who are counting on the Federal Reserve to keep interest rates low to offset the dampening effects of the tax increases they're about to approve as part of President Clinton's plan to slash the federal budget deficit.

However, Greenspan said the restraint on growth coming from deficit reduction is uncertain and warned that an "ill-timed easing" in short-term interest rates could cause "a flare-up of inflation expectations" — even when the economy appears relatively slack.

That's why the Fed in May shifted the bias of its monetary policy in favor of raising rates, although it has not yet acted on that bias.

Greenspan acknowledged that economic growth early this year was less than expected and reported that the central bank had cut its growth forecast for this year. In February, it projected growth in the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced within U.S. borders, at between 3 percent and 3.25 percent. Now it says GDP will grow between 2.25 percent and 2.75 percent.

Greenspan listed a host of factors slowing growth, including high business and consumer debt levels, defense spending cuts, soft commercial real estate markets and job-cutting restructuring steps by employers.

He said the prospect of deficit reduction under Clinton was bringing down long-term interest rates on the bond market.

Ginsburg describes legal temperament

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Ruth Bader Ginsburg, facing a friendly Senate Judiciary Committee, today outlined a judicial approach that is neither liberal nor conservative but "seeks to get it right."

In testimony prepared for her confirmation hearing, the 60-year-old federal appellate judge said it would be wrong for her to say how she would view specific issues, such as abortion, that are confronted by the high court.

"A judge sworn to decide impartially can offer no forecasts, no hints," she said, adding that "it would display disdain for the entire judicial process."

If confirmed, Ginsburg would be the first justice named by a Democratic president since Lyndon Johnson sat in the White House, and the second woman to ascend to the high court. In her prepared statement, she paid homage to early feminist leaders Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Harriet Tubman.

"In my lifetime, I expect to see three, four and perhaps even more women on the high court bench," she said.

Ginsburg sat quietly at the red felt-covered witness table as the panel's chairman, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, and Republican Orrin Hatch of Utah welcomed her graciously in the opening moments of the hearing. No serious opposition has surfaced to her appointment, although hearings are expected to last the balance of the week.

President Clinton wants the Senate to confirm Ginsburg to replace retired Justice Byron R. White before Congress recesses in early August.

Opening the committee's confirmation hearing, Biden told the nominee that she was appearing "with her place already secured in history."

Biden noted Ginsburg's work on women's rights issues.

U.N. programs on schedule, according to special envoy

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — By 1995, the 27-nation U.N. military coalition will have rooted out gunmen and bandits in Somalia, the U.N. special envoy here vows.

Envoy Jonathan Howe stressed that U.N. forces will be able to withdraw on schedule by May 1995, by which time he believes the country will be peaceful enough to rebuild its economy and restore social and political stability.

"There's already the start of commercial activities we're all pretty excited about," Howe, a retired American admiral, told reporters at the heavily guarded U.N. headquarters compound.

He spoke shortly after two American military police were wounded by sniper fire in Mogadishu. The soldiers, who were not identified, were reported stable while undergoing treatment at the main U.S. field hospital.

Thirty-five peacekeepers have died since June 5 in attacks blamed on gunmen loyal to renegade clan leader Mohamed Farrah Aidid, who controls southern Mogadishu. More than 100 U.N. soldiers have been wounded.

U.N. forces have retaliated with helicopter attacks on several compounds believed used by Aidid's gunmen, resulting in heavy Somali casualties and triggering international criticism about excessive force by U.N. troops.

"It's time the other story was told," Howe said.

He said starvation has largely been eradicated in rural areas since the foreign military intervention began with a U.S.-led operation in December. Schools, shut down by anarchy and famine during two years of civil war, are open again, and harvests are picking up, he said.

Displaced families, among more than 1.2 million refugees who fled the war, have begun returning to rebuild their homes and young militiamen say they are tired of fighting, Howe said.

He expressed confidence U.N. forces soon would end weeks of anarchy in Mogadishu itself.

But for now, U.N. military officials conceded they had no control over southern Mogadishu, about 40 percent of this city of nearly 1 million inhabitants.

