500 GUESTS EXPECTED

Dorothy Greathouse, Opera Singer, to Give Feature Musical Numbers

Accomplishments of 1928 and work for 1929 will be reviewed and discussed when members of Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce meet Friday night at 7 o'clock at the Junior college for the annual banquet and election of directors.

The entire gathering at the banquet will be seated in the main dining hall of the Junior college cafeteria, it was announced by officials of the organization Thursday, as final arrangements for the event were completed.

It was announced last week that part of the crowd would be seated in the gymnasium for dinner, and would move into the cafeteria at 8 o'clock for the program. Increased space in the main dining hall was made available Thursday, however, and made possible the assembling of the more than 500 persons who are expected to be present in one body for both the banquet and program. Chamber of commerce officials stated that the seating arrangements assure the comfort of every guest.

Ballot on Directors

Beginning at 6:30 p. m. members of the chamber of commerce will be given copies of the January issue of the Community Builder, monthly publication of the organization, as they arrive, and will mark the enclosed ballots for election of six directors in the auditorium before entering the dining hall at 7 o'clock sharp. ## NEWT BYRNES ELECTROCUTED

Hatchet Slayer Pays For Three Murders

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Jan. 11 (AP)—Game to the end and carrying out his boast that he would go to his death unshaken, Floyd Newton Byrnes paid with his life in the electric chair here early Friday for the slaying of three women in San Angelo.

The current was sent through his body at 12:23 a. m. and he was pronounced dead at 12:31 a. m.

Byrnes paid with his life for the "hatchet murder" of three women members of a wealthy San Angelo family. He confessed the murders and told officers that he slew the women and then mutilated their bodies with a hatchet. He was indicted for the death of Myrna Juergens, a young girl, her mother Mrs. W. J. Juergens and Myrna's grandmother, Mrs. Rosa Schirra.

He was tried only for murder of the girl and was given the death penalty. His only defense was that he was under influence of liquor when he committed the crime.

Maintained Calm

Throughout his last day on earth Byrnes maintained stoical calm as minutes ticked away and brought him to the threshold of the electric chair.

In the afternoon he talked earnestly with the Rev. Father Hugh Finnegan, Catholic priest, who was admitted to the slayer's cell after Byrnes refused to talk to the prison chaplain and requested that he be allowed to speak to Father Finnegan instead.

Priest Visits Cell

After a hurried check up, officials discovered that Father Finnegan was in Houston, 90 miles from here. The priest was located, made a hurried trip to Huntsville and immediately on his arrival went to the doomed man's cell.

Throughout the day Byrnes talked and joked with jailers who described his frame of mind as unchanged from the time when he was first placed in "death row." He ate his noon-day meal with apparent relish and then puffed on cigars given him in accordance with a prison custom.

CITY MANAGER DENIES CHARGE OF CONTEMPT

Every Effort Made to Obey Court Order, Says Fairtrace

HEARING SET JAN. 19

Pollution of Wichita River Halted Oct. 1, Says Official

Denial of charges that the city is continuing to pollute the waters of Wichita river in violation of a restraining order issued last August by former Judge E. G. Thornton was contained in a statement from George D. Fairtrace, city manager, Thursday afternoon.

The statement followed the serving of a writ of attachment ordering Mr. Fairtrace to appear before Judge P. A. Martin Jan. 19 to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for failure to comply with the terms of the injunction. The attachment was ordered Thursday morning after D. G. Whitney, plaintiff in the original injunction petition, had filed an affidavit alleging that the pollution of the water and the placing of offensive matter on the banks of the river has been continued in spite of the court's order.

New Equipment

"No sewage or waste matter is being discharged into the river," Mr. Fairtrace declared. "The city is doing everything in its power to obey the order of the court."

"Even before the case came up we had planned the installation of an emergency pump and a new motor to power it. These have been put into operation and the sewage disposal plant is in perfect order."

Mr. Fairtrace said the discharge of all sewage and waste had been stopped before the injunction went into effect on Oct. 1. He said he was prepared to go into court with a complete denial of the charges.

The contempt hearing is the latest development in the contest starting early last summer when Mr. Whitney, owner of an extensive area of land along the river, sued for the injunction and for $212,000 alleged damages to his land through the disposal of sewage in the river and the dumping of garbage along the river bank.

Decision Appealed

In August Judge Thornton granted the injunction, which has been appealed to the supreme court by Thelbert Martin, city attorney. The damage suit is yet to be tried. At the time the injunction was granted, Judge Thornton instructed the city to remedy the conditions leading to the pollution of the water. It was to this end that the installation of the emergency pump and motor was ordered, Mr. Fairtrace explained.

LEASE REPEAL SEEMS CERTAIN

House Expected to Follow Senate's Example

Charlie Chaplin and Georgia Hale Have Been Seen Together, So—??

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10. (UP)—Now that Charlie Chaplin has had almost five months freedom from marital ties, the screen colony rumors an engagement between the comedian and Georgia Hale, the dark-haired beauty who played opposite him in "The Gold Rush."

The report has persisted despite Chaplin's emphatic statement that only friendship exists and that those who speak of an engagement "do Miss Hale a great injustice."

Studio officials said that "they just like each others' company and we see no basis for talk of an engagement."

Miss Hale did not appear in any of Chaplin's pictures after "The Gold Rush," which was made about the time of his marriage to Lita Grey, who since obtained a divorce from the actor. The decree became final last August. The engagement of Miss Grey to Roy D'Arcy was announced recently.

Chaplin and Miss Hale have been seen together frequently about Hollywood of late. Chaplin is working on his new feature comedy, "City Lights," at the present time, with Virginia Cherill, Chicago society girl, playing opposite him. Miss Hale is free-lancing.

Marland Heads Royalty Ass'n

Hinton, James Bedford and Marland will constitute the executive committee.

Officers of the Texas division include Bedford, president; C. P. Watson of Fort Worth, active vice president; J. F. Lucey of Dallas, and A. B. Eyssell of San Angelo, vice presidents, and Wandell, secretary-treasurer.

The board of directors of the Texas division were named on a district basis and includes, among others, the following individual royalty owners and royalty company officials:

Wichita Directors

Wichita Falls district—Dudley Golding, Clint Wood and W. J. Moran.

Amarillo district—Neill Johnson and Earl R. Calloway.

Midland-Big Spring-Colorado district—J. O. Crump, A. R. Carmody W. F. Scarborough, H. G. Bedford and L. E. Wandell.

Corsicana-Mexia district—E. L. Smith.

San Angelo district—R. G. Carr, V. E. Cottingham, I. G. Yates, J. T. Cross, W. S. Duty and Mrs. Lydia H. McMullen.

Ranger-Eastland-Cisco district—Walter Gholson.

Purpose of Association

Purpose of the association was explained as the working out of problems peculiar to the royalty owner as the general oil associations have handled problems of the oil producer.

Among these is the working out of standard lease, royalty and division order forms which will give justice to the royalty and land owner, common defense against unjust taxation and "title jumping" operations of an abstract exchange and of a general engineering service to serve members at a nominal charge.

An early problem which may be tackled is that of a solution of the problem of releasing land on which leases have expired since subdivision of the royalty rights. This has proved vexatious in numerous instances, but is believed by the association that a solution which can be reached which will permit quick leasing of land with protection of interests of scattered royalty owners.

FEM SHERIFF SCORNS CAREER

Dallas Woman Prefers Her Home to Six-Shooter

DALLAS, Jan. 10. (UP)—A woman, who has encroached upon man's estate to the extent of holding the hard-fisted job of sheriff in a county in which 69 homicides were committed in one year, is ready to say that a woman's place is in the home.

Mrs. Lula Seale has held the office of sheriff of Dallas county since the death of her husband, Allen Seale, last May 17. During the seven and one-half months of her term she has had to deal with a wave of killings that have set a record for this city.

Although Mrs. Seale says that her term in office was a pleasant experience from the standpoint of cooperation of her deputies and members of the district attorney's office, she refused to run for re-election.

Today upon her retirement from the office she told the United Press that a woman should seek a career of home-making rather than one of packing a six-shooter.

And she would give the same advice to women contemplating a combined political-domestic career.

Sheriff Allen Seale belonged to the "old school" of Texas peace officers and is remembered in Dallas as one of the most successful of his type. Likewise, Mrs. Seale may be regarded as belonging to the "old school of feminism," since she has confined her activities to raising a large family and maintaining a home up to the untimely illness and death of her husband. Naturally, her opinion is based on her experience and not on any theories advanced by any neo-feminism movement.

However, she is of the opinion that politics is not a taboo profession for women without families in so much as they have to pay poll taxes. Likewise, she is a firm believer that women should have equal voice at the polls.

YOUNG MATING PLAN PROPOSED

But French Women Quick To Oppose Suggestion

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Jan. 10.—A storm of protest has greeted suggestions by Professor Pinard of the University of Paris that French girls marry at the age of 16 and boys at the age of 21, or as soon thereafter as they can find suitable mates. Pinard is the arch foe of race suicide in France.

The most prominent women of France have joined in the attack on Pinard's suggestion, declaring that youthful marriage will ruin the race. Far better, they insisted, to wait until both boy and girl have grown wise in years, marrying when the woman is at least 21 years old and the man five years older.

More Children

"By marring young" said the noted professor, "girls have a greater chance to have more children, and that is what France needs.

"In the Orient no one is astonished to see girls of 12 or 13 years entering harems. For state reasons, we have seen European princesses marry kings or heirs to thrones at an even more tender age. From a physiological point of view, a girl of 16 years is at the right age for motherhood. It is best that she does not wait longer for marriage.

"It is absolutely necessary for the moral and physical balance of a woman that she bear a child before she is 25 years old."

Opposition Arises

Immediately feminine leaders rushed to voice their opposition and Madame Raymonde Machard, author of numerous novels, and Mlle. Lucile Tinayre, member of the bar, made their positions known tonight.

"It is pure folly of the wildest sort," said Mlle. Tinayre. "It has been proved that these apprentice households never have good results. I believe in assorted couples, the man five or six years older than his bride, who should be at least 21 years old."

Madame Machard said:

"When I think of the wonderful life American wives have and the countless advantages their marriage brings them, I must admit that if I were an American girl I would hasten to profit by marriage.

"I find it astonishing, even, that they would wait until they are 18 years old to enjoy such bliss. But here in France it is different. A French girl of 16 has the right to dream and aspire to heights. She should not be tied down by French marriage customs and babies and cookery."

FATHER HELD FOR ASSAULT

Circus Whip Used on Boy, Charge Says

Charges of aggravated assault have been filed against the father of a 12-year-old boy who early this week ran away from home after a whipping at his father's hands.

The complaint, filed in the county court at law by L. V. Abernathy, assistant county attorney, was signed by the boy's mother, who lives apart from her husband.

The child, who spends most of his time with his mother, was visiting his father at the time of the alleged assault. After having been whipped the child ran away from his father's home and was found, two days later, in Fort Worth. The help of James A. McDonald, county juvenile officer, and a radio broadcast was enlisted in efforts to locate the little runaway.

The boy was brought into the office of the county attorney where scars across his shoulders and over his body were exposed, according to officers. He had been struck with a whip bought at a circus, according to the evidence.

Questioned by Mr. Abernathy, the father asserted his parental right to whip the boy.

