Federation of Choirs Anniversary a Success

According to TEC Statistics Lubbock Women have Higher Unemployment

The mid-February unemployment rate for Lubbock County has dropped to 3.6 per cent according to Texas Employment Commission statistics. The rate for women, blacks, and Chicanos was higher, however.

Meanwhile, Harold K. Dudley, chairman of the Texas Employment Commission, said the state will gain "at least one million jobs between now and 1985."

"Future developments could result in an even greater gain," Dudley said.

Applications Must Be Made Before May 1 To Transfer Students

Parents who wish to transfer their children from one Texas independent school district to another must apply for the transfer before May 1, according to Bill Parker, pupil personnel director for Lubbock Public Schools.

Parker said that the May 1 deadline is set by the Texas Education Agency. He noted that the transfers that must be requested are those between two independent school districts. They do not involve transfers from one school attendance area to another within Lubbock Public Schools.

Any family living outside the Lubbock Independent School District that wishes to have children transfer next school term to Lubbock Public Schools needs to apply at the school administrative offices, 1628 19th Street. Families must apply for transfers each school year, Parker noted. For this reason, parents must apply by May 1 for children who are currently attending Lubbock Public Schools on transfer if they want the children to continue that attendance next year, Parker said.

Total unemployment for women in Lubbock County was five per cent according to January TEC statistics.

Chicano women registered the highest rate with 9.3 per cent jobless, while 6.4 per cent of the black women in the labor force did not have jobs. Black and Chicano women made up 7.4 per cent of the total labor force in Lubbock County.

Bert Darden, office manager for the Lubbock branch of the Texas Employment Commission, cited less working experience, and less education for Black and Chicano women as the primary reason their unemployment rate was higher.

"It's a matter of training, experience, and availability of jobs for females," Darden said.

Women of all races made up 38 per cent of the total Lubbock County labor force. However 4.4 per cent of Anglo women were unemployed, according to the January statistics, while 9.5 per cent of all minority women did not have jobs during that time.

The unemployment rate for black males, who comprise 6.5 per cent of the labor force in Lubbock County, was 4.9 per cent according to the January statistics. The rate for Chicano males was 9.1 per cent. Chicano males make up almost 9 per cent of the total Lubbock County labor force.

The chairman of the Texas Employment Commission said last Thursday that trend projections show the total number of people employed in Texas is expected to be "over six million" in 1985.

"In my estimation, Texas has the best economic potential of any state in the nation," Harold Dudley said.

The TEC chairman cited population growth in Texas, which now ranks as the third most populated state, and a manufac-

The twenty-second anniversary of the Federation of Choirs last Sunday afternoon at the Greater Saint Luke Baptist Church was a success. The overflow crowd showed their approval by applauding each performance.

As usual, the lovely voices blended in with the direction of Elder Levi Lenley, former member of the Ray Charles group. "I have played all over this great country of ours with great jazz musicians, but today I'm playing for God," said the bearded Lenley.

"We come here this afternoon to praise God in songs," said A.L. Smith, third president of the organization.

Mrs. Maunita Terrell, secretary emeritus of the Federation of Choirs, was paid a beautiful comment by the organization. President Smith sang one of her favorite songs, "I'm Going Through." She was given a kiss by Mrs. Desma Moore, directress of the group.

Rev. Wilson Baldwin, former vice president and now pastor of the Greater First Baptist Church in Littlefield, gave brief remarks.

Host pastor to this year's affair was Dr. Floyd Perry, pastor of Lyons Chapel Baptist Church. He expressed his sincere appreciation for a job well done by the federation. "It's good to be able to come together with one goal in mind . . . serving the Lord," he told the group.

Women paraded in two abreast with their long black dresses and red corsages; men wore black suits and ruffled shirts, trimmed in black and red color. Elder Lenley, who was distinguished from the group, wore a gray tux with trimmings. His organist, Professor William Shumate, was an identical copy of the director. The "Mass Choir", which consisted of members of various church choirs, marched in singing "When The Saints Go Marching In."

Selections presented by the group were "Close To Thee", with Bobbie Patterson as soloist; "Take Me Back", Rose Mary Wilson soloist; "Change My Name," Michael Matthew as soloist; "I'm Determined To Go Thru," with Mae Pearl Jackson as soloist.

Other selections were "Hallelujah The Storm is Passing Over," With Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Marilyn Cathran singing a duet; and "God Has Smiled On Me." Michael Matthew sang "Sooner Will Be Done", while "Jesis Is The Best Thing," was sung by Elder Lenley. Mrs. Louise Perry and F.E. Brown sang "Thank You Lord."

Invitation to discipleship was given with Elder Lenley and Professor Shumate doing their version of "How Great Thou Art." Political candidates for city, county and state offices were given three minutes to express their appreciation for the job being done by the federation.

Officers for the Federation of Choirs are Mr. Smith, president; Willie Turner and James Thompson, vice presidents; Joan Y. Ervin, secretary; Ollie Coleman, assistant secretary; Grover C. Colvin, treasurer.

Ms. Yvonne Perry also served as directress. Pianists were Mae Pearl Jackson and Mertha Haynes.

Bentsen Believes Farmers Should Be Given Free Reign

U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen Monday told Lubbock newsmen that farmers should be able to sell their agricultural products anywhere in the world, including communist countries.

"We ought to sell them everywhere we can," Bentsen said. "It keeps the country prosperous, it keeps farmers prosperous, and it helps the balance of trade."

The 55-year-old south Texan said, however, that the sales should not be made matters of international politics.

"I don't feel agriculture should be used as a political football. If they tell us to plant fence row to fence row, we should be able to sell these products to anyone."

Bentsen said he sponsored an amendment in the Senate which requires the Department of Agriculture to monitor foreign commodity sales to prevent the American taxpayer from subsidizing agricultural sales abroad, as happened in the 1972 Russian wheat deal.

The former director of a financial holding company is seeking re-election to the Senate seat he has held since 1970. He currently is opposed in the May 1 democratic primary by Phil Gramm, a former Texas A&M economics professor who has repeatedly hit at the difference between Bentsen's Washington voting record and his statements in Texas. The conservative Gramm has challenged Bentsen to a public debate, claiming the Senator is violating a pledge he signed in a resolution for campaign reform.

Bentsen Monday branded Gramm's request to debate as "a tactic of losers."

"They try to get on the coattails of those who are winners," he added. "I'll continue to go around the state speaking to the issues."

For High Plains residents, those issues include an expanding

Presiding Elder Leon McNeil Succumbs Tuesday

Rev. Leon McNeil, Presiding Elder of the Lubbock District of Tenth Episcopal A.M.E. Church, succumbed at approximately 4:30 a.m. Tuesday in an Odessa hospital.

According to a spokesman, Rev. McNeil had just completed his third quarterly conference at Johnson Chapel A.M.E. Church and went out to eat. After this, he became ill and was taken to the hospital.

Services are pending for him in Midland, his home.

Lubbock Regional Airport to Hold Open House Sunday, April 4

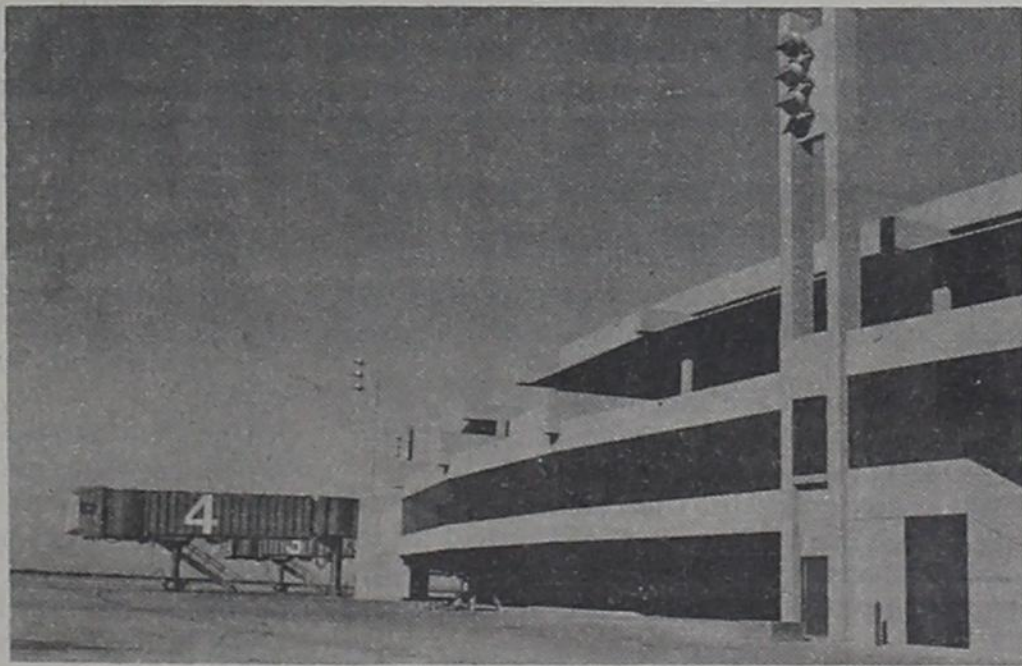

South Plains residents will be touring the new six-gate terminal at Lubbock Regional Airport during open house from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, April 4.