In other action, the court approved four line-item budget transfers and one budget amendment. The amendment, requested by Peace Justice Wanda Rushing in the amount of $900, was for the payment of an autopsy in an unexplained death.

Budget transfers included $17,172 for the airport. Of that amount $7,172 was for the installation of a pad and key pump at the airport. The remaining $10,000 was to transfer from salary to part-time salary.

A total of $6,000 was transferred into repairs for Precinct 3 and $3,000 was transferred into supplies and tires for Precinct 4. A total of $805 was transferred into travel for the county treasurer to attend required schools.

The court also reviewed minutes and activity reports for the airport board, board of county development, library board, welfare board, child welfare board and extension service.

Also appointed were election judges and alternates. These include: voting Precinct 5 (Fluvanna), Mrs. Louetta Turner and Bill Jones; Box 6 (Union), Mrs. Paula Lewis and Mrs. Billie Smith; Box 7 (Northwest and West Snyder), Jerry House and Mrs. Sharon Bruns; Box 8 (West Central Snyder) Mrs. Jeanne Bullard and Bob Ivey; Box 9 (Ira), Wanda Falls and Anita Erwin.

tion to the court in 1987, says the entire process has become politicized and thus distorted. Biden insists that the system worked properly when Bork was "defeated by the extreme nature of his views, as fully documented in his public record before any hearing was ever held."

Biden said confirmation hearings aren't supposed to be "a dramatic spectacle" or a trial, but a look at the nominee and the record.

Testimony by court nominees has been standard only since 1955; before that it was sporadic, depending on circumstances, and before 1925, there was none. Since 1981, Supreme Court confirmation hearings have been televised; Bork says that has made hem "drawn-out photo opportunities."

"Nothing Judge Ginsburg says at her hearing will be nearly so important as what she has done the past 30 years," Biden said.

That wouldn't make it much of a TV show, which would be fine with Biden.

Wilson receives full scholarship

DALLAS — Benjamin S. Wilson of Snyder will attend the University of Texas at Dallas this fall as a recipient of the U.T. Dallas Academic Merit Scholarship.

Wilson received one of the university's new, merit-based comprehensive financial aid packages for freshmen students who earned "commended" and "semi-finalist" honors from the National Merit Scholarship Program.

As a "commended" scholar, Wilson will receive $16,000 over the next four years. The money will cover tuition, books and on campus housing.

Wilson will join nearly 400 other freshman students planning to attend U.T Dallas in August. This will be the largest freshman class since the university began offering a full undergraduate program in 1990.

William Joyce, known as "Lord Haw Haw" for his pro-Nazi radio broadcasts from Germany, was hanged in London in 1946. Although American born, Joyce held a British passport.

Late Wife's Parents Are Still In-Laws to Widower

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Could you please answer the following question for me: When your spouse dies, are his parents still your in-laws?

I am involved with a widower I'll call John, who always refers to his late wife's parents as "my in-laws."

I do not consider my late husband's family my in-laws any longer. To be honest with you, I am glad to be rid of them — with the exception of one, whom I consider a friend now, not an in-law.

I feel that John is having trouble letting go of his late wife's memory, as he still calls her parents his in-laws. I haven't any problem with his being friends with them, but after a couple is divorced, they no longer have in-laws, so why not in death?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: When John's wife died, technically, her parents became his former in-laws, but he probably continues to refer to them as his in-laws out of habit and respect to their former relationship.

DEAR ABBY: As I begin my second year of medical school, I need some advice on how to respond to those ignorant people who assume that since I am female, I am studying to be a nurse. Men and women alike are guilty of this stereotypical error.

Please don't get me wrong, I have just as much respect for nurses — they work as hard as some physicians, but women are seldom given the credit they deserve.

I once heard the following statement: "Oh, so you're in medical school? My sister is a nurse, too!"

I cannot tell you how angry this makes me, and I am not alone. Many of my female classmates also feel this way.

Do you have a response that expresses our feelings without offending the speaker?

By the way, my class in medical school is 40 percent female — the highest percentage ever in this school.

MS. FUTURE DOCTOR IN L.A.

DEAR FUTURE DOCTOR: Anyone who is confused about the role of a student in medical school should be told that future physicians are trained in medical schools, and future nurses are trained in nursing schools.