Some of the World's Best Men Make Meanest Husbands, Miss Dix Says

A Really Good Husband Is One Who Never Takes His Wife for Granted, But Who Tries to Make a Success of His Marriage as He Does of His Business, Observes Dorothy Dix.

A woman asks: "What is your idea of a good husband?" My idea of a good husband is a man who tries as hard to make a success of his marriage as he does of his business. Who handles his wife as diplomatically as he does his best customer. Who makes as much effort to sell himself to his family as he does to his boss. Who treats his wife as politely as he does his stenographer and whose manners are as good at home as they are abroad

Being a good man and being a good husband are not one and the same thing. Some of the best men in the world, judged by every ethical standard, are the meanest husbands, while on the contrary many men who are short on the standardized virtues are long on the domestic ones.

There are plenty of husbands who never touch a cocktail, or play a game of bridge, or see a horse race, or chase a petticoat, who are so stingy, and tyrannical, and grouchy, and hateful that they make their wives' lives a burden to them, and there is many a weak brother who is always falling off the water wagon and straying in forbidden paths who is so generous and tender and considerate that he is easier to live with than the austere saint.

We set it down to the inexplicable vagaries of the feminine temperament when we see with what fortitude and resignation some widow bears the death of her husband, who was the model in the community in which he lived, while the widow of the town drunkard breaks her heart over his loss. But it is only the woman who has been married to a man who knows what sort of a husband he was.

Now my idea of a good husband is a man who enters into matrimony with a full realization of its responsibilities and a firm determination not to welch on them. To begin with, he doesn't marry until he has some settled way of supporting a family, because he feels that no man has a right to take a girl out of a good home where she has three square meals a day to starve her, or to ask one to give up a job with a pay envelope attached to work for him for nothing.

It isn't necessary for a man to provide his wife with an expensive apartment, or jewels, or cars, in order to be a good husband, but it is necessary to provide her with the ordinary comforts and decencies of life.

No man who is not willing to work for his wife is a good husband. Amiability does not atone for laziness, though many women seem to think it does, and so high a value do they put upon a little jollying from the men to whom they are married that they are willing to work their fingers to the bone for husbands who will kiss their hands and tell them how beautiful they are.

A good husband is a man who considers that he is just as much married to his wife as she is to him, and that it is just as much his duty to be a little ray of sunshine in the home as it is hers. He doesn't expect to spend his evenings playing poker with the boys while she keeps the home fires burning. He doesn't expect his wife to scrimp on the butcher bill and wear her last year's clothes in order that he may have the money to throw away sustaining his reputation of being a good spender in night clubs.

A good husband is a home-keeping husband for the most part, because he finds his chief enjoyment at home, and because he realizes that unless he cultivates a companionship with his wife they will lose step with each other and drift apart. Also, he realizes that when he brought children into the world it became his chief duty in life to guide and direct them and develop them into fine men and women.

Therefore, the good husband takes an interest in his home and tries to make it a place of happiness and cheer. He chums with his wife and children. He advises with them and consults with them. He is their friend, counselor and guide, and their best playmate.

The good husband gives his wife a square deal in money matters. He makes her feel that she is a full partner in the firm of Benedict & Co., and that she is just as much responsible for its prosperity as he is. He knows that no human beings with a particle of self-respect in them can endure the humiliation of having to ask like a beggar for every cent they spend, and so he makes his wife as liberal an allowance as he can afford for running the house and a personal allowance for her own needs.

A good husband does not think that just the fact that she is married to him is all the joy that any woman could possibly ask of life and let his obligations to his wife go at that. He does something actively and definitely to make her happy. He makes her continually feel that he is always thinking of her pleasure. He devises little treats for her. He remembers anniversaries. He plans surprises for her.

Perhaps it is no more than taking her to the movies, or bringing her a 10-cent bag of gumdrops, or staying at home with the baby of an evening while she runs over to gossip with a neighbor. It is showing her that he cares whether she is happy or miserable; that he notices whether she is tired or rested that counts with a woman. A woman is perfectly satisfied to do without things if her husband will go window shopping with her and tell her how it breaks his heart that he can't buy her a sable coat.

Above all, the good husband is a man who never ceases to make love to his wife. He never takes her for granted. He always shows his interest in her and tells her that she is as young and beautiful to him at 40 as she was at 20 and that he blesses the day that heaven bestowed her upon him as a wife.

He is tenderer, more thoughtful, more considerate, more anxious to give her pleasure as a husband than he was a lover. Indeed, he remains the perpetual lover, and as long as a husband is that he may have every other fault in the world and his wife will never find it out.

He will be the ideal husband.

A day that might have meant so much—and she has to be excused. What a pity there's a woman left who does not know of Midol! One or two tablets in time, and not a twinge of pain throughout the menstrual process. Or an end to such suffering at any time, five to seven minutes after Midol is taken. Yet this merciful medicine is non-narcotic. Its wonderful results are due to the fact it acts directly on the organs affected; so it's utterly harmless, and it is only common sense to use it. Midol comes in a clever little case of aluminum you can slip in the smallest purse. And the cost of this comfort is fifty cents.*

* Midol's comfort is not confined to any certain days or age. It relieves at any time of life. Its ease is felt immediately in cases of nervous headache, backache, cramping, hot flashes and all febrile pain peculiar to women.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

(Copyright, 1928, by Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—With the disappearance of the old brownstone courthouse at the northeast corner of City Hall park, and the eventual elimination of the gloomy Tweed courthouse, the people of New York will be able, after years, to see in something like its proper setting the finest example of Italian renaissance arcnitecture in America an i probably their own most beautiful building.

And in years to come, when the dismal, hulking old federal building at the south end of the park is razed, New York's beautiful city hall will be revealed in the middle of a great sweep of lawn, visible from as far south as St. Paul's church.

This storied building was 125 years old this year. When it was built New York was a very small city and in the whole country there were less than six million people. George Washington had been dead only four years. No steamboat had yet ploughed the Hudson and all travel was by carriage, stage coach or riding horse.

There has been much discussion recently in the papers as to what the workingman shall do with all the spare time he now has.

The workingman might take a lesson from some young men who regularly congregate around the corner of Murray street and Broadway during lunch hour.

The commuter was in that vicinity recently and heard a loud shout of "Hey! Hey! Hey!" and saw a dignified old gentleman who was stooping suddenly straighten up and hurry away looking very embarrassed.

Then he heard a loud laugh.

The commuter watched. Presently one of the group of young men threw a penny on the sidewalk. Hundreds of people were passing and very soon one of them caught sight of the coin, stooped down and as he was about to pick it up the "Hey! Hey" chorus started. The passerby left the coin on the pavement and went his way.

Occasionally some one would brave the derisive shouts and go away with the penny. When this happened the unfortunate man was greeted with a cry, "Come back with that penny, you Scotchman!"

Broadway and Forty-fifth street about 8:30 in the evening. Crowds pushing their way along the sidewalks, some of the more daring overflowing into the street to the obvious annoyance of automobilists. Two urchins, perhaps 7 or 8, raggedly dressed and boisterously talking, were wending their way along the sidewalk near the curb. A taxi draws up to the Hotel Astor, stops and the door opens, disclosing four or five people. One of the urchins stops and endeavors to assist the gentlemen and ladies from the cab, reaching up to grasp their arms in the most chivalrous fashion. His job done, he stands back—hoping, expecting. The door slams, the taxi moves off, the passengers hardly notice him as they push their way through the crowds to the hotel. The urchin follows them with his gaze, shrugs his shoulders and continues on his way with his companion.

That "man is but a child of older growth" in his desire to show off to an appreciative audience was well emphasized one afternoon recently in Longacre square. A sandwich man on high stilts in the garb of a policeman noticed a small boy of four or five years watching him with absorbed interest.

The admiration of the youngster evidently aroused the showman instinct in the stilted one and with professional pride he staged a performance that was really wonderful. Such an array of fancy steps, including the Charleston, was indeed amazing to watch and made many of his older observers marvel that he was not on the vaudeville stage.

Soon there was such a crowd gathered that a not-unfriendly officer was forced to stop the show to prevent a traffic jam.

About six feet tall and weighing at least 200 pounds, he was just the type for the job he was holding—that of platform man at Times Square. No crowd was too big for him to pack into the narrow recesses of a subway car; no car was so full but that he couldn't get another passenger in it.

He was attending to his duties with great gusto the other night when he got a taste of his own medicine at the hands of six stalwart youths, who, being well versed in football lore decided to get even for the jamming they had received at his hands on the preceding evening.

Choosing the psychological moment, when, after crowding a "6x6" gentleman into a "1x0" space he called out his inevitable: "Room for one more!" they started moving the flying wedge they had formed directly behind him. He was swept off his feet and deposited just inside the door the instant it slammed shut. The train pulled out, carrying away a very uncomfortable platform man. One wonders how he explained his absence when he returned.

30,000 Look for Jobs

THIRTY THOUSAND men gathered in the open lots surrounding the Ford Motor company's plant in Detroit the other day looking for jobs. All were unemployed; some of them lived in Detroit, some had been drawn from distant cities by the announcement that Ford was going to enlarge his staff. Throughout a long winter day they stood in the cold, waiting for a chance to be put to work.

There is something about that bit of news that makes one stop and do a little thinking.

Thirty thousand men—collected from the cities, towns and farms of the Middle West, waiting all day long in the cold and snow for a chance to win the jobs that meant the difference between comfort and privation. More men than Washington ever commanded in his continental army, standing in line to let one of the modern kings of the earth take his pick.

Was there ever a time in all history when that many adult males, lacking the means of earning a living, could meet in one place without provoking fears of riot, bloodshed and destruction? Has it often happened that one man has been arbiter of destiny for so many?

We specialize in bigness, in this country. Our factories are the biggest on earth, our buildings are the tallest, our rich men are the richest, our queues of job seekers are the longest. The 30,000 men who met outside Henry Ford's factory door symbolized, in a striking way, our New World civilization. A land of magnificent plenty and a land of eternal competition; a land where the job is the biggest thing in life; a land where the race is always to the strong and the swift; a land where old words like democracy and equality have been completely changed about in their meanings by whiring machinery—those things, and more, were implied by the presence of those 30,000.

The early American looked to his political leaders for guidance. If they would give him peace and freedom, he would settle on the rich farm land of the unclaimed frontier and work out his own destiny without asking anything more. The modern American has 'bout-faced. He looks to the industrialists. They have the jobs. Give him one, and let him share in the prosperity of the day, and he will let the politicians do about as they like. Deprive him of one, and he will raise holy hob.

That, probably, is why we are known as a nation of conservatives. Industry and business have grown more important than politics. When one man's announcement that he has an abundance of jobs can draw 30,000 men to his door, it is evident that the early American set of values has been replaced by a new set.

We have committed ourselves to large-scale industrialism, and we shall stand or fall with it. Our Henry Fords have put us on a new path, and it is up to them to see to it that the path leads in the right direction. If the time ever comes when it does not—well, you might ask yourself what would have happened if those 30,000 jobless men had gathered around factory gates that were not open, but closed.

The Eavesdropper

MASSACHUSETTS has an ancient law, seldom invoked; one providing penalties for any person guilty of being a "common eavesdropper." A few days ago that law was hauled out, dusted off and put to work.