Passenger and air cargo service will begin operating at the $9.3 million facility April 11.

Opening of the new terminal climaxes a $25 million airport expansion program launched in 1970. Local and federal funds have provided reconstruction of runways and taxiways, new runway lighting, a new fire and rescue station manned 24 hours a day, an expanded flight service station for private aviation and security fencing in addition to the terminal.

"We're mighty proud of this new terminal and feel it will give better and more convenient service to the air-minded public in this vast region," said Lubbock activity levels. Passengers and visitors will have a short walk from the parking lot to the plane. Upon entering the main level of the terminal, passengers have access to ticket counters, baggage claim area and car rental services.

The contemporary terminal is of a curved design with three

They will then step to the common boarding lounge that spans the full 700-foot length of the terminal. They will board their plane through the enclosed jetways that extend from the boarding lounge.

Be Sure to Vote Saturday

On Saturday April 3rd, an election for members of the Lubbock Independent School District, two places on the city council, and the mayor's seat will be held. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Though there has not been as much interest in the election this year as in year's past, we feel it is still important for qualified citizens to get out and vote.

Vote for whomever you choose, but above all else, vote.

Last week, the West Texas Times published essays from the candidates running for city council and the mayor's seat. We hope the essays provided you with some indication of how the people running for office think. We did not provide a forum for school board candidates because of space limitations.

But now it is up to each of you to do your own part by casting your ballots. We hope the lack of interest displayed in the election so far this year is not indicative of the turnout Saturday.

The power exists, but only for those who use it. Use your power. Vote this Saturday.

Take Advantage of Those Programs Which Aid You

Last Monday, Senator Lloyd Bentsen discussed present federal agencies able to help people in business, with members of the black community. Among those agencies listed was the Small Business Administration.

Bentsen urged those going into business to take advantage of the aid offered by the federal program. We at the Times can find no fault with agencies working to help small businesses get their feet on the ground. Such programs are an aid to the free enterprise system which the larger corporations are slowly strangling.

But the programs can also serve the black community by providing opportunity for blacks to become economically independent. The black community will begin the climb from economic slavery only when it has its own economic base.

We urge prospective businesses in east Lubbock to look towards the SBA.

"As I See It"

by T.J. Patterson

I had an opportunity to travel to Washington D.C. last week for business, and welcomed the chance to see what is happening in the nation's capitol. I found that blacks as well as the other minorities in West Texas are not really tuned in on what is going on here in the country.

My short stay there opened my eyes to the many opportunities which should become realities for people in West Texas. There are people in Washington who believe in the same principles which the Times stands for at this time.

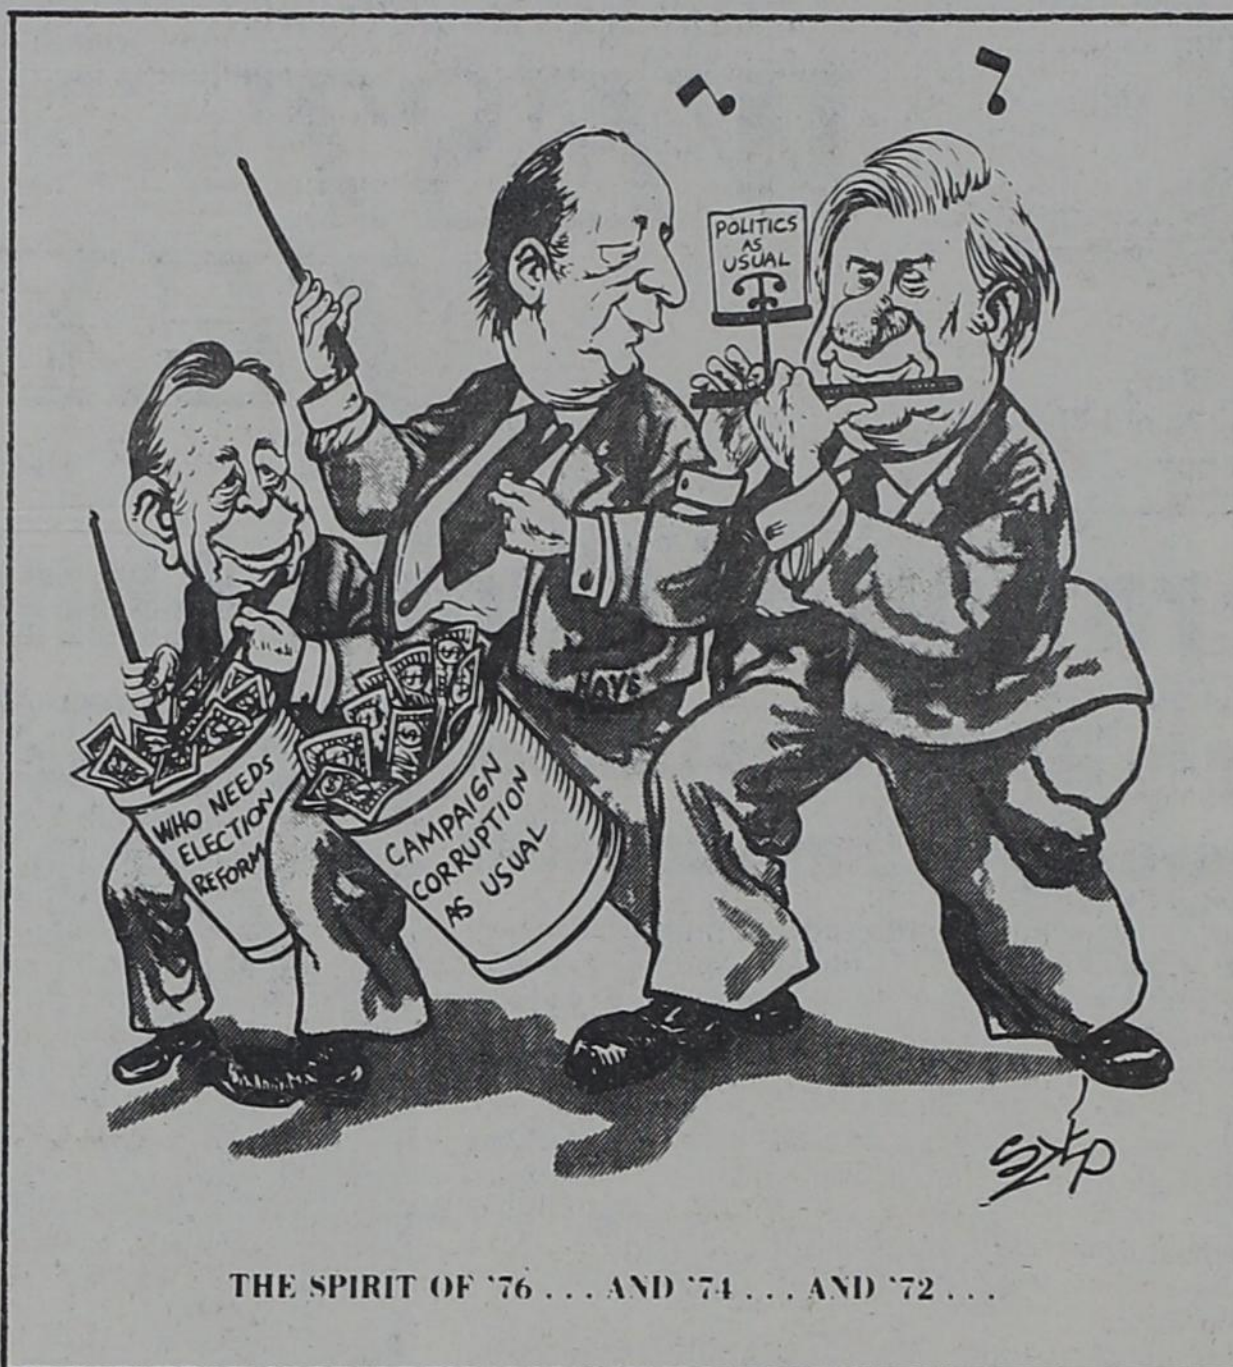

Local politicians have been keeping a great deal from the people in Lubbock, either through ignorance or through neglect. It is time for the cover to be pulled from those people who leave out minorities when it comes to the planning stages of our city, county, and in all educational areas.

