1981 cars must average 22 mpg, Adams announces

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams Sunday announced a rapid acceleration of federal fuel-economy standards for the automobile industry in model years 1981 through 1984.

Discounting warnings from the big-four Detroit car manufacturers that sharp increases in such standards could depress sales and lead to reductions in employment throughout the economy, Adams said an average fuel economy of 22 miles per gallon will be required for 1981 models.

He said an average manufacturer's fleet fuel economy must increase to 24 miles per gallon 1982, 26 miles per gallon in 1983 and 27 miles per gallon in 1984.

Moreover, Adams ordered his department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to review even more stringent standards for car manufacturers in 1985 and beyond, and perhaps for the 1984 models.

He claimed the new rules would mean only small changes in the price of cars. Some of the fuel-saving measures he envisions would lead to an $80 drop in 1981-model prices, and even in 1984 prices should rise by no more than $50, he said.

However, auto industry leaders have warned that the billions of dollars required to build new produciton facilities for smaller cars will inevitably lead to higher consumer prices.

Congress previously set standards of 18, 19 and 20 miles per gallon for the model years 1978, 1979 and 1980 and also established a long-range goal of 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985 models.

"These standards insure that the American public will have available in the next decade cars that have good fuel economy, improved safety and low emissions," Adams said Sunday. "Cars built in the early 1980s to meet these standards should save the new-car owner about $1,000 over the life of the vehicle compared with those being manufactured today."

The decision was required by the Motor Vehicle information and Cost Savings Act. Average fuel economy figures are computed on the basis of average consumption of all passenger automobiles in a company's line for a particular model year.

To determine minimum standards, Adams was required to consider technological feasibility, economic practicability, the effect of other automobile standards on fuel economy and the need to conserve energy.

"The standards are readily achieveable with presently known technology and the prospect of further fuel economy improvements through additional weight reduction and alternative engines supports the need for considering higher fuel economy requirements for 1985 and beyond," Adams said.

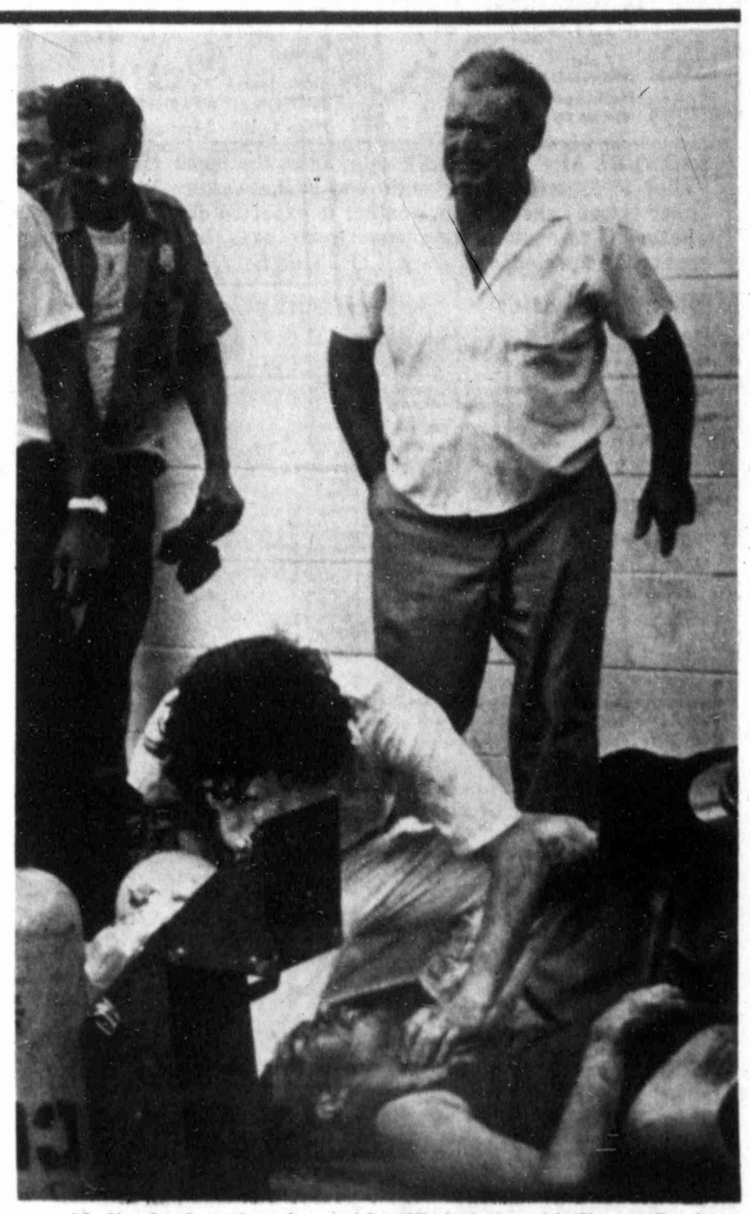

If the Department of Transportation decides on any increase beyond the 27.5 miles per gallon standard already set by Congress, it could be vetoed by Congress.

While American auto manufacturers have agreed that reaching the 27.5 miles per gallon standard in 1985 and any interim increases are technologically feasible, they have warned the government that moving too fast could jeopardize the entire economy.

Between 1974 and 1977 model years, according to Environmental Protection Agency estimates, the average fuel economy of new cars increased 34 per cent — from 13.9 miles per gallon to 18.6 miles per gallon.

According to Henry L. Duncombe Jr., chief economist for General Motors, the steps necessary to meet rapidly increasing and high average fuel economy standards could make new cars less attractive to consumers. Many may thus decide to keep their older, less energy-efficient cars, perhaps resulting in higher total

Proposed tax said potentially lethal to petrochemical industry

By MARTIN MERZER

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's energy proposal now before Congress includes a tax that would force much of the $40 billion petrochemical industry out of the country, industry spokesmen warn.

And that would mean the loss of many of the 390,000 American jobs now directly related to the industry, the spokesmen say.

Administration spokesmen refuse to comment directly on the industry threat. But they say the industry is going to be damaged anyway, if not by higher taxes — aimed at conservation — then by a scarcity of petroleum, the major raw material of petrochemicals. The policy does not "attempt to appease one interest or another," a spokesman said.

The main petrochemical-industry objections are to Carter's proposed tax on oil at the well and an additional tax on major industrial users of oil. The industry says the taxes would raise costs so much that foreign competitