Segovia School Opens New Term Monday Morning

County Judge J. B. Randolph Makes Address to Students

With Mrs. L. E. Stockard in charge, the Segovia School opened its doors Monday morning with forty-five pupils enrolling. More are expected to enroll within the next two weeks. Last year there were forty-one pupils in the school.

County Judge J. B. Randolph made the opening address. He stated that the Segovia District No. 3 is one of the largest school districts in the county, and spoke of the progress which the school has made under the direction of Mrs. Stockard. County Agent R. E. Homann made an address in the interest of the county 4H Club work, urging the members to choose their project and commence work immediately as all the other schools in the county have begun their work.

Miss Anna Mae Russell, a new teacher, will assist Mrs. Stockard this year. The pupils, as well as the teachers, are enthusiastic and this year should be the most successful in the history of the school. Plans are being made for the purchase of some new playground equipment. The school also plans to enter strongly into Inter-scholastic League work this year.

Motor Car Tags Will Have New Styles In 1931

Licenses for 1150 Cars Are Issued for Kimble County

Licenses for 1150 cars have been issued to Kimble County, according to information received from the office of the County Tax Collector. Two hundred and fifty truck and pickup licenses, 35 trailer, 17 chauffeur, 5 dealer and 4 motorcycle licenses have been issued to the collector's office.

Texas motorists will carry neat black plates on their automobiles next year with white letters and numbers.

There are two noticeable changes in the "tags" for 1931. They will not be marked "front" and "rear" like the present tags. A front and rear tag are required, but they are made just the same, making a saving to the state of $7,000.

Another change has been made which is expected to make the numbers more easily read. As the Texas numbers now run into the million, it has been decided to use letters for hundred thousands.

A tag that would read 142101 under the old system will be A4-2101. The highway department also claims it is easier to read and remember that way. It will be a memory-breaker, however, for many motorists who have been arranging to get the same number each year. Many motorists did so by making arrangements with the county clerk. They left him a check for the license fee. When the number they wished was reached the clerk would set it aside for them. This year all numbers will be different.

LONDON TO OPEN GRID SEASON WITH LLANO

The London High School football team will open the season with a game with Llano Friday afternoon. The game will be played in Llano. E. B. Morrison is coaching the London team. ## Junction Lions Club Offers Valuable Prize

Keeping alive their interest in the Junction High School, the Junction Lions Club voted in a business meeting held Monday night to award a valuable gold watch to the most valuable football player on the high school team this year. The most valuable player will be chosen at the close of the football season and will be named by the members of the team. The only stipulation made by the Lions Club was that the members of the team must decide upon who is the most valuable man.

Commissioners Inspect Roads Around London

Commissioner G. W. Hardesty Has Done Good Road Work For Community

County Judge J. B. Randolph, Commissioners J. F. Ragsdale and Henry Bierschwale and Mr. V. P. Emmons made a trip to the London section Thursday morning to make an inspection of some recent road work done by Commissioner G. W. Hardesty.

They inspected the London-Monard road which has been greatly improved. This road is also part of the Highway No. 10 for which this section is seeking Federal designation.

The inspection party were guests of Mr. Hardesty at a dinner served at Mack's Cafe in London. On their return trip to Junction they passed over the recently improved Yates road. ## Rotarians Present Gift to Journalist

As a token of appreciation for the work John M. Hankins has done in publishing the weekly paper of the local Rotary Club, the members presented him with a new hat at the luncheon held at the Fritz Hotel today.

Hon. Coke R. Stevenson made the presentation, and Mr. Hankins thanked the organization for the present. Today marked the end of the first year of the Rotary paper which is called the "Junction Rotary Reporter."

Cotton Crop Light Throughout County

With only eighteen bales of cotton ginned at the local gin to date, and with little more to come in, production in this county will be probably placed at a new low level. Mr. C. W. Atchison, manager of the local gin, stated that very little cotton was planted on the North and South Llano Rivers this year. Most of the cotton in the county was produced around London and Live Oak. The London gin has handled well over one hundred bales.

Commissioner H. W. Bierschwale made a trip last Saturday out on the Harper-Junction road to the James River where some of the highway had been washed away by recent rains in that section. A crew was put to work immediately repairing the damaged road.

Mr. Carl Tibbitt is able to be out in his car some now following his serious injuries several weeks ago, in fact, months ago. His friends are glad that he is improving. He hopes to be able to be at work soon.

Kimble County Students Leave This Week for Various Schools

Despite adverse financial conditions throughout the county, many young people have left this week to attend the universities and colleges throughout the state. After three weeks' effort, the Eagle has secured the names of students in the county who are going off to school. Of course there will be some who have gone or will go whose names are not included. We have tried to get a complete list. The list includes: University of Texas—Dennis Wallace, Miss Maurine Farmer, Guy Munn, Carleton Wright, Reuben Loeffler, Junior Stevenson, Dick Winn, Dick Boone,

Miss Vivienne Livingston was elected associate editor. Mrs. Effie Roy Felps was re-elected sponsor of the paper.

Last year was the first attempt the high school students made in issuing a school paper in co-operation with the Junction Eagle, and throughout the year they improved the paper. This year bigger plans have been made, and the paper is due to be better.

The first edition is contained in this issue of the Junction Eagle.

Dr. H. E. Wright returned the first of the week from a trip to San Antonio. His mother, Mrs. D. Wright, returned with him for a two week's visit. While in San Antonio Dr. Wright went on a wolf hunt with several of his friends.

Merchants are Offering Many Irresistible Bargains

Thrifty housewives of Junction who are always looking for bargains when purchasing merchandise and groceries, cannot afford to miss the bargains which are advertised in this issue.

Both the dry goods establishments and grocery stores and produce houses are offering real savings to their customers. They are offering these special bargains in order to tide over the depression period, and Junction housewives should take advantage of these buying opportunities. Read all the advertisements carefully and make a saving on your purchases this week.

Hill Country C. of C. Formed Monday Night

Representatives for Kimble County Attend Meeting

Permanent organization of the Hill Country of Texas Chamber of Commerce was completed in Marble Falls, Texas, Monday night with nine counties represented. Messrs. Emil A. Loeffler and Conrad T. Holekamp represented Junction. Messrs. T. B. Phillips and E. McLeod were also members of the delegation from Junction.

A constitution and by-laws were drawn up and C. J. Doolley, president of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, was unanimously elected president of the newly formed organization.