One Theodore Fortine was brought into court accused of eavesdropping. He is charged with listening at doors and windows of a Boston hotel for spicy details of conversation, and then repeating what he had heard to other guests. Apparently he succeeded in creating quite a furor before he was finally taken into custody. He pleaded guilty and is awaiting sentence in $500 bail.

Not all of New England's old-time statutes can be praised, but this one strikes us as a good law. We can think of all kinds of times and places when it might well be invoked.

"Crime Doesn't Pay"

IT IS extremely trite, and sometimes it isn't quite true, to say that crime doesn't pay; but every now and then something happens to indicate that the old saying is pretty generally valid.

In the New York courts the other day appeared one George C. Parker, for years tabbed as "the aristocrat of crookdom." He had been a confidence man for years. Twice he "sold" the Brooklyn bridge to unsuspecting strangers. He used to be known as one of the best dressed men in New York. For a long time he was a heavy spender and a gay liver.

But when he came into court he didn't look as if any of those things had been true. He was old, shabby and discouraged. He was arrested for cashing a worthless check for $150—a sum that would have been small change for him once; and since it was his fourth offense, he was sent to prison for life.

Crime doesn't pay—at least, not always.

Herbert Kaufman's Daily Editorial

THE TAPELINE OF BIOGRAPHY

THE confessions of St. Augustine and Jerry McAuley alike show how the worst of starts may change to the best of ends.

No man's career may be accurately estimated before death has closed his books for final audit.

Until then opinion must withhold decisive verdicts and grant reasonable benefit of doubt.

Philanthropy more than once has worn the mask of the miser, as witness the deceptive lives of Thomas Guy, Stephen Girard, Johns Hopkins and Russell Sage, the leading skinflints as well as the greatest benefactors of their respective times.

Lots of folk play the game that way, caring nothing for the grandstand's applause and waiting for the last inning to bunch their scores.

There's sound stuff left in plenty of flawed material.

And there are plenty of flaws hiding under popularity's polish and veneer. To which fact, various governors, bankers, Sunday school superintendents and other hypocrites taking morality cures in federal sanitariums, offer vivid testimony.

The law doesn't detect all double-crossers, but biography eventually discovers them. To forbid post-mortem tapelines upon sneaks, grafters and fore-flushers, would tend to pass maudlin miscalculation and tear-retouched portraits on to posterity.

And neither vultures in borrowed plumage nor asses in lions' skins are entitled to parade their disguises through history.

The price of place is criticism, which is nothing more than the verification of merit.

When we line the halls of fame with apocryphal monuments and portraiture; when we hide beneath lickspittle art and Pecksniffian memoirs the actual likenesses and accurate account of recreant, selfish lives, we simply encourage the false tribune in his opportunism and assure the Pharisee that his secret soul shall never be revealed.

The saying "De mortuis nil nisi bonum" (meaning, we shall speak only well of the departed) wasn't inspired by rogues and snides.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has perfected his invention, the Vicarion, so called because it permits people to live vicariously by showing them completely events out of the past, thus far outdistancing the efforts of Complete Illusions, Inc., the company which then controls all the improvements of the motion picture.

Radley first demonstrates his device to his sweetheart, Phyllis Norman; her father, mother and brother, John; John's sweetheart, Carol Gould, and Brainard's Aunt Relief. While he is showing them a dinner given for a movie actress who had since died, a man suffering from amnesia staggers in the studio, and though he is unable to tell who he is, he calls Phyllis by name. Brainard dubs him Van Winkle.

Brainard shows a scene of Mr. Norman's home being robbed, and then the police, who have been looking in on a similar projection, arrive with the criminal, Honer, but he escapes. Besides the large machine intended for public showing, Brainard invents a small "receiving set." While looking into one of them Carol faints.

A tremendous revulsion rose in her. Something was abnormal about this—something like a gigantic perversion! What happened to people who witnessed the real tragedies of life habitually? And the vices! Doctors and nurses? Did scientific interest keep them sane and humane? But doctors and nurses at worst saw merely results—not the things that caused them. Were not the causes contagious? Was not crime itself something like an infection? What sort of ancient pestilence or plague might spread through modern eyes that looked upon its real festering passions and its raw sores? Action? Well enough—if action were always heroic. But the world's action at best was not commonly heroic—and at worst, there were human gorillas—and cobras! Heroism itself saintless, lay less often in deeds than in something "The Vicarion" would never record. What were deeds but the mere outpicturing of those things the Vicarion would not get?

She could not think it through. Perhaps no brain could grasp now the far-reaching consequences of which her father had spoken. Did humanity itself always revolt from its worse debauches? But had humanity ever been offered such a temptation as this? Censors indeed! What authority could institute a censorship over a rush for life—life in the raw, unbleached, apparently without effort and without penalty—a rush for Life, 24 carats real!—that would eclipse any rush for gold the world had ever seen!

The very feebleness of her own thought to cope with the thing appalled her. Yet here was she, caught by her own impulse to snatch at the thing like a fruit that could be picked, fevered with anticipation of marvels to which she knew she was as blind as one who tries to see the sun!

On the floor above they entered a room that was similar in size to the studio below. Several persons were here. Excitement enough was in the air. A babel of conversation in the hoarse tones of men. Abruptly Mr. Norman tried to warn them back. But it was too late.

On the floor in the midst of the room lay a man—groveling there. He turned toward where Phyllis stood a face that seemed stricken with madness. He was moaning as if with pain. His hands were clutching meaninglessly. He covered and uncovered his eyes with them—and clutched again! And moaned!

"What is it?" asked Brainard sharply, with a ruthlessness that turned Phyllis cold to the heart.

"He's off his head, Mr. Brainard!" An officer in patrolman's uniform stepped forward. "He went to pieces—an' I don't blame him! You ought to told him what he was goin' to see!"

"Scared?" asked Brainard.

"Dippy! He saw himself in that there libery, an' he let a yowl out of him like to busted my ears. I nearly yelled myself! Say, what kind of a——"

"Why don't you pick him up?" asked Brainard.

"No place to put him."

"Well, are you satisfied he is the man who robbed us last night?"

"Eh? Well, yes! But how in the name o'——"

"Never mind that."

"But I don't see——"

"You don't have to. Take him away and shut him up. I'll see the chief."

Brainard turned to his guests.

"Come back this way," he said, and led the way past them and into the hall.

"But Radley, that poor chap was fairly crazed by what he had seen," said John as they followed.

"He'll get over it. But are you surprised?" Brainard laughed again slightly. "His sort is going to furnish some interesting experiments."

Escape!

He opened a door into a large room, lined with white like the studio below.

"Here is where I have my shows for the employes," he said, as if he had quite forgotten the man in the other room.

Ranks of chairs filled nearly all the floor space. Phyllis sank into one of them; she was weak and very ill.

"I don't show my people much of anything but nice little scenes," Radley was going on to the others. "As I told Aunt Relief, I carefully look over every scene before I exhibit it here."

"And you have to recondense it every time it escapes?"

"That's easy! Having its vibration index, it is simple and almost without cost to capture it again."

"But don't you have to have an enormous power plant?"

"No. We discovered long ago that it isn't force that accomplishes things—it's finding the key."

Phyllis listened in a half comprehending daze. How could they take it so? Her mother!

"Are you going to show us something here?" asked Carol, eager.

"I have some new ones here that I will show you if I were sure just what they are," answered Brainard, grinning at her.

"Then you still have a conscience, have you, Radley?" queried his aunt.

"Wait," said Brainard. He stepped to the rear wall and opened a cupboard there, using keys. "Here is one I have just got in; I'll take a look at the beginning of it, and if it's all right I'll throw it out where you can see it."

He slipped a bomb into a niche similar to the one in his studio. From the white wall at his side hung a long, bag-like hood, attached. He lifted it and slipped it over his head—a receiving head set! His hand reached out for a switch beside him.

But at the instant a thundering knock came at the door of the room. Phyllis' heart leaped as if the sound portended immediate catastrophe. Brainard whipped the hood from his head and his face was dark with anger.

"Who's there?" he shouted.

"Say—Mr. Brainard!" came a hoarse voice from outside. "This here guy Honer, he's jumped out of the twelfth floor window! He jumped—see? He——"

Brainard rushed to the door and flung it open. A confusion of voices rose outside. Phyllis could distinguish no more. She could distinguish nothing, even within her own brain, where thought snarled like threads gone wrong in a loom.

She turned to look at the others of her little party. Her eyes fell upon Carol. The younger girl was standing beside the switchboard which Brainard had just left. As Phyllis looked at her she was just reaching out to lift the hood-like receiver that hung upon the wall. Apathetically Phyllis watched her, only marveling that the girl's curiosity could ignore everything but a means of satisfying itself.

Carol tossed her little hat aside and slipped the hood over her head as Radley had done. Her hand groped out toward the switchboard; she found a lever and moved it. The lights in the big projection room rose from moderate illumination to a blaze. The girl's hand moved to another switch, as all the others turned to look at her. She swung it. Through the fabric of the hood Phyllis saw a blood-red flare of light within. Then it whitened and disappeared. Carol stood leaning against the wall, an easy, indolent little figure, full of unconscious grace. A lovely little human thing she was! Out of the very chaos of Phyllis' heart welled up a yearning affection for the girl, waking now as such emotion wakes unbidden at the unconscious gestures of a child.

But suddenly, under her caressing eyes, the girl's slender figure stiffened as if with the shock of an electric current. Her body swung back away from the wall. Her hands went up in terrified protest, quivered, grew rigid! Then the hood slipped from her head and fell softly to hang against the wall!

There was not a sound in the room. Carol turned slowly. Her young face was bleached to the hue of plaster. In the blaze of light her young eyes looked glazed, seared! She turned them to and fro, sightless. Her young lips were drawn back across her teeth—dry, like a hag's! She put out her hand against the wall—then slipped softly down, as a silken gown might fall from a form—and lay as shapeless, still!

In the window of what was now his private office on the eleventh floor of the Bonmar Apartment building, Radley Brainard stood looking down upon the newly boulevarded street of Santa Monica. In the afternoon sunlight of June the heaving crowd that filled the pavements from wall to wall looked like a gigantic swarm of varicolored crawling bees. As far as the eye could see up the avenue, swarm upon swarm of them; thinning here a little and there a little, centering as if upon various hives! The sound of their humming came up to him, the drone of human voices, forever like the purr of a vast boiler's imprisoned energy—the sibilance of restless human feet, forever like the whisper of restless steam!

High above their heads, almost opposite his own, Brainard's own index of the phenomenon hung in gigantic signs:

TODAY
In All Theaters
THE VICARION

There they were! The flood was started! Here was the first gush of the rising tide! In six little weeks since his first private showing to the invited few the whisper of his achievement had spread like a leaven through his immediate world. He had offered them no flaunting announcements, he had shouted no promises; he had merely set time and place for them to have what he had to give them.

"The world knows what it wants!" he was whispering to himself over and over again as he stood with his forehead against the window glass like a boy staring in at a showcase where lies the toy of his dreams.

But a fever flowed in his blood. He had fired a bunch of grass and learned that the prairie would burn!

