Government To Intervene In Cotton-Dust Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration announced today it will take the unusual step of seeking a delay in a pending Supreme Court case in an effort to determine the cost and benefits of existing cotton-dust safety standards, with an eye toward possible relaxation of the rules.

The standards were designed to protect thousands of textile workers from a respiratory condition known as "brown lung," and some officials of the Brown Lung Association in North Carolina said today they view the administration's move as a setback to their efforts to upgrade working conditions.

Thorne G. Auchter, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health, said the administration will undertake a review of the cotton-dust standard in keeping with President Reagan's Feb. 17 executive order, which requires federal agencies to assess the economic impact of major regulations.

Auchter said the administration is asking the high court to delay its ruling on a suit challenging the safety standard so the Occupational Safety and Health Administration may review the rule, which was issued by the Carter administration in 1978.

The aim is to use re-examination of the cotton-dust standard to explore cost-benefit analyses in setting worker health regulations generally.

Auchter said the standard would remain in effect and be enforced by the government during the reassessment, adding that the review would be "a wide-open effort to come to a resolution of this very quickly."

"The provision that cotton dust be controlled solely by engineering and work practice methods — in addition to mandatory use of respirators to control exposure — is not scheduled to go into effect until 1984," Auchter noted.

"This gives us time to investigate the practicality of weighing the standard's cost and benefits, which were not considered during the original rule-making and, if warranted, make changes in the standard."

Auchter said his agency had no consultations with the textile industry before deciding on the new course of action.

The OSHA cotton-dust standard was upheld by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in October 1979. That decision was appealed to the Supreme Court, which heard oral arguments Jan. 21, the day after President Carter left office.

Polish Strikers Ignore Warnings

Russia Blasts Workers

WORKERS' SUPPORT — Polish labor leader Lech Walesa is carried on the shoulders of workers at the Hytna steel works near Warsaw today during a rally marking the four-hour warning strike staged by Solidarity, the independent labor union. The union plans a general strike Tuesday unless its demands are met by the Communist government. (AP Laserphoto)

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The 10 million-member Solidarity independent labor union held a four-hour warning strike today, defying Warsaw Pact troops and tanks, then resumed negotiations aimed at averting a general strike next week.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weingberger said the Allies were considering measures in the event of Soviet-led intervention in Poland, and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said this weekend could be critical.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Solidarity's actions were of "an openly political nature," implying that the labor crisis had gotten out of control of Polish communist authorities.

But Solidarity leader Lech Walesa told striking workers at a steel mill near Warsaw, "We don't want to overthrow the (Communist) party. We only want to get rid of the people putting the brakes on renewal."

Renewal is the word Poles have given to the economic and political reforms sought by Solidarity, the Communist bloc's first non-governmental trade union.

The strike began at 8 a.m. — 1 a.m. CST — and ended on schedule four hours later. But union officials have threatened a general — and open-ended — strike for next Tuesday if their demands are not met.

A Solidarity strike bulletin published today quoted Polish radio and television chief Stanislaw Balicki as saying the government was prepared for "30 days of strikes." It also quoted him as saying the government was ready to proclaim "a state of emergency,' and that government leaders had told him the current Warsaw Pact maneuvers had been prolonged. It did not elaborate.

A Solidarity spokesman said workers walked off their jobs in the Silesia coal mines, at factories in Wroclaw, Jelenia Gora, Katowice and Lublin, and in the shipyards of Gdansk, flashpoint of last summer's labor protests. The spokesman could not say immediately what portion of the Solidarity membership participated.

The warning strike was the first since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski became Poland's premier Feb. 10 and called for a 90-day respite from strikes. It was believed to be the largest coordinated labor protest in Communist Poland's 38-year history.

Solidarity leaders resumed talks with the government a day after the regime unexpectedly postponed them Thursday. The talks are expected to focus on union grievances stemming from last week's beatings of farmers and unionists in Bydgoszcz.

In Warsaw, factory whistles heralded the strike. Transportation in the capital ground to a halt. Some 4,000 employees at the giant Huta Warszawa steel mill on the city's northern outskirts stopped work, as did 5,000 at the Ursus tractor factory nearby.

Walesa toured a number of the plants by car. At the Huta Warszawa plant, he appealed for support — but also for patience. "We want to give the premier some time to restore order."

At the tractor plant, site of 1976 disturbances over food prices, activists distributed half-loaves of bread and workers stood atop fork lifts to place the red and white Polish flag on beams.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged today that the AFL-CIO was collaborating with the CIA in an effort to subvert socialism in Poland.

The Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo added that Solidarity was engaging in "threats, blackmail and terror" in a "concentrated attack" on the Communist system. The Yugoslavian daily Politika said Poland was "paralyzed."

U.S. Watches Soviet Moves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today there is "a very dangerous, very bad" split in Poland's Communist party and that the coming weekend "could be critical" in determining whether there can be a peaceful outcome to Poland's internal problems.

"I think it's very, very serious," Haig told a small group of reporters.

"There's a very major split in the party between hard-liners and soft-liners ... I think there's a great deal of concern that this coming weekend could be critical," Haig said.

Among warning signs, he said, is the continuation of Soviet-led Warsaw Pact military maneuvers in and around Poland beyond when the exercises had been expected to end. He also cited the "tensions associated" with today's four-hour "warning" strike by the independent labor federation Solidarity and the possibility of a general strike next week.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, meanwhile, told reporters in a separate session that a variety of options are being consdiered by the United States and its allies in the event of Soviet military intervention in Poland.

He refused to specify what the proposals are and, asked if he intended to include an allied military option, said: "I don't rule it in and I don't rule it out."

Following Weinberger's breakfast meeting with reporters, top aides said no military option is in the cards and added that the defense secretary had intended to be purposefully vague to keep the Soviets guessing.

Haig said the situation "is more serious than the December period," when there was real worry in the Carter administration that Soviet intervention might be imminent to put a stop to the actions of Solidarity.

Haig also said that because of a deteriorating economy the possibility of food riots in Poland "is a real thing ... it's a contributor to real tensions that exist throughout the country, and tempers."

But a senior State Department official who did not want to be identified said Soviet intervention in Poland still "is neither inevitable nor imminent. ..."

"On the other hand," he said, "if there is a major crackdown internally, I think there would be fighting, and if there was fighting, you know what comes

Haig-Reagan Clash May Aid Connally

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig says it is time to forget the dispute over management of future crises, but a White House official warns "there are land mines ahead."

And former Texas governor and Cabinet member John Connally is starting to look better and better as a possible Haig replacement, another source said.

In his first public appearance since the crisis management flap, Haig appeared annoyed but calm Thursday when senators and reporters peppered him with questions about the decision to make Vice President George Bush head of the administration crisis team.

He was testifying, in his third public session this week, on the administration's proposed $7 billion security assistance program.

"My interest is getting on with the important matters that concern the American people," Haig said, "and I intend to do that."

"The obituary was wrong," Haig said, flatly denying he had suggested or threatened resignation, thus contradicting White House officials reported to have said the former general came close to quitting.

A White House aide said Haig did not seem to know that when President Reagan "gets his Irish up," he should not be challenged.

"It isn't over yet," said the aide. "There are land mines ahead."

A former Republican official said Haig does not seem to understand that "Reagan likes team players."

He said Connally, who sought the GOP presidential nomination himself, may be waiting in the wings to replace Haig, if and when Haig steps down. Connally was reported to have sought either the Defense or State Department posts in the Reagan Cabinet and was offended when lower-echelon Reagan aides talked to him about the Energy Department.

White House aides insist Haig did not threaten to resign when Reagan told him he was putting Bush in charge of crisis management, but they said everyone heard he "stormed around" his office after getting the word.

Haig attended the National Security Council meeting Thursday at which it was decided a statement on the gravity of the Polish situation should be issued. The events in Poland were not classified as the kind of "crisis" that would be handled by the newly formed White House team.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker said he was not as "excited as some" about the Haig furor and called it the type of misunderstanding common to an administration's "shakedown cruise."

Texas Tech To Receive Area Land

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY

An estate settlement is being worked out which will provide Texas Tech's Health Sciences Center with about 7,000 acres of land, mostly in Dickens County, from the estate of Paul and Eva Braddock, Tech regents announced at this morning's meeting.

Although Tech officials say they do not yet know the value of the property, some observers estimate its worth at $2 million.

In other matters, regents agreed to hike parking fees approximately 18 percent next year, named recipients of honorary degrees, endorsed an equal educational opportunity plan to encourage more minority enrollment, and extended the boundaries of the Ranching Heritage Center.

Three new regents were sworn into office today by Judge Robert C. Wright of the 137th District Court. They are Anne Burnett Phillips of Fort Worth, and Rex Fuller and John Birdwell II, both of Lubbock.

Mrs. Phillips abstained from the vote on the Ranching Heritage Center. Regents extended the fence line of the 8.6 acre ranching site an additional 1.3 acres to provide room for the 6666 barn, which was donated to Tech last summer by Mrs. Phillips.

Honorary degrees, to be presented at the May 15 commencement, will go to Dr. R.C. Goodwin of Gainesville, Fla., a former Tech president, and Alvin Allison, Levelland attorney, who is credited

Police Seek Suspect In City Slaying

By JACK DOUGLAS

A Lubbock man was shot and killed about 1:15 a.m. today inside a Clovis Road club and police were looking for a man seen leaving the nightspot moments later swinging a pistol and cursing.

Rodolfo R. Gonzales, 32, of 1923 Ave. N suffered three gunshot wounds and was pronounced dead at the Dos Amigos Club, 2228 Clovis Road, by Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack. Blalack ruled the death a homicide, the city's eighth of the year.

Three persons leaving the club while officers were at the scene were apprehended after it was found one of them had a .32-caliber pistol tucked in her pants. However, it appeared Gonzales was gunned down with a .38-caliber weapon, according to a police spokesman.

The 20-year-old woman who reportedly was armed with the unloaded pistol was jailed for unlawfully carrying a weapon and her husband, 21, was detained on traffic warrants. A man who was with the couple was questioned by detectives and later released.

That man told authorities he was in the nightspot during the shooting and that he dropped to the floor when he heard gunfire. He said he saw a Mexican-American man, between 48 and 53, with neatly parted, collar-length hair and a mustache, walk to the back of the club.

High Winds, Snow, Dust Sweep Over Southwest

A-J News Services

A winter storm over the Rockies sent high winds sweeping across the Southwest and southern Great Plains today, as weathermen predicted a wild mix of spring weather for the Lubbock region.

Snow and high winds triggered travel warnings in northern New Mexico.

Winds from the south and southwest were expected to hit 25 to 40 mph and reduce visibility to less than a mile over the area this afternoon.

Gusts up to 30 miles per hour were pounding Amarillo at noon, but wind velocity at Lubbock was only 17 mph at the same hour. Humidity remained at 49 percent in the Hub City at midday despite dust on the horizon. Forecasters pegged the chance of rain at 20 percent tonight.

Some blowing dust is expected in 20-to-35-mph westerly winds Saturday.

"The large and vigorous storm system covering much of the western two-thirds of the nation continued to develop and intensify last night," a Lubbock weatherman said. "It is gradually moving east this morning, carrying its associated cold front.

"The front is expected to cross West Texas later today and tonight. Ahead of the front, strong winds and blowing dust will prevail.

"It appears at this time that the magnitude of this dust storm will not be as great as the one that hit this area several days ago," the weatherman said, referring to the severe sandstorm that struck Lubbock with 60-mph winds and widespread damage March 17.

"However, visibility will be reduced to less than one mile. In some areas it will be less than one-quarter mile.

"It will continue to be windy on Saturday, and there will be more blowing dust. The wind should diminish by late Saturday."

Partly cloudy skies are expected here through Saturday, and weathermen list "a slight chance" of thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight.

Temperatures will be in the low 80s today, upper 40s tonight and near 70 Saturday.

Skies will be partly cloudy Sunday and mostly fair Monday and Tuesday.

A warming trend will begin early next week, and strong winds will return to most of the region Tuesday.

Economic Indicators Continue To Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported a third straight monthly decline today in a series of indicators designed to forecast the direction of the nation's economy.

The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators fell 0.3 percent in February, following previous declines of 0.6 percent in January and 0.1 percent in December. The figures for February and January were officially corrected by the department shortly after it had reported the index fell 0.4 percent in February after a previous decline of 0.4 percent in January.

The new figures were again generally in line with most economists' predictions of sluggish growth — or no growth at all — in the U.S. economy in coming months.

A February decline in the average number of hours worked by American wage-earners — from 40.4 in January to 39.8 in February — was the biggest contributor to the decline.

In all, six of the indicators fell in February, including those for the layoff rate, inflation-adjusted contracts and orders for new plant and equipment, building permits, stock prices and the inflation-adjusted money supply.

Four indicators rose in February: new orders after adjustment for inflation, delivery performance, liquid assets and producer prices for key raw materials.

Card Trick Happens With Bare Hands

By SHARI LEWIS

Some magic tricks work with strings. Others with mirrors. With magnets. With trap doors.

This is a trick that you can make work using nothing but your bare hands! You didn't know that you were magic right to your fingertips, did you?

Here's what'll happen: you'll ask a friend to pick a card, put it on top of the deck. Then you will slip the deck back into its original package. And lo and behold! Wonders of wonders! Will miracles never cease? The selected card will rise up into view through the top of the pack!

How can you make such a thing happen with your bare hands?

Simple! When you are alone, before you start, you'll cut a rectangle out of the back of the package. This opening will be big enough so that when the deck is put into the pack, your thumb can push up on the card nearest to it — the top card of the deck!

Blood Pressure Pills Recalled

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Pennwalt Corp. says its pharmaceutical division has begun a recall of 690,000 pills used to treat high blood pressure because some packages labeled 2½ milligrams may contain tablets four times as potent.

"Ingestion of 10 milligram Zaroxolyn tablets instead of 2½-milligram tablets will result in an overdose which could constitute a health hazard for some patients, particularly for patients also taking digitalis products," the firm said in a statement this week. Digitalis is a heart stimulant.

Pennwalt spokeswoman Cecilia Winters said 6,900 bottles of the 2½-milligram tablets distributed to U.S. wholesalers were involved in the recall. The bottles, each containing 100 pills, were distributed after Jan. 1 as Lot No. C-0533.

The company says the mislabeling only affects prescriptions filled after Jan. 1. The prescription drug Zaroxolyn is used to treat high blood pressure and edema, or swelling caused by fluid accumulation.

Pennwalt began the recall after a druggist in Indianapolis reported one bottle of Zaroxolyn labeled 2½-milligrams contained 10-milligram tablets.

Patients can easily distinguish between 2½-milligram tablets and 10 milligram tablets, the company said.

Area Solons' Votes Recorded

Roll Call Report Service

WASHINGTON — Here is how area senators were recorded on major roll call votes March 16-20. There were no House votes.

LIMITING FARM IMPORTS — By a vote of 45 for and 53 against, the Senate failed to kill an amendment limiting imports of casein, a dairy byproduct that countries such as New Zealand, Australia, Ireland and the USSR sell on American markets. A protein component of milk, casein is used in industrial processes such as glue-making and in producing dairy products such as coffee whiteners.

Supporters of quotas said farmers in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Idaho, California, Washington and other states would find casein markets as a result of the amendment. Opponents said that by limiting casein imports the government would invite retaliation against U.S. exports, including farm exports.

The vote came during debate on a bill to cancel the milk price support payment scheduled for April 1. The bill (S 509) awaited final Senate action.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a supporter of killing the amendment, said the measure "will not generate any appreciable increase in the demand for nonfat dry milk or any other domestic dairy products." He added that he has "no stomach for inviting a retaliatory trade war."

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., who wanted to limit casein imports, said: "This amendment will not cost the U.S. government one thin dime... It will have the dual effect of saving additional federal dollars (by lowering price supports) while giving some support to our dairy industry."

Sen. John Tower, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "nay."

COMMITTEE VOTE — By a vote of 14 for and 2 against, with one abstention, the Senate Agriculture Committee approved and sent to the Senate floor a bill (S 509) eliminating the scheduled April 1 hike in federal milk price supports.

Voting No: Sens. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

Teens Imitate TV Program

ELKINS, W.Va. (UPI) — The sheriff's deputies on television's "Dukes of Hazzard" are a crew of bungling rednecks, unable to keep up with a couple of hot-rodding brothers in a southern town.

Unfortunately for three youngsters trying to ape their television heroes, state troopers gave them an illustration of how police work is really handled.

Three brothers, ages 10 to 15, were arrested on charges they set a series of six fires, broke into as many as 24 homes and set a car afire.

Police this week quoted the 15-year-old as saying the crimes were committed to see whether they could outwit police the same way the Dukes do it on the CBS-TV program.

FDA Wants More Information On Artificial Heart Implant

WASHINGTON (AP) — A medical team associated with the University of Utah is being asked to submit more data on an artificial heart it has developed before approval is granted for the first artificial heart implant in a human.

The Food and Drug Administration notified the team this week that its application is "not approvable in its present form" because:

—It does not assure that the device will be used only in subjects who have irreversible heart damage.

—It does not provide sufficient data showing patients would be made fully aware of the risks before signing consent forms.

—It contains too little data on how well the heart would work and its impact on other bodily organs, raising questions about whether the project would be scientifically sound.

In notifying Kolff and Associates Inc. of its decision, the FDA offered to have its staff members meet with the organization to resolve the difficulties.

Victor Zafra, acting director of the Bureau of Medical Devices said the agency "would be happy to review a revised application."

Kolff and Associates developed and produced the artificial heart, which was to be used for the first time at the University of Utah College of Medicine.

Dr. William Kolff, director of the University of Utah artificial organs division and the head of the 20-year research program, said, "We have no reaction until we see the letter, but it is routine that when they have additional questions they disapprove."

The FDA decision, reached after consultation with scientists inside and outside the government, means there will be a delay of undetermined length in use of the artificial heart. Scientists had expected the first such transplant to take place within the next few months. It now depends on how soon the medical team can meet the agency's requirements.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said the disapproval notice was not meant as a deterrent.

"The problems identified are not with the physical heart equipment," he said. "It's rather with the study plan, the protocol."

Research on the artificial heart began more than 20 years ago. The device under study is made of aluminum and plastic and has kept test animals alive for more than 250 days.

Only gravely ill heart patients, those who might otherwise die, would even be considered for such a transplant.

A heart pump, which is about the same size as a human heart, would be implanted in a patient's chest and attached by two six-foot cables to a portable electric energy source outside the patient's body.

A longer range objective is developing an artificial heart which would give its wearer more mobility.

In weighing applications for such devices, the FDA is required to consider whether the risks to the patient outweigh the benefits and knowledge to be gained, whether the informed consent procedures are adequate to insure patient protection and whether the project is scientifically sound.

Menses Onset May Trigger Herpes Attack

BOSTON (UPI) — Women with genital herpes simplex virus infections may be more likely to suffer the disease's recurring outbreaks five to 12 days before the onset of their menstrual period, according to a study published Thursday.

Research conducted by five scientists at the University of Utah College of Medicine found an apparent relationship between hormone changes prior to menstruation and onset of the painful herpes lesions.

Genital herpes causes reddish, open sores on the sex organs, thighs or buttocks. At present, there is no cure or universally effective treatment.

People infected with the virus suffer periodic outbreaks. It is especially serious in pregnant women, who may transmit an active infection to their baby at birth. Women with herpes also are eight times more likely to have cervical cancer than uninfected women.

The women attended a university herpes clinic and were examined daily for the first four days of a heres outbreak. Then they were seen every other day until the lesions healed — usually around eight days, the scientists reported.

Of 19 women whose periods occurred during the time they were seen by doctors, 13 had attacks of herpes prior to the start of menstruation.

Tests also showed active viruses occupied the herpes sores for the first four days of an outbreak in more than half the women. On average, the researchers said, virus "shedding" from lesions lasted from five to 7.5 days.

Snuff Dippers Risk Cancer

BOSTON (UPI) — The high rate of oral cancer among white, Southern women may be due to a popular tobacco habit called snuff dipping, which can raise the risk of such malignancies fourfold, warns a study published Thursday.

Female snuff dippers were at higher risk of oral cancer than women who engaged in other habits related to the disease, such as smoking cigarettes or drinking liquor, National Cancer Institute researchers reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Snuff dippers place a pinch of processed tobacco between cheek and gum. Unlike men who actually chew the tobacco, Southern women just let it remain in the mouth.

The researchers, working with scientists at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, surveyed 256 women from North Carolina who had forms of oral cancer; 107 (46 percent) of them were snuff dippers.

"A fourfold excess was linked with snuff use among non-smoking white women, with a much smaller increase in blacks," the researchers said.

The difference in black women — only a 1.5-fold increase — was probably because many of them had not dipped snuff for as long as the white women had, they said.

UMW Digs In For Strike

A DANGER INHERENT in relying too heavily on union-mined coal to meet the nation's energy requirements is evident in the "no-contract, no-work" tradition of the United Mine Workers.

Despite a three-year 36 percent wage dispute settlement, UMW bosses made no real effort to avert a walkout of miners between last night's expiration of the old contract and next week's expected ratification of the new pact.

If the UMW had the same stranglehold on energy supplies today as it had 40 years ago, it could hold the nation hostage to whatever outrageous demands it might want to make.

THE OIL INDUSTRY, a favorite whipping boy of demagogic politicians in recent years and especially during the Carter administration, has never been subject to the unbridled power of labor bosses.

Until domestic oil production sank so low a decade ago that foreign producers could control the nation's energy lifeline, much as the UMW had done in the 1930s, the U.S. enjoyed plentiful supplies at low prices.

What all this serves to emphasize is that government policy should be aimed at encouraging free market competition among all forms of energy so that no one group, foreign or domestic, could endanger the nation's economy or its security by choking off the supply.

As part and parcel of that policy, the federal government needs to take a long and objective look at the upper hand labor unions have in negotiations with management.

In the beginning, unions flourished because workers in some industries had a legitimate complaint that they were being unfairly exploited by industry captains.

AS OFTEN HAPPENS, though, the pendulum swung too far in the other direction so that consumers now are victimized through higher prices and, in the event of prolonged strikes, through shortages of goods and services.

This time, in the coal industry, the nation's dependence on that source of fuel was not so great that the UMW could gain substantially more by rejecting the mildly inflationary 12 percent a year wage boost to $13.86 an hour in 1984.

It is in the national interest to keep the unions from ever again being in the position to force the nation to its knees, for we can be certain that they will strike indefinitely if they hold the upper hand.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

High Court Ducks

ALEXANDER (The Great) Haig got his comeuppance this week when he publicly protested the naming of Vice President George Bush as chairman of a "crisis management team."

The Secretary of State was passed over, Presidential spokesman James S. Brady said, because "management of crises has traditionally—and appropriately—been done within the White House."

Haig later "concurred" in the decision. Score one win for the White House's crisis management.

The White House also backed national security adviser Richard Allen's characterization that the "better red than dead" philosophy is contemptible.

It was part of the administration's belief that the tone and color of its foreign policy is "better coordinated than clashing."

Wednesday, President Reagan went out of his way to reassure Haig that the Secretary still is his "primary" adviser on foreign affairs.

NOTE TO THE bureaucratic regulators: We have two cars equipped with seat belts.

One of them, the older model, has a simple belt which just waits there quietly for us to use or not use. It is easy to reach and to buckle.

I never move the car an inch without buckling it.

Our other car has a seat belt-shoulder strap contraption. It buzzes and squawks and generally makes a nuisance of itself if I start the engine without buckling it.

It is difficult to reach, comparatively speaking, and to buckle. Besides that, its infernal noise irritates me. As a result, I find myself leaving it to its obnoxious self as often as not.

Ralph Nader won't like this, I know, but I'd appreciate it if on the next car I buy you'd let the manufacturer leave off the noise maker and just give me a quiet, simple seat belt that's easy for me to use if I want to but which leaves the choice to me.

If Ralphie Boy wants a squawker, let him pay for it extra but butt out of my business and my car.

The Old Warrior says it's funny to him how all the economists who advised former Presidents and got us into the mess we're in are now advising that President Reagan's economic plan won't work.

THE SUPREME COURT has ducked—again—the issue of whether a property owner can sue a city for damages if he thinks a zoning decision has denied him the use of his land.

Such suits would constitute a formidable obstacle to a city's ability to protect the public interest through land-use zoning.

Sooner or later, the Court will have to meet the issue head-on. This week, it avoided a decision by refusing, 5-4, to review a case won in state court by the City of San Diego.

That case has not been "finally" judged by California state courts, the Supreme Court rationalized as a way of avoiding the issue.

The San Diego case involved the zoning of 412 acres for "open space" and, therefore, constituted a relatively clear-cut question of whether the property had been "taken without just compensation" to the owner.

If the right to sue for damages ever is established, however, property owners would be hauling city councils into court over much less clear-cut decisions.

FOR EXAMPLE, the owner of land abutting a freeway might contend his land had been "taken" from him if it were zoned for apartments rather than for the shopping center or industrial plant he wanted.

In all probability, cities ultimately would win in all but the most flagrant examples of capricious zoning decisions, but borderline zoning changes would be granted in many cases just to avoid litigation.

It would appear from this distance that zoning private property for "open space" use constitutes a taking of the land and that the owner should therefore be reimbursed for it.

The public's right to be protected from an obnoxious or incompatible neighboring land use would be crippled, though, if the courts were to begin awarding damages just because the land owner saw a way to make bigger bucks by getting a zone change and was denied that opportunity.

Louis Rukeyser:

Gold Stock Future Lacks Luster

NEW YORK—A topflight expert on gold, who correctly predicted the metal's price decline in this column two months ago, has just returned from South Africa with more bad news for the bugs.

Andre Sharon, who oversees international investments for Drexel Burnham Lambert, has come back with a warning specifically for those who put their faith in South African gold-mining stocks.

"It is clear," he told me, "that dividends will be quite disappointing over the next 12 months."

High dividends, as it happens, have been a chief attraction of investment in the South African mines—as opposed to buying bullion or gold coins, neither of which has any regular dollar yield at all.

So Sharon's forecast is even more ominous than it may at first appear.

THE VETERAN ANALYST bases his conclusion on three main factors:

(1) The stall in the gold price. In January, he accurately forecast a further decline, even after the tremendous battering gold had taken following its brief early-1980 peak of $875 an ounce.

Anticipating the metal's plunge below $500 an ounce, Sharon said in January that the downward pressures would intensify what he saw as "the current worldwide disinflationary context," as inflation rates tended to lessen around the globe. Now, clearly, he doesn't expect a dramatic rebound in the gold markets.

(2) The sharp escalation in gold-mining costs. In 1980 these rose in South Africa by 17.7 percent—just as the product's price was tumbling.

In addition, profit margins at the mine were squeezed by a 10-percent appreciation of the South African rand against the U.S. dollar. Nor is there any prospect of immediate relief in this area: for 1981, South Africa's inflation is estimated at close to 17 percent.

(3) THE POTENTIAL DAMAGE to marginal producers. Sharon notes that the eight largest producers (out of 36 mintes) account for nearly half of total South African gold production.

Hence, he observes, as price and cost pressures mount, "the squeeze of the marginal producer comes into perspective."

For all his current doubts, Sharon is no gold-hater; on the contrary, he remains convinced that "some gold-related exposure legitimately belongs in virtually all well-diversified portfolios, both institutional and individual."

His reasoning is that long-term political changes, while neither "predictable nor quantifiable," can be expected eventually to put the gold price back into an uptrend—even though he regards the metal as economically overvalued, by traditional supply-demand standards, at any price above $300 an ounce.

Sharon's lack of enthusiasm for gold is less an indictment of its long-term prospect than a conviction that it is likely now to lag behind competing, alternative investments.

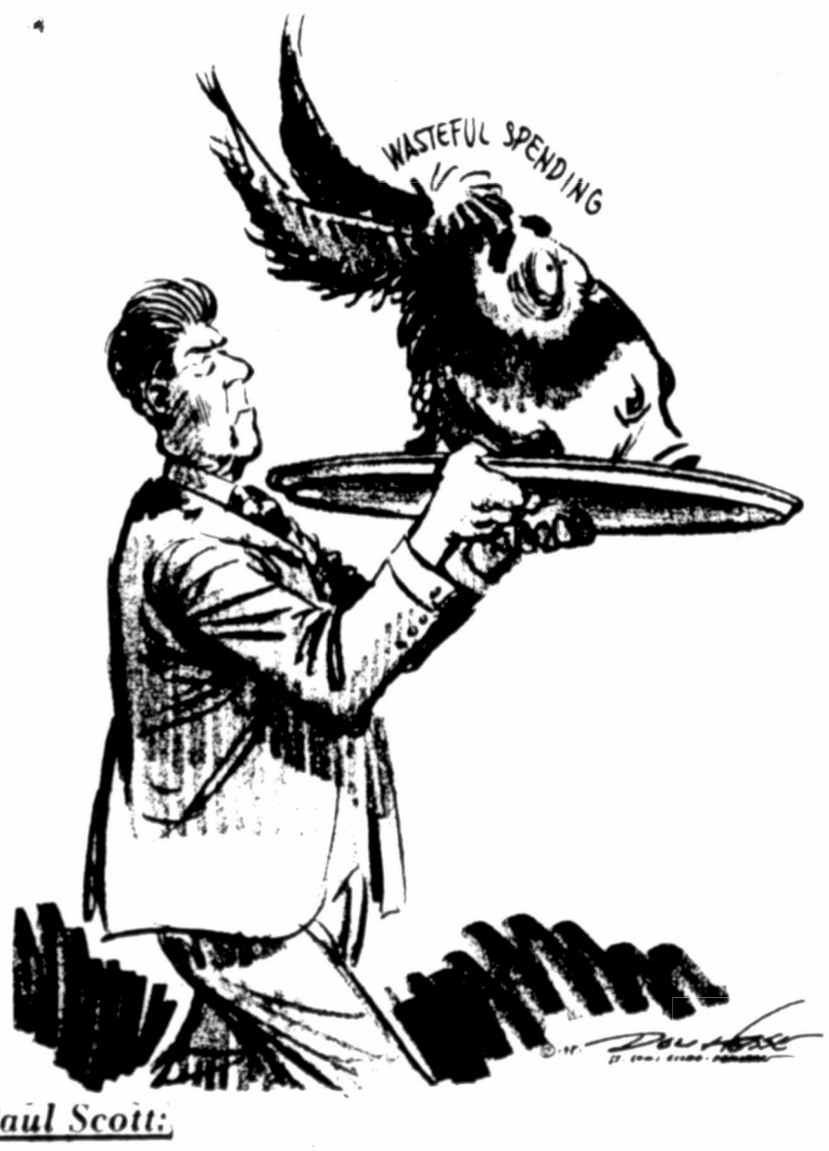

In recent months, U.S. non-gold investors have been earning returns that handsomely beat inflation.

This has not gone unnoticed either by domestic investors, who generated high stock-market volume, or by foreigners assessing the strength of U.S. currency.

Aided by the relatively high interest rates prevailing in the U.S. this past winter, the dollar staged an uncharacteristic show of vigor against nearly all major world currencies—notably including those two favorite vehicles of "hard money" investors, the West German mark and the Swiss franc.

"I suspect foreign-exchange markets will wait until the fall before assessing the chances of success of the Reagan program," Sharon told me. "Gold could therefore continue to be a dull holding while attractive returns are available in the U.S."

In short, one of the best forecasters in the gold game thinks the metal still has a future but, near term, is one of the less shining attractions on the investment scene. For now, at least, you might say, the carat will not be his shtick.

Paul Scott:

Cuts In Budget Only Skin Deep

WASHINGTON—President Ronald Reagan's controversial budget cutting isn't nearly as deep as Congressional opponents would like all of us to believe.

In nearly all agencies of the government, spending under the proposed Reagan budget will be considerably higher in the coming year than at the present time regardless of the reductions.

What has made the budget cuts look so big is that most reports compare the Reagan budget to the bloated fiscal 1982 budget sent to Congress by former President Carter before he left office.

Privately, most veteran Democratic lawmakers will admit that the Carter budget was overloaded.

TAKE FOR EXAMPLE the Veteran Administration where Reagan suggests a reduction of slightly more than $700 million from the budget submitted to Congress in January by the outgoing Carter administration.

The Reagan proposal calls for a reduction of from $24.9 billion to $24.2 billion or approximately 3.2 percent.

This proposed reduction still leaves the Reagan budget request for Veterans programs a full five percent above the current rate of spending in the VA's budget.

In other words, the Reagan budget calls for an overall spending increase for VA programs of $1.3 billion—not a small hike considering the state of the economy and the need to begin to control government spending.

All Reagan is attempting to do at the present time is to "reduce the rate of increase in spending from fiscal year 1981 to 1982."

The net reduction of $744 million sent to Congress by Carter is to be achieved primarily by lowering overhead and personnel costs—a long time objective of Congress.

THE GOOD NEWS in the Reagan budget is that the medical care appropriation request for 1982 is $6.7 billion, an increase of $348.9 million over the present budget spending rate.

With this increase in funds, no change is anticipated in the number of hospital patients treated under the new Reagan budget. In effect, this means there will be no reduction in spending for medical benefits for veterans.

For veterans compensation, the budget requests an appropriation of nearly $8.7 billion, an increase of $74.4 million above 1981, and proposed legislation for an 11.2 percent compensation rate increase to be effective Oct. 1, 1981.

Pensions are estimated at $4.1 billion with an automatic cost of living increase of 11.2 percent included.

THE BIG SAVINGS in the Reagan budget will come in education programs for the veterans. Enrollment in these programs is expected to continue to decline in 1982 reducing the request for readjustment benefits to nearly $1.7 billion.

This is $381.8 million below the 1981 budget. To help achieve this reduction, the Reagan budget calls for the elimination of flight and correspondence training.

Most of the controversy over the VA budget so far has been centered around the proposed closing of the 91 readjustment counseling centers for Vietnam era veterans, for which the legislative authority expires on Sept. 30, 1981.

VA officials claim that most of these services can be continued at present VA facilities. A compromise is expected to be worked out in Congress where some of these counseling centers will be kept open.

Other savings to be achieved by the Reagan budget include:

Proposed legislation which would place restrictions on travel reimbursement for veterans receiving treatment for non-service connected medical problems;

Tightening eligibility requirements for non-service dental care; and Limiting bonuses paid to VA doctors to 12 percent of the cost of base salaries.

SAVINGS IN CONSTRUCTION expenditures will be achieved through the cancellation of two new hospitals, one in Baltimore and one in Camden, N.J., and be deferring other construction projects until the federal budget is brought under control.

Significantly, the present number of hospital beds will be kept in operation under the Reagan budget. This compares with the elimination of 10,000 hospital beds during the four years of the Carter administration.

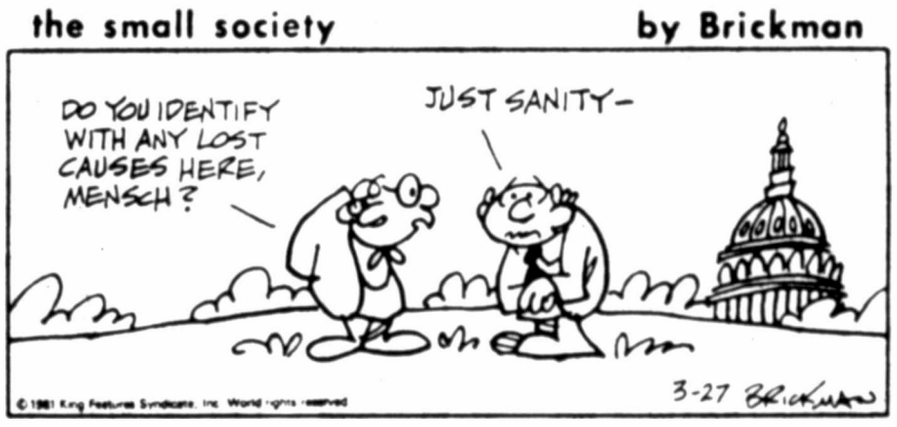

In light of the runaway federal budget, these are "reductions in the rate of spending increases" that veterans should be able to live with if the results go to help build up this country's security.

