Yet She Smiles! In Spite of Trouble This Once-Famous Actress Is "Carrying On"

Madame Nijinsky

By NEA Service KANSAS CITY, Dec. 1.—There is tragedy, unseen but poignant, behind the smile of Madame Romola Nijinsky.

Two years ago she crossed the continent in a private car, surrounded by luxury. It was a tour of triumph. Her husband was one of the world's foremost dancers, a star of the Diaghileff troupe.

Sophisticated through and through, she spent a small fortune on Christmas gifts and a diamond necklace. That was 10 years ago. Today Madame Nijinsky is in Kansas City under different circumstances. She came on a day coach, walked from the station to her hotel to have face and hair done as usual.

Nijinsky, in Paris, is insane. He is being cared for by a sister while Madame Nijinsky seeks money to pay brain specialists. The specialists, she hopes, will be able to restore Nijinsky's reason.

Two years ago, while in Kansas City, she spent a small fortune on Christmas presents for friends in Europe. This year there will be none.

Madame Nijinsky fills a small part in "The Miracle," playing here.

Chaplin Likes Sleep; Chases Wife's Party

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2. (P)—Charles Chaplin, film comedian today denied charges that he had left his young wife, Lita Grey Chaplin, and declared that she left him when he objected to a drinking party in his home. "I have never left my wife," he said. "I have done everything I could do to make my home a happy one, but it seems impossible," the actor stated in an interview given at his Beverly Hills mansion.

"In her story of our separation, my wife refers to an incident last Monday night. It was this: I objected to a noisy drinking party of men and women who came to my home while I was asleep and caused the entire household, including the nurse and the baby," Chaplin explained.

"Well," he continued, "when I heard the piano, organ and victrola all going at once, I got the best of me, so I called my wife up and told her to get the people out at once. She did this and the next day she left."

Mrs. Chaplin, who took her two children and went to the home of her grandparents, explained yesterday that she and her mother, Mrs. Lillian Spruce, were entertaining a party of friends in the Chaplin home when she and her young husband quarreled.

The Woman's Day

YES, IGNORANCE IS BLISS

A woman who claims to have visited the entire world many times over, giving especial study to women and wives everywhere, reports that American wives have more freedom than any other wives, and yet are the most discontented. She speaks of domestic bliss in regions of earth where wives are not pampered, petted and given the liberties they are here. Her argument is that freedom is still a novelty to women, and they don't know how to use it. My own interpretation has it that the wife with freedom is the wife with intelligence, and intelligence rarely walks as close with happiness as does the woman not overburdened with intelligence.

ANECDOTE OF GRACIOUS MELBA

Once upon a time, story has it, Dame Nellie Melba, contralto, who has retired from the concert stage, was crossing the Atlantic. She was in a ship's concert and went with an officer down into the hold to get some music from her baggage. A by-drum was found open which had been pushed for hours right into all of Dame Melba's baggage. Her famous operatic dress was nothing but a wrig of soggy tissue, and the operatic were loose in the bottom of the trunk.

Charles T. Spedding, famous purveyor of this particular vessel which has carried its share of the world's celebrities, and who has now written his "Reminiscences of Transatlantic Travelers," reports that Melba simply said, "I hope no one gets into trouble over this. No one shall hear of it from me."

I was thinking of Melba this noon at lunch when the shrew at my table nearly broke a blood-vessel in upbraiding the scarce little waitress who spilled a glass of water on the table. A Melba says "It doesn't matter." A nobody shrieks to the almighty heavens to bear witness how she is abused and insulted!

Rev. Mr. Pope is recognized as one of the strongest young preachers in the state, and it was at the urging of many of his friends here that he accepted the appointment. He probably will be engaged here until about the first of the year, and plans then to enter Yale college to complete work on his Ph. D. degree.

Rev. Mr. White is now convalescing in a local sanitarium from injuries sustained in an automobile accident near Post several days ago, and will be able to be taken to his home in a few days, doctors said Thursday.

WHEN BUYING FUR FINERY

If you are buying a new fur coat, remember that it may not be as good as it looks, say fur buyers. No matter how pretty it is, look at the belt side. If you can possibly increase it, have the lining tipped a little so that you can get at the belt. Because of little, stiff folds, and resists if it feels pliant and flexible. Your argument that even if you are spending more than you should for your coat, you can wear it five years, is not necessarily a good one. Some fur coats do not wear as long as some cloth coats.

PUZZLE—FIND THE CULPRIT

It's girls who are to blame for petting, according to the male student body of a large university. Answering a questionnaire of this weighty subject of petting, the boys said they petted because the girls expected them to. "Silly as this is, it is no sillier than the old argument so much in vogue to the effect that girls pet because the boys demanded it, and they wouldn't have dates if they didn't. For proof, consult any Bee Parlor or Cynthia Grey. Our observation of this petting business has been that both sides of the fray have been quite willing to indulge."

Handle Pictures With Care

These groups illustrate some of Miss Curry's principles of proper picture hanging.

By NEA Service
If your walls are just w-a-l-l-s, look to your pictures. It is surprising what the hanging of a picture can do your room. The best pictures that money can buy will look cold and indifferent almost snobbish, if you don't give them a chance to be friendly.