DEAR ABBY: You ought to be ashamed of yourself for advising Mrs. Bogus (whose name was changed from Buguslaski) to stick with "bogus" because it's much easier to spell, pronounce and remember. I am proud of my brothers for not changing our name, which is Szczepanski, to one that might have been easier to spell and remember. I am also proud of our grandchildren who never complained about our name, which is not easy to spell, pronounce or remember.

THERESA SZCZEPANSKI SIENKIEWICZ, JERSEY CITY, N.J.

DEAR THERESA: (Do you mind if I just call you "Theresa"?) You win.

DEAR ABBY: An acquaintance of ours offered to get us some fireworks for our Fourth of July celebration. He dropped them off and we paid for them.

When we opened them, we realized there is no way they could be legal for private use.

Abby, I don't know what to do with them! They are in our garage covered up. How can we get rid of them without getting into trouble? Please hurry your answer.

INNOCENT YET GUILTY IN FLORIDA

DEAR INNOCENT: Since I don't know the size of your town, or what public services it offers (such as Hazardous Waste Removal), the place to call would be your fire department. Explain that you have some combustible materials that need to be disposed of. I'm sure they will be happy to be of assistance.

Attorneys seek direct mail soliciting

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawsuit has been filed by a group of Houston-area attorneys who are seeking to overturn a new state law preventing lawyers from soliciting clients through direct mail.

The lawsuit was filed Monday against Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. and 10 other prosecutors.

The federal court lawsuit listed nine attorneys as plaintiffs who practice criminal defense law in Harris County and advertise through direct mail to potential clients.

The attorneys claim Senate Bill 1227, effective this Sept. 1, will violate their First Amendment right to free speech.

Attorney Kenneth Poland, who represents the plaintiffs, said the prosecutors targeted as defendants would be responsible for charging attorneys with violating the new law.

A first offense of illegal soliciting would be a Class A misdemeanor, the second or subsequent offense a third-degree felony.

Poland said, "Some of the attorneys receive as much as 75 percent of their practice from this type of direct mailing."

The attorneys obtain names and addresses of persons recently arrested for criminal offenses. The names and addresses are public record in the district clerk's office of counties.

The new law amends the barratry section of the Texas Penal Code, making it a crime to send direct mail advertising within 31 days following an arrest or issuance of a summons.

"We're already prohibited from contacting them by phone," Poland said. "But sending them a letter gives them the choice of putting it in the trash or calling the attorney."

The lawsuit says, "None of the communications sent by any of the plaintiffs is in any manner false, deceptive or misleading," and asks the court to prevent prosecutors from enforcing the new law.

"We do have prosecutorial authority, and it is clear that the Legislature can regulate professions," Holmes said. "These lawyers will still be able to advertise. When I started out, it wasn't even acceptable to solicit. You simply hung out your shingle and let your work speak for itself."

Bullet train lobbying continues

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas High-Speed Rail Authority is planning to beef up lobbying efforts in Washington for federal money to help build a $6.8 billion bullet train through Texas.

The agency, which oversees the project, has decided to formulate a plan that focuses not on the project itself, but on the state.

"The authority raised the question not whether the federal government should be spending money on high-speed rail, but instead whether Texas should get its fair share if the federal government is spending money on high-speed rail," said Marc Burns, authority executive director.

Texas TGV, the franchise seeking to build the estimated $6.8 billion system, already has several people lobbying in Washington. The company is seeking to alter federal legislation that would all but preclude Texas from obtaining federal money for the project.

"The reality is we are trying to get this project to the stage where we can attract investors," said Larry Salci, Texas TGV vice chairman. "The federal government can help us defray the costs to get to that stage."

The corporation must secure financial commitments and cash totaling $170 million by Dec. 31 to keep the project alive.

President Clinton has proposed that as much as $1.3 billion in federal matching grants should be distributed during the next five years to states and local governments that are spending money on the development of high-speed rail projects.

But Texas is left out of the plan because of a 1989 law that prohibits spending state tax revenues on high-speed rail construction and operations. The proposed Texas TGV project, which grew out of a franchise agreement, is funded privately. It calls for linking Houston, San Antonio, Austin and the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex with commuter trains travelling over 600 miles of track at 200 mph.

