Annexation on council agenda

First reading of an ordinance that would annex property adjacent to the proposed Houston Parkway extension is set tonight when the Snyder City Council meets at 6:30 p.m. at city hall.

At last month's regular council meeting, opposition to the Houston street extension surfaced from nearby property owners. A petition in opposition to the street project has been circulating in Snyder and is expected to be presented to the council.

A public meeting has been scheduled July 24 on the proposed street. Tonight's action deals only with annexation of property adjacent to the proposed street.

Houston Street, which currently deadends at 48th Street in far southwest Snyder, would be extended to the Big Spring Highway. The street would be financed from urban system funds administered by the Federal Highway Administration.

The Texas Highway Department would oversee construction and the city's responsibility would be to provide right-of-way. When the right of way was secured, the city decided the street's use could best be controlled if it were inside the city limits.

In a related matter, the council will consider on second reading two ordinances approving voluntry annexation.

A public hearing will be held to consider a zone change request by I. L. Wilson to change Lots 10, 11 and 12 in Block 29 of the Boothland West Addition from commercial to general residential.

Final approval for de-annexation of a 300-foot strip of property adjacent to Western Texas College is expected. The action was requested in April by members of the WTC board of trustees.

The land requested for de-annexation contains approximately 10 acres adjoining the west, south and east sides of the campus. The land was annexed some 13 years ago and was recommended for de-annexation because it is used for ranching purposes and receives no city services.

Also on the agenda is a request from Billy McCormick concerning an ordinance banning the use of LP Gas within the city limits. McCormick made the initial request last month. Fire Chief Terry Don McDowell will also be present to answer questions.

The council also is expected to consider a final plat on the Cedar Creek subdivision Unit II.

The council will also hear a request from the Senior Citizens Center to increase the city's support of the center from $26,000 to $28,500 for the 1984-85 fiscal year.

The board is also expected to authorize the city manager to seek bids on two radar units for use by the police department.

Wall of water may be cause of rail mishap

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A wall of floodwater 18 feet high probably caused a railbed washout that derailed a train and left five people dead and nearly 140 injured in the worst Amtrak accident in 13 years, safety officials say.

The tracks had been inspected the day before the Saturday morning wreck in Williston, according to local railroad officials, but a federal safety spokesman said tremendous pressure built up during overnight flooding and washed out a culvert underlying the track. The Amtrak Montrealer, carrying 278 people, toppled off the weakened tracks, tumbling cars into a ravine.

"The preliminary indication is that the high water mark (during a Friday night storm) was 18 feet ... within four feet of the track," said Ira Furman, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board. "The hydraulic pressure was tremendous."

He said Sunday "it concerns us" that railroad officials had not ordered a special inspection of the track in light of the flash flooding.

However, the board's vice chairman, Patricia Goldman, said at a news conference Sunday in Burlington that she was told by railroad officials that the tracks had been checked the day before the crash and the 2-by-4-foot culvert 22 feet below the tracks had been inspected last month.

This morning, about 48 hours after the accident, the northbound Montrealer picked its way through the wreck site on rebuilt track.

Veep choice...

Mondale keeping quiet

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — A week before the Democratic National Convention starts, Walter F. Mondale is staying out of sight and keeping quiet about his search for a running mate.

The apparent Democratic presidential nominee had no public appearances scheduled today and was continuing private preparations for the convention which begins July 16 in San Francisco.

As the convention draws closer, speculation about the No. 2 spot on the ticket has been intensifying while Mondale and his aides remain reluctant to publicly discuss the selection process.

"The only person who knows what's going on is Mondale," said John Reilly, a Washington attorney and senior Mondale adviser who is overseeing the vice presidential candidate search.

Last week, Mondale wrapped up a series of interviews at his suburban Minneapolis home with seven potential candidates — three women, two black men, a Hispanic man and one white man.

While no further interviews are scheduled, Mondale has left the door open to name someone who has not come to Minnesota for an interview. He also has made clear that a running mate may be announced before the convention.

One of those interviewed for the No. 2 spot, San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, met last week in San Francisco with Mondale's campaign chairman, James Johnson, Reilly said. But, he added, "I wouldn't characterize it as a follow-up" interview.

"We've been asked not to comment" on the Thursday meeting, Ms. Feinstein told the San Francisco Examiner. "Any comment will have to come from the Mondale campaign."

However, she also has publicly maintained that she is not sure if she would accept the position, if it is offered, and that she would not actively pursue it or after the session.

Meanwhile, after Mondale held a strategy session Saturday with senior aides, there were published reports that Ms. Feinstein and two other mayors, Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, who is black, and Henry G. Cisneros of San Antonio, who is Hispanic, are serious contenders to become Mondale's running mate.

Reilly sought to play down the impact of those reports saying, "I disagree with them." He said they are no more serious contenders than the others who have been interviewed.

Mondale's presidential rival, Gary Hart, another possible vice presidential running mate, attended a private fund-raising reception at the home of a supporter in Silver Spring, Md., Sunday evening, still insisting he was in the running for the presidential nomination.

Airport reopened...

Protestors block roads in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Jetliners landed at Beirut's international airport today for the first time since warfare forced its closure five months ago, but the planes carried no passengers and roads leading to the facility were blocked.

The first Boeing 707 belonging to Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national carrier, circled over the city three times before landing at 5:30 a.m. It flew in from Damascus.

Twenty minutes later, a plane coming from Egypt landed at the airport, and the rest of the airline's fleet began to stream home from Cyprus.

The airport was closed Feb. 6 during fighting in which Moslem and Druse militiamen drove the army out of west Beirut and the southern suburbs.

The reopening of the airport and seaport, as well as of crossings between sectors of the divided capital, are key elements in a Syrian-mediated security plan approved by the Lebanese Cabinet, which includes the country's primary militia chiefs.

Middle East Airlines announced a schedule of eight flights to Europe and Middle East destinations beginning today.

But families of people kidnapped by various militias during recent fighting barricaded all roads to the airport with burning tires, and threatened to continue their protests until all captives were released.

The demonstrators also blocked all roads from mostly Moslem west Beirut to the harbor to thwart plans to reopen the port, also closed since Feb.6.

At the mid-city crossing by the national museum, mothers and sisters of the missing people sat shoulder-to-shoulder across the intersection while others set tires afire. Similar barricades were set up at three other crossings, halting traffic between the two sectors of the city for a fourth straight day.

International Red Cross representatives said arrangements were under way to free a few more than 100 kidnap victims. But a committee representing relatives of the missing produced a list of more than 3,000 it said had been abducted.

A senior Druse officiial, Marwan Hamadeh, said many of those kidnapped "may have met a fatal end," the magazine Monday Morning reported.

17 injured as bus veers off Alpine road

BRIG, Switzerland (AP) — A bus carrying 45 American students and their two chaperones lost its brakes on a hairpin curve in the Alps and slid down a steep slope, leaving 17 passengers hospitalized with minor injuries, a tour leader said today.

