Bush, Dukakis ready for real race

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

LOS ANGELES — Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis today celebrated victorious conclusions to the long primary season, with Dukakis declaring, "The marathon is over and now the race to the finish line begins." Jesse Jackson renewed his claim on the Democrats' No. 2 spot but Dukakis said no one "is due an offer."

Both Bush and Dukakis, assured of their parties' presidential nominations, pledged a tough but clean election fight offering voters a clear choice.

"I feel terrific. Here I am as the Democratic nominee," Dukakis exulted in an interview broadcast today on CBS-TV.

Jackson, his last remaining opponent, promised in interviews broadcast today that he would continue the nomination fight all the way to the convention in Atlanta. But Jackson, implicitly conceding the fight was really over, said repeatedly he had earned a Dukakis offer of the vice presidential spot.

"I've earned an option to accept it or turn it down," he said on CBS in an interview taped earlier. On ABC-TV he said, "Consideration does mean an offer; it does not mean just in passing. We have earned consideration." He did not say whether he would accept such an offer.

Dukakis, making no promises, said on ABC, "I don't think anyone is due an offer." He added, "There are a great many people that are going to be considered and he'll be one of them and I'm not going to rule anybody in or out at this point.'

In Washington today, former candidate Paul Simon said he would support Dukakis for president, and he urged his 150 or so remaining delegates to do the same.

Sen. Simon, D-Ill., who had put his fading campaign on hold two months ago, said at a news conference, "The primaries and caucuses are now history. The verdict is in. I will vote for Michael Dukakis at the convention and will do everything I can to advance his candidacy after the convention."

Dukakis was also picking up formal support today from former rivals Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Bruce Babbitt of Arizona.

"The race to the finish line begins," proclaimed a jubilant Dukakis after returns from a four-state primary sweep guaranteed him a delegate majority. He won races in California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico.

"Now we'll be going into the major-league ballgame and I am ready on the issues," declared Bush, who locked up the GOP nomination more than a month ago and cruised to uncontested wins in the states voting Tuesday.

Dukakis' season-ending sweep gave the Massachusetts governor victories in 30 states. The marathon primary contest began with seven contenders, but over the last two months came down to a head-to-head battle between Dukakis and Jackson.

The magic number for a convention majority was 2,081 and Dukakis easily surpassed that with his landslide finale. His delegate total after Tuesday's sweep stood at 2,251, according to the latest Associated Press count.

City Council still not ready to answer telephone issue

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

This is one line that's on hold and will probably stay that way until Midland City Council is ready to answer.

Certainly City Manager Fred Poe's not prepared to do so. "We're just trying to compare apples to apples," said Poe in assessing what's become a ripe issue between Southwestern Bell Telephone and Universal Communication Systems.

The two companies — which in recent weeks have expressed interest in selling the city a replacement phone system — are now in a deadlock that only the council can settle.

UCS already has indicated it's not thrilled about the new ground rules that were set — in particular, the question of price.

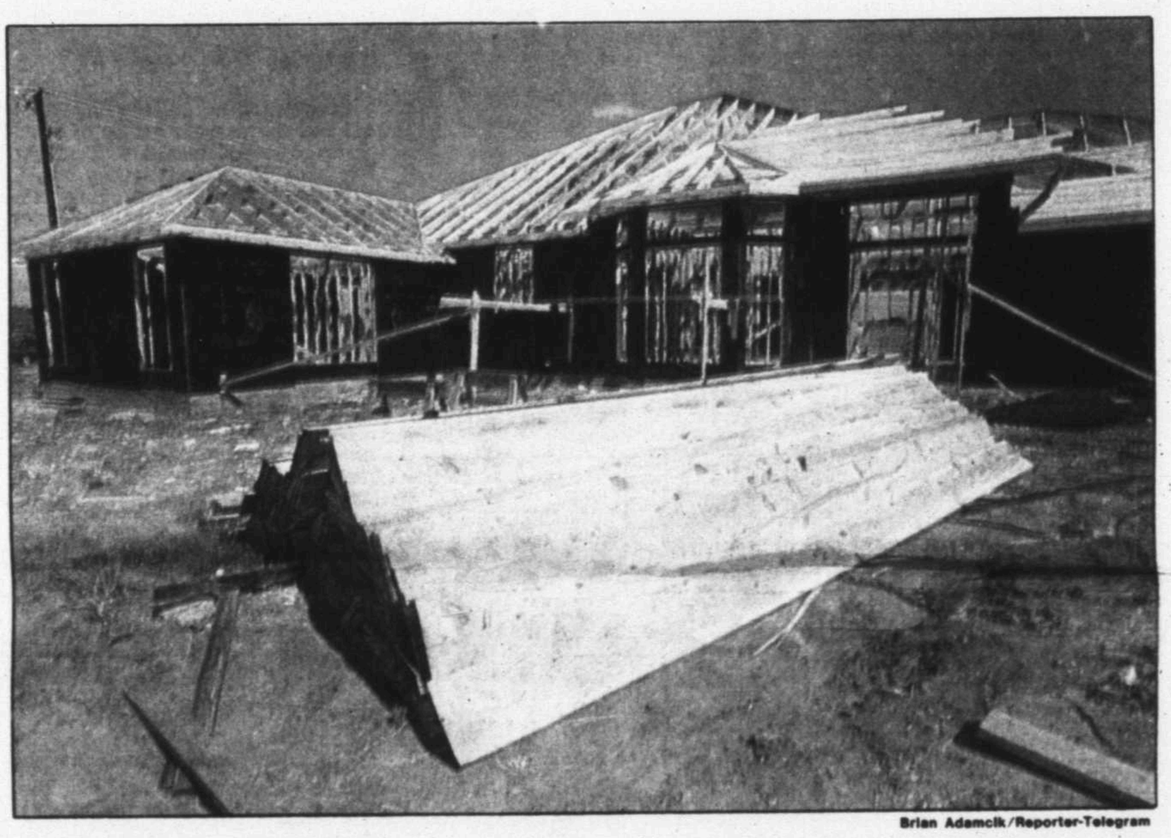

UCS Salesman Jerry Ravel told council two weeks ago that the city's consultant had mis-figured what his company would charge for additional lines that would take the heat of the city's central switchboard by adding direct dail-in lines to most-called departments.

Ravel today could not be reached for comment.

Enter the consultant — Ray Kimball.

Kimball was hired in March by council to advise the city on how it could implement a computer-aided dispatch system for the fire department.

Gingrich

Wright

Gingrich also used aide to write book

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the most vocal critics of House Speaker Jim Wright's ethics has acknowledged that, like Wright, he once had a congressional aide work on a book published under his name.

But Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Tuesday that the work his aide did on his book, "Window of Opportunity," before its publication in 1984 was much different from the work Wright's aide did on the speaker's book, "Reflections of a Public Man."

Gingrich, who asked the House ethics committee last month to investigate Wright's personal financial dealings, said he's "fairly confident" he asked Frank Gregorsky, his administrative assistant in 1984, to review the manuscript of his book because "he's a first class writer."

"That is totally appropriate and to the extent that (a staff member) filled that role, it would not be inappropriate," Gingrich said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Matthew Cossolotto, a former aide to Wright, said in interviews this week that he spent 150 to 200 hours while on Wright's congressional staff working on the speaker's book.

House records show that Cossolotto also was paid $2,078 from official congressional accounts to cover his expenses during a 1984 trip to Texas when he oversaw the final editing of the book.

Wright has refused to comment on the matter since Sunday, when he defended Cossolotto's assignment during a telephone interview with the Washington Post. He canceled his regular daily news briefing Tuesday and denied an Associated Press request for an interview on the subject.

Gingrich's request for a House ethics committee investigation of Wright came several weeks before Cossolotto's role in the production of Wright's book became known publicly.

But Gingrich said Tuesday he thinks the ethics panel also should examine whether Wright violated House rules by assigning Cossolotto to work on the book.

With valuations stable, tax hike would hit homeowners

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Homeowners will bear the brunt of tax rate increases that Midland taxing entities may approve this year to make up for valuations that continued to plummet through January.

Ron Segall, chief appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District, said Tuesday that valuations for residential property remained generally stable, but commercial and mineral valuations saw the biggest decreases.

"Residential values held up best.... The most desirable residential areas pretty well stayed constant," said Segall, mentioning in particular west and northwest parts of the city and centrally located "old Midland."

In general throughout the city, residential property that is "well-maintained" tended to keep its value, he said.

The stability of the valuations means that those property owners will feel the crunch if the five Midland taxing bodies decide to raise tax rates to generate the the same number of dollars as last year.

Valuations calculated by the appraisal district for the five — the county, city, school district, hospital district and college district — fell between 3.7 and 5.8 percent between Jan. 1 last year and the same date this year.

The fall in valuations reflects market conditions in January, said Segall, who emphasized that current market conditions indicate greater stability.

To make up for the fall, taxing entities — with the exception of Midland County — would have to approve tax rates between 4.95 and 7.2 percent higher than last year's rates.

Midland County presents a special case because voters last August approved a half-cent county sales tax that by state law must be applied to a reduction in property taxes.

While county valuations declined 6.17 percent, a tax rate 31.5 percent below last year's — with the addition of the sales tax revenues — would bring in the same amount of county tax dollars as last year.

Midland taxing entities last year levied a combined tax rate of nearly $1.63 cents per each $100 of valuation. On a home valued at $100,000, the combined tax bill amounted to $1,628.

If all taxing entities approve rate increases solely to the level that would provide the same number of tax dollars as last year, the combined rate would reach about $1.64 per $100 valuation.

In that case, the owner of a $100,000 home would pay $1,641.10 in property taxes. The amount is $13.10 higher than last year, despite a county property tax reduction that is balanced by a half-cent sales tax increase.

Local demand for new housing still building despite flat economy

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Midland developers are making a few dreams come true and perhaps even creating a few of their own.

Despite a relatively flat economy, demand for new housing continues to invigorate the local market.

Based on the latest figures released by the city of Midland, the number of new building permits sought through May ran an average of 18.6 units, compared to just 12 two years ago.

All this doesn't surprise Doug Henson, president of SBC Corp. — an entity owned by Midland's Scharbauer family — who says the demand for three and four bedroom oil executive-type homes has been around for years.

"Midland continues to show a net gain in population according to the city's own numbers," says Henson. "And that's what's driving new construction."

As of April 1980, the last available census data pegged the Tall City's population at 70,291. Estimates for the current year, according to the city's own data, figure a population of 99,246.

While city officials agree that the oil and gas downturn drove some families out of the area, they also note a mini-baby boom occurred during the same period.

And, according to Kyle Womack, co-owner of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper Engineering, which has worked closely on the SBC project, there's one other factor: the consolidation of other oil companies, which has brought more families to Midland.

"There certainly seems to be an increase in building activity," said Womack, "Especially out west and north of town." In addition, developers are encouraged by lowering building costs and interest rates now running anywhere from 10 to 10.5 percent. "That makes housing a lot more affordable," he said.

West of town, at Loop 250 and State Highway 191, SBC's Grassland Estates has opened the first of two phases that call for the building of 71 new homes. Henson said when other sub-divisions began selling out, the company saw its niche and moved ahead.

But SBC is hardly alone. According to Dick Hennessy, director of planning and development for the city, other developers also are pushing ahead to secure permits for their plats as well.

Royalty decision pleases Turner heirs

From Staff and Wire Reports

The descendants of Midland oilman Fred Turner Jr. are "very pleased with the court's decision" to reject the state's request to halt royalty payments from a disputed lease in the Yates Field.

Lynn Durham Jr. of Midland, a grandson of Turner, said Tuesday he was glad "the merits of the defense is being heard."

State District Judge Peter Lowry ruled the state did not justify its request to suspend the payments pending a trial in its lawsuit involving a 3.97-acre tract in the Pecos County field.

The judge's decision not to grant the injunction doesn't bode ill for the state's case, according to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

"We asked for extraordinary action" in requesting that the $400,000 in monthly royalty payments from the tract be suspended to defendants whose predecessors allegedly were involved in a deal that defrauded the state, Mauro said.

"It does not affect the possibility of winning the lawsuit in the future," he said. A trial has not been set.

Defense attorney Cecil Munn of Fort Worth called the ruling "eminently correct."

"This case ought to be dismissed. It's abusive. There's no basis for it. It's reckless. It's politically motivated," Munn said.

Mauro asserted the state has not politicized the case.

Durham said he hoped that Tuesday's decision was an indication that the court "will continue to see the state's case is not all it's cracked up to be."

College costs, AIDS risks worry nation's teens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's teen-agers worry most about paying for college, contracting AIDS and making the wrong decisions about their future, according to a survey released today.

High school juniors and seniors generally think their lives are more complex than their parents' lives, the data showed.

They are keenly aware that drugs, alcohol, AIDS and sexual abuse are issues that affect them and their friends, although they are less likely to admit that they are personally involved with those problems, according to the study by the American Home Economics Association.

Many teens tend to be pessimistic about social problems and the country's future. For example, 58 percent do not think there will be an end to racial discrimination in the United States in their lifetimes; 42 percent think there will be nuclear war in their lifetimes; and 62 percent think their lives will be harder than those of their parents.

The study, funded by Chesebrough-Pond's Inc. and Lever Brothers Co., surveyed 510 high school juniors and seniors nationwide between March 25 and April 5. Quotas were established so that a sample of 300 teens selected at random reflected Census Bureau breakdowns of student population by sex, race and ethnicity. A supplemental group of 210 included only blacks and Hispanics.

The average age of the respondents was 17, and the survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

The teen-agers were asked how concerned they were about 32 issues. Topics that drew responses of "extremely" or "very" were considered top concerns. They tended to be questions of money, the future or AIDS.

WEATHER SUMMARY

State sees warmer temperatures

Associated Press

Clear skies and continued warm to hot temperatures were forecast across all of Texas through Thursday.

Temperatures will be even warmer Thursday, but forecasts are calling for the possibility of some relief in the form of thunderstorms Thursday afternoon in Northeast Texas.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s statewide.

Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 90s except in North Texas where readings will climb to around 100, along the Rio Grande Plains where readings will be around 102, in the Permian Basin where readings will be around 103 and in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas where the mercury may climb to around 108.

NATION

Snow fell in California mountains and widely scattered showers dampened the mid-Atlantic Coast and the Southeast early today after thunderstorms produced large hail and damaging winds in many areas.

A heat wave in the Northern Plains was expected to continue.

Gusts up to 75 mph ripped through Delaware on Tuesday, downing trees, forcing the evacuation of more than 500 people from a subdivision and causing power outages, authorities said.

The heaviest damage appeared to be just north of Dover, where residents reported a tornado. However, the weather service said the report could not be confirmed immediately.

The thunderstorms Tuesday also struck Florida, Alabama, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Montana. The storms weakened during the evening, and by early today lingered primarily over southern Florida and central Iowa.

Heavier rainfall for the six hours that ended at 2 a.m. EDT included an inch at West Palm Beach, Fla., three-quarters of an inch at Miami and two-thirds of an inch at Orlando, Fla.

Snow fell in higher elevations of Northern California early today. On Tuesday, at least 10 hikers were reported missing temporarily and some mountain highways were closed or restricted as snow drifted up to 2½ feet high. Hail up to a half-inch in diameter fell on Fresno.

Elsewhere, many cities hit record highs for the date as a heat wave continued in much of the nation.

Baltimore reached 94 degrees, topping the 93-degree mark set in 1980; Bismarck, N.D., reached 101, beating the 95-degree record of 1977; Cape Hatteras, N.C., hit 90, a degree more than the 1975 record; Galveston, Texas, reached 91, beating the 89-degree mark of 1880; and Goodland, Kansas, topped out at 97, a degree more than the 1963 record.

The nation's high was 110 degrees at Glendive, Mont.

Senators hold out hope for trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of comprehensive trade legislation headed into today's Senate showdown without enough votes to override President Reagan's veto, but they refuse to abandon hope for their 1,000-page bill.

Some, such as Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., a strong supporter of the bill, say they still think a version acceptable to Reagan can be fashioned this session.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Tuesday that the bill's "pulse is still beating," but there was nothing he could do to budge perhaps 36 senators prepared to sustain Reagan's veto.

Byrd told reporters there was still hope that home-state pressures would change a few minds at the last minute.

The House already has voted to override Reagan's veto. Senate failure to follow suit could doom trade legislation for the rest of 1988 and send some administration loyalists into fall campaigns with an Achilles heel on the issue.

"This veto is going to be used as a political issue this year; we all know that," Heinz warned his colleagues.

Some administration supporters clearly would like another crack at the issue before November. The administration has been urging a scaled-down bill that would win the president's support. But Byrd has been warning that a fresh bill would be peppered with amendments and could become hopelessly bogged down.

The bill's chief provisions would overhaul the system under which the government imposes import curbs to aid U.S. industries and retaliate against international trade violations.

Other features range from a potential $2 billion in agricultural subsidies to repeal of the windfall profits tax on oil-industry earnings.

Reagan's May 24 veto focused on a provision that would require companies with 100 employees or more to provide their workers with 60-day notice of plant closings and large-scale layoffs. He said the provision would take away too much management flexibility. Reagan also was critical of restrictions in the bill on Alaskan oil exports.

A two-thirds majority is needed in Congress to override a presidential veto. The bill's backers failed to gain that when the Senate passed the bill 63-36 on April 27, and the lawmakers appeared to remain frozen in the positions they took then.

The only Democrat to oppose the measure was retiring Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who has fought provisions that would relax the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

Obtaining criminal convictions of businessmen for overseas payoffs would become more difficult because of the changes. "That's why I call it the bring-back-bribery bill," Proxmire said Tuesday.

As debate began, Heinz said the political potential of the issue should not prompt lawmakers to give up on trying to fashion a bill that Reagan would sign.

"Anybody can just sit in the stands and boo the umpire," he said.

VALUE

City Finance Director Troy Gifford said Tuesday that "simply because the tax rate changes does not mean that taxes will go up or down.

"That is not a cause and effect relationship," he said, adding that the the level of a property's valuation also is taken into consideration when determining how much tax a property owner pays.

He noted that the average tax bill from the city of Midland is $350. On a property that sees no drop in valuation, a three percent city tax rate hike would amount to tax increase of less than $7, he said — "less than a carton of cigarettes."

Segall emphasized that current valuation figures remain "preliminary" until after the appeal process concludes. Midlanders who began receiving their property valuation notices May 16 and question the value placed on their properties have until June 16 to file appraisal protests with the district, he said.

By July 25, the appraisal district must certify the valuation in its final form so that taxing entities may begin considering their budgets and setting their tax rates.

Segall did not expect more than a 1 percent variation to result from the protest process.

A survey of valuations and tax rates of the five Midland taxing authorities indicates that the city would need a 4.95 percent tax rate increase to bring in the same number of tax dollars as last year.

The current city tax rate is 43.8 cents per $100 of valuation on a total valuation calculated last year at $3.026 billion.

With this year's valuation of $2.914 billion, a municipal tax rate of 45.97 cents would generate the same number of tax dollars.

School district valuations fell 5.7 percent over the past year — from $3.824 billion to $3.606 billion, according to appraisal district figures. A tax rate of 84.94 cents per $100 of valuation — compared to the current 79.9 cents — would allow the district to collect the same amount of property taxes as last year.

Midland County's total valuation fell 6.17 percent, from $4.198 billion to $3.939 billion. While the current county tax rate is 21.07 cents per $100 of valuation, a 14.43-cent tax rate — in conjunction with the recent half-cent sales tax hike — will garner the same number of tax dollars as last year, according to appraisal district figures.

The Midland Junior College District saw valuations fall 4.37 percent, from $3.977 billion to $3.810 billion. Last year's 9.89-cent tax rate would have to jump to 10.6 cents for the junior college district to recoup the same number of tax dollars as last year.

Midland County Hospital District valuations fell 5.78 percent, from $4.207 billion to $3.964 billion. The current tax rate of 8.14 cents would have to be upped to 8.71 cents to allow the district to garner the same number of tax dollars.

By state law, the appraisal district must calculate a tax rate for each entity that would allow them to collect the same amount of tax dollars as the previous year. That rate is called the "effective" tax rate.

Also under state law, taxing entities may raise their tax rates to three percent above the effective rate before having to call a public hearing on the rate.

A hike of 8 percent over the effective rate would allow circulation of a petition calling for a tax roll back election, under state law.

POLLS

Confronted by polls saying Dukakis was the current choice of a majority of voters, Bush said, "I'm fighting back. I'm the underdog now."

While Dukakis could enter the race with an edge in polls showing Americans wanting a change after nearly eight years of Ronald Reagan's presidency, Bush could find strength in the Republican hold on the electoral votes of Southern and Western states.

The vice president was meeting this morning in Washington with Reagan.

Dukakis said voters were not interested in "slashing attacks" and he warned the Republicans not to engage in "mudslinging and name-calling."

"I don't think you have to run a negative, nasty campaign," said Bush. "What I think you have to do though is be sure the American people perceive what you really want for this country."

Party unity and the search for running mates were top priorities for both Bush and Dukakis as they looked ahead to their party conventions — the Democrats in July, the Republicans in August — and beyond.

Bush was flying to Denver Friday to open a unity conference at which three of his former rivals for the nomination would appear — Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and television evangelist Pat Robertson.

Campaigning in California for two days before the primary, Bush previewed his fall strategy, repeatedly portraying the Massachusetts governor as a liberal likely to advocate tax increases.

"Michael Dukakis said he would not rule out a tax increase," Bush said. "I'll rule it out."

YATES

Mauro said the request was justified to protect the interests of the Permanent School Fund, which gets the state's share of such royalties, but he added that "we expected a tough time."

Assistant Attorney General Jose Manuel Rangel argued that Fred Turner Jr. of Midland and others conspired more than 50 years ago in a deal to get substantially more profits from the tract than went to the public school trust fund.

Under a Texas Supreme Court ruling reaffirmed in 1932, the state retains ownership of mineral rights when it sells land and is entitled to half of bonuses, rentals and royalties from oil and gas leases. The surface landowner also gets half for acting as the state's agent in negotiating leases.

The state says it has received only $10 million of the $161 million worth of oil and gas produced from the tract since 1934.

Turner and two lawyers engaged in "a fraudulent, self-dealing scheme" that unknown to the state gave Turner an interest in the lease he negotiated and led to the disparity in royalty payments, Rangel said.

The state has alleged a similar "strawman" transaction was completed during the 1930s on another tract in the field, 24.41 acres, by M.H. Reed.

In that case, the state was granted an injunction more than two years ago and an estimated $8 million in royalty payments have been put into escrow.

Reed heir attorney William M. Kerr Sr. of Midland said Tuesday it was unclear if Lowry's ruling could help his clients and Ralph Ogden's heirs get royalty payments resumed pending a hearing of the facts of their case.

"The first thing we still have to do is get a judge," Kerr said. The state and the initial plaintiff in the action, Summit Energy Inc., have challenged retired Appellate Court Judge Stephen Preslar sitting in the case.

Kerr did say, however, that he was "tickled" at the outcome of the Turner hearing and that it "might knock some of the wind out of the Land Commissioner, who was getting pretty heady over these cases."

Munn and defense attorney Charles Tighe of Midland argued that it is difficult to tell what state officials considered when, 54 years ago, a court judgment was entered validating Turner's lease.

The case again was considered in 1968 by the attorney general's office, but state attorneys declined to pursue a lawsuit, they noted. Tighe also disputed whether Turner technically was the state's agent in 1934, when a receiver was appointed in a dispute over the tract.

Lowry ruled that the state, in asking for the suspension of royalty payments to the defendants, did not prove it would be harmed if such payments continued.

The state could recover future royalties from the rich tract if the lawsuit is decided in its favor, he said.

In addition, Lowry said, the state did not show a "substantial likelihood" it would prevail in the lawsuit. Although he emphasized that he was not saying the state would lose, Lowry said defenses were raised that were not frivolous.

TEENS

Being able to pay for college was a top concern for 39 percent of the teens surveyed, as was the fear of contracting AIDS. Thirty-four percent listed making the wrong decisions about the future and not being able to change them as a top concern.

Fear that the United States "is steadily going down hill" greatly concerned 33 percent; and the prospects of a nationwide depression worried 30 percent. Not earning enough money to enjoy the better things in life was a top concern for 29 percent.

While few teens — 11 percent — actually know someone who has contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome, 30 percent say they have changed their sex lives because of the fear of getting the deadly disease.

Fifty-eight percent of those surveyed have a friend who has thought of or committed suicide, and 53 percent said some of their friends were ruining their lives because of drugs. Forty-six percent report alcohol abuse among their friends, and 32 percent claim to have a friend who has been sexually abused.

But there was a reluctance to relate those problems to themselves. Only 8 percent or less admitted that they have drug or alcohol problems or have thought about suicide.

Despite their worries, 65 percent of those surveyed said they believe that science will find cures for serious diseases such as AIDS and cancer.

And they were optimistic about the future — 78 percent expect to attend college and 94 percent believe having a job they enjoy will be an important part of their lives.

Dr. Gail House, the association's executive director, said the survey will be used to develop courses to help teen-agers prepare for family and adult responsibilities.

"The idea of using 200 hours, of having it be your only job assignment, of charging over $2,000 for a trip which a staffer says was only for the purpose of going to Fort Worth in order to write the book, it seems to me that's clearly wrong," he said.

Gingrich said Gregorsky's only role in his own book was reviewing the manuscript before it was published. He said he wrote the first draft himself and the final draft was done with help from his wife and a professional writer who was paid by the publisher.

Because of questions about such use of congressional staffers, Gingrich said he is preparing a letter to his colleagues suggesting the creation of a bipartisan panel of retired congressmen to re-examine the basic ethics rules of the House.

The House ethics committee meets Thursday for a second session to consider Gingrich's complaint against Wright. The panel met behind closed doors for several hours last week without reaching any decision on whether to launch an investigation.

Part of Gingrich's complaint asked the ethics committee to investigate reports that Wright receives unusually high royalties of 55 percent for his book, which was published by a company that was paid more than $250,000 for services to Wright's re-election campaign in 1985-86.

PHONES

However, council took that job one step further, seeking his advise on a new phone system.

Kimball would later recommend that council approve a contract to install a Southwestern Bell "Plexar System."

That recommendation was based on cost and service. It also was protested by UCS. The plan has been on hold ever since.