"I have been in homes where the pictures hung so high that one needed a step-ladder to look at them," says Margie Currier, Director of the American Art Bureau and a writer for "Fam and Friends."

"Pictures are to be lived with, down on a level with people. That's why their center should be about even with your eye when you come into a room. If a picture is extra large, let the lower part be at this point. If small pictures are hung by themselves, place them low near a table, a desk or a reading nook. There you can see them intimately. You are close enough to read their thoughts."

May Look Awkward
I have been in rooms where the pictures tilted out from the wall, and hung staring down at an awkward angle. They looked uncomfortable and made me feel that way. Pictures need to be fast against the wall, hung on a small nail or their backs. You can get nails made for this purpose that will not spoil your plaster.

"A large picture, of course, must be hung from the molding. You fasten this with two parallel wires or cords. When a picture hangs from one hook, the wire forms a triangle of lines that takes the strain by itself, pulling the wires and away from the picture. And, too, the triangle interferes with the unity of the room."

The cord or wires should not be heavy. If they cross them in some way to match the wall covering, they look like a piece of string. You can get them in a wide variety of subjects and sizes.

"Good original paintings may often be purchased at reasonable prices, but it is better to have a fine reproduction of a painting of acknowledged merit than a poor original."

County Prisoners Are Put to Work

Prisoners of Lubbock county, which now have become so numerous that the battle is somewhat congested, will be given an opportunity (at the urging of officials) to work off some of their surplus energy in beautifying the buildings and premises about the court house here, it was stated Thursday.

Several of the inmates are to remain in the jail for considerable time, and strict confinement will be detrimental to their health, officials said they believe. Some of them, accordingly, have already begun their daily grind of routine work, under supervision of the caretaker of the house of justice, who will be relieved of some of his labors in an effort to keep track of the prisoners.

VISUALIZING THE GOLDEN RULE

Our time has seen no more extraordinary banner of philanthropy unfurled to the breeze than Golden Rule Sunday. The world—regardless of creed or sect—has responded to it during the past three years like Crusaders to the raised symbol of the cross. Less than a year after the idea of the Golden Rule Dinner was established by the Near East Relief, eighteen religious communities, representing, also, at it happened, eighteen different nations, gathered in a garden in Jerusalem to break bread and endorse the symbol of self-denial. In the group were Moussa Kazim Pasha, head of the Moslem community of Palestine, the Patriarch of the Church, the Archbishop of the Syrian Church, the Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church, the Coptic and Abyssian Patriarchs, together with representatives of the Jews, the Anglicans, Christian Scientists, the Roman Catholic Church, and others. President and Mrs. Coolidge will keep Golden Rule Day in the United States this year as they have in the past. The "orphan's meal" idea was born in the mind of Charles V. Vickrey, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, while he was journeying to Geneva after a visit to the orphanages of the Levant, where he had sat with the children and eaten with them their healthful five-cent meal of rice and tomato, dar, dark bread, stewed prunes, and cocoa. The echoes of happy children rang in his ears as he thought painfully of the fact that the Near East Relief was then facing an almost inevitable deficit due to the added burden of Smyrna's burning, which it had shouldered the year before. He was thinking with dread of the impending starvation that hung over the heads of those fatherless and motherless children he had just left. And it was then that he conceived the notion of asking Christendom and the world at large to curtail one of its meals during the course of the year and to send the saving in cost as a reminder of the poverty and needs to the little children of the Near East. That was in 1923. When Mr. Vickrey arrived at Geneva, he proposed his plan to the international societies which were supporting the work of the Near East Relief, and it was immediately accepted. Every year since the number of people who have denied themselves a little one day in the year for the sake of the Near East's unfortunate's has grown until today millions will join in one of the most magnificent gestures of inter-racial charity that our times have seen, the third Golden Rule Day dinner.

In the last number of the Review of Reviews, Richard H. Edmunds presented a staggering array of facts on "America's limitless resources." His article is a Thanksgiving proclamation in statistical form, worthy of preservation, study and review. Our harvest of agricultural and manufactured products, he says, reach the total of $33,000,000,000. Our national wealth approximates four hundred billions. With only six per cent of the world's population we have half the world's gold, we produce 87 per cent of the world's automobiles; have 62 per cent of all the telephones, and other commodities in like proportions. Bank deposits are 47 billions, saving bank deposits 23 billions; life insurance in force, seventy billions. No people ever lived in such comfort, ease, luxury. But even as we pass Thanksgiving and prepare for Christmas festivities, thousands of orphans in Armenia are homeless and face a winter of exposure, suffering and death, unless we, in the spirit of the Golden Rule, share our abundance to supply their wants. The severest earthquake in the history of Armenia occurred on the night of Oct. 22. Fortunately a preliminary tremor gave warning and enabled the American relief workers to get their 9,000 children out of the buildings before the heavy crash came. The orphanage buildings, however, were damaged, and the children obliged to sleep out-of-doors pending repairs. Quakes of varying intensity occurred almost daily for a period of two weeks. On the 30th a blizzard began. The suffering of the village population in their improvised shelters, according to the cables, "would make Valley Forge seem comparatively comfortable." Christmas is a season of peace on earth and good will toward men; but the carol falls dead if while we sing it, in our well-warmed churches or comfortable homes, children on the snow-swept plains of Armenia freeze and the children of other lands lack food. On Golden Rule Sunday, we are asked to make a definite contribution toward peace on earth and good will among men by sharing our abundance with those who are in adversity. On this day the Golden Rule citizen of the world are asked to content themselves with a frugal but adequate meal, such as of necessity must suffice monotonously every day for the orphans of the Near East. Then, having entered for a brief period into sympathetic fellowship with the sufferings of our fellow men, and having with thanksgiving entered into a new appreciation of our own good fortune, we are asked to make such contribution for the relief of others as we would like to have made if fortunes were reversed and we or our loved ones were in adversity and distress.