These are the type of sacrifices that all of us must make.

So They Say...

Are You In Right Spot To Survive A Merger?

NEW YORK—As a merger mania grips the industrial giants of the world to an extent without precedent and with economic-social implications so profound that they still are barely discernible, one factor that strikes me because it has received virtually no attention is:

PEOPLE.

You're an executive, say, of Kennecott, in a position precisely comparable to that of an executive of Standard Oil of Ohio, the corporation which has just bought yours.

You know you are good, you have been a success, you feel sure you're secure. Are you really secure? Will you come out on top of what eventually must be a clash between the two positions, or will you find you're on the way out?

OR YOU'RE PART of the management of the Bache Group, which has just agreed to accept the purchase offer of Prudential Insurance, the nation's largest insurance company.

Your whole management has been "invited to remain." If you believe the invitation and do stay, what are your chances to stay in management in the new setup?

Are you psychologically prepared to cope with the aftermath of this deal?

In a merger of your company with another, a certain number of human heads must inevitably roll.

The more successful you may be as an executive in your present job the less likely you may be to advance in a new company created by a merger.

JUST BECAUSE YOU are a higher-placed executive, you will not necessarily be the successful survivor; far from it.

And just because you are a top employe, a good leader and administrator, you will not necessarily exercise the best judgment on behalf of yourself in a merger.

The giant mergers are in the black headlines—but at lower levels, thousands of similar consolidations, takeovers, buyouts, etc., are occurring.

If you're among the nine out of 10 executives or mid-management workers in these companies, you are not ready to take care of yourself if you're on the target end of the merger.

Study this quiz, therefore. Use the answers to safeguard yourself against weakness if "it" happens to you.

(1) DID THE NEW owner buy your company for management talent, including yours?

(2) Are you the key executive in a profit center of vital interest to the new management?

(3) Are you flexible enough to (a.) report to a new group of executives; (b.) function in a new organization setup; (c.) do things "their" way?

(4) Are your executive skills transferable within the new structure?

(5) Was your company acquired for non-management reasons, special financial advantages, manufacturing facilities, distribution structure—of which you are a part?

(6) Is your salary high in relation to the compensation scale of the purchasing company?

(7) Is your salary high relative to the marketplace for your job outside the company?

(8) Is your future duplicated in the parent company?

(9) Were you publicly against the merger?

(10) Are you in a staff position?

(11) Are you a "self-made" worker with long tenure?

IF YOU ANSWER "yes" to the first five questions and "no" to the remaining six, you are in a strong position in a corporate merger.

If your answers are off—on even three or four of the points highlighted by each question—look out!

Millions of you will face the prospect dramatized in this column in coming years.

The warnings inherent in each line are of vital significance and almost surely some, if not all, will startle you.

Clip and save this quiz. It alone can protect your future.

U.S. Military Teams Operate Routinely In Many Countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military trainers and technicians sent to embattled El Salvador represent only a fraction of the number of such teams operating routinely in dozens of countries around the world.

Pentagon officials report that by the time this fiscal year ends Sept. 30 the United States will have had 323 Security Assistance Teams, totaling 1,667 personnel, in 53 countries.

However, El Salvador is the only one of the 53 in which is there is significant fighting between a U.S.-backed government and insurgents.

Given that particular circumstance, the presence of 56 U.S. military specialists in El Salvador to help shape up the country's army, navy and air force has raised anxieties among some Americans concerned that U.S. involvement in Vietnam started with a small group of military advisers.

But for more than 30 years, U.S. military specialists have followed U.S. weapons and equipment given or sold to friendly countries on all continents.

These specialists have taught foreign troops how to use and maintain their U.S.-provided gear. They also have taught everything from field sanitation to techniques for fighting guerrillas.

In most cases there was no fighting while U.S. trainers were there and only in Vietnam did such an approach escalate into a full-blown war for the United States.

President Reagan has pledged that no U.S. trainers or technicians will become involved in fighting between U.S.-supported El Salvador government troops and leftist rebels.

American military personnel are assigned routinely to various countries in three types of units. They are called Mobile Training Teams, Technical Assistance Teams and Technical Assistance Field Teams.

They range from one man each in Denmark and France to a total of 323 U.S. military team members in Egypt and 441 in Saudi Arabia.

The Mobile Training Teams and Technical Assistance Teams carry out specific tasks which can take from a day to about six months, then they leave.

The teams assigned to El Salvador are in the Mobile Training Team category.

Lt. Gen. Ernest Graves, director of the Defense Security Assistance Agency, testified early this week that these teams probably will complete their assignments within the coming six months.

But Graves cautioned that there will be a continuing need for what he called "follow-on training" and logistics, maintenance and other areas.

The Technical Assistance Field Teams, which combine longer-term training and tecnical support, are kept in certain countries for extended periods.

Study Reports Jobs Programs Work

BALTIMORE (AP) — Contrary to Reagan administration assertions, public service employment programs do indeed steer workers toward private jobs and better wages, according to a seven-year study by Johns Hopkins University.

The study of 1,700 workers in the Baltimore area, funded by the federal Department of Health and Human Services, was the first to follow the careers of people after they left the job programs, according to Laura L. Morlock, who conducted the study with David S. Salkever.

It found that three-quarters of the workers employed under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act had found "unsubsidized employment" three years after leaving their public service jobs. And the new jobs were not "low-paying, menial" work, the study found.

When President Reagan proposed abolishing the CETA program in February, he said only one-third of CETA workers found private employment when their public-service jobs ended.

Miss Morlock contended this week the Reagan administration has made its decision to cut CETA without first examining the long-term effectiveness of the jobs programs.

"We're worried," said Miss Morlock, a public health researcher at Johns Hopkins' medical school.

"From a public health standpoint ... the concern is for the social consequences," she said, adding that higher crime rates usually accompany rises in unemployment.

Salkever said that income levels, as well as rates of employment, gained significantly following CETA jobs.

The study followed 1,700 workers in public service programs between 1971 and 1978 and 1,100 who had left Emergency Employment Act and CETA program jobs.

Sixty percent were black, a third of them women and a third of them veterans — groups traditionally hard-hit by unemployment, Miss Morlock said. About one-third had not worked for a year before public service employment.

At the time of release from the jobs programs, the study said, 48 percent of the workers had found jobs in the "regular labor market." One month later, that percentage was 59, and it rose to 66 after six months, and 78 percent after two years, they reported.

When those who went from public service jobs to school or training programs were added, the percentage in such programs or in jobs was 82 percent after two years.

Solon Planning To Live In Capitol Hill Office

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressman, facing the costly reality of financing a residence in his home state and another in high-rent Washington, has decided to move into his Capitol Hill office.

Rep. James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., disclosed this week he is moving into the Rayburn House Office Building because his Washington apartment is being converted to a condominium that he can't afford.

"It's just a practical solution to a problem," said Jeffords, who is now in his fourth House term. "I have assets. But I had the choice of living with a negative cash flow."

Jeffords' pay amounts to $60,700, with which he divides his time between Washington and Rutland, Vt.

He may not find office living very appealing.

Rep. Ken Holland, D-S.C., said he tried living in his congressional office for nine months and decided it was not something to recommend as a permanent situation. He moved to a suburban Virginia apartment.

"Being in the same place all day and all night is a little oppressive," said Holland.

Jeffords, a recent divorcee at 46, said he expects few problems. He is installing a couch in his private office that can be converted into a bed. The office has a toilet and an adjacent House office building has showers.

Underwriting Losses Expected To Remain

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The property-casualty insurance industry suffered an underwriting loss of at least $3 billion last year, and investment analysts who cover the industry say the losses may continue for years.

"In fact," says Allen Nadler, who studies the industry for Goldman Sachs, the big securities investment firm, "it is entirely possible that underwriting may never again be profitable."

Analysis

Big awards by sympathetic juries, increases in the cost of automobile repairs, rising medical bills and inflation in general are among factors helping to spread the red ink across the industry's books.

And yet, some analysts say shares of property-casualty insurers are worthwhile investments. Nadler himself says some "appear to provide good value," especially for periods beyond 18 months.

The reason is suggested by another set of numbers.

Despite underwriting losses, according to the Insurance Information Institute, the property-casualty industry last year earned $7.51 billion, up from $6.92 billion in 1979, a one-year gain of $590 million.

The gain, you might have surmised, came in part from the same source of the underwriting loss: It came as a result of inflation and other economic factors that drove up the return on money invested.

Last year the property-casualty people showed a net investment gain of $11.32 billion before taxes, coming mostly from dividends earned on stocks and interest earned on bonds, as well as from capital gains.

Insurance companies have lots of money to invest, and so long as they do not get caught by turns in the market, so long as they manage to ride with the investment tide, they tend to make money on investments.

An item called policyholders' surplus — holdings after liabilities have been deducted from assets — gives an idea of the amounts. Last year it reached $57.4 billion, up $10.5 billion for the year.

After viewing these investment results, you might correctly conclude that the business of insuring was poor, but the business of investing returned rich rewards. And Nadler expects the pattern will continue.

The industry is a good investment, he says, because it is "absolutely necessary for the world's economy." And, he says, it can be expected to continue offering dividend increases, underwriting losses or not.

There are deeper reasons too, connected for example with the ups and downs of the underwriting cycle, with inflation, and with what are considered by some analysts to be relatively low price-earnings ratios.

And there are several lessons to be learned and a question to be asked as well, at least by the ordinary person.

First, it would appear, is that numbers are not always what they seem, not only in insurance but in many industries. Insurers do not hide their numbers, but if you are not careful you might settle on the wrong ones.

There is the obvious lesson that business conditions today are trickier than they might appear, especially with extremes of inflation and interest rates reflecting even serious, deep economic problems.

And there is the question: How long can it all continue?

EARTHY BATHROOM

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (AP) — Many houseplants are finding a home in the bathroom, where there is high humidity and often fluorescent lighting. "It's an ideal place for plant growth," say the makers of Garden Scene planterware. Ten plants that grow well there, according to Husby, are fittonia, kangaroo ivy, grape ivy, lipstick plant, myrtle, nautilocalyx, Swiss cheese plant, peacock plant, prayer plant, and snake plant.

Dream Of Indiana Pyramid Taking Shape

BEDFORD, Ind. (UPI) — With a federal grant and geographic good luck, Merle Edington's dream is beginning to take shape — a pyramid that will tower 10 stories high above the farm land and forests of southern Indiana.

And if that is not enough of an attraction to draw Edington's hoped-for two million tourists a year — he is also going to thrown in an 800-foot-long replica of the Great Wall of China.

Edington's version of Cheops on the Nile is not going to cost Bedford a pharaoh's ransom.

"The land has been donated, the stone has been donated, most of the labor is being donated," Edington said.

The volcanoes of another age have provided for free the material that will compose the triangular structure — Indiana limestone that formed the blocks used by architects to build, among other things, the Empire State Building.

Edington says he thought quarry operators might like to donate cut limestone that was just lying around, some of it piled 50 and 75 feet high, to build a tribute to an industry that was muscled out of construction by pre-stressed concrete and glass curtainwalls.

Instead of suggesting he had rocks in his head, the quarries complied.

Even Washington is helping out.

A slowdown in the Reagan administration's efforts to abolish the Economic Development Administration provided some of the cash needed to keep up with construction costs elevated by inflation.

Last week the administration processed 64 pending requests for $23 million in grants and $71 million in loan guarantees. Among those requests was $200,000 for the pyramid project.

Scientists Will Soon Begin Tests Of Cancer Scanner On Humans

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Scientists soon will begin large-scale human tests of a new ultrasonic scanner they say will detect breast cancer without the radiation risks of X-rays.

Researchers at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., said this week that early tests of the system show that diagnoses based on its images rival those of X-ray mammography.

Dr. James F. Greenleaf said the scanner avoids the potential radiation risks of X-rays and also operates with an intensity of ultrasound energy far below levels known to cause any harmful effects.

"Therefore, patients can be scanned every few months if necessary," he told an American Cancer Society seminar here.

Without risk of radiation, he added, patients could be scanned throughout their reproductive years with no fears of being pregnant and inadvertently exposing the unborn to X-rays.

Unlike conventional ultrasonic scanners, which make images by bouncing sound waves off objects, the new device is computer-assisted to give multiple cross-section images.

This makes the machine similar to the computerized axial tomography (CAT) X-ray scanner that has revolutionized radiology in the last decade.

Both machines take multiple exposures and build them up in a computer, which reconstructs images and displays them on television screens as detailed "slices" of the body.

When using the ultrasonic for breast surveys, the patient lies on a bed with a hole in it. One of her breasts goes through a hole into a pool of water, which conducts the sound waves into the tissue.

The speed at which sound travels through cancerous tissue usually is higher than the speed through normal tissue, and the machine detects and displays these variations.

Greenleaf said that a three-year trial using 1,000 women will begin in Rochester early this summer. A preliminary test with 120 women previously diagnosed with breast cancer found three undiscovered tumors in the group, he added.

Greenleaf said the sensitivity of the ultrasonic scan and what it can detect is "very close" to conventional mammography.

He also noted that both methods shared a difficulty in detecting tumors in dense, young breasts. But he said a conventional sonic scanner, which does a better job on the firm breasts of young women, easily can be fitted to the new machine for special cases.

If the new machine goes into production, it should cost about $150,000, Greenleaf said. And the costs of each three-minute scan should be about the same as a comparable X-ray exam, he added.

State Trying To Decide Which Wife Gets Money

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Because Henry Davis Jr. died in the line of duty as the Wilmot police chief, his widow has $10,000 coming under state law. And Arkansas will give it to her, too — as soon as someone figures out which of his three wives should get it.

Davis was married five times between 1951 and his death in 1978, records filed with the state indicate. However, he was divorced only twice.

Wife No. 2, Tressie Lavender of San Franscisco, has filed a claim for the money. So has Wife No. 4, Lonnie Bell Davis of Ruston, La. And Wife No. 5, Sheila Joyce Perry of Monroe, La., also wants a cut.

"I hope these women understand that we've just got $10,000 to divvy up," said state Claims Commission chairman Herby Branscum.

In 1979, the Arkansas board awarded three-fourths of the $10,000 to Lonnie Bell Davis and the couple's child. The rest went to the child Davis had with Mrs. Perry.

But attorneys for Mrs. Lavender this week filed a claim for the $10,000. And state officials are still trying to untangle this situation.

—Davis married in 1951. The couple had two children and divorced in 1961.

—He married Mrs. Lavender in 1959, two years before his divorce to his first wife was final. The couple had three children, and Mrs. Lavender claims they were never divorced.

——In 1967, Davis married again — and divorced in 1970.

——Three months later, he married Lonnie Bell Davis. The couple had one child, but Davis obtained a divorce in chancery court in 1976.

——In October 1976, Davis married Mrs. Perry.

But a Louisiana court nullified the marriage at the request of Lonnie Bell Davis, who contended that no one ever properly notified her that Davis had divorced her.

To get a share of the $10,000, Mrs. Perry contested that ruling in the Louisiana and Arkansas claims commissions. She lost both times.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration awards $25,000 to the heirs of officers killed in the line of duty and ruled that each of the three women ought to share equally.

Davis died in March 1978 when his car hit a farm vehicle. He was recruiting officers in Louisiana.

Agency To Question Lobbyist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lobbyist Paula Parkinson, quoted as saying she had affairs with "less than a dozen" congressmen — all Republicans — expects to be questioned next week by the Justice Department.

Miss Parkinson, 30, has tried without success to sell stories to Playboy and Penthouse magazines about her Capitol Hill exploits — a sales effort that has triggered rampant rumors and some shudders through Congress.

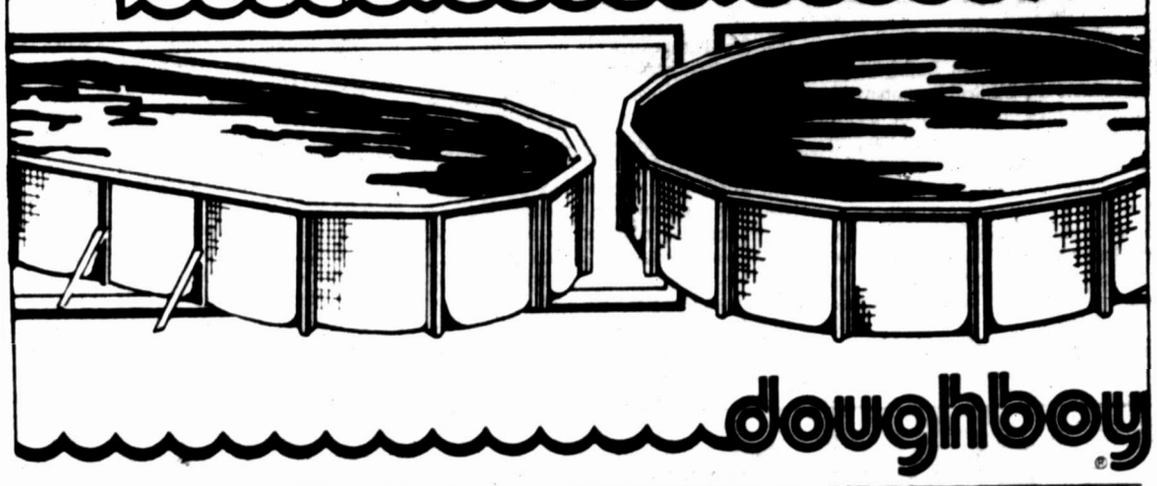

The Justice Department, which declined comment, is attempting to determine whether legislative votes were swapped for sexual or other favors.

Presbytery To Act On Nicholson

By PAT GRAVES
A-J Religion Writer

The next, and possibly last, installment of what could be called "The Bob Nicholson Affair" will unfold Saturday when the Palo Duro Union Presbytery considers a recommendation regarding his Feb. 11 resignation.

Because First Presbyterian Church's congregation rejected the resignation of its pastor, the Rev. Robert D. Nicholson, on Feb. 22, the presbytery must now decide his status.

According to a church member close to the situation, who wishes to remain anonymous, the recommendation under consideration is to accept Nicholson's resignation effective no later than Aug. 31, or sooner if Nicholson secures another position prior to that time.

There is also a provision for a possible 60-day extension of salary and parsonage privileges beyond Aug. 31.

Clergymen and elders, (one each from every congregation may attend) representing the 67 churches in the 70-county presbytery, will assemble at 11 a.m. Saturday at Grace Presbyterian Church to hear the proposal. It will be presented by the Commission on Ministerial Care, a First Presbyterian committee representing the congregation, and two members of the church's session of elders.

The presbytery could accept the recommendation, amend it, reject it or pass a counter-proposal.

If the recommendation is approved, the source said it would enable the church to proceed with goal-setting and other preliminary measures relating to the search for a new pastor.

Although it is unclear as to when a pulpit committee would be formed, should Nicholson leave, commission member Rev. Davis Price, pastor of Covenant Presbyterian Church, said the entire replacement process will take several months, perhaps longer.

Davis pointed ot that, within presbyterian policy, the presbytery must have the final say in every dissolution or establishment of a pastoral relationship. He said the governing body will listen to input from all parties involved but would not speculate on its possible action.

"That's like saying how congress will vote," Price said. "There's no way to figure it out."

The recommendation was formulated last week by Nicholson, the commission, the congregational committee and session of elders. As he has in previous meetings regarding his status, Nicholson is expected to attend Saturday's session.

Although the church source said Nicholson, pastor of First Presbyterian since 1971, informed the congregation by letter he had decided at Christmas, 1980, to resign sometime in 1981, it reportedly was a group of elders who set things in motion.

Several elders approached the commission around Feb. 1, the source said, intent on obtaining Nicholson's resignation.

The miniszr was invited to attend the Feb. 5 meeting by the commission, and did so. He then met Feb. 11 with the session of elders, submitted his resignation effective March 1.

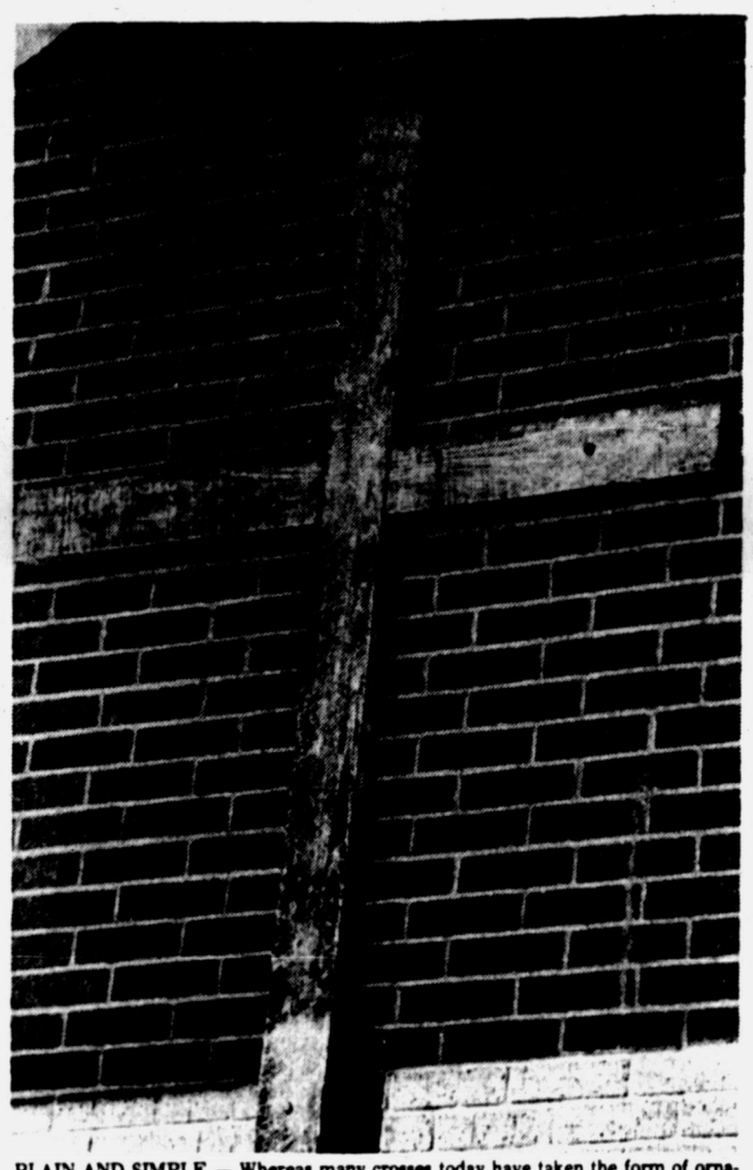

On Feb. 23, with what one church member termed the largest attendance at a morning worship service in recent years, a lively discussion of the subject transpired. Then the congregation voted approximately 3-2, an observer noted, to reject Nicholson's resignation and reaffirm his original invitation to become pastor.

That unprecedented action, plus the election of a four-member committee to represent the church, led to a March 16 meeting of the commission, Nicholson and the committee, which then presented its recommendation to the session of elders March 18.

Nicholson has refused to comment on the church's vote, and presbyterian officials have been reluctant to express themselves as to why the controversy arose.

Church members, however, have speculated that Nicholson's resignation stemmed from misunderstandings between the pastor and church officers, or that some elders felt his presence was detrimental to attendance and fund-raising.

The anonymous source summarized the cause of the episode by saying, "He (Nicholson) was planning to resign anyway, the elders just speeded it up."

PLAIN AND SIMPLE — Whereas many crosses today have taken the form of ornamental jewelry or decorative architecture, this cross embodies the simplicity of the genuine article. The simplicity of the wood and the presence of the nails are fitting reminders of the life and death of the carpenter from Galilee. This "old rugged cross" is f.. and at Melonie Park Baptist Church, 66th Street and Indiana Avenue. (Staff photo by Jim Watkins)

President Of Southern Baptists Predicts Harmonious Meeting

ATLANTA (Special) — Southern Baptist Convention President Bailey Smith, who inherited the Biblical inerrancy controversy and then created one of his own by his remarks last summer on the prayers of Jews, has predicted his denomination's summer convention in Los Angeles will be anything but controversial.

Smith told the SBC Home Mission Board last week that the convention will be " the greatest, most harmonious expression of love that our denomination has ever known."

Saying he was totally committed to ensuring love and harmony at the meeting, Smith repeated his pledge to be a peacemaker between conservative and moderate factions.

"It's not perfect, but I believe the Southern Baptist Convention is the greatest force ever put together for winning this world to Christ," adding that he did not want to do anything to bother that.

Having just returned from a tour of mission work in Africa, Smith challenged Baptists to match the commitment of their missionaries. He said too many Christians are so busy going to church that they never have time to get personally involved in missions.

"One reason we meet is to avoid doing what we ought to be doing," Smith told Home Mission Board directors.

He related about speaking at a Baptist church banquet of rainy night where 400 persons were in attendance. When asked how many would have come if there had been no steak dinner or program, but instead a visitation effort to bring others about Jesus, he said more than 90 percent admitted they would not have come.

"We must quit meeting and talking about strategy and start doing what we already know to do," Smith urged. "I know people who pass 100 mission opportunities on the way to church to talk about mission opportunities."

Smith commented that Baptists have trained their people with fallacious notion that meeting and talking is synonymous with going and caring.

Robert Billings Gets High Federal Post

WASHINGTON (Special) — Robert Billings, a key leader of the religious right, was named recently as special assistant to the secretary of the Department of Education.

Billings, who two years ago opened Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority operation here, becomes the first well-known figure from the religious right to be named to a high position in the Reagan administration.

DR. GENE WILLIAMS

In the $51,000-a-year job, Billings will be responsible for finding ways the federal government can assist private schools. That effort is expected to include heavy lobbying of Congress for a tuition tax credit bill, a measure Billings favors.

He also will represent Christian schools to the secretary and act on the secretary's behalf on special projects.

From his own studies, Billings claims evangelicals gave Reagan his margin of victory in many states, and directly accounted for 249 of his electoral votes.

Although he admitted he wished more born-again evangelicals had been appointed by the president to government posts, Billings said he is not all that unhappy with Reagan's selections.

He predicted Reagan will go down in history like Washington and Lincoln, in that all three "tried to turn the country around."

HERE'S UTLEY — As "The Tonight Show" filled the gap for late-night television viewers, so Trinity Baptist Church is attempting to meet a spiritual need for late-night worshipers. Bob Utley, pastor, will lead a come-as-you-are Bible study and worship service at the church, located at 2707 34th St. The half-hour Bible study will begin at 11:30 p.m., followed by a 45-minute worship period. Although designed for shift workers and night people, everyone is welcome to attend.

Council Sponsors Bike-A-Thon Benefit For Emergency Fund

A bike-a-thon project to benefit the Golden Cross fund supporting a ministry to people in medical emergencies is scheduled for May 2 with a goal to raise $50,000.

The undertaking is sponsored by the Northwest Texas Conference Council on Ministries of the United Methodist Church. Money will be contributed in the form of pledges made to bikers in a 100-mile bike-a-thon and in several 25-mile rides.

There will be two separate events in the project. A conference-widebike-a-thon involving 100 bikers, each riding 100 miles on the same route, will start at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock at dawn.

After spending the previous night at Forrest Heights United Methodist Church in Lubbock, participants will be served breakast before trekking through Ralls to Post and back.

The other event will be 25-mile rides organized by local churches. Each congregation will attempt to recruit 25 riders who will bike 25 miles each on a route of the church's choosing.

In both events, riders and organizers will recruit their own sponsors who will pledge to donate 10, 25, or 50 cents per mile to the bikers. All proceeds will go to the Golden Cross Fund.

The fund is dispensed through the ministries of doctors and hospital care at Methodist Hospital, under the direction of the chaplaincy department. Additional information about the bik-a-thons may be obtained from project chairman Rev. Bruce Parks of Tulia, or any United Methodist pastor.

Harris, who served two churches as music minister during his collegiate career, holds a music degree from William Carey College in Mississippi. He worked with Calvary Baptist Church in Shreveport, La., until 1978, when he became a full-time music evangelist.

Address Of Writers Will Be Withheld

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (Special) — A fraudulent scheme to solicit money from writers of daily devotions for "The Upper Room" has prompted the magazine to identify writers only by name and state or country of residence.

The action followed the discovery in 1979 and 1980 of a highly organized scheme located in India, and described as "a fabrication purely to get money."

Accorkng to the publication's officials, writers of meditations were receiving letters from a "young Indian Christian girl." Although the letters did not ask directly for money, several persons responded with up to $2,000 during the two-year period.

Stop! Look! and Listen!

What Are The Cults of Our Day Really Teaching?

Christian Science-a cult? YES! A dominant earmark of cults is their denial or perversion of the diety of Jesus Christ, while at the same time using his name. Christian Science teaches, "Jesus Christ is not God as Jesus Himself declared but is the son of God." Science and Health, p 361. This denial is easily refuted by the scriptures-Col. 2:9, Heb. 1:1-4, Phil. 2:8-11, John 1:1, and John 8:58,"Before Abraham was, I am." Jesus declared himself to be the "I am" found in Exodus 3:14, the very name of God.

Christian Science also denies the following Biblical doctrines: the inspiration of the Bible, the existence of physical matter, sin, sickness, and death, man's sin nature, the virgin birth, the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, and the atonement of Jesus Christ. To the Christian Scientist these all are illusions of the mortal mind — a mind which does not physically exist in their theology! The Christian Science counterfiet gospel (2 Cor. 11:4) leaves one terribly deceived, in a state of sin without remedy, resulting in eternal separation from God. For free literature on Christian Science write to Trinity Baptist Church or call 793-3467.

GOD WANTED NO PUPPETS

It is called freedom of will. And it is one of the most exciting ideas in man's religious knowledge: we decide for ourselves what we'll believe and how we'll live.

It is not that God doesn't care about human beliefs and behavior. In the Bible and in the life of His Son Jesus, God had made vividly clear His LOVE and His WILL.

But God wanted no puppets. So each of us has been endowed by the Creator with freedom of will. This way our faith is a vital response to God's love — not a mechanical reaction controlled by a puppeteer. And our morality is the real-life expression of our Christian convictions — not a wooden uprightness imposed by strings.

Remember this whenever God puts spiritual opportunity in your path. Like next week when you worship.

Koch Gets Parking Ticket

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch has become a casualty in his own war against illegal parkers in midtown Manhattan, but the outspoken Koch says he'll fight the parking ticket slapped on his official car.

KOCH

"I am not peeved. I'm not annoyed," the mayor said Thursday at City Hall. "I simply cry out for justice."

Koch said his driver told him a traffic enforcement agent wrote out a ticket for the mayor's blue Chrysler, which was parked in a no-parking zone while the mayor was paying a courtesy call on a foreign visitor at the Plaza Hotel.

He said the agent ignored a "richy limousine" parked in front of his car and a unmarked police car parked behind.

Koch said his car is an official police vehicle. He said his driver showed the agent a windshield plaque allowing the vehicle to be in the no-parking zone.

A week ago Koch announced a crackdown on motorists who double park or park in no-standing zones in the busy midtown area.

Drug Charge Names Millionaire

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Millionaire philanthropist Percy Ross has been charged with possession of hashish, a felony offense that could carry a maximum prison sentence of three years and a $3,000 fine, authorities said.

Ross, 64, was expected to appear today in Hennepin County District Court. He has been free on personal recognizance since he was arrested Sunday at his suburban office by Hennepin County deputies.

Deputies seized four grams of hashish, according to Jim Gaffney, assistant Hennepin County attorney.

They also seized what they suspected might be cocaine, but the substance turned out to be baking soda, investigators said. Deputies also confiscated a half-dozen marijuana cigarettes.

Ross, the flamboyant head of Ross Investments in Edina, Minn., has been unavailable for comment since the arrest. Ross is known for his practice of giving out silver dollars to children and for making donations to cancer victims and poor families in the Twin Cities area.

Javits Writes Autobiography

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Jacob K. Javits, who was defeated for re-election last November after 24 years in Congress, has been keeping busy during the past few months.

Javits, 76, told a reporter Thursday following a reception here for the wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that he already has finished writing his autobiography.

The Republican from New York said the book will be published by Houghton Mifflin Co. and released in May.

For Hire: Intelligent Man

SEATTLE (AP) — Employment agencies and want ads didn't get him a new job. So a young father who was recently laid off took to the highways to find employment.

Motorists driving along Washington State Hwy. 520 Thursday toward Seattle might have spotted signs that read:

The Lighter Side Of The News

"Attention"
"Man with"
"Intelligence"
"Integrity"
"And courage"
"Seeks employer with same."

The last sign also bore the phone number of John Bonnington, 24, of Kirkland, Wash.

Bonnington said three days after his second daughter was born he was told he was among 100 workers being laid off by an interior-decorating products company.

Despite the staggered signs by the highway, Bonnington was yet to get any offers.

Carol Burnett Wins $1.6 Million In Libel Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Carol Burnett says her $1.6 million victory in a libel suit against the National Enquirer "evens the score" and may teach the popular tabloid a lesson, but its editors say they don't plan to change editorial policy.

Miss Burnett, who sat in court throughout the trial, covered her face and began to cry when the jury announced its verdict Thursday.

"If they had given me a dollar plus carfare, I would have been happy," she said. "It was the principle. I feel like I've been pregnant for five years, and the baby is beautiful."

Miss Burnett said she planned to donate her award to charity — "I was told they (the Enquirer) might get a tax deduction so I'll write the check myself." But her lawyer warned no money would change hands until appeals are resolved.

The verdict was unanimous, though only nine of the remaining 11 jurors needed to agree. However, one juror said there had been "a lot of disagreement about the amount of personal damages."

"It was the money factor where we really got heated," said Anthony Brown. "We did get mad at each other while discussing the money."

The case centered on a March 2, 1976, item saying Miss Burnett argued loudly with then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in a Washington restaurant, "traipsed" around offering other diners tastes of her dessert, spilled wine and giggled.

Miss Burnett said the article was inaccurate and implied she was drunk, which she found offensive because her parents were alcoholics.

Her attorney, Ed Bronson, charged the Enquirer had been unable to confirm the story totally before printing it. Masterson said the Enquirer tried to check the story and noted that after publication it had been retracted.

"There are some who may feel some news is more important than others, but under the Supreme Court, news is news," Masterson said.

Miss Burnett declined to speculate on how the verdict might affect the work of other publications.

"Yippee!" said Jeff Wald, husband-manager of singer Helen Reddy, who is suing the Enquirer.

"I'm delighted for anyone who is attacked by publications like the Enquirer," said "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson, whose televised attack against the Enquirer for an item about his marriage prompted the dismissal of two jurors. Carson said he would not file suit.

The suit, which began in 1976 after the Enquirer reported that Miss Burnett acted boisterously at a Washington restaurant, ended when a jury that deliberated for more than 13 hours awarded Miss Burnett $300,000 in damages and $1.3 million in punitive damages.

The suit originally sought $10 million, but in closing arguments her attorney urged the jury to award the popular entertainer $1.5 million — the Enquirer's estimated net profit for a year.

Enquirer attorney William Masterson said he would file a motion next week for a new trial, reduction of damages and reversal of the verdict. If those motions are denied, he will appeal, he said.

"These were clearly excessive damages," said Masterson. "It's ridiculous — for five lines in a gossip column to take a year's earnings and half of a company's net worth. ... This is the equivalent of capital punishment against a corporation."

