Park comes out of hiding today

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tongaun Park, the key figure in the South Korean influence-buying scandal in Washington, came out of hiding today and said he would not let American authorities question him.

Declaring "I am a 100 per cent Korean," he told a news conference there is no need or any obligation for him to speak to any American investigators. "If Leon Jaworski comes to Korea, it's his liberty, but I'm not going to see him," he added.

Jaworski, the former Watergate special prosecutor, is the new director of the investigation into the scandal by the ethics committee of the U.S. House of Representatives. The U.S. Justice Department also is investigating charges that Park was the South Korean government's chief payoff man in Washington.

The 42-year-old Korean businessman said American newspaper allegations that he gave funds and favors to members of Congress to get their support for the Korean government and to advance his own rice-buying operations were "irresponsible, merciless and inhumane."

He also said there was no justification for the seizure of his property in the United States by U.S. authorities in connection with allegations of tax evasion.

Park met Korean and foreign reporters at his office in downtown Seoul after being questioned earlier in the day by the Seoul prosecutor's office. It was his first news conference in 10 months since the scandal in Washington broke last October and he moved to London.

Prosecutor Ahn Kyung-sang said he called Park in to determine if his alleged activities in Washington violated any Korean laws. He refused to say what he learned in the initial interrogation but said Park would be questioned again.

There was speculation that the government also suspected he might have violated foreign exchange regulations in his extensive business dealings abroad.

An informed source said Park would not be allowed to leave the country until he was cleared of suspicion. Park said he planned to leave as soon as his ailing mother recovered.

It could not be learned whether the questioning was requested by the U.S. government. Park cannot be returned to the United States against his will since South Korea does not have an extradition treaty with the United States. The Korean government has repeatedly denied that it had any connection with his activities in Washington.

Park arrived from London last Thursday traveling under an alias. He reportedly returned to see his 70-year-old mother, who was discharged from a hospital on Saturday after treatment for anemia and stomach trouble.

Leon Jaworski is giving the House ethics committee a progress report on his first few days in charge of the investigation of alleged South Korean influence-buying attempts in Congress.

The former Watergate special prosecutor is meeting with committee members today in their first session since he took over the investigation on Aug. 15. Aides declined to say in advance what Jaworski would tell the committee.

They also would not say whether the panel will consider a contempt of Congress action against S. Park Thomson, a former secretary to retired House Speaker Carl Albert.

Ms. Thomson's lawyer, Philip Hirschkop, said she is willing to answer the questions in a public session.

Weather

There will be a chance of thunder showers through Thursday as partly cloudy conditions continue. The highs today and Thursday will be in the upper-90s (36 degrees C) and the overnight low will be in the upper-60s (19 degrees C). Winds will be from the west at 10-15 mph today, becoming light and variable tonight. The high Tuesday was 93 degrees F (34 degrees C) and the low this morning was 65 degrees F (18 degrees C).

Picking up some new skills

David Guthrie, biology teacher at Pampa High School, gets some practical instruction in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) from Jessie Newberry, R.N., as he tries the newly-acquired skills on a mannequin of an infant. All employees of the Pampa Independent School District are receiving the CPR training today as part of the five-day in-service education for teachers. Certified

Pampa may tax motels

The possibility of initiating Pampa's first hotel-motel tax will be discussed at 7:30 p.m. today during a study session of the Pampa City Commission.

The session was called to discuss a way the city could improve its retirement plan for employees.

City Manager Mack Wofford said a 3 per cent hotel-motel tax would produce between $14,000 and $15,000 annually.

Under the city's present plan with the Texas Municipal Retirement System an employee contributes 5 per cent of his salary up to $6,000 per year and the city contributes $1.50 for each dollar the employee pays.

Employees would like to contribute to their entire salary. Wofford said of the 26 city employees now receiving retirement benefits, the largest check is $147 per month.

He noted that an employee who began work in 1946 could retire in 1984 — with 38 years service — at $413 per month under the present plan.

"If we could get the proposed plan through that same individual with the same amount of service could retire at $1,115 per month," Wofford said.

The city manager sees the proposed plan as a means of retaining employees.

Wofford said there are three ways to finance the retirement, or amend some portion of the budget.

The proposed plan would cost the city about $40,000.

"I can find the money, but it has to come from some other portion of the budget," Wofford said. However, he stressed that there are no plans to increase the total amount of the budget, unless a hotel-motel tax is initiated.

The study session was called by Mayor R.D. Wilkerson Tuesday following a public hearing on the budget. Finance Director, called attention to the fact the retirement plans needs to be upgraded.

He told the commission that a city employee is "not a second rate citizen."

City employees are as important to society as any other person, Dyer emphasized.

'I can't paint but I can bake rolls'

Pampans volunteer to spruce schools

Gene Lewis came into The News office today carrying a pile of letters from volunteers — folks who are willing to donate their time and talents to repairing Pampa's public schools.

Lewis came up with his "Let's do it ourselves" plan on Friday, following the Thursday defeat of the $2.2 million school bond issue.

The Sunday edition of The News carried a story outlining the plan, with Lewis's request for others in the community to write him and let him know their feelings on the idea.

"Hurrah for you!" a retired teacher wrote him. "Your plan is a good one and the community would make themselves proud. I'm all for your plan. Most people on low and middle incomes will be pleased. I'm sure there would be work for a retired teacher, and that's me!"

Another writer commented, "I believe you can get together a group that will turn out a lot of work and save the taxpayers money."

Other comments included:

"Dear Gene, you have the best idea I've heard of lately. I'm all for it."

"Mr. Lewis, Volunteer time and talent may be the answer for our school problem. Thank you."

"We voted for the bond, were sorry it did not pass. Would be happy to give a day's work on the buildings. I do carpenter work or paint."

"I operate a welding rig for Shorty Hudson of Pupco Inc. I'm sure he would release me and my truck whenever possible to help ya'll out. I also have experience in wood repairs and will try anything you say."

"I will help on weekends if needed. If any yard work is needed I will furnish machinery until the job is finished."

"You got a good idea. I'll work a day and more."

"I will donate a day or more if needed."

There also have been 25 or 30 phone calls from volunteers and several Pampans have stopped Lewis on the streets, in the bank, the post office to voice support of his plan and to add their names to the list.

John Morris, owner of Guarantee Builders, volunteered a day's work for himself and his entire crew.

"One little old lady told me she couldn't drive a nail or paint, but she said, 'I can bake a cinnamon roll that will melt in your mouth and I can bake bunches of them,'" Lewis said.

One man delivered five $20 bills to Lewis from a donor who had opposed the bond issue.

"I tried to give it back to him because I don't know yet if we'll get this thing off the ground, but he wouldn't take it back," Lewis said.

He said today that he doesn't want to be the leader of the project. He'd rather be "just one of the workers."

"I'm not looking for a place to be. It's time we give this to someone else. We need one of our good strong civic leaders to take charge of this and get it organized."

Lewis said an ideal leader would be "maybe somebody retired from a position of leadership get him some office space and staff it with volunteers and get organized. We need somebody at this point who is stronger than I am."

He said the Pampa Jaycees have volunteered to assist in the project and could possibly provide the necessary office assistance.

In the meantime, while Lewis is waiting for a leader to come forth, he has asked that people continue to write him and let him know what they think of the plan — Box 1978, Pampa.

"There may be a reason why it won't work, but thus far I don't know what it is," he said.

Judge won't allow picture of Priscilla

By MIKE COCHRAN

Associated Press Writer
AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Defense attorneys for millionaire Cullen Davis tried unsuccessfully today to introduce into evidence a provocative picture of Davis' estranged wife Priscilla and a partially nude male friend.

The blonde Fort Worth socialite, under cross examination by the defense, said she could not recall the picture being taken but identified the man as W. T. Rufner.

"Do you recall ever seeing W. T. Rufner in this condition of attire, or lack of it?" defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes asked.

"No sir," she replied. "You're telling us under oath,?" Haynes continued.

"Not in that particular situation, no sir," she said.

State District Court Judge George Dowlen sustained prosecution objections to the picture and barred at least temporarily its introduction into evidence.

Haynes also zeroed in on the number of people, male and female, who have visited or lived at the mansion since the Davises separated in 1974. He questioned her specifically about how many had individual house keys.

The lawyers for Davis know they must discredit Mrs. Davis, the state's star witness, if they are to win an acquittal for the Fort Worth industrialist.

Mrs. Davis Tuesday identified her estranged husband as the "man in black" who wounded her and killed her lover Stan Farr in a summer-time 1976 shooting spree.