The people on Capital Hill are willing to hear your presentations. And they are not that hard to get to. The time has passed for simply talking about what needs to be done. The thing that counts now is action.

Congressman George Mahon was very helpful during my two day stay there. He and Larry Seegull, his able assistant, saw that I was at the right place at the right time. Congressman Mahon is without a doubt the Dean of the Congress.

One thing about Washington D.C. is that Anglos are the ones in the minority. The city's population is 85 per cent black.

Dr. Percy Vaughn, dean of the business college at Alabama State University, was with me in Washington. He is a young man going places in education. As I've always said, "Percy has his head on right." Keep up the good work, Dr. Vaughn, the world needs more people like you in education.

THE SPIRIT OF '76 ... AND '74 ... AND '72 ...

There is only one regret about Dr. Vaughn. He left Lubbock after getting his doctoral degree from the College of Business at Texas Tech University. Lubbock lost a dynamic young man when he left.

From time to time, this writer has complained about the lack of black firemen on the Lubbock Fire Department. After eating dinner with Tom Foster, Fire Chief, I am more confident that something will be done to give blacks and other minorities an opportunity to become a member of this family. Brother Foster is a very serious man about opportunities for minorities.

This writer predicts in the very near future that Lubbock will have its first minority fireman. This will become a reality, because there is a man like Tom Foster who is concerned about opportunities for all Lubbock citizens.

As I've said in the past, if I can help in any way, Chief

Foster, please advise me.

The young members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) are in the process of reorganizing the special division of the unit. It will take young people, who want to do something for their community, to come out and help.

This group is meeting Saturday, April 3, at the Mae Simmons Community Center at 1 p.m. If you are concerned about your community, young people, go by and be a part of the situation. Lubbock needs your input, because it will help Lubbock grow.

VOTING IS A PART OF THE BICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION. GO OUT AND CAST YOUR VOTE. THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

THE INTERNATIONAL DEADBEATS
by Jack Anderson with Joe Spear
(Copyright, 1976, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—The American people have been the most generous in history. But we might be excused if we now ask ourselves whether it has been worth it.

Since the end of World War II, we have rained dollars on the needy and the greedy alike. The total economic and military aid has now reached a staggering $168 billion. This is the greatest financial fallout of all time.

The money has gone to support opposite sides in the same war, to prop up corrupt dictators, to underwrite nations which hold us in outright contempt. By the most conservative count, at least 34 military and civilian dictatorships around the world are on the U.S. welfare rolls.

Take just one of them—Uganda's Idi Amin. He has expelled Americans from his country, detained Peace Corps volunteers and sent insulting telegrams to our presidents. So what have we done about it? Why, we've rewarded him, of course, with more than $43 million.

American aid has gone to 134 nations and eight territories. Only about $18 billion have been paid back. That's less than $1 billion repaid for every $10 billion paid out. And some of the worst deadbeats are some of the world's most solvent nations.

Millions are still owed to us, for example, by the oil sheikhdoms. Saudi Arabia has been piling up oil profits literally faster than it can spend the money. Yet the Saudis still owe us $38 million from the past.

The Shah of Iran has been awash in petroleum. He has squandered his oil millions on weapons, palaces and jewelry. But he still hasn't paid $165 million that he owes Washington.

This is an election year and our politicians are railing against government spending. It should be a good year, therefore, for foreign aid cuts.

But politicians apparently aren't paying any attention to their own speeches. America's Bicentennial budget for the world is another whopping $4.7 billion. And, as usual, the money will go to friend and foe, to the just and the unjust alike.

Here at home, meanwhile, crime is running rampant, drug addiction has become epidemic, thousands are dying from cancer and heart disease. These problems might be less troublesome if they could receive the same attention we give foreign nations.

Watch on Waste: The Navy, according to insiders, has too many tugboats. This has been confirmed by government accountants who conducted a confidential audit of the Navy's multimillion-dollar tugboat operations. We have obtained a copy of their confidential report.

"During a recent survey of the Navy's port service fleet operations," it says, "we noted more tugboats are operated than can be economically justified." The auditors claimed that more efficient tugboat management could save as much as $245,000 at the Treasure Island, Calif., naval station alone.

—Restless bureaucrats also waste a lot of money trading offices. It's a never-ending game that might be called "musical offices."

For example, the Health Resources Administration packed up and moved seven years ago to offices near the National Institutes of Health. The justification was that it needed to be closer to its parent agency.

But now, the Health Resources Administration is preparing to move again to offices some 15 miles away from the parent agency. A confidential document estimates the move will require the employees to travel an extra 10,000 miles daily. That's nearly two and a half million additional miles a year.

A spokesman told us the move would cost $180,000. But our sources say it is more likely to run over $1 million, after all the relocation expenses are added up.

The move, of course, is part of another game of "musical offices." Health Resources is moving into offices which the Navy is vacating. The Navy people, in turn, are moving to new offices 10 miles away.

Meanwhile, the Food and Drug Administration has its eye on the offices that Health Resources is vacating. In another seven years, they'll probably do it all over again.

—At Fort Lyons, Colo., the chief of the Veterans Administration psychiatric hospital just spent $12,721.91 to fix up his living quarters. His name is James Parsons. He decided he needed new wallpaper, a paint job and new bathroom fixtures. So he spent the taxpayers' money to spruce up his place. A spokesman said the renovations are authorized.

Colby's Cronies: The appointment of George Bush as the new CIA director stirred up a front-page controversy. But the public hasn't heard a word about him since he disappeared into the bosom of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Our CIA sources tell us he has been hit by so many urgent problems every day that he hasn't had time to catch his breath. The problems have been caused by the CIA revelations, which have had repercussions throughout the subterranean world of espionage. A new crisis is dumped on Bush's desk as fast as he gets rid of the old ones.

But his biggest problem was caused by his predecessor, William Colby, who left his cronies behind in the key jobs. After Colby learned he would be bounced out of the CIA, he hastily promoted his pals and installed them in the best available jobs.

Colby has made a lot of speeches about the low morale at the CIA. Nothing has hurt morale worse than his own misuse of power to take care of his friends.

economy, concern about governmental red tape, and worries of inflation, he noted.

Bentsen said he voted to end the oil depletion allowance given to major oil companies while retaining the allowance for small independent oil drilling companies. When the bill came out of the House of Representatives, he said, it contained provisions to end depletion allowance altogether.

"We could win (the bill sponsoring an end to the depletion allowance) in the Senate by saving it for independents. The independents drill 70 per cent of the oil. That takes care of 95 per cent of the oil drilled in this state," he contended.

The incumbent said he was running as a favorite son candidate for president in this state so Texans could present a "united delegation" to the democratic national convention.

"We need to have a united delegation to go up there so we can work for Texas," he said.

"I think as a Texan, I can do a better job of it."

The senator also said he was "deeply concerned" over the water situation on the high plains. He contended he has gotten additional funds for the Army Corps of Engineers to study the problem.

Lloyd Bentsen began the press conference by announcing that a highway bill sponsored by the transportation committee he chairs last week passed the Senate and will provide $18 billion over two years to replace bridges, improve dangerous intersections, and upgrade rural roads.

The Senator has served three successive terms in the House of Representatives. At 25, he was elected a judge in Hidalgo County, and became the youngest member of the House of Representatives at 27 in 1948. He presently is a member of both the Finance and Public Works Committee and the Joint Economic Committee in the Senate.

turing study which showed Texas leading the nation in new manufacturing jobs over a seven year period, as reasons for the employment figure increase.

The TEC chairman said the absence of corporate income taxes and low unemployment insurance taxes—the third lowest in the nation—were reasons for a healthy business climate in the state.

"Texas is in an enviable position, as it has four areas of powerful growth potential; industry, agriculture, energy resources, and the fact that it is a good place to live and work," he said.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Indiana or Michigan? Everyone else knows, but at this writing, I can only guess, and the guess would be, Indiana. The Hoosiers showed more than enough Saturday to make believers of all.

