Dahmer's death

MADISON, Wis. — Jeffrey Dahmer didn't want restrictive living arrangements that would have given him more protection in the prison where his head was bashed in, his lawyer said Tuesday. "He wanted to be in with the general population. He didn't want to sit in a hole all day long," said Stephen J. Eisenberg. Authorities still did not know a motive in Monday's killing. Dahmer was found in a pool of blood in a restroom next to a gymnasium at the maximum security Columbia Correctional Institution in Portage. His head was bashed in./7B

Storyteller captures students' attention with sounds, voices

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The lilting notes of a thumb piano, played on a gourd-like instrument, broke the silence at Ben Milam Elementary School Tuesday. Nationally known storyteller Rex Ellis immediately filled the school cafeteria with song, and went right into a story about a "beautiful village girl with large eyes."

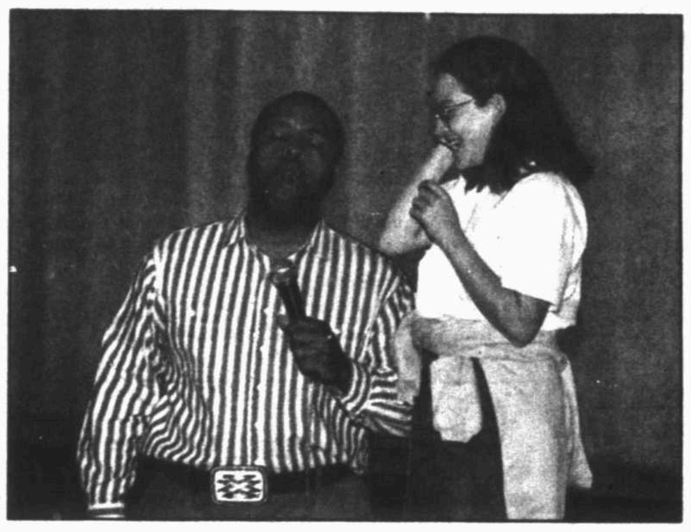

Milam was one stop on a tour of 12 schools Ellis will visit by Friday. He is one of five nationally recognized storytellers in Midland for the public schools' "Celebrations of Light II" event.

Ellis captivated sixth-graders with body movements, different character voices and sounds of a West African village. He wove African history, culture and stories of pride into his repertoire.

Before long, Ellis had roped in four teachers — as a backup band — who played complex rhythms on simple instruments.

When teacher Ron Jumper stumbled in his attempts to play a repeated pattern of three long beats and

House OKs world trade pact 288-146

■ Measure goes to Senate where supporters are searching for needed votes.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House, brushing off critics who protested the legitimacy of a vote by a lame-duck Congress, passed a sweeping world trade agreement Tuesday. President Clinton hailed it as a "historic vote for American workers, farmers and families."

The House voted 288-146 for the rewrite of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, sending the measure to the Senate, where supporters were still searching for the votes needed for passage.

The four hours of debate were brought to a close by House Speaker Thomas Foley, who in his final speech in the chamber where he had served for 30 years urged his colleagues to pass the measure.

"It is impossible to imagine a single act of this Congress that can do more to contribute to our economic growth," said Foley, who was defeated in the November elections in a Republican sweep that gave control of both the House and the Senate to the GOP for the first time in 40 years.

Foley was one of 85 House members who were either defeated or chose not to seek re-election participating in the first lame-duck session of Congress in 12 years, a fact that GATT opponents pointed to often during the debate.

The GATT accord would cut tariffs by 38 percent worldwide, expand the rules of world trade to new areas such as agriculture and services and create a new, more powerful World Trade Organization to referee disputes.

The administration estimated that the reduced tariffs equate to a $744 bil-

Officials warn residents to take precautions for nighttime freezes

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

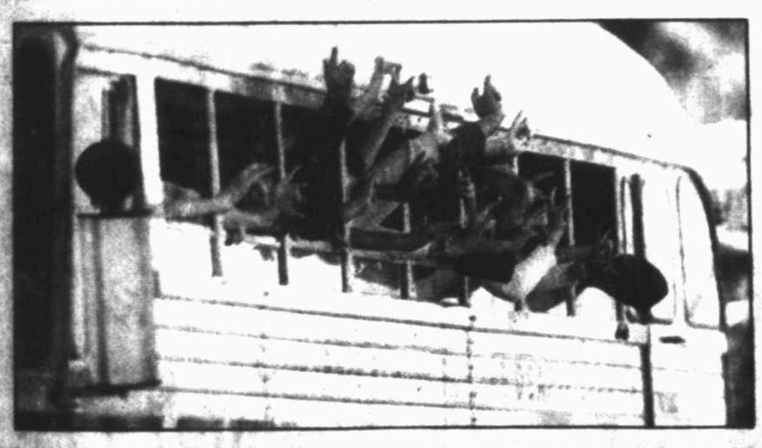

Frigid nighttime temperatures have finally reached the Permian Basin and National Weather Service officials are warning residents to take precautions during the next several nights as temperatures continue to reach or dip below the freezing point.

The year's first hard freeze occurred Sunday night, with the temperature dropping to 26, according to a National Weather Service spokesman. Monday's overnight low reached 32, with the daytime temperature warming to only 53.

Forecasters predicted that Tuesday's overnight low was to drop to near 20. Tonight's temperatures should be between 30-35.

The NWS spokesman said the overnight lows will warm back up to between 40-45 Thursday night and should remain in the Defendant tells police television ordered him to kill

EDINBURG (AP) — A murder defendant using an insanity defense told investigators that television instructed him that his duty was to kill werewolves and vampires, a detective testified Tuesday.

Rafael Nunez, 33, is charged in the September 1993 stabbing death of 20-year-old Paula Hernandez of Donna.

"I am an angel," Nunez told reporters before being silenced by his attorneys Tuesday.

Opening statements in his murder trial were delayed until today. State District Judge Fernando Mancias considered Tuesday whether to admit into evidence the statements that Nunez made to investigators on the night of the killing.

"He (murder defendant) said, 'I'm being good to you guys so you have to give me a cell with a television. That's where I get my orders.'

—Sgt. Oscar Montoya
Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department

Sgt. Oscar Montoya of the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department testified that Nunez freely admitted to stabbing Ms. Hernandez three times in the chest because he believed she was a werewolf. He also identified her as a vampire, Montoya said.

"He said, 'I lifted up her shirt to make sure the holes were in her heart to make sure she was dead,'" Montoya said.

"My duty is to kill werewolves and vampires," Montoya quoted Nunez as saying.

Veterans' trek honors Allied dead of WWII

By Sheila McNulty
Associated Press

KANCHANABURI, Thailand — Japanese veterans of World War II wept tears of shame Tuesday upon learning how 116,000 people died at the hands of their Imperial Army while building the "death railway."

They walked the span crossing the River Kwai — a small portion of the 258 miles of track that Japanese troops forced more than 260,000 Allied prisoners and Asian slave laborers to cut through thick, malarial jungles.

And they paid respects at cemeteries where 16,000 Allied prisoners are buried alongside more than 100,000 Asian laborers. The victims died of disease, malnutrition, execution and torture during the 1942-43 construction of the railroad, a strategic link between Thailand and Burma.

"What we did, the Japanese should not have done," said Yoshio Fukuzawa, 74, weeping before hundreds of headstones. "I had no idea what happened here."

Fukuzawa, who served in a transportation unit in China during the war, learned about his army's atrocities in this western Thai province during the "Cycle for Peace." Two dozen Japanese veterans from a variety of professions are riding their bicycles on a tour of atonement.

They were met at one cemetery by a former British prisoner of war, Trevor Dakin, 74, who moved to Kanchanaburi eight years ago.

Dakin, a naturalized Canadian who lived in Ontario, broke down after telling the Japanese of his 3½ years of abuse under their army. All around him were the graves of Americans, Australians, Britons, Dutch and New Zealanders, some of them marked simply: "A Soldier of the 1939-1945 War. Known unto God."

He recalled walking the same stretch of land to bury the dead decades ago.

"I can't keep doing this. It's killing me," he said through tears.

Japan has yet to offer a proper apology for the suffering and provide compensation to the victims and their families, he said.

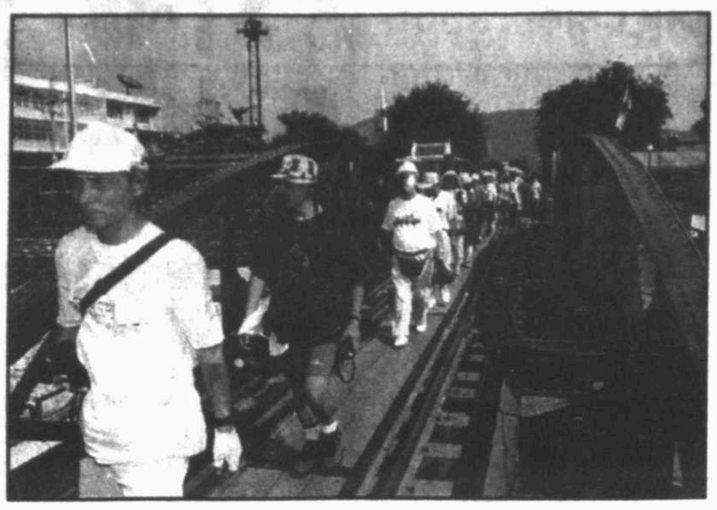

"Now is the time to make this moral reparation," Dakin told the Japanese. "And until you do ... we will never forget, and we will never forgive."

Tears welled up in the eyes of some of the Japanese, several of whom grabbed his hand to apologize.

"I feel responsible for him and all the POWs who died and were victimized," said Yoshiyuki Onogi, a 54-year-old oil company employee from Tokyo. Onogi agreed that Japan's reparations had been insufficient.

Yuko Ikebuchi, an elementary school teacher in Okayama, said Japanese students still were not taught the truth about their army during World War II.

"I want to tell the students what Japan did during wartime, which is not written in the textbooks," Ikebuchi said. "For a long time, the Japanese government has hidden the truth."

Russian confectioner gives sweet deal to investors

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Don't ask folks at the Red October candy factory about the invasion of Mars. And don't mention Snickers or Bounty either.

These American sweets are so heavily advertised, so omnipresent in today's Russia that a whole generation of Mars, Snickers and Bounty jokes has appeared.

But no one is laughing at Red October. A scowl darkens the face of Red October director Anatoly Daursky at the mere mention of a Mars bar.

"One hundred and fifty million people wanted to try some foreign chocolate. Well, it's been two years and everyone has had their taste! And we now say OUR confectionery is going to survive!" he declared.

Like many big state enterprises, Red October has had a tough time since the Soviet collapse. But this 127-year-old confectioner isn't about to give up.

Next Monday, the sprawling red-brick factory in the heart of Moscow will become the first former state company to sell shares to the general public, officials announced Tuesday.

'One hundred and fifty million people wanted to try some foreign chocolate. Well, it's been two years and everyone has had their taste! And we now say OUR confectionery is going to survive!'

— Anatoly Daursky, Red October director

Money raised through the landmark stock offering — part of a pilot program aimed at showing other Russian companies how such a thing is done — will be used to modernize its plant and market its sweets.

Red October has, Daursky says with a certain understatement, "had its ups and downs" since it was founded in 1867 by a German master confectioner.

There was the Bolshevik Revolution, when the factory was nationalized. There was World War II, when hundreds of workers were sent to the front. There was the 20 percent tax on imported sugar levied this year.

And then there was Mars. And Snickers. And Bounty.

But Red October officials — and their British advisers — insist the company's chocolates, toffees and caramels have a solid niche in the Russian market.

To many Muscovites, Red October products like Mishka (Clumsy Bear) chocolates, Little Cow caramels, Romance bonbons and Kis-Kis toffees are tender reminders of childhood treats and family gatherings.

Red October sweets are savored, Daursky insists, not wolfed down on the run like an American candy bar. Red October seems at least equal in quality to American sweets, but buying the imported stuff is the trend.

Red October cultivates its role as a national institution; the company museum is like a quick tour through Russian history.

It is crammed with memorabilia, from brocaded boxes from the days when the factory supplied sweets to the Czar's household to red velvet flags emblazoned with the Communist hammer and sickle.

The $21.8 million stock offering could give Red October a new lease on life. Daursky says half the plant's equipment is obsolete. Packaging and distribution also need improvement.

Red October will offer 3.5 million shares to Russian and foreign investors at 20,000 rubles, about $6.25, a share for two weeks beginning Monday.

Officials hope the stock offer will set an example for a nation still somewhat befuddled by the whole concept of investing. Millions of Russians seeking quick riches have been defrauded by fly-by-night funds and thinly disguised pyramid schemes.

Red October, officials say, won't make anyone rich overnight. But it won't vanish overnight either.

Bulk of aid to Palestine won't arrive, official says

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Although poverty appears to be fueling violence in the Gaza Strip, the World Bank's top Middle East official told Yasser Arafat on Tuesday that only a third of the international aid pledged to Palestinians is likely to reach them this year.

Of the $700 million promised by international donors for 1994, only about $240 million at most was likely to be delivered on schedule, said World Bank Vice-President Caio Koch-Weseer.

Arafat was attending a two-day conference in Brussels to appeal to donors to make good on aid pledges so he can relieve the economic hardship that is threatening his 6-month-old administration.

Dashed hopes for economic recovery since Arafat signed the peace treaty with Israel last year have helped radical Islamic groups gain backers for campaigns of violence in the Palestinian territories and in Israel.

The donors — which included the United States, Japan and the European Union — urged Israel to help by easing restrictions on Palestinian workers and goods crossing its border.

"Measures allowing more Palestinian workers in Israel ... will greatly contribute to alleviate the political tensions and the need of international economic assistance," said Foreign Minister Frank Vandenbroucke of Belgium, who opened the conference.

World Bank officials estimate 20,000 Palestinians cross the border daily to work in Israel compared to 70,000 last year. Israel has tightened border restrictions in response to attacks against its citizens.

Unemployment among Gaza's 800,000 population stands at 50 percent. The United Nations estimates economic activity has shrunk by more than 25 percent in the past year.

So far this year, international aid to Arafat's administration has totaled $140 million.

WEATHER WATCH

COLD: Today's high to be near 60

lower to mid-40s through the weekend.

While the overnight temperatures remain around the freezing point, the NWS spokesman said residents should bring in tender plants and cover those that cannot be brought in. Pets should also be taken in during the night.

He also recommended leaving faucets dripping overnight to prevent the pipes from freezing. Residents should also make sure they check the antifreeze in their vehicles.

The next overnight freeze is not expected until next week, he said.

Today should be sunny with a high near 60 and variable winds at 5-10 mph. Tonight should be fair.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with highs warming back up into the upper 60s to lower 70s.

The record high for Tuesday was 78 set in 1975. The record low was 15 set in 1976.

STATE

Clear skies and abundant sunshine covered Texas on Tuesday, but much of the state was under a freeze warning for overnight.

Lows early today were projected to be in the upper teens and 20s in the Panhandle, from 25 to 32 across North and East Texas, and in the 30s in South Texas.

But highs on today are expected to rise into the 50s and 60s again statewide. However, temperatures could drop again tonight, especially in the Panhandle and South Plains.

High pressure continued to build across Texas on Tuesday. Late afternoon temperatures Tuesday were in the 40s and 50s in West Texas, the 50s and 60s in North Texas, and the 60s and 70s in South Texas.

Winds were generally from the northwest to north in West Texas, with winds 10 to 20 mph and occasionally gusty.

Temperatures Tuesday ranged in West Texas from 42 at Dalhart to 54 at San Angelo, in South Texas from 65 at Galveston to 75 at Kingsville, and in North Texas from 53 at Abilene to 71 at Lufkin.

Skies should be mostly clear across the state on Thursday, with highs in the 60s.

NATION

Heavy rain fell across parts of the South on Tuesday as a cold front rolled across the region, and snow accumulated to a record depth in the mountains of Utah.

By midafternoon, 2 to 4 inches of rain had fallen in parts of central Georgia. Heavy rain also was reported in parts of Florida.

Mobile, Ala., reported 2.91 inches of rain.

In Louisiana, wind gusts to 74 mph were reported in thunderstorms near New Orleans.

Out West, one weather system produced scattered snow showers over the Intermountain region, and on its heels the latest in a series of storms was pushing into the Pacific Northwest.

Heaviest snowfall reported was in the mountains of northern Utah, where the Alta ski resort got an additional 16 inches of snow overnight. That pushed the total there for the month of November to a record 200 inches.

In the Northwest, snow advisories were posted for parts of Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

Along the Washington Coast, Wishkah, near Aberdeen, reported 2.41 inches of rain overnight and about 3 inches was reported at Ocean Shores. In eastern Washington, 3 to 6 inches of snow fell with 5 inches at Colville.

Wind advisories were in effect from the Pacific Coast to the eastern slopes of the Rockies. Wind gusted to 54 mph at Netarts, Ore., and to 52 mph at Rawlins, Wyo.

TELL: Storyteller captures students' attention

two short beats, children screamed with delight. Midland DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer Robert Porter hopped up to give Jumper a hand, and took over his rhythm instrument — a block of metal hit with a short wooden dowel stick.

As Ellis added rhythms for the other teachers, all of the "band" members faltered in trying to play their individual rhythm. Porter succeeded by turning his back on his band mates, but drew laughter when Ellis imitated the police officer's forceful swing of the stick.

"Softer," Ellis said, as Porter and the teachers gamely tapped out their intricate rhythm patterns.

"It made me really understand rhythms," Porter said. "I watch people clapping out rhythms on TV and now I really understand them."

Although the rhythms were complex, Milam sixth-graders caught on quick to reciting songs.

"Europeans use melody most," Ellis said, singing the melody of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

"West Africans used poly-rhythm patterns," he said, "adding one rhythm onto another."

Ellis said in African American culture, music also is an integral part of the storytelling experience.

"Rap is a story. It's a story with a rhythm to it," he said.

Giving the students a verse to recite during a story, Ellis used different voices and body movements to portray various jungle characters. Exuberant and dynamic, he appeared to bring an ensemble of cartoon characters to life.

On a more dramatic note, Ellis described African villagers, told a slave story and incorporated gospel music into his story of Rosa Parks igniting the civil rights movement.

He also threw in tidbits of information, such as the banjo was used in Africa in the 17th century.

Of the storyteller's presentation, Porter said, "I loved it. It was nice to hear about my culture. I learned some things I didn't know before, like the history of the banjo. Also, we as Americans sing a song, while Africans may hum it or tap out the rhythm."

Ellis, director of museum programs for the Smithsonian Institution, travels constantly to perpetuate the art of storytelling. The Virginia resident has published numerous articles on African American culture, storytelling and museums. He is a member of the Screen Actors Guild and the National Storytelling Association.

He — along with storyteller Donald Davis — will give a public performance, billed "Wednesday Night Live" from 6:15-7:15 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church, 300 North Main St. The performance is being offered free of charge.

Davis, an author and national storyteller, tells Appalachian tales. Persons interested in attending dinner before the presentation may call 682-3702 for reservations.

Ellis is also a featured speaker at the Saturday Celebrations of Light II workshop and concert. Cost of the 8 a.m.-3:30 p.m. storytelling workshop is $15. Cost of the 7:30-10 p.m. concert is $10 for adults and $5 for students age 5-20. All events will be presented at the church.

TRADE: House OKs GATT, sends it to Senate

lion global tax cut over a decade. For Americans, it would represent a $70 billion cut in border taxes on imported goods and services over 10 years.

Foley and other supporters argued that a defeat of the trade agreement would be disastrous for America's standing in the world. But opponents pleaded with equal fervor that the 124-nation GATT accord was too complex to be settled "on the 11th hour" by many lawmakers who had been voted out of office.

The 142-vote margin of passage represented a victory for President Clinton, who had worked the telephones throughout the day talking to undecided lawmakers.

It was the first post-election test of whether the White House and Republicans who will control Capitol Hill come January could work together.

Clinton said the House vote "demonstrates to the American people that Democrats and Republicans can work together in the national interest."

The bipartisan vote included 167 Democrats and 121 Republicans in favor of the accord and 89 Democrats, 56 Republicans and one independent opposed to it. There is one vacancy in the 435-member House.

The administration had been hoping for a large margin of victory in the House to provide momentum for the Senate, where the measure faces stiffer opposition.

"The eyes of the world are now on the United States Senate," Clinton said in a statement. "I can call on the Senate to pass GATT with the same strong, bipartisan support as it received in the House of Representatives."

In the Senate, supporters will need 60 votes Thursday on a key procedural motion.

An Associated Press head count found 47 senators either supporting the agreement or leaning toward approval. An additional 21 senators were opposed or leaning toward voting no, and 32 were still undeclared.

Supporters said the trade agreement, which took seven years to negotiate, would mean lower prices for U.S. consumers on everything from computer chips to potato chips, and would aid American companies and farmers by lowering the trade barriers they face overseas.

However, opponents charged that lowering U.S. barriers would mean America's factories would face even more competition from low-wage foreign workers. They said the new WTO represents an unprecedented infringement on America's sovereignty, and they accused supporters of railroading the legislation through the lame-duck session.

"What a tragedy that we cannot fully debate the surrender of American's authority to the World Trade Organization," said Rep. Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio. She complained that only four hours were set aside for the House debate.

At the White House, Clinton met with 75 uncommitted House members and with both Democratic and Republican leaders supporting GATT.

The administration sought to stress Clinton's bipartisan approach as a model for how he will deal next year with a Congress in which Republicans will control both the Senate and House.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, who announced his support last week, said from Brussels, Belgium, that he believed the Senate would pass the deal in a close vote.

Dole spokesman Clarkson Hine said the senator, who was attending a NATO conference, had been following GOP whip counts by telephone and was "encouraged by what appears to be fairly strong Republican support."

The GATT debate marked the first time in 12 years and only the 10th time since 1940 that Congress has returned after the November elections to take up legislation.

There were 85 House members and 10 members of the Senate who were true lame ducks, either because they had lost in November or had decided to retire, a fact that opponents referred to often.

"This should not be a vote taken on the 11th hour of the last day in a lame-duck session of Congress, voted on by many people who have been asked to come home by the American voters," said Rep. Peter de Fazio, D-Ore. "This is the ultimate arrogance."

Lights, camera, action: FBI agent stars as movie mogul

By Anne Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — To prepare for his role, Garland Schweickhardt, like any good actor, immersed himself in the world of his character.

He studied film production at UCLA. He hung out with Hollywood hotshots at the Polo Lounge. He learned how to throw around terms like "second-unit shoot" and "externals."

For five years, Schweickhardt — a 29-year FBI agent — circulated phony scripts and entertained business contacts on a yacht as the star of Dramex, an FBI sting aimed at rooting out mob influence in the film industry.

Many thousands of dollars later, the production was something less than a smash.

Dramex, short for Drama Expose, netted only James Moar and William Winn, two former officials of a Teamsters local in Boston, and three reputed mobsters. All were accused of accepting at least $65,000 from Schweickhardt to ensure labor peace on film productions in New England using cheap, non-union labor.

"Champagne" Dennis Lepore pleaded guilty to conspiracy to bribe and is serving an 18-month sentence. Frank Salemme Jr., son of "Cadillac" Frank Salemme, had his trial on the same charge postponed indefinitely because he is ill. Tommy Hillary is in the federal witness protection program and will testify against Moar and Winn, who went on trial in Boston in mid-October.

Schweickhardt is back in the limelight at Moar and Winn's federal trial, detailing the sting from the witness stand.

Before Dramex, he had a dress rehearsal.

In 1985, the FBI tried to crack what Los Angeles police call the Mickey Mouse Mafia, or the movie industry mob, said Richard A. Stavin, a former federal prosecutor who was the supervising attorney during the early stages of Dramex.

Schweickhardt went undercover, but he wasn't quite savvy enough to the biz.

He bribed and arrested a Teamster, only to find that the union local in question hauled fruit and vegetables and had nothing to do with the movie industry. Nevertheless, the feds decided to take the sting nationwide.

This time, Schweickhardt got some acting lessons.

After two weeks at FBI "undercover school," Schweickhardt studied film production for 12 weeks at the University of California at Los Angeles. He hung out with industry veterans who taught him the lingo. He rented an office on Wilshire Boulevard.

He was outfitted with just about everything but Armani suits. (And his non-designer wear had to be a size larger than usual so he could conceal surveillance equipment underneath.)

Wearing a wire and armed with four scripts, Schweickhardt traveled the country setting up faux productions and trying to bribe reputed gangsters and union leaders in cities such as Dallas, New Orleans, Las Vegas, Providence, R.I., and Boston.