Poe acknowledged that Kimball lacked the "technical expertise" to make a recommendation, but added he was given that assistance from a retired Southwestern Bell System employee.

Kimball — who is being paid a flat fee of $7,000 a month — had consulted for the city on a voluntary basis on two other occasions, according to Poe. As president of Eagle Computer Co., while living in Midland, Kimball helped the city in setting up its first computer system, the city manager said.

"Since we already had him on board, we decided to use him to help us with our phone system," said Poe.

In considering the new phone system, council was given three options. The city could either update its old system; move into Plexar, which would give it the capability of linking all its outlying buildings; or build a completely new system.

The latter was rejected because of cost.

Council also rejected the Plexar plan, but reconsidered it after Southwestern Bell had reported it had figured wrong in the bidding process.

Asked why other companies hadn't bid on the project, Poe replied: "No others chose to."

He added, that the city had heard from AT&T and one other carrier, but was told they couldn't compete on a cost basis with Bell's Plexar link-up.

"We've gotten some criticism from UCS, but in the first round we got it from Bell," said Poe. "This isn't black and white. There are a lot of gray areas...we don't know exactly how many lines we'll need."

Correction

Sunday's business/oil story about royalties in the Yates Field, it should have been reported that Andrew Knickerbocker's unsuccesful lawsuit was filed against the executors of Fred Turner Jr.'s estate, not against Turner.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

DEVELOP

At Trinity Meadows — located between Midkiff and Midland drives — first phase construction already has been "developed out," said Hennessy, and second phase building is nearing completion.

Other areas targeted for development are Plantation Hills' Vista West, located northwest of Midland Drive and Briarwood Avenue and north of Loop 250; and a 200-acre "concept development plan" located north of Soloman Lane and east of Saddle Club Estates.

Hennessy said two other sections sought for development include an area of Polo Park located at the southeast corner of the Polo Parkway and Castleford Road northeast of Garfield Street, as well as the southeast corner of Garfield Street at Bluebird Lane.

"Basically, all this has come over the last two to three months," said Hennessey. "Evidently there's a market out there for single family homes. It's my understanding that there's a demand out there."

Agreeing with that was Darrell McDonald, president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

They (developers) are literally filling out lots that were started five or six years ago. There's a certain segment of the public that just wants something new," said McDonald.

California says no to AIDS measure

Associated Press

Voters rejected a possible AIDS quarantine in California, nominated a councilman to become the first black congressman in New Jersey, and launched a comeback by former Gov. Thomas Judge in Montana.

In other results from seven state primaries Tuesday, voters set the stage for four Senate races:

California — Democratic Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy piled up 81 percent of the vote against three challengers and will oppose moderate Republican Sen. Pete Wilson. McCarthy said he would attack Wilson for a lack of leadership, adding, "you must speak from your convictions to people. You don't jump on winning sides."

New Jersey — First-term Democratic Sen. Frank Lautenberg trounced two opponents with 77 percent of the vote and will face GOP newcomer Peter Dawkins, a former star athlete, Rhodes scholar and Vietnam war hero. Dawkins criticized Lautenberg's opposition to the death penalty and willingness to support tax increases. Lautenberg said Dawkins, who recently moved to New Jersey, "has demonstrated a lack of knowledge" about environmental and other issues of concern to the state's voters.

Montana — Democratic Sen. John Melcher won 74 percent of the vote against a political unknown in his bid for a third term and will run against Republican Conrad Burns, a Yellowstone County commissioner. "I think it's pretty obvious I've been here awhile," Melcher said from Washington. "The longer you're here, the more chances you have to get bills passed...that will benefit Montana."

New Mexico — State Sen. Bill Valentine outpolled three Republicans for the right to take on first-term Democratic Sen. Jeff Bingaman. Valentine said Bingaman supported "big labor, big government and big spending on the part of Washington" and had fallen in line "with the East Coast liberals."

With 97 percent of the vote counted, Valentine had 33,620 votes or 43 percent, and his closest challenger, former Interior Department official Rick Montoya, had 22,314 votes or 28.5 percent.

The AIDS measure, backed by extremist Lyndon LaRouche, was one of a slew of propositions in California. With 100 percent of the precincts in, it was soundly defeated by 3,604,180 votes or 68 percent to 1,690,973 votes or 32 percent.

Also rejected were proposals to relax limits on government spending, and local measures to shut down the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant and split mammoth San Bernardino County in two. However, voters approved two state measures to cap campaign spending.

In San Diego, Mayor Maureen O'Connor won a full four-year term. With 38.1 percent of the vote counted, she had 36,179 votes or 58.3 percent, and her closest rival, former Councilman Floyd Morrow, had 21,334 votes or 34.4 percent.

Newark, N.J., City Councilman Donald Payne defeated a fellow black councilman, Ralph Grant, to capture the Democratic nomination for the seat held by Rep. Peter Rodino for 40 years. Payne will be an overwhelming favorite against Republican Michael Webb, who also is black.

"It gives our delegation the fairness it's been lacking for many years," Payne said of the fact that he stands to become the state's first black congressman. "I can speak from a true urban perspective."

With 98 percent of the vote counted, Payne had 39,681 votes or 73 percent and Grant had 14,576 votes or 27 percent.

In Montana, Judge defeated five other Democrats who were enticed into the race by the retirement of two-term Gov. Ted Schwinden.

"People remember we had eight good years," said Judge, who served from 1973-1981 and was beaten by Schwinden in the 1980 primary. He said he also had "put forth a program that the people of this state have been waiting for."

The GOP primary victor, former state Sen. Stan Stephens, said Judge "represents an administration from yesteryear."

Primaries over but campaign goes on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1988 presidential primaries are over, but Michael Dukakis and George Bush are still campaigning, now seeking party unity at the summertime conventions in Atlanta and New Orleans and into the fall.

Both nominees-to-be are reaching out in the next few days to the men they defeated in the 39 primaries, seeking to heal any wounds and to avoid any new squabbles. And part of that process will be their choice of vice presidential running mates for the general election.

Bush joins four of his five former Republican rivals for a "Unity '88" meeting in Denver on Friday, the first of several such meetings to lay the groundwork for the GOP National Convention in New Orleans Aug. 15-18.

Dukakis, his final primary victories in hand, gathers the formal backing of some former Democratic rivals today. He will stop in St. Louis on the way home from California to receive the endorsement of Rep. Richard Gephardt, while Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois will add his support in a statement.

"I don't see any great divisions within our party," Dukakis said before the votes were counted Tuesday. "We're going to have ourselves a great convention."

For the Massachusetts governor, the first challenge is Jesse Jackson.

The preacher-turned-politician has been Dukakis' most persistent opponent, hanging on to the end of the primaries and promising to continue all the way to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta July 18-21.

"Suffice it to say, we're going to keep our campaign alive to July, at the convention," Jackson said in Los Angeles.

Jackson has stepped up his pressure on the Massachusetts governor in the closing hours of the season — on the vice presidency and on the issues. In his strongest statement yet, Jackson suggested he had earned at least an offer of the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

"If he were to win, extending the invitation to me is his option," Jackson said of Dukakis. "It is an option my constituency has earned."

Dukakis brushed aside such comments, noting that Jackson has said that it is up to the nominee to select a running mate. And he also claimed to be unconcerned about the possibility of fights at the convention on issues Jackson thinks are important.

"We may have a floor fight or two," Dukakis said. "There may be some issues that go to the floor."

But Jackson was conciliatory as well after a meeting Monday night with Dukakis.

"He's sensitive on these matters and we're going to have some follow-up meetings, necessarily to discuss matters of platform, credentials, rules, the convention itself, and beyond that, our strategy for winning in November," Jackson said.

Mother takes sanctuary in church rather than testify

NEW YORK (AP) — A black woman who has refused to testify about her daughter's alleged abduction and rape by six whites took sanctuary in a church this morning to avoid arrest for contempt for court, an adviser said.

Glenda Brawley, her two attorneys and two bodyguards entered the Ebeneezer Baptist Church in Queens about 6 a.m., according to the Rev. Al Sharpton.

In taking sanctuary, Mrs. Brawley was seeking "relief from a higher authority," one of her lawyers, Alton Maddox Jr., said Tuesday.

Authorities issued a statewide warrant for Mrs. Brawley, saying she was "fair game" for arrest.

The group, Sharpton said, intended to remain in the church "till we're arrested or until the warrant is vacated." He said that they were prepared to stay for days and that supporters would bring in food and supplies.

On Monday, the 33-year-old Mrs. Brawley was sentenced to 30 days in jail for defying a grand jury subpoena to testify. But upon the urging of state Attorney General Robert Abrams she was given one more opportunity to tell a judge today why she refused to cooperate.

However, Maddox, who has claimed state officials are involved in a racially motivated cover-up, said Mrs. Brawley would take sanctuary in a black church rather than appear before a grand jury in Poughkeepsie this morning.

"The history of this nation will be on trial tomorrow and I dare Robert Abrams or (Gov.) Mario Cuomo to come into the black church," Maddox said at a news conference Tuesday.

"Glenda Brawley will be seeking relief before a higher authority, she will be putting her life in God's hands."

"You don't mess with black people in their churches," said Mrs. Brawley's sister Juanita.

Neither Maddox nor other Brawley family advisers participating in the news conference — attorney C. Vernon Mason and Sharpton — would say what church would offer Mrs. Brawley asylum, though Sharpton said it was in New York City. They insisted authorities had no right to enter a church to arrest her.

Maddox said there was "a long-standing precedent that persons who have been oppressed politically can seek asylum in a church."

But Sgt. John Clifford, a New York City Police Department spokesman, said the decision to arrest people who request sanctuary privileges is decided on a case-by-case basis.

Police are allowed to arrest suspects who run into a church, the spokesman said.

Tawana Brawley was found November 28, four days after she had disappeared.

Presbyterians consider paper on pornography

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pornography debases God's gifts and is "far from the mutual sexual delight depicted biblically," according to a report submitted for study by the nation's largest Presbyterian group.

"Pornography: Far From the Song of Songs" recommends, among other things, that members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) boycott materials and companies that market or produce pornographic materials.

The paper is one of several that committees were to begin discussing today during the first full day of the Protestant church's 200th General Assembly.

The 630 commissioners first were scheduled to elect a moderator to serve as the chief spokesman for the next year for the 3-million-member Presbyterian group.

Candidates include the Revs. Juventino R. Ballesteros, 54, of Savannah, Ga.; C. Kenneth Hall, 63, of Butler, Pa.; James R. Struthers, 66, of Stillwater, Okla.; Roy H. Zuefeldt, 63, of Abilene, Texas; and James Spalding, 66, professor of religion at the University of Iowa.

If elected, Ballesteros would become the first Hispanic to hold the office.

The pornography report's title refers to "The Song of Solomon," an Old Testament book that contains some of the most sexually explict language in the Bible.

Some critics, however, say the paper does not go far enough in condemning pornography.

Sharlyn Stare, who heads a special Presbyterian committee on pornography in Cincinnati, said the "recommendations need to be more aggressive to moving people to support prosecution of illegal obscenity and child pornography."

Other reports include a paper entitled "Christian Obedience in a Nuclear Age," which declares that nuclear war and the theory of nuclear deterrence are immoral and calls on Presbyterians to be more active in the fight for peace.

While the paper stops short of calling for a denominational position of civil disobedience, it calls for the support of those who feel compelled to engage in resistance and recommends establishing a fund to support resisters.

Anti-abortion groups within the church are also hoping to persuade the commissioners to toughen the church's stance against abortion.

The reports will be considered by the commissioners at committee meetings on Thursday and Friday. The commissions reassemble Saturday to deal with the reports.

The meeting runs through next Wednesday.

As part of the anti-abortion effort, Presbyterians Pro-Life sponsored a visit here Tuesday by Mother Teresa of Calcutta, who called abortion the "greatest destroyer of love and peace."

"If I had power, I would open a jail and put every single doctor in jail for killing life, killing a child, a gift of God," said the Nobel Peace Prize winner who is noted for her work with the poor.

"Every single child, every unborn child in the womb, is precious to Him, is created for greater things, to love and be loved," she said in a speech to about 600 people, including commissioners and St. Louis Roman Catholic Archbishop John L. May.

Exam was set for Navy recruit after his death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A medical exam to determine Navy recruit Lee Mirecki's fitness for continued training was scheduled for the day after his death in a rescue swimmer course he was allowed to resume by mistake, his chief petty officer has testified.

The planned physical was disclosed Tuesday on the final day of testimony in an investigative hearing to determine if five Navy Rescue Swimmer School instructors and their commanding officer should be court-martialed in the airman recruit's death.

"You cannot legally return to training status until that physical is held," said John W. Singer, the school's leading chief petty officer.

Lawyers for the defendants and the Navy were to make closing arguments today before Cmdr. Daniel J. D'Alesio Jr., the investigating officer. At a later date he will make his recommendations to Rear Adm. David Morris, chief of naval air training in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Lt. Thomas A. Torchia, the school's commander, is charged with dereliction of duty, and the five enlisted instructors are accused of involuntary manslaughter and conspiracy to commit battery. They are Petty Officers 1st Class Richard E. Blevins and David J. Smith and Petty Officers 2nd Class John W. Zelenock, Frankie D. Deaton and Michael W. Combe.

The instructors allegedly forced the 19-year-old recruit from Appleton, Wis., into the water March 2 when he tried to quit the course for a second time during a drill. A pathologist said Mirecki literally was scared to death because of a phobia about being pulled under water.

The phobia had been diagnosed by a flight surgeon a month earlier after Mirecki asked to drop out the first time. The flight surgeon found him unfit for training, but a psychologist who later examined him disagreed.

Mirecki was erroneously restored to training on the basis of the psychologist's finding but without the required physical examination and approval of the flight surgeon, testimony disclosed.

Singer put part of the blame on the school's second-ranking enlisted man, Chief Petty Officer Daniel J. Conway, student control chief. He said Conway should have discovered the error because Mirecki's scheduled return-to-training physical was on a computer readout listing students on medical hold that Conway was supposed to monitor daily.

Mirecki's name, however, disappeared from the list without authorization on Feb. 17, and he was placed in a new rescue class, Singer said.

In earlier testimony, Chief Petty Officer Kevin Brannigan, a corpsman at the Naval Aviation Schools Command, admitted he violated procedure by failing to send Mirecki back to the flight surgeon.

House bill would add long-term health care to Medicare

WASHINGTON (AP) — A costly new long-term home health care plan arrives on the House floor against the backdrop of a coming election and a series of polls indicating public desire for such a program.

The home care bill is championed by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who said Tuesday he had been trying for 50 years to help fill "a total vacuum" in the area of long-term care.

But two spurned committee chairmen whose panels never got a chance to review the bill spearheaded an effort to block its consideration on the House floor today.

"We should not allow the rules of the House to be manipulated to satisfy the popular issue of the moment," Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Tuesday in a letter to his colleagues.

Pepper's plan would expand Medicare to include long-term home care benefits for anyone of any age who is chronically ill or can't perform tasks of daily living.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., the Senate sponsor of the Pepper bill, said 30 percent of the people in nursing homes would not have to be there if home services were available.

"We're going to have an explosion in the demand for long-term care and we ought to face up to it now," he said at a news conference Tuesday with Pepper and others.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the home care program would cost nearly $28 billion over five years. Backers say it would be paid for by imposing the Medicare payroll tax on income above $45,000, which is currently exempt, but opponents are skeptical, saying the cost could balloon out of control.

Ordinarily, the House Ways and Means Committee and the Energy and Commerce Committee would have worked on the Pepper bill before it reached the floor.

But under a special arrangement between Pepper and House Speaker Jim Wright, Pepper agreed not to offer his home care plan as an amendment to an already controversial catastrophic health bill dealing with the cost of acute illness. In return, Wright agreed to let him have a floor vote on his bill.

The move allowed the bill to bypass Rostenkowski's committee and the Energy and Commerce panel led by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Republican and Democratic opponents, though lauding the intent of Pepper's bill, said they had problems with the way it got to the House floor, its cost, its lack of a nursing home component, and the absence of agencies capable of administering the plan.

"History has demonstrated that such a big program cannot be put in place quickly without encouraging inept or fraudulent management," Rostenkowski said.

Investigators review claims that INS endangered Houston agents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators are reviewing allegations that the Immigration and Naturalization Service retaliated against agents who complained that an administrative assignment put their undercover identities in jeopardy and that they were told to falsify their time cards.

The alleged reprisals began after all eight agents in the Houston anti-smuggling unit told Congress they were being reassigned part of the time to contact employers about the new immigration law and sanctions for hiring illegal aliens.

They were allegedly told to record those duties as anti-smuggling work on their time cards.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas and chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, contends the agents' safety was threatened when they had to meet employers who may have been hiring illegal aliens.

"I'd hate to be an undercover agent traveling around and visiting those big employers of aliens. They'd recognize you; you'd stand out like a sore thumb," Brooks said.

But INS Commissioner Alan Nelson said it is "ludicrous" to claim the agents' cover was blown by meeting with employers. Nelson said he's "not aware there's any truth" to the allegations about the time cards.

"It's a basic and simple case of insubordination and failure to follow directions that started the whole thing," Nelson said. "It is our belief that they failed to perform their duties and appropriate action took place."

Nelson said it was necessary nationwide to shift manpower to accomplish the visits with employers, but apparently the men in Houston were the only ones who "just didn't want to do it."

Brooks said the agents have continued to suffer, although a source said members of the unit were reassigned this week to full-time anti-smuggling duties.

Brooks said he requested a General Accounting Office investigation in April because although the INS is "treading a little more carefully until the heat dies down" its top-ranking officials "in their minds think they have done nothing wrong."

"On rare occasions you find overzealous administrators who cover up their mistakes by persecuting the people who talked about it, but never have I seen it with the terrible dangers this one reflects for the participants," said Brooks.

The Office of Special Counsel, an independent investigatory agency of the Merit Systems Protection Board, is also investigating, said Laura Baumgaertner, executive assistant.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he has looked into the situation and received "wholly inadequate replies from the agencies involved."

"We don't need an INS whitewash, we need an objective assessment of the facts. Then we will know what other steps, if any, we need to take," Bentsen said Tuesday.

Defense to begin in Mecham trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — With the prosecution's case complete, former Gov. Evan Mecham says he's confident he'll be acquitted on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

"If they can convict anybody on that little evidence, why, we're living in the wrong country," the ousted Republican governor said as the prosecution rested its case Tuesday.

The defense planned to open today with testimony by Mecham's former gubernatorial chief of staff, Jim Colter, and Barry Wolfson, the developer who provided the loan.

Mecham and his brother, Willard, are charged with concealing the loan on financial reports required by the state.

Judge Michael Ryan of Maricopa County Superior Court on Tuesday denied defense motions to dismiss the charges.

Mecham's lawyer, Michael Scott, argued that the prosecution was "trying to make something out of nothing."

"All you have is that Evan Mecham signed this disclosure" that omits the loan, Scott said. "He was responsible for the loan...But that does not equate with a violation of the law."

Leroy Johnson, a state accountant and final prosecution witness, testified earlier that the omission of the loan from financial reports could not have been a simple bookkeeping error.

"This one transaction stands out above all other transactions," Johnson said under cross-examination by Scott. "It's the largest single transaction by far. The receipt is recorded a month after the fact. The name on the receipt is Evan Mecham, not Barry Wolfson."

The defense has contended that the $350,000 loan was properly reported as part of a $465,000 lump sum listed as a contribution from Mecham. The Mechams also have said the failure to itemize the loan was an innocent mistake.

Pendleton held true to beliefs

Clarence Pendleton, who died Sunday, was notable not only for his work as chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission but for his views of what civil rights are all about. Outspoken, with sometimes unorthodox views, Pendleton bore the brunt of criticism for his beliefs and became one of the more controversial figures of the Reagan administration.

Through it all, he held true to his belief that opportunity — not government handouts — would get the poor off welfare, out of the ghettos and into the mainstream of American life.

"Penny," as he was known to friends all across the country, epitomized the extent to which a black person can succeed in this country through perseverance and hard work. He was born in Louisville, Ky., to a family of modest means and raised in Washington, D.C., where he experienced racial discrimination.

Undaunted by racial slurs and slights, he graduated from Howard University, returned after a stint in the army, earned a master's degree, taught physical education and coached the swimming team. His transformation from a self-described "bleeding-heart liberal" to a conservative began during the late 1960s when he witnessed first-hand the failure of the Great Society's anti-poverty programs and set out to do something about it.

In 1972, Pendleton went to San Diego, Calif. and was selected by then-mayor Pete Wilson to head the Model Cities program. Three years later, he became executive director of the San Diego Urban League, a post he held until he was named by President Reagan in 1981 to head the civil-rights commission.

Pendleton's six-year tenure as commission chairman was stormy because he challenged the conventional wisdom of forced busing, racial quotas and affirmative action. A staunch advocate of academic and economic opportunity for Americans of all races and creeds, he viewed preferential treatment for minorities as intrinsically racist and, therefore, wrong. He ridiculed comparable worth and scathed black leaders for deluding their followers. He also bestowed an "uncivil rights award" on black power brokers in Newark, N.J., who pressured white congressman Peter Rodino to retire in order that a black could occupy his seat.

Although Pendleton incurred the wrath of the civil-rights establishment, he was generally revered by the little people, many of whom urged him on. Notably, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who disagreed with Pendleton politically, has praised the chairman as "an outstanding public servant."

We believe history will hold Clarence Pendleton in high esteem as a man who believed deeply in a color-blind society and had the courage of his vision and conviction.

Hogan course complaint

Want to play nine holes? In 2½ hours or less? Don't go to Hogan Park.

It would seem that the City of Midland which is trying so hard to present Midland as the perfect retirement community would take a little more interest in the gold mine they are sitting on. I'm referring to the "only" municipal course around. Until July 16th anyway. The employees, management, and staff need to wake up. I have heard and also have many complaints about Hogan Park and its staff, too many to list. But the top of the list would look much like this:

1. Slow play!
2. Course marshals who ride around and play instead of marshaling.
3. Lack of drinking water on the course.
4. Ball washers with no water in them.
5. A snack bar that should be self-serve because it would sure be faster than the service they have now.

As I said, these are but a few of many complaints. But don't complain to the staff. They get paid regardless. It's a shame, but Hogan Park will see quite a difference in attendance after July 16th. The new Ratliff Ranch Course, which is already five times what Hogan will ever hope to be, is going to be getting a lot of Midland money. Mine included.

Bon voyage, Hogan!

Today's Highlight in History:

Twenty years ago, on June 8, 1968, a requiem Mass was held at St. Patrick's Cathedral for Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, slain by an assassin June 5. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy eulogized his brother as "a good and decent man who saw wrong and tried to right it, saw suffering and tried to heal it, saw war and tried to stop it."

Robert Kennedy was buried that evening at Arlington National Cemetery, near the grave of another brother, President John F. Kennedy.

On this date:

Regulators worry over risky S&L move

WASHINGTON — M. Danny Wall promoted himself as "Mr. Clean" last July when he took over as chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the agency that regulates the savings and loan industry. Nearly a year later, Wall finds his reputation among some fellow regulators as near to bankruptcy as the industry he oversees.

Jack Anderson

This harsh assessment is the verdict of Washington's bank and thrift examiners and the normally tight-lipped bank regulators who seldom break ranks with one of their own.

The problem is Wall's handling of a savings and loan owned by a man who is a generous contributor to political heavyweights. Current and past officials from the principal banking agencies told us that Wall has "crippled" the independence of his examination staff and "undercut every regulator in the country."

Lincoln Savings and Loan, based in Irvine, Calif., and owned by Charles H. Keating Jr., was slated by bank regulators for receivership or conservatorship in May 1987. Wall took over as chairman of the Bank Board in July and within a month confided to fellow regulators that the Keating problem was settled.

A knowledgeable banking source posed this question: How could Wall give a virtually clean bill of health to Lincoln Savings and Loan so quickly when it took his own regulators two years in a complex audit to reach their negative conclusions about Lincoln?

Previous stories have reported allegations regarding Lincoln's deficiencies in loan underwriting, appraisals and speculative investments in junk bonds, equity securities and partnerships. Keating did not return our calls. He has said previously that his institution is profitable and healthy and that he is the victim of Bank Board persecution.

When the regulators in the San Francisco regional office of the Bank Board finished a long and often tense audit of Lincoln Savings and Loan, they recommended that the institution either be put in conservatorship or receivership. Lincoln officials found out and demanded to be taken out of the jurisdiction of the San Francisco office, according to a confidential Bank Board memo dated Jan. 13. Our associate Michael Binstein obtained a copy of that memo.

The Bank Board caved in to Lincoln's demands. On May 20 the three-member board voted 2-1 to conduct Lincoln's next examination out of Washington, D.C., instead of San Francisco. And the board ruled, in effect, that Keating could be able to shop for a new regulator through the acquisition of a thrift in another Bank Board district.

The decision to let a banking institution select its own regulatory office because it can't get along with the office to which it is assigned is unprecedented in the Bank Board's history.

Some of Wall's fellow regulators suspect politics may have played a role in the unusual ruling for Lincoln Savings and Loan. Keating and his business associates have given nearly $300,000 in campaign contributions to five senators during the 1980s. Those senators pressed the Bank Board regulators in San Francisco to bring their investigation of Lincoln to an end, according to a recent story by our associate Michael Binstein in the Washington Post. They are John Glenn, D-Ohio; Donald Riegle, D-Mich.; John McCain, R-Ariz.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; and Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

In an unusual meeting on April 9, 1987, the five senators sat down with regulators from the San Francisco office and in essence told them to wrap up the Lincoln investigation. "To be blunt, you should charge them or get off their backs," Glenn said, according to a confidential account of the meeting prepared by the one of the regulators.

Wall's handling of the Lincoln case seems to fly in the face of his announced goals when he took office last year. Then he said that the savings and loan industry would not be allowed to run roughshod over the Bank Board. "It's going to be ... hard for the agency to continue to be perceived to be too close to the industry it regulates," he said in an address at the National Press Club.