Clinton's plan, which still must overcome several obstacles in Congress, would not provide federal matching funds for projects financed by the private sector.

Texas TGV officials said having the support of the state behind its lobbying efforts would help argue the cause for extending the federal match to private-sector funding.

"It's going to be of very great importance for the State of Texas to take a role and let the people up there know what we want. We do not carry the same amount of influence alone that we do when the state is up there supporting us," said David Rece, Texas TGV president and chief executive officer.

Policemen given incentive to live in area they protect

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — When police Officer James Jones bought a condemned house through a city loan program, he didn't have to gut it before renovating. The crack dealers who lived there before had pretty much seen to that.

"The before picture of the house you wouldn't believe," said the 28-year-old officer, who first saw the place when he raided it as a rookie in 1990.

The dealers had torn holes in the walls to hide drugs and painted "Stop" on a lamppost for a drive-through drug pickup. Cars blasted music into the night.

Now, the officer, his wife and two young children have a new home with smooth, white walls and shiny floors. The tree-lined street is quiet.

Jones was one of nine city officers to sign up in 1990 for a program that gives them low-interest loans to buy and move into houses in poor neighborhoods they have patrolled.

"The whole idea is to promote home ownership and encourage police officers to have a vested interest in the city of Columbia and the neighborhood," said program director Eric Cassell.

Cities around the country have followed Columbia's lead, and the program is in the running for a national award. The Ford Foundation on Friday awarded it $20,000 as one of 25 finalists for its Innovations Awards. If the program makes the top 10, it could get $100,000.

Another officer who signed up, Michael Hendricks, said driving home in a patrol car for meals makes neighbors feel safer and might deter crime. He lives in the neighborhood with his wife and 9-week-old daughter.

"Just his presence makes people feel more secure," said 72-year-old Dorothy Barton, who has lived in the area for 12 years and is two houses away.

Dorothy Murray, 58, said before Hendricks moved in last September her house was broken into several times, despite sturdy locks. "The only way to get in was to smash the windows, and they did that in broad daylight," she said.

But with Hendricks as a neighbor, she hasn't had any problems.

Columbia used federal grants and money saved by refinancing city debt to offer the 4 percent loans with no money down. The homes were bought and renovated for an average of $65,000 to $70,000 each.

At least seven similar programs have been started by other cities, including Sarasota, Fla., and Wichita, Kan., Cassell said.

A Savannah, Ga., program, called Cops on the Block, also offers 4 percent loans, but the officers must make down payments. At least two officers bought houses that had been condemned.

"They'd been vacant for years and they were just in terrible shape. You can imagine — the worst piece of property. They had to be stripped and gutted to the core," said Henry Moore.

State worker copes with fire memories

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jeanne Byrd has dedicated her life to helping children — a task she cherished until the morning of April 19.

A Child Protective Services specialist with the Texas Department of Human Services in Waco, Ms. Byrd spent that morning gathering car seats with which to carry some 17 children away from the Branch Davidian cult compound outside Waco.

But as flames erupted inside the complex, burning it to the ground, Ms. Byrd stood a few miles away watching over the seats that were to remain untouched.

"I had spent the morning gathering up car seats and preparing to receive the remaining children. But of course they never came. That's the part that haunts us," Ms. Byrd told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Three months after the fire, which ended a 51-day standoff between the Davidians and federal agents, Ms. Byrd is still searching for ways to cope.

She says the views of the flaming compound and the imagined screams of the victims haunt her nightly in flashbacks. She has written a poem, "Screams in the Night," in an attempt to come to terms with the incident.

One section reads:

"My goal, my aim: children to save,

Instead, I watched them go to an early grave."

Ms. Byrd says she is angry because federal agents would not heed warnings from her and her supervisor, Joyce Sparks, that cult leader David Koresh and his group were prepared to shoot it out with law officers — warnings that came before the Feb. 28 raid that left four agents and six Davidians dead.

"An ATF agent asked us what would happen if they served a warrant at the compound," she said. "We told the agents that David Koresh and cult members would get their guns and shoot them.