The purpose of the association was outlined as an organized effort on the part of the Hill Country towns to secure more tourist travel through this section of the state, to secure geological survey of the mineral resources, and to cooperate and promote the civic, commercial, agricultural, educational and transportation facilities of this section.

The matter of a permanent location for offices will be decided later.

Kimble County has not officially joined the movement, although representatives sat in at the business session held in Marble Falls Monday.

Gasoline Refueling Station is Opened At Local Airport

Through the efforts of Mr. Emil A. Loeffler, local Magnolia gasoline distributor, the Magnolia Company has installed a gasoline refueling station at the local airport, according to Mr. H. O. Denman, Mr. V. L. Mill-sap will run the station.

Mr. Denman pointed out that before army planes could be refueled here, the field would have to be designated and placed on the maps as such, since army fliers get gasoline by orders at designated ports.

Sergeant Higbie and Lieutenant Dyer, army fliers from San Antonio flew out to Junction Monday for a visit with

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Lowgren and little daughter, Edwina, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Reynolds and son, Roy, Jr., returned last week from an eight-day vacation trip into New Mexico and along the Rio Grande border country. While in New Mexico they visited the famous Carlsbad Cavern. While stopping in Alpine they saw Louis Loeffler who is working on an Alpine newspaper now. Mr. Reynolds said it was dry everywhere except across the Mexican border.

Mrs. Emil A. Loeffler and son, Reuben, returned Saturday from a trip to Alpine where they visited with Louis Loeffler, who is connected with the newspaper in that city.

Eagles Humble Border Eleven In Fast Game

Will Play First District Game With Powerful Sonora Eleven

Outplaying the Del Rio High School football team throughout the game, with the possible exception of the third quarter, the Junction Eagles won a well deserved victory Friday afternoon on the Del Rio field. The score was 12 to 7.

Junction opened up at hte first of the game and scored a touchdown in the first three minutes of play. Led by Harry Witt, the Junction offensive moved down the field for a touchdown by making substantial gains on line plunges and end runs.

In the second quarter, Harry Witt intercepted a Del Rio pass on the forty yard line and raced sixty yards for the second touchdown of the game.

By means of a triple pass in the third quarter, Del Rio scored its lone touchdown.

Coach Bowers was pleased with the showing his team made Friday. There will be no game this week, but he is drilling the team for the first district game which will be played Saturday, September 20. Word comes from Sonora that they have a powerful team and when they come to Junction Saturday week they are coming to win. It will be a good game.

Falling Earth Proves Fatal To Segovia Man

Avalanche of Dirt and Gravel Buries H. M. King While Loading Truck

One of the most tragic accidents ever to occur in Kimble County happened at Segovia Wednesday morning when Guy McMillan King, aged 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy King, was pinned under several tons of earth caused by a cave-in of a gravel bank. The man was loading a truck of gravel to be used in the construction of a store in Segovia.

Just as the cave-in started the men noticed it, and the other workmen were able to run clear of the falling earth, but King in his flight, struck the truck and fell just as the side of the bank gave way. He was pinned under two or three feet of earth.

His rescuers dug frantically until he was removed. Dr. L. E. Standifer was summoned to the scene, and King was taken to his home a short distance away and given medical treatment. But his injuries, together with the shock, proved fatal. He died about two hours after the accident. He suffered a crushed chest and broken collar bone.

Funeral services will be held this (Thursday) afternoon at 4 o'clock from the First Methodist Church at Junction, with the Rev. Milton F. Hill officiating. Interment will be in the Junction Cemetery.

Work Starts Today On Boulder Dam

A spike of Nevada silver, sledged by Dr. R. L. Wilbur, secretary of the interior, into a railroad tie today marked the official beginning of the work on the $165,000,000 Boulder dam project.

The Hoover dam will be the name of the great project.

Lieutenant Dyer and Sergeant Higbie from Brooks Field in San Antonio flew their army plane to Junction Monday in order to visit with Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Sheppard, friends of the fliers. They had lunch with the Sheppard family.

SEVERAL CLUBS WILL BE FORMED THIS YEAR

A number of clubs are reported to be "in the making," but so far, none have been organized.

Mrs. Felps has promised clubs in English, and will have more to say on the matter next week.

Miss Knight has informed the reporter that she expects to organize clubs in civics class and history classes. Topics will be taken from the "Literary Digest" for discussion, and the American History class will give some discussion on topics from outside assignments. Nothing very definite has been decided as yet, however.

The grade teachers were rather undecided on the matter of clubs, but almost every grade last year had some club, and the children seem to expect them this year.

Most of the teachers believe that clubs help to create interest among the pupils in their class work, and clubs encourage class spirit. They offer a little diversion from the regular monotony of class work, and help to revive the interest in the work. Also, clubs can be very helpful to the children by widening their knowledge of things outside of their own little world, if the proper amount of interest is taken by the children and teachers.

GRADE CLASSES START YEAR OFF FINE STYLE

The pupils in the grades are becoming adjusted to having more than one teacher. Most of them have never had more than one before, and they find it quite a novelty to change teachers every class.

The low first, having only one teacher, Miss Austin Durst, is composed of 29 pupils. They are all eager and enthusiastic about getting to start to school. Bobby Earl Maddox has been ill for several days and his classmates are glad to have him with them again.

The low and high first has 25 pupils. This class is under the supervision of Miss Owens.

The second grade is taught by Mrs. Astor Wallace. She has 33 pupils. They are all studying well and are glad to get back to school. She plans to have health contests in the future.

The third grade is taking up long division this year, and their teacher, Mrs. J. F. Horton reports that they are doing well. During their home room period they read and sing, and sometimes make novelties. There are 28 children in this class. They have organized a club called "Tell a Tale and Listen a While." Ray McKay is president of one side, and Joe Rex Walker is president of the other.

Mrs. Munn is home room teacher of the sixth grade. She reports that her pupils are taking review work mostly, and that they are learning the sounds in spelling, and are learning to study their problems in a new way in Arithmetic. During the home room period they read "Jerry Tod and the Purring Egg." There are 26 pupils in the sixth grade.

There are 17 pupils in the 7B class. They are progressing nicely. Miss Dicky is their home room teacher. They have civics twice a week and all other days they have history. Friday afternoons are devoted to programs during the home room period. They had a debate last Friday. The participants were: Affirmative—Charley Baylor and Billy Boone; Negative—Roy Bierschwald and Nancy Fred Duderstadt. The question was: Resolved, that it is better to live in the country than in town.