Triumph was already his to taste. Triumph. The whole race was of the same inflammable stuff. The building behind and below him, all the space in which he had now bought from lessees and owners rather than disturb for a moment his established quarters, was filled with men and women who were either working for him or who had purchased the privilege of sitting in his projection rooms for what they called his first runs. Patrons and employes alike were his tools. Alike they flocked to him—men and women who would see and handle and experience! The police guarded his doors!

Power! He had tried to discount it in anticipation. But no man discounts in advance the fire of the mightiest of stimulants in his blood. He knew he was drunk with the sense of achievement, of monopoly, of holding suddenly in his hand the world's leash—a leash such as no man had ever held before! What were mere military conquerors to him who held humanity by the cords of its desires?

What was the command of mere marching hosts to the command of the passions of peoples—peoples of every language and every clime! What were guns, gases, liquid fire—liquid death!—to Liquid Life—this liquid life he could give to their lips or withhold at will!

Down there in the street they were already striving to reach the cup—his cup. And he had yet offered them a mere diluted drink! What would be the flame of appetite as knowledge of the flavor spread? The world also would presently be drunk! And mad with a craving thirst that would send it to him with its treasures to buy more, and more! And he, standing here immune, because of this other, mightier thing, distilled for him alone!

Mortimer and Ballard

The door of his room opened behind him and the Van Winkle came to his side.

"Are you expecting Mortimer and Ballard, of Complete Illusions? Your secretary said——" he began.

Brainard turned on him. "Yes; I'm expecting them! Of course I'm expecting them!" He whirled and pointed down to the street below. "Why wouldn't I expect them?"

"Well, they just phoned—— Say, I should think you might be expecting them!" The man of mystery, whose own little affair, which he now called his reincarnation, had paled to insignificance in the sweep of greater things, stared down at the throng surging before the little city's long theater front. "Well, say!" he exclaimed softly.

No phase from any living lips would have been adequate to the demand of Radley Brainard's emotions at that moment; but this man might have been looking at some interesting phase of the habits of flies on the window screen! Brainard had kept the fellow here originally to study into his case. But the rush of events had made every one lose sight of his case. He had seemed, too, more than willing to drop into an inconspicuous place in the growing organization. But brainard had been vaguely aware sometimes that he did not react nominally to stimuli—that he seemed to become less and less alive to the tremendous import of affairs around him as that import became more obvious to normal people. That was consistent enough with the idea that his mind was partly clouded. But the thing contained a special form of irritation for the man on whom were now centering all eyes in wonder and appeal. Van Wikle seemed neither much to wonder, nor to appeal. His was ever a calmer and more calm observation, a cooler and more cool cynicism, less and less surprised—more and more galling! A strange manifestation, surely, both the irritation and its cause!

"I suppose you know," said Brainard, "that Complete Illusions' so-called attractions are being shelved generally in favor of Liquid Events."

"Of course I know it," returned Van Winkle.

"And that over there on my desk is a sheaf of radiograms an inch thick offering me theaters in every city of importance in America?"

"Certainly."

"Well, why shouldn't Complete Illusions come to see me?"

Van Winkle pressed closer to the window and gazed down at the crowd. "What are they seeing today?" he asked. "Assassinations or mermaids? Amazon voodoo—or fire-damp explosions?"

"You know what they are seeing," said Brainard surprised at his own annoyance. "Where have you been?"

"Busy with my own job, figuring cross-dates on Charles the Second! By the way, did you know that Neil Gwyn had a namesake who was a king of the fairies among——"

"Look here, Van, are you trying to be offensive? I'm not interested in——"

"Mr. Brainard! Offensive? Certainly not. Certainly not. Let me see—oh, yes, my hardest job I haven't mentioned—keeping my own head. You don't mind if I try to keep my head?"

"I don't care what you do with your head!" Brainard found relief in a laugh. Rip Van Winkle was proving an ingenious and useful helper in the "location department," as the growing jargon of the new craft had it.

"How is Phyllis?" asked Van Winkle abruptly.

Phyllis and Carol

Again Brainard was irritated. The man persisted in this familiarity in which he had been at first indulged because of his misfortune. But his question irked Brainard for a more positive reason now. Phyllis was recovering from her long illness; everybody knew that. But there were those, Van Winkle among them, who seemed to feel that this should be his, Brainard's, chief concern. He was under no obligation to explain to them—but Phyllis was not his chief concern. She had turned against him away back when she had first learned of what he was doing—jealous of his great interest as he had told her, critical, censorious. He had lost his feeling that she must share with him his successes and triumphs. What man would not lose his desire for sympathy from a woman who withheld it ignorantly, selfishly, perversely, at a moment of all moments in his life when he really wanted it most? A woman who presumed to throw narrow little moral traitlac-

Bandit Kills Shoe Dealer in Holdup

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10. (US)—While scores of onlookers in the business district milled in a panic, a lone bandit, who wanted only a pair of shoes for loot, calmly stood and pumped four bullets into the body of Store Manager Abraham Sandelam, killing him.

Brandishing his smoking pistol, the bandit then fled. A pedestrian the thief tried to shoot was saved by the weapon jamming. Several blocks away he was captured by R. Jamieson, who made a flying tackle. The bandit identified himself to police as Alphonse Reilly, 21, of St. Louis.

"I just wanted some shoes," Reilly told police.

Kitchen—Dining Room—Then Court

CHICAGO, Jan. 10. (US)—Family feuds start in the kitchen, or bathroom, come to a head in the dining room and—end in the divorce courts.

This developed in an address today on "family ethics" by Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, president of the Woman's City club.

"Life in the kitchen will either make or break the home," Mrs. Langworthy said, "while the dining room, which should be the happiest of all the rooms, is often the clearing house for all accumulated grievances and the 'no man's land' of the home."

WILKINS ENDS POLE SCOUTING

Explorers to Return Home Soon as Possible

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS
Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition

(Copyright, 1929, by The Record News and Universal Service, Inc.)

DECEPTION ISLAND, ANTarctica, Jan. 10. (Via Whaler Hektoria and KUP-San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station).—Our present exploration trip is ended.

Tomorrow we will look for a safe place to store our machines and equipment and investigate the possibilities of a speedy return to civilization.

This is the decision we have reached following another flight over the great white south today. We left Deception today in sunshine and under most favorable conditions, with Joe Crossan piloting the Lockheed plane Los Angeles, which is now on pontoons.

Pictures Taken

We flew about 250 miles and looked over some of the country recently discovered. We tried to locate a more southerly base accessible by boat, and where we will likely have more favorable conditions than at Deception. We flew in the early part of the flight at an altitude 2,000 feet below the level of the mountain peaks and took some remarkable still and motion pictures. Further south clouds obscured all land from sea level up to 4,000 feet, leaving the mountain peaks in sunshine and looking as though they were idly floating on a great gray feather bed.

From the plane the cloud surface looked most inviting and almost solid enough to land on, yet we knew that if our engine failed we would hurtle through the billowy masses to jagged peaks and yawning crevices beneath. Yet our Lockheed plane with its Wright whirlwind engine continued without a falter.

Further south the cloud belt broke and we saw once again the Graham land plateau, the sharply indented coast line and the gaping glaciers.

Efforts Postponed

Soon after we passed the cloud belt and on account of our restricted load we had to turn and head for home, having reluctantly come to the conclusion that because of the unusual meteorological conditions during the early part of the season and the fact that our discoveries show that Graham land is a group of islands, not part of the antarctic continent and not offering, as we thought it would, a connected line in case of engine failure, to postpone further efforts until next season.

We can then hope to carry our base to the continent itself, and start from there on a flight along the still undiscovered coast line from where our discoveries ended this year for a further 1,800 miles to the Ross sea barrier.

Back over the clouds we came, circled Deception harbor and landed among the myriads of birds that always present a great hazard to flying from this place. Our friends on board the Hektoria were much relieved at our return, for a headwind had come up and we were absent much longer than expected.

Tomorrow the hunt for a safe place to moor our machines and other equipment and then the preliminary work that will permit a speedy return home.

America Proves Ability to Operate Ships on Atlantic

PARIS, Jan. 10. (US)—Conclusive evidence of American ability to operate the best passenger ships successfully in fiercest competition with the best Europe can offer in the rich north Atlantic field, was seen today in the reports of the United States lines showing that the Leviathan and others of the fleet did a record business in 1928.

Preliminary figures assembled at the principal Paris office of the line from ports of England and Germany as well as Cherbourg, reveal that more travelers used the United States ships last year than ever before in their history.

This remarkable record was achieved in spite of the fact that the giant Leviathan was laid up for weeks for overhauling, while the President Roosevelt and President Harding were used considerably in the Mediterranean and the America entered the service only in the spring.

If the United States lines had been in a position to operate a larger fleet comparable to those of some of their rivals, the record would have been better.

The final official figures for Cherbourg showed that the United States lines handled one-sixth of the passenger traffic for 1928.

How Weak Nervous Women Grow Stronger

Feel Better, Look Younger and Have Steadier Nerves

If you only knew—you rundown anemic women—who are dragging yourself around on your "nerve"—what a wonderful increase in strength and health Tanlac will give you, you wouldn't hesitate a moment about going to your druggist and getting a big bottle of this splendid medicine.

Mrs. A. M. Owens, of 1716 Taylor St. Rt. 3, Box 34, Little Rock, Ark., says "I was so weak I couldn't walk across the floor. I had spent a fortune trying to get well and would be in my grave if it weren't for Tanlac. Now I eat and sleep fine and have gained 22 lbs."

Tanlac is as free from harmful drugs as the water you drink—only Nature's own medicinal tonic herbs. Druggists know this and for the past 10 years have recommended it to men and women who need a quick "pick up" that will put them on their feet and give them a new interest in life.

So confident are the makers of Tanlac that if you are not helped by it, you get your money back on request.

Youths' 'League of Death' Results In 11 Suicides Before Parents End Move

Young Russians of Both Sexes Carry Out Vows of Self Destruction to Puzzle Older Folks

By EUGENE LYONS

MOSCOW, Jan. 10. (UP)—A fantastic fraternity of self-destruction—"The League of Death"—which caused 11 young communists to take their own lives in a flaming revival of the pessimism of Slav literature is reported at the capital from the distant town of Liesva, in the Urals. Both boys and girls were its victims.

The most active members of the Liesva branch of the communist youth committed suicide in the organized league before authorities realized that the deaths were planned and carried out on schedule, according to results of an investigation now published by the Moscow "Communist Youth Pravda."

Yessenin Was Example

The example of Sergei Yessenin, the dashing young Russian poet and husband of the late Isadora Duncan, who killed himself last year, apparently stirred the young boys and girls of the little town. Out of his grave he seemed to have reached into the town, beckoning impressionable young Russians to share his doom. Yessenin, it will be recalled, wrote a dramatic farewell note in his own blood before hanging himself.

The victims of the "league of death" were accustomed to meeting for pessimistic discussions of life and poetry which glorified death.

The first of the suicides to puzzle the town was that of Ivan Bresgin, one of the best known and most popular young men in the communist circles of Liesva. His body was found hanging from a rafter in his home, a note of farewell to his comrades asking that they give him a good funeral. He was buried with magnificent ceremony.

Shortly after—late last summer—the secretary of the local organization at Liesva received a letter from Faina Nevolskikh, announcing that the girl was about to die and suggesting that she be dressed prettily and adorned with flowers at her funeral. Her body was found in the forest a few days later.