In Boston, Schweickhardt testified, he schmoozed with Moar and Winn over power breakfasts at expensive hotels and paid them $65,000 to permit non-union labor on a film called "The Knockover," about a fight between a city that wants to tear down a historic building and a restoration group that wants to save it.

Schweickhardt also peddled a script for "The Convention," a mystery set in Las Vegas, and chatted about possible starring roles for Angie Dickinson and Roy Scheider.

He also shopped around "Love at Second Bite," a sequel to "Love at First Bite," an actual vampire spoof that starred George Hamilton.

Court hears prospects' stories of women abusing men

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson, who has written of sometimes feeling like "a battered husband," appeared pleased Tuesday when one prospective juror said his ex-wife had abused him and another said his mother abused his stepfather.

Outside court, defense lawyer Robert Shapiro told reporters he forgives the victims' relatives for saying they believe Simpson is guilty of killing his ex-wife and her friend. The relatives haven't heard Simpson's side of the story, Shapiro said.

Nicole Brown Simpson's sister Denise Brown quickly shot back, telling talk show host Geraldo Rivera that she's "fighting mad."

"Of course we're emotional," she said. "We're just as much a victim as Nicole was."

In court, Simpson nodded vigorously as a man being considered as a jury alternate confided that his ex-wife sometimes summoned authorities during their heated battles.

"The sheriffs once asked if I wanted to press charges," the man said.

"So she was physically violent and threatening to you?" Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark asked him.

"Yes," he said.

Simpson smiled and gestured with his hands to his attorneys, as if to say, "You see?"

In a letter written after his ex-wife and her friend were slain, Simpson said: "At times I have felt like a battered husband or boyfriend but I loved her."

Denise Brown said Simpson's claim "makes me sick."

"It's a joke. It's a total joke. He thinks he was abused by Nicole. To me it's ridiculous," she told Rivera on CNBC.

Simpson is accused of slashing Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman to death outside his ex-wife's condominium on June 12.

The prospective juror also said his wife recently called police when he went to her house to see his daughter.

KILL: Murder defendant claims television told him to kill woman where he buried the kitchen knife used in the killing.

"He said, 'I'm being good to you guys so you have to give me a cell with a television. That's where I get my orders,'" Montoya said. "He would say that the devil talked to him through the television."

Three psychiatrists for the defense have diagnosed Nunez as psychotic. His attorneys contend he is unable to assist in his defense.

"I don't pay much attention. I understand I'm being tried in court," Nunez told reporters.

His 20-year-old brother, Daniel, said Rafael Nunez has been mentally ill for several years.

"We're not saying whether he is guilty or not guilty. But he needs medical help," Daniel Nunez said. "He might be able to start off a conversation, but in the middle of it he would go to irrational responses."

A sister, Maria, said Rafael Nunez often watched static channels on television.

Earlier this year, a jury declared Nunez mentally competent to stand trial.

Mediators attempt blitz for Serb approval of federation peace plan

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Mediators began a diplomatic blitz Tuesday in hopes of persuading the Bosnian government to accept a peace plan that could include a federation between Bosnia's rebel Serbs and Yugoslavia.

U.S., Russian, British, French and German mediators from the so-called contact group met with the Muslim-led government in hopes of salvaging a negotiated end to the war, not an outright military victory for the Serbs.

Fighting around the U.N. protected town of Bihac picked up Tuesday, with Mayor Hamdija Kabiljagic saying shells were landing every six seconds in the afternoon. U.N. spokesman Maj. Herve Gourmelon reported heavy machine-gun, shelling and small-arms fire.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali was expected in Sarajevo today to discuss a possible cease-fire and an end to harassment of the 24,000 peacekeepers, 400 of whom are detained by Bosnian Serbs as insurance against NATO air strikes.

Charles Thomas, the U.S. representative to the contact group, said after meeting Bosnian Vice President Ejup Ganic that there were no changes to a peace plan rejected by Bosnian Serbs this summer.

Thomas said the contact group would "stick with the plan," which calls for Serbs to reduce their holdings from 70 to 75 percent of Bosnia to 49 percent. A Muslim-Croat federation, which has accepted the plan, would get 51 percent.

'The last thing we need is another American change of position on Bosnia.'

— Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas

But U.N. spokesmen and senior officials of NATO countries acknowledged they have almost no leverage on the Serbs since admitting that the ultimate weapon in their arsenal, NATO airstrikes, was insufficient to stop a Serb assault on the northwest Bihac pocket.

The U.S. defense secretary, William Perry, suggested Sunday that the Serbs had won the 31-month war.

"If the secretary of defense of the most powerful country in the world is making these remarks," said U.N. spokesman Michael Williams in Zagreb, Croatia, "then the leverage that the U.N. has as a peacekeeping operation ... is limited."

That leaves negotiators looking to the Bosnian government for concessions.

Perry and British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said one possibility was to allow the Bosnian Serbs some sort of political ties with Serb-dominated Yugoslavia that they long have sought and that the United States has opposed.

Such ties, Hurd told reporters in Brussels, are "a matter that is reasonable to consider."

Depending on what links were offered, such a move could provide the Serbs an opportunity to unite in a Greater Serbia. The nationalist dream tore apart the old Yugoslavia and helped start the war that since April 1992 has left 200,000 people dead or missing.

But Sen. Robert Dole, the incoming Senate majority leader, reacted coolly to U.S. efforts to draw Bosnian Serbs into talks by offering to reopen a peace plan they've rejected.

"The last thing we need is another American change of position on Bosnia," the Kansas Republican said after talks Tuesday at NATO headquarters in Brussels.

In Washington, Secretary of State Warren Christopher predicted U.S. allies would accept a new U.S. initiative calling for an international conference to explore terms for a settlement. Christopher also sharply criticized the United Nations for not authorizing sustained air strikes by NATO warplanes on Serb positions near Bihac.

Fighting for Bihac continued, with outgunned government troops facing rebel Serbs from Bosnia, Serbs from the neighboring Krajina region of Croatia, and a renegade Muslim force.

S. Africans try to erase white legacy

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The black-led government swept away another legacy of white rule Tuesday, rechristening a dam named for the creator of apartheid.

Hendrik Verwoerd Dam was among 12 dams and rivers given new names. Most are native words or a return to original names.

Verwoerd Dam, in Orange Free State, will be called Gariep dam, after a word in the language of the area's Khoi tribe. Hans Strijdom Dam, named for another white prime minister, became Mokolo Dam.

"Although it was painful not to use the names of some historical figures, we sought to avoid a triumphalist approach," said Kader Asmal, water affairs and environment minister under President Nelson Mandela.

South Africa's flag and a few other national symbols have been overhauled since the African National Congress won the first all-race election in April, but the government has avoided wholesale changes.

Afrikaner groups representing Dutch-descended white settlers protested the name changes, saying Mandela's government wanted to wipe out Afrikaner culture.

The changes are part of the "revolution of radicals in an attempt to discredit the so-called apartheid people," said Conservative Party spokesman Marius Oosthuysen.

Asmal, who is Indian, noted that apartheid regulations made it nearly impossible for him to visit Verwoerd Dam, because he couldn't spend the night in Orange Free State.

Norway's refusal of membership in Europe union angers others

N.Y. Times News Service

OSLO — On Monday, Norway became the first country to say "no" to the European Union, and Tuesday the members of the club reacted with the frozen smiles of jilted suitors. There were expressions of disappointment and regret and underneath the whispered message: it's going to hurt you more than it hurts me.

By resolutely rejecting membership in the European Union, Norwegian voters broke the union's winning streak. In a series of votes this year that were timed to maximize pressure upon Oslo, the people of Austria, Finland and Sweden all decided to join.

Their admittance on Jan. 1 means that the union, intended to bring about a single market and perhaps someday even a unified political entity, will become a 15-nation body of 340 million people, extending from the Mediterranean to the Arctic and from the west Irish coast to the Danube.

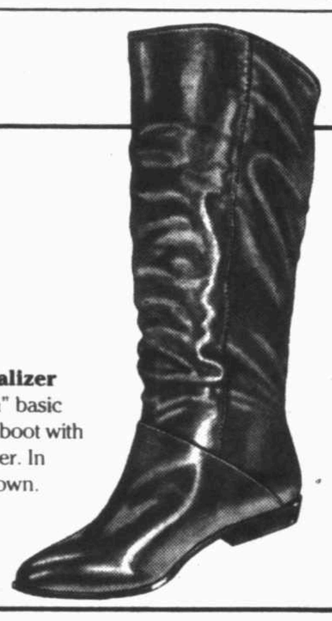

But now there will be a missing piece in the puzzle in the northern corner — not a big one but a disturbing blank space all the same.

No one expects any of the applicants to think twice after Norway's rejection. Norway has long been a special case in that the union wanted it more than it wanted the union. Once before in fact, in 1972, Norwegian voters rejected joining the European Economic Community and by a margin only slightly larger than Monday's 52.2 percent "no" vote.

The decision not to join was especially regretted in Britain and Germany, where government officials were looking forward to an unbroken line of new recruits that were seen as affluent supporters of free trade and less inclined to require agricultural subsidies, which make up half of the union's budget.

Fighter attack on Chechen airport follows Yeltsin's crackdown threat

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Fighter jets attacked the airport of the Chechen capital Tuesday, hours after Russian President Boris Yeltsin threatened to crack down on the breakaway region if the fighting doesn't stop.

It was the first time jets have been used in the escalating conflict in the Caucasus Mountains region, which declared independence from Moscow in 1991.

Russia has openly backed the opposition to elected Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev, but denies providing any military help. It says mercenaries are involved on both sides.

But Dudayev said the jet attack was the latest sign that Russia is arming and leading the opposition forces.

"Here you see the situation with your own eyes," he told reporters minutes after the jets flew low over the city and anti-aircraft fire roared out. "You hear and have seen the plane go down."

Chechen (CHETCH-en) officials claim to have shot down a Russian-made MiG fighter, one of four MiGs and four Su-27s that they said attacked the airport six miles north of the Chechen capital, Grozny. They also claimed to have shot down two helicopters.

At the airport, four Tu-134 civil aircraft were destroyed and smoking on the tarmac. A few hundred yards away, two storage tanks of jet fuel had been hit and were belching orange flames into the night sky.

Ali Khasiev, head of airport security, said there were no casualties.

As a plume of black smoke from the downed plane rose over Grozny, some residents ran to get out of the city center while others scrambled onto buses. Some were crying, some carrying children.

The latest opposition offensive began last week with helicopter attacks on Grozny's outskirts. Dudayev's forces repulsed the attacks Saturday in heavy fighting at his presidential palace.

His government claimed to have captured about 70 Russians, including Army officers and soldiers, and on Sunday threatened to execute them if Russia did not claim them by Tuesday evening. Dudayev later said the Russians would be treated as prisoners of war.

The deadline passed with no word on the prisoners' fate.

Yeltsin issued an ultimatum of his own Tuesday. He demanded that all prisoners be released and that both sides disband their forces within 48 hours, or Russia would impose a state of emergency in the mostly Muslim republic of 1.2 million people.

Moscow has sent troops once before, in late 1991, to try to force Chechnya (chetch-NYA) to abandon its independence, but pulled back in the face of popular resistance. Since then, it has maintained a heavy military presence nearby.

Chechnya and other regions in the Caucasus put up fierce resistance to Russian imperial encroachment in the 19th century, and continue to have a reputation in Russia as untamed and criminal.

New Mexican president inherits country in turmoil

By Anita Snow

■ Analysis

MEXICO CITY — After the cheers fade and the confetti is swept away, President Ernesto Zedillo will inherit a troubled Mexico where rebels threaten new violence and the ruling party is torn by infighting.

While his predecessor, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, faced severe economic problems upon taking office six years ago, Zedillo faces political ones.

"Zedillo's challenge will be to achieve political reform while maintaining political stability," said Nora Lustig, a Mexico specialist with the Brookings Institution in Washington.

"The economic reforms of Salinas cannot be sustained over time if they are not accompanied by political reforms and social stability."

Zedillo takes office Thursday amid the biggest political crisis to confront the Institutional Revolutionary Party since it began in 1929.

Democratic reforms introduced by Salinas have eroded the monolithic, authoritarian structure that has helped the party known as the PRI rule for more than six decades.

Those changes unleashed bitter infighting by party reformers and the "dinosaurs," members of the old guard who want to retain power at any cost.

The Sept. 28 assassination of PRI secretary-general Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, a reformer, has been blamed on the party's blood feud.

A fugitive PRI congressman has been named as the mastermind in the killing. The prosecutor, who is the dead man's brother, has accused PRI leaders of blocking his investigation and resigned last week.

That latest killing also revived new interest and speculation in the March 23 assassination of the PRI's original presidential candidate, Luis Donaldo Colosio, in Tijuana.

Although authorities maintain Colosio was killed by a lone, deranged gunman, many Mexicans still believe his death was part of a larger conspiracy inside the PRI to silence one of its more eloquent reformist voices.

The PRI has traditionally maintained its hammerlock on power through patronage, intimidation and electoral fraud.

But under electoral reforms pushed through by Salinas, PRI stalwarts can no longer burn ballots or threaten voters.

Although thousands of irregularities were reported in the Aug. 21 election won by Zedillo, the election was seen as the cleanest in Mexican history.

As for patronage, there just aren't enough jobs to go around.

Colombia leads in human rights violations, groups says

By Paul Haven
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — More than 2,000 children were murdered in Colombia last year, many of them by police or the military, and only 12 of the killings were prosecuted, a human rights group said Tuesday.

"Colombia is a world leader in the killing of its own children," said Michelle Morris-Baird, legal adviser for Human Rights Watch-Americas, which is based in New York.

Colombia is one of the world's most violent nations. About 26,000 people die by violence every year, giving the country the world's highest murder rate.

According to government statistics, that number last year included 2,190 children, Human Rights Watch said. It contended many of the killings were carried out by police or with government acquiescence.

There was no immediate comment from the government on the report. But President Ernesto Samper acknowledged two weeks ago during a visit by the head of Amnesty International that police and military forces had committed human rights violations.

The murder rate for children in Colombia has surpassed that of Brazil, where the deaths of hundreds of street children has been well publicized, Human Rights Watch said.

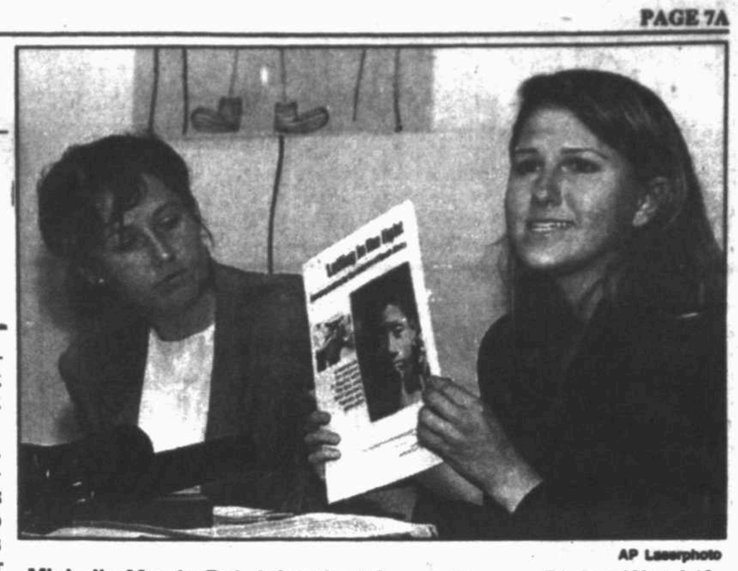

Children are killed, tortured or forcibly recruited by drug traffickers, right-wing groups or guerrillas fighting a 30-year-old insurgency, said Robin Kirk, who led the group's Colombia investigation.

The group has asked the government to reform the military and police, more actively prosecute human rights offenders, and appoint more officials to monitor the plight of the nation's children.

During his visit two weeks ago, Amnesty International Secretary-General Pierre Sane said he was encouraged by Samper's pledge to improve Colombia's human rights record. But Sane said Samper must turn that promise into reality.

'Colombia is a world leader in the killing of its own children.'

'Fast track' move on GATT unwise

A prime example of how Congress should NOT approve a trade pact is now being played out in Washington, D.C., where the Uruguay Round of the world trade agreement is now being debated.

The far-reaching agreement known as GATT — for General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade — passed the House on Tuesday and comes up in the Senate Thursday. The strategy in the GATT debate is that President Clinton put the trade pact on a "fast track" for congressional approval, which stipulates that there can be no amendments to the agreement and it must be enacted on a particular timetable. It must either be approved as is or rejected. If rejected, the trade pact could be reintroduced in 1995 when the new Congress convenes, but it's obvious from his action that Clinton expected to get a more favorable hearing for the agreement in the current Congress rather than in January when Republicans will rule both houses.

While in many respects, GATT might lead to much freer trade and could benefit many segments of the American economy, there are a number of industries in the United States that it could harm. One is the petroleum industry where the agreement could prohibit tax credits and all other incentives to the oil industry, according to Donald Hodel, former secretary of Energy during the Reagan administration.

In fact, said Hodel, GATT "would not only endanger marginal production in this country by depriving it of economic incentives, but it would also terminate efforts to foster renewables such as solar, wind and geothermal."

From that standpoint alone, GATT fails an important test. The domestic petroleum industry does not need to be hurt more; it needs to be encouraged so that our nation's oil supply is guaranteed.

Of course, the trade pact's detrimental effect on the domestic oil industry is not the only concern. In fact, an informal survey of some Texas congressmen and senators this week revealed widespread concern on a number of specific issues involving the pact.

The one safety valve in the GATT debate is that, if approved, the trade agreement is exactly that — an agreement, not a treaty. Thus, any member nation can withdraw after six months' notice.

Our hesitation is this: Is this any way to approve a far-reaching trade agreement that will affect a large segment of American business? We don't think so. It would be far preferable for the Senate to reject the GATT on Thursday so that it can be reintroduced in 1995 without the "fast track" provision. That way it can be amended if necessary.

That could mean the necessity of having to go through the entire process of getting the trade pact reapproved in all the member countries, but wouldn't that be preferable to enacting something that would be detrimental to U.S. interests?

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 30, the 334th day of 1994. There are 31 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 30, 1782, the United States and Britain signed preliminary peace articles in Paris, ending the Revolutionary War.

On this date:

In 1803, Spain completed the process of ceding Louisiana to France.

In 1804, the only U.S. Supreme Court justice impeached to date, Samuel Chase, went on trial, accused of political bias. (He was acquitted by the Senate.)

In 1835, Samuel Langhorne Clemens — better known as author Mark Twain — was born in Florida, Mo.

In 1874, British statesman Sir Winston Churchill was born at Blenheim Palace.

In 1900, Irish author Oscar Wilde died in Paris.

Old terrorists give way to new breed

WASHINGTON — The dawning new age of terrorism — inaugurated with last year's blast at the World Trade Center — will be more virulent, more dangerous and more difficult to stop.

Anderson

Though there has been a recent lull in major terrorist attacks against the United States, several sources believe it is the calm before a veritable storm.

One reason is that the Mideast peace process is unraveling day by day — despite the recent peace treaty between Jordan and Israel, and the historic visit by President Clinton to Syria. Yasser Arafat's influence among Palestinians is waning by the day, giving new strength to radical rejectionist groups who believe terror, not truce, is the best way to push their agenda.

Most of these groups do not fit the profile of "traditional" terrorist organizations, whose ranks have been infiltrated by spies in recent years. Rather, this new threat comes from smaller, ad hoc groups that are bent on violence for religious, ethnic or economic reasons. As mainstream groups in the Mideast try to accommodate peace, these radical new offspring will gain power and influence by fanning the flames of fear and hatred that continue to consume many in the region.

Hussein Mussawi may have put it best. He is leader of Hezbollah, a virulently anti-American group based in Lebanon and sponsored by Iran. He has said: "We are not fighting so that the enemy recognizes us and offers us something. We are fighting to wipe out the enemy."

What set the February 1993 World Trade Center bombing apart from previous terrorist acts is what did not happen: The bombers made no demands, asked for no concessions and made no claims. It was an indiscriminate act of pure aggression, and very indicative of what terrorism will look like in the years ahead.

The usual suspects are still around, and just as nasty as ever. States that still sponsor terrorism include Syria (which Clinton recently placated with a state visit), Iran, Iraq, Libya and Sudan.

While these traditional threats continue to keep the West on guard, several newer threats have also emerged that are worrisome to counter-terrorism officials:

- Islam has long been split into two main sects, Sunni and Shiite. Sunni Muslims rule most Arab countries, such as Saudi Arabia, Egypt and so on. The minority Shiites gained control in Iran during the 1979 revolution and have been "exporting" their revolution ever since.

The Sunnis have never been known to view terrorism as a viable political strategy against the West. But that is now beginning to change. In Egypt and Algeria, some orthodox Sunnis have become convinced that the only way to topple secular governments is through terrorism.

- The war in Afghanistan during the 1980s was a breeding ground for thousands of potential Muslim terrorists. "Thousands of Muslims from roughly 40 countries flocked to Afghanistan following the 1979 Soviet invasion," James Phillips of the conservative Heritage Foundation recently wrote. "Radicalized veterans from the Afghan war... have returned home and have become the spearheads of radical Islamic movements in Algeria, Azerbaijan, Bosnia, Egypt, Sudan and many other places around the world. Hundreds of these 'Afghanis' are being trained by Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Sudanese training camps."

- Weaponry has become more widespread and sophisticated. While world attention has focused on the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, conventional explosives are getting smaller, deadlier and easier to conceal.

One top-secret report by the Central Intelligence Agency, to which our associate Dale Van Atta was given access, warns of the potential proliferation of "invisible bombs." These are described as secret, sophisticated explosives undetectable by standard bomb-searching techniques.

Several years ago, CIA agents were tipped off to this by a defector from a radical Palestinian guerrilla group who told of an explosive molded into the cardboard of a suitcase which he carried into a Geneva hotel room. The bomb was located and, indeed, was not detectable by modern bomb-sniffing devices. Its only distinction was an odor like vanilla, according to our CIA sources.

- FBI and CIA officials fear that the recent crash of a private plane on the South Lawn of the White House, and the lone gunman who opened fire through a White House gate have alerted foreign extremists to possible weak spots in the president's security. They fear copycat incidents may not be quite as harmless.

As recent history suggests, terrorism in the future is likely to be even more random and deadly than we've come to expect. As the former Soviet Union has splintered, so too have the radical organizations that keep a deadly vigil against peace and cooperation.

GOP wants to hold Nuremburg-style trials

The difference between this election and others is that the Republicans are threatening to hold war crime trials against the President and members of his party.

Buchwald

The winners — Newt Gingrich, Alfonse D'Amato and Jesse Helms, among others — all want to bring members of the opposition to justice either by demanding a public hanging on the Mall or a firing squad with ammunition supplied by the National Rifle Association.

A GOP law-enforcement officer told me, "We wish to hold the equivalent of the Nuremberg trials and have the Democrats face charges of increasing the budget deficit, pouring money down welfare sewers, appointing liberal justices to the Supreme Court and waffling on prayer in schools. We will not let them get away with any crimes committed inside the Capital Beltway."

"What proof do you have on any of this?" I asked.

"We have a sample of DNA from Teddy Kennedy's stomach."

"That could be very damaging," I admitted.

The prosecutor said, "I have no problem proving that Clinton was driving a white Bronco when he campaigned for Mario Cuomo in New York."

"That's all Alfonse D'Amato needs," I told him.

"This is the first time the Republican Party seems so vindictive about punishing the opposition. After all, the GOP won — shouldn't they be happy?"

"You don't forgive Democrats who voted in favor of abortion rights, Head Start and higher taxes for the upper-income brackets. If the Republicans looked the other way, the Dems could challenge us in 1996. The best thing is to cut off their heads — even if it means borrowing a guillotine from France."

"I know this is a silly question, but if the GOP spends so much time avenging themselves against the Democrats, how will they fulfill their 'contract with America'?"

"We'll sequester both houses until the Republican committees find the Democrats guilty. The voters don't care about new legislation — they want to see the GOP burn down the White House."

"Besides the political rhetoric of the campaign, what other evidence do you have that the Democrats have committed crimes in the same league as Nuremberg?"

"Newt Gingrich found a glove on the White House lawn that could have been dropped there on Election Day. If D'Amato can prove that it belongs to Hillary Clinton, his case against Whitewater will be clinched."