Reunion Awkward For Amnesia Victim

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — With a shy, awkward "I'm pleased to meet you," an amnesia victim called Jane Doe has been reunited with her family after seven years' separation.

She still does not recognize them, and she isn't quite ready to wholeheartedly adopt her real name, but a family photo album sparked a recollection of her pet dogs and some other "little things" about her past.

"Only in the annals of movie script-writing do we anticipate there will be ... instant recognition," said Dr. Jessie Kaye, a psychiatrist at South Florida State Hospital. "It only happens in storybooks."

It didn't happen here.

Hospital spokeswoman Jackie Dale, who was at the reunion, said Cheryl Ann Tomiczek said to her father, mother and brother, "I'm very happy that you came. I'm pleased to meet you."

Her brother Robert, 32, said that during the meeting, "She was studying us while we were trying to study her. We had to break the ice at the beginning. Finally, everybody seemed to relax."

Her father, Andrew, broke down during the meeting with his 34-year-old daughter and was given medication, hospital officials said. He did not appear at a subsequent news conference.

Her mother, Irene, said her daughter — found last September naked and near starvation by a ranger patrolling a wooded area in Birch State Park in Fort Lauderdale — did not recognize her family members but did remember "little things" about the family's past after being shown a photo album.

"I'm very happy. I assured her how much we love her. We discussed many things about the dogs she used to have when she was a little girl," said Mrs. Tomiczek, of Roselle, Ill.

"There is no doubt that Jane Doe is Cheryl Ann Tomiczek," said Kaye.

Miss Tomiczek seemed calm at the news conference. She said she is not ready to take the name Cheryl Tomiczek, and for the time being will hold on to "Jane," the name she was given by officials after being found in the park.

Teen-Ager Gets Life Sentence

MIAMI (AP) — A black teen-ager convicted of the beating and stoning deaths of three white youths during last May's race riots has been sentenced to three consecutive life terms, while two other black youths convicted in the case were given 45 years each.

The Dade County judge who sentenced them said he hoped the tough sentences would serve as a crime deterrent.

"The court, in sentencing, must take into consideration the effect that those sentences will have on the community as a deterrent so people can go about their business on the street," Circuit Judge Mario Goderich said in imposing the sentences Thursday.

Samuel Lightsey Jr., 17, was sentenced to three consecutive life terms, while brothers Lawrence and Leonard Capers each were given 45 years for the deaths of three whites who unwittingly drove into the riot zone May 17, the first of three nights of racial violence in Miami's Liberty City neighborhood.

The sentences were the maximum allowed by law.

Problems Plague Roscoe's Fight Against Floods

ROSCOE (UPI) — Residents, concerned nature might decide to continue a series of floods this year with a once-in-a-century deluge, have run headlong into a series of reverses in trying to protect the town.

A flood that forced 40 residents from their homes in 1979 was described as a "once-in-50 years phenomenon." Then a 24-inch rain that covered the town last year was designated a "once-in-75-years phenomenon."

Roscoe's 1,616 residents are tired of phenomena. And they don't want to wait another year to try to correct conditions that let flood waters inundate their town, a farming community in the rolling prairie country 47 miles west of Abilene.

Engineers have estimated that the price tag on changing the water-flow pattern at between $13 million and $17 million, a figure that caused Mayor Bedford P. "Beep" Cain to comment: "It would be easier to pick up the community and move it a few miles."

An appeal to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was equally discouraging.

"They said it would take one year of study, two years of planning and 16 years of implementation," Cain lamented.

"But the people of this community aren't the type to sit back and wait that long. A 3-inch rain or a 5-inch rain right now could get us back in the same shape we were in last September."

Almost broke and faced with about $200,000 in flood-related expenses, the city appealed to Nolan County Commissioners Court for help. The commissioners were more than glad to assist the beleaguered town, but they wanted to do it their way. Having little patience with federal forms and even less with bureaucrats, the commissioners insisted they could complete the project using only county funds and county equipment.

"You can drown out again while you're waiting on an application," said County Judge Donald Menn.

The commissioners dedicated themselves to finishing the project in four months and went to work, unstopping culverts and cleaning creeks.

They took survey readings to determine the "historical flow of the water," and settled on a drainage plan that would keep flood water moving in a controlled pattern around Roscoe.

But farmers, who lost more than 75 percent of last year's cotton crop to drought and flood, don't want the runoff water any more than the residents of Roscoe.

The county's consulting engineer, Stanley Morris, tried to calm protesting farmers by pointing out that "what the commissioners are trying to do is keep Roscoe safe ... This is just a stop-gap measure," he said, and promised solutions for the future.

School Lunch Fund Boosted By Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans, forced by Democrats to vote publicly for budget cuts in politically popular items, went on the offensive today with a successful bid to boost support for nutrition programs — over the initial protests of Democrats.

The Democrats joined Republicans in voting, 88 to 9, to add $200 million to the school lunch program. Then, on a 70-26 vote, senators agreed to delete $200 million from foreign aid.

The move by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to divert $200 million from foreign aid to domestic nutrition programs, which are under the jurisdiction of his Senate Agriculture Committee, touched off a rancorous debate.

Helms, who backs the Reagan administration's bid for major reductions in school lunch and food stamp programs, said the purpose of his proposal was to reassure many "who think the president may have cut nutrition programs too deep." He said he did not share "that apprehension."

Helms' move was sharply questioned by Sens. Donald W. Reigle Jr., D-Mich. and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who pounded his desk and shouted that Helms' amendment was "hogwash."

Time after time, Senate Democrats have succeeded in forcing GOP members to go on record as favoring cuts in popular programs. In the latest such incident, the Republican-controlled Senate voted 56 to 44 Thursday to reject a Democratic attempt to restore $295 million of the $400 million that President Reagan wants to cut from veterans' programs in 1982.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes meanwhile told reporters it was budget director David A. Stockman's personal opinion only that Reagan would veto a one-year tax cut bill that Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, says he will seek.

Stockman warned the House Budget Committee Thursday that Reagan would veto any measure that did not include a 30 percent, across-the-board reduction in individual income tax rates over three years.

"I would not say that David Stockman misspoke," Speakes said. "I would say that he expressed a strong personal opinion which will carry weight with the president, but the president will not say what he's going to do on a sign-or-veto matter until it reaches his desk."

Speakes said Reagan generally is "very pleased with the progress so far on his economic program," particularly with final congressional approval in the Senate this morning of a measure eliminating a scheduled April 1 increase in dairy price supports.

In the emotional debate this morning over nutrition spending, Helms said he was "astonished" there would be opposition to taking "some money out of foreign aid and giving it to school children for their lunches. ... I fail to see what is so dastardly about that."

Area Men Hail Reagan Action

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Spokesmen for High Plains cotton producers and agribusinessmen today hailed the Reagan administration's attempt to relax federal cotton-dust standards in textile mills.

Such an action, if successful, could help to assure a stronger market for the millions of bales produced annually on the High Plains, they said.

With 95 percent of the costs of the proposed standards expected to fall on textile mills, area cotton industry officials fear many of the factories would switch to synthetic fibers instead of spending millions of dollars to develop technology and equipment to filter the air.

"The rules don't apply to dust produced from any other materials," noted Farmers Cooperative Compress manager Rex McKinney. "The cheapest way to comply is not to use cotton."

"If the mills can win the case, we can keep the markets that we've worked to establish over the years," McKinney said.

Other phases of the cotton industry, such as gins, warehouses and classing offices, have been successful in efforts to make the standards inapplicable to their operations. But the easing of regulations at the processing level will be to no avail, sources said, if there is no market for cotton.

Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. executive vice president Don Johnson said Reagan's action, if successful, could be a "major victory" by enabling textile mills to more easily use cotton in their operations.

"The unreasonable cotton dust standards could have serious effects on cotton if the regulations are imposed," Johnson said. "The action could be a very positive step for the industry."

The new standards, written by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, are to take full effect next year unless blocked or changed.

U.S. Department of Agriculture analysts said the administration's decision to relax the cotton-dust standards is expected to result in increased future domestic cotton consumption.

The effort probably will have the greatest impact on many of the smaller firms, which would have been forced out of business, the USDA analysts said.

Many of the bigger textile mills already have modernized their facilities to comply, at least partially, with the standards proposed four years ago by the Carter administration, they said.

The USDA analysts said there will be "a positive factor" in domestic cotton consumption resulting from the changes.

"Relaxation of the rules may improve mill use of cotton from the current levels (5.9 million bales this crop year and 6.5 million bales last season)," they said.

"But we would have to know the precise new standards before estimating the specific impact," they said.

While labor unions long have favored the strict cotton-dust rules, the textile industry and farm and allied groups have opposed the regulations.

of the air. In areas where the machines would not do the job, face-covering respirator masks would be required.

The new rule is five times more stringent than the one now in effect and industry opponents say the additional cost of implementing it would drive many small textile companies out of business.

Officials who proposed the rule estimated the additional cost at $550 million. Some industry estimates peg the cost at $2.7 billion.

People who inhale cotton dust particles allegedly run the risk of contracting the respiratory disease byssinosis, often called "brown lung."

At the heart of the administration's move, one high-ranking Labor Department source said, is a fear that the court will uphold the standards, thus dooming efforts to review the economic impact of the cotton-dust standard and a host of other safety rules.

The Supreme Court has heard oral arguments and now has under consideration the textile industry challenge.

The high court is faced with the question of whether federal officials must satisfy a cost-benefit test before imposing regulations such as the one on cotton dust.

The unusual element to the case is that the day after former President Carter left office, government attorneys completed oral arguments before the Supreme Court defending the tough standards and the matter was taken under advisement by the justices.

One high-ranking Labor Department source, who declined to be identified, described the administration move as a test case that would affect a wide range of government safety regulations.

"As I understand it," he said, "if we let this case go forward (and lose), there is no way we can go in and challenge these things," he said.

If the court were to uphold the Carter cotton-dust standards, the source said, "We would no longer be able to make a cost effectiveness judgment. It would knock completely out of the box the basis for determining factually whether a regulation can be justified in view of its cost."

"The technology (for measuring cotton dust particles) is not accurate," the Labor Department source said. "Before we can condemn a cotton mill to the legal definition that they are endangering the health of the employees, we ought to know that the equipment is accurate."

Jet Hijacked To Managua

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A Honduran airliner with an 87 people on board, including about 20 Americans, was hijacked here this morning and flown to Managua, Nicaragua, airport and airline authorities said.

Nicaragua said five armed hijackers were aboard the plane and airport authorities here said they were four men and one woman.

The Boeing 737 with 81 passengers and a crew of six aboard was commandeered shortly after takeoff on a flight scheduled for the Honduran city of San Pedro Sula, then to Belize and New Orleans.

An hour later the plane arrived at the Sandino International Airport in Managua where it was parked at the west end of the runway and surrounded by Nicaraguan troops.

The hijackers' demands were not made known and there was no confirmation of their identities, although the airline director said they were Nicaraguan.

A Nicaraguan government spokesman said there were five armed hijackers aboard and that Nicaragua had agreed to act as intermediary at the hijackers' demand. Vice Defense Minister Luis Carrion Cruz was named to handle the talks.

Koala Bears Arrive At San Diego Zoo

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Six shy and cuddy female koalas and a single male have arrived at the San Diego Zoo to join the rest of the only such colony outside Australia.

A spokesman said the single female and four males already at the zoo "have been waiting for companionship, whether they knew it or not."

The new arrivals, gifts of the Queensland National Parks and Wildlife Service, were flown Wednesday from Brisbane and trucked to San Diego after zoo veterinarians inspected them in Los Angeles.

next," an apparent reference to Soviet intervention.

The official said he thinks the Russians "will do what they feel they have to do." He said he didn't know what the response of the Polish army would be in the event of internal disorder, however.

"I don't think anyone knows if they would resist or join. It might be mixed because what they are talking about involves firing (on) or suppression of their own people," the official said.

As for the prospect of Soviet intervention, Weinberger said he thinks the Russians would prefer that the Polish situation be resolved to their satisfaction without military intervention.

The Russians, he said, "would much rather get what they want without going in" militarily.

On Thursday, President Reagan, calling the Polish turmoil "very serious ... very tense," warned the Polish and Soviet governments against using force to crush Solidarity.

He declared in a written statement that the Soviets may be planning "to undertake repressive action in Poland."

Such a step would have "a grave effect on the whole course of East-West relations," the statement said, echoing the words of the Carter administration at the peak of the earlier strife.

And in a thinly veiled warning to the Warsaw government, the statement said U.S. economic aid to financially troubled Poland would keep flowing only as long as Polish leaders try to talk out their differences with the workers and not resort to force.

Police Seek Suspect In Slaying At Club

legs. He was cussing, but I don't know what he was saying," the witness told detectives.

The witness said the man went to his girlfriend, who was sitting at a nearby table and that she grabbed his arm and said, "let's go."

The man was still cursing and displaying the weapon when he and his companion walked out the front door, reports state. Another club patron said he thought he heard the man and Gonzales arguing outside earlier in the night.

Authorities received a call from a man about 4 a.m. today who said he knew something about the killing, but he hung up before a detective could talk to him. When police attempted to call the number given to them they got the bus station. An employee there said the man who had been at the phone had left seconds earlier in a pickup.

Police said Gonzales had been shot three times, suffering wounds to the middle of the back, the upper chest and in the abdomen. A spokesman said it appeared the victim was already on the floor when he was shot at close range in the abdomen, because that slug exited Gonzales' side and was found buried in the carpet next to the body.

Another slug was found in the metal front door and a spent round was found on the floor about 20 feet from the victim. Authorities said it appeared all the shots were fired inside the nightspot.

Gonzales, who apparently was unarmed, was found by police lying on his back in the southwest corner of the club.

Detectives questioned numerous other customers at the club who said they heard the shots but did not see the gunman.

Blalack ordered an autopsy, which was to be performed today at St. Mary's Hospital.

Robber Shot By Partner

GROSSE POINTE PARK, Mich. (UPI) — When the bandit said "Nobody move," he meant his partner, too.

Two men entered the Hot Wax record shop in Grosse Pointe Park this week, brandishing revolvers and announcing a holdup, police said.

Two startled customers, the owner and an employee were in the store at the time. One bandit "nervously" grabbed a female customer and said "Nobody move," Det. Sgt. James LaPlatt said.

His partner moved. The hostage-holding robber promptly shot him in the head at point-blank range, LaPlatt said.

As the wounded bandit lay bleeding, a third man who had been standing watch outside entered, picked up the wounded man's gun and the two surviving robbers rifled the cash register of $15, police said.

Weather

ening the South Plains today was bringing severe weather to New Mexico.

Winds gusting to more than 50 mph and blowing snow in the New Mexico mountains prompted Albuquerque weathermen to issue a travelers' advisory for the western and northern mountains and the northwest plateau of the state.

A high wind and blowing dust warning was issued for the remainder of the state.

"Rain began at Gallup and Farmington around midnight last night, but the rain changed quickly to snow," a weatherman reported.

"The winds, snow and blowing snow will make for hazardous driving conditions over the northern and western mountains and the northwest plateau today. Some locally heavy snow could fall over the higher mountains. The snow showers will spread into the central highlands and southern mountains later today with all mountains standing a chance for snow tonight and Saturday."

Dallas Official Resigns Over Kickbacks Probe

DALLAS (AP) — A county commissioner has reportedly agreed to resign to avoid prosecution in a multistate kickback investigation that may result in indictments of as many as 50 politicians in Texas alone.

The federal investigation has involved close examination of county road and bridge fund records, sources have told The Associated Press.

Investigators for the U.S. Justice Department are looking into reports of kickbacks said to involve sales representatives trying to sell their products and equipment to county governments, the sources said. Some of the alleged payments date back as long as six years.

One county judge, who asked that his name not be used, said one of the four commissioners in his county has agreed to repay money received in a kickback scheme and step down rather than face prosecution.

"From what I understand, it (the resignation) is imminent," the judge said.

Of several county officials who talked to The Associated Press about the investigation, only one would let his name be used.

Commissioners all over East Texas have been notified of prospective indictments that may be handed up by a federal grand jury scheduled to convene April 7 in Tyler.

The Texas investigation is part of a multistate operation that reportedly involves investigations of as many as 100 county officials in 40 Oklahoma counties and has resulted in 18 indictments against county officials in Arkansas.

The Dallas Morning News reported today in a copyright story that an Arlington vendor, who had reportedly been paying off officials in Bowie County, began cooperating with federal agents after some of his dealings were tape-recorded.

The man agreed to turn informant and admitted paying off more than a dozen East Texas commissioners, unidentified sources told the News.

One county official told the AP that federal authorities are looking primarily for purchases from three materials companies — two in Texas and one in Oklahoma.

Several county officials said FBI agents visited the county auditor's office in Bowie County about a year ago and came to Red River and Titus counties within the past few weeks.

"From what they were asking it seemed they were interested in seeing records of the road and bridge funds," a county judge said.

"They (FBI agents) came in to check our records," said Paul Boggs, Titus County auditor. "They indicated to us that they were assigned (to the investigation) by a U.S. attorney in Tyler."

However, U.S. Attorney John Hannah of Tyler said Thursday that he could "neither confirm nor deny" that the investigation was going on.

"We had no idea what they were looking for. I asked questions to see if I could speed up their work, but they just told me who the assignment came from," Boggs said.

Boggs said he had no idea what kind of county purchases the agents were interested in.

U.S. Diplomat Raps Salvadoran Attacks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — As Salvadoran troops pressed their offensive against anti-government leftist guerrillas, America's chief diplomat here said he would not be intimidated by rightist or leftist attacks on the U.S. Embassy.

U.S. Charge d'Affaires Frank Chapin, the acting chief of mission, condemned the latest attack — a rocket-grenade salvo on Wednesday — and said the leftist Popular Liberation Front was responsible. No injuries were reported.

It was the fourth attack on the embassy since Sept. 16. Leftists have been blamed for one previous raid, while right-wing extremists have been blamed for two.

"We decry and deplore attacks on any embassy," Chapin said Thursday. "I have been in contact with (President Jose Napoleon) Duarte and he has promised full and adequate protection to us."

Chapin did not elaborate on what additional security measures would be taken at the fortress-like four-story building.

The United States backs the civilian-military junta and has accused the Soviet Union of supplying arms to the leftist guerrillas who are trying to topple the government.

The increased American military aid to the junta has angered both leftists and rightists, who consider the junta too liberal. The power struggle has claimed an estimated 16,000 lives since a military coup toppled rightist President Carlos Humberto Romero in October 1979.

Major counter-insurgency operations by the army were reported under way in the northern county of Morazan near Honduras. The army also said it was trying to drive the rebels out of caves and tunnels dug into the mountains near Guazapa, 15 miles north of El Salvador.

Fifteen guerrillas were reported killed Wednesday in fighting in Tecoluca and San Lorenzo 30 miles west of the capital.

In San Salvador, the capital, four people were killed Thursday when a bomb exploded inside a car on a busy street.

Details were sketchy but police said the parked vehicle apparently contained several bombs. They said the vehicle belonged to presumed leftist terrorists "who were killed by their own weapons."

A passing motorcyclist was also among the four dead, who were not identified.

Space Shuttle Undergoes Major Fuel Tank Test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Super-cold liquid hydrogen and oxygen began flowing into the space shuttle Columbia's massive external fuel tank today in a test that was considered the last major hurdle before the $8 billion program makes its maiden flight into space.

The highly volatile fuel slowly began pouring into the massive aluminum tank about 6 a.m. CST. NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said there were no problems and the operation was "going smoothly."

A decision on the launch date for the reusable space vehicle hinged on the durability of foam insulation on the outer skin of the 15-story silo-like tank that fuels the orbiter's main engines for eight minutes.

Space center officials said if all went well with the tanking test, the orbiter could be launched as early as April 9.

For the second time in three days, the double-cylinder tank is being loaded with 520,000 gallons of liquid oxygen and hydrogen to test the heat-and-ice-resistant insulation, which was damaged in a similar procedure in January.

Visual inspections today and a meticulous "hands-on" analysis Saturday will have to satisfy technical specialists before the tank is pronounced ready by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Driver Injured In Auto Crash

PLAINVIEW (Special) — A 27-year-old man was in "very critical" condition at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital early today with head injuries suffered when he apparently lost control of his car and crashed into a concrete drainage system on I-27, about four miles south of Plainview.

Curtis Ray Carr, reportedly of Earth, had been unconscious in his car for "two or three" hours before he was found about 6:30 a.m. today by road construction workers, a Department of Public Safety spokesman said.

The accident occurred in a portion of the interstate which is under construction, the spokesman said. Carr, who apparently was the lone occupant of the vehicle, was first taken to Hi-Plains Hospital in Hale Center and then to Methodist Hospital.

U.N.-Israel Conflict Predicted

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Military officials warned today that the Israeli army and U.N. peacekeeping troops were on a collision course over who controls southern Lebanon.

The prediction came as Palestinian and Christian militiamen exchanged artillery fire in the Christian-controlled enclave north of the Israeli border, residents reported.

There was no word on casualties or damage.

Israeli army officials suggested that unless tension along Israel's northern border is defused, Israeli forces and troops of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon might end up fighting each other.

The Jerusalem Post quoted military sources as saying Israel would prefer to avoid clashing with U.N. troops, whose commander, Maj. Gen. William Callaghan, wants to bring southern Lebanon under control of Lebanese troops.

"If Callaghan insists on destabilizing the area and providing the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) with an avenue for hostile action against Israel, the army will have no alternative but to become directly involved, even if this means direct confrontation with UNIFIL," the Post's sources said.

The officials said the statement reflected the military's thinking.

63 Regulations Targeted For Hit List

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration has withdrawn, indefinitely postponed or ordered reviews of 63 federal regulations, ranging from guidelines for energy audits to mandates for deboned meat.

Vice President George Bush, who heads a presidential regulatory relief task force, said this week the administration is trying to achieve economic relief by eliminating unnecessary and burdensome regulations.

Bush said the action is designed "to reduce costs, to reduce inflation, to increase productivity and to provide for more jobs."

Most of the targeted regulations were issued in the closing weeks of the Carter administration and were temporarily frozen by President Reagan shortly after taking office.

That freeze, which expires next Monday, involved 172 regulations. Of those, 41 since have been released, 100 will be released when the freeze ends and the rest are being postponed indefinitely or scrapped.

The Labor Department issued a separate announcement this week saying it is already moving to abolish some existing regulations among those Bush selected for review.

Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said he is withdrawing, effective Friday, a cancer policy that set guidelines on how the government would detect and regulate potential cancer-causing agents.

Among the regulations already in effect but targeted for reassessment are:

— An Energy Department requirement that utilities offer "energy audits" to home customers.

— Environmental Protection Agency rules governing cradle-to-grave handling of hazardous wastes.

— An Agriculture Department regulation requiring disclosure of ground bone in mechanically deboned meat.

Also among the regulations shelved for the time being are endangered species protection for the Hawaiian tree snail, rules governing workplace exposure to lead and nondiscrimination against the handicapped by local governments receiving revenue sharing grants.

None of the regulations in this week's announcement directly affects the automobile industry.

Protection Urged For Subways

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York City's subways may be hard pressed for cash, graffiti-ridden and dirty, but some state transportation officials think money should be spent to study ways to protect them against nuclear attack.

"I don't want a penny spent on this," said state Sen. Martin Solomon, referring to a $569,000 proposed study on the feasibility of protecting the subways against a nuclear holocaust.

Solomon said recently he discovered the proposal for the study in a 1980 interoffice memo at the Transit Authority's Power Division. He said the protection system is called "Electro-Magnetic Pulse Hardening."

"If we had $100 million in extra money, and the buses and trains ran on time and the subways were safe maybe we'd have the luxury of worrying about this," he said.

A spokesman for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, which announced earlier that bus and subway fares may have to be raised, said that no contracts for the study have been awarded.

Courthouse Undergoing Energy-Saving Project

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County Commissioners are hoping to cut down on their utility costs at the courthouse by installing insulated window units throughout the building.

The project, which is about one-third complete, is costing the county around $141,500.

However, Commissioner Coy Biggs said the windows are expected to pay for themselves through savings on courthouse utility bills in less than 10 years.

County officials contracted with Lubbock Glass and Mirror Co. to install the new window units. All windows at the courthouse should be covered within about two months, according to company manager Delbert Sanders.

Sanders explained that the sealed units are composed of two pieces of glass with air space between them. A reflective coated glass is on the outside, he noted.

The insulated units reduce the amount of cold that can penetrate the window, Sanders said.

In the winter, Sanders said the units would stop the cold from getting into the courthouse. And during the summer months, he said, the units should reduce the amount of air conditioning that escapes through the windows.

The new window units already have been installed over all windows on the first floor of the courthouse. Work is underway on the windows located on the second and third floors.

However, the cost effectiveness of the insulated window units has failed to impress some employees at the courthouse. Since the windows went up, there has been a lot of grumbling among the workers.

"They're all right on the days when the sun is shining," observed one employee. But on days when the sky is overcast, she said that the window's darker tint gives everything a "gloomy look."

Similar complaints were voiced by other workers employed by the county.

According to Sanders, some employees also have complained because the new units prevent the opening of windows at the courthouse when offices get too hot.

Courthouse officials frequently experience problems with heating and cooling the building, Biggs said. He noted that some areas of the courthouse may be sweltering when other areas are at the right temperature.

And one of the hottest spots on occasions is the commissioners courtroom on the first floor. "But we've always had that problem, even before the windows were installed," Biggs said.

Sanders said it will be more cost effective for county officials to keep all windows closed. "When they opened windows, all the heat went out through the window," he said.

Biggs said he was at first opposed to installing the insulated window units. However, the commissioner said he is now "convinced" the windows will curtail costs on utilities.

The window units also keep out the sand and dust, Biggs said.

DOWN BUT NOT OUT — Dave Appleton of Snyder has his calf roped but not yet tied in this action from the 39th annual ABC Rodeo at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. Cowboys Win Battle Over Bulls In Rodeo's Second Performance

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Cowboys won their bout with the bucking bulls, but lost their big lead over the broncs Thursday as the second edition of the 39th annual ABC Rodeo kept 4,600 fans cheering and whistling in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Rodeo's twisting ton of fury failed to dislodge five determined cowboys with world champion bull rider Don Gay of Mesquite leading the scoring with a 71, followed closely by John Davis of Homedale, Idaho, with 70, Tova Bolton of Odessa with 68, Wacey Cathey of Del Rio with 65 and Terry Holland of Carthage with 64.

For the cowgirls, Kay Garrison of Marlow, Okla., rounded the cloverleaf in 14.43 seconds to top barrel racing efforts. Sharon Youngblood of Lamesa made it in 14.44 and world champion Carol Goostree of Verden, Okla., came in with 15.05.

Some cowboys bit the dust in hard spills while others stayed aboard to win high scores atop high kicking, hard bucking broncs which fought to regain their wild reputation.

Saddle broncs made it 5-7 against the determined riders, while bareback broncs lost in a round that went 6-5 to the cowboys.

But there was no split decision for Roger Miller, who won his bout with the fans hands down with a little "Dang Me," a little fiddling and a coliseum full of Miller personality. The fans rode through the rafters on the "Orange Blossom Special" with Miller at the controls of the fiddle bow.

The "King of the Road" and a thrill-packed third round will be on tap at 8 p.m. today when the rodeo heads into the home stretch with lower times and higher scores setting the pace.

Cowboys had it rough all through with the sturdy stock from Elk City, Okla., but the hard-luck cowboys of the night were the calf ropers. They gambled and lost on short loops and fast runs in making a try for the ABC championship and its side prize of $1,000 in the Coors Chute-Out with world champion Roy Cooper.

But despite all the excitement, not a single newcomer to rodeo missed a bit of the action thanks to the running com-

City Schools Utilize Self-Image Program

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

While adults are pulling their own strings, looking out for number one, getting rolfed and trained in est, the young folk too are experiencing the search for a positive self-image.

Indeed, the philosophy of positive thinking is being utilized in three elementary schools here through a pilot program known as Aware.

But the Aware teaching therapy does not appear to be just another in a long line of Me-Decade therapy fads. The ongoing program not only promotes the attainment of a healthy self-image among youngsters, but also of respect and regard for other people and their differences.

Counselors and teachers at all elementary levels except the first grade are combining specific games and exercises with a general attitude and teaching style to instruct students at Hardwick, Bozeman and Parkway elementary schools in positive thinking.

What the teachers and students ultimately stand to gain by practicing the Aware philosophy in school, the project's promoters explain, is better student performance. "If you have a good self-concept, you will do well in school," said Hardwick third grade teacher Sue Thomas.

And teachers and counselors involved testify the program has succeeded over a period of time in making youngsters feel better about themselves and others and in making students more sensitive to the differences in other people. It even has lightened the load of discipline problems, they report.

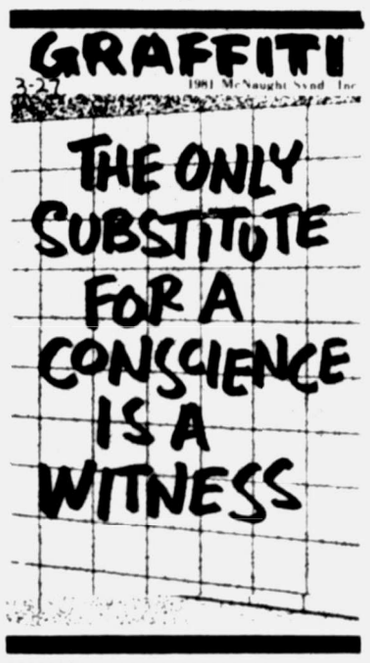

Eva Samples, elementary social studies consultant for the Lubbock public schools, explained that the multiple aims of the two-year-old program include improvement of students' ability to solve social problems "without getting into fights and negativism. We stress positiveness."

The first step in the process of molding students' attitudes takes place on the first day of school, Mrs. Samples said. Students get acquainted with one another.

One of the strategies for getting to know classmates is the Aware Circle. The students' and teacher's names are put into a box and each person must then pick a name and say something positive, or at least neutral about the person they've chosen. Even a remark like, "She has blue eyes" qualifies, as long as no negative comments are thrown out.

DEAR ABBY

Middle-Aged Doctor Not Taking Own Advice

DEAR ABBY: My husband just celebrated his 50th birthday. He's a physician who tells all his male patients who reach 50 to "slow down." If they smoke, he orders them to quit or cut down, but he's a two-pack-a-day man.

He puts all his overweight patients on diets, but he is considerably overweight himself and can't stay on a diet for two days. He insists that daily exercise is a must, but he doesn't exercise at all.

He says that an annual vacation away from one's daily work is essential to good health, but he hasn't had a vacation in six years. And this will floor you: He wants all his patients to have a thorough checkup every year, but the last one he had was 12 years ago. What's wrong with him, and how can I get through to him?

DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: He's human. He finds advice much easier to give than to take. You can get through to him (maybe) by insisting that he consult a colleague for a checkup. And if he refuses, ask him to keep paying those life insurance premiums, so you and your next husband can retire in luxury. Cruel? Not really. Sometimes we have to be cruel to be kind.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine is marrying a minister. He plans to perform the marriage ceremony himself. He insists that since he is authorized to perform marriage ceremonies, there is no reason why he should not perform his own.

Somehow this doesn't seem right to me. Can you please find out if such a marriage would be legal in South Carolina? Thank you.

BRIDE'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: According to Robert N. DuRant, executive director of the South Carolina Bar:

"Only ministers of the gospel or accepted Jewish rabbis and officers authorized to administer oaths in this state are authorized to administer a marriage ceremony in this State.

"Complications could arise when one attempts his own wedding ceremony. To be strictly legal, one could avoid the question by having a third party perform the marriage ceremony."

JOEY

DEAR JOEY: Maybe he just wants to make sure somebody laughs.

DEAR ABBY: You recently quoted G.K. Chesterton, who said, "The truly great person is the one who makes every person feel great."

May I share an anecdote that illustrates that point beautifully: In Queen Victoria's time, a young woman had the good fortune of being escorted to dinner by William E. Gladstone, who was considered one of the most brilliant statesmen of the 19th century. On the following evening, the same young lady was escorted by Benjamin Disraeli, novelist, statesman and twice prime minister of Great Britain.

When asked for her impression of these two great rivals, she replied, "After an evening with Gladstone, I thought he was the most brilliant man I'd ever met. After an evening with Disraeli, I thought myself to be the most fascinating woman in the world!"

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

From age 13 to 19, your teenagers will go through the seven stages of Career Searching. Why, do you ask, does he or she vacillate between one profession and another? Because it is the first time he has faced the realities of how to make a living.

Stage I (age 13) — He has learned to sign his name and can sign it just as well as Bill Walton. Bill Walton gets a million dollars a year for signing his name. Besides, coach says if he keeps growing this summer he might start in the fall.

Stage II (age 14) — Has not grown enough to dunk higher than Walton's knees. Decides sports is for jocks who don't want to grow up. Did an article for school paper and discovered Katharine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post, earned in excess of $375,000 in one year. Getting out the paper is all work after school, but it's worth it. Journalism gets in your blood.

Stage III (age 15) — New girl with nice-smelling hair called Shelly wanted to be walked home every night after school. He let someone else get the stupid paper out. Besides, stupid faculty censored everything. Shelly thinks he should go into law like her father. Chief Justice Warren Burger makes $84,700 a year. Besides, all those years in law school would give them a chance to mature.

Stage IV (age 16) — Shelly took shorter time to mature than he thought. He decided after she dumped him that girls are overrated. He said she'd be surprised when she hears he's going to become a priest. They don't make a lot of money, but you get a lot of people looking at you and saying, "Wonder why he never got married. He has such charisma and can reach people."

Stage V (age 17) — Son decided he didn't need religious life when he discoverd the hours. He said if he wanted to work Sundays he'd be a realtor. With all the charisma people said he had, he figured he'd go into politics. After all, the mayor of New York City makes $80,000 a year.

Stage VI (age 18) — Charisma bombed out at student council level. Is undecided about career, but seems to have narrowed it down to either game show contestant who won $132,000 by knowing Butterfly McQueen was the maid in "Gone with the Wind," or a plumber who took 27 pounds of his hair out of the hall drain and makes $53,000 a year.

Is open to suggestions.

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

South combined all his chances to bring home a difficult slam on this hand from a recent team match.

After North showed a powerful, balanced hand with his jump to four spades, South was fully justified in making a move toward slam. The sensible approach was a diamond cue-bid, and North, with first-round controls in the other suits, needed no further encouragement to bid the slam. Perhaps a contract of six no trump might have been a better choice in view of his heart and club tenaces.

West elected to lead a club—a heart would have given declarer no practical chance. Since the lead made it unlikely that West held the queen, declarer wisely did not attempt the "free" finesse—he had other ideas for dummy's jack of clubs. Declarer won in his hand, drew trumps in two rounds and cashed the ace and king of diamonds. Then came the ace of clubs, followed by the jack.

West produced the queen of clubs, but declarer did not ruff. Instead, he discarded his remaining diamond. That was a good play, for if diamonds were 3-3, declarer would be able to set up dummy's long diamond by ruffing a diamond, and the heart finesse would no longer be needed.

The diamonds did not break evenly, but South's fine technique was rewarded in another way. When East was left on lead with the third club, he was ensnared in an end play. Since East had been stripped of diamonds, he was faced with unpleasant alternatives. A club lead would permit declarer to discard a heart loser from one hand while ruffing in the other; and to lead a heart was tantamount to surrendering the contract, for it would be into dummy's ace-queen.

Whichever line East chose was suicide. Declarer made his slam with the loss of only a club trick!

Housewives Unite To Rock Boats

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

Housewives of America are uniting, says Jan Peterson, executive director of the National Congress of Neighborhood Women.

