Freeze warning extends to S. Texas

By The Associated Press

Arctic air roared into Texas today on the heels of a winter storm, sending the mercury plunging and threatening to spread sub-freezing weather as far south as the semi-tropical Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The National Weather Service issued a freeze warning for tonight for the Winter Garden, coastal bend and Lower Rio Grande Valley area. Temperatures are expected to dip to near freezing in the Valley.

Temperatures at the freezing mark would not seriously harm the valley's citrus crop, still trying to come back after a disastrous freeze in 1983, but could harm some of the area's vegetables.

Citrus industry officials say temperature must dip to at least 27 degrees and remain there for several hours to cause damage to citrus fruit and trees.

The leading edge of the frigid air pushed across the Panhandle, South Plains and western portions of North Texas early today. Temperatures plunged into the teens and lower 20s in the area covered by the frigid air.

Lows tonight will range from near 10 in northwest sections of of North Texas to near 20 in southeast portions of North Texas. Lows tonight in West Texas will range from near 10 in the Panhandle to the mid 20s in Southwest Texas. In South Texas, lows tonight will range from the upper teens in the Hill Country to near freezing in the Valley.

The Arctic air moved into the state after a winter storm moved across much of West Texas and veered northeastward out of the state after reaching western portions of North Texas.

Some snowfall was reported in western sections of North Texas, but the storm veered away from the Dallas-Fort Worth area late Thursday. Only some freezing drizzle, sleet and snow flurries were reported in the heavily populated area.

Forecasters had expected several inches of snow to fall after a bout with freezing rain and sleet.

A travelers advisory was in effect early today for northwest sections of North Texas, including the cities of Wichita Falls, Abilene and Gainesville. The travelers advisory for other portions of North Texas was canceled early today.

The area covered by the travelers advisory was north of a line from Sherman to Eastland to Ballinger.

Local paid staff joined with fireman's union

The Snyder Professional Fire Fighter's Association — composed of the nine paid firemen serving the local department — has joined the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAF), a nationwide union organization.

With the action, spokesmen for the group Thursday noted, "We shall not strike or take active part in any sympathetic strikes as we are formed to protect the lives and property of the community in case of fire or other disaster."

Officers for the newly formed union local note Snyder joins other paid firemen from such area cities as Abilene, Sweetwater and Big Spring in their IAF membership.

Ronnie Clawson, elected president of the local, said 90 percent of the professional firefighters in the U.S. belong to IAF.

He said the IAF provides such services as updates regarding laws which affect firemen, in particular labor laws.

Other information provided through membership includes the latest information regarding safety equipment used by fire fighters.

In addition to Clawson, other officers for the local are Bobby Hataway Sr., vice president; Jerry Dickey, secretary-treasurer; and Kyle Cox, assistant secretary-treasurer.

The group notes, "It shall be the intent of this association to sanction the International Association of Fire Fighters, and to assist that body in any way possible and to discourage friction and ill will among its members."

Regarding the IAF, its stated purpose is to "organize all paid fire fighters."

Specific areas of support noted in its charter include compensation for services; settlement of grievances; and work toward "just and reasonable hours and working conditions."

Other goals noted include improved fire fighting skills — to include establishing fire fighting schools; better relations between fire fighters and their employers; and the formation of sick and death benefit funds for firemen.

Also, to encourage the formation of local unions, state and provencial associations; and to "cultivate friendship and fellowship among its members."

Reduced tax need for WTC's budget said 3 years away

Western Texas College can hope to reduce its local tax requirements by as much as 25 percent after 1988, trustees for the college were told Friday during the institution's annual outside audit report.

This estimate was given by Larry Anderson of the CPA firm Anderson, Vestal and West, who made his firm's report to the board.

Anderson pointed to the college's bonded indebtedness, which will be retired in 1988, as the reason for the projected decrease in taxes.

He noted, however, this assumes no major reductions in state funding for WTC.

Anderson's audit of the college's operation was "unqualified," indicating no specific areas of concern were found.

He pointed out this judgement took into account the reported loss of some $24,000 in funds at WTC this fall.

"When you consider the overall scope of the college's finances, the theft loss is relatively immaterial," Anderson said.

From an accounting standpoint, he added it is not specifically addressed in the outside audit, "Since we have pretty well fixed the figure and expect the college to recover these funds through restitution."

Anderson's report reflected the college's financial condition as of Aug. 31.

At that time, the institution reported assets in excess of $14.9 million. This compares to the same period last year, when assets of more than $14.4 million were reported.

The largest share of these assets is comprised of campus buildings, property and equipment. These are now estimated at $11.1 million, up from last year's figure of $10.6 million.

Regarding actual cash on hand and investments, the college reported some $3.2 million. Of this figure, some $2.6 million is drawing interest in investments.

Regarding liabilities, the report noted some $2.2 million comprised mainly of bonded indebtedness still owed.

The college is currently still paying on two bond issues authorized in 1970 and 1972 — amounts which financed the two construction phases for the WTC

IRS says 14 now due undelivered refunds

Fourteen undelivered Internal Revenue Service refund checks for Snyder residents were reported this week.

The notifications were part of the IRS's 1985 list of undeliverable tax refunds for the North Texas Region served by the Dallas Taxpayer Service Office.

Some 5,800 tax refund checks representing almost $2.7 million were mailed in the region, then returned to the IRS, it was reported.

While 14 carried a Snyder address, none were reported for patrons served through the other Scurry County post offices in Hermleigh, Fluvanna and Ira.

The most common reason for the return of checks was failure to notify the IRS or the post office of a forwarding address.

The IRS now asks friends or relatives of the taxpayer to notify them of a correct address.

The department can be contacted by dialing a toll free number, 1-800-424-1040. Snyder taxpayers owed refunds include:

—Ysrael A. & Jonita Balderas.
—Jessie & Maria V. Contreras.
—Irene Garza.
—Raul & Ninfa Gaytan.
—Patrick L. Goff.
—Ricky & Debby Hill.

"If you feel guilty upon getting up from the dining room table after a repast of Thanksgiving vittles, we have some consolation for you.

"Even if you and your family gorged on turkey and dressing and all the fixin's, you didn't come within a country mile of history's most famous feast.

"Back in 1465, at Cawood Castle in England, some 2,500 people ate 113 oxen, six wild bulls, 1,000 sheep, 2,000 each of geese, pigs and chickens, 12 porpoises and 4,000 cold venison pastries.

"Wonder what kind of gravy they served?

"We suppose the second most famous feast came about from the old sayin' that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned.

"Back in 1591, Queen Elizabeth I became upset with the Earl of Hertford over his lack of attention to her.

"So the queen gathered up a retinue of several hundred people and went and stayed at Earl's home for three nights and four days–and bankrupted him in the process.

"It's where the term 'eat 'em out of house and home' originated, probably."

In Brief

Tax overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration and House Republicans have worked out new ground rules that could clear the way for a House vote on tax revision, as sought by President Reagan, the White House announced today.

Spokesman Larry Speakes said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, agreed to join GOP leaders in presenting the proposal to Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

The plan calls for the House to vote on the Ways and Means Committee's tax bill, on an alternative favored by the committee's Republicans and on a GOP amendment.

Speakes declined to discuss the nature of the amendment until the plan was presented to O'Neill.

"We believe the votes are there for the passage of tax reform," Speakes said, predicting that "tax reform will stand on its own merits and will pass" if it reaches the House floor.

Prices go up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, stampeded by another surge in beef costs, surged 0.8 percent in November, the Labor Department said today.

The increase came on the heels of a 0.9 percent increase the previous month and means wholesale prices for finished goods have risen at an annual rate of 1.8 percent through the first 11 months of 1985.