Good outweighs bad for Midland youths

With the season of giving and sharing upon us, I would like to share with the community the recent generosity of our local youths.

All too often we hear of the wrongdoing of our youths, this time the good outweighs the bad.

During the United Way campaign, 13 Midland Independent School District (MISD) schools participated in "A Dime's Worth of Difference," a youth campaign. A total of $5,148.69 was raised by Ben Milam, Bonham, De Zavala, Emerson, Fannin, Henderson, Jane Long, South and Washington Elementary Schools. Coleman, Midland, Lee Freshman and Abel Junior High also participated.

Lesson learned...Better to give than to receive. I hope this letter warms your hearts!

Volunteers guarantee success of planting

Midland's Community Spirit really shined through Saturday, Nov. 19, during the morning hours. Texaco, in conjunction with Keep Midland Beautiful, and Global Re-Leaf, hosted a tree planting along Wadley Avenue and on North Big Spring Street. The event was guaranteed success with all the volunteers that showed up and completed their mission. A special thanks goes out to the following groups: The Midland Jaycees, Big Tootsie, Compressor Systems, Inc., San Jacinto Junior High, Lee Freshman, Boy Scout Troop 270, Midland Freshman, Girl Scout Troop 270, Penwell Energy Inc., Dowell Schlumberger, Inc., Midland High School Science Club, Lamar Elementary School and Midland Teen Court.

And this also applies to anyone else who worked and was not mentioned in the preceeding. Thanks to everyone's efforts in making community improvements a reality, not something only wished for.

Parents have priority for coach positions

This letter is in response to the letter you published on Nov. 21 regarding the selection of volunteer coaches by the board of Tower Little League. There were a number of statements made in the letter which were taken out of context and are therefore inaccurate.

As a coach and board member of Tower Little League, I would like to make clear what I feel to be the board's position. First it is not now nor has it ever been our intention to discourage volunteers of any kind whether they be parents or not. The policy of Tower Little League will be to give first consideration for coaching positions to parents of the players, and if then we are unable to fill all of the openings we will then select coaches from a list of volunteer applicants. In this way we are encouraging the parents by sending a message that they will have first priority for any coaching positions.

I can't speak for the other board members, however my support of this action was based on my conversations with some parents who felt that they were being denied an opportunity to coach their child because some teams were being held by coaches who no longer had a child on a team. Past experience has shown that we have plenty of parent and non-parent volunteer coaches for the older age group divisions, but that we have to go begging for coaches in the younger age division. If someone desires to be a true volunteer coach then let them use their coaching talent in the age group where it is most needed, not where they selfishly wish.

Shelby offers refunds to contributors

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Sen. Richard Shelby made an offer Tuesday to any Democratic contributors put off by his switch to the Republican Party: Send him a letter and he'll send the money back.

"We'll be glad to," Shelby said. "We don't think it will be much. But even if it is, it will be made up by many others."

Shelby received $2.8 million in contributions during his most recent campaign, in 1992. Running as a Democrat, he handily defeated Republican Richard Sellers to win a six-year term.

■ More national news/5b

Earlier this month, Shelby bolted to the GOP one day after the Republicans swept to control of both house of Congress.

Democratic Party officials have heard some grumbling since then.

"We've had some phone calls from people," said Al LaPierre, state Democratic executive director. "We just tell them to call him."

A phone call isn't enough, though.

"Write me a letter, tell me how much ... and we'll give it back," Shelby said in an interview. "We'll verify it. We'll send it to our treasurer."

The Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee gave Shelby $101,156 in the 1992 race, but spokeswoman Kim James said from Washington the organization has no plans to seek a refund.

Storms cause high death toll for '94 season

MIAMI (AP) — It wasn't much of a year for Atlantic hurricanes in 1994, but the tropical storms were killers.

The first named tropical storm of the year, Alberto, moved inland and stalled over Georgia in July, causing flooding that killed 31 people.

The last tropical storm of the season was the erratic Gordon, which washed away flimsy hillside homes earlier this month in Haiti, killing at least 830 people there. It killed nine others in the Caribbean and eight as it crisscrossed Florida.

"Whenever you have large loss of life, it's always water, it's not wind," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

"In the Caribbean and Central America, it's water due to heavy rains, flash floods and mudslides. In the U.S., it's storm surge, people dying in the surf or inland flooding such as we had with Alberto."

In between Alberto and Gordon was Debby, a tropical storm that formed in mid-September and caused nine deaths, mostly in the islands of Martinique and St. Lucia.

There were seven named storms in 1994, fewer than the average of 10.

The Atlantic hurricane season starts June 1 and ends Nov. 30. A tropical storm has winds of at least 39 mph. It becomes a hurricane at 74 mph.

Odessa park to accommodate disabled

■ The Odessa Downtown Lioness Club begins a drive to provide a barrier-free park to meet the needs of children with handicaps.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A barrier-free park — one specially designed to accommodate disabled children — is $50,000 closer to becoming a reality following a donation by Odessa Regional Hospital on Tuesday.

A project initiated by the Odessa Downtown Lioness Club, Barrier-Free Progressive Park will be located across the street from the hospital at 520 E. Sixth St.

"We are very optimistic by the spring of next year we'll have the funds to begin," said Donna Parish, project director with the Lioness Club.

"We have $274,000 committed. We feel we need at least $360,000 to break ground," she said.

Projected cost of the park is $515,000.

The money donated Tuesday came from the hospital — employees and volunteers — according to spokesman Steve Burke.

"We're giving them, hopefully, the first in a series of checks," Burke said.

The Lioness Club and hospital hope to solicit needed funds from foundations and the community.

"Now the real fun begins: to get the community involved from a financial standpoint," said Lex Guinn, chief executive officer of Odessa Regional Hospital.

But truly the real fun will be that enjoyed by the youngsters who use the park, expected to be completed by the end of next year.

Similar to Midland's Opportunity Park, the Odessa park will be completely accessible to handicap youngsters.

That will include textured ground surfaces to help guide visually impaired individuals. There will also be signs in Braille and a scent garden.

Other amenities will include swings for wheelchair-bound people and spring platforms — similar to seesaws — for children who have limited use of their legs.

The park will also have talk tubes and educational panels.

"There will not be any area or piece of equipment in the park disabled children will not have access to," Ms. Parish said.

"They will be able to get sensations they have not been able to get their whole lives," she said.

The approximately three-acre park was conceptualized by Midland landscape architect Kelly Cook.

The park will benefit more than just the disabled.

"Because abled-bodied children can play besides (the disabled children), we hope it can harbor an understanding of what handicapped children go through every day," said Lioness Club President Joy Gregg.

The public can make contributions by purchasing $100 personalized inscribed bricks for a "yellow brick road" within the park. Donations between $250 and $4,999 will warrant the donor's name on a plaque on the base of a fountain at the front of the park. And donations of $5,000 or more will entitle the donor to a personalized plaque at the base of the fountain.

Home health week grows

■ Organization that promotes at-home care for the sick receives worldwide recognition.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

When someone is sick, home care can be the best place for them to receive care and recuperate — surrounded by family, friends, familiar surroundings and a competent home health-care provider.

Additionally, home health care can be easier on the patient and the pocketbook. That is the message of World Home Care Week, according to Mary Daffin, director of the Odessa office of HealthCor, a home health-care provider.

"The purpose of World Home Care Week is to put focus on that particular health-care industry. It's a very specialized kind of care delivered in the home," according to Marilee Kyler, director of community relations for the Midland division of CareTeam Health Care Services, formerly We Care.

This is the first year for the World Home Care Week, she said. Since 1982, this celebration was formally recognized by the president and Congress as National Home Care Week.

The growing practice of home care around the world prompted Dr. Knight Steel — president of the World Organization for Care in the Home and Hospice — to expand the observance internationally this year, Ms. Kyler said.

The week honors the physicians, nurses, therapists and aides who make house calls every day to provide high-quality home care, she said.

Some of the services home-care providers offer include home nursing, personal care, infusion and equipment.

By providing full services through one source, home-care providers help keep costs and time to a minimum for their patients, who range from infants to the elderly, Ms. Kyler said.

Ms. Daffin said home health care is not a new idea; it has been in existence since 1965 when Medicare was enacted.

Ms. Kyler said many patients recover more quickly in the home and home health care is more cost-effective.

"Experience and studies prove it. Home care is easier on the patient and on the pocketbook," Ms. Daffin said.

"Home care reinforces the nurturing of family members and friends. It preserves the patient's dignity and provides a welcome measure of independence that even the best institution cannot offer," Ms. Daffin said.

"Home-care patients benefit from an improved quality of life during recuperation, as well as tremendous financial savings over hospital or nursing facility care," Ms. Daffin said.

According to statistics released by the National Association for Home Care, a day in the hospital costs an average of $1,756. One day in a skilled nursing facility costs almost $300, while the average visit by a home health-care professional is about $90.

"Hospitalization is sometimes necessary. When it isn't, home health care can offer families a sound, cost-effective alternative," Ms. Daffin said.

"Home care can be a more compassionate way to care for people while they are ill.

Texas delegation in favor of GATT

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Most of Texas' House members on Tuesday endorsed a 124-nation trade accord, cementing a trade-friendly reputation earned last year when they helped push the North American Free Trade Agreement to victory.

Unlike last year when NAFTA's passage was in doubt until the eleventh hour, the world accord negotiated under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade won easy approval Tuesday on a 288-146 vote.

Twenty-five members in the 30-member Texas delegation backed GATT, largely recreating the coalition that endorsed NAFTA last November.

The Senate, also returning for a rare lame-duck session, begins debate on the world trade accord Wednesday with a vote due Thursday. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, already has announced his support for the pact, which faces a difficult sell in the Senate. The state's other senator, Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison, remains publicly uncommitted.

The pact slashes tariffs by an average of 38 percent worldwide and expands the rules of world trade into new areas such as agriculture, services and the protection of copyrights and patents. The World Trade Organization it creates would eliminate the power of any one country to block an adverse trade ruling.

'Should we fail to pass this this week, America will be in retreat. If we take the reins and pass this legislation, we will have every opportunity to be the leader in this new age of international competition.'

— Rep. Mike Andrews

Echoing arguments used in the NAFTA debate, GATT critics said the accord would increase competition for U.S. workers from low-wage foreign workers. They also charged that the World Trade Organization infringes on America's sovereignty and questioned the propriety of a lame-duck Congress voting on the legislation.

But supporters stressed the accord's potential for economic gains, jobs growth and lower prices for U.S. consumers. They also argued that failure to pass the legislation would

Houston representative casts final vote

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defeated Texas Congressman Craig Washington is going out on a high note: He voted, for a change.

The Houston Democrat, whose absences from the House floor this year have become legendary, cast a ballot Tuesday during the House's lame-duck session to approve a world trade accord. For the record, his final vote was an endorsement of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Congressional Quarterly, which tracks votes by members of Congress, estimates that Washington has missed 81 percent of all votes this year — more than anyone else in the 435-member House.

The 18th District lawmaker's voting percentage took a turn for the worse after he was defeated in the March primary. His absences figured in his loss to Houston City Councilwoman Sheila Jackson Lee.

Even though the one-time defense attorney couldn't be found on Capitol Hill, he made time to lay the foundation for the lobbying business he plans to launch next year in Texas.

A congressional watchdog group last month filed complaints with the House ethics committee against Washington and two other lawmakers with prolonged absences.

The National Taxpayers Union is seeking to dock Washington's $133,600 salary by almost $22,000 to account for his absences. NTU estimates that Washington failed to appear during 60 of the 122 days in which the House or its committees voted during the first nine months of this year.

Bush Library groundbreaker today

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — The Bush White House stages a reunion of sorts Wednesday when many administration principals gather under a tent for the groundbreaking of the George Bush Presidential Library and Museum Center.

The $82 million project will be constructed on a 90-acre site on the southern edge of the Texas A&M University campus, just across the road from the university's swine, goat and sheep research centers.

Some $42 million will go for the library and museum with the other $40 million dedicated for an academic building for government studies. Under a new federal law, the money must be privately raised, although the facility itself will be turned over to the federal government.

Construction is expected to begin soon with completion set for early 1997.

The Bush Library will be the 10th presidential library operated by the National Archives. An 11th library, the Richard Nixon Library in California, is privately run.

The Bush Library, however, will join the Lyndon Johnson Library in Austin and the Jimmy Carter Library in Atlanta as only the third presidential library to have academic programs attached to it.

Texas A&M officials were expecting Wednesday's ceremonies to attract about 1,000 people, many of them veterans of Bush's 1988-92 presidential term.

Former Vice President Dan Quayle was to be among them, but his hospitalization in Indianapolis for treatment of a blood clot to a lung will make him a no-show.

Others confirmed, however, included longtime Bush confidante and former secretary of state Jim Baker; Lamar Alexander, a former Bush education secretary and Tennessee governor mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate; ex-national security advisers Andrew Card and Brent Scowcroft; Edward Derwinski, former veteran affairs secretary; former White House chief of staff John Sununu; Bush labor secretary Lynn Martin; and ex-health and human services secretary Louis Sullivan.

Former Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney also was expected to attend.

The former president and wife, Barbara, accompanied by son George W. Bush, the Texas governor-elect, and some 300 others were scheduled to board a 14-car train in Houston early Wednesday for the 90-mile trip to College Station. George W. Bush heads the Bush Presidential Library Foundation.

GATT: Vote 'sets tone' for America's future hurt America's standing in the international community.

"Our economic future is closely linked to the tearing down of export barriers and to locking in these extraordinary reforms," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, the incoming chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"With 94 percent of the world's consumers living beyond the U.S. borders the global economy is here to stay," Archer said in a floor speech. "We must compete, we must find our future there."

Outgoing Rep. Mike Andrews, casting his last vote after 12 years in Congress, cautioned that the vote sets the tone for America's future.

"Should we fail to pass this this week, America will be in retreat," Andrews told his colleagues. "If we take the reins and pass this legislation, we will have every opportunity to be the leader in this new age of international competition."

Rep. Kika de la Garza, who as House Agriculture Committee chairman played a significant role in fashioning the GATT language relating to agriculture, touted the pact's benefits for farmers.

The Mission Democrat said the accord improves market access for U.S. agricultural producers while reducing export subsidies for foreign farmers, notably in Europe.

But Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, voted against approval in part because he contends a lame-duck Congress shouldn't be deciding the outcome. He also voiced dislike of GATT's implementing legislation, which includes provisions unrelated to trade.

Woman recalls horror of 1983 sexual assault

Associated Press

ABILENE — A 51-year-old Abilene woman said she was subjected to repeated sexual abuse during a "horrific" night in 1983 that she thought she'd never live through.

"I felt for sure I was going to die," she testified Tuesday. "I never thought I'd be here to tell this horrible story."

She also never thought she'd have to wait 11 years to give the testimony.

Because of a broken plea bargain, George Ray Prince is only now being tried for a crime that allegedly occurred from just after midnight on March 1, 1983, until 9 a.m. the next morning.

The woman, former co-owner of an Abilene club, testified that she was beaten repeatedly and forced to participate in various sex acts.

Prince pleaded guilty to the attack later in 1983 and was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

But the plea bargain included a stipulation that he would not be tried for crimes in Illinois and Oregon. Under pressure from a victim, Illinois officials reneged, and Prince was extradited to Illinois and convicted in 1992 on two counts of aggravated rape committed in 1980.

Consequently, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned Prince's 50-year sentence for the Abilene crime.

The 18-year-old is one of two candidates who have filed for the January election. The other, 45-year-old Bonnie Claire Dadidakis, has a son in Madison's class.

"If my son was doing that, I would be very proud of him," Ms. Dadidakis told the Houston Chronicle. "I think it's very admirable. I also feel that it shows that he has received an excellent education."

Survey says most inmates fight drug, alcohol problems

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Almost half of all Texas prison inmates were addicted to alcohol or drugs before their incarceration, according to a survey released Tuesday by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

"There is a strong relationship between crime and substance abuse," said David Farabee, author of the survey. "Drug use multiplies crime rates, while people who complete drug treatment tend to be less of a candidate to commit a crime."

The report is based on a random sample of 1,030 inmates at the Goree Unit in Huntsville, ranging in age from 18 to 67.

The survey found that 63 percent of Texas inmates had one or more substance abuse problems in the year prior to their incarceration.

Farabee said the most significant revelation of the survey is that half of all inmates would be interested in getting treatment.

A quarter of all inmates would even be willing to extend their prison stay by three months in order to receive treatment, the survey said.

"Not only do we see a high rate of inmates who have substance abuse problems, but we see a high number of people willing to get treatment. They know there is a problem and want to get rid of it," Farabee said.

The Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse released a statement saying, "The total number of drug offenses is increasing and the need to treat the addicted inmate population is more important than ever."

Glen Castlebury, spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said the survey's findings aren't surprising. He said TDCJ screenings show that 76.2 percent of the inmates admitted to prison in November had substance abuse problems.

"It is more important than ever to treat and we are," Castlebury said. "Today, we have right at 9,000 inmates in one kind of substance abuse treatment program or another."

The current Texas prison population is roughly 100,000, according to Castlebury.

But Castlebury said it wouldn't be fair to conclude that only 10 percent of the inmates are receiving treatment. He said it's likely prisoners with longer sentences wouldn't be treated until closer to their release date.

"Our goal is to time the treatment so that it has its maximum benefit when the inmate leaves prison. Therefore, a large percentage of inmates who are enduring a long sentence would not be candidates for these programs yet," he said.

Of the inmates sampled, 39 percent claimed to have been drunk or high at the time of the offense that led to their incarceration. Seventy-three percent of that group said they wouldn't have committed the offense if they weren't drunk or high.

Almost 98 percent of the inmates sampled reported some level of lifetime alcohol use, and 53.6 percent reported use in the month before their incarceration.

Nine indicted on organized crime charges

LUBLOCK (AP) — Nine relatives face charges of organized crime stemming from what authorities say was a series of staged automobile accidents costing insurers more than $300,000.

The 3½-month investigation that led to Monday's indictments was launched in response to a state trooper's suspicions about an accident last December.

"A lot of the facts did not add up, which led me to believe it was a staged accident," said Texas Department of Public Safety trooper Carey Matthews, who was called to the accident scene.

Family members would drive their cars to an appointed intersection and intentionally collide, Matthews said. The drivers would tell police they didn't know each other and then file insurance claims, he said. The accidents involved only members of the family.

Matthews said that because the suspects had various last names, it was not initially apparent they were related.

Harvest of bumper cotton crop nears end in Texas

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Only 10 percent of the 1994 cotton crop, one of the best in years, remains to be harvested, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says.

"With harvest almost finished, producers have found that this year's cotton crop bounced back from past weather conditions with excellent yields," Extension agronomist Kater Hake of Lubbock said Tuesday.

"Also, the quality of the cotton is even better than last year's."

The bumper crop and rising market prices — an unusual combination — are bringing smiles to Texas cotton producers, Hake said.

"This isn't something cotton farmers expected, because the market usually falls as yields go up," Hake said. "However, this year was an exception and just reflects the strong demand for cotton both within and outside the United States."

HAKE NOTED that the number of contaminated "barky" bales is down 11 percent and that the strength of the fibers is better than expected.

He said yields estimated for Texas stayed the same as last year — about 5.5 million bales. Nationally, the cotton harvest is estimated at 19.5 million bales, up one million bales from last year.

Dr. Carl Anderson, Extension economist at Texas A&M, said domestic and export demand has played a key role in the rising market.

"It may in part be uncertainty of general economic conditions and the possibility of larger-than-expected export sales," Anderson said. "Also, large speculators have been on the buying side for several weeks."

He added that the uncertainties concerning the size of cotton harvests in China and Pakistan have promoted U.S. export sales of cotton, which in turn has improved the market.

Hake said South Plains producers still waiting to harvest the rest of their crop should expect to see fewer bales and lower quality. Producers don't usually have to wait this long to harvest because the first killing freeze usually occurs before November, he explained.

"PRODUCERS WHO used harvest-aid chemicals on their cotton didn't get hurt by the late freeze," he said. "Producers who didn't use the chemicals may reconsider their harvesting options next year."

Robert Roark, Extension agent in Andrews County, just north of Odessa, said cotton producers there are also still waiting for the first killing freeze to help strip leaves off their plants.

"Most of the producers in the area don't spend money on harvest-aid chemicals, so they must depend on the weather," Roark said. "But this year the weather is not proving to be something they can depend on.

"The bolls are just hanging on the plants ready to be harvested, only producers can't get to them through the leaves," he said.

Roark said usually the first freeze is around the first of November, and that producers expect the delay to affect the cotton quality and grade for the area. He added that temperatures have been dropping so producers hope to harvest soon.

Meanwhile in Southwest Texas, pecan and peanut harvests are completed and producers now are getting ready for spring planting.

JOSE PENA, Extension economist in Uvalde, said most of the farmland is ready for planting, but a hard freeze could slow producers down.

"A freeze could slow fall vegetable growth as well as forage production," Pena said. "These mild conditions have really helped producers in our area, and if we had a choice they would continue."

Jon Zeitler, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said a high pressure system will bring cool conditions to Texas through Thursday.

"Other than some high clouds, skies will be fair, with plenty of sunshine during the latter half of the week," Zeitler said. "Temperatures will warm up beginning Friday, pushing high temperatures into the 70s and low 80s across most of the state this weekend."

He added that high temperatures will range from the upper 40s in the Panhandle to the lower 70s along the Gulf Coast. No rainfall is expected for the state until Sunday.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges need rain. Harvesting cotton, carrots. Sorghum, sugar beet harvests completed. Supplemental feeding continues for livestock.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges need moisture. Harvesting cotton. Sorghum harvest near completion. Planting wheat. Dry weather slowing small grain growth.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair to good condition. Cotton harvest delayed, waiting for killing freeze. Wheat progressing. Livestock in good condition; supplemental feeding continues.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture surplus to adequate. Pastures, ranges improving with rain. Harvesting cotton, soybeans, peanuts, pecans. Vegetable harvests completed. Planting wheat, oats.

EAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Winter pastures good growth; some hay feeding. Good harvests of winter greens, sweet potatoes, other cole crops. Final harvest continues in pecans; poor yields. Cattle good; market steady.

FAR WEST TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in fair to good condition. Harvesting pecans, cotton; dryland producers waiting for first freeze. Cutting, baling hay. Livestock good; supplemental feeding continues.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short to surplus. Pastures, ranges improving with moisture. Wheat, winter pastures progressing. Some dryland peanuts will not be harvested. Livestock in fair to good condition.

CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture surplus. Pastures, ranges improving with rain. Wet fields stopping field activity. Peanut yields good to excellent. Pests damaging wheat fields. Livestock in good condition.

SOUTHEAST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Pastures, ranges benefitting from rain. Harvesting peanuts, vegetables. Wet fields slowing garden activity. Cattle in good condition; market steady.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS: Soil moisture surplus to adequate. Pastures, ranges in excellent condition. Peanut, pecan harvests completed. Cutting hay. Fall vegetables progressing. Preparing land for spring planting.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture adequate. Pastures, ranges improving with moisture. Harvesting hay. Wet fields delaying rice harvest. Seeding winter pastures. Pecan yields low. Cattle in good condition.

Judge rules against ban on long hair

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge ruled Tuesday that the Bastrop school district's hair-length rule is unconstitutional in Zachariah Tounga-te's long-running battle to wear his ponytail to class.

But Visiting Judge Norman Lanford of Houston refused to order school officials to abolish the rule, saying the dispute didn't rise to the level requiring court intervention.

"We're happy with a win, and we're taking it as such," said attorney Paul Hunn, who represents the Bastrop school board.

But Zach's attorney, Charles Beall, considered the judge's finding a victory.

"It's an illegal and unconstitutional rule," Beall said. "I don't know what kind of message they (the school) will send to their students if they continue to enforce it."

Hunn responded that he expected the school board to continue to enforce the rule. He said the judge deferred to local educators by recognizing legal precedent that says the dispute isn't a matter for the courts.

In 1990, Zach gained national attention when as a third-grader he was given in-school suspension for refusing to cut his rattail-style hair.

School district rules in Bastrop, a small town about 35 miles east of Austin, required boys to have hair no longer than the bottom of their collar.

Zach was kept separated from other students, and taught alone in a 10-foot by 13-foot room. He also was prohibited from participating in extracurricular activity.

School officials argued that the rule instilled discipline and made students more productive members of society.

In February 1991, the boy's parents withdrew him from school and taught him at home for the remainder of the year.

Zach's parents sued the school district to get rid of the rule so he could return. While the case made its way through the legal system, Zach received hundreds of letters from across the country, most of them supportive.