Joe Kelly, 40, said most of the injured had "bumps and bruises," but several of the high school students and the other adult suffered broken bones in the accident Sunday. Kelly said he and all the students were from Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles.

"Everybody is in good spirits," Kelly said. "We were very, very lucky."

Kelly credited British driver Gordon Smith with preventing a more serious outcome.

"He set that coach down so beautifully, he saved a lot of lives," Kelly said. "He's a former stock-car driver, and it was a miracle."

Kelly said Smith discovered that the brakes on the bus had failed and that his emergency brake was also defective as it approached a hairpin curve on Switzerland's N-9 highway descending into Brig in the Valaisian Alps near the Italian border.

The plunge of several hundred yards down the steep slope tore away the front end of the bus and shattered windows, Kelly said, but the bus remained upright on all four wheels, thus averting more serious injuries.

Kelly, who along with chaperone Rod Flagler, 43, were the only two adults on the tour, said the uninjured students had continued on to Zermatt, base of the famed Matterhorn. They they hoped to continue their tour, he said.

Kelly said Flagler, of Redondo Beach, Calif., suffered a broken hip, "and is about the worst hurt of us all."

The parents of the injured students were informed of the accident, Kelly said. The 30-day tour began June 18, and is to conlude July 23.

Ask Us

Q.--Aren't secret school board meetings illegal?

A.--Yes. Meetings of all public taxing enities are covered under the Texas Open Meeting Law. Notice of planned meetings must be posted, and must be conducted in an open forum. However, executive sessions are allowed to discuss a specific personnel problem, to acquire real estate or to discuss pending litigation. All votes must be taken in an open meeting. We have observed that Snyder boards and councils follow the provisions of the open meetings law.

In Brief

Feldstein gets high marks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martin Feldstein, ending a rocky two years as President Reagan's chief economist, returns to his post at Harvard University with his reputation intact, if not enhanced, say private economists.

Feldstein, who has been at odds with some in the administration over the budget deficit and other economic issues, leaves his job Tuesday as chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Private economists interviewed, some of whom held the position in the past, generally give him high marks for his work.

A few, though, say his outspokenness hurt his effectiveness in an administration thought to prize teamwork.

Herbert Stein, who held the chairmanship of the economics council in 1972-74, says, "He's one of the best qualified people who ever held the office."

Nigeria may be involved

LONDON (AP) — British police reportedly are convinced that the Nigerian government had a hand in the bungled kidnapping of a fugitive politician, but a Nigerian official suggests Umaro Dikko may have staged his own abduction.

The Sunday Times of London reported that Scotland Yard's Anti-Terrorist Squad "is now certain the Nigerian government was involved in the kidnapping," which ended with the discovery of the drugged and unconscious Dikko in a crate at a London airport last Thursday.

Grand jury meeting

The July session of the 132nd District Court grand jury was in session beginning at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

The grand jury originally was to meet Monday morning, but the Scurry County Courthouse was closed in honor of long-time County Attorney George Killam who died Friday. Services were held Monday morning at Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Tax review set

The Scurry County Appraisal Review Board will convene at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the Appraisal District office at 2612 College Ave.

The review board will hear protests from royalty owners and other producers on valuations of oil properties within Scurry County.

Based on preliminary figures, oil and gas values in Scurry County are expected to decline from $2.3 billion to $2.1 billion--changes that will result in a reduced tax base for all but one Scurry County taxing agency.

Only Hermleigh Independent School District will have an increase with values placed at $11.7 million. Other values are Scurry County and Western Texas College, $2.1 billion; Snyder ISD, $1.9 billion; Ira ISD, $185.7 million; City of Snyder, $38.7 million.

College board meets

A short agenda will face trustees of the Scurry County Junior College District when the WTC board meets at 5:45 p.m. Monday in the college administration building.

An executive session to discuss a personnel matter is first on the agenda. All action items appear routine. The board is expected to accept the resignation of one staff member and then consider bids for a mini-computer for use in the Counseling Center.

The board will also discuss the management contract with the Diamond M Foundation, discuss the state funding error for junior college insurance programs and discuss implications of the recent special legislative session as it pertains to community colleges.

Globe trotting secretary cuts back

WASHINGTON (AP) — John R. Block is still the globe-trottingest secretary of agriculture in U.S. history. But he is slowing down a bit.

In three and a half years, Block has made 18 foreign trips to help promote U.S. farm products and to attend official functions.

Four of those have been since the current fiscal year began last Oct. 1, two of them to attend conferences in Rome and Brussels. The others included an 11-day trip to West Germany, the Middle East and North Africa, and last month's journey to Japan.

However a spokesman, John Ochs, said Block does not plan any more trips abroad this year.

Block recently suffered an ulcer attack and has cut back on some of his heavy scheduling. Also, as Block's health permits, he is expected to be busy with domestic travel, at least until after this fall's election.

There has been no apparent rush on the part of Agriculture Department political appointees to cram in some foreign travel before November. However, as is usually the case, some travel probably has been made as one of the perquisites of holding jobs within or close to the power structure.

Last August, Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, who is chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, headed a congressional tour to the South Pacific, including visits to Australia and New Zealand.

Those two countries supply most of the meat imported into the United States, and Australia is a major competitor in the international wheat market.

According to department records, De la Garza's tour group included two people from USDA — Assistant Secretary C. W. McMillan, who oversees the department's marketing and inspection services, and Vivian Culp, an administrative assistant to Block.

One of McMillan's duties is to ride herd on the agencies in the department that handle inspection of imported products, including meat and dairy poducts. McMillan also is a former executive of the National Cattlemen's Association, where he was known in foreign livestock circles.

Another foreign trip took place in late February when a USDA delegation went to Singapore to meet with U.S. agricultural counsellors and attaches stationed in the Far East. About 15 Asian posts were represented at the meeting.

The USDA delegation was headed by Richard A. Smith, administrator of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, and included a dozen or so other employees, many of them agency specialists.

Included also was Vivian Culp, Block's aide.

Ochs, asked about Miss Culp's two foreign trips at taxpayer expense, returned a reporter's call last Friday with a prepared statement explaining that "from time to time during the past three-and-a-half years" Block has been prevented by other duties from going on trips.

In those cases, Ochs said, someone from Block's office has been designated to do the traveling.

"Miss Culp on two occasions was selected," Ochs said. "An additional level of dignity is also added to a mission when a representative from the office of the secretary is included."

The trip to Japan last month to promote agricultural and forest products included three of Block's politically appointed aides in addition to himself. Those were: Assistant Secretary John B. Crowell Jr., who oversees natural resources and environment programs, including the Forest Service; Mike Masterson, a special assistant, who acted as an "advance" man for the trip; and Dave Lane, who was in charge of news media functions.