The negative side won. The 7A class is taking review work for the greater part. They have decimals and fractions and are having graph making. They are progressing nicely. Their home room teacher is Mrs. Kendrick.

Miss Brownie Motley spent the week-end with Beatrice Neal in San Angelo.

Fred Beasley will attend the University of Texas the ensuing term.

SPANISH COURSES ARE NOW AFFILIATED

During the entire school term last session Miss Nellie Bennett, language teacher, put forth much effort in directing the pupils and planning her work in Spanish classes. Spanish I and Spanish II were taught, but they were not affiliated subjects. By Miss Bennett's untiring work affiliation was gained. The school is going to try for affiliation in the commercial courses, general science and another 1/2 credit in civics this year.

PHYSICAL TRAINING PART OF SCHOOL WORK

At 8:30 each morning the High School pupils meet in their home room.

After the roll is taken, they march downstairs to Physical Education class.

The boys meet on the football field where their instructor, Mr. Bowers, directs calisthenics. The eighth grade and ninth grade girls play base ball one week and the tenth and eleventh grade girls play volleyball. The next week the tenth and eleventh grade girls play base ball and the eighth and ninth grade girls play volleyball.

Miss Bennett and Mrs. Felps are the instructors of calisthenics and Miss Knight and Miss Kelley are the instructors of volleyball and base ball.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS WORK IN LIBRARY

The room which was used as a library during the past school term has been converted into a class room, and a part of the former auditorium now serves as library. The librarians are selected from high school students. The following are the librarians this term:

- 1st period.....Emma Hensley
- 2nd period.....Lorena Couey
- 3rd period.....Veola Wahl
- 4th period.....Harry Witt
- 5th period.....Vivienne Livingston
- 6th period.....Harrie Ethel Hubbell
- 7th period.....Ella Simon

The library was opened immediately after school began, and many books have already been issued. A great interest in reading is shown this early in the year.

SOPHOMORE CLASS ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The ninth grade students are getting their studies arranged now and are beginning to study. Mrs. Effie Roy Felps is the ninth grade sponsor, and the English room is the home room. The room mothers are, Mrs. Lester Hodges and Mrs. Minnie Barnes. The class is divided into two sections, and each section has about seventeen or eighteen pupils. This makes it much easier to do good work. Mr. Bowers took over the morning section of Algebra last week. Miss Kelly was the teacher until then. The first year Latin class has only eleven pupils. Although we have lost some of our old pupils, we have a good many new ones this year. They are Helen Parker, Marjorie Whitworth, Tommie Jones, Era Turbiville, John Whitworth, Arthur Hensley and Roland St. Clair.

JUNIOR CLASS NAMES ALL CLASS OFFICERS

Last year Schreiner High had a good Junior class, but the class is better this year.

This year there are thirty-six students, all energetic and just a "rarin'" to go.

Officers were elected at the first meeting and here they are: Eleanor Highsmith, president; Harry Witt, vice president; Betty Kroppf, secretary; Jewel Riley, chairman of the social committee.

Wednesday the sophomore class met and organized. The meeting was presided over by the last year's president, Lucille Taylor. Juanita Cowsert was elected president. Christine Schraub was elected vice president. Marie Sheppard was elected secretary. Mae Delle Lowry was elected treasurer. The president appointed Tommie Jones as chairman of the entertainment committee. Other members of this committee are Kathryn Hodges, Jarvis Jordan and Joe Roberts. Lucille Williams is reporter for the sophomore class.

Mrs. Conde Hardeman began her expression classes Monday, September 15. She has her studio at the Earl Bowers residence near the school.

GIRLS' CHORUS CLUB WILL BEGIN PRACTICE

Mrs. Milton F. Hill has been teaching a small class in voice and piano during the summer months and will continue to do so this winter.

Mrs. C. W. McCarroll opened her classes in piano, violin and voice last Monday.

The Choral Club will begin active rehearsal as soon as the schedule of the classes is completed.

The high school enrollment is now 132.

M. C. and Marvin Blackburn will attend the San Antonio Junior College the next term.

Mrs. H. O. Patterson's Expression class of small children started its study on Monday of this week.

Among those who attended the football game between Del Rio and Junction in Del Rio were: Kathrine Johnson, Hazel Lister, Maud Boone, Jewel Riley, Blackie Motley, Benita Barnes, Ella Annis Henderson, Veola Wahl, Lucille Taylor, Juanita Cowsert, Madeline Ragland, Kalleta Taylor, Nevada Blackburn, Elsie Bessent, Louise King, Helen Parker, Hazel Parker, Audrey Blackburn, Warren Bralley, Nolan Wilson, Blake Chenaull, Carleton Wright, Junior Stevenson and Doyle Parker.

JUNCTION EAGLES WIN GAME FROM DEL RIO

Last Friday morning Coach Bowers and twenty-two husky Eagles motored to Del Rio and defeated the Wildcats. The score was 12 to 7. This was a hard fought game from start to finish. The Eagles had the Wildcats bested because this was Del Rio's first game of the season and the Eagles' second game. Del Rio has a growing club, but they will be stronger after more practice.

There are new men dropping in every day, starting and trying to fill a position on the team. This will enable the coach, by having more material to make his team stronger and fill up the weak spots.

Denman Ake has returned to be with the boys the rest of the season. He made a good man last year, and he is coming back strong again this year. Coach Bowers is giving his boys stiff and hard work-outs, so they will be prepared when the Sonora Broncos come galloping down to Junction on the 27th. This will be Junction's third game this season.

FACULTY MEMBERS PASS SUMMER PLEASANTLY

Upon the teachers being asked how they spent the summer, the following reports were received:

Miss Austin Durst visited the Carlsbad Cavern in New Mexico and also visited in San Antonio.

Miss Georgia Gildart spent a month in Los Angeles, California, about a month at Phoenix, Arizona, and attended Sul Ross for six weeks.

Miss Dicky spent six weeks in San Marcos, where she attended school.

Mrs. Astor Wallace stated that she spent practically all the summer at her home in Junction where she specialized in dishwashing and house keeping in general.

Miss Velma Owens spent her summer vacation with her parents in Cherokee.

Miss Louise Knight spent her summer vacation visiting in Tucson, Arizona.

Miss Nellie Bennett, in addition to taking a course in dishwashing at her ranch home, visited in Kerrville and Abilene. Miss Inez Kelley says, "I spent my vacation at my home in Flawanna, which is a small town of which most people have never heard. The only lengthy trip I made was to Junction. I liked Junction immediately."