Retail inflation is running at an annual rate of 3.3 percent so far this year, the lowest in nearly two decades.

The November Producer Price Index showed food costs rose 1.6 percent after seasonal adjustment, in large part because of a 4.5 percent jump in beef costs. Overall food costs had risen 1.4 percent in October, beef prices 11.8 percent.

Another major factor was a 3.1 percent increase in energy prices.

'Poor' woman's will stirs up $5 million worth of trouble

DALLAS (AP) — When Gary Joe Lewis visited Elizabeth Tietze, he only hoped to buy property owned by the aging woman.

Instead, Lewis found a friend in the sweet, slightly eccentric lady who kept her dearest belongings in a paper bag and never let it out of her sight.

Lewis may also end up with more than $100,000 for his friendship.

The seemingly impoverished Dallas woman left behind a handwritten will and addendum bequeathing $5 million — one that includes Lewis.

Whether anyone will get to keep any of the fortune is currently being debated in a Dallas probate court after several cousins of the woman contested the will.

Shirley Smith, a friend who was put on the witness stand to answer questions from the crowd of lawyers, suddenly burst into tears.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I feel like nobody's shed a tear for Mrs. Tietze."

The woman lived in an aging house in East Dallas, a house she apparently let no one enter.

She was usually seen in one of two dresses and tennis shoes and went about in public dirty from her frequent yardwork, acquaintances said.

It's even possible the 73-year-old woman took a meal or two from charities.

But she made friends in recent years, largely through business. Someone would get interested in buying one of her properites and come to talk to her about it.

The elderly widow with no children was usually glad for the company. She warmed to people who took an interest in her, even if it started out strictly business.

In return, they warmed to her.

"When I'd call, she'd ask that I bring her a pimiento cheese sandwich, a Dr Pepper in a bottle. Sometimes, she'd ask for a Twinkie," said Lewis, who first dropped by in 1984 to inquire about some warehouse property he was interested in and that was listed on the tax rolls as owned by Mrs. Tietze.

They first met on the front porch of her home, he told the Dallas Morning News.

Later, she'd send flowers from her home garden to Lewis' wife. She visited his home once. Soon he found himself taking her on errands, helping her with some remodeling work and bringing her lunch.

One day over a cheese sandwich, she told him that she wanted him and his family to have something, Lewis said. She handed him a handwritten codicil to her will. She gave him and his family $150,000. He tried to give it back, he said, but she insisted.

Mrs. Tietze, whose wealth stemmed from inheritance and investments, died of a heart attack in June. She was living in a rooming house nearby, rent-free.

Her friends didn't know she was rich — 11 pieces of property, some residential, some warehouse buildings — valued on tax rolls at $1.5 million, plus another $3.5 million tucked away in various bank accounts around town.

Sitter is given life term

DALLAS (AP) — Giving a life sentence to a man who posed as a woman babysitter and plunged a 4-month-old into scalding water shows "an expression of community outrage," a prosecutor said.

Richard Arthur Gilbert, a 29-year-old transvestite who said he accidentally spilled hot water for pasta noodles on the child, was sentenced Thursday to a maximum life in prison and fined $10,000 after the jury deliberated less than an hour.

He was convicted of injury to a child on Wednesday. The infant later died of his injuries.

"I think it was an expression of the community outrage — that a person like this could prey on the community," said prosecutor Rider Scott.

Jurors wept with the parents of the child in the Dallas courtroom as the punishment was announced.

A finding by jurors and State District Judge Jack Hampton that a deadly weapon — the scalding water — was used in the crime mandates that Gilbert serve at least 20 years of the sentence, Scott said. The baby later died of his injuries.

Gilbert's attorney, Russ Henrichs, said the verdict would be appealed.

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated slighly more than an hour before finding Gilbert guilty of holding the infant the hot water at the home of Vera and Andrew Baker, where he was babysitting.

Defense attorney Henrichs argued that Gilbert accidentally spilled the water on the baby Sept. 26.

Man, 88, is mauled by dog

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A retired machinist was hospitalized after he was attacked by a Doberman pinscher guard dog chained to a house near a salvage yard, authorities said.

Henry Miller, 88, of New Caney, was listed in satisfactory condition Thursday at the Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

He suffered puncture wounds to his ankles, feet, legs and arms after the Tuesday afternoon incident.

The dog that attacked Miller was chained to a house in front of an auto salvage yard.

The dog's owner, Ed Vanden, said the animal "was just doing his job. He was chained in my private yard and the man must have taken a shortcut through my yard to get to the salvage yard. He was talking to me about getting a gas tank and the next thing I know, my wife was beating the dog off of him."

The animal was being held for rabies examination until Dec. 20.

Although Vanden has not asked that the animal be destroyed, Vanden's wife, Marlene, said she did not want the dog returned.

"He's not coming back here," she said. "The dog was just gnawing on that man's leg. I hit him on the head with a plastic bowl, but he still kept chewing. I got a 2-by-4 and hit him again and finally pulled the man to safety."

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with the student signed "Upset in Elk River" whose principal announced that he was going to remove all the doors from the compartments in the girls' lavatory because some girls had been smoking there.

It's been nearly 50 years since I entered first grade in a one-building Southern school, where I had to share a large restroom with girls from elementary, junior and high school grades combined.

I was from a farm and had been more or less isolated from other children and was doubly shy. The pain of embarrassment was far worse than the physical discomfort I suffered from avoiding going down to that basement bathroom with no partitions. I hated school for that one reason.

Thanks for printing that letter, Abby. I hope the principal in Elk River changes his mind and considers the girls' right to privacy. After all, the few girls who smoked in the lavatory will find somewhere else to smoke. But modesty, even that of one student, should be preserved if possible. There seems to be so little of it left in the world.

DEAR ALSO: Hear, hear! Another Californian suggested that the principal leave the lavatory doors alone and install smoke alarms in the girls' restroom instead. Great idea. Where there's smoke there will either be fire—or somebody smoking.

DEAR ABBY: Not too long ago you had a piece in your column about which came first, the chicken or the egg, and you ended up by saying that the egg came first—and it came from a reptile!

Well, I used to love eggs and ate two every morning for breakfast, but now I am unable to eat eggs because I hate reptiles.

I am so sorry you put that in your column, Abby. Just the thought of eating reptile eggs turns my stomach!

NO MORE EGGS
IN FORT DODGE, IOWA

DEAR NO MORE: I did not mean to imply that the eggs we eat today come from reptiles; I was referring to the process of evolution that began millions of years ago.

The eggs you enjoyed were from hens—not reptiles. I hope this settles your stomach because food phobias are no yolk.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this while waiting for my husband to finish shaving and join me for breakfast.

About five minutes ago, I glanced out the window and saw 10 or 12 men exiting from a large van. They were nicely dressed, all carried briefcases, and were obviously a crew of salesmen. Within minutes my doorbell rang. I ignored it. My husband heard it and shouted, "Will you please get the door!" I yelled back, "It's some salesman; besides, I never answer the door unless I'm expecting someone."

He became very impatient with me and said, "What's the harm in answering the door and finding out what the salesman is selling?"

I told him I felt no obligation to listen to strangers who want to sell me something. He insisted I could always say no. Abby, this has happened several times in our 40-year marriage. I feel that this is my home and I don't have to open my door to every person who pushes my doorbell. What is your opinion?

JANE
IN GREENVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR JANE: Same as yours. It's a wise woman who realizes that she's no match for high-pressure, fast-talking salespeople. I admire their talent, but I wouldn't want to pit my resistance against their persistence.

Disregard trends, reflect interests

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Rich or poor, most Americans regard their home as a place of refuge, not a stage on which to display their trendiness.