More Bodies Found

Within two weeks the town was startled by the discovery of two more bodies in the forest, Lisa Tumina and Tonia Bakilina, the victims, left notes explaining that they shot themselves because "life isn't worth living." They left explicit directions for their burial, requesting pink dresses and pink coffins. Their wishes were respected.

The suicide wave continued until 11 were dead. Last month the investigation was started after parents demanded that authorities do something. Many of the citizens of the town had heard talk of the "league of death," but it was not until the results of the present investigation were revealed that its existence was confirmed.

A number of new officers will be elected and plans for the coming year will be discussed.

Mexico Undecided On Old Differences

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 10. (US)—The Mexican government has not yet made up its mind whether the exchange of new year greeting telegrams between Mexico and Nicaragua constitutes recognition by Mexico of the Nicaraguan government. Senor Genaro Estrada, sub-secretary in charge of foreign relations, today stated that neither the government nor his office has decided the question, but may do so within 10 days.

Mexico severed relations with Nicaragua to show disapproval of United States intervention when President Diaz took office with the support of United States marines.

PEACE DEBATE STOPS SENATE

Filibuster Looms in Opposition to Treaty

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. (UP)—Some symptoms of an incipient filibuster against the Kellogg anti-war treaty were apparent in the senate today where the entire legislative program of congress has been bottled up for a week during the treaty debate.

Some of the reservationists opposing ratification of the treaty offered to negotiate with Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee on a time to vote within the next few days but others refused and prepared for a last ditch fight.

The reservationists who offered to surrender were led to Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, while the bitter-enders remained behind the banner of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, a skilled parliamentarian who knows how to conduct a filibuster without open warfare.

Developments tumbled over themselves in the haste in which they were produced in the senate committees while the treaty fight was monopolizing the floor.

Testimony made public by the forged documents investigating committee contained a charge that George Barr Baker public relations adviser of President-elect Hoover, had been forced by the state department to give up forged documents brought into this country from Mexico.

A new spurious paper also was produced charging Ivy Lee, international promoter of New York, with having received instruction from the Soviet government.

Attorney General Sargent and Chairman Work of the Republican national committee appeared before the senate Indian affairs committee and testified they acted only in the interest of justice in holding up the prosecution of Indian Commissioner Burke. The prosecution may yet be authorized.

Opposition developed in the judiciary committee to the compromise resolution authorizing President-elect Hoover to conduct an impartial survey of prohibition after his inauguration.

Action on the resolution was postponed because of this opposition.

BURGLARS CAUGHT

They were arrested and brought here. All the clothing in the tailor shop and all the barber tools had been taken but all were recovered.

STRIBLING-SHARKEY FIGHT HINGES ON GARDEN'S OBLIGATIONS

CONFAB TODAY DECIDES ISSUE

Bout May Be Staged Along Rickard's Plans

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (AP)—The proposed Sharkey-Stribling heavyweight boxing match for Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 27, will be held "if there is a legal obligation on the Madison Square Garden corporation." This statement was made by William F. Carey, first vice president and treasurer of the Madison Square Garden corporation, late today.

Carey's statement followed an announcement by Jack Dempsey in which he expressed willingness to assist "should the Madison Square people decide to stage the Sharkey-Stribling boxing match at Miami Beach."

The Garden officials' statement said that if it should be found no legal obligation existed on the corporation an effort would be made to effect "a business-like arrangement" with the boxers and attempt to stage the bout anyway.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Madison Square Garden corporation will be held tomorrow at which time every one who has had anything to do with all documents concerned will attend in an effort to see to what extent the corporation is obligated by negotiations conducted by the late Tex Rickard, president.

DEMPSEY UNDECIDED ON PLANS FOR FUTURE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (AP)—Jack Dempsey has not decided yet whether he will fight again, as he had agreed to do for Tex Rickard he announced today. His plans for aiding the promotion of the Stribling-Sharkey fight at Miami Beach, Feb. 27, also are unsettled as a result of a possible shift in this event.

Dempsey said his greatest desire was to assist Mrs. Rickard and her baby insofar as their interests in the Miami Beach bout are concerned. If the Madison Square Garden corporation decides to go ahead with the bout, the former champion said he would be glad to assist.

This was the first definite intimation that in spite of previous pronouncements to the contrary and in spite of the advanced stage of Rickard's plans the garden management may decide not to promote the Florida match. Col. John S. Hammond, acting general manager, said last Monday the bout would be held as scheduled.

Dempsey was vague as to his future fighting activities if any, and indicated all the plans he had discussed with Rickard were in the air.

IOWA PARK, Jan. 10.—Wichita Falls high school scored a basketball victory over the Iowa Park Hawks here tonight. The score was 25 to 14.

It was an interesting game and the Coyotes were forced to play their best basket ball to win. The score was tied on two occasions.

Malone and Beaty, ace goal shooters of the Pack, were closely guarded and accounted for only five points between them, two of these field shots by the big blonde.

Capt. Anderson, in addition to playing his usual stellar floor game, was the leading scorer of the contest with 12 points, including five goals from play. Iowa Park was held to two field goals.

Cheeves, also a guard, led the Hawks' individual scoring with six.

Coaches McCallum and Morris brought the Pack second team here for a game with the reserves but it was not played. Lineup:

Hall's foe will be Sam Riley, the Altus, Okla., sharpshooter and they will meet in the 10-round feature of an all-star boxing show staged by Alec Ross at 821 Indiana avenue.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

NO LITTLE of the phenomenal success of J. Alvin Gardner in the acquisition, development and sale of young ball players is that he doesn't overlook opportunity to grab promising kids. Bush leaguer, collegian or independent, they all are assured a trial with the Spudders—if, of course, they are sufficiently well recommended.

The boss of the Wichita Falls entry in J. Doak Roberts' loop added a young battery to the Spudder personnel yesterday. The new players signed are Eull Moore, the pitcher, and Leo Keubler, the catcher. Moore is the Indain hurler who made an impressive showing last summer in the City league here. He was signed by Secretar, Guy Airey, who made the trip to Moore's home near Tishomingo, Okla., to secure the hurler's signature to a contract entrusting his baseball future to the Spudders.

Kuehler was signed by Gardner in the Spudder offices. The catcher is touted as a young man who knows what it's all about back of the leg, and can hit and run bases, etc., to a satisfactory degree.

HERE'S A BIT of news that will be received with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow by the infielders who play at Athletic park. The infield is being improved. Black dirt has been dumped around the bare spot between the in and outfields. This has been done with the design of making the fielding of ground balls more secure, with the memory of several balls that took erratic hops last year.

But with the space on the base lines made firm now, what will the besemen and shortstops have as an alibi when they spill a grounder?

Fertilizer has been spread over the grass of the infield and when the athletes start spring work around March 1 they will find an infield that will make the fielding of ground balls less of a hazard than formerly.

STARS IN RICH GOLF TOURNEY

$10,000 Los Angeles Open Starts Today

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Jan. 10 (AP)—Fairways soldiers, 130, gathered by this major golfing battle, stacked irons today, resting until the start tomorrow of the three-day drive of the $10,000 Los Angeles open. A few, however, put finishing touches to their games.

Tomorrow morning, when the first group marches to the first tee will mark the opening of a 72-hole struggle perhaps more spectacular than any of the three Los Angeles major events of the past.

Among those who will put the "big money" chase under way are Walter Hagen, British open champion; Leo Diegel, national professional king; MacDonald Smith, who will defend the Los Angeles open title, and Horton Smith, youthful pretender to the pro throne.

The list is not complete without mention of Tommy Armour, Washington, D. C., former national open king; Cyril Walker of Detroit, also ex-open titleholder; Al Espinosa, Chicagoan who placed in the money in all western tournaments leading up to the $10,000 open.

The amateurs have notable representatives. George Von Elm, Detroit, former national amateur champion, and H. Chandler Egan of Medford, Ore., will lead that contingent.

INDIANS' CAGE PROGRAM IS SET

Tribe to Open Conference Season Jan. 25 and 26

Wichita Falls Junior college will open its conference basket ball season Jan. 25 and 26, with the North Texas Aggies here. The conference games for the Indians were announced yesterday by Coach E. A. Baggett, following a meeting of officials of the circuit.

Starting Jan. 30, the Indians will play four games on foreign courts. These include contests at Gainesville, Jan. 30; at Paris, Jan. 31; at Arlington, Feb. 1 and 2, with the North Texas Aggies.

Four games not in the conference will be played with the Cameron Aggies of Lawton, Okla., two here, Feb. 7 and 8, and a pair on the Sooners' court, Feb. 15 and 16.

These contests, with a series to be played with John Tarleton Aggies and the Commercial league games will give the Tribe plenty of competition.

Fuchs Assailed By Councillor

Boston City Father Denies Brave Head's Charges

BOSTON, Jan. 10. (UP)—Councillor William G. Lynch, accused by President Emil Fuchs of the Boston Braves of seeking a $65,000 bribe for himself and 12 councillors for the passage of the Sunday sports bill through the council, today vehemently denied the truth of Fuchs' allegations.

Lynch, testifying before the finance committee's investigation into the bribe charges, described the Braves' president as "a racketeer, a blackmailer and a blackjacker" in answer to a query as to why Fuchs had made the charge.

Lynch said he had discovered some "startling information which would be revealed at a later date."

In recounting the story of his meeting with President Fuchs in a hotel suite on Nov. 23 last, Lynch denied practically every detail of the meeting as described by the Braves' president on the witness stand.

Lynch said that Fuchs told him he had discovered that he (Lynch) headed a bloc in the city council opposing the passage of the bill and that he "would ruin his business" if he continued his opposition.

Tex Had Accident in Big Wichita, Quit Cowpunching to Be Showman

Venture Failed and He Returned to Henrietta and Was City Marshall—Without Fear or Favor

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Although Tex Rickard wandered all over the continents of North and South America and never had an established home until he came to New York to take over the old garden, he always saw to it that his mother was well taken care of. Even when the breaks were going against him and dollars were scarce he always managed to provide for her.

She now lives in Seattle in a cozy home that was purchased for her by "my boy George." She never learned to call him Tex.

Mrs. Rickard never needed a second invitation to talk about her George, and she would always preface her remarks by saying:

"George was always a good boy."

In the first installment of this biography I said it was doubtful whether any of Tex Rickard's thousands of friends really knew him—whether anybody had ever fathomed the man behind that inscrutable poker face with the half-smoked cigar stuck in the corner of the mouth.

If anybody in this world ever knew the man it was probably his mother, with whom he kept in contact throughout his wanderings and regardless of the state of his fortunes. And his fortunes were often at a precariously low ebb.

Mrs. Rickard would sit down at any time and give you a biographical sketch of her George's life, in which there would be more intimate details and local color than could be provided by all his friends combined.

Mrs. Rickard Proud of Tex

When the mother talked of her George it was with the light of idolatry in her eyes. And yet she never stood in awe of him as many of his friends did. She didn't mind reprimanding him, for instance, when he'd flick cigar ashes on the new parlor rug.

In yesterday's installment we gave you Mrs. Rickard's description of the first fight that Tex ever had. It was his battle with Rex Woodruff, the town bully who had previously beaten up Tex's little brother, Robert. What Tex did to Rex was plenty. Tex was 11 years old at the time and was cowpunching on a ranch near Henrietta, Texas, at a salary of $10 a month and board.