It is rare for any team to go through a season undefeated, but a tremendous achievement if accomplished. And there's no reason to think that the Hoosiers let Michigan, a team it beat twice in the regular season, spoil their season.

It's a tribute to Big 10 basketball that the finalists for the national title came from the same conference. This is a rarity, as is a conference runnerup making it to the finals. You would think that, somewhere along the line, the runnerup would lose.

But Michigan proved that it was no fluke. The Wolverines showed speed and quickness, strong defense and a balanced scoring attack that others couldn't stop.

The NCAA playoffs, unlike those in other years, have not produced close, tight games a rule. Most of the games have been close for a while and then one team would assert its superiority. When that happened, only the final score was in doubt.

There have been few thrillers, and you would have expected the semi-finals, in particular, to be cliffhangers. Instead, Indiana whipped UCLA and Michigan toyed with Rutgers.

Rutgers? Here was a team that hadn't lost a game all season, and yet it was the underdog quintet against a conference runner, not even the No. 1 team. The coach was mad about the role and, presumably, used it to psych up his team.

The effort failed. The Scarlet Knights were as tight as Tech against Missouri and, after initial success, fell farther and farther behind. It was a major blow to Eastern basketball.

Certainly the best teams in the nation this year did not make the NCAA playoffs, with Virginia the prime example. When that situation exists, the playoffs are going to be less even.

That is to take nothing away from the teams that managed to fight into the four playoff sites. They either won their conferences, or a playoff, and they won the right to compete. It appears that the balance is not as strong in the 1975-76 season.

The spring sports program is in full swing at Texas Tech and, as usual, the Red Raiders are not faring well. The golf team played at Galveston as though that tournament was designed for it, but it hasn't done well otherwise.

The baseball team is stumbling along without a win in conference play and a mediocre record; tennis isn't doing too well; and only track has shown an upswing.

The irrepressible Corky Oglesby has taken a lacklustre Tech squad and transformed it into one that can compete. It's been a long time since anyone can remember Tech track teams doing well.

But Corky has given spring sports a shot in the arm. People might even get so interested that they forget spring football, an exercise that is needed, but attracts little general notice. After all, Tech plays only against itself.

But, football is about to start its annual spring stand and it will be interesting from several standpoints. The biggest question, of course, is who will replace Ecomet Burley?

Ecomet headed up a defense that, at best, was mediocre. His loss will not help the situation. There are not many worries about the offense, but a vast amount of work needs to be done with the defense. If Tech can come up with a strong line, it would be a contender.

Baseball? The major league season is right around the proverbial corner and it will be interesting to see what happens. The early games could be disasters—or normal.

If games are normal, the argument that major leaguers need six weeks or more of spring training will be shot. And it could make a change in future training by big league teams. Bad early games will be laid to the lack of regular length sessions.

Meanwhile, the players and owners appear to be fairly far apart on key issues and there will be many playing out their options because they will not have contracts.

If Andy Messersmith is not able to sign a big contract, though, it might have a sobering effect. Andy, as of this writing, had not been able to sell his service for as much as he thinks they are worth. Unless he does, other players might pause to consider what would happen to them.

One of the big questions before a game has been played is whether the Boston Red Sox can repeat. Everything indicates that they have strengthened their club and should.

Would anyone bet against the Oakland Athletics? Probably not, but Cincinnati might face problems, although the likelihood of their not winning is remote.

The Rangers? The Astros? The Cardinals? None of them seem strong enough. Many trades have been made and it will take time to see what happens. One thing is for sure; it should be another interesting season.

While a student at the academy, he participated in the police athletic tournament and other events.

He recently joined the Lubbock District Department of Public Safety.

A former student of Dunbar High School, he graduated from Estacado High School. He is also a graduate of Jarvis Christian College where he received his B.S. degree in education. After graduation from Jarvis, he completed his student teaching in Big Sandy, and Tyler, Texas.

His wife, Bobbie, who is teaching in Dainger Field, Texas, and daughter, Shundra, will join him in the very near future.

"I would like to go to law school this fall," he says.

As a recent member of the Department of Public Safety, he says for young people blessed with a clear and clean mind, they use it and not abuse it.

In Lubbock, he will be working with the Drivers License Division.

Larry has been an assistant manager for K-Mart in Aurora, Illinois. It was there that he decided to enroll in the police academy.

Editor Visits in D.C. this Week

T.J. Patterson, editor of the West Texas Times, visited in Washington, D.C., last Thursday and Friday in regard to a Texas Tech/Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE) grant for minority businesses.

The grant, Computer Assistance Instruction (CAI), is designed to help minority business persons understand the basic tools in the business community.

Dr. Percy Vaughn, dean of the business college, Alabama State University, was also involved in seeking information on the grant last week. Dr. Vaughn was responsible for writing the first grant. The first Tech/OMBE grant was funded for $42,000.

Looking Back Over The Years . . .

"Blacks Need to Vote This Saturday", says Joan Y. Snell Ervin

by T.J. Patterson

(Editor's note: This is part one of an interview with Mrs. Joan Ervin, first black elected official in Lubbock. She came to Lubbock in 1937.)

Mrs. Ervin, when did you come to Lubbock?

"My family moved here in 1937. We came from Waxahachie, Texas."

Did you attend school in Waxahachie?

"No, I didn't. I did my first day and last day in the Lubbock Public School System. I graduated from Dunbar High School in 1949."

Did you ever think you would become a politician in Lubbock?

"Not really. I didn't have that much of an inspiration at that time. I had thought and dreamed of something that could be done to enhance quality education for the Lubbock Public Schools. I have been particularly interested in the east Lubbock area."

Did you attend college?

"Sure, I attended Prairie View A&M College."

What did you do when you came back from college?

"I guess the first thing I did was go to work for Mrs. Mae Simmons at Ella Iles Elementary School as a secretary. At this time I was married and my husband, Clarence, was in Korea."

How did you like working as a secretary?

"Well, it was exciting for me. I really enjoyed working for Mrs. Simmons."

Where did you go from Ella Iles?

"After working there, I worked at the New Hope Baptist Church as their first full-time secretary. Later, on the recommendation of George Woods to the City Fathers, I became Lubbock's first black secretary. I worked for the Urban Renewal Agency."

What did you think about working for Urban Renewal?

"I fairly enjoyed it. It was very interesting and a challenge. It gave me an opportunity to work closer with my brothers and sisters in east Lubbock. I was able to see the various phases of Urban Renewal. This included the advantages and disadvantages of the program."

What were some of the advantages of the program?

"An advantage, to a certain extent, was to allow black citizens, at that point, to upgrade their homes. This was done by doing away with slum and blighted areas. It allowed the opportunity to use Federal money to build new homes in the area."

What were some of the disadvantages?

"One disadvantage, that I saw then and is more obvious now, is the great number of vacant lots and weeds in east Lubbock. These weeds really decorate the east Lubbock community now. This has been one of the disadvantages I regret at the present time with Urban Renewal."

Do you think Urban Renewal has helped east Lubbock?

"From an individual standpoint, yes. I say this because it gave black families an opportunity, for the first time in their lives, to have decent dwellings. This, to me, was most advantageous for black people. As far as leaving the community blank and moving the populace to other areas of the city, I don't all together support that effort. I was really under the impression that Urban Renewal would clean, clear and rebuild. This would leave families in the area if they chose to do so. It seems as if the general idea was to vacate and move into other areas of the city of Lubbock. If this is what families chose to do, then this is what they did."

Will east Lubbock bounce back and become redeveloped?

"I would like to see it happen, but I have about convinced myself, at this time, that this will not happen. Particularly, I noticed one area that would be a good example of what could be done. The areas of Birch, Cedar and Date Avenues, from about East 26th Street to East 19th Street. There are beautiful homes in this area. After Urban Renewal came, these people decided to do something in their area. They proved it can be done with team work. This tells what can be done if only they would do it."

How many years were you with Urban Renewal?

"I was there about nine years. I left this program and went to IBM."

What was your first position with IBM?

"I was in data processing at the beginning. I was an office products maintenance clerk. This was the typewriter department where I was controlling the selling of maintenance contracts for customers with their equipment."

Since that time, what other positions have you held?

"I have gone to field engineering division which is the computer division of the corporation. I have served as its computer dispatcher and systems operator. I have been educator coordinator and numerous titles with IBM. It all has been really great for me."

What kinds of awards have you received from IBM?

"Pat, they have been numerous.