"Their only defense is to destroy me," Mrs. Davis, 38, said outside the courtroom. "But it doesn't matter if I was the biggest hooker, doper or what have you. It has absolutely nothing to do with what he did."

Davis, 43, is on trial for his life in the Aug. 2, 1976, slaying of his stepdaughter, Andrea, 13, the first of two to die in the midnight shootings at the $8 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Davis, shot once in the chest that night, told the jury Tuesday how she lay bleeding on the mansion floor and watch the gunman fire two fatal shots into the dying Farr.

"Stan just looked at me, closed his eyes, laid down his head and he died," she said, tears flowing down her cheeks and her ice-blond hair tumbling across her face.

Moments earlier, she said, the man in black and wearing a woman's shoulder-length black wig had stepped from a stairwell, said "hi" and "then he shot me."

Mrs. Davis told also of running through the darkness to a neighbor's home across the 181-acre estate and crying.

"My name is Priscilla Davis. I live in the big white house in the middle of the field. Cullen has wounded me very badly. He's killing my children. He's killing everyone please, he's trying to kill me."

She testified she was unaware at the time that Andrea's lifeless body lay crumpled in a basement utility room.

Since there were no witnesses to Andrea's death, the state intends to prove the bullet which killed the child was fired from the same gun used to kill Farr.

The tiny, 53-seat courtroom was packed and spectators lined up outside as Mrs. Davis began a tearful account of the story she told from a wheelchair at a bond hearing a year ago in Fort Worth.

The defense sought to show Mrs. Davis had been well-rehearsed by prosecutors before her appearance.

"She conceded there was a nighttime 'walk-through' or reenactment at the mansion with surviving principals of the shootings, but said she recalled no other such sessions.

The defense also delved into her two marriages prior to meeting Davis and brought out that she once lost custody of her children in a contested action.

During her testimony, Mrs. Davis said she and Farr returned from dinner and drinks with friends about midnight Aug. 2 and found the mansion's security system deactivated.

Nervously fingering the white lace blouse of her pink dress, Mrs. Davis said she first spotted what appeared to be bloody handprints on a wall and door leading to the basement.

"I hollered for Stan," she said recalling that Farr, with whom she shared the mansion, had ascended the stairs to the bedroom.

"I kept hollering, 'Stan come here, Stan come here,'" she testified.

As she crossed to the kitchen, she said, all of a sudden, "Cullen" stepped out.

"When you say 'Cullen'?" Curry interrupted.

"Cullen Davis," she replied. "He had all black on and a woman's wig, a shiny wig straight, but with curls at the bottom. It had a part in it," she continued.

"Did he say anything?"

"He said, 'hi'."

"Then what did he do?"

"Then he shot me."

She pointed to the spot where the bullet entered her chest and exited through her back, an injury for which she said she is still receiving treatment.

Mrs. Davis said the man in black "had his hands together and they were covered with a black or dark garbage sack."

After the first shot, she said, she screamed, "Cullen shot me! Go back! Stan, go back! He's got a gun!"

With tears turning to sobs, she told how the gunman attempted to push through a door separating him from Farr.

"He stepped back and shot through the door. I heard Stan go like 'Uhh' and I knew he'd been hit."

Farr then lunged through the door, grabbed the gunman's wrist and the two wrestled until another shot felled the towering former basketball player, Mrs. Davis said.

"Stan was lying there looking at me," she said. "He (Davis) stood there a second and then he shot him... two times."

Mrs. Davis returned to the stand later and said Davis grabbed Farr by the ankles, dragging him toward the kitchen.

Asked when she last saw Farr's body she replied:

"I saw Stan's fingertips disappear behind a cabinet in the kitchen."

She added, "I jumped up and ran to the glass sliding door, unlocked it and opened it and ran... down a walkway... with Davis' right behind me."

"He grabbed my right arm. He still had the wig on a gun in his hand. I started crying. 'Cullen I love you. I've never loved anyone else. Can't we sit down and talk this thing out?'"

Mrs. Davis returned to the stand later and said Davis grabbed Farr by the ankles,

Nixon loses box battle

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon lost a court fight today to prevent the government from rummaging through boxes he left behind to see if they contain clues to the whereabouts of valuable gifts from foreign dignitaries.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. said the law clearly gives the government the right to look at anything deemed presidential historical materials and just as clearly requires it to return items that are personal and private.

"We've got to start the process," he said. "There's got to be a preliminary determination immediately of what is personal and private. And if its personal and private it doesn't belong to the government."

Steven Frank, a Department of Justice lawyer, said the search of the records will begin sometime next week.

At stake in the hearing was more than just a listing of the gifts, some of which may be "missing" through poor record keeping.

In fact, the gifts were barely mentioned at all during the two hour court session.

The proposed search is the government's first attempt to look through materials in its possession since the Supreme Court awarded custody to Uncle Sam — specifying that strict regulations must govern access.

It was also Nixon's first chance to challenge those rules. Under the regulations Nixon must be given notice that materials will be searched. Frank said the notice will be sent to Nixon's lawyers within the next few days.

R. Stan Mortenson, Nixon's lawyer, said the former President has no objection to providing the gifts inventory to the government but he said he feared that the search might reveal personal documents as well.

The inhumanity of it

Thoughtful people over the centuries have never been comfortable when quantum developments occurred in the technology of weapons of destruction. The discomfort intensified greatly with the advent of the atomic age.

Cost of weapons also has been troublesome, not only today when an airplane can cost more than $100 million, but also in the old days. On one occasion President Calvin Coolidge is said to have asked why the Army and Navy could not share an aircraft and take turns flying it — after both services had asked for the new machine.

The old arguments about how many weapons are too many and the costs of defense systems also are very much in the minds of Americans these days as the nation discusses the merits and demerits of B-1 bombers, cruise missiles and the neutron bomb.

Recently, President Carter decided to stress the cruise missile program when he concluded that the cost of the B-1 bomber was excessive.

And now Congress is debating the Pentagon's desire to deploy the neutron bombs, which kill mostly by radiation instead of by fallout, concussion and heat.

Stripping away the emotionalism, those who would put the neutron bomb into mothballs make the following arguments:

1. It's an inhumane weapon because it kills people but leaves property relatively unscathed.

2. A president would be more likely to order the use of the neutron weapon because it is precise and would not invite retaliation by intercontinental missiles and an all-out nuclear war.

3. Short of total nuclear war, use of a neutron bomb would invite battlefield retaliation from an enemy, with bombs that might be atomically "dirtier."

4. Deployment of the neutron bomb would simply add to existing nuclear overkill capabilities in the world — and set back diplomatic efforts to reduce doomsday armament levels.

These are serious and thoughtful concerns that cannot be dismissed lightly. But the counter-arguments also have merit.