HITTING AT THE SOURCE OF PROHIBITION VIOLATIONS

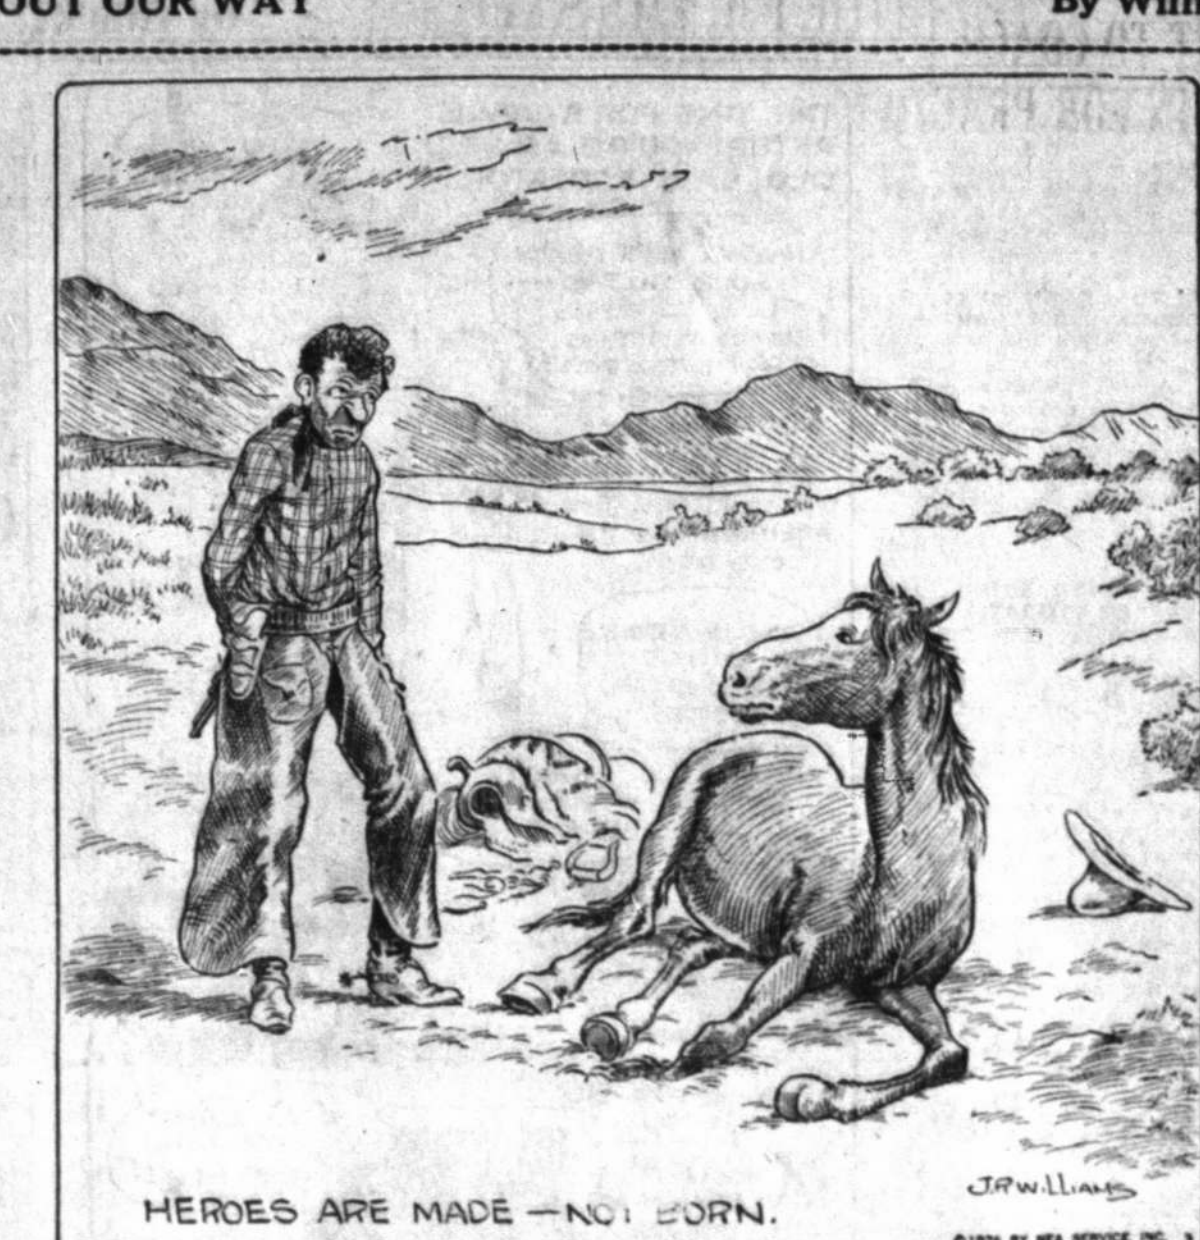

The prohibition law-enforcement officers are going at the enforcement of the prohibition law in an entirely different way next year according to the announcement recently made by Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant to the State Secretary Treasury. He asserted in this connection that he expected his policies in the next year to produce fewer arrests, but that the cases made by Federal agents would mean the curbing of sources of supply instead of "piling up thousands of inconsequential cases." Assistant Secretary Andrews observed that the amount sought to pay prohibition enforcement expenses in the fiscal year 1928 was the same as available in the current year. He believed he had succeeded in attracting "a more desirable class" of personnel to the Federal service because of the policies of leaving the so-called police cases to local authorities.

"We have had a tremendous turnover in the prohibition personnel," he commented. "There are now only nine of the original twenty-four men I appointed as administrators; all the others are new. Some of the departures and retirements from the service were because of more attractive propositions from private enterprises and we could not hold men who were offered more money. Some of the others were left outside because they did not fit; to the extent that I made mistakes in not getting the right man for the job in several places, there have been changes. Then we have had to get rid of a number of subordinates whom we found were either going wrong or were refusing to carry out established policies. It can be seen, therefore, that the last 12 months has brought its changes in the enforcement personnel. But that's not serious. I know we are making progress. There is still smuggling and there will be some of it continue. The forces are constantly battling against this sort of violation. But it is my contention that every time we run down a big conspiracy we have broken up an agency of distribution into which the smuggled goods are fed. There are efforts being made to get more in, and the service everywhere is making efforts to keep it out. As for the internal work, I think there is genuine improvement and I am convinced that much of the improvement is due to the higher type of men we are getting. Not only does the type of men we seek increase the efficiency but it also creates a more favorable impression where they come in contact with the general public and as I have said in several speeches, we must have that co-operation. As Mr. Andrews said he had not familiarized himself with the appropriations sought by the Coast Guard and the Division of Customs, both of which are under his supervision and both of which have their work to do in connection with enforcement. He assumed that the financial needs of each unit had been carefully drawn up and had been presented in detail so that Congress will know for what the money is to be spent. The trouble seems to be that they are trying to stop the bootlegger reptile by cutting off inch by inch of his tail, and that is a very slow process