A survey by Knapp Communications of 1,000 Americans indicated a surprising degree of unanimity in attitude about the home, regardless of income level.

What emerged from the national survey is a picture of Americans who consider their home a reflection of their own tastes and interests. What did differ according to income level was knowledge of various furniture brands and attitudes towards employing decorators.

Those with annual incomes in excess of $50,000 are more likely to consider employing a decorator and are more knowledgeable about furniture companies, according to Robert W. Brown, vice president and associate group publisher. Brown noted that the survey participants were not necessarily readers of Knapp's upscale publications, Architectural Digest, Bon Appetit and Home Magazine.

Many of the findings in the Knapp study were borne out in another recent survey by Better Homes & Gardens Magazine, which also found most respondents unwilling to employ a decorator and uninterested in decorating in the latest trendsetting style.

In the Knapp survey, only 11 percent of the respondents said they'd like to get rid of everything and start over from scratch; as many as 35 percent would prefer to incorporate what they currently own with new furnishings acquired slowly over the years.

Other findings were that most consumers expect to keep their furnishings for a long time and anticipate that their tastes will remain substantially the same. Consequently, an important consideration when purchasing furniture is how well it is made.

Besides an emphasis on quality, other attributes that are sought include value-for-money, durability and versatility. Ranking considerably lower are characteristics such as stylishness, low cost, and handcrafting.

Brown noted that people have given up on the idea that they can afford handcrafted furniture. However, they do recognize that good value is not necessarily the lowest price. "And nobody liked the word, 'trendy,'" he added.

The survey uncovered a connection between sociability and the desire for a nice home. Not surprisingly, people who enjoy entertaining and do so often were found to be more likely to consider an attractive home essential. However, added the executive, most do not want to sacrifice other luxuries such as vacations, cars and new clothing to pay for new home furnishings.

Many of the findings in the Knapp study were confirmed in the survey of 1,000 readers by Better Homes & Gardens. BH&G also found little general interest in employing decorators; in fact, 89.2 percent of the 1,000 individuals who replied to the survey had not employed a decorator. Most (about 90 percent) prefer to decorate in stages, either one room at a time (44.2 percent) or one element at a time (46.7 percent).

Respondents identified quality with known brands and most preferred to buy a brand-name item at a higher price rather than an unknown brand at a lower price. More than 73 percent said they always or frequently checked the brand before making a decision. A startling 93.5 percent agreed completely or somewhat with the statement that "good furniture is worth the money you pay because it lasts longer."

In order of importance, respondents rated comfort (93.8 percent), durability (87.3 percent) and construction (85.3 percent) as of most concern. Other characteristics such as type of fabric, styling and stain resistance were selected by more than 60 percent of respondents.

The picture of careful shoppers was confirmed since about 42 percent said they had shopped six months to a year before actually making a purchase.

Asked to rate the purchase of furniture in terms of priority when compared to other items, 40.3 percent of the respondents gave purchase of a car highest priority while 20.9 percent considered furniture a high priority item. Vacations were third choice, selected by 8.7 percent.

Household tips given

Q. — I have read about how condensation occurs on a window when warm air settles on a cold pane, but I need some advice on what is happening on two of my living room windows. We have storm windows on both of those windows. When condensation took place on the inside of the storm windows last year, we were told that the storm windows must not have been airtight, so we did everything we could to make them so, adding weatherstripping and caulking. It was near the end of the cold season and we could not be sure this remedy had worked. We find this season that the same thing is happening — that is, the inside of the storm windows get wet and drip down. I sure hope you can solve this problem for us.

A. — The inside of the storm windows would not be fostering condensation unless warm air was settling on them. The conclusion is that the warm air is coming from inside the house. In other words, it is getting through your regular windows. To prevent this, you have to make them airtight. You don't say, but presumably they are double-hung windows, which usually are at fault because of the space between the two windows at the center. After checking the putty around the pane to be sure air is not leaking through it, weatherstrip wherever there is a space through which air can pass. If warm air cannot touch the insides of the storm windows, there will be no condensation there.

Opening lead: ♠ Q

Netherlands player Eddy Roosneck gained a non-vulnerable game in a match against Germany some months ago by following the time-honored principle of giving himself an extra chance for his contract. His German counterpart, also in three no-trump, had won the spade king, overtaken the king of hearts with the ace and played queen of diamonds from dummy. When that lost to the king, the opponents cashed the remaining spades to beat the contract by a trick.

Roosneck saw that he could give himself a little extra chance at the risk of only one more non-vulnerable undoubled undertrick, so he took it. He won the spade king, but then, before crossing to dummy with the heart ace, he laid down the ace of clubs. When the king of clubs fell under the ace, there was no need to establish the diamond suit. He overtook the heart king and led the club 10 from dummy. When that won the trick, West showing out, he had 10 tricks.

What would have happened if West had started with the K-J of clubs and no king of diamonds, and had made the cute play of the club king? That's easy — you would now be reading about a great defensive play by West instead of a fine declarer's play by Roosneck.

Canyon Reef opens tonight; other cage events scheduled

Despite icy roads and the threat of continued cold weather, the Canyon Reef and other tournaments in the area were still scheduled to be played this weekend - though some were a day late in getting started.

Snyder varsity boys will host Lubbock Estacado at 7 tonight in Scurry County Coliseum for the first game of the three-contest Canyon Reef. Snyder is 5-2 on the season. Estacado is 2-6 and comes into the game after a win over a strong Morton squad.

Estacado is to play Abernathy at 10 a.m. Saturday as the tournament continues. The final tilt is scheduled between Snyder and Abernathy at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Snyder's sophomore boys and junior varsity girls were to have opened tournament play Thursday, but weather conditions led to postponements. In a squall of rescheduling, the junior varsity girls are now scheduled to play Midland Lee at 4 p.m. today in the Midland JV Tournament.

Snyder sophomore boys were rescheduled to play Big Lake at 4 today in the Coahoma Tournament.

Two other tournaments involving Snyder teams were to go on as scheduled at of last word this morning.

Snyder junior varsity boys open play in the Big Spring Tournament at 5 p.m. against Midland.

Snyder varsity girls, 8-0, will play in the Tall City Tournament at Chaparral Center in Midland. They were slated against Denver City at 1:30.

SPC men pound Wranglers, 75-56

Odessa men fell but the number one ranked Lady Wranglers remained undefeated in the only Western Junior College Athletic Conference games played Thursday evening.

Western Texas' non-conference game with Angelo State JV was cancelled.

Games between Frank Phillips and New Mexico Junior College, and New Mexico Military Institute and Howard College, were postponed due to icy weather conditions. The games will apparently not be made up until later in the season. No makeup dates have been arranged at this time.

South Plains men improved their record to 12-4 for the season and 3-1 in conference play by shocking the Wranglers at home, 75-56. It was the second straight conference loss for Odessa, which fell to 10-6 and 1-2.

Odessa women continued rolling along, however. The NJCAA's number one ranked squad is now 15-0 for the season and 3-0 in conference play after whipping South Plains 77-50. SPC falls to 10-5 and 1-1.

As the colleges take a near month-long holiday break, conference games will not resume until January 13 when Western Texas hosts New Mexico Junior College and Clarendon goes to Levelland to play South Plains. In men-only games, Midland will be at Big Spring to play Howard and Odessa treks to Roswell, N.M., to take on NMMI.

Rockets keep streak

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston is the only team in the National Basketball Association that is unbeaten on its home court and all-star center Akeem Olajuwon says the win streak gives the Rockets added incentive.

"We play harder because we have something to protect. We're the only team in the NBA that is undefeated at home, and we feel that we have to protect that," Olajuwon said Thursday after scoring 27 points and grabbing 15 rebounds to lead the Rockets to a 123-120 win over the Dallas Mavericks.