I am most grateful for all the awards I've received with IBM. I received an All-Star District Award, the IBM Maintenance Award, Field Engineering Award, Top Notcher Award, Citizen of the Year Award from the president of the corporation, which entitled me to serve as his personal guest at a meeting in Miami, Florida, several years ago. There have also been cash awards, citations and recognitions. You see, they have been numerous for me. I am most grateful. I think I've been quite fortunate, not withstanding, I don't feel anything was just given to me. I surely earned it and deserved it."

Why did Joan Y. Ervin want to become a politician?

"Well, Pat, it goes back to my high school days. At this particular time, prior to entering the school board race, I was attempting to serve as president of the Dunbar PTA. Needless to say, during those times, the information trickled out from under the desk that the administrators and school board members were seriously considering closing Dunbar. This, to me, is a very touchy subject."

Did that really turn you on?

"Yes, it did. It started from there. At this point, I had asked and encouraged the PTA officers of Dunbar to blend our forces. This allowed us to communicate with the president of the board and administrators by letters. We were able to express ourselves and asked that they give us an explanation as to what their plans really were for Dunbar. You see, we kind of started from there. Shortly afterwards, we were granted a session with the members of the school board. It just rolled on from there. Of course, I feel these ladies were responsible, as well as others, for my involvement as a school board member today."

Who were some of these ladies?

"Well, they were Annie Sanders, Willie Washington, Gladys Henderson, Fannie Melton, Luella Scott, and others I can't recall just now. These ladies and others really served as a spearhead to help me with becoming a member of the school board. Today, I feel, because of the hardwork of these ladies and other citizens is really why I am on the school board of the Lubbock Public Schools. It also made it possible for us to have our school (Dunbar) in our community. It was perhaps in the mind of Judge Woodward that the black community did want the school."

Exactly what did the ladies do for Dunbar?

"The ladies, as well as students, of Dunbar did things like going from door to door, getting people to sign a petition. We prepared it in the form of a scroll and presented more than 2,000 signatures to the Judge the time we were in court. As you can see, it kind of triggered from that—from one thing to another. I really became interested in running for the school board."

Was it a hard decision for you to make to run for the school board?

"I was not really a hard decision. I felt as though we needed representation. If we have had representation the community would have known earlier there was a possibility of the board discussing the closing of Dunbar. Thank God, we got the message in time, so we could do something about the situation."

Will a black ever be elected to the city Council?

"Pat, I am wondering about that. After having three or four persons running for a position on the city council, it does make you have mixed emotions. These persons have run powerful races, but this isn't what we are after. We want more than a powerful race. It does make me have mixed emotions and hope the day will come when citizens on the other side of the track can see, realize and understand that we have black men and women who can fill the shoes and do a good job."

Mrs. Ervin, will blacks vote on Saturday, April 3rd?

"I certainly hope so. We have done everything in our power to get them out to the polls."

(Next Week: Mrs. Ervin talks about bussing.)

LUBBOCK'S COMMUNITY SERVICES

A year ago, the City of Lubbock established by City Ordinance the Community Services Department, and its advisory board the Community Services Commission, to conduct the "anti-poverty" programs for Lubbock. Almost a year to the date from its formation, the Department's executive director, Archibald Bottoms, announced that Lubbock's Community Services has been approved as a Community Action Agency by the Federal Community Services Administration. This means, according to Bottoms, that the program activities proposed by the Department and its Commission have received official approval, and that the funding from federal sources will begin in mid-April (the contract calls for funding of $104,400 for a twelve month period).

The programs activities approved for Community Services includes the establishment of three neighborhood centers in the low-income areas of Lubbock, from which extensive outreach services involving counseling, information and referral, and escort & transportation services will be provided to the needy. The Community Services concept, evolved from the old O.E.O. programs, is based upon service determined largely by the needs of the poor as they themselves indicate in regularly conducted surveys.

Before applying for designation as a Community Action Agency, Community Services had to complete a survey of the needs of the poor in Lubbock County. Priority needs shown in this survey taken last summer were: housing, health care, and employment. The programs developed by Community Services will address these priorities, primarily by means of direct services.

Community Services, established by City ordinance, receives central office space in City Hall, and certain departmental services such as those afforded by the City's Personnel and Accounting departments, from the City. However, no local tax funds as such are to be diverted to Community Services use, and the latter's programs and activities will depend upon state and federal grants.

Although little has been accomplished on the public level, Community Services has not been idle during its first year. The executive director was hired last May, and with the guidance and assistance of the Commission, he spent the first six months in preparing the documents and conducting the survey in order to present the application for federal funding. Delay occurred as apparent conflicts developed between local government philosophy and federal bureaucracy; shortly after the first of the year these problems were resolved, and the programs proposed by Community Services were approved; however, yet another delay developed over legal technicalities which involved adapting state constitutional provisions to federal requirements at the local level. These last difficulties were ironed out last week by the City's Legal Department and the Dallas office of CSA. According to Bottoms, "We're ready to roll, now!"

Community Services has already been functioning since January on the basis of two modest contracts with the State and a work agreement with the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). As a result of an $18,000 annual contract with the State Department of Public Welfare, an $8,000 annual contract with the Texas Department of Public Welfare, and the CETA provision of four workers, Community Services has been able to field eight outreach workers, who are going out into the low-income areas of Lubbock and adjoining areas in Lubbock county to provide assistance in applying for food stamps and other available public assistance.

The Community Services Commission plays a very important role in the Department's activities. The Commission decides the policies and plans the programs to be implemented by the Department. The Commission completed its first year of service on March 31. According to the City Ordinance establishing it, one half of the Commission's terms expire each year on March 31. The Commission is made up of eighteen members, six of whom are public officials, six representing private groups, and six elected from the low income areas of Lubbock. The six public officials and the six private groups are appointed by the City Council; the six elected representatives are elected by the target areas they represent. The City Council has reappointed A.C. Bowden (head of City-County Health Board) and Warner Sims (Lubbock Independent School District), and appointed Dr. Floyd Perry, Dean of Admissions, to represent

Texas Tech in place of Clyde Morganti. The City Council also reappointed the American Association of Retired Persons (represented by Edna Houghton), the Central Labor Council (represented by Curtis Chapman), and the Community Planning Council (represented by Tex Timberlake). Elections for the three spots on the board for elected representatives will take place next week, Saturday, April 10. Elected representatives completing their term are Benny Brito, Juan Alamanza, and Lorenzo Sedeno. Commission members whose terms expire next year, and therefore continuing on the board are Mayor Roy Bass, Fire Chief Tom Foster, and Judge Rod Shaw of the public officials; Rev. Howard Cupp (Lubbock Ministers' Association), Marion Key (Chamber of Commerce), and Dr. Harvie Pruitt (Lubbock Christian College); elected representatives: Lynda DeShazo, Carlos A. Quirino, Sr. and Marshall Taylor.

Bottoms said: "Now that we've finally gotten all the preliminaries behind us, we have every expectation of getting into full swing with our various programs during the coming twelve months. People can hardly be blamed for looking askance at us, since these past twelve months have not contrived to our public image. We're not going to engage in flowery promises or lofty rhetoric; we simply ask people to wait and see, and judge us by the results of our program which is only now getting off the ground."

COMMUNITY SERVICES COMMISSION ELECTION

On Saturday, April 10, 1976, there will be an election to fill three vacancies on the Community Services Commission, the advisory board of the Community Services Department of the City of Lubbock. Community Services aims to help the poor of the City of Lubbock through various federal and state programs.

Three area representatives will be elected, one each from the following areas: (1) target area I in northeast Lubbock, north of Parkway Drive and east of the U.S. Highway 87 and the Santa Fe tracks; (2) target area II in north Lubbock, north of Fourth Street between Avenue Q and Quaker; (3) target area IV, in east Lubbock, east of Quirt between Parkway Drive and 19th Street.

Term of office is two years from April 1. Candidates must be 18 years of age by April 1. To be named on the ballot, candidates must have the support of at least 25 citizens over 18 years of age in the target area he/she seeks to represent. Write-in candidates will be allowed. A nominee whose name is placed on the ballot may be reimbursed up to $15 for campaign expenses; requests for which, along with evidence of expenditures, must be made to the Community Services Department no later than one week following the election.