Ochs said he had been slated to go but had been to Japan previously and stepped aside in favor of Lane.

Reduction Effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gradual reduction in milk output this year is having an effect on the manufacture of butter and other dairy products, says the Agriculture Department.

Butter production in May was about 106 million pounds, down 12 percent from May 1983, the department's Crop Reporting Board said in a monthly review.

Total cheese output, at 437 million pounds, was down 1 percent from a year earlier, and May production of non-fat dry milk was 128 million pounds, down 16 percent.

It was good news for ice cream lovers, however. Production rose 4 percent from May 1983 to 81.8 million gallons, the report said.

Exhibit Begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution next week will begin a month-long exhibit titled, "100 Years of Animal Health."

Agriculture Department officials said the exhibit will be open July 11 to Sept. 11 at the National Museum of American History and is expected to be viewed by an estimated one million visitors.

Elderly going back to cities?

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Americans on the move continue to follow the patterns set by senior citizens — as they did in the 1960s and 1970s — a return to the cities may be approaching.

The elderly, who were in the vanguard of the movement from cities to small towns in recent years, have reversed that trend, a new study of Census Bureau figures shows.

"If older migrants are the pioneers that predict general patterns ... then migration researchers should be cautioned to fasten their seat belts," reports Charles F. Longino of the Center for Social Research in Aging at the University of Miami.

While the general pattern of movement in America had been from small towns to cities since the last century, that trend was reversed during the 1970s, with the elderly leading the way.

Indeed, the pattern of movement back to the countryside began in the late 1960s for the elderly, reports Longino in a paper prepared for the September edition of The Journal of Gerontology.

Between 1965 and 1970, 22 percent of people aged 60 and over who moved across state lines moved from cities to small towns or the countryside, while only 15.2 percent of such movers went from country to city.

That reversed the historical pattern, and Census studies have shown that in subsequent years the migration flow of Americans in general began to follow a similar city-to-country pattern.

That movement led to the widely discussed "rural renaissance" as growth of major cities stagnated and smaller communities expanded.

But between 1975 and 1980, the elderly reversed themselves again, restoring the traditional country to city pattern of migration, according to the study done by Longino and three colleagues.

During that five-year period, 22 percent of the interstate movers over age 60 went from country to city, while only 16 percent went the other way, they reported.

The reversal of trends occurred primarily among people moving from one state to another. For those moving within the same state there was less variation.

Longino said that part of the movement out of cities that began in the 1960s may have stemmed from the social turmoil of that era.

In recent years more retirement communities have been constructed near metropolitan areas, emphasizing their cultural and recreational proximity to cities coupled with a "safe" location. These, he said have drawn more elderly interstate movers to metropolitan locations.

In addition, higher levels of education and income among the elderly may tend to encourage more to locate in metropolitan areas, and demographers have also suggested that some elderly who moved to the countryside may now be returning to the cities in search of medical care and other services.

Longino's research was done in cooperation with Robert F. Wiseman of the University of Kansas, Jeanne C. Biggar of the University of Virginia and Cynthia B. Flynn, who heads a research firm in Seattle.

There was a radio program in the 1940s called QUIZ KIDS. It featured super-smart youngsters who knew all the answers.

What do you suppose happened to them. What are they doing today?

One of the QUIZ KIDS of the Forties was Ruth Duskin Feldman. She, now a journalist, has traced the careers of others featured on that program, has written a book called, "Whatever Happened To The Quiz Kids?"

The book is contributing to a re-evaluation of the I.Q. of youngsters, of how it is measured and what it is worth.

"What is an 'aptertx'?"

The boy who, at age 7, knew the answer to that question: "A small New Zealand bird" was Gerard Darrow. He was on the cover of Life magazine when he was 9.

After years of menial jobs and welfare checks, Darrow died of alcoholism at 47.

But then —

James Watson was a Quiz Kid and he later discovered the key to genetic engineering, received a Nobel Prize for DNA.

"What is an 'arachnida'? A spider.

"How far does a phonograph needle travel when it plays a 10-inch record?"

Answer: "Two-and-a-half inches — sideways."

Surely society was justified in expecting great things of the younsters who knew things like that. But when Mrs. Feldman sought out and relocated 80 former Quiz Kids it became obvious that they had enjoyed neither more success nor less than others less scholarly.

Harve Bennett produced the "Star Trek" movies.

Jack Lucal interprets the Pope's pronouncements.

Vanessa Brown became a movie star. Joel Kupperman became a professor.

But author Feldman deduces that those who succeeded succeeded less as a result of their extraordinary intelligence and more as a result of two other factors: persistence and willingness to work.

"Intelligence can be a trap," says Mrs. Feldman. "It can lead a young person to expect success will come easly. It almost never does."

Two University of Chicago psychology professors, Getzels and Jackson, are convinced that we need to re-assess the I.Q. as a measure of intelligence.

They believe the outstanding characteristic of giftedness is not intelligence, but creativity.

And hear this: "The outstanding characteristic of the creative child is a sense of humor."

'Welfare worker' molests child

DALLAS (AP) — Bail has been set at $50,000 for a man accused of molesting a Dallas child while posing as a welfare worker checking for signs of child abuse.

Mark Anthony Quinn, 25, of Irving was arraigned Sunday on a charge of indecency with a child under 14, a second-degree felony punishable by two to 20 years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

Quinn surrendered to Irving police late Thursday morning and was held in the Irving jail on a misdemeanor charge of impersonating a public servant until Sunday afternoon, when he was transferred to the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas.

Criminal District Court Judge Tom Boardman said Quinn has been serving a 10-year probation for indecency with a child and a 2-year probation for driving while intoxicated.

Police said they have received several reports recently of child molestations in which a man posing as a welfare worker persuaded parents to let him into their homes to undress and examine their children.

Texas law requires parents to let abuse investigators examine their children for cuts, burns and bruises if they have reason to believe the children have been abused.

Child welfare workers Sunday advised parents to ask abuse investigators for identification before letting them examine their children.

"Caseworkers carry plastic-covered photo identification cards that say Department of Human Resources and are signed on the back by the commissioner," said Peggy Nichols a caseworker in Dallas County.

Puffs with pistachios

By Cecily Brownstone
AP Food Editor

Cream puffs, often found in pastry shops, have been baked at home successfully by American cooks for a long time. At first the puffs were filled traditionally — with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. And old-fashioned cooks used to keep on hand a large shaker of confectioners' sugar with which to sprinkle the puffs (and other desserts) just before serving.

For some decades now, the puffs have often been made into a savory rather than a sweet. For this they are made small — no bigger than a mouthful — and filled with a savory combination of perhaps cheese or seafood or both.