Mrs. Grady Kindrick states, "Grady and I spent a very enjoyable vacation in Galveston, Beaumont and some Louisiana points. I spent the remainder of the summer at home."

Mrs. Joe Felps taught summer school in Junction and visited in the coast towns of Beaumont, Port Arthur and Houston.

Mr. Earl Bowers spent the summer in Rising Star working. He failed to state the nature of his employment.

Mr. Bethel attended A. & M. for three weeks. He has been in Junction since July 1, making arrangements for this session of work. He forgot to mention that his wedding took place this summer.

Mr. Moses stated that he spent eight hours a day during the entire summer at the school house. He conducted summer school and made arrangements and preparations which will help make this school term a success.

SENIOR CLASS ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

Most of the students who were members of the Junior Class last year are members of the Senior Class this year. There are several new members also.

There are now twenty-five members in the Senior Class.

Miss Nellie Bennett, who was the Junior Class Sponsor last year, is Senior Class Sponsor this year. With Miss Bennett as a leader the members of the class hope to accomplish a great many worth while things.

All of the Senior boys play football, and the class is rather small when there is a football game.

The members of the Senior Class met in their home room Wednesday morning with the last term's Junior Class president, Raymond James, presiding. The class met for the purpose of organizing.

The following class officers were elected by popular vote: Raymond Schneider, president; Leonard Dunbar, vice president; Lorena Couey, secretary-treasurer. This group of people seem to be partial to Raymonds for class presidents.

After a brief discussion, it was decided that the order for the Senior rings will be mailed October 1, 1930.

HAZEL LISTER CHOSEN LEADER OF PEP SQUAD

On September 10, a group of girls, interested in organizing a pep squad, met in the study hall at 3:30 p. m.

Miss Blackie Motley was in charge of the meeting until a leader was elected.

There were only two persons nominated, Miss Katherine Johnson and Miss Hazel Lister. Hazel was elected and she took charge of the meeting.

Nominations for assistant leaders were then taken. The nominations were made in couples. Only two couples were nominated. Tommy Jones and Marie Sheppard as one couple, and Maud Boone and Katherine Johnson the other couple.

Maud and Katherine were elected.

The pep squad then had a discussion on whether they would get new suits or use the old ones. The members decided to use the old ones; and those who do not have suits are going to have suits ordered.

FORMER STUDENTS PAY SCHOOL VISIT

The high school was visited during the past week by the following: Tempie Boone, Ruth Sandherr, Merle Millsap, Marjorie Montgomery, Elsie Bessent, Ruby Davis, Vivian James, Marvin Blackburn and Oscar Duderstadt. These visitors graduated from Schreiner High School last May.

Juanita Cowsert and Lucille Taylor spent the week-end in Del Rio.

LONDON LOCALS

The fine rains recently makes everyone smile. Even editor Swinney looks more pleasant than usual.

Where our pasture land was not trampled bare the grass is already green and makes one think of spring time.

Field feed crops, where the stubble was not entirely dead, has begun a new growth and will make a fine crop of fall feed.

If our farmers will now sow wheat, oats or rye, or all these grains, they will stand a chance for a fine crop in spring feed, besides the winter pasturage. Some of our farmers and stockmen are already sowing wheat and oats. Now is the time while you are assured of the grain germinating and a good stand coming up.

The recent rains have retarded the gathering of the short cotton crop and has destroyed considerable cotton but our loss in cotton is greatly overbalanced by the fine feed the rain insures.

Mr. W. L. Kothmann shipped 128 calves to the Fort Worth market last week.

Mr. John Ralston shipped a truck load of calves to the San Antonio market last week.

Wes Smith and his negro were caught in the swollen current of Salty on the Jones ranch last week and came near wrecking their car, and the negro says he believes Mars Wes would have drowned had he not helped him out.

The Commissioners' Court was in our town Thursday of last week. Their business was to review the new built road from Highway No. 29 at the Cooper farm north to the county line. Judge Randolph declared it to be a real road and well worth the money.

Mr. Joe A. Harris of Cincinnati is here for a visit with friends. It looks natural to see Joe Ad in town.

Mrs. W. T. Russell of the Phlegner ranch has moved to town so that the children will be near the school.

Mrs. Edwin Ellebracht has moved to the R. L. McKinney residence. She has moved to town to send her little girl to school.

Mr. Leonard Hensley of Ozona is taking a much needed rest and spending his time with relatives and friends here and at Junction.

R. L. McKinney tracked cattle to the San Antonio market last week.

Man Harrison was in our town Friday. He was offering for sale blooded cattle.

Judge John S. Allison of Rocksprings passed through our town Friday.

Mrs. E. T. Hensley and little Mickey were meeting relatives and friends here Saturday. We regret very much to learn that our friend, E. T. Hensley, is on the puny list and not as strong physically as he might be, but the hills and pure spring water along the Frio should be sufficient to restore him to good health.

Our friend and neighbor, Mr. J. S. Goodman, is on the sick list. This is very regrettable. Mr. Goodman seldom fails to come to town Saturday and stay all day. Last Saturday we missed him. On making inquiry we learned he was quite sick. Our last news from him he was getting along very well.

Misses Hazel Emma and Clara Bess Herbst were shopping in town Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Drago are visiting relatives and friends here this week.

Judge M. D. Slaytor and Mr. E. H. Kothmann, two of our most substantial citizens, will represent London on the 23rd at the town to be named soon where representatives from Fort Worth to Del Rio will meet to organize real efforts to secure designation of Highway No. 10 by the National Highway Commission. This is no small consideration for Kimble County, and the entire country through which it will traverse. It will mean more to Kimble County and especially to London and Junction than any highway ever yet proposed. It will give tourists from the north and north-eastern states a direct state and national highway through eastern Oklahoma and diagonally across the best and most scenic section of the greatest state in the Union, and last, but by no means least (to us), it will traverse from northeast to southwest the entire empire of Kimble County. Let's all pull or push, as the circumstances may demand, for it.

We have the shower baths installed for our ball boys, now let's cheer them on to victory. Rah! for London High School foot ball team.

SEA THROWS UP BOOZE ON SAND

Newport, R. I.—A small fortune in liquor, packed in burlap wrapped cases and brought in on a high tide, lay under the watchful eye of four coast guardsmen at Belmont Beach recently.