especially when it is taken into consideration that this reptile reaches across the United States. We believe when the enforcement forces get in dead earnest about the matter that there will be no trouble in subduing the monster. The United States Government is big enough to do anything that it will undertake to do in dead earnest. It was a mighty sweep of the pen that prohibition was brought into the United States, and it only requires the right kind of men at the head of the Prohibition enforcement office to enforce the act. Striking at the source—the head of the reptile is the way to forever put it out of the way. The same is true with the local conditions. Put the knife at the head and the root and the sources of the bootleg whiskey, and it will not be long till the boys and the men of the town who have been in the habit of drinking the stuff will become more decent individuals. Worth more to their family and their community. This can be done only by the law enforcement officers backed by the people who want the laws enforced whether they actually believe in them or not. Juries and individual citizens must work together with the men who occupy the offices.

A COMING CONTEST

Political observers foresee a bitter fight between the dries and wets in 1928. The strong demand for a national referendum upon the prohibition question comes from those who desire changes in the existing law. From its supporters emanate defiance of such a test, and a determination to oppose wet planks and wet candidates. Laws legally enacted should be obeyed by all citizens, but the right to seek relief is open to all citizens. The wets have constantly maintained that prohibition was "put over" on the country as a war measure, although a "majority of our people are against it." Prohibition was legally enacted in this country and has been endorsed by too many states to permit such a wet change to go unchallenged. A referendum on the present law might serve a good purpose, if it would convince the wets that the people, excepting a small minority of the whole, approve prohibition. But, if such a referendum is had, and the dries win, would the wets accept the decision as final? If not, there is no use in a poll. The question is, would they? Looking at their record of the past years, we are compelled to doubt it. For that reason a referendum, which, in itself, can hardly hope to repeal the constitutional amendment, would do little, or no, good. To repeal the Eighteenth amendment will require the joint action of more states than the wets even hope to carry.

OUT OUR WAY

HEROES ARE MADE—NO BORN.

SO THINK WE

We think there are many undeveloped industries in this section of the state. It might be a good idea for the chamber of commerce to take a quiet hour between now and the first of the year just to think about the vast undeveloped possibilities of the Lubbock country and map out a plan of advance in order to obtain them. Just a few for an example. Increased poultry production. Increased dairy production. The development of the packing industries here including fruits and vegetables, potato curing plant. Broom corn industry, more small grain, etc.