Danny Wall refused comment on this story.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Navy and the Marines have decided not to punish Kathleen Mazure for her choice of a husband. Mazure is a Navy lieutenant who had the gall to fall in love with a Marine corporal. Everybody knows that officers and enlisted people don't fall in love. It's called fraternization, and it's against the rules. Mazure's husband was forced to leave the Marines, and she was threatened with a court martial and two years in prison. Last month, the Navy and the Marines decided not to lock up Mazure. It wasn't that the brass came to their senses and threw out a silly rule. It was merely because Mazure was able to prove that no one explained the silly rule to her. Everybody's dignity is still intact, and we can all sleep better knowing that our national security will not be threatened by careless dating habits.

Now's not time to relax pressure on Soviets

MOSCOW — Driver pulls up in front of the Intourist Hotel near Red Square, double-parks and blocks the entrance. Soviet policeman shouts at him that the car will be towed away. Driver shrugs, walks off.

William Safire

How, I ask, can this challenge to authority be tolerated? "The threat had no credibility," my interpreter replied. "That cop couldn't get a tow truck here in a week."

A system without a profit motive is intrinsically sluggish, and not even fear of punishment can make workers productive. The Soviet "command" economy has failed; faced with the dire prospect of losing superpower status, the Russians have put on a new demeanor, promising more freedoms at home and no more subversion abroad. Wearing this mask, they hope to induce the West to finance their economic salvation.

Mr. Gorbachev offers the illusion of "democratization" because he has no other choice. World power is openly rooted in economic power, and Moscow has been forced to call timeout — to ask for peredishka, a breathing spell, and to reveal its desperation for Western credits and technology.

Any recognition of their real motive for the romancing of the West is resented. At a press conference, one of the "new thinking" economists, Nikolai Shmelev, denounced articles that have appeared in this space. My thesis has been that the revelation of zero growth in the Soviet economy means that the level of military spending has become unsustainable — that now is the time for us to press for arms cuts and major pullbacks in Africa and Central America.

"Mr. Safire's assertion of the military share is fantastic," he told the world press. He later admitted that the share could be up to 20 percent (higher than our outdated CIA estimates). Add to that a proportion of the dual-purpose production of aircraft and ships and trucks, plus the maintenance of Mr. Castro's mercenaries in Angola and similar adventures — and you have the confirmation of all I have been writing: no nation can long exist with one-third of its output devoted to arms and the cost of empire.

Their present dilemma presents us with a once-in-a-century opportunity. Not only should we refrain from alleviating the pain now forcing changes toward economic freedom, we should push hard for demobilization of troops, tolerance of dissent and retreat from Soviet imperialism.

They are prepared to retreat, as we have seen in Afghanistan. Our next focus should be on Africa, where 45,000 Cuban soldiers, financed by Moscow, prop up a regime in Angola that would otherwise be overwhelmed by Jonas Savimbi and his anti-Communist Unita insurgents.

The deal in the offing is simple: The U.S. induces South Africa to promise to pull out of neighboring Namibia while the U.S.S.R. gets Cuba to pull out of Angola. That is followed by — or better yet, accompanied by — an internal settlement between the puppet regime and the freedom fighters. Mr. Castro will fight the deal, because his most profitable export is the blood of Cuban youth, but in the end Mr. Gorbachev will make his decision for him.

In an interview, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Anatoly Adamishin made plain to The New York Times that Moscow favored a "political solution" to cut the "Angola-Namibian knot." If invited to participate directly in these negotiations, the Soviet Union would "consider it very attentively," which says to me that Moscow is eager to cut costs. "Where there is a will there's a way," says the up-and-coming Mr. Adamishin, adding wryly, "including the economic considerations of such concern to you."

At the summit last week, U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker met with Mr. Adamishin to noodge the parties: by Sept. 29, the 10th anniversary of the U.N. resolution calling for South Africa's departure from Namibia, the superpowers want to see some action in a mutual Cuban-South African withdrawal.

But here's the rub: On this most ripe of the regional issues — where Soviet-sponsored military influence can actually be rolled back — Mr. Reagan took no part. Impresario George Shultz relegated Angola to the third level of summiteering. The glasnostalgic president was too busy signing mail-order treaties to focus on an area where his personal attention might have provided an impetus.

The "Moscow spring," as Mr. Reagan curiously put it, might prove as short-lived and cruelly disappointing as the 1968 "Prague spring." Now is the moment to press, not to relax; but when strategy calls for the exploitation of Soviet economic weakness, along comes Ronald Reagan in his tow truck.

ART BUCHWALD

Getting rid of Noriega's easy; start a war!

Okay, let's see if we can explain Panama as simply as possible.

Q. Who is Manuel Noriega?

A. Manuel Noriega is the top banana of a top banana republic. But we want his tail out because he's not our kind of guy.

Art Buchwald

Q. Then why is he still there?

A. Because Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, who is the top banana in charge of Central America, keeps slipping on Noriega's banana peels. What you have to understand is that Noriega is a smart cookie even though he has been indicted for drug smuggling.

Q. I thought if the United States said someone in Central America had to go, he went.

A. So did Abrams, and apparently the White House felt the same way. But Noriega said you can't kick out a top banana unless you give him something in exchange. The United States was willing to go so far as to offer Noriega the first draft choice of the Washington Redskins, but he got greedy and held out for more.

Q. How did we get mixed up with Noriega in the first place?

A. He was on the payroll of the CIA, and also a big honcho in the drug business. The latter pastime didn't bother the CIA as long as Noriega did his job for the agency.

Q. Why didn't we bump him off earlier?

A. Because we didn't think he'd give us any trouble when we wanted to wave goodbye. If we had known then what we know now, he would have been a marvelous part of a cement lock in the Panama Canal.

Q. Why don't we buy him off right away?

A. The U.S. can't compete in payoffs with the money to be made from dealing dope.

Q. Besides the fact that he's a two-bit dictator, what else don't we like about Noriega?

A. He's a know-it-all and refuses to listen to any advice the American ambassador gives him.

Q. How come we didn't know his weak points?

A. We considered him a loyal ally because he was helping us fight the Sandinistas, and therefore as an anti-Communist he couldn't do anything wrong. We would probably still be in bed with him if the U.S. attorney in Florida hadn't indicted him.

Q. What is more important to the United States — getting someone to work for us in Nicaragua or convicting a person who is very big in the drug business?

A. It depends on whom you are working for in the U.S. government. In the past, State would have rather helped the Contras than worry about how much cocaine was going up the noses of people in the United States. But now they've changed their minds.

Q. Noriega can't be dumb. He played one agency off against the other and made the White House and State Department look ridiculous. How does the Administration explain it?

A. Very poorly. Elliot Abrams assured everyone that it was a matter of days before Noriega was on a boat for Argentina.

Q. Did Abrams lie?

A. Elliot Abrams doesn't lie — well, maybe a little, but not any more than someone else in his position. The feeling here is that Abrams is incompetent.

Q. If he is incompetent, why doesn't Shultz fire him?

A. When you're Secretary of State you don't fire a man just because he's doing a lousy job. You have to have a good reason.

Q. So if Abrams is running the show, how does the U.S. get rid of Noriega, ruling out war, of course?

A. Who said anything about ruling out war?

New computer helping athletes jump to great lengths

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — A glowing, green two-inch-high stick figure reproducing the long jump or triple jump form of a Carl Lewis or Willie Banks is helping America's elite athletes go to great lengths.

The figure on the screen in James Hay's biomechanics laboratory at the University of Iowa is a digital representation of movie film shot at 100 frames per second. It is a computerized projection of horizontal and vertical acceleration, angle of takeoff and body position in the air.

"We're trying to find the answers to some basic questions about jumping," Hay said. "We do a lengthy series of statistical analyses of the data. Out of that we put together a 40- to 50-page report with a summary of findings and what we think the athlete needs in terms of practice, what the coach and athlete might direct their attention to."

For example, a 45-page book prepared for triple jumper Mike Conley with data from TAC championship meets in 1983, 1985, 1986 and 1987, is crammed with data describing factors including "velocity changes of center of gravity from touchdown to takeoff of the hop phase."

The athletes like to see the stick figure representations, though.

"These stick figures do tell them where they are in a particular part of the jump," said Dean Hayes, 1988 U.S. Olympic long and triple jump coach, and a coach at Middle Tennessee State University for 23 years.

Hayes said Hay's research, funded by the U.S. Olympic Committee's elite athlete project, is highly prized by jumpers.

"They have confidence in him," the Olympic coach said. "Before, we gathered all this data but didn't know what to do with it. We're now giving the athlete and coach direct feedback. Hay's really done a good job of that."

Coach Tom Tellez, who has worked with Olympian Carl Lewis and his sister Carol at the University of Houston, said Hay's analyses are valuable even when they only back up what the coach and jumper have been doing.

"With Carl and Carol, he's done some good work," Tellez said. "He's reinforced for me a lot of the things I've been doing. For some other coaches and athletes he may have been even more valuable."

Hay isn't out to replace coaches with his statistics and stick figures.

One million blacks stay home as South African strike ends

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 1 million black workers and students stayed home today as a three-day general strike came to a close. Police reported widespread violence and said they dispersed unruly crowds with shotguns and tear gas.

Black labor unions and anti-apartheid groups staged the boycott to protest a 2-year-old state of emergency, more recent restrictions on their activities and proposed legislation to restrict the rights of unions to strike.

Police said a toddler was shot to death and a man was hacked to death from Tuesday through this morning, bringing the death toll to 10 since the strike began Monday.

Overnight, a train engine and freight car were derailed near Johannesburg; buses, private trucks, police vehicles, and homes were firebombed and stoned in several townships in Natal and Transvaal province, police said.

They said 15 people were injured and 25 arrested.

The government has said the protest is illegal, and employers said Tuesday that workers were returning to their jobs in many areas.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions, the nation's largest black union group, said it would consider meeting with the government's manpower chief to discuss the labor bill that sparked the strike — apparently the longest in the country's history.

The congress said at least 2.5 million people had honored the boycott.

Police said a 22-year-old man was hacked to death with a machete in Hammarsdale, in Natal; and a two-year-old child was found dead with a shotgun wound to the chest in Ashdown, also in Natal.

They said a group of blacks killed the man after setting homes on fire, but they gave no details on the death of the baby.

Police reported using shotgun fire, tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse crowds in several cases of violence in Natal, where groups who oppose the strike have clashed with militant protest supporters.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions called on employers to participate in an independent inquiry into the effects of the labor bill, which all black unions have opposed. It said it would also consider meeting with Manpower Minister Pieter du Plessis to discuss the legislation, which is about to be passed in the white-dominated Parliament.

Congress leader Jay Naidoo said the strike reflected "the wide-scale resentment and anger" about orders issued in February that barred his organization and other anti-apartheid groups from political activity.

President P.W. Botha's government imposed the emergency June 12, 1986, to combat a black uprising against apartheid, under which South Africa's 5 million whites control the country and deny its 26 million blacks a voice in national affairs.

Du Plessis has warned workers that they might be dismissed from their jobs for participating in the strike.

Police have warned news media about reporting on the extent of the strike, and the government-run broadcasting services have continually given upbeat reports about percentages of workers returning to their jobs since Monday.

Figures from government and private transport companies and employers indicated that the black workforce attendance in most of the Johannesburg-Pretoria area was half of normal. In Durban, the nation's third largest city, about 90 percent of the workers were staying home.

Israelis offer protection to Arab officials

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli authorities today offered protection to Arab officials in the occupied West Bank after an Israeli-appointed Arab mayor was stabbed in the heart, apparently by Palestinian militants.

Tawil

The army maintained a curfew on El Bireh and some areas in the neighboring town of Ramallah as it continued to search for suspects in the Tuesday stabbing of Hassan Tawil, 74, the El Bireh mayor.

Tawil was in stable condition, said a doctor at Ramallah hospital who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Israelis are trying to stop other Arab officials from quitting under pressure from militants.

The Israeli newspaper Maariv said the military government would step up protection for the Arab officials, but it did not specify what steps would be taken. An army spokesman refused comment.

A 19-year-old man from the Gaza Strip refugee camp of Jebalya died overnight from wounds he suffered when beaten by Israel soldiers, Dr. Ahmed Yassih of Gaza City's Shifa Hospital said. The army confirmed Hussein Jam'a Abu-Jallalah died but said said the circumstances and cause of death were not clear.

The death would raise the number of Arabs killed in the six-month old Palestinian uprising to 202. Two Israelis have also died in the unrest in lands Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Israel radio today reported the army would prosecute an officer and two soldiers for excessive use of force in Arura, a village near Ramallah where two residents said they were buried under a pile of rocks last month.

Hanna Atrash, the elected Arab mayor of the West Bank town of Beit Sahour, said eight soldiers in two jeeps offered to protect him but he refused when they said he couldn't go anywhere without them.

"I also told them they are hurting me more than they are helping me," he said.

Atrash was elected mayor in 1976, the last year Israel allowed free elections in the territories.

Tawil is one of about a dozen Arab mayors appointed by the military government to replace Israeli officers who ran the towns and cities after some mayors were deposed and elections were banned. The heads of about 85 village councils also are appointed by the military government.

A senior military official said army representatives were meeting with Arab officials to block resignations anticipated after the stabbing and the appearance of a new underground leaflet calling on Israeli-appointed officials to resign.

Many Arab officials have received threats or had their homes stoned or firebombed in recent weeks, said the official, also speaking on condition on anonymity.

But by this morning, "not one person has resigned," said Olivier Rafowicz, spokesman for the army administration.

The mayor of the West Bank town of Qalqilya, Rahman Abu Sneineh, condemned the stabbing and told Israeli army radio that he did not want any protection because "God will protect me."

Abu Sneineh, who is considered a moderate, said he had no reason to fear because "I do not cooperate with the military government, I only cooperate with the residents of my town."

The army said there was no basis for the allegation that residents were buried under a pile of rocks in Arura. But the officer and two soldiers would be tried for using force on suspects after their arrest and allegedly shooting at the legs of protesters without justification, Israel radio said.

In a new leaflet issued Tuesday, the PLO-led United Leadership of the Uprising called for a general strike Thursday.

WORLD in brief

Afghan's Najib threatens to delay troops' pullout

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Najib of Afghanistan, in his United Nations debut, threatened to seek a delay in the Soviet troop withdrawal from his country if Pakistan continues its vigorous support of anti-communist guerrillas.

Najib also told a news conference Tuesday that more than 34,000 Soviet soldiers have left Afghanistan since May 15 under a U.N.-mediated agreement calling for a complete Red Army pullout over nine months.

But Najib said his Marxist government could have the pace of withdrawal slowed if neighboring Pakistan does not stop what he called interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979. More than 100,000 had until last month helped friendly governments fight guerrillas backed by the United States, Pakistan and China.

The guerrillas have repudiated the settlement signed April 14 in Geneva. They reject Najib's government, refuse to join a coalition government and vow to continue fighting Soviet and Afghan army forces.

Nicaraguans cite progress

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government and U.S.-backed rebels moved closer to a settlement as they began another round of peace talks. Both sides reported progress on the key issue of democratic reforms.

Negotiators, who meet again today, discussed Tuesday a government proposal that a Sandinista official said accedes to nearly all Contra rebel demands for ending the ruling party's political monopoly.

Before they lay down their arms and end six years of fighting, the rebels want guaranteed freedom of the press, an end to Sandinista control of the army and government, the right to strike and judicial and electoral reforms.

"We have made substantial advances," Information Minister Manuel Espinoza said after Tuesday's session in Managua that opened the fourth round of negotiations since the foes signed a preliminary peace accord on March 23.

Alleged terrorist detained

TOKYO (AP) — An alleged Japanese terrorist who authorities say may have been involved in plotting attacks on the Olympic Games in Seoul arrived today under heavy police guard after being deported from the Philippines.

About 100 police officers met the Japan Air Lines plane carrying Hiroshi Sensui as it arrived at Tokyo's Narita airport, the Tokyo Broadcasting Service said.

The NPA official said police would start interrogating Sensui, 51, at Metropolitan Police headquarters tonight. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

Sensui was arrested Tuesday at a suburban Manila hotel and hustled aboard a Japan Air Lines jet bound for Tokyo today.

Architects to inspect renovated county jail

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A sign that the Midland County Jail's year-long renovation is nearing an end was evidenced by an architectural inspection of the facility slated for today.

The architectural review was to establish a date for substantial completion sometime within the next two weeks, jail architect Walter Pate of Pate & Associates said.

That's when construction workers complete the unfinished chores and prepare for a June 22 inspection by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

"I don't think there are any problems," Pate said of the work remaining on the last of four stages of construction. "I feel confident that we're in pretty good shape."

The inspection of the facility by the Jail Standards Commission will determine whether the fifth-floor structure is fit to begin taking in prisoners, according to Sheriff Gary Painter, who has been operating the jail at 85 percent capacity since 1985.

"We'll open as soon as it (the jail) is inspected and certified by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. That's the only way that the remedial order will be lifted," the sheriff said.

Midland County fell under a Texas Commission on Jail Standards remedial order in April of that year because it neglected to equip the facility with adequate cell lighting, an exercise area, sunlight throughout the jail and sound-and-sight separation of prisoners.

Threatening to close the jail unless the county corrected the deficiencies within 60 days, the commission limited the inmate population to 85 percent of capacity to allow for the classification of prisoners in single and multi-occupancy cells according to sex, inmate temperaments, status as misdemeanor or felony offenders, and the seriousness of crimes charged against inmates.

The $1.5 million jail renovations provided for additional bed space, improved lighting and an exercise area, according to Painter, who observed that only some minor wiring and painting remains to be completed on the year-long construction project.

"It's all minor stuff right now," he said. "We just need to make sure everything works."

Noting that "a jail is the most complicated building" to design, Pate fears that certification by the Jail Standards Commission will be delayed by the discovery of additional deficiencies.

However, the architect expects that those repairs "can be taken care of fairly readily" and that the commission "would allow the jail to operate all 104 cells."

Denoting optimism, Painter said he doesn't foresee any delay in certification since the renovation progressed under the supervision of the commission.

"We did everything with the commission's blessing," he asserted. "I don't know what else could be done that would make it more attractive to the commission."

Since construction on the jail began last spring, the structure has operated without many of its existing amenities, including kitchen facilities and air conditioning.

"I guess the thing that hurt us the most was the that air conditioning was down so long," said Painter, "and we had to move the kitchen facilities to the Southside Lions Club and haul the food back and forth."

State officials expect peaceful GOP convention

HOUSTON (AP) — The state Republican convention in Houston this week should be a relatively harmonious affair, top party officials say.

"Old Republicans as as well as new Republicans agree on about 90 percent of the issues," GOP Chairman George Strake said Tuesday. "My job...is to get people to focus on things they agree on."

He said no major skirmishes were expected between supporters of George Bush, the likely nominee, and supporters of former candidate Pat Robertson.

"I've said all along I look at the Robertson situation as an unlimited opportunity," Strake said at a news conference prefacing the three-day convention, which begins Thursday. "I think this party would not be where it is today, on the verge of becoming a majority party, if we would not have had the Robertson faction."

Party officials estimate about 40 percent of the 6,000 delegates to the state convention back the former television evangelist while 55 percent support Bush, the party's likely presidential nominee.

Robertson was expected to arrive at the convention Thursday but was not scheduled to speak until Saturday. Vice President Bush, who calls Houston home, is slated to address the convention Thursday.

Other convention speakers were to include Gov. Bill Clements, Secretary of Education William Bennett, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and GOP National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf.

"We want to leave this town with an upbeat attitude," Strake said. "What I want to do in November is win big because a big win will help us all the way down the ballot."

Strake said he expected Republicans to gain 10 seats this November in the Texas House, two to four seats in the Senate, keep its two spots on the Texas Supreme Court and add two or three more.

He speculated it would be a struggle for Republicans to keep the congressional seat being vacated by Beau Boulter, who is running for U.S. Senate, and that Bush's pull in Texas would keep two-term U.S. Rep. Mac Sweeney of Wharton in office. Among the Democratic incumbents, Jim Chapman's 1st District seat and John Bryant's in the 5th District are the most vulnerable, he said.

> "Old Republicans as well as new Republicans agree on about 90 percent of the issues."
>
> — George Strake, GOP chairman

Boulter, waging an uphill battle against U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, could pull off a big surprise, according to Strake, who said such an upset was possible only if Bush won big in Texas.

While Bush's selection of a running mate would have little impact on the vice president's performance in Texas, Strake said a Michael Dukakis-Lloyd Bentsen Democratic ticket would be interesting. Bush still would win in Texas, he said.

"I'd like to see Dukakis and Bentsen have lunch together," Strake said. "Dukakis is a proven liberal and Bentsen is trying to say he's a conservative."

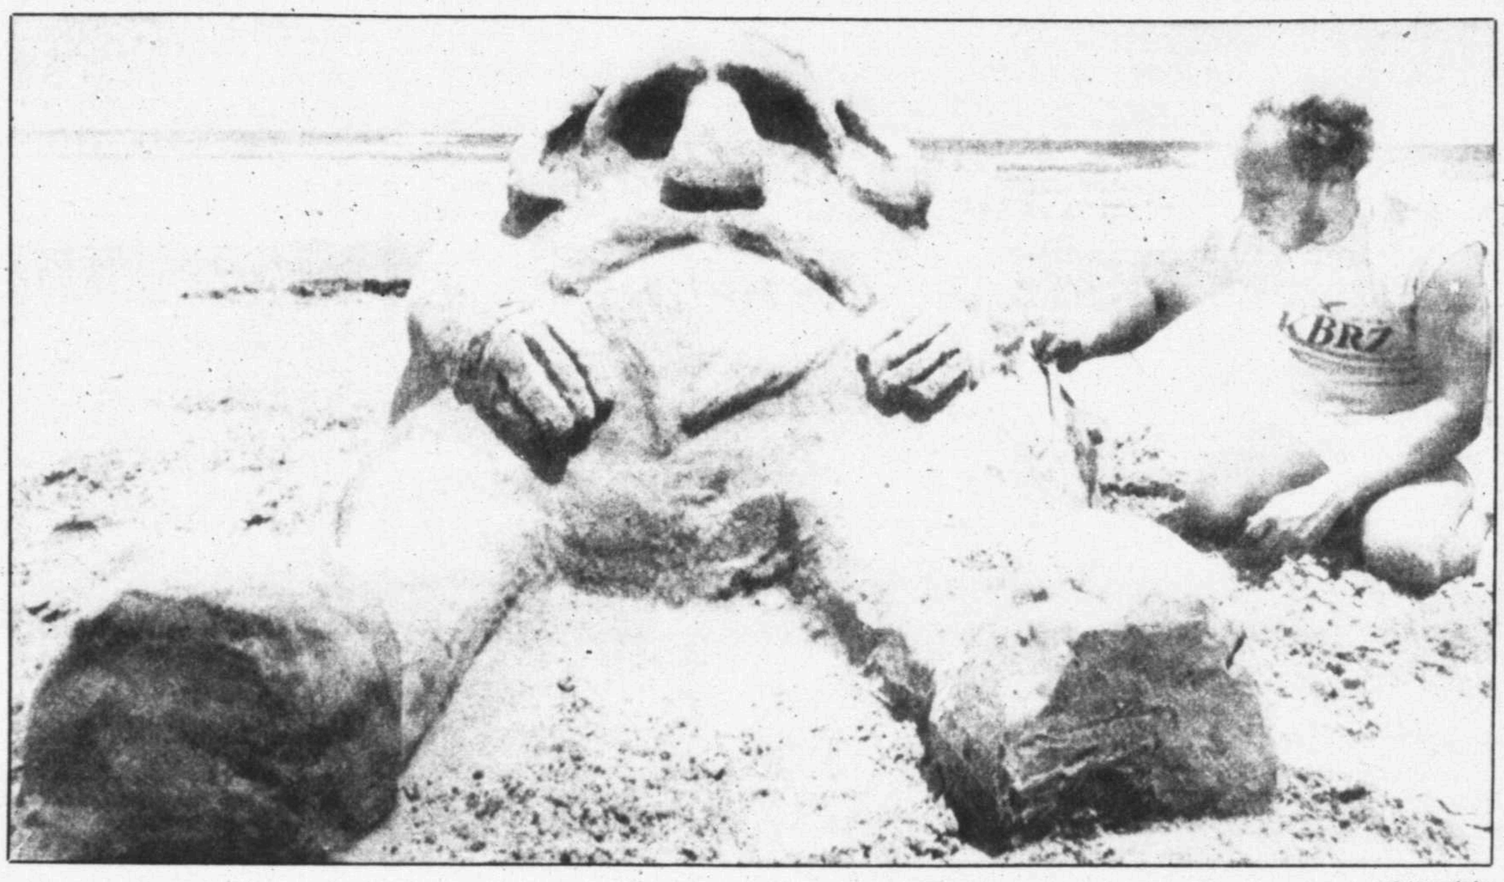

Strake, who is not seeking re-election as head of the state party, said he supported Fred Meyer as his successor. Meyer, now finance chairman for the state party, is a former Dallas County GOP chairman.

"He turned Dallas literally into a mecca for Republicans," Strake said.

Texas Democrats are holding their convention the following week, also in Houston. Strake characterized national Democrats as a picture of unity.

"All six of them who ran for the presidency don't have a dime's worth of difference in their own philosophy," he said. "Jesse Jackson just speaks better than the rest of them.

"The point is the message they're selling is just too liberal for Texas."

Mattox: Suit could cost Texas federal funds

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A lawsuit aimed at excluding illegal aliens from the 1990 U.S. census count could cost Texas millions in federal funds and as many as two new congressional seats, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday.

Mattox said Texas, in cooperation with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, has joined the state of New York in an attempt to intervene in the federal lawsuit filed by numerous U.S. congressmen and several groups.

Similar action is anticipated from the states of California, Illinois and Florida, he said.

The lawsuit, filed in February in a Pennsylvania district court, seeks to prevent the U.S. Census Bureau from counting illegal aliens in the upcoming 1990 census.

"Simply stated, Texas stands to be stripped of its strong voice in Congress and of federal financial aid if the plaintiffs win this lawsuit," Mattox said.

Because of the suit, the state could lose at least one and possibly two additional congressional seats, as well as millions in federal aid for education, human services, highways, mass transit, public housing, school lunches, community block grants and other programs, Mattox said.

An estimated 2 to 8 million illegal aliens live in the United States, and as many as 1.2 million could be in Texas, Mattox said. Five states — Texas, California, Florida, Illinois and New York — contain 80 percent of all illegal aliens in the country.

"We believe it is essential that these individuals be counted as they have been counted for the past 200 years," he said.