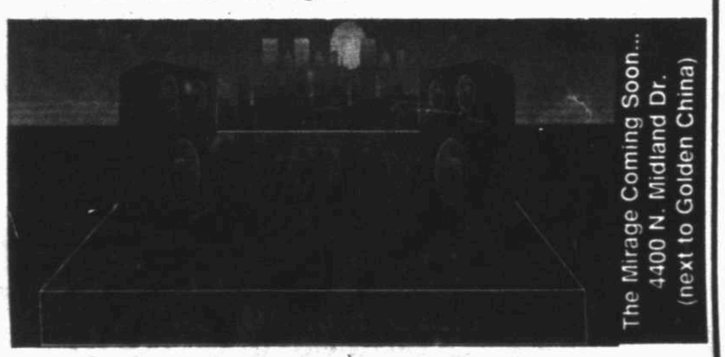

The case was dismissed, but an appeals court reversed that decision and said Zach's challenge to the constitutionality of the hair-length rule deserved a trial.

Last month, a jury ruled against Zach, who is now 12.

But jurors later said they were confused over key questions given them, Beall said.

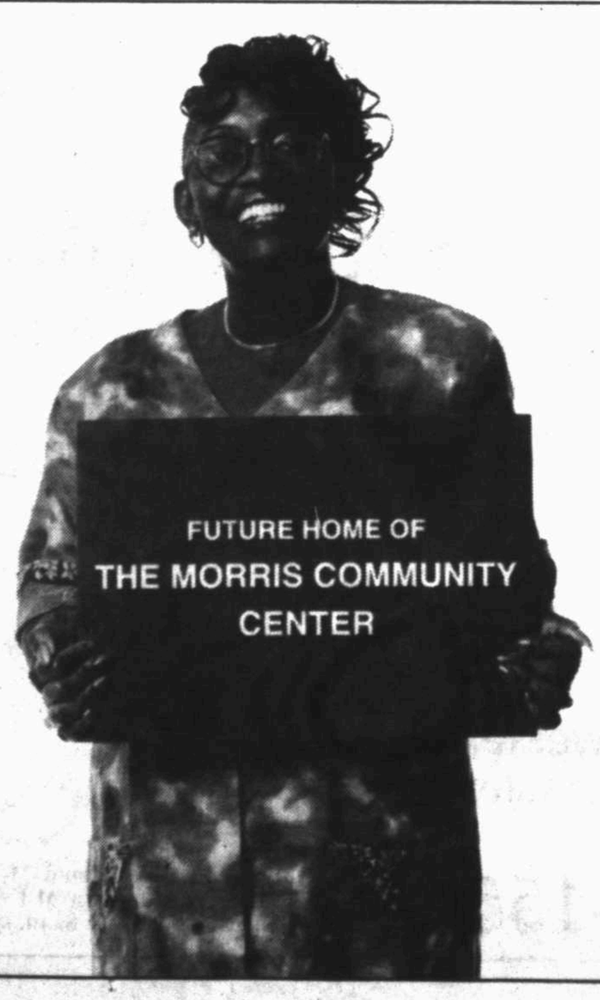

On Tuesday, Judge Lanford threw out the jury verdict, said the rule was unconstitutional but refused to order the school to stop enforcing it.

From fourth- through sixth-grade, Zach attended private school. He now is being educated at home again.

Researchers hope tracer can reduce need for breast cancer biopsies

By Brenda C. Coleman
AP Medical Writer

CHICAGO — A radioactive tracer injected into women who may have breast cancer makes malignancies "light up" on a detector and could cut in half the number of biopsies needed in this country, a researcher said Tuesday.

If the technique is proved effective, it could save millions of dollars and spare hundreds of thousands of women the pain and scarring that can accompany biopsies, said the researcher, Dr. Iraj Khalkhali.

The technique was 90 percent accurate in identifying breast cancer in women who were afflicted, Khalkhali and colleagues reported at a meeting of the Radiological Society of North America.

"Mammography is very sensitive at detecting most abnormalities in the breast, but only one out of every four or five suspicious lesions seen on a mammogram turns out to be a cancer," said Khalkhali, an associate professor of radiology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Khalkhali cautioned that the method is still experimental.

The new technique, called scintimammography, costs about $600 and employs a radioactive tracer first used to detect heart disease. The patient is exposed to about the same amount of radiation she would receive on a cross-country airplane trip.

Biopsies typically cost $1,500 to $3,000. About 700,000 a year are done to evaluate breast lumps.

The new technique has the potential to eliminate the need for half of them, Khalkhali estimated. "We can no longer afford to do a biopsy on every suspicious finding seen on mammography," Khalkhali said.

The researcher said the equipment needed is already in virtually every hospital's radiology department.

Dr. Steven M. Larson, chief of nuclear medicine in the radiology department at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Institute in New York City, said the technique holds promise, but its place in medicine is still to be determined.

Khalkhali said scintimammography has been tried on more than 600 women at Los Angeles Harbor-UCLA Medical Center, where he is breast imaging chief. He reported on 147 consecutive patients who required biopsy for 153 suspicious masses.

Scintimammography correctly identified cancer in more than 90 percent of cases, Khalkhali said. There were 11 false positives — suspicious findings that were identified as cancer by scintimammography but turned out to be noncancerous. There were four false negatives — lesions not identified by the technique that turned out to be cancerous, he said.

If the scintimammography indicates cancer, doctors r[illegible]nmend a biopsy, he said. "If results are negative, we recommend that the patient be followed with periodic mammography or physical exam," Khalkhali said.

A clinical trial involving 50 hospitals throughout the United States began in April, and sites in Europe and Latin America have been added. Results are expected in about six months.

Nonconformist Jerry Rubin dies from wreck injuries at 56

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Yippie-turned-yuppie Jerry Rubin was a merry master of political theater: He mocked a judge by wearing a judicial robe to court, appeared before a congressional committee in Revolutionary War costume and showed up at protests shirtless, wearing an Uncle Sam hat and toting a toy M-16.

Rubin died at age 56 Monday, two weeks after he was hit by a car while crossing a street. He never regained consciousness after the accident.

His former wife, Mimi Leonard Fleischman, acknowledged that his death came with a final act of nonconformity — jaywalking.

"He was a great life force, full of spunk, courage and wit," said state Sen. Tom Hayden, a co-defendant in the Chicago Seven trial.

The son of a Cincinnati truck driver turned union official, Rubin was catapulted to fame during the anti-Vietnam War protests of the 1960s. Along with Abbie Hoffman, Paul Krassner and other radicals, Rubin founded the Youth International Party, or Yippie movement, dedicated to disrupting "the system."

In 1969 he was one of eight defendants who went on trial on charges of conspiring to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic convention in Chicago.

Black Panther leader Bobby Seale, after being bound and gagged in the courtroom, was tried separately, so the defendants became known as the Chicago Seven. Rubin and four others were convicted, but the convictions were overturned on appeal.

During a House Un-American Activities Committee investigation into the anti-war movement, Rubin showed up in a Revolutionary War costume, with three-cornered hat.

"He was a kind of Paul Revere calling attention to the war in Vietnam. ... It was a cultural civil war," Krassner said from New York.

After the Chicago Seven trial, Rubin wrote a book of political autobiography called "Do It! Scenarios of the Revolution," which became a best seller.

During the 1970s, the bearded Yippie radical evolved into a tailored, clean-shaven young urban professional, writing the book "Growing (Up) at 37" in 1976.

In the '80s he became known for organizing "networking" parties that attracted thousands of people to the Palladium nightclub in New York on Tuesday nights. During that period he confronted Hoffman, his former sidekick and a lifelong radical, in a series of "Yuppie vs. Yippie" debates held around the country.

When he died, Rubin was organizing gang leaders into distributing the health drink he marketed through his Life Extension International health foods business. He had moved to Los Angeles in 1991.

"Instead of distributing crack, he was getting them to distribute his product," said Krassner, editor of the quarterly newsletter The Realist. "In the end, he was combining his altruism with business."

Jury in Fleiss trial begins discussion of police conduct

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Heidi Fleiss jury began deliberating Tuesday whose conduct was more objectionable: the so-called Hollywood madam's or that of undercover police.

The case went to the seven-man, five-woman jury after the 28-year-old pediatrician's daughter was alternately depicted in closing arguments Monday as a victim of entrapment and an eager supplier of prostitutes and drugs.

Fleiss, who was also charged with supplying cocaine to undercover officers, could get 11 years in prison.

The jury deliberated all day Tuesday before retiring for the evening. Deliberations resume today.

Fleiss was captured on video and audiotapes during a Beverly Hills sting last year and charged with offering four women for prostitution. Two testified under immunity that they were to give Fleiss 40 percent of their $1,500 fees.

"When asked for cocaine ... would you deal drugs to a total stranger?" prosecutor Alan Carter asked the jury. "Would you say, 'No problem, no problem' again and again when asked to procure women for sex?"

Defense attorney Anthony Brooklier lashed out at police for pursuing his client but not the call-girl ring's customers, who were rumored to include Hollywood's rich and powerful.

The names in Fleiss' black book were not revealed at the trial. Superior Court Judge Judith Champagne ruled that they were irrelevant to the defense argument that police induced Fleiss to commit a crime.

During the sting, Beverly Hills Detective Sammy Lee posed as a Hawaiian millionaire and spoke gibberish meant to pass as Japanese. Videotapes show him arranging to purchase four women for himself and three colleagues.

Doctors treat Quayle for clot in lung

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former Vice President Dan Quayle underwent treatment Tuesday for a blood clot in his lung just weeks before he was expected to announce whether he will run for president in 1996.

"The doctors are very optimistic about Mr. Quayle's condition right now. He's doing extremely well and he is progressing very nicely," said Pam Perry, a spokeswoman for Indiana University Medical Center.

The 47-year-old Quayle was expected to make a full recovery, the spokeswoman said.

He was being treated with anticoagulants to prevent further clotting while natural enzymes in Quayle's body dissolve the lodged clot, said the physician treating him, Dr. Homer Twigg. After four days, he likely would be put on another blood thinner for about three to six months.

Twigg said it can take up to a year for a clot to dissolve completely.

While clots can be life threatening because they interfere with breathing, Twigg said Quayle had required only a small amount of oxygen when he was admitted to the hospital and wasn't in immediate danger of dying.

Twigg said at a news conference that Quayle is otherwise in excellent heath.

Twigg said it isn't known what causes such clots, called pulmonary embolisms. They often occur in people who are sedentary for long stretches, such as truck drivers, and can be hereditary, but Quayle had no such predisposition, the doctor said.

Quayle has been promoting his book "Standing Firm" and appearing frequently on behalf of Republican candidates over the last year.

Quayle's wife, Marilyn Quayle, said the illness would not affect her husband's political future, which could include a run for the 1996 Republican presidential nomination.

"It's nothing. It's basically a blip and he will continue with the timetable that he set for himself and will be back on his feet shortly and will decide what he wants to do with the future," she said.

Quayle went to the emergency room for a chest X-ray Sunday because he wasn't feeling well, said Dr. Deborah Allen, his family physician. Allen said doctors were exploring a number of diagnoses, including walking pneumonia.

Serial killer didn't want isolation, protection, says Dahmer lawyer

By Arthur L. Srb
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Jeffrey Dahmer didn't want restrictive living arrangements that would have given him more protection in the prison where his head was bashed in, his lawyer said Tuesday.

"He wanted to be in with the general population. He didn't want to sit in a hole all day long," said Stephen J. Eisenberg.

Authorities still did not know a motive in Monday's killing. Dahmer was found in a pool of blood in a restroom next to a gymnasium at the maximum security Columbia Correctional Institution in Portage. His head was bashed in.

An inmate who had been working with Dahmer also was beaten and remained in critical condition Tuesday with head injuries.

A third prisoner who had been working with the two men on a cleaning detail was identified as the suspect in the slaying.

Dahmer, who confessed to killing 17 men and boys over 13 years and sometimes having sex with and cannibalizing the corpses, died Monday of multiple skull fractures and brain trauma. A bloody broom handle was found near Dahmer, but authorities hadn't determined if it was the murder weapon.

Dahmer, who had been behind bars since July 1991, when a handcuffed man escaped from him and led Milwaukee police to an apartment full of body parts, had been attacked once before.

In July, an inmate tried to cut his throat but the weapon, a razor blade attached to a plastic handle, fell apart before it could hurt Dahmer.

Dahmer had been kept in isolation at the prison for a year before the staff determined he could mix with other prisoners, Corrections Secretary Michael Sullivan said.

Man accuses weight loss chain of sex discrimination

BOSTON (AP) — Tracy Tinkham says he wanted to move up the corporate ladder at Jenny Craig Inc.

But when he was told he'd "either have to have a sex change or a push-up bra" to get ahead, he decided the price of advancement was too high.

Tinkham is one of the "Boston Eight," eight men who have filed claims of sexual harassment and discrimination against the weight-loss firm.

On Tuesday, the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination said it had found probable cause that three of the men had been discriminated against. Three other cases were still under investigation, while two of the complainants missed filing deadlines.

MCAD board chairman Michael Duffy said investigators found that the three men were passed over for promotions and treated differently than the women.

MCAD case workers will mediate negotiations between the company and the men: Joseph Egan, of Boston; Mark Davis, of Nashua, N.H.; and Lauren Webber, of Lynn. All are former employees of Jenny Craig diet centers in the Boston area.

If an agreement cannot be reached, the commission could hold a hearing and eventually order the Del Mar, Calif., based Jenny Craig to pay damages to the men.

High court listens to debate on term limits

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, gingerly handling the politically explosive issue of term limits, seemed equally skeptical Tuesday of arguments for and against state efforts to limit the time anyone serves in Congress.

"It's very close," Justice Antonin Scalia said in discussing his view of the constitutionality of House and Senate term limits, imposed in various forms since 1990 by 22 states.

None of Scalia's eight colleagues contradicted his assessment.

The court will take its initial, private vote in an Arkansas term-limits case Friday and announce its decision by late June.

No matter how the court may rule, Republicans in Congress plan to vote next year on a constitutional amendment to limit congressional terms.

"We now have at least 200 members on the House side who are really, strongly committed to limiting terms," Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., said after the high court's 90-minute argument session.

But one Republican opponent of term limits, Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, said they aren't needed because "it is pretty clear the voters are taking care of the problem."

He pointed out that more than half the House members in the next session will have been elected since 1990, and that 55 senators are new to the body since 1984.

Dozens of members of Congress gathered on the front steps of the Supreme Court building, across the street from the Capitol, to share with reporters their legal and political insights.

Arkansas voters amended their state constitution in 1992 to limit how many times someone could appear on the ballot. Those who had served two six-year terms in the Senate or three two-year terms in the House could run, but only as write-in candidates.

The Arkansas Supreme Court struck down the measure, ruling that states cannot add to the qualifications for Congress listed in the Constitution — minimum age, state residency and U.S. citizenship for a number of years.

Arkansas Attorney General J. Winston Bryant urged the justices to reverse the state court ruling and uphold the state's "constitutional authority to encourage rotation in office of its congressional delegation."

Bryant said such a step was necessary to combat a trend toward "long-term, entrenched" incumbents that has proved to be "less fair, less competitive and less representative."

The Arkansas measure also was defended by John Kester, a lawyer for U.S. Term Limits, the private group that has pushed for such limits in all states.

Many of the justices' questions sought to clarify whether the Arkansas measure properly is classified as a "qualification" or, instead, as a "time, place and manner" regulation states routinely impose on elections.

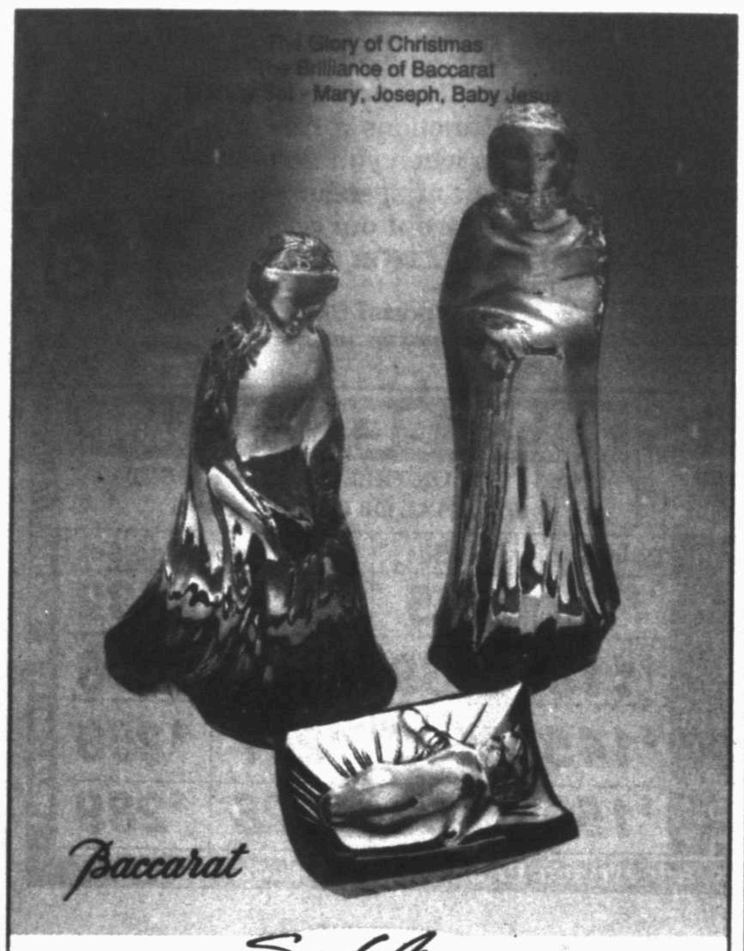

Louis Cohen, a lawyer for the League of Women Voters, urged the justices to invalidate the Arkansas measure but conceded that he thinks the state court wrongly found it to be a qualification.

Whatever the ballot-access condition is called, Cohen said, "it is something the states have no power to do."

Solicitor General Drew Days III, attacking state-imposed term limits on behalf of the Clinton administration, at first called it "unavoidable" to define the Arkansas measure as an impermissible qualification.

But when pressed by Scalia and Justice John Paul Stevens, Days said the measure should be invalidated even if the court views it as a "time, place or manner" regulation or something else entirely.

"Whatever that unidentified flying object is," it's unconstitutional, Days said.

Court upholds ban on child pornography distribution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court upheld a federal ban on distributing child pornography Tuesday, saying the law applies only to people who know the material features a sexual performance by someone under age 18.

Congress did a less than artful — but constitutional — job of writing the law, the court ruled 7-2 as it reinstated a California man's conviction for selling films made by former porn queen Traci Lords when she was 15.

The law had been challenged as one that punished even defendants who did not know the content of the material they distributed.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court that such an interpretation would create absurd results, making criminals of druggists who hand over an uninspected roll of developed film or Federal Express couriers who deliver a box labeled "film."

Instead, the court interpreted the law to require proof that defendants knew the books or films they distributed were child pornography.

Justice Antonin Scalia dissented, saying the decision put "in place a relatively toothless child-pornography law that Congress did not enact."

Like those convicted of statutory rape, people who knowingly deal in pornography should be held liable even if they did not know the performer was underage, Scalia said.

John McMickle of the National Law Center for Children and Families agreed, saying Tuesday's ruling creates a heavy new burden for prosecutors.

But Pat Trueman of the American Family Association called the decision a "substantial victory" because it removes any doubt about the child pornography law's validity.

The decision reinstated Los Angeles porn shop owner Rubin Gottesman's conviction for distributing sexually explicit Traci Lords videotapes. Lords was a well-known porn star when it was discovered in 1986 that she had been underage when she made many of her films.

Gottesman, owner of X-Citement Video, was convicted of selling more than 100 Lords tapes to an undercover policeman in 1986. He was sentenced to a year in prison and three years' probation, and his business was fined $100,000.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out Gottesman's conviction, saying the federal law violated his free-speech rights because it required no proof that Gottesman knew Lords was underage.

The law makes it a crime to knowingly transport or ship child pornography.

Cooper talking

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State coach John Cooper has talked with LSU officials about becoming their football coach, a television station reported Tuesday night.

WBNS-TV in Columbus reported that Cooper said he met Tuesday with LSU officials in Atlanta. LSU fired coach Curley Hallman after four years.

Cooper, who has one year remaining at his Ohio State contract, and athletic director Andy Geiger could not be reached for comment. Neither returned telephone calls Tuesday night. Another message was left for sports information director Steve Snapp.

Ohio State and Cooper have discussed a contract extension, but no agreement has been reached. Geiger told WTVN radio in Columbus on Tuesday he expected the talks to end soon.

"I'm very hopeful we'll come to closure very soon," Geiger told the station.

Ohio State went 9-3 during the regular season, capped by a 22-6 victory over Michigan. It was Cooper's only victory over Ohio State's arch-rival in eight years. Cooper is 54-25-4 at Ohio State.

Player collapses

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Penn State guard Katina Mack collapsed on the court during the first half of Tuesday night's game against Vanderbilt.

She was taken to Centre Community Hospital in State College and was reported conscious, but there was no further word on her condition.

With 4:55 left in the half, Penn State forward Angie Potthoff hit a free throw to cut Vanderbilt's lead to 33-24. Mack, the Lady Lions' second-leading scorer last season, then collapsed and lay motionless.

Tech coach resigns

LUBBOCK — Mike Jones, volleyball coach at Texas Tech for the past six years, resigned Tuesday.

Jones' teams were 128-62, but only 15-15 this season. His teams went to the NCAA tournament three times.

Talks resume; hope for agreement slim

■ Management negotiator John Harrington says if players end the strike with no agreement owners could lock them out.

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

LEESBURG, Va. — Less than a week before the deadline owners have set for determining baseball's new economic order, talks resumed Tuesday with little hope for an agreement.

Owners were awaiting a counteroffer from players to the luxury tax plan management presented Nov. 17. Free agent outfielder Brett Butler said there was sentiment to wait until after the union's executive board meets in Atlanta next week, but owners said that would be too late.

"Once you go past the point implementation, it's difficult to put the yolk back into the egg," management negotiator John Harrington said.

■ Baseball Strike

Harrington said that even if the players end the strike without an agreement, owners would consider locking them out. An end to the strike without a deal would leave the possibility of another season without a World Series.

"That might not be fair to the fans," Harrington said, adding that he wouldn't want to play "with the season in jeopardy on a day-to-day basis."

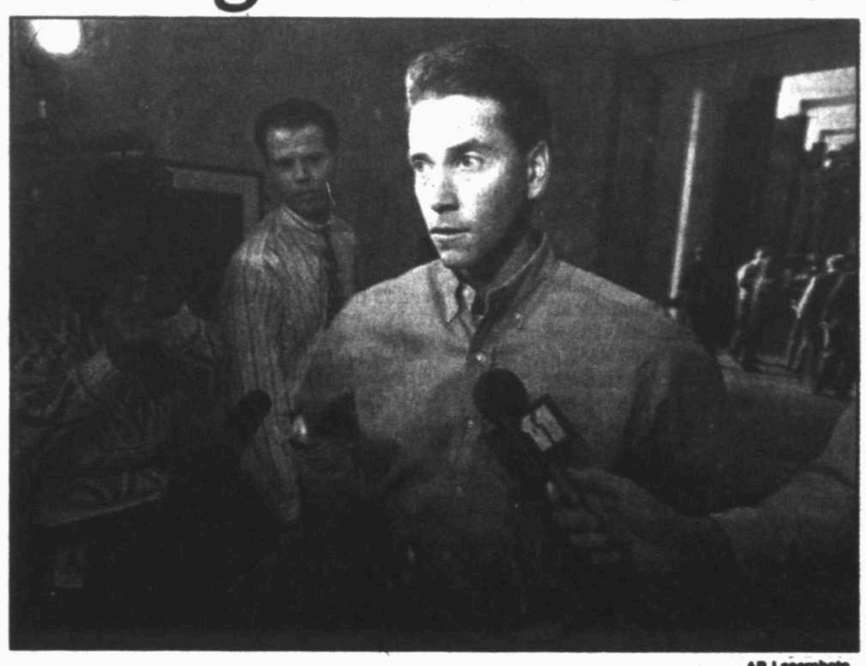

Atlanta Braves president Stan Kasten, a member of the owners' bargaining team, said management would implement a new system if there isn't an agreement by Monday, when owners are scheduled to meet in Chicago. Players weren't so sure.

"Words are cheap," Butler said before the meeting. "You can say one thing and do another."