We think since the women folks have such a hankering after being like men in their appearance that some of them should be baldheaded. We are really expecting that some of them will at least try it some of these days.

We think making the road safe for pedestrians is possibly one of the highway problems of today.

We think that France is possibly getting ready for another big loan from some source, since she is putting on such a prosperous appearance these days.

We think it certainly takes a small guy to hide behind women's skirts these days, but all the same some men do.

We think if there was a systematic checking up on third class mail and where it goes when the party it is addressed to receives it. A law would be justified in keeping it out of the way so that real service could be given to first class mail customers.

We think the American dollar, like the carburetor on some automobiles has been speeded up. It is different now. It does not go so far, but it goes much faster than it formerly did.

We think if there was a penalty on ignorance that could be enforced it would be even more exciting than the enforcement of the prohibition laws of this nation.

We think there is no such a thing as falling until you have gotten to the point where you can recognize it.

We think if a fellow can build an acreage it is better than nothing. But why not build a pretty home in Lubbock, and quit.

We think the difference between truth and flattery does not make much difference when talking with certain people.

It is reported that Santa Claus is coming back again next Tuesday and that he must not be trampled on this time, for he is still sure from the stepping on he got last Tuesday.

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported that many people have bought their Christmas things, but have not mailed them. Do not wait too long. It is not very long till Christmas you know, and Uncle Sam can not handle all the packages that the people will mail in two or three days.

It is reported that Lubbock could build twenty miles of cement walk and not have near enough. We hope she will have that much new walk by this time next year at least.

It is reported that stealing in Lubbock does not wind up as happy to some boys as they figured it might. A day in jail is not what they figured on.

It is reported that folks are still stealing milk from the door steps of many of the people of this city. Milk is good food, but nobody appreciates their daily allowance being cut out entirely by some one coming along and snatching it away.

WHAT POVERTY MEANS

At times when we become discouraged and feel that this world is not treating us fairly, it would be well to reflect upon the terrible poverty that is being endured by the unhappy people of the eastern hemisphere. Just one instance of this is in the plight of 120,000 Bulgarian refugees, who have been left homeless and landless by the interchange of population between Balkan countries since the war. In their case an effort is being made to render assistance through a $10,000,000 loan to be raised under the auspices of the League of Nations, which has already aided Greek refugees to some extent. The loan, if arranged, will only provide a rough house, some seed, a cow, one-half share in a plow and a cart, and one-fourth share in a harrow for each family with some provisions to aid them while a crop is being made. In a plea for these people before the Council of the League, the representative of Belgium declared that he had never seen a more pitiful and tragic spectacle than that presented by these Bulgarian peasants, who had been torn from their homes and all they possessed through no fault of their own. Only when we contemplate the abject poverty of such people as these can we begin to appreciate how fortunate we are to have been born in America.

DIVERSIFICATION BEING PROVEN

Makes Banner Crop of Feed on Farm This Year. L. A. Thomas, who but a few years ago bought the McReynolds farm northwest of Big Spring, is meeting with all kinds of success farming, and this year has proven to be a banner one in the production of grain. Mr. Thomas has every barn or available shelter on his place filled with feed, and he has between twenty and thirty loads of feed in the fields yet to be gathered. He will not be in the market for feed of any kind for a few more years, and will feed his hogs, cows, and chickens bountifully of this big supply. Regardless of what cotton crops brings, Mr. Thomas believes that he can make an independent living from his livestock and poultry. As soon as our farmers realize that diversification is the only safe farm plan and plant their cotton, the sooner will the price go up, and prosperity will reign, the one crop system just won't work.—Big Spring Herald.

Will Help Make This Land of 'Hog and Hominy'

Frank Perry, an enterprising farmer who lives ten miles northwest of the city is preparing to help make Hockley county a land of "Hog and hominy" and also to utilize a large feed crop in a very practical manner. Out of a shipment of blooded hogs received at Brownfield, he purchased sixteen brood sows and has moved them to his farm in this county. This is a step in the right direction and will mean much in the development of this country. While cotton can be raised cheaply here, feed can also be grown far more profitably than in Iowa. Pork can be raised profitably here at a price that would mean ruin to Northern feeders. Blooded hogs, good dairy cattle, good poultry well cared for, will make this country the most prosperous in the southwest. If it takes ten cent cotton to bring this about, then cheap cotton may be a blessing in disguise. Hockley County Herald.

Miss Denton, Friend of Millions

By W. H. PORTERFIELD NEA Service Writer

Miyajima, Japan, Dec. 2 (AP)—A few days ago in the city of Kyoto, I had occasion to compliment one of the hotel porters on his "good English."

"Thank you, very much," he replied. "I learn in Methodist mission school in Kobe, but my brother he speak much better as me. He will be graduate of the Doshisha."

The next day of Kobe I was talking to another porter. He asked me where I had come from. I replied "Kyoto." Quick as a flash he asked, "You see the Doshisha university?"

When I told him that I had visited it and that we knew Miss Denton, his face broke into smiles and he laughed heartily. "You know Miss Denton. That's very good. I know her too."

