'Toy' Trans-Atlantic Plane Flies Northern Route To England

DARING YOUNG BRITISH FLIER ON OCEAN TRIP

Lieut. Comm. MacDonald Leaves Harbor Grace Unexpectedly

IN TINY MOTH PLANE

Modest Aviator Didn't Even Tell Wife of Departure

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Oct. 17. (UP)—Alone in the smallest airplane ever used on a projected transatlantic flight Lieut. Comm. H. C. MacDonald tonight followed the northern air lane that leads to England or to death.

Quietly, and with the same shy manner which has marked his brief but admirable career as a pilot, the London flier climbed into the cockpit of his 85-horsepower Gipsy Moth plane at Harbor Grace at 11:51 a. m., and started home. No report from the tiny plane had been received at 9 p. m., more than nine hours after his departure.

There was no delay, once MacDonald had made up his mind to start. Loaded to capacity, the single-seated plane took the air and started her long trip over the water gap to Irish shores and MacDonald who had been seeking a sporting thrill in the air since he took up flying a year ago was facing his great adventure—the adventure which he had failed to find in a remarkable air tour of the near east last spring.

Confidence in Plane

He had confidence in his plane and wanted only reasonable weather. MacDonald said when he arrived here three weeks ago from England. He flew tonight with a stiff wind riding his plane from the northwest and with small areas of rain ahead. He flew without radio facilities, with only his instruments to guide him and with no hope for safety if his plane was forced down at sea during the flight.

Even for a sturdy flier like MacDonald, who likes his adventure but likes it away from the public eye, there were plenty of dangers ahead.

The flier realized before his start that he might encounter unexpected storms. With that in view, he told spectators who saw him loading the little plane that he was making a long trial flight with full load.

Mechanic Reveals Plan

"I'll probably take five or six hours," he remarked carelessly as he watched his mechanic filling the extra gasoline tanks to capacity. In the same spirit he entered the plane and roared away as unconcerned as any air tourist flying over to the next town.

It was not until darkness had closed down and the plane had not

Talking Movies Mean More to 'Main Street'

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 17. (UP)—Sound pictures are destined to mean infinitely more to Main street than to Broadway, A. M. Lightman, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Arkansas, told the national exhibitors body in convention today.

Main street will be wired for sound in two years, Lightman believes.

THOMAS DAVIS GOES ON TRIAL

Suspended Sentence for Boy Is Asked

EASTLAND, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—Two jurors remained to be selected for the trial of Thomas Davis, charged with the participation in the slaying of Lucian and Leon Shook near Leeray last month, when two special venires totaling 100 men had been exhausted tonight.

Judge Elzo Been, who conducted his second straight night session, ordered another venire of 25 summoned for the opening of court tomorrow. As the defense had exhausted eight challenges and the state four it was thought certain that the panel would be completed within an hour tomorrow and testimony begun.

Only five jurors were obtained at the night session. Most of those examined disqualified themselves, either by expressing opposition to the death penalty, which the state has asked for Davis, or by opposition to a suspended sentence, which the defense said it would ask in event of conviction.

When the trial began, the defense motion was not filed. Several of the 31 ventiremen examined were disqualified when they admitted they would object to a suspended sentence if they found Davis guilty.

Davis' trial follows the conviction last night of Clyde Thompson, 18, of the murder of Lucian Shook, the same charge on which Davis is being tried. The jury recommended a death penalty.

Thomas Davis' younger brother, Woodrow Wilson Davis, 12, was the chief state witness in Thompson's trial, describing in detail events on the night of the shooting.

Gainesville Woman May Be Unable to Testify

GAINESVILLE, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—Plans to try Silas Jorman, Houston negro, here Monday for an attack on Mrs. A. R. Hassenpflug Jr., may be changed by District Judge Alvin C. Owsley because of statements by physicians that Mrs. Hassenpflug would not be able to testify for three weeks or more, court attaches said today.

Judge Owsley today considered transferring the trial to Sherman, or ordering a special term of court here with a special judge on the bench.

Commander of Zep Details Plans For Line

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (UP)—A regular dirigible service between Europe and the United States within four years, with sailings from both sides of the Atlantic every four or five days, was visualized today by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin.

At least four giant airships will be necessary before the service can be inaugurated, Dr. Eckener explained. The ships will be larger and more powerful than the Graf Zeppelin. It will also be necessary to build two great hangars, one in the United States and one in Europe.

Dr. Eckener favors the vicinity of Washington or Baltimore for the erection of the American terminal in preference to Lakehurst due to unfavorable cross winds which are frequent over New Jersey. The European terminal, he said, probably will be located in the Rhine valley near Eddle, as Friedrichshafen, (from where the Graf Zeppelin started its transatlantic flight) is too high.

Cost Will Mount

A capital of at least $10,000,000 will be necessary for the construction of the four dirigibles and the two hangars. Dr. Eckner estimated the cost of each airship will

GANG WARFARE CLAIMS LIFE OF RACKETEER

Ross J. Murphy Killed and Mike Quinlan Is Wounded

MANY BULLETS FIRED

John Hertz Warned His Grandchild Will Be Kidnaped

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. (UP)—Ross J. Murphy was shot and killed and Mike Quinlan was wounded, probably fatally, here tonight in a machine-gun battle which police described as a reopening of the south side beer war.

Both men were standing near an automobile in front of a drink parlor when another car passed and opened fire, using the modern method of gang warfare—machine-gun fire.

Quinlan to Hospital

Two bullets struck Murphy in the head and he was dying when police arrived. Quinlan fell to the sidewalk with six bullet wounds in his face. He was taken to a hospital where surgeons who operated upon him held little hope for his recovery.

Recent activities on the south side had led police to fear a resumption of the war for beer concessions and the shooting tonight may signal open gun attacks between competing gangs.

The south side district has been a constant worry to police for several months. When the police department was reorganized several weeks ago and John Stege was named assistant commissioner, he ordered seven squads into the district in which Nugent's place is located.

"Upp to Battle Line"

"We are now up to the battle line," Stege said in issuing the order. "Let them start something now."

Police regard Nugent as a friend of Ralph Sheldon, reputed leader of a beer gang. Sheldon formerly was a confederate of Al "Scarface" Capone. The south side beer war has been fought between the Sheldon forces and followers of Stubby McGovern, police said.

Hoover Always Citizen Of U. S., Passports Show

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17. (AP)—The state department in a formal statement today said that it had investigated the antecedents of Herbert Hoover, the Republican presidential nominee, and had found that he has always been an American citizen.

The department explained that it had searched its lists of registrations in London from 1908 to 1918 and found that Herbert Hoover had registered as an American citizen in 1908 in London and that a number of passports had been issued during that period to Mr. Hoover and that he had retained his residence in the United States during all that time.

Forward, Wichita Falls

AN EDITORIAL

THERE is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

The Record News believes that such a tide is about to come to Wichita Falls in the bringing here of Charles Weeks, the successful California expert and colonizer, for a project in the irrigated Wichita Valley.

Mr. Weeks has made a success of his colonization projects in California, successful not only for himself but for those who have entered his colonies and have won a competence and satisfaction. More than forty Wichitans who made a trip to California and who visited one of Mr. Weeks' colonies there will testify to this. J. A. Kemp and members of the agricultural committee of the chamber of commerce who have further investigated Mr. Weeks' method are convinced of the soundness of them. Frank Kell who has also visited Mr. Weeks' colony has been greatly impressed.

There is no doubt in their minds but that Mr. Weeks can do a similar thing here, using larger units and including both dairying and poultry raising. Mr. Weeks himself is reported as being certain of his success, after a visit to the valley a few months ago and after obtaining detailed statistics. He is enthusiastic over Wichita Falls and the spirit of progress and doing he found here.

A successful project of this character will prove the value of the Wichita Valley. It will furnish an example of incalculable worth and will start a mighty development which will fulfill the dreams of our people.

We are told by the agricultural committee that the plan for the project does not involve the raising of any general contribution from the community; that it will be financed by land owners and those directly interested.

But it is important that the whole community give moral support to the plan. For the purpose of acquainting the community with what Mr. Weeks has done and what he believes can be done here a mass meeting has been called at the Municipal Auditorium Friday night at which Mr. Weeks will tell of his California colonies, and plans for the project here will be discussed. His talk will be illustrated with stereopticon views. It is promised that it will be of interest to every dairyman, every poultry raiser and every citizen of Wichita Falls. All of them are invited and urged to attend.

The Record News regards this as a most important meeting. The citizens of Wichita Falls can divide over political matters and can attend meetings of first one political party and then another, but all of them ought to attend this meeting.

Let all citizens come together and be ready for a great forward movement.

G. O. P. Leaders Plead With Hoover To Speak in Missouri Salient

Mammoth Reception Accorded Smith Sets Republican Heads to Wagging

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17. (UP)—Pressure from Missouri Republican leaders for Herbert Hoover to make his one formal western radio address in that border battleground has become very strong since the enthusiastic response Gov. Alfred E. Smith stirred there.

The appeals are carrying such weight with the Republican candidate and his advisers that it appears very probable now Hoover will decide to speak at St. Louis on Nov. 2 on his way west, instead of at one of the cities in the middle and northwest which also has been considered — Minneapolis, Milwaukee and Chicago.

Missouri's 18 electoral votes constitute a prize eagerly sought by both parties. Both sides are claiming the state, and at the same time working with equal vigor. Republicans already have decided to throw one of their "big guns" into the battle there, former Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, who will speak at St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 23. According to reports, Smith received the biggest reception of his campaign at St. Louis, and Republican anxiety is increasing.

The route west by way of St. Louis also would carry Hoover through West Virginia, and Kentucky, the latter one of the "doubtful" border states, for appearances and impromptu speeches. It would take him likewise through Kansas and Colorado, the latter a state where the battle now is close, according to reports. By this route, Hoover would cross the trail of his Democratic opponent in Smith's western and border state tour.

'Ace' Borah Pleads For Democrat Votes

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 17. (AP)—A plea to the voters of North Carolina and of the normally Democratic southern states was made tonight by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, "ace" of the Hoover campaign forces, for them to vote in the presidential election "according to their convictions and not on the basis of party loyalty."

AUSTIN, Oct. 17. (AP)—Oscar Beard and Lee Hodges, convicted in Shelby county of the murder of Wash Lee and given five years in the penitentiary, will get a new trial.

Pinchot Still Favors Election of Hoover

READING, Pa., Oct. 17. (UP)—Former Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania said today he still favored election of Herbert Hoover as president, despite his own failure to qualify as a pro-Hoover campaign speaker.

OIL DECISION NEW 'MATERIAL'

Smith May Discuss New Angle of Scandals

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. (UP)—With the aid of several thousand Chicago policemen on horseback, on motorcycles and afoot, Gov. Alfred E. Smith managed to fight his way across the center of Chicago after his arrival here tonight.

The crowd at the union station was so dense that police formed a huddle around the Democratic presidential nominee to get him through to his car.

Police lined the mile route across the town to his hotel every 10 feet on either side of the street, holding back the crowds among which were many enthusiastic burning red and white flares, and bearing banners announcing that the various wards of the city were for Smith for president.

ABOARD THE SMITH SPECIAL TRAIN, NEARING CHICAGO, Oct. 17. (UP)—The latest development in the never-ending oil scandals probably will be taken up as a campaign issue by Gov. Alfred E. Smith in his speech at Chicago Friday night.

All day long, at railroad stops en route across Mississippi and Illinois to Chicago, telegrams were put aboard his special train bringing him details of the decision of Attorney General Sargent holding invalid the Salt Creek royalty oil lease of Harry Sinclair, the lessee of Teapot Dome.

Pending a complete study of the decision and subsequent activities about it, the Democratic presidential nominee would say nothing. His friends, however, say the Democratic national committee had intended making important use of the situation before the decision.

A New York newspaper supporting Smith is said to have been in readiness for publication of a series of stories about the fact that the Republican national committee chairman, Hubert Work, as secretary of interior, had renewed the optional lease to Sinclair after expiration of the original lease granted by Sinclair's friend, Albert B. Fall.

Smith's friends contend that news of their intentions reached Republican headquarters and insinuate that the decision may have been a result.

CRITICISM FOR SINCLAIR DEAL IS ANSWERED

Former Interior Secretary Says Remarks Are 'Campaign Talk'

CONTRACT IS ENDED

Secret Clause Causes Adverse Opinion on Transaction

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP)—A defense of his action in renewing the contract held by the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company for government royalty oil from the Salt Creek, Wyo., field was made public tonight by former Secretary of Interior Hubert Work, now chairman of the Republican national committee.

Criticisms of the renewal "is entirely of campaign origin," Work said in his statement, issued by the Republican national committee. Terms of the contract offered him no alternative but to renew the contract, Work explained, and this action was on the advice of the interior department solicitor.

Contract Invalid.

Work's statement was made after the interior department's issuance of an order today formally canceling the Sinclair contract, which was made by former Secretary Albert B. Fall in 1922. The department acted pursuant to an opinion of Attorney General Sargent, who held the entire contract invalid because of a secret renewal clause which Fall included in it.

In Sargent's opinion, made public late Tuesday, he held that the interior department was not required to renew the contract, because of this secret clause which voided the entire transaction between Fall and Sinclair.

Quotes Opinion

Work's statement quoted Sargent's opinion as saying that the renewal of the contract was upon the advice of the solicitor of the interior department.

Notice was wired the Sinclair company at Tulsa, Okla., by the interior department today that delivery of oil will be stopped at 7 a. m., Oct. 27. All lessees and operators at Salt Creek were also notified, and they will pay cash in lieu of giving the government royalty oil from the wells until the oil can again be offered for sale at public bidding, the department said.

Byrd's Polar Ship Reaches Equator

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP)—A message received by the navy today from Charles L. Kessler, a marine aboard the Byrd Antarctic vessel Eleanor Bolling, advised Kessler's friends here that the Byrd expedition is nearing the equator on its voyage to the south pole.

"Nearing the line (equator) and our initiation into the ancient order of Neptunus Rex, part of which will be a head shave." The message said. "We have an unofficial race on with the City of New York and it has pepped things up.

Bank of Italy Branch Is Robbed of $7000

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17 (AP)—Using a special police officer as his unwilling aide, a man held up and robbed a downtown branch of the Bank of Italy here today of $7,000 and escaped. The robber carried a bomb with which he forced A. F. Kaduck, the officer, to accompany him to a teller's window.

In a low voice Kaduck told the teller: "This is a holdup man; give him some money." The money obtained was currency.

TEXAS FREIGHT SYSTEM ENDED

Common Point Plan Wiped Out After 50 Years

AUSTIN, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Texas common point freight rate system, in effect for more than 50 years, was ordered wiped out by the state railroad commission today and a straight mileage scale, conforming to the one prescribed by the interstate commerce commission for interstate traffic, was substituted, effective Nov. 8.

The general effect of the order will be to lessen cost of short distance shipments and increase long-haul costs proportionately. It applies mainly to manufactured articles and does not disturb basic agricultural, mine and forest products.

With only a few exceptions, the order "takes care" of objections raised at the recent lengthy hearing by shippers, many of whom were agreeable to the Texas railroads' proposal to apply the straight mileage to intrastate traffic.

The cost probably is the most important in the railroad commission's history. The main purpose of the commission was to remove discrimination of existing intrastate rates against the new interstate rates prescribed by the federal rail body in the consolidated southwestern cases. To do this, the commission substantially adopted the interstate mileage scale for this state.

Varied ramifications of the order are almost incomprehensible to the layman. Twenty-two closely typewritten pages were required to give the opinion of Commission Chairman Clarence E. Gilmore and Commissioners C. V. Terrell and Lon A. Smith, aided and advised by O. D. Hudnall, rate expert of the commission.

Eckener Visions Ocean Service

be about $1,500,000 if built in Germany. If some of the ships are built in the United States the cost would be higher, due to higher labor charges.

The cost of the American terminal is estimated at $3,000,000 and that in Germany would be about $1,500,000.

The service could be operated permanently, despite bad weather, Dr. Eckner said, explaining that he left Germany for the United States in the face of very unfavorable weather reports because he wanted to demonstrate that the airship can withstand all kinds of weather.

He believes the performance of the Graf Zeppelin under the adverse conditions encountered en route demonstrated its efficiency and reliability.

Dr. Eckner believes the transatlantic airship service would be primarily devoted to transportation of mails, with a few cabins for passengers, as, in his opinion, a large revenue would be obtained from the mail service.

Fabric Cut Explained

Speculating as to the possible causes of the accident to the port stabilizer he explained that an empty tin can or some other refuge thrown from the window of the Graz Zeppelin's kitchen may have opened a small cut in the fabric of the fin, allowing the wind to enter and cause greater damage.

Commenting on published reports that Henry Ford pictures the dirigible of the future as having wings, pontoons, and horizontal vanes like the Lacierva auto-giro, Dr. Eckener laughed and said that although Ford is a great man whom he admires, he is not an airship expert.

Eckener said the idea of the dirigible with wings was about 100 years old and entirely impractical since the wings only serve to give the aircraft dynamic lift, which the dirigible can obtain from the lifting gas.

Seven Motors Needed

The ideal cruising speed for transatlantic airships would be 80 to 85 land miles, he said, with a maximum speed of 90 to 95 land miles. The Graf Zeppelin develops about 70 land miles cruising speed and 80 land miles maximum speed. The new airships would be powered with at least seven motors instead of five as the Graf Zeppelin, he said.

Asked whether he expected to obtain financial assistance in the United States to carry out his proposed projects, Dr. Eckner said that on his last trip to he United States, four years ago, a very prominent financier, capable of supplying all the needed capital himself, conferred with him.

The financier, whose name he would not reveal, had offered to finance the scheme, but did not want to assume the moral responsibility of promoting it until he was sure of the safety offered by the airship as a passenger carrier.

To Visit Cities

Cleveland, Akron, Detroit and Chicago are included on the tentative itinerary of the Graf Zeppelin on its flight to the middle west, Eckner said. An attempt also will be made to fly over as many of the small cities as possible while en route.

The dirigible will be moored at the mast at the Ford airport, Detroit, he said, and if that is not feasible, the night will be spent cruising over Lake Erie. It is his plan to fly as much as possible in the daytime so that many people will be able to see the great ship.

The return flight to Germany will be started soon after the midwestern flight, as the ship can be fueled, he indicated. Gas similar to the Blau gas used in the trip here will be furnished by the United States navy, he said.

Bridge Expert Wins Too Many Contests

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17. (UP)—For 18 consecutive weeks Ewell Shiflett won first prize at a charity bridge party in Foresters' Hall. Then he wandered over to another charity affair looking for more bridge tables to conquer. And Ewell conquered. For eight more weeks he copped first honors.

It got so you could set Ewell after he "doubled and redoubled" time after time and still he came out ahead. One night they looked at his scorecard.

"Terrible," everyone said. And it was terrible.

Then the hostess wondered and so did the guests when the "star" turned in high score for the night. They went to the police headquarters.

When detectives visited Shiflett's room they found a complete outfit for faking score cards identical with those used at the tournaments. Ewell's secret was out and they took him to jail.

"There isn't enough loving shown in 'Wings'," has been the most frequent complaint heard from the feminine movie fans who have seen the production.

And there is not a great deal of time and place for superabundance of love scenes that characterize most of the present day movies. But there is plenty love seen amid the fighting, for according to eastern proverbs, the love of man for woman may wane but the love of brother for brother lasts forever. From a more or less disinterested standpoint (nobody could be uninterested in love altogether) we'd say that there is love aplenty in "Wings."

Theatergoers are reckless in their desire for variety and the five-act bill on at the Majestic this week should "hit the spot" with the large number who have complained about the recent number of unit shows.

COP GREETS BOLD 'MASHER'

Swain Gets Surprise as He Makes Call

A "masher" who had annoyed a married woman for several days was taken into custody by a policeman at noon Wednesday when he called at the woman's home. He was released after he had posted a cash bond of $50.

The woman, whose husband was out of the city, told police a man had been "pestering" her by telephone for several days and had called at her home in person. Later at her husband's suggestion she agreed to "see" the man if he would call at the home at noon Wednesday. The caller was met at the door by John Lowry, traffic officer, who hooked him on a "mashing" charge at the station house.

STRANGE BIRDS ON TEXAS ISLE

Bird Island Is Paradise For Ornithologist

GALVESTON, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—A principality of the feathered kingdom and an ornithologist's paradise is Bird island.

It is on this small island, less than a mile long and about half a mile wide, that trappers and government banding agents find migratory birds once common but now so scarce that they are protected by federal laws.

The island, about two miles from the southwest tip of Galveston island and three miles from the mainland, can be reached only by boat at high tide.

The birds have favorable weather conditions. Breezes from the gulf keep the sand as warm as 65 degrees in winter and as cool as 80 degrees in summer.

The island itself offers few attractions to the birds other than its isolation and almost even temperature. The only vegetation is salt grass and salt cedar, and other animal life is scarce. The birds are mostly water fowl, however.

At least two of the rarest species visit the island at times. The whistling and the trumpeting swans have been found there. The reddish and snowy egret also are frequent visitors. Both nest there. Among other birds nesting on the island are the black and the royal tern, the small blue heron and the Louisiana heron, the skimmer, the willet, the curlew, the cormorant, sea pigeons and many more common species.

The beautiful plumes of the egret once adorned feminine apparel, but federal laws now make even possession of an agret feather an offense punishable by a maximum fine of $500.

Birds banded on the isle so their seasonal flights could be traced have been captured as far north as Canada and as far south as Brazil.

Cattle Rustlers These Days Use Motor Trucks to Carry Off Loot

DENVER, Oct. 17. (AP)—Those who lament the passing of the days of frontier chivalry and of spouting six-shooters hear this tale of modern cattle rustling.

The time of wholesale cattle stealing when hundreds of head were run off to the accompaniment of barking firearms is almost past. But tonight one may sit down to a steak which was rustled off a western range in a motor truck.

Coolrado contains less than 200,000 square miles and its population exceeds 1,000,000. Yet, according to the livestock inspection board, the 25,000 or more cattle owners in the state suffer "incalculable" losses every year because of rustling.

Working in twos and threes, modern cattle thieves sometimes drive range cattle to market. Again they drive them across a state line for sale to an innocent buyer or to a confederate. More often they rope a few cows or steers in the dark, load the animals on a truck and haul them to sparsely settled parts for butchering.

Sales Decline

Sales of stolen cattle at markets are falling off because the state board keeps too close a check on brands registered at its office in Denver. Brand marks from other states, however, are not registered, which complicates the problem.

Re-burned brand marks are easily identified, members of the board point out, because an experienced cattle man can distinguish the old burns from the new.

Many stories, some humorous, some tragic, come out of the board's office in connection with rustling. One cites the case of a young man who, desiring to marry, ran some cattle from a neighbor's and shipped them to the Denver herd, loaded them in a railroad car market to obtain money for his nuptials. Alertness of an inspector disclosed the source of the branded cattle and in less than six days the tenderfoot rustler was at the state penitentiary.

But the board generally finds convictions for cattle stealing difficult to obtain. Illegal butchering is hard to prove and it is next to impossible to stop traffic across state lines in sparsely settled regions. Only 44 convictions were recorded last year.

Prices Incentive

Rustling, the board says, has become more prevalent since the price of beef went up, and in a few instances this year herds of 200 to 300 head have disappeared from the ranges. While large bands of thieves no longer are found, the high price of beef has induced smaller groups to undertake bolder operations.

Authorities experience most trouble in the southeastern corner of Colorado, where the state lines of Kansas and Oklahoma offer easy escape from the jurisdiction of Colorado. But interstate traffic in stolen cattle is not confined to that section. The thieves run their booty on the hoof into Utah, Wyoming, and even Nebraska less frequently but with equal persistence.

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It also promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and at the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

NEW AIR LINE OPENS DEC. 1

Air Company Here to Give Service to Dallas

Definite announcement of an air line between Wichita Falls and Dallas with operations to begin by Dec. 1 was made Wednesday by Fulcher Armstrong, president of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company. J. I. Staley and J. E. Hall will be associated with Mr. Armstrong in the company.

Contractors have started work on plans for the construction of a hangar large enough to accommodate six large ships at the company airport on the Henrietta road. The airport will serve as headquarters for the line and will in all probability be called Staley field. Night landings will be made possible by the installation of colored lights.

Surveys will be made between Wichita Falls and San Angelo and between Wichita Falls and Oklahoma City as soon as work is started on the Wichita Falls and Dallas air line, Mr. Armstrong said. If sufficient business can be obtained, lines between these points will be put into operation.

First steps toward obtaining an air mail contract from the federal government between Wichita Falls and Dallas have been taken, according to Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the chamber of commerce. The aviation committee of the chamber of commerce has been seeking to obtain such a line between this city and Dallas for the last several years and expresses itself as well pleased with the plans submitted by the new company, Mr. Harrison said.

Mail, express and passengers will be carried upon completion of the line, with one daily trip planned at the opening.

Dudley Rider has been appointed new manager of the airport of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company.

Chest Issues Appeal For Past Due Pledges

A plea that those who have not paid their past due pledges to the Wichita Falls Community chest do so at once was made at chest headquarters Wednesday.

Memorandums of the pledges made by individuals will be mailed out in the next few days in the hope that many of the delinquents will make good their pledges so the community chest work may continue in good shape to the end of the present fiscal year, Miss Myrle Neely, secretary of the chest, said Wednesday.

SOLID SOUTH BADLY SPLIT

But Demos Yet Remain Hopeful

By D. FIELD BRITTLE

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 17. (AP)—How solid is the "solid South?" That question is the question asked by the rest of the country as it hears that Democratic Dixie is swept by waves of anti-Smith and pro-Hoover sentiment; it wonders whether Republican Herbert Hoover will win any of the electoral votes which traditionally belong to the party of Alfred E. Smith.

The answer awaits Nov. 6, but in the meantime there is ample evidence that the land of cotton is running high political temperature without a parallel since reconstruction days and the invasion of the Republican carpet bagger.

G. O. P. Organizes

Well before the Houston convention entrusted the Democratic standard to Governor Smith, opposition to him was in full vigor below the Mason-Dixon line. Since Houston, that opposition has achieved important proportions; for a time Democratic bolting became almost epidemic. The situation is well reflected in the fact that for the first time in political ages the Republican party is organized and active here, and in the corroborating phenomenon of Democrats actually stumping the South.

Committing Kentucky, Tennessee and Oklahoma as border states, there are 114 electoral votes tucked away in the rest of the South from Virginia to Texas, 114 credits to the electoral college which ordinarily are conceded to be the property of the Democratic presidential choice from the moment the convention has voiced its will. Now, nothing is conceded, as witness Hoover's bid for southern support with his Tennessee speeches; Smith's dip into Dixie on his present tour, and the fact that both vice presidential nominees have been assigned southern itineraries.

Excellent examples are Louisiana and Mississippi, and even in these wells of Democracy there are some Smith men who are sighing with relief at the passing of their recent fears. The Democrats who are standing by the party are fighting one battle against two, the Republicans and the anti-Smith Democrats. They are making now the one appeal that since the war between the states has had most to do with continuing Democratic ascendancy over the Republican party with its negro membership—the appeal and demands for white supremacy.

Smith Favor Returns

Thousands of pieces of literature and numbers of speakers are being sent forth to drive home that one argument above all others. Smith managers say it is having full effect; they assert that defections not only have been stopped, but that a returning wave of favor for Smith and the party has set in.

Above the tumult rises a distinct impression that both Democratic and Republican parties are rebuilding, laying new foundations for the future. Present management of the Republican party in Louisiana, where elsewhere as in the South it has been little more than a name, gives indication that the national organization is thinking more of every fourth year to come than it is of 1928. It has taken steps to disassociate itself from the negro domination of the past; in place of the "black and tan" arrangement of other years, the Hoover campaign here now is directed by a "Lily White" Hoover club. In addition, as in some other states, the Republican electors all are white.

It is the hope of Republican leaders that they will be able to retain the bulk of the dissenting Democrats they will acquire this year. They desire to build up a new party that will in time destroy the preponderant Democratic majorities. Conversely, the Democrats are determined to smother Republican opposition now for good and all.

West Swathed in Doubt as Both Smith and Hoover Show Strength

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 17. (UP)—Three weeks from today will be the morning after election and one party or the other is going to wake up with a terrible headache, but which one is destined to call for the cold towels becomes more uncertain as the campaign progresses.

Smith is swinging through pivotal territory this week. He must win some of it to be elected. Missouri is so evenly divided apparently that the effect of his visit to the state might tip it into the Democratic column.

In Illinois Smith apparently feels he has a good chance, judging by the time he has allowed himself there, yet all previous indications were against him because of the tremendous normal Republican majority.

Tough Argument

Hoover further developed the Republican prosperity issue in his Boston speech, and as the campaign goes on it is apparent that the Republicans are relying upon the average voter's desire to go on buying automobiles. Voters who have not been pulled away from Smith because of religion or prohibition are now to be prodded on the pocket nerve with the argument that the country is doing well enough now, so why change.

This is the hardest argument the Democrats have to meet. Governor Smith's attempt at Sedalia, Mo., to "debunk" Republican economy claims probably will be followed by attacks in similar style upon the monopoly Republicans claim to have on prosperity.

As the campaign develops it becomes more and more uncertain what is going to happen. Political leaders on both sides are boldly claiming everything in sight, but tremendous registrations almost everywhere are baffling.

Here in Colorado one of the Democratic leaders began getting alarming reports from his workers that the heavy registrations were endangering them. He conducted a direct investigation, dipping into various precincts, and he claims to have found a great number of Smith voters, who had never voted before, were turning out. In other sections it is likely the new registration represents a preponderance of Hoover votes. But nobody knows, and for that reason the present election is in more doubt than any in many years.

Different Predictions

One prominent Republican told the United Press correspondent he believed Smith would come very close to winning, yet at the same time he quoted a Republican of national fame who predicted privately Hoover would achieve one of the most striking victories in political history, chiefly because of the religious issue.

In the western Hoover states most Republicans say they expect Smith to poll a large vote and in practically every state the Republicans expect Hoover's vote will fall below that of Coolidge four years ago.

Everywhere the campaign revolves around Smith, pro and con. This observation has been made to the United Press correspondent countless times in more than a dozen states thus far visited. Many Republicans have said Smith would win or come close to it were it not for his religion.

There are signs that religion and prohibition are being pretty well talked out and that they have decided all of the votes they will decide, and that as the campaign progresses economic questions will become more prominent in the debate.

It is the opinion of most unbiased judges that at the moment Hoover has the advantage, but that Smith after slipping somewhat at the start of his campaign, is gaining now and is in a position where, with a good share of the breaks, he might win. All politicians regard his present trip as a vital one and many believe the result will be decided by the votes he makes or fails to make in the states he is now visiting.

DEMOS CLAIM MONTANA VOTES

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 17.(UP)—The three great sparsely populated neighboring states of Montana, Wyoming and Idaho together cast only 10 electoral votes—the same as Oklahoma. Yet in a close election one of these might be sufficient to turn the result, so neither party is passing them by.

Democrats are directing the fight for all three from regional headquarters here under the direction of Fred Johnson, of Rock Springs, Wyo., who did the first organizing work for Governor Smith in the Rocky mountain region. Of the three states, Governor Smith has the best chance in Montana, with only a slight chance in Wyoming and even less in Idaho.

The situation in each of these three states is roughly summarized as follows:

Montana—Four electoral votes. Democrats claim the advantage in this state because two years ago on a referendum it voted to wipe off its state enforcement act. This year drys are trying to restore the state enforcement code and are supported by the Republicans and opposed by the Democrats.

Walsh Aids Al

There is a large labor population of progressive leanings. Senator Burton K. Wheeler is up for re-election and is making an aggressive campaign. Senator Thomas J. Walsh, though bone dry, is now pro-Smith. The religious issue is inactive, due to the fact that Senator Walsh is a Roman Catholic and the state has a large Catholic population.

Wyoming—Three electoral votes. This state, with the smallest population of any state, estimated at 200,000, is so much interested in protection due to stock raising and wool that Republicans feel certain Hoover will carry the state. Registration is overwhelmingly larger on the Republican side.

Former Governor Nellie Taylor Ross, though defeated for re-election, is a help to Smith.

Idaho—Four electoral votes. In Idaho Harding got twice as many votes as Cox in 1920. Coolidge got almost three times as many as Davis in 1924, although La Follette was not far behind the Republican vote. The state responds to progressive appeals and has been educated by Senator Borah to regard partisan lines rather lightly. The state is as dry as he is. Republicans feel Idaho warrants no worry at all.

Minnesota, which has been making a bid for tourist travel, had a 24 per cent increase over 1927 in automobiles from other states during the 1928 summer census period of the state highway department.

STAMFORD MAN BUYS RANCH

Waco Firm Sells Choice Dickens County Land

Special to The Record News.

STAMFORD, Texas, Oct. 17.—Sale of the Stafford ranch located some 15 miles north of Spur in Dickens county, by the Amicable Life Insurance company of Waco, to R. V. Colbert, president of the First National bank of this city, also president of the American Hereford Breeders' association with offices in Kansas City, has just been announced.

This ranch comprises seven sections of land and joins on the east the old Putman ranch of 16 sections, also recently purchased by Mr. Colbert and the two, thrown together, make one of the choicest bodies of ranching and farming lands in the state. Range conditions in this particular section are exceptionally good this season and are said by old-timers to be better than they have ever known. Mr. Colbert is stocking his newly acquired property with cattle from the pure bred Hereford herds on his Jones, Haskell and Shackelford counties ranches.

The registered Hereford herd of R. V. Colbert and son, T. R. Colbert, located on their ranch in Haskell county, some three miles north of Stamford, is still maintained to a high degree of efficiency in point of producing breeding and show Herefords that rank with the best to be found in the United States, as evidenced by the recent sale of a yearling herd bull from this herd to Mr. T. B. Ellison of Fort Worth, for $2,000, and a 2-year-old herd bull to Mr. J. C. McNeill of Spur, for $2,500.

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their systems. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles. Or, to prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours, use this special coupon:

Woodpile to Greet Alms Seekers at Beaumont

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—Seekers for alms at the Beaumont Salvation Army hotel in the future will be greeted by a large woodpile.

A woodyard near the hotel has been acquired by the hostelry, and the new ruling is that for able bodied men, one hour in the yard will be required for a bed for the night. One hour also will be required for each meal.

It is explained that this does not apply to those who are physically incapacitated, but an effort to help those who wish to help themselves and are able bodied.

HOW TO FIGHT EXCESS FAT

There are sure ways, of course, but never suffer them. There is a pleasant, modern and scientific, which number the ... number of people now use it. And the slender figures now seen everywhere are largely due to that.

That method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for years—millions of boxes of them. Almost everybody in almost every circle knows of them. Now beauty, new health, new vitality.

Each box of Marmola contains the formula, also the scientific reasons for results. No guess-work, no fake theory. Learn the facts about Marmola, because of the good it has done. Ask your druggist—now—for a $1 box with the book. Then decide.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

Cherie must be dressing to go out. We know for a certainty that this is her newest evening slip. The slip is cut to conform to the princess silhouette and the pointed seaming in the front may or may not aid in that, but it must certainly give one the feeling of being smartly clad from the skin up.

The slip, we forgot to say, was of peach crepe back satin and was trimmed with binche lace. This dress is something new. Smart as beige lace has been and smart as black lace has been it's only just occurred to someone to put the two together. The bodice, sleeves and top of the skirt are beige. The flounces, black.

This dress is grey moire with flat skirt tiers and tight sleeves that flare out at the wrists without cuffs. The trimmings are black satin—a jabot that becomes on the right shoulder, a long scarf that can be twisted about the throat. We'd like to suggest the possibilities of that scarf for a really good murder story.

She wasn't going anywhere. Merely to bed. Note the nightgown ensemble—a gown of peach crepe trimmed with Alencon and a three-quarter length coat to match. At the extreme right, the modernistic purse shows a clever use of stitching on suede. It also shows other things, too, since at the moment it is completely empty.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—While in Honduras, a New York family acquired a most efficient maid. She was good natured, capable, anxious to please, and when the family came home, they decided they would bring this treasure with them. They did.

After a few weeks in America, the maid said she wanted her picture taken to send home. She was told where there was a photographer who was good and not too expensive, and she set out to find him.

It was about a week later that she came to her mistress with proofs of the pictures.

"Horrors!" said the lady, "you can't send these pictures home. Whatever made you have them taken this way?" And she looked through four poses of the girl with her hair down and posed in her underwear.

"That's what the photographer told me," said the maid, "I couldn't have them that way, but I insist. I want them that way. I am an American now, and I want the folks at home to know I am American. I want to be like they are."

"But they don't get photographed that way in America," said her mistress. What made you think they did?"

The girl disappeared and brought back a stack of magazines which she had taken from the library of the home as the new issues replaced them. She turned to the advertising sections and showed the lady dozens of pictures of pretty girls in underwear and corsets, with hair loose, and looking exceedingly attractive—for advertisements.

"The girl is so pretty she will probably wind up posing for some artist," said the lady. At any rate those pictures are going to be finished and sent home. I have given up trying to dissuade her."

The lady was glad that the maid hadn't seen any of the advertisements for an Al Woods show, and insisted upon being photographed in bed.

"And," said she, "you should have seen the filmy undies she bought for those photographs! It isn't likely she will be able to buy anything else all winter after paying for the chiffon things and the photographs."

And wouldn't you like to see the faces of the un-American relatives when the photographs arrive in Honduras?

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

By SHIRLEY BLAKE

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture. You can get this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and luster of your hair.

Everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. —Adv.

Variety Offered In Vaudeville

Five Acts Promised in New Program

A few of the joyous incidents in the life of the soldiers overseas will make up the different scenes of "Side Kicks," the C. B. Maddox production which will open the five-act program of the interstate vaudeville bill at the Majestic theater Thursday and Friday.

Vaudeville fans will be given a treat in this week's vaudeville skit since the deluge of unit shows of the last two weeks and those of the last season.

Adding grace to the second part of the bill is Ethel Davis, late of the Greenwich Village Follies, who is still singing in the varieties despite her best laid plans to return to musical comedy. She offers clever little narrative songs held together with coupling pins of comedy chatter.

Ray Vaughn is called the king of syncopation and he bears the xylophone as crown for there seems to be style in crowns as in other things. Vaughn offers good music on an instrument difficult to play.

The other two cast on the bill are "The Redcaps," comedy acrobats, and Walton and Byron in "Tell Tales."

Garden Clubs of State to Organize At Dallas Nov. 10

DALLAS, Oct. 17.—The Texas Federation of Garden clubs will be organized in Dallas, Nov. 10, at a meeting called by the Garden club of Dallas, Mrs. Gross R. Scruggs, president. The meeting will be held in the Woman's club.