Interestingly enough, a savory French variation of the puffs made with Swiss cheese (called Gougere and from Burgundy) has been a late-comer to the United States. Only occasionally do you find recipes for it. Now an inventive American cook has varied the French recipe for Gougere by adding pistachios, which contribute great texture. These Pistachio Puffs are delicious served straight from the oven; they do not need to be filled.

PISTACHIO PUFFS—Delicious to serve with soup or salad for a festive lunch.

PISTACHIO PUFFS

1 cup water
¼-pound stick butter
1 cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 large eggs
1-3rd cup shredded (medium- fine) Swiss cheese
¼ cup finely chopped pistachios

Heat the water and the butter in a 2-quart saucepan over moderate heat until water boils and butter melts. Add the flour and the salt all at once. Remove from heat; stir vigorously until mixture leaves side of pan and begins to form a ball.

Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition; continue to beat until mixture is smooth and glossy. Stir in the cheese and pistachios.

Drop by rounded tablespoonfuls, about 1 inch apart, onto a large greased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 40 to 45 minutes. Serve at once.

Makes 15 puffs.

Note: You can bake the Pistachio Puffs ahead and, appropriately wrapped, store them in the freezer. At serving time, unwrap and place the frozen puffs on a cookie sheet; heat in a fairly hot oven just until thawed and surface is crisp; serve at once.

Collection successful

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The sheet industry shows new spring lines to retailers in November. But Ralph Lauren's second collection for J. P. Stevens was introduced to the trade in January.

The motto for the industry often appears to be "off with the old and on with the new" as many of last season's domestics are discontinued to make room for a new set of designs. But the new Lauren domestics and related products build on themes introduced in his first collection, on sale since late fall.

The industry generally waits to see if a designer collection is going to be a success before investing in it. But Stevens set up a special marketing subsidiary with its own staff and quarters to handle the Lauren collection before the first washcloth was ready for production.

If you get the idea that the Lauren collection breaks new ground in the planning and marketing of home furnishings, you are right. The gamble has paid off, according to Dan Finley, general manager of the Lauren Home Furnishings subsidiary of Stevens. The first collection is in 30 of the nation's top department stores, and selling well at retail, he said.

One of the more unusual aspects of the first Lauren collection was the large number of separate items in it — 2,500 stock-keeping units, or SKU's in industry jargon.

"We expect to have 2,500 SKU's all the time," said Finley. The new collection, however, will not entirely supplant the old. Instead, many of the more wintry items will be out of production, so spring and summer designs being introduced now can be made.

Then as fall succeeds summer, the winter things will come back into production, Finley said.

The home furnishings designed by Lauren encompass everything for the home except furniture. Originally, Lauren was planning to include furniture, but none has been produced and it may never be, he said.

Besides bedding, towels and bath accessories, there are fabrics by the yard, wallpaper, dinnerware, flatware, glasses, kitchenware and a variety of home accessories. Many of the products are made by manufacturers other than Stevens, under license.

The designer has applied the same philosophy to home furnishings that has served him in apparel. He prefers to design classic clothes firmly based on traditional themes.

For example, he says he virtually reinvented the American West with rough outerwear, jeans and country plaids. Other themes he has made use of include small town 19th-century life on the eastern seaboard — or our idea of it — as well as Victorian opulence and English gentility.

The same themes are evident in his five new home furnishings collections. Each one has a full complement of home products — enough to create a special ambience in the home, according to Lauren.

There is "Cottage," a summery interpretation of a vanished 19th-century life with its dainty embroideries, blue and white color scheme and natural fiber cottons and linens.

"Mariner" is a mainly red, white and blue collection based on nautical flag designs. Among original ideas in the collection is the use of sweatshirt material as blankets.

"Safari" is a sort of fantasy of 19th-century safari travel, mainly in khaki and olive drab with some prints that recall English chintz.

"Cricket," is Lauren's homage to the English gentleman. The home furnishings — mainly in blue and white — feature motifs from the sports of cricket, golf, tennis and hunting and riding.

"Jamaica" featured some of Lauren's most expensive products when it was introduced last season. For example, an embroidered linen sheet cost $200 or more, depending on size. He has added to "Jamaica" with a series of brilliant tropical colored sheets and towels.

Lauren says this season's home furnishings designs have echoes in his ready-to-wear. He did both Safari and Cottage collections for women.

The designer said that while he had completed only his second home furnishings collection, he was in home furnishings to stay. He said he had set out to "make things I would want to buy myself."

A brilliant leading man

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

For excitement and glamour on the international bridge circuit, try Deauville, France, in July. For many years this resort has been the site for dramatic, star-studded bridge competition. Today's deal features Canada's long-time stellar pair, Sammy Kehela, North, and Eric Murray, South. The action took place several years ago, and augmenting our cast of characters was Omar Sharif, West.

Eric Murray has long been a champion of direct bidding. When his partner jump-raised hearts, he felt slam was there if North had a spade control. He made a very simple bid: five hearts! When you and your partner have bid three suits, a jump to five of the agreed-upon major suit has one specific meaning. It asks partner to bid six if he can stop the opponents from taking two tricks in the unbid suit. North carried on to six hearts, and it was now time for Omar Sharif to prove he could star away from the world of film.

Sharif knew the meaning of South's five-heart bid, and he was looking at the spade ace. North would not have accepted the slam invitation without a spade control. Maybe it was the guarded king. Without hesitation the two of spades was led. Who can blame South for playing low from dummy? After all, it is hardly automatic to lead away from an ace against a slam contract. When the slam was set, the applause from the audience in the viewing room told Sharif he had found stardom on another stage.

BOOK REVIEW

A TIME FOR JUDAS. By Morley Callaghan. St. Martin's. 247 Pages. $12.95.

Veteran writer Morley Callaghan comes up with an intriguing idea in his novel, "A Time For Judas."

Central to the idea is Judas Iscariot, a man whose name has lived in infamy down through the ages, a man who symbolizes the ultimate betrayal.

But, wonders Callaghan, what if Judas was not like that at all? What if his betrayal of Jesus — called "The Galilean" in this novel — was not an act of his own doing but instead instigated by another for purposes of creating a "story" that would remain in the minds of those who were there at the time as well as for the generations to come?

Callaghan tells his story through Philo of Crete, the scribe for Pontius Pilate in Jerusalem. A man of the world, Philo numbers among his many acquaintances members of the underworld of ancient Jerusalem, high-ranking priests, and the man named Judas.

At Judas' urging, although he is not overly eager to do so, Philo puts down the "true facts" of the betrayal as well as a powerful documentary of what transpired in Jerusalem during the days of the Galilean. Most powerful of all, and most heartbreaking, is his description of the agony of the Crucifixion.

Philo's account is recorded on a scroll but for a variety of reasons is not revealed during his day. Instead, it is sealed in a vase and buried.

"RUFF LIKES EVERBODY, BUT HOT DOG JUST DON'T GIVE A HOOT."