Everybody Knows Her. That afternoon we decided to return a book borrowed of Miss Denton, by mail, and I spoke to one of the numerous hotel boys about it, casually mentioning that it was a book borrowed of Miss Denton. I gave no address, but asked the boy to wrap the book or mailing.

Half an hour later he delivered the book, all neatly wrapped, tied and addressed to Miss Mary Florence Denton, the Doshisha, Kyoto, all in Japanese, of course, and when we expressed surprise, he smiled and said: "Oh, everybody knows Miss Denton. Japan has 68,000,000 human beings within its borders, all of them very busy. All of them are Shintoists, most of them are also Buddhists, some are Confucianists, and a very, very few acknowledge Christianity as their faith. But it is safe to say that there is not a person of importance within the empire who does not know about Miss Denton and the institution of learning to which she has given 33 years of her life as (teacher and spiritual mentor.

Austere Life. We had breakfast with this remarkable woman the other day. We found her living most simply, indeed, austere, yet she apologized for the good breakfast set before us, saying that if she could, she would like to have the Catholic sisters of Japan, of whom she is very fond, but that it did not seem possible to do so without all ordinary comforts.

What is the "Doshisha"? Is it the Harvard university of Japan. It was founded 80 years ago through the almost incredible efforts and sacrifices of one Joseph Hardy Nossima. It includes today a preparatory or normal school for teacher training, and the university containing colleges of the various sciences, economics, theology, law, literature, chemistry, and having a total enrollment of about 1000 students of both sexes, in all departments.

Price on His Head. Dr. Nossima, who was born of a Samurai clan in 1843 came under the influence of western Christianity at the age of 18, ultimately escaped by stealth, by going aboard a small American trading ship, and from Shanghai escaped on an American clipper to Boston, with a price on his head if he should ever return to Japan. In 1875 in the face of very great opposition, he founded the Doshisha in Kyoto, prescribing that Christianity should be the foundation of the ethical teaching of that college.

Christianity. Education up to 12 years of age is compulsory in Japan, and naturally and properly so religious teaching is permitted in the government schools. In the Doshisha, which takes the student at an early age, the basis of the ethical teaching is Christianity as revealed in the Sermon on the Mount. This is despite the fact that the institution is wholly Japanese and that the Doshisha has the moral, and to a certain extent, the material, support of the government.

Friendly With Buddha's. Theologically, the Doshisha is very modern and liberal, and friendly relations are maintained with the more progressive Buddhist sects. The Doshisha, in itself has been, is by no means a "missionary school," in any narrow sense of the word. It is a great institution of learning, in the most interesting city of Japan. From its doors thousands of young men and women are being sent out every generation (this year's class numbered 141)—young men and women influenced by the spirit of the "western culture."

It costs mighty little to attend the Doshisha. A daughter of one of America's fashionable finishing schools would faint at the suggestion that she occupy a bare room with five other girls, that she live on rice and fish with a little fruit occasionally and that one new dress annually was quite enough. Who ever heard of a hot water bottle concern encouraging bachelors to marry? Sorry the drugstore won't credit you any more, Freda. Try a True Confessions magazine, to bring color to the cheeks.

LAUGHS

Philosophic Mauderings. And Lochinvar only had a horse. Divorce is the holiday of matrimony. Ambition can't sleep with content.

The Fixer. I do not like mechanics; Somehow I do not care To take my car to the garage To be adjusted there. They tighten where it rattles By working day and night; But when it's tight where it was loose, It's loose where it was tight!

And so I do not like them; Instead, I fix my own. It's always less expensive when The owner works alone. And when I've finished fixing it, When all the work is done, I find it pays to junk the thing And buy another one!

Efficiency. Once upon a time a man tried to be a doctor and fell down; tried to be a lawyer and failed; tickled salesmanship and flunked; went into business and resigned. Then he married the wrong girl and after the divorce married her husband he thought was a widow but her husband turned up alive. Thinking things over, he opened an office, stuck up a sign that read: EFFICIENCY EXPERT and made $137,000 telling other people how to succeed.

"Home," said the orator, spreadingly, "is worth everything a man can put into it." "You're right," said the second man on the third row, "and that's what mine cost!"

To succeed, step right out in the center of life's stage and yell: "Gimme the spotlight, Jimmy; this is me in the center!" And watch me do my stuff!"

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

TRIAL. We grow by strife, by faith in doubt, By courage in the presence of despair. Those splendid virtues men are quick to praise Are fashioned by the burdens which they bear.

The living suffer, and the wise men know That out of struggle conquest is attained. Faith holds them fast through all the storms which blow And there's no loss but something else is gained.

We are not promised easy roads to fare, It was not said life should be struggle free. Burdens there are for every man to bear. Pain is the symbol of mortality.

Who suffers, lives! Who neither hopes nor fears And is not conscious that his joys may cease Has joined the dead of all the ancient years. For in the grave is only perfect peace.

Four Northwestern Stars Who Helped Purple's Great Eleven Tie for Championship

THE past two seasons have been big ones in a football way at Northwestern. Last year Northwestern provided one of the biggest upsets of the year in defeating Michigan 3-2. Many experts gave the Purple a tie with Michigan for the Big Ten title. However, Northwestern, feeling that Michigan had a better claim, withdrew, a most sportsmanlike thing to do.