Eligibility Rules

All garden clubs doing home and civic work are eligible to send delegates to this convention. Delegates will be welcome from organizations conducting annual or semi-annual flower shows, and carrying out programs of garden study. The federation will be open also to groups in other organizations, such as women's clubs and chambers of commerce, who are engaged in simlar activities.

More than 20 garden clubs in Texas have already been located and invitations have been sent to their presidents. Members of the Dallas club are sure, however, that many other organizations exist who would be valuable to the new state body, and who would in turn derive benefit from its association with the state federation.

Rapid Growth

In forming the Texas Federation of Garden clubs, this state is following the lead of Virginia, who in 1920 organized the first state federation of garden clubs in this country. Since then 14 additional states have developed garden organizations, and federations are now in process of formation in Texas and Connecticut. States now having organizations are: Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, New York, Kansas, District of Columbia, New Jersey, Tennessee, Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio, Oregon, Iowa, Georgia and Maryland. This movement is certain to grow, and will doubtless result before long in either a national council or federation. It is easy to imagine the influence such a body would wield.

At the Dallas meeting plans for state-wide activities will be discussed. Those interested in the new state federation are asked to write to Mrs. Gross R. Scruggs, president, the Garden club of Dallas, 3715 Turtle Creek boulevard, Dallas. Full particulars of the meeting will be sent to all who desire them.

"She spells well for her age" is one of the qualifications of Miss Virginia Sue Duval, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Duval of Munday. Her father is president of the First State bank of Munday. The guess would be that if she can spell at all, it would be considered well at that age.

Virginia Sue has a maltese kitty for a pet in addition to four brothers and a daddy who all spoil her. Maybe the youngest brother who is not yet a year old doesn't do a fair share of the spoiling, but the elder members of the family make up for his negligence.

The young lady is engaged in learning singing and folk dancing early in the game and is this season spending her leisure in a study of the arts. She has blue eyes and brown hair and is fond of pretty clothes, inclining toward the artistic.

Girls Can Tell in Plenty of Time What Kind of Hubby They're Getting

How to Tell the Kind of a Husband a Man Will Make Before Marriage—Sage Advice to Movie-Mad Girl—Correcting a Fiancee's Table Manners

Dear Dorothy Dix—My fiance wants to have his way about every thing and if I don't give in to him he gets furiously angry and sulks, and I have to apologize all over the place to get him into a good humor again. If I marry him, do you think I will be happy with him?

MABEL.

Answer: No. I don't think a woman is ever happy with a husband who makes a doormat out of her.

But if you marry this young man, you will deserve what you get, because he has shown you just how he is going to treat you. He has given you a sample of his disposition and shown you just what his attitude is going to be, and you will have only yourself to blame if you let yourself in for a lifetime of misery in having to live with a selfish, overbearing, tyrannical husband.

Don't delude yourself into thinking that there is some magic in the marriage ceremony that changes a man's character. There isn't. What a man was before marriage he continues to be after marriage, only more so, because the fact that his wife is in his power brings out the best or the worst in him.

If a man is by nature gentle, generous and chivalrous, the knowledge that his wife's happiness is in his hands rouses in his breast every tender and protective instinct and makes him treat her like a queen. But if a man is mean and selfish and cruel, the fact that his wife is dependent upon him makes him wreak on her all the cruelty that he has to hide from the balance of the world and he kicks her around as if she were a dog.

So a girl does wisely to take note of a man's disposition while he is courting her and observe the way he treats her. In that way she can get a perfect line on the sort of a husband he will make before she ties up with him for life. If he gets mad every time he can't have his own way, the woman he marries is either in for a lifelong fight or 30 or 40 years' domestic war—or else she will submit and become a poor, downtrodden slave.

If your sweetheart has sulky spells and has to be wheedled and cajoled into a good humor, be sure that after marriage you will always have to walk on eggs for fear of saying or doing something that will offend him, and that he will make one of the gloomy, grouchy husbands that are just about as cheerful and pleasant to have in the house as a corpse.

If your sweetheart always wants to consult his pleasure and not yours, if he takes you to the places that he enjoys going to, instead of the ones you prefer, if he is selfish and inconsiderate, rest assured that after marriage you will be nothing but a household convenience to him and that he will monopolize all the privileges and perquisites of matrimony and leave you to make the sacrifices.

If your young man is high-tempered and hard to get along with before marriage, after marriage, when there is nothing to restrain him, he will fly into rages at the slightest provocation and hurl insults at you that will scorch your very soul and kill your affection and respect for him.

And if he is jealous before marriage, after marriage he will make your life a torment to you by his suspicions and accusations.

So take the tip your fiance is giving you about his disposition and save yourself while there is yet time.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 13 years old and very beautiful and I want to join the movies, but my parents won't give their consent. Would you advise me to run away and go to California or stay at home and grieve it out?

MOVIE CRAZY.

Answer: My dear child, I earnestly advise you to stay at home, where you have three square meals a day and a good bed to sleep in and somebody to provide you with clothes. Because if you run off and go to California you will have none of these.

You will walk the streets of Hollywood, footsore and weary and frightened and homesick, until some policeman arrests you and they telegraph home to your father to come and get you. Or some worse fate may befall you.

In the first place, my silly little child, it takes a lot of money to get to Hollywood, and you probably haven't the price of a railroad ticket to go 50 miles. And in the second place, they earnestly don't want you at Hollywood. The film companies and the town authorities have issued bulletins entreating movie-crazy girls to stay away. The town is flooded with them and they can't get any work in the studios, because thousands of other girls who also though themselves beautiful have arrived before them and pre-empted all the jobs.

Anyway, at 13 you are nothing but a child, so quit thinking about being a movie queen and devote yourself to getting an education, and don't think about running away from home. That would mean certain ruin to you. After you are grown up and your beauty has developed there will be plenty of time for trying to break into the motion pictures.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am engaged to a very sweet girl with whom I am much in love. Although nearly perfect in all other respects, the young lady has one failing that gets upon my nerves, and that I cannot contemplate enduring for a lifetime without a shudder. Her table manners leave much to be desired, especially her chewing, which is distinctly audible. As you realize, it is a subject that one does not like to mention to one's sweetheart. But can't something be done about it, please? Please help me with a suggestion.

HOPEFUL.

Answer: If ever the anonymous letter is justified it is in a case such as this. Why not write her a nice, friendly letter calling her attention to the sin she commits against table etiquette and get some friend to mail it for you in a distant city?

Undoubtedly the girl would be glad to correct the mistake she makes and to break herself of her bad habits. Her errors are the result of ignorance and she will be thankful to have her attention called to them, rather than to go along making herself a laughing stock to all observers.

If you do not want to try the anonymous way of correcting her, have enough courage to tell her of her mistakes. You will be ashamed of a wife who doesn't know how to eat properly. Better take a chance on correcting her table manners before marriage than after marriage. And if she gets angry with you, you will at least have the consolation of having performed a missionary act.

DOROTHY DIX.

PLAN STUDIED FOR CREDITORS

International Insurance Claims May Be Paid

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 17. (UP)—A plan to satisfy $1,112,000 worth of creditors' claims against the International company of St. Louis, formerly the International Life Insurance company, was under consideration here today by Special Master Conway Elder of the United States district court.

The scheme was brought to Elder's attention yesterday, but the court adjourned without definite action.

The plan, which is expected to save creditors some $30,000,000 according to William L. Maston attorney for Massey Wilson, receiver for the company, provides that the Great Southern Life Insurance company of Houston, Texas, shall gain control of more than 20,000 shares of the International Insurance company stock, now held for collateral for loans to the International company of St. Louis and substitute them for contracts of indebtedness for an equal amount.

The plan was suggested by president E. P. Greenwood of the Great Southern. Wilson and his co-receivers have approved the plan, but it must have the sanction of the United States court before it can be set in motion.

Styles of The Times Spread to Funeral Fashions Too, He Says

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 17. (INS)—It may seem that funerals and fashions have little in common yet the art of funeral directing is subject to the dictates of styles the same as any other business, according to W. W. Turpin, Indianapolis, president of the National Funeral Supply Salesmen's club, Turpin is sponsoring an exhibit in connection with the 47th annual convention of the National Funeral Directors association, which opened officially here tonight.

Turpin declared the successful undertaker adopts new innovations and methods in this profession as quickly as a dressmaker follows the fashions in Paris.

There is a style in hearses, in burial clothing, in caskets and the methods of conducting funerals and it is surprising how often these modes change, Turpin declared.

The present tendency in funerals is toward naturalness and inconspicuousness with sedan motor cars replacing the old-time ornate hearse, and clothing of the newest design replacing the somber shroud of other years, said Turpin.

Caskets vary widely in design and price. One bronze exhibit on display is priced at $15,000 and rivals in splender the coffins of ancient kings.

John Coolidge Tries Hard To Make Radish Team

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 17. (UP)—John Coolidge is fighting hard to become a Radish.

PLANES SPEED UP CAMPAIGN

Major Parties Helped By Fast Transportation

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. (AP)—Politicians complained that Washington was too far from the populous centers when that city first was mentioned as the national capital.

It now is no more than 32 hours from the farthest point of the continent as the Democratic and Republican parties have found in this campaign—the first to use the air mail and air express to any extent.

Speakers keep engagements by airplane; campaign literature travels by air and on one occasion a radio broadcasting outfit was sent from St. Louis to Tulsa, Okla., by plane for an address by Senator Borah of Idaho. The outfit was ordered by telephone at noon and at 8 o'clock that night was in use at Tulsa.

The water that I shall give him shall become a well of water springing up into eternal life.—John iv:14.

Remember, all things that have stirred the world have come from within. Is it not written of the Son of Man that "as He prayed the fashion of His countenance was altered?" Yes; it was from His prayer that His transfigured glory came. It was from the glow of His heart that there issued the glow of His countenance; it was when He was musing that the fire burned.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The dire forebodings that preceded the advent of the automobile 30 years ago are finding their echo today as the airplane gains in popularity. These forebodings find lodgment in the mind of a charter member of the Looking Backward and Forward club, an institution which does not exist in name, but which holds forth nightly in the lobby of a certain midtown hotel.

Its membership, if it may be said to have one, is limited to half a dozen men who prefer to think of their New York as it was in the days of Weber and Fields, Captain Churchill, Mollie Reardon's Garrick, Pabst's Harlem, Healey's, Stillgebauer's and Broadway without automobiles. Those were the days of the full cup.

Club meetings are held when, as and if the members are motivated to seek the solace of the lobby nook which has served as a trading post around which odd-lot Broadway gossip has been exchanged for well-nigh two generations.

Since the lure is born of a state of mind which lost its flexibility when Dr. Volstead imposed his prescription on several million unwilling patients, it is ever-present and club meetings are practically a nightly event, barring such accidents as rheumatism, an invitation to hold communion with an ancient body suddenly brought to life in a musty cellar or by way of Canada, or perhaps a first night which holds out promise of merit according to the standards of 1900.

All members duly assembled, formalities are dispensed with. The meeting opens automatically with the arrival of the first members.

"Listen to this," says Mr. Young, flourishing the evening paper. "Here's a piece that tells how a 50-pound sack of flour fell out of an airplane over Kansas City and just missed a boy's head. There it is in print. I've been waiting for it. I know something like it was bound to happen. You remember I predicted 30 years ago that the automobile would come along and scatter death all over the highway. We faced it on the ground then and now we're facing it from the air. Mark my words. Ten years from today, you'll pick up your paper in the morning and you'll see an article that will read about like this:

"'Concrete Hat Saves Pedestrian's Life.'

"'If it had not been for his missile proof helmet, Joseph Rand of 333 West 300th street would have been instantly killed last night when a piano which had fallen out of an airplane passing overhead struck his concrete helmet, bounced off, crashed through a plate glass window in the jewelry shop at 10,000 Broadway.

"'Though stunned by the impact Mr. Rand was not critically injured. It is believed his skull will mend with slight repairs. In the meantime he is congratulating himself upon having recently acquired his concrete helmet, which has come to be the vogue since airplanes have taken possession of the upper air.'"

Tragedy—Here and Abroad

WE HAVE to be close to things to feel very deeply about them. Anything that happens far away, in a place we have never seen, does not touch our emotions.

The whole nation shuddered the other day when 17 convicts were burned to death in an Ohio prison plant. The tragedy shocked us inexpressibly.

But a day or so later Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, chairman of the China Famine Relief organization in New York, received advices from China saying that 200,000 people had been massacred in a Moslem outbreak in Kansu province, China. And most of us, probably, never gave it a second thought.

The butchery of 200,000 people is almost too frightful to think about. But it doesn't stir us very much. It happened too far away—and the victims were Chinese, whom we don't understand.

A Basis for Friendship

THE cordial relations that have existed between the United States and Canada have for years excited the wonder and admiration of the rest of the world.

Since we are living in an era of business, one would expect any enduring relationship to have a pretty firm business foundation. And the friendship between the United States and Canada has precisely that.

Figures just issued by the United States Chamber of Commerce show that in the first six months of 1928 Canada bought more goods from the United States, and sold more goods to it, than any other nation. The total business between the two countries amounted to the amazing total of $661,000,000. More than 18 per cent of all United States exports go to Canada.

Prosperity on one side of the border means prosperity on the other side.

Two Years for Taking a Life

HOW strict should sentences for gross violations of the traffic law be? A Kansas City motorist got drunk and indulged in a mad joyride across town. In this ride he hit two automobiles in succession, ran over and killed a 76-year-old pedestrian, drove away without stopping and crashed into still another car.

He was caught, brought to trial on a charge of manslaughter. He pleaded guilty; the judge sentenced him to two years in prison.

The man's attorneys contended that was a severe sentence. The prosecutor said he thought it was about right. A Kansas City newspaper cries that it was too light.

How about it? Is two years too much or too little for a drunkard who pilots a car he cannot control about the crowded streets of a big city, causing one death, wrecking three cars and failing to take more lives only by the whim of chance?

Good Roads Bond Issues

THE election of a president is not the only important issue facing the voters at the coming election.

Bond issues for highway improvements, totaling the amazing sum of $330,000,000, will be passed on by voters in the various states.

This speaks volumes for the way our civilization is developing. Many men and women who have not yet reached middle age can recall the day when a paved road in the country was almost unheard of; when wagons and carriages plowed along through sand and dust in dry weather and through deep mud in wet. A decade ago, when a motorist asked another how the roads were on a certain route, he meant, "Are they passable, or are they all mud and sink holes?" Now, when he asks that question, he simply wants to know if they are smooth enough for him to drive at 50 miles an hour, or if they need resurfacing and will hold his speed down to 25.

Undoubtedly, the voters will approve the bulk of these bond issues. Good roads are vital to our national welfare.

Eyes That Can See

THE DOORS of the eastern Pennsylvania penitentiary at Philadelphia swung open the other day and a 76-year-old man, James Salerno, walked out. He wore a cheap suit of clothes and had $10 in his pocket, and he knew not a soul in the city. He was about to "start life anew," as a press dispatch put it, after serving 22 years of a life sentence for murder.

Starting life anew, at the age of 76, with no other resource than a $10 bill, can't be such a snap. In fact, after the three-score and ten limitation has been passed, one might say that the job would be pretty difficult even with much more money than $10.

However, human nature being the hopeful thing it is, James Salerno was quite jubilant when he regained his freedom. When you have spent 22 years in prison—this old chap occupied the same cell all that time—any possible change is for the better. Freedom, even if it brings starvation, is worth having.

Indeed, you might even say that in some respects the aged ex-convict is to be envied. Only a few years remain to him, and they doubtless will be filled with trouble. Yet, fresh from two decades of imprisonment, he may be able to see things that most of us ordinarily fail to see.

Perhaps he can see the dignity and courage of human life better than we do. He has seen only guards and convicts for 22 years; now he can see men working their lives out in order that their children may have it a bit easier. He can see people fighting down grief and discouragement to carry on in tasks that have lost their savor. He can see the endless sacrifice and devotion that ordinary men and women put into the daily routine.

Those things are before our eyes every day, but we are too used to them. We miss them because they are too obvious. We take them for granted.

Perhaps this homeless old wanderer, turned loose at 76 with $10 and a new suit of clothes to "start life anew," can see those things. If he can, he will be better off than some of us who feel sorry for him.

For to see such things—to realize the infinite heroism and fidelity and endurance of the average misguided man and woman—is to find life satisfying and noble. To miss them is to find it empty. And that is the tragedy that overtakes too many of us.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

By HERMAN LANDON

Copyright by G. Howard Watt — Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

INSTALLMENT XIX

Thomas Dean, successful young novelist, has hidden from the world his old name Paul Forrester, because the latter was connected with a self-defense killing out West and Dean still carries the scar of that encounter. But a series of circumstances swirls him into a vortex of mysteries. First he reads a deathbed confession of the murder of Paul Forrester five years before, made by

Martin Lamont, Western business man, on a visit to New York, and witnessed by Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, and Dr. John Ballinger, well known doctor. Then a mysterious lady,

Viola Gray, visits him and

Lieutenant Shane finds the remains of the murdered man in "The Room Under the Stairs," of Dean's deserted family home. A watch marked "P. F." completes the identification, although Dean finds pieces of another watch crystal at the scene of the murder. Later an attempt is made on his life by

Freddie Mills, a hired assassin, and Dean's subsequent appearance alive produces a startling effect on both Miss Gray and Dr. Ballinger. Finally, after Dean has heard a woman's screams through the dying man's telephone, Lamont is murdered, and Dean trails the lawyer to a hidden room in the latter's house. There he finds

Shirley Lamont, the dead man's daughter, held as prisoner, and is discovered by Littleby.

Miss Lamont Wavers

The lawyer, fingering his inevitable pince-nez, came forward with a prim and doleful air. Evidently he had not retired since Dean followed his movements in the corridor, for he still wore his sedate swallow-tail coat and trousers of a faint gray check. For a moment his eyes met the girl's in a way which made Dean wonder whether an optical message were being exchanged between them, and then the lawyer seated himself with the ceremonious deliberateness which he affected in all things.

"I wonder if there is such a thing as mental telepathy," he said musingly. "Ever since I left you—it must be fully an hour ago, isn't it? —I have been troubled with a persistent feeling that all wasn't well with you, Miss Lamont. At length I decided to investigate, arriving here just in time to find you engaged in a highly diverting conversation with this—this officious young man. You showed admirable discretion in your refusal to accept him at his face value—the same sagacity in regard to character that was one of your poor father's sterling traits." He sighed ostentatiously. "May I suggest again that you ask him where he was when the fatal shot was fired?"

His eyes sought the girl's downcast ones as he spoke, and when she looked up their glances once more tangled in a manner which to Dean suggested a secret understanding. Yet he perceived in Miss Lamont's manner a sigh of dread and inward shrinking, while behind the lawyer's sleek personality there was a hint of subtly domineering influence. He wondered what it meant, and then he found Miss Lamont fixing him with a questioning gaze.

"Will you answer that question, Mr. Dean?" she said coldly.

Dean hesitated, weighing the possible consequences of a full and candid explanation and what effect it might have on the girl. He did not know what it was that drew his gaze to the telephone in the rear of the room, but of a sudden his brows contracted, and the light of an idea, at first staggering in its immensity, came into his eyes. He looked at the lawyer sitting a few paces away with a sort of gloomy self-satisfaction on his face, then at Miss Lamont. He studied the oval of her face, white and tense and showing signs of a terrific struggle.