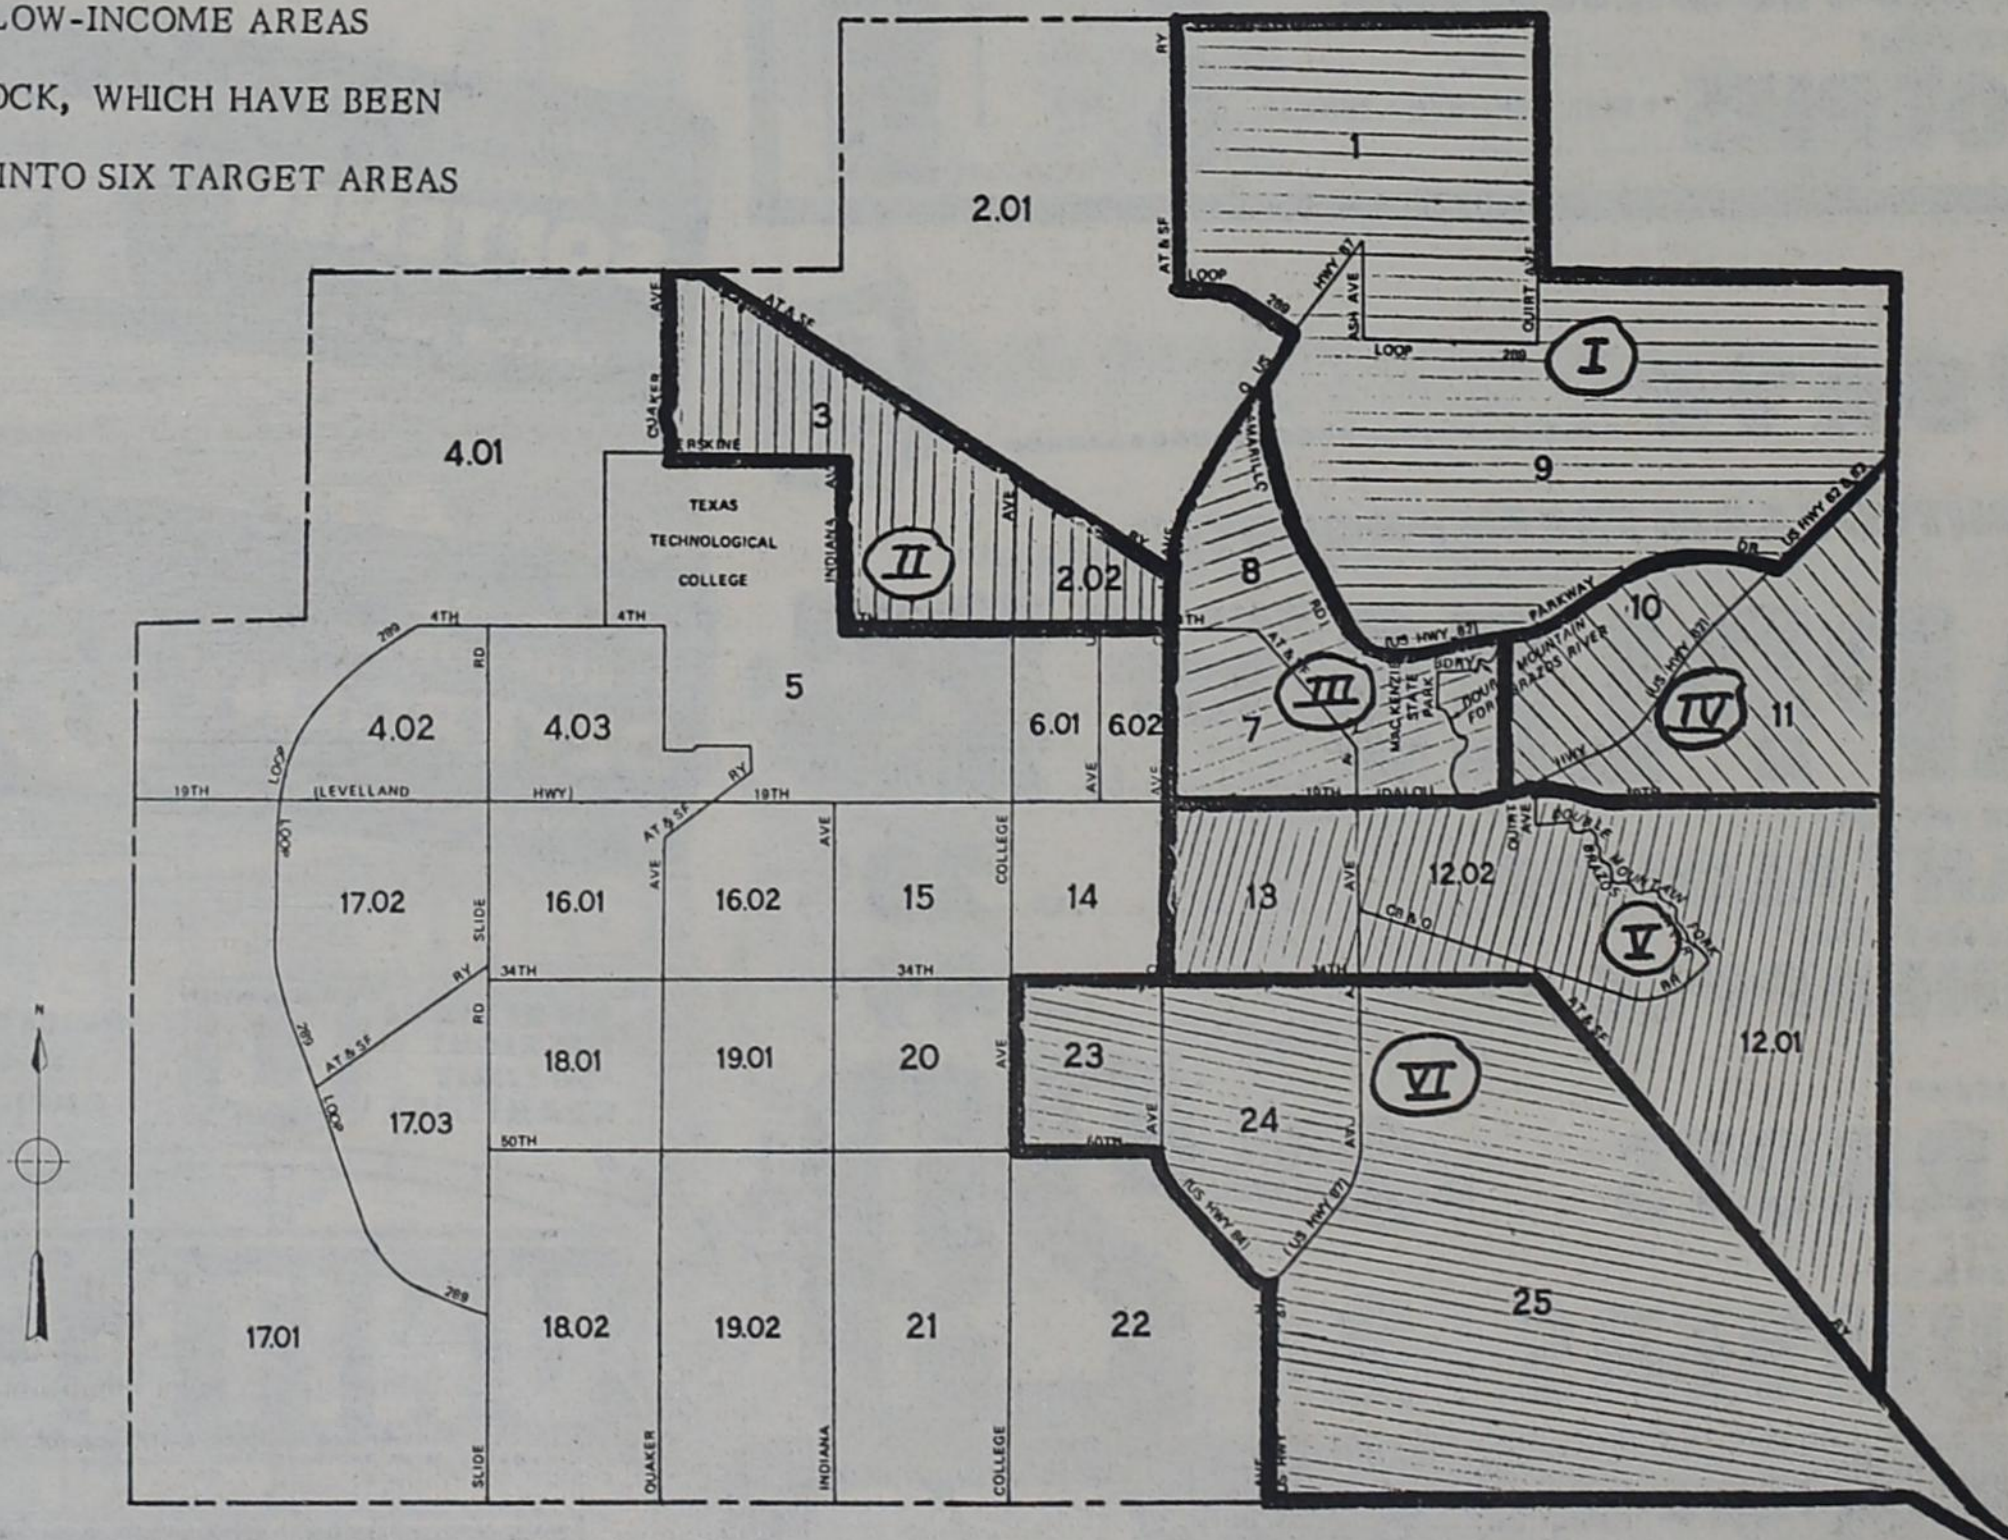

The petition for nomination must reach the Community Services Department, Room 213, City Hall, before 5 p.m. Friday, April 2, 1976.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