FIVE COTTON GINS OF SLATON TURN OUT TEN THOUSAND BALES THIS SEASON, THIS IS 2,000 AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

(Special to The Avalanche) Slaton, Dec. 2.—The five cotton gins here have turned out a total of approximately 10,000 bales of this year's crop. This is 2,000 bales in advance of last year's total, and the same number less than the total of the previous year. It is estimated by ginners and farmers that at least 10,000 bales more will be ginned here, and the total might go even higher. It is believed, however, that the crop is five-fifths harvested. Probably 20,000 bales were produced in the trade territory, but rains and heavy winds have wasted some of the cotton.

In addition to these figures on the year's ginnings, a gin now located in Union community eight miles west of here is receiving much of the crop that usually comes to Slaton for ginning. The gin here would boost the total here stated, and should properly be credited to local gin receipts.

The standard of Thanksgiving day left the cotton very dirty, and in many cases as much as 2,000 pounds of seed cotton is required to produce a bale of lint weighing 500 pounds. The increase in weight of the bale of seed cotton has added to the ginning costs, and some of the farmers have said there is very little profit to be derived from gathering the crop under such a condition. Clouds of dust and sand from the gins almost constantly as they attempt to separate the lint from the seed, the sand and the trash.

Sticks are now being used by many to harvest the crop more quickly. The shortage of pickers and the inability of the farmers to pay high prices for picking when the staple must be sold for such a low price are the reasons given by the farmers for adopting this means of gathering the cotton. Ginners, however, are discouraging the practice. Sticked cotton is difficult to gin because of the multiple forms of trash that is pulled from the stalk along with the cotton. Gin machinery, even the most modern, suffers damage and delay when ginning this type of harvest.

Of the 10,000 bales already ginned here, more than 800 bales have been received from the farmers who planted acreages with a pure strain of Mebane seed, and who have worked under a plan sponsored by the Slaton Chamber of Commerce. The organization secured the co-operation of W. S. Gallovay, of San Angelo, cotton breeder of reputation, and formed an agreement with numbers of Slaton farmers to set aside certain percentages of their cotton acreage to be devoted to this particular strain of cottonseed. The purpose of the plan was to develop a perfectly acclimated seed of pure strain for use in this section. The results of the plan are showing up very satisfactory. Larger yields per acre, longer staple and better prices for both lint and seed are among the advantages noted. Farmers who co-operated in the movement this year will continue through 1927 and other farmers will be included, it is expected.

The general sentiment among the farmers here is to the effect that diversification will be practiced more extensively during the coming year. A good feed crop was grown this year and this means much to the country as a whole. Next year, however, it is believed more interest will be taken in poultry raising, hog raising, dairying, and the growing of feed and food crops in larger quantities than heretofore known. It is freely predicted that a general reduction of the cotton acreage will be made, also.

HIGHWAY CLUB OF TEXAS LAUNCHES ACTIVE CAMPAIGN FOR BETTERING THE ROADS OF THE LONE STAR STATE

(Special to The Avalanche)

FORT WORTH, Dec. 2.—Declaring that highway transportation facilities are a state responsibility and public service new ranks second in popular importance to public education, a group of leading business and professional men, representing all sections of Texas, have organized the Highway Club of Texas and are launching an aggressive campaign for the betterment of the highways of this state.

The club officers have announced, will seek not only the permanent improvement of highways, but will seek to have passed laws strengthening the authority of the state in the construction and maintenance of designated highways, controlling the use of such highways and aiding the several counties of the state to obtain more funds for the building and repair of roads. Revenue measures touching the highways and motor vehicles also are being studied with a view to working out a more just and equitable distribution of the tax burden and laws will be advocated looking toward greater safety of the highway traffic. Lloyd H. McKee, prominent business man of Fort Worth, has been elected president of the highway club. Headquarters have been opened in Fort Worth in charge of W. T. Wheeler, who was elected general manager of the organization meeting in Dallas. Wheeler has long been identified with good roads movement and highway improvements in Texas and will devote his entire time to the activities of the new organization.

Wheeler, who was elected general manager of the organization meeting in Dallas. Wheeler has long been identified with good roads movement and highway improvements in Texas and will devote his entire time to the activities of the new organization.

Besides McKee, officers of the Highway club are Augustus McCloskey, of San Antonio, county judge of Bexar county, and Wm. L. Edmond, of Ward, a banker and first and second vice-presidents respectively. The directorate is composed of these three officers and 14 following outstanding citizens of Texas: W. F. Hobby, C. M. Caldwell, Abilene; J. E. Jarratt, San Antonio; R. A. Steinhagen, Beaumont; Cone Johnson, Tyler, Harry Black, Galveston; Joe A. Foley, Dallas; Mayor Lee Elvins, Amarillo; Don C. Sanders, Fort Worth; R. C. Bowen, Fort Worth; J. E. Farrow, Dallas; Leo Simmons, Sherman; W. E. Nunnally, Tyler; Charles N. Bassett, El Paso; C. B. Gillespie, Houston; K. V. Liscomb, Dallas and Judge O. C. Dancy, Brownsville.