A scream echoed in his memory and went booming down an arcanum of mysteries. He recalled the scene at Lamont's bedside when the dying man sat upright in bed, his wasted form trembling in an agony of unspeakable dread, with the telephone receiver pressed to his ear and a look of abysmal terror in his shrunken face. Dean, obsessed by the fearful spectacle, had snatched the receiver from his hand, brought it to his own ear, and then—

Something seemed to snap within his brain, releasing a torrent of wild ideas. Was it Miss Lamont who had uttered that nerve-tearing shriek that was still resounding in chaotic echoes in his mind? If so—

"Miss Lamont has asked you a question," the lawyer reminded him. "Will you tell her where you were when her father was murdered?"

"Gladly," said Dean, a strange calm sweeping over him in the wake of the blinding flash that had just come to him. "I heard the shot distinctly. When it rang out, I was in the stairway between the second and the third floors. Dr. Ballinger and you, Mr. Littleby, were talking on the balcony. I heard my name mentioned and couldn't see any harm in listening in on a conversation that concerned my humble self. Shall I detail what I heard, Mr. Littleby?"

"You needn't," said the lawyer dryly. "I recall that your name came up in a casual way in a chat I had with Dr. Ballinger. The detail wouldn't interest Miss Lamont. It is quite possible that you heard a part of our conversation. We talked for 20 minutes or so if I remember correctly. However, it is only a few steps from the stairway to the room Lamont occupied. You could reach it in less than a minute."

"True," admitted Dean, grasping the implication, "but I had not moved from my position in the stairway when the shot was fired."

The lawyer smiled, a sad, indulgent smile. "Miss Lamont may be satisfied with the statement, but I fear it would fail to convince a hard-headed jury. But we shall let that pass for the present. Perhaps Miss Lamont would be interested to know what explanation you can give for trespassing in another man's house."

"I can satisfy Miss Lamont on that point, but first I would like to know if I am under suspicion."

The lawyer made a deprecatory gesture with his hand. "Oh, I wouldn't say that, but the matter has a certain relevancy in view of something Lamont told me a day or two ago. He believed very strongly that a certain person was interested in hastening his death, and that person was you."

"So Miss Lamont has told me. You are right, Littleby. I owe Miss Lamont an explanation. I came to this house to have a talk with Miss Farnham. Dr. Ballinger had suggested to me that she might enlighten me on certain points. I entered in the approved fashion, ringing the bell and being admitted by a servant. I told her that I had come to see Miss Farnham and could find my way up without being shown."

"Ahem, yes," murmured the lawyer, with a significant glance in Miss Lamont's direction.

"I went up, knocked on the door, but no one answered," Dean went on. He looked as if he found the recital rather boring, but his voice carried a faint note of excitement. "Finally I went in. Apparently the nurse had just stepped out, for Lamont was alone in the room. He was sitting upright in bed, with the telephone receiver at his ear, in a state of tremendous excitement. I could see that he was listening to something that disturbed him inexpressibly."

Dean paused. Miss Lamont, who had remained standing, looked as if she were about to fall, and he conducted her to a chair, meanwhile watching the lawyer askance. At the turn the narrative had taken, Littleby's face had suddenly lost something of its mournful sublimity, its sorrowful calm, taking on instead a look of growing distress.

"Most remarkable," he mumbled, trying to give a skeptical emphasis to his tone.

"It was," Dean assented. "Seeing that Lamont's excitement was approaching the danger point, I took —THURSDAY ... .'...a(AP).... the receiver from him. Naturally I couldn't resist the temptation to find out what was affecting him so tremendously, so I put the receiver to my ear and listened. I don't wonder that he was terrified."

Miss Lamont leaned back in her chair, her lips tightly compressed, her eyes partly closed, looking as if the narrative had conjured up a terrifying scene in her imagination. Littleby, now and then clearing his throat ineffectually, seemed momentarily on the point of interrupting.

"What I heard," said Dean, drawling out the words in a way that gave—a succession of screams.

"They were awful! Never heard anything like them. I couldn't imagine where they came from or who was uttering them—but I think I can now. What's the matter, Littleby? Not feeling well?"

"It's nothing," said Littleby hoarsely, essaying a sickly smile of skepticism. "You are always diverting, Dean, when you exercise your imagination. Makes me feel shivery all over. Go on."

"I have nothing more to tell, except that I took your hospitality for granted and remained in the house in the hope of locating the origin of the screams. I am still mystified, but perhaps Miss Lamont will give us the explanation. You raised these cries, didn't you, Miss Lamont?"

The lawyer gave a husky, incredulous laugh.

Miss Lamont looked as if the question had roused her from a deep and troubled reverie. She raised her head, but her eyes were fixed on an indefinite point in space. Instead of answering Dean's question, she asked another:

"Did you say Mr. Dean, that the nurse was out when you entered father's bedroom?"

"She was, Miss Lamont."

"And father was sitting upright in bed with the receiver to his ear?"

"Exactly."

"And when you took it away from him and put it to your own ear, you heard a scream—several screams."

"Yes, and they were dreadful ones, Miss Lamont."

She sat lost in thought for a moment, unaware of the mocking glance Littleby leveled in her direction.

"Perhaps I should remind you, Miss Lamont," said the lawyer insinuatingly, "that our friend Dean is a novelist and has a novelist's imagination. There is another question you might ask him. See if he will tell us why, after leaving Dr. Ballinger, the nurse and myself in your father's room, he went out of his way to create the impression that he was leaving the house by slamming the outer door, while as a matter of fact he remained inside."

The girl, absorbed in her own problems, paid him no attention. She got up from the chair, and now there was no sign of weakness or hesitation in her movements. She walked direct to where Littleby sat and looked steadily into his eyes.

Straight From the Shoulder

"I think I understand now," she declared firmly. "It was all a hideous conspiracy. Everything is clear to me—everything but the motive. And you arranged everything, Mr. Littleby. You did it so cleverly that I never suspected anything until this moment. What a beast you are!"

Littleby gave her a long virtuous look, deigning no answer, but gazing at the young woman as if trying to control his temper in the face of an ugly and unworthy accusation. Dean could only wonder at her sudden change of front, asking himself whether her woman's intuition had been at work or whether the strange statement she had just made was a crystallization of knowledge already in her possession but whose significance she has not realized until now.

While he was still marveling, he saw a spasm pass across her face. It hardened, grew darker, and a vehement flame seemed to flash from her eyes into Littleby's. She drew back a step, raised herself a little, and the words she spoke sounded as if wrung from her lips by an irresistable force.

"If you did those other things," she declared, "then you did the rest, too. You killed my father!"

Littleby gave a violent start. An ugly sneer appeared on his lips, but it vanished almost instantly.

"You are hysterical, my dear child," he murmured soothingly. "You don't realize what you are saying. But I understand. You are not responsible. In a little while you will regret your hasty words. There now——"

She waved him aside as he rose and tried to take her hand.

"Don't come near me!" she cried. "You have deceived me long enough. You are a murderer. I see murder in your eyes. And then you tried to shift the guilt on an innocent man. Oh, you monster!"

She was beside herself, but Littleby's suavity only grew more pronounced as her emotions mounted higher and higher. He argued with her as one might argue with an unreasonable child.

"Now, aren't you just a little unfair? Haven't you forgotten what your father said, that a certain person who is now in this room would be to blame if he should come to a sudden end?"

"Don't speak of my father! You killed him, and now you are adding insult to your crime. I believe you deceived father just as you deceived me and then, when you found you couldn't deceive him any longer you murdered him."

Littleby's face darkened, expressing the resentment a righteous man might feel at repeated slanders.

"I see you are in no condition to listen to arguments," he said with dignity, "but I shall give you just one more before I leave you to think the matter over. Dean has been good enough to provide me with an alibi. He has told you that I was engaged in conversation with Dr. Ballinger when the shot was fired. If you ask Dr. Ballinger, I am sure he will support the statement."

She gave him a long, doubting look, then turned aside, her figure drooping as if the ebb of her emotions had left her exhausted.

"Oh, I don't care," she mumbled brokenly. "I know!" Then, turning to Dean: "If you can forgive me for what I said a while ago, take me away at once—anywhere."

"Come," said Dean eagerly, holding out his hand and instinctively squaring his shoulders, for he had noted a quick change in Littleby's expression.

With a pathetic trustfulness that touched his heart, she placed her hand in his. It was cold and moist and quivered like a frightened bird.

With a sidelong glance over his shoulder he led her toward the door, momentarily expecting a show of opposition.

But none came. He saw Littleby rise from his chair and stroll casually toward the center of the room, and for a moment he was struck by the peculiar smile, reflecting a sort of serene malevolence, that hovered about the lawyer's lips. He tried to erase the unpleasant impression from his mind as, with the girl beside him, he crossed the little vestibule outside the room. While she watched him in wonder he reached up a hand and pressed a point on the wall almost level with his head. He pressed again and again, and gradually a look of bafflement came into his face.

"Something's wrong!" he muttered. "It worked all right before, but now——"

He paused and glanced through the open hall door into the room where they had left Littleby. Eyes widening, he moved forward a few steps and swept the room with a startled glance.

The lawyer was gone.

THOUGHTS

A lot of good it does to think
Of midnight skies, as black as ink;
Or of the fields where happy cows,
On sweet fresh grasses slowly browse;
Or of a tree, where sings a bird—
Poetic thoughts are so absurd!
I'm not a cow; I cannot live
On grasses that the meadows give.
I am no bird; I cannot be
Contented, singing in a tree;
How can I dream poetic lore,
With hungry wolves outside my door?
Oh, Lord, please make a bleak life sunny
With working thoughts, that make the money.

Collision of Moon and Earth Likely, Declares Sir Oliver Lodge in Talk

LONDON, Oct. 17. (US)—Visualizing the time when the moon may collide with the earth and destroy all life on the planet, Sir Oliver Lodge, the distinguished British scientist-inventor, declared in a lecture before a group of English collegians that forces are at work upon the moon to make it return to its parent body—the earth.

Similarly, he stated, that in a few thousand years the moon of the planet Mars may crash upon the surface of its parent body—Mars.

But the people of this planet need have no fears. Sir Oliver believes that it will be several billion years before there is danger of a collision with the lunar body.

Moon Part of Earth

"The moon was once a part of the earth," Sir Oliver said, "and was split from it. It was pulled away from it. Some people have suggested it broke away in the region of the Pacific ocean, which is the lowest part of the earth, and in that way the area now filled with water was scooped out. I have no opinion on the subject.

"What we can say is that the action which broke it away will tend to push it farther and farther away from the earth for a time, but the solar tides, which are produced by the sun, will gradually pull it back again and make it approach the earth.

"There are many such instances of this reverse action, and it is conceivable that the earth's moon may, millions and millions of years hence, perhaps return to its parent body. It may be said this is fanciful, but it is taking place in the Mars.

Seven-Hour "Month"

"Mars has got a moon very near it—so near that the month on Mars is shorter than the day. Mars' day is like ours, of 24 hours, but the moon goes round it in seven hours. That is, the month is only seven hours long.

"The moon is being pulled in by the tides and hurried along in its rotation. Some day—it may be a few thousand years hence—it must come so close it will graze the planet and come crashing down upon the surface. That will be a very fine sight for those who are alive on this earth, but it will not be the end of the inhabitants of Mars for the Martian moon is very small. It will be a different story if our own moon ever crashes into this planet."

Beautification Program Started at McAllen

M'ALLEN, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—Free flower seed will be distributed to property owners of this town as the result of a recent appropriation of $500 by the chamber of commerce for the purpose.

The beautification program is being carried out under the auspices of the civic affairs committee.

BALLOT PLEDGE PUT TO TEST

Houston Primary Rule Goes to Court

HOUSTON, Oct. 17. (AP)—A test case to determine legality of the city executive committee's proposed pledges which would exclude Hoover Democrats from participating in the city Democratic primary Dec. 1, was filed here today by George Clough, attorney.

The attorney filed mandamus injunction proceedings against the city Democratic executive committee and city officials. He also attacked the legality of the preferential ballot form, prescribed by the city charter.

In order to make a test case of the matter, Clough, a candidate for the committee, has refused to sign a pledge to support all nominees. He said, however, that he would support the national Democratic ticket.

Valley Being Rid of Most Diseased Cattle

EDINBURG, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—Both Hidalgo and Cameron counties are practically free of tubercular-infected cattle, R. E. Chappell, state livestock sanitary commissioner, announced recently after an examination of herds.

The commissioner said the Rio Grande valley had made remarkable progress in ridding itself of diseased cattle, but that tests would be made at six-month intervals until tubercular stock had been eliminated.

BLACKMER CASE PUT ON SHELF

Extradition Hushed Until After Election

PARIS, Oct. 17. (UP)—The tangled affairs of Henry M. Blackmer, who has been in voluntary exile from the United States since the government sought his testimony in connection with the Teapot Dome oil deals, will remain unchanged until after the presidential elections at least, the United Press learned today.

Washington's request for extradition of Blackmer has been stuck in a pigeon hole at the Quai d'Orsay and will remain there until November 6. The request was presented to the foreign office last summer, stating that the former Denver oil man was wanted in connection with income tax charges.

It is no secret here that the United States extradition request has bothered the French government considerably since France prides herself on being a political refuge with laws favoring the individual rather than the nation seeking extradition.

Since the request was made there have been various maneuvers which subsequently delayed final decision and the political significance was considered by officials here. Many persons acquainted with the case expressed the belief that the American attempt to extradite Blackmer was a result of party politics. In view of the approaching elections in the United States, it was decided to shelve the request until the campaign is ended.

When the Quai d'Orsay decides the time is ripe, documents in the case will be turned over to the ministry of justice, which will assign the case to the accusation court. It is likely to remain for some months in the court before it is returned to the ministry of justice with a decision. The decision will be transmitted to the department of foreign affairs, thence to the American embassy.

$1250 In Bounties Paid Callahan Wolf Hunters

The club has some money remaining in its treasury, but committees were appointed to supply funds for payments resulting from a fall trapping campaign which was mapped out.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

HAY FEVER

Judging by the number and type of letters which I am receiving, the annual crop of hay fever or autumnal catarrh is being harvested.

Although cases of hay fever may begin as early as June or July, by far the largest number occurs toward the last part of August and remains until frost. Hay fever patients usually know the exact date when their next attack is going to occur and regard its approach with apprehension. This disease is characterized by a profuse flow of secretions from the eyes and nose, a general feeling of depression, intense headaches and sensitiveness to light, and a loss of appetite. It is exceedingly troublesome and interferes with work and recreation.

The majority of hay fever victims are intellectually developed or highly nervous individuals. The irritation from pollen or dust is usually blamed for causing this disease, but there must always be two other conditions present, first—a general tendency toward acidosis or catarrh and, secondly—a local congestion of the membranes of the nose.

Even though appearing locally, hay fever is really of constitutional origin and is caused by a failure of most of the organs of elimination to discharge their full quota of toxins so that the mucous membranes, irritated by the excessive quantity of acid excretions, develop a chronic state of engorgement.

Much foolish advice is given as to the treatment for hay fever, but the cure is very simple and depends entirely upon dietetic treatment. The person who has a tendency to this disorder must first cleanse his blood stream by a short fast of several days from all food, and he must drink large quantities of water, possible three or four gallons per day, and use at least one enema of a quart of warm water. Shower baths should be used twice daily, followed by brisk rubbing with a rough towel till the skin fairly glows. This stimulates elimination from the skin and relieves the overworked mucous membranes, and relief will almost immediately be felt.

It is surprising how quickly hay fever will disappear under this regime, but if your sickness has been of many years' standing, the tissues may be so chronically engorged that much time may be required for a cure. The inflamed mucous membranes have been trained in the habit of being eliminative organs and the cure cannot be greatly hastened except by those treatments which stimulate elimination.

All starches and sugars, and bananas, should be excluded from the diet for a considerable time and in many cases it seems advisable to discontinue milk and cream, although normal amounts of butter may be used.

Even though you are not suffering from a spell of hay fever at present, you can often prevent its future occurrence by following this regime between the periods of attack.

So many pople have hay fever that many of the sufferers have banded themselves together in an organization which meets annually so that the members can mutually sympathize. I am serving notice on this association that if they invite me to address them next year at their annual convention, I will guarantee to break up their society if the members will follow my advice, and the following year they will not have enough of their old members to form a committee let alone an association.

Developing the Chest and Back

Question: A Reader asks: "Kindly publish in your column whether or not it is possible for a man of 21 years of age to develop the chest and back.

Answer: Unless you are greatly deformed it will be possible for you to develop your chest and back to perfect shape through taking certain exercises. The best exercises are with what are called chest weights which are found in any gymnasium. In addition to this, exercises may be taken by lifting heavy weights unders the instruction of a competent physical culture teacher.

Butter Combinations

Question: Elizabeth asks: "Should butter be used with your starch and protein combinations?"

Answer: Butter is a neutral food and may be used in moderate amounts with any food.

Nervous Child

Question: Anxious Mother writes: "I have a little girl who will be 12 years old next January. She is very nervous and thin. For the last six months she has grown tall very rapidly and is pitifully thin now. What kind of diet would you prescribe for her?"

Answer: Girls often make peculiar changes in their weight and shape during the adolescent period. Do not worry about a "special" diet for her, but see that she has a well balanced diet such as I recommend in my weekly menus. This is an important turning point in a girl's life and it would surely be a good plan for you to have her examined by a competent diagnostician. If he does not find her suffering from any particular disease, you can rest assured that she will start growing plumper within a few months if her meals are regular and well proportioned.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By MORRIS GEST

Morris Gest is one of the world's foremost theatrical producers. He first introduced to America the original Russian ballet and the Moscow Art Theater. Further identification points out that he is the son-in-law of David Belasco.

Morris Gest

"A woman" as Gest's favorite story goes, "who had visited every department of one of the big London shops and worried the majority of the salesmen and saleslaadies without spending a penny, so exasperated one of them that he ventured to make a mild protest.

"'Madam,' he asked, 'are you shopping here?'

"The lady looked surprised, but not by any means annoyed.

"'Certainly!' she replied. 'What did you think I was doing?'

"For a moment the salesman hesitated, then he blurted out, 'Well, madam, I thought perhaps you were taking inventory!'"

Political Campaigning Loses Old Time Thrills

FAIRFIELD, Wis., Oct. 17. (AP)—Political rallies have lost their romance for the three survivors of the Fairfield Martial band which for 60 years has played its way through many state and national campaigns.

"Torchlight processions on horseback, with the band up in front in a four-horse wagon, made your blood tingle," said W. S. Guinter, original snare drummer. "It does not seem so inspiring to ride in a motor truck."

Sylvester Belville, bass drummer, and Theodore Bennett, fifer, are survivors of the 11 original members of the band.

Guinter thinks the Garfield campaign was the most exciting of the fifteen he has taken part in.

Slayton Building Total Sets Six-Year Record

SLATON, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—Slaton's building record promises this year to total more than six former annual figures.

FIGS MAKE PROFIT

GALVESTON, Oct. 17. (AP)—Texas fig growers are realizing a profit of approximately $35 an acre if figures announced by C. W. Van Dyke, president of the Texas Fig Growers' association, follow an average trend.