Miss Peterson said these women don't fit the stereotypes of women's movement crusaders and in the past they are people who have felt the women's movement passed them by. In fact, she says, NCNW is 'the theoretical mother' of an alternate women's movement emerging in America."

The real "Norma Rae," Crystal Lee Sutton, recently joined the NCNW board, NCNW says that was a salute to the working-class-woman image NCNW tries to project.

Women in the alternate movement are working class themselves or wives of truck drivers, policemen, firemen, factory workers, plumbers, construction workers, auto mechanics and other hard-working types.

Miss Peterson said these are people who are not satisfied with their neighborhoods, with services from city hall and some other things. So they formed their own boat-rocking organizations to improve things.

Miss Peterson said in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Milwaukee and other places "neighborhood women" are rocking boats. They attack violence on their doorsteps, potholes in their streets and even crusade for college classes in the local library.

A leadership meeting for neighborhood women involved in exceptional programs recently drew representatives from Chicago; Somerville, Mass.; Cleveland; Guadalupe, Ariz.; Rapid City, S.D.; Milwaukee; Harlingen, Texas; St. Louis; Prichard, Ala.; Ponca City, Okla.; Glen Jean, W.Va.

Most of them, as others in neighborhood women's movement, meet around nothing more elegant than the kitchen table. They raise funds via cake sales, door-to-door sales and even bingo games.

Their social activities trend to church basements and feature ethnic dishes that at a given event can include Chinese, Spanish, German, Polish, Slovak Italian dishes.

Said another way, the menu might read — kielbasa, sauerkraut, chicken chow mein, rigitoni, southern fried chicken, sweetpotato pie, taboulleh (middle eastern salad).

"The neighborhoods these women live in are the original melting pots," said Rochelle Wyner, public information director of NCNW, "and have been for several generations. And it is as important to them to keep the ethnic foods on line as it is to keep their roots alive.

"The only thing we seem to agree on is what's for dessert. Usually it is a cake with gooey frosting, topped by lots of sugary flowers."

The "neighborhood women" set up daycare for kids of working mothers, shelters for battered wives, programs for ex-offenders and senior citizens.

They battle movies, magazines and entertainment that offends their value structure.

"They fight against what hurts their neighborhood and for whatever the neighborhood needs to improve the quality of life for all kinds of persons," Mrs. Wyner said.

Formed in 1975, the NCNW, based in Brooklyn, N.Y., is trying to build a network that will provide information support, recognition, and technical assistance for low and moderate income women working to improve the quality of life for themselves, their families and their neighbors.

"We feel proud and strong about ourselves and our abilities," Mrs. Wyner, who is from Brooklyn. "But often we feel alone and discouraged. Sometimes we feel our voices will never be heard. That is why we are formed in a growing network of women like ourselves.

"With that, we can exchange skills and experiences. And get change going better — without changing abandoning the existing value structure."

Simple, Tailored Lines Suited For Women Seeking Success

Success dressing — just what does it mean to women in Lubbock?

Simple, tailored lines always have been sought after, but now results are happening with women who choose professional looking clothes. They are being taken seriously on the job — a big problem for many women — and they are moving up faster in their fields.

Success dressing does not mean bleak starkness, especially not in West Texas. It means choosing a wardrobe rich in quality and workmanship. It means looking like you take your clothes as seriously as you take your job.

Men discovered this tip many years ago and use it to its full potential. Men's fashions are usually tailored and classic, don't change with fashion, and wear better longer. Investment dressing is something men take for granted.

The well-tailored suit or blazer is what a woman should build her wardrobe around. Many types of suits are available, but classic skirts and lined blazers are the best choices. Too many slits or low-cut blouses, and a woman is noticed more for her figure than her job qualities.

Neutral colors such as camel, gray, black or white are good choices for investment dressing. Not only do the colors stay in style year-round, they also are easy to co-ordinate with blouses and pants.

Blouses also are best with small collars, string ties, or bows. Ruffles and lots of lace add a "little girl" look that career-minded women usually avoid. However, a handkerchief edged with a small bit of lace can add the touch of femininity to an otherwise stern suit.

Most businesswomen want to stay in fashion at the same time they are planning an investment wardrobe, and this can be done several ways. Instead of purchasing loud, bright colors or dolman sleeve jackets, a professional wardrobe can center around different textures and fabrics. Smooth fabrics such as silk can be a beautiful addition in the form of a blouse or two, and a pure linen or pure wool suit can be another fashionable part of the entire wardrobe. Shoes with a flattering t-strap or sling-backs can add the touch some women are looking for. A pure leather or well-made purse always makes a woman feel stylish.

Stylish elegance is what professional women seek, and this can be accomplished with investment dressing. Although some women don't realize it, their job capabilities are sometimes judged by the clothes they wear. Not only can success dressing pay off in the pocketbook, but also in the career.

Official Emphasizes Importance Of MX Missile

Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Minuteman missile force is a viable deterrent to Soviet aggression, but the United States still needs the multi-billion dollar MX Missile System, according to the Chief of Staff of the Ballistic Missile Office at California's Norton Air Force Base.

Col. Lawrence B. Molnar also told members of the Lubbock Chapter of the Air Force Association at Reese Air Force Base Thursday night that under the Reagan administration, the Department of Defense and Air Force will be allocated billions of dollars for MX Missile deployment although cost is a major factor in the military's preference for Nevada and Utah basing.

Molnar said the Minuteman is an expensive system, already consuming $30 billion tax dollars, but if the United States is to feel secure against the threat of Soviet aggression, three times that amount will have to be spent on the MX Missile System.

"The Minuteman has excluded the Russians from even thinking of using nuclear force," Molnar said. "They can't beat our force as it exists. They can strike at it, but it will survive. Then it will deliver a fatal blow."

Yet the missile expert also said the MX system, with its 4,600 shelters, is "absolutely necessary" to this country's defense.

"One thousand missiles need to survive a first strike if we are to succeed (in staving off an enemy nuclear attack)," he said. "With 4,600 shelters and the enemy never knowing for sure where any of the 200 missiles are at one time, they'll be forced to build that many missiles to knock out our entire system."

Molnar also explained the Air Force's preference for deploying the entire system in Nevada and Utah, asserting that those two states contain large tracts of public land which would prevent removal of acres of private agricultural land from Texas and New Mexico, the states listed second on the department's priority list.

"But you know we have to go to the Congress to get the right to withdrawal on this public land, and even then it's not over," Molnar said. "We have to go back to Congress every 20 years to ask if we can continue using the land."

The Air Force official said that to split base the system would cost the American taxpayers millions of extra dollars, but indicated that cash is no problem where the nation's defense is concerned.

"This year, we're budgeted in excess of $3 billion," he said. "What does that mean? It means that if you stop the program right now, we've already spent $3 billion this year. It's expensive, but it's necessary."

Molnar said the Air Force's deployment location preference might be precluded by opposition of some 30 citizens groups in the states who "bitterly" oppose it.

"But there's a lot less emotion in what they (opposing citizens) are doing in Texas and New Mexico," he said. "I don't mean to be derogatory to the citizens in Nevada and Utah, but there's a lot less discipline there.

"We've seen some very rational letters written in opposition to the MX, like here's why I don't like the system, and the reasons are listed," he said. "But then you have the ones who call us warmongers and the like. We can't be expected to write back these people and explain things to people who have gotten off on the deep end."

Lubbock Courts Hit By More Jury Trials

By MARC FLAKE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The city may need to hire some part-time judges to free up the two full-time Municipal Court judges because of an increase in jury trials, according to discussion in a City Council work session Thursday.

The council heard a progress report on the insitution of the Municipal Court of Record, established last spring, by Chief Judge Cecil Puryear.

The court of record was expected to reduce substantially the number of appeals to county court by requiring those appeals to list errors in law during municipal hearings.

That expectation has been fulfilled, with the number of appeals dropping from about 1,000 per month to approximately one per month, Finance Director Robert Massengale told council members at the work session.

However, the unexpected development of a substantial increase in jury trials has created a backlog of cases and less citations are being issued because police officers are spending more time in court.

The number of jury trials has increased 57 percent, Massengale said, and the number of jury trial requests is up 179 percent. Also, the jury docket has increased from 56 before the change to 1,530 after, he said.

"The (municipal) court is now taken more seriously," he said. "Appeals to county court are almost non-existent."

But because police officers are spending more time being witnesses for jury trials, they are not out on the streets giving citations, he pointed out.

Before the change, there was only a 5 percent backlog of pending citations, Massengale said. Now, however, there is an 18 percent of back-logged citations.

Puryear said he had thought that the court of record system would be briefly tested and then jury trials would fall off, but the decrease has not occurred.

"We have different people in our city," he said. "They are more interested in fighting these cases than in other cities.

"Lubbock is growing and we're hearing more cases per capita than other cities," he added.

The council should begin considering expanding the municipal court and adding some part-time judges to hear non-jury trial cases, Puryear suggested.

That way, the full time judges could concentrate more on handling the increasing number of jury trials, he said.

Other recommendations by Puryear and Massengale call for municipal court concentration to be on following up pending citiations and the improvement of the data processing system.

In other business, the council made one change in the proposed General Revenue Sharing budget before approving it Thursday afternoon.

The assessment paving program lost $5,000 to a project to restore the lighting in the Civic Center's indoor fountain.

Other requests, including funding for a Red Cross canteen van, funding for two administrative positions at the Auxilio Youth Drug Abuse Center and additional requests for Civic Center funding were turned down by the council after a one-hour work session conducted following the budget public hearing.

Council members said they thought the Red Cross and Auxilio Center are worthwhile projects, but said governmental funds should not be used by private groups.

Bull Riders Dominate Action In ABC Rodeo

Dave Appleton of Snyder put in the wildest ride of the bareback competition to earn a 78 from the judges, followed by Scott Davis of Lubbock with 66, J.C. Trujillo of Steamboat Springs, Colo., with 64, Bruce Frans of Nampa, Iowa, with 58 and Randy Davis of Lubbock with 56.

High score posted in saddle bronc competition was a 75 earned by Joe Spearman of Greenville in a head-popping ride on the hurricane deck of a bronc called The Saint. Jerry Daniels of Farmers Branch and Bob Wilfong of Andrews tied for second high with 68. Dennis Reiners of Scottsdale, Ariz., posted a 66 and C.J. Rogers earned a 67.

Jim Fuller of Valley Mills roped and wrapped his calf in 19.1 seconds, topping a field of only four out of the total 12 getting times on the Thursday scoreboard. Others were Dick Carroll of La Junta, Colo., with 13.1, James Owens of Sheffield with 19.5 and Jim Cade of Sonora with 21.8.

Three steer wrestlers pegged their steers, Greg Mindemann of Apache, Okla., in 7.7 seconds, Delbert Davis of Hereford in 7.8 and Larry Kephart of Lawton, Okla., in 9.2.

In a less tiring, but no less crowd pleasing, event Bob Smitheson and Tom McCrummen tied first and second in the "Most Becoming" division, while Buddy Abney took first and Bruce Skaggs and Bill Sparks tied for second in the "Anything Goes" category.

Tickets for the rodeo, which benefits the capital improvement fund of Lubbock Boy's Clubs, are $5 for general admission and $7 for reserved seats.

ABC Champions, 1981, will be named at the Saturday finale when a record money pie of more than $24,000 is sliced for the toprunners.

Tech Student Earns Chemistry Award

Paul G. Hipes, a student at Texas Tech University, was named one of 21 honorees for 1980-1981 by The Texas Institute of Chemists.

Each year the TIC — the state chapter of The American Institute of Chemists — receives nominations from the faculty of each in Texas, and honors those chosen with a reception, banquet and award.

This year's ceremony will be held in the Summit Club in Houston on April 10. Presenting the awards will be Dr. Paul Peurifoy of Shell Development Co., also president of the TIC.

Murder Suspect Gets Bond Cut

The $100,000 bond originally set for murder suspect Jesse Nerios was reduced to $12,500 by Judge William Shaver Thursday after a hearing in which local law enforcement officers testified they took Nerios into custody in Florida, where he apparently had run to escape prosecution.

Nerios is charged with the early Sept. 21, 1980, shooting death of 20-year-old Mary Alice Alvarado. The woman was struck by a bullet apparently meant for someone alse outside the El Fronteriso Club on the Tahoka Highway.

The woman was apparently a bystander and not involved in the gunplay.

Nerios' younger brother first was charged with the crime, but when a witness to the shooting identified the elder brother as the man who had participated in the gunfire outside the club, that charge was dropped.

Nerios' attorney, Tom Cannon, had requested in his motion for reduced bond that Nerios' bond be set at $7,500.

needs an ego boost or perhaps is celebrating a special day such as a birthday is seated in front of the class. Each classmate then must pass by and say something complimentary about the student in the place of honor.

"In five minutes a child who has had such a bad day is just beaming," Mrs. Thomas said. Her students "beg" to play the game, she added. She admitted that students are reluctant at first or embarrassed and may not be particularly sincere about their comments. "But with practice and with thinking, they get over that," Mrs. Thomas said. "Eventually they begin to mean it."

"If they start out thinking positive, they'll say something positive," Mrs. Samples added.

Sometimes students and teachers play a game where they take turns telling the class something personal about themselves. The exercise is strictly voluntary, however, and students are not pushed to open up. Teachers say the game has made students aware that their instructors are human too.

"It's important to introduce ourselves. It's important we share something personal with them," said another Hardwick third grade teacher, Jimmy Day.

And when the students are aware teachers have problems too, they understand and accept their elders more, Mrs. Thomas reported. "If you make mistakes or you're not feeling well, if you stop and tell them, they accept and understand it."

Aware aids youngsters in understanding their own and others' feelings too, participants said. "We let them understand it's all right to be angry," Mrs. Samples explained. "We all feel sad or frustrated sometimes. But we help them to deal with things in a positive kind of way. We give them constructive ways to cope with anger."

"A lot of people act up because they feel bad about themselves," said Georgia Smith, Hardwick counselor. So in dealing with a behavior problem, "We let them (students) know it's the behavior that's bad, not the person," Mrs. Samples said. "We're appealing to their better nature."

The two Hardwick elementary instructors reported their students get along better and that they were successful in turning around the behavior of even the most recalcitrant of youngsters. Still they admit, the strategy is not infallible. "If the problem continues," Mrs. Thomas said, "they have to suffer some consequences. But they have to realize it's their problem."

She said she often takes the approach of praising good behavior rather than coming down on misbehavior.

The instructors also spoke about success in instilling empathy in their students for their classmates with problems. As a result, they said, youngsters who once kidded a peer about her wheelchair-bound father now want to "help" her and another youngster trying to adjust to the fact she was adopted has the backing of the whole class.

While the Aware program might appear to take up some valuable teaching time, participants claim it does not detract from their instruction in the basic subjects. The strategy is "fused into" the entire curriculum, they explained.

"It's a total teaching philosophy," said Mrs. Thomas. "It's the way I walk into class, the way I check role, what I say to each child," she said, adding that she would never skimp on instruction in reading, math and writing.

Aware, said Mrs. Samples, enhances rather than takes away from the basics. She said she hopes the program eventually can be implemented in all of the schools.

County Demands Bond Payments

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

County officials put local bail bondsmen on notice Thursday that they will either have to pay up all their outstanding bond forfeitures or run the risk of losing their licenses in the next 60 days.

Representatives of seven local bonding companies met with the county's Bail Bond Board Thursday afternoon to review the status of more than $640,000 in bond forfeitures called here in the past four years.

That review was ordered by Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford a month ago as part of the board's new tougher policy on bail bond forfeitures. Montford serves as chairman of the five-member board.

An article published in The Avalanche-Journal Feb. 15 noted that the county had collected less than $4,000 on bond forfeitures in the past two years.

Yvonne Faulks, chief of the civil division for the CDA, informed board members Thursday that about $221,400 of the bond forfeitures are on bonds held by companies still in business here.

Another $256,300 in bond forfeitures are against bondsmen no longer doing business in Lubbock, Mrs. Faulks reported. In addition, she noted, about $165,820 in personal recognizance bonds or out-of-county bonds have been forfeited here.

According to Mrs. Faulks, the forfeiture proceedings on $35,350 in bonds held by currently licensed bondsmen already are final. And the rest of the forfeitures will be final within a short time, she said.

Montford emphasized the need for the board to be fair with the bonding companies. However, he added, the bondsmen will be expected to pay on all forfeitures when they become final.

To put some teeth in the stricter policy, board members voted unanimously to give the bondsmen 30 days to make payments on their forfeitures.

If no payment has been received at the end of that period, the new policy calls for a bondsman to be notified that a hearing will be held to determine if his license should be suspended. The hearing will be scheduled within 30 days after a forfeiture becomes final.

Board members also adopted a tougher attitude on defunct bonding companies that failed to pay the county for any outstanding forfeitures.

The board agreed to collect a portion of the bond forfeitures owed the county by three former bondsmen from cash deposits made by those bondsmen and held by the district clerk.

Adds To Treasury

Cashing in those deposits will bring about $11,350 into the county's treasury. Montford said he expected the money to be turned over to the county before the end of the month.

One former bondsmen had provided a deed of trust on his property to cover bonds he wrote. The board voted to obtain a writ of execution to begin foreclosure procedures on that property.

However, the board will have a tougher time collecting from another former bondsmen who left Lubbock owing the county around $64,200 in bond forfeitures.

Under a former policy, the bondsmen was allowed to obtain his license by purchasing a certificate of deposit in his own name, with the agreement the CD would be assigned to the bail bond board. But the bank holding the note was never told of the assignment to the board.

The board requested an investigation to locate the missing bondsmen.

Board members also agreed to "be just as tough" on individuals who forfeit personal recognizance bonds as they will be on bonding companies.

Mrs. Faulks noted that action already has been taken on a $100,000 personal bond forfeited by Vaso V. Mraovic, a Chicago man convicted of hiring a "hit man" to kill a local restaurant owner.

The county has collected on the $10,000 cash deposit Mraovic put up when he signed the bond, Mrs. Faulks said. She noted that county officials also have the option to levy on property Mraovic owned in Illinois.

Board members decided to file for writs of execution to begin levying against the property or cash deposits put up for other personal recognizance bonds.

County Judge Rod Shaw, also a member of the bail bond board, complimented Montford and his staff for "the aggressive attention" currently being given bond forfeiture cases.

Some members of the commissioners court earlier had been concerned that little effort was made in the past to collect on forfeitures.

Montford announced his new get-tough policy at the board's February meeting. At Thursday's meeting, Montford assured board members and bondsmen that "the policy will be consistent."

Sewing Contest Winners Named

Held in conjunction with Agricultural Awareness-Appreciation Week at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, the contest featured 68 contestants modeling clothing they had sewn within the past three months. Garments were made of cotton, wool or mohair.

Adult division winners were Ruth Hargrave of Lubbock, first place; Candy Creel of Lubbock, second, and Regina Henley of Childress, third. Teen division winners were Melissa Gholson of Pecos, first; Nancy Castator of Lubbock, second, and Jamie Franks of Lubbock, third. Young teen winners were Gaye Preston of Wolfforth, first; Sharla Blay of Brownfield, second, and Shelly Sain of Muleshoe, third.

Contestants modeled dresses, sportswear and suits. Accessories were added to complete the appearance. Entries were judged on construction, compatability of fabric and design, creativity, overall appearance, poise and fashion.

Atlanta Police Discount Suspect In Child Deaths

ATLANTA (AP) — As Atlanta authorities discounted the possibility that a man arrested in New York might be linked to the killings and disappearances of 22 black children here, the director of the FBI said the agency has "three or four suspects" in some of the cases.

But FBI Director William Webster said in Washington Thursday that the agency doesn't have a suspect in the several killings that are believed to be related. He said the killings in which the FBI has suspects "are not part of the main string" of murders.

An FBI spokesman said there was not enough evidence on the suspects to present to a federal or state grand jury for indictments.

Authorities in Atlanta said meanwhile that the discovery of similar dog hairs on the bodies of three of the 20 children found slain here over the past 20 months does not by itself indicate that the three were killed by the same person.

But the dog hairs — like the fibrous material reportedly found on the bodies of seven of the slain children — could turn out to be significant in linking some of the slayings once a suspect is arrested, authorities said.

In Poughkeepsie, N.Y., a New York City man arrested Sunday in the alleged abduction of a 9-year-old black boy has refused to answer questions posed by FBI agents investigating the Atlanta slayings on the advice of his lawyer.

Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said the special task force investigating the slayings does not consider the man, Frankie Edmonds, 32, of New York City, a suspect in any of the cases. He said no task force members were being sent to New York to question Edmonds and his arrest was being treated as just "another lead."

Webster said Thursday that there were "lines of coincidence" between the Atlanta killings and Edmonds, a former mental patient, but it was too early to "give a strong comment" on the Edmonds arrest.

Friends and relatives of Edmonds, who is black, however, denied that he was connected in any way to the murders.

The New York Daily News first reported the discovery of the dog hairs on Thursday, but medical examiners in the Atlanta area downplayed the report, with one saying that "the weight being given to the animal hairs right now is totally out of proportion with the evidence."

Fulton County Medical Examiner Robert Stivers said Thursday there would be no way to determine if the hairs came from the same dog unless they were markedly distinctive.

"If they're lacking a unique feature, the best we can do is say they appear to be similar," Stivers said. "You can't really match them in a legal sense."

DeKalb County Medical Examiner Joe Burton said individual bits of evidence recovered from the bodies don't have much meaning alone.

"It is the compilation of bits of evidence that have similar origins that will tend to give credence to a theory that can link the cases," he said. "But not in any of these cases do we have evidence that will stand alone" to obtain a court conviction.

In other developments Thursday:

— The Atlanta Journal published a detailed account of the $2.4 million in cash and pledges that have poured into Atlanta. The Journal said that public agencies and private citizens have given the city of Atlanta $720,265 in cash and almost $1.6 million in pledges.

In addition, five private agencies have collected more than $56,000 to aid the victims' families and offset expenses for the weekend volunteer searches which have been conducted since October.

The city has established five separate funds to help pay for the Atlanta Police Bureau's investigation, a $100,000 reward, consultant fees, a summer program for children and burial expenses for the victims, the Journal reported.

In addition to the $720,265 in cash collected so far, the city has promises of $1.5 million from the Reagan administration and $72,500 in private donations for the reward fund.

— Camille Bell, mother of one of the victims and head of the Committee To Stop Children's Murders, called a news conference to deny that mothers have profited from their children's deaths.

Deputies Uncover Third Body At Homesite Of Sex Offender

WEEKI WACHEE, Fla. (UPI) — Deputies using trowels and paint brushes and digging with the care of archaeologists worked to exhume a skeleton from a rural homesite where two other bodies have been discovered in shallow graves.

Searchers Thursday uncovered the skull, leg bone and foot of a skeleton on the property of William Mansfield, a convicted sex offender whose two sons face rape and murder charges in California.

Hernando County Sheriff's Maj. C.E. Crosby said the skeleton, apparently of an adult, appeared to have been in the ground several years.

"We anticipate finding between four and six bodies before we're finished digging," Crosby said. "We do have three bodies and I expect we will be digging for two or three more weeks."

The first skeleton, found March 17, is believed to be that of a teen-age female. It has been sent to Florida State University where forensic anthropologists will determine the age, sex and race of the victim.

It was found after deputies armed with a search warrant began digging on the litter-strewn five-acre homesite of Mansfield, 56, who was sentenced to 30 years in prison in November for sex crimes.

The search warrant did not name Mansfield, but instead named his son Billy, 25, as a suspect in the disappearance Dec. 31, 1975, of Elaine Ziegler, 15, of Warren, Ohio. She disappeared from a nearby campgrounds.

Billy is in jail in Santa Cruz, Calif., awaiting trial on charges of raping and murdering a 30-year-old woman Dec. 7. His brother Gary, 23, is jailed as an accessory.

Crosby said Billy is the "prime suspect and the only person named on the warrant."

"I can't say that Mansfield (the father) is a suspect at the time, although he could develop into one," Crosby said.

No charges can be filed until the skeletons have been identified.

Officers had believed the first skeleton to be that of Miss Ziegler but that was ruled out after a check of dental records.

Oil Donations For Redecorating Draw Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is coming under fire for accepting $270,000 from oilmen to redecorate the White House. A consumer critic called the money "gratuities for services rendered," and a congresswoman said the tax-deductible donations may end up costing the government almost three times the $50,000 federal stipend turned down by first lady Nancy Reagan.

"The taxpayers are being taken to the cleaners," Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., complained Thursday. "If the oil donors are in the 50 percent (tax) bracket, and they're probably in higher ones than that, it could cost the government $130,000 in lost revenues."

The White House announced last month that President and Mrs. Reagan were declining $50,000 appropriated by Congress to refurbish the family living quarters and would finance the project instead with private contributions.

"It's more appropriate to do this with private funds, and to do it properly is going to cost more than $50,000," Sheila Patton, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said at the time.

The fund-raising drive brought in more than $735,000 — almost quadruple Mrs. Reagan's original $200,000 goal — including $270,000 in donations ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 from 23 individuals with oil interests.

Consumer representatives and some members of Congress assailed the Reagan White House on Thursday for accepting donations from the oilmen just a month after the president removed price controls on domestic oil.

Former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox said the fund raising "shows a surprising insensitivity to the danger of mixing money and politics." Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., called the oil-connected donations "as blatant a presidential conflict of interest as I can recall in the more than 20 years I've been in Congress."

Peter McCoy, Mrs. Reagan's chief of staff, has said the donors "have absolutely no political interest, no political motives." Moreover, he said, the Reagans were unaware of the fund-raising drive among oil interests.

Some contributors said they were showing appreciation for the president's policies, particularly those favorable to the oil industry.

Miss Schroeder noted that Reagan's budget cutting is leaving 31 displaced homemaker programs without money as of this weekend.

"It only costs $1 million," Miss Schroeder said of the programs, which help middle-age women who after years of homemaking find they have no employable skills. "Why don't they have a fund-raising drive for that."

Cox, now chairman of the citizens' lobby Common Cause, said: "The White House belongs to all the people and should be refurbished by all the people, not just representatives of a select special interest."

Congress Approves Dairy Subsidy Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress handed the Reagan administration its first big victory on spending cuts today, completing action on a bill to eliminate a scheduled April 1 increase in dairy subsidies.

By voice vote and with no debate, the Senate approved the measure that passed the House on Thursday. That sent the bill to the White House for President Reagan's signature.

The measure passed by the Senate today was shorn of the largely symbolic riders, which had been attached when the Senate initially approved the bill Wednesday. Those riders expressed displeasure with a continued embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union.

Administration officials estimate the bill will save $147 million this year. It represents the new administration's first solid achievement in its drive to hold down federal spending.

There were protests Thursday from House members representing dairy-producing districts, but after less than two hours' debate the measure was approved without a roll call.

Critics said farmers were being forced to bear an unfair burden in the fight against inflation.

But Rep. Thomas E. Petri, R-Wis., said he supported the bill despite its impact on farmers from his state. "We have to look at the bigger picture," he said. "The farmer is the first whose ox is being gored."

Petri added that he hoped other "sacred cows" such as tobacco subsidies and federal aid to cities also would be cut back this year to reduce government spending.

Rep. Steve Gunderson, R-Wis., said the bill was unfair and would fail to cut dairy product surpluses, which the government is committed to buy under the price support program.

The administration said eliminating the April 1 increase in dairy product subsidies would save the government an estimated $147 million, and also would spare consumers from paying an extra 7½ cents for a gallon of milk.

Brother Claims Racial Motive In Hanging

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Police offered no motive for the slaying of a black teen-ager found hanging from an elm tree, but the victim's brother says he may have been mistaken for another black youth who was dating a white girl.

The body of Michael Donald, 19, was found last Saturday hanging from a tree in a racially mixed neighborhood. A noose of plastic rope was slung around his neck, but an autopsy revealed he had been beaten and strangled before being strung to the elm tree.

Three white men — Ralph Hayes, 23, Jimmy Edgar, 22, and his brother Johnny Edgar, 26 — have each been charged with murder. Hayes, who lived across the street from the hanging tree, and the younger Edgar have criminal records.

A bond hearing for the suspects was set for today in Mobile District Court before Judge James Sullivan.

"We have been told he might have been mistaken for somebody he worked with that was dating a white woman," said the victim's brother, Stanley Donald, of Biloxi, Miss. "We don't know and the police won't tell us anything."

Both police and Mobile County District Attorney Chris Galanos have dismissed as "speculative" the mistaken identity theory, but they offered no other motive in the slaying.

Boundaries Of Sunbelt Vague

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — You might think that a geographical area so large — at least a third of the entire United States land area — would be easy to find. But it isn't. Where in the world is the Sunbelt?

It is coast to coast below the 37th parallel, according to a popular definition, but others exclude Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. Sometimes northern California is included, sometimes it isn't.

The boundaries are important, because Sunbelt statistics are used today in dozens of ways — to show population mobility, political power shifts, industrial growth, energy-efficient homesites ...

But the boundaries are vague. So vague are they that the situation constitutes one of the more distressing problems of statistics, a field already plagued by its own inadequacies and inconsistencies.

How do you measure the population, the industrial power, the income, the growth of an undefined area? Do you measure the Sunbelt by land area? Or by some other measure, such as hours of sunshine?

Bradley Rice, who teaches at Clayton Junior College, in Atlanta, ran into the problem when co-editing an anthology of articles about Sunbelt cities, to be published by the University of Texas Press.

Is St. Louis a Sunbelt city? "Anyone who has wintered in St. Louis ... would question its inclusion," he writes in American Demographics, a monthly magazine. Is Baltimore? Lexington, Ky.?

He found curiosities. The Census Bureau, for example, includes Delaware with Florida in its South Atlantic Division. Does that make Delaware, which adjoins New Jersey, a member of the Sunbelt group?

The Population Reference Bureau, a distinquished organization, lists Missouri as in. Fortune magazine put Virginia in but split California along county lines near Fresno. Sales and Marketing Management magazine published a map that included all of California but excluded Virginia.

Rice's curiosity grew. He found that in a book on the Sunbelt, two economists, Robert Firestine and Bernard Weinstein, omitted northern California and southern Nevada but included Virginia, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

He found a professor, Carl Abbott, who would include as "Sunbelt" only those areas of rapid population growth. The professor would exclude Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, while conferring Sunbelt status on Denver, Norfolk and Seattle.

Kirkpatrick Sale, author of "Power Shift: The Rise of the Southern Rim and Its Challenge to the Eastern Establishment," defined the Sunbelt as "the boundary line which runs along the northern edges of North Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona — or generally the 37th parallel."

But, while the 37th parallel tends to follow state lines, it cuts through California and Nevada. Thus, Rice points out in American Demographics, "Las Vegas is in, but Reno is out." Sale then creates a bit of a problem by including San Francisco.

Rice's own definition, a sort of cartographic approach, may still contain problems.

"My own research leads me to conclude that the best definition ... omits the San Francisco Bay area and roughly follows the 37th parallel ... from Southern California to North Carolina," he writes.

But this demands a decision involving which California and Nevada counties to include. He resolves it this way:

In Nevada, only Clark County, with Las Vegas as its center, should be included. "In California, the upper boundaries of San Bernardino, Kern and San Louis Obispo counties form a straight line that runs across the state. All counties below the line are Sunbelt, all above are not."

Novelist Reveals Recruitment By Communists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Novelist Michael Whitney Straight, deputy chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts in the Nixon administration, says he was recruited to spy for the Soviet Union in the 1930s but was dropped by the Russians after he provided useless essays.

Straight, who says the episode began when he was a student in England, went public with his story this week amid disclosures about espionage in the upper ranks of British intelligence.

It was his information, Straight says, that exposed Sir Anthony Blunt, keeper of Britain's royal art collection, as a longtime Soviet agent.

As a New Deal speechwriter in the Interior Department, Straight says, he gave about eight written political appraisals over 1½ years "to a man who called himself Mr. Green" after being pressed into Soviet service in 1937 when he was a student at Cambridge University in England.

The essays contained no government secrets, he says, and he never knew who "Mr. Green" was.

He said he was not paid and believes he violated no law.

"I have great remorse about it," he says. "But I don't think it either served the Russians or damaged the United States."

Straight, a former editor of the New Republic magazine, described his recruitment to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, whom he knew socially, in October 1963 when he was a candidate for a government post. It was then, he says, that he blew Blunt's cover.

Straight told his story after it started to emerge in England, where the London Daily Mail is carrying articles on Soviet infiltration of British intelligence.

The articles, by defense correspondent Chapman Pincher, described Straight's role but did not name him. A companion article in Wednesday's editions by Washington correspondent Angus Macpherson did identify Straight. It was not immediately known if Straight was aware of the Macpherson article when interviewed but he did say he believed his role was bound to come out.

Straight, 64, is a writer and editor who lives in the Washington suburb of Bethesda, Md. Independently wealthy, he is the son of diplomat Willard Straight, who died in World War II, and the brother of actress Beatrice Straight.

He was editor of New Republic from 1941-43 and again, after service in the Army Air Corps, from 1946-56.

This is Straight's account of how, at age 20, he happened to be recruited by the communists.

The cast includes Guy Burgess, the British civil servant whose defection to the Soviet Union in 1951 led to the disclosure of a celebrated spy ring whose other members were Donald Maclean and Kim Philby.

In November 1979, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher informed the House of Commons that Blunt had been the fourth member of the Burgess-Maclean ring. After "new information" was received, she said, Blunt confessed in 1964, was granted immunity from prosecution and was allowed to continue working for the queen with his past shielded so he could cooperate in other investigations.

Straight said he provided the information about Blunt after President John F. Kennedy offered him the job as chairman of the arts endowment.

"This led me suddenly to realize that I couldn't accept any public service without informing the government of my story," he said.

After talking with Robert Kennedy, he told the FBI about his past: While he was at Cambridge University in England studying economics under John Maynard Keynes, his best friend was killed fighting in the Spanish civil war against the Nazi-backed forces led by Francisco Franco.

Blunt, then an art professor, "came to me and said that because of the death of my friend it was up to me to make a similar sacrifice and give up my life in going underground to provide information for what they called 'the International.'"

"They wanted me to go back to America and become a banker for J.P. Morgan & Co., where my father had been a partner, in the belief that from this citadel of Wall Street I could provide them with inside appraisals of the intentions of the capitalist enemy, I suppose.

"They trapped me (emotionally). Under those circumstances I felt that I had to work my own way out. It took me a couple of years to get out."

Straight said he attended communist meetings as a student. He said he was a fellow traveler, but not a communist, motivated more by a hatred of Nazi Germany than by sympathy for communism.

In 1948, he said, he returned to England to attend a meeting of the Apostles, a club of intellectuals, and Blunt and Burgess were there. They were afraid Straight might expose them.

The next day "we had a very stormy meeting," Straight said. Blunt was working in art, and Straight dismissed him as useless to the communists, but Burgess — "an unprincipled, amoral vagabond" — was working in the Foreign Office.

"So I told him that unless he got out I would turn him in."

Straight next ran into Burgess in Washington in 1951 and was furious to learn that he was still in the British government "in a position to pass on secrets involving lives in the Korean War." Again, Straight said, he threatened to expose him; again, Burgess promised to quit.

Informed by the FBI, British investigators confronted Blunt, who denied the accusations against him. Straight was told of the denial. He told the FBI, "I'd be happy to go to England and meet Blunt and confront him personally and I'd be willing to go to court and state it publicly."

New Scandal Raises Ghosts Of Traitors

LONDON (AP) — The report this week that the former head of the British counter-espionage agency, the late Sir Roger Hollis, was suspected of being a Soviet agent has raised the ghosts of a line of highly-placed traitors who have haunted Britain since World War II.