11-year-old gets tickets

DALLAS (AP) — The 11-year-old girl from a Dallas suburb whose letter prompted Michael Jackson to change the controversial policy that allowed purchase of Jackson Victory Tour tickets only in four-ticket, $120 blocks, has received four complimentary tickets to Saturday's concert here.

Ladonna Jones, a sixth grader from nearby Lewisville, received the tickets Sunday from George Harrison, a representative of Pepsi-Cola U.S.A., which is underwriting the Jacksons' 13-city tour.

Harrison also told her she would be given a new outfit to wear to the concert and that a limousine would be provided to take her family to and from the show in Texas Stadium.

"It's really exciting," Ladonna said. "I'm going to be sitting in the first seat of Row 1."

She had been promised two free tickets last week after Michael Jackson mentioned in a press conference that he had received a letter from Ladonna expressing her disappointment at not being able to see him because she didn't have $120.

That had caused her to decide which family member to take with her. Her mother, Marie Martinez, said there were no hard feelings when Ladonna decided to give the second ticket to her 24-year-old aunt, Annette Russell.

But Mrs. Martinez said she and Ladonna's 14-year-old brother, Christopher Porras, were ecstatic Sunday when they learned that they too would be going to the concert.

Bulk is good for diverticulosis

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 73 years old and have a problem with diverticulosis and what I can and cannot eat. One doctor says eat apples and skin completely chewed. Another says don't eat the peel. Both agree I shouldn't eat seeds.

I'd like to know about peels and skins such as those of grapes, raisins, plums, cherries and peaches, and membranes from oranges. Also, what about vegetables such as lettuce, cabbage, corn and peas, which have a fine skin? Is cauliflower raw or cooked OK? Do tomatoes have too much acid if they are skinned and seeded? What about seeded cucumbers, and celery, which can be stringy?

I take Metamucil every two or three days. Is it all right to take this for the rest of my life?

DEAR READER — Most doctors would urge you to avoid seeds or any foods that contain seeds unless the seeds are removed. Otherwise, bulk in your diet is good for you, including the membranes in citrus fruit and the peelings from fruit. The natural fiber in fruits and vegetables is partially digested before it ever gets to your colon, where the little pockets of the colon, diverticula, are located. Solid foods don't escape from the stomach. So the peel of an apple should be pretty well macerated before it leaves the stomach.

The other consideration is whether a food causes gas. Gas-formers increase the pressure inside the colon and can increase problems with diverticulosis. In fact, a spastic colon may be the cause of the symptoms some patients experience, rather than the diverticula. A spastic colon causes less trouble if there is more bulk in the diet.

To help you appreciate the problem better I am sending you The Health Letter 5-6, Diverticulosis. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Yes, you can use Metamucil or some other bulk former every day, and, if needed, more often for life. It is an inert substance that provides gentle bulk and improves the colon's normal rhythm. Such bulk-forming agents are usually helpful for most patients with diverticulosis or with spastic colon problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know how to get rid of cellulite on the back of my thighs. I am a 28-year-old woman and I have had this problem since I was 22. I have been pretty much inactive since high school until a year ago. I was also about 15 pounds overweight. I'm 5 feet 8 and weigh 132 pounds. I jog more than three miles three days a week and other days I ride my bike. I'm in good shape except for this layer of cellulite on my thighs. It just won't go and looks very unattractive. Do the advertisements for melting away cellulite really work?

DEAR READER — They seem to work for the seller's profit. Remember that cellulite is just body fat. It is not unique in any way. Women tend to accumulate fat on the thighs and buttocks while men to accumulate fat in the abdomen ("beer belly"). You can lose that fat by further overall weight reduction. It does seem to be true that body fat leaves the face and desirable places first and leaves the undesirable places around the waist, thighs and buttocks last. But it is still body fat.

In some cases plastic surgery is justified to eliminate the localized fat deposits. But obviously this should not be done until a good effort has been made to reach an ideal body weight. Fewer calories may be your answer.

Out of the Rubble in Beirut Come Memories of Friendship

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of one of the 269 servicemen who died in the terrorist attack on the BLT Headquarters Building in Beirut last October.

During recent months I, along with other mothers and family members who lost a loved one in that terrible bombing, have become increasingly aware of the need to seek each other out for support and comfort.

Most of the victims were U.S. Marines and sailors, but there were others stationed there and they were like a "family," developing close friendships and a deep sense of loyalty to each other. Many had sent home pictures of themselves and their buddies in Beirut, and we want to share these pictures—their last—with their families, but the faces are nameless.

We are calling upon you, Dear Abby, to make our support group known to those families who want to contact us. Everyone handles grief in his own way, so we will understand if some prefer to remain silent. The fortunate few who miraculously survived that attack are also welcome to join our group.

Please help us by printing our address so we can be contacted. Interested parties should write to: The Beirut Connection, 324 Center St., Moorestown, N.J. 08057.

Thank you, Abby, for helping us to find each other.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have an unusual question concerning our children, ages 16 and 17. They both attend high school in this area.

Both children have asked us not to read their yearbooks! They claim that to do so would be an invasion of their privacy. As parents, we believe that yearbooks should be put out for friends and family to enjoy. We've always told our kids never to write anything they may later regret having written.

I have polled adults, and they agree with me. However, the children claim that all their friends feel as they do.

What do you think?

MRS. P. IN DELAWARE

DEAR MRS. P.: I think it's too bad that any child would have something in his yearbook not fit for the eyes of his parents and their friends. But the yearbook belongs to the child, and if he doesn't want to share it with his family, he shouldn't be expected to do so.

DEAR ABBY: I am a social worker on a child abuse hotline. In reading your letters regarding the dangers of toddlers who might strangle on a venetian blind cord or drown in a toilet bowl, I was reminded of two other common hazards that the public needs to be aware of.

The first is couches placed next to windows. We've received numerous referrals of toddlers who had fallen out of windows, sometimes falling several stories onto concrete sidewalks, when the children climbed onto a couch (or chair) placed next to a window and then pushed the screen out.

The second is shaking a small child. An infant's brain does not fill up the skull cavity, so when someone shakes a child vigorously, his brain "bounces" off the walls of the skull. This causes bruising of the brain, swelling, internal bleeding, and more often than one would believe, permanent brain damage and sometimes death.

SAN DIEGO SOCIAL WORKER

DEAR SOCIAL WORKER: Thanks for writing. Only recently has the public been warned that shaking a small child vigorously can cause serious brain damage and even death.

'Extraordinary' rescue efforts are praised

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Passengers and federal officials credited an "extraordinary" rescue effort by hundreds of volunteers with preventing the loss of even more lives after an Amtrak train derailed, killing five people and injuring 137 others.

The 18 hours of digging, lifting, cutting, sweating and waiting was "a textbook example of how it should be done," said Donald Hamlin, who helped direct the efforts that followed the worst Amtrak accident in 13 years.