JUST KIDS — By Ad Carter

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE — "Famous First Ladies"

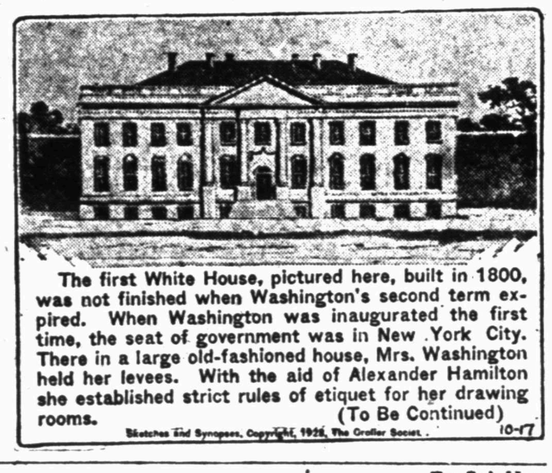

The rooms of the White House overflow with memories of the hostesses who, as the wives of presidents, have dispensed the hospitality of the nation. We never can speak of the White House without seeing in our minds visions of those women whose names are interwoven with its history. Some writers say the name of the White House owes its origin to Martha Washington.

There is a story that the White House was so named in honor of the country seat where Washington had gone to claim his bride.

Other stories say it was named the White House because it was painted white to hide the smokestains on the walls after the British burned it in 1814.

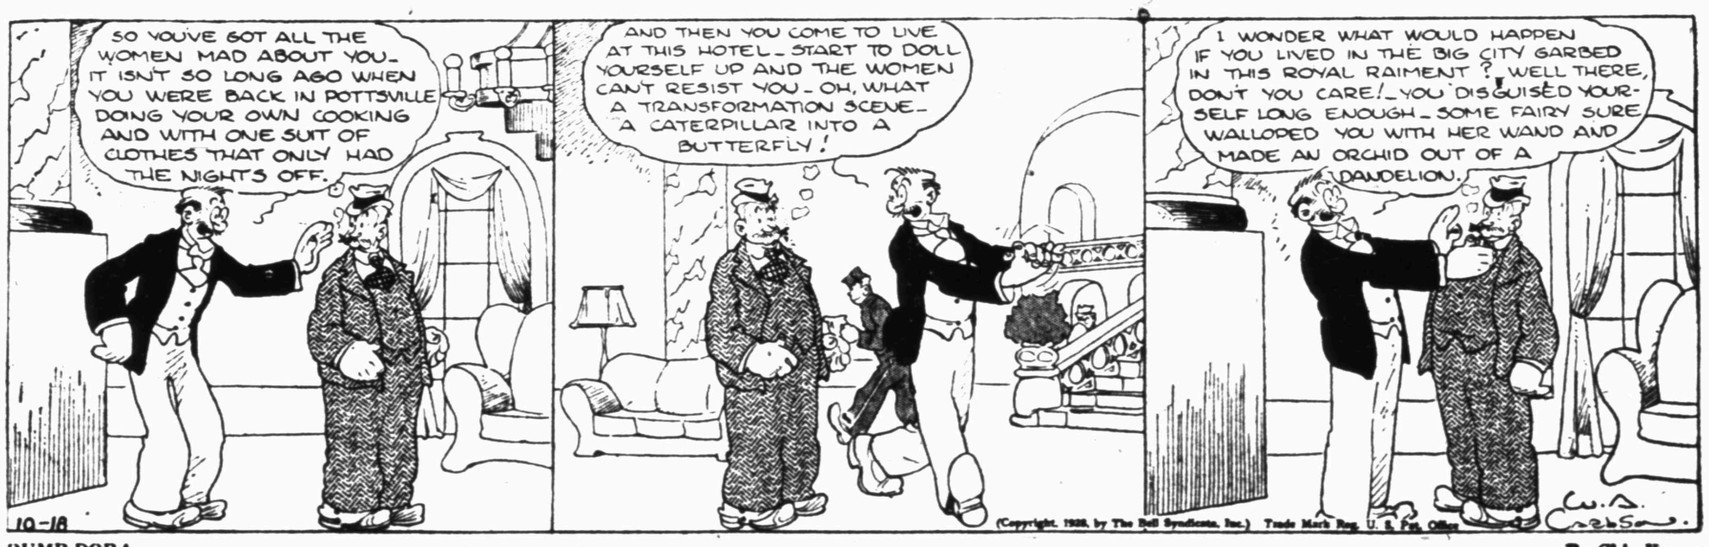

The first White House, pictured here, built in 1800, was not finished when Washington's second term expired. When Washington was inaugurated the first time, the seat of government was in New York City. There in a large old-fashioned house, Mrs. Washington held her levees. With the aid of Alexander Hamilton she established strict rules of etiquet for her drawing rooms.

'KING OF BAND DIRECTORS' PICKS BURK MUSICIANS AS BEST

LIONS BOYS PLACE SECOND

Grandfield Band Third in Contest Here

Youthful West Texas bandsmen marched in all their glory Wednesday afternoon, showing their best colors in a parade before the king of all bandsmen, John Philip Sousa.

Sousa, just arrived for his two concerts here, was surrounded by hundreds at the corner of Scott avenue and Eighth streets, which was selected as the reviewing stand for the parade. Sousa himself was to pick from the aggregation of musicians passing in review what he considered the winning band.

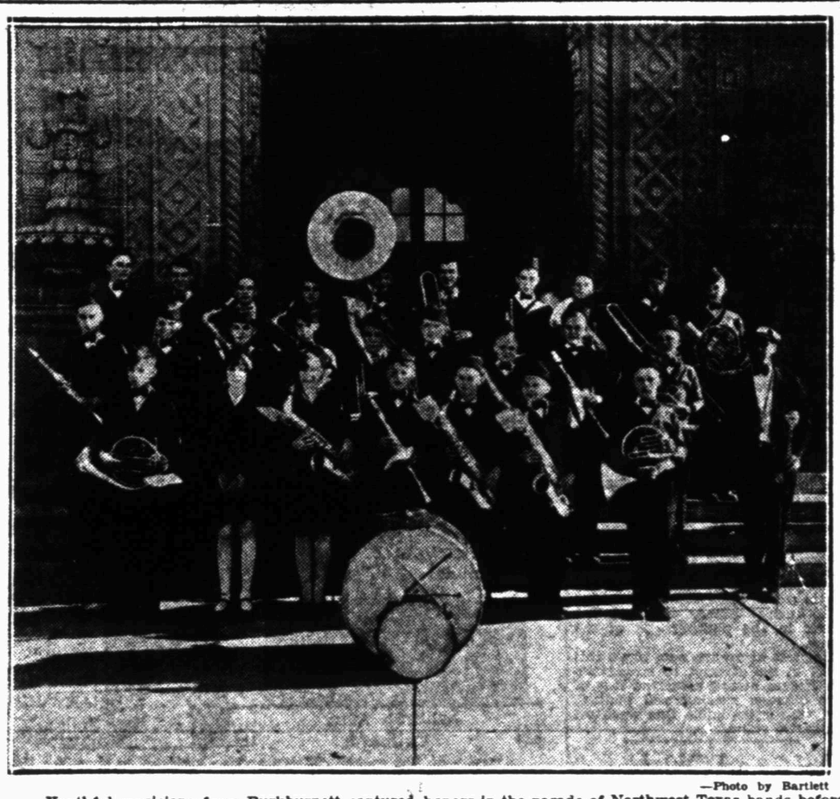

It remained for the Burkburnett High school band, the last to pass before Sousa, to win that honor. Playing a Sousa march, this band, from the first note it struck, drew the attention of the great commander, and when it had passed he gave it a classification of "90" per cent perfect."

The Wichita Falls Lions club band, second to march, was rated second with a classification of 80 per cent; and the Grandfield, Okla., High school band, first to pass, was given third place with 75 per cent.

The Wichita Falls Shrine band also passed in the line of march, but was not entered for competition. After the announcement of the awards, the bandsmen marched to the Memorial auditorium, where after further welcoming the visiting musicians, each band was dismissed.

L. V. Lawler and R. E. Shepherd assisted Mr. Sousa in the judging, giving special attention to the marching formation of the bands.

New Rum Chaser Sent to Beaumont

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 17. (AP)—With the speedboat "Rita' added to the "navy" of the Sabine district rum chasing forces, this section now has two boats whose purpose is to run down craft laden with illicit liquor or other contraband merchandise.

The boat was assigned by the treasury department at the request of A. A. Gunter, collector of customs, to augment the services of the "Imperator," a larger and somewhat slower craft.

The new vessel is 36 feet long and is equipped with a 300-horsepower motor and has an eight-foot beam. Developing the speed of 30 miles an hour it is believed it will be able to cope with any rum carriers which may invade the territory.

One other small vessel, the "Karanawha" will be sold as soon as the new vessel is placed in service, Gunter said.

Gunter believes with the two vessels the area will be practically closed to rum craft.

Noted Fliers Experiment With New Airplane

BERLIN, Oct. 17 (UP).—Clarence D. Chamberlain, Capt. Herman Koehl and Major James Fitzmaurice, transatlantic fliers, experimented today with a Junkers plane of the type of the Bremen, but equipped with an "automatic pilot," which, through automatic operation of various conrols, keeps to a specified course through squalls or storms. Chamberlain said it would be of great advantage in flying in fog or darkness.

Secret Naval Pact to Be Published Thursday

LONDON, Oct. 17 (UP).—The Anglo-French naval accord will be published Thursday or Friday as a 60-page "white paper," it was learned on reliable authority today. The document will contain a complete record of the naval limitation proposals and correspondence.

U. S. TO BUILD GIANT ZEPPS

Blimps to Be Twice Size Of Graf Zeppelin

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (UB)—Two mighty dirigibles, each twice the size of the Graf Zeppelin, are to be constructed for the United States navy, Rear Admiral William E. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aviation for the navy said today.

Admiral Moffett spent the day with Commander Rosendahl, the U. S. navy's representative in the crossing of the German airliner.

"When completed, the two navy dirigibles will each have a gas capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet," he told. "They will be lifted with helium, a gas of which the United States has almost the sole supply. Since helium is non-inflammable, its advantages over the easily ignited hydrogen are obvious."

The American admiral expressed gratification at the success of the Graf Zeppelin's flight.

41,000,000 RADIO BUGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (UP)—The radio audience of the United States is 41,453,496, according to a survey made public by the National Broadcasting company.

'Discovery Week' to Give Amateur Entertainers Chance at Stage

Embryo stars of the stage and the screen will get their first "shot" at a chance before the footlights during "Discovery Week" to be conducted at the Olympic theater beginning Oct. 29 under supervision of Alec B. Ross, local theatrical and sports promoter.

For one week Ross, as representative of the Brown theatrical agency, will conduct nightly amateur contests at the Olympic with local talent entered in various acts. Each night the winning act will be chosen for a one-day contract later at the Olympic, while from the six winners, acts will be chosen for use in theatrical presentations in connection with featuer movies or to fill in vaudeville bills.

The best act of the entire lot so chosen will be given a two-day tryout engagement with the Interstate vaudevile circuit at the Majestic theater here.

Local amateur actors desiring to compete in "Discovery Week" are requested by Mr. Ross to communicate with him by mail in care of the Olympic theater.

LONG SOJOURN

Last Indictment Keeps Case in Court for Two Years

AUSTIN, Oct. 17. (AP)—Because the original indictment was lost the case of John Reagan of Galveston county, convicted of aggravated assault, has been in the courts for more than two years, it was revealed today when the verdict was affirmed by the court of criminal appeals.

That the indictment was missing did not become known until attorneys appeared to argue the case in July, 1927.

Reagan was given six months imprisonment and fined $250 for an alleged attack upon F. Benavides on Oct. 7, 1926.

HICKMAN TALKS WITH OLD PAL

Slayer Forgives Boy for 'Telling on Him'

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Calif., Oct. 17. (INS)—Fulfilling one of his final requests to Warden James B. Holohan, William Edward Hickman, Los Angeles girl slayer, condemned to die on the gallows Friday, today was permitted to talk with his youthful partner in crime—Welby Hunt.

The two youths, brought together in the office of the captain of the yard, faced each other for the first time since their sensational trial in Los Angeles for the robbery and murder of C. Ivy Toms, druggist, which occurred previous to the Marion Parker kidnaping.

"I forgive you, Welby, for telling on me," began Hickman, grasping Hunt's hand as they met in the captain's office in the presence of the warden and guards.

ASKS WIDOW FOR HER FORGIVENESS

PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 17. (INS)—Mrs. C. Ivy Toms, widow of the Rose Hill druggist, C. Ivy Toms, who was slain by William Edward Hickman and Welby Hunt during a Christmas eve holdup in 1926, today received a letter from Hickman in his prison cell pleading forgiveness for the crime.

The letter also asked forgiveness from Policeman C. D. Oliver, who was wounded in the drug store shooting.

"FOX" BARES LIFE AS WARNING

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Calif., Oct. 17. (UP)—Tracing his career from boyhood in an Arkansas village to the death house of San Quentin prison, William Edward Hickman bared intimate details of his life in the "hope that other youths may not follow the same path."

The slayer of Marion Parker, Los Angeles school girl, will be executed on the gallows about 10 a. m. Friday unless one chance in a million—an insanity hearing—saves him from that fate.

The listeners to Hickman's story were three newspapermen and Warden James Holohan who were closeted with the slayer for almost an hour at the youth's request.

Calmly and minutely Hickman related the chronicle of his life—the missteps he feels are responsible for his predicament, and the philosophies he subscribed to as he progressed from petty holdups to the kidnaping and killing of the Parker girl.

Not Insane

From his narration three general conclusions may be drawn:

1. He believes beyond a doubt in his own mind he is not insane.
2. He is assured salvation awaits him and therefore does not fear death.
3. He wishes the youth of the nation to shun the spiritual downfall that he believes led him to the death because he "forsook God's teachings."

"Crime and other evils are signs of ignorance and death," the boy said. "All criminals and unrighteous men are struggling in the clutch of satanic error. By wilful disobedience of God's law they become ignorant of the laws of truth and life. All creation is based upon positive force.

"A young man who tries to build character without truth is like the house built on the sands. It is very dangerous for young men to neglect their spiritual welfare. During high school I took an interest in evolution and atheism and denied Christian faith. Therefore I became susceptible to worse errors and finally took up crime and murder. I beg young people to keep a close watch over their morals. Cling to Christian faith and practice."

Youthful Farm Boys Start Out to Imitate Jesse James; End in Jail

BRISTOW, Okla., Oct. 17. (UP)—A career of crime ended soon after it began for Charley Watson, 19, and Cecil Johnson, 16, farmer boys of Edna, 25 miles southeast of here, when they were arrested yesterday on a charge of hijacking.

Their victims were two negro boys from whom they obtained the sum of 20 cents.

Less than an hour after the holdup friends of the victims captured the would-be desperadoes and held them until officers from Bristow arrived.

At the Bristow jail the boys talked freely of their predicament, and were convinced that crime does not pay.

During questioning at the jail the youths said they got the idea for a career of crime from reading magazine stories of western life and criminal daring. They were on horseback and said they sought to emulate Jesse James, the famous Missouri outlaw of civil war days.

EVANS DENIES KLAN IS BROKE

Imperial Wizard Refutes Charges In Suit

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17. (INS)—A denial that the Ku-Klux Klan was insolvent or was spending money in the political campaign was made today by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in a statement replying to the receivership suit filed yesterday in federal court in Atlanta, Ga.

C. T. Rice, who filed the suit as a member of the klan, charged Evans, J. A. Comer and W. F. Zumbrun, klan officers, had diverted funds to their own use and the organization was insolvent although $100,000,000 has been collected from the membership. A rule was issued requiring the three officers to show cause on Saturday why an injunction should not be issued to restrain them from dissipating klan funds, or converting funds to campaign war chests.

When Food Sours

Sweeten the stomach—instantly

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

TEXAS CONTRACTOR GREATLY BENEFITED BY ORGATONE

Had Suffered With Bad Case of Stomach Trouble for Many Years

"I had suffered for many years with a bad case of stomach trouble," stated Mr. Dan Crabtree of 909 N. Cleveland, Sherman, Texas, a well known contractor, recently in a conversation with an Orgatone representative, "and it had gotten to the point where my heart was bothering me something awful and I did not know what to do for it.

"Of course I was very nervous from such a condition and suffered with dizziness, sleeplessness and that generally worn out and run down feeling and had scarcely any appetite at all. Many times I had had spells with my heart sometimes lasting as long as 72 hours at a time, and it would act like it might stop beating entirely at any moment.

"I began reading about how Orgatone was helping so many people, and although I had tried many different things and was, of course, skeptical about Orgatone, but I started using it. After using one bottle I sure can tell a decided change for the better in my condition. My heart no longer bothers me, I have a wonderful appetite and can eat anything I want without fear of it hurting my stomach. Why, I can now eat foods of which I am particularly fond, and which I have not eaten for many years. I sleep good and awaken greatly refreshed, and your Orgatone has been the cause of my relief and I naturally think it about the finest medicine I ever saw."

Genuine Orgatone is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison Drug store, 716 Indiana Ave., under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative who is meeting the public daily and charges nothing to explain his theories on health and hygiene.—Adv.

GORDON'S Stops Stomach Trouble

For eighteen years people with stomach trouble have been turning to Gordon's (named for its discoverer) as a safe and sure means of overcoming such ailments as indigestion, gas, bloating, constipation, heartburn, dyspepsia, excess acid, that "tired feeling," bad breath, sour stomach, sick headache, and nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion.

Gordon's, being an internal antiseptic, goes right to the seat of stomach and bowel troubles. It exercises a distinctly antiseptic as well as digestive effect. It stops and prevents fermentation (souring of food matter), soothes and heals the irritated or inflamed condition and quickly stimulates the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. A few doses will convince you. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.50—less than three cents a dose. At druggists.

HER LECTURES ARE HELPFUL TO THE YOUNG HOUSEWIFE

Mrs. Chitwood works along entirely original lines. Her lectures will be found especially helpful to the young housewife, and the matron who's desirous of serving better meals at less cost. She seeks to encourage better health through better food. It is not necessary to remain at home every day in order that good nourishing meals may be served in the home. Neither is it necessary for matrons to hurry the family to a cafe after an afternoon at the club or some other social affair. Mrs. Chitwood is going to give suggestions of preparing meals at less cost in time and money but at the same time, meals that will be appetizing and healthful.

The lecture begins promptly at 2:30 Monday afternoon and continues with the demonstration for about two hours. It will pay any housewife to attend each and every one of her splendid lectures the entire week.

GEORGE MORIARTY RESIGNS AS MANAGER OF DETROIT TIGERS

EX-UMP FAILS TO HELP CLUB

Jungaleers Fall From 4th To 6th Under His Care

DETROIT, Oct. 17. (AP)—George Moriarty, manager of the Detroit baseball club of the American league, resigned tonight at the expiration of his two-year contract with the team.

The resignation was contained in a letter to Frank Navin, president of the club, sent by Moriarty from his home in Woodstock, Ill. Beyond stating that the resignation had been accepted, Navin refused to comment. He declined to state if he had signed a new manager or had one under consideration.

Although nothing official was given out, it was more or less an open secret that Moriarty would sever his connection with the team at the conclusion of the past season. In the two seasons that he piloted the Tigers they finished in fourth and sixth places, respectively.

'Aggies Drill to Conquer Frogs

Farmers Practice Hard For Conference Opener

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 17.—Determined to wipe out their recent defeat by the Centenary Gentlemen with a victory over the T. C. U. Horned Frogs in what will be the first conference tilt of the season on Kyle field Saturday, Coach Dana X. Bible's Texas Aggie grid charges are hard at work in an effort to correct all weaknesses shown in the tilt with the Louisianans and in an effort to get their offensive team play functioning perfectly.