President McKee in announcing the purpose of the new organization, declared that there is a need of coordinating all the movements of the highway legislation into a definite state policy on constructive progress and for a better popular understanding of the fundamental principles that must constitute the basis of better road building and control in the development, maintenance and use of a state system of highways.

McKee recalled that Texas has labored under many handicaps in its efforts to provide a system of public highways through the state since the enactment of the highway law of 1917 chief of these being the lack of legal authority, inadequacy of funds and a limited popular conception of the factors necessary to the development of such a system. The highway club of Texas, he said, will seek to obviate these handicaps.

An appeal for statewide cooperation in carrying out the purposes of the organization was voiced by McKee.

The most useless thing in Herrin is a blank cartridge.

Survivor Tells of Lost Battalion

Major Charles Whittlesey, heroic commander of the famous "lost battalion" of the Argonne, did not tell the Germans to "go to hell" when they demanded his surrender during the progress of a well-known annihilative siege from October 2 to 3, 1918, which wrote the name of the 308th Infantry, Seventy-seventh division, indelibly into history.

Whittlesey's real response, registered in action, and not in words, was far more gallant, gentlemanly and indicative of real heroism than the pseudo-answer which some war correspondents with a sense for the dramatic, fastened on the commander in his story of the battle.

"Whittlesey may have felt like telling the Germans to go to hell but he was not the type who expressed such sentiments, even under stress," says H. M. Averill, one of the 114 survivors of the battalion, who is in Lubbock during the exhibit at the Lindsey of the cinema reproduction of the famous fight.

According to Averill, this is what actually happened after the Germans had returned a captured American runner to the surrounded battalion, with a taunting demand for surrender.

The Germans had instructed the Americans to show a white flag if they agreed to the terms of the demand. There were several large white canvas panels near the American position, a signal by which American airplanes might locate the position of the beleaguered battalion and send aid. Whittlesey immediately ordered the withdrawal of these panels; for fear the Germans might interpret them as a compliance with their terms of surrender—this, in spite of the fact that such action removed the surest hope of informing American rescue parties of the lost command's location.

The "lost battalion" won its renown, and exhibited its peerless heroism, under circumstances which are reminiscent of two other famous engagements in world history—the immortal charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava in the Crimean war and the defense of the pass at Thermopylae by the Spartans.

The message which sent the 308th Infantry into action was similar to the order for the charge of the Light Brigade.

The general says you are to advance because of the barrage, regardless of losses, was the terse message which sent over 80 per cent of Whittlesey's battalion to extermination. Another battalion, commanded by Capt. George O. McMurtry, was also included in the order.

The dauntless Americans reached their objective, Charlevaux Mills, with heavy casualties, and crossed the German trench system on October 2. But they had gotten ahead of their support on both flanks, and presently a reconnoitering lieutenant made the appalling discovery that they were completely surrounded by the enemy.

Then began the siege of six days, with its courageous resistance, its desperate attempts to get runners through to the American lines and its grim effort to forestall extermination until the arrival of aid. This heroic episode will be known in history as the "Argonne Pocket" according to Averill, who was a corporal with company A of the 308th Infantry.

Thirty-seven runners were killed or captured in attempts to reach assistance. The thirtieth, Private Munson of New York, ingeniously eluded the German interceptors, and brought relief. Of the 757 officers and men who began the fatal advance, 114 lived to see the armistice one month later, Averill says. Averill was wounded on the second day of the engagement, and was semiconscious when rescued.

There are several chapters of the story, however, which were written following the war. One is the tragic story of Major Whittlesey, the scholarly Harvard graduate whose classmates had known him as a man more interested in books than men, and considered him hardly the type who would have elected the role he took in the "Argonne Pocket."

After the war he was decorated and promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was a man admired and respected by his comrades for his leadership. But he was reflective. In 1920 he was invited by the government to serve as pallbearer at the interment of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington cemetery. Shortly after this ceremony Colonel Whittlesey quietly slipped off the deck of a steamer into the waters of the Atlantic a few miles out of New York. His friends believe that his sensitive, reflective nature could no longer endure the memories of the war.

Averill, with other veterans, met one of their German enemies during the exhibition of "The Lost Battalion" in a theater at Cincinnati, Ohio. The German, now an American citizen, had come to this country as soon after the war as possible. He complimented the famous 308th Infantry for its exemplary heroism at the "pocket," expressing

Say Lubbock Farmer Mistreated Laborer

Protests against treatment of a Mexican citizen by a Lubbock county farmer have been filed at San Antonio, according to word received by county officials here Thursday from the Mexican Consul General at San Antonio.

The complaint charges that the Mexican, having been engaged by the farmer to pick cotton was mistreated after he left his employ, saying that he was followed by the farmer, who received him at all his moves. The complaint further charges that ill treatment by the farmer had brought fear to the Mexican, causing him to leave the employ of the man.

Officers are investigating the case.

BEWARE THE COUGH THAT HANGS ON
Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified crocetin that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.
Of all known drugs, crocetin is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the great healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to crocetin, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the crocetin goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.
Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)