A film that cannot help but recall last season's stunning "Murder on the Orient Express" is the newest Charles Bronson starring vehicle, "Breakheart Pass," currently showing at Cinema West, which uses a wonderful old steam powered train as its principal setting.

"Breakheart Pass," both western and whodunit rolled into one, is an exciting and active film with above average casting and performances. The film is adapted from Alastair MacLean's novel (he also did the screenplay) and is 95 minutes long, carrying a PG rating.

The basic plot evolves around ole No. 9 as she steams through rugged country and snowy landscapes carrying medical supplies to an Army Post caught in a diphtheria epidemic.

Action sparks from the very beginning as two Army officers are missing. Along the trip all communication is lost, bodies are strewn out of the train and tumbled spectacularly down the terrifyingly high trestles over deep gorges, a section of the train is uncoupled and slides downgrade for total disaster for the troops aboard. One realizes gradually that the truth of the plot is not a medical emergency but a band of murderous villains bent on joining with the Indians to get the gold and silver hoard from the fort.

Charles Bronson poses as a villain in the marshall's custody but we learn that he is a government agent after the gang. Craggy Bronson turns in his usual action portrait without too much effort. Richard Crenna is the unsuspected governor, while Jill Ireland as his assumed paramour plays her usual pretty self. (She is Mrs. Bronson and co-stars with Charles most every outing).

A good stock company of season players includes Ben Johnson as a crooked marshall and Ed Lauter as the honest Army colonel. Completing the roster are well-knowns David Huddleston, William McKinney, Charles Durning, Roy Benson, Casey Tibbs, Archie Moore and Joe Kapp.

Top tunesmith Jerry Goldsmith's score is neat and the photography all through is beautifully handled.

With such stalwarts as David Niven, Darren McGavin, Don Knotts and Hershel Bernardi topping Walt Disney's "No Deposit, No Return," at the Fox 4, is a G-rated, 112 minute romp that features a self-kidnapping, fast auto chase, aerial tricks and a fairish plot. The family film is lightweight but it has its entertaining moments.

Last Sunday was a double-header for me. Early in the afternoon I was present in the new studios of KTEZ-FM (Music all the time) at the Tower of the Plains while station personnel conducted tours of the facility and Mayor Roy Bass snipped the traditional ribbon. Having appeared on the station some four times in the past six months or so, I have fond feelings for Art Christensen, account executive and my host, and was pleased to meet the others of the enterprising staff.

From there it was a dash to Greater St. Luke's Baptist Church for an afternoon of glorious spiritual music from the Federation of Choirs, 110 strong, in the 22nd Anniversary service. Lyons Chapel Baptist Church was the host and that big church was jammed to the rafters, literally. It was hot inside and the shouting and singing went on without a slip.

What a thrilling emotional experience this day is each year, and A.L. Smith, president of the Federation, Mrs. Joan Ervin, secretary, Director Elder Levi Lenley, Directresses Desma Moore, Yvonne Perry, pianists Mae P. Jackson and Martha Haynes, and organist Prof. William Shumate, all deserve a thumping hand of congratulations. As, of course, do the soloists and the solid choir, all of whom worked so hard and did so well in the singing worship of the Lord.

The Federation of Choirs service is a wonderful event on the annual calendar and deserves to be heard by persons in all walks of life, race, color and creed. This is simple devotion and meaningful.

Well, the 48th Annual Awards of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences came off as usual Monday night, colorful, peppered with bright stars and handsomely staged production numbers and, as usual, ran a bit overtime on the network.

The film segment of Mary Pickford receiving her special Oscar at Pickfair was a bit saddening as the 83-year-old movie great endured the ordeal of minutes or so. Long an ill recluse inside the lavish estate, Miss Pickford is the legendary last of the true motion picture titans and the clips from some of her silent and talking screen successes were true nostalgia bits. She won the second Oscar given to an actress (for "Coquette"), and the Academy's homage was in good and right order. (Heavens to Betsy, can Miss Pickford and Charles "Buddy" Rogers have been married 39 years already!) Incidentally, Rogers co-starred in the first Oscar-winning Best Film, the memorable "Wings" way back when! Ironic that the other co-star Richard Arlen died Sunday at 75, just one day before the mention of the film on Monday's broadcast.

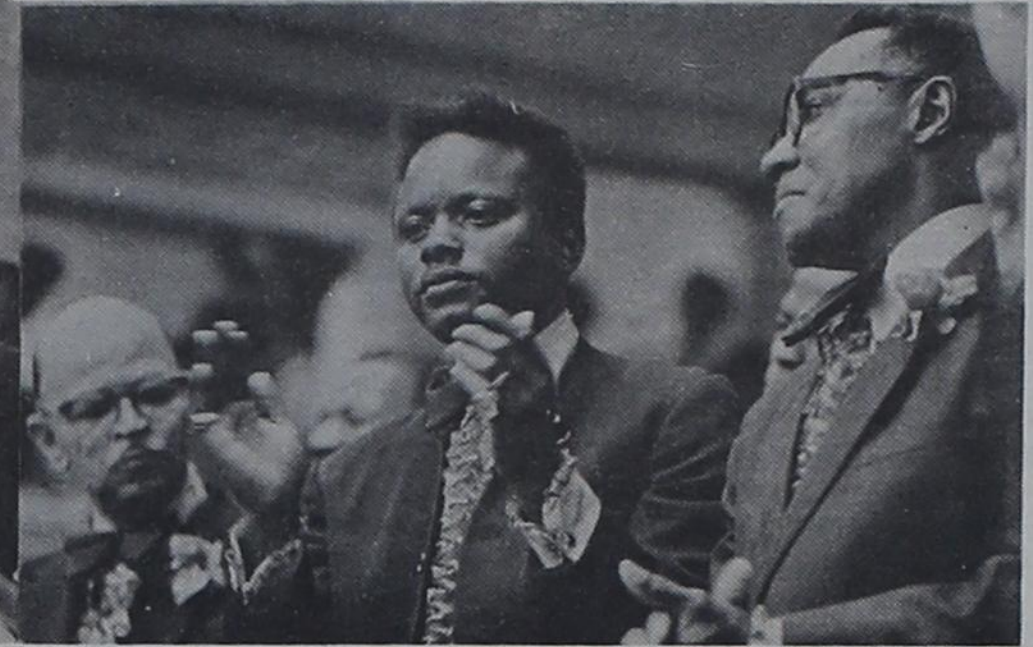

Those who read last week's forecast of the proceedings will remember that I divided my choices into three categories for the six leading nominee blocks. I had probably, dark horse and personal choice. How'd I do? In the probables, I called Jack Nicholson for best actor; Louise Fletcher for best actress; George Burns for best supporting actor; and Milos Forman for best director. Four out of six, not bad. My single "dark horse" winner was Lee Grant, best supporting actress.

But now look at my personal choice! Jack Nicholson, Louise Fletcher, Lee Grant, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest", Milos Forman. Five out of six, darned good. I admit I lost on the first category (probable) when I thought "Barry Lyndon" would take the statuette. I did that because of the vast technical accomplishments in an otherwise tediously long film. Well, "Lyndon" got a number of awards in the technical division, all right. But "Cuckoo's Nest" was a perfectly fine choice for me.

It is too bad that we don't ever see the best shorts and documentaries, but that's the way it goes.

With a sound as clear and as refreshing as a breeze from caves of ice, members of the east Lubbock Federation of Choirs entertained a packed St. Luke's Baptist Church Sunday.