The liquor, which coast guardsmen believe had been dumped overboard by rum runners, was first discovered by servants from estates near the beach. Other servants were told and before authorities knew of the existence of the contraband a score of cases had been carried off.

When police and coast guardsmen arrived the beach was strewn with 200 cases and as many more floated in on the next high tide that night. Early the next day 500 cases had come up on the beach and at dawn it was still coming in.

Hundreds of Newporters flocked to the beach to attempt to salvage what they might. They stayed all night, dodging in and out of the shadows cast by the coast guardsmen's flares, managing now and then to grab a bottle and get away. Once the coast guardsmen fired two shots into the sand to halt a group of men who had managed to get a bottle or two and were making for the highway. They dropped the bottles.

TRAVEL COSTLY FOR KING

London.—Railroad traveling is an expensive item for King George of England.

While his subjects pay approximately 2c a mile when they travel King George has to pay approximately $3.20 a mile in addition to fare for every member of his party.

Elaborate safety precautions are taken when the king and queen travel. Every foot of the line is inspected before the royal train pulls out of the station.

WIFE MADE TO SHOW HIDING PLACE OF HUSBAND'S LEG

A Dallas husband appealed to police Saturday to force his wife to bring his artificial leg from hiding.

While the one-legged man was sleeping his wife planned to fix it so he could not visit a home brew emporium during the day, she explained to police. She hit upon the idea of hiding her husband's artificial leg. He called police and she was forced to produce the leg.

Today You Say—And That is That—But Tell Me Are You Very Fat

Well, if you are—it's probably your own fault—You don't know how to eat right and that's one reason.

If you would like to learn how to lose the fat you hate—and no one else likes—do as I did—take this 30 day test. Cut out candy, cakes, pies and ice cream—cut down potatoes, rice, butter, cheese, cream and sugar.

Eat anything else you feel like eating but moderately—lean meat, fish, chicken, vegetables and fruit are best.

Take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning—follow this advice. One woman lost 19 pounds in 4 weeks; another got rid of 47 pounds in 3 months; a New York woman lost 14 pounds with one bottle of Kruschen and is full of vim and pep, so she writes.

At Heyman Drug Store or any drug store in the world you can get these magic salts—one 85 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks. Ask for Kruschen Salts—an enemy to Fat.

TERRACES SHOULD BE CONSTRUCTED NOW SAYS COUNTY AGENT HOMANN

The dry summer has checked crop growths, and most crops are now gathered. Terracing, deep tillage in the early fall, a prospective good winter season followed by an early seed bed preparation with pure-line seed will insure a better crop year in 1931 should conditions remain as they are, according to County Agent R. E. Homann.

If the lands are terraced before the fall rains, the soil on farms will not only be saved but the moisture will be conserved.

—And There's Only One Meter for the New Home Comfort Rate—

"Another big advantage of the new Home Comfort rate is that you have only one meter in your home. Regardless of the number of electric appliances you operate, there is only one meter to be read—and all electric service is figured on the same basis; that is, the lighting rate has been lowered to where it is now possible to use electric refrigerating service or heating and cooking service through the one meter. This is important from the standpoint of economy, for it means that everything electrical in your home benefits by the low Additional Service rate.

"For instance, in the average live room house, in a month ordinary lights and small appliances should utilize most of the service billed on the initial and second rates. Then your meter will record all additional use on the low 4c rate—3c where service is also used for heating or cooking.

"There will be no bother of two meter readings or two bills. Everything will be compact, definite and easily understandable.

"I'm thinking of new advantages so rapidly that I can hardly wait from week to week for the opportunity of explaining them to you. I'll be with you again next week, and I'm sure I'll have some interesting facts."

Miss Nobody from Nowhere

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

SIXTEENTH INSTALLMENT
 WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
 Alone in New York, remembering nothing of her past life, not even her own name, and with nothing about her with which to identify herself, a young woman meets Eric Hamilton, who tries to befriend her. She runs away from him, meets some curious people through whom she gets a job as a dancer in "Jake's" night club. A man out of her past life appears there one night, Samuel Henderson. She does not remember him but fears him, and runs away again, this time back to Eric. Hamilton persuades her to go through a marriage ceremony with him, to give him the right to protect her. They had just got back from the City Hall when Henderson finds them. He identifies the girl as Eve Carrington, a famous pianist, who lost her memory from a nervous shock induced by unsuccessful effort to save two children from drowning. Henderson had hoped to marry her. Eve is still ignorant of her real identity. Hamilton calls in Dr. Carrick, a nerve specialist, who arranged with other doctors to try the effect of another shock to bring her back to herself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 "Yes."
 "How did you manage it?"
 "Well, I got the clothes from the East Side apartment. The janitor let me have them—for a consideration," Eric finished with a wan grin.

"Now don't go up in the air," Doctor, he begged; "but I've simply got to make a suggestion and you've got to listen to it. I want you to have a consultation before you go ahead with this experiment. I want you to discuss the case with two or three of the best psychiatrists in New York—the associates you have the greatest faith in—and see what they think of your experiment. I'll leave the selection of them entirely in your hands, but as I shall pay their fees I want the privilege of hearing what they say."

"A consultation now would excite her and to that degree might imperil the success of my experiment. That's why I didn't arrange it. But I've been wishing they could see her," Carrick admitted, "and since you feel that way I'm wondering if we could have them study her without her knowing it. Could you have all four of us to dinner tonight as friends of yours?"

It was an unusual dinner. It is difficult to carry on a dinner conversation with a person whose conscious life is less than a month old. Again and again Mayer came up against the black wall.

He retreated from it so tactfully that he seemed not to touch it. But he learned young Mrs. Hamilton's present preferences, and something about the recent plays she had seen, as well as her impression of a new book or two, and his interest in her deepened. He was vastly impressed, as Carrick had been, by the poise and dignity of this groping figure that moved toward him through such a fog. His vivid imagination pictured himself as a victim of this girl's experience, and the flesh of his scalp tingled.

An hour later, in the hotel writing-room, the physicians, joined now by Carrick, passed on their conclusion to Hamilton. They were very frank with him. "No one can promise you anything," Hazard confessed, "except that the experiment will not do Miss Carrington any lasting harm. If she had not wrung a promise from you to the contrary, we would suggest that her manager be told the whole situation and consulted. But as there is in the case the element of his passion for her—"

Hamilton felt self-conscious. "And her obvious fear of him," he pointed out.
 "Exactly. Considering those things, it would be better, perhaps, to proceed as Doctor Carrick suggests. The alternative is to let matters drag along, and in that case you will certainly have to take Mr. Henderson immediately and fully into your confidence."
 "Yes," Hamilton regretfully admitted; "I see that. We can't keep him in the dark any longer."