Mrs. Rickard's story of those early years, while sometimes sketchy and disconnected, is filled with intimate anecdotes. In telling of his cowboy days she said:

"George loved the life of the range. He loved the horses and the cattle and the carefree existence but I always worried about him. I seemed to have a premonition that some harm would come to him. At that time in Texas the boys got out their six shooters on little or no provocation, and I knew that George had a quick temper.

"One time when George and a lot of other cowboys were driving a great herd of cattle across the Texas plains he had an accident that almost cost him his life. They were fording the Big Wichita when a steer charged into George's horse. George was thrown into the river and several steers tramped on him before another cowboy threw him a rope and pulled him out of the stream more dead than alive.

Buys a Merry-Go-Round

"When he was brought home to me I did him that he would have to quit the cowpunching business and do something else. He agreed that there was no future in it and told me he would like to get into the show business. I don't know where he got the idea from because there had never been a showman in our family.

"In some newspaper he read of a carnival that was selling out at Tonawanda, N. Y. Among the effects listed for sale was a merry-go-round. George took all his savings out of the bank and went to Tonawanda and bought that merry-go-round. I never could find out just what happened, but the merry-go-round venture didn't pan out. I think it was his idea to bring the machine back to Henrietta, but he never did. After operating it for about a month somewhere in upper New York state he sold it and returned to Henrietta.

"Then he became town marshal of Henrietta, and I remember people saying that George, like all the other town marshals that had held office before him, would only arrest poor cowpunchers for getting drunk and would let the rich men of the place do anything they wanted. He showed them that they were wrong the very first chance he got.

"Two of the richest cattlemen in that part of Texas got drunk one day and started riding their horses up and down the sidewalks and firing off their guns. George arrested them both and put them in jail and kept them there until they sobered up. And he did it without using his own gun.

"Then there was a saloon keeper in Henrietta who announced to the public that if George ever put foot in his saloon he would shoot him down. George promptly insured his life for $5,000 in my favor and walked into that man's saloon. Before he left George and the saloon keeper were buying each other drinks.

Married Leona Bittick

"When George was 24 he fell in love with Leona Bittick, the doctor's daughter, and they were married in 1894. A year later she died. She had a baby and it died, too. That hit George hard and he said he wanted to get away from Henrietta. It was then that he started for the gold fields of Alaska."

Tex's departure for Alaska seems to have marked the breaking up of the Rickard family. One by one his sisters and brothers died. Minnie, his sister, was the last to go. His mother married again and had two sons by the second marriage.

Mrs. Rickard, now Mrs. Adams, finally settled in Seattle, where Tex gave her money to buy a house. She said she went there because she wanted to be near George. She had heard that he had become a saloon keeper and that worried her. She wrote him letters entreating him to get into some other line of business.

The mother tells of Tex returning from the Alaskan gold rush and bringing with him a great Newfoundland dog. The animal had been the leader of the team that had dragged him across the Alaskan snows. He had sold all the others, but for the big Newfoundland he had such an affection that he couldn't bear to part with it. He brought the dog back to Seattle and presented it to his mother, who kept it for years.

Treats Mother Like Queen

After Tex had settled in the East he frequently had his mother come on to visit him. I can remember how he used to look forward to these periodical visits. He planned and prepared for them the way he would for a big show. He used to have everybody in the old garden dancing attendance on the old lady. When she was in New York she was treated like a queen.

"The long trip from Seattle is hard on me," she once said, "but I have to see George ever so often. I have to keep an eye on him, you know, just to see what he is doing. I don't want him to get into mischief. And then I like to meet his friends and listen to all the nice things they have to say about him."

Tex Rickard's last Christmas on earth was somewhat saddened because his mother was physically unable to make the long trip from Seattle.

He wanted her to see little Maxine.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Peristalsis

Question—John Smith asks: "Will you kindly explain to me what peristalsis is?"

Answer—Peristalsis is a peculiar contractile expulsive muscular movement of any hollow organ of the body. You probably refer to this action of the intestines. Both the small and large intestine are provided with longitudinal and circular muscular fibers. These contract alternately and force along the fecal matter, pushing it toward the rectum, except in some peculiar cases when this action is reversed.

Saccharin Harmful

Question—Rose E. writes: "Some time ago you stated in your column that the continued use of saccharin in food in place of sugar has a harmful effect. Will you kindly state in just what way it is harmful?"

Answer—Saccharin is a coal tar derivative, intensely sweet—300 to 500 times as sweet as sugar, depending on its purity, being sometimes adulterated with bicarbonate of soda. Most states and countries have pure food laws to prohibit its use in foods. Mathews and McGurgan report that saccharin retards the oxidation in the blood and muscles and retards the digestive juices, especially the salivary glands and pancreas, causing digestive disorders. The following are the opinions of Sajous and Culbreth, respectively: "It (saccharin) is believed a general protoplasmic poison in that it inhibits nearly all of the fermentive processes of the body, and interferes with, and diminishes general bodily metabolism." "Saccharin retards action of digestive ferments, hence should be used with caution where digestion is impaired."

Loose Joints

Question: H. J. L. writes: "Kindly tell me why the bones in my arms, also my ankles seem to go right out of their sockets when I walk or when I throw my arms out quickly. My arms and legs seem to get out of joint, which is very painful. It doesn't last very long, only often."

Answer: Where the looseness of the joints is noticed all over the body it is a sign of mineral starvation. You need more foods containing the bone-building materials. These are found in the non-starchy vegetables and also in the whole grains.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By EDMUND LOWE

I spent five years in California and Edmund Lowe is the only native son I ever met. He studied law in Los Angeles, but, after practicing that profession a few months — clientless — he turned out the legal light and stepped in front of the spotlight, and for the last 10 years he's been emoting all over the silver sheet.

EDMUND LOWE

"I vote for the gag," he told me, about Parson Jackson, who faced his congregation for the morning worship. When his lengthy sermon was finished he called out: 'Deacon White, will ye-all lead us in prayer?'

"There was no answer?"

"'Deacon White,' this time a little louder, 'will yo-all please lead?'

"Still no response. Evidently the deacon was slumbering. Parson Jackson made a third appeal, raising his voice to a high pitch that succeeded in arousing the drowsy member. 'Deacon White! Will yo-all lead?'

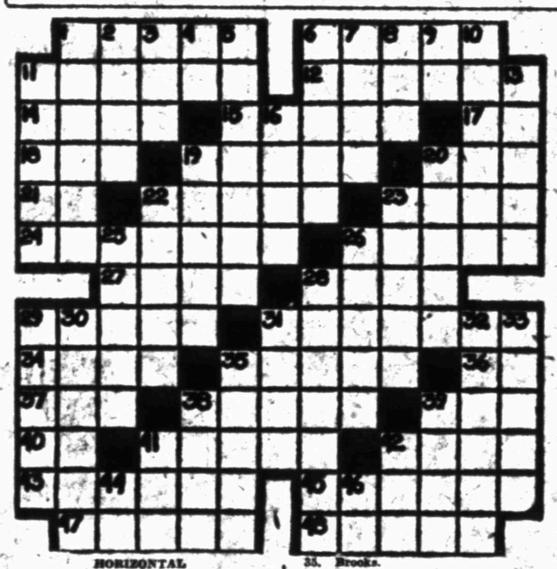

"The deacon, in bewilderment rubbed his heavy eyes and blurted: 'Lead yo' self, parson, I jest delt!'"

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (AP)—Early declines under selling promoted by an unfavorable view of the cotton cloth statistics and relatively easy Liverpool cables were followed by rallies in the cotton market here today. Rumors of larger private domestic consumption figures for December than recently discussed and talk of a firmer technical position seemed to encourage covering and trade buying. March sold up from 19.85 to 20.15, or 11 points net, but lost part of the gain under realizing and closed at 20.02, or 2 points net lower. The general market closed steady net 7 points higher to 6 points lower.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 to 7 points in response to disappointing cables. Prices eased off under selling, accompanied by bearish comment on the standard cloth statistics showing sales for the month of December amounting to 80.7 per cent of production, with an increase of .8 of one per cent in stocks on hands for the month and a decrease of 9.8 per cent in unfilled orders. Liquidation appeared to be coupled with southern selling and the market gradually worked off to 19.78 for January and 19.52 for July contracts, or 15 to 20 points net lower.

January sold up to 20.08 and July to 19.78, making net advances of about 5 to 12 points on the active position. Demand tapered off above the 20 cent level and fluctuations became irregular, with prices easing off several points from the best under realizing. The difference between old and new October contracts, which had widened out yesterday, narrowed today, with the old October 17 points over the newt at the close, compared with 25 points at the close of Wednesday.

Private cables said that advances on trade calling and covering in Liverpool had been checked by London and Bombay selling. Port receipts 23,102. U. S. port stocks, 2,260,206. Exports today, 57,920, making 5,154,415 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10. (AP)—The cotton market started easy today on bearish textile statistics, but strengthened later in the session when shorts covered rather freely on reports of a better spot demand. March contracts which sold down to 19.20, rallied to 19.49, but just before the close there was a flurry of selling, probably realizing, and the delivery closed at 19.40, a gain of 3 points for the day. The general market closed steady at net advances of 2 to 4 points.

The opening was easy, due to the bearish statement of the Association of Textile Merchants of New York, although one item in the report showed a substantial increase in the total unfilled orders at the end of December and this served to off-set in some measure the influence exerted by the report. First trades showed losses of 7 points and prices continued to ease off in early trading until January sold at 19.15 and March 19.20, or 16 to 17 points under the previous close.

At this juncture considerable covering came into the market, probably induced by the reports of a better spot demand at a higher basis. The demand kept prices on the upgrade for the remainder of the morning and practically the entire afternoon session. January traded up to 19.40 and March 19.49, or practically $1.50 a bale above the day's lows.

The rally was not fully maintained, however, and in final trading January eased off and closed at 19.33, March 19.40 and May 19.43, or 2 to 4 points net up.

Stocks Do Further Recovery But Steel and General Motors Are Quiet

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 10. (US)—Further recovery was scored in the stock market today although the close was highly irregular. Maintenance of call money at 6 per cent helped sentiment and overcame fears of a rediscount rate advance which failed to materialize.

The outstanding news development of the day was the steel tonnage report showing an increase in orders of over 303,000 tons, far exceeding the most optimistic expectation. Steel common and General Motors however, failed to participate in the bullishness as they did on Wednesday. Minus these leaders, other issues assumed greater prominence, but it was evident that considerable profit-taking was going on.

Loans Decrease

Decrease of $17,000,000 in brokers' loans fell far below forecasts, but the disappointment should be more than offset by the weekly reserve statements which disclosed a drop of $274,000,000 in rediscounts.

The rediscounts are more vital in the consideration of the reserve directors, for they represent the extent to which member banks are dependent upon the reserve system. Continuance of this tendency in rediscounts will remove all danger of a rediscount rate raise. Although $30,000,000 additional gold was "earmarked," most of it has been made up by imports. The banking situation presents the best picture in a long time.