"I guess they thought we were just little ol' lady social workers and didn't take us seriously," she said.

On the day of the raid, Ms. Byrd and Ms. Sparks accompanied the agents to take charge of the religious sect's children, ranging in age from infants to 17- and 18-year-olds.

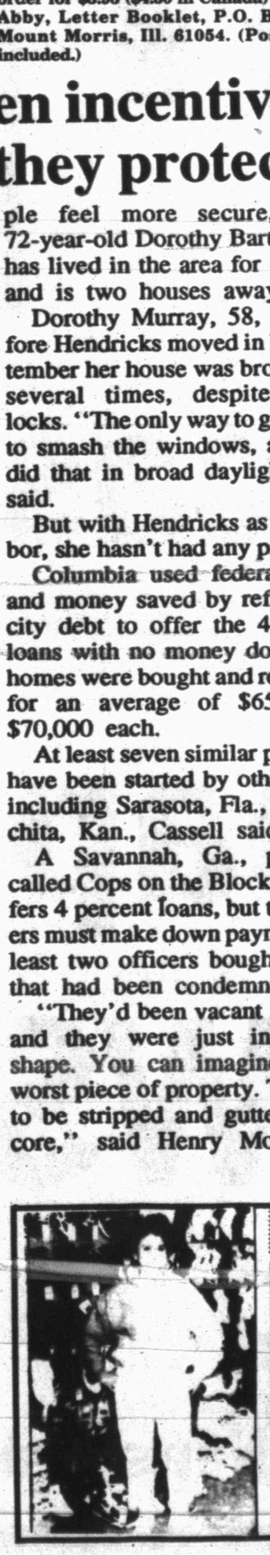

Over the next five days, the cult released 21 children ages 7 months to 12 years old. They were taken to a Methodist children's home and ultimately turned over to family members.

"On the surface, they appeared to be just like any other children," Ms. Byrd said. "But then you realized there was something missing — the spontaneous laughter and play of children."

She said the children calmly talked of bullets coming through the walls of the compound during the assault.

In the year preceding the siege, Ms. Byrd said she had visited the compound many times to check on reports of child abuse. She said the lack of indoor toilets and a conventional water supply would validate the state's assertion that the children were physically neglected.

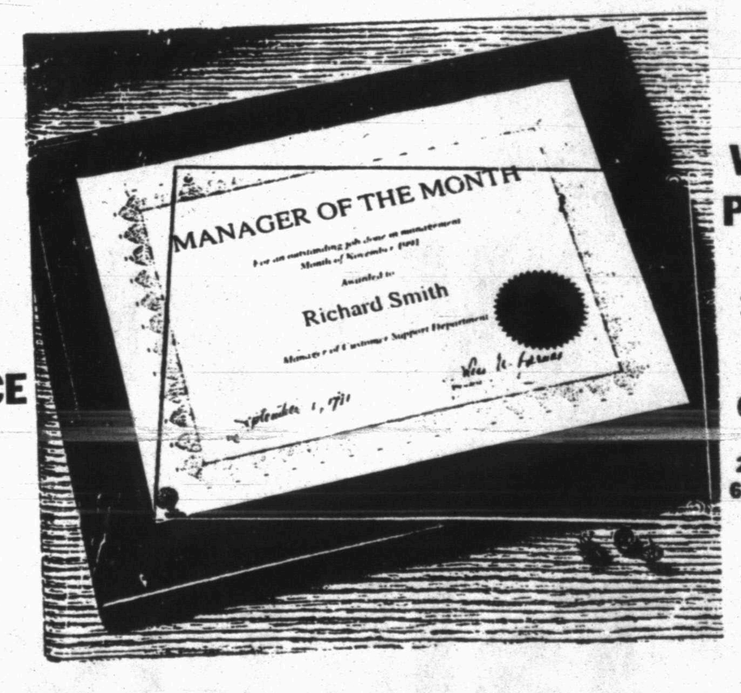

During those visits, Ms. Byrd said she had long talks with Koresh, who she said was adamant that he and his followers would meet their end in gunfire and flames.