The sides met for two hours in the late afternoon before a short break and were scheduled to get back together in the early evening.

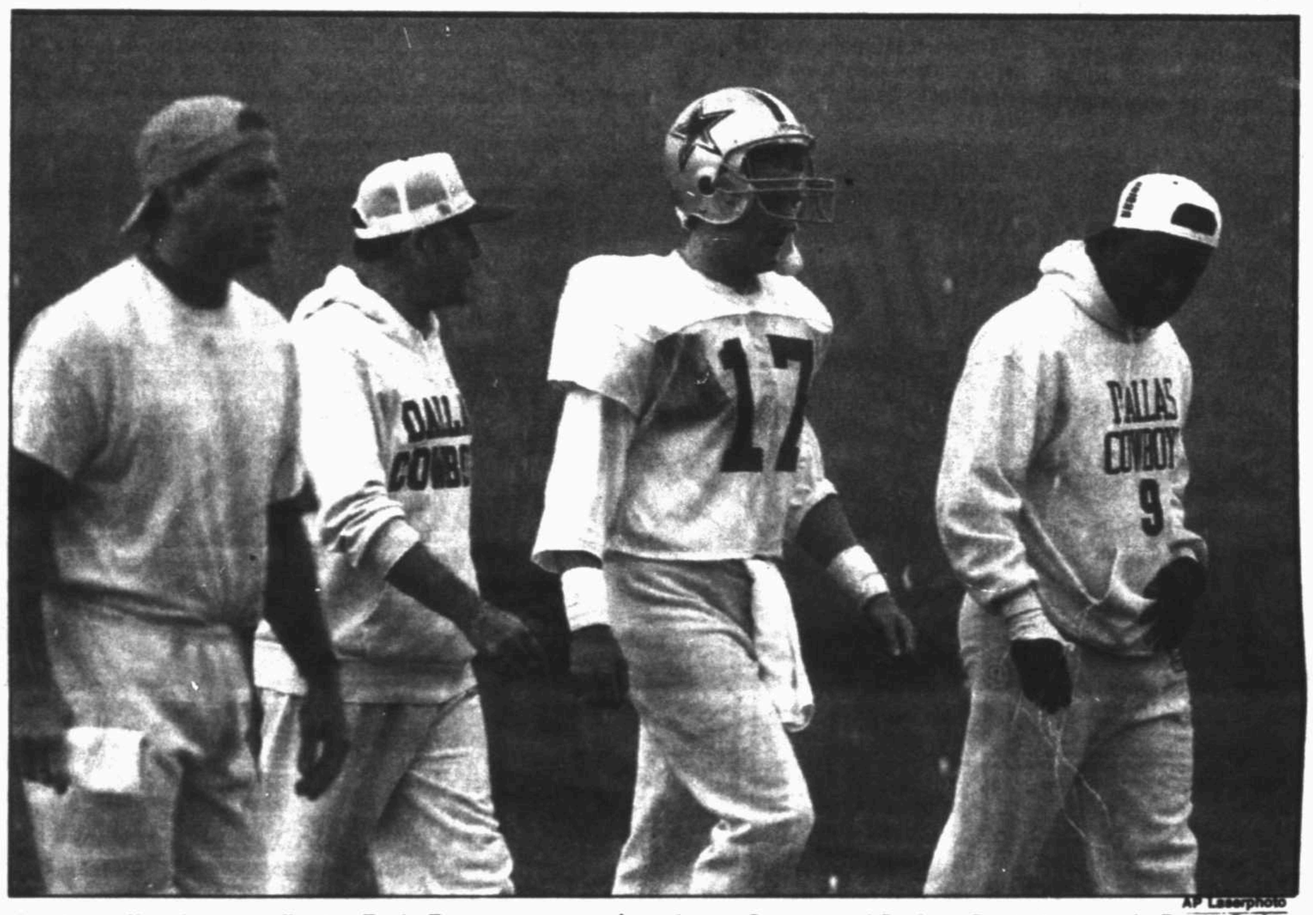

"It's going to be pretty tough to get

IRVING — Troy Aikman will be in uniform for Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Eagles, but the Dallas Cowboys hope he won't have to play.

Aikman, who suffered a ligament sprain in his left knee two weeks ago, will be the Cowboys' designated third quarterback, coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday.

Seifert wants 49ers to stay home

■ San Francisco will try to avoid a late season collapse that could have them going to Dallas for the NFC title game.

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Wary of another postseason pratfall, George Seifert wants the San Francisco 49ers to spend the final month of the season driving for home-field advantage throughout the playoffs.

"I think we learned last year the importance of homefield advantage," the 49ers coach said Tuesday, recalling San Francisco's 38-21 loss at Dallas in last season's NFC championship game.

"We still have a ways to go to see exactly where we're placed in this whole playoff picture," Seifert added. "But that is something to strive for. We're kind of in a neck and neck battle with Dallas. So each game for each team is very, very critical. It's the one who blinks first, I guess, who gets hurt."

San Francisco (10-2) won its seventh straight game Monday night by beating the New Orleans Saints 35-14. The victory clinched the 49ers' 11th NFC West title since 1981 and sent San Francisco to the playoffs for the 12th time in 14 years.

It was the second earliest division clinching win since the NFL went to the 16-game format in 1978. Only the 1985 Chicago Bears clinched sooner.

"We expected to be here — maybe not this early — but we expected to be in the playoffs," strong safety Tim McDonald said. "We didn't come here to be division champs. Guys are here to get to the Super Bowl."

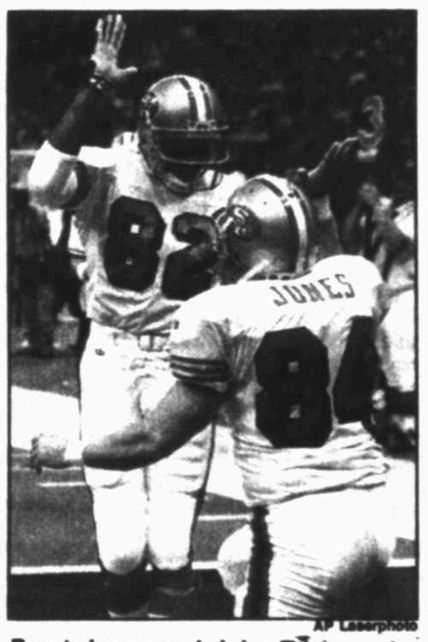

Toward that end, San Francisco maintained a tiebreaker edge for homefield advantage over Dallas (10-2), having beaten the Cowboys 21-14 on Nov. 13. It was San Francisco's first win in four tries against the Cowboys, who twice beat the 49ers in the conference title game en route to consecutive Super Bowls victories.

Last year, the 49ers lost three of four games over the final month. During that span, Seifert also rested Steve Young and other regulars at times, even though games were still on the line.

"I'm not thinking at all about rest now," he said. "I'm just thinking about getting better."

"I think this club has a pretty strong feeling about the competition with regard to Dallas right now. Now, if we lose a ballgame or two, that part of it,

'Living Dead' is back door miracle

By the end of Thanksgiving, Midland Lee's football Rebels were supposed to be the picked over carcass of a turkey.

Williamson

Face the facts. It was these Rebels who lost three — count 'em, 1, 2, 3 — games in District 4-5A play alone. Their very playoff fate was tied to what other loop teams did, or in this case, didn't do.

By logical rights, Lee shouldn't even be in the state playoffs, much less playing in December with the stars of the state. Lee has gone against teams with 10 or more victories in every week of the playoffs. Lee would now have to win a state championship to claim 10 victories.

The Rebels are a bit like the guy in shanty town who borrowed a tux to attend a $500-a-plate gala. They are playing with the elite of the football fraternity, and what's worse, acting like they belong even though they had to attend the party through the back door.

In fact, the Rebels have become down right entertaining. They have developed this magical air that would be welcome at any party. They produce weekly miracles that are the talk of the state.

And since miracles are so hard to believe in, this team is now called the Living Dead. After all, their bones were supposed to be scattered across The Dump on Cuthbert Street by this time. Instead, they continue to walk on water. Their amazing act has carried them to the state quarterfinals. They have come from behind six times in three playoff outings. We have found Houdini.

And this all came from a team that had a measly seven points in its last eight quarters of play in regular season.

How did these back-door miracles originate? Well, first of all, be ever grateful to Odessa High for losing to last place Abilene High on the final week of regular season. For the Bronchos, the team Lee can't seem to beat on a good year, Midland will be ever grateful. Otherwise, there would be the Dead Dead, instead of the Living Dead. There would be no miracle comebacks against 10-0 Amarillo High or 11-1 Arlington Lamar. We would have missed two of the most gut-wrenching wins (or is it ties?) in Lee football history.

But there was also a little known off-the-field week that may have done more to keeping the Living Dead alive than anything else. That also occurred on the final week of the District 4-5A season. Lee was open that week, not even knowing if a playoff trip was possible. The Rebels "went to war" — against themselves.

Lee lined up first team defense against first team offense. Lee coach Earl Miller turned them loose and let the blood flow.

"I've never done that in regular season, but I felt we had nothing to lose," Miller said. "I'm just glad we didn't get anybody hurt, but that was the only way I felt we could get better."

Even before the Amarillo High game, and after that momentous open week, Miller said, "I think we have gotten better, but time will tell if it's enough to compete in the playoffs."

Better was enough to wrench out two heart-pounding ties and one victory. Better was enough to vault four rounds deep into the state playoffs, giving Midland its first-ever chance to host a Class 5A quarterfinal match.

So, leave the back door open. It may be a Rebel coming to visit. And you sure don't want to miss his act. The Living Dead is a show worth seeing.

North Carolina gets inside win

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Rasheed Wallace scored a career-high 30 points as No. 2 North Carolina took its game inside to beat Pittsburgh 90-67 Tuesday night.

■ Top 25 Roundup

Wallace had little trouble maneuvering around the basket, leading to the first 30-point game by a Tar Heel since Hubert Davis had 35 points against Duke on March 8, 1992.

Wallace hit 14 of 19 shots, and eight of his baskets were dunks. He also grabbed 11 rebounds for his second double-double in as many games.

In fact, much of the North Carolina offense was produced on the inside. It wasn't until Jerry Stackhouse's jumper at 17:07 and Donald Williams 3-pointer with 16:28 remaining that the Tar Heels (2-0) got baskets from beyond the lane, and only a few perimeter shots followed after that.

No. 8 Florida 91, Boston College 65

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Dametri Hill, suspended from Florida's first game for disciplinary reasons, scored 15 of his 19 points in the first half as the eighth-ranked Gators beat Boston College in the opening game of the Great Eight Basketball Festival.

Boston College (1-1), which shot 55 percent in its season-opener, shot only 33 percent against the bigger, stronger Gators. Andrew DeClercq added 18 points for Florida (2-0) before fouling out with 5:01 remaining.

Hill, who shed almost 25 pounds to get down to 290 pounds during the offseason, took command almost from the opening tip, scoring the first five points for the Gators.

No. 11 Maryland 92, Loyola, Md. 62

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Maryland survived a sluggish first half and a sub-par performance by Joe Smith, getting seven points from Duane Simpkins in a 14-0 run that led the 11th-ranked Terrapins past Loyola (Md.) College 92-62 Tuesday night.

Smith, a preseason All-America selection, scored only 12 points on 3-for-6 shooting. The 6-foot-10 sophomore center, who has been held below double figures only once in his career, didn't score his 10th point until late in the second half.

No. 15 Minnesota 102, Sacramento St. 84

MINNEAPOLIS — Voshon Lenard scored 28 points as Minnesota followed its impressive Great Alaska Shootout championship with a sloppy victory over Sacramento State.

The Gophers took control of the game with an early 24-3 run, including 10 by Lenard, the senior who returned to school after being drafted last summer by the Milwaukee Bucks.

No. 16 Connecticut 90, No. 6 Duke 86

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Ray Allen, the player slotted to replace Donyell Marshall, scored 26 points Tuesday night to lead No. 16 Connecticut to a 90-86 victory over No. 6 Duke in the inaugural Great Eight.

Marshall, the Big East player of the year last season and an All-American, was the only starter gone from the Huskies (2-0).

No. 21 Wake Forest 74, Davidson 62

DAVIDSON, N.C. — Randolph Childress scored a 27 points and center Tim Duncan had 17 points and 15 rebounds to lead Wake Forest to a victory over Davidson in the annual matchup of cross-state rivals.

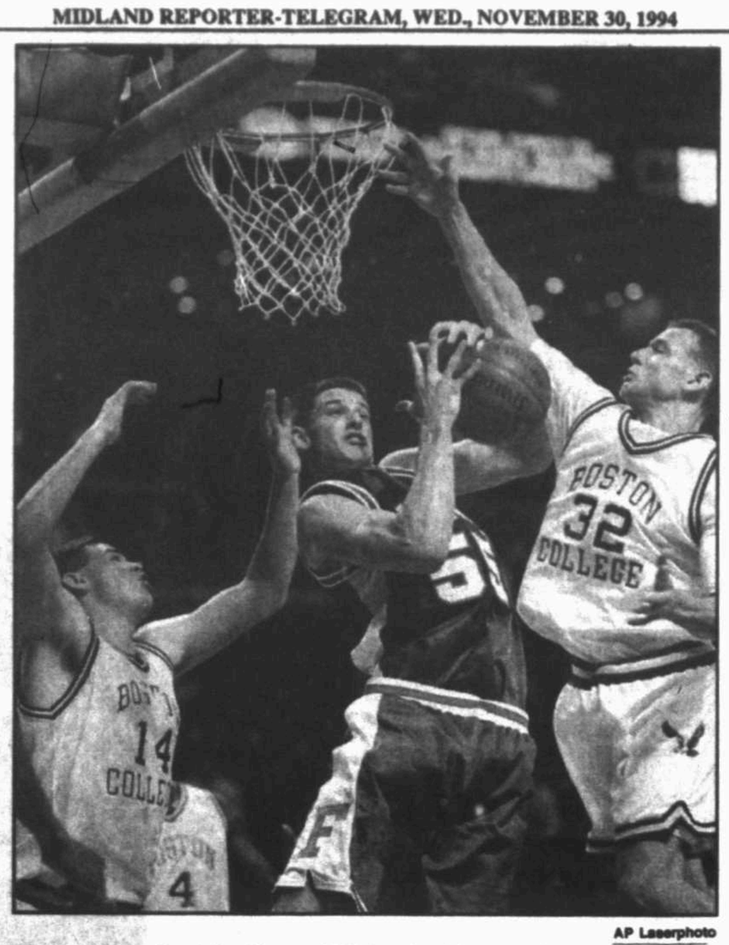

Wake Forest (2-0) was scoreless in the first four minutes before using an 8-0 run to take a 14-7 lead. The Demon Deacons never trailed after that.

Brandon Williams led Davidson (1-1) with 23 points, including five 3-pointers. Quinn Harwood added 14.

No. 22 Syracuse 88, Colgate 53

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — John Wallace scored nine of his 15 points in the opening 6½ minutes to stake Syracuse to an early 15-point lead, and the Orangemen rolled to a victory over Colgate.

Playing for the first time since an overtime loss Nov. 16 to George Washington in the opening round of the Preseason NIT, the Orangemen (1-1) came out aggressively.

Davis' 29 points leads Tech in rout

Associated Press

■ SWC Roundup

LUBBOCK — Mark Davis scored 29 points, leading Texas Tech to a 116-82 victory Tuesday night over Houston Baptist in the home opener for the Red Raiders.

Tech, the pre-season Southwest Conference favorite, never trailed, and the score was tied only twice as the Raiders rolled to their largest victory margin ever in a home opener.

Houston Baptist (4-3) was led by Bobby Sanders, who scorched the nets for 30 points, including a school-record 8-of-11 three-pointers.

Davis also led all rebounders with 10. Three other Raiders scored in double figures, Koy Smith with 22, Jason Sasser with 14 and Gionet Cooper with 10.

Sanders put on a shooting clinic with his three-pointers, hitting 5-of-6 in the first half and 3-of-5 in the second half.

Smith almost matched him, knocking down 3-of-3 three pointers in the first half and finishing with 6-of-11 for the game.

Houston Baptist got 15 points from David Preston and 11 points from Shannon Holmes.

The Raiders outrebounded Houston Baptist 55-35.

Texas 97, Lamar 54

AUSTIN — The Texas Longhorns scored 29 points off 27 turnovers and defeated Lamar behind a career-high 24 points from Reggie Freeman.

Texas (1-1) used a tough press and three-point shooting to pull away from the Cardinals in the first half.

Roderick Anderson added 20 points and 10 assists for Texas, with Terrence Rencher chipping in 17 points and Rich McIver 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Lamar (1-1) was led by Ron Coleman's 18 points.

Freeman scored nine of his points in a 19-6 run early in the second half as Texas pulled away to a 57-33 lead with 12:20 remainng. The Cardinals never got closer than 21 points thereafter.

Texas pressed or trapped virtually the whole game. Most of the 27 turnovers came off the press, which contributed to Longhorns' runs of 11-0 and 9-0 in the second half.

Texas went 8 for 18 in 3-pointers, but only 4 for 18 inside the 3-point line against the Lamar zone.

Both teams struggled early, until the Longhorns used a 17-4 run, capped by a Rencher three-pointer to take a 25-11 lead with 7:12 left in the first half.

North Texas 99, Baylor 91

DENTON — David Miller scored 23 points and Tony Jones 21, leading North Texas past Baylor, 99-91, Tuesday night.

North Texas (2-0) trailed at the half, 51-49, but took advantage of Baylor's 31 percent shooting in the second half.

Aundre Branch hit 8 of 17 three-pointers for Baylor (1-1) and finished with 3 points.

Tech women nip Sooners

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — No. 11 Texas Tech came from five points down with 1:24 to play, defeating Oklahoma 66-64 Tuesday night on Nikki Heath's two free throws with 6.4 seconds left.

Mandy Wade's driving layup gave the Sooners (1-2) a 64-59 lead.

But Heath sparked a comeback, hitting a 3-pointer with 1:07 remaining to cut Oklahoma's advantage to two. Noel Johnson's steal then led to a layup by Michi Atkins that tied the score.

Oklahoma had a chance to win the game, but instead turned over the ball.

Atkins led all scorers with 24 points and 10 rebounds, while Connie Robinson chipped in 19 for Texas Tech (4-2).

Wade paced Oklahoma with 18 points and four rebounds.

Russian takes tech program

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The strength of Russian skating never seems to waver. Yet another example was presented by Olga Markova at the International Pro-Am Figure Skating Challenge on Tuesday.

Markova, yet to win a major international competition, took the technical program over more-heralded competitors Surya Bonaly of France and Michelle Kwan, the top-ranked American amateur. Markova can capture her first significant crown in Wednesday night's free skate.

Skating last in the field of five, Markova finished first with four of seven judges, thanks to a superb triple lutz-double toe loop combination and some excellent spins. That put the 20-year-old ahead of Bonaly, who has been on a hot streak, with three victories since the world championships.

Bonaly, the highest-ranked amateur woman in the world, touched her hand to the ice on a combination jump and her concluding spins were weak.

Kwan fell on her first jump and was fourth, behind Nicole Bobek.

"I wish I had hit that double axel because it's right at the beginning of the program," she said. "But I can't go back and rewind it and then hit it."

Bobek was competing just two days after being bitten in the neck by a dog. She was unnerved by the incident when it happened, but never considered dropping out of this event.

"My neck was numb. We iced it right before I skated," Bobek said. "I wasn't even thinking about it."

Bobek was bitten while visiting a friend's house in Troy, Mich.

"The dog, a Labrador, had seen me once before," she said. "I asked if I could pet him and my friend's father said, 'Sure.' I petted him and turned around and he ran and bit me in the neck. I was in shock. My mother asked if he bit me and I couldn't respond. She said I turned white, like I saw a dead body.

"I don't know what's next. Either I'm injured or sick or have a dog bite."

Caryn Kadavy was fifth after the technical program, worth one-third the total score.

The Russians also led in pairs and dance, with the men's event scheduled for later in the evening.

World champions Evgenia Shishkova and Vadim Naumov won the pairs technical routine, followed by American champions Jenni Meno and Todd Sand. First place in the dance through compulsories was held by a new couple, Angelika Krylova and Oleg Ovsiannikov. They began working together in May and this is their first international event.

TALKS: Owners want a change in system something done by next week," Butler said.

Owners want to change the economic system before Dec. 7, the last date for teams to offer salary arbitration to their former players who became free agents. Eighty-two players face the deadline. Another, infielder Felix Fermin, agreed Tuesday to a $1.7 million, two-year contract with the Seattle Mariners.

A decision to impose system, presumably the salary cap plan owners have been talking about for two years, would lead to litigation and probably would prevent spring training from starting normally in mid-February.

Anticipating a new system, teams scheduled a meeting of general managers on Monday in Chicago. The owners' expansion committee will meet Sunday night in Chicago to interview backers of a potential team in Orlando, Fla.

Mets acquire Everett

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets acquired outfielder Carl Everett from the Florida Marlins for second baseman Quilvio Veras in a swap of switch-hitting minor leaguers Tuesday.

"Carl Everett in our minds is a potential five-tool player," said Joe McIlvaine, Mets executive vice president, baseball operations. "This is a baseball trade. The strength of the Mets' organization is infielders and the strength of the Marlins' farm system is outfielders. That's the genesis of the trade."

Everett, a former No. 1 pick of the New York Yankees (10th overall) in the June 1990 draft, was selected for the Triple-A All-Star game this year. With the Edmonton Trappers of the Pacific Coast League, Everett batted .336 in 78 games with 11 homers, 47 RBIs and 16 stolen bases. In parts of two seasons with the Marlins, Everett had two home runs and 6 RBIs in 70 plate appearances.

Everett was the Marlins' first pick in the second round of the 1993 expansion draft (27th overall).

Veras, signed as a free agent by the Mets in November 1989, batted .249 in 123 games for the Mets' Norfolk AAA farm team of the International League this year. He had 22 doubles, 4 triples, 43 RBIs and was second in the league with 40 stolen bases. He also was chosen for the Triple-A All-Star game.

Both players are 23.

"We have had a very high regard for Everett from his days with the Yankees," McIlvaine said. "Everett is an above-average outfielder with above-average running speed. We strengthened a position that needed some strengthening."

McIlvaine said it was possible that Everett could supplant Ryan Thompson in center field.

"He's a center field candidate," McIlvaine said of Everett. "That's his best position. To my mind, he's been pretty much a center fielder all along. I know that we have an incumbent center fielder in Ryan Thompson. I think if Everett was ready to play in the major leagues, he might play center field and we might move Ryan to left or right. (Manager) Dallas (Green) might have a different feeling in spring training."

IAAF passes waiver rule

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Track and field's world governing body has taken steps designed to make doping cases less bureaucratic and discourage athletes from challenging them in the courts.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation completed a busy three-day Council meeting Tuesday by passing a rule requiring athletes to sign a waiver agreeing to resolve all drug-related disputes within the sport's guidelines before going to court.

The move followed Monday's vote to dispense with the mandatory testing of an athlete's "B" sample if the "A" sample has been tested positive, a rule that will speed up disciplinary action for those who flunk drug tests.

Jones to create positions for minorities

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says he will create three upper-management jobs for minorities to increase diversity in the front office.

The announcement Tuesday came just weeks after the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People threatened to boycott Cowboys' games because of a lack of minority employees.

However, Jones said he was not forced into his decision.

"The facts are, when you see some of the people that we're putting into these jobs, you'll see that they've been a part of the future of the Dallas Cowboys for quite some time," Jones said.

NAACP officials, who appeared with Jones at a news conference, hailed the announcement.

Shannon Reeves, director of the NAACP's southwest region and national director of the organization's Office of Sports and Entertainment, praised Jones for "committing to adopt the most aggressive equal opportunity policy of any NFL football team."

"While all things cannot happen overnight, we are pleased that the Cowboys are on their way with an exciting beginning," Reeves said.

Jones said he also planned to increase business with minority vendors and develop new internships and summer jobs at training camp for minority students.

Jones said he reduced the number of employees when he first bought the team, but now that the Cowboys are expanding the team has "been very sensitive and have a tremendous record, frankly, in hiring minorities."

The new top level positions are: director of personnel-human resources, director of player programs-club affairs and director of minority procurement for Texas Stadium Operations. Jones did not say who he planned to hire.

NAACP officials have complained about the hiring practices of several professional sports franchises, including the Cowboys.