Carrick made no secret of his jubilation over the concurrence of his colleagues in his plan.
 "Then we're all set," he declared. "I have an answer to that telegram I sent this morning to the Chicago hospital. We can stage our experiment for the day after tomorrow if this fine weather holds, as I think it will. Ready for your part of it?"
 "Of course." But Hamilton

spoke from a black depression. He was still horribly afraid of that coming experiment, and he did not care how many doctors knew it.

The day set for the test was of the warmly mellow type that sometimes comes as the last gift of a dying September. To that degree Nature worked with Carrick, as he pointed out to his nervous young assistant.

It was easy for Eric to persuade Eve to take an automobile spin early that morning; easy to drop unseen, in the back of the roadster, the carefully packed suitcase; easiest of all to turn from the city's roar, flash out across Long Island, and bring up at a remote stretch of beautiful seacoast that lay shimmering but lonely in the sunshine. Indeed, it was almost deserted. Only two figures, women in bathing suits, gave life to it.
 "It's rather late in the season for bathing," Eve said, with a glance at the backs of these ladies. She spoke with a great effort, keeping her eyes away from the water.

"It won't be October till tomorrow, and people bathe on this coast till the ice forms," Hamilton reminded her. "There's a bathing-club called the Polar Bears or something of the sort."
 "Those nurses are almost too realistic," he muttered.

"I . . . I don't think I want to stay here," Eve faltered.
 Apparently Hamilton failed to hear the words. He stopped the roadster, jumped, and offered her his hand.

"Let's sit down a little while and look at the sea," he casually suggested. As she reluctantly descended from the car he added, "You settle comfortably in the sand while I park the machine on the other side of that bank."

He was not sure of his voice, for his nervousness was increasing. He could see that Eve was shivering—that a slow tremor shook her entire body as she now turned and stood staring at the ocean. There was a row-boat rather far out—too far for her to see what was in it.

She followed its progress with quickening breath and eyes that steadily widened.

Eric got into the roadster and started the engine.
 "It may take a few minutes to park and lock this," he called to her over his shoulder, "I'll be back as soon as I can."

He caught one look she turned on him as he drove away, and he never forgot it. But he set his teeth and played his part of Carrick's drama. The next moment he was out of sight around the bank, where Carrick, Mayer, and Hazard were awaiting him behind another bath-house, in company with a rowboat and a life-guard in bathing-trunks. If, in her growing panic, Eve had followed him she might have discovered them all; but both Hamilton and Carrick had rightly reasoned that she would not do this. She ceased to think of him after that one wild look. Still violently trembling, she stared out to sea.

When the distant boat overturned she did not need the shrieks of the two women on the beach to tell her of the accident. Yielding to something as definite as the push of powerful hands, she had kicked off her pumps, thrown her hat on the sand, and was running into the water even before the women cried out. Their shrieks were excellent ones; and the urgent appeals to "save the children," which they sent after her as she began to swim, could not have been more realistic. They drew to the spot the only natives in that lonely region—two men whose zest for rescue had to be sternly dealt with by Carrick.

"Moving-picture stuff," he curtly explained. "Merely rehearsing a scene. Get out, or sit down and keep quiet."
 They sat down and kept quiet while the life-guard got the rowboat into the water with the assistance of Hamilton; and one of the two nurses in the bathing-suits bore Miss Carrington's pumps into the convenient bath-house. It was an unusually well fitted bath-house, for it held not only a fine assortment of Turkish towels, but a cot, an alcohol stove with a kettle of hot water on it, and a suitcase containing dry underwear, stockings and the gown and hat worn on the day of her memory lapse.

One of the nurses was Miss Adams. The other, who had arrived from Chicago late the night before, was not so importunate as her professional sister. The shriek she still sent after the swimmer, to preserve the proper atmosphere, had the ring of genuine excitement.

"I've never been so thrilled in my life," she confessed to Miss Adams, "or so nervous! You see, I nursed her for ten days, and I got very fond of her."

Miss Adams let her finish and then sent forth another shriek. It was a fine, full-voiced, far-carrying outcry, meant to emphasize the difference between nerves in New York and those in Chicago. Notwithstanding her agitation, the Western nurse caught the idea and promptly topped Miss Adams' shriek with a better one. Emerging from behind the sand-bank with his associates, Doctor Carrick grinned nervously.

Hamilton turned to him in desperation.
 "Doctor, she may get tired. Haven't I better swim out there, to be on the safe side?"
 "Don't be an ass. A life-guard is just behind her, there's another strong swimmer back of the capsized boat, and Miss Carrington herself is cutting through the water like a fish. What more do you want?"

"I wanted this over," Hamilton groaned, eyes glued to his binoculars.
 "So do I," Carrick admitted. "Eve's mind held one idea and only one—the need of reaching that capsized boat. She could see no figures in the water, for the young fisherman who had been the boat's sole occupant was now up to his neck on the far side of it.

The two nurses continued to shriek.
 Eve was very near the overturned boat when in response to a long whistle from shore the life-saver at last put his back into his strokes and reached her.

"All a mistake, miss," he cheerfully cried out, repeating the lines taught by the guys on shore. "There ain't no children there. There's only a man, and he's all right."
 There was something funny about that, too, he reflected. If this was only a picture, why had he been told to learn and speak these words?

Eve got into the boat without difficulty and sat dripping in the stern, blindly looking about her. Her companion, having helped to right the other boat and rescue the oars, rowed her back to shore swiftly and in silence.

On the beach Miss Carrington found a waiting group of sympathetic and helpful strangers, who showed a solicitude for her welfare that would have surprised her if she had not been past reasoning. Four of them were men and two were women, the women who were bathing-suits. These ladies hustled her into the convenient bath-house, and insisted on taking off her wet clothing and rubbing her down with coarse towels and giving her hot coffee which it appeared to be their pleasant habit to carry about with them, and urging her not to talk.

They also re-dressed her in dry garments—fortunately her own. She had an odd feeling of having entered the bath-house in garments that were not her own. The two women explained that these must have been bathing clothes. The clothes themselves had strangely disappeared, and she was now wearing her green and gold one-piece gown. . . . But where was she? What did it all mean?

The four gentlemen who had so opportunely been passing along the shore in a big automobile insisted on taking her home.