The seeds of their treachery were sown nearly 50 years ago in the hallowed cloisters and quadrangles of Britain's two most prestigious universities, Cambridge and Oxford.

Soviet spymasters, seeking recruits among Britons after security authorities rolled up their network of Russian agents in the 1920s, established their first cell in Cambridge in the summer of 1931.

It was made up of a group of brilliant, politically disillusioned young men who became a generation of traitors. These young idealists infiltrated the upper echelons of British Intelligence, then run by the "old boy" network, and the class-conscious governing Establishment.

One, Anthony Blunt, exposed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in November 1979 as a longtime Soviet agent, wormed his way into the royal household as Queen Elizabeth II's art historian.

Moscow took advantage of the young, well-connected undergraduates' bitterness about the collapse of Britain's first Labor government in the economic catastrophe of 1931 and the hunger of 2 million unemployed. For them, the Soviet Union was the socialist panacea and, amid Britain's policy of appeasement, the only hope of combating fascism.

Two key figures emerged. One was Samuel Cahan, the Kremlin's top man in Britain before the war, who spun the web of well-placed agents.

The other was Blunt, a Cambridge tutor who helped Cahan recruit and worked with MI-5, the counter-intelligence agency, during and after the war.

The 1930s recruits included Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, two members of the diplomatic service who defected in 1951 as British agents were closing in on Maclean. Blunt is believed to have warned Burgess to flee also and to have arranged their escape.

Another was Harold "Kim" Philby, who became a key figure in MI-6, the wide-ranging British secret service, and worked closedly with U.S. Intelligence. He sat out the crackdown following the defection of Burgess and Maclean but fled to Moscow in 1963 after being warned that his cover had been blown.

Burgess died in Moscow. Maclean and Philby are still there.

Blunt, Burgess and Maclean were also linked by their homosexuality.

One of their Oxford contemporaries was the admitted homosexual Tom Driberg, a senior Labor Party official and member of Parliament who died in 1976. Veteran defense reporter Chapman Pincher, who touched off the latest scandal this week with the report that Hollis had been suspected of being a double agent, reported Driberg worked secretly for both the Soviet KGB and MI-5 and that both knew it.

Hollis was an Oxford man who joined MI-5 before World War II and became its director-general for nine years. There has been no intimation that he was homosexual, but he had an affair for 18 years with his secretary and married her after he retired and divorced his wife. He died in 1973.

Blunt, who some intelligence sources believe was the linchpin in the whole network he helped set up, was uncovered in 1963 after U.S. Intelligence sources identified him as a traitor.

Andrew Boyle, whose book "The Climate of Treason" led to Blunt's public exposure 16 years later, believes that at least two other prominent members of the Cambridge set were Soviet agents during the crucial Cold War period.

Home Part Of American Dream

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Smithsonian News Service

The single-family house, some maintain, is as obsolete as that other erstwhile icon of American life: the tail-finned, chrome-plated, mini-mileage gas guzzler.

Yet never before has anything considered so culturally dated been in more demand, more expensive or a better investment. Despite soaring mortgage rates and operating costs, the old home place is still a bulwark of the American dream, albeit one now in reach of only about 15 percent of potential homebuyers.

A related reason for this demand, says architect Warren Cox, moderator of a recent Smithsonian Resident Associate lecture series on the look, history and problems facing the American house, comes down to this fact of life: The home — like the inhabitant's dog — is often a tangible reflection of the class, culture, aspirations and, not infrequently, the actual appearance of the residents themselves.

What do these "residents" look like today? And how are they changing to cope with the economic realities predicted to become even more severe during the 1980s?

At the moment, the house coming off the architect's drawing boards is a structure that is fresh and contemporary, yet garbed with traditional architectural elements. It is a product of the modern design concepts of the 20th century — flat, geometric exteriors and open, spacious interior planning — but with references to the past — perhaps shingles, classical columns or barnsiding.

"The eclectic tradition of earlier periods, discarded for several decades, is reviving now," award-winning architect Robert Stern of New York says. "Architects are again turning to the past for inspiration."

To a great extent, though, this describes the "architect's house," one custom-designed for a client able to afford a bit of experimentation, one where innovation flourishes because the penalty for failure is small.

Other homes, of course, are on the market. And today, it seems, architecture is in a period of pluralism not seen since the Victorian age. There are solar-designed houses whose functional requirements dictate their appearances. There is a new interest in earth-sheltered houses. There are houses with built-in whimsy that spoofs earlier architectural periods. And there are the mass-produced houses spreading across the landscape, some of them praised for their design "honesty" and others condemned for their "misuse" of materials and architectural styles.

This diversity, however, comes at a time when architecture and homebuilding are in the midst of crisis, the outcome of which is going to affect the way Americans live in future years. Just as the house of the 19th century reflected the lifestyles of that period with such features as cellars for food storage, verandas for summer nights and dining rooms to accommodate large families, today's economic realities are dictating the look of contemporary homes.

Because of inflation, high interest rates and energy costs, the trend is now toward smaller houses, way down from the 2,000-3,000 square feet of the 1950s; and once again, generations of families are sharing the same home, says Charles Moore, former chairman of the Yale Schools of Architecture.

"The problem of affordability is our biggest problem," West Coast builder Robert Fisher agrees. "We are now seeing two unrelated families buying houses together, and in San Francisco, we are taking units and dividing them in half."

"Large picture windows are no more," Fisher says. The windows now going into houes are carefully considered for function and location. For example, passive solar systems, so simple in principle, call for windows on the south side of buildings to catch the winter sun and depend on awnings and nearby trees to provide summer shade.

Houses that rely on this approach still need conventional heating, but they may use as much as 75 percent less fuel than regular buildings, according to a recent Worldwatch Institute report. And, by the way, those fashionable rooftop skylights of recent years are terrible energy wasters; it is better to install them vertically, preferablky high on south-facing walls.

Leading architects and builders also contend that another factor — red tape — is pushing real estate prices skyward. Government approval processes can be so time consuming, says Fisher, that in one project where $25,000 was budgeted for legal reviews and planning, the costs soared to close to $250,000.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your behavior will be closely scrutinized tomorrow by your peers and associates, so be sure to put your best foot forward. Bad impressions will be hard to erase.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even though you may feel your ideas or ways of doing things are superior, it's best you keep your thoughts to yourself tomorrow. Criticism creates problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extremely careful in business and investment situations tomorrow. Don't buy anything or obligate yourself if you feel there is more you should know.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Relationships, both family and career, could cause you frustrations tomorrow if they are not handled diplomatically. Try to b cooperative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may need help tomorrow to lessen some of your responsibilities. But if you are too demanding, others will put roadblocks in your path instead of offering assistance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're pretty good at managing your own resources as well as those of others, but tomorrow your talents may not be up to par. Meddling could prove costly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Tomorrow, it would be wise to skirt issues on which you and your mate hold strong opposing views. It wouldn't take much to start a serious brouhaha.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If your attitude is negative tomorrow, it will reflect on everything you do. Even usually easy tasks could become distasteful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're entitled to enjoy yourself tomorrow, but be careful not to over-indulge or spend too lavishly. Both areas carry penalties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Putting too much emphasis on your self-interests will turn off people you may have to deal with tomorrow and greatly lessen your chances of getting what you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Beware of a tendency tomorrow to make snap judgments before you have all the facts. Your quick conclusions are apt to be anything but right.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Tomorrow is not a good day to either make loans or borrow. Be helpful to friends without having to dig into your purse.

House Passes Interest Ceiling

Avalanche-Journal Staff

A compromise bill raising the maximum legal interest rates in Texas on just about any kind of credit was passed to the Senate Thursday carrying with it a "floating ceiling of 24 percent" which Lubbock Rep. Froy Salinas says favors consumers.

Amendments suggesting ceilings from 10 to 80 percent were proposed, but a limit of 24 percent finally accompanied the bill which was sponsored in the House by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton.

Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock led about 95 House members in a bid to "provide relief for the needy, but not a windfall for the greedy."

Salinas, who held a Thursday afternoon news conference on his return from Austin, said he favors some raising of legal interest rate limits to make money available to Texas consumers.

"It was a question of whether we want this state to stay abreast economically with other states," Salinas said. "Texas is (ranked) below 40th(in comparison with other states) in all (credit) categories except one. We were about in the middle on very small loans."

The House approved the bill 91-54 late Wednesday. If the bill eventually passes, interest rates can rise for auto loans, credit card balances, department store installment loans, home improvements, business loans and credit union loans.

Bankers, auto dealers, credit unions, savings and loan associations, retailers and other lenders who pushed the bill received only one setback Wednesday, and that was Salinas' amendment lowering the 30 percent ceiling.

"Thirty percent is a lot, and a lot of people had problems with it," Salinas said. "We felt like some (lenders) would have taken advantage (of that ceiling) and gone immediately to 30 percent."

As the bill stands, a three-layered ceiling on interest rates will be imposed on just about all loans except home mortgages. When the rate on six-month U.S. Treasury bills is 9 percent or below, the ceiling would be 18 percent. But when the T-bill rate is higher, the maximum legal interest rate in Texas would be twice the T-bill rate but could float no higher than 24 percent.

Lenders could raise interest rates at

"The floating ceiling protects the consumer," Salinas said. "Many (legislators) wanted to set a flat ceiling, but the floating ceiling allows the rate to go down when more money is available."

Salinas, who said he does not support high interest rates, said Texas legislators were forced to raise the ceiling to allow state lenders, many of them small businesses, to compete with out-of-state lenders, and to provide an incentive for Texas investors to speculate in their home state.

"These businesses where you buy goods have to borrow money for their inventories, and most of the time, they have to pay what out-of-state banks charge," Salinas said. "They're allowed to charge 2 percent more than the prime interest rate, and if you've tried to borrow money lately, you know that's been at 21 and 22 percent.

"With a low ceiling in Texas, it was a choice between being able to borrow money at all and paying the higher interest," he said, conceding that many consumers will not be able to afford to at higher interest rates.

Messer said Salinas' amendment would hurt "high risk" borrowers who can obtain credit only at very high interest rates.

"There's not but one high risk business I know that can pay 30 percent interest, and that is the drug pushers and the marijuana smugglers," said Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, who banded with Salinas to limit the ceiling.

Salinas said the higher ceiling also would encourage Texas investors to spend their money at home.

"Many, many investors are going elsewhere with their money," he said. "If I can get 20 percent on my money in New York, why should I invest in Texas?"

Solon Loses, Then Wins Battle To Boost Comptroller's Powers

AUSTIN (AP) — A veteran senator has given an inexperienced rookie a lesson in how the Senate operates and, at the same time, gave the state tax collector a promise of broadened investigatory power.

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, failed Thursday in an attempt to expand the comptroller's auditing authority. Then moments later — to the surprise of a freshman colleague — he tried again and succeeded.

McKnight's first motion to debate the bill fell one short, 19-11.

After the Senate had approved another proposal, McKnight made the same motion a second time.

John Leedom, R-Dallas, said he was new at Senate politics and asked, "Can you lose and bring a bill back up for the second time in a day?"

"Oh-h-h-h yeah," shouted several senators.

"If you've got the votes, rules don't matter," said Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin.

"I have a feeling we're going to have a switch of one vote," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, the Senate's presiding officer. Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, sat in his chair smiling. The second vote to debate the bill passed, 20-10, with Sarpalius changing sides.

An employee of the comptroller's office had testified in committee that if the comptroller "has reason to believe that someone is stealing state money, he has the duty to check it out."

The bill analysis said the measure was needed because a 1980 opinion by Attorney General Mark White had limited the comptroller's audit authority to determining who owes money to the state and how much they owe.

Governor Claims Federal Budget Cuts Will Affect State Spending

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators need to cut $2.5 billion from state spending the next two years to cover the loss of federal funds under President Ronald Reagan's austerity program, Gov. Bill Clements says.

"We have to reorder our priorities and get off this 'letter to Santa Claus' basis and look at what we can reasonably expect from Washington," he told a news conference Thursday.

Clements said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton were "in agreement."

Texas will lose about half its usual federal funds, or about $2.5 billion, the next two years, the governor said.

"Instead of increasing our biennial appropriations by 20 percent, we may have to make-do with a 10 percent increase," Clements said. "We may have to hold our 1982-83 budget to $23.5 billion instead of the $26 billion we had anticipated would be available in revenue during the next two years.

"I repeat that we are not talking about cutting the present state budget, but rather reducing the amount of the anticipated increase ..."

He said Comptroller Bob Bullock considers federal funds when estimating the state's income for the next two years.

Bullock said he would be glad to meet the governor "to hear him out on why I should reduce by estimate because I don't recall having met with him since January, but I'm not going to be panicked into a wholesale revision of the estimate on the basis of some rumor floating around Washington."

Clements said he had no suggestions where the cuts should be made.

Clements added he is "totally in favor of Mr. Reagan's program of budget economy, and it is obvious the U.S. House and Senate are also but just how it will come out we do not know."

Clements also said:

— "I am absolutely opposed to a special session for this purpose

Osteopath Board Gets First Approval

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate tentatively has voted to place osteopaths under a separate licensing board after 74 years of regulation by the Board of Medical Examiners, which oversees all physicians.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett said the voice vote Thursday was a small victory in his 1½-year-old feud with the Texas Medical Association, which opposed the bill.

Another vote is needed to send the bill to the House.

Doggett's bill would set up a Board of Osteopathic Medicine consisting of six osteopaths and three public members. The Board of Medical Examiners has 11 medical doctors, one osteopath and no public members.

Asked what impact the bill might have on the medical examiners, Doggett said, "The key principles (of the bill) set standards that ought to apply to everybody."

The bill would require a medical peer review committee to report knowledge which might suggest a colleague was incompetent — "when a physician can't hack it anymore," said Doggett.

Doggett, sponsor of the law creating the Sunset Advisory Commission — which reviews agencies — repeatedly has been rebuffed in his attempts to obtain what he calls "accountability" from the medical examiners, such as adding lay members to the board.

Officer Wants To Break Cycle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "Wilson" family is a poor, sprawling clan with a record of more than 150 arrests over three generations. Now a police officer determined to "break the cycle of crime" is trying to take at least four of the family's youngsters away from their parents in a case that could set a startling legal precedent.

"My judgment was based on the parents being criminal role models," said officer Tom Corey. "Extrapolated to its extreme, this case could mean the government has the authority to drive up and down the street and say, 'You're not an appropriate role model, so we'll take your kids.'

"But at some point, there's got to be a way to break the cycle. It's up to the judge to decide that."

The case began last fall when Corey, assigned to the Pasadena Youth Services Division, noted a report that two cousins — aged 8 and 9 — had been caught shoplifting $3.97 worth of toys. The report said the children had no prior record and required "no further counseling."

Then Corey noticed the children came from the "Wilson" family. Wilson is not the family's real name.

"These minors," the 35-year-old former teacher wrote in a report, "spent their formative years in a family environment in which it was the norm for family members to be arrested and incarcerated — their fathers in prison, their mothers both serving 90-day jail terms this year, nearly all the adult members of their immediate family have double-digit arrest figures, and even their great-aunt was arrested twice this year."

Corey has placed three of the children in protective custody. Next month, the county Juvenile Dependency Court will determine whether at least one other child in the third generation of Wilsons — a family led by a 46-year-old woman and her 14 children — should be removed from their homes.

Court observers say Corey's action could break new legal ground and could redefine what constitutes an unfit home.

"It's possible the county will try to keep chipping away until finally, any parent with a criminal background can have his kids taken away," said one of the Wilsons' court-appointed attorneys, Ron Marks.

One member of the Wilson family — 23-year-old Billy — says police helped him "a lot." He became involved in a petty theft 10 years ago, and officers got him tutoring, counseling and a place in a scouting progam. Now he runs a janitorial business that employs three of his brothers.

But he said the department is prejudiced against his family.

"They can't say the Wilson family ever hurt anyone," he said. "The only thing they can say is we stole clothes or food because the welfare wasn't enough for 14 of us."

Corey's 18-page report on the family described how three sisters in their 20s lived on welfare and shared a two-bedroom house with their mother, their children and their mother's other children.

Corey attributes more than 150 arrests to 17 members of the Wilson clan, from disturbing the peace to attempted murder and drug sales.

DUSTY JOB — Mowing the grass is never a pleasant job, but it's even worse in early spring when the mower throws up clouds of choking dust. However, James C. Convicted Slayer Fights Malignancy, Extradition

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A convicted murderer who was released from jail because county officials did not want to pay for his cancer treatment says he wants to remain free now that he is cured, but authorities want him back behind bars.

A hearing was held Thursday in Multnomah County Circuit Court to decide whether Kurt Angelone, 27, should be returned to the county jail, where he had been held for nearly a year awaiting extradition to California.

Angelone is wanted in California on charges of leaving the state without telling parole officials following his release from jail on a 1973 second-degree murder conviction. He also faces two counts of auto theft in Los Angeles County.

Angelone was released from the Multnomah County Jail last month so the county's corrections department could avoid paying for about $15,000 in radiation treatments required after surgery to remove a malignant tumor in Angelone's throat. He underwent surgery in mid-January after the cancer was diagnosed late last year.

Angelone's treatments ended earlier this week. And now that he is improved, county officials want him back in custody, saying he may flee while he fights extradition. They say Angelone was released from jail only so welfare and not the county corrections budget would pay the high costs of the treatment.

But Angelone's lawyer and friends think the man should remain free on humanitarian grounds.

"If he was going to run, he'd have done it by now," said Frank Turney, a counselor with the Northwest Ex-Offenders Association, which Angelone joined while out of jail.

Angelone says he wants to marry Susan Anderson, 29, whom he met before he was convicted on the murder charge. He left California in 1978 after his release from prison to be with the woman, who is the mother of his 2-year-old son.

He was jailed in Portland in February 1980 pending extradition to California and has been fighting the extradition since. Angelone's extradition was affirmed this week by the Oregon Court of Appeals, but his lawyer — public defender Marc Sussman — said his client will appeal to the state Supreme Court.

New Boss Trying To Fix Comedy Show

By KENNETH R. CLARK

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC's "Saturday Night Live" is off the track and in the garage for an overhaul, but it goes right on rattling people from Charlie Rocket to the mayor of Piscataway, N.J.

Dick Ebersol, the man called in to fix the broken-down satire, has sacked three original cast members — including the unhappy Rocket — and four writers, and he's added a one-man combination of both in his bid to have the show rolling again by April 11.

His latest acquisition, signed up this week, is Tim Kazurinsky, an alumnus of Chicago's famed Second City Improvisation Group.

"I'm delighted to have Tim as the first new member of our repertory company," Ebersol said. "He has been widely viewed as one of the most popular and creative people to come out of Second City in the past decade."

Ebersol said Kazurinsky — trained as a journalist before coming down with show biz fever — will work both as a writer for the new "Saturday Night Live" and as one of its principal actors.

Last week, Ebersol fired original cast members Gilbert Gottfried, Ann Risley and Rocket whose live camera gutter gaffe earlier this month preceded the sacking of the show's producer, Jean Doumanian, and the summons to Ebersol to set things right.

Rocket's ad-libbed Anglo Saxonism fueled the boycott drive of the Coalition for Better Television and triggered a demand from its leader, the Rev. Donald Wildmon, that Rocket be fired. He got his wish, but Ebersol denied that the Wildmon coalition had anything to do with the decision.

"They were dropped for creative reasons," he said of the suddenly unemployed cast members and writers.

But Wildmon wasn't the only one incensed by the old show. Before Ebersol took it off the line, mandating taped repeats of "Saturday Night Live" from the glory days of John Belushi and Gilda Radner, it had the mayor of Piscataway rumbling in wrath.

His Honor, Robert G. Smith, found no humor in the parody of his city as the toxic chemical waste dump capital of the nation. He demanded a public apology this week, but he didn't get it.

NBC expressed "regret that he was offended," but said since the tradition of the show has been to poke fun at people in high places, human foibles and the like, nobody ever took it seriously in the first place.

"We do not believe a public apology is appropriate," said NBC Executive Vice President James R. Holland.

An NBC spokesman said none of the remaining "Saturday Night Live" cast members will be dumped, though a few new ones still may be hired.

"Let's see — we had seven and we let three go," he said. "I don't know if we'll try for seven again or let it stand at five."

Whatever the final count, Ebersol remains haunted by the ghost of "Saturday Night Live" as it was. Excerpts from the old show, run while he overhauls the new one, have sent the Nielsen ratings up from a dismal January average of 9.3 with an audience share of 27 to 11.1 and 32.

Unfortunately, Belushi, Radner and Company no longer are available.

Statue Stolen From Church

The life-size statue of a young girl was part of a $100,000 sculpture on loan to St. Bartholomew's Church from an East Side art gallery.

The statue is a piece of "Four Generations" a work by Mexican artist Francisco Ziniga that depicts four generations of women. Sindin lent it to the church in August after he purchased it from a museum in La Jolla, Calif.

Off-Duty Patrolman Shot By Fellow Officer

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — An off-duty patrolman who drew his revolver while shopping for uniforms was shot by a fellow officer who thought he was robbing the store.

"What we have here is a classic case of mistaken identity," said Lt. Armando Fontoura.

The two patrolmen were from different district stations, he said, and did not know each other.

Public TV Reports Increase In Pledges

NEW YORK (AP) — Public TV viewers, apparently seeing "the handwriting on the wall," contributed record amounts recently to local stations threatened by a loss of government support, officials say.

The public TV system reported this week that viewer pledges during the recent Festival '81 fund-raising campaign totaled $26.8 million, a 29 percent increase over last year.

"We made it clear every night that we are in a time of need, that federal funding won't go on forever, and I think viewers responded to that," said Harold Holzer, a spokesman for New York's WNET.

The New York station, one of the system's largest, reported subscriptions totaling $2.1 million, compared with $1.8 million last year.

"I think people responded more generously than ever before because they saw the handwriting on the wall — that the federal government is not going to support public broadcasting much longer," said Christopher Ridley, a spokesman for Boston's WGBH, a major source of programming for the PBS system.

WGBH, which has adopted a "more we hear from you the less you hear from us" philosophy, used only 10 of the 16 days of Festival '81 and raised $457,000 — about the same as was pledged in 11 days last year.

Contributions from viewers make up only a fraction of the yearly income for public broadcasting — about 12 percent in fiscal 1979, the last year for which figures are available.

Federal funds as well as corporate and foundation grants often are designated for specific purposes, but the viewer contributions may be used as the stations wish.

The Reagan administration has proposed a 25 percent cut in the congressional appropriation for public radio and TV, to $129 million. However, the Senate Budget Committee last week approved the $172 million outlay proposed by the preceding Carter administration. The funding bill now is awaiting a vote by the full body.

Congress appropriated $162 million for public broadcasting in the current fiscal year. Though the outgoing administration recommended a slight increase, most public TV executives expect the funding level to decline sharply in the years to come.

"I think the possibility that we will eventually lose federal funding was a contributing factor to the increased income from subscriptions," said Mark Harrad, a PBS spokesman. "Some stations made a point of that, but others purposely did not.

"I think the important thing to remember is the pledges increase about 25 percent each year anyway, sometimes more, sometimes less," Harrad said.

Nonetheless, both WNET and Los Angeles' KCET made a point of advising viewers of the prospects for continued federal support.

WETA in Washington reported its most successful effort ever, with pledges totaling $602,775, an increase of nearly 50 percent over last year. In contrast, WTTW in Chicago, saw subscriptions dip slightly this year, from $689,346 in 1980 to $667,399.

In all, 694,539 viewers pledged an average of $38.57 to the 134 stations involved in Festival '81. The average pledge in Festival '80 was $34.26.

Police Official Held For DWI

GEORGETOWN, La. (UPI) — The town has forfeited its lone patrol car because Greeley Bradford, police chief and sewerage superintendent, was charged with drunk driving.

Now state officials are saying maybe Bradford should not be allowed to keep both city jobs because there's a statute banning dual office-holding.

"I already have received 100 phone calls from people who heard about the incident and support me 100 percent," said Bradford, who was jailed this week in Monroe, La., on a charge of driving while intoxicated. His squad car was impounded.

Elected officials can only be removed from office if convicted of a felony, and DWI is a misdemenanor.

Film Adds Occult Dimension To Fear Of Snakes

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Since the Garden of Eden, more terror probably is wrung from snakes than any other of God's creatures.

Yet the slithering, gimlet-eyed reptiles are rarely employed in movies or TV shows except as an occasional and frightening distraction.

"King Cobra's" story is based on the true life story of a 1955 carnvial train derailment near Springfield, Mo. Among the animals which escaped during the confusion of the wreck were 21 cobras.

According to Wilson, the snakes killed five human beings in the area over a period of three months before all the reptiles were either killed or captured.

Wilson has added an occult dimension to the simple horror of a king cobra running around loose. This particular snake is seized by Satan and directed to sink its fangs into the town priest.

It develops that this priest is the lineal descendent of Druid ancestors who can be directly traced to St. Patrick, the guy responsible for driving all the snakes from Ireland.

"Fritz Weaver plays the priest," Wilson said. "The priest's family has a history of being sought out by snakes. Actually, the movie becomes something of a morality play by the final confrontation — Good against evil.

"So far as I know, there has never been a movie with a snake as the major menace. That's curious in itself because I can't think of any creature on earth, including sharks, which are more frightening to human beings."

Back in 1972 Universal produced a film titled "Sssssss," starring Strother Martin as a herpetologist whose assistant becomes a cobra. The film was virtually crawling with snakes.

For "King Cobra" Wilson bought six king cobras — ranging in length from 15 to 20 feet — from Thailand at $250 per snake. The cast includes a half-dozen American rattlesnakes and as many cottonmouths.

"We needed six king cobras to play one snake," Wilson said. "You can't work a snake too long without having it tire. What makes king cobras more frightening than other poisonous snakes are their size.

"A 20-foot cobra can rise to one-third of its height, whp six feet away. When you're working around these animals, you quickly learn what the safety zone is.

"Also, their venom is almost 100 percent fatal. We hired Bill Haast from the Miami serpentorium to work the snakes in the picture. He's been bitten more than 200 times by other varieties of snakes and once by a cobra.

"I believe he is the only human ever to have recovered from a king cobra bite. He takes anti-venom shots once a month to keep his immunity up.

"We kept anti-venom on the set at all times. And before the crew and actors were signed they were all tested to see if they were allergic to antivenom.

"Nobody looked forward to working the picture because of the snakes. We didn't use glass partitions, although we had them on hand, because it would have interfered with the reality of the snake shots.

"We spent $50,000 on a mechanical snake and a muppeteer to work it, but we had to give it up. We also spend $20,000 on plexiglass and didn't use it.

"As a safety precaution, Haast milked the snakes every day.

"We shot almost all of the picture in Eutaw, Alabama. I guess you could say the only real precaution we needed was the presence of Bill Haast who knew exactly what he was doing at all times.

"It's impossible to train a snake or to get it to react on cue. For one thing, snakes are deaf. Those cobras that sway in baskets in India are reacting to visual movement, not music."

Filtered Cigarettes Do Not Lower Risks

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Smokers who switch from non-filter cigarettes to filters do not reduce their chances of developing heart disease, according to a study that has monitored heart problems since the 1940s.

"Filters are not doing what they are reputed to be doing. You're still getting the poison," said study Director William Castelli, in an interview with the Middlesex News.

Kites Offer Fun, Chance To Challenge Creativity

By LAWRENCE HOWE
Smithsonian News Service

An ill wind may blow no man to good, as the proverb goes, but a gusty day is the perfect setting for hours of enjoyment. All you need are a few inexpensive materials, imagination, some know-how, an open field and...viola! You're guaranteed some high-flying fun with a kite.

Kiting has always been an exciting and popular hobby for many people. But to Paul Garber and the hundreds who participate in the Smithsonian Institution's annual kite festival, kiting is more that a leisure-time hobby — it's a chance to challenge their creativity and pit their wits against nature's elements and seasonal changes.

The festival — which consists of a display of kites, a lecture, a workshop and a competition — takes place during the last three weekends in March in Washington, D.C. During the final weekend, children and adults may test their talents while competing for awards based on appearance and performance. There are only two pre-requisites to enter the competition: The kite must be flown by the person who made it, and everyone is required to have a good time.

Garber, well known for his interest in the history of aviation and a historian emeritus at the National Air and Space Museum, first organized the festival in 1967. It is now a part of the Smithsonian's Resident Associate Program.

According to Garber, the idea for the festival originated after the Secretary of the Smithsonian, S. Dillon Ripley, returned from a trip to Paris. "Mr. Ripley saw lovers arm-in-arm, students, artists — everyone — enjoying Paris' parks," Garber says. "He wanted the public to enjoy the beautiful Mall that adjoins the Smithsonian's museums."

Ripley asked Garber what he liked to do outdoors. "I told him about making a teddy bear kite for my great-grandson and the fun we had flying it," Garber relates. Ripley liked the idea and approved Garber's suggestion for a kite-flying festival, now in its 15th year.

Throughout its existence, Garber says, the kite has been one of the most versatile inventions ever made, aiding developments in both the meteorological and aeronautical fields and achieving considerable cultural status in many countries.

Kites originated in China more than 2,000 years ago. They were used by the Chinese army as early as the sixth century to relay signals to troops over great distances. In 1752, Benjamin Franklin used a kite for meteorological experiments, and in 1901, the famed Italian physicist, Gulielmo Marconi, used a kite to raise his antenna for the first trans-Atlantic radio message.

Over the centuries, kites of virtually every imaginable size and shape have been flown — from the tiniest of flyers made by devoted enthusiasts in Japan to the kites used for fishing by natives in the South Pacific islands to the enormous Japanese Wan-Wan kite, which spans 60 feet, weights approximately 5,500 pounds and requires 150 persons to launch and fly it.

Today, kites can be seen in their most dramatic form in Japan where they are an integral part of the country's national heritage. On the fifth day of the fifth month of the Japanese year, for example, the Boys festival is celebrated by households which have been blessed with the recent birth of a male child. The proud families fly tubular or "sleeve" kites which resemble a carp, a fish which battles upstream to spawn, symbolic of the son's anticipated progress through the river of life.

The kite also has been used extensively by the pioneers of aviation to study the aerodynamics of flight. In 1783, the Swiss scientist, Daniel Bernoulli, discovered that when the wind blows across a curved airfoil (wing), air speed is increased and a reduction in air pressure occurs along the top surface. This exerts an upward force upon the wing.

The airflow diverted downward by the wing's bottom surface is slowed and produces an upward force from the underside. The combination of the two forces generates the "lift" required for flight.

A further understanding of these aerodynamic principles eventually led to development of the modern airplane wing.

The centers of force affecting a kite's stability — which are lift, gravity, pressure and thrust — must be in proper relationship to ensure proper flight. This is achieved when launching the kite by angling it into the oncoming wind. As with any aircraft, whether it be a simple box kite or the SST, these aerodynamic forces affect the craft's performance and stability during flight.

For many flat-surfaced kites, a stabilizing force is provided by the extra wind resistance or "drag" imparted by the kite's tail. Lengthening or shortening the tail, which depends on the kite's size and shape, can correct instability resulting from variations in wind conditions. Typically, the stronger the wind, the longer the tail required.

"There has been a remarkable increase in the popularity of kites in recent years," Garber says. The Smithsonian's festival and organizations such as the American Kitefliers Association have been fundamental in fostering the resurgence.

"Certainly, not everyone can make a spacecraft or an airplane," Garber says, "but anyone interested in flight can easily make a kite."

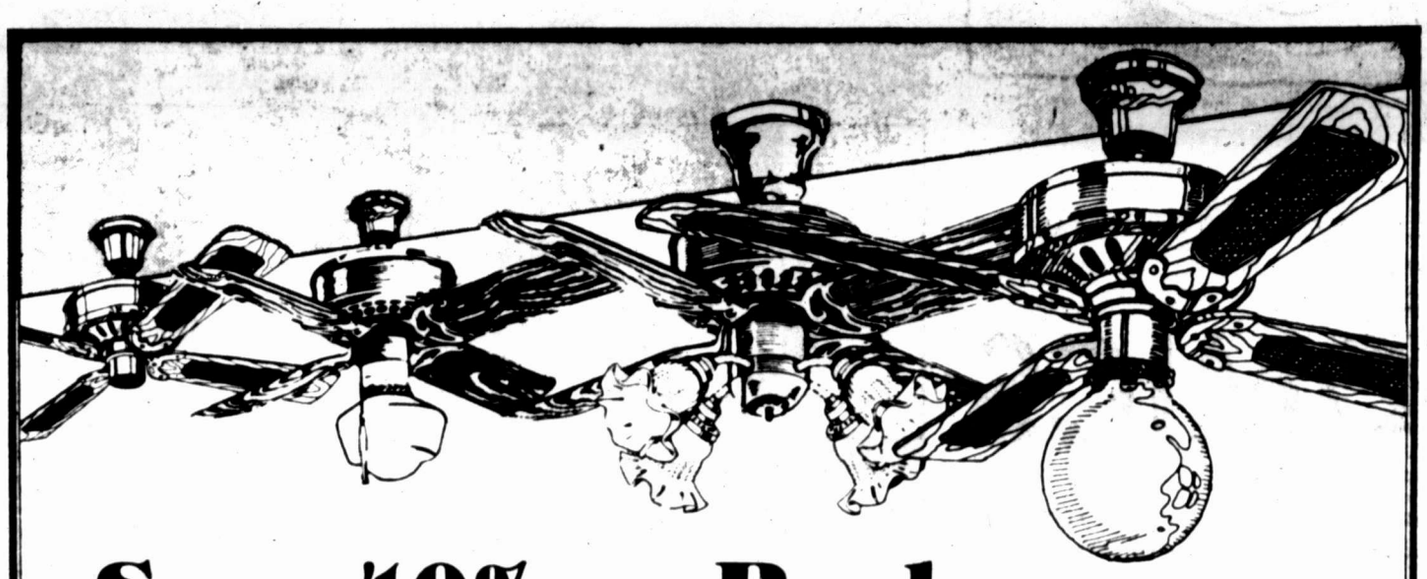

Garber notes that ready-to-assemble kites and kite materials are available at most hobby shops and even some drug stores. Many people prefer to construct their own because they learn how to modify the kite to accommodate it to the flying conditions.

Books of instructions are available in libraries or hobby stores, and there is even a kite-flyer's magazine, Kite Lines, published in Baltimore, Md. The following tips may be helpful to would-be flyers:

— The kite should be "bridled" to face the wind at a lifting angle so that the wind will lift the kite into the sky. The bridle is a line or series of lines attached to strong parts of the kite's structure to position it correctly into the wind. Finding the correct bridle length and flight angle are essentially trial-and-error matters, but if the bridle is properly attached, the kite should balance horizontally and the top of the kite should be about 20 degrees higher than the bottom when the kite is suspended by the bridle strings.

— Use a stick or a reel for winding the kite string.

— The kite can be landed in a strong wind by winding in the string most of the way and then anchoring the line and walking towards the kite with the line under one armpit while you pull down and back on the line, hand over hand.

Stock Mart Continues Pullback

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, continuing the pullback that set in on Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 9.46 Thursday, slipped 1.80 to 1,003.96 by noontime today.

Losers held a 7-6 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders had begun to cash in on some of the market's recent gains after the Dow Jones industrial average hit an eight-year high on Wednesday.

They also said investors were keeping a wary eye on the unsettled situation in Poland.

Another source of concern was the interest-rate outlook. Open-market rates were declining until a little more than a week ago, but since then they have reversed course and moved upward.

Mobil led the active list, down ¼ at 67¼. Two blocks of 100,000 shares each traded at that price.

Flexi-Van gained 1⅝ to 30⅝. On Thursday the company said it received a $35-a-share takeover bid from a group of British investors.