In an Oct. 27 letter to the Cowboys, Reeves complained that no black vendors and only one Hispanic vendor are now doing business with the Texas Stadium Corporation controlled by the Cowboys. He also said almost all Cowboys' employees, with the exception of players, are white.

Reeves said the NAACP will continue to examine minority issues among other sports teams. However, he hopes Jones' announcement will be an example to others.

"We hope that other owners in pro sports see this as the easy way to work together," Reeves said. "The doors are closed everywhere. This is the first door that was cracked, and it's now wide open."

Slaughter lashes out at Oiler coach Fisher

HOUSTON (AP) — Webster Slaughter ignored the threat of a suspension and lashed out Tuesday at Jeff Fisher, accusing the new Houston Oilers coach of trying to discredit him during a team meeting.

"I talked to a lot of players after that meeting and basically ... he told the team I'm not a team player and that I wasn't with the team," Slaughter said.

On Monday, Fisher fined the unhappy wide receiver one game check worth $9,529. Fisher was responding to two weeks of complaints by Slaughter about not being used in the new two-wide receiver offense the new coach instituted after taking over from fired Jack Pardee.

Fisher said if Slaughter didn't cease his public complaints he would be suspended. Slaughter spoke out anyway.

"This is America and there is freedom of speech and I'm going to say whatever I feel like should be said when someone poses a question toward me," Slaughter said.

Slaughter, who called an impromptu news conference at the training facility on Tuesday's off day, said he planned to be at Wednesday's workout unless otherwise instructed.

"If called upon and put in the game, I'll do my job," he said. "Any competitor, when he's put in a situation, will try to win. But off the field, things just aren't going to be the same."

Slaughter objected to being removed from Sunday's 34-10 loss to Cleveland in the third quarter, and after the game he said he didn't see how he could play hard for the Oilers.

"Maybe I didn't handle this in the right way from the get go," Slaughter said. "But this is an issue that I'm going to stand by because I know I'm right.

"They're wrong in what they're doing. If they want to suspend me the rest of the season and send me home without pay, so be it."

Slaughter, the Oilers' second-leading receiver with 48 catches, got caught in Fisher's shift from the run-and-shoot offense to a more conventional alignment with Haywood Jeffires and Ernest Givins as the starters. Slaughter is the third receiver in the game.

Slaughter earns the NFL minimum $162,000 salary.

COWBOYS: Aikman will be ready next week

(From 1C)

Day, or sore-thumbed Rodney Peete will start against the Eagles.

"We'll know more later in the week, but both Jason and Rodney will be in the mix. Troy will suit up and probably be the third quarterback," Switzer said. "I think Rodney should be healthy, and both he and Jason will be taking a lot of snaps this week. I sure like what Jason did against Green Bay."

Aikman said his knee was feeling better, but added, "I think it would be extremely optimistic to say that I'm going to be ready to play in the game."

"I'll certainly be ready the following week," he said. "I'm able to run around and do things I haven't been able to do, although I'm not totally pain-free."

Switzer said he still was concerned about Peete's thumb, which was injured two weeks ago against Washington. Peete suited up but did not play against Green Bay.

"Rodney is still throwing the ball with four fingers and not using his thumb in the throwing motion," Switzer said.

Garrett, who threw two touchdown passes against the Packers, said he understands if Switzer moves him aside for Peete.

"Rodney has more experience than I do," Garrett said. "I wouldn't have any problems with that. I understand my role on this team."

Switzer said he hopes the Cowboys clinch the NFC East division title against the Eagles so they don't have to worry about it anymore.

"I don't think we'll lose our edge if we do clinch because of our stumble against San Francisco," Switzer said. "We've got to take care of business week to week to stay on track for the homefield advantage."

Dallas has a 20-6 record in games played after Thanksgiving. Last year the Cowboys defeated Philadelphia 23-17 at Texas Stadium after Thanksgiving.

The Cowboys beat the Eagles 24-13 in the third game of the season at Texas Stadium.

Manute Bol to have surgery

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Golden State Warriors center Manute Bol is scheduled for arthroscopic surgery on his right knee Wednesday, eight days after being injured in a game.

The 7-foot-7 Bol, the tallest player in NBA history, will have torn cartilage removed from the knee. He was injured during a Nov. 22 game at Charlotte.

The surgery will be performed by Steven Haas, team physician for the Washington Bullets. Bol, 32, was drafted by Washington in 1985 and lives nearby in Glenn Dale, Md.

The Warriors said the length of the recovery period would be determined after the operation.

49ERS: QB should play Sunday

as far as the home-field advantage will dissipate. But at this point, I think everybody realizes the importance of that aspect. So I think they'll be quite focused."

San Francisco closes the regular season against Atlanta, San Diego, Denver and Minnesota.

Seifert said he expected Young to play against the Falcons on Sunday despite finishing the Saints' game with a gimpy left ankle. Young sprained his foot late in the third quarter.

Seifert described center Bart Oates as questionable. Oates aggravated a left knee sprain late in the second quarter. If Oates is unable to play, Chris Dalman would start against the Falcons in his place. Dalman replaced Oates in the second half of the Saints' game.

Monterey upends Lady Rebs

LUBBOCK — Lubbock Monterey scored a measure of revenge for a loss to Midland Lee in the Tall City Girls Tournament two weeks ago by defeating Lee 67-50 in basketball action here Tuesday night.

Lee drops to 4-2 on the year with the loss.

The end of the second quarter proved to the pivotal point of the game as Lee led by five points with 47 seconds to play before half, but wound up trailing 28-27 at interemission.

Monterey, who led by junior forward Amy Wells with 22 points, outscored the Lady Rebels 16-9 in the third period.

"We didn't play as well as we did when we beat them in the Tall City Tournament," said Midland Lee coach Elise Kail. "We played a lot better in the first half than in the second."

Krissy Woodard, who was in foul trouble much of the game in the first meeting between the two squads, stayed free of foul trouble this time and led Lee with 23 points.

The Lee sophomore team lost 36-30 in overtime and the junior varsity lost 39-21 in other action.

Houston snaps losing streak

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 27 points, including eight in a row in a blowout third quarter, as the Houston Rockets snapped a three-game losing streak with a 96-81 victory over Denver on Tuesday night.

The Rockets were in charge from the beginning, hitting their first seven shots of the game and 11 of 17 in the first quarter.

Denver never led in the game, and the Nuggets' 81 points were a season low. Their previous low was 92 points in a 94-92 loss to Detroit on Nov. 17.

Houston led 46-36 at the half and broke open the game in the third quarter during a 15-6 run to start the third period. Olajuwon's 8-point surge gave the Rockets a 61-42 lead with 6:26 to go in the period.

Carl Herrera, starting in place of the injured Otis Thorpe, scored a season-high 17 points. His previous high was eight points. Olajuwon had 12 rebounds and five blocked shots.

Rodney Rogers led the Nuggets with 17 points, and Robert Pack added 12. They were the only double-figure scorers for the Nuggets, who lost for the fifth time in six games.

Mavericks 84, Timberwolves 83

DALLAS — Jim Jackson scored 26 points, including a key three-point play with 2:43 remaining, and Roy Tarpley added 19 points and 12 rebounds as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Dallas went 7-4 in November, their best month since going 7-4 in April of 1990. The Mavericks didn't win their seventh game last season until Feb. 21, their 52nd game.

Jackson's basket and free throw pushed Dallas' lead to 82-77 with 2:43 left, then Jackson converted two foul shots with 1:31 left to give the Mavericks an 84-77 advantage. Jackson scored the game's last field goal.

Minnesota pulled to 84-81 with 28 seconds left on two free throws by Christian Laettner, then Jackson threw the ball out of bounds with 18 seconds to play.

Laettner was fouled on the ensuing possession and converted two foul shots with 13 seconds left to pull the Timberwolves to within 84-83.

Suns 123, Bucks 106

MILWAUKEE — Dan Majerle scored 23 points, including 19 in the first half, and Charles Barkley made his first start of the season as the Phoenix Suns beat the Milwaukee Bucks.

Undrafted rookie Trevor Ruffin added 20 points for the Suns, who set club mark with 12 3-pointers.

Vin Baker had 23 points and 12 rebounds for the Bucks and Todd Day scored 20 points as the Bucks lost their fourth straight.

Phoenix took the lead with just under two minutes gone in the first quarter and pulled away for good in the second quarter.

Lakers 129, Nets 120, 2 OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sedale Threatt scored 7 of his 14 points in the second overtime and the Los Angeles Lakers posted their first five-game winning streak in two years with a 129-120 victory over the New Jersey Nets Tuesday night.

In ending the Nets' three-game winning streak at home, the Lakers had to rally from a 16-point deficit with 8:06 to play in regulation and they twice had to score big baskets in final minute of the first overtime to stay alive.

The second overtime was all Los Angeles after Threatt hit a three-point basket and a foul-line jumper. Cedric Ceballos scored underneath in a 7-1 burst that put the Lakers ahead 123-117.

Knicks 99, Bullets 91

LANDOVER, Md. — Patrick Ewing had 20 points and 15 rebounds Tuesday night as the New York Knicks outlasted Washington 99-91, the Bullets' sixth straight loss.

Charles Smith added 17 points and Charles Oakley 16 for New York, which has won three of its last four games.

Washington trailed by 18 points late in the third quarter when point guard Mitchell Butler came off the bench to score 8 points. He led an 18-6 run that brought the Bullets within 4 points midway through the fourth period.

But Ewing, in foul trouble much of the second half, returned to stabilize the Knicks' inside game and give New York its 16th victory over the Bullets in their last 17 meetings.

Chris Webber had 21 points and 11 rebounds for the Bullets, who are winless in four games since he was acquired from Golden State. The Bullets have lost four straight at home.

Kings 94, Heat 89

MIAMI — Walt Williams scored 9 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter Tuesday night to lead the Sacramento Kings to a win over the Miami Heat.

Bimbo Coles had 19 points for the Heat, who hit just five of 19 shots in the final period.

The win gave the Kings a 6-5 record, their best start since the 1982-1983 season, when the then-Kansas City Kings opened with an 8-3 mark.

Williams opened the final period with a 3-pointer and a 20-foot baseline jumper to put Sacramento up 82-75 with 9:08 remaining. His dunk gave the Kings an 88-79 lead at the 6:54 mark.

The Heat cut the gap to 4 points, but Williams' two free throws with 23.5 seconds to play put Sacramento up 92-86.

A 3-pointer by Brad Lohaus was the Heat's only basket in the final 2:23.

Hornets 90, Hawks 85

ATLANTA — Hersey Hawkins scored 16 of his 22 points in the first quarter and Alonzo Mourning hit four free throws in the final 33 seconds as the Charlotte Hornets survived an Atlanta comeback to beat the Hawks.

Hawkins' early salvo was only 2 points shy of his previous high this season as the Hornets built a 12-point lead in the opening period and stretched it to 49-33 in the second before the Hawks began to rally.

Jazz 105, Trail Blazers 94

PORTLAND, Ore. — Karl Malone scored 30 points and Utah held Portland to 14 fourth-quarter points as the Jazz won its fifth in a row with a victory over the Trail Blazers.

The Jazz led 81-80 entering the final quarter, then outscored the Blazers 10-2 in the period's first 5:02.

More Sports/10D

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — No. 3 Alabama has been walking a thin Crimson line all season.

There's no room for error with these guys, who keep winning by the narrowest of margins: a last-minute touchdown here, a late defensive stop there.

"At the beginning of the season a lot of the guys were saying, 'Man, we've got to play better than this. If we keep playing like this, it's going to be a long season,'" safety Willie Gaston recalled. "There's only so many times you can come from behind."

But that's just what Alabama keeps doing, rallying four times in the fourth quarter alone. Only one game against a Division I-A opponent has been decided before the final period.

"We have come from behind a lot this year," said Gaston, admitting he has been proven wrong.

Alabama (11-0) has beaten only two teams by more than 11 points, and one of those was a 42-13 victory over I-AA Tennessee-Chattanooga. Excluding that game, Alabama's other victories have been by a total of 80 points.

Compare that with the other unbeaten, untied teams. No. 1 Nebraska (12-0) has defeated everyone by at least 10 points, with an average margin of 24.2 points. Second-ranked Penn State (11-0) has three close calls, but is still winning by an average of 26.7 points a game.

It may be hurting the Tide in the rankings, but one close game after another is viewed as a badge of honor around Tuscaloosa. The players may not be able to explain it — watch their foreheads wrinkle and the eyes narrow when queried for an explanation — but they consider themselves the kings of the fourth quarter.

"Yeah, I think so, because we've done it so many times," offensive guard Kareem McNeal said. "If it's close, a lot of times people have doubts in mind that they can win a close game in the fourth quarter. But we've done it so much."

Sixth-ranked Florida (9-1-1), which meets Alabama in the Southeastern Conference championship game Saturday in Atlanta, is one of those teams that may be having doubts. The Gators have won by an average of 35 points, but their only two close games have resulted in a last-minute, 36-33 loss to Auburn and a 31-31 tie with Florida State when they blew a 28-point lead in the fourth quarter.

"We've had two close games and not won either one of them," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said. "That's very, very frustrating. To have a big, big year, you've got to win the close ones."

That's why Alabama is still in the running for the national championship and Florida isn't — even though the Gators are widely viewed as the most talented team (they are a 6-point favorite in Saturday's game).

So why does Alabama keep winning the close games and Florida doesn't?

Coach Gene Stallings points to the defense, which may not be as dominating as the 1992 unit which produced a national championship and four first-round NFL draft choices but is still one of the stingiest in the country. The Tide has allowed only 13.6 points per game — first in the SEC and fifth nationally.

Stallings also points to the improvement of senior quarterback Jay Barker, who is 34-1-1 as the starter and is having by far his best season with 1,815 yards, 13 touchdowns and just three interceptions — not to mention almost single-handedly leading fourth-quarter comebacks against Georgia and Mississippi State.

"Jay Barker is obviously playing better than he was in '92," Stallings said. "In '92, we weren't behind very much. This year, we've been behind quite a bit."

There are a few other areas that stand out, too. Alabama is by far the least penalized team in the SEC with 39.2 yards per game — Florida is the most penalized at 81.5 yards — and has one of the nation's best turnover ratios, coming up with a total of 25 interceptions and fumbles while giving the ball up only 14 times.

Plus, this is a team used to winning. The senior class has tied a school record for most victories, going 44-4-1 over the last four years.

"It just comes down to believing in one another," Gaston said. "We believe that no matter what the score is, we can win."

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) —

Golfers will have to choose between the PGA Tour and the new World Tour — they won't be allowed to play both.

PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem said Tuesday he will enforce the "conflicting events" rules requiring players to get his permission to play in outside events, and he said the PGA would go to court to defend those rules.

Under those rules, anyone playing in a World Tour event without Finchem's permission would be suspended from the PGA Tour. And Finchem made it clear he is not about to give his permission.

"If a new tour becomes a reality in 1995 or thereafter, our members will have to decide whether they want to continue to play on the PGA Tour or play on a new tour," the commissioner said.

The player most immediately affected would be Greg Norman, a fouding member of the World Tour and the second-leading money winner on the PGA Tour in 1994.

"This is not dissimilar from the decision professional athletes in other sports were forced to make when competing leagues were formed," Finchem said.

Norman said he was surprised by the PGA's moves, but hopes there can be a reconciliation.

"I've always been a believer that you could have both tours," he said at a news conference in Melbourne, Australia. "You can't go along and undermine the PGA Tour. From my point of view I've always said that it has got to be interfaced with the PGA Tour."

Mark Calcavecchia, also in Australia, said he doubted the World Tour would get off the ground in 1995 "despite what Greg is saying and what other people are saying."

"We've got to work together," he said. "We don't want to keep fighting with each other."

Finchem said the tour would defend the critical rules — rules now under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission — that allow it to restrict its members' participation in outside events.

The tour's regulations require members to obtain a formal release from the commissioner in order to compete in conflicting events.

"We are aware that, in the near future, the staff at the FTC may request the FTC commissioners to initiate formal proceedings aimed at eliminating these rules," Finchem said. "We intend to do what is necessary to preserve these rules. If required, we welcome the opportunity to defend their reasonableness in administrative and judicial proceedings, although we recognize that such a process may take four or five years," Finchem said.

His statements followed a two-day meeting of the Tour Policy Board.

Natural gas falls

Natural gas futures prices slammed to a 21-month low Tuesday amid forecasts for mild winter weather in most of the United States.

Gas supplies already are so high, due to the relatively cool summer and warm fall, that some pipeline operators have asked producers to remove gas from storage, forcing some to burn it.

Natural gas for January delivery on the New York Mercantile Exchange tumbled 10.1 cents, or 5.4 percent, to $1.77 per 1,000 cubic feet, the lowest daily settlement for near-term deliveries since March 3, 1993.

In other energy trading in New York, January light sweet crude oil fell 7 cents to $18.05 a barrel; December heating oil fell 0.61 cent to 49.97 cents a gallon; December unleaded gasoline fell 0.57 cent to 55.41 cents a gallon.

Natural gas is the preferred heating fuel in the United States, except in the Northeast. It also powers air conditioners in much of the country.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ended mixed on Tuesday as credit market interest rates rose following a better-than-expected report on the economy.

Technology issues, which had been hard-hit in the market's recent downturn, moved higher.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 1.01 points to 3,738.55.

But advancing issues narrowly outnumbered decliners on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 286.62 million shares, up from 265.49 million in the previous session.

The Conference Board said consumer confidence in the economy rose sharply in November to reach a four-year high. The business-research group's Consumer Confidence Index climbed last month to 101.3 from a revised 89.1 in October.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose broadly Tuesday, reaching its highest level against the yen since mid-October, in a rally inspired by strong U.S. economic news and a Federal Reserve banker's hints of further interest rate increases.

Traders said the dollar also benefited from some resilient weakness in the German mark, which fell in the aftermath of Norway's vote to reject membership in the European Union.

It was the third straight day of strength in the dollar, and in contrast to prior days the rally was broad-based. That was seen as a sign to some currency brokers that the dollar may have snapped out of its prolonged slump.

Survey: Consumer confidence soars

■ Economists say highest level in 4½ years is reflection of rising job opportunities, prospect of lower taxes.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Consumer confidence surged in November to its highest level in 4½ years in what economists said was a reflection of rising job opportunities and the prospect of lower taxes under the Republicans.

The survey was issued Tuesday by the Conference Board, a business research group in New York.

Some economists called the surge an aberration. Others said it means Americans are more likely to borrow and spend in coming months despite the sharp increase in interest rates this year.

"The rise in confidence was stunning," said Anthony Karydakis, senior financial economist at First Chicago Capital Markets Inc., a Chicago investment firm. "The consumer remains completely unfazed by higher interest rates."

An index based on survey results climbed to 101.3 in November, up from a revised 89.1 in October. It was the highest reading since the index stood at 101.7 in July 1990, just before the recession began, and the biggest one-month jump since November 1993.

The index, calculated from a base of 100, is derived from responses to questionnaires sent to 5,000 U.S. households every month, querying consumers on topics ranging from appliance-buying plans to local job availability.

It is regarded as an important barometer of the financial security felt by consumers, who account for two-thirds of all U.S. economic activity.

"The current level of confidence signals an expanding economy in the months ahead," said Fabian Linden, head of the Conference Board's consumer research unit. "The latest consumer confidence readings strongly suggest that fears of an imminent slowing of the economy are unrealistic."

More consumers surveyed felt jobs were "plentiful" in November, while an increasing number felt more confident about their family incomes, employment opportunities and business conditions in the coming six months.

Some economists said they believed the GOP victory in November played an influential role in the results.

Southwestern Bell to stop '1' plus dialing

■ Area businesses get final warning on long-distance changes.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Southwestern Bell Telephone has sent a final warning to Permian Basin residents reminding them that after January 3, it will be necessary to dial an area code on all long distance calls — even those in the same area code.

That means it will no longer be possible to dial "1" or "0" plus the number.

Plans for the switch began a year ago, when it the wide use of cellular telephones made it apparent that additional area codes would be needed.

The company says the reason for the new system is the increased use of cellular phones, fax machines and pagers, all of which require a unique telephone number.

Southwestern Bell says the change affects businesses that subscribe to Call Forwarding, Selective Call Forwarding, Remote Access to Call Forwarding or Speed Calling who currently have 0-plus or 1-plus programmed. The services will have to be reprogrammed by January 3, 1995.

The company says the reason for the new system is the increased use of cellular phones, fax machines and pagers, all of which require a unique telephone number. Currently area codes have only a 0 or 1 as the middle digit, but to address the situation additional area codes using a middle digit of 2 through 9 will be introducted, beginning as early as January of 1995. This means that in some cases the three digits of a new area code will be the same as the first three digits of a local seven-digit phone number.

The change means that businesses must have their phone equipment changed to process all long distance calls and to process new area codes as they are phased in.

Businesses in the Permian Basin have had one year to make the transition, but some may not have made final arrangements, according to Southwestern Bell. If equipment is not changed, it could result in a business not being able to make or receive long-distance phone calls.

Those with questions about the changes may contact a Southwestern Bell Telephone representative at 1-800-449-7928.

Harassment case could be retried, attorney says

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A ruling by a Superior Court judge trimming in half the $6.9 million in damages awarded a woman for sexual harassment at the world's largest law firm could result in a whole new trial, a key attorney in the case says.

John Bartko, lead counsel for the firm of Baker & McKenzie, said Monday that Judge John Munter's ruling could result in an appellate court ordering the case back for retrial, not only on the issue of damages but on the facts.

In a 17-page ruling, Munter found there was sufficient evidence for a jury to find that Rena Weeks had been sexually harassed by attorney Martin Greenstein.

But the judge said the $6.9 million awarded to Weeks, 40, in punitive damages by the jury of six women and six men was excessive and not supported by law.

Munter told Weeks she could either take $3.5 million, about half of the jury award or 5 percent of the law firm's net worth, or request a new trial on the damages issue.

Alan Exelrod, one of Week's attorneys, declined to speculate what his client would choose to do. He said he would confer with co-counsel Philip Kay, who is on vacation, before making a decision. They have until Dec. 12.

Munter's decision blunted several of the jurors' post-trial comments that indicated the huge punitive damages were awarded because Greenstein's law firm failed to take action, even after several other women had complained of sexual harassment.

"This court agrees with (Bartko) that Baker's conduct was not the product of a deliberate and purposeful policy aimed at violating the rights of anyone," the judge wrote. "Baker took aim neither at plaintiff nor any other woman in its workplace."

Moreover, the judge said that even before the trial started, the firm had taken steps to improve its handling of workplace sexual harassment in an attempt to prevent similar occurrences.

Bartko said he would await Week's decision on whether to accept the $3.5 million or ask for a new trial. He also acknowledged that she could appeal Munter's ruling to the state Court of Appeal, which would probably stay the whole proceedings for years.

"Until they may make a decision, I don't know what's going to happen," he said. "This case may result in a new trial."

Bartko said that he doubted there could be a new trial on the issue of punitive damages alone without going into all the facts of the case.

"To decide how reprehensible something is, you'd have to know what happened," he said. "So, essentially, I think it winds up being a new trial."

Bartko urged in post-trial arguments to the judge a reduction in the jury award to $250,000.

"He obviously didn't agree with that," the attorney said.

But Munter did approve of the $225,000 in punitive damages jurors assessed Greenstein for his actions that they found offensive.

The judge found Greenstein's record of sexually harassing women in his office extended over several years and was "severe and pervasive."

Although Weeks worked for Greenstein for only a total of 20 days in his office, she claimed he had harassed her on several occasions, the worst coming at a staff lunch in Palo Alto, Calif.

Fifty years ago, Army was best

By John Kekis
AP Sports Writer

WEST POINT, N.Y. — When Army plays Navy on Saturday for the 95th time, the Black Knights will enter the game with a 3-7 record, their glorious past a distant memory.

Fifty years ago, Army was the best. Even Notre Dame was no match for the dynamic two-way talents of "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside" and their Army teammates. It was Earl "Red" Blaik's fourth year as Army coach, and it ended like no other at West Point.

The prospects were quite good as the 1944 season neared. Speedy halfback Glenn Davis, his math problems behind him, was entering his second year, and a big, punishing freshman fullback named Felix "Doc" Blanchard was ready to step in alongside Davis. Six players gained first-team All-America status at season's end.

Army opened with a 46-0 win over North Carolina, then beat Brown 59-7, Pitt 69-7, and Coast Guard 76-0.

The 6-foot-2, 210-pound Blanchard blossomed against Pitt: Mr. Inside scored two touchdowns, one on a pass from team captain Tom Lombardo; intercepted a pass and returned it 21 yards for another score; kicked off four times into the end zone; punted once for 44 yards; gained 45 yards rushing on just four carries; and caught 4 passes for 108 yards.