Houston, 17-7 and the Midwest Division leader, is 14-0 at home this season.

Trading continues at winter meetings

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox, locked in a game of "Let's Make A Deal" for several weeks, finally landed lesser prizes on the final day of baseball's winter meetings.

But the Thursday swap that sent pitcher Britt Burns and two minor-leaguers to the Yankees for pitcher Joe Cowley and catcher Ron Hassey was not the big deal both teams hoped to make.

"There's a possibility this could lead to another trade," White Sox General Manager Ken Harrelson said.

That other deal would send Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk to New York for designated hitter Don Baylor. But Chicago is still trying to sign free agent Fisk, who wants a three-year contract, and the Yankees are still trying to get Baylor to drop his no-trade clause, which he might do for enough money. Baylor reportedly also wants a $1 million a year.

Fisk and Baylor are both represented by Jerry Kapstein, and Harrelson said the agent effectively has the trade on hold.

"You have to follow his lead, and that's what we're doing," Harrelson said.

The Yankees-White Sox deal, along with a transaction that sent Mike Stenhouse from Boston to Minnesota for a minor-league pitcher, brought the trade number to 12 and the players moved to 26 during the winter meetings.

Along with Burns, the Yankees acquired minor-league shortstop Mike Soper and outfielder Glen Braxton.

By trading Cowley and Hassey, the Yankees were temporarily left thin in the catching department. Butch Wynegar is a free agent and two others, Scott Bradley and Juan Espino, have only brief major-league experience.

But New York Manager Lou Piniella said that situation would be solved soon, although he did not mention Fisk by name.

The Twins sent Mike Stenhouse, a power hitter in the minors who has not done well in the majors, to Boston for pitcher Charlie Mitchell.

Cage league holds meeting

All teams need to have rosters together.

Anyone interested in playing men's basketball is urged to attend.

Dallas Cowboys hope to break string of losing in last two games of season

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys have done "The Big Fade" in December the past three years.

In fact, they've lost their last two games in the 1982, 1983 and 1984 seasons.

Historically, the Cowboys have been a fast-closing team.

Now, they face the final two critical games of the season against the New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers.

A victory over the Giants can assure Dallas the National Conference Eastern Division title for the first time since 1981. Dallas could still make it as a wild card with a loss to New York and a victory over the 49ers.

Why the slide in recent years in the clutch?

"We're not as strong a football team as we have been," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "Everything is a growing process in this business. We have a young team and you can't predict what will happen.

"Nobody expected us to win the East before the season began. All we know is that destiny is in our hands. If we don't win we don't deserve to go." The players are determined to bounce back from last Sunday's 50-24 loss to Cincinnati.

Defensive tackle Randy White said the Cowboys are pumped up.

"I don't think anybody on this team is going to have trouble getting up for the Giants," said White. "We beat the Giants and we win our division. That's been our goal all year."

Defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones agreed.

"We've worked too hard beginning in training camp in July to let it the title get away," said Jones. "We've got to get our act together."

The Giants and Cowboys, both with 9-5 records, tangle at high noon Sunday in Texas Stadium. Dallas, which defeated the Giants 30-29 in October, was rated a three-point favorite.

The Giants have not won a title of any kind since 1963.

Wide receiver Tony Hill, listed as questionable for the game with a hamstring injury, said "I want to be out there regardless of the circumstances."

Rookie Karl Powe will replace Hill if Dallas' leading pass receiver can't go.

Landry plans to use recently activated Gordon Banks as a kick returner and wide receiver. Banks is a refugee from the United States Football League who had been on the inactive roster until two weeks ago.

The Giants are 3-10 against Dallas in Texas Stadium and Dallas has a 31-13-2 series record over them.

"We've been 0-6 in the last three years in the dash for cash, but that's in the past," said running back Tony Dorsett.

"I'm fired up because I know what's at stake," said middle linebacker Eugene Lockhart.

"It's for all the marbles now," said wide receiver Mike Renfro.

19th-ranked DePaul rips Houston

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Cougars Coach Guy Lewis, who could be considered an expert on the subject, says the 19th ranked DePaul Blue Demons are "definitely a Top 20 team."

The Blue Demons impressed Lewis and the Cougars with an 84-78 non-conference college basketball victory Thursday night.

Noting that Houston lost to DePaul at Chicago last year, 69-58, Lewis, who has coached the Cougars to the Final Four five times, said, "they killed us this year and last year on the boards."

"They're definitely a Top 20 team that will get better."

DePaul used its inside strength in the victory Thursday night, something that Coach Joey Meyer said he intended the team to do.

"Our game plan was to go inside and I think we did a good job," Meyer said. "We have a lot of big people and we used them well tonight."

Houston forward Ricky Winslow, who had 17 points and four rebounds agreed.

"We had a lot of problems up front, they have many big guys that just keep coming in," Winslow said.

"They are not only good up front but also from the back court," added Houston center Gregg Anderson.

Lamone Lampley scored 19 points and Dallas Comegys added 18 for the victors.

Lampley, a 6-foot-11 center, was an example of the inside scoring advantage the Blue Demons held over Houston as he connected for eight of the Blue Demons' first 12 points, including three of his five dunk shots.

Fund is available for crime victims

AUSTIN (AP) — A total of $11 million is currently available to help compensate Texans who fall victim to crime, according to state officials.

The money comes through the Crime Victims Compensation Act, a law that took effect in 1980 to help ease the financial stress imposed on crime victims.

The funds help make up for lost earnings, pay medical bills, provide for counseling and other services. The Industrial Accident Board, which administers the law, can award up to $150 per week, with a maximum award of $25,000 per claim.

The funds are collected in the courts by assessing additional court costs on convicted criminals.

Gov. Mark White said Thursday that the board paid more than $7 million in benefits to 1,257 victims and their families during the 1985 fiscal year.

"For too many years in our society, it was exclusively the criminal that was the focus of our attention. All too often, the victim of crime was neglected or forgotten," White said.

"Today in Texas, we are doing something about crime. We are doing something about criminals, and we are doing something for crime victims."

Two victims of crime joined White at a news conference outlining the program's benefits.

Michael Haynes, a student at the University of Texas, was shot in the back in 1982 and spent 11 months in the hospital. He received more than $20,000 from the fund and said it eased the financial strain on him and his family.

"I spent about a year in the hospital, so you can imagine the financial burden on my parents. It was a big help," he said.

Donna Burns, an elementary school nurse who was injured by a drunk driver, collected about $2,200.

"After the initial trauma, it's very frustrating because we had so many bills ... Suddenly, one day you find yourself without any resources at all," she said.

After graduation, Teeters will serve as pastor of First Baptist Church in Jayton.

FUMC schedules Christmas cantata

The chaucel choir of the First United Methodist Church will present a Christmas worship service in music at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The cantata, "This Day of Celebration," by Mary McDonald and John Purifoy includes the richest elements of a Christmas celebration: candlelight, children, the singing of carols, and music and narrative from Scriptures to honor Christ's birth.

Also performing will be the brass choir and the children's choir. Jane Womack will be the organist and Betty Watts is the pianist. The service will begin with a procession of poinsettias by the children and music by "The Little Ones" choir directed by Diane Scott.

Christmas service scheduled by county Methodists

The Hermleigh United Methodist Church will have a special Christmas service at 7 p.m. Sunday. The public is invited to attend.

Chief of police gets acquitted

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — A small-town police chief acquitted of the execution-style slaying of a fellow officer says he doesn't know if he can stay in the community where he had been accused of first-degree murder.

But Michael Schertz, 39, said his acquittal Thursday "is the best possible Christmas gift. I haven't been (home) in a long time."