What prompted the lawsuit is that a number of states, particularly Pennsylvania and Connecticut, are on the verge of losing congressional seats because of population shifts. U.S. Rep. Thomas Ridge, a Pennsylvania Republican, is the lead plaintiff in the suit.

Seats in Congress are reapportioned every 10 years based on the most recent census count. Since 1960, Pennsylvania has lost four congressional seats and Texas has gained four.

In his request for intervention in the suit, Mattox noted that a 1982 U.S. Supreme Court decision ordered Texas to provide children of all residents — legal or illegal — with an equal and free education.

"Yet this lawsuit would threaten our ability to do that if it is successful," he said.

MALDEF's Jose Garza of San Antonio said the lawsuit, if successful, would jeopardize an accurate count of the Hispanic population.

Many Hispanics fear the census information could be turned over to immigration officials for possible prosecution, he said.

"If they are successful in including a question...that isolates persons by legal status, that would have a devastating impact on all the work that we have been doing," Garza said.

Specialist goes to great heights to save trees

By NANCY PERDUE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Although Patty Leslie will go out of her way to save living things, the times she climbed a ladder and clung to a limestone bluff were not attempts at saving animals.

She simply was trying to protect a rare tree growing in the Hill Country.

"It is exciting to try and preserve the natural diversity of the state," Ms. Leslie said.

"Most people get real excited about endangered animals, but they don't think about plants," she said. "And plants are very important to us. About 30 percent of the medicine we take comes from plant compounds."

Ms. Leslie, 31, is a San Antonio Botanical Center native plants specialist who is involved in an effort to save plants on the federal endangered list.

The horticulturist is focusing her attention on the Styrax Texana, commonly called the Texas Snowbell because it bears white bell-shaped flowers.

"They're very palatable to livestock and deer," Ms. Leslie said, explaining that experts speculate that hungry animals are the culprits responsible for killing the trees.

"They are found growing only in Real and Edwards counties," she said. "There are less than 45 plants in the wild."

The trees, which hang from bluffs overlooking streams or creek beds, fail to repopulate naturally because their seeds fall into the water and are washed away.

In 1985, Ms. Leslie became involved in a project that involves collecting seeds, germinating them and planting them in a greenhouse setting.

In May 1987, when the trees were about 10 inches tall, she and some other experts took the Snowbells to two private property sites in the Hill Country where they climbed a ladder and then clung to a cliff as they transplanted 25 trees at each location.

As an added precaution to keep animals from helping themselves to dinner, the group placed chicken wire around the tiny trees.

"Then we had those spring monsoons and it washed a lot of them out," Ms. Leslie said. "We had to replant most of the trees at one site."

Today, 47 Snowbells still are growing on the controlled bluff sites as part of the species revival project.

Ms. Leslie said Southwest Texas Junior College instructor Toney Keeney of Uvalde and officials with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are assisting in the effort.

High expected to reach 103, meteorologist says

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A high pressure system stagnant over the U.S. central Plains states is the culprit behind Midland-Odessa's early summer heat wave, a meteorologist said this morning.

The high today was expected to hit 103, said Gary Woodall, a National Weather Service meteorologist.

The high coupled with a relative humidity level in the 40-50 percent range should translate into a heat index reading near 115 for the area, he added.

And relief from the parching weather is not in sight for the Permian Basin because of the closed, non-circulating system, Woodall said.

There is a chance of isolated thundershowers in the area, but not for at least five days, he said.

Though temperatures may not hit the 100 degree-plus mark daily for the remainder of the month, Woodall said a cooling trend is not expected for at least 10 days.

The high pressure system is creating 100 degree-weather as far north as central Kansas and temperatures in the 90s as far north as the Dakotas and Minnesota, the meteorologist said.

Tonight should be clear and warm with a low in the upper 60s. Winds from the south should blow in at 5-10 mph.

Thursday will be sunny with a high predicted near 103. Winds should be from the southwest at 5-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 100 didn't break the 24-year-old record high for that day of 106.

The record low for today was set in 1949 when it dropped to 57.

Odessa police investigating couple's deaths

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police this morning were continuing to investigate a double shooting that left a man and woman dead early today.

Police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon said officers responded to a "shots fired" call about 12:25 a.m.

Arriving on the scene, he said, patrol officers found Marialma Renteria, 35, lying on a sofa in the living room of the residence with what appeared to be a single gunshot wound to the head. Uriel C. Renteria, 42, was found lying on the floor in the same room with a similar wound, McAhon stated.

An ambulance was called and "the male was determined to be deceased at the scene," according to McAhon. The woman was transported to Medical Center Hospital, treated in the emergency room and admitted to intensive care, where she died a short time later.

Peace Justice Julian Pressly ordered autopsies but made no preliminary determination as to the cause of death of the man and woman, McAhon said.

Professor develops safer ways for dealing with wind shear

HOUSTON (AP) — A Rice University aerospace science professor has developed what he calls new and safer maneuvers for airline pilots in dealing with deadly wind shear during takeoffs and landings.

In some instances, the procedures could double the chance of survivability, said Angelo Miele.

Miele, who began his intense studies four years ago, believes they could lead within three years to new cockpit guidance displays for pilots confronted with unexpected wind shear.

The new procedures differ from the strategy of many pilots to attempt a rapid constant climb and the Federal Aviation Administration's recommended strategy to make a constant climb with the aircraft pitched up 15 degrees.

Miele and fellow researcher William Melvin, a veteran Delta Air Lines captain who chairs the Air Line Pilots Association's airworthiness committee, note that some wind shears may be so severe they are unsurvivable no matter a pilot's strategy.

Melvin, who has logged 18,000 hours, said ALPA has requested a FAA hearing to discuss the latest findings.

"The problem of flight through a wind shear is one of three major problems for airline pilots," Miele said. "The other two — high altitude turbulence upsets and winter weather effects (icing) — have been largely solved."

Wind shear has been blamed for 30 airline disasters in the past two decades, including the 1985 crash of a Delta plane during landing at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport that killed 137 and the 1982 crash of a Pan American plane during takeoff in New Orleans that killed 153.

Wind shear is characterized by abrupt shifts in wind direction and intensity.

While severe wind shear is often associated with severe thunderstorms, which pilots are trained to avoid, more insidious forms are associated with less visibly threatening puffy cloud structures that tower into the sky.

Many forms are harmless, but those characterized by a strong downburst or descending column of air, which sweeps horizontally near the ground, are considered extremely dangerous.

Downbursts, in turn, can be characterized as microbursts, which range up to three miles across, to macrobursts, which range from three to 300 miles across. Though smaller, the microburst is considered more dangerous because it is stronger.

In a downburst, an aircraft experiences both a head wind and down draft followed by a tail wind and down draft, all in a few seconds.

Police probe criminal mischief

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police today are listing what was initially believed to be an unprovoked attack on an off-duty police officer as a case of possible criminal mischief.

Sgt. Snow Robertson was headed home after work Tuesday afternoon in the 6500 block of Highway 80 East when he heard what sounded like a shot and the shattering of the rear glass in his police vehicle.

Robertson was struck by flying glass but was not seriously injured.

Robertson, 35, said he was headed east on Highway 80 and had noticed a light blue pickup truck with tinted glass pull up beside him several times just before the glass shattered.

Acting on the assumption a shot had been fired, officers later stopped a pickup truck matching the one Robertson described. The vehicle was searched but no weapon was found. Robertson was unable to positively identify the three occupants of the vehicle.

Two of the men were arrested on outstanding traffic warrants.

Robertson said at the scene he knew of no reason why anyone would attempt to shoot at him.

Police this morning are speculating the rear glass of Robertson's vehicle may have shattered because of Tuesday's high temperatures, which topped the 100 degree mark. His vehicle had been parked in the police department parking lot until he finished his shift at 2 p.m.

The official police report, according to police spokesman John McAhon, lists the incident as "criminal mischief," with no reference to a shot being fired.

Doris Goodrich Jones, a Temple native, has entertained children with her puppets since 1937. Ms. Jones has written more than 40 plays and has between 200 and 300 puppets.

'Lone puppeteer' says best part of shows children's joyful reactions

TEMPLE (AP) — Dunkin Darna, Clippo the Clown and Asthma first visited the Temple Public Library in 1937.

Recently the trio returned for their 51st year under the nimble hands of "the lone puppeteer," Doris Goodrich Jones.

"The best part is the joy of the children," Ms. Jones, an octogenarian, said. "They love the puppets just as much as they ever did. They just really believe (the puppets) are real people. They are convinced."

Ms. Jones, a Temple native currently living in Waco, was one of only a handful of puppeteers traveling Texas in the 1930s. In those days before television, she crisscrossed the state in her Ford pickup splitting admission charges 60-40 with schools and civic groups as she put on thousands of performances.

"I made my living with puppets," she said. "I charged 5 cents a person. That was a lot of money for people who were poor."

Puppets were unknown to most of the schoolchildren she performed for, and the boys in particular had a hard time accepting the new art form. "They thought they were dolls," Ms. Jones said. "I would tell them, 'Did you ever see a doll do this?' "

More than a doll act, a puppet show requires expertise in singing, dancing, ventriloquism, sewing and carpentry, Ms. Jones says. "It's hard work," she said. "I had to make new plays all the time and new characters. I make all of my puppets."

She is nicknamed "the lone puppeteer" because she does everything at once during a performance. While Ms. Jones, an accomplished violinist, puts a bow to her fiddle behind stage, a puppet plays his pint-sized instrument and taps his feet while another puppet claps to the beat.

Ms. Jones has written more than 40 plays and has between 200 and 300 puppets — she vows to count them when she finds time. The puppet plays have been documented on film by Bruce and Karen Johnson, who have been working with Ms. Jones for the past 10 years and now give her a breather manipulating the puppets' strings.

"I was originally interested in the construction (of the puppet stages) for its historic value," Johnson said. "Little by little, Doris (got) us into performing."

Each new puppet starts with an "idea," Ms. Jones said. Dunken Darna, named for the darning egg he was made on, is the hands-down favorite of the kids.

With her portable shoulder-strap stage, Ms. Jones wanders through the crowd as Darna the clown "dunks" his head out of sight and returns as Darna the Indian. As a finale, Darna blows up a balloon to sounds of laughter and looks of awe from the children.

The reaction is much like her own when her father, W. Goodrich Jones, an early Temple civic leader known as the father of Texas forestry, took her to the circus and introduced her to those famous puppets, Punch and Judy.

"I can still feel the horror of seeing Punch with his club knocking every puppet down, even Judy, his homely wife," she wrote in a diary of her career.

More camping sites opened up for Rainbow Family's gathering

GROVETON (AP) — More camping sites have been opened up to accommodate Rainbow Family members who plan to gather near Groveton for the Fourth of July peace gathering by the back-to-nature group, a family member says.

The group is "playing games" to keep the U.S. Forest Service guessing, Forest Service officials say.

A Rainbow Family member known as Alabama said two additional sites will hold an overflow as members arrive and the Groveton camp is being prepared, a family member known as Alabama said Tuesday.

Forest Service spokeswoman Gay Ippolito said Forest Service personnel continue to patrol the area on Forest Road 583 in the Davy Crockett National Forest and are "monitoring the situation."

"We are monitoring things overall. If they move, we will move too in order to administer the site," Ms. Ippolito said. "But right now we have no sure sign any moving is going on. We are seeing the same people there each day."

The group does not anticipate any problems with the Davy Crockett forest area at Groveton, he said. Family members believe the site is big enough to hold the annual Gathering of the Tribes.

The Forest Service placed a gate across the north end of the forest road, and have said the gate is intended for the protection of an elderly woman who owns property near the site.

The Rainbow Family reported that two Groveton men pulled the gate down Friday night and dragged it a mile away.

Alabama said the group has the support of Groveton merchants who do not want the Forest Service "government bureaucrats to hassle us."

Trinity County officers say it has not been determined who pulled the gate down, and no arrests were made in the incident. Another gate has been set up.

A handful of arrests have been made by Trinity County deputies for public intoxication and disorderly conduct.

One Rainbow Family member was arrested for public nudity Sunday, and officers say he will be extradited to California where he is wanted on a drug charge. Deputies arrested two more family members for disorderly conduct late Monday.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's ruling on the injunction opened the way for the group to meet "pretty much where they want to," Ms. Ippolito said.

But, she said, the ruling also pointed out that the Forest Service can enforce the laws against disorderly conduct, public intoxication and public nudity, as well as other offenses.

Senate panel OKs appropriation of $100 million for proposed SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel voted Tuesday to appropriate $100 million to the proposed "super collider," but the legislation prohibits beginning construction on the multibillion-dollar project during the next fiscal year.

The House approved on May 17 a $100 million appropriation for the super collider, but also decreed no funds could be used for construction or purchase of capital equipment. The money is to be spent on research and development.

Texas is one of seven finalist states for the high-energy physics project recommended by the Reagan administration. The others are Arizona, Michigan, Colorado, Illinois, North Carolina and Tennessee.

"Following the lead of the House, the Senate appropriations subcommittee gave us $100 million for the SSC next year. That's not as much as we wanted, but it is a solid sum in any case in these days of tight budgets," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"We are going to have to work to try to increase the appropriation and also to soften the effect of the restrictive 'no-construction' languange the subcommittee included in its report. Unfortunately that kind of language can slow this vital project down," said Bentsen.

The package was approved by the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on energy and water development.

WIND

Though major airports are being equipped with Doppler radar to help detect wind shear, dangerous conditions form quickly and can form in series, so an aircraft may clear one and enter another.

Studies indicate severe downbursts are more likely to form during the late afternoon between May and August.

Using a computer, Miele studied wind shear models and the flight characteristics of the Boeing 727 to develop what he terms "optimal" flight trajectories for pilots confronted by unexpected wind shear as their aircraft leave the runway and during final approach.

Miele and Melvin said pilots can fly approximations of these optimal trajectories if their airliners are equipped with sensors that measure wind and aircraft acceleration as well as the status of the plane and computer software that can translate that data into a useful cockpit display.

Melvin said altitude indicators equipped with flight directors (lines on the indicator display) on many existing airliners could be modified to provide the useful heading and pitch prompts to the pilot.

Miele stressed that the optimal maneuvers his studies support would probably be unsuccessfully carried out without improved instrumentation.

Three persons jailed after two drug raids

From Staff Reports

Three persons are in custody today on narcotics charges following two Tuesday raids by Midland County Sheriff's officers, according to reports.

More than 1¼ pounds of marijuana with a street value of about $2,000 was confiscated and a 24-year-old man was arrested by officers after they went to a residence in the 900 block of N. The device was described as a grenade simulator, according to officers.

At about 5 p.m., officers armed with a search warrant went to an apartment on the north side of Midland and arrested a man and a woman, according to reports.

Three "balloons" of heroin, or about two grams with a street value of $1,200, were found in the apartment, officers said.

The arrest was made without incident, and the two persons will be charged today with possession of heroin, officers said.

Man dies in traffic accident

ODESSA — A traffic accident at the intersection of Andrews Highway and University Boulevard late Monday night claimed the life of a 43-year-old west Ector County man.

Kenneth Wayne Davis, 10019 W. 24th St., died about 3:45 a.m. Tuesday of injuries suffered in the accident while undergoing emergency surgery at Medical Center Hospital.

According to police traffic investigator R.G. Smith, vehicles driven by Magdalena Rivera Pittman, 26, 3401 Brazos, and Ruben Salazar, 24, 2202 Huntington, were headed east, stopped for a red light and were proceeding through the intersection on a green light when the 1972 Chevrolet Chevelle driven by Davis slammed into the rear of the 1987 GMC pickup driven by Salazar. The Davis vehicle careened around the rear of the pickup and into the path of the 1979 Chevrolet Nova driven by Ms. Pittman, police said. Davis' car was struck broadside by the Pittman vehicle.

Smith's report indicated Davis was not wearing a seat belt at the time of the accident.

The report also stated Davis failed to stop for a red light at the intersection.

A 12-year-old passenger in the Pittman vehicle, Adriann Jimenez, 3401 Brazos, was transported to Medical Center Hospital where she was treated and released.

Salazar refused treatment at the scene for himself, his 21-year-old wife, Laticia, and 2-year-old daughter, Natalie.

Ms. Pittman was not injured in the collision.

Denison girl in film about Mouseketeers

By MONA PALMER

DENISON (AP) — If Denison's Jennifer McGill doesn't know the famous lines by now, she'll be singing them in her sleep by the end of the summer ...

M-I-C "See you real soon."

K-E-Y "Why? Because we like you."

M-O-U-S-E...

Jennifer, 9, is one of the new Mouseketeers, who will play the old Mouseketeers in a Walt Disney Studios movie scheduled for release this fall.

"I'm a Mouseketeer," Jennifer says, trying out the word.

For almost two months, Jennifer has thought of becoming a Mouseketeer.

Through three auditions, Jennifer belted out songs, tapped her toes, performed jazz routines and read scripts.

Finally, Disney officials called her mother, Joy, a couple of weeks ago. Joy called Jennifer at school with the news.

"When I was walking down there (to the school office) I kept thinking 'What have I done now?' " Jennifer said. "I heard Mom's voice and when she mentioned Julie's name (the talent agent) and I felt really excited...I'm a Mouseketeer."

"She was very down to earth about it," Mrs. McGill said. "The first thing she asked was if I was really sure so she could tell her teacher.

"Jennifer loves to perform, and this is an opportunity she's always wanted. We're extremely grateful."

Jennifer said she was never really scared during her tryouts.

"I kept thinking, 'this could be my whole future,' " she said. "I was nervous but I wouldn't really call it scared."

Jennifer's father, John, is a training supervisor with Conair. She also has a 6-year-old brother, Justin.

Mrs. McGill said her daughter is a "pageant child."

"She loves to sing, and the only place she had to sing was in a pageant," Mrs. McGill said.

Jennifer's latest pageant, the Royal American Miss in Dallas, set her Disney career in motion.

One of the judges was a children's talent agent. After the show, she approached the McGills and talked with them about representing Jennifer.

Within two weeks, the agent arranged a private audition for Jennifer with Disney representatives who had selected her photo from 500 submitted from the Dallas area. She then auditioned — singing and dancing. When she made the third cut, Disney representatives filmed Jennifer singing, dancing and acting.

The McGills don't know what part Jennifer will play in the upcoming movie.

Disney probably will film the movie this summer in California. Mrs. McGill said the movie will be spun off into a series. Whether Jennifer will be in the series hasn't been discussed, she said.

While teaching seventh and eighth grade English at B. McDaniel Middle School, Mrs. McGill found the time to coach her daughter.

"When Jennifer was a baby, she sang with my mother," Mrs. McGill said. "By the time she was 4, we knew she was exceptional, and at 7 she expressed an interest in contests."

Mrs. McGill is also a singer and was in the 1967 Miss Texas pageant. She also studied music in college.

Aide says Boulter's charge against Bentsen 'foolish'

Boulter

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's spokesman says it's foolish to charge that Bentsen's 1978 vote to give away the Panama Canal was ill-advised due to government knowledge of drug trafficking by Panamanian officials.

The charge was raised again Tuesday by Republican Senate hopeful Beau Boulter, who also said Bentsen's earlier response — that the charge was "funny" and "ridiculous" — was off-base.

"It's not funny that Lloyd Bentsen voted to give the canal to a government of drug dealers. It's not funny that Col. Noriega today is what he was then — a drug thug. And it's not funny that Panama today is a major pipeline for drugs into our country," Boulter told a news conference Tuesday.

Displaying a copy of the Feb. 21, 1978 Congressional Record, Boulter said a debate on the canal treat in the Senate that day touched on the character of Panamanian officials and the alleged narcotics involvement of some of them. Noriega, then a colonel, was chief of military intelligence.

"Noriega is mentioned more than several times in this (debate) transcript," Boulter said.

Bentsen twice voted present in the Senate the day of that debate, Boulter added.

Jack DeVore, Bentsen's press secretary, said Boulter's charge still is ridiculous.

"This is just another foolish stunt by Congressman Boulter. The fact is, Vice President (George) Bush himself says we only recently got conclusive proof of Noriega's drug smuggling. Yet Boulter claims that Sen. Bentsen had the proof 10 years ago," DeVore said.

"It was a debate with one side claiming one thing and the other side claiming another thing," Bentsen's spokesman said.

Asked whether Bentsen had any second thoughts about his 1978 vote to ratify the canal treaty, DeVore said, "No."

While information aired in the debate didn't constitute conclusive proof, Boulter said, it was sufficient to raise questions about the activities of some Panamanian officials.

Bentsen "knew or he should have known that Noriega was involved in drug dealings. He knew or he should have known the character and kind of people that he was in favor of giving the Panama Canal to," Boulter told a news conference. "My claim is not preposterous. It is, in fact, true."

The Republican said Bentsen should explain why he voted to ratify the canal treaty.

Boulter said Bentsen now is advocating additional federal spending on drug interdiction efforts along the nation's southern border. Boulter agrees with such a move, but he said it might not have been needed had the United States retained control of the canal.

"Now he is leaping into action as he seems to do every six years," Boulter said. "I don't disagree with that. But we might not have to spend that money had we not propped up a corrupt, drug-trafficking government by letting them have the revenues and the tolls from the Panama Canal."

Austin NWS office to cut back operations

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin residents should not be concerned for their safety because the National Weather Service office is going to start closing for six hours each day because of budget cutbacks, a NWS meteorologist says.

The Austin office is scheduled to close from midnight to 6 a.m. beginning July 3, leaving the monitoring of Austin weather in the care of the National Weather Service office in San Antonio. The weather service has offered 24-hour service in Austin since 1936.

The cutback is necessary, the Weather Service says, because of budget constraints. Officials said Tuesday the move should pose no threat to the safety of Austin residents.

"If we have hazardous weather, the radar in Hondo will pick it up and notify San Antonio and they would call up here and someone would come into the office," said Dave Owens, meteorologist in charge at the Austin office.

Although this method is rather time consuming, it is not likely to result in a storm hitting Austin before warnings could be issued, he said.

He said this should put someone in the office long before the storm reached Austin, but occasionally there could be problems.

City Emergency Management Director Chuck Harrison said that relying on the San Antonio office to monitor the overnight weather "won't really do us much good as far as warning people is concerned."

"San Antonio would have to decide when the situation was becoming dangerous," Harrison said.

"Then they would have to call a forecaster (in Austin) and wake him up, then he'd have to get up and go crank up all his equipment before he could make a decision, but by then it'll be too late and he won't need to make a decision."

The City Emergency Management office usually waits until storms are almost on top of Austin before issuing warnings. This is done to prevent false alarms that could lead residents to ignore warnings.

Owens said the cut from 24- to 18-hour operations was prompted by a lack of funds to hire more forecasters.

"Our station doctrine calls for six journeymen to operate the station, but for the past two years we've been operating with five men," Owens said.

He said one of the men retired recently and the office has been operating with only four men for two weeks.

"We were all getting burned out working 16-hour shifts," Owens said.

"We've got budgetary restrictions and hiring freezes," Owens said.

"We're hoping this is very temporary. I hope they may even raise" the hiring freeze before July 3.

Sabat's footprints don't match those of missing Illinois boy

EL PASO (AP) — Officials plan to continue their efforts to identify a deaf-mute boy found wandering last year in Mexico after the mysterious boy's footprints didn't match those of a missing Illinois boy.

The deaf-mute boy, nicknamed Sabat (for Sabado, Saturday in Spanish, the day of the week he was found) was found last November near an international bridge in El Paso's Mexican sister city of Ciudad Juarez. He cannot speak and communicates through drawings and gestures.

Officials believe the boy, whom they estimate to be 7 or 8 years old, might be from the United States because of his preference for American cartoons and food and his familiarity with U.S. money. Pictures he has drawn seem to indicate the boy survived a small-plane crash that killed his parents and sister.

The Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington D.C., sent birth footprints of a missing Decatur, Ill., boy to the El Paso County Sheriff's Office. But the boys' footprints did not match when they were compared Tuesday evening, said FBI spokesman Eric Benson.

No other prints are expected soon, Benson said, and the FBI is fielding calls from all over the country in seeking leads as to Sabat's identity.

Sabat's description roughly matched that of T.J. Davison, who was 4 years old when he disappeared in October 1985 from a car parked in front of a Decatur, Ill., grocery store. Davison's footprints arrived Tuesday afternoon in El Paso and the FBI and Sheriff's Office compared his prints to Sabat's.

Police hunt for man who stabbed mother, daughter

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Police continued their search Tuesday for a man accused of fatally stabbing an 8-year-old girl at a coin-operated laundry after a soda machine short-changed him, authorities said.

Jennifer Delgado, who was stabbed in the abdomen, died at 11 p.m. Monday at Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center, hospital spokesman Sgt. Lowell Cook said Tuesday.

Police were looking for a Hispanic man in his late teens or early 20s, who was wearing a flower-print shirt and driving a small, gray two-door sedan.

The woman's mother, Melida Delgado, 25, who also was stabbed, was in fair condition at Wilford Hall, Cook said.

Police detective John Lopez said Ms. Delgado and her daughter were alone in the coin-operated laundry when a man entered the building.

"He put money in the (soda) machine and, when it didn't respond, he kicked it. As he left, the lady and her daughter were stabbed," Lopez said.

"She ran across the street with her daughter in her arms screaming for help," said neighbor Vicki Martinez. "I wrapped a towel around the little girl before the ambulance arrived. Melida was talking, but Jennifer had passed out," she said.

Board leases coastal land

AUSTIN (AP) — The School Land Board on Tuesday leased 5,300 acres along the Texas coast for protection under the new Texas Coastal Preserve System, according to State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The Welder Flats, a 1,500-acre whooping crane wintering habitat, and 3,800 acres of South Bay at the tip of Texas are the first two state-owned coastal areas to come under the protection of the preserve system.

The acreage was leased to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The land board also approved the first lease in the Kennedy Causeway Masterplan area for a 2.5-acre recreational vehicle park and marina, Mauro said. The causeway connects North Padre Island with Corpus Christi.

Legal fees to be paid

HOUSTON (AP) — The city of Houston plans to pay nearly $700,000 in legal fees to comply with a federal judge's order in a case stemming from a 1973 voting rights lawsuit.

The agreement, signed Monday by U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald, was worked out Friday between city officials and plaintiff attorneys.