Sessions lasting legacy said equal opportunity in the FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although he departed under a cloud, William Sessions presided over a period of fairer treatment of minorities in the FBI, technological advances and improved relations with other police agencies.

The fired director is credited with overhauling the FBI's fingerprint files, pursuing use of DNA to identify suspects and astutely responding to new global realities by reassigning 325 agents from foreign counterintelligence and focusing on violent crime.

State and local law-enforcement officials also gave him high marks for enhancing the FBI's reputation for cooperating on investigations.

"They've taken off their coats and ties and worked hand in hand" with local drug and homicide detectives, said Capt. Michael Andrew, chief of the Baltimore Police Department's drug enforcement section.

Yet, many say Sessions' most significant accomplishment during his five-year tenure was his resolute support for affirmative action in the white male-dominated bureau created by J. Edgar Hoover.

He refused to fight a federal judge's ruling that favored Hispanic agents, settled a civil rights lawsuit brought by black agent Donald Rochon, who was harassed by white agents, and settled a threatened suit by black agents.

"The opportunities for women, blacks, Hispanics and other minorities have been greatly expanded," he told a news conference Monday at the FBI, where he was on visitor status because President Clinton had fired him an hour earlier. "The possibility for service and promotion within the bureau could be limitless."

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a former FBI agent whose House Judiciary subcommittee oversees the bureau, said Sessions' affirmative action work was "a remarkable accomplishment done with considerable difficulty."

Geoffrey Alpert, a criminal justice professor at the University of South Carolina, said, however, that lawsuits prompted many of Sessions' decisions. With his judicial experience, Alpert said, Sessions simply figured, "Why spend the time and money in a losing battle?"

The former federal judge was dogged by allegations that he was a weak administrator who gave his wife, Alice, too much influence on bureau affairs.

Mrs. Sessions outspokenly supported her husband, to the chagrin of those backers who wanted her to stop naming names of longtime FBI officials she believed were plotting against her husband.

"The whole thing is very sad for the FBI," Mrs. Sessions said hours before her husband was fired. "It's the dark side of the FBI."

Sessions also alluded to such a cabal, saying he refused to take the easy way out and resign because he wanted to ensure the bureau was not politicized. An example of politicization, he said, is that the dissatisfaction of 10 employees can be translated into "so-called ethical problems."

Mrs. Sessions said some agents fed misinformation to the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility, which issued a report in January that put her husband's future in doubt.

Florida couple hit by lightning

AMARILLO (AP) — A Florida couple was struck by lightning Monday evening while sightseeing with their children at Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

James Valentine and his wife Jackie Valentine of Clarksville, Fla., were taken to Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon. Valentine was in serious condition and his wife was in satisfactory condition late Monday, a hospital spokesman said.

The lightning struck the Valentines as they stood on an overlook near the park's entrance at about 5 p.m., said park spokesman Mike Wilson.

James Valentine's tennis shoe was blown off and a crater was left where he was standing, Wilson said.

The Valentines' five children were about 50 feet away from their parents when the lightning struck. One son, Nathan, said his hair started to stand on end just before the strike.

"We felt the electricity come through us and we heard people screaming," said daughter Tawnia.

Eyedrops help control glaucoma

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been diagnosed with glaucoma and would like information on the topic. My doctor realizes I'm a very nervous individual and have a tendency to panic. Therefore, he never provides much information.

DEAR READER: Perhaps if your doctor supplied more information, you'd be less anxious. In my experience, withholding facts from apprehensive people merely worsens their apprehension. Like children waiting to get punished, we sometimes anticipate something far worse than the act itself.

At any rate, glaucoma is a common disease of unknown cause, marked by an increase in the pressure of the fluid within the eyeball. There are several types of glaucoma; all are caused by an imbalance between the production and outflow of this fluid.

Glaucoma may cause no symptoms, but as the pressure rises, patients experience headache, blurred vision and halos around lights, which progress to nausea and loss of vision. Untreated glaucoma can lead to total blindness.

This eye disorder is diagnosed by measuring the pressure within the eyeball. Patients with glaucoma should be under the care of ophthalmologists or, in severe cases, eye doctors who specialize in glaucoma.