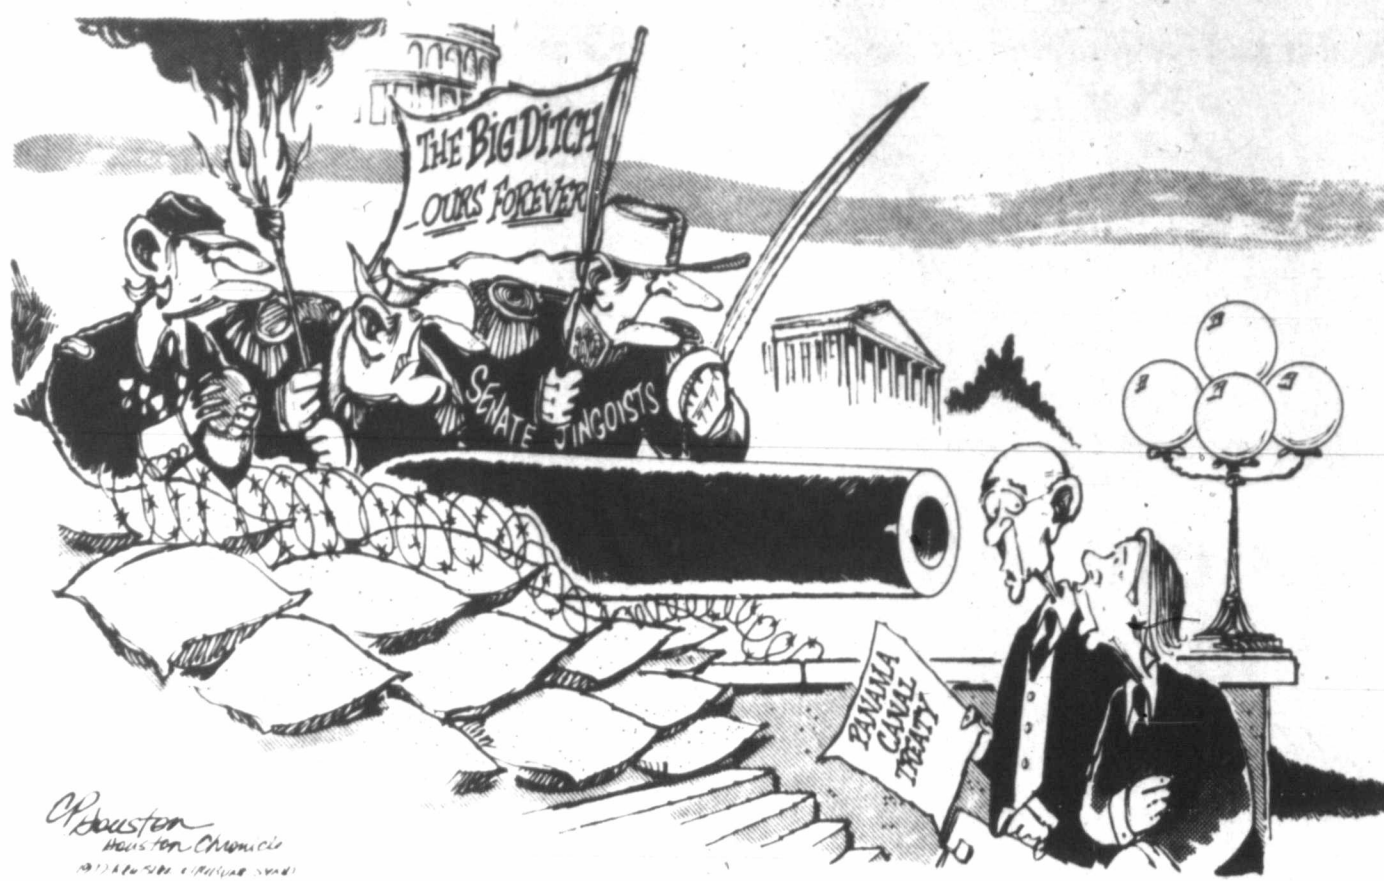

1. No weapon intended to kill another human being is humane; it's a matter of degree. The neutron bomb is smaller than the present tactical nuclear weapons deployed in West Europe. The neutron weapons would probably kill fewer innocent people than the present weapons. And don't scoff at those who try to save property. Not the least of the hardships endured during a war is the lack of transportation, housing, utilities and jobs.

2. The purpose of American defense is to deter the enemy, not our president. The United States will not start a war.

3. The Warsaw Pact troops could have a neutron bomb or a dirtier one — and they might dare to use it. The idea is to make the risk of using such weapons too great for the enemy to take.

4. All "overkill" arguments are based on the premise that mass and volume are substitutes for precision and sophistication. Henry Kissinger once asked: "For God's sake, what do you do with strategic superiority?" He and many others make good arguments that there never will be a deliberate strategic nuclear war because the consequences are too terrible. But does anybody suggest that there will never be another war? And if a conventional land war erupted in Europe, the U.S. could not use Minuteman missile to stop enemy troops. Even if present atomic tactical weapons were used, they would destroy our allies in the effort to save them.

Is the neutron warhead an American effort to make war less devastating by saving lives of innocent persons, as well as their homes and businesses? We don't know the answer. But in the real world of 1977, it is a question we all must seriously consider.

'Suddenly Torrijos begins to appear the pushover in this matter'

Countdown to 1984 on schedule

By BUTLER D. SHAFER

You remember the scenario: Alan Ladd, in the disguise of a German peasant, approaches one of those roadblocks with the red and white striped arm-lift barricade. A sneering German officer, addressing a sub-machine gun to our hero's mid-section, orders him to "halt," and then demands: "you will show me your papers!" Our hero fumbles through his pockets and comes up with a forged set of identification papers. The German officer stares menacingly at him for a few moments, asks him a question somewhat the German equivalent to "who won the 1942 World Series," and finally allows him to pass. Alan Ladd, along with the theater audience, breathes a sigh of relief and goes off to join forces with John Wayne, Brian Donlevy, and Randolph Scott to win the war.

Perhaps it was out of a sense of nostalgia for these World War II police-state methods that Republican members of Congress recently proposed the establishment of this same sort of personal identification system for all U.S. citizens. While ostensibly directed to the so-called "problem" of illegal aliens literally interpreting the verse on the Statue of Liberty, the Republican proposal would require all citizens to obtain and possess government papers for purposes of identification. This proposal is not new; it has come up repeatedly over the years. There was even a proposal made by the Kennedy administration to require every new-born child to have a federal social security - identification number tattooed on its foot. The purpose of these various plans is quite apparent: not only would everyone be locked into an elaborate system of political control, they would also be subject to arbitrary detentions on the street (or at red and white striped roadblocks) for purposes of "identification." The effect of such a program would be the creation of an internal passport system governing not only travel and employment but, perhaps, even conduct within one's home.

It will be interesting to see who — besides the "conservatives" and "liberals" who have traditionally supported such measures — line up to endorse this proposal. You can be assured that the labor unions will plump for it: anything to restrict the flow of foreign laborers who dare to compete at less than "union scale." The Chamber of Commerce, accustomed to the anti-competitive benefits of government intervention in the market - place, can probably be counted on for support, if only out of habit. The "law-and-order" crowd — supportive of any measure that further subjugates individuals to the arbitrary authority of police officials — will probably start plastering their car with bumper stickers that read "register people, not guns!" I am sure this latter group will take comfort from the words of one of the proponents of this measure, California Congressman Clair Burgener, who offered the classic police-state rationale that it is not unreasonable to ask every American to identify himself!

The ancient Incas of Peru — whose citizenry was literally owned by the state — had an elaborate "identification" system, and persons traveling from one village to another were required to secure permission to do so and to have their "I.D." with them at all times. More recently, of course, we can identify such practices extant within the communist nations, in which travel is a state-decreed privilege, and subjection to the arbitrary power of police officers is a way of life.

Mindful, perhaps, that 1984 is less than seven years away, and intent on now allowing the Democrats to monopolize the planning for the big event, the G.O.P. has demonstrated its talents as architects for the ultimate American police-state. With the American government already in possession of a number of concentration camps (oooops, "relocation centers"), the political power - structure is hard at work seeking the realization of Orwell's prognosis. While we don't know exactly how the system will work, perhaps we can get a rough idea from those World War II vintage films: "you will give me your papers, citizen, and do not make trouble. Remember, you had members of your family living in Sun City!"

A chance to save some state tax dollars

By THOM MARSHALL

Pampa News Co-Editor
Ever since I learned that the local county school superintendent (C.S.S.) is going to request a 10 per cent increase in her budget I've been giving the matter a great deal of thought and I just can't make sense of it.

The largest item in the budget, which totalled almost $20,000 last year, is the salary for the C.S.S. So, apparently, she is requesting a 10 per cent increase in her $11,000 annual gift.

I consider it a gift rather than a salary because the county has no county schools and the C.S.S. has no actual, definable duties of office.

Oh, a couple of the county's smallest school districts provide her with some busy work to do, but I think I figured out why that is. You see, about the only real power in the hands of the county school board of trustees that could ever amount to anything is the power to consolidate school districts.

The small independent districts in the county — Alameda and Grandview Hopkins — have no desire to be consolidated because that would result in a big increase in taxes for those who own property in those small districts. It would also eliminate the top administrative posts.

So the administrators and the property owners of the small districts keep in touch with the county school superintendent and her board of trustees. It simply is smart politics.

This ripoff of state funds by county superintendents is not confined to Gray County. I called Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, a couple of days ago and learned that the total cost to the state for useless county school superintendents throughout Texas is going to be $3.8 million this year.

Peveto and Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, introduced a bill quite some time ago, to do away with the needless office of C.S.S. Peveto said that the House of Representatives has succeeded in putting a halt to the funding of the offices which should result in their abolishment. Funds will be withdrawn as county school superintendents complete their terms.

Which means that the ripoff will continue here and in other counties for another year and the local C.S.S. is very likely to get her 10 per cent increase (after all it is only state tax money).

If such a waste of tax dollars concerns you, let me add a bit more fuel to your fire.

Our local C.S.S., if the information I have been able to dig up is correct, taught school only for a couple of years a few decades ago. Before teaching she attended college for only two years.

Well, according to the state form used in figuring her salary for last year, she was to get $180 base pay (an amount which varies according to one's education qualifications. If she had a bachelor's degree it would have been $267 monthly).