The city will pay the judgment within 10 days, and, in return the plaintiff attorneys have agreed not to force collection of $100,000 the city owes in interest.

City attorneys are appealing the amount of interest the city must pay.

The lawsuit said the at-large City Council election system unconstitutionally diluted minorities' voting strength.

Ms. McDonald ruled in August 1986 that the lawsuit played a pivotal role in the city's decision to change the system, and she awarded legal fees to the plaintiff attorneys in excess of $1 million.

Last year, an appeals court lowered the award to $693,805.

Bush to address LULAC

DALLAS (AP) — Vice President George Bush is scheduled to open the National League of United Latin American Citizens convention, which is expected to attract more than 5,000 delegates, organization officials said Tuesday.

The five-day convention will begin July 5 with Bush formally opening the meeting on July 6, said Oscar Moran, national LULAC president. Democratic presidential candidates Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson are scheduled to speak July 8 and July 9, respectively.

LULAC, a civic group orgainized in Corpus Christi in 1929, includes more than 6,000 councils around the world that focus on the concerns of Hispanics.

The convention runs through July 10.

Helicopter service canceled

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Aeronautics Commission Tuesday canceled the authority of Air Link Airways to provide helicopter service in the Houston area.

The service recently lost Federal Administration Aviation certification on its helicopters, said Clay Wilkins, commission executive director. Air Link voluntarily released its certificate when contacted by the state agency, he said.

Air Link served the Houston area between the points of Allen Center Heliport, Astrodome-Marriott Helipad, Galleria Guest Quarters Heliport, Greenway Plaza Heliport, Town and Country Heliport and Houston Intercontinental Airport, according to the commission.

Reprimanded judge resigns seat

AUSTIN (AP) — State appeals court Justice Jim Brady, who was reprimanded earlier this year by the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, has resigned his seat on the Austin-based 3rd Court of Appeals.

The resignation is effective Aug. 31. Brady, 68, was defeated in the March 8 Democratic primary by Woodie Jones, an Austin lawyer, who is unopposed in the November general election.

Brady said in his resignation letter to Gov. Bill Clements that he is quitting "to pursue private practice of law and support urgently needed improvements to the condition of our Texas judicial system."

James Huffines, the governor's appointment secretary, said Tuesday his office probably would not consider appointing a successor until mid-August because it has other judicial vacancies to fill first.

Brady's term expires at the end of the year. The six-member appeals court hears cases from 24 Central Texas counties.

Brady was reprimanded in January for having issued a press release last year touting a court opinion he had written in a libel case involving The Wall Street Journal.

He appealed the reprimand to a special court of review, which has held a hearing, but not yet handed down a ruling.

His resignation letter was dated June 1. In it, Brady asked Clements "to join with me and others in an all-out effort to seek legislative approval to bring judicial salaries in line with the private sector." He also sought support for non-partisan election of judges.

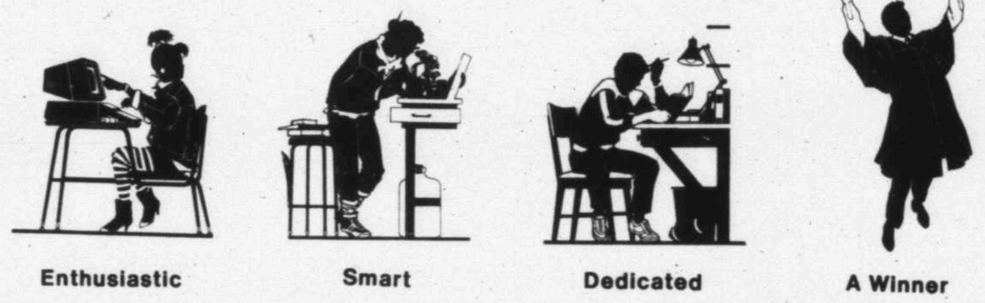

Going on the road

Gilberto Rivas waves goodbye as he boards one of the buses of the Veterans Peace Convoy. The 41-vehicle convoy left Austin Tuesday bound for Nicaragua carrying clothing, food and medical supplies. The trip, expected to take 10 days is an effort to bring humanitarian aid to the war-torn country.

Rains opposes pending voter registration law

Rains

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats and Republican Secretary of State Jack Rains are scrapping again, this time about a congressional proposal that could make it easier to vote.

Travis County election officials, all Democrats, say it is a good idea. Rains says it's not and would make elections even more difficult for the people who run them.

At a Tuesday news conference, Rains said the Democrats who run Travis County elections seem to already have trouble counting votes. He pointed out that the county was the last to report results from the most recent election.

"Until (they) can get their own house in order, they don't need added responsibilities," Rains said of the Travis County officials.

He also released a list of county election officials who join him in opposing the proposed Universal Voter Registration Act pending in Congress, which would set national voter registration standards and allow election day registration.

Currently, Texans must register 30 days before an election. Travis County Clerk Dana DeBeauvoir, a Democrat, said at a Tuesday news conference that the Texas law provides few barriers to voting, but other states have overly restrictive laws.

"The Universal Registration Act is the removal of barriers from voter registration. Voting should not be a bureaucratic maze of laws and regulations which seeks to discourage, confuse and otherwise disenfranchise eligible citizens," she said.

Ms. DeBeauvoir said voters who move between states can "become disenfranchised because they find diverse registration laws to be frustrating, confusing and limiting."

Democrat Cecelia Burke, Travis County tax assessor-collector, said the proposed federal legislation would remove barriers to registration.

But Rains, who submitted testimony to a congressional committee, said the election day registration provision "practically begs people to commit vote fraud."

"Unfortunately, the long and rich history of vote fraud in Texas continues to this day," he said, adding that election day registration would be costly and cumbersome for election officials.

He said his view is shared by election officials representing 65 percent of Texas voters.

OPEC meeting may not raise prices

By YOUSSEF M. IBRAHIM
New York Times News Service

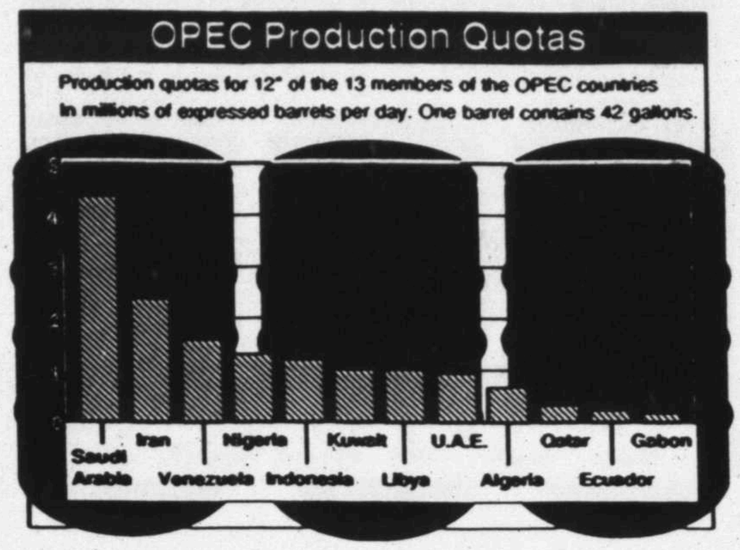

PARIS — As oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries prepare for their mid-year meeting in Vienna on Saturday, many of the group's experts appear convinced that there is little likelihood of raising oil prices much.

The reason OPEC is falling short of its goal of higher prices, these experts say, is that new oil is still being found around the world.

Recent announcements of a potentially gigantic oil pool in the Amazon River delta in Brazil and of other discoveries by oil-producing nations that are not members of OPEC have focused OPEC's attention on what has become its biggest problem.

"The number of non-OPEC producers is expanding," said Alirio A. Parra, managing director of the London office of the state oil company Petroleos de Venezuela and a senior member of Venezuela's OPEC delegation. "In the past 10 years some 37 non-OPEC producers either expanded output or saw their first commercial production. Production may well continue to increase beyond the beginning of the next decade."

According to energy analysts at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., the non-OPEC nations produce 23.2 million barrels of oil a day, up from 18.8 million barrels a day in 1981. During that time, OPEC has reduced its output to about 18.5 million barrels a day, from 22.6 million, in a futile effort to bolster prices.

The current average price of OPEC oil is about $16 a barrel, below OPEC's official target of $18 a barrel. OPEC's hope is that in the long term it can persuade non-OPEC producers to join it in a program to contain production and lift prices.

BUT THAT ambitious goal is not expected to be tackled at the Vienna meeting.

Most oil experts inside and outside OPEC do not expect any initiatives concerning oil production or prices to come out of the meeting. Nor is there any expectation that Iraq, which belongs to OPEC but has refused to participate in the 13-nation group's quotas on production, will change its position.

No non-OPEC oil producers are expected to participate in the OPEC meeting, as they did when OPEC met in April in an abortive search for common ground for cooperation.

The agenda for this regularly scheduled midyear meeting has not been announced, but it is expected to include general discussions of policies and goals.

The major hurdle to OPEC's long-term goal of cooperating with other oil producers to limit output is that the organization itself is once again mired in internal disputes.

Iraq is demanding production parity with Iran's quota of 2.3 million barrels a day, a request that several OPEC members, including Iran and Venezuela, oppose. Without such parity, Iraq goes its own way, producing about 2.7 million barrels a day. And as it does, its allies — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the other Persian Gulf states — turn a blind eye.

New owners don't plan to revamp Dallas paper

Singleton

Buzzetta

DALLAS (AP) — The second sale in as many years at the Dallas Times Herald won't spell any drastic changes for the newspaper as it battles in one of the country's most competitive markets, the new editor says.

"I think it's been a quality paper for the last couple of years," Roy Bode said Tuesday. "I'm sure there are things we can do to improve it, but I have no plans for major changes."

MediaNews Holdings Inc., controlled by Times Herald Chairman William Dean Singleton, is selling the paper to DTH Media Inc., a new corporation controlled by MediaNews stockholder John Buzzetta, a longtime business partner of Singleton.

Rumors had been circulating for weeks about the pending sale of the Times Herald, which has had marginal profits in the face of a weak state economy and is locked in battle with the larger Dallas Morning News.

Buzzetta, 38, will become publisher of the Times Herald.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed, but in a story today the Times Herald quoted sources as saying Buzzetta and two partners in the venture — Equitable Capital Management and Dillon, Read & Co. — paid $110 million to $120 million to acquire the newspaper.

As gesture to Bush, plans for offshore drilling halted

By JULIE JOHNSON

Bush

WASHINGTON — In a political gesture to Vice President Bush on the eve of Tuesday's California primary, the Interior Department said Monday night that it would temporarily suspend plans to lease 1.1 million acres off the northern California coast for oil and gas exploration.

Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel, who has made the development of energy resources a chief policy goal, made the announcement a day after Bush modified his basic position that domestic American oil production could be increased without endangering the environment.

On a final campaign swing through California, Bush declared Sunday that this particular offshore drilling plan should be deferred.

Returning to the campaign trail after a week of strategy meetings in Kennebunkport, Me., Bush made his statement after discussions with Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif.

A statement from Wilson said he and Bush had discussed the drilling plan "at length in recent weeks," with Wilson "urging the vice president to oppose the plan."

Interior Department officials acknowledged that Hodel's announcement had been made with the knowledge that the Democratic presidential candidates, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, have opposed the federal offshore oil and gas program.

Experts discuss ways to fund small businesses

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The Midland Economic Development Co., which has loaned more than $80,000 in federal funds since April 1987, is only one non-conventional source of funds for small businesses, according to a panel of experts.

More than 30 small business owners and entrepreneurs heard Bill Stovall, chairman of MEDC and a senior vice president of First City National Bank, explain the guidelines and uses for funds from the non-profit revolving loan fund Tuesday evening at a Midland Chamber of Commerce Small Business Council seminar.

The funds from the federal Department of Housing & Urban Development are intended "to promote business in the area targeted by the Community Development Block Grant program," said Stovall.

In addition to providing direct assistance, MEDC seeks to enhance small businesses' chances of receiving conventional funding.

The $82,500 loaned by MEDC to five businesses in its 14 months of existence have been augmented by more than twice that in conventional funds — $178,500 — in creating eight permanent jobs.

In addition to the geographic limitation of the CDBG area, funds loaned by the economic development company must be used to create new jobs — at least one job per $20,000 loaned, Stovall said.

MEDC has another $122,000 of original funds available for lending in addition to more than $5,000 in loan payments received from the program's initial clients. Also, the company has requested additional funding from the city council for up to $150,000 of the 1988-'89 HUD funds, Stovall said.

Other options for small — and not so small — businesses include outside venture capital and the Small Business Administration's guaranty loan program.

"Venture capitalists are often willing to take a chance on a high-growth potential idea that banks and other funding sources shy away from," said Art Donnelly, chairman of the chamber's venture capital committee.

Hispanic chamber seeks extra funding from city

In order to accomplish the goals the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has set for the coming years, the chamber has asked the City Council for $50,000 from the city's general fund.

"We have substantiated our services to the community, and that we serve as an avenue for a group that would otherwise not have one," MHCC president Sam Flores told directors and officers at Tuesday's meeting.

In his letter to the City Council, Flores noted that the chamber's membership currently exceeds 300, and that the Lamesa Road project is a direct result of the chamber's efforts. He also pointed out that the chamber has sponsored or co-sponsored educational workshops and seminars on business and educational development, given $6,000 in scholarships to Hispanic college students, and sponsored a drop-out prevention program, among other activities.

According to Flores, in the next year the chamber plans to sponsor its second "Step Up to Success" drop-out prevention program and implement an "Adopt A Class" program where chamber members act as role models for junior high and high school students. The chamber will also promote a "Mercado" for Midland's East side, and establish an incubator program in the near future. He pointed out to Council members that over half the proposed budget of $103,200 would be raised by the MHCC itself.

Flores asked board members to write a letter of support to City Council members, and to attend the presentation, scheduled for the last week of June.

New to downtown Midland is CLUB SPUD, formerly known as Potatos, Soups and Salads in Midland Park Mall.

The restaurant closed its mall location and reopened — under its new name — at 111 N. Colorado, across the Midland County Courthouse. It continues to offer homemade soups, salads and baked potatos, and has added such items as hamburgers, taco salad, and chicken sandwiches to its menu.

Manager Mark Walker said phone-in orders are welcome, and carry-out and delivery will be added soon.

According to Walker, current hours are 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday, but the restaurant should be opening earlier when a breakfast menu is added. It should also begin staying open later once it receives its beer and wine license.

A Midland success story is the HERB HALL CO., which recently moved to larger quarters for the third time in four years. The business equipment company is now located at 600 Kent, the former Peyton's Bikes location.

Owner Herb Hall explained that, with 16 employees, his 2,400 sq. foot store at 423 Andrews Highway was too small. The new store has 6,400 square feet. "When we started this company four years ago, it was myself, my wife and my son," he noted. "It's grown from four employees — we added a service manager — to 16 in four years, and the product line is enlarging." He added that not only has the number of employees quadrupled, so has the business. "We never saw a downturn," he stated.

Hall sells and services typewriters, calculators, computers and dictation equipment manufactured by Canon, Sharp, Panasonic and Dictaphone. He also services equipment not sold by his store.

Oil price drop follows rebound

Oil prices took a seven cent drop in mid-morning trading today, following a slight rebound Tuesday.

Prices today were trading at $17.30 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Tuesday, contracts for July delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed at $17.37 per barrel, up 11 cents from Monday's close. The contract had dropped 24 cents on Monday.

Among July contracts for refined products, wholesale unleaded gasoline settled 0.47 cents higher at 50.20 cents a gallon, while wholesale heating oil closed at 46.23 cents a gallon, up 0.39 cent.

Contracts for refined products also had been down sharply in the previous trading session.

Traders said the rebound was simply a reaction to the earlier selloff and was not based on any significant news developments. The market has been trading in a relatively narrow range, well below the official $18-a-barrel price set for oil produced by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"More than anything, the market continues to have a bearish attitude (about the upcoming meeting)," said Richard Redoglia of Merrill Lynch Energy Futures.

Another observer, Bob Baker of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said that while pessimism seems to pervade the market, near-term crude prices were getting support at the $17.25 level.

"People are simply putting in their money's worth (each day) on what is going to happen at the OPEC meeting this weekend," said Baker.

The regular mid-year meeting, which opens Saturday in Vienna, Austria, is expected to focus on the cartel's production quotas and price-support mechanisms.

Dollar has modest European loss

LONDON (AP) — The dollar posted modest losses against most major foreign currencies in Europe early today in moderately active trading. Gold bullion fell.

Market players sold dollars because of uncertainty over next week's report on the seasonally adjusted U.S. trade gap for April, traders said.

But they said concern that central banks would intervene to prevent a sudden drop in the dollar was providing a floor for the currency.

The dollar fell against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.8220, compared with Tuesday's $1.8130.

The dollar weakened in Tokyo, closing at 125.32 Japanese yen, down from 125.77 yen. In London trading later Wednesday, the dollar slipped to 125.11 yen.

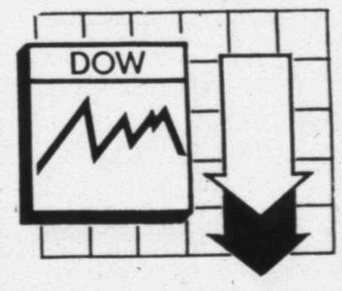

London's major bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $458.75 a troy ounce, down from $463.50 late Tuesday. A trader said gold fell overnight in reaction to a drop in grain prices. The metal was boosted last week by a rally in the commodities market.

In Zurich, gold traded at a bid of $458.50, down from $463.50.

Earlier, the metal closed in Hong Kong at a bid of $458.98, down from $464.03.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $7.20, down from $7.34.

Stock market runs into resistance

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground Tuesday, running into resistance from sellers after its sharp rally over the past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 118.77 points over the past five sessions, dropped 20.62 to 2,054.59.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 657 up, 877 down and 464 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 168.71 million shares, against 152.64 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 199.94 million shares.

Interest rates rose in the bond market Tuesday. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell about $5 for each $1,000 in face value.

Analysts said the pressure on bonds stemmed largely from inflation worries that have increased with rising commodity prices of late.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

OSHA gets stricter on chemical exposure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration on Tuesday proposed cutting job exposure limits for 234 toxic chemicals and bringing 168 others under government regulation for the first time.

Officials estimated that the new exposure ceilings will reduce job-related fatalities due to cancer, respiratory and cardiovascular ailments and liver and kidney diseases by 500 a year. Illnesses will fall by an estimated 55,000 annually, they said.

Approximately 3.6 million workers are now exposed to concentrations of the chemicals above the proposed new ceilings, OSHA officials said. They estimated the cost to industry of meeting the new standards at $900 million a year.

Bank earnings rebound but not in Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Earnings at the nation's commerical banks are rebounding from the worst year since the Depression in every region of the country except the Southwest, the government said Tuesday.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said the 13,541 banks it insures collectively earned $5 billion in the first three months of this year, down somewhat from $5.3 billion in the same period in 1987.

Agreement to develop Anartic oil, minerals signed

By PHILIP SHABECOFF
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Concluding 6 years of difficult negotiations, 33 nations have agreed to open all of Antarctica to regulated development of its oil and mineral resources, according to American participants in the talks.

The participants said a convention permitting regulated development of the southernmost continent was initialed last week in Wellington, New Zealand. They said it would take effect after it was ratified by 16 of the 20 voting members of the Antarctic Treaty, an agreement signed in 1959 that regulates activities in Antarctica. Ratification of the new convention is expected late this year or early next year.

The new agreement is a major step in the evolution of the Antarctic Treaty, under which the continent has been kept free of military activities and many nations have pursued scientific research projects while sidestepping disagreements over territorial claims made by some countries.

There is now no prohibition on mineral development in Antarctica under international law, but an informal moratorium on development there has been observed by nations over the last eight years. The convention would replace the moratorium, but the convention would require that the 20 voting members of the Antarctic Treaty specifically approve the opening of each area of the Antarctic to exploration for oil or other minerals.

A State Department official said there were several previous examples in which international regulatory bodies were set up to govern the exploitation of natural resources. One example is the Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, which was approved by member nations of the Antarctic Treaty in the 1970s and which established a commission to regulate the harvesting of fish and other wildlife. Another example is the International Whaling Commission, which first established quotas for the capture of various whale species and then imposed a moratorium on all commercial whaling.

Although the mineral and oil potential of the region is still largely unknown, industry spokesmen said Tuesday that they believed it could provide major resources for the global economy in the coming years.

But environmentalists and some scientists, pressing for the continent to be preserved as a pristine "world park" for scientific research, expressed fear that large scale oil development could have disastrous impact on its delicate ecological systems.

Under the agreement, prospecting for oil and minerals by seismic testing and other techniques with a relatively light impact on the environment would be permitted anyplace in Antarctica as soon as the treaty is ratified. Interested companies would not have to secure further permission.

But full-scale exploration and development, involving major blasting or drilling, would be barred in any area until a new "commission" to be set up by the convention unanimously decided that a particular area could be opened to development. The commission would consist of the 20 voting members of the treaty. Among the factors to be considered would be the environmental effect.

Once an area has been opened by the commission, oil and mineral companies could apply for licenses to explore and develop that area. They would then be required to present a plan to a new 10-member "regulatory committee" set up for each opened area. The committees could approve or disapprove a license and monitor compliance. Development projects could be modified, suspended or revoked if the license requirements were not followed or if the situation changed.

Membership on these committees would rotate but the United States and the Soviet Union, as the countries with the biggest scientific presence in Antarctica, would be represented on all.

Unocal president to step down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Hartley, the blunt oilman who has guided Unocal Corp. since 1965 and successfully fought off a takeover attempt by T. Boone Pickens Jr. in 1985, has resigned as chief executive, effective Aug. 1.

Hartley, 71, will continue indefinitely as Unocal's chairman, the company said Monday, but will turn over the chief executive's job to Richard Stegemeier, the current president and chief operating officer.

There has been speculation about Hartley's departure for months, and some industry analysts suggested board members had urged Hartley to relinquish the post.

Hartley's gruff, outspoken comments and his management style earned him both praise and criticism from the investment community and the oil industry.

"If Fred had his druthers, he's rather be president for life," one close follower of Unocal told the Los Angeles Times. "I don't believe Fred had control over his own destiny."

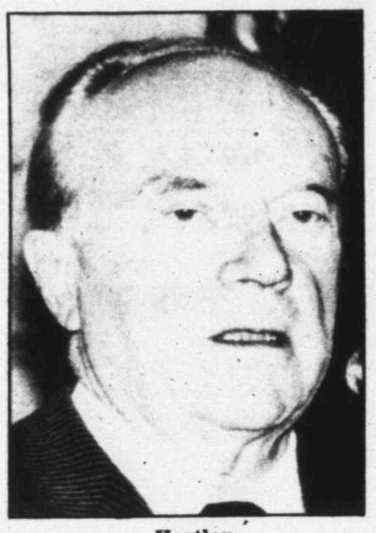

Unocal said Hartley had recommended he be replaced by Stegemeier, 60. Hartley will retire as an employee no later than Nov. 30, but his tenure as chairman is open-ended.

While some analysts were skeptical that the change would make an immediate difference at Unocal, others questioned whether he will relinquish control.

"He's sort of easing himself out," said M. Craig Schwerdt, an oil analyst at Morgan Olmstead Kennedy & Gardner. "He'll still have an influence."

Hartley joined Unocal in 1939 and has been running it since 1965, building up a company that some have valued at $7.3 billion.

The chief executive has been among the most outspoken industry leaders calling for an oil import fee and other aid for the industry since the 1986 collapse of oil prices.

Gucci sells 50 percent stake

N..Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Investcorp, a Middle Eastern investment bank, has bought nearly a 50 percent interest in Guccio Gucci S.p.A., the Italian fashion house whose international network of specialty stores stretches from Rome to Fifth Avenue in New York and Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills, Calif.

The purchase, which reportedly involved about $135 million in cash, was announced Tuesday by the Morgan Stanley Group and Investcorp. Andrea Morante, of Morgan Stanley in London, said that the shares had been acquired from members of the Gucci family over an eight-month period.

The purchase of what is believed to be a 48.7 percent stake, gives the Bahrain-based banking concern the second-largest holding in Gucci. About 50 percent is held by Maurizio Gucci, a grandson of Guccio Gucci, the company's founder, but those shares have been sequestered by an Italian court as part of legal proceedings against him.

About 2 percent to 3 percent is owned by Roberto Gucci, anotheer Guccio Gucci grandson. Morgan Stanley said that Investcorp has "certain understandings" with Roberto Gucci involving the voting of those shares.

Although the Gucci family has been producing leather goods in Italy since the 15th century, the present business was founded in a saddlery in Florence in 1906 by Guccio Gucci. The company's well-known trademark consists of his linked initials.

Gucci has since expanded into apparel as well as leather goods. Its shoes, scarves and handbags have become highly prized by many consumers despite their high prices. Paul Dimitruk, a member of the management committee at Investcorp, said that the banking concern was not presently pursuing the acquisition of additional Gucci shares.

Texaco promises to pass on asset sales

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. on Tuesday promised to give its stockholders a third of the $5 billion it expects to raise from asset sales as part of its bankruptcy reorganization plan.

The White Plains, N.Y.-based oil giant said the distribution would come in the form of a share buyback or some other "direct shareholder participation or distribution," and would be made by the end of this year.

"The distribution may involve cash or the use of securities, in anticipation of the proceeds to be realized from the sales program," Texaco said in a statement.

It added that the other two-thirds of the proceeds would be used to repay debt, strengthen the balance sheet and fund increased capital investment programs for selected retained operations.

Wall Street showed little response to the move, which came in the midst of a proxy fight between Texaco and takeover specialist Carl C. Icahn.

In consolidated nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues Texaco closed at $51 per share, up 12½ cents.

"It's negative from the stock market's view, because it's not like they're giving the shareholders something they don't already own," said Richard S. Pzena, who studies oil companies for the Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. securites firm.

Icahn is running a five-man slate for the board of directors, hoping to a victory will help him get the board to let shareholders vote of a $60-per-share cash offer for the company. The votes are to be cast at Texaco's annual meeting on June 17.

Pzena said that by adding some value to shares already hovering in the $50 range, Texaco in effect was diluting the impact of Icahn's $60 cash offer, thereby strengthening its chances of beating Icahn in the proxy fight.