The Aggies are looking forward to one of the hardest battles of their schedule when they meet the Horned Frogs, and it is likely that the result of the T. C. U.-Aggie tilt will have an important bearing on the outcome of the conference title race, for both teams are considered to be among the strongest contenders for the flag this season.

In their games thus far in the season the Frogs have the edge on the Aggies, having scored a decisive victory in each of four contests while the Aggies are credited with three victories and one loss in their early season games. That the Frogs have one of the strongest teams in several years is indicated by the fact that they scored a 19-3 victory over the Simmons Cowboys, who were playing all of their men regardless of eligibility under Southwest conference rules, while the S. M. U. Mustangs were barely able to nose out a 6-0 victory over the same team with a large number of the players ruled out under conference rulings.

The Frogs have a real triple-threat team entered in the conference race and promise Coach Bible's eleven a hard battle. In kicking especially the Horned Toads have an advantage if the results of early games can be taken for an indication.

Both teams are expected to resort to an open method of attack and if they continue the style of play which they have used in their non-conference games, there will be thrills a plenty for the spectators. In each of the Frogs' victories their passing attack has been a big factor and the Aggies are well known for their open style of playing.

She Sets Record; Well, What of It?

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (AP)—Mrs. Lottie Moore Schoemme l today clambered out of the hotel swimming pool which had been her bed and boarding place continually for three days and nights. She brought out with her a new world's endurance swimming record of 72 hours, 2 minutes and 40 seconds.

Restoring supremacy in this strange form of athletic activity to the so-called weaker sex, the new mark displaced the former standard set by Jimmy Cherry, ex-sailor, in Los Angeles on Sunday night. The blonde New York woman of 29, mother of two children, stayed in 7 hours and 40 seconds longer than Cherry.

When George Moriarty succeeded Ty Cobb as manager of the Detroit Tigers two seasons ago they were jubilant in Ford's town. So George steps out, the second manager to lose his job since the pennant campaign closed.

RICKARD PLANS MARATHON RUN

El Ouafi and Ray to Race Over Distance Sunday

By FRAUK GETTY

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (UP)—The Olympic games, whatever may be said of their value in promoting international amity, are steeped in tradition which goes back some 15 centuries to those days in the pleasant vale of Olympus when representatives of the various free cities of Hellas met in tests of strength and skill and beauty.

At intervals since the revival of the games in modern times—at Athens, in 1896, to be exact—various gentlemen interested in the promotion of sport for profit have felt a profound conviction that the entire affair was being mismanaged.

The latest to arrive at such a conclusion is Tex Rickard.

Here's Some Ballyho

On next Sunday Rickard will present Abdel Bahimel El Ouafi, winner of the marathon run at the 1928 Olympic games at Amsterdam, who came to this country as a professional a few weeks ago to weave his laurels into shekels.

Opposing El Ouafi, among others, will be Joie Ray.

Gentle El Ouafi, the cow-eyed, chocolate colored, curly haired Algerian camel boy, is supposed to have said that Ray was "yellow," and quit at Amsterdam. Joe is supposed, quite logically if one accepts the original premise, to have resented this and to have announced that he will run El Ouafi into the tan-bark.

Other Entrants

In addition to El Ouafi and Ray, who turned professional a week ago for the purpose of revenging himself upon the gentle Algerian, there will be seven other marathon runners of note if not distinction. There will be Willie Kolehmainen, brother of the famous Hannes and holder of the world's professional record for the full marathon distance—2 hours 29 minutes and 39 seconds. And there will be Juri Lossman of Esthonia, who was just seven seconds behind Hannes Kolehmainen when that long-legged Finn won the Olympic marathon in 1920 in the record time for amateurs—2:32:20.

Others in the race will be Ollie Wittimen, a Finn; Sam Richman, the Hebrew marathoner; Guisto Umek, the Italian, who was fifth in the C. C. Pyle bunion derby; Arthur Newton of South Africa, who holds the world's professional record for running 100 miles, and Gunner Nausland of Sweden.

Quigley to Umpire Baseball in Japan

ST. MARYS, Kan., Oct. 17. (UP)—E. C. Quigley, former athletic director of St. Marys college here and a nationally prominent football, baseball and basket ball official, has left for Japan where he will umpire a series of baseball games between two picked Japanese college teams.

Twelve games will be played between the two teams. Ty Cobb will manage one team and Walter Johnson the other. Five of the games are to be played as part of the coronation ceremonies for the new emperor.

Quigley will also conduct a coaching school for officials in baseball, football and basket ball which have become very popular in Japan recently. Quigley will return to the United States Dec. 12. The trip will mean the cancellation of a number of football engagements in various parts of the country.

Ruth to Broadcast For Demos Tomorrow Night

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (AP)—George Herman (Babe) Ruth will make a campaign plea for support of the Democratic national ticket Friday night, speaking over station WJZ and a nationwide network from 10:30 to 11 p. m., Democratic headquarters announced today. John W. Davis will share the period with the home run expert.

Cubs' Deal for Hornsby Held Up By Transfer of Players to Hub

Wrigley Willing to Pay $200,000 But McCarthy Balks on Handing Over Whole Team for Costly Rogers

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. (US)—William Wrigley is ready to write the check and Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves is ready to cash it, and Rogers Hornsby is reported ready to join the Chicago Cubs and lots of other things are ready but Marse Joe McCarthy, Cubs' manager isn't quite ready to hand over his whole team for Hornsby because Hornsby is only one and not nine.

All this much ado about something was given added importance when William Wrigley admitted he was dickering for the star slugger and was ready to give $200,000, but balked when Fuchs asked more money and two or three players, it is understood.

While refusing to name anything or anybody Wrigley did say this:

"They are asking for everything possible in the way of players, but I am not going to be the judge in this feature of the deal. The club will attend to the cash all right, but McCarthy is the team manager and will have the final say as to which players are to go or not to go. It would be foolish to wreck the present team just to get one great hitter."

Wrigley's statement that $200,000 may not be enough to swing the transaction indicates that an offer of cash and certain players has been made and that Fuchs, while admitting his willingness to trade Hornsby, so far has refused the offer.

That the Boston team not only wished to strengthen its waning treasury but also wished to build up its team was the way Wrigley observed the situation.

It was pointed out that $40,000 was a severe drain on the treasury of the Braves under the present circumstances and that while Hornsby was admittedly the berries, he alone could not put the team on its feet but on the other hand took a powerful slice of the gate receipts with his pay check, something the Boston baseball magnates didn't care to relish.

So it would seem from every indication that the mental wrestling of Mr. Wrigley and Mr. Fuchs was due to bear fruit in the near future and that next year Hornsby will be in Chicago.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

The selection of Mickey Cochrane of the Athletics as the "most valuable player in the American league for the 1928 campaign "probably was as good a choice as could have been made, though of course there will be many who favor another player. Ruth and Gehrig being ineligible for the honor because it had been bestowed upon them previously, Cochrane doubtless was among the foremost players of his league. There is question, however, if the Philadelphia catcher was as valuable to his team as Henie Manush was to his club, the St. Louis Browns.

◇ ◇ ◇

Cochrane was the outstanding star of the Athletics. But his efforts could help them land no higher than second place, where they should have been, if indeed, not first. On the other glove, the Browns were the unanimous choice of the experts to finish far down in the second division, (most of the critics consigned them to the cellar) and the bat of Manush was the greatest factor in the drive of Dan Howley's team which landed them in third position.

◇ ◇ ◇

IT IS SURPRISING that Alvin Crowder and Sam Gray, star pitchers, did not receive a single vote for "most valuable" mention. The name of Lefty Grove, Athletic slab ace, also is missing from the honor roll, which calls for a lifting of the eyebrows. The selection of the "most valuable" committee of Joe Judge of the Senators and Tony Lazzeri for third place (they tied) was rather startling. Both are great ball players but neither had seasons of any particular outstanding merit in 1928, one has been led to believe from box scores and press reports.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE TIMES yesterday has a story about an Irishman who has agreed to an armistice with the Irish Free State after five years of fighting. Seems as if this mick had a gun and for five years he wandered around the land of Shamrocks, taking a shot at the enemy. He probably had forgotten who was the enemy and what he was fighting about, if he ever knew. But anyhow, he had a gun—and a gun is to shoot.

◇ ◇ ◇

Give a man a horse he can ride —or an Irishman a gun or shillelagh.

◇ ◇ ◇

JOHN W. HEISMAN, veteran football coach and tactician, elsewhere on page 11 advances a plan whereby he believes a national collegiate football champion could be definitely determined. Heisman asks the opinion of sports editors on his idea. Mine is that while Heisman's plan is admirable, in that it would settle disputes as to the country's greatest grid team, it is impracticable and impossible of materialization.

◇ ◇ ◇

For the reason that it would put the winning of the championship greater than the game! I know, of course, that football teams play to win. They should, But football is, or is supposed to be, played by collegians primarily for the love of the game and dear old Siwash. Victory is supposed to be secondary and championship trophies, while nice to adorn the grimey showcases of gymnasiums, only matters of secondary interest. What then would be the hue and cry of that element that already stresses football as too commercialized; that deplores costly stadiums and high-priced coaching staffs, if they would play with the determining of a national championship as the goal?

◇ ◇ ◇

TOO, I BELIEVE that Heisman's plan, which is to divide the country into four districts, with two each meeting the second Saturday after Thanksgiving and the survivors clashing the following week for the title, entails too much football. The grid game is a gruelling, battering contest. Players are exhausted, their studies interrupted, from start of school utnil the season ends around Thanksgiving. To send two teams into such battles as would ensue in national semi-finals and final games is asking too much of the young men who would be on the surviving elevens. It is, it seems to me, really putting too great a premium on a championship.

◇ ◇ ◇

HEISMAN'S PLAN would have sports editors select the leaders of the four sections as the surviving teams. That would result in disputes over sectional championships, just as we now have arguments over the national titleholder. A Dallas sports editor might claim the title of this section for S. M. U. and a Shreveport scribe would advance Centenary as best, both honest opinions and each justified. But the situation would not be clarified; would, doubtless, only further increase confusion as to the outstanding team in the country.

TEXAS LEAGUE MOGULS MEET

Magnates in Fall Conclave Saturday at Dallas

DALLAS, Oct. 17. (AP)—Possible revision of the rookie rule and the question of whether the playing season shall be split next year are the chief issues facing eight Texas league baseball club owners who met here Oct. 20 for a fall housecleaning program.

Fred Ankenman, Houston president and league accountant, is in Dallas auditing the circuit's books prior to the meeting.

Previous statements of club moguls showed that only the championship Houston team made any profit during the past season. Several baseball owners in the loop have declared that the marked letdown at the turnstiles was caused by halving the playing schedule.

The league rookie rule, which requires that two men who have never played higher than class B baseball be carried, undoubtedly will be changed if the sentiment of owners takes tangible form. The Southern association plan of carrying five non-class A men is favored by several baseball heads.

Talk of dispersing the league sinking fund also has come in for its share of gossip since the league ended its season.

Indians, Coyotes Set For Conference Openers

By GORDON FULCHER

Wichita Falls junior college and high school football teams began to take on a formidable appearance Wednesday with but one more day of hard practice left before the opening of the conference season this week-end.

Coach E. A. Baggett will send his Junior college Indians against their first conference competition of the season Friday at Athletic park when the Tribe engages Ranger junior college.

Coach Bud McCallum and his assistants drilled the high school Coyotes behind closed gates Wednesday afternoon at Spudder park in an effort to perfect new plays and formations before the opening of the Interscholastic league season Saturday afternoon at Electra.

The high school coaches have centered their efforts this week on developing a quarterback to replace Captain Harvey Black and in all probability Morris Lee will receive the opening assignment Saturday at signal calling with Elliott and Davis passing in Black's place. Jud Bell, husky guard, will replace Black in the punting end of the game.

Baggett also gave new plays this week in his attempt to strengthen the Indian attack after the loss of Olin Dickey, passing and punting ace, who is ineligible this week on scholastic standings.

Texas and Oklahoma Resume Grid Games

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 17. (AP)—The existence of a 10-year contract with the University of Texas, providing for a football game each year with the University of Oklahoma, during the Dallas fair, was revealed here tonight by Ben Owen, athletic director of the university.

When the Big Six conference was organized late last year, the conference granted special permission for the Sooners to play this game away from home, Owen said.

The contract was signed last December by Owen and L. Theodore Belmont, at that time director of athletics for the University of Texas.

The game for next year will be played Oct. 19, Owen said.

Conference Ruling Puzzles Simmons

ABILENE, Oct. 17. (AP)—A ruling handed down by Dr. T. C. Simms of Trinity university, president of the Texas conference, that only two schools, Trinity and Southwestern university, were eligible to win the conference football title proved puzzling to Simmons university authorities here today.

"It seems to me that the Texas conference team winning the most games should be awarded the championship," Prof. J. E. Jurnam, Simmons faculty athletic representative, said when notified of the ruling. "If the title is given any other team it will make a joke of the conference."

Coach Frank Bridges refused to be bothered about the matter.

"My business is to keep the scores of opposing teams under 50," he explained.

Yost Denies Repjorts He'll Leave Michigan

DETROIT, Oct. 17. (UP)—Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan, in a telegram to the United Press from Nashville, Tenn., today, denied printed reports that he might resign from his position at Ann Arbor.

"After the Indiana game," Yost wired, "I came here on important business. The arrangements for this meeting were made 10 days ago. I have been at Michigan nearly 30 years. The last seven years as director of athletics, and will remain there always.

"Michigan football teams during that time have written their own record, which speaks for itself."

Harvard and Army Meet Saturday For First Grid Game Since 1910

Army, with but one touchdown and no victories to show for its 13 games with Harvard, is the favorite for the first Crimson-Cadet contest since 1910. Captain French of Harvard and "Red" Murrel of the Army are the headliners Coaches "Biff" Jones and Arnold Horween will shoot into the fray.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (AP)—The West Point Military academy football team will have a real incentive in its big game with Harvard at Cambridge Oct. 20. Although these teams have met 13 times since their rivalry began in 1895, the Army has never been victorious over Harvard and has been able to score but one touchdown. That was in 1902.

This year's resumption of gridiron relations, marking the first meeting of Harvard and the Army since 1910, will provide an interesting opportunity to see whether the Harvard jinx over the West Pointers still holds good.

The Army, with an experienced line built around its all-American captain, Mort Sprague, stands out as the favorite, although Harvard is ready to give any team a battle this season.

In the 18 years that have passed since Harvard and the Army last met on the gridiron, the Cadets losing by a score of 6 to 0 in 1910, the memory of their long succession of hard fought games may have become somewhat dim. Brushing off the dust, the record looks like this.

1895—Harvard 4, Army 0.
1897—Harvard 10, Army 0.
1898—Harvard 28, Army 0.
1899—Harvard 18, Army 0.

While there is little likelihood that an Army team sporting such backs as Cagle and Murrel and such linemen as Sprague, Perry and Hammack will add another to this lengthy row of goose-eggs, Harvard, too, has hopes of doing some scoring.

That the Crimson this year has possibilities as a powerful attacking machine in the making was shown in its opening game when Captain French, Harper and Guarnaccia, with able assistance from such other backs as Batcheider, E. Putnam and Tom Gilligan, the drop-kicking star, ran roughshod over Springfield to win by a score of 30 to 0. The same Saturday the Army was having a tough time in nosing out Southern Methodist university by 14 to 13 on the West Point plains.

The meeting of these two strong teams should provide one of the real high spots of the October campaign in the east.

MORRISON PANS PONY GRIDDERS

Like All Good Coaches, Ray Does Some 'Scathing'

DALLAS, Oct. 17. (AP)—A blackboard analysis of the mistakes they made in last week's contest with Simmons university, in which the Ponies were extended to win, 6 to 0, was the training program adopted today by Coach Ray Morrison, boss of the Southern Methodist Mustangs.

"I am not satisfied with you," Morrison told his squad, "and I am hoping for a much improved showing against Rice on Saturday."

Spurred by the touch of winter weather in the air, the Ponies took the field and worked until dark on two new formations.

If the plays are successful against the Owls, Morrison will add more to them for possible use against Texas and A. & M.

Frogs to Finish Hard Work Today

Christians Leave Tomorrow For Aggie Battle

FORT WORTH, Oct. 17. (AP)—Horned Frogs of T. C. U. will take their last hard drill before the game with Texas A. & M. Thursday. They will work on new plays, scrimmage against reserves using Texas A. & M. plays and Friday will depart for College Station.

A light signal drill will be on the program Friday, after which they will rest for their battle Saturday.

Today, it appeared that for the first time in four years, Coaches Bell and Kubale plan to launch a heavy offensive against the Aggies. Always before they have been content to play a waiting defensive game against the more touted farmers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (UP)—George Courtney, Oklahoma middleweight contender, knocked out Wilson Yarbo, Cleveland, after one minute, five seconds of fighting in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout here tonight at the St. Nicholas arena.

Plan to Decide College Grid Title Modeled From Texas Prep System

Heisman Advances Scheme to Settle National Championship by Means of Sectional Eliminations

By JOHN W. HEISMAN
Famous Football Tactician and Coach

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—It has long been admitted that the determination of a real football champion each season is, under present conditions, an utter impossibility.

So difficult is it, too, for any team to go through an entire season's schedule without meeting at least one defeat that it has become somewhat customary to consider the team which accomplished such an achievement as the campaign team for that year.

But right on the face of such an assumption is its obvious absurdity, for no two colleges in the entire country play exactly the same list of opponents—as is done in a professional baseball league, for instance!

And yet it would not be so difficult a matter to work out a real champion of the entire country, provided everybody really wanted to have one declared each year. It's done with the high school teams of Texas, and a state championship is awarded there annually though the total number of high schools in the Lone Star state is over 200. In New Jersey, with some 300 high school teams, it's also done yearly to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The Texas System

In Texas, though, the winner in each district cannot be ascertained until about Thanksgiving time, and following that the leaders in the districts must meet each other in elimination contests until it narrows down to only two, and that last game doesn't take place until about Christmas. It would never do to prolong college football that way, even for two teams only.

In the Southern conference there are over 20 member colleges. Even with this limited number it's quite out of the question to have each team play every other member. Indeed, with the minor games and the intersectional games each wants to include in its schedule, few of them get to play as many as five conference opponents.

And yet they have a way of determining a championship in that organization each year, and that way seems to give perfect satisfaction to all. The colleges concerned appoint a committee, consisting of the sports editors of the largest papers in all the cities covered by the Southern, and after studying and comparing carefully the records of each member team these sports editors declare a real champion of the conference.

Now what I would like to see in operation for the entire country is a system that would be a combination of the Texas and the southern methods. Divide the country into four sections and, by Christmas time, the sports editors of each of the four sections could declare a champion team for that section. These four teams would then be paired off against each other in two games, both to be played on the second Saturday following Thanksgiving day. Then the winners of these two games would be paired off in the finals—as is done under the Texas high school system, as is done in intercollegiate tennis, in the open golf championship, and goodness only knows how many other kinds of tournaments.

Here's Heisman's Plan

You ask how I would divide up the country. My idea of the proper four geographical divisions is:

A. The northeastern colleges—located north of the Mason and Dixon line and east of Ohio. In this area are to be found about 21 colleges that, at present, play first class football.

B. The southeastern colleges—located south of the Mason and Dixon line and east of the Mississippi river. In this area are playing first class ball some 15 institutions.

C. The colleges of the Middle West—which would take in about 16 colleges playing top notch ball. It would include all the territory not definite described as belonging to either A, B or D sections.