It was difficult to determine who was better that day. Mr. Outside gained 161 yards on nine carries, completed two passes for 118 yards, and scored on a 63-yard run.

Next victim was Duke. By only 27-7 in New York City.

Army actually had to rally from a 7-6 halftime deficit in that one, which obviously displeased Blaik and made Villanova's life quite miserable the following week. 83-0. The game got out of hand so quickly that the teams agreed to shorten the third and fourth quarters to get it over with as soon as possible.

The Fighting Irish were next. Thirteen years (10 losses and two ties) had passed since Army defeated Notre Dame, which came into the game at Yankee Stadium 6-1. After quickly falling behind 7-0, Notre Dame coach Ed McKeever decided to attack through the air.

Big mistake!

The Irish passed 20 times, completing 10 for 102 yards. But the Black Knights intercepted eight of those tosses, setting up their third, fourth, and fifth touchdowns. Both Davis and Blanchard had interceptions in what turned into a 59-0 rout, the worst defeat ever suffered by the Fighting Irish.

Then came Penn, and Army suffered no letdown. 62-7. Davis scored three times and Blanchard twice to set up the season finale against second-ranked Navy. Through eight games, Army had outscored the opposition 481-28, and its first perfect season since 1916 seemed within reach.

Although the Middies entered the game with two losses, they had beaten Army five straight times — four of them shutouts. And, with five All-Americans on the squad, Navy also had rolled over Notre Dame, Penn, and Duke, with quarterback Dick Duden, halfbacks Hal Hamberg, Bob Jenkins and Red Barron, and fullback Clyde "Smackover" Scott leading the charge.

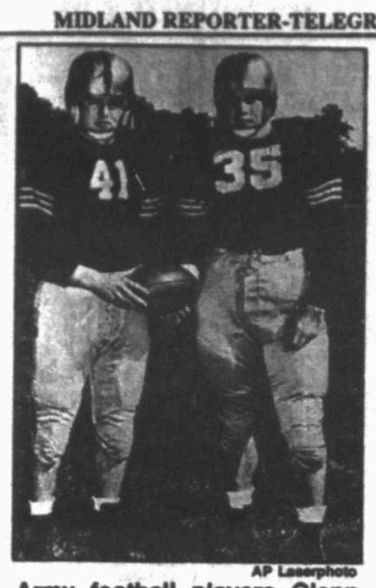

Army got something of a break when the game, originally scheduled for Annapolis, was switched to Municipal Stadium in Baltimore in an effort to stimulate war bond sales during World War II. More than 70,000 jammed the old wooden stadium to see the national championship decided for the only time between two service academies.

"Coach Blaik was so worried he was pacing up and down on the sidelines just before the game was to start," said Davis, who had been dropped from the Academy as a plebe because of scholastic trouble but had passed a re-admission test before the 1944 season. "This was not like Blaik, who was usually quite unemotional."

The first quarter was scoreless. Army's Dale Hall scored on a 23-yard run in the second quarter and Joe Stanowicz blocked a kick for a safety and a 9-0 lead.

The Middies came right back, going 72 yards in 16 plays, with Scott smacking over from the 2. But Davis thwarted a Navy drive in the fourth quarter with an interception deep in Army territory and returned it to midfield. Blanchard did the rest, carrying seven times for 48 yards and scoring on a 10-yard run.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Gators want to redeem themselves.

Knocked out of the national championship picture by a fourth-quarter collapse against Florida State, coach Steve Spurrier's team is intent on bouncing back in Saturday's Southeastern Conference title game against No. 3 Alabama.

"To me, this is the biggest game of the year. ... All you do in the off season — the lifting and working — is to give yourself a chance to play your best in this game," Spurrier said Tuesday.

"The game last week is history. There's nothing we can do about it. Hopefully we can learn from it," he added, reflecting on the 31-31 tie that ended any hopes the No. 6 Gators had of finishing No. 1.

A third SEC title in four years, however, is still within reach. Plus, Florida (9-1-1) would earn a rematch with No. 7 Florida State in the Sugar Bowl by beating Alabama (11-0).

"If we don't get ready for this game, it's like FSU not only tied us but took away the rest of the season," wide receiver Chris Doering said.

"We'd like another chance to show exactly the kind of team we are rather than have people remember us for the collapse in the fourth quarter. That's a game we should have won."

Florida led 31-3 before Florida State rallied with 28 points in the final 13 minutes of the game. Fans blamed defensive coordinator Bobby Pruett, but Spurrier has stood behind his assistant, who had the SEC's stingiest defense through 10 games.

"Certainly our play in the fourth quarter was not very good, and he felt bad about it," Spurrier said. "Basically, we were playing with a lot of coverages we had played the whole season. We just didn't execute well enough."

Longevity vitamins

Here's more new evidence that taking vitamin E and vitamin C supplements can make you live longer, even if you are already over age 65.

Several studies suggest that middle-aged men and women who take vitamin E and/or C have lower death rates from any cause.

Same is true for those 65 to 100, says Katalin Losonczy, a statistician at the National Institute on Aging. In a new study of 10,000 elderly persons, Losonczy found those who took individual vitamin E tablets were 43 percent less apt to die over a 9-year period than those who did not.

The lifesaving benefits were even greater for those who took both vitamin E and vitamin C pills; they were 53 percent less apt to die of any cause than non-vitamin takers. The vitamin impact was greatest on fatal heart disease. Taking both of the vitamins cut the risk of heart disease mortality 69 percent!

How strong the doses were is unknown but they were higher than in multiple vitamin pills. If you decide to take vitamin E and C, first check with your physician to be sure they do not interact with other medications.

Colon savers

New strategy for avoiding diverticular disease: Eat more fruits and vegetables and less fat and red meat. Doing so can cut your risk by two-thirds, according to a new Harvard study of 48,000 men.

Diverticular disease affects the colon, causing some 200,000 hospitalizations annually. Tiny protrusions or sacs in the colon can lead to bleeding, disturbed bowel habits and abdominal pain.

Specifically the study showed that men who ate the most fiber (32 grams a day) were 42 percent less apt to have symptoms of diverticular disease than men consuming the least fiber (13 grams daily). Surprisingly, the most protective fiber came from fruits and vegetables — not from cereals.

Red meat was a danger. Men who ate the most meat had a 50 percent greater chance of developing diverticular problems.

Greens for eyes

Let's hear it for spinach -- again! Eating spinach may do more for preserving your eyesight than eating carrots. Not long ago British researchers found that heavy spinach eaters tend to have fewer cataracts — an opacity of the lens.

Now, Johanna M. Seddon, M.D., an ophthalmologist at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, reports that spinach — and its green leafy cousin, collard greens — also seems to protect against macular degeneration, a leading cause of blindness tied to aging.

Dr. Seddon identified antioxidant pigments called carotenoids in the green leafy vegetables as the strongest eye protectors. Those who ate the most vegetables richest in carotenoids cut their risk of macular degeneration by 43 percent.

Exceptionally strong was a carotenoid called lutein that is concentrated in spinach as well as collard greens and kale.

How do they work? The carotenoids probably prevent or slow down the progression of macular degeneration by neutralizing renegade chemicals called free radicals that can damage the retina of the eye, says Dr. Seddon. Taking antixoidunt vitamin C and multivitamins also had a small benefit, she found.

Pregnancy travel

Pregnancy does not have to stop travel plans. If a pregnant woman has no complications, she can travel during the first 28 weeks as long as she remembers a few rules, said Dr. Kenneth J. Moise Jr., an obstetrician and gynecologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. Moise recommends:

- Consulting her physician before making travel plans. If she intends to be gone for more than a day or two, she can ask her physician to recommend a colleague in the destination city.
- Taking exercise breaks every hour or two to stretch legs and back and to improve circulation.
- Drinking plenty of water and juices to avoid dehydration when traveling by plane.
- "Buckling up" in the air or on the ground. More fetal injuries are caused by injuries the mother receives because she was not wearing a seat belt than by seat belts themselves, Moise said.

What medical tests are most often advised?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The is the first of a two-part series. Part two will be published on the Living Well page Dec. 7.

By Dr. Adina L. Kalet
Associated Press

What medical tests are most often advised by doctors to patients?

The answer depends on the doctor, the patient and the reason for a visit. If there is a specific complaint behind the visit, the nature of the complaint will play the dominant role in determining which test or tests are given.

If the patient is in for a checkup, the tests to be given usually depend on the medical history. But some tests are given to all individuals for screening purposes.

A patient with a known cardiac condition is likely to have an electrocardiogram, for example, but an EKG generally isn't part of a routine checkup for a young person with a healthy heart.

For a person visiting a family practitioner for a routine checkup, unquestionably the most common test is one that patients and doctors hardly think of as a test: a blood pressure reading given for screening purposes. It's a virtually automatic part of the examination that every patient gets, because it assesses the risk of stroke and heart disease.

The examination will also include questions about the patient's medical history and measurements of pulse rate and respiration. Those screening data provide up to 90 percent of the diagnostic data on an individual and often determine what further tests will be given.

A screening test that's close to the top of the list is the one for blood cholesterol levels.

Since heart disease is America's leading cause of death and high blood cholesterol is a major factor in heart disease, almost all patients who have a routine checkup will have their cholesterol checked.

Often the cholesterol test is part of a package of blood tests that are administered as a group for screening purposes.

Readings of white and red blood cell counts give information about possible infections, vitamin deficiencies and anemia.

Tests of blood proteins, minerals and other chemicals are indicators of kidney and liver function, nutritional status, and dehydration.

Often, a dozen or more tests may be done on a single blood sample, something made possible by automated testing machines.

Another common screening test is the urinalysis, which gives information primarily about kidney function.

For a woman over 50 making her yearly visit for a checkup, a mammogram is a screening test recommended to detect breast cancer in its earliest stages. Whether women under 50 should have annual mammograms is a matter of some controversy.

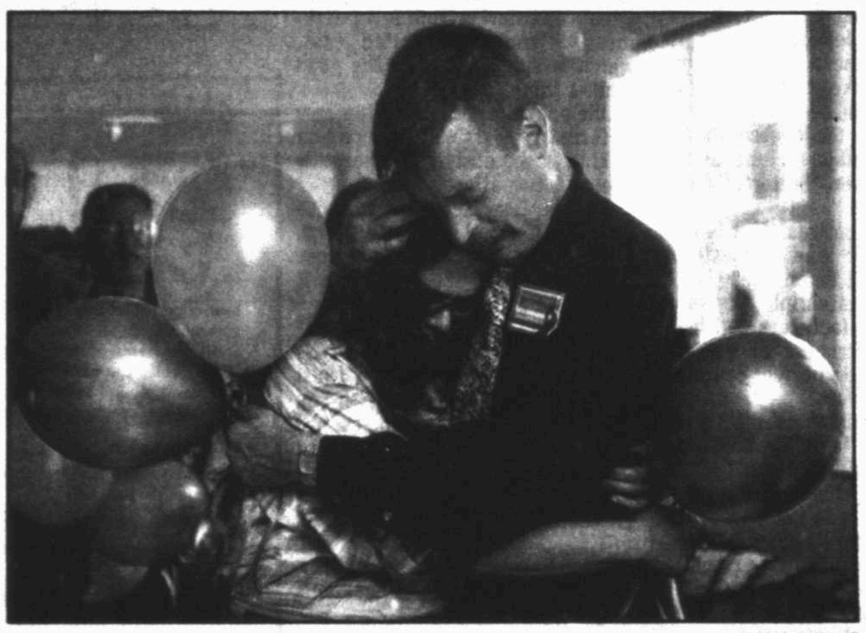

For older men, a routine screening blood test for a protein called prostate-specific antigen, PSA, is also controversial. There is a running medical debate about whether the PSA test is accurate enough to use as a screening test since it may miss some tumors, or cause some men without cancer to undergo more extensive testing.

A test that is being given to more patients detects exposure to hepatitis B, a liver infection that is increasingly widespread. And with the number of tuberculosis cases on the increase, so is the use of a skin test to detect exposure to the bacterium that causes tuberculosis.

It's when something suspicious shows up that a wider spectrum of more intensive and informative tests comes into play.

AIDS No. 1 killer of San Francisco men

By Dara Akiko Tom

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Richard has seen it countless times — the anger, the sorrow, the bravery of critically ill AIDS patients.

All too soon, he says, he'll know exactly how they feel.

"Not everybody is courageous in the face of AIDS. Some go kicking and screaming and are horrible to everyone around them," says the former heroin addict-turned-counselor. "I'm not sure how I'm going to act."

Richard, an AIDS counselor who declined to use his last name, was diagnosed HIV-positive in 1985.

"So I'm panicking," he says.

He isn't the only one.

The San Francisco health department announced earlier this year that in 1992, for the first time in any U.S. city, AIDS was the leading cause of death among men — the first time any illness had supplanted heart disease.

In a tragic coincidence, 1992 was the same year health officials celebrated hitting a plateau in the number of new AIDS cases.

Still, few here were surprised by the latest news.

"We've lost so many friends," said Richard Chavez, former program coordinator for activities at the Shanti Project, which provides a wide range of services for people with AIDS.

"It's frightening to think that nobody is surprised by it. Maybe some people who have been hiding in the sand might say, 'Oh, my gosh.'"

Over the past few years, AIDS has been the leading cause of death among men aged 25-44, but 1992 marked the first time it crossed all age lines.

Of the 8,143 total deaths in San Francisco in 1992, 1,195 men died of AIDS, while 1,094 died of heart-related disease. In 1991, of the total 8,345 deaths, heart-related disease killed 1,189 men and AIDS killed 1,152.

"AIDS had been inching up as the leading cause of death. ... It didn't go from being No. 12 to 1 overnight," said Mitch Katz, director of the city's AIDS office.

"Between 1981 and 1984, there were 8,000 new infections each year. Those were entirely among gay men," he said. "And now we're seeing, 10 to 12 years later, the consequences — the high rate of death."

While the numbers for 1993 were still being compiled, AIDS was expected to remain the leading cause of death. The death rate isn't likely to decrease until the late 1990s, Katz said.

The bright news: The number of new AIDS cases reported in 1992 was 3,028, but that dropped 25 percent to 2,264 in 1993 — and the health department estimated the rate of new cases would decrease to 1,204 in 1997.

But the department also warned the disease could show a resurgence because of the growing number of cases among young people and intravenous drug users.

Fritz Desir doesn't know how he contracted HIV, but said it could have been the unprotected sex he had with a number of women. Here's what he does know: He can no longer play soccer, and paying his bills is a struggle.

Desir escaped from Haiti in 1980 and spent three months drifting at sea before being picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard. He eventually received political asylum and was sent to San Francisco.

In 1992, after suffering a bout with tuberculosis, he learned he was HIV-positive. These days, his energy level — and his spirits — are low.

"I can't pay my rent. I can't go out and have a good time," said Desir, 31, sitting in his cramped San Francisco studio.

"She helps me," he said, pointing to his girlfriend, Catherine Crawford. "But I can't help her like I used to."

The two share the studio. Both are unemployed and, after paying rent, they have $100 left. Recently, a friend staying with them promised to help pay the rent. The friend skipped town instead.

"We just take every battle as it comes," Desir said. "My life is in God's hands."

Robert Sternman and Glenn Nelson met through a computer bulletin board.

Richard Chavez, 44, lights two candles as a nightly ritual before going to bed in his San Francisco apartment July 13. Each night since being diagnosed HIV positive in 1991, he says a prayer and lights candles to burn throughout the night.

Each knew the other was HIV-positive, but that didn't matter. Their only fear was that they would get sick at the same time.

Nelson's health started deteriorating first, about a year ago, so they decided to get married. Though California doesn't recognize same-gender marriages, the pair exchanged vows at a ceremony before a small gathering of

Foods can cause migraine

Associated Press

If you're one of the 18 million Americans who suffer from migraines, you might find some relief by changing what you eat, suggests Ladies' Home Journal magazine. About 30 percent of migraines appear to be triggered by food. (Other causes include hormonal changes, stress, excessive smoking, even strong odors and bright lights.)

Listed here are the most common troublemakers for people who are prone to migraines. Chocolate: It contains phenylethylamine, a compound that constricts blood vessels in the head. Tyramine: Another compound that can cause blood-vessel constriction. Large amounts of tyramine are contained in aged cheeses, including cheddar and Swiss, very ripe bananas, avocados, fava beans and chicken livers. Sodium nitrite: A preservative used in some processed meats, including hot dogs, bacon, cold cuts. Alcohol: Though all alcohol dilates blood vessels, certain types — including red wine, cognac and Scotch — contain byproducts of fermentation, called congeners, that can trigger headaches. Caffeine: Many doctors encourage migraine sufferers to limit coffee to no more than two cups a day and to avoid excessive tea and cola consumption. But cut back gradually. An abrupt reduction can also trigger a migraine. Aspartame: The low-calorie sweetener used in most diet sodas. Monosodium glutamate (MSG): A flavor enhancer often used in Chinese food and many food products, including packaged gravies and sauces and instant bouillon.

Children outgrow colic

By Dr. Harris Burstin
Associated Press

To new parents, nothing seems as difficult as hearing their child cry; and when the cries are caused by colic, it often seems impossible to do anything that helps.

But knowing that the condition is generally benign and will eventually pass should ease parents' concerns.

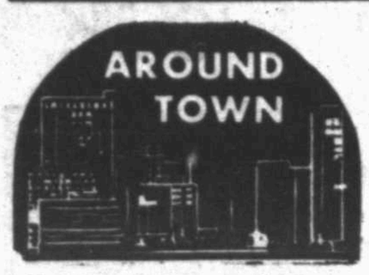

Colic is caused by periods of spasms in the intestines that result in a physical discomfort in an infant's abdomen.

The syndrome of colic and the term "colicky" are two different conditions. Most newborns are fussy during their first few weeks of life and the term colicky is used to describe this behavior.

In most cases, fussiness is not caused by physical problems. These newborns can be calmed by parental contact such as rocking, feeding or offering some water.

Not so infants with the colic syndrome. This relatively common syndrome can appear in a range of severity. In the most intense cases, babies tend to cry inconsolably for two to four hours, generally in the late or early evening.

DEAR ABBY
Woman getting older is proudly getting better

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A recent column had several letters from women age 60 and over who had cute responses to questions regarding their age. I think these women are part of the problem.

Van Buren

Our culture extends neither status nor credit to its aging population. Today there are more of us than ever before, and we are striving to age with grace and dignity, but there seems to be a consistent, subtle and insidious message that it is not OK to get older. For example, try to buy a birthday card that doesn't refer to the loss of memory, sight, body functions or body parts that no longer work properly.

Let's fight back! Let's establish models for aging with grace and dignity, and change our own negative views on aging and the attitude of the younger generation. There are cultures that respect their older members for their wisdom and knowledge.

I worked hard to get where I am today. I had lessons to learn and many to relearn — and I am still learning. That's what life is all about, isn't it? I have much to share.

TELL YOUR AGE. Be proud of it. Show others that you have earned the wisdom and balance to enjoy life even more. — JOAN BELSHIN, 62 YEARS OLD, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

P.S. One of the cleverest birthday cards I have seen is by Seinfeld. It reads: "You are lucky to be growing older. Now, if you want a cookie, you can have a cookie!"

DEAR JOAN: Perhaps you tuned in late. When asked my age, I simply say, "I'm a 1918 model."

I vote with you — and Seinfeld!

DEAR ABBY: Last night my 14-year-old son amazed me by asking if our family could go Christmas caroling this year. He then said, "Let's give family members fewer gifts, and use the money to buy gifts for people who are in hospitals and nursing homes — and deliver them ourselves on Christmas Eve!"

Abby, I was somewhat stunned that a 14-year-old would think in such generous terms. We are going to use his suggestions and make this the most rewarding Christmas we have ever had.

Perhaps we need to listen to our children more. — TIM, JESSICA AND MICHAEL'S MOM IN TENINO, WASH.

DEAR TIM, JESSICA AND MICHAEL'S MOM: "Out of the mouths of babes ..." (Psalms 8:2). Another truism: "The apple doesn't fall far from the tree." Take a bow, Mom.

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your reader, Earl W. Brown, who hates canned laughter on television.

To express my similar sentiments, I composed the following:

"If they have TV in the great hereafter,

"I hope and pray there's no canned laughter."

— CHARLES F. YARHAM, ROCKY RIVER, OHIO

CONSUMING INTERESTS
Cheese 'alternative' interesting

By Linda Anderson

Seems there's a continuing search on for foods that taste good and are healthy at the same time. People are more conscious of what is good for them, but they want it to taste good. And they want the foods they are familiar with, just healthier versions.

Anderson

Cheese is a perfect example of this. Many people (me included) just love cheese. So many foods go better with cheese on top — vegetables, meats, breads, casseroles, fast foods of all kinds — but unfortunately cheese is well-known as being loaded with the bad kind of fat and cholesterol, things many people are trying to limit in their diets.

Food manufacturers and marketers are trying to come up with options in this on-going search. I found something called formagg (all lower case letters with two little dots over the a) in the dairy case. It looks like cheese slices, is wrapped like cheese slices and is marketed with the cheese slices, but is advertised on its label as being "lactose free, butterfat free, cholesterol free."

So the question was: If it is lactose, butterfat and cholesterol free, how can it be cheese?

The answer is simple: It isn't. What the manufacturers call it is "Pasteurized Process Cheese Alternative." Made perfect sense to me.

Label advertising is mostly in lower case: "love cheese? formagg...the healthy choice."

Ingredients labels shows that yes, the product is not cheese. It contains, in order listed, water, casein (dried skim milk protein), partially hydrogenated soybean oil and some other stuff.

Nutrition label lists one ¾-ounce serving (one slice, and the package contains 16 slices) as containing 70 calories and 5 grams of fat (that's 45 calories from fat) but its mostly monounsaturated fat, which is supposed to be the good kind. I think.

One package containing 16 slices of formagg costs $3.59 too, which is kind of expensive for cheese or cheese alternatives.

But the taste test was interesting. The texture is a little weird, but it really does taste like cheese and even melts like cheese, so it does have some advantages.

Is formagg worth the price? That's a tough one to call. Depends on if you are worried about just butterfat or all kinds of fat; if you need to limit lactose or cholesterol in your diet or are more interested in limiting total fat intake.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Fainting's causes are determined

By Dr. Stuart A. Dickerman
Associated Press

Fainting, or syncope, is a common problem responsible for an estimated 6 percent of all hospital admissions in the United States.

Until recently, the cause of up to half of all faints remained unknown, even after extensive testing. Fortunately, cardiologists are using an old tool to diagnose and treat a condition — neurocardiogenic syncope — that causes many of these fainting spells.

Head-upright tilt-table testing is an old noninvasive test that is now being used to identify patients who suffer from this disorder. The test may require as little as a standard EKG monitor, a sphygmomanometer (blood pressure cuff), and a table that can be positioned at different angles. The test itself is administered after an overnight fast. After the patient is situated on the tilt table, the table is slowly raised to the upright position at an angle of 60 to 80 degrees. If the individual faints after being raised to the upright position, the test is considered positive.

Specialists now agree that many of these people have a disorder known as neurocardiogenic syncope. These patients experience sudden episodes of bradycardia (slow heart rate) and hypotension (low blood pressure). These episodes are triggered by reflexes transmitted through the nervous system.

A positive head-up tilt-table test reproduces the mechanism of the neurocardiogenic faint, as the patient will experience a drop in heart rate and blood pressure before fainting.

By understanding the underlying causes of neurocardiogenic syncope, cardiologists can now successfully treat this condition in several ways. Special support stockings, pacemakers, beta-blockers and other medications have all been helpful.

Neurocardiogenic syncope does not usually signify serious underlying cardiac disease. Other types of faints, however, are linked to serious heart disease. Therefore, other testing may be required even after a positive tilt-table test. Such testing may be needed to exclude other, more serious causes of fainting, such as cardiac arrhythmias.

AIDS: Sufferers learn to plan lives week by week

friends and family.

"We both said, when we said our vows, ' 'til death do us part.' And that's exactly what we meant," Sternman said.

Nelson died earlier this year. He was 28.

Now, Sternman has begun feeling the effects of AIDS himself. He stays at home more now, because he's afraid he won't have the energy to climb back up the flight of stairs to his apartment.

"The whole world seems to be moving at a much, much faster pace than me. That gets to be frustrating when you know you used to be at that faster pace," he said.