That amounted to a negative on Wall Street, because "$60 is better than $50," Pzena said.

Icahn claimed Texaco's objective in the move was "to do just enough to get reelected and then get back to business as usual."

"Unfortunately, Texaco management will promise almost anything to keep me off the board and keep stockholders from voting for $60 or better," he said in a statement.

Texaco's latest announcement updated its progress in other aspects of its reorganization plan. It came just 24 hours after it said it had agreed to sell its 99.12 percent interest in Deutsche Texaco AG of West Germany to a major utility in that country.

Rheinish-Westfaelisches Elektrizitaetswerk AG, also known as RWE, agreed to pay over $1.2 billion for the subsidiary. Both sides expect no problems with a requirement that West Germany's Federal Cartel Office approve the transaction.

In its Tuesday announcement, Texaco said it expected to generate more than $1.8 billion more in two other upcoming transactions. One is a deal to sell 60 million barrels of oil and gas equivalent reserves, expected to close by the end of this month. The other involves proposals to establish joint ventures with certain oil-producing countries.

The ventures, which were "in advanced stages of review," would involve three Texaco refineries and related marketing facilities on the East and Gulf coasts.

Texaco President James W. Kinnear said the two other countries are Venezuela and Saudi Arabia.

The company also said studies were continuing on what to do with its 78 percent interest in Texaco Canada Inc., including the possible sale, merger or joint venture of some or all of the stake.

In addition it said it was considering the potential sales of other domestic oil and gas properites of marginal value to the company, as well as certain European and African holdings.

Finally, the restructuring program is expected to yield more than $50 million in additional savings in overhead from staff consolidations, Texaco said.

The latest developments are a result of months of negotiations that began as Texaco prepared for its April emergence from a year under Chapter 11 bankruptcy court protection.

Texaco had filed for that protection a year earlier to avoid having to post an $11 billion security bond while appealing a $10.3 billion judgment held against it by Pennzoil Co. A jury ruled Texaco had interfered with Pennzoil's 1984 attempt to acquire part of Getty Oil Co. so it could buy Getty itself.

Texaco agreed in December to settle the suit by paying $3 billion to Pennzoil as part of a restructuring plan that included sales of $3 billion worth of assets.

Soon afterward, Icahn, its largest stockholder with 14.8 percent of the company's shares, stepped up pressure on Texaco's management to do more to increase the value of its stock.

In March, he threatened to run his slate of five candidates, including himself, for Texaco's board, if the company did not take steps that would raise the price to $55 per share from then-current levels in the $35-to-$45 range.

In an apparent bid for stockholder support, Texaco announced the restoration of its dividend and an expansion of its planned asset sales to $5 billion a month later.

But Icahn, unsatisfied, proceeded with his $60-per-share offer for those Texaco shares he does not already known, and launched his threatened proxy fight.

During the meeting, seven scholarships totaling $2,350 were presented by the MHCC and its Women's Department. Winners of $400 scholarships were Mark Edward Herrera of Midland High School, who will be a pre-med major at Texas A&M, and Loredana Tucker, of Lee High, who will attend Texas Tech. Also receiving $400 scholarships were Dolores Cano, Hilda Ramo Rodriguez, who are currently enrolled in college. Scholarships for $250 to women who are returning to school were given to Susan Torrez, Belinda Sanchez and Bertha Chavez.

In other business, board members agreed to establish an advisory council comprised of former MHCC officers and board members, to meet — in an advisory capacity only — with current officers once each quarter. The members also agreed to postpone officer elections until September. They also approved relocation of the chamber offices to larger quarters at Starline Plaza, 502-B E. Nobles.

Elvia Hernandez, the chamber's executive director, is arranging a trip to El Paso for the Fourth of July week-end to see the area's manmade lake. "I know we have the convention to worry about. But we also have to worry about the future, about next year." She feels a similar development would be very beneficial to the local economy, bringing in tourism dollars as well as provide recreation for local residents.

Planning continues on the state Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce convention next month. Hernandez reported that TAMACC officials have requested that Jessica McClure, the toddler rescued from the well, make an appearance at the convention, and she has asked former state Sen. Pete Snelson, the McClure's spokesman, to help arrange an appearance. She also said Clayton Williams has agreed to be the master of ceremonies for the President's Dinner, and former National Football League coach Tom Flores — of the Los Angeles Raiders, will be the keynote speaker.

"But they are looking for a high rate of return to compensate the higher degree of risk — usually a payback of three to five times the initial investment within three to five years," he said.

In return for their investment, venture capitalists take an equity position in the company, which they will, in time, liquidate and move on to other investments, usually.

"The venture capitalist is interested in running his own business, not yours," Donnelly told the crowd. "That is something which scares many people off — giving up a share of their company — but it shouldn't."

Another thing that scares many people thinking about SBA financing is the volume of paperwork required to apply for a federally guaranteed loan. SBA specialist and vice president of United Bank Michael J. Davis tried to allay some attendees' fears by walking the group through a checklist of paperwork requirements.

In addition, he offered suggestions on where to get help with some of the information and documentation needed.

United Bank offers an SBA "loan packaging" service to assist businesses in having everything organized and completed before submitting it to the SBA regional office in Lubbock. Other local banks offer similar services.

The guaranty loan program encourages banks to lend to eligible small businesses by guaranteeing from 80-90 percent of the principal amount of the loan. In addition, the SBA program loans can offer longer maturity dates and regulated, lower interest rates for borrowers, Davis said.

There are few limitations on the use of SBA loan proceeds. They can be used for purchase or construction of facilities, machinery and equipment, inventory, working capital and payment of some types of short-term debt. Banks are not allowed to reduce their potential loss exposure on an existing conventional loan by reissuing an SBA-guaranteed loan to the same customer.

"He made the decision because of the circumstances in California, political and otherwise," Hodel's spokesman, David Prosperi, said Tuesday. "When Hodel made the announcement last night, he called the vice president in California, not to negotiate but to say I've made a decision and you should know about it."

The announcement was greeted with outrage by the petroleum industry. "This unnecessary and unjustified delay comes at a time when America's oil imports exceed 40 percent of our use — the highest level since 1980 — and domestic production of oil is down one million barrels a day from only two years ago," the American Petroleum Institute said in a statement.

The Interior Department had been working to publish by August a final statement on how the proposed drilling would affect the environment. The government was to make available for oil and gas exploration about 223 tracts, each about nine square miles, off Mendocino and Humboldt counties in northern California.

Texas Eastern hit with $400 million clean-up

By BOB SABLATURA
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Texas Eastern Gas Pipeline Co. of Houston has signed an agreement to pay a record $15 million civil penalty and pick up an estimated $400 million in costs associated with cleaning up polychlorinated biphenyl contamination at 89 disposal pits along the company's 10,000 mile gas pipeline.

The company also must reimburse the Environmental Protection Agency as much as $1.5 million for costs incurred by the agency to investigate the case and pay a third party contractor as much as $18 million to oversee clean-up efforts at the sites.

Assistant Attorney General Roger J. Marzulla said the $15 million is the largest civil penalty ever imposed in a single environmental case.

The amount of the fines and the cost of the cleanups are the same as outlined in a preliminary agreement disclosed last November.

"The record $15 million penalty is appropriate because it will serve as a sharp reminder that failure to comply with the environmental laws will strike a heavy blow to the pocketbooks of would-be violators," he said.

The EPA filed a civil complaint against the company Monday in U.S. District Court in Houston. A consent decree, resolving the EPA complaint, was filed at the same time. The decree was signed by both parties but will not become final until it undergoes a 60-day public comment period.

First RepublicBank plan completion expected soon

DALLAS (AP) — A New York investment banking firm is studying several proposals to recapitalize First RepublicBank Corp. and federal regulators expect to complete a deal soon.

"We are currently negotiating with a number of people on terms for recapitalizing that bank," said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. "We hope that sometime in the reasonably near future we will be able to announce a transaction in that regard."

At a Washington press conference Tuesday, Seidman said the FDIC has retained Dillon, Read & Co. to provide financial advice as the agency negotiates with potential buyers of the troubled thrift.

Seidman said the Government Accounting Office is projecting the federal bailout for the Dallas-based holding company will cost $2 billion. But he added that some of that money later can be recouped.

The FDIC already has pumped $1 billion into First RepublicBank, which showed a $1.5 bilion loss for the first quarter of the year. The bank turned to FDIC for assistance in March after mounting losses.

Meanwhile, First RepublicBank officials continue to work with investment bankers, Drexel Burnham & Lambert Inc., on their own proposal to recapitalize the company.

"We expect to present a formal plan to the FDIC in the very near future," said Joseph R. Musolino, president of the holding company. Musolino previously said the banking firm this month would finish reviewing its loan portfolio, working toward its proposal for the FDIC.

Albert Casey, appointed First RepublicBank's chairman and chief executive officer by federal regulators last month, has said a proposal will be presented to the FDIC by late July. That proposal likely will include a spinoff of the holding company's bad loans.

OPEC

Iran, at war with Iraq for more than seven years, has opposed Iraq's request for production parity. Iraq, meanwhile, has made every effort to boost its production to maximize its revenues to fight the war. The Iraqi oil minister, Issam Abdul-Rahim al-Chalabi, recently reiterated that Iraqi oil output is heading for 3.5 million barrels a day by the fall of 1989.

ALTHOUGH Chalabi professed his country's willingness to cut production if given parity with Iran, many experts doubt his sincerity, given Iraq's need for as much money as possible to fight the war.

There is also a dispute about undeclared production of oil by several members. The cheating leaves about 1.7 million barrels of oil a day to slip through the OPEC quota system to world markets, weakening oil prices.

OPEC's hold on the world oil markets slipped in the 1970s, when huge reserves of oil were found in Alaska and the North Sea. The North Sea currently produces 3.8 million barrels of oil a day, and the United States produces 8.2 million barrels a day. The United States, Britain and Norway, which hold these fields, have refused to cooperate with OPEC in limiting oil production.

The latest discovery was announced June 1, when President Jose Sarney of Brazil described what he called a "historic" discovery.

MGM owner fails to come up with buyer

NEW YORK (NYT) — Kirk Kerkorian, who controls the MGM-UA Communications Co., has apparently not come up with a buyer for the company and announced Tuesday that he might sell parts of it and distribute the proceeds to shareholders.

Kerkorian's move did not surprise Wall Street analysts, who have doubted that a serious bidder would emerge for the movie and television production company despite rumors that Philips Industries N.V. of the Netherlands might be interested.

No bid has materialized, but Steven Silbert, the president of MGM-UA, did say Tuesday that it had received offers for the entire company. Although he declined to elaborate, MGM-UA apparently found those bids unsuitable.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Kerkorian said he was now considering not only a sale of the company, but also "proposals for a restructuring."

The filing said such proposals "could involve the sale of one of the company's production units together with certain other assets, including interests in the company's distribution organization, and the distribution of the proceeds to shareholders."

Kerkorian, through his wholly owned Tracinda Co., holds 82 percent of MGM-UA stock.

David Londoner, an analyst at Wertheim Schroder & Co., said Kerkorian might have been unable to find a buyer willing to take the whole company, which is still losing money and has a heavy debt load. But he added that someone might be willing to buy half of it for less money.

Londoner noted that Kerkorian had been highly successful at breaking up companies and maximizing his return.

Kerkorian's proposal would be the latest in a series of transactions in which he has bought, sold and then bought back MGM-UA assets.

Soviets, Americans discuss joint venture natural gas development

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union is discussing working with American and other foreign interests to develop vast natural gas fields in its Arctic, Siberian and other regions, a top Soviet official says.

Joint venture agreements "are not signed yet but they are in the works," Soviet Gas Industry Minister Victor S. Chernomyrdin told reporters on Tuesday at the 17th World Gas Conference.

He declined to give other details or name the potential foreign partners, saying premature disclosure could upset the negotiations or "ruin their business."

Earlier Tuesday, the minister said in a speech to the conference that the 1986 disaster at the Soviet Union's Chernobyl nuclear power plant has prompted increased use of gas and other fuels to make electricity.

Chernobyl "made it necessary to somewhat limit the production of electricity at the nuclear power plants," and other kinds of power stations have taken on greater loads, he said.

Chernobyl and other environmental concerns led to huge increases in gas production and consumption the past three years in the Soviet Union, now the world's largest natural gas producer, the minister said. From 1984 to 1987, he said, Soviet gas production rose from 584.7 billion to 727.4 billion cubic meters and consumption from 462.8 billion to 568 billion cubic meters.

Gas exports have increased more than 20-fold in the past 15 years, he said. Dutch gas industry leader A.H.P. Grotens told the conference Western Europe nations import 60 billion cubic feet of Soviet gas annually.

Chernomyrdin told reporters that terms of joint ventures are still being negotiated, but that the Soviets will insist on retaining majority ownership in any project.

The Soviet Union seeks foreign collaboration to acquire high technology for vast production increases planned for the 21st century, the minister said.

The Soviets face daunting engineering problems in some remote and frigid egions, he said.

Six lengthy pipelines will be needed under the normally-frozen Gulf of Baidarak, for instance, to link the huge Yamal Peninsula on the Arctic Ocean to the rest of the country, he said. One field on the tundra peninsula could yield 200 billion cubic meters of natural gas annually by 1990, he said.

D.C. court upholds fuel standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Regulators complied with Congress' intent when they sought to spare the automotive industry economic hardship by lowering fuel-economy standards, a federal appeals court says.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia issued that ruling Tuesday in turning down a petition attacking the lower 1986 standards. The petition was filed by the state of California, the cities of New York and Los Angeles, and four public issues groups.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's "consideration of the likelihood of economic hardship within its 'assessment of 'economic practicability' must be given due weight," the court said in an opinion by Judge Ruth Ginsburg.

The agency's decision was based on an analysis that concluded the higher standard would have severe economic effects throughout the auto industry, and therefore was not arbitrary or capricious as the petitioners alleged, the court said.

NHTSA lowered the corporate average fuel economy, or CAFE, standard automakers must meet in 1986 from the 27.5 mpg set by Congress to 26 mpg. Standards for 1987 and 1988 were also lowered to 26 mpg.

Petitions also have been filed asking for review of the 1987 and 1988 standards. Con Hitchcock, an attorney for the public issues groups, said they would reevaluate the petitions for 1987 and 1988 in light of the court's ruling.

Although Congress set the standard at the higher level, it also allowed NHTSA to set lower standards after considering economic practicality, technological feasibility, the effect of other motor vehicle standards, and the nation's need to conserve energy.

The court rejected the petitioners' assertion that NHTSA failed to consider energy conservation in adopting the lower standards.

The agency had weighed increased fuel consumption against economic harm under broad guidelines set by Congress.

"Had Congress offered a more precise balancing formula for the agency to apply, ... we could more confidently discern the agency's compliance with the congressional mandate," the court said.

Lacking precise standards, NHTSA properly accommodated conflicting policies in lowering the standard, the court said.

Judge Abner Mikva joined Judge Ginsbug in the majority. Judge Lawrence Silberman dissented in part.

Public issues groups joining in the petition were Public Citizen, the Center for Auto Safety, the Union of Concerned Scientists and the Environmental Policy Institute.

Consumer confidence high in 'eager '80s'

NEW YORK (AP) — All may not be well with the American economy, but a survey says consumers' confidence rose in May to its highest level since the "Soaring Sixties."

The Conference Board, a business-supported research group, said Monday its Consumer Confidence Index reached 119.2 in May, the strongest since December 1969, when it stood at 126.0.

"It's pretty impressive," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center.

"All of the ingredients that give the consumer a sense of well-being are working together at this moment," Linden said, mentioning strong employment gains and restrained inflation.

The index is based on a monthly survey of 5,000 U.S. households. The index has been kept since January 1969 and was recently recalibrated to a base of 100 for 1985.

The Consumer Confidence Index jumped 3.5 points from April and 16.2 points from May 1987.

The strength of consumer confidence is surprising in light of the Labor Department's report Monday that most workers have failed to stay ahead of inflation for five consecutive quarters.

Not since the spiraling inflation of 1979-81 have workers gone that long without an improvement in their standard of living through wage gains, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The Conference Board's survey indicated more optimism than another report released Tuesday by the International Association for Financial Planning, but the latter was based on a survey conducted three months earlier.

That survey of 1,008 peoplefound that 39 percent said it is harder this year than a few years ago to pay their bills and still have money left over, compared with 29 percent who said it was easier.

Also, 39 percent said the next generation will have worse financial opportunities than those available today, while 29 percent said the opportunities would be better.

SEC to file fraud charges against Drexel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and junk bond dealer Michael Milken face civil charges from the Securities and Exchange Commission once the U.S. attorney in New York has time to complete his separate criminal investigation, a published report says.

The SEC decided at a recent closed-door meeting to file the fraud charges against Drexel, Milken and other Drexel executives, but wants to hold off action to avoid interfering with the criminal investigation, The Washington Post reported today.

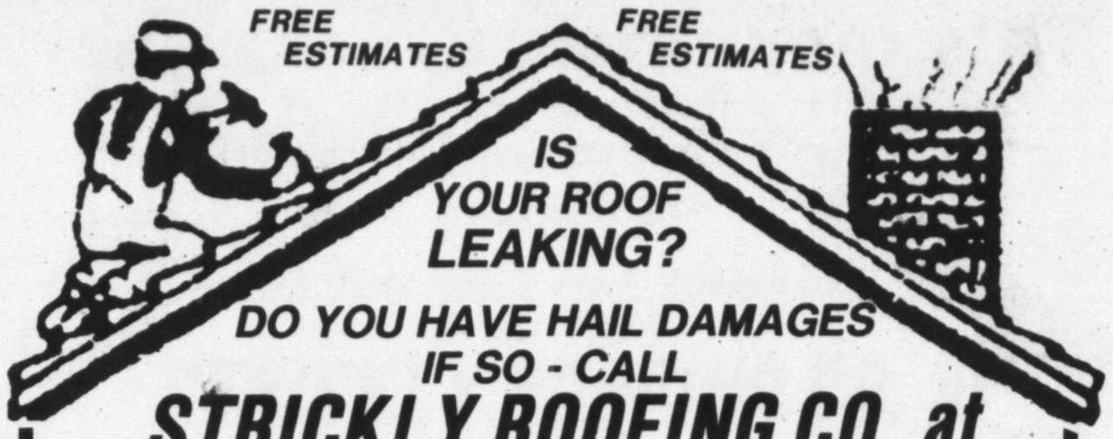

In February, the investment banking firm acknowledged that it and some of its employees had been targeted for civil charges by the SEC staff.

The head of the SEC's enforcement division, Gary Lynch, and officials at the office of Rudolph Giuliani, the U.S. attorney in Manhattan, both declined comment on the Post story.

The SEC decision comes after examining evidence from a two-year investigation and a recommendation by its enforcement staff, the Post said in a story written from New York.

The newspaper cited unidentified sources for the information.

Drexel has been the subject of investigations by the SEC, the U.S. attorney and a federal grand jury since the breaking of the insider trading scandal surrounding former stock speculator Ivan F. Boesky.

SERENDIPITY SAUCE

The Contemporary Cook's Discovery

Even a meal that requires only an hour to prepare can become a hectic chore at the end of a busy day. After rushing home from the office, juggling errands and grocery shopping, facing the kitchen is often a dreaded task.

Preplanning and precooking entire meals or parts of meals can prevent last-minute chaos. Best of all, this leaves the cook at ease to relax with family and friends and allows time to indulge in the creative aspects of food preparation and entertaining.

The inviting dishes pictured here were all prepared with "Serendipity Sauce," a versatile make-ahead base for a selection of diverse entrees. Best of all, this cook's discovery can be prepared in advance, kept refrigerated or frozen, and used as needed. One batch is enough to make any four of the following recipes – all conveniently prepared in one skillet or wok.

Serendipity Sauce blends soy sauce, ginger, garlic and sherry to create a flavor combination that complements a variety of ingredients and seasonings – from delicate shrimp with snow peas to spicy Szechuan beef with vegetables. Without imparting a taste of its own, corn starch lightly thickens the sauce to a consistency which highlights each vibrant ingredient.

Time-conscious cooks can also get a head start by cutting meats or vegetables in advance or by recruiting family members to prepare a rice side dish or quick dessert. When mealtime arrives, it's simply a matter of adding the finishing touches.

SERENDIPITY SAUCE

In 1-quart jar combine corn starch, brown sugar, ginger, garlic and red pepper. Add soy sauce and vinegar; shake until blended. Add broth and sherry; shake well. Chef teams microwave, barbecue

By BARBARA KAFKA
New York Times News Service

The microwave oven can speed up your barbecuing duties and can produce succulent results without any loss of flavor. Partly precook spareribs, chicken and even some vegetables — but not steak — in the microwave oven, with or without a sauce or marinade, and then put them on the grill.

The advantage of this method is that the food is cooked through without getting dry or stringy as it so often does if cooked start to finish on the grill.

Barbecue sauces and marinades can also be made in the microwave oven — often, they are quickly cooked to blend their flavors — but others need no cooking.

MUSTARD BARBECUE SAUCE

8 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
3 drops hot red-pepper sauce
1 tablespoon fresh tarragon leaves.

Combine all ingredients except the tarragon. Spoon or brush over chicken before partly cooking in the microwave. (See Microwave-Tips) Baste chicken with sauce while grilling.

After chicken is done, scrape remaining sauce, about ⅛ cup, into a 1-cup measure. Add tarragon and cover tightly with microwave plastic wrap. Cook at 100 percent in a 650- to 700-watt oven for 2 minutes. Remove from oven. Prick the plastic to release steam, and uncover carefully. Stir well, and serve over rice or mashed potatoes with chicken.

Yield: about 1 cup (enough for a 4-pound chicken).

QUICK BARBECUE SAUCE

1 can (1 pound 13 ounces) tomato puree
⅓ cup dark molasses
3 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
¾ cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons chili powder
8 cloves garlic, peeled and smashed
1 tablespoon kosher salt, or to taste
¼ teaspoon hot red-pepper sauce, or to taste.

Combine all ingredients except the salt and pepper sauce in an 8-cup glass measure. Cook, uncovered, at 100 percent in a 650-to 700-watt oven for 10 minutes.

Remove from oven, and stir in remaining ingredients. Use immediately, or freeze

Yield: 4 cups (1 cup is adequate for 1 rack of ribs).

NOTE: Freeze extra sauce in 1-cup portions in plastic storage containers that can be used in a microwave. To defrost, remove top, and cover tightly with plastic wrap. Cook at 100 percent in a 650-to 700-watt oven for 3 minutes 30 seconds. Prick the plastic to release steam, and uncover carefully.

ORIENTAL GLAZE

Zest of 3 lemons
½ cup granulated sugar
2 cups tamari soy sauce
4 tablespoons Oriental fish sauce (nuoc mam)
⅓ cup rice-wine vinegar
1 teaspoon ground cardamom
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1 teaspoon Oriental chili sauce
2 ounces fresh ginger, cut into small pieces
12 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice.

Combine all ingredients except lemon juice in a 8-cup measure. Cover tightly with microwave plastic wrap. Cook at 100 percent in a 650- to 700-watt oven for 9 minutes.

Remove from the oven. Prick plastic to release steam, and uncover carefully. Strain glaze through a fine sieve. Stir in lemon juice. Use immediately or store, tightly covered, in refrigerator.

Yield: about 3 cups (enough for 3 chickens).

Unrefrigerated foods suggested as safest for outdoor luncheons

By Carol Deegan
Copley News Service

It's time to send the kids to summer camp — and to take the family on weekend picnics. What to pack?

Foods that require no or little refrigeration include peanut butter, hard cheeses, fruits, vegetables and bread.

For sandwiches, use enriched or whole grain bread or rolls.

For sandwich fillings, use chopped poultry, or slices of poultry, fish or lean meat; hard cheese; cottage, pot or farmer cheese; whole or chopped cooked egg, or peanut butter.

Soft cheeses can be flavored with fruits or vegetables, and peanut butter can be served plain or flavored with fruit.

Use chicory, escarole, spinach or romaine for garnish.

Vegetables for the lunch bag or the picnic basket can include cantaloupe, grapefruit, oranges, strawberries, tangerines, peaches, plums, apples, bananas, watermelon and honey dew melons.

For dessert, pack graham crackers, or oatmeal, molasses and peanut butter cookies.

For a picnic or lunch bag beverage, pack small containers of fruit juice. These containers may be frozen overnight. They will defrost by the time lunch is ready to eat.

Milk should be carefully refrigerated from the time of delivery until served. Milk should be delivered in insulated carriers and kept cold in a refrigerator, or should be packed in an ice chest or cooler.

To prevent spoilage, foods must be kept at or below 40 degrees F.

Other food safety tips from the New York City Health Department's Bureau of Nutrition: Always wash hands before and after eating. Wrap all foods in plastic or foil, or place them in a clean, plastic containers. And use an insulated carrier or a styrofoam ice chest for summer picnic foods that need refrigeration.

The American Dairy Association says that when taking advantage of summer ice-cream sales, be sure to overwrap ice-cream containers with freezer paper to prevent the ice cream from drying out.

Breast Cancer Detection Unit Available to Area Women

An early read could save your life...

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of eleven women in the United states will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancer are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate. A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, • even before it can be felt. The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for a mmography in asymptomatic women. (Women who have no symptoms of disease). Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstericians and Gynecologists, and the American College of Radiology. Those guidelines are:

I. 35-40 years of age - One baseline mammogram.
II.. 40-50 years of age - A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.
III. 50 years of age and over. An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.
IV. Asymptomatic women under 50 years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropriate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.
V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

WHAT'S COOKING

Shirley Edwards

Couple active in Lions Club

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the second article in a series of interviews with members of the Midland Suburban Lioness Club.

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Shirley Edwards and her husband, Don, are not only very active members of the Lions Club organization, but they are both charter members of their respective groups — Midland Suburban Lioness Club and Suburban Lions Club. "I'm one of the charter members," Mrs. Edwards said. "My husband was in Southside Lions Club years ago — he's been in the Lions Club I don't know how long — (and) he's one of the charter members of the men's club."

Suburban Lioness Club was chartered in 1984, she said. The men's group "chartered right before we did."

As active members of the organization, both Mrs. Edwards and her husband are involved in many of the club's projects, including, currently, "coordinating getting the kids ready" for Texas Lions Camp, which was formerly called Crippled Children's Camp. This year "30 or 40" Midland children will participate in the camp program, Mrs. Edwards said. "That's the most we've ever had from Midland.