Then there was a passage in the form that said "to the above base salary add $6 per month for each year of teaching experience in the public schools of Texas, not to exceed $72 per month."

"NOT TO EXCEED $72 PER MONTH" And yet our local C.S.S. currently is being paid $96 per month for an experience increment. She legally is limited to $6 per month for each year of teaching experience — a total of $12 — yet she is being paid $96.

The difference between the two amounts is $84 per month. For the past year, fellow tax victims, we have been cheated out of $1,008 because of that mistake (or whatever it was) in computations. The C.S.S. should be required to pay back that money.

Figuring her state base salary according to the form supplied by the Texas Education Agency, division of state funding, our C.S.S. is entitled to monthly paycheck of only $172. Of that amount, $90 is a scholastic population increment based on the number of students in the county.

That was $172 which the state says she is entitled to. And yet her monthly salary last year was $916.66.

Plus an annual expense allowance of $1,080 for office and travel. Where would she need to travel since there are no county schools to visit? Why does she need an office since she has only some manufactured busy work to attend to in place of real duties of office?

I don't know. And I don't know why she would need a secretary to help her — at a monthly cost $500 per month, $6,000 per year.

This robbery of tax dollars is going to be stopped in a year or so, according to Peveto. But it could be impressively reduced NOW by our local county school board of trustees — M.M. Finney, Arlie Carpenter, W.A. Rankin, L.K. Davis, and Bill Crisp.

We sat on the cool grass, in the shade of a maple tree, surrounded by happy people, and listened to the Detroit Concert Band play stirring marches by Sousa.

It was idyllic. Except when I couldn't hear the music, and then it was infuriating. My wife had to restrain me from screaming terrible oaths at those few cretins who were disturbing the peace.

The scene was the Civic Center Plaza at the foot of Woodward in downtown Detroit, on a beautiful Sunday evening. The plaza is midway between busy Jefferson Avenue and the Detroit River, also busy. The boats, all sizes, glided by in splendid silence. And the traffic on Jefferson was a mere hum, heard only when the band rested between numbers.

BUT EVERY ONCE IN A while there was a terrible noise as unmuffled motorcycles roared by. Not even Sousa could withstand the awful din. There was nothing the listeners could do except wait for the idiots to drive their stupid bikes out of hearing range, which was just the other side of the Ohio border.

Probably I was the only one on the plaza who did more than wait. I also asked my wife to use her influence with a merciful God, to see what could be done about having those motorcycles crushed by trucks.

And, on my own, I beseeched the devil to take agonizing possession of every policeman who does not immediately enforce the law which forbids unmuffled motors to shatter innocent eardrums.

Later, my wife said I was silly. Pat said I shouldn't bother getting angry at noisy motorcycles because, like the poor, they shall always be with us. She further said I get unreasonably mad at too many infeasible annoyances which shouldn't bug me that much at all.

It was a marvelous program, with beautiful color photography of the ancient treasures found in Tut's tomb. But King Tut never won Michigan's lottery, so why in hell was it necessary to superimpose that day's winning number over a picture of an incredibly lovely vase made 3,000 years ago?

"You actually counted off the number of seconds that the lottery number blocked your view of the vase," my wife said, "and you never stopped swearing. That was really childish."

"Maybe it was," I admitted. "But you must remember this was a double boiler. I was not only protesting TV's thoughtless use of print - overs and voice - overs to drive viewers schizophrenic. I was also protesting the hypocritical mentality which governs lottery advertising. Do you realize most weekly newspapers cannot legally publish lottery ads because federal law forbids the advertising of gambling through the mail? Many of the 50 states run gambling games and spend millions advertising them on TV and in daily newspapers. But the federal government still says tch, tch, you can't use our mailmen to advertise that awful gambling. Did you ever hear of anything so stupid?"

"Calm down," Pat said. "It is stupid, but there is nothing you can do about it, so relax."

AND THEN SHE UNRELAXED me by itemizing another incident which had wrought my wrath. It happened at Tiger Stadium.

One night it cost me $2 to park in a lot across the street from the ball park. The next night it cost $3 in the same lot. What happened? The Bird was pitching the second night.

I have been parking in that lot for years. Most nights, as the Tigers flopped, I was practically the only customer. I received all sorts of smiles and service for my $2. But then comes Mark Fidrych, and the parking hustler rewards his faithful customers by gouging them for an extra buck.

That really steams me. And it's not the principle of the thing, it's the money. If the Bird's arm never gets better, it will sadden me greatly. But I will feel better when I remember that the parking robbers have lost an excuse to rob.

I know it is silly of me to pound the wall over such minor ripoffs. But I can't help it. In my heart, I know every time I get gyped, the bum who screwed me is going to buy a motorcycle.

Onward and Upward, in righteous indignation.

Canal opponents 'uninformed'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, declaring that public opposition to the proposed Panama Canal treaties is based in part on misconceptions, is launching a series of meetings with officials from around the country to win support for the agreement.

As he called in the governors of Mississippi and Kentucky for a briefing on the agreement, Carter told a news conference Tuesday that the United States would have first rights to involvement in a new canal, if one is built.

And the President, while telling reporters he "wouldn't want to say anyone who disagrees with me is ignorant," added he believes, "The way to arouse public support for the treaty is to let the American people know the advantages to our country of its terms."

Carter acknowledged that "there is not popular support for the Panama Canal treaty" but blamed this on "a great deal of misconception."

The President's actions are part of an administration attempt to counter attacks by foreign-policy conservatives who say the treaties give away too much for what the United States gets in return.

A White House official said that the meeting with the governors, Cliff Finch of Mississippi and Julian Carroll of Kentucky, was the first of several on the agreement.

The governors said after the meeting that Carter sought their help in convincing their citizens of the need for the treaties, but that he specifically asked them not to put pressure on their states' senators.

During Tuesday's news conference, Carter also:

—Defended Budget Director Bert Lance, saying, "I don't know of any allegation that has been made or proven that Bert Lance did anything illegal or even unethical."

A report released last week by the Comptroller of the Currency said no evidence was found to warrant prosecution of Lance, long a friend and adviser of Carter. The report was prepared following an investigation of the personal financial dealings of Lance, who was president of the National Bank of Georgia before becoming director of the Office of Management and Budget.

—Said South African officials had reported to the United States "that they do not have and do not intend to develop nuclear explosive devices for any purpose." He said the United States would continue to monitor the situation.

—Said that the United States would go no further than cautioning Israel that its settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River in occupied territory created "an unnecessary obstacle to peace."

The talk with the governors on the canal treaties produced some success, Finch, who had opposed the agreement before talking with Carter, said later he was not fully convinced he should support it, but he was more inclined to back the President.

The agreement reached two weeks ago in Panama between U.S. and Panamanian negotiators turns control of the canal over to Panama by the year 2000, although the United States would retain the right to defend its neutrality at any time.

G-H school board okays $215,000 budget

The Grandview-Hopkins School District Board of Education members approved a $215,000 budget during the Tuesday night session.

The 1978 budget was $141,000 — but the new budget allows for construction of an auditorium to be completed by Christmas.

Other construction includes enlarging the cafeteria and building a storeroom.

The school has an enrollment of 34 students with four teachers including the superintendent.

T.J. Adkins, superintendent, said Grandview-Hopkins district pays teachers the state salary plus $500 — the same as Pampa.

School begins on Aug. 29. Grades kindergarten through six are taught at the G-H school.

'Rest home' operator charged

WHARTON, Tex. (AP) — Authorities arrested a man and sought a woman today after the discovery of a group of undernourished, incapacitated persons at a rural residence that allegedly operated as a "rest home."

Held in Wharton County jail was Elmer Arnold Tompkins, 34, of Van Nuys, Calif. He was charged with 12 counts of false imprisonment and bond was set at $80,000.

Prisoner swap with Mexico set to begin

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Preparations are under way to begin transferring imprisoned Americans to U.S. authorities as soon as the U.S. Congress passes the legislation necessary to put a prisoner exchange treaty into effect.

Authorities said 16 Americans have been brought to Mexico City from prisons in southwest Mexico during the past week. Other American prisoners will be concentrated in detention centers along the U.S.-Mexican border and in Guadalajara.

Dr. Cesar Lechuga Rojas, director of the agency carrying out the prisoner transfer, said said he had learned Congress might pass the needed legislation in September.

The prisoners will not be "delivered all at once, on the same day, like a blitzkrieg," he said in an interview. "But we want to be ready."

Lechuga said the transfers began a week ago and will continue until all American prisoners are collected in three or four cities.