Tobacco and Rubber shares were among the strongest groups. The former, of course, have always been among the best-liked stocks while the rubber industry has regained its profit-making stride, with indications that 1929 will prove the best for the trade in several years. Copper stocks held firm without any unusual changes in quotations. Union Carbide spurted several points on statement here of a proposed splitup and increase in dividends. Kansas City Southern was a feature of the rails rising four points on buying attributed to anticipation of an "important announcement."

Texas Gulf Higher

Texas Gulf Sulphur was more active and higher. This company is understood to be arranging with the Gulf Oil Corporation the payment of a sum, said to be between $35,000,000 and $50,000,000 cash, for full ownership of the famous Boling Sulphur Dome deposits. Gulf Oil now receives a royalty on the sulphur production from the dome and Texas Gulf Sulphur is understood to desire complete ownership and doing away with the royalty. Gulf Oil had a sharp advance. This company is controlled by the Mellons and it is probable that if the proposed deal goes through its stockholders will be awarded a handsome bonus.

Without attracting much attention, Allied Chemical rose to a new high on revived rumors of its long expected capital readjustment. Allied benefits materially from the higher prices for its heavy stock investments in other companies, which probably will be more fully disclosed in its annual report. Mathieson Alkali, another leading chemical issue, advanced over six points. Midland Steel Products preferred was another strong issue, buying being induced by universal forecasts of a record-breaking year for the auto industry. Motor stocks were again under pressure, although Studebaker attained a new high on the persistent buying by people supposedly close to the company. Pierce-Arrow lost part of its recent gains.

Patino More Active

Patino Mines developed increased activity and advanced as strong interests were reported to have taken a leading position in the company. The name of the Guggenheims, powerful in mining affairs, was mentioned in this connection. Patino owns valuable tin properties in South America and is understood to be showing very material expansion in its earnings, with the likelihood of this betterment being maintained throughout the year.

Increased demand was noted for Paramount Famous-Lasky. This enterprise is sought by the Radio Corporation of America.

Wright Aeronautical was up several points. It is understood that a leading financial institution will shortly name a representative on Wright's directorate. International Nickel maintained its price despite definite indications that some of the most powerful and prominent banking interests identified with its sensational rise over the last few years have been taking profits through liquidation of substantial portions of their holdings.

Livestock

TEXAS REVIEW

FORT WORTH, Jan. 10. (AP)—Trading in the livestock market today displayed a little more life, with some classes showing higher values. The supply of cattle was seasonable.

Very few slaughter steers included in the receipts today and no real test of the market made up to noon.

Bulls fully steady with a light offering on hand. A carlot of fair bulls sold at $7.65, common light bulls around $6.25.

Cows active at values mostly 15c to a quarter higher; bulk canners sold around $5.00; very thin ones around $4.25. Very few good cows included in the receipts, but a sizable package of truckers sold at $8.50, load lots at $7.75 and down to $6.00.

Packer purchases in the calf division included better calves than they bought yesterday, values looked a quarter to half-dollar higher than yesterday's bids, or about in line with values paid by order buyers and stocker purchasers. Sales or carlots at $11.35 on packer account.

Stocker calves steady, calves at $11.00 to $12.50; stocker cows at $6.65.

Hogs were strong to five cents higher; sales to shippers a little more. Early rail top $9.10; bulk 175 to 250-pound butchers at $8.30@9.10; packing sows $7.25@8.00.

CHICAGO REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 10. (AP)—Ardor to buy grain future deliveries broke out afresh and hoisted wheat and corn both to about 5 cents a bushel above quotations current Tuesday. On the bulge, corn and oats established all-around new high-price records for the season. Incentive to purchase on the part of many traders was found in reports that President-elect Hoover has a definite and specific program for farm relief.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 1½c to 1⅜c net higher, with wheat 1½c to 2c up, oats ½c to ⅝c advanced, and provisions showing 2c to 10c gain.

Throughout the day, various reports about prospects of farm legislation at Washington were given attention among grain traders, but it was not until toward the last that developments regarding the subject became apparently the dominating influence. This was after remarks attributed to Senator Brookhart of Iowa touching a conference he had with Mr. Hoover were given circulation and were generally construed here as bullish regarding grain values.

Wheat owed some of its strength to comprehensive reports that the crop outlook for domestic winter wheat is not nearly so favorable as at the first of the year. A substantial amount of acreage, especially in sections of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, was represented as apt to be smothered out. Today's export sales of wheat from North America were estimated at 600,000 bushels. Oats as well as wheat tended much of the time to follow the lead of corn in which buying on a large scale was credited to some leading Chicago traders.

NEW EVOLUTION TRIAL IS COMING

Tennessee School Teacher To Face Charges

JAMESTOWN, Tenn., Jan. 10. (UP)—Tennessee's family skeleton is about to be brought from the closet with the looming here of another evolution trial on the order of the one that attracted national notice over three years ago in the trial of John Scopes at Dayton.

Prof. Elmore Gentry, principal of Clark Range High school in this county, has been ordered to appear before the county board of education Friday and answer charges of teaching evolution in his school. The board has written charges against Gentry signed by Bert Jones and Fred Dixon, two prominent men of Clark Range. It is claimed that Gentry has put into the school library two books which specifically endorse evolution as a fact. These books are two volumes entitled "The Outline of Knowledge," and are published by the Kingsport Press at Kingsport, Tenn.

Also in connection with the evolution charge Gentry is charged with assault and battery on a son of Fred Dixon. He will be asked to resign. It is alleged that the ill feeling against Gentry grew out of his expulsion from the school of sons of Bert Jones and Fred Dixon.

Gentry is reported to have "given satisfactory service" as a teacher during his three years at Clark Range.

Gentry's friends are defending him on the evolution charge by saying that the books used in the school are for reference only. Patrons of the school are sharply divided in the matter.

Scholarly Chinese Quits Gab Contest In Favor of Irishman With Harp

By W. F. SULLIVAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Retirement of Charlie Lee, a Chinese, with a mastery of seven languages and an A. B. degree, reduced the so-called gabfest here to just plain talking and blowing today.

Some of the color in the contest, approaching its 100th hour, faded when Lee left the platform. Charley used six languages alternately with his fluent Chinese in an effort to out-talk the other contestants, but he sank under the deafening din of gab and the incessant, monotonous blasts from John Sheehan's harmonica.

John, incidentally, came here recently from the Emerald isle with his harmonica and Gaelic gift, and this had its effect on the Oriental touch of the contest.

Young Lee, just fresh from the University of Illinois, was reciting some passage from a French novel, when he suddenly folded up his Mongolian literature, laundry tickets and language books of various descriptions and retired.

Charley was exhausted, but after several minutes' rest, regained his native tongue. An interpreter explained that the educated Chinese became deaf and couldn't hear himself talk. He didn't know whether he was observing the rules of the contest and quit before being disqualified.

His Irish opponent, who obviously had feared the yellow competition, gained new wind with Charley's retirement and he went after the 15 other remaining contestants with the harmonica and a vengeance.

A correspondent stepped close to Sheehan to ask him from which side of Ireland he came, but a blare in the ear of the questioner was the only reply. Sheehan just won't quit blowing.

"The rules of the contest," Walter Sherwin, promoter, explained, "permit Sheehan to use the harmonica instead of talking. All the contestants have to do is to exercise the vocal cords. Just listen to Sheehan exercise his. A saxophone, trombone or any instrument is permissible.

"Of the 30 that started, 14 have quit. I don't think the Chinaman was after the prize as he said he wanted experience before the public so he could get away from stage fright. I guess he got enough from that Irishman."

TEXAS TAME

Compared to Chicago, Is Verdict of Ex-Ranger In Windy City

CHICAGO, Jan. 10. (US)—Riding the Rio Grande is a quiet life compared with police duty in Chicago, according to an ex-ranger, Roy D. Coppers, of the Oak Park police force.

"Those 'Spick' smugglers never worried me," Coppers said. "If they shoot at you—you're safe. But, up in this country these hombres shoot pretty accurate."

Coppers, a native of Denison, Texas, saw two years service in the Texas rangers and what with shooting with men who can shoot and the cold weather, 'lows the rangers have a pretty nice life after all.

LAW DIVIDES COUNTY FUND

Bundy to Secure Big Share Of Auto Fees

Acting on the provisions of the Wichita county special road law, M. A. Bundy, commissioner from Precinct 1, will claim a 40 per cent share in all county road and bridge funds in 1929, according to an announcement from the commissioner Thursday evening. Other commissioners said Mr. Bundy was legally entitled to the fund and it would not be disputed.

By the distribution system already in effect, precinct No. 1 which includes Wichita Falls, last year received a 40 per cent share in all road and bridge funds except those from automobile weight fees, which were equally divided among the four precincts. The only change is Mr. Bundy's proposals for distribution will be the inclusion of a claim for $30,000 of the $50,000 which the county will receive from the automobile weight taxes.

According to the special road law, passed in 1920, funds collected in one precinct may not be appropriated for use in another without the consent of the commissioner of the precinct from which the money comes. Last year Mr. Bundy waived his legal right to at least 40 per cent of the weight taxes, agreeing to the equal distribution.

Heavy demands on his precinct, which must finance the new bridge across Wichita river on Scott avenue and pay for the paving which will complete the Seymour road in Wichita county, make it necessary for him to ask that all funds be included in the 40 per cent division this year, Mr. Bundy explained.

According to the present distribution system, precinct No. 1, (Wichita Falls) gets 40 per cent; precinct 2 (Burkburnett) 18 per cent; precinct 3 (Iowa Park) 17 per cent; and precinct 4 (Electra) 25 per cent. No changes beyond the one suggested by Mr. Bundy are expected this year. The ratio for the year will probably be set at the meeting of the commissioners court Monday, Jan. 14.

Services Saturday At Boston for Buchanan

Funeral services will be held Saturday at Franklin, Mass., for W. C. Buchanan, 50, prominent Boston manufacturer and brother of Mrs. R. B. Melat and Paul M. Buchanan of Wichita Falls, who was killed Wednesday by an express train near Boston. News of the fatal accident was received in Wichita Falls Thursday.

Mr. Buchanan was president of the Golding Manufacturing company of Boston, where he resided. He lived at Franklin 25 years before moving to Boston. Besides the brother and sister in Wichita Falls, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Buchanan of Shreveport, La., survive.

Paul M. Buchanan, who is a scout in the land and lease department of the Roxana Petroleum corporation, had not received details of the accident Thursday night.

Wichita Woman Leaves For Father's Funeral

Mr. Payne, a pioneer resident of Milan, and one of its leading citizens for years, was 75 years old. His death resulted from complications following influenza. Besides Mrs. Kerwin, his wife, two daughters and three sons survive.

Wichita Man Talks About Trouble

Lost Steadily and Could Not Find Relief; Every Sign of Indestion Is Gone After Taking Orgatone

The ramarkable experience of C. N. Ritter, residing at 2102 Kemp Blvd., is another striking evidence of the extraordinary merits of Orgatone. In speaking of his long-time suffering from indigestion and headaches and subsequent relief, Mr. Ritter said:

"I am telling all my friends about Orgatone and all of my family are taking it after seeing what it has done for me.

"My trouble had been growing worse instead of better, all the time," he continued. "It was almost impossible for me to eat a meal without suffering from gas and sour stomach afterwards. I began losing weight and had fallen off until I only weighed one hundred pounds, away below my weight, and could not find anything to relieve my pain or build me up.