Tubos de Acero de Mexico was the American Stock Exchange volume leader, up ⅝ at 7¼. The company reported higher 1980 earnings and proposed a 40 percent stock distribution.

The NYSE's composite index lost .04 to 78.39, and the Amex market value index was down .60 at 360.72.

Tensions Up Gold, Dollar

LONDON (AP) — Labor unrest in Poland pushed the dollar higher against most major currencies in early trading in Europe and Tokyo today. Gold also rose, gaining $14 in Zurich and $15.36 in Hong Kong.

The 10 million-member Polish independent union Solidarity staged a four-hour warning strike today, defying Warsaw Pact troops maneuvering on that nation's borders.

"In a political crisis like this, the U.S. economy, the most self-sufficient in the world, looks the most attractive," said a foreign exchange dealer in Amsterdam, explaining a rush to buy dollars.

European traders attributed increased gold prices to the mounting tensions in Poland. The precious metal is a traditional shelter for funds in times of political and economic uncertainty.

Midmorning dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Thursday, included: 2.1315 West German marks, up from 2.1105; 1.9405 Swiss francs, up from 1.919; 5.0325 French francs, up from 4.9545; 2.363 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3235; and 1,042.5 Italian lire, down from 1,044.3.

The British pound was less expensive this morning at $2.2385, compared with Thursday's $2.2505.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar surged against the Japanese yen, spurred by the reports of Polish labor unrest and rising U.S. interest rates. The yen closed the week at 211.40 yen, up from Thursday's closing of 209.45 yen, and higher than last Friday's closing of 208.55 yen.

In later European trading, the dollar was quoted at 211.9 yen.

London's five bullion houses fixed a recommended morning gold price of $547.25 a troy ounce, up from $540.50 late Thursday. In Zurich, gold traded for $549.50, up from $535.50.

Consultant Believes Business Needs Leadership

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Here's one management consultant who says the trouble with American business is there is too much management. What business needs, he says, is leadership. And what it gets is managers who "know how to get things done through people, to turn people into little tools, but not how to direct them, inspire them and motivate them."

The consultant is John J. Music, of Paoli, Pa. He has advised a long list of corporations on how to break out of what he sees as a comfortable rut.

"There's so much emphasis today on earnings per share, on profitability; corporations get too much money from the stock market instead of from banks. There's too much pressure to show short-term results," he says. "And there's too much of the same emphasis in business schools. Have you ever seen a school that teaches leadership?"

In Music's definition, leadership "provides a scenario to the people they're leading. It's not just bunk for the securities analysts. It's where I'm going to take this company. And it's backed up by action, by getting into the day-to-day operation."

"An executive has to explain what he intends to do," he says. "The people working for him will get the vibes on whether or not he means it."

The reason why business has lost its leadership ability, according to Music, is that "it's risky. If it doesn't work, the executive can't blame anybody else."

He thinks, though, that the view from the executive suite is changing — that members of boards of directors are becoming more concerned with the long-range future of the companies they head.

"There are megabucks riding on it," he says. "Not so long ago, the U.S. market was big enough and it was pretty well protected from foreign competition. American manufacturers didn't have to worry about foreigners coming in and taking away their markets. So they got fat and lazy. Now the market's changed. It's worldwide and there's competition coming from everywhere."

Music concedes that there often are problems in getting an executive strong in management to hire one who's a good leader, or vice versa. So he says it's up to the board of directors to do the job.

"The board has to be careful in picking," he notes. "It has to find people who can work together. From my own experience, I've seen both the leadership and management abilities in the same person less than half the time."

To illustrate his point about the two roles, Music points to the automobile business. "Henry Ford (the first) was a leader," he says, "and Alfred Sloan (who built General Motors) was a manager. In fact, there's a management school at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology named after him. And General Motors became the biggest industrial corporation in the world, so all the business schools picked up on it."

GM may be the prototype of management-run companies, but Music gives it high marks on leadership more recently.

"That company has impressed me," he says. "They made the move to smaller cars, they're into a redesign cycle, they're using their financial clout to attack the world market. I think they're going the right way."

Music sees two main points to the need for leadership: "People are willing to work their butts off for you if you give them a clear objective, show them how to reach it, and prove that you mean it through action and consistency."

And, "The manager and the leader may be different people, but they can live together if they both keep the company in mind."

Anxious LSU Arrives For Cage Semis

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rudy Macklin says he didn't have much choice when he delayed the Baton Rouge departure of the Louisiana State basketball squad on its trip here for the NCAA's Final Four.

"My parents would have killed me," he said. "They're coming to the game."

Without them, his family wouldn't get to see LSU match with Indiana in the opening round of the Final Four on Saturday.

Macklin, the team's star forward, was hustled from the airport to the LSU campus in a police car, its siren screaming.

"I've never been happier to be in any city in my life, unless it was in Baton Rouge on March 27, 1972, when I became head basketball coach at LSU," Brown said.

He said he was not awed by the task of playing Indiana Saturday in the semifinals of the playoffs. Nor did he expect Indiana to be awed by playing LSU.

"I'm sure the Hoosiers will give us a lot of trouble, but we plan to give them a lot of trouble, too," he said.

Brown said his players would vote Thursday night on whether they would indulge in a little sight-seeing Friday before practice.

It was a quiet arrival, compared to the tumultous cheering section of 300 that saw them off at Ryan Airport in Baton Rouge.

Brown was still glowing from the sendoff.

"You should have been there," he told his welcoming committee. "We had 7,500 screaming and shouting supporters at a pep rally the night before, and we had a huge crowd at the airport. They really plugged up the airport."

At Baton Rouge, he told the crowd that the team could not enter into any early celebrations.

Groh Lands Wake Forest Job

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Al Groh, Texas Tech's linebacker coach during the 1980 season under former Red Raider boss Rex Dockery, today was picked to replace John Mackovic as head football coach at Wake Forest University.

Groh, 36, joined the Wake Forest staff as defensive coordinator and assistant head coach Jan. 19, one month after Dockery resigned to take over the head coaching duties at Memphis State. Groh came to Tech from the Air Force Academy, where he spent two seasons as defensive coordinator.

Mackovic resigned Tuesday after three years at Wake Forest to become quarterback coach for the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League.

Groh played at Virginia and was defensive end and linebacker coach for five seasons under Bill Dooley at North Carolina.

"When coach Mackovic resigned Tuesday morning Wake Forest had to determine if there was a coach on the current staff who could take over the program," athletic director Gene Hooks said.

"After interviewing each of the coaches separately it became apparent that Al Groh would be a popular and wise staff selection, and that if he was selected Wake Forest would be able to keep intact what I consider to be the best football staff it has ever assembled."

Cowboy Veteran Larry Cole Prepares To Retire

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran defensive tackle Larry Cole returned to Texas Stadium today, this time to put the wraps on his colorful 13-year career with the Dallas Cowboys.

The 6-4, 250-pound Cole, 35, called a news conference this afternoon at the site of some of his fondest memories, including a game-winning touchdown against the Washington Redskins last season.

Cole had hinted at the end of the 1980 campaign that he'd retire to devote full attention to his home-building company, but he had made that threat before.

"My wife has been referring to this as my fifth last season," he joked.

Today, his retirement becomes official.

A native of Granite Falls, Minn., he came to the Cowboys in 1968 as a 16th-round draft choice from the University of Hawaii after helping the school to its first winning season in half a century.

In his 13 years with the Cowboys, Cole played in 26 playoff games, an NFL record, and played in five Super Bowls. He played every position in the Dallas defensive front four and was called upon to fill the shoes of Ed "Too Tall" Jones, who retired for a year to pursue a pro boxing career.

After Jones came back last year, Cole moved back to defensive tackle, where he started ahead of former Baltimore all-pro John Dutton.

Landry described Cole last season as "indispensable," and it was clear that Cole could have returned for another season if he wanted to.

For several seasons, Landry had called him "the miracle of the defensive line."

As a rookie, he scored twice against Washington, once on an interception and again on a fumble recovery. A year later, he added another touchdown with a 41-yard interception return.

But his biggest touchdown came last season when he intercepted a pass from backup quarterback Mike Kruczek and lumbered 43 yards for a touchdown that helped Dallas to a 14-10 victory.

After the game, when someone pointed out that more than 10 years had passed between his third and fourth touchdowns, Cole just shrugged.

"Anyone can have an off decade," he said.

Dutton said Cole's departure will mean more playing time for him, "but I'm going to really miss him. We got pretty close in the past couple of years, and he taught me a great deal.

"Even when we were competing for the same job, he never turned his back on me. He was always ready to help, to explain things to me. I'm sorry he's not going to be around this next season."

Tech's Grid Transfer Walker Quits Squad

Walker, who guided the Clovis Wildcats to back-to-back state championships in 1977 and 1978, practiced Tuesday and informed the Tech coaching staff of his decision Wednesday. His departure leaves Tech head coach Jerry Moore with four quarterback prospects — Ron Reeves, Jim Hart, Richy Ethridge and Perry Morren.

The Tech quarterbacking corps looked much sharper during Thursday's three-hour workout, and quarterback coach Richard Ritchie said he is pleased.

"Every day they get a little better," Ritchie said. "They make mistakes just like everyone else, but I've seen a lot of good things from all of them."

Thursday's practice, the Raiders' third of the spring, was a bit more team-oriented than the previous two. Tech's first-team offense worked for 20 minutes against the second-team defense, while the top defensive unit went head-to-head with the second and third offensive groups. The top offensive and defensive units lined up for 10 minutes of goal-line scrimmage to end practice.

Anthony Hutchison, listed as the No 1 I-back on Tech's depth chart, missed Wednesday's and Thursday's practices with a pulled hamstring. Running back backer Dwayne Jiles (flu) missed practice Thursday.

The Raiders have today off but return to the practice field Saturday at 1:30 p.m. for the first lengthy controlled scrimmage of the spring.

Canyon Cager Teri Mayfield Leads 4A All-Stars

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Canyon's senior post Teri Mayfield, who capped a sparkling season by leading the Eagles to the state Class 4A basketball title, heads the Avalanche-Journal's 1981 4A All-South Plains six-person dream team.

The 6-foot Miss Mayfield scored 55 points in two state tournament games as the Eagles won their sixth state title in 12 years with a 64-39 semifinal win over Magnolia and 64-53 championship game victory against Bay City.

Joining Miss Mayfield, who was also selected as the All-South Plains player of the year in Class 4A, on the mythical squad are 5-10 senior teammate Theresa Stone, Dunbar 5-5 senior Lisa Caviel, Dumas 5-11 senior Tammy Taylor, San Angelo Lake View 5-8 senior Linda Rogers and Levelland 5-8 senior Karen Kinnison.

Eagle coach Lyndon Hardin, who guided Canyon to a 27-7 season, was selected All-South Plains 4A coach of the year.

Miss Mayfield and Miss Stone were Canyon's leading scorers during the regular season, averaging 12.9 and 10.7 points an outing, respectively. Miss Mayfield averaged 11 rebounds and Miss Stone 9.2 boards a game as the Eagles won their final 17 games of the season.

They were a perfect 12-0 in District 1-4A games, winning their first league crown in three years, and advanced to the state tournament by defeating Monahans 52-27 in a bi-district playoff game and Mineral Wells 46-44 in overtime in regional action.

Miss Mayfield and Miss Stone were both first-team All-District selections and Miss Mayfield was a unanimous selection to the state all-tournament team.

Miss Caviel was Dunbar's leading scorer (16 points a game) and second-leading rebounder (9.6 per contest). She also ran the 14-13 Panthers' offense and served as Dunbar's ball-handling guard. She played in all 27 games, hitting 174 of 438 field goal attempts and 84 of 126 free throw tosses.

Levelland's Miss Kinnison was third among area 4A scorers, averaging 18.6 points a contest for the 17-12 Lobos while scoring 539 points. It was the second consecutive season the 5-8 post led the Lobos in scoring.

Dumas' Miss Taylor was right behind Miss Kinnison in scoring, tossing in 17 points each game and contributing nine rebounds each outing. Both Miss Kinnison and Miss Taylor were selected to the 1-4A All-District first team, as was Miss Caviel.

Lake View's Miss Rogers, the sixth team member, suffered through an injury-plagued season but still managed to average 13.4 points and 11.9 rebounds in 17 games while leading the Chiefs to a tie for second place in District 2-4A. Miss Rogers was also selected to the 11-member 2-4A All-District team.

Savages Finish Sweep Of LCC

The Chaparrals lost the first game of Thursday's double-header 12-9 as Southeastern exploded for a six-run first inning, then dropped the nightcap 14-10 as the Savages crossed four runs in the seventh.

Southeastern Oklahoma, the second-rated school nationally in the NAIA, had three batters get three hits in the opener but still had to hold off a Chap rally.

David Brady only had two hits for the Savages, but one of them was a grand-slam home run in the first inning that helped propel Southeastern Oklahoma to a 6-0 lead.

In the nightcap, Lubbock Christian squandered a 7-5 fourth-inning lead by allowing Southeastern Oklahoma seven runs in two innings.

The Chaps built the margin on a run-scoring single by Billy Montemayor, a two-run homer by Oscar Cardenas and a four-run outburst in the fourth inning that featured run-scoring doubles by Ledbetter and Montemayor and a run-scoring single by pinch-hitter Mitch Mackey.

But the Savages rebounded for four runs in the top of the fifth on a single and a three-run homer. They got another run in the sixth and then iced the victory with four runs in the seventh on a pair of home runs.

All tolled, 13 balls flew out of the Chaparral park Thursday.

LCC will now face Mary Hardin-Baylor in a twinbill this afternoon at the Chaparral Stadium. Those games are set to begin at 5:30 p.m.

Red Raiders Require Recovery

By RAY GLASS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Texas Tech baseball team learned all about comebacks a year ago, a lesson Raider coach Kal Segrist hopes will be remembered when his squad takes on Baylor in Waco today.

Tech won 11 of its final 12 SWC games a season ago to qualify for the conference post-season tournament for the first time ever. And Segrist doesn't want the Raiders to have to duplicate that feat for a return trip to Austin.

"At this point I'll take any win we can get," said Segrist, whose Raiders are 0-3 in conference play and 16-10 overall. "If we don't win this series (with Baylor), it will be very difficult for us to win the conference.

"I wouldn't mind coming home with a 2-4 (conference) record but, of course, I'd much rather be 3-3. The key is we have to start winning some series."

The Raiders and Bears, 1-5 and 11-11, began the three-game set with a single game today at 3 p.m. They meet again Saturday at noon in a double-header.

Although Tech still has 18 SWC games on its schedule, the Baylor series needs to be a morale booster for the Raiders, who were shelled by Texas two weeks ago in their conference opener in Austin.

The Longhorns raked eight Tech hurlers for 27 hits and 29 runs in the three-game set. And the Raider pitchers helped the Longhorns along, walking 28 batters in 22 innings.

"Playing Baylor will be good for us," said junior left fielder Bobby Kohler. "We need some wins but I don't think we'll take them too lightly. We just know what we have to do."

Seven of the nine probable Tech starters are hitting above .300, led by designated hitter Gene Segrest's .467 average. Third baseman Jimmy Zachry is hitting .395 and is second in nearly every team offensive category to Kohler, who sports a .388 average with 35 RBI and four home runs.

In other weekend league action, first-place Texas (3-0 in SWC action and 29-3 overall) entertains No. 6 Houston (3-3, 14-12); second-place Arkansas (4-2, 19-8) travels to No. 5 Rice (3-3, 16-7); and Texas A&M (2-1, 16-7) travels to TCU (2-1, 11-7). All series begin with a single game today and conclude with a double-header on Saturday.

Ruth League Sets Signup

Signups for the Babe Ruth League are scheduled for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday and again April 4, at South Plains Mall.

Babe Ruth, which features leagues for 13-15-year-olds and 16-18-year-olds, has been in existence in Lubbock since 1969, and nationally since 1945. It is the largest baseball program for teen-agers in the world.

Local Babe Ruth president Bill Sanders said, "This program has good value. It teaches teamwork and it's also a good chance to have fun in the summertime."

Starting dates for this year's baseball are June 1 for 16-18s, and May 9 (tentative) for 13-15s.

Registration fee is $20 per player.

Babe Ruth sponsors three World Series each summer. In addition to age divisions 13-15 and 16-18, there is a separate Series exclusively for 13-year-olds. This year's Series are slated for Johnstown, N.Y., Aug. 15, for 13-year-olds; Mobile, Ala., Aug. 22, for 13-15s, and Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Aug. 22, for 16-18s.

MHS' Mindee Mayfield Measures Goals In Miles

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As a sophomore in high school, Mindee Mayfield came to an important realization about herself. The District 4-5A champion in both the quarter-mile and the half-mile, she was blown out in the regional round of competition.

"I started out as a quarter-miler and a hurdler but I just don't have the speed for it," she said. "I ran the half and the quarter in my sophomore year and won district in both but when I went to regionals, I just didn't have it. I wasn't fast enough to compete.

But instead of dropping out of track altogether, she moved to the distance events, running cross-country in the fall.

"When I started running cross country, I could really feel things clicking. I knew I could do that. I knew I couldn't be a half-miler. I guess I shouldn't say that because you can do whatever you want, but I knew I'd never be as good as I am in distance.

"In my junior year I went undefeated in cross country. I said this my thing. I went undefeated and I said this is it."

And brother, is it.

The Monterey trackster has turned an 11:45.00 in the 3200 already this year. That's good for tenth place in the state, but more impressively, she is the fastest girl west of San Antonio and north of Austin in that event.

In the 1600, an event also dominated by the southern and eastern warm-weather runners, her best time is a 5:30.60, eight seconds out of the state Top 10, but still the best in this part of West Texas.

In fact, she is the only girl on the South Plains to have the best marks in two different events. Her 1600 time is eight seconds better than second place and her 3200 is a whopping 15 seconds better than the next-best.

And she's done all that despite laying off most of last season after a disagreement with her track coach, who has since departed.

"I just quit; we had a new coach and I had a disagreement with her," Miss Mayfield said. "I thought it was best on my part to quit, and I think it is the best thing I've ever done.

"I was just overloading myself. After I quit, my grades came up a whole letter grade. I needed a break."

After coming to track in a roundabout fashion, Miss Mayfield has really taken hold. She started competing in gymnastics but then broke her finger and had to drop out on doctor's orders.

She has played soccer for five years now and, as a matter of fact, it was one of her soccer coaches that persuaded her to try out for cross country. It was love at first lap for Miss Mayfield.

"Running is an individual sport," she said. "I really like the individuality of it. I don't like to have to depend on other people, I like to do things myself."

The relationship is now so full-bloomed that she runs every day, frequently stepping out twice a day. According to Miss Mayfield, she averages 40 miles a week during track (including three miles on meet days) and brisks along a quick 60 or 80 miles during cross country.

Now, after taking second in the district and going to regionals in cross country, she is aiming at the state meet in track.

"Around here, there really isn't anybody in the district who can push me," she said. "Most of my competition now is out of El Paso. At regionals I'll probably run the mile and the two-mile but I'm going to shoot for the two-mile. That's where I have my best chance.

"Only one girl from El Paso has run some good times, so it looks pretty good for me right now in the two-mile. In the mile, there's Patsy Norman (from El Paso). She can run a five-flat, but I'm a 5:30. I'm just not that caliber."

No matter how she finishes in state, her future is almost assured. She is due to sign a letter of intent with West Texas State within the next two weeks to attend nursing schools.

What's the attraction of nursing?

"You can get a job most anywhere and you can work your own hours around, so I'd have time to run," she said. "I plan to run till I go in my grave, I really do. I want to set some Masters' records someday."

Hawks' Pecking Order Loses Brown

ATLANTA (AP) — It was like the end of a 30-year marriage, Atlanta Hawks' president Mike Gearon said of the decision to fire Hubie Brown as coach of the National Basketball Association team.

"Hubie has been with us five years," Gearon said in making the announcement Thursday. "In terms of NBA coaching longevity, that's like a 30-year marriage.

"It's fair to say this was one of the most unpleasant experiences of my life," Gearon said. "It's like any relationship, partnership or marriage — the breaking up and making that decision. I think the persons who make that decision, who are involved in that decision, have to have a deep sense of failure."

Little more than two months earlier, Gearon had said, "Hubie Brown is our coach, period ... He has three more years on his contract, plus an option year."

Gearon's statement attesting to Brown's tenure was made after a 3½-hour Jan. 16 meeting "in the spirit of mutually wanting to continue the kind of success we've had here in the past."

The meeting followed Brown's flirtation with the New Jersey Nets, a team that was ready to offer the New Jersey native a lavish five-year contract, published reports said then.

"I can't say I'm surprised," the Hawks' Tom McMillen said Thursday. "This thing's been going on for a while. Hubie can't be surprised."

"Am I going to miss him?" asked Eddie Johnson. "Well, I have to be professional about the whole thing. I'm going to have to do my job for whoever takes over.

"With Hubie, the thing is I went out and did my job, and that's what he expected," Johnson continued. "And when I didn't do my job, I got criticized, too."

One source inside the Hawks organization said if the firing hadn't taken place, at least five players would have requested to be traded during the offseason. Brown was sometimes a volatile coach, arguing at times with officials, players and even fans.

Brown's record was 199-208 with the Hawks. Included were three straight playoff appearances, and last weason the Hawks won the Central Division title.

"My reaction to all this is definitely no comment," Brown said. "For me, I'm 47 years old, and this is the first job I've ever been fired from in my life. The only thing it does is just put a heavy cloud over a day ... Thursday."

WATSON LEADS FIELD

Bowling Events Begin Locally

City Tournament Week has arrived for Lubbock bowlers. The Lubbock Bowling Association (men's) will open its competition Saturday at noon at Imperial Lanes. The tourney is another record year for LBA with 195 five-man teams, 321 sets of doubles and 642 single entrants. This year marks a first in the city championships as both the men and the women will be competing at the same time.

The Lubbock Women's Bowling Association will hold its formal opening Saturday at 5:30 p.m. at South Plains Bowl with members of the Twenty Year Club participating in a style show. Special award-winners of 1980 will be honored by rolling out the first ball, signaling the beginning of the tourney. The award winners are Hall of Fame inductee, Arlys Welch, Bowler Of The Year; Sue West, Bowler's Best Friend; Joyce Archer, Golder Age Bowler; Hazel Alexander and Miss Lubbock Junior Bowler, Miss Tonya McElwee. "Misty" will be the guest commentator...

In 1901 William McKinley was president of these United States, organized baseball hadn't played its first world series and Marconi was a year away from sending the first wireless signal across the Atlantic.

In January of that year, in downtown Chicago's Wetsbach Building, 41 teams from 17 cities in nine states congregated to compete in the first national bowling championship conducted by the American Bowling Congress. Those 41 teams, plus 78 doubles and 155 singles entries competed for a prize fund of $1,592.

Today, nearly 80 years later, the ABC National Championship Tournament is considered the "showcase of bowling" for every male bowler from the once-a-week league player who's out to have a good time to the country's premier professional. And in Memphis the tournament will feature 6,400 teams and 32,000 bowlers from all 50 states and several foreign countries. The prize fund exceeds $1 million.

Dale Brown Wins Coaching Honor

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Dale Brown of Louisiana State, a member of this year's NCAA Final Four, was named 1981 basketball coach of the year Thursday by The Sporting News.

LSU is 31-3 and won the Southeastern Conference regular-season championship while establishing record home attendance of 205,482.

Tech Track Meet Alters Location

The Texas Tech Track and Field Invitational Meet, originally slated to be held on the Tech track, will be run instead at South Plains College in Levelland on Saturday.

Resurfacing work on the Tech track was delayed last week due to the windy conditions, forcing the change.

BIGGS TRIAL — Ronald Biggs, center, Britian's Great Train robber, is led to court in Bridgetown, Barbados, by members of the Barbados police department. Biggs lost an initial bid for freedowm today as Acting Chief Justice Denys Williams ruled that Barbados' chief immigration officer had not been acting in bad faith by continuing to hold Biggs while waiting to establish positive identification. Local SBA Favors Budget Cuts

By LARRY SUTHERLAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

While many bureaucrats within the federal government are feeling uneasy about proposed Reagan administration federal budget cuts, the local Small Business Administration office welcomes the reductions.

"We believe the benefits may outweigh the adverse impacts. We're perfectly willing to take our share in these cuts," said Willard Foist Jr., acting district director of the SBA.

Foist and other high-level officials within the local SBA see the budget cuts as a way to help stem inflation, which they say puts small businessmen in a poor competitive position. Easing inflation, they predict, will have less adverse impact than not having as much loan money available.

And a farmer who owns about 5,000 acres of wheat and corn farm land in Bailey County agrees with Foist's assessment of the effects of inflation, at least on farmers. "Inflation is killing our industry. It's hurting the farming industry as much as anything," he said, adding farmers often are not able to simply pass the costs on to others.

This same farmer was able to keep from going under with the help of a $2.1 million disaster assistance loan from the SBA in 1979.

During the remainder of this fiscal year, and for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, the proposed cuts call for a reduction of direct-loan SBA money of $128 million, a reduction of $2 billion to back up guaranteed loans and a cut in disaster loan money of $830 million.

What will the effect of these cutbacks in loan money mean to farmers, restaurant owners and other small businessmen in West Texas? "We're really not sure of that yet," Foist said.

But Foist and other district office officials note the effect may be least on merchants taking out direct loans. Under direct loans, money is loaned directly by the SBA to merchants who otherwise would not be able to borrow money.

"Our direct loan demand from acceptable applicants hasn't been all that great," Foist said, pointing to only about $1.1 million loaned out so far this fiscal year in the district's service area, which essentially is west of Abilene and north of San Angelo.

Also, Foist said the Farmers Home Administration has in the last year taken over most of the responsibility for loaning money on disaster loans. For about the first six months of the fiscal year, the district SBA office has had $43.5 million loaned out mostly to farmers and ranchers. More disaster loan money is expected to be loaned out by the SBA within the next few months.

Disaster loans may well mean the difference between making it or going under for farmers and ranchers hit by drought, heat and hail, Foist said, noting those are three of the common valid natural disasters that may qualify a small businessman for loan money.

The SBA is not funding new disaster loan applications pending more budget information from the Office of Management and Budget. Still, persons are free to apply for the disaster loan money, made at interest rates ranging from 3 percent to homeowners to more than 13 percent for some businesses.

Guaranteed loans account for $26 million of SBA-backed money loaned out so far this fiscal year in West Texas. Under this program the SBA underwrites 90 percent of the loan, which is made by a private lending institution.

If the proposed Reagan budget cuts are approved, Foist says he sees no short-term problem in loan money being available. "The effect may not necessarily be on the small businesses. We suspect a lot of the slack may be picked up by the banks," he said, adding the "demand has been down anyhow" on these guaranteed loans. SBA officials say the guaranteed loan program basically allows banks to make longer-term loans to small businessmen.

Ford Shows Optimism After China Visit

PEKING (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford said today his talks with China's leaders make him "absolutely confident" the sensitive issues of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan and possible similar sales to China can be worked out.

Speaking with reporters at the end of a six-day visit to China, Ford said Chinese officials had been "pleased" by the personal messages he delivered on behalf of President Reagan.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda denounced Ford's visit to China, saying it was evident that Peking and Washington were collaborating against the Soviet Union. "Those who try to conduct a dishonest game behind the scenes lose in the long run," Pravda said.

Diplomatic sources, who asked not to be identified, said Ford had extended — on Reagan's behalf — an invitation to Premier Zhao Ziyang to visit the United States. Asked about this, the former president said he hoped Chinese leaders would visit the United States and that Reagan would visit China in the next year.

Ford called military sales to China a matter of "major importance." The matter of arms sales to Taiwan, which China opposes, can be solved "with wisdom and prudence and looking at the broad picture," he said. He declined to be more specific.

China has repeatedly warned the United States not to send arms to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan, contending that Taiwan is a part of the mainland and any arms sales represent interference in China's internal affairs. China also has let it be known it would like to buy American weapons if the United States is willing, so far U.S. officials have agreed to sell only military support equipment.

"I am absolutely confident," Ford told reporters, "that the administration in Washington and the leadership in China ... have the capability of working out a satisfactory solution to the problem of arms sales (to Taiwan)."

Diplomatic sources said that in three hours of talks with Ford, China's top leader, Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping was blunt and forceful in discussing Taiwan and arms sales, but was not antagonistic.

Thief Takes $2.4 Million

MONTREAL (AP) — The front door of the armored truck was unlocked, the keys were in the ignition and $2.4 million in cash and securities was stacked neatly in the back when the lone bandit struck. He hopped in, scared off a guard and drove off.

The guard and two others flagged a taxi and tried to give chase but couldn't keep up, police said. The dark blue armored truck was found in an east Montreal alley Thursday afternoon about an hour after it was taken — but the bandit and the loot were gone.

Constable Mario D'Arcy, a police spokesman, said investigators believe the thief must have had help emptying the truck, "because it was done so quickly." But authorities were unable to say whether the robbery was premeditated.

D'Arcy said the armored truck, owned by Alliance Securite Blindee, was making one of several stops at downtown financial institutions at about noon. The driver and one messenger had gone to lunch, leaving another guard in the back of the truck, when a man in his mid-30s wearing a construction helmet climbed in brandishing a paper bag.

Man Assessed Prison Term

Donald Ray Willard was found guilty of a March 8, 1980, aggravated assault Thursday and sentenced to two years in prison.

Willard, 26, of 2724 E. Ninth St. was convicted of shooting 19-year-old Gregory Lynn Evans with a shotgun during the incident last year. It took the 140th District Court jury 35 minutes to find Willard guilty and a little more than an hour to decide his sentence.

A third-degree felony, the aggravated assault charge carries with it a possible prison term of from two to 10 years.

Evans testified that the incident started when he stopped on an eastside parking lot to visit some friends. One of his friends was involved in an argument and was about to get in a fight, he testified.

The complaining witness told the court he stood back with his hands folded as the two argued, but a man he identified as Willard stepped forward and, after instructing him not to "mess with" his friend, hit Evans.

Evans said he got in his car and left. But, he said, he was followed by Willard, who eventually pulled a shotgun and fired at him. Evans said he was wounded by several pellets which struck him between his neck and his knees.

Eliminate Fat From Diet

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Some time ago you had a column on weight control. You said that you could do a lot to decrease your calories and still have plenty to eat if you just ate the right foods.

Well, what are the right foods? I have never been very successful with a diet because I cut down for the diet and then when I am off the diet I gain all the weight back again. I'm a real yo-yo.

This time I thought I would try to prepare foods I really like but use only those that were not high in calories. If I do that and exercise regularly, perhaps I can stand to diet and stay slim forever.

DEAR READER — You can certainly avoid regaining your excess pounds of fat if you stay with a sensible diet and exercise program.

Yes, you can have a fine balanced diet and have enough food to be satisfied if you follow some basic principles in food preparation.

The underlying principle is to eliminate all the fat you can in food preparation. Fat is the major source of calories. If that isn't enough, eliminate all the concentrated sweets you can.

Finally, learn that many foods are low in calories because they contain lots of water. That includes lean meat, fresh vegetables and most raw fruits.

The methods to use are outlined in The Health Letter number 9-12, Kitchen Power for Weight Control, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

For the meat group, use only very lean meat. For poultry, use white meat and take the skin off. Use the low-fat fish such as sole but avoid salmon and sardines. Never fry. Bake, boil or broil. Cut away all visible fat.

When cooking a roast, take it out about two-thirds along and remove the fat from the drippings by cooling. Then return and complete the roasting pocess. The relatively fat-free juices make good meat sauces.

Use nonfat dry milk powder for milk in cooking. Use nonfat milk for beverages. About half the calories in whole milk are from fat. If you follow a good routine, you can substitute kitchen power for willpower.

DEAR DR. LAMB — When the body lactic acid is too high, resulting in muscular aches, how can it be lowered? The person involved is allergic to milk products so doesn't eat or drink them.

DEAR READER — I wonder if you have lactose, the double sugar in milk, confused with lactic acid. Lactose is a combination of glucose and galactose found only in milk, from lactation.

Lactic acid is an intermediate compound in the process of breaking down glucose. If your working muscle does not have enough oxygen, it will still metabolize glucose to a point by forming lactic acid. This enables your muscles to get energy from glucose without using oxygen.

This usually occurs during vigorous exercise when the work exceeds the circulation to the working muscle. When the lactic-acid level gets too high, the person has muscular fatigue.

With rest, the circulation catches up with the oxygen needs, and the lactic acid is further metabolized, lowering its level. Rest is usually all that is needed. Physical training decreases the tendency to build up lactic acid with exercise.

New Design Battery Promising

RALEIGH, N. C. (UPI) — The zinc-chloride battery touted last year as the technological breakthrough that will return electric-powered automobiles to America's highways is living up to expectations in production tests, its developers say.

Gulf & Western Industries, which announced the new battery with much hoopla late last summer, has clamped a lid on the specifics of its testing.

But company officials in Greensboro, N. C., say a problem charging the battery in cold weather has been solved and they still maintain the battery will run a car close to 200 miles on a single charge at 55 mph — three times the range of conventional lead-acid batteries.

G&W has said its optimum-design car would have an operating cost of about 2.3 cents a mile, compared to 6.5 cents for the conventional gasoline-powered engine.

"It's been a very heavy year for us on testing," said John W. Rowan, president of G&W's Energy Department Associates in a telephone interview. "Our target numbers are holding up very well, but we won't know the final numbers until we run the actual road tests."

The emission-free battery consists of a mixture of zinc, chlorine and water, which is passed through a series of graphite cells. During charging, the zinc and chlorine are separated by passing the mixture across a series of graphite plates, upon which the zinc is deposited.

The chlorine gas combines with the water and is stored as slushy chlorine hydrate in a storage tank at -48 degrees Fahrenheit. When the battery is activated, the chlorine compound is again passed across the cells, this time combining with the zinc to produce electricity and power the car.

G&W began limited production of the batteries at the plant in Greensboro earlier this year, and is expected to annouce its optimum-design car sometime this spring.

The advantages of the system, says Rowan: a 200-mile range at 55 mph, a battery life of 200,000 miles, full efficiency for 90 percent of the charge, and cheap components.

A Volkswagen Rabbit converted to the zinc-chlorine system under a federal grant was unveiled at a flashy press conference in New York last August and had a range of 150 miles an hour. The lead-acid battery, by comparison, has a 50-75 mile range at 50 mph and begins losing power much sooner.

The cost factor gives the G&W battery a strong advantage over a nickel-zinc battery being developed by GM, said William H. Webster, acting chief of the U.S. Department of Energy's battery development branch in Washington. GM has said its vehicle would have a 100-mile range at 55 mph, but uses costly zinc, which is not avialable in great quantities in the United States.