Both Mexico and the United States have ratified a treaty that would allow many Americans jailed in Mexico and Mexicans imprisoned in the United States to serve out their sentences in their own countries. But the U.S. Congress has delayed passing the enabling legislation.

Jack Kwmp, an investigator for the Wharton County crime task force, said Tompkins helped run the "rest home" at Spanish Camp, a settlement seven miles north of here.

Kemp said warrants also were out for the arrest of Lillian Gobert, 35, also of Van Nuys but formally of Wharton. She was charged with seven counts of false imprisonment.

Kemp said the two were charged in connection with the confinement of the group of mentally disabled armed service veterans and other individuals, some of whom were found locked in an unventilated garage.

Kemp said it is believed the woman unlawfully transported several of the men from California and held them virtually prisoners while she administered their disability and pension checks.

He said 13 persons, including six veterans and two women, were found at the residence. The persons ranged in age from 28 to 50, authorities said.

Kemp said six of the men found at the three bedroom brick residence were taken to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Houston. Two were suffering from severe malnutrition and all needed immediate attention according to the county medical examiner, Kemp said.

The remaining patients were taken to the Texas State Hospital in San Antonio upon the recommendation of the medical examiner.

Tompkins' arrest came Sunday after officers raided the home where they were told a man was being held captive.

"It was pretty grim," said Kemp. "We found five men locked in a garage without ventilation and they all had to use a single gallon can for a toilet."

He said authorities first learned of the Spanish Camp operation from a California woman who was searching for her son.

Kemp said the missing man was found at the home and that he immediately asked to be taken back home to California.

Hospitalized for observation

A Pampa woman, Ruby C. Howard, 35, of 932 S. Nelson, was hospitalized overnight for observation following a two-car accident in the 500 block of E. Francis Tuesday. Pampa Patrolman Johnny Bennett and Franklin Herring, Metropolitan Ambulance attendant, move the injured woman onto a stretcher as Steve Horton looks on.

Ms. Howard's car was in collision with a car driven by Emory D. Crockett, 71, of McLean. Crockett was cited for failure to yield at a stop sign. Ms. Howard was to be dismissed from Highland General Hospital this morning.

Vance talks 'move'

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met today with Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and hoped to get down to the chief business of his trip to China, closer relations between the U.S. and Chinese governments.

The talks now "will be moving along at an accelerated rate," a U.S. spokesman said. But it was considered unlikely that the Chinese would moderate their demand, reiterated only last week by Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, that the United States cut all diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan as the price for full diplomatic relations with the Communist government.

Carter Administration officials have promised not to abandon the Nationalists, who fled to the island after the Communist military victory on the mainland in 1949. But there has been speculation that the United States might offer to break formal diplomatic relations while maintaining economic relations and its guarantee to protect the Nationalists from invasion.

In view of Hua's speech, this did not seem to be enough of a concession to get the Chinese to agree to exchange ambassadors. Teng, twice purged and twice restored to power, posed smilingly for photographers as he received Vance and lectured American correspondents accompanying the secretary. Now 73, his handshake was firm, his eyes clear and he appeared sprightly.

"I have read some of what you are writing," he told the journalists with a smile. "Some of it is accurate, some is not." Offering Vance a cigarette, he commented: "Whoever smokes can help himself. Act in accordance with the Chairman's slogan, self-reliance. Use your own hands and cloth and feed yourself."

After that bow to the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, he recalled the hardships of the Communists' life in the 1930s after the Long March to Yenan. "We found it necessary at that time for us to be able to feed and clothe our own army as well as many patriots and young people who numbered some tens of thousands and had come from various parts of the country," Teng said.

He told of living in caves, raising pigs and scratching crops out of poor land. The message seemed clear: China will overcome its economic problems through determination and hard work. Before his meeting with Teng, Vance held his third 2½-hour session with Foreign Minister Huang Hua. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Huang "made some points about normalization" of relations between Washington and Peking, but he refused to elaborate.

Huang was the highest-ranking Chinese official Vance saw prior to the meeting with Teng. Vance met Teng once before during a private visit to Peking in 1975.

There was still no indication whether Hua would receive Vance before the secretary leaves China on Thursday.

Vance, looking for a formula to better ties without casting Taiwan adrift, has been emphasizing the mutual interest of Peking and Washington in countering Soviet influence in such areas as Africa.

Former executives attach Ma Bell

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., its image scarred by allegations from two former high executives, opened its defense today against charges leveled in a $29 million damage suit.

Louis Bailey, a corporate official from the St. Louis headquarters of Southwestern Bell, was the first witness called and was expected to testify throughout the day.

The lawsuit was brought by fired executive James Ashley and the family of T. O. Gravitt, who was Bell's top Texas official when he committed suicide in October 1974.

Bailey was Gravitt's immediate supervisor during the period in which Gravitt was the Texas vice president of the company. Bailey testified that he was largely responsible for Gravitt's promotion to the Texas post and approved pay raises which increased Gravitt's salary from $41,000 annually in 1970 to $80,000 at the time of his death.

Bailey said he had a good working relationship with Gravitt and Gravitt never complained to him about any of his duties.

The plaintiffs rested their case Tuesday afternoon after 11 days of testimony from 22 witnesses and 21 sworn depositions collected since the suit was filed 33 months ago in state court.

Most of the allegations against Bell stem from a suicide message and pages of attached notes which Gravitt left in the study of his Dallas home when he killed himself Oct. 17, 1974.

The suit alleges that Gravitt was hounded to his suicide and Ashley wrongfully fired as a result of the company probe.

The Gravitt notes accused Bell of operating illegal political "slush funds," engaging in unfair rate-fixing tactics and allowing company executives to spend money wastefully on themselves.

Bell, in a counterclaim in the suit, charges Gravitt and Ashley defrauded the company of about $30,000, mostly by filing false travel and expense vouchers.

Ashley and the Gravitt family claim the company investigation destroyed the two executives' reputations and was designed to drive them out of the Bell power structure because they were critical of certain practices.

Bell attorney Hubert Green, in his opening argument to the 16-man, two-woman jury more than two weeks ago, warned there would be a lot of "mudslinging" in the case.

He said the company maintains it has the right to investigate its employees.

Ashley was suspended from his $55,000-a-year job in San Antonio on Oct. 9, 1974, by an official who told him one of the reasons for the action was alleged sexual relations with female Bell employees. He was fired Oct. 31, 1974.

The plaintiffs contend Gravitt was driven to insanity and suicide by the investigation which Bell security agents questioned employees about alleged wrongdoing by Gravitt and Ashley, including whether they ever had sex with them.

Earlier, a psychiatrist testified for the plaintiffs that the Bell probe drove Gravitt to insanity and suicide.

Farmers Union leader to speak Thursday here

The president of the Rocky Mountain Farmers Union, headquartered in Denver, will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Gray County Courthouse Annex at a meeting of the Gray - Roberts Counties Farmers Union.

John Stencel will speak on the protest actions being planned by Colorado and Wyoming farmers and on nationwide protest efforts.

"This will be an open meeting," said Sheridan Hamby, president of the local Farmers Union chapter. "All producers and interested persons may attend whether or not they are our members."

mass mail-in of boxes of wheat and the parade of protesting farmers "were a success and our message was carried across the state through the news media. We have heard from farmers everywhere who have been inspired to continue efforts to educate the public and seek changes in government policy."

She said the "ultimate goal" of the protest actions "is to get a fair price for our labors."

The next form of organized protest, according to Mrs. Hamby, will be the posting of signs on co-operating area farms to inform passing motorists that "This Farm Will Strike."

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock star Rod Stewart has been sued for $15 million by Swedish actress Britt Ekland, with whom he lived for 2½ years.

The couple split up 10 days ago when Stewart moved out of the home they shared in the exclusive Holmby Hills section of Los Angeles.

Miss Ekland's complaint states that the couple began living together two days after they met in March 1975, and that a few weeks later they publicly announced their "love relationship" and intent to de-emphasize her career to further his.

The actress claims that she helped to promote his record albums, applied his makeup at rock concerts and counseled and supported him in his career.

Her help contributed to $10 million of Stewart's earnings and another pending $30 million recording contract, the complaint states.

Miss Ekland asks the court to order Stewart to continue paying the mortgage on her home and to pay her $5,000 a month support until the suit is settled.

MADRID (AP) — Charging that she received no more than $250 for taxicab fare money from producer Tony Navarro during filming of "Widow's Nest", actress Gina Lollobrigida said she is going home to Italy. "He didn't pay me, so I didn't work," declared Miss Lollobrigida, who arrived here Aug. 3 for the movie, about a widow who goes to Cuba.