D. The colleges of the far West, the coast conference, and the Southwest—Texas, New Mexico and Arizona—from the Mississippi river westward, and below the southern boundary of Oklahoma and Colorado and also including the Rocky mountain section. This would give the far West a list of some 15 institutions that play football of the highest grade.

Scribes Pick Champs

To summarize briefly, the organized sports editors of A section and those of B section would choose, after the last regular games of each section, the champion teams for those two. Similarly the committees for C and D sections would do the same thing in their respective territories. Then the champion team of A would meet the champion team of B on the same day that the champion team of C met the champion of D. One week later the winner of the A vs. B game would meet the winner of the C vs. D game for the national championship. It would involve only three post-season games in the entire country, while only two of the 500 college teams playing football would prolong their season into mid-December.

Could anything be simpler? Would any plan give greater pleasure and satisfaction to lovers of football than this? I wish every sports editor in the country would discuss this plan in his columns.

NOTED ARTIST DIES

COURTS NEED MORE 'FRIENDS'

Appellate Decision Denies Rehearing of Case

AUSTIN, Oct. 17. (AP)—The court of criminal appeals was constrained today to differ with a "friend of the court" and deny his motion for rehearing of the case in which Frank Vogler and F. P. Littlepage, San Antonio detectives, were ordered released from contempt charges in that city.

The court remarked, in an opinion by Judge O. S. Lattimore, that "in the multitude of assaults from every angle upon the courts in these 'parlous' times, heaven knows they stand in needs of friends."

The friend of the court was Thomas H. Franklin, San Antonio lawyer, who filed an amicus curae motion for rehearing of the Vogler-Littlepage case, which grew out of the detective's arrest of Jackie Miller, while she was out on bond pending a district court habeas corpus hearing on her application for release from custody of San Antonio health officers.

District court held the detectives in contempt for the arrest, which was for an another release not connected with her detention by health authorities. The court of criminal appeals reversed the contempt judgment and the detectives were released.

The contention of Franklin, whose name was not mentioned in the opinion, was that the appellate court erred in freeing the officers.

"To hold," the opinion said, "that one merely detained by health officers and who may be at large on bail pending habeas corpus hearing set weeks later, is thereby privileged from arrest for murders committed, theft perpetrated, ravishments done or any other violation of the law, merely because the arresting officer had knowledge of such pending habeas corpus proceedings, would make for incredible confusion and disorder."

AGED PASTOR FATALLY HURT

Rev. John Carney Dies of Crash Injuries

SNYDER, Texas, Oct. 17. (INS)—Rev. John Carney, 76, of Cleburne, veteran Baptist minister and temperance advocate, died here today of injuries received in a collision between the automobile in which he and his wife were riding with a Santa Fe freight train Monday morning. Mrs. Carney was killed in the crash.

Carney formerly lived at Fort Worth and was a familiar figure in the intense fights over prohibition some years ago. Speaking from the back of his wagon, painted with lurid signs depicting the evils of the liquor traffic, the fiery minister illustrated his talks with charcoal drawings. In later years he used an automobile.

Funeral services for the Rev. Mr. Carney and his wife will be held at Cleburne Friday.

Bruin Likes Flour

LINDSAY, Calif. — Three local sportsmen were forced to give up cooking with flour while camping at Sequoia National park. A bear got away with all but one package of their supply, and they had hopes for at least one round of flapjacks. To protect it they fastened the package to the limb of a tree overhanging a stream. But Bruin succeeded in tearing a hole in the bag, big enough to let the flour pour down into his gapping jaws.

Ancestral Home of Al Smith Draws Thousands to Peat Bogs

DUBLIN, Oct. 17. (INS)—Buried away at the edge of a peat bog in the wilds of Cavan is a little cottage that seems likely to become world famous.

It is the ancestral home of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, Democratic nominee for president of the United States.

Scores of Americans are visiting this tiny, one-floor cottage with its sagging thatched roof and white washed walls. For years it attracted no more attention than any other tumble down cottage in Ireland. But when Governor Smith became the Democratic presidential nominee American tourists to Ireland began to show a lively interest in the home of his ancestors.

One American took a Dublin photographer with him to make a special picture of the place. It will be sent to Governor Smith at Albany.

Nowhere is the progress of the American political campaign being followed with more keenness than in the remote section of Ireland around Cavan.

Governor Smith's grandfather was born in the cottage and set out from there as an emigrant to the United States where he settled in New York City. He was known as a leading agitator in the farmers' revolt against the landlords and his activities made the area too hot for him.

Other members of the family still live in the village.

Petroleum Uses Increase Until It Ranks at Top of Raw Materials

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (AP)—The woman sitting at the wheel of her automobile and remembering that gasoline is what makes it go, doesn't suspect more than a small fraction of what petroleum is doing for her.

The probabilities are that there is petroleum on her cheeks, in the rouge. If she is reading a note written in ink, petroleum is one of the possible ingredients of the ink. If all this happens by arc light, the carbon in the arc is out of the petroleum barrel.

"In this age of synthetics, petroleum ranks high among the leading by-product sources. A bulletin of the American Research Foundation says that "practically no other product has as wide and diversified range of uses as has petroleum, and its uses are constantly increasing."

The petrol product used in fountain pen ink is ligroine. Another named rhigolene is used by surgeons as a local anesthetic. Cymogene is used for producing ice artificially.

In beauty creams and cosmetics there is a host of products with petroleum as a base and likewise in the pastes and salves of medicine.

Chemists have produced synthetic butter from petroleum and declared it palatable, but such butter is made only for experimental purposes.

In war, petroleum supplies tuluol and benzol for explosives; and in peace, by-products that remove ticks from cattle and sheep, that control insect parasites of fruit trees and that help in cotton boll weevil extermination.

DENVER PLANS FARM DAIRIES

Railway Agent to Promote Camapign in Area

A campaign to promote and encourage dairying along the Fort Worth and Denver and South Plains railway lines will be launched soon by M. B. Oates, agricultural agent of the Fort Worth and Denver road.

Mr. Oates has been studying dairying through Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas for several months, making a tour of that section last summer with a number of West Texas bankers.

Dairying is the most prosperous business through the Southern states, according to Mr. Oates. Bank deposits in the leading dairying areas have increased on an average of 50 per cent in the last five years, according to figures compiled by the Denver agent.

Quite profitable results have been shown in several Texas towns in dairying during the last two years, and Northwest Texas could also add to its prosperity through dairying, Mr. Oates asserted.

Mr. Oates plans to publish a bulletin on his survey of dairying in the Southern states within the next two months to aid him in promoting the industry in this section of Texas. He will also distribute dairying literature to county agents, chambers of commerce, bankers, and merchants along the Denver line and through the South Plains.

SCHOOL BLAST INVESTIGATED

Window Found to Have Been Opened

VERDIGRE, Neb., Oct. 17. (UP)—An investigation was started today to determine the cause of an explosion that partially shattered a tiny school house northwest of here and injured two small children.

Deputy Sheriff A. L. Smith said today that dynamite or gun powder had been used and that one window had been forced.

The explosion occurred yesterday during the noon recess. With a terrific roar, the stove exploded, tearing holes in the floor and wrecking the room. The stove was blown into hundreds of pieces.

Grace Tusch, 11, and Stasie Ellis, 8, were in the room and were injured. Both will recover.

Miss Agnes Moticks, the teacher, had just kindled the fire but had gone to the far end of the room and escaped injury.

The teacher and directors of the school have no known enemies, it was said.

Sherman Shcool Leads In Number of Failures

Rather Have Saloons, Says Green Bay Council

GREEN BAY, Wis., Oct. 17. (AP)—The city council went on record last night as being opposed to steps taken by the federal prohibition department to padlock 48 Green Bay soft drink parlors because they are alleged to have violated the Volstead act.

Members of the council took the stand "that the city is better off with the licensed saloon under the supervision of the police department than it could be with the unlicensed beer flat or the 'speak-easy' scattered throughout the city."

INSISTS HERB OWNS OIL LAND

Hansbrough Delivers His Charges Again

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 17. (UP)—For the third time in a week, former Senator H. C. Hansbrough has charged Herbert Hoover, Republican presidential candidate, with owning oil lands.

"Honest John Raskob and Doctor Work attempted to get me to stop the attack, but if Hoover's friends think the facts are unfounded they should prevent publication of Jonathan Wickwire's book," Hansbrough said in an address here last night.

Quoting from Wickwire's book on Latin America, Hansbrough said: "Hoover associates through the Mexican Petroleum company owned oil land and water frontage at Tampa through Santa Gertrudis, Ltd., and Camp Bird, Ltd., in both of which Hoover formerly was director and controlled and owned mining properties in Hidalgo, Puebla and Zacatecas."

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP)—A broadening trade and commission house demand promoted by unavorable weather reports, continued talk of improving textile trade conditions and relatively steady Liverpool cables, was responsible for advances of approximately $2.00 a bale in the cotton market here today. All positions made new high ground for the movement, with December contracts selling up to 19.87c and closing at 19.83c. The general market closed firm at net advances of 36 to 40 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 5 points to a decline of 1 point and eased off slightly during the first few minutes under southern hedging and realizing by recent buyers. The latter may have been influenced by a favorable interpretation of the weekly report of the weather bureau and the failure of a western belt frost predictions to materialize. The offerings were very readily absorbed with an increased trade demand reported, while there was also covering or rebuying by recent sellers and as the market steadied it appeared to be attracting an increased commission house demand. The latter was further stimulated by the detailed reports of the weather bureau, showing heavy rains in some central belt sections and the reiterated forecast for frost in extreme western Oklahoma and the Texas panhandle.

Stop orders were uncovered as prices advanced and there were reports of buying by interests who had previously been holding off in the hope of lower prices under the weight of the movement.

Publication of reports from London that satisfactory progress was being made in the discussion of reparation problems attracted considerable comment and were referred to as a contributing factor on the late afternoon advance which extended to 19.97c for October contracts and 19.79c for March or 40 to 42 points net higher. Reports that prices had been fixed on only a comparatively small percentages of mill requirements and the steadiness of the market in the face of the recent rapid movement of cotton to market were also among the factors mentioned in connection with the buying. Exports today 83.634 bales, making 1,612,513 bales this season. Port receipts 93,608 bales. United States port stocks 1,695,686 bales.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 17. (AP)—Cotton prices soared to new highs for the present upward movement here today under buying promoted by various bullish influences, including unfavorable weather and more cheerful reports from the textile markets. An early decline carried December contracts down to 18.80, but on the subsequent rally the option traded to 19.26, 46 points up and closed one point under the high and 39 points net higher for the day. The general market closed steady at net gains of 36 to 39 points.

Liverpool cables were better than expected at the start here and first trades showed gains of 2 to 4 points but the early demand was soon supplied by liquidation and selling on the failure of the predicted frost to materialize and a generally favorable weekly weather summary. January contracts sold off to 18.80, with active positions generally 6 to 7 points net down.

Prices started upward, however, immediately after these offerings were absorbed, under general buying prompted by reports of heavy rains in the belt, lowering of crop estimates by spot interests, large exports for the day and more cheerful textile news. By noon December traded to 19.02, January 19.00 and March 18.98 or 20 to 33 points above the early lows.

After noon the volume of business increased and the advance became more rapid. Some speculative buying was in evidence and price fixing by spinners was reported. All active positions traded above the 19-cent level, and the highs of the day were reached in final trading when December touched 19.26, aJnuary 19.25 and March 19.17, or 45 to 46 points above the lowest. The close was a point or two under the top at a net advance for the day of nearly $2 a bale.

Betterment of Oil Industry Seen In Formation of Export Association

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. (US)—"Selected stocks" stood out in a quieter but generally firm stock market today. Quite heavy profit taking was encountered in some of the recent favorites but offerings were taken in good manner.

International Nickel with gain of 19 points to a new high was the sensation while Victor and Radio with advances of 8 and 5 points respectively were prominent throughout the session. Steel, motors, can and other standard industrials held to rather narrow price range. The rails after momentary strength in the morning slipped back into the dullness that has chacterized the group for many months. Oils and coppers were quieter but evidenced good support.

Call money made an appearance in greater supply during the session so that the rate eased to 7 from renewal of 7½ per cent. No nervousness was evidenced regarding today's reserve reports although another increase of from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 in loans is expected.

Export Association Planned

As the oils were being steadily bought it was learned the heads of leading companies were meeting at 26 Broadway discussing formation of an export association. The meetings were regarded as further steps in the plan for stabilization of oil output throughout the world inaugurated when Mr. Teagle journeyed to Europe recently. Enhancing the influence of such activity was the report of drop of 18,000 barrels in daily output in this country.

The measures already taken toward stabilization of the industry were reflected in the improved earnings shown in the recent report of Tidewater Associated. Sinclair, Texas and other companies will show similar betterment. From the coast comes report that the head of Richfield oil is en route to this city as Richfield has jumped to a place among the leading producers in the West. Its consistent strength is due to knowledge of consistent monthly gain in earnings.

General Motors met considerable profit-taking when it reached its high level but was well taken as the "big ten" do not believe it has entirely discounted the melon to be cut in November. Chrysler was in better demand also coincident with estimate that earnings would establish a new fourth quarter's record. Electric Auto Lite was quietly taken with expectation voiced that dividend would be increased by the end of the year.

Kansas City Southern and other Loree western roads were in demand for a while due to expectation that special distribution would follow abandonment of merger plan. It is learned, however, that the merger hopes have not entirely been cast aside and will be resurrected later.

Coppers Gain

Favorable position of the coppers was emphasized by the developments in the oil industry. Through operation of export association and other measures the red metal industry now is stabilized and Anaconda, Cerro, Calumet & Hecla and others are increasing earnings to an extent that points to more favorable news from stockholders than has already made an appearance. American Type Founders took a more prominent place among the specialties as report was circulated of plan to add to properties.

Radio and Victor stirring advance aroused merger talk. These companies are very close and it can be authoritatively stated that their consolidation would not conflict with the trade commission's regulations as they do not compete. There is nothing immediate in the merger plan, however, according to those who should be best informed.

W. C. Durant sails from Europe Saturday to arrive here the following Friday. Nickel's strength in part was due to this report as Nickel is his chief pet. Hudson slipped off although the associates of Durant here now talk very optimistic on the stock and declare he is working with the pool therein Peerless and Moon were irregular also although Durant is expected to take action on merging them with Durant Motors soon after his return. Chandler, on the other hand, jumped over two points. It is doubtful now, according to report, that Chandler will go into the planned consolidation although regarded as being in the best position of any of the companies mentioned.

Sterling slipped off again as offerings increased and aroused hope for further gold shipments. The mark was the outstanding feature of strength in an otherwise firm and quiet foreign exchange market. Cotton and grains moved higher in the face of rather bearish weather reports with buying credited to professionals covering short contracts.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 17 (AP) (U. S. Grain

CHICAGO REVIEW

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Oct. 17 (US)—Grains closed irregularly today with wheat and rye lower, but corn and oats higher. Corn finished very strong in spite of the dragging influence wheat may have had on it.

At the end wheat was down ⅛ to 1c; corn was up ⅝c; oats were ⅛ to ⅜c higher; rye was ¼c lower.

Wheat made its high for the session in all except the May future right at the start. The opening was at the closing level of the day previous. From then on the market moved up and down uncertainly until well toward the close, when it weakened.

The finish was only slightly above the low for the day and sentiment was very bearish. Nevertheless, wheat does not look to me like a good sale, no matter how bearish statistics are. Outsiders probably will do well to keep out of it altogether until after election day. Between now and then the market may be erratic.

Board of trade members seem to be dissatisfied with the grain markets generally and are looking forward with high hopes to the establishment of trading in stocks. The directors have appointed a committee to do preliminary work and will appropriate, it is understood, $100,000 for carrying it on.

Two New Gas Lines Into East Texas

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 17. (AP)—Two gas lines from north Louisiana into East Texas, one from the Richland parish field at Waskom and the other from the new DeSoto parish gas area to Latex, will be started within a short time, it was announced here today.

The Moody and Seagraves interests will lay the line from Richland to Waskom, a distance of approximately 130 miles. The line, it is reported, will be 18 and 20 inches. The eastern end will be at Alto. At Waskom the new line will hook up with a line already laid by the Moody and Seagraves interests.

The Magnolia Gas company has entered into a contract with R. O. Roy of Shreveport to lay a 10-inch line to the new DeSoto field uncovered last August.

Empire Shuts in Winkler Gusher

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, Oct. 17.—Empire Gas & Fuel company's No. 1 Leck in northern Winkler county was shut in today preparatory to testing Thursday after flowing open into the slush pit for 20 minutes at a rate computed at 3,500 barrels of oil daily from 3141 feet, 18 feet in the pay.

Gas was estimated at 10,000,000 cubic feet The well greatly increases the value and possibilities of the pool 9½ miles north and west of the Hendrick field opened early in the year by Gibson & Johnson (now Atlantic) and Kesslar & Logan's No. 1 Leck.

It made much water though initially rating 3000 barrels daily, while Empire No. 1 Leck, a south offset, shows no water. Both are in section 3, block 74, public school land, only about 2½ miles from the New Mexico line.

HENSHAW FIGHT TO COMMISSION

Advisory Committee 'Passes Buck' at Hearing

FORT WORTH, Oct. 17. (AP)—Suggested changes in Howard county pro-ration rules to take care of a new situation created by the Henshaw Oil corporation No. 1 Settles, an extension well producing from a new pay, were passed up to the Texas Railroad commission by the Howard county advisory committee. The committee's action came after a hearing of Henshaw's position held in Fort Worth today. The matter was passed on to the commission without recommendation. Henshaw's position found support with members of the committee, but diverse opinions on the committee prevented a vote on a recommendation.

The commission was urged to set the hearing at an early date, and hear all operators in the affected area.

Two Added to Body

Henshaw and M. E. Wilson of Shreveport, vice president of the Louisiana Oil Refining company, were added to the committee, to give representation to producers in the new district.

The district was already represented by I. G. Harmon of Ponca City, Okla., vice president of the Marland Production company, and Frank T. Pickrell of Fort Worth, vice president and general manager of Texon Oil and Land company. Both of these interests are probable producers in the new area.

In addition to the Henshaw matter, the advisory committee took action on several other items. The most important from standpoint of general interest was petitioning the railroad commission to increase the allowed outlet of the county from 25,000 barrels per day to 40,000 barrels per day, or such part of that as a pipe line outlet would permit. It was brought out that the pipe line outlet would probably be up to this when the order became effective, with the Humble adding 10,000 barrels to the outlet, with the Cosden line ready to run oil and with the Big Spring pipe line wishing to take additional amounts. As all of the wells are pumping, opinion was expressed that conservation considerations would not prevent the field being produced to the available outlet. Virgil Hicks of Tulsa, of the Laurel Oil and Gas company, voted no on this change.

Magnolia Accused

Charge that the Magnolia Petroleum was violating conservation rules in the field in the matter of locations, was made by William Fleming of Sherman, president of the F-H-E Oil company. He said the Magnolia was drilling a well to the deep pay on a basis greater than that of a well to 40 acres—the basis which the commission decided after testimony represented economic development. Fleming said his company had not offset the Magnolia well until it had passed the two shallow pays, because representatives of the company had assured him that it was to be a shallow well.

The committee, by resolution and unanimous vote, asked the railroad commission for enforcement of the rule. R. D. Parker, the commission's chief supervisor, said the matter was now up with the Magnolia and he expected it to be adjusted.