Meanwhile, he plans life by the week. And he clings to whatever optimism he can muster.

"There's hope that they will be able to find a way to control the disease," he said. "And the hope that at least your journey into whatever the next life is, is as easy as it can be."

Richard, the AIDS counselor, also has managed to find a shaft of light amid the gloom.

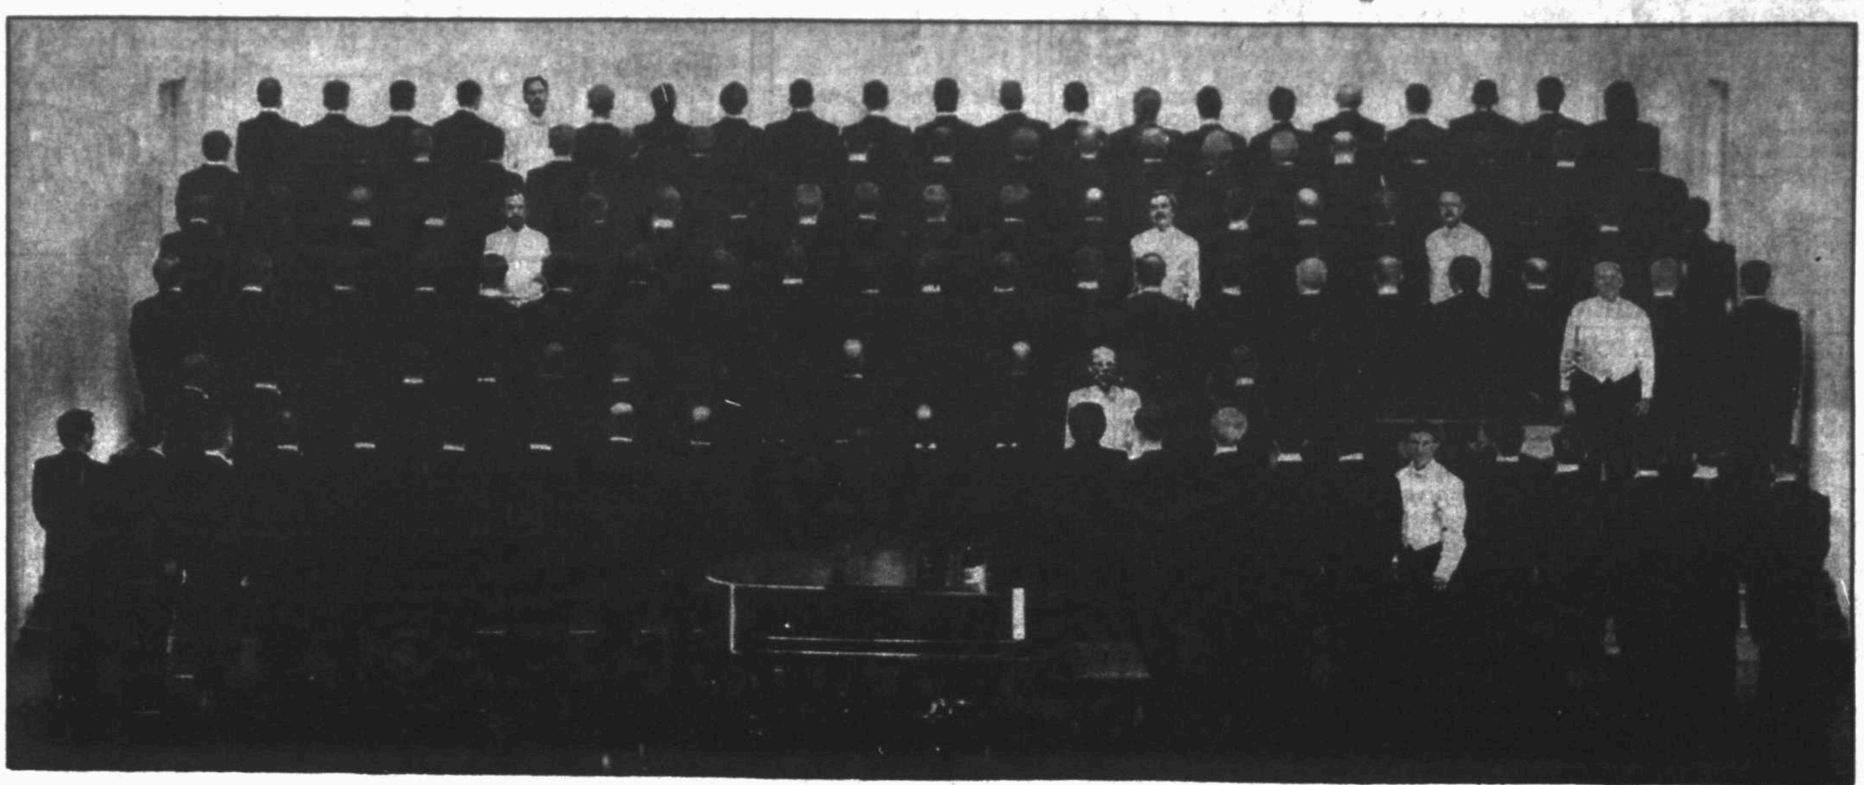

AIDS is "part of what put me in touch ... made me part of the human race again," he said. "I've spent so much of my life numb and unfeeling. To be feeling is a miracle."

"I know I get incredibly teary sometimes when I think about what it would be like," he said, imagining himself with full-blown AIDS.

"I don't want to wear a diaper because I'm incontinent when I'm 41. That's the stuff that's supposed to happen to you when you're 85 or 90."

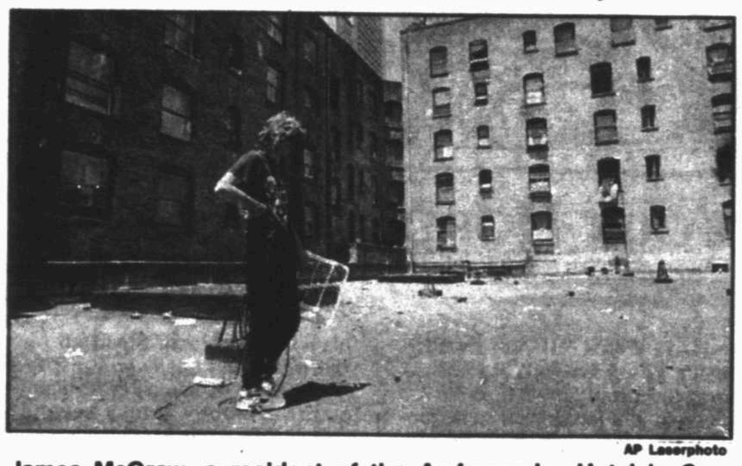

But then Richard's spirits rise again, when he thinks about his work as a counselor, about his girlfriend and about graduate school, which he started in the fall.

"If I didn't get HIV, if I didn't get tested, I wouldn't be here today," he said. "And I'm supposed to be here and putting one foot in front of the other."

Members of the San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus illustrate the number of men who have died of AIDS in their group by facing away in San Francisco May 16, 1993. Seven original members of the group are still living, while 115 who joined in 1989 have died.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A financial problem will be solved after you join forces with some progressive thinkers. An overseas visit can be quite successful if you plan ahead; try to schedule it for next summer. An interest in public life could lead to a new career. Count on romance being very satisfying. A marital relationship becomes even stronger.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball slugger Bo Jackson, author Mark Twain, dramatist David Mamet, actress Virginia Mayo.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Slow down and stay in the background. By conserving your resources, you will eventually win whatever you want! Go over legal contracts with a fine-toothed comb. Listening to music will relax you tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Prepare now for a confrontation that you know is coming. Keep your money separate from other people's. Take precautions with your valuables. Give office gossips a wide berth. You cannot afford to waste time on rumors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will have good luck securing financing or a loan. Stand up for your rights and others will respect you more. Welcome an opportunity to turn a hobby into a second income. Seek experts' advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not rush into large-scale ventures without first conducting some research. Cancel a meeting if you are not completely prepared. One faulty performance could damage your reputation. Be discreet about client's financial limitations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could learn an important lesson at work today. Resist the temptation to flirt. Provoking loved ones' jealousy will not help you restore domestic tranquillity. Trust your instincts. New responsibilities will boost your confidence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Those who make service to humanity a major goal will find great success and happiness. Call a pal with good news about family or friends. Planning a school reunion or political campaign revives old memories.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Displaying humor and enthusiasm on the home front will strengthen family ties. Immerse yourself in work, even if it is routine. Others are relying on your leadership. Handle financial matters with care. Build savings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It pays to be firm today; do not let loved ones or friends stray from the facts. Changes at work could make you feel uneasy at first. Take a wait-and-see approach. Be flexible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your love life and professional affairs separate now. Do not let your personal feelings influence career-related decisions. Double-check any information received. Business entertaining begins to pay off. You make powerful new friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Close associates are in a very practical, "show-me" mood. You win when you respond in a down-to-earth manner. Expect mixed signals in romance and bide your time. Love thrives on consideration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Give your artistic inclinations free rein when making decisions on refurbishing your living quarters. Being your own decorator can be fun and inexpensive! Read magazine and newspaper articles on home furnishings before going shopping.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An imaginative idea gets the day off to a flying start! A romantic attraction fuels your creativity. Early-morning suspicions will be resolved by nightfall.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

There are hands where pursuit of a single line is all that is needed to land your contract. More often than not, however, you have to combine two or more strategies if you are to succeed.

South was rather heavy for a three-no-trump opening bid — 27 is usually the upper limit. However, South considered the 4-3-3-3 shape and potential blockage in the majors something of a drawback (correctly because, as you can see, a low card in either major would be worth a full trick), and adopted a more conservative course.

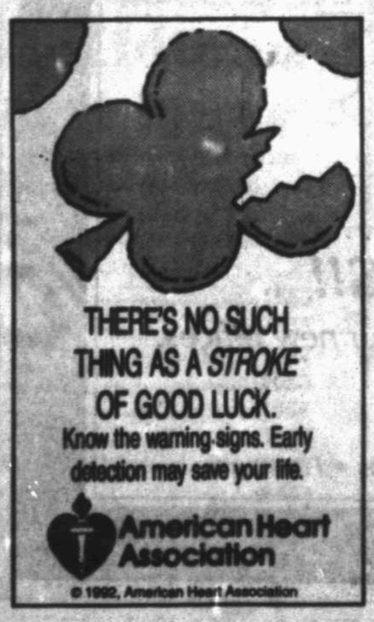

West led the queen of clubs, and declarer's first good decision was to employ a holdup play and allow West to win the trick. The continuation of the jack of clubs was taken in hand and the three winners in each major suit were cashed.

One possible line now was to cash the remaining club honor and then exit with a diamond. That would work if whoever won the diamond also held the ace. But the defenders could maneuver to have East win the trick and then declarer would have been in jeopardy when East returned the suit. As the cards lie, defeat would have been inevitable.

Declarer did better by taking his second club winner and then exiting with a club. When West turned up with the outstanding club, the contract became a laydown. A major-suit return would present dummy with two tricks, and a diamond would establish the king as the fulfilling trick.

Note that declarer's refusal to win the first trick fails only if West started with specifically Q J 9 of clubs. On any other lie of the suit the defenders can maneuver to have East gain the lead for the fatal diamond shift.

Wife says Cobain proposed suicide after daughter's birth

NEW YORK — On the day after their daughter's birth, Kurt Cobain brought a gun to the hospital and proposed a suicide pact to his wife, Courtney Love. She agreed.

Then, she said in the Dec. 15 issue of Rolling Stone, she had second thoughts:

"I held this thing in my hand. And I felt that thing that they said in 'Schindler's List': I'm never going to know what happens to me. And what about Frances? Sort of rude. 'Oh, your parents died the day after you were born.'"

Love, lead singer of the band Hole, said she talked her husband out of killing himself then. But Cobain had constant suicidal episodes after the 1992 birth of their daughter. He finally shot himself to death in April.

Love said their 2-year-old misses her father: "On some nights, she cries out for him, and it freaks me out."

WASHINGTON — Gregory Hines says the secret to his success is a little motherly encouragement.

"My mother saw that my brother and I had a little interest and ability in tap dancing," the 48-year-old actor and dancer said Monday at a forum sponsored by an educational arm of the Smithsonian Institution.

Gregory Hines says mother's encouragement is secret to his success.

The Tony-winning star of such movies as "The Cotton Club" and "White Nights" began performing with his brother, Maurice, at age 3.

"My mother was always saying, as I was progressing, 'You're good at this. You can do it.' In her way she would encourage me," Hines said.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Pele introduced soccer to the world. Now he'd like to introduce more businesses to his hometown.

"I will ask my businessmen friends in Japan, the United States and other First World countries to come invest in Rio," the soccer star said in an interview Tuesday with the newspaper Jornal do Brasil.

Pele, now a 54-year-old wealthy businessman, said he feels it his duty to help lift Rio out of violence and decay. Things are so bad the army is patrolling the streets to fight crime.

"The time has come for the turnaround," Pele said. "That's where we come in, with a great movement in favor of Rio. All must help the city grow."

SYDNEY, Australia — Nasty weather grounded the Duchess of York but couldn't stop a party in her honor.

The former Sarah Ferguson had to cancel a helicopter trip Tuesday to Merriwa, a community about 75 miles north of Sydney. She was to have visited victims of motor neuron disease.

"The cloud cover is far too heavy to risk continuing the journey," helicopter pilot David Jones said.

The duchess continued with other events on behalf of motor neuron disease patients, one of her favorite charities.

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — Stonewall Jackson may have to sit out this weekend's performance at the Grand Ole Opry, and it's a doggone shame.

The country singer was walking at his farm Sunday when a neighbor's German shepherd bit him on his arm and leg.

Jackson, 62, known for his hits "Waterloo" and "Don't Be Angry," was treated at a hospital.

He said the dog ran off after he picked up a big stick. Animal control officials picked up the dog later.

Jackson has performed since 1956 at the country music show.

HOUSTON — Noted heart surgeon Denton Cooley celebrates 50 years of practicing medicine this week with a black-tie gala and performance by singer Julio Iglesias.

The gala Wednesday night will also feature a video tribute from Walter Cronkite.

In 1968, Cooley performed the first successful human heart transplant in the United States.

Cooley is founder and surgeon-in-chief at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston. In 1984, President Ronald Reagan presented Cooley with the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award.

Kim Basinger, who is best known for buying a small town in Georgia, for a court battle after she dropped out of a starring role in "Boxing Helena," and for her marriage to Alec Baldwin, told Interview magazine, "Basically, my work in the last 10 years has been for the protection of animals. . . ."

"I try not to be too judgmental of others," said Basinger, "even though I would love to think that the definition of the word 'animal' will change somehow before I leave this planet. I don't know whether it will or not. As far as I'm concerned, I don't eat meat. I still eat sushi, though I'm trying my best to have my last sushi roll."

Agencies launch effort to improve diabetes care

By Linda A. Johnson

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Eighteen months ago, a huge National Institutes of Health study reported that complications of diabetes, including blindness and kidney failure, could be limited if patients controlled their blood sugar better.

Experts say doctors and America's estimated 14 million diabetics — half of them unaware they have the metabolic disorder — have barely heeded that message. So federal agencies and diabetic supply companies are beginning public education campaigns and developing other ways to better manage the disease, the country's No. 7 cause of death.

Diabetes specialists attribute that groundswell to the dramatic results of the NIH's 10-year Diabetes Control and Complications Trial (DCCT), reported in June 1993. The study of nearly 1,500 insulin-dependent diabetics in early stages of the disease found that intensive therapy — injecting insulin and testing blood sugar through pricking a finger, at least four times daily — sharply cut the rate of serious complications, and any improvement in care was beneficial.

"IT'S BEEN likened to the next most important thing (for diabetics) after the discovery of insulin" in 1921, says NIH spokeswoman Jane DeMouy.

"The DCCT was really a turning point," agrees Kathleen L. Wishner, president of the Washington-based American Diabetes Association. "The public hasn't recognized how serious the disease is, and we're only now able to say for certain that what we're advocating, intensive management, does make a difference."

Diabetics lack enough insulin, a hormone made by the pancreas, to carry sugar from digested foods into the cells. That sugar, glucose, builds to unsafe levels in the blood and is eliminated in urine, stealing the body's main fuel.

Diabetes causes vision loss, kidney failure, heart disease, nerve damage and amputations. In the United States, it costs about $132 billion annually in medical care and lost productivity.

DCCT found that intensive therapy cut risk of eye disease by 76 percent, nerve damage by 60 percent, kidney disease by 50 percent and cardiovascular disease by 35 percent.

So NIH last month launched the first government-sponsored program touting the benefits of better control of blood sugar level. Using the theme, "Do Your Level Best," it includes public service ads and urges diabetics to call a toll-free number (800-GET-LEVEL) to get a patient information kit.

Dr. Richard C. Eastman, director of the Division of Diabetes, Endocrinology and Metabolic Disease at the NIH, says any improvement in blood sugar control helps patients.

But he and other experts concede that it will be tough to persuade them to follow the intensive therapy because it takes more time, costs more for supplies and means pricking themselves up to 12 times a day between insulin injections and drawing blood to test the glucose level.

"THE FEELING on the cynic side (is) that it's too much to ask people to do," says epidemiologist Dr. Michael M. Engelgau, a diabetes specialist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

Engelgau says CDC is studying whether instead of urging diabetics to test blood glucose level themselves four times daily, it would be more effective to encourage them to stick with twice-a-day testing — what most now do — and have a different test at the doctor's office every three months. That test is for glycolysated hemoglobin, a blood component that gives a measure of the average glucose level over months.

At an international conference in Japan this month, doctors presented a new "staged diabetes management" program developed by the International Diabetes Center in St. Louis Park, Minn.

Three medical products makers will be disseminating the program materials for free: insulin-syringe maker Becton Dickinson of Franklin Lakes and two Indianapolis-based companies, insulin maker Eli Lilly and Boehringer Mannheim, which makes blood glucose monitoring kits.

Dr. Barry Ginsberg of Becton Dickinson says tests of the program at 28 centers worldwide produced results as good as the DCCT, about a 20 percent average improvement in glucose levels.

Beginning in January, the three-company alliance will distribute program kits to five large health maintenance organizations covering a combined 30 million people. Later it will expand to medical centers, group practices and physician residency programs.

"I THINK it's a very well-organized effort to provide primary care doctors with the tools to intensify management of diabetes. It's exactly what they need," Eastman says.

The effort likely will catch on with managed care health insurers, says ADA's Wishner. Those organizations are beginning to recognize that better management of diabetes will prevent costly complications.

Her group is running its own education campaign, including efforts focused on minorities — Spanish-language home health parties and church-based programs for blacks — because the disease strikes minorities in greater rates than whites.

Some group practices already specialize in treating diabetics. One example is the Diabetic Foot Care Center in Paramus, one of four such centers nationwide.

Dr. Vincent Giacalone, the center's medical director, says nerve damage and reduced circulation in the feet leave diabetics unable to feel pain there, so minor injuries can worsen undetected. He says 80 percent of amputations done on U.S. diabetes patients — more than 50,000 a year — stemmed from a minor foot irritation.

"Diabetics are more susceptible to infection and they heal slower," because their high blood glucose level inhibits the blood's infection-fighting cells, Giacalone says.

New drugs under study also offer hope, although NIH's Eastman believes those benefits are years away.

ALTEON INC. of Ramsey just began patient tests of its drug Pimagedine, designed to prevent eye and kidney damage by blocking a chemical reaction in which excess glucose in the blood binds to proteins, disrupting their function.

Tests on lab animals were promising, says Dr. Stephen H. Schneider, an endocrinologist supervising the four-year study at Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in New Brunswick.

Facts about diabetes and its treatment listed

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Diabetes is a metabolic disorder afflicting 14 million Americans, but half don't know they have it and risk severe complications without treatment.

In diabetics, the body produces little or no insulin or doesn't use it properly. Insulin is a hormone produced in the pancreas that helps carry glucose, a sugar from digested foods, into the cells. Without insulin, glucose builds to unsafe levels in the blood, overflows in the urine and passes out of the body, removing its main fuel.

Symptoms include blurred vision, unusual thirst, feelings of tiredness or illness, frequent infections, slow healing of sores, frequent urination, especially at night, and weight loss. Complications include vision loss and blindness, kidney failure, heart disease, strokes, hypertension, nerve damage, amputations, and birth defects in babies born to women with diabetes.

Some other facts:

- Diabetes is the seventh-leading cause of death, killing or contributing to the deaths of more than 200,000 Americans in 1991.
- About 600,000 new U.S. cases are diagnosed each year.
- In 1992, diabetes cost this country $85 billion for medical treatment and $47 billion for lost work time, disability payments and premature death.
- Diabetes is the leading cause of acquired blindness (up to 24,000 new cases annually among diabetics) and causes about half of all amputations (54,000 a year). It's the top cause of kidney failure; about 41,000 diabetics now get dialysis or have had kidney transplants.
- Noninsulin-dependent diabetes (NIDD), in which patients can survive but may develop long-term complications without insulin injections, usually develops after age 40. It accounts for 90 percent to 95 percent of diagnosed cases and almost all undiagnosed cases.
- About 10 percent of diabetes patients have insulin-dependent diabetes (IDD). About 30 percent have NIDD but take regular insulin shots. The other 60 percent rely on oral medication or diet and exercise.
- About half of insulin-dependent diabetics are age 29 or younger.
- Diabetes is much more prevalent among minorities than whites. Other risk factors include being overweight and older.

The National Institutes of Health's 10-year Diabetes Control and Complications Trial found complications were greatly reduced through intensive therapy.

That includes testing the blood sugar level through finger pricks at least four times daily, following a diet and exercise plan, visiting a health care team monthly, adjusting insulin doses according to food intake and exercise, and injecting insulin at least four times daily OR using an insulin pump, a beeper-sized syringe device worn under clothing.

Patients who followed those steps reduced their risk of:

- eye disease by 76 percent,
- kidney disease by 50 percent,
- nerve damage by 60 percent, and
- cardiovascular disease by 35 percent.

COLIC: Condition is common

(From 1E)

Parents can take comfort in knowing that most pediatricians believe that colic-related crying is a reflex reaction that signals less pain than discomfort.

And contrary to popular belief, the colic syndrome has nothing to do with whether a baby is being fed by the breast or by bottle — or even by the type of formula being used.

The colic syndrome is caused by an exaggeration of the gastrocolic reflex, a stretching and churning of the stomach that occurs after an infant eats and which children outgrow sometime during the first few months of life.

It generally occurs in 2- to 4-week-olds, and disappears when he or she grows out of the gastrocolic reflex, at about 12 weeks of age.

The gastrocolic reflex can be viewed outwardly when the baby abruptly pulls away from the breast or bottle, fidgets, grunts, passes some gas, then returns to feeding.

For many years doctors have been searching for medications that can help treat an infant and put an end to the crying that goes with colic. But progress has been slow. In the 1950s and 1960s, medications used often contained opiates or a combination of phenobarbital and alcohol that caused children to become drowsy and sleep.

In the 1970s, pediatricians began using antispasmodic medications that target the gastrocolic reflex. These medications can help relieve the colic but are not effective in all cases.

Current treatment is a combination of reassurance from pediatricians that the illness is not serious and a reminder that the period of colic is finite and will end; in severe cases, medications may be prescribed.

A final note: it is important that an infant who may have colic is examined by a pediatrician to distinguish the syndrome from a possible medical illness. Red flags that can signal illness in infants include vomiting, constant crying, fretfulness and discomfort, or failure to gain weight.

Dr. Harris Burstin is clinical associate professor of pediatrics at New York University School of Medicine.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on on of its few "Special Allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is between Cotton Flat and Rankin Hwy. - also the Downtown Area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

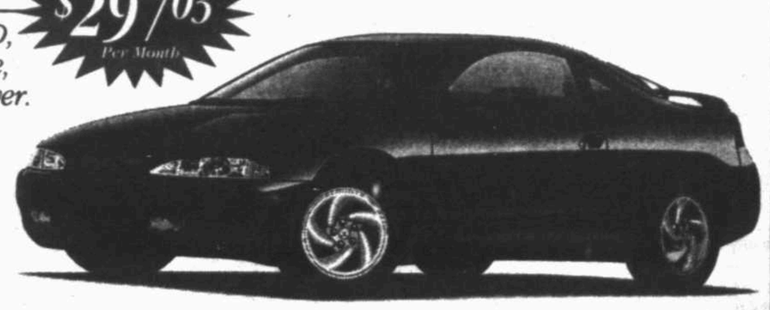

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