Navarro, an American, was not available for comment Tuesday.

The film also stars American actress Patricia Neal and Italian actress Valentina Cortese.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Leland C. Nielsen will be asked Monday to settle the battle over who owns a painting of Frank Sinatra in a dispute that involves the artist and singer Keely Smith.

Others claiming the oil painting are Shirley Newman and Thomas Twomey, who became involved in confiscation of the painting by the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

The DEA seized the Innocenzo Dario work from the home of Ms. Newman. She claims the painting was given to her by Twomey as collateral for a $7,000 loan.

Singer Smith, according federal public defender John Cleary, claims in turn that the work was stolen from her.

Meanwhile, Dario filed papers asking that the painting be returned to him on grounds he is "the painter of the painting and the true and rightful owner."

DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who's afraid her husband won't be on hand when she has her baby, because she's due Jan. 1, and her husband already has tickets for the Rose Bowl game.

I was born on New Year's Day, and I'm sure I wasn't the only baby who had to compete with the Rose Bowl game. My mother's doctor (an avid football fan) gave her strict instructions not to come to the hospital until after the game was over! My mother, an obedient registered nurse, was used to taking orders from a doctor, so she waited until the game was over and she barely made it to the hospital in time. Those on the scene tell me that I was very nearly delivered by a neighbor lady.

NEW YEAR'S BABY (1954)

DEAR ABBY: Read on for another situation in which the doctor was a football freak:

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the expectant mother whose husband loved football reminded me of my own experience.

The day my baby was born I awakened my husband early in the morning to tell him I thought we should call my doctor. We dressed and waited for a grocery store to open because those were depression days and we had no phone. We phoned the doctor from the store, and he told us to get to the hospital fast. We had no car, so we called a cab, a terrific extravagance for a couple living on $16 a week. (Our college degrees cut no ice!)

When we got to the hospital, my doctor said I would probably not deliver before evening. Around noon my doctor invited my husband to go to the football game with him, so the two of them took off.

You guessed it! At 1:20 p.m. a staff doctor I had never seen before brought my nine-pound baby boy into the world!

My "baby" will be 44 in October. He has two fine children of his own, and times have changed because HE was present when they were born.

MRS. P.H.R., CINCINNATI

DEAR ABBY: I'll put my bowling nut up against that lady's football nut any day.

When I was expecting my fourth baby, I knew from experience that the baby was on its way—but in a hurry. So I threw a few things into my overnight bag and my husband drove me to the hospital.

The doctor on duty called my doctor and said it wouldn't be long.

My husband kissed me on the forehead and ran down the hall, saying he had to bowl in a tournament that night! I didn't whine or fuss him out because I knew the team needed him. (He was top scorer.) They won the trophy, and I finally had a baby girl after three boys!

MAGGIE

DEAR ABBY: Please tell that lady who's expecting her baby on Jan. 1 that she doesn't have to worry about competing with the Rose Bowl game in 1978.

Jan. 1 will fall on Sunday next year, so the Rose Bowl game will be played on Monday, Jan. 2.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB —

During my four years in high school I participated in varsity sports and cheerleading year round. From all this activity I developed big muscles in my calves and thighs. Is there any possible way that I can get rid of these muscles or thin out my legs?

DEAR READER — A muscle stays as large as it needs to be to have the strength to do the work it is required to do regularly. That means if a muscle is not required to do strength work it will begin to get smaller. We usually say that to maintain your muscle size and strength you must do strength exercises at least once a week.

Apparently if you are not doing sports now the only weight your calves and legs must lift is your own body. Under these circumstances, if you are not obese and have fat over your thighs the size of your muscles may be a familial characteristic.

Those genes we inherit do have their effects. That is why we have beef cattle and dairy cows — one for muscle, the other for milk. Draft horses for work are heavy muscular animals while race horses have different bodies.

Don't try too hard to change your natural state. Just get rid of fat if you already have some. To give you a better idea of what controls muscle size I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Keep in mind those muscles, if they are muscles and not fat, may help keep you from getting fat later in life.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My son is 18 months old. The children's specialist I take him to thinks he has a heart murmur which could be innocent. My family doctor disagrees with him. What is a heart murmur? How can you check it?

My father and father-in-law both died young because of heart failure — my father at 48 and my father-in-law at 50. I am 37 and my wife is 29. My blood pressure is not too high and my wife is in good health. Your opinion on this will be appreciated.

DEAR READER — Just as a murmuring brook is a rapid stream that makes a noise a murmur in the heart is a sound made from the turbulence of blood circulating.

Murmurs in the heart and blood vessels then represent the vibrations of circulation. In young children with rapid heart beats and thin chests these sounds are easily heard and may have no medical significance at all. In other instances the vibrations are caused by defects inside the heart or arteries. Such defects can be caused from damage to the heart valves or arteries or from birth defects in the chambers of the heart.

Clearly, your pediatrician thinks the murmur he hears is not important. It is probably not a very loud murmur or there would be no disagreement about its presence. Incidentally, an innocent murmur may be present on one examination and not on another depending on how rapid the circulation is — which may also be related to whether the patient is resting or anxious.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Do you know of anything that will remove mildew from a tablecloth I crocheted out of cotton thread? A flower pot sat on it all winter so mildew spots appeared under the pot. — PEARL.

DEAR PEARL — You failed to mention the color but we will presume your cloth is white. Try laundering it and then spreading out on the grass to dry in the hot sun. If the stain remains apply lemon juice and salt to damp spots and put in the direct sunlight. Rinse thoroughly. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the many advertisements that show children with horrid manners. I work with small children and find it very difficult to teach them good manners when they are constantly subjected to ads, commercials and even children's programs that show them chewing with their mouths open or eating with their fingers. So many of these characters are appealing to the youngsters and I feel it is a great disadvantage that advertisers cannot find a more appropriate way to introduce their products. — SUSIE.

Capsule reviews prepared by the American Library Assn. By Betsy Hearne

When summer boredom strikes the home front — which it inevitably does after the first fling of "school's out" fades — it's a good idea to know about some of the better new books for children. Two of them are custom tailored to the season: Robert Lipsyte's "One Fat Summer" and Lois Lowry's "A Summer to Die."

Lipsyte is a veteran sports writer, and in a way this book is about shaping up — when you're 14, male, fat and stuck in a summer resort back in the '50s. Bob Marks is the hero of his own first-person narrative, but he doesn't know it until the end of the book. Then he finds out that a hero is not necessarily thin and tough — both of which he has become — but someone with compassionate instincts for doing the right thing — which he is becoming.

It is satisfying to watch a more than 200-pound self-loather get himself an exhausting summer job, stuck to it, defy some rural hecklers as well as the more insidious hold of his loving family, and reject his own diving champion role model. Lipsyte builds sympathy, tension and nicely mixed — if not always subtle — feeling for each character, a feat which junior high readers will appreciate.

Where Lipsyte is smooth and coolly funny, Lowry has a gentle, perfectly pitched style — also first person narrative — for the simple saga of an older sister's death from leukemia. Although the book faces each stage honestly, it has a natural flow that is far from depressing. In fact, the family is such a warm one that a reader feels enriched by having lived through their tragedy with them. And part of their armory is humor.

things will enjoy Carol Farley's "Loosen Your Ears" which shines through as an integral part of facing life and death.

At the beginning of the summer, narrator Meg feels at loose ends, but by the end she has approached adulthood. She has watched her father finish his book, her mother finish her quilt, and her sister finish her life. Meg is learning to express herself through photography, an interest that promises life-long work and that is heightened during the summer when she records the birth of her friend's baby. A lot happens in this book, but the action never strikes a falsely overdramatic note, something that junior high readers, again, will appreciate. The pattern of life and death here is quiet and true.

Somewhat younger readers rooting for the funny side of Ears. Here's a bunch of stories spun by an old man recalling his crazy family. Melvin, who started his life as a tumor, Homer, who wanted to see his own skeleton. Gramma Hemmer, who was stubborn as a mule but not quite as bright. Cousin Ernie, who finally got rid of his tape worm by eating a few too many pumpkin seeds. Great Uncle Oscar, who predicted the end of the world and then waited it out in the root cellar.

The tone of the tales is folksy, the twists in them clever and unexpected, the people live-wired. Farley creates the kind of rural setting that lets contemporary kids into the past without a lot of preaching about how much better everything used to be. The sense of family is strong, yet its members are invitingly fallible and erratic like families these days. These people, however, are structured. They get on with life and make the best of it, for all their quirks and problems.