The committee also recommended a 12-hour instead of 24-hour test on wells to establish the potential, and instructed the umpire to make adjustments for difference in size of tubing and time and length of pumping stroke, to make the proration test equitable.

Distinct Oil Claimed

Henshaw's contention was that his new well was producing from a different horizon and was making a distinctly different grade of oil, of much higher gravity than the other lime pays. He urged that a different outlet be allowed for it, on the ground that a different market existed, and that this could be developed and met without drainage on producers in the other pay levels. Unless a different outlet is allowed for this oil, he declared, pipe lines will take it only on the same provisions as the heavier oil from the other two lime pays. Henshaw expressed willingness to prorate the market for this oil with all other producers of the grade as the pool developed. Some of the committee members indicated the opinion that under the present order this pay, given its proration of the total outlet to the field with the other lime pays, this market outlet could be met, without necessity for change.

City's Code of Laws In Demand Here

The value of a copy of the compiled ordinances of Wichita Falls to other cities was emphasized Wednesday by W. E. McBroom, city clerk, in telling of inquiries from neighboring towns.

"Wichita Falls studied for many months on its code, and studied ordinances of many cities in all parts of the United States," he said.

The result is a code of ordinances which is up to date and which would serve any city as an excellent guide in compiling its own laws."

Mr. McBroom said the book is obtainable at his office in paper binding at $5 or in cloth binding at $7.50. A number of attorneys and private citizens already have obtained copies.

COOK SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY

Mrs. Ida Chitwood Tells of Innovations

Style has gone to the kitchen.

This is the thought expressed Wednesday by Mrs. Ida M. Chitwood, noted culinary expert, who will open the four-day cooking school for the Times-Record News Monday afternoon at the Memorial auditorium.

Gone are the days when the style world was primarily interested in adorning the face, the feet and the body. The greater percentage of women of the present day are interested in knowing how to fittingly adorn the food she prepares and selects for her table. For psychology has proved to the most obdurate that a well decorated and well prepared dish is more palatable.

New Suggestions

With the idea in mind that persons can be taught to like dishes often without the pale of popular favor, Mrs. Chitwood will loosen a veritable "bag of tricks" with her entirely new ideas at the cooking school this year.

Mrs. Chitwood has conducted a cooking school in Wichita Falls for the fifth consecutive year. Each year enrollment in the school has doubled that of the preceding year and the school next week is expected to afford a record enrollment of women from Wichita Falls and vicinity.

Ten or 12 years ago women were not materially interested in learning to cook, but today even young girls of high school age will remain from classes in order to learn the newest modes of preparing and serving attractive meals. This fact is due to the scientific study women have made of cooking and of the nutritive value that may be obtained from various dishes, Mrs. Chitwood believes.

The kitchen is in the social limelight nowadays, the expert explained, and the hostess that several years ago would not consider asking the guests into her kitchen has begun to realize that the kitchen can be made the center of the home.

Colorful Utensils

Colorful cooking utensils and a more attractive furniture in the kitchen is the principal item in the life of the home and more thought is being expended toward its equipment, she said.

Mrs. Chitwood will teach the preparation of new appetizers during her stay in Wichita Falls. She will demonstrate the preparation of fancy and plain sandwiches, such sandwiches as might be used in serving formal meals if sandwiches were accepted as a part of such menus.

"The flapper salad" and the Christmas roast as well as inexpensive Christmas fruit cakes will be taught by the expert in her four day school here. The new pie crust au gratin and new breakfast omelets will also receive her attention.

The entire program for the cooking school will be published in the Sunday Times-Record News. A list of the business firms which will distribute free admission tickets will also be published at that time.

Cool Weather to Reduce Static

The cool weather of the last two days is aiding in decreasing static and is making for better radio reception, according to a statement made by J. M. Gilliam, general maanger of station KGKO. Not only are local stations being received with greater ease but the stations at greater distances are heard by local radio "fans."

The program from station KGKO for Thursday will be as follows: 8:30 a. m., bargain hour; 9 to 10 a. m., shopping hour and announcements; 11:30 to 1 p. m. and 4:30 to 6 p. m., musical program and announcements; 7 to 7:30 p. m., a program of yells, skits and vocal solos from the Junior college; 7:30 to 8 p. m., Mrs. Cortez Slaughter and Joseph Rabinowitz in a piano and violin musical program; 8 to 9 p. m., program of the Texas Electric company of Burkburnett, including instrumental and vocal musical numbers, broadcast by remote control; 9 to 10 p. m., male quartet numbers, a talk on "The Past, Present and the Future of Wichita Falls" by J. A. Kemp, and violin selections by Stanley Raub.

HOUSTON GIVES MASS OF DATA

Federal Body Said to Be Opposed to Parity

AUSTIN, Oct. 17. (AP)—Houston interests introduced numerous decisions of the Interstate Commerce commission into the state railway commission's hearing on the Houston-Galveston rate equalization proposal, today in an effort to show that the federal rail body is definitely opposed to the application of rate parties at divergent distances as proposed by Galveston and Texas City.

Charles E. Holloman, traffic manager of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, on the witness stand, also analyzed the effect of the proposed rate grouping of Galveston and Texas City with Houston.

The Galveston rate to Wooters, 149 miles up the Missouri Pacific lines, would be the same as the rate to New Waverly, 102 miles, in some instances, he said.

SOUSA PROVES REAL AMERICAN

No Mustachio Twirling at This Concert

(By The Record News Critic)

Lovers of the art not only from Wichita Falls, but from many towns representative of this region gathered at the Memorial auditorium Wednesday afternoon and evening to hear music played under the direction of a real American, Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa.

For Sousa is, above all else, American. From the minute he makes his appearance on the stage, prim, erect, and takes his position in front of his world famous band, there is distinct American atmosphere about the show. He picks up his baton. There is no twirling of mustachios of tearing of hair. There is no grabbing for music. Every thing is orderly. When he lifts the baton, it is for a purpose. He signals for musical response, and gets it.

Soloists Please

It was this way Wednesday evening. One slight bow to his audience, an abrupt turn, a short jerk of the baton, and the band had begun the first number, "Militaire Francais," a precise but tricky selection from Saint-Saens' "The Algerienne." The selection finished, Director Sousa allowed but a second for applause, took a brief bow, and before hands had ceased the clap the first strains of the next number were in the air.

This was the first solo number of the evening, featuring John Dolan, cornetist, in the solo, "Habanera," by Sarsate. Difficult of rendition, this number drew applause generously. The soloist responded with an encore, playing Bartlett's "A Dream."

Other soloists drew equally of applause, chiefly Miss Marjorie Moody, soprano soloist, who sang as her first number one of Sousa's latest compositions, "Love's Radiant Hour" As an encore she sang the "Italian Street Song." The sextette for flutes, "The Dance of the Merlitons," from Tschaikowsky, was given by the flautists of the band, Messrs. Evans, Petrie, Phares, Orosky, Zlotnik, and Hall; and later in the program Howard Goulden was featured in a xylophone solo, "Mignon." For encores he played "At Sunrise." "Indian Love Call," and "Rio Rita," a popular number.

Musical Souvenirs

Sousa proved his Americanism further when his own band compositions, excluding his marches as of a lighter vein, were given. The third number, "Tales of a Traveler," bore striking kinship to the tunes almost every American hears when he visualizes, as Sousa does in this suite, the Kaffir girl of Africa, or Australia, the "Land of the Golden Fleece," or, to come nearer home, as the composition does in the last part, President Coolidge's lawn decked with kids on an easter morning.

Sousa also accomplished another feat when he made a musical sketch out of a popular tune, "Among My Souvenirs." This selection, long battered by sentimental jazz orchestras, took on new coloring after it had been rearranged to really include some musical souvenirs.

And last, but not least, the band played Sousa's latest march, "The Golden Jubilee," written in honor of the composer's 50th year as a band director, and commemorating his 36th annual tour. The closing number was his "Balance All and Swing Partners."

Interspersed throughout the program were played various Sousa marches, notably "The Stars and Stripes Forever," "Semper Fidelis" and "U. S. Field Artillery."

A feature of the program was the appearance, during intermission, of the Burkburnett High school band, and later of the local Shrine band. The Burkburnett band, which was accorded first place by Sousa in a contest Wednesday afternoon, was led by the March King as it played his "Washington Post March." Then it played Sousa's "Thunderer" march under the leadership of its own director, E. L. Nichols. The Shrine band later appeared behind the stage band and joined in playing "The Stars and Stripes Forever" march.

County Farm Manager Denies Aged Couples Separated

Cottages Would Be Of Little Use, Jernigan Declares In Protest

Aged married couples at the Wichita county farm are not separated, and there is no need for cottages at the farm for such couples, declared L. N. Jernigan, superintendent, Wednesday night. Mr. Jernigan made the statement in answer to suggestions made by Mrs. Effie McHam, secretary of the Family Relief association, that cottages be erected at the farm because "Wichita Falls has no place where its poverty stricken, aged couples may spend the last days of their lives together."

Mr. Jernigan said in the 10 years he has been superintendent of the county farm there never have been but two married couples and these never were separated.

"In the first place," Mr. Jernigan said, "it would not be advisable to build cottages at the farm for the reason that these old people need attention and there would be no one to care for them. We have had only two married couples at the farm and I have been superintendent of the institution 10 years out of the 12.

"These two couples are allowed to live together as man and wife and they are cared for in the institution as they should be cared for," Mr. Jernigan declared.

"I feel that Mrs. McHam's statement is unjust to the institution as well as to myself, for as far as I know she never has been on the farm," he said.

In a statement issued Tuesday Mrs. McHam said aged couples are the greatest problems in her work and that erection of cottages at the county farm would answer the question.

"If the old folks are admitted to the county farm the men must go with the men and the women must go with the women," she said.

Democratic Women Plan Canvass Of City for Nominees of Party

Telephone Book Issued in Sections to Workers; Mrs. Smedley And Mrs. Martin Head New Organization

A personal invitation will be extended to every woman in Wichita Falls to hear Mrs. W. D. Moore of Denton and Congressman Guinn Williams of Decatur speak on Gov. Al Smith's candidacy Monday, according to a decision made at the organization meeting of the Wichita County Woman's Democratic league in the county Democratic headquarters Wednesday.

Mrs. G. B. Smedley was named permanent chairman of the organization at the meeting, and Mrs. Bernard Martin was selected secretary. Forty-one women and a number of men attended the meeting.

The women pledged themselves to do all in their power to work for the election of Governor Smith. The first definite piece of work is getting the crowds out to hear the congressman from this district, speak on the platform Monday night along with Mrs. Moore.

Work in This

This invitation will be extended by the simple expedient of hard work. The city telephone directory has been allotted by sections to women members of the club. Name by name, they will put in individual telephone calls to each name in the book and extend the invitation to the speaking.

Other plans for campaign activity were made by the women to include assisting in the precinct organization work of each precinct of the 39 in this county.

Edgar Scurry, county Democratic chairman, Ben D. Donnell, W. M. Moore, J. C. Kay, J. T. Montgomery and Bernard Martin made short talks. Mr. Martin opened the meeting.

Mrs. Alfred E. Smith was praised by Mr. Donnell who met her when she was in Oklahoma with the candidate.

"She is a fine looking woman, capable of gracing the White House" he said.

Mr. Moore attacked Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee, saying: "No party, Democratic or Republican, ever forced racial equality on the nation, but it was left to one man, Herbert Hoover, to force equality of the races."

Mr. Montgomery said that the first speech he ever made was in favor of prohibition and continued. "In my opinion, Al Smith is the most candid, honest, straightforward man I ever knew to run for an office in America. He has been frank with you, and he's told you that he didn't believe that prohibition has had a fair chance, or that it will have a chance under the Republicans. Hoover thinks it is a nice little experiment, and he's willing to go on experimenting with it. Smith says he will enforce it—let's give him a chance!"

Mr. Kay, in talking of prohibition said: "About prohibition: every community has got all the prohibition that community wants. If the people loved prohibition with the zeal with which they howl about it, they'd enforce it. The best way to be a prohibitionist is not to drink, the next best way is to help enforce the law. There's another way, to elect all your officers by that yardstick, so that any body that gets up and says he's a prohibitionist can get elected. I don't mind a man hating the Catholic church when he has paid $10 or $15 for license to hate 'em," he said in conclusion.

Those attending the meeting included Mesdames J. B. Hatchitt, H. F. Weldon, R. T. Belcher, J. J. Moran, T. B. Greenwood, Mark Walker, L. J. Bullitt, J. Roy Avers, Tom Fulton, J. O. McMundy, J. E. McDonald, Thomas Ballard, E. W. Nicholson, M. M. Bates and W. P. Smith.

Others announced as being members of the organization are: Mesdames F. S. White, J. M. Sammons, Charles Pogenpohl, Floyd Springer M. J. Bashara, W. H. Godfrey, E. F. Dr. F. S. Onderdonk, superintendent of missions for Mexicans in Texas for the Methodist church, praised President Calles of Mexico in an address given at the Optimist club luncheon Wednesday noon at the Highland Heights Christian church. Dr. Onderdonk is one of many pastors who no longer preach in Mexico due to the enforcement of the Mexican law that all preachers in Mexico must be of Mexican birth. Dr. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the First Methodist church, introduced Dr. Onderdonk.

W. E. Young sang "Ramona" and was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. F. R. Collard. Joel H. MacGregor led in community singing with Miss Lorene Tucker playing the accompaniments.

'TOY' AIRPLANE MAKES FLIGHT

Young Novice Tries Lindbergh's Feat

returned that the mechanic finally admitted that MacDonald intended to continue to England if conditions were favorable.

Commander MacDonald is one of the newest and most daring British fliers. He recently toured France, Italy, Egypt, Arabia, Mesopotamia and Syria after only eight hours of solo flying. His plane has a wing span of 26 feet and weighs only 880 pounds. It has no facilities for landing on water.

Modest Aviator

Commander MacDonald's Moth plane, which has neither wireless or waterfloats, has a flying radius of about 3,500 miles. MacDonald is a retired officer of the royal navy and only recently learned to fly. He is of modest disposition and of such a retiring nature that little publicity was given his really remarkable flight from London to the Near East and return in the spring of 1928. The same was true of preparations for his flight from Newfoundland.

His arrival here three weeks ago was given but scant attention despite the fact he planned to fly the ocean in the small, single-seated De Haviland plane. The plane was landed from the S. S. Nova Scotia and placed on a train for Harbor Grace.

MacDonald went to Harbor Grace shortly afterward and started supervision of the work of assembling the craft. He made some short trial flights and said he would await favorable weather for the departure. After that he was left comparatively alone and went quietly about his business.

This morning the plane was loaded to capacity and MacDonald suddenly decided the time was ripe for his departure. His take-off for England was entirely unexpected.

AVIATOR'S TAKEOFF WAS UNEXPECTED

LONDON, Oct. 17. (UP)—The start of Lieut. Commander B. C. MacDonald's projected flight from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to England, was entirely unexpected here. Not even his wife had been informed of the take-off on what was believed to be an attempt to cross the Atlantic ocean until news dispatches were received.

"I don't think he would want me to say anything until he has accomplished something," Mrs. MacDonald said in a shaking voice when informed of the flight. She added that she was "terribly worried" and had not known the flight had started.

MacDonald's home is in Kensington and the couple have one child. The flier is 33 years old.

The formal naval officer complained, upon his return from his eastern flight last spring, that there had been no excitement. He said the nearest thing to a thrill happened near Bagdad when he fell asleep in his tent near the plane. Suddenly he heard a terrific crash and rushed out to discover that a motor truck had rammed the Moth plane and damaged the wings.

Retired Cowpuncher, 70, Grins After Train Strikes Him

PAMPA, Texas, Oct. 17 (AP)—Ed Lynch, 70, retired cowboy, disputed right of way with a passenger train here today and emerged from the argument with no worse than a broken shoulder and arm.

Lynch, one a wild, free rider of West Texas prairies, often walks along the streets of Pampa with his eyes to the ground.

Today, as dozens shouted warnings to no avail, he trudged contemplatively into the path of an inbound train. The engine brushed him, throwing him to the ground. A rugged constitution enabled the ex-cowboy to grin ruefully as he survived his injuries.

Castner to Address State Meet at Austin

Dr. C. W. Castner, superintendent of the Wichita Falls state hospital here, will speak on "State Hospitals as Psychiatric Training Centers" at a meeting of the Texas State Neurological society at Austin Friday, it was learned here Wednesday. Dr. Castner will leave here Thursday. He will tell of the training school for nurses in this work at the hospital here.

The state institution here is said to be the only state hospital in Texas meeting the requirements of the National Council on Medical Education and Hospitals on psychiatric nurses' training schools.

Deserted Wife Sells Lunches on Streets

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17. (US)—A masked woman selling box lunches on Los Angeles streets attracted considerable attention today.

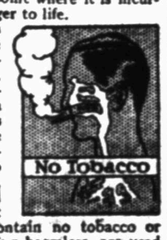

Investigation revealed that Mrs. Jerry De Orr—Which is not her real name, was "up against it." Her husband had been gone for weeks, nobody wanted to buy pictures she had painted, and she couldn't find a job, she said.

So she took to selling box lunches and donned the mask so her friends wouldn't know the straits she was in.

PROPAGANDA OF BIGOTS FLAYED

Robinson Addresses Utah Audience

OGDEN, Utah, Oct. 17. (AP)—The "propaganda" that Governor Smith, if elected president, would turn the government over to the pope of Rome, was declared by Senator Joe T. Robinson tonight to be subversive of intelligence and happiness and "seeks to undermine the foundation of liberty and equality.

Devoting practically an entire campaign speech to religious tolerance, Robinson declared "that the preservation of liberty—liberty in its full and comprehensive sense—is an issue of this campaign." He laid to "an organized political effort" a spirit of intolerance such as prevailed in the dark ages.

"The cabal" Robinson said, "which robbed the nation of its naval reserves, the conspiracy to loot the veterans' bureau and the trust funds of the alien property custodian's office were not more harmful to the public than the effort in this campaign to make the American people believe that if the great, progressive leader of the Democratic party is chosen president, he will turn the government over to the pope of Rome, close the public schools and secure enactment of a law requiring everyone 'to kiss an arch-bishop's toe.'

"More than that, the injection of religious prejudice and animosity into the campaign tends to cause the public to forget and disregard the great issues which press for consideration and solution.

"It supersedes fair tests with false standards and breaks down barriers erected through the courage and sacrifice of patriots against the advance of lawlessness and treason."

Lady Edward Has Novel Experience At Legion Meeting

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 17. (US)—Lady Edward Spencer-Churchill saw more drunken men on the streets of San Antonio, Texas, than she witnessed in London for 10 years, she said here today.

Lady Edward was en route from the American Legion and its auxiliary's national conventions in the Texas city, where she was a guest of honor.

She said:

"Prohibition is the most foolish thing I ever heard of. We have no prohibition in England and yet I have not seen a drunken man on the streets of London for 10 years. I cannot say the same for San Antonio. But then that was a special occasion. They say it was the saloon that needed to be destroyed. Do not our inns in England correspond to the American saloon? They are all over the place and still there is no drunkenness. In England it is a disgrace to be seen drunk."

Bandit Gets $5000 In Colorado Bank

LITTLETON, Colo., Oct. 17. (INS) A lone, masked bandit entered the First National bank here shortly after noon today, cowed the employes with a revolver and escaped with loot estimated at between $5,000 and $8,000. The bandit fled in an automobile he had parked at the curb with the motor running and is believed to have started toward Denver, 10 miles north.