"I'm . . . at . . . the Garland . . . I think," she managed to bring out. "But . . . how . . . did I . . . get here? . . . I . . . merely meant to take . . . a walk . . . ?"
 They were vague about that, but obviously they were also men to be trusted, and one of them said he was a doctor and made a fuss about cold and exposure and insisted on having her put to bed and given medicine as soon as she was back in her hotel rooms.

It was all a dream of course . . . a chaotic dream with something horrible in it. . . . There was a younger man in the group, with a tragic sort of face. . . . That face haunted her.

Bicycling Through Normandy

EDITOR'S NOTE—Because of several requests from subscribers—sincerely or otherwise—the editor of the Junction Eagle is preparing a series of articles based on his impressions of Europe, the first one appearing this week. The titles and the order in which they will appear are: "Spain in a Day," "Climbing Through Normandy," "Between Drinks in Germany," "Oberammergau—The Passion Play," "Climbing and Tunneling Through Switzerland," "The Time in London and Environs," "A Great Little Country," and "Things You Don't See in Europe."

It lasted two weeks—this bicycle trip through Normandy that Joe Stanton and I took. Pedaling 814 kilometers on a French bicycle through country that has too many hillsides doesn't fall exactly in the category of de luxe travel.

To begin with, French bicycles are obnoxious. Built with hand brakes, minus the American coaster brake principle, it takes the average American about three good falls to catch on to the Continental idea of cycling. And, too, on the boulevards of Paris is a bad place to practice.

After bumping over Paris cobblestone streets for hours, we emerged into the country and also into a good rain which drove us to take shelter under the roof of a peasant's stable.

Versailles, a city of about 60,000 inhabitants and the place where much of France's history has been made, was the first stop on our ill-will trip. After seeing the Palace of Versailles in typical tourist fashion, we set out and arrived at dusk at Trappes, a small peasant village. Having only a conching knowledge of French, we had a difficult time explaining to the innkeeper that Americans do not stop long enough to sleep. Finally she conducted us up an antiquated winding stairway to a small chamber fitted with furnishings belonging to the eighteenth or nineteenth century. After gesticulations intended to convince us that this was the right place to stay, she pointed to a small electric light dangling from the ceiling and said in French, "See what we have to offer you."

For the evening meal we were served cold roast of dubious character, pickles, snails and beer. Peasant life in the small villages of France is a simple affair, but contentment is written plainly in every line of their faces. The complexity and hustle of the outside world doesn't affect their serenity. They open their shops when they want to and attend to customers at their leisure.

The next day, although handicapped by sore muscles, we pedaled about 80 kilometers, reaching the city of Chartres in time to go through the beautiful Cathedral of Chartres, which is one of the most famous in France.

At Nogent-la-Rotrou, we saw the stables of the famous Percheron horses. The Percheron horse was developed in this section of France.

Normandy is a hilly country and before we had pedaled three days our bicycles began suffering parietic strokes every time we started up a hill. Besides having to walk up the hills, we had to lead those iron horses up.

While going through the city of Rennes, we saw a big sign bearing the words, "American Soda Fountain." It was a touching sign. It brought back fond memories of Coca Colas and chocolate milk shakes. Finally succumbing to the appeal, we went in and with our best French accent we ordered a Coca Cola in English. After waiting long enough for an American soda dispenser to serve fifty people, the waiter finally brought out a pitcher of steaming hot chocolate. We accepted it, realizing it was just another of the misunderstandings between Americans and Frenchmen.

From Rennes, we set out on the long, up-hill journey to Dol, a little village immortalized because Victor Hugo spent much of his time there writing. Many scenes in his immortal "Les Miserables" were laid there. We loitered an hour or so in the little church yard which was one of Hugo's favorite rendezvous.

After thoroughly exploring the peaceful village of Dol, our next stop was Mont St. Michel.

old home of the rulers of Normandy, and oftimes referred to as the eighth wonder of the world. Mont St. Michel rises from the bosom of the sea in a bay to which it has given its name. It was built on a small island of rock jutting up in the sea about two miles from the coast of Normandy. Today it is linked up to the mainland by a causeway.

Originally St. Michel was built for a monastery and was inhabited by monks, but as time went on, rulers of Normandy and France took possession of it and for many years it was a political stronghold. Besides the beautiful abbey which is the crowning glory of the island, there is a picturesque village built on the rocky slopes of the small island.

During the reign of Louis XI several cells were fitted up in the substructures of the Abbatial Church. Being more or less inquisitive and desiring to see some real, honest-to-goodness dungeons Joe and I drifted off into some of the hallways of the substructures. With the aid of matches we got a close-up view of some real dungeons. Some of the cells were so small that the prisoner could only stand up. Remnants of chains which were used to secure the prisoners were still in the cells. Utter darkness prevailed. Dank, stuffy air laden with heavy dust stifled us. Our match supply gave out and we had to retrace our steps by groping along the sides of the tunnels. By violating the rules of the place, we had gotten to see some of the sights which Frenchmen do not show American tourists.

After spending two days absorbing some of the history and beauty of Saint Michel, we pedaled through some of the famous apple producing sections of Normandy. Instead of eating the fruit, practically the entire crop is converted into cider, which is the universal drink of Normandy. Their slogan is "Drink More Cider." In every cafe and home in the district, a large pitcher of cider is served with meals, and failure to drink it is a direct insult to the host.

After spending some time in Caen visiting the famous cathedrals and public buildings we proceeded up the Norman Coast to Deauville, one of the most famous horse racing centers in the world. Having lived in Kentucky and with an idea that he knew horses, Joe would not pass the place up without spending an afternoon at one of the tracks.

After it was all over, we tried to figure how a person could win by betting. Here are our figures. We placed four bets of sixty francs each. Two of our horses came in first. We lost two. But when we went to collect we were only given two hundred francs. We had bet 240 francs, on four races; picked two firsts and then did not win as much money as we had bet. We concluded that it was wrong to bet on horse races.

By this time we had pedaled about 800 kilometers and had been drifting over the byways for two weeks without a shave. We needed a rest. Arriving in Honfleur, a historic little coastal fishing village, we decided to sell our bicycles and spend a week fishing. It was then we learned something about these economical Frenchmen. By giving away one of the bicycles we managed to get half price for the other one, just enough money to purchase some respectable fishing apparatus.

During the next week while we were catching large quantities of mullet, we had time to rest up our sore muscles and look back with full appreciation upon our two weeks of bicycling through picturesque Normandy.