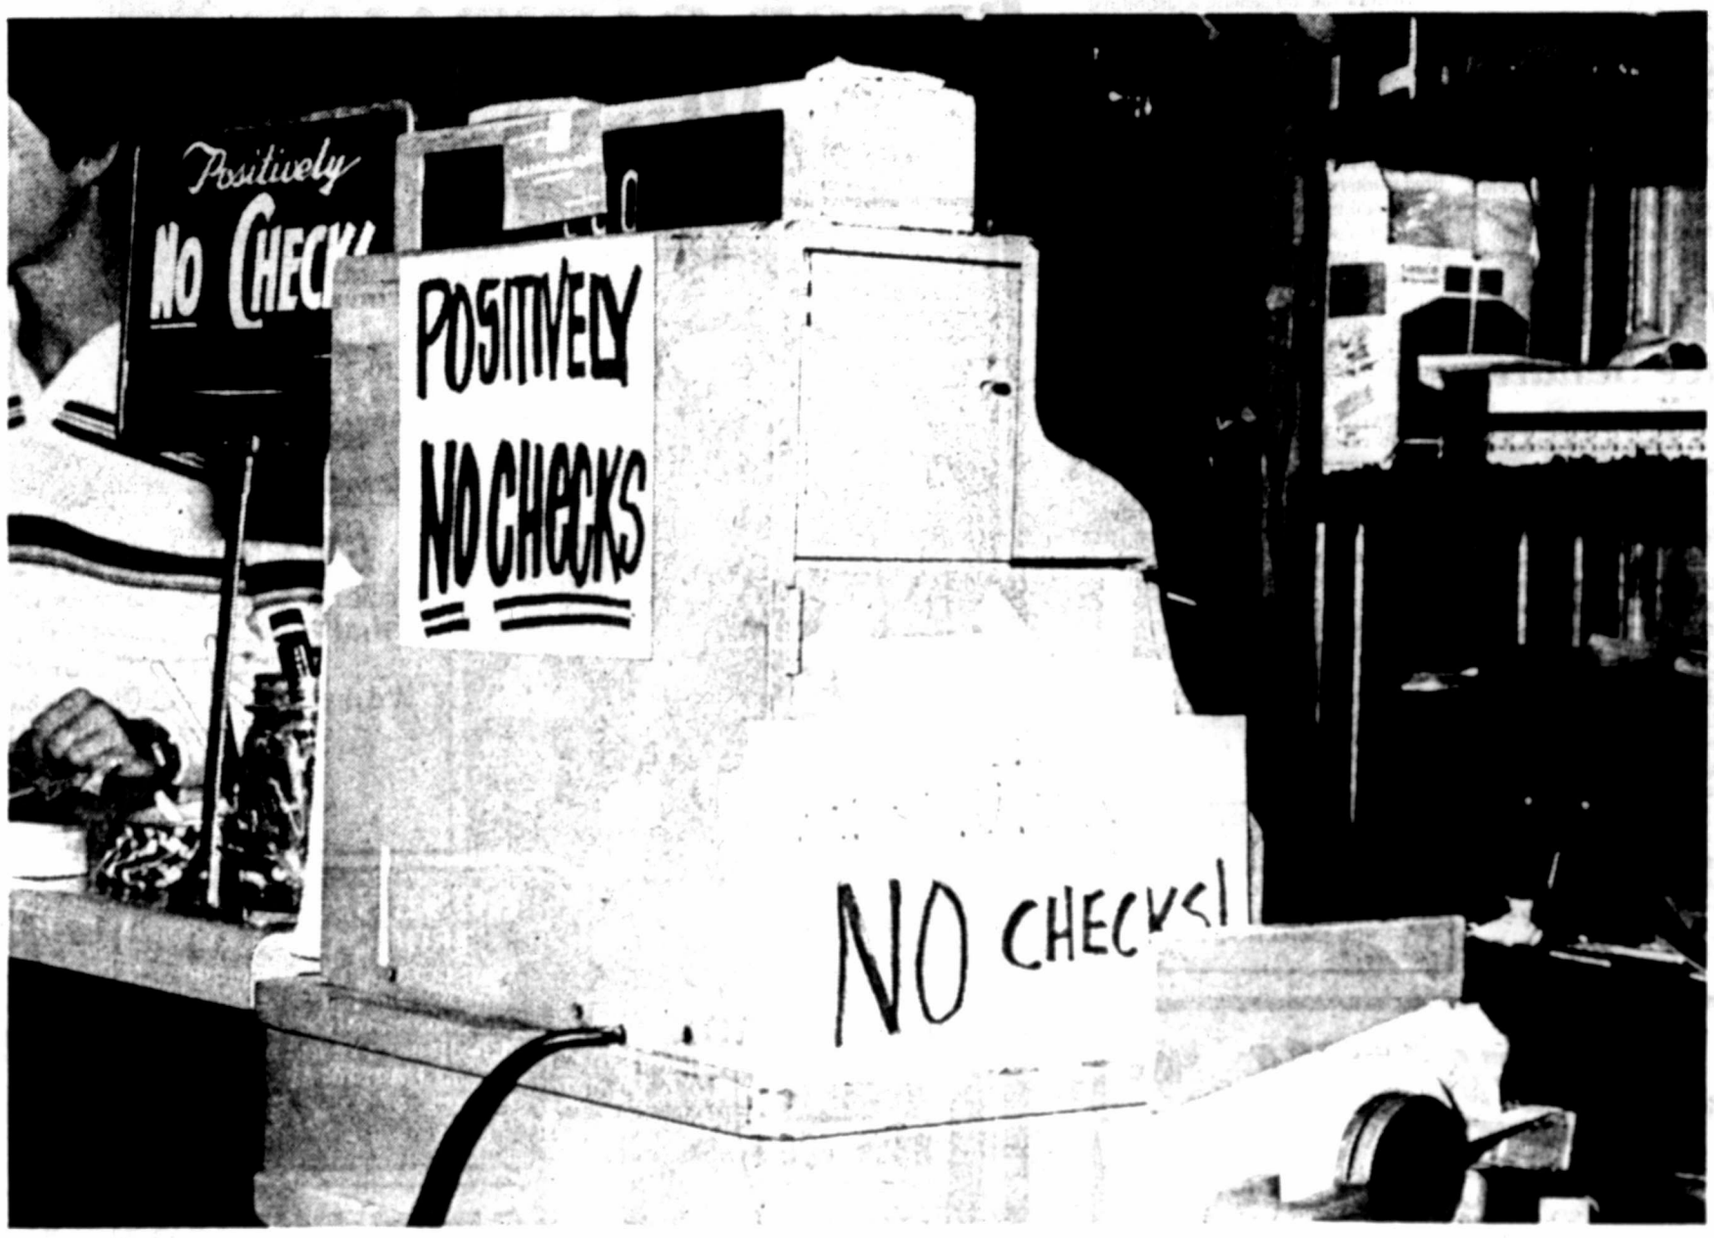

The GM battery has not been able to achieve a life of more than 20,000 miles, Webster said.

The Energy Department, which provided G&W the funds for its test of the Rabbit and has another project in the works to test the battery in a GM van, said the zinc-chlorine system may not be feasible for the smallest cars now on the market, because the battery needs to be of a sufficient volume to be efficent.

If everything goes according to schedule, the first zinc-chlorine cars should be generally available by 1985. The engine, at today's dollar value, would cost about $3,000 and an entire compact car about $8,500, G&W says.

TREE STREETS

When William Penn first saw the land now called Pennsylvania, he called it "Sylvania" for its beautiful woodlands. Then, when he laid out Philadelpia, he named the city's streets for trees: Chestnut, Walnut, Spruce, Pine. The idea caught on, and in many other American cities tree names sprouted on street signs, the National Geographic Society says.

Senator Brags About Influence

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sen. Harrison Williams Jr., facing trial next week on Abscam charges, allegedly told an undercover FBI agent while discussing a mine deal that "contracts" would be "no problem" because he had contacts reaching into in the White House, according to court records.

A transcript of the conversation, which the government said was videotaped in an Arlington, Va., hotel room on June 28, 1979, was made available this week by a clerk of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

It was included in records of the Abscam trial of two Philadelphia councilmen who were convicted of accepting cash from an undercover agent. The convictions were overturned on grounds the defendants were entrapped.

Williams, a New Jersey Democrat, is scheduled to go on trial Monday in federal court in New York on charges of bribery, conspiracy and receiving a financial interest in a titanium mine in return for using his political influence.

The conversation in Virginia allegedly concerned a titanium mine that Williams was promoting and that a fictitious sheik, played by an FBI agent, planned to purchase. The sheik allegedly was to give Williams a secret interest in the mine.

"We have something that is of the highest value and most unusual in our country, in the world as a matter of fact," the transcripts quote Williams as saying. "Titanium is now coming on to be one of the most valuable minerals or metals for space, for aviation, for defense, submarines, for the skin of the submarine. The Soviets are doing it; we're not. We are behind in this respect

"I only involve myself in something that I just completely believe in. With great pleasure I'll talk to the president of the United States about it and, you know, in a personal way and get him as enthusiastic and excited because we know what our country needs."

The transcripts indicate Williams also said he had influence with then-Vice President Walter Mondale — "He used to work for me, on the committee" — with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — "a neighbor back in New Jersey" — and the secretaries of the defense, Navy and Army departments.

"Well, in that respect, then, with you being in that position, contracts and the like would not be a problem,' agent Tony DeVito, masquerading as the sheik's representative, was quoted as saying.

"No problem, no," Williams replied, according to the transcripts.

Williams has denied any wrongdoing, contending he was set up by a government informant, Melvin Weinberg, who allegedly coached him on what to say to the sheik.

According to the transcripts, Williams attended the meeting with Mayor Angelo Errichetti of Camden, N.J., who has been convicted in an earlier Abscam case.

Indicted along with Williams and Errichetti were Alex Feinberg, a Cherry Hill, N.J., lawyer, and George Katz, a North Jersey garbage contractor and Democratic fundraiser.

DeVito was quoted as making it clear that Williams would receive stock in the mine for his influence, allegedly an 18 percent interest, and that the certificates would be held in another man's name.

"I talked with the mayor and Alex and we were discussing your shares and how to conceal it best and we came up with who, who do you want, or what name or how are we gonna handle it as far as you're concerned," DeVito was quoted as saying.

Williams was quoted as responding: "Well, in my situation, with Alex, you know Alex, we're very close ... I would work my situation with Alex..."

In New York, meanwhile, another in a series of motions by Williams to have charges against him dismissed was rejected by a three-judge panel of the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals. Two motions to have his trial delayed are still pending before another panel on the circuit court in Manhattan.

Wave Of Burglaries Plagues Pet Stores

CHICAGO (AP) — Exotic birds have been stolen and rare fish poisoned in their tanks in a wave of burglaries and vandalism that has hit pet stores on the Southwest Side, police say.

Officials said this week as many as a dozen stores have been victimized. Some of the fish and birds were worth $400 each.

"Besides the fact that the animals are dead, we're talking about some valuable merchandise that small businessmen like me can't afford to lose."

Social Security Hike Scheduled In July

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 36 million Social Security recipients will get a cost-of-living increase in July, probably of 11.2 percent but possibly a bit more.

The increase, smaller than the 12.3 percent boost predicted by the Carter administration two months ago, would push the average monthly check up by at least $37 to $371.

The exact increase will not be known until the Consumer Price Index for March is released on April 23, but could be 11.3 percent or 11.4 percent if the index climbs at a double-digit pace as it did in February.

Payments increase each July if the increase in the index exceeds 3 percent from the first quarter of one year to the first quarter of the next. Last July, benefits went up 14.3 percent, the biggest jump since Social Security was tied to the index in 1975.

The maximum monthly payment to a retiring 65-year-old worker would climb by at least $76 from $677 to at least $753 — $9,036 per year. If the worker has a spouse, the couple could collect combined payments half again as large, $1,130 a month or $13,560 a year.

To draw the top benefit, a just-retired worker would have to have been paying maximum Social Security taxes each year since 1959. Last year the tax reached a maximum of $1,589 on income of $25,900 and over; this year the maximum rises to $1,975 on incomes of $29,700 and over.

The average monthly payment to retired workers is now $334. An increase to $371 would make the yearly total $4,452. Again, that would be increased by one-half if the worker has a spouse.

The Reagan administration has ruled out any attempt to pare this year's increase as part of its budget cuts, counting Social Security benefits for the aged were a prime component of its so-called "social safety net."

However, the administration does want to cut Social Security benefits for college students and the minimum $122-a-month benefit.

The outgoing Carter administration predicted that benefits would climb 11.3 percent in July 1982 and 9.2 percent in July 1983. The Reagan administration, using a more optimistic economic forecast, predicts the 1982 increase will be 9.3 percent and the 1983 increase only 6.3 percent.

The increase will add more than $1 billion to the $11 billion in Social Security checks the government sends out each month.

Fishing Treaty To Face Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is ready to vote on a proposal to submit an ocean boundary dispute between the United States and Canada to international arbitration.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted unanimously this week to recommend that the Senate endorse a treaty under which both countries would agree to let the International Court of Justice set the boundary between Nova Scotia and New England.

After settlement of the boundary question, the United States and Canada would resume negotiations on a treaty allocating fishing catches off the New England and Canadian shores. At issue is Georges Bank, one of the world's richest fishing areas.

The proposed treaty could come before the full Senate as early as next week, but it also must be ratified by Canada to become effective.

Senate Sends District Courts Bill To Clements

By LARRY ARNOLD
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A bill which will create two new State District Courts on the South Plains and give a $12,000 raise to the Yoakum County Attorney is on the governor's desk awaiting his signature.

Senate approval Thursday of the Omnibus Court Bill, Senate Bill 596, sent the legislation to Gov. Bill Clements. The bill passed through the Senate without any changes being tacked onto it by House members.

Under the bill's proposals, Hockley and Cochran Counties will be in the new 286th Judicial District, with the new 287th District covering Parmer and Bailey Counties. A judge and district attorney for each of the new courts will be appointed by Clements.

Brownfield State Rep. Jim Rudd's House Bill 1728, which was incorporated into the bill approved Thursday, called for the creation of a new District Court from the 121st District of Cochran, Hockley, Terry and Yoakum Counties.

Rudd's incorporated legislation also sought prosecutorial duties for the Yoakum County Attorney. The new duties will make the attorney a state, rather than a county, employee and includes a pay hike of $12,000 to $32,000 per year.

The retention of the district attorney's office in Terry County, also was in the Brownfield legislator's House bill. That stipulation is included in the Omnibus Court Bill, which also calls for the creation of about 18 new State District Courts statewide.

Rudd said Thursday afternoon he expects Clements to sign the bill because it allows the governor to appoint the judges for the new district courts — something Clements wanted two years ago and which led to his veto of a bill that didn't give him that power.

A Brownfield attorney, Rudd said attorneys will "no longer have to hunt for a judge" when papers need to be signed or other court action is needed.

Rudd said under the current 121st District setup, lawyers frequently are faced with locating the lone presiding judge who may be in any one of the four counties. And after finding the judge, he said, attorneys then must call to find out if he will be in the same place long enough for them to drive 65 miles or more one way to get the paperwork handled.

The speedy trial act, which calls for the prosecutor to be ready to try a criminal case by 120 days after the accused is charged, also was a motivating factor in the creation of the two new district courts, Rudd said.

With the new courts, Rudd said, a case should be at trial "within six months" rather than tied up in a court's backlog.

The bill's fate was in question earlier this week when State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka said he opposed the pay hike for the Yoakum County Attorney.

Jesse George, Short's administrative aide, suggested Tuesday the 31-member Senate might reject the bill if Short was not pleased with the changes by the House because Yoakum County is in Short's 28th Senatorial District.

Short confirmed the bill's untouched passage through the Senate Thursday night, but did not elaborate on the legislation.

Rudd said Terry and Yoakum Counties will remain the 121st District Court, leaving Lamb as the sole county in the 154th District.

Since Gov. Clements called the legislation an emergency bill, it probably will be signed soon, Rudd said. He added Hockley, Cochran, Bailey and Parmer Counties will be without a district attorney and a district judge when the matter is signed, and temporary officials will be named to serve until Clements makes his final appointments.

Rudd noted another Omnibus Court Bill which calls for judges to be elected rather than appointed is in the hopper now, but is likely to be vetoed by the governor if it gets that far.

Lubbock Man Assaulted Inside Nightclub

A Lubbock man suffered a broken nose and at least one fractured rib in a beating about 1 a.m. today at a Texas Avenue bar, according to police.

Juan Ramirez, 26, was in satisfactory condition early today at Methodist Hospital. Ramirez told police he was playing pool inside the Sweet Retreat, 1812 Texas Ave., when, "for no apparent reason," two men attempted to start a fight with him.

The victim said he told the men he didn't want to fight, but one suspect slugged him in the face anyway. Ramirez said he fell to the floor and was kicked in the face and stomach by both men.

Reports state Ramirez managed to get out of the club and was taken to the hospital by his companions. Both suspects were described as short and between 26 and 35 years old. One man reportedly was white, and the other a Mexican-American.

Ogletree said he returned after being gone from his residence about five minutes to find his garage door ablaze. It appeared someone had poured gasoline on the floor and touched a match to it, he said.

Shannon D. Coffee, a bill collector, said he was knifed about 2:50 p.m. Thursday by a man from whom he attempted to collect a debt. Coffee said when he confronted the man at his business, the suspect pulled a knife and cut him on the right arm.

Coffee was treated at Methodist Hospital.

Peggy Mike said she lost $3,498 in money, jewelry and a television when her Lubbock residence was burglarized between 3:15 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Goods worth $1,305 were stolen Thursday morning from the home of Jerry Stevenson, 4117 Brownfield Road, Space 15, according to Lubbock police.

Someone forced the front door of the mobile home open between 10 a.m. and noon, making off with a 35mm camera, an assortment of jewelry and three watches, police said.

The Payne cooling units, each valued at $634, were stolen from new houses at 7702 and 7704 Vernon Ave., police said. The thefts occurred between Tuesday and Thursday, reports show.

'Taste Of Texas' Meal Climaxes Event

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Juicy morsels of beef, pork and lamb on a skewer, buttered carrots and homemade biscuits and honey weighed heavy on the dinner plates, but pride was perhaps most abundant as about 600 High Plains residents and Commisioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown sat down to a 100 percent Texas-produced feast Thursday at the Civic Center.

Billed as a "Taste of Texas," the meal featured citrus from the Rio Grande, vegetables from the High Plains, West Texas grain fed beef and salads, relishes and even pepper and sugar all produced within the state.

The buffet was the climax of the week-long South Plains Agriculture Awareness and Appreciation activities in Lubbock and was sponsored by the Food and Fiber Institute of Achievement and the Texas Department of Agriculture.

In his keynote address, Brown said convincing the public that the concerns of the farmers and ranchers should be the concerns of everyone may be the toughest job ahead for the agricultural industry.

"While some areas of the state blessed with abundant water supplies may be unconcerned with the water plights of other not-so-lucky regions, it is a fact that what affects one sector of the economy will surely affect another," the commissioner said.

"In West Texas, for example, there is concern that the Ogallala Aquifer may not be able to meet demands in 20 years," Brown continued. "People may think it's their problem, but agricultural production in the High Plains from irrigated acreage is important to our state's economy.

"The area accounts for 28 percent of Texas' wheat production, 25 percent of the state's cotton, 26 percent of the sorghum, and 62 percent of the corn production," he noted. "If this production is curtailed, shortages would certainly impact clothing and mat prices."

Brown said that without plentiful agricultural production, Texans would have to import a large amount of the food supply and there would be a strong pinch felt in the $30 billion that agriculture generates each year in the state's economy.

Initiative, Referendum Bill Promoted By Solon

By LARRY SUTHERLAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Initiative and referendum ability would limit the effect of lobbvists, according to a conservative state senator from Houston, and would give Texans a more direct voice in government.

Sen. Walter Mengden, who was in the city to drum up support for initiative and referendum legislation, told an audience of about 50 at a town hall meeting at Coronado High School that with such a bill, citizens could "veto any laws that they do not want or pass laws."

Mengden also said the proposal would limit the effects of lobbyists to get bills passed or killed, and he urged Lubbockites to support the measure, which is strongly favored by Gov. Bill Clements.

If initiative and referendum legislation becomes law, Mengden said, the input he has received so far indicates Texans would push for a bill to limit the terms of the governor and other high-level elected state officials.

Mengden said initiative and referendum also may be a way to place a tax limit on state govement and to have a voucher system which would allow parents a choice in deciding what schools their children attend. "It would give you freedom of choice," Mengden said of the voucher system.

Mengden's visit to Lubbock, one of several trips across the state he has made in support of initiative and referendum since the legislative session began, was sponsored by local chapters of the Eagle Forum, Citizens Against Pornography, the American Security Council and the Federation of Republican Women.

Although he primarily addressed initiative and referendum legislation, Mengden also spoke in favor of his bill to require a minimal level of achievement of school students before they could be promoted or graduate from high school.

And he said he supports legislation to require a "balanced approach" of the teaching of evolution and scientific theories of creation in public schools. Mengden said such a proposal would not allow religious doctrine to be included in the scientific creation discussion.

Reagan Enjoying Routine Of Being President

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan has settled comfortably into the routine of being president and seems to be enjoying his busy new life.

Although he has quipped of being "a bird in a gilded cage," Reagan strides down the corridors to the Oval Office at a brisk pace and with a smile on his face.

He has a regular morning staff meeting and gets a briefing from national security affairs adviser Richard Allen. Then he is ready for the raft of appointments, some official and substantial, some courtesy calls.

He rarely appears harassed, and does not seem to resent the time it takes to pose for a picture with a poster child — many of them are real charmers.

and has no hideaway study to use as a retreat. He conducts most of his public business in that office and in the nearby Cabinet Room.

Sometimes the parade of visitors seems relentless and Reagan frequently must shift intellectual gears. When old friends or new acquaintances come to call, he always has a story to tell — some of them old chestnuts — designed to put his guests at ease.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas seems to have forged a warm relationship with Reagan in these early days and has praised the president for holding informal sessions on legislation with him and House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill. If Reagan has his way, the political honeymoon will last longer than usual.

As with other presidents, there are watchful — sometimes anxious — aides standing by, clocking visitors in and out and making sure Reagan is primed for each one.

When Reagan goes into a long meeting on the economy or foreign policy, he has "talking papers" or a "briefing book" prepared, a sort of crash course in the subject at hand.

Like Dwight Eisenhower, Reagan wants biefing papers boiled down and the options listed on a page or two — nothing like the 48-page book handed to him the night before his state visit to Canada. The State Department has been told such ground work will be handled by the White House from now on.

Reagan is described as a "good listener" and apparently does not mind presiding over tedious budget sessions. In fact, there are indications he gets a real kick out of cutting "fat" from federal spending.

The big three at the White House — counselor Edwin Meese, chief of staff James Baker, and deputy chief Michael Deaver — run the show and in some ways run Reagan.

Meese has taken command of all policy decisions, and he keeps a tight control, exerting all his perogatives to maintain his power position.

Baker is in on all top domestic policy making, and keeps the White House apparatus churning smoothly.

Deaver calls himself "a body watcher" — he is the Oval Office gatekeeper and has a big say in who gets in to see the president.

Babies Placed On Waterbeds

CHICAGO (AP) — Infants who emerge prematurely from the womb have fewer problems if placed on tiny waterbeds, doctors say, and 24 area hospitals will be outfitting their incubators accordingly in an effort make such babies more at home in their new environments.

Incubator waterbeds help simulate the floating environment of the womb. High-risk babies placed on the gently rocking mattresses grow faster and have fewer breathing problems than those placed on conventional beds, says Dr. Henry Mangurten, director of the newborn intensive-care unit at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge.

"Waterbeds also keep pressure off critical joints that stick out in infants born eight-to 12-weeks prematurely," he said.

A Chicago company, Peppers Waterbeds, is making 200 of the incubator waterbeds and donating them to the Chicago-area hospitals.

Mangurten said he has been experimenting with a dozen waterbeds in his 30-incubator unit for two months and plans to do a more detailed study.

"We've found that the beds help premature babies with irregular breathing and heartbeats," said Mangurten. "The incidence of thesc episodes goes down significantly — they are fewer and less severe."

A study at Georgetown University Medical School indicated premature infants gained as much as 25 percent more weight and had greater head growth when cared for on waterbeds.

"They seem to grow as if they were still back in the womb," said Dr. Lloyd I. Kramer, who conducted the study. "We also found they could be handled a lot easier and rolled from side to side. And they often curl up in the fetal position, which was different from those on firm mattresses."

Some doctors say waterbeds are only helpful for premature babies. They say that infants who are mature enough to be taken home need a firm mattress to help them learn their first basic movements.

Prison Overcrowding Analyzed In Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — More prisons are not the answer to prison overcrowding, according to a consultant's report to the Justice Department.

According to figures in the $1.5 million study by ABT Associates Inc. of Cambridge, Mass. a quarter of the state prison systems have been found by courts to be in violation of the constitutional protections against cruel and unusual punishment.

The study recommended that states define minimal space needs for inmates and make reports, for judge to consider before sentencing, on the number of inmates released and on prison capacity.

Journalist Faces Prison Term

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — An American journalist who helped expand freedom of the press in Costa Rica now faces up to two years in jail under a suit accusing him of practicing his profession illegally.

Stephen Schmidt, 32, a New York City native who worked for the English-language Tico Times newspaper, could be sentenced to between three months and two years in prison if convicted.

At the core of the case is a debate over whether journalists should be licensed — an issue hotly debated in UNESCO — as well as an inter-school rivalry and fears that foreigners could take jobs away from Costa Ricans.

The charges against Schmidt are ironic because his victory in a 1978 libel suit filed by a land developer led to a Costa Rican Supreme Court ruling protecting the right of journalists to publish allegations of wrongdoing.

Although Costa Rica has the freest, and perhaps best, press in Central America, it also has a 1969 law under which no one can work as a journalist unless he is a member of the Costa Rican Journalists Association.

Sponsors of the law established strict membership requirements, arguing the news media has such power to influence public opinion that its responsibilities can only be met by well-educated journalists.

Members must be graduates of the government-run University of Costa Rica journalism program. There are no tests for admitting non-graduates even if they have working experience.

"In effect what they have is a closed union shop," Schmidt said in an interview. "They are more interested in protecting their jobs than in improving the quality of journalism."

The association has even turned down graduates from the Autonomous University of Central America in San Jose, saying its 18-month postgraduate course in journalism is inferior to UCR's five-year program.

Some Costa Rican newspaper editors say that is not true and blame part of the dispute on a "class war" between graduates of the two universities.

While some of the association's 300 members believe the law is too stiff, they stress it is seldom enforced and that no charges have been brought against the half-dozen other journalists working illegally in San Jose, most of them Americans employed by the Tico Times.

Schmidt, they say, was sued only because he spoke out in March at a seminar in Costa Rica, sponsored by the Inter American Press Association, on the pros and cons of licensing journalists.

Schmidt stood up and told Journalists Association Vice President Carlos Morales, "I am practicing journalism illegally and will continue to do so. What are you going to do about it?"

"In essense I challenged the association in front of the biggest newspaper editors in the hemisphere," Schmidt said. "They all knew I had been working illegally, but I embarrassed them."

Morales' answer was a suit charging Schmidt with the "illegal practice of journalism." After eight months of legal wrangling, it is expected to go to trial sometime in April.

'Gunsmoke' Stars Elected To Cowboy Hall Of Fame

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Directors of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame have elected three stars of the "Gunsmoke" television series to the western shrine's Hall of Fame of Great Western Performers.

James Arness, Ken Curtis and the late Milburn Stone will be added to the hall during Western Heritage Awards weekend, April 25-26. Another "Gunsmoke" star, Amanda Blake, was elected to the hall in 1968.

Trustees Awards will be presented to John Mantley, who produced more than 200 episodes of "Gunsmoke," and to actors Dennis Weaver and Buck Taylor and the wife of the late Glenn Strange.

The organization also elected two persons — Sallie Reynolds Matthews of Albany, Texas, and Murdo Mackenzie of Denver — to the Hall of Fame of Great Westerners.

After four years in which no film was judged worthy of a Western Heritage Award, the judging committee selected "Heartland" for the 1980 outstanding motion picture award.

Other award winners are:

—Art book: "Taos, a Painter's Dream," by Patricia Janis Broder.

By DONNA RAND
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A lawsuit against the U.S. government aimed at regaining more than 1 million acres of land in northeastern Arizona once inhabited by Hopi Indians is one of the major issues concerning the tribe, according to Abbott Sekaquattewa.

Sekaquattewa, chairman of the Hopi Tribal Council, discussed the litigation — along with some of his tribe's achievements and goals — Thursday before opening ceremonies of the Second Annual American Indian Symposium at Texas Tech.

The Hopi reservation was established in 1882 on 2½ million acres of land near Flagstaff, Ariz., Sekaquattewa said. But settlement by the Navajo tribe has diminished the size of the Hopi land to 1½ million acres, he added.

"The government did not protect our land rights and the boundaries of our reservation were not enforced," he said, because the Hopi is small and has no political clout.

Approximately 7,500 Hopi now live on the smaller reservation, he said, with 1,500 living outside the area. Sekaquattewa said nearly 60 percent of the his tribe's population is under the age of 18 and the majority of the youth living on the reservation probably will remain there throughout their life. However, he said, many will leave temporarily in the hopes of finding better employment before returning to the tribe.

The Hopi chairman said persons living outside the reservation mistakenly believe that the Indians simply farm the land and create arts and crafts to make a living.

But the reservation, Sekaquattewa said, is run much the same as any small town, with residents working in and owning local businesses, although arts and crafts remain an important part of the reservation's economy. Silver jewelry and other crafts are sold wholesale and marketed to tourists and outside businesses, Sekaquattewa said.

In the past, he said, the schools and many of the businesses were run by non-tribe members but today most persons now employed by the school system are Hopis who have obtained higher education degrees. He said more of the culture established in the past is taught and remains with students when Hopi tribe members are teaching in and running the schools.

However, he noted, "It is difficult to retain and maintain customs and rituals associated with our ancestors when we are living in a completely different world than existed in the past."

He cited outside pressures and a lack of understanding as reasons for the loss of some of the tribe's customs. He said curiosity seekers tend to ignore the significance of Hopi rituals and ceremonies and often disrupt activities. He added, however, that there are many outsiders who know the Hopi ways and value the tribe's rituals.

Sekaquattewa said the Hopi would like to continue to live on their own land, maintaining their own government and customs. At the same time, he said, the tribe plans to take advantage modern society and its developments in health care, education and technology.

GLENNETTE SHREVE
Industrial Lions Queen

Wolfforth Girl Named Queen Of Lions Club

A Frenship High School sophomore was selected Thursday night as the 1981 Lubbock Industrial Lions Club queen.

Glennette Shreve, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Shreve of Wolfforth, was chosen from five candidates. She will represent Lubbock Industrial Lions in the District 2T2 competition here April 16-18.

First runner-up was Nicole Webb, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F.A. Webb of 3110 80th St. She is a freshman at Evans Junior High School. Second runner-up was Shelley Hudson, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Hudson of 5415 79th St. She is a sophomore at Coronado High School.

The girls were judged on the basis of personality, poise and beauty. The judges were Nelouise Canup, Trudi Lewis and David Evans.

Store To Open In Lubbock

A September opening date tentatively has been set for Lubbock's H.J. Wilson Catalog Store, to be located in the former Grand Central Store building at 62nd Street and Slide Road.

The lease of the 82,800-square-foot building to the Baton Rouge, La., business was confirmed Thursday night by Rich Robins of The Boyer Company in Salt Lake City, Utah.

The lease agreement was signed last week with the shopping center's owner, Lubbock C.G. Associates. The Boyer Company is a general partner in the shopping center firm.

The H.J. Wilson Catalog Store is similar to two large catalog-showroom stores already in Lubbock.

RAFB Personnel Top Blood Drive Mark

Maintenance complex personnel at Reese Air Force Base not only topped record blood-giving at South Plains Blood Services, but added 72 pints to the mark for others to aim for in the future.

In two days, Reese topped by two pints the existing record of 304 in three days set recently by Alpha Phi Omega at Texas Tech University. When the three-day tally was in late Thursday, Reese AFB came away the new champion with 376 pints.

Staff Sgt. Richard Gibbs organized the blood drive.

Medical Radio Network Questioned At Meeting

By DEBBI STALTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A special meeting questioning why a two-year-old federal grant has not produced a workable emergency medical communications network in the region resulted Thursday in requests for outside engineering assistance with the design of the system.

The meeting, attended by area hospital and county officials, was called by South Plains Emergency Medical Services director Ed Paul. SPEMS is a private, non-profit organization charged with administering $300,000 in federal money to set up the communications system.

However Lubbock County Hospital District board member Don McInturff questioned at the Thursday meeting why the set-up is taking so long and asked for a fresh look at the system's design.

A meeting is expected to be called soon for SPEMS board members, consisting of consumers, health care providers and elected officials, to decide if there is enough local financial support to seek some new technical assistance in the matter.

One apparent problem has been the location of a base antenna to relay transissions from emergency vehicles.

Paul told the group Thursday that $120,000 has already been spent on equipment, with an additional $160,000 to $180,000 planned to be expended in the future. But without a decision on the location of the antenna, he noted, the final link in the network is missing.

An antenna already installed atop the Texas Tech University medical school was called unworkable late last year by Nelson Ray, Texas Department of Health engineering consultant who designed the system.

Ray was unable to attend Thursday's meeting because of illness. He will be asked to attend the future SPEMS board meeting.

Ray's opinion at that time was that location of the antenna atop the medical school would result in too much interference in transmission. The antenna is located adjacent to Lubbock County's individual Emergency Medical Services antenna.

Paul said Thursday that after consulting with the state engineer, he felt the best location for the antenna was outside the city. However McInturff questioned that opinion after hospital district board members were earlier told that increasing the height of the antenna could aid reception.

"This is tax money we're spending, and we need to find a location that will work," McInturff told those attending. "And I don't care if it's (the antenna) at Methodist, St. Mary's or Lubbock General."

Paul said that regardless of the tower's location, it would have to be at least 1,000 feet high to avoid communication interference.

"And I don't know of any building in Lubbock that will support a 1,000-foot tower," he said.

Jefferson Gets 20-Year Term

A Lubbock County jury handed down the maximum sentence allowed by law against Emmett Earl Jefferson Thursday after he was convicted earlier in the day on a charge of burglary of a building.

The 72nd District Court panel took 45 minutes to assess Jefferson a 20-year prison sentence and $5,000 fine for the second-degree felony. The jury had taken 50 minutes to find Jefferson guilty of the Nov. 3 burglary of an Amarillo Highway nightclub.

Lubbock police officers testified Wednesday morning in 72nd District Court that they found Jefferson in the building when they arrived at the scene. He was arrested and taken to the Lubbock County Jail.

One officer testified that he found a claw hammer and steel chisel at the scene which he took into custody as evidence.

Club owner Judy Duke told the jury that she was called out to her business during the early morning hours of Nov. 3 in in response to the activation of the burglar alarm there. The police were there when she arrived, she testified.

Load Management Saves Money For Utility Firms, Customers

By DAN LOHWASSER

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — When it was conceived in the 1970s it was a novelty. For the 1980s, the concept of "load management" by electric utilities may become an absolute necessity.

It is designed to reduce peak demand for electricity on a utility's generating system. Since power companies use all of their generating capacity only during certain peak hours, reducing the load then cuts back on the need for expensive construction of new power plants.

Duke Power Co., which serves 1.1 million residential customers in the two Carolinas, a Sunbelt region of growing power demands, offers what is considered one of the most advanced load management programs in the country.

It has special rates for customers who insulate their homes to special standards, use less electricity during peak hours and permit the company to cut off power to their air conditioners and water heaters in times of emergency.

Since the program began in 1974, Duke reported, peak demand — adjusted for growth — had declined by the equivalent of the production of two older coal-fired generating plants.

James Rickard, who manages Duke's program, said the company estimates by 1994 load management will have have enabled it to avoid $10.4 billion in new construction, well above the company's present capitalization of around $6 billion.

"We developed the concept in 1974. With OPEC and everything happening, we forecast that for a 15-year period we would be unable financially to support construction of new plants required for our expected load," said Rickard.

The program was conceived on the spot as very serious business, he said. "It has become far more important, and no doubt as we go along, with inflation and increasing costs of capital, its importance will continue to grow."

Duke is spending about $10 million a year, promoting and capitalizing its load management program. Other utilities have adopted load management programs similar to Duke's, although Rickard noted some companies have more capacity than they know what to do with.

Last November, Virginia Electric and Power Co. scrapped plans for an entire nuclear unit in favor of load management. Southern California Edison expects growth will diminish from around 10 percent to 3 percent in the 1980s, partly as a result of load management.