Schertz, suspended police chief of the village of Iola, who has been jailed for months, still faces charges that he stole two guns, including the one suspected to have been used to kill Officer Gerald Mork.

He was acquitted Thursday by an an Eau Claire County Circuit jury in the death of Mork, the only other full-time officer in the village of about 1,000 people in east-central Wisconsin.

Mork, shot twice in the head at close range, was found dead, lying beside his patrol car at a cemetery July 14.

Waupaca County District Attorney Thomas Maroney said Schertz killed Mork after becoming frustrated at not being able to fire him.

Joint problem is temporary

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — If an adult had Osgood-Schlatter's disease as a child, how can he or she keep from having knee problems? Do running or biking aggravate it? Would surgery be needed if the knee became irritated enough?

DEAR READER — It is my understanding that Osgood-Schlatter's disease is a temporary nuisance confined to growing children. Adults do not have problems with it. In general, bicycling is much easier on anyone's joints than is running. Even youngsters with Osgood-Schlatter's usually can bike without much discomfort.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What are the inherent merits and disadvantages of undergoing hiatal hernia surgery in which a silicone-filled, doughnut-shaped collar is implanted around the esophagus? Is there a particular profile of the type of person who would benefit more from this method?

DEAR READER — I am not familiar with the technique you describe. Surgery for hiatal hernia ordinarily involves tightening the opening where the esophagus passes through the diaphragmatic muscles. I believe that most surgery is oriented toward a particular disorder, not a personality-type.

To give you more information on hiatal hernia, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report on the subject. Other readers who want a copy should send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of this newspaper to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on HIATAL HERNIA.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've had bad burning in my lips and tongue, and now my vagina is burning, too. I've been in the hospital for 10 days for a sickness in my lower intestines. They gave me very strong antibiotics. I've tried Tagamet and rinsing my mouth with Maalox. Should I try another doctor?

DEAR READER — The use of antibiotics can allow yeasts to overgrow in the mouth, intestinal lining and reproductive tract. You may have a low grade monilia infection that would respond to Myocstatin mouthwashes and vaginal tablets. Ask your doctor about this. In addition, some antibiotics can cause nerve damage, with resulting tingling, numbness, ringing in the ears and hearing loss. Ask your doctor about this, too.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a woman in my late 30s. I have a discharge every month and it has a very strong, unpleasant odor. I've never had any infections. What causes this, and is it normal?

DEAR READER — At mid-cycle, when a woman ovulates, she may experience a temporary increase in viscosity and quantity of normal vaginal secretions. While this may be the explanation for your problems, check with a gynecologist to make sure.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

San Angelo girl to meet singer

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AR) — Cynthia Hernandez may suffer from a malignant brain tumor that impairs her hearing, but she hears well enough to enjoy the tunes of Kenny Rogers and dreams of meeting the entertainer.

On Saturday, the 11-year-old girl will meet the man of her dreams.

"I'm going to get up there and kiss him, even if his wife is there. Then I'm going to faint," Cynthia said.

The little girl's dream of meeting Rogers was arranged by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of West Texas Inc., which grants special wishes to children with terminal illnesses.

Valley teacher turned in notebook for dope

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — A former school teacher accused of participating in an international drug-smuggling ring probably was lured to the drug trade because of easy money, a government agent said Thursday.

Juan Frank Garcia, 35, was one of 44 people named this week in a 109-page indictment alleging that the drug ring brought into the United States more than a quarter-million pounds of marijuana in the past five years.

Several of his family members, including a 79-year-old uncle, also are among those indicted.

Garcia is a former migrant school teacher and high school football booster who arranged to have topless dancers at a party for coaches. But he's also a convicted drug felon and an alleged abductor who is on the run.

"I don't know why John Frank Garcia got into this business, but probably for the profit ... and the excitement," said Ken Miley, a Drug Enforcement Administration agent in McAllen.

The indictment against Garcia and others grew out of a large-scale investigation called "Cash Crop."

The probe was instigated two years ago by the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program created by President Reagan to break up major narcotics rings.

The alleged drug ring was said to have started in 1980 and involved the importation of narcotics from Mexico into the Rio Grande Valley and other parts of the United States.

Garcia "was certainly in the upper echelon of the organization here in the Valley," Miley claimed.

In 1983, Garcia had purchased a residence in Humble, Texas, for $383,000 in cash and had transferred the title to Ignacia Payan, the mother of Juan Jose Quintero-Payan, 37, and Emilio Quintero-Payan, 32.

The Payan brothers are uncles of Rafael "Caro" Quintero, the reputed Mexican drug kingpin who has been jailed in connection with the kidnapping and slaying of DEA agent Enrique Camarena.

The Payan brothers are accused of making large cash deposits in American banks and providing marijuana for Garcia.

Garcia and two others, Jose F. Muniz, 35, of McAllen, and James Fox, the former president of Metropolitan National Bank in McAllen, are accused of participating in the transactions.

Garcia and Muniz also are charged with conducting a continuing criminal enterprise and that they supervised aspects of the alleged drug trafficking operation.

Miley said the DEA knows Garcia's whereabouts.

"He is in Mexico. That's what our intelligence sources tell us," Miley said.

The charges against Garcia are not the first alleging wrongdoing.

Garcia, up until 11 years ago, was a teacher at the Donna Migrant Junior High School. He began teaching there in 1972.

A year later, he earned a bachelor of science degree from Pan American University. By December 1974, he told Donna school officials he wanted to quit his job to continue his education.

"He was a very nice gentlemen. He was always a real clean-cut, neat person," said a secretary at the Donna Indpendent School District who did not want to give her full name.

Three years later, Garcia would be serving time for conspiring to possess with intent to distribute marijuana. He was sentenced to five years in prison and served about two years.

According to authorities, Garcia later got involved with the Payans and they provided narcotics and he made transactions in the United States for them.

In April 1984, $500,000 worth of gold coins Garcia claimed were his were stolen from an Edinburg residence.

Garcia, soon after the burglary, began running ads offering $20,000 and later $50,000 for the return of the coins.

A month later, Garcia allegedly kidnapped Hector Alaniz and Angelita Garcia and forced the pair to fly him to Fort Worth. The two, who had been arrested in connection with the burglary, escaped and returned to the Valley and filed charges against Garcia.

In the summer of 1984, authorities seized $6.8 million Garcia had in two Houston bank accounts. Federal officials subsequently have seized other assets, stock in Garcia's investments, a city block in Edinburg, two nightclubs in Edinburg, property in Montgomery County and gold coins.

In December 1984, Garcia arranged for topless dancers to be present at a party for Edinburg High School coaches.

School officials and businessmen attended the party and when it was reported a month later, school officials said those present, including a university president, were victims of circumstances.

In late January, Garcia was given an award by the Edinburg High School boosters for donating $500 to the organization.

By February, he was coming up for trial on the aggravated kidnapping charges. He had been released on a personal recognizance bond.

Australian cutting horse expert said Texan at heart

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Charles "Chiller" Seeney is a native Australian, but he's also a Texan at heart. Just listen to his tall tales about the land "down under."

"We have iguanas that you'd have to pull up and let them cross the road or they'd turn the car over."

Frogs, called "cane toads," have "legs as thick as my arm" and terrorize citizens, he also says.

No wonder that Louise Havard, Seeney's hostess here, is having second thoughts about accepting an invitation to visit in January. "I'm a little afraid to go," she confesses.

Seeney, however, says there's nothing to fear from the kangaroos. "Kangaroos deliver our mail. They sit on the side of the road. They have that pouch there."

Since Seeney, a champion cutting horse trainer and rider, came to Texas this fall after winning a free trip, the Havard family of ranchers has learned to treat his statements with some suspicion.