Poultry Business Still Means Money

Even during "hard times" in the business world there are always opportunities for men who have initiative and the ambition to work.

There is in Kimble County now an opening where a person willing to work, who, with small capital, could build up a profitable and substantial business.

Every year the grocery merchants, meat market proprietors, bakery and other businesses are forced to buy their egg supply from out of county markets because there is no supply at home. Based on estimates gathered from local business men, there are approximately 500 cases of eggs shipped into Junction during the course of a year. This is exclusive of the home produced eggs. There are 30 dozen eggs to a case which would mean that about 15,000 dozen eggs are imported each year. Placing the average cost per case at $8, which is a conservative figure, that would mean that Junction merchants pay $4,000 a year just for eggs shipped in. Then add to this amount which would be derived from selling chickens to markets, etc., and the man with a business mind can visualize the possibilities of the business.

Of course any business that pays requires work and patience, and this is no exception. There is a good field here in Kimble County for such an enterprise and it is waiting for the man with the ability to put it over.

KERR ALLOTTED 3,300 CAR LICENSE PLATES

MILK COW PLACED IN CHICAGO ZOO

Strange as it may seem, cows are a curiosity to thousands of Chicago school children.

"One is surprised how many Chicago school children visit the Lincoln Park Zoo and ask to see a cow," said Alfred E. Parker, director of the zoo. "For several years we have had in our zoo a specimen of the sacred cow of India, but the kids are curious about an ordinary barnyard bossy."

So Lincoln Park Board put up a stanchion in an old house formerly occupied by monkeys, and Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick contributed the cow, a prize animal from her farm near Byron, Illinois. Thus "the friendly cow all red and white" finds herself, in her new quarters, a successor to apes and chimpanzees as an attraction to the thousands of city children who have never seen one; and this in the Middle West—one might say, in the very center of a bovine stronghold.

TORCH CUTS THROUGH IRON 25 FEET AWAY

New York.—A torch that cut through an iron hinge from a distance of 25 feet was tested successfully by the N. Y. fire department. The torch, equipped with a straight tip burner on a slender iron pole, is designed to aid firemen in cutting through barred windows out of reach of fire escapes and landings and will become part of the regular equipment of the city's fire department rescue trucks.

Junction Trade Notes

(By G. G. Co.)

The "Heart of Texas" Press Ass'n will convene in Coleman Saturday in semi-annual session. Next meeting of the association will be in April, 1931, and the editors will not make a mistake by selecting Junction as the place of meeting, where they could have all the solace and pleasure that living waters give.

The sale this week in Junction area of a 1000-acre River ranch, intended for intensive development, is an important news note of the week. . . . And the announcement was made last week that W. L. Moody, capitalist of Galveston, is soon to build a fine residence on his estate in the hills between Junction and Kerrville. The residence will be two stories and basement, 274x188 feet, patio in center, construction of natural stone and concrete, with 17 guest quarters and baths.

In stock: New Delicious and Jonathan apples, school size. New crop prunes, evaporated apples, apricots and other dried fruits. Gann Grocery Company. Apple sauce, in tins, delicious new food product.

Brook Ramey, representing Ramey Pecan Co. of Brownwood, visited Junction this week to investigate local pecan prospects. First new pecans of the season should be showing in Junction within next ten days. The local crop is short but the nuts are exceptional quality. For the State as a whole the crop is estimated as 23% of normal, while in eastern States production is estimated at 70%.

Pecan-Nut butter blended with peanut is putting a popular product in Junction; sold in 25c and 45c glass jars. Gann Grocery Company.

Model 'A' Costs Are Checked by Police Officers

After two years of constant service and thorough checking, police officials of the City of Louisville, Ky., find that the total operating cost of their Model A's has averaged 1.073 cents per mile. Roy W. Easley, Director of Safety of that City, is authority for those figures. Following is his statement:

We are writing you regarding the experience we have had with Model A Ford roadsters, used in this department by our men in covering their beats. Our cars, Nos. 19, 14, 25, 36 and 42 were in service for two years. We have taken the cost of operating these cars and it is a pleasure for us to state the total operating cost averaged 1.073 cents per mile. In arriving at this low figure a very liberal depreciation was charged off; over twenty-one miles per gallon of gasoline was experienced; the average mileage of each of these cars was 174,276 miles.

The above figures are extremely low and enabled this department to effect a considerable saving in giving adequate police protection to the citizens of Louisville.

Overdrawing on the Bank

It is clear that some good people do not realize what an overdraft means to the bank and to themselves. The following comments are made in a kindly way, and the persons to whom they may come, whether used to overdrawing or not, are asked to receive them in a like good spirit.

1. When a depositor overdraws he requests the bank to do what it has no legal right to do, that is, to pay money when there is no money to his credit.
2. Usually, therefore, a bank declines payment. But this is embarrassing to the depositor because the check has to go back through all hands that had it on its way to the bank and go marked "no funds" or "not enough funds." The law provides, also, that a protest check must be protested on the very same day it is received by the bank. We have no choice about this.
3. Sometimes the bank, in order to save the customer this embarrassment, will call him up, with a view to getting a deposit sufficient to cover the checks presented for payment and to prevent an overdraft. This is not always possible, and it is never fair to the bank, whose officials and employes have work enough with their regular duties.
4. Of course, every bank desires to accommodate and to please its customers. It can do business only because it has friends. No bank likes to turn down the check that may be an overdraft because of an error or even because of intention.
5. But customers should know that every such overdraft, if, allowed, has to be listed in the bank every day until paid, and to be ready for inspection by directors and officers and bank examiners.
6. Customers that repeatedly overdraw should also be reminded that they cannot do this without impairing their credit. A man may be of sterling character and he may have considerable property, but if he habitually overdraws his account he unavoidably gives the impression that he is "not a good business man," or that he is "hard up," etc.
7. A forged or raised check may show itself as an overdraft. Banks rightly feel, therefore, that they should notify customers at once. Errors in the bank's book-keeping also sometimes show themselves as overdrafts. When a bank, therefore, sends out an overdraft notice, it means that there is something wrong that needs to be corrected, and it ought always to be corrected promptly.
8. To sum up, overdrafts are against the law; they are against sound principles of good business; they use up valuable time of the bank's officers and employes, and, certainly, they injure the credit standing and business reputation of those that indulge in them. So this explains why one rule of "Any Good Bank" is and has to be "Don't Overdraw."