"Our club was asked to donate 100 percent — or $10 per member" toward the expenses of sending these children to camp, she said. "This year our Lioness Club donated 200 percent — $20 per member."

Although Lions Clubs traditionally work with sight conservation and providing aid to the blind, the group has begun other projects as well, such as diabetes research and drug prevention programs. "We had a 'Lions Night' out at the ballpark (Angel Stadium)," Edwards said. "All proceeds went to drug awareness program through the schools."

Other projects include "helping needy families," said Mrs. Edwards, and "school kids needing school clothes," her husband added.

The Lions also are involved in the adopt-a-highway program, they said, and are responsible for four miles of Highway 349, otherwise known as Rankin Highway. "The men have the first two miles from the interstate, and the women have the next two," Edwards said. "Together we have four miles of highway" to keep clean.

Members spend three or four hours, twice a year, picking up trash along their stretches of the road. "What really irritates us is when we clean up the highway and it looks so nice and clean, and we go back and somebody has thrown out something," Edwards said.

The couple also farms 1,462 acres of land in Reagan County, planting cotton, milo and hay grazer, he said. "And we run sheep. ... We've got a little over 100 head (instead of the several hundred head they used to have) because it got so dry."

In spite of their active lives, the couple still has time to enjoy the following recipes:

SOUTH DOWN BARS
2 tablespoons butter

Mix gelatin dessert and hot water, stirring until dissolved. Cool. Mix cream cheese, sugar and vanilla. Mix gelatin mixture, cream cheese mixture and whipped cream all together. Vitamin supplements may offer relief

Copley News Service

You don't have to suffer from depression, constipation or even something as serious as emphysema — Dr. Gershon Lesser, author of the book "Growing Younger," claims that using select vitamin supplements can help you kick certain ailments.

For example, he says depressed folks can get a pick-me-up from increased dosages of calcium, magnesium, Vitamin C and L-tryptophan. They should also eat fish, whole grains and non-fat dairy products.

Scientists say catfish gel has healing properties

Associated Press

NEW YORK — American and Kuwaiti scientists have found that catfish in the Persian Gulf secrete a gel-like substance with properties for healing.

Called catfish slime, it has long been recognized as a folk medicine, but contemporary scientists say that when used on cuts the slime causes the cuts to heal in three days as compared to the usual 10 days.

This news won't help American catfish fanciers because in the U.S. the catfish secrete a similar substance that remains under the skin. The Arabian catfish secrete the slime on the outer surface which makes it accessible, reports Animal Kingdom magazine.

Experts say give up dieting

By TRISH HALL
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Every day — but especially with bathing-suit season here — millions of Americans gird themselves to embark on a diet, riveted by the fantasy that life would be better if they were lighter and slighter.

But maybe dieters should reconsider: increasingly, experts on obesity are finding that strict dieting may backfire. And while many specialists say people can become thinner if they stick to a moderate diet, a few dissident voices maintain that the best approach is to give up dieting altogether, and to eat whatever is wanted whenever hunger strikes.

The idea that dieting can be harmful is presented in two new books, "Don't Diet," by Dale M. Atrens, published in March by William Morrow & Co., and "Overcoming Overeating," written by two New York psychotherapists, Jane R. Hirschmann and Carol H. Munter, and published in April by Addison-Wesley.

Janet Polivy, a professor of psychology and psychiatry at the University of Toronto who is a research associate at Toronto General Hospital, has said for years that dieting itself may cause people to gain weight or develop eating disorders.

"For a long time most doctors who didn't ignore us thought we were crazy," said Polivy, who with a colleague, C. Peter Herman, wrote "Breaking the Diet Habit" (Basic Books, 1983). But she now finds greater support among her medical colleagues for the anti-diet approach.

ACCORDING TO anti-dieters, overweight people must first learn to accept themselves as they are. "They have to stop looking to weight and appearance to be the magic source of change for them," said Polivy. Then, she said, they won't fall for strict diets whose promises of rapid weight loss may ultimately lead to eating binges because people cannot tolerate being deprived for long of the foods they really want or need.

In "Overcoming Overeating," Munter and Hirschmann say that their approach often leads to weight loss but that it offers people other benefits even if they don't lose weight. When people stop criticizing themselves for being fat and learn to eat what they need when they need it, Munter said, they develop more positive feelings about themselves.

The two therapists, who practice in New York and teach at the New School for Social Research, tell clients to put away undersize clothes and get rid of scales, which become external judges of their worth.

They recommend a crucial step: buy all the foods you like and take them home. This advice may frighten clients. "Everyone is afraid they will go crazy," Munter said. But that does not happen, she said; instead people begin to learn to nourish themselves based on actual hunger.

Ethel Speiser, who is 37 years old and lives in San Diego, said she read "Overcoming Overeating," decided she liked the concept and started by buying six boxes of miniature Milky Way candy bars. Although she ate a lot of candy at first, she said, "by the end of the week, I'd take a bite of one and say, that's enough."

AFTER THE FIRST week, she broke the book's rule and weighed herself; she said she had lost five pounds.

Carol Husten, 56, of Brooklyn, N.Y., said she had been dieting since she was 16. Over the next 30 years or so, her weight fluctuated so wildly that she had clothes in her closet from size 12 to size 20. Then, she said, she began taking classes with Munter and has stabilized at size 16 (she does not weigh herself).

She has also changed her outlook. "Once I know I can eat it if I want it, I don't want it so badly," she said. "But to get to that stage, you really have to feed yourself all you want." She said liberating herself from dieting gave her self-confidence.

Because of food obsessions, Munter said, many people never guiltlessly enjoy food, and they never confront the issues that actually trouble them. "The real tragedy," she said, "is that people spend lifetimes preoccupied with food."

The authors, who define compulsive eaters as those who eat when they are not hungry, speak from personal experience. Hirschmann recalls the constant self-criticism that went with being overweight: "I'd have half my head in a conversation and the other half thinking: 'She looks thin. I ought to be that thin.'" Ending that obsessive rumination, she said, "left me open to face life."

Atrens, a professor of psychobiology at the University of Sydney in Australia, argues in "Don't Diet" that the hazards of being overweight have been exaggerated. People of all weights can be healthy, he says, if they exercise and eat a diet low in saturated fats and high in carbohydrates. He argues that people underestimate such negative effects of dieting as its potential contribution to the development of eating disorders.

NEW IDEAS ABOUT dieting and being overweight have emerged in the last year or so from studies in the United States. Research now shows that when people are too strictly deprived of food their bodies may perceive the diet as a threat and rebel by slowing down, thus assuring that they shed no further weight. In some cases the metabolism does not speed up again when the diet is abandoned. Researchers are finding, too, that slow metabolisms may be hereditary.

Indeed, it is beginning to appear that obesity — usually defined as being 20 percent over ideal weight — may not always be linked to gluttony.

C. Wayne Callaway, director of the Center for Clinical Nutrition at the George Washington University Medical School in Washington, estimated that only 20 percent of obese people overeat. "Skinny people tend to eat more than fat people," he said.

Kelly Brownell, a co-director of the Obesity Research Clinic at the University of Pennsylvania, led a study that showed that on-again off-again dieting can actually contribute to becoming overweight because the body responds to dieting by using food more efficiently. His group has found preliminary evidence that such dieting may increase the risk of diabetes or heart disease.

Neither Brownell nor Callaway, however, maintains that research results should lead people to give up hope of being thin, and they are not opposed to dieting under proper conditions. Brownell said people should start diets only when they are ready to stick with them; that way, they will not lower their metabolism by going on and off diets.

SIMILAR ADVICE comes from Callaway, who said very-low-calorie diets are also hazardous because they can end in binges. Chronic dieters, he said, need diets designed to reduce weight gradually, which will return their metabolic rate — the rate at which the body burns food — to normal and also bring about a slow weight loss. To assure a proper metabolic rate, a diet should allow no less than 10 calories per pound of weight per day, or 1,600 calories a day for a 160-pound person.

Some researchers, though, say that too much blame is being placed on heredity. Susan Schiffman, a psychologist who directs the weight loss unit in the department of psychiatry at the Duke University Medical Center, argued that anyone can be thin if they strip their diets of fat, which has nearly twice the calories of carbohydrates or proteins.

Whatever the approach to dieting, the American obsession with thinness is unabated, especially among women. Its prevalence was suggested again last week when a study of 2,030 girls and women in the Detroit area was presented to the American Psychological Association. The study's author, Adam Drewnowski, a University of Mighican psychologist, found that 38 percent of the girls and 49 percent of the women considered themselves overweight, even though only 15 percent of each group were too heavy, according to the federal government's weight charts.

Catering service delivers diet meals to doorsteps

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

Great ideas start from the simplest needs. Joanne Guy of San Diego had trouble staying on the Weight Watchers diet because she worked and did not have time to buy the ingredients and prepare the dishes. She looked for a service that would do the cooking for her, without success.

At first, Ms. Guy's solution promised her more work, rather than less. After a quick study of diet menus in cookbooks, she and a friend placed an advertisement in a newspaper that said: "Gourmet diet meals delivered to your door. 1,200 calories a day, 3 meals a day, Monday-Friday."

That brought them eight customers and total exhaustion. But Ms. Guy lost weight eating her diet meals, and has kept it off.

"For about three months, we cooked after work and almost died doing it," she said. "We stayed up until midnight cooking and then got up at 4 a.m. to pack the food and deliver it. It was like 'I Love Lucy.'"

An appearance on a local television program brought 20 more customers. Ms. Guy quit her job as a technical writer for General Dynamics, and is now the sole owner of the company, Doorstep Diets. She employs two cooks and three drivers and has about 60 steady customers, most of whom are professional women.

"It's like having a part-time live-in cook," said Joyce Maxwell, who has been a customer for a year.

Gourmet Gazelle in New York City and Diet-Carry-Out in Marseilles, Ill., provide similar services. Each has a slightly different approach to the food and its delivery, but both sell low-fat, low-calorie, low-sodium, low-cholesterol meals to people who want to lose weight or who just want to eat more healthful meals, without having to do any of the work involved.

What Ms. Guy offers today is far more sophisticated than what she sold in 1984. Customers can choose from three plans, which provide 900 calories, 1,200 calories or 1,800 calories a day. (The average non-dieting woman needs about 2,000 calories a day; the average non-dieting man, about 2,700) Customers may select all-vegetarian menus or ones that exclude foods they cannot or will not eat, like red meat or cheese, although Ms. Guy said she was cutting back on these tailor-made meals.

"It's getting to the point that I can't do special orders anymore," she said. "There are so many strange quirks."

The menus have been checked by a dietitian and have been accepted by the American Heart Association. According to Ms. Guy, however, many customers are not on weight-loss diets. They just like the convenience and the emphasis on nutritious food.

"We want the food to be as healthful as possible," she said. "But we want to appeal to people who are not on a diet. We want it to taste good so that it will appeal to people after they lose weight," to help them maintain their weight loss.

Kathy and John Yato have been using Doorstep Diets for about a year. Mrs. Yato is on a diet, so she follows the 1,200-calorie plan; her husband does not need to diet, so he indulges in 1,800 calories.

"We work long hours in our business," said Mrs. Yato, who distributes art prints to galleries. "I get home at 10 or 11 o'clock and it's a little bit hard to have a nutritious diet. This appeals to me because the food is real tasty and because of the nutrition."

On the whole, Ms. Guy's food is very tasty and little of it seems like diet fare. Of the dishes sampled at her kitchen, several were as good as, or better than, the average carryout food, including macaroni crust pizza, potato moussaka made with yogurt, whitefish stuffed with crab meat and tuna Romanoff.

Her plans are available with three meals a day, two meals a day or one meal a day, five or six days a week. The price for three meals a day five days a week is $73 to $97, depending on the number of calories; for six days it is $88 to $115. Dinner only for five days is $38 to $50; for six days it is $45 to $59.

Give lemons a pretty twist

Here's how to make it:

1. With broad edge of small sharp knife, cut thin strip of rind two-thirds around lemon.
2. To keep strip intact, angle the knife inward.
3. Lift strip end, loop it over itself and up through the center. Gently tighten the perky curl.

Fish, chips shops spruce up image

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE

BARKINGSIDE, England (AP) — The Hi-Tide is no longer your run-of-the-mill fish and chips shop. The American hamburger, fried chicken and pizza have seen to that.

Instead of the greasy, colorless decor that typifies many British fish and chips places, the Hi-Tide is a large combination restaurant-take-out business refurbished with "Old English" decor of wood beams, exposed brick and lanterns.

The kitchen gleams and the large staff is eager to please.

The reason for this is just down the main shopping street of this tidy northeast London suburb: a hamburger stand, a Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet and a pizza parlor. McDonald's is coming soon.

Fish and chips are still Britain's biggest-selling fast food, but the trade is under siege and having to fight back.

"The competition is very, very fierce," said Hi-Tide's owner, Eric Laycock. "I'd be lying to you if I said it didn't hurt."

Not only is there competition, there are image problems too. The health-conscious are shunning fried foods, and young Britons say eating fish isn't trendy.

Bob Kennedy, marketing director for Edinburgh-based Sea Fish Industry, says fish and chips shops "are maintaining their level of sales but they are not sharing in the expansion of hot food takeaway as a whole."

Said Brian Phelps, president of London's Fish Friers Association: "We're having to pull our socks up, obviously."

Fish and chips have been a national food since the 19th-century industrial revolution, when trains and steam trawlers started bringing it to the neighborhoods of the new working class.

The meal usually consists of succulent cod, deep-fried in batter, and stubby French fries called chips, all sprinkled liberally with malt vinegar and salt. Mushy peas are optional.

Until the advent of modern packaging, the fish and chips came wrapped in an old newspaper to soak up the grease. A order now costs an average of 1.25 pounds ($2.34), about half the price of a Big Mac, fries and soft drink.

Nicknamed "chippies," fish and chips shops generally have been small businesses run by married couples out of the front rooms of their terraced houses.

But gentrification of these terraces has driven out many shops, and they are scarce even in central London today.

As the new competition has intensified in the past 10 years, "chippies" are becoming larger, and chains and partnerships are forming. Although most shops remain English-owned, Chinese, Greek and Indian immigrants are moving in.

Britain had 9,500 fish and chips shops in 1986, representing 52.1 percent of the multibillion-dollar fast food market, down from 10,750 shops and 55.3 percent in 1981, according to Sea Fish Industry.

Today, annual fish and chips sales total the equivalent of about $935 million, the National Federation of Fish Friers said.

The fight for survival is multi-pronged.

More are providing seating for their customers.

Laycock, who offers 42 seats, says: "Takeaway is too blunt, it is too quick. You can't converse with a customer like in a restaurant."

The shops have improved flavor by using better batters and oils, and are packaging meals in lidded cardboard boxes, Phelps said.

Industry associations now run training courses for their members and are countering the health issue with a low-key public relations campaign.

"People say that fried food is unhealthy and too much fried food will lead to heart disease," said Arthur Parrington, head of the Leeds-based national federation. "We say, 'Moderation in all things.'"

Laycock, 45, says he spent 100,000 pounds ($187,000) renovating the run-down fish and chips shop he bought in 1974. He reports business is better, and he is considering getting a liquor license.

As a director of Old Bylands Ltd., a 20-shop chain, Laycock travels to outlets to teach managers how to fight the competition from the hamburger, fried chicken and pizza.

"There will be less of us. The ones that are left will be highly specialized and efficient," he said.

"This is a very dying trade, but I think we still have a place in English society."

Inhaling cooking-oil spray fumes fatal

Copley News Service

Cooking-oil spray that contains Freon is as lethal as cocaine and should be banned, according to a Canadian substance abuse expert, who says six kids have died from inhaling cooking-oil sprays in the past decade.

Dr. Robert Peterson says Freon-filled cooking-oil spray is too dangerous because snorting it can cause heart attack or death.

He says the government restricts the use of Freon in most products because it damages the ozone layer. But cooking-oil spray manufacturers are allowed to use Freon because it creates a quality non-stick surface.

In addition, the government maintains that a product used for its intended purpose isn't hazardous.

But Peterson disagrees.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

When we were young, we enjoyed experimenting with different bidding styles. This hand, from the finals of the North American Collegiate Bridge Championship held in conjunction with the American Contract Bridge League's Spring North American Championships in Buffalo, show that that is still the case.

The event was won by the University of Illinois. On this deal, Dennis Carney and Justin Graver of UI sat North-South. They used the Precision System to get to an ambitious diamond slam. North's one club opening bid was artificial, indicating 17 points or more, and East's double showed the major suits. South's one diamond response promised at least a five-card suit and 5-8 points. North asked for suit quality, and South showed a suit headed by the jack. Both three clubs and four hearts were asking bids in those suits, and South's replies revealed second-round control in each case.

West led the jack of spades, and East's double came back to haunt him. With nothing to guide him, declarer would probably have taken every finesse in sight, with dire consequences. Since the location of most of the cards was marked, South instead elected to rise with the ace of spades. Next came a finesse of the jack of hearts, and when that held, declarer cashed the king, spurned the trump finesse in favor of crossing to the ace and discarded a spade on the ace of hearts. After conceding a trick to the king of diamonds, he later took a winning club finesse to land his slam.

Prostitute who had Swaggart as client says she's returning to Indiana, children

NEW YORK (AP) — Debra Murphree, the New Orleans woman who says evangelist Jimmy Swaggart paid her to perform sexual acts, says she's given up prostitution and is returning to Indiana and her children.

Murphree

Miss Murphree appeared at a news conference Tuesday to promote Penthouse magazine's July issue, which contains her description of her encounters with Swaggart and photos illustrating some of the sexual poses she says he paid her to assume.

Miss Murphree would not say how much Penthouse paid her for her story.

She said that after a two-week, 10-city tour, she would return to Princeton, Ind., and her children — a 10-year-old daughter and two sons, 7 and 8 — who are staying with her parents.

She said she had no plans beyond getting a high school diploma, but thought she might try something like interior decorating.

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare book by Edgar Allan Poe that a Massachusetts man picked up for $15 in a New Hampshire barn was auctioned for $198,000, putting the seller in a "dream world," an auction house official said.

The first-edition copy of "Tamerlane and Other Poems," only the 12th known copy of Poe's first book published in 1827, was sold at Sotheby's auction house Tuesday to a rare book dealer for less than expected.

Even so, the Massachusetts seller was 'extremely happy," Sotheby's Vice President David Redden said. "He's still in, I think, a sort of dream world over the whole business."

The seller, who demanded anonymity said he found the book in an antique barn in southern New Hampshire. The barn was not identified.

Poe, who paid to have the book published by an obscure Boston publisher, went on to write such classic poems and stories of horror and romance as "Annabel Lee," "The Raven," and "The Tell-tale Heart."

"It's the rarest book in American literature — it's the most famous book in American literature," said the buyer, Manhattan book dealer James Cummins. "It's the book that every rare book seller hopes to get his hands on."

Cummins said he was buying the book for a "serious book collector" from New York and was "very pleased" with the price, which Sotheby's described as a record for a work of American literature.

Sotheby's had estimated the book's value at $200,000 to $300,000. The $198,000 price includes the 10 percent commission that goes to Sotheby's.

The soft-cover book, which contains the long title poem and nine shorter ones, bears no reference to Poe, listing the author only as "a Bostonian." Although Poe was born in Boston, he lived there only a few months before his parents moved to Richmond, Va. He lived in Boston again for about eight weeks when "Tamerlane" was published.

The work had been written about five years earlier, when Poe was 12 or 13 years old. There is no indication that a single copy of the book was ever sold, and it never has been highly regarded by critics.

Its value is considered historical more than literary, since it is the first and rarest work by Poe.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Charley Pride set up a gazebo. Loretta Lynn boasted a hot-pink booth with revolving mannequins. Barbara Mandrell, surrounded by red, white and blue, offered up baseball and apple pie.

To hear country music stars tell it, Nashville's annual "Fan Fair" is as important to them as it is to the thousands who make the pilgrimage year after year to collect their autographs or exchange a few words with their idols.

"People think that it's a drag for performers to meet fans live," said singer K.T. Oslin, who won a Grammy this year as country female vocalist for her single, "80s Ladies."

"It isn't. It's great fun," she said Tuesday. "I mean that's the only way you can tell what your work is going to when somebody looks you in the face and they say, 'I love your record and I'm from so-and-so.' And you go, 'All right, they hear me there.' The fans are fun."

More than 20,000 country music lovers are expected to descend on the state fairgrounds this week for seven days of festivities that feature about 30 hours of concerts and 365 autograph booths.

Naomi Judd, the older half of mother-daughter singing duo The Judds, said she owes it to the fans to come to the festival.

"You come to see us when we come to your hometown. You guys go buy the tickets, get babysitters, get your outfits ready and hassle the traffic and come to see us," she said.

Pride manned a gazebo to greet his fans. Miss Lynn's booth was painted hot pink and had revolving mannequins displaying T-shirts. Miss Mandrell used a red, white and blue baseball motif for her booth and offered apple pie to her fans.

The fair gives the performers a chance to pay back their fans, said singer Eddy Raven.

"Anybody who tells you that they come out here just because they love to come — in the heat and all that — that's wrong. It's not true," he said. "It's a time that we can really come and meet folks and not be under the pressure of having to perform."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte will probably undergo chemotherapy to treat the cancer that has spread from his stomach to his liver, but Duarte's personal physician says the malignancy is terminal.

Duarte

Duarte underwent three hours of cancer surgery Tuesday at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in which doctors removed a portion of his stomach but left his diseased liver alone.

"There was metastatic disease present in both lobes of the liver, and this was not removed," a hospital statement said.

"That is going to end the life of President Duarte," said Dr. Benjamin Interiano, Duarte's personal physician. He said the average life expectancy for someone in Duarte's condition is six months, but some patients live longer, others shorter.

Following Duarte's recuperation from surgery, "this disease will probably be treated with chemotherapy," the hospital statement said.

Duarte, 62, "tolerated the surgery well," it said, describing the operation as "uneventful."

The Salvadoran leader, who was hospitalized here May 31, will remain in intensive care for a few days before returning to his regular hospital room.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's affection bruises wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Tony" and I have been married for nine years. We are both in our early 50s, and it's the second marriage for both of us.

We get along great, but Tony is too affectionate. I'm affectionate, too, but when he shows affection, he gets so rough he leaves black and blue marks all over me.

He starts hugging and squeezing me as soon as he gets home from work, and doesn't let up until bedtime. He wants me near him all the time, so he can playfully pinch or punch me.

He weighs twice as much as me, and I can't defend myself. I have begged him to be more gentle, but he says he loves me so much he can't help himself. He says he was never this way with his first wife. — BLACK AND BLUE IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR BLACK AND BLUE: A pinch is a pinch and a punch is still a punch, and both are physical abuse. Buy yourself some protective padding — the kind worn by football and hockey players (I'm serious).

Greet Tony at the door in full uniform and don't remove it — even at bedtime — until he agrees to get some professional counseling and learns how to show his love less sadistically.

DEAR ABBY: When our son was diagnosed as being "in an acute stage of schizophrenia" and was admitted into the special-care unit of a psychiatric hospital, many friends and relatives asked me how he was doing, what they could do to help, etc.

I thanked them for asking, gave them a brief but honest answer concerning his condition, and added, "You could send him a get-well card."

When our insurance coverage ended at the private hospital, he took those get-well cards to the state psychiatric hospital with him; when he was released from there, he carried that little bundle of cards home to keep near him.

He is functioning normally now, and he's never forgotten the thoughtfulness of those people who sent him cards when he was ill. — CLEVELAND COMMUNICATOR

DEAR COMMUNICATOR: You communicated a valuable message to pass along to my readers: Those who are hospitalized for any kind of illness desperately need to know that friends and relatives wish them well.

It takes so little effort to send a card or a note, and the joy it can bring is incalculable.

DEAR ABBY: We live in New York, and my husband and I plan to move to Florida in July. We have a 90-pound German shepherd and a full-grown domestic cat.

How do we make a worry-free move for our family of four and the pets? I have already been told that pets do not travel well, but I would hate to have to find a new home for them and leave them behind for this reason.

We have considered buying a small station wagon, but I don't know how this will work out for our dog. Any ideas will be a great help. — T.R. IN N.Y.

DEAR T.R.: My pet consultant, Dr. J. Isaacs, informs me that there is a medication that will alleviate motion sickness and stress for traveling pets. Also, all pets crossing state lines must have an interstate health certificate to ensure that they are in good physical condition, have the proper vaccinations, etc.

Take your pets to your vet for physical examinations, appropriate medications, shots, etc. Your vet can answer any and all questions, including the name of a competent vet when you get to Florida.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me! I had a boyfriend who has a teen-age daughter and a 5-year-old daughter. I have reason to believe he is sexually abusing them. The very thought of it turns my stomach and sickens me so much I just had to get away from him.

When we first started going together I liked him a lot — we had so much in common — but since I've had these suspicions about him, I don't want anything to do with him.

He keeps calling and asking to see me, but I keep making excuses. The last time he called, he wanted to know if I was mad at him. I told him no, I wasn't — which is true. I am just sick at heart and confused.

Should I confront him and clear the air, or just forget about him and look for a man who doesn't have daughters? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Confronting him will not necessarily clear the air. What if he denies your accusations?

If your suspicions are based on strong evidence, this man should be reported to your local child protective agency.

The people there will know how to approach and question him — and his daughters. Your first concern should be the girls. If your suspicions are correct, they and their sick father will require therapy.

Please send me your name and address, and I will gladly intervene for you.

Pistons prove they're for real in Game 1

Pressure, slumping Lakers no match for Daly's five

NBA Finals

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons handled the playoff pressure like some lightweight nuisance they could simply flick off their shoulders. They handled the defending NBA champions the same way.

Finalists for the first time in their 31 seasons in Detroit, the Pistons were remarkably poised Tuesday night. They shot well, stifled Los Angeles' shooters and upset the Lakers 105-93 in the opener of the best-of-seven title battle.

Now, perhaps, the team that eliminated Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls 4-1 and Larry Bird and the Boston Celtics 4-2 will get the respect it feels it deserves.

"A lot of guys are upset that most of the media has us going down in four or five," said Detroit's Adrian Dantley. "We're fired up."