Beginning readers and picture-book listeners will get a kick out of Tomie de Paola's "The Quicksand Book" and James Stevenson's "Could Be Worse." Both titles poke fun, the first at pompous Young Jungle Boy lecturing to Jungle Girl who has fallen into quicksand and obviously needs a helping hand. Instead she gets an explanation of scientific principles and safety precautions, which gets her nowhere but deeper. By the end of the book, though, Jungle Boy gets a taste of his own medicine. Besides the good joke and interesting information, there's a final set of instructions for making quicksand — a summer day's backyard project. Parents, prepare yourselves.

Where de Paola's illustrations stress shapes, color patterns, and flat, funny figures, Stevenson, a well-known "New Yorker" cartoonist, sticks to line, movement and splash in his watercolor drawings. But he has the same droll sense of absurdity. Stodgy old Grandpa always with him. A shy, retiring sort, Barnes goes Hollywood with a vengeance and some of the adventures that befall him and Gene.

Others include Flash, the promoter always sustained by his dream of the big score, and Mulligan, the poet, who "loved to make chili but he couldn't help making it so hot that no one but him could eat it."

A most engaging bunch and a most enjoyable book even though it ends sadly.

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass. (AP) — In 1837 when Mary Lyon, the founder of Mount Holyoke College here was looking for a name for her new institution, a friend from nearby Amherst suggested "Pangynaskean Seminary."

This Greek term for "all the powers of woman — physical, intellectual and moral," — never caught on, but it caught the attention of the press which laughingly reported the proposal. The unexpected publicity paid off.

Suddenly, Lyon's fledgling institution, which was based upon what was then considered the daring and revolutionary idea of higher education for women, became known in households all over New England. Then there was a burst of financial and moral support for the venture which a few months later was named for a nearby mountain — Mount Holyoke.

Jurors picked to hear Hill case

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys began the selection today of the 12 jurors who will hear testimony in the trial of a $7.6 million damage suit resulting from the death of a Houston plastic surgeon.

The son, widow and mother of Dr. John Hill are suing Houston millionaire oilman Ash Robinson. They allege Robinson arranged the death of Hill, his former son-in-law, in revenge for the death of Robinson's only daughter.

Hill was shot to death on the steps of his plush River Oaks home Sept. 24, 1972. At the time of his death, Hill was awaiting trial on a charge he killed his first wife, Joan Robinson Hill, through medical neglect in 1969.

Attorneys have indicated each prospective juror may be interviewed individually, a procedure seldom used in a civil court case.

State District Court Judge Arthur C. Lesh Jr. said the questioning of the jury panel will begin in the jury assembly room because the larger room would be more convenient to question a large panel.

No criminal charges have been filed against Robinson, 79, and his lawyers have denied the allegations made in the civil suit brought by Robert Ashton Hill, 17, Connie Hill and Myra Hill.

Three persons were charged in Hill's death. Bobby Wayne Vandiver, 36, charged as the hired triggerman, was shot to death in 1974 prior to going on trial. Marcia McKittrick, who has testified Robinson was the mastermind in a plot to have Hill killed, now is serving a 10-year term in connection with the alleged conspiracy. Lilla Paulus is serving a 35-year sentence after being convicted of taking $25,000 to find someone to kill the plastic surgeon.

Lesher refused Tuesday to impose a gag rule during the trial.

W. Robert Brown, one of Robinson's lawyers, called for the order prohibiting parties involved from discussing the case with newsmen.

In rejecting the motion, Lesher said he believes the professionalism of newsmen and the code of ethics governing lawyers will be sufficient to assure proper news coverage of the trial.

Some 40 witnesses for the plaintiff are expected to be called during the trial which could last a month to six weeks.

His talent discoveries have included Arnold, Chet Atkins and the late Hank Williams. The Stars of Tomorrow Talent Contest will precede Fowler's show and cash prizes will be awarded through third place. Lie catches up with soldier

PORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Although he was only 12 when he fought in two of the biggest sea battles in Naval history, Calvin Graham of Fort Worth still is being outgunned by military rules.

Graham, who was injured aboard the USS South Dakota during WWII, is seeking an honorable discharge.

He even participated in the sea battles at Santa Cruz and Guadalcanal.

But Graham is not entitled to an honorable discharge.

The reason? W.L. Gulley, director of the White House military office, said Tuesday Graham does not qualify for veteran benefits because he lied about his age to enlist.

"The statutes in regard to fraudulent enlistment are quite explicit. Enlistment under false pretenses cannot be counted as creditable for any veteran's benefits," Gulley said in a letter to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

And since an individual who fraudulently enlisted has never been a member of the armed forces, Gulley added, "he cannot be formally discharged."

"I can assure you Mr. Graham's youthful service is appreciated and he has been given every consideration within the laws governing such matters," Gulley said.

Members the USS South Dakota Association had a reunion recently and vowed to help Graham. Among the ship's officers is Sargent Shriver, brother-in-law of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Ray Karnoff, association executive director, said that members may solicit Shriver to have Kennedy introduce special legislation granting the discharge.

"I remember the kid," said Karnoff, who was a pharmacist's mate aboard the ship. "He helped me save some of those lives during that battle."

"We read your (Star-Telegram) story and half the crew members sent me letters about it. When we got together, they couldn't believe he hadn't gotten the discharge yet," Karnoff said.

"We'll do anything we can, but I don't know if it will do any good in Washington."

Karnoff added that "If the kid went through hell and back—which it was—you'd think they'd give him something besides a piece of paper."

Refugees rescued at sea

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Saying that life in Viet Nam was "like being in hell," 15 refugees were hoping for freedom when a British tanker docks here today.

The South Vietnamese were rescued by the tanker Cavendish July 9, after spending 15 days at sea in a small boat off the South China Sea.

Charles Wilcox, captain of the Cavendish, told a South African newspaper during a stop-over that the refugees had only a one-day supply of food and water when they were rescued 300 miles from Saigon.

He added the Vietnamese told him that 51 ships had ignored their distress signals before the Cavendish stopped after the crew discovered the boat and its white SOS flag.

The refugees, after meeting with Immigration and Naturalization Service officials on debarking, will be taken to temporary quarters in the area, according to a spokesman for the Catholic Diocese of Corpus Christi. Their resettlement is being coordinated by the U.S. Catholic Conference.

The refugees include eight children, three sets of parents and another adult.

Newton strain of wheat resists all

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas Agricultural Experiment Station has joined its counterparts in Oklahoma and Texas in finding much merit and no overriding faults in a new variety of wheat which resists soil-borne mosaic virus, a major scourge of the crops.

The semidwarf strain is named Newton, after the city in Kansas which was the principal center of its testing.

The action of the experiment stations means Newton will be available to wheat farmers for planting in the fall of 1978.

A commercial seed company developed the strain. It is described as a high-yielding cross between Scout, one of the most popular varieties in Kansas, and Mexican spring wheat.

Second and third generation plants were grown on Kansas State University experimental plots at Manhattan, Hays and Hutchinson. Performance trials began in 1974.

A report prepared by Dr. Floyd W. Smith, director of the experiment station, and Dr. Elmer Heyne, wheat research geneticist, made these points:

—Soil-borne mosaic, on the average, infests two million acres of Kansas wheat each year. (Kansas farmers recently have harvested 11 million to 12 million acres of wheat each season.)

—Newton will be particularly useful in that part of the state south of Interstate 70 between Kansas City and Salina and a diagonal line from Salina southwest.

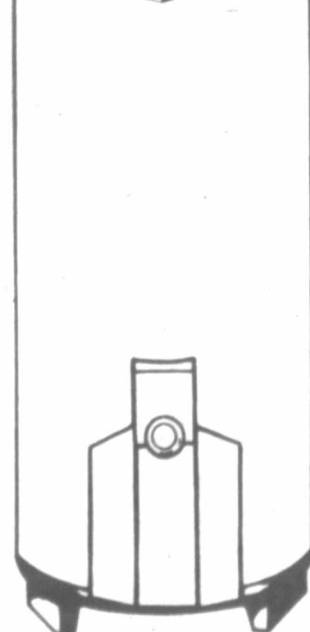

—In infested soils, it yielded 25 per cent more than Centurk, heretofore the most resistant variety, and two to four times more than varieties susceptible to soil-borne mosaic.

—In non-infested soils it yielded 5 to 10 per cent more wheat than Eagle, Larned and Sage, which all are high yielders.

—Its test weight is average, equal to that of Eagle; and, like Scout, it resists leaf rust and stem rust. It is taller than most semidwarfs, has good straw strength, and equals Triumph in winter hardiness.

—Its protein content is excellent, and it has other qualities that millers and bakers look for.