"It was trial under fire for all of us," said Hamlin, 52, a founder of the Essex Rescue Squad. "We practice disaster drills twice a year. But this is not the sort of thing you think is ever going to happen."

The Montrealer, carrying 278 people, toppled down a 30-foot gully as flood-weakened tracks collapsed under its weight shortly after 7 a.m. Saturday in Williston. The five people who died were in a car that was crushed beneath two others, authorities said.

It was early Sunday before rescue workers could get inside the crushed car and retrieve the last two bodies. A temporary road had to be constructed through swampy ground to the wreckage so that cranes could be brought in to remove the wrecked cars.

Federal safety officials investigated the scene Sunday as the tracks were being cleared of crushed and twisted metal.

The rescue "was extraordinary. It seemed like it was planned," said Bill Gearhart, owner of Adventures Unlimited, a New Jersey organization which had booked 164 passengers on the Montrealer for a weekend train party.

More than 300 firefighters, state troopers, rescue squad members, ambulance crews, National Guardsmen, construction workers and Red Cross volunteers helped out.

"The coordination of this rescue was an extraordinary effort," Patricia A. Goldman, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, told The New York Times.

Hamlin, a civil engineer, was at the scene within 20 minutes of the accident and was recruited by Gov. Richard Snelling and Vermont National Guard Adj. Gen. Donald Edwards to help them run the rescue operation.

The biggest obstacle was getting to the wreckage. Only a long, muddy path led to the train tracks. By midmorning, two dozen construction workers began knocking down trees and hauling in gravel to build a temporary road.

Restaurants supplied food and coffee day and night.

About 100 Vermont National Guardsmen, who fortunately had been assembling Saturday for a two-week training trip, were immediately sent to the site. Forty more were called out.

The most seriously injured were airlifted by helicopter, while drivers of ambulances, school buses and police cars carried the others from the wreck and ushered rescue workers in.

"I don't know how many people lost their lives, but I think it would have been a lot more if it hadn't been for the volunteers," said Montreal real estate saleman William G. White, one of the survivors.

Checks returned after bankruptcy

LULING, Texas (AP) — In April, a billion-dollar Chapter 11 bankruptcy court filing in Florida by Charter Co. hit this small oil town with a resounding crash.

Charter Oil Co., a subsidiary, was the largest buyer of crude oil from the 60-year-old Luling oil patch and contributed millions to the town economy.

When Charter Co., a Jacksonville, Fla., oil and insurance concern walked into a federal bankruptcy court on April 20, oil producers were left in the cold and hundreds of landowners who receive a royalty on oil produced on their land were left holding checks they could not cash.

Luling is a town in Caldwell County about 55 miles southeast of Austin.

Luling oilman Ben Rollert, who operates about 175 wells in this and adjacent Guadalupe County, estimates that losses incurred by Luling residents as a result of the Charter bankruptcy action will run into the millions of dollars.

Rollert fared much better than most of the others, however.

Three days before the company filed for bankruptcy protection, Rollert caught word "that Charter was quaking around," he said.

When his lawyer called to say he had heard the same thing from another source, Rollert said, he went to the post office, picked up $300,000 in overdue checks that had just arrived and flew to Los Angeles, where he cashed the checks directly at the bank on which Charter's checks were drawn.

Chris Walker, president of the First National Bank of Luling, hurriedly gathered checks that had been mailed to several other of his customers and got on a flight behind Rollert. Walker also succeeded in getting money for the checks he had.

Walker said Charter owes customers of his bank about $750,000. Rollert, who has joined other oil producers in a lawsuit against the conglomerate, says he and his business partners are still owed an estimated half-million dollars.

When the company walked into bankruptcy court in Florida to file for reorganization, all assets and bank accounts were frozen. Some producers were able to cash checks for the oil gathered by Charter in March, but for many more, checks were returned to their banks unpaid, Rollert said.

Charter, plagued by consistent reports of a growing cash bind in its oil operations, filed for protection for 43 of 183 subsidiaries under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code. Under Chapter 11, a company is protected from creditor lawsuits while attempting to work out a plan to pay debts.

Although Charter has cut back operations in Luling, the Luling facility is still manned at a reduced level from the 60 employees the company had on the payroll before entering bankruptcy court.

For the most part, however, Luling appears to have weathered the Charter bankruptcy, despite the economic turmoil it generated in this community 55 miles southeast of Austin.

Luling's acting city manager, Harold Watts, said oil still is being pumped, and other companies have stepped in to fill the void left by Charter.

The effect on most firms and individuals has been to put them into a temporary "cash flow squeeze," Watts said.

"Of course, any loss of income hurts. But for most, it amounts to one-twelfth of their yearly income. Most of them don't like it, but they can stand it," Walker said.

William Meacham, president of Citizens State Bank of Luling, said there has not been a surge in loan requests from customers in a cash bind. justed to the income loss, he said.

"I don't know of anybody who was totally wiped out," Meacham said.

Jerry Saur, owner of a well service company in Luling, agreed.

"My assumption is that a lot of our established operators — those that have been in business for a while — the money they lost is what they were going to use to do something extra," Saur said.

"It's the money they were going to use to do the remedial work necessary to increase production or to maintain production or to drill new wells," he said.

Small royalty owners are hardest hit by the Charter failure, Saur said.

LAFF-A-DAY

"I'm never invited to the company picnic."

Mr. Ed fans get together

DALLAS (AP) — The Mr. Ed Fan Club, honoring the memory of television's famous talking horse, drew about 400 people to a Dallas bowling alley Saturday night.

Tiny Tim was there, along with several rock n' roll singing groups, who were invited for the occasion. His repertoire was greeted by a succession of ovations to a repertoire of songs, and he was rewarded with a tiny statuette of a horse's rear given to several people in categories such as Best and Most Hats Worn Throughout the Century and Best TV Show of All Eternity.

Tiny Tim got his for Greatest Performance of the 20th Century, for his just-completed performance.

The only evidence onstage of the equine star was in the horseshoe-shaped memorial wreath standing near the performers' feet. Mr. Ed died 10 years ago.

Among Tiny Tim's songs were his version of "The Mr. Ed Theme Song," which started out:

"A horse is a horse, of course, of course,

"And no one can talk to a horse, of course,

"That is of course, unless the horse..."

The idea to invite Tiny Tim and a number of rock n' roll bands to an occasion dubbed "Edstock" ("15 years after Woodstock!") and to charge the public $14 to see them belongs to Jim Burnett, a young Dallas courier who had never seen "Mr. Ed" when he formed the Mr. Ed Fan Club 10 years ago "because I thought the world needed it."

Alan Young, who played straight man Wilbur Post to the loquacious Mr. Ed on the TV show, also was on hand. He circulated through the crowd, signing autographs and telling people how they got Mr. Ed to move his lips.