If the Pistons win Thursday night's second game, they'll become the first team in NBA finals history to win the first two games on the road. The three games after that will be in Pontiac, Mich., starting Sunday.

If the Laers come back and win the series, they will become the first repeat champions since Boston in 1969.

Detroit's underdog status against the Lakers, who are in the finals for the seventh time in nine seasons, kept the Pistons loose.

"As far as we knew, we were supposed to get swept, so there was no pressure," Detroit guard Vinnie Johnson said.

"We're very relaxed," Dantley said. "I talked to a lot of guys. Everybody's sleeping better. When we played Boston, we couldn't sleep.

"The Lakers are favorites anyway so what have we got to lose?"

Detroit wasn't going to lose Tuesday night, not the way Dantley and Johnson were shooting and the way they and their teammates were keeping the Lakers from scoring.

Dantley made 14 of 16 shots and led all scorers with 34 points. Johnson came off the bench to make seven of 11 shots and score 16 points. The Pistons sank 57.5 percent of their field goal attempts, which helped them prevent Los Angeles from using its running game.

Johnson's 17-foot jumper with 10:56 left in the second quarter gave the Pistons a 24-23 lead. They never trailed after that, led 57-40 at halftime and stayed on top by at least seven points the rest of the way.

The Lakers were led by Magic Johnson with 28 points and Byron Scott with 25. But Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made just four of 13 shots and Michael Cooper missed all seven of his. The team's shooting percentage was 39.8.

"I wouldn't like to think so," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said when asked if his team was emotionally down for the game. "We are playing for the world championship at home. We came ready.

"The shots wouldn't drop and that got the guys frustrated after 10 or 12 minutes," he added. "It probably was one of the worst games we've ever played in the playoffs here."

The Lakers, who lost a home playoff opener for the first time in 20 series, made just eight of 22 shots in the first quarter and seven of 22 in the second. They were open for many of the misses.

"I think we had guys flying at them" on those apparently open shots, Vinnie Johnson said. "We were taking away their first and second options and they had to settle for their third option."

Flat Lakers belie success

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Coach Pat Riley, who guaranteed a year ago that the Los Angeles Lakers would repeat as NBA Champions, himself repeated a phrase he's used often lately.

"I go back to what I've been saying to the team the whole year; if we win (the title), it will be the toughest thing they've ever done," Riley said.

"And there's a lot more basketball to be played."

The Lakers, who had the NBA's best regular-season record (62-20) this year after their championship season of 1987-88, seem to be making it hard on themselves.

After struggling to seven-game victories in the last two playoff series, against Utah and Dallas, the Lakers came out flat Tuesday night and were beaten 105-93 by the Detroit Pistons in the opening game of the NBA Championship series.

Detroit's defense, which has caused trouble for each of the Pistons' playoff foes this year, was a factor, but the Lakers had many costly lapses at both ends of the floor.

And they couldn't get the ball into the basket — shooting just 39.8 percent to the Pistons' 57.5 percent.

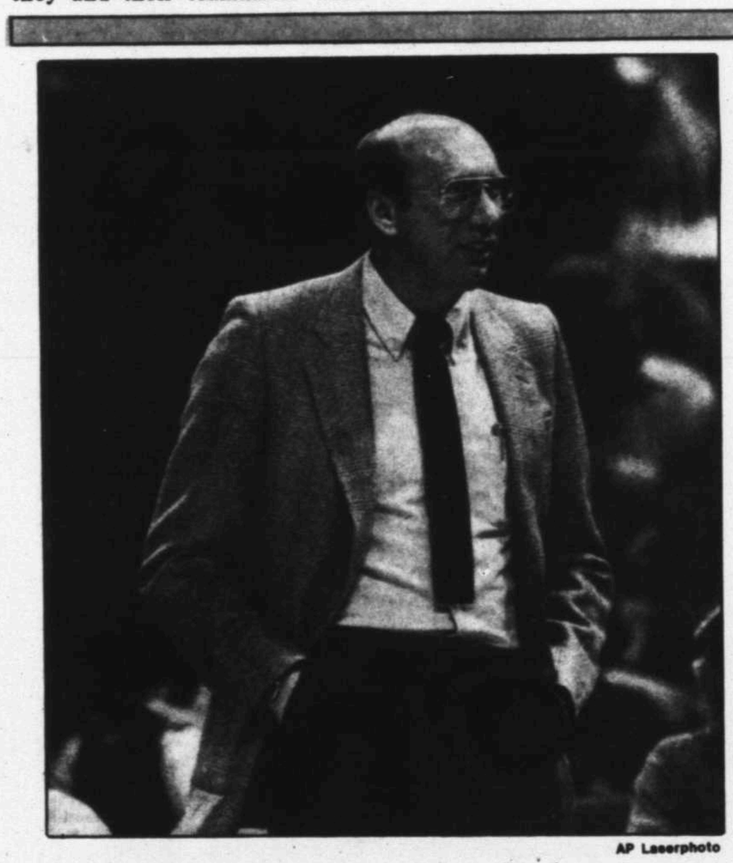

"They didn't do much to bother my shots; they just didn't go in," said Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was 2-of-10 shooting in the first half as Los Angeles fell behind 57-40.

The Lakers' Michael Cooper was 1-for-6 in the half (0-7 for the game), and Byron Scott 3-for-10 as Los Angeles fell too far back to overcome the deficit.

"It was probably one of the worst games we've ever played in the playoffs here," Riley said. "Cooper missed seven open shots, Kareem couldn't get a skyhook to go in ...

"I'll have to look at the film; I don't know whether it was them (the Pistons' defense) or us."

Bob Weiss won't man the San Antonio bench next season.

Weiss fired, but Albeck in line for Spurs' job

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Saying it was time for a change, the new owner of the San Antonio Spurs fired two-year head coach Bob Weiss and said a former Spurs mentor was in line for the job.

B.J. "Red" McCombs, who gained control of the team on May 27 for $47 million, fired Weiss on Tuesday, but said Weiss might be reassigned to another position within the organization.

McCombs also said that former Spurs coach Stan Albeck, who is now at Bradley University, was among a group of candidates for the job. Albeck compiled a 153-93 record from 1980 to 1983. A decision is expected by next Tuesday, McCombs said.

Weiss, a former assistant coach with the Dallas Mavericks, compiled a 59-105 record in his two seasons with the Spurs.

"I feel it was best at this time to make a change," McCombs said, declining to elaborate on his judgment of Weiss' abilities.

"I do appreciate the contribution that he made to this team. I recognized that he came in at a time when we were playing a lot of new faces and I think he made a contribution to that," McCombs told a news conference.

"I just feel we are at a stage now that I would like to see a change," he said.

Weiss said he would prefer an NBA coaching job and would take some time off to decide his future.

He said he was not angry about the dismissal.

"It's Red's team now and he has to have somebody he's comfortable with," Weiss said. "I can certainly see his viewpoint. My feelings are more of disappointment that I couldn't see this through.

"Oddly enough there is no bitter disappointment, resentment, and it's a really a thing of circumstance. I'm walking away with my head held high. I really felt we were on target. I'm happy with the way this team is.

"I think we're on track and this is going to be a great team and I'm just sorry I'm not going to be here," he said.

Mavs mum on possible Aguirre trade

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks officials won't comment on speculation that Mark Aguirre will be traded, but they say the forward probably will be fined for playing at a charity golf event instead of attending a mandatory team meeting.

Newspaper reports say the club is split between owner Donald Carter and his basketball management about whether to trade Aguirre, the team's leading scorer.

Aguirre did not return calls made by The Associated Press on Tuesday. Mavericks Vice President Rick Sund, contacted at pre-draft meetings in Chicago, refused to comment.

Carter attributed Aguirre's absence to absent-mindedness, even though Aguirre failed to tell team officials he would miss the meeting.

"You may find I'm wrong, but I'll bet you that he will feel like one of my sons," Carter said Monday. "When they were younger they'd say, 'Ooh, I forget to do something I told momma or daddy I'd do.' Mark Aguirre is a child at heart, and I love him for that. So this meeting was the furthest thing from his mind this morning."

Aguirre probably will be fined $250 for missing the meeting, Carter said.

The forward was playing in the Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Arlington charity golf tournament during the team's final meeting before breaking up for the summer.

Now that the team is adjourned until Oct. 7, Coach John MacLeod and his staff are expected to hold a meeting in the next couple of weeks to discuss the state of the club after their most successful playoff season.

Dallas defeated the Houston Rockets and Denver Nuggets and stretched the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers to a seventh game in the Western Conference Finals, which Dallas eventually lost.

Aguirre's defensive shortcomings and his moodiness could work against him, some of his teammates and team officials have said.

Sun Devils stay alive with romp

CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Live bats, a lively arm and a lively controversy kept the Grim Reaper away from No. 1 Arizona State in an elimination game against No. 5 Florida at the College World Series.

The Sun Devils, whose bats had been dead in hitting .221 through two World Series games after a season at .326, collected 14 hits against the Gators to go with Rusty Kilgo's six-hit pitching in a 10-1 whipping of Florida on Tuesday night.

The victory kept Arizona State, 58-12, alive in the series and headed into a rematch tonight with No. 4 Wichita State, 56-14-1. The Shockers downed ASU 7-4 Sunday night in the two-bracket, double-elimination tournament.

Florida goes home with a 48-19-1 record after its first College World Series appearance.

In the nightcap Tuesday, defending champion Stanford used Doug Robbins' unearned run with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to sideline No. 3 Miami 2-1. The Cardinal, ranked No. 7, stays alive with a 43-23 record and will meet No. 6 Fullerton State, 43-16, Thursday night.

Arizona State's bats and Kilgo's second standout performance at the CWS may have been encouraged by the suspension earlier Tuesday of Sun Devils catcher Tim Spehr, the team's leading home run hitter, several players said. Coach Jim Brock told his team of the suspension Tuesday morning.

"I'm not going into what the infraction was," Brock said. "You do not take away a young man's opportunity to play what might be his last ball game without it being very serious. I think there's a feeling on the ballclub that if everything goes right, Timmy might be back tomorrow."

"I've been with Tim two years and he's one of my best friends," said Martin Peralta, who took Spehr's spot behind the plate for ASU.

EL PASO — Ace reliever Colby Ward was again hammered by El Paso batters and the Diablos went on to post a 10-6 win over the Midland Angels at Dudley Field here Tuesday.

Ward, 9-2, failed to retire a batter in a four-run seventh inning for the Diablos and was yanked after Greg Vaughn blasted a three-run home run to left-center field, his 15th.

Ueberroth hailed after announcing plans

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that Peter Ueberroth says he's leaving, baseball owners want him to stay.

Ueberroth said Tuesday he was rejecting an offer for a second five-year term as baseball commissioner but would stay on through the labor negotiations in 1990 if necessary.

Owners, some of whom had objected to Ueberroth's high-handed methods in the past, said they were disappointed.

"I'm just devastated he's leaving because I think he's done more for baseball than anyone else I know. There was not one owner in that room who did not want him back," Minnesota Twins owner Carl Pohlad said of last week's meeting in San Francisco. "I'm surprised and disappointed. I'm going to try to talk him out of it."

"I'd like to see him stay on but I think he's pretty firm on leaving," San Francisco Giants owner Bob Lurie said. "He has straightened out the game financially and put it in the right direction."

Ueberroth consistently has said that he did not think he had enough support for re-election, which requires votes from 14 of the 26 clubs. But at the owners' meeting, he was asked to stay on by Pohlad and Montreal Expos owner Charles Bronfman, who approached him as representatives of a majority.

"I was suprised. I was pleased. I was thankful," Ueberroth said. "But I told them I would not accept."

"It came up near the end of a meeting," Lurie said. "He said, 'Some of you have approached me about staying on for another term and I think I owe it to you to tell you that I will not.'"

Ueberroth did agree, however, to remain in office for up to one year beyond the expiration of his current contract on Dec. 31, 1989. Owners had been concerned that he would leave only months before a possible players' strike.

Baseball's collective bargaining agreement expires the same day as Ueberroth's contract and baseball's network television contracts end after the 1989 season.

The Associated Press reported Monday that Ueberroth had agreed to stay on through the 1990 labor negotiatons.

"The important thing is that the commissioner has agreed to stay on," Seattle Mariners owner George Argyros said. "You have to recognize that Peter's done a wonderful job as commissioner."

Ueberroth said he will not seek political office as has often been rumored.

"I have no entry point into politics," Ueberroth said. "I've passed up opportunities. I'm a little too brash, a little too blunt. But I run things well. I'll find something to run."

Bailes loses gem, but gains savvy

Associated Press

After the seventh inning, Cleveland's Scott Bailes had lost a no-hitter and gained some experience.

The left-hander had held the Toronto Blue Jays hitless through six innings Tuesday night and was ahead 3-0. He retired the first two batters in the seventh but second baseman Julio Franco dropped George Bell's blooper to shallow right for a two-base error. Bailes hit Fred McGriff with a pitch and gave up an RBI single to Kelly Gruber. A two-run single by Cecil Fielder tied the game.

"I feel I've improved a lot this year," said Bailes, who ended up with a three-hitter as the Indians came back to win 5-3 on Cory Snyder's ninth-inning homer. "Last year, if that would've happened in the seventh inning, I might not have lasted the inning, let alone the game. I've settled down emotionally."

Bailes, 6-4, walked one and struck out two.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 3

Rickey Henderson hit a run-scoring single and started a sensational double play in the eighth inning as New York beat Boston, hours after baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth ended the feud between Yankees manager Billy Martin and umpires.

Martin, who stayed off the field Monday night under threat of instant ejection, left the dugout four times without incident.

Charles Hudson, 5-2, overcame a three-run inning in the top of the first and Cecilio Guante finished for his sixth save.

American

Orioles 4, Tigers 3

Eddie Murray, who had a tie-breaking double in the eighth inning, drove in three runs, as Baltimore and won its first series against an East Division opponent since April 10-12, 1987.

With one out in the eighth, Billy Ripken doubled against Frank Tanana, 8-4, and Cal Ripken walked. Murray then doubled down the left-field line. Doug Sisk, 3-2, pitched two scoreless innings.

Murray had tied the score with a homer in the bottom of the sixth, his fifth of the year and his first as a right-handed hitter since Sept. 12 of last season.

White Sox 10, Twins 8

Harold Baines' homer and Mike Woodard's two-run triple highlighted a seven-run seventh inning as Chicago defeated Minnesota.

Baines hit the first pitch off reliever Keith Atherton, 4-3, for his seventh homer of the year. Dan Pasqua, who had homered earlier, hit an RBI single to put Chicago ahead 5-4. Ozzie Guillen had a two-run single, Woodard tripled in two more and Gary Redus hit a sacrifice fly as the White Sox enjoyed their biggest inning of the season.

Royals 6, Athletics 0

Ted Power scattered nine hits and George Brett and Danny Tartabull homered on consecutive pitches as Kansas City shut out Oakland for the second consecutive game.

The Royals won their sixth straight game while Oakland lost its third straight, matching its longest losing streak of the season. It was the first time since June 28-29, 1980 that the Athletics had been shut out consecutively. It was the first time since Aug. 6-7, 1983 that the Royals pitched consecutive shutouts. Oakland left 11 runners on base.

Angels 1, Rangers 0

Chuck Finley and Bryan Harvey combined on a five-hitter and Brian Downing homered in the sixth inning as California shut out Texas.

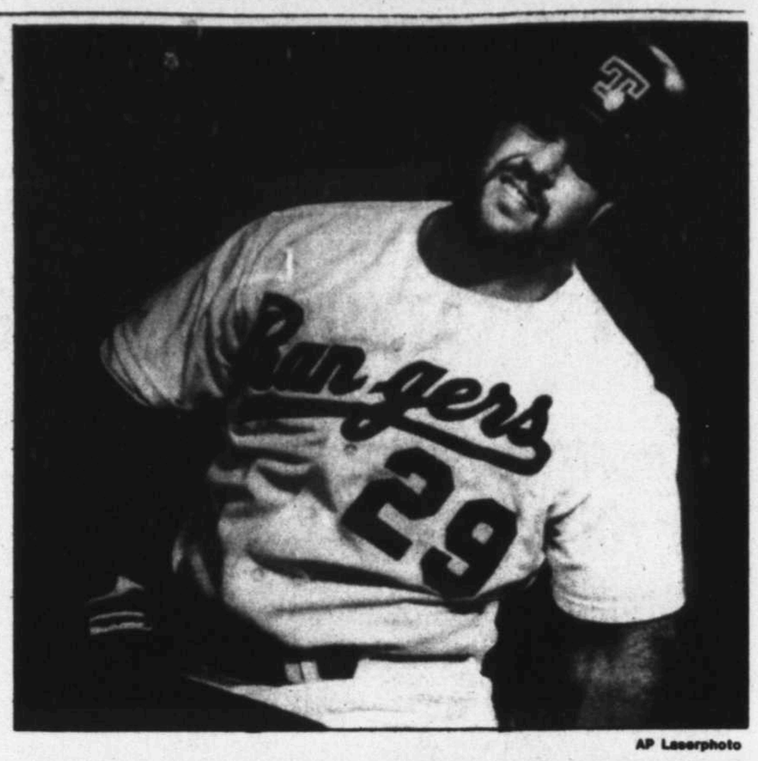

Finley, 4-7, allowed five hits, struck out seven and walked none before being relieved by Harvey with two outs in the top of the ninth and runners on first and third. Harvey struck out pinch-hitter Pete O'Brien to earn his fourth save.

Mariners 5, Brewers 4

Mickey Brantley drew a walk with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning as Seattle defeated Milwaukee for its second consecutive victory under Manager Jim Snyder.

Snyder replaced Dick Williams, who was fired Monday.

Pinch-hitter Dave Valle led off the ninth against Paul Mirabella, 0-1, with a single. After Harold Reynolds walked, Mark Clear relieved and walked Henry Cotto to load the bases. Brantley then walked on four pitches.

Improved Maddux takes over NL lead in victories

Associated Press

Greg Maddux' luck, and pitching, are getting better all the time.

Maddux became the National League's first 10-game winner as the Chicago Cubs defeated Pittsburgh 8-5 Tuesday night at Three Rivers Stadium.

Maddux, 10-3, allowed eight hits in 7 1-3 innings to beat the Pirates for the first time in his career after five defeats. Maddux and New York's Dwight Gooden had been tied for the NL lead in victories with nine.

Maddux, who was 6-14 with a 5.61 earned run average last season, tied Greg Swindell of Cleveland for the major league lead in victories.

"They hit me has hard as they always have, but some of the balls they hit tonight were caught," said the 22-year-old Maddux. "I was lucky. After last year, I just wanted to be a .500 pitcher this year."

He's been a lot better than that and has more than a third of the Cubs' 28 victories.

National

Phillies 10, Expos 5

Juan Samuel drove in four runs with a homer and single as Philadelphia beat Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

Samuel hit a two-run homer in the second inning and added a two-run single in the third.

Greg Harris, 2-2, pitched three innings in relief of starter Don Carman for the victory and Kent Tekulve got his third save.

Tim Raines homered in the first for the Expos.

Cardinals 4, Mets 1

Willie McGee had three hits, three RBI, and two stolen bases as St. Louis defeated visiting New York and previously unbeaten David Cone.

McGee had a two-run single in the third inning and an RBI single in the fifth.

St. Louis made the most of six hits in five innings off Cone, 7-1, whose earned-run average in six previous starts was 0.76.

John Tudor, 2-1, allowed eight hits in 6 1-3 innings and Ken Dayley pitched 2 2-3 hitless innings for his third save.

Padres 6, Reds 2

Ed Whitson hit a two-run double and allowed six hits in seven innings to lead San Diego past Cincinnati at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Trailing 2-1, the Padres scored five runs in the fourth inning off Danny Jackson, 5-3. San Diego got two-run doubles from Whitson and Keith Moreland, and a run-scoring single by Carmelo Martinez.

Whitson improved to 5-5 and Lance McCullers finished for his fifth save.

Giants 5, Braves 0

Kelly Downs pitched a two-hitter, facing the minimum of 27 batters, and Robby Thompson drove in three runs as San Francisco beat Atlanta at Candlestick Park.

Ken Oberkfell got a one-out single in the fourth inning and was out stealing. Ozzie Virgil grounded into a double play after Dion James singled in the fifth.

Downs, 4-5, struck out six and walked none in the first complete-game shutout of the season for the Giants. The Braves were shut out for the seventh time.

Astros 5, Dodgers 2

Danny Darwin pitched a seven hitter and ended a personal four-game losing streak as Houston took advantage of sloppy fielding to beat Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

The victory moved the Astros to within a half-game of the first-place Dodgers in the NL West.

New backup Bell may retire this fall

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Cincinnati Reds third baseman Buddy Bell says he might retire at the end of the season.

Bell, 37, has lost his starting job to rookie Chris Sabo. Bell hasn't been in the starting lineup for the last seven games.

Bell, who grew up in Cincinnati, said he decided before the season that this might be his last one. He's coming off arthroscopic surgery on his right knee, and has sprained his left knee three times since spring training, resulting in two stays on the disabled list.

Bell said he'd hoped to finish his career in Cincinnati, but the emergence of Sabo might preclude that. Bell is in the final year of his contract.

"There's not a spot for me," he said. "(But) I have not asked for my release nor have I asked to be traded or anything like that."

Bell indicated that if the Reds don't want him beyond this season, he might consider an offer to play for another team. He said he doesn't expect the Reds to offer him another contract.

Bell is hitting .196 with just 51 at-bats. Sabo is batting .287 in 45 games.

WEST TEXAS RUNNER

Interval work helps runners slash times

By FRANK MORGAN

Morgan

Runners are continually seeking ways to race faster. Often times they try the latest diet, the newest training tip, or look for the latest technology in shoes.

Most adult runners join the sport in their late 20s or 30s with no background in running. Being unfamiliar with how to train to run faster, they settle for slow relaxing runs. Unfortunately, slow relaxing runs yield slow races. The only way to learn to race faster is to train faster.

Beginning runners often make the mistake of trying to run a little farther and faster each day. This soon leads to injury and fatigue and often times the runner leaves the sport. By learning the proper techniques of speed training, runners of all levels can learn to run faster.

In general, a runner that is trying to improve shouls spend about 80 percent of the time in endurance training and 20 percent of the time in speed training. A recent survey by the Permian Basin Road Runners Club showed that the average runner trains 25 to 30 miles per week. Most of these runners could improve their race times considerably if they would slowly raise their mileage to about 40 to 50 miles a week. Time limitations hinder many runners from raising their mileage, so these people must turn to speed training if they want to improve.

There are several forms of speed training, but the one most used is an interval workout on a measured track. An interval workout is conducted by breaking the race distance down into segments and running each segment slightly faster than race pace. Each interval workout has three variables, quality, intensity and rest.

The quantity of a workout is defined as the length of each interval and the numer of repetitions performed. Someone training for a 5K race might run quarter-mile intervals on a track. Over several workouts, the runner will increase the number of quarter-mile intervals until they are equal to the 5K distance. As an example, the runner might run four quarter-mile intervals during the first workout, then increase this by two intervals per week until he runs 12 intervals.

The second variable in the workout is intensity. An interval should be run at slightly faster than race pace so that during the actual race, the runner is used to running faster. A six-minute mile pace is 90 seconds per quarter-mile. A runner who is training to run a six-minute pace during the race will run the intervals at 80 to 85 seconds each. This makes the body adapt to the speed and makes the actual race pace seem slower. As the runner improves, the times of these intervals will get faster.

The final variable in the workout is rest. After running each interval, the runner will rest before running the next one. The amount of rest depends on the length and intensity of the interval, and the conditioning of the runner. A runner doing mile intervals while training for a marathon might stop and walk for several minutes before running the next interval. A runner doing 220 yard repeats might jog slowly between intervals. A runner can make the workout harder by cutting down on the length of the rest between intervals.

The theory behind interval workouts is that on race day the runner will be able to combine the quantity and intensity together while cutting out the rest. Since the intervals have all been run at faster than race pace, the body is able to handle the extra stress during a race.

There are many variations of interval workouts and almost any running book will provide schedules and instructions. The best way to run an interval workout is with a partner. Members of the Permian Basin Road Runners Club have been meeting at the Memorial Stadium track at 7 p.m. on Wednesdays to conduct interval workouts.

The group consists of runners with a wide range of abilities so you should not feel intimidated if you would like to join. For more information on the workouts, contact Berry Simpson at 689-0646.

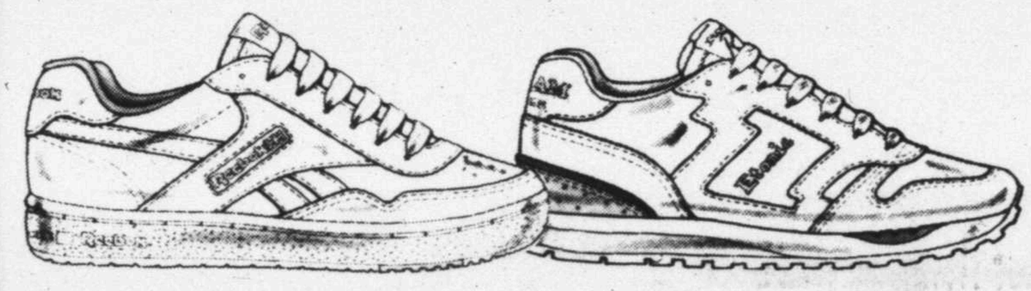

RUNNING NOTES: Several races will be held in Midland during the summer starting with the Midland Mile on June 25. The Women's Distance Festival races will be held on July 16, while the One and Only Crazy Eights race will be held on August 8. That date is of course 8-8-88, so the race will feature an 8K run starting at 8 p.m. with awards to the 8th, 18th, 28th, etc runner. What will they think of next?

140 CARD OF THANKS

to express my thanks for the love you've shown to me.
In our time of pain you all reached out to hold us close to Thee.
We've been on a journey for many long years not knowing our journey's end.
Now Michael's journey has been blessed With angels to walk him home.
For now we grieve and shed some tears, Our hearts do ache with sorrow.
But with each day the pain will ease as love brings each new tomorrow.
And so my friends - I thank you all for standing close and dear.
Sharing our loss, easing our pain
Showing us that LOVE is here.
From the Heart
Thank you friends
THE FAMILY OF MICHAEL ALSTRIN