Better use a tape recorder, Mrs. Havard tells a reporter, so she can check out what he says.

Of course, someone who brags that "Texas is just like the palm of your hand" compared to his native state of Queensland might be expected to tell a few tall tales.

Seeney, however, seems frank when he relates his colorful history as a boxer, rodeo contestant and cutting horse trainer and rider. In all three sports, he has won Australian national championships.

Seeney, 40, grew up on a cattle ranch, about 200 miles from the city of Rockhampton, Queensland.

Like other children in sparsely populated areas of Australia, Seeney got his education from a governess rather than in school.

He grew up around horses and cattle, but as a teen-ager became an amateur boxer. As to how he got into fighting, he said, "I don't know, actually. Just a tournament comes on, and I won that fight, and it just goes on from there, doesn't it?"

Ask The Preacher

...about "Faith" and "Deeds"

By Randall Gray

One way to put this topic is "being" and "doing." Can you really "be" a Christian without "doing" your Christianity?

I guess James (the Lord's physical half-brother) makes the clearest contrast of these concepts. He said, "Show me your faith without deeds, and I will show you my faith by what I do." James 2:18. We are perfectly correct when we say that a person can go to church every time the doors are open and display all the trappings of Christianity yet still be lost. That is a chilling truth. But so is this: Anyone who claims to "be" a Christian, but who fails to "do" his faith is condemned by God.

Want proof? James, again, still in chapter 2 says, basically, "look, there are two kinds of faith - there is living faith and there is dead faith. Dead faith can NOT save you (2:14). Living faith is the ONLY kind of faith that can save you." But here's the heart of the issue. What is it that brings dead faith to life? What constitutes living faith? What is the energy that provides faith with its life-force? It is ACTION, or deeds, or works, or doing, or whatever you want to call it. (2:20-22)

So, a person who appears to be a Christian, but who really is not, that person has a faith problem. Their faith is dead, even though it appears to be alive. On the other hand - if a person looks dead, smells dead and acts dead - they probably are dead! So it is with their faith.

Search beginning for cause of crash

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — Searchers recovered flight recorders and the bodies of half the 258 victims from the sparsely wooded hills where a DC-8 packed with U.S. soldiers crashed and exploded, but said determining the cause of the tragedy still may be "time-consuming."

The four-engine jet crashed early Thursday seconds after takeoff from this airport on Canada's Atlantic coast. Aboard were troops of the 101st Airborne Division, returning home for Christmas after a six-month tour of duty with the multinational peacekeeping force in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula.

Horrified airport employees watched the pre-dawn sky light up with the explosion minutes after they had chatted with the U.S. soldiers, heard them singing Christmas carols in the terminal and directed them onto the Arrow Air charter.

"There was a flash, just like a sunburst," said Judy Parsons, a car rental agent who witnessed the crash from the Gander parking lot. "It lasted for just two seconds and then I heard an explosion."

Canadian Transport Minister Don Mazankowski said the plane climbed no higher than 1,000 feet before crashing. Transport Canada spokesman Bruce Reid, returning from a helicopter tour over the site, said there was no suggestion that the jet exploded in flight.

"Where it came down, it obviously exploded on impact. Everything in the area is charred," he said. "It's not nice to look at."

The crash littered the sparse, hilly landscape 1,200 feet from the runway's end with Christmas gifts, weapons and smouldering debris.

A makeshift morgue was erected next to a body of water known as Deadman's Pond.

Officials said there was no indication what might have caused the crash.

Gander airport manager John Pittman and Royal Canadian Mounted Police Sgt. Roger Tinkham said the plane was not de-iced before takeoff, despite having landed a little more than an hour earlier in light freezing rain after a refueling stop in Cologne, West Germany.

But authorities refused to speculate on the possible cause of the crash and Pittman, appearing later at an evening news briefing, refused to elaborate on his earlier statement.

Thursday's crash, the worst air disaster ever in Canada, adds to this year's record death toll in commercial aviation, which now stands at 1,948, according to the International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal.

Bonner to enter hospital for tests

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner will enter a hospital next week for coronary artery tests to find where the blood vessel is blocked, her doctor says.

Mrs. Bonner, the 62-year-old wife of Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, had a heart attack in April 1983 and an electrocardiogram showed minor heart damage from an earlier episode, Dr. Adolph Hutter, director of Massachusetts General Hospital's coronary care unit, said Thursday.

Mrs. Bonner, meanwhile, telephoned her husband Thursday and the two reassured each other about their health, her daughter, Tatiana Yankelevich, said.

Mrs. Yankelevitch blamed Soviet officials for static on the line that she said was caused by jamming.

The call was jammed when Mrs. Bonner tried to warn Sakharov that he was being secretly filmed, said Mrs. Yankelevich, who lives in this Boston suburb.

The jamming, a long, steady noise, occurred about 10 minutes into the conversation, the first between the two since Mrs. Bonner left the Soviet Union on a temporary visa for medical treatment in the West, Mrs. Yankelevich said.

"She told him she met with the prime minister of Italy and with the pope (last week before flying to the United States) and that she saw films (made in 1984 and 1985) shot with hidden cameras," Mrs. Yankelevich said.

campus.

The first bond issue — authorized Aug. 1, 1970 — has only one payment of $325,000 remaining.

The second bond issue — authorized Feb. 1, 1972 — has three payments remaining. These will total $595,000 and will be paid after the fall semester of 1988.

The audit report was given during the regular December of the board.

In other business, the board approved a new collection agency charged with collecting past due student loans. Dr. Don Newbury, college president, noted approximately 100 ex-students are involved with individual loans totaling some $100 each.

He said the total amount owed is approximately $13,000 to $14,000.

The board approved United Revenue Corp. of Arlington and Lubbock to collect these notes.

During the monthly president's report, Newbury noted reservations for dormitory spaces for the spring semester are already 90 percent spoken for.

Board members attending were Bill Jones, who presided, Roy Baze, Bob Hargrove and R.C. Patton. Those absent were Howard Sterling, Edwin Parks and Bill Wilson.

Government operating on temporary money proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is operating through Monday under a temporary money bill while Congress finishes work on long-term spending legislation — and President Reagan tries to reverse his defeat on tax revision.

A government shutdown today was avoided Thursday night, when Congress extended the government's spending authority until 6 p.m. Monday. The House and Senate also extended the 16-cent-a-pack cigarette tax, the dairy price support program and current Medicaid reimbursement levels, all due to expire this week, in anticipation of permanent bills early next week.

Without action, the cigarette tax would have dropped to 8 cents and dairy price support levels would have soared.

Congress is eager to break for the holidays and was shooting for adjournment this week. But the spending bill must be finished first. The legislation is needed because many of the regular appropriations bills have not been passed and signed by the president.

House and Senate negotiators abandoned efforts to meet the midnight deadline with a long-term bill after they were unable to resolve differences over spending by the Defense and Interior departments. The four-day extension was then quickly approved and sent to President Reagan, who said he would sign it.

The administration, handed a stinging defeat Wednesday when only 14 House Republicans voted for the tax overhaul bill, lobbied hard Thursday to gain enough votes before Congress departs.

However, the president and his top aides appeared to gain only a few pledges of support. Some of those were on the condition that Democratic leaders reverse themselves and agree to open the bill to amendment on the floor.

The House bill to revise the income tax code was written by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and other Democrats on his Ways and Means Committee, but it is reasonably similar to the tax plan proposed by Reagan.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he wouldn't let the tax bill come up again this year unless the votes were in place.

"If the president can deliver 50 to 75 votes ... we'll bring it up," he said. "If the Republicans want to kill it, that's their business."

Lawmakers also were working to find agreement on the farm bill and on a separate budget package designed to save $80 billion in the next three years.