The three major elements of Duke's program deal with special rates for different periods of the day, energy-efficient home construction, and interruptible service.

An approved energy-efficient home, Rickard said, can result in a special rate on electricity of 2 to 19 percent under the conventional kilowatt-hour cost.

Special money-saving options are available to 28,000 Duke customers now, with the number expected to increase to 81,000 by the end of the year.

A time-of-day option offers a 40 percent rate reduction for electricity used during non-peak periods, and penalizes a customer heavily for electricity used in peak periods of 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the summer and 7 a.m. to noon in the winter.

Researchers Studying Fuel Alcohol Feasibility

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

A cooperative effort by three High Plains dynasties could launch a profitable sideline industry in the area.

Cotton, cattle and oil, which together form the triangular economic base in this semi-arid region, are part of a unique fuel alcohol study by Texas Tech University scientists and a private, Lubbock-based agricultural research corporation.

The plan calls for a highly integrated fuel alcohol production system to be established at area feedlots. The alcohol is to be made primarily from cotton gin trash or 'burs' with the left over pulp or "mash" being fed wet to the cattle on site.

Adding to the plan's efficiency, the fuel alcohol would be sold on the open market and the collected by-product carbon dioxide be sold to area oil companies for extracting petroleum from underground.

Agriculture Research and Development, Inc., comprised of area businessmen and farmers, has teamed with TTU chemical engineers and animal scientists to examine the feasibility of such a system.

The state of Texas issued a $185,000 grant, the first of its kind, to partially fund the project and another $55,000 grant was received from the federal government.

According to Dr. Davis Clements, chemical engineering associate professor, Texas Tech researchers are providing the support and expertise to the project while ARD is providing access to a newly fabricated 800-gallon-a-day alcohol production plant in Lubbock.

BUR BREWERY — A team of Texas Tech University chemical engineers and animal scientists is cooperating with Agriculture Research and Development, Inc., a Lubbock-based company, to investigate the feasibility of making fuel ethanol from cotton burs. This system — consisting of a bin, boiler, fermentation tank, water tank, beer holding tank, beer column and dehydration column — is capable of producing 800 gallons of 99 percent ethanol a day. (Staff Photo).

Cotton burs, which produce about 50 gallons of ethanol per ton, were chosen for the main "feedstock" because of their availability.

"In the immediate area surrounding Lubbock some 2 billion pounds of cotton gin trash are collected annually," Clements said. "The burs are gathered as a part of the normal harvest-ginning process as opposed to sorghum or corn stalks which are generally left in the field.

"The cost for gathering corn or sorghum stalks or other 'worthless' feedstocks," he said, "greatly increases the cost of producing alcohol from them."

Cotton burs already constitute a small portion of the ration at most feedlots in the area, but the animal scientists are expected to analyze the nutritional value of the concentrated wet mash as well as the dollar value of the by-poduct and what percentage of the ration the bur mash could compose.

ARD chairman of the board D. W. Lewter of Lubbock, who built the 50,000-head capacity feedlot on the Slaton Highway in 1955 and fed cattle until 1973, said it is almost impossible to make money consistently in the feedlot business now.

"I really think it won't be long until alcohol plants are commonplace at feedlots," Lewter said. "Feeding the wet mash as it is made could lower feed costs and the fuel alcohol made could be used for the operation's own needs or sold on the open market."

Having a still or alcohol production system at a feedlot rather than at a separate location would enhance the quality of the feedstuff by eliminating the need for long storage periods and transporting the substance, Lewter pointed out.

The pilot plant consists of a storage bin, boiler, fermentation tank, heat exchangers, water tank, beer holding tank, beer column and absolute or dehydration column, much like the design used by Germany to fuel its World War II effort.

The researchers say the dehydration process is the key to producing a high quality, almost pure alcohol.

"As the liquid comes out of the fermentation tank, it is only about 6 to 10 percent alcohol," explained Clements. "From the beer column, the alcohol is about 50 percent, but the dehydration step results in a 99 percent alcohol which runs well in vehicles because of the lack of water."

At the "reasonably conservative" conversion rate of 50 gallons per ton, Clements noted, the area's bur supply represents about 50 million gallons per year of ethanol. He added that the annual statewide 40 billion pounds of collectible residue could result in 1 billion gallons of ethanol a year.

The pilot plant is capable of producing 800 gallons a day with one cycle taking about 24 to 36 hours. The 500,000 gallons produced annually by such a system is about half of the requirement of a feedlot the size of the Lubbock one.

Lewter said some long range "dreams" are to use methane made from the feedlot's manure supply to fire the still, which presently uses natural gas, and to establish a plant at major cotton gins.

It is too early to determine how much such a plant would cost, but Lewter said many of the feedlots already have storage bins and boilers that could be tied into the system to reduce the expense.

Clements said the project is drawing on the expertise of scientists, economists, businessmen and lawyers in an effort to examine every aspect of the operation and the non-resolved questions.

For example, a team of lawyers is laying the framework to determine who actually owns the gin trash — the ginner or the farmer — and who should get the profits.

The chemical engineer also said ways to handle the burs, which clump together instead of flowing or shoveling well like grain, are being devised. He said the burs must be ground, at an additional expense, to hasten the cooking process.

Though a few other institutes in the United States have conducted a limited amount of research on cotton burs for fuel alcohol, Clements said the Lubbock area is ideal for such a project.

"Every element that is essential for a successful fuel ethanol production system is available in this area," Clements said. "We have the feedstock, a market for the alcohol, a market for the by-product in the feedlots and a market for the carbon dioxide product to oil companies."

The researcher said if the study proves feasible, such plants could be in operation at area feedlots in about 18 months.

It seems cotton, cattle and oil will remain the kings of the Texas High Plains economy, but alcohol production plants at area feedlots could be a prince of a sideline business.

Heritage Sale Consignments Made In Area

Several area consignments have been made to the Heritage Sale of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association during the TSCRA's annual convention Sunday through Wednesday in Fort Worth.

"For 104 years, cattlemen from Texas and surrounding states have made the annual trek to the TSCRA convention," said John S. Cargile, association president from San Angelo.

"It is a habit and as natural as spring roundup or going to the auction barn for these men and women."

The TSCRA expects more than 2,500 cattlemen and their families for this year's convention, trade show, Heritage Sale and formal dedication of the association's new home offices.

Most business meetings will be in the Tarrant County Convention Center or the Hyatt Regency across the street.

Vice President George Bush will deliver the keynote address at the kickoff luncheon Monday in the convention center. Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University, will be among the convention speakers.

The Heritage Sale will feature 15 royally-bred Quarter Horses, 15 registered bulls of all breeds, and 15 pieces of Western art and sculpture. Ruben Reyes of San Antonio will be the auctioneer.

Among the horse consignors are John E. Birdwell III of Whiteface, Pitchfork Land & Cattle Co. of Guthrie, Scharbauer Cattle Co. of Midland, and the W. T. Waggoner Estate of Vernon.

Paul Wylie of Lubbock is among the Western art consignors. Admittance to the Heritage Sale will be by advance registration and ticket only.

Gov. William P. Clements Jr. and U. S. Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Tex., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, will address the convention.

Other speakers will include Assistant Secretary of Agriculture C. W. "Bill" McMillan; J. W. "Bill" Swan, president of the National Cattlemen's Association from Rogerson, Idaho; John Huston, president of the National Live Stock and Meat Board; and Mrs. Ann Woolley, president of the National CowBelles from Ada, Okla.

A new administration in Washington, an uncertain economy in transition, lagging consumer demand for beef and a depressed cattle market are all concerns the ranchers will take up during the meeting, Cargile said.

The convention will open with the 150-exhibit trade show at 1 p.m. Sunday. In addition to live animal exhibits, the trade show will include the latest in farm and ranch equipment, agricultural products and services, and the work of the nation's best known artists and craftsmen.

Much of the activities on Monday and Tuesday will involve committee meetings on animal health, agricultural research, association promotion, wildlife, land use and the environment. Several policy statements are expected to come out of these meetings.

Tours of the new TSCRA Foundation headquarters are scheduled each day of the convention, with formal dedication ceremonies set for Monday afternoon. All registrants will be invited to burn their brands into the walls of the training center in the headquarters.

The new headquarters building, in which TSCRA has offices, also contains a Western museum, the training center, and a research library open to the public.

The Texas CowBelles, a cattle industry auxiliary group dedicated to beef promotion and education, will meet in conjunction with the Cattle Raisers.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

DOMESTIC POLITICAL PRESSURE, which threatens to make itself felt in language of the 1981 omnibus farm bill, could force the Reagan administration to end the embargo on grain exports to the Soviet Union soon, Rep. William Wampler, R-Va., said this week.

Wampler, ranking minority member of the House Agriculture Committee, spoke at the annual meeting of the National Grain and Feed Association at Orlando, Fla.

He said he is "optimistic" the embargo will be lifted soon. Otherwise, he said, the administration may find itself with a farm bill it could not accept.

Wampler said Congress, listening to appeals from farm groups, might set commodity price support loan rates in the farm bill at levels too high for the administration to approve if the embargo is not removed.

Some grain industry officials at the meeting expressed concern that the administration might "trade off" higher loan rates and some favorable provisions of the farm bill in return for not lifting the embargo.

THE ADMINISTRATION HAS GIVEN no assurances the embargo would be lifted soon, Wampler said, and he conceded that international events such as developments in Poland will play an important role in the decision.

He added, however, that from a practical political point of view, the embargo will have to be lifted soon if the administration hopes to get the bulk of its farm bill proposals enacted.

Protection for farmers against future commodity export embargoes will be "an important part" of the 1981 farm bill, Wampler said. This protection, he said, would apply to embargoes imposed for any reason.

Wampler also said he has introduced a bill to increase U. S. agricultural research and hopes it will be part of the general farm legislation.

He said agricultural research efforts now are "overcentralized" within the U. S. Department of Agriculture to the detriment of state efforts.

Too much research now is aimed at modest improvements in agricultural output, he said, rather than at quantum increases in productivity.

MEANWHILE, CROP ANALYST CONRAD LESLIE this week said any withdrawal of East Bloc troops from Poland could bring an end to the grains embargo as early as this weekend. His remarks were made at a Wisconsin grain meeting.

Leslie said Washington observers had told him consideration was given to lifting the embargo last week but increased tensions in Poland over the weekend may have influenced the administration to postpone the move.

He said a decision to lift the embargo at this time could be questioned with soil moisture reserves so uncertain.

Leslie is forecasting U. S. wheat production will be in surplus while soybean production will be balanced with consumption and every bushel of corn produced will be utilized during the coming crop year.

In addition, corn carryover reserves likely will be tapped, strengthening prices. Soybean prices will strengthen as the year progresses if world supplies tighten, he said.

GRAIN MARKETS PRESENTLY ARE SENSITIVE to weather news, he pointed out. And it can be "very dangerous" to establish positions in a weather market, he added.

Even with current dry conditions, he said, the corn market has been depressed by sales of the feed grain coming out of the farmer-held reserve. Once those sales are completed, he said, corn supplies probably will tighten.

"If I were a farmer, I would not be selling corn until Aug. 20 or so," Leslie said. Then prices should be firm into September, he said, "unless we are overwhelmed by the size of the U. S. crop."

If the national corn crop this year is only average, he said, the unusually small carryover supplies will have to be tapped to fill consumption needs.

Evidence of any U. S. crop shortage would result in Europeans booking American feed grains rather aggressively, the analyst said, because of the precarious world feed grains situation.

Current marketing year months erased early gains to finish down eight points, with spot May at 87.02 cents, and new-crop months ended unchanged to up 15 points, with December up the most at 82.90 cents.

Floor brokers said the market had added as much as 90 points in May on speculative buying but retreated on local and trade selling.

Analysts attributed speculative support to fresh buying ahead of the USDA's weekly export report, with an eye on recent rumors of large sales of U. S. cotton to China, as well as to sympathy with strong gold prices.

It was reported that unexpected rainfall earlier this week damaged a large amount of Nicaragua's unpicked cotton crop along the Pacific coast.

NET U. S. COTTON EXPORT SALES for the current season totaled 61,200 running bales during the week ended March 19, the USDA reported after the close. The sales were mainly to South Korea, Japan, Indonesia, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

New-crop sales were 32,200 bales, boosting the 1981-82 total to 173,800 running bales. The 1980-81 export commitment — shipments plus undelivered sales — was 5,587,200 running bales.

Shipments for the week of 188,500 bales hiked exports for the season to 3,914,400 running bales, compared with 3,725,900 a year ago.

"The export figures were within the range of expectations and shouldn't affect the market much, if any," one analyst said.

Government-Owned Corn Sold In Area

Commodity Credit Corporation is selling government-owned corn in West Texas in competition with and at the expense of High Plains grain producers. This is corn which had been contracted for sale to Russia and which the U.S. Department of Agriculture bought from the grain companies after the embargo.

CCC relocated the corn in the West Texas area last fall and winter in order to make room for the 1980 corn crop in the corn belt. Unit trainloads were shipped from as far north as Illinois and Minnesota. It is reported that over 52 million bushels of corn were relocated in West Texas.

Grain Sorghum Producers Association (GSPA) recognized the potential damage to local grain markets and began last December appealing to USDA to establish a sales policy for this corn that would not disrupt the grain market in the High Plains area. Such policies have not been implemented.

CCC contends that the corn will not be sold for less than 105 percent of the national average call level for reserve corn and then not below the market price. An exception is made for the corn that is going out of condition or will not grade "number three or better." It is doubtful that much of this corn will grade number three or better when it is loaded out because of breakage in handling. CCC can, by claiming this exception, sell all of the grain at discounted prices.

Almost 1 million bushels of the corn had been sold, mostly to West Texas buyers, by March 15. This was corn that graded "sample" grade when it arrived at the storage destination. It was sold on a bid basis at prices not less than CCC determined the local market price to be, less their normal discounts for sample grade grain. These prices were determined after the government paid the transportation and relocation costs. The government's cost of grain and transportation was not used as part of the sale price formula.

Grain prices have steadily deteriorated in the High Plains area since the corn was moved in. Grain buyers have anticipated that the entire 52 million bushels would eventually be released within the area, probably at discounted prices. Now CCC is basing their pricing formula on this area's depressed prices. During this same time, prices in the rest of the country, especially the corn belt, have strengthened.

GSPA contends that CCC does not allow for the strength that would have developed in High Plains markets if the relocated corn had not been available and in competition with locally grown grain.

This corn, according to GSPA, should be sold only for export. If it is sold for domestic use, it should not be sold for less than the current market price in the area in which it was grown, plus freight and relocation charges. Anything less creates an artificial marketing situation that will weaken the market prices in the High Plains area even while the rest of the nation, especially the area in which this corn was grown, will experience stronger prices.

The volume of corn that was relocated in West Texas is more than half as much as the combined corn production of West Texas, Eastern New Mexico and the Oklahoma Panhandle in 1980 — enough to completely wreck the High Plains grain markets.

GSPA has requested the assistance of area congressmen to work with USDA in finding a more equitable way to dispose of CCC relocated corn.

Grain Demand Variants Include Future Prices

By RODERICK TURNBULL
KANSAS CITY BOARD OF TRADE

KANSAS CITY — The pattern for cash prices on grains is established by prices on futures markets, but cash values don't always exactly follow the patterns.

Sometimes futures prices will rise, while the quotation at the country elevator stays the same. On the other hand, sometimes the future price will go down and still the cash price stays the same. Or, the futures price may stay the same and the cash value increase.

And all of this has a tendency to confuse both buyer and seller on what actually does determine price. The simple answer is that supply and demand set the price, both on grain traded for future delivery and that for delivery immediately, and there can be a difference.

This winter has been a good one to demonstrate that fact. The difference between the futures price and the cash price at any certain locality shows up in what is called the basis, or in the "premium" offered by the buyer.

Another way of trying to explain the situation is to say that if the buyer wants grain, wheat as an example, he has to pay what it takes to get it, regardless of the futures market. Also, the seller has to accept a price that somebody will pay. In either case, the cash price will not stray far from the futures price in the nearest contract month.

Farmers, of course, understand that the local price for wheat will not be the same as the price paid for delivery on a futures contract. The contract traded in futures at the Kansas City Board of Trade calls for delivery of wheat at an elevator in Kansas City. The cash price received by the farmer at his local elevator must take into account the local elevator's handling charges, including its profit, plus the transporation cost to Kansas City.

This difference between the local elevator and the Kansas City futures price is called the basis.

But there also is another figure to be calculated in the basis, or what the elevator can pay, and this in grain trade language is the "premium."

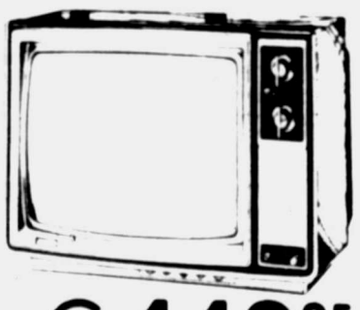

The following paragraph from a grain market letter of a recent day, telling about price trends in the previous week will help set the stage for continuing the explanation.

"Wide variations appeared in cash wheat premiums. Hard winters were up 6 to 8 cents, as generally slow pace of country movement forced mills and other local buyers to scramble for limited offerings. At the same time, springs were off sharply, dropping 8 to 14 cents in ordinary to 15 percent and 2 cents in 16 to 17 percent. Receipts, particularly of low and middle proteins, were sizable and overburdened local demand."

"Premiums on hard winters were firm to 2 cents a bushel up, springs unchanged to 10 cents off, hard amber durum steady to 5 cents off and soft red unchanged."

The first paragraph quoted illustrates that premiums will vary on different kinds of wheat. Buyers of hard red winter wheat had to raise their premiums to get adequate quantities to fill their needs.

THE FIGURES FROM THE U.S. DEPARTMENT of Agriculture hogs and pigs report sent the livestock industry from the depths of depression to the heights of euphoria this week. Friday's quarterly report indicated total hogs and pigs were down 9 percent from a year earlier, a figure so bullish that it left some participants in the industry shocked.

The fresh pork market was very strong yesterday — including some buying for storage purposes. Trading was said to have been active and demand good, especially for frozen product. These gains made the pork products profitable for packers literally overnight, and has caused packers to be aggressive buyers of hogs.

Cash live hog prices yesterday were 25 to 75 cents lower as top prices range from $40 to $41.75. The outlook for cash hog prices for today is steady to easier as packers are fairly confident of adequate hog runs on Monday and will not need to be aggressive buyers today. However, the outlook for cash prices over the next month now doesn't appear as bearish as it did prior to the pig crop report. There was widespread thought, before the report, that cash hog prices would decline to around $35. Now it appears that the $40 area may be the low on cash over the next month when the fall pig crop will still be moving into market channels. However, there is still the possibility that hog runs will be sporadically light in late April as farmers move into the fields for spring planting.

Last September and October, following the September pig crop report which showed a 10 percent reduction in supplies, there was ample buying of pork for storage. That type of buying diminished following the December report, which showed only a 5 percent reduction. But buying for storage appears to have resumed again this week as last Friday's report indicated an 8 percent reduction in market hogs. This indicates a short-term modified supply and an 11 percent reduction in hogs kept for breeding, which points toward a long-term short supply the rest of this year. That is keeping the fresh pork market very strong this week and giving considerable support to cash and futures for live hogs.

FACED WITH AN EXPECTED 30 PERCENT increase in feed prices in 1981, hog and cattle producers will be hardpressed to translate anticipated higher livestock prices into profits because production costs are also rising, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In a summary of a report on cost of producing livestock in the U.S., USDA said cattle producers will stand a better chance of recovering production costs than hog producers this year. Figuring costs for an average operation on a national basis, USDA said operators of hog-farrow-to-finish operations will lose $9.72 on total non-land production costs for every hundredweight of sales, compared with $9.30 in losses per hundredweight in 1980.

The back-to-back annual losses for average producers "will exert great pressure for more rapid adjustment toward larger and more efficient operations for both pig production and finishing," USDA said. Returns above total non-land costs for fed beef will average 45 cents for every hundredweight of sales in 1981, compared with $4.20 last year. Returns for feeder cattle above costs for an average producer will be $9.66 per hundredweight, up from $7.89 last year.

Feed prices are the main variable this year because of drought-reduced stocks. Another poor weather year could boost feed costs well above projected levels, USDA said.

IF THE CHICAGO MERCANTILE EXCHANGE was the epicenter of Friday's USDA hogs and pigs report earthquake, it only follows that the effects would be felt two blocks down the street at the Chicago Board of Trade.

That is what happened early in the week as limit-up livestock and meats markets touched off buying of grain futures at the CBT. Some traders feel speculative shorts in meats found themselves unable to cover in the limit-up CME markets and so they instead covered at the grains and soybean markets at the CBT.

Theoretically, some of these participants might have held short positions in the grains also, but analysts said it is difficult to discern even how much CME-related buying took place, let alone how many had positions at the CBT. "People are so trapped in the meats that what it comes down to is they're looking for anything to protect their (equity) positions or limit their losses."

There is only one problem with this desperation short covering. The thrust of the hogs and pigs report was fundamentally bearish for feedgrains. Fewer than expected feedgrain-eating animals, as the hogs and pigs report indicated, implies less than expected demand for corn and soybeans. This issue did not appear to matter as prices rose. The most-often mentioned offsetting factor was the weather forecast. As traders see it, each week in which it is not supposed to rain can mean a week of higher prices, and vice-versa. Still, the debate about whether it is premature to trade on weather factors continues.

It is true that the soybean crop has not yet even been put in the ground but weather-market enthusiasts claim that doesn't matter — dry conditions now will affect both planting conditions and intentions. As of late yesterday, rain was expected over the weekend in growing regions for the major commodities, and down came price.

THE GROWTH OF THE NATION'S MONEY supply, the pool of funds quickly available for spending, apparently has been at a much faster clip this year and may be more inflationary than originally thought. A growing number of bankers and economists say the method used by the Federal Reserve System to compile the money statistics has significantly underestimated the strength of the important economic measure. This, in turn, some of the specialists contend, allowed the Fed to relax its credit reins more than it otherwise would have done in the past several weeks. What it suggests, according to one observer, is that interest rates wouldn t be quite as low as they are now.

At issue is the way the Federal Reserve treats deposits in popular NOW accounts in computing the basic money supply known as MI-B. The Fed includes NOW deposits in MI-B but it doesn't adjust the numbers to take into account seasonal patterns as it does with other components of MI-B: Cash in the public's hands and regular-checking account deposits. Checking deposits, for example, normally rise sharply at the end of the year, then decline quickly in the beginning of the following year. Seasonal adjustments are designed to smooth the distortions.

THE RIO GRANDE VALLEY REPORTS a slow rate of cotton planting due to unseasonably heavy rains a couple of weeks ago. The Coastal Bend has seen some replanting of cotton due to rain and cool temperatures. In the long run, though, the moisture should be beneficial, especially when it is recalled that last season at this time both areas were suffering from drought. Blacklands and Upper Coast are on the dry side but nothing at this time to be concerned about. Actually, these soil moisture deficits are a reminder, or carryover, of last summer's drought and low rainfall pattern prevalent the first half of this winter.

In the Low Plains and High Plains, and farther west, abnormally heavy fall and winter precipitation has resulted in a very favorable soil moisture situation as planting time approaches. The Delta mainly has moderate drought. Given a good 1 to 3-inch series of showers and thunderstorms, however, this dryness could be remedied, at least as it concerns immediate crop moisture needs. Areas where soybeans follow what would especially welcome a more active rain pattern. Unless excessive, an increased rainfall pattern over the Delta should be beneficial, even though it may cause some delays in cotton planting operations.

Cotton planting continues to make good progress in Arizona. Overnight minimums in the Phoenix area have been hard-pressed to get much below 55 degrees. In California, land preparation for cotton planting continues and irrigation supplies are adequate.

Wheat Nitrogen Deficiency Warning Aired

AMARILLO (Special) — Recent moderate rain plus favorable temperatures have caused wheat to commence spring growth, and now is the time to watch carefully for signs of insects, disease and nutrient deficiencies, cautions an agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Dry fall and winter conditions restricted growth so not much nitrogen had been used, said Dr. Frank Petr, the area agronomist.

"Therefore, the number of wheat fields deficient in nitrogen may be less than in wetter seasons when more forage is produced and removed from the field by grazing," he said.

On the other hand, the increased cost of nitrogen and irrigation plus the poor wheat prospects due to dry conditions last fall have resulted in many fields not receiving adequate fertilizer prior to planting.

"These are the fields to watch closely," the extension agronomist said.

Wheat foliage may appear light green when growth resumes after irrigation or rain if the weather is cool and cloudy.

"If this yellow-green color persists after several days of sunshine, you can be reasonably certain the condition is due to inadequate nitrogen," Petr said.

The presence of vigorous darker green wheat growth around cattle droppings and urine spots is added evidence that nitrogen is deficient, he noted. If the field has not been grazed, it is necessary to verify that the abnormal wheat foliage color is not due to disease.

"Wheat streak mosaic virus has somewhat similar superficial symptoms. A close look at the leaves reveals an irregular mosaic or mottled pattern of yellowish and normal green if wheat streak mosaic virus is the problem.

"Quite often the disease symptoms will be worse in the southwestern corner of the field where the virus-laden vector, the wheat curl mite, is carried to the wheat by prevailing winds."

The presence of volunteer wheat, rangeland, or even a corn or sorghum field in the vicinity of the initial outbreak will aid in the confirmation of the diagnosis, the agronomist said.

Dryland wheat fields that are deficient in nitrogen should be fertilized with 30 to 40 pounds of nitrogen, the extension specialist advised. Irrigated wheat fields that are showing nitrogen deficiency symptoms should receive at least an initial application of 60 pounds of actual nitrogen, he said.

Under full irrigation, additional nitrogen could be applied through the irrigation system. The nitrogen can be applied in the dry form as ammonium nitrate, ammonium sulfate or urea. Nitrogen solutions can also be used effectively, he said.

"Urea is usually less expensive than the other dry forms, but there is a risk of losing some of its nitrogen content when the urea is applied to the surface of moist clay soils. This loss is minimized if rain or irrigation occurs to move the urea into the soil shortly after application," Petr said.

Topdressing or adding supplemental nitrogen to wheat should be done as early as the need is evident, the agronomist stressed. Favorable response has been observed in Northern High Plains when the topdress applications was made as late as April 10 on dryland wheat. In the Southern High Plains and Rolling Plains the topdress application should be completed by the end of March or earlier.

For irrigated wheat, earlier application of supplemental nitrogen would stimulate tiller production.

A&M Course To Focus On Profit, Loss In Hogs

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Opportunities and techniques which could help pork producers make a profit instead of a loss in view of current feed prices will be explored at the annual Swine Short Course at Texas A&M University April 5-7.

The short course is part of the Texas Animal Agriculture Conference being conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The impact of various production factors on profit and loss; practical aspects of herd health, reproduction and maintenance; conversion of hog biomass to alternte fuels; opportunities for computerizing swine production records; and the potential for farrowing cooperatives in Texas are among the topics featured in the two-day program.

In conjunction with the short course, the Texas Pork Producers Association and Texas Pork Producers Board will hold a directors' meeting at 7 p.m. April 5, and the annual meeting and banquet of TPPA at 6 p.m. April 6.

The banquet speaker will be Orville Sweet of Des Moines, Iowa, executive vice president of the National Pork Producers Council.

Conference sessions will be held in the Rudder Tower and the Memorial Student Center on campus, said Dr. T. D. Tankersley Jr., professor and extension swine specialist in the department of animal science.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Good crop weather and increased political tension in Poland helped push grain and soybean futures prices lower again Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Heavy selling by commission houses and professional traders was noted in soybeans, which fell as much as 16½ cents and closed at $7.61½ a bushel for delivery in May.

Traders noted forecasts showing that major growing areas are due for scattered showers, a factor seen as beneficial to crop yields and therefore negative for prices.

Also weighing on prices, traders said, was news that Solidarity would go ahead of with plans for a nationwide strike in Poland Friday and a general strike next week. There is fear that the grain embargo against the Soviet Union could be expanded should relations between Poland and the Soviets result in Russian military action.

At the close, grain prices were as follows: wheat was 6¼ cents to 7½ cents lower, May delivery was $4.27 a bushel; corn was 3¾ cents to 5¼ cents lower, May $3.62¼ a bushel; oats were 3 cents to 4 cents lower, May $2.16¼ a bushel.

Cattle Futures Close Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 110 to 150 points higher with August and October up the daily limit Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 24,746 cars.

Futures ran up on spillover demand from the pork pits and commission house computer buying. Local short covering and chart support were also noted. Adding strength was the improvement in cash beef at noon despite early expectations of a steady to weak market. Overshadowed was the easy tone to live markets.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 1 at 92 to 93 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were weak to off $1 with the best top $61.25 per hundredweight at Omaha. Slaughter totaled 118,000 head. About 2,425 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 145 to 150 higher with all contracts except April up the daily limit with buyers over. Volume was 4,061 contracts.

Feeders followed the lead of other meat pits and moved up on active short covering and other buying. Early wire-house selling gave way to spillover demand and commission house computer buying. Gains in cash beef at noon despite early indications of a steady to weak market added support.

Deliveries total 193 thus far. Cash feeders were steady to up $5 with the best top $87 per hundredweight at Amarillo. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 1,200 head.

Hog futures closed 87 to 150 higher paced by June through October and February at the daily limit with buyers over. Sales totaled 12,504 lots.

Futures advanced on spillover demand from the belly pit and local short covering touched off by commission house computer buying. Improvement in cash bellies and steady cash hams at noon along with expected steady to higher live markets today spurred buying. Offset were heavy slaughter and large interior runs. Commercials were on both sides of the markte initially before turning buyers.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 68 to 72 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the best top $41.50 per hundredweight. Kill totaled 18,500 head. The major markets are expecting about 18,500 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed up the dialy limit of 200 across the board with buyers over. Volume was 4,792 lots.

Futures held midsession limit gains on aggressive shortcovering and commission house computer buying. Prices eased from initial limit gains on profit taking but quickly rebounded the limit the fourth day in a row. Adding support was improvement in cash product and expectations of steady to higher live markets today.

There have been 634 deliveries thus far. Wholesale bacon was up 1 to 3¼ at 39 to 46 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Dry Lake Bed Ready For Backup Shuttle Landing

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — The desert here is laced with history. Billy the Kid, the outlaw, and Geronimo, the Indian leader, roamed the sands, the rocket age was born nearby and the atomic era dawned with a roar at a site dubbed Trinity.

Now the U.S. Army's huge desert missile range is ready and able to witness the first "runway" landing of a spaceship. Millions of dollars have been spent, and Very Important People have been invited.

Trouble is, if all goes well, the shuttle will land 800 miles away from the white gypsum sands of New Mexico, at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

The space shuttle Columbia is scheduled to be launched around April 10 from Cape Canaveral, Fla., and return to earth 54 hours later at Edwards.

However, if weather conditions or technical problems make the Edwards landing impossible, touchdown could take place on one of two seven-mile runways smoothed out on a dry lake bed called Northrup Strip.

Although Northrup Strip is only an alternate site, preparations continue at a steady pace — both at the strip and at the headquarters for the missile range, 45 miles to the south.

Flying Gulfstream II executive jets, modified to handle like a gliding shuttle, the training astronauts — including John Young and Robert Crippen, the Columbia crew — fly to within 10 feet of the sand, the point where touchdown would occur if they were flying the shuttle. Then they fly off to make another approach, and then another.

White Sands is the primary landing site for an "abort once around mission," which would occur if the shuttle fails to reach the orbiting stage and the astronauts are forced to circle the earth once before landing.

Northrup could also be designated as the "end of mission" landing site if Edwards does not dry sufficiently from recent heavy rains. The strip must be able to withstand the weight of the 150,000-pound shuttle.

Al Paczynski, NASA project engineer at White Sands, said he personally would be disappointed if the shuttle did not land there, but "for program reasons, I guess I would prefer it land at Edwards. They have more capabilities there." NASA spokesman Ken Senstad candidly described White Sands as "minimally equipped."

Paczynski estimates that construction and training at White Sands has cost $2 million. He calls the expenditure "good insurance," explaining that each day's delay in the shuttle launch date costs several hundred thousand dollars.

"If you land here as opposed to waiting a month for Edwards to dry out, that's a considerable savings," he said. "Time is money, especially in the space program."

The first three shuttle flights are to terminate in a lake-bed landing, Paczynski said. White Sands is scheduled to back up the first four shuttle missions, with an option on two more. "We have a very good chance that at least one" of the landings will be at Northrup Strip, he said.

This land was prime ranching country until the Army opened White Sands Proving Ground on July 9, 1945. One week later, the world's first atomic bomb was exploded on the range at an area now known as Trinity Site, about 40 miles north of Northrup Strip.

Just west of the range, near Roswell, Dr. Robert Goddard developed the first gyro-controlled rocket guidance system. Goddard, who in 1926 flew the first liquid-fueled rocket, was eventually flying rockets faster than the speed of sound and at altitudes up to 7,500 feet.

Today, the range is a multi-service facility used for testing missiles, weapons components and energy projects related to defense. It employs about 8,000 military and civilian personnel.

If the shuttle does land at Northrup Strip, there will be plenty of witnesses.

A group of 300 area leaders, including Gov. Bruce King, the state's congressional delegation and the mayors of Las Cruces, Alamogordo and El Paso, is being invited to Northrup Strip if the landing takes place there.

Jim Lovelady, a NASA public relations officer, expects about 150 reporters at Northrup on launch date — and up to 10 times that number if White Sands is the actual landing site.

Hero Firedog Leaves Pups For Friends

NEW YORK (UPI) — Otto, the hero firedog who died under a burning tenement wall last month, has left his mournful comrades something to remember him by — six firepups.

The men of Engine Company 35 in Harlem, who sadly buried Otto with full honors Feb. 12, proudly announced this week their late mascot had fathered a half dozen healthy heirs.

Otto was killed when he followed the firefighters into a tenement fire and was caught as the building's wall collapsed. "Everyone got out but Otto," a stricken firefighter said at the time.

His mate, Benji, was "with child," the firemen said, when she was widowed. But Benji, who also answers every fire alarm, had lost an earlier litter due to the hazards of her profession.

"She lost her last pups because she inhaled so much smoke and bounded around so much on the trucks," said fireman Tom Montgomery.

"But this litter was pretty valuable to us, so we had to keep her tied up for a while before the babies came. She was very frustrated."

Neighborhood residents, also saddened by Otto's passing, kept careful tabs on Benji's delicate condition. The station received dozens of sympathy cards from people who had read of Otto's heroic death.

"We got letters saying 'take care of his puppies,'" Montgomery said. "One of the guys made a scrapbook."

So there was considerable cheer in the beleaguered ghetto neighborhood over the arrival of the healthy puppies, who are already filling the stationhouse with yelps and the patter of little paws.

Montgomery said Benji has resumed her firedog duties like the career canine she is. "Benji leaves the pups to go with the men every time there's a fire," he said. "When she comes back, they're all yelling."

The pups resemble Benji, a spaniel, more than their German shepherd father. But Montgomery is sure there's an Otto Jr. lurking in the litter.

It will be up to the department brass, he added, to decide whether one of the pups will be allowed to stay in the stationhouse and follow in his late father's footsteps.

"I imagine it'll probably come off," he said. "The guys are looking forward to keeping an Otto Jr."

NEW YORK (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board should be dismantled by the end of this year — four years ahead of schedule, Frank Borman, president of Eastern Airlines, said recently. Borman told a Wings Club group here the regulatory body should be "sunsetted" earlier because of the changed domestic environment resulting from airline-industry deregulation.