Sacco-Vanzetti grew into symbol

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Fifty years later, the doubts, the anger and the bitterness have outlived most of the people who made the names Sacco and Vanzetti, synonyms for thwarted justice.

Almost every year since the two Italian immigrants were put to death on Aug. 23, 1927, this anniversary has been observed with some kind of protest or appeal.

The case could easily have faded into history, remembered only as the death of two men, a part of a time and mood long past. But instead, it has grown into a symbol. And it is championed by a second and third generation intent on keeping alive the memory of two obscure men.

Today was officially declared Sacco and Vanzetti memorial day in Massachusetts.

New York City also intended to declare a memorial day. But it was canceled after Spencer Sacco, a grandson, objected to a statement by Mayor Abraham Beame in favor of capital punishment.

Historians say the issue of their guilt or innocence will probably never be settled. It is still debated.

The crime itself was brutally simple. A carload of gunmen robbed the Slater & Morrill Shoe Co. in South Braintree, Mass., of $15,776. They shot to death a paymaster and a guard.

Three weeks later, police arrested Nicola Sacco, a worker at another shoe company, and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, a fish peddler, and charged them with murder. They were tried and convicted a year later.

They were avowed anarchists; they spoke with foreign accents; they were aliens in a culture still dominated by Yankees.

When they stood trial, three years after the Bolshevik Revolution, the nation was upset by a fear of radicals. And so the doubts persist.

Did they get a fair trial? Were they guilty? Or were they convicted on trumped up evidence by a jury conscious of their politics and foreignness? Did they die because of prejudice?

In 1944, a group that included Eleanor Roosevelt and Walter Reuther, the auto workers union leader, offered the state a memorial bas relief of Sacco and Vanzetti. They wanted it set up on Boston Common. The state refused.

In 1959, a resolution asking posthumous pardons for the two men was brought before a committee of the state legislature. At a packed, emotional hearing, the committee declined. It said the legislature did not have such power.

In 1967, the 40th anniversary of the execution, a group called the Sacco-Vanzetti Commemoration Committee staged a candle-light vigil in front of the State House.

In 1973, the National Park Service offered to make the county courthouse in Dedham where they were convicted a national landmark. The county commissioners angrily refused.

The same year, Sacco's brother, Saino, asked the governor to proclaim the two men innocent. But then Gov. Francis W. Sargent said he would leave the matter "to the judgment of legal scholars and to the judgment of history."

President pushes to ratify ERA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will reaffirm his personal support of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment by meeting with the leaders of more than 70 groups planning to march Friday in support of the ERA, the White House says.

The President also will proclaim Friday as Women's Equality Day.

"The President is not only sensitive to Women's Equality Day, but is taking the opportunity to reaffirm his absolute belief in the ERA," presidential assistant Margaret Costanza said Monday.

Rustlers take trees

MONTESANO, Wash. (AP) — Stealthy loggers equipped with muzzled chainsaws and pickup trucks are the Pacific Northwest's counterpart to the cattle rustlers of the prairies. They're stealing majestic red cedars worth millions of dollars.

Estimates of the loss to public and private landowners in western Washington range from $6 million to $17 million annually and, until recently, little could be done to halt it.

However, Curt Janhunen, Grays Harbor County prosecutor, says a new state law, effective Sept. 21, will encourage some "very aggressive law enforcement."

Stealing the towering Western Red Cedars is hard work. But a "midnight logger" can fill the back of a pickup truck in a matter of hours and peddle the wood by daybreak to a mill operator for as much as $300.

A few tree raiders have rented helicopters that can swoop down in a forest and quickly whisk away hundreds of dollars of cedar.

Because many thefts are from national forest lands, the FBI has joined other agencies investigating cedar rustling.

The new law requires sheriff's offices around the state to investigate all applications for permits to harvest the trees. The sheriff will be required to contact the owner of the land on which the cutting is to be done to make sure it has been authorized.

The new law also will place strict record-keeping requirements on the hundreds of cedar mills in the state, many of which Janhunen says operate "solely or primarily on stolen cedar."

'Sacco and Vanzetti Day'

Does proclamation wash away past?

By Boyd Lewis

NEW YORK — (NEA) — On the 50th anniversary of their death in the Massachusetts electric chair, Bartolomeo Vanzetti and Nicola Sacco have received their reprieve from the governor.

It comes too late and from a governor they would never know. But in a very real sense the proclamation by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis which sets aside Aug. 23 as "Sacco and Vanzetti Day" does retrieve the conscience of Massachusetts.

Fifty years ago this month I stood by the windows of the governor's office in the Massachusetts State House on Beacon Hill. As a young reporter for the United Press (now United Press International) I had come to interview Gov. Alvan T. Fuller about the possibility that he would grant a stay of execution. Two Italian radicals stood condemned to death for the murder of a paymaster and his guard at South Braintree, Mass., April 20, 1920, almost seven years earlier — seven years of court battles, and of worldwide demonstrations demanding that stay.

By this August of 1977 the Sacco-Vanzetti case had become inflated from personal tragedy of murder and legal peril into one of the world's greatest cause celebres. Radicals paraded and rioted in Tokyo, Vienna, Buenos Aires, virtually every major city.

And now as Governor Fuller and I looked out of his windows onto Beacon Street a motley group of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers — Greenwich Village "pinks," labor union men, society intellectuals — paraded in front of the State House carrying placards calling upon Fuller to halt the execution.

Fuller stood frowning for a few moments, then with a gesture toward the demonstrators turned to me and said: "I'm not going to let them tell me what to do."

And he did not. With reinforcement from the report of a three-man commission of inquiry consisting of two college presidents and a judge, Fuller allowed the archaic Massachusetts legal system, with its limitations on the right of appeal, to throw the electric switch at Charlestown State Prison.

Never in the years of legal infighting had the lawyers for the two Italian anarchists been able to get retrial by citing the obvious prejudice of presiding Judge Webster Thayer. Now when the men were about to be strapped into the electric chair, the burden of world prejudice flowed in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti and against Massachusetts' justice.

No one could read the minds of the two college presidents and the judge. One could only read their "findings," a strange and ambiguous document. One could read the mind of Alvan Fuller, that pillar of the establishment, who had earned wealth by selling Packard automobiles to the affluent of New England, had opened his mind to me with that single sentence: "I'm not going to let them tell me what to do."

BOSTON POLICE drove horses through the crowds on the Common during a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration. Speakers and spectators were arrested.

To comprehend today the motivations of Governor Fuller, Judge Thayer and others — and also to comprehend the action just taken by Governor Dukakis — one must understand the temper of the time. U.S. Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer had conducted wholesale deportations of "reds" in 1919-20 under a program later condemned by high courts as "misconduct." Felix Frankfurter, later to become a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, wrote in "A critical analysis for lawyers and laymen" in 1927:

"Boston was one of the worst centers of this lawlessness and hysteria. Its proximity to industrial communities having a large proportion of foreign labor and a history of past ugly industrial conflicts lent to the lawless activities of government officials the widespread support of influential public opinion."

At the time of the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti, leading Boston bankers took out full-page newspaper ads about the "red peril."

I heard many people say: "They're reds. They ought to burn." A 21-year-old reporter who had spent much of the final year sitting in courtrooms and law offices trying to make meaningful news from frustrations, failure and legal flimflam had to file his own reservations against the mass judgment of his home state's establishment.

Could this self-taught philosopher have committed a violent holdup-murder? Could Sacco, a windbag and a threatener, have done so?

Hubenak calls commissioner of ag 'clown'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, says he wants to be Texas' new agriculture commissioner because of the "clowning" attitude of the appointed incumbent.

"Texas agriculture is not a laughing matter — it never was and never will be," the 46-year-old legislator told a news conference Tuesday in announcing that he was a candidate for the 1978 campaign.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, former aide to Gov. Dolph Briscoe, was named by Briscoe to be agriculture commissioner when Commissioner John C. White resigned to become deputy U.S. secretary of agriculture.

Brown, a frequent after-dinner speaker, has said he will seek election to the job in 1978.

"Today we are witnessing the office operating by an appointee — a temporary commissioner of agriculture — who apparently believes that he is solving some of the state's problems by telling funny stories and reciting nursery rhymes," Hubenak said.

"Agriculture in Texas must not become a mistreated stepchild, and we need to institute new ideas and new programs to bolster the products and incomes of our farm and ranch populations," he said.

He said he was born and reared in Iowa Colony, Brazoria County, and went to school in Alvin, Alvin Junior College and the University of Houston. He had additional work in the University of Nebraska and the University of Colorado.