The farm bill negotiations moved forward Thursday in a hard-fought area when Senate negotiators voted 6-2 to accept a House-offered package dealing with subsidies and price support levels for wheat and corn through the end of the decade.

Under the proposal, the per-bushel income subsidy levels for those two crops would be frozen at current levels for the next two years, then be reduced in small increments in each of the following three years. Income guarantee levels in 1990 would be about 90 percent of current targets.

A separate House-Senate conference committee has labored all week on disputed portions of a bill designed to reduce deficits by about $80 billion in the next three years. The bill would commit Congress to making the spending cuts and tax changes envisioned in the budget passed last summer.

Aircraft explodes soon after takeoff

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A LearJet crash that killed two people and injured another forced the closing of the Texas A&M University-owned airport because of debris scattered on the runway, a university spokesman says.

Shortly after takeoff at 7:21 p.m. Thursday, the Lear L-35, owned by GTE of the Southwest, caught fire and crashed, said Lane Stepenson, A&M spokesman.

The dead were identified as GTE pilot Jerry LaBoid, 43, of San Angelo and company engineer Susan O'Rear, 39, of San Angelo, said A. Beamer, Department of Public Safety spokeswoman in Bryan.

The pilot at the time of the crash, Wayne Melvin Short, 47, of Bedford was in guarded condition early today at St. Joseph's Hospital in Bryan where he was being treated for head and chest injuries, Beaman said.

LaBoid and Short were both licensed pilots, said Bob Wiatt, Texas A&M security director.

According to the sole witness to the accident, an airport attendant, "the plane had just reached takeoff speed and become airborne at about 20 to 30 feet when he heard a pop and then saw sparks from the rear of the plane."

Stephenson said airport attendant Doug Dunn, the witness, said sparks then created a fireball and what appeared to be an explosion.

The plane hit the ground and skidded a couple of hundred yards off the runway, crossing the airport field and into an open taxi area.

The Bryan Eagle reported that the jet's right engine had caught fire.

The jet was making a regular courier flight picking up corporate mail. It was en route to Houston Hobby Airport and then to San Angelo GTE headquarters, Stephenson said.

"There was no evidence that the plane was having any problems at all," said Wiatt.

Stephenson said the weather was "reasonably good" at the time of the crash and didn't seem to be a factor. It had been raining at times during the day at College Station Thursday, he said.

But wet and muddy fields hampered rescue attempts, the Bryan Eagle reported. An airport crash truck was stuck in the mud about 10 feet from the jet, the newspaper reported, and rescue vehicles couldn't get close to the jet because the L-35 had landed in a muddy field.

Federal Aviation Administrators were expected to arrive early today to investigate the accident, Stephenson said, and the airport was expected to reopen at 9 a.m.

The moderately busy, general purpose airport regularly receives flights from Royal Air Lines Inc., Rio Airways and American Eagle, Stephenson said.

The crash was the first fatal accident to occur at the airport since its opening in 1938.

The safety lamp was invented by Britain's Sir Humphrey Davy. It was first used in coal mines in 1816.

Comet inspires myth and science

By Ann Ranard

HALLEY'S COMET makes it 30th recorded visit to the Earth in the coming months. It will be visible as it heads toward the sun in December and January and as it returns to the outer solar system in March and April.

Most of us will only see Halley's comet once in our lifetime, but for Sam Storch, part of the experience will last forever.

"The comet is a link between generations. My 5-year-old son may see Halley's comet when it returns in 76 years, and I want him to remember that his dad made him get a look at it."

Storch is activities director of the New York-based Amateur Observers Society — one of many groups watching Halley's. In addition to amateur stargazers, scientists worldwide will try to squeeze out every possible bit of information while the comet is near, in hopes of learning not only about its mysterious behavior, but also about the origin of our solar system.

This is the 30th recorded appearance of the comet, which passes closest to Earth on April 11. Depicted as a glowing fireball, its visits have been woven into myths and legends passed down through the years.

Past civilizations imbued Halley's with supernatural power, regarding its appearances as frightening forecasts of death and disaster. Some of these themes have sparked the imaginations of today's marketing wizards, who hope to immortalize the legends — and fatten their bank accounts — with literally tons of comet paraphernalia.

Some of the myths about the comet were dispelled in the 18th century when Edmund Halley computed its orbit using Isaac Newton's law of gravity. When Halley noted that comets in 1531, 1607 and 1682 had moved across the same part of the sky, he surmised that the three were the same comet and that it would make another appearance in 1758. The comet did indeed grace our skies again as Halley predicted, and it was named in his honor.

One reason Halley's has intrigued so many people is its seemingly strange behavior. Unlike the stars and planets that we can count on seeing in a certain place at a certain time, comets seem to float capriciously in and out of our skies.

However, as Edmund Halley explained, many comets do follow regular paths that cross Earth's orbit periodically. Their orbits are more elongated than those of the planets, which travel in nearly circular patterns. Depending on how large and bright comets are, and how close they come, we may be able to see them from Earth.

Because Halley's returns every 75 years or so, it is classified as a short-period comet. Other comets may take millions of years to make one orbit. Still others never get close to the sun.

Although no one can be sure exactly how comets formed, most theories connect their origin in one way or another with the birth of our solar system. Scientists believe comets contain the same material that was present in the solar nebula, the region of gas and dust in which Earth formed.

One theory is that comets were the building blocks for the outer planets, said Roger Knacke, astronomy professor at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

"There were lots of small icy objects in the outer solar system. Some became planets and those that didn't became comets," said Knacke.

According to current theory, a cloud of perhaps a billion comets slowly orbits the sun, about 100,000 times farther from the sun than Earth. They would never be noticed if they remained in their communal habitat, called Oort's Cloud after the Dutch astronomer who theorized about it. Gravity from a nearby star sometimes pushes one out of hibernation, sending it hurling toward Earth.

Because comets spend most of their time in the deep freeze of outer space, part of the birth cloud has been preserved in their core. Scientist liken this ball of frozen gasses imbedded with bits of primordial rock to a dirty snowball.

Ironically, each time a comet streaks though our solar system, putting on a celestial show, it comes closer to its death. Heat from the sun evaporates the snowball, producing a stream of dust and gas. The vapor collects in a coma — a halo around the iceberg. From Earth the glowing gasses look like a hazy patch.

Two types of tails extend from the head. Radiation from the sun pushes dust out of the coma to form a tail that curves with the comet's orbit. The sun also produces a stream of high-speed particles that contain magnetic fields, or solar wind, that blows electrified gasses from the coma and traps them into a straight tail. Depending on Halley's position as it travels through Earth's orbit, we may see one or two tails.

One reason Halley's comet is so big and bright is that it has a relatively large orbit compared with others that get close to Earth. Comets with very short periods have had more exposure to the sun, losing some of their glitter with each orbit. For example, Encke's Comet, which visits every 3 ½ years, the shortest known period, travels closer to the Earth than Halley's, but is too faint by now to be seen with the naked eye.

Halley's comet will be visible often during the next few months, but it probably won't be a glowing fireball streaking across the sky. This time it will be more than twice as far from Earth than in 1910, but judging from early reports, it may be brighter than first suspected. Its movement will be almost imperceptible as it makes its way toward the sun in December and January and heads back toward the outer solar system in March and April.

Viewers will have to search for the comet, as they would to locate a particular star. But it will be worth looking for, says Storch.

"Halley's comet will be beautiful — but subtle."

Good old days were changing fast

By Teresa Klink

Christmas carnival at the Stock Exchange

On Christmas Eve 1885, traders at the New York Stock Exchange honored a holiday tradition. They celebrated.

"It has always been customary for brokers to descend from their customary dignity on the day before Christmas," reported The New York Times on Christmas Day.