In most patients with glaucoma, the pressure can be controlled by using eyedrops that promote fluid drainage from within the eye. Drops containing pilocarpine, timolol or betaxolol are the most common. Occasionally, diuretics in pill form may be necessary. Patients who don't respond to medical therapy may have to consider surgery.

Glaucoma is more prevalent in blacks and in persons with diabetes. However, the disease occurs so frequently in the adult population that most experts recommend periodic eye examination for all people, starting in midlife.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I recently saw a specialist because of a tumor in my head diagnosed as an acoustic neuroma. Please discuss this condition.

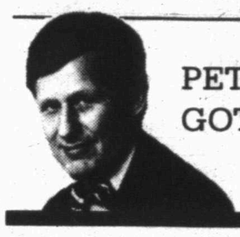

DEAR READER: Acoustic neuromas, tumors that arise from the acoustic nerve near the ear, comprise about 7 percent of all growths within the head. No one knows their cause.

As the tumor enlarges, it leads to hearing loss and tinnitus (ringing in the ears), which can progress to deafness. The diagnosis is made by an MRI scan. Small acoustic neuromas can be removed by microsurgery, which minimizes damage to surrounding structures. Larger growths usually require traditional neurosurgery. After successful surgery, the outlook is favorable.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Solon may have gotten embezzled funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, one of the most influential members in Congress, faces fresh scrutiny in the House Post Office scandal because of court documents that suggest he may have received embezzled funds.

Rostenkowski declined comment Monday on the latest developments in the case, in which former House Postmaster Robert Rota pleaded guilty to conspiracy and embezzlement charges.

As part of federal court papers filed in Rota's plea, Rota confessed he had worked with "Congressman A and Congressman B," who were "knowingly embezzling and converting" post office funds to their own use.

The papers did not identify the lawmakers by name. But they contain dates and amounts of vouchers submitted to the post office for stamp purchases that match vouchers submitted by Rostenkowski and former Rep. Joseph Kolter, D-Pa., as recorded in public records issued by the House.

A source close to the investigation, speaking only on condition of anonymity, confirmed that Rostenkowski was Congressman A and Kolter was Congressman B.

Neither Rostenkowski nor Kolter could be reached for comment, but both previously have denied any wrongdoing in connection with the House Post Office investigation. Kolter is no longer in Congress; Rostenkowski, who is serving his 18th term, is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the House's point man in compromise talks with the Senate on President Clinton's deficit-reduction legislation.

The Post Office investigation has dogged Rostenkowski. Investigators have probed his financial affairs and campaign practices outside the post office.

U.S. Attorney J. Ramsey Johnson made clear that prosecutors achieved a breakthrough with Rota's guilty plea, which was made in return for an agreement that prosecutors would not press additional charges.

He said it "will greatly aid our ability to resolve the allegations of corruption at the House Post Office."

Papers released in the case said Rota helped House members obtain embezzled money from shortly after he became postmaster in 1972 until his retirement under fire 20 years later.

One embezzlement count said Rota "aided and abetted Congressman A in willfully and knowingly embezzling and converting to Congressman A's own use" the post office's funds.

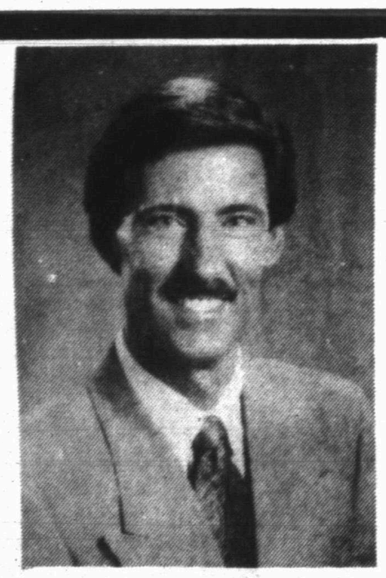

The second embezzlement count used same the language for Congressman B.

Adding figures in the indictment, Rostenkowski would have received $21,300 between May 1985 and April 1991 — about the time the current investigation began. Kolter would have received $9,300 between August 1986 and December 1990.

The court papers said other members of Congress participated in similar schemes with Rota but were not part of Monday's plea.