"The trainer put this soft substance under his lower lip, and Mr. Ed tried to get rid of it, which made his lips move. It's like when you get peanut butter under your lip," Young said.

Haven found for pet wolf

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It's one thing to buy a young wolf as a pet, only to discover it's against the law. It's another thing to get rid of it.

For the past nine months, a young female wolf by the name of Sung has been kept in the back yard of John Buckley, a teacher at Austin Community College and an active member of Wildlife Rescue, Inc., an organization whose members shelter orphaned and injured animals.

It's also illegal for Buckley to have the wolf, but it has taken months to find anyone that could or would take Sung.

"We called zoos all over the country, animal sanctuaries, wildlife exhibitors, everyone we could think of, but no one wanted to take this wolf off our hands. No one needed a wolf," Buckley said.

Sung, an Arctic wolf, one of 23 subspecies of gray wolves, was born in captivity 14 months ago, Buckley said.

"She was sold to a private individual, and that's against the law, although they didn't realize it when they took her," Buckley told the Austin American-Statesman.

Capt. Stanley Brooks of the state Department of Parks and Wildlife said the state issues permits to allow licensed circuses, zoos, menageries, and exhibits of a scientific or educational nature to possess wolves, "but individuals are not allowed to possess them."

To do so is a felony punishable by six months to five years in prison, Brooks said.

"That law has been on the books since the 1800s," Brooks said, "and some people think it became law because cattle owners were gathering up wolves and turning them loose on sheep owners' land during the big range wars."

The owners of Sung's parents have permits that allow them to keep wolves for exhibiting, Buckley said, but they are forbidden by law to sell or give the offspring to individuals.

Buckley said Sung's first owners, whom he would not identify, acquired the wolf pup when they lived in a rural area, then moved into Austin into an apartment.

"She wasn't even housebroken, and they realized they had more than they could handle," he said.

They contacted the Natural Science Center, which turned to members of Wildlife Rescue for help with the wolf.

Fire destroys wing of cathedral

YORK, England (AP) — A fierce fire today gutted a 760-year-old wing of York Minster, the largest medieval cathedral in Britain, causing an estimated $1.3 million mage. Police said lightning probably started the blaze.

The fire collapsed the roof of the south transept, which dates to about 1220, and covered one of Europe's greatest collections of medieval stained glass with heavy black soot — but apparently did not destroy it.

Firefighters saved the 200-foot-high central tower of the cathedral, and Church of England authorities said in a bulletin posted outside the damaged cathedral that they hoped to reopen the building by the end of the week "if it is safe to do so."

Charles Brown, the cathedral's architectural consultant, estimated the cost of damage to the cathedral at 1 million pounds, about $1.3 million.

Police said the fire started above the south door and spread through the wooden rafters of the stone-walled building, formally known as the Cathedral of St. Peter. Built between 1220 and 1470, it is second only to Canterbury in the Anglican hierarchy.

"At the height of the blaze, huge flames leaped from the roof of the transept, said British Broadcasting Corp. reporter Rosemary Hartill, who witnessed the fire.

Lubbockites win playoff crowded tourney here

Steve Long and Bob Hullander of Lubbock shot a 126 to take top honors in the annual Earl Fish Memorial Partnership, held here last weekend at Snyder Country Club.

They won the two-day tournament by a single stroke over defending champions Larry Anderson and Don Copeland.

The tournament format was a scramble on Saturday and low-ball on Sunday.

Both Long and Hullander and Anderson and Copeland shot 60s on the first day.

The well-matched tournament featured playoffs in every flight except the Championship, including the First Flight, where Mark Duke and Todd Line eased out Hank Jordan and Scott Hamilton in the initial hole of sudden victory.

Both teams had turned in 134s; Duke-Line a 63-71 and Jordan-Hamilton a 65-69.

Jim Patrick and Fred Maxwell won third place in the Championship Flight with a 131. Mike Patterson, Bryan, and Van Francis, Matador, shot a 135 for third place in the First Flight.

The tournament was played under favorable conditions. Club pro Price Courter said, "Everything went great. We had some strong competition in every flight. The weather was ideal and the tournament went fine."

Next up for the club will be the Raggedy Ann and Andy Tournament, Aug. 17-19.

Wichita Falls' Deryl Brock and Jim Tate captured the $200 first place prize in the Second Flight, shooting a 136. Kip Wadleigh, Snyder, and Jeff Green, Fort Worth, grabbed second with a 141. Third place ended in a three-way tie, which Johnny Powell and Joe LaRoux won on the third playoff hole. They and the teams of Rob Hall and Duane Richard and Ernie Armstrong and Rod Bailey had each carded a 142.

Third Flight winners were Donnie Newman and Glen Patterson. Their first-day score of 72 trailed several teams, but they shot a fine 67 the second day to win by six strokes with a 139. Second were Lou Brice and Don Wolf with a 145.

Bear Hardin and Don Sealy took third place after defeating David Sisson and Mark Hatfield on the second hole of a playoff. Both teams had shot 150s.

Dalton Walton and Paul Thompson were Fourth Flight champions with a 157, edging out Steve Hass and Don Sellars by a single stroke. Third ended with Pat Gilstrap and Herb Childs eliminating Tim McWilliams and Bill Stucky on the first playoff hole after both teams had tied at 159.

Don Dollins and R.O. Gray shot a 160 to win the Fifth Flight by five strokes over Dickens' Bush Jordan and Bob Ross. A tie for third left L.A. and Powell Berry defeating Rickey Billingsley and Wesley Key on the third playoff hole. Both had shot 167s.

Arizona was prepared; challenge Stars in finals

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) - All week long, Arizona Wranglers Coach George Allen carried a palm-sized, white-and-green pin in his right pocket which simply said, "Luck: When preparation meets opportunity."

Saturday night, Allen said his club "was as prepared as ever and took advantage of every opportunity" to defeat the Los Angeles Express 35-23 here and gain a berth in the United States Football League title game July 15 in Tampa, Fla.

As winners of the Western Conference championship, Arizona will meet the Eastern Conference champ Philadelphia Stars, who beat the Birmingham Stallions 20-10 Sunday.

"We don't care who we play in Tampa. We're just happy to get there," said Allen, whose Wranglers are 0-3 against the Stars.

The game's starting time was switched from 12:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. MST to avoid the midafternoon heat. However, the temperature was 100 degrees at kickoff with 29 percent humidity.

Wranglers running back Tim Spencer, who scored three touchdowns, said "our conditioning really came through in the fourth quarter. We were definitely pumped up for this one."

Arizona scored 21 fourth-quarter points, taking the lead for good on Kevin Long's 1-yard touchdown run 40 seconds into the final period to cap a 10-play, 80-yard drive.

Spencer, who rushed for 94 yards on 18 carries, caught a 5-yard touchdown pass from Greg Landry with 9:14 remaining for a 28-17 lead. Spencer had scored twice in the first half on short runs.