"At the Stock Exchange, there was no set programme of disorder, but a spontaneous outburst of misrule took place early in the day. Whoops and shrieks, such as only members of the Stock Exchange and Comanche Indians can produce, broke out."

Those stock traders in New York who didn't feel like whooping at Christmas could have escaped next door to The Exchange Buffet, America's first self-service (that is, fast-food) restaurant.

It was one of that year's many "firsts." The 1885 inauguration of President Grover Cleveland to his initial term seemed to spark an avalanche of beginnings.

Overseas, Karl-Friedrich Benz had driven the world's first successful gasoline-powered car, reaching a speed of 9 mph. Benz circled in his vehicle at Mannheim, Germany, but it stalled twice before it was stopped by a broken chain. (Later in the year, Benz tried to show off a slightly improved version, but he forgot to steer and smashed into a brick wall.)

It would be three years before shoppers could buy a "motor carriage" — perhaps as a Christmas gift — from the forerunner of Mercedes-Benz.

But if you needed to get around in 1885, you could have tried a "Bicyclette Moderne." This French model, like England's "safety bicycle," had wheels of equal size, making the bicycle suitable for general use.

Since then, of course, it's become one of the most popular Christmas gifts.

Residents of Foxburg, Pa., in 1885 could have cycled to the home of Joseph Mickle Fox to play one of the first rounds of golf in the United States. Fox discovered the game in Scotland and introduced it to America. He created the Foxburg Country Club, now the oldest in the nation.

If golf wasn't your bag at Christmas, you could have bought a two-horsepower leisure motorboat, produced for the first time by New York's Gas Engine and Power Co.

People whose loved ones couldn't afford to indulge them with a bicycle or a power boat might have found the popular Browning single-shot rifle under the tree.

Even those American families on limited budgets probably savored treats at the Christmas groaning board.

Food was abundant and fresh fruits were available.

Oranges were coming out of Southern California on the Sante Fe railroad; bananas were shipped to Boston from Jamaica in just 10 days. Fresh milk was bottled for the first time; and California began commercial production of figs. The traditional turkey was selling for 12 to 18 cents a pound, but those looking to impress probably had no trouble securing a seafood delicacy for the family feast — the North American lobster catch reached an all-time high of 130 million pounds, and the Maryland oyster catch was nearly 15 million bushels.

The rest of the country may have been luxuriating in their limited holiday free time, but Texas cowboys, for once, had the jump on relaxation — whether they wanted it or not. The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad had reached the heart of Longhorn cattle country in 1885, ending the need for long Wild West cattle drives north from the Lone Star State.

Progess hadn't stopped at the train station: In 1885, Chicago's Home Insurance building became the world's first skyscraper.

Louis Pasteur developed a treatment for rabies; and the first successful appendectomy was performed.

Social progress gave women the chance to earn graduate degrees for the first time at Bryn Mawr College, founded by Dr. Joseph Taylor in 1885.

Just 20 years after the Civil War, blacks, too, were making inroads. Bishop Benjamin William Arnett was elected to the Ohio legislature, becoming the first black to represent a predominantly white constituency. In New York, The Cuban Giants, the first black professional baseball team, was organized. (Pitchers and catchers made $18 per week; infielders, $15; outfielders, $12.)

Had this been your first Christmas, you would've been in good company. Ezra Pound was born in 1885, along with D.H. Lawrence, Sinclair Lewis and Anna Pavlova.

"A Child's Garden of Verses" was written in 1885 by Robert Louis Stevenson; and Richard Burton wrote "The Arabian Nights." The Boston Pops was founded; Karl Marx's "Das Kapital" was published; and Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" opened at London' Savoy Theatre.

And "King Solomon's Mines" — which is one of the movies of Christmas 1985 — was originally a novel — written by H. Rider Haggard in 1885.

'Chevy man' collects antiques

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Keith Pope is a farmer, a regular job holder and something more unusual — a collector of antique farm equipment.

The long road down to the Pope place, east of here just off Interstate 30, is covered in white rock. Dust spews up in angry resistance to passing tires. Thoughts of the movie "Giant" creep into the mind. Holstein cows with wide eyes line the south fence, expressing unsophisticated curiosity.

Pope's wife, Karallu, greats the visitor, curbing an old blue heeler hound that is defending "his" place.

"Keith and Levi are down in the field," she says.

"I'm supposed to go down and bring them back up when you arrive. Why don't we get in the '30 Chevy truck and go down and get them?"

The truck is a beauty with a natural wood top — the original — still intact. Inside is room for two and there are a lot of strange knobs and buttons. It takes a few minutes for the farmer's wife to find the choke, but then the problem of how to crank the truck is solved and the '30 Chevy starts right up.

About a half-mile away in the field, Pope is plowing and 5-year-old Levi is forging through the big plowed chunks with another dog.

Bumping along on the trip back to the house, Mrs. Pope relates the story of the 1930s truck: "We were married in January of 1977 and took our honeymoon at our relatives in Missouri. We saw this old truck which a farmer there had bought new and used on his farm. We couldn't afford it then.

"Later, in 1983, I called the man, bought the truck, and presented the title to my husband for his birthday. This is our favorite piece. It only goes 35 mph, but that's great for us — we use it to haul grain in from the fields where we use our antique combine. We also haul hay we bail with out late '30s Ann Arbor bailer."

One of the odder antiques in the Pope collection is the "Go-devil" which is implanted in the flower bed at the front door of the house. Levi jumps on the instrument — a strange, rusted concoction of iron seats, discs and plows. There are no wheels.

"This implement took two mules to pull through the fields, and it was used to disc and plow furrows for cotton and other crops," Pope explains.

Pope has a preference for General Motors products. "I am a Chevy man," he says.

Parked in the barn, in various stages of restoration, are a 1956 Chevy station wagon, a 1937 two-ton Chevy truck and a 1938 one-ton doolie panel Chevy delivery van.

But his favorite is the Chevy truck. "I don't want to part with that old 1930 Chevy truck. It is my favorite, and it is in the best shape of most of what we have. When I drive that one to town, a lot of people ask me what I want for it. I say a ridiculous sum like $15,000 just to put them off and then tell them that I don't really want to get rid of it."

It isn't always easy to collect old abandoned implements. Many are buried in mud, and as they rest for long periods in pastures, trees sprouts grow up through cracks in the frames, some growing quite large over the years. The tree problem is a common one for the Popes as they salvage items.

"We have to take chain saws, axes and shovels to get many of these implements free. One tractor we got — a 1930 C.C. Case tractor with lug wheels — was buried axle deep in mud. We had to dig that one out," he recalled.

"One implement we dug out had the whole tree still sticking out of the top after we loaded it on the trailer to come home.

White: oil price drop said not devestating

AUSTIN (AP) — The decision by OPEC ministers to let oil prices fall below current levels shouldn't dramatically affect Texas' oil and gas severance tax revenues, state officials say.

Gov. Mark White told his Thursday news conference that the price reductions still are higher than the estimates used in preparing the current state government budget.

"I don't think there's anything to be alarmed (about) at this time," White said.

Sunday, members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to abandon attempts to control world oil prices through cuts in production.

The 13-nation group also decided to give up its defense of the current $28 per barrel price, instead seeking to protect a share of the world market but cutting its prices.

Dale Craymer, director of revenue estimates for the state comptroller's office, said the action was expected.

"We realize that OPEC has some very basic problems, and that was reflected and is reflected in our own price forecasts," he said.

Craymer said oil companies apparently also anticipated the OPEC decision, as evidenced by a decrease in exploration.

"Drilling activity is way down right now from what it normally is at this time of year, in spite of the fact that prices have been fairly firm," he said.