"After I had suffered month after month without getting any better, someone gave a statement on Orgatone that convinced me and I started taking it. As I have said before, I have gained in health and strength and I haven't felt a sign of the old indigestion trouble since. I have taken Orgatone only a few weeks so far, but from the way I have improved already, I am glad to recommend it to everybody."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Allison's Drug Store, 716 Indiana avenue, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative. Out-of-town customers are being supplied promptly by mail upon receipt of price; one bottle $1.25, or six bottles $6.25.—Adv.

Plans Launched for County Chamber Of Agriculture at Iowa Park Meeting

Wichita Council of Agriculture Is Tendered Banquet by C. of C. at Gate City; Support Pledged

By TEX ROGERS

IOWA PARK, Texas, Jan. 10.—Plans for extending the influence of the Wichita County Council of Agriculture into every section of Wichita county and for expansion of the organization into a county chamber of agriculture were advanced at the initial meeting of the council at the Helton hotel in Iowa Park Thursday night.

At a banquet given by the Iowa Park chamber of commerce representative farmers, including the members of the council, business men of Iowa Park, G. C. McGown, county agricultural agent, Earl C. Wilson, superintendent of the Iowa Park State agricultural experiment station, and Mayor Earl Knox, president of the Iowa Park chamber of commerce, were present.

Support Assured

In an address of welcome Mayor Knox assured the council of the undivided support of the commercial interests of Iowa Park in its endeavors.

C. C. Hudson, editor of the Iowa Park Herald, supplemented the welcome extended the farmers by Mayor Knox.

L. L. Kuntz, county commissioner and agriculturist, enlivened the meeting by emphatically advancing the opinion that legislation should immediately be enacted providing for the extermination of every scrub bull in Texas.

Development of dairying and poultry raising should be the most important projects to be undertaken by the council, Mr. Kuntz said.

J. C. Muller, farmer of the Clara community, declared that he was an enthusiastic advocate of the development of the dairy industry in Wichita county and asserted that had it not been for revenue from his milch cows in 1911 he would have starved.

Members of the council who made addresses were: H. C. Haynes, Electra; H. C. Obenhaus, Enterprise; H. J. Flusche, County Line; W. E. Palmer, Barwise; J. R. Bradley, Beaver Creek; John Muller and Dave Abbott, Clara; L. L. Kuntz, Iowa Park; W. L. Hodges and P. C. Jones, Valley View; G. V. Mitchell, Kemp City; W. C. Evans and N. G. Entrekin, Allendale; and J. S. Downing of Wichita Falls.

Downing Chairman

B. V. Bogy, Clara merchant and V. H. Majors, alfalfa expert on the Mangold lands at K. M. A., and recently from the Pecos Valley, were visitors.

At the conclusion of the meeting J. S. Downing of Wichita Falls was chosen permanent chairman by acclamation. It was determined that future meetings of the council would be held on the second Thursday of each month. The next meeting is scheduled to be held Feb. 14 at Electra, where a banquet will be given the council by the Electra chamber of commerce.

County Agent McGown announced that the banquets would be given the council at future meetings by chambers of commerce at Burkburnett and Wichita Falls.

WOMAN FACES PLOT CHARGES

Wife of Intended Victim Denies Accusals

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 10. (UP)—Mrs. Grace Wood, 39, accused of instigating a plot to assassinate her estranged husband Ralph, 33, wealthy realtor, was formally charged with assault and intent to kill late today. She emphatically denied the charge when arrested.

Taylor Pierce and William Thompson, reputed gunmen, whom police say were hired by Mrs. Wood to kill her husband, were held on similar charges. William Haggerty, said to have been a third would-be assassin was shot and killed when he walked into a trap set Wednesday night by police.

Plotter's Wife Squeals

The young wife of Cecil Holt, 25, who feared the consequences if her husband joined in the murder plot, was said to have made possible the information that brought about Haggerty's death and the arrest of Pierce and Thompson.

Mrs. Holt forced her husband to tell Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Paul Buckley of the plot. Fourteen deputy sheriffs and detectives were hidden about Wood's office Wednesday night when Holt and three men went there, presumably to carry out the death plot.

Wood was given a revolver and told to walk from the office. As he stepped from the door, Haggerty struck at him with a blackjack but a volley of shots checked the blow. Wood and the detectives fired simultaneously. Haggerty's body bore five bullet wounds.

Officer Wounded

Reporters, photographers and officers were so confused none could tell exactly what happened. William Dunnigan, a deputy, was wounded but is expected to live.

Mrs. Wood was defiant tonight at the charges, claiming her husband was trying to "railroad her to prison."

She was taken to police headquarters from the home her husband had given her when they separated a year ago. Mrs. Wood complained she was ill with influenza but when she stepped from bed, officers said, she was almost completely dressed. Her 70-year-old mother, Mrs. Mary Smith Baumgardner, was held as a material witness.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Thousands Suffer Needlessly From Stomach Trouble

Antiseptic Remedy Indorsed by Many Former Sufferers

No longer need sufferers from stomach trouble lead lives of misery. There is a remedy that is bringing thousands back to health. That remedy is Gordon's (formerly Gordon's Antiseptic), an internal antiseptic so effective that it has brought voluntary expressions of praise from hundreds of people who unhesitatingly commend it to others.

Gordon's goes right to the seat of the trouble because it stops fermentation (touring of food matter), which is the greatest obstacle to the successful treatment of stomach disorders.

It will bring quick relief in cases of indigestion, sour stomach, gas, bloating, constipation, heartburn, dyspepsia, excess acid, "that tired feeling," bad breath, sick headache, and nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion. It will soon tone up the digestive organs and stimulate the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. The first dose will convince you.

Gordon's is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.10—less than three cents a dose. At druggists.

TEST OF FEE REPEAL LOOMS

Raley to Present Claims On Delinquent Collections

Claims for $30,000 commissions on delinquent taxes collected since 1919, to be presented to the county commissioners court by Guy C. Raley, collector, and M. L. Tittle, his predecessor, may lead to a local test of the law repealing the act which granted the commissions, according to views expressed by members of the court Thursday evening.

The 1919 law, intended to repeal an act granting 5 per cent commissions on the collection of back taxes, and which has been under fire from Bexar county, has been declared invalid by the supreme court, according to news received here by T. R. Boone, local attorney. By this ruling, Mr. Boone said, the law allowing the commissions becomes effective.

Acting on the ruling of the court, Mr. Raley and Mr. Tittle will ask the court for back commissions totaling $30,000, they announced Thursday. Members of the commissioners court, discussing the issue, were inclined to the view that Wichita county will probably put the law to the test before acting on the claims.

Whip Expert On Vaudeville Program

By The Record News Critic

Knocking the ash off of a cigar, tying a knot around a girl's neck, putting out a match held in the hand or what have you? can be performed by Colonel Fred Lindsay with his 25 foot Australian whips in this week's vaudeville bill which opened Thursday for a two day run at the Majestic theater.

Colonel Lindsay, Australian sportsman and big game hunter, and his whips are the feature of the week's show which is one of the best of the season at the Majestic.

Yates and Lawley, Victor recording artists, received a big hand from the audience with their popular songs as did William Edmonds and Fanchon with a comedy skit "Peg O' My Sole."

Other acts on the program are Mr. and Mrs. Lew Brice in "What's the Odds" and Stevens-Nelson and Stevens in "Bare Facts."

"The Butter and Egg Man" with Jack Mulhall and Greta Nissen, a First National picture, and a comedy and news reel constitute the move attraction on the Majestic card this week.

There Was Humor Mixed With Misery Of Italia Crew's Stay in North

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

ROME, Jan. 10.—Hitherto untold anecdotes surrounding the rescue of General Nobile and the members of his Italia crew from their floating ice field in the arctic were told today by Lieutenant Lundborg, Swedish aviator, who was the first to land near the red tent and bring succor to the marooned men.

I was invited to lunch this morning with General Nobile and Lieutenant Lundborg. The latter was telling stories about the polar expedition and the efforts of him and his comrades to find the lost crew of the Italia.

Lundborn said that when he first descended in his plane to the ice pack he offered his whisky bottle to Cecioni, the member of the crew who was most seriously injured.

"What does it cure," Cecioni asked.

"It cures everything," Lundborg said he answered as Cecioni reached for the bottle.

Lundborg said that when he first turned he received a letter addressed to "Mr. Captain Who Saved General Nobile, Sweden." And then he recalled an American woman who wrote him:

"Take me for your wife. I am not beautiful but very rich. Even if you shall not love me I will be proud to carry your name and be near you."

"That was a pity," said Lundborg, "but I am already married and am greatly in love with Mrs. Lundborg."

RADIO JOKES TOO PROFANE

It's Hard to Please All Of Listeners-In

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10. (UP)—It takes all kinds of people to make a radio audience and the ease with which some of them are made to blush has created the problem of just how far our bolder microphone artists should be permitted to go.

Chairman Robinson of the Federal Radio commission feels something should be done to protect pious listeners-in against rude shocks via the loud speaker, but is unwilling to say what restrictive regulations are desirable. That, he said today, is for congress to decide.

Testifying before a house committee, Robinson revealed that the commission has received numerous protests from radio owners who were shocked by some of the jokes and songs that came to them through the ether. Even the mildest forms of profanity were roundly condemned in letters demanding that such language be barred from the air.

But not all the communications the radio commission receives are in agreement. A petition presented recently by the Lord's Day alliance asking that jas music be excluded from Sunday programs was followed by one from the Association Opposed to Blue Laws admonishing the commission not to infringe on rights of free speech.

Under present laws, the commission has no power to regulate programs, although it can refuse licenses to stations considered "unworthy." Chairman Robinson pointedly refrained from requesting any extension of the commission's powers but said the public demand for some form of censorship had reached the point where he considered it desirable to present the facts to congress.

Changes in the radio act of 1927 were proposed to congress today by General Counsel Caldwell of the radio commission.

Caldwell termed the radio act a creditable piece of legislation in a pioneer field but suggested it could be improved.

AUTO VICTIM BETTER

Miss Cleo Gilliam and J. W. Echols, nurses at the state hospital who suffered severe bruises and shock when they were struck by an automobile while walking along the highway between the institution and Lake Wichita Wednesday night, were reported to be resting well Thursday by attendants at the hospital. Both of them were confined to bed Thursday, attendants asserted.

LIONS FEAST ON VENISON

Electra and Wichita Clubs At Gathering

Members of the Wichita Falls and Electra Lions clubs, together with their families, to the number of approximately 150, gathered at the home of Dr. R. H. Graham, president of the local club, at Call field Thursday night for an outdoor feast on barbecued venison.

Six pits were required for the preparation of the wild meat which had been supplied for the occasion by Jim King and Jim Robinson. Following the venison dinner, an informal program was given. Mayor J. W. Akin, guest of honor, made a brief address, including commendation of the Lions club for their work in establishing the Municipal zoo. Mrs. J. S. Pitman, Miss Lucille Graham and W. R. Little Jr. entertained the gathering with several readings. A singsong was led by R. B. Hall, secretary of the Electra Chamber of Commerce. The entire gathering joined in a number of old fashioned games.

Visitors from Electra included Miss Florence Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Davidson, Neal Sparks, Wayne Gillespie, S. B. Marchant, John McKinley and R. B. Hall.