Mack Boatner's 5-yard touchdown run sealed Arizona's win with 2:55 left.

Express quarterback Steve Young, harried all night by a heavy Wranglers pass rush, fired a 20-yard scoring strike to David Hersey with 1:20 to go.

Young, the heralded rookie with the $40 million contract, completed just seven of 23 passes for 126 yards with two interceptions.

McEnroe stops Connors easily

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Two weeks of high quality tennis, idyllic summer weather and record crowds - the 1984 Wimbledon championships had just about everything.

"We have had all the ingredients of a vintage Wimbledon," said Buzzer Hadingham, chairman of the All England club, as the championships drew to a close.

On the second Monday of the tournament, 17 former champions took part in a Center Court parade to mark the women's centenary.

Many stayed on for the rest of the fortnight and saw Martina Navratilova beat Chris Evert Lloyd in a high-class women's final on Saurday to capture her fifth singles crown, and third in a row.

For the first time ever, all the No. 1 seeds won the five major competitions.

John McEnroe took just 80 minutes Sunday to demolish fellow American Jimmy Connors 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 in one of the most one-sided men's singles finals in many years. Later, Britain's John Lloyd and Australia's Wendy Turnbull retained their mixed doubles crown.

On Saturday, McEnroe and Peter Fleming won their fourth men's doubles title, while Navratilova and Pam Shriver took the women's doubles.

The best display of the tournament was reserved for the very last singles match on Center Court. McEnroe, his game peaking for the ultimate test, destroyed Connors in Sunday's men's final with an awesome display of shot-making that gave the 25-year-old New Yorker his third Wimbledon crown.

He was the first American to retain the title since Don Budge in 1938 and brought the following tribute from Britain's Fred Perry, himself a former three-time champion: "I consider him to be the complete tennis player. He has shots no other player has and is very fast around the court."

McEnroe said he played one of the greatest matches of his career and he hoped people would remember him for his tennis ability, rather than his notorious on-court antics.

At his post-match news conference, he said he hoped for four or five more shots at the title.

Navratilova, who has dominated the women's circuit for over two years, was named by the Women's Tennis Association as player of the year for 1983-84 and she and Shriver won the best doubles pair.

The award for the most improved player of the year went to Kathy Jordan of the United States, who reached the semifinals here and has shot back up to No. 5 in the world after two years out of the Top 10.

Manuela Maleeva, of Bulgaria, 17, who beat Chris Evert Lloyd in the final of the Italian Open, was voted the best newcomer of the year.

Hal Chase, in 1916, won the National League batting title with .339 and became the only player who batted right-handed and threw left-handed to do that.

American League...

Chi-Sox parallel 1983

by The Associated Press

Chicago White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa gets angry when asked to compare 1984 with 1983, but he certainly wouldn't mind if it turned out the same way.

Anyway, the comparisons seem to be in evidence and even LaRussa, a licensed attorney, would be hard-pressed to prove otherwise.

Exhibit A: After 84 games last year, the White Sox were 44-40, 1½ games out in the American League West and starting a 58-24 tear that saw them romp to the division flag by a record 20-game margin.

Exhibit B: After 84 games this season, Chicago is on top with a 44-40 record, one game ahead of Minnesota and California. And the White Sox are hot. Sunday's 9-8 victory over the Cleveland Indians gave them a seven-game winning streak, longest of the season.

Any objections, counselor?

"Anybody who talks about last year gets fined. I'm posting the sign. This is 1984," LaRussa said. "We're not setting any schedules for ourselves, not when we play 162 games. We'd prefer to get off to a fast start every season but it hasn't worked out that way."

In other AL games, Texas outlasted Detroit 9-7, Seattle stopped Toronto 7-1, Minnesota edged New York 4-3 in 10 innings, California blanked Boston 4-0 after dropping the double-header opener 3-2 in 10 innings, Oakland downed Milwaukee 4-1 and Kansas City trimmed Baltimore 6-1.

Despite two-run homers by Vance Law and Rudy Law, the Chicago White Sox trailed Cleveland 6-5 in the bottom of the eighth inning. But pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston tied the game with a leadoff home run off Steve Farr and Harold Baines slammed a three-trun blast off Mike Jeffcoat following singles by Julio Cruz and Scott Fletcher. Andre Thornton hit a pair of solo shots and Chris Bando also homered for Cleveland.

Rangers 9, Tigers 7

Texas built a seven-run lead and survived costly errors by second baseman Wayne Tolleson and shortstop Curt Wilkerson as Bobby Jones, Donnie Scott and Buddy Bell drove in two runs apiece. Winner Frank Tanana went six innings, giving up six runs on six hits, but was hurt by four unearned runs in the sixth capped by Howard Johnson's three-run homer. Loser Doug Bair, making his first start after 24 relief appearances, was knocked out in the third when Texas scored five times for a 7-0 bulge.

Mariners 7, Blue Jays 1

Jim Beattie, pitching with just two days' rest, tamed Toronto on three hits in a six-inning stint and Ken Phelps and Barry Bonnell each drove in two runs. Beattie was raked for seven hits and seven runs in 1 1-3 innings Thursday night and also failed to last two innings in an early-season start against the Blue Jays.

Mets sweep Cincinnati

by The Associated Press

The National League prepared for its annual midseason break with the annual feelings of exhilaration, optimism and escape.

Definitely falling into the first category were the New York Mets. The NL East leaders completed a five-game sweep of the Cincinnati Reds Sunday with a 7-3 decision as Danny Heep and Darryl Strawberry each drove in a pair of runs.

"We're on a high now," said Mets center fielder Mookie Wilson, after doubling, tripling, scoring two runs and driving in another. "Any higher and we'd be dangerous."

The Mets, who have won nine of 10, have their best halfway record, 47-34, since 1972. The five-game sweep was their first since 1970. They have never been in first place at the All-Star break, not even in their pennant years of 1969 and 1973.

Bruce Berenyi, acquired from the Reds on June 15, and Jesse Orosco combined on a six-hitter. Berenyi, 6-9, gave up three unearned runs, struck out 10 and walked four in 7 2-3 innings. He said he showed the Reds a new Bruce Berenyi.

Dave Parker hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning to break up Berenyi's shutout attempt.

Elsewhere in the NL, Montreal defeated Houston 8-5, Chicago beat San Francisco 6-3, Philadelphia blanked Atlanta 7-0, St. Louis took an 8-6 12-inning decision from Los Angeles, and Pittsburgh edged Philadelphia 4-3.

Executions accelerate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record 1,202 inmates awaited execution in the United States at the end of 1983, and recent statistics show their chances of postponing death are rapidly dwindling.

The Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Sunday that the death row population swelled by 13 percent last year, as 252 people were sentenced to death and 113 were removed from death row.

The 113 included five who were executed, the largest number since executions resumed in 1977.