Dr. Connie Yerwood Named Chief of Bureau of Personal Health Services

Dr. Connie R. Yerwood has been working for a lifetime for one goal—better health for mothers and children of Texas.

Now she has a bigger part to play in seeing it come true.

Dr. Yerwood has been named chief of the Bureau of Personal Health Services of the Texas Department of Health Resources. A member of two minority groups—being a woman and a Black—Dr. Yerwood is the first woman ever to advance above a directorship in the health agency. She had been director of the Division of Maternal and Child Health.

In her new role, she will have an active part and oversee the operations of three large divisions: the Maternal and Child Health Division; the Early Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment (epsdt) Division and the Chronic Diseases Division.

"The overall goals of the services are to reduce the incidence of maternal and infant mortality and morbidity, and to assure that every child from birth to 21 years of age shall have the opportunity to develop to maximum potential," says Dr. Yerwood.

The native Austinite comes from a medical family. Her father was a physician who practiced medicine in Austin until his death, and her sister—a classmate at Meharry Medical College—is a general practitioner in Stamford, Conn. She received her A.B. Degree from Samuel Huston College in Austin (now Huston-Tillotson College). Following graduation from Meharry in Nashville, she interned at Kansas City General Hospital and did her residency in pediatrics at Wheatley Hospital in Kansas City. Dr. Yerwood did graduate work in public health at the University of Michigan.

In addition to making a valuable contribution in the field of public health, Dr. Yerwood contributes generously of her time, talents and abilities to civic, educational and religious organizations.

Dr. Yerwood has been recognized by her community. She was named one of Austin's five outstanding women for 1974 by the Austin American-Statesman newspaper and was selected in 1975 by the Women in Communications as Austin's most outstanding woman in the field of child development.

Among her many other activities, Dr. Yerwood serves as chairman of the Board of Trustees of Huston-Tillotson College and chairman of its executive committee, president of the Huston-Tillotson National Alumni Association and serves as vice-chairman of the board of Wesley United Methodist Church and member of the board of the Methodist Home in Waco.

Ringling The Bell

with Bob Tieucl

From a Black Perspective: Here in Dallas for several days, we talked to a good number of black parents, civic and business leaders as well as religious leaders of the community on the latest plan to dismantle the remnants of its racially segregated school system. The Dallas school board voted today to purchase 303 school buses needed under the Alliance proposal, at a cost of some five million dollars with U.S. providing the lion's share of the cost, it is reported.

The Alliance plan, which was written by a 21 member committee of blacks, whites and Mexican-Americans, divides the district into five subdistricts for desegregation purposes. The plan would establish four "magnet" schools near downtown Dallas by the beginning of the next school year and increase to a minimum of seven by the beginning of the 1979 school year.

The plan would also expand the bilingual program from the kindergarten through the eighth grade and would assign kindergarten through the third grade students and ninth through 12th graders to the schools nearest their homes. The plan calls for the hiring of top level administrators so that 44 percent of those administrators will be black and 12 percent Mexican-American, by 1979.

Black and white leaders of the plan, as well as the two leading daily newspapers of Big D, for the most part expressed the opinion that at least "it was a basis for hope." Said the Dallas Times Herald "We believe, and said so before Judge Taylor's decision that the Dallas Alliance effort offers the best opportunity in years for ending the long and troubled history of school desegregation litigation here."

The Times concludes: "The Alliance plan adheres as closely as possible to the neighborhood school concept by drawing new attendance subdistricts, envisioning the assignment of young pupils to schools closest to their homes, and creating magnet schools . . . We are confident the Dallas School Board and Administration can make the Dallas Alliance plan work . . . We have the basis for hope and the opportunity to make the Dallas desegregation effort a successful model for the nation." end of quote.

It's the talk of the town: Here in Big D, even as Wendell Tooley, columnist, expressed it in The Floyd County Hesperian recently, the talk of the town is "the unhappiness expressed on cost of light and gas bills." The AFL-CIO of Texas says the situation is so bad that it is expected to wage a campaign for gas intrastate controls and a serious study of fuel adjustment costs is planned. Candidates for public office are voicing similar opinions to do something about steadily increasing utility costs. The other issue on the lips of nearly every householder is the new busing plan approved by Judge William Taylor of the U.S. District Court.

600 COPE delegates meeting in Galveston, Texas, last week approved resolutions calling for legislation to impose criminal penalties on employers who hire illegal aliens and calling for federal control of in-state natural gas to help curb mounting utility bills and end "the unbridled greed of the oil-gas monopoly."

The president of the largest black-owned furniture company in the nation told black business people in Dallas recently that the best way to increase their participation in the economy was to develop better relationships with black consumers. Rick McGuire, founder of Seway Furniture Co. of Chicago acknowledged at the PYLON-NBL Samesmanship Club's 11th annual Negro Market Seminar that "reservations" exist among blacks for black businesses along the lines of a lack of faith in their reliability, performance and service but added that "good salesmanship can eliminate this. You can stimulate ethnic loyalty," he said.

S.B. Fuller, who after founding the Fuller Products Cosmetics Company, became one of the nation's first black multimillionaires, said that black women seem to have an aversion to doing business with members of their communities as "she does not see the black man as a man of authority." This fact is compounded by the fact that the black community is the only major ethnic group where the majority of college graduates are women, Fuller added. The prevalence of black households headed by black women also is a factor, Fuller stated. Developing black-owned businesses has become vital to the overall stability of black people, Fuller concluded.

Until later, Peace and be a good neighbor. They come in all colors.

"Ears" Provided to Deaf

The deaf in Lubbock and the surrounding area will be able to communicate with the fire department in case of emergency, and with others who are deaf for conversation purposes thanks to a program sponsored by the 2T2 Lions Clubs and the Pioneer Club of the telephone company.

Both groups have joined together to place teletype machines capable of transmitting messages through a telephone hookup in the homes of the deaf. So far, nine have been installed, and within the next two years, says Mike Wester, a member of the Lions Hearing Conservation Deaf Work Committee, both clubs intend to install the machines in the homes of the more than 100 deaf in the South Plains area.

The equipment will enable the deaf to solicit aid in cases of emergency by calling the Central Fire Station in Lubbock. Dispatchers there can relay the call to any other agency at any hour of the day.

"If these special people need a policeman, a doctor, an ambulance or a fireman, or any other unusual emergency like a plumber to cut off water in a flooding house, they will now be able to call the fire station and get help immediately," Jim Hamlett, President of the South Plains Telephone Pioneers Club, says.

The alternative for the deaf was to drive somewhere to contact people who could aid them.

The person using the equipment places the receiver of his telephone on a special hookup, and then sits down at the teletype machine to transmit his message. The teletype machine is capable of transmitting and receiving messages which are typed on a sheet of paper for the deaf to read.

The process has the additional advantage of being educational, Mike Wester says. Using the machine encourages the deaf to develop proper vocabulary, spelling, and sentence structure. But the big advantage is that it will enable the deaf to communicate across town with others in the same situation, he adds.

"Nothing would please them more than to be able to talk across town without getting in their car and having to drive," Wester says.

To help them do this, a special telephone directory will be printed containing the names and phone numbers of people with the machine. The deaf will also be able to make long distance calls to other people in the state and the nation who have similar hook ups.

Similar systems are currently operating in Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth. Unlike Houston where the deaf purchase the entire system, people in the South Plains area pay only for the purchase of a telephone. The Lions Club purchases and installs the $200 teletype machines. A program like the one in Houston was started here two years ago but fell through because of the expenses involved.

District 2T2 Lions Clubs have taken the project on as an extension of their program to help those who are blind. Working closely with the Pioneers Club, a group of Bell Telephone employees with more than 19 years experience, the two clubs financed the system here. Wester says the Lions hope to make the project to help the deaf state-wide next year.

About 150 teletype machines are on order from Western Union in Chicago, and will be divided between Amarillo and Lubbock for installation on the High Plains, Wester says.

THANK YOU

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wilson would like to thank the many friends and love ones for the warm and thoughtful appreciation service rendered on Sunday, March 21, 1976, at Bethel A.M.E. Church, for Mr. Wilson.

At times like these words cannot convey how much we appreciate your kindness. Many times we feel so forsaken and forgotten, but you, the people of Bethel, Lubbock, and especially Senior Choir No. 2, of Bethel, have shown us that the Lord does indeed have His eyes on the sparrow, and He also watches over me.

May God forever Bless and Keep you!

Thank You,
With all our Christian love,
Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Wilson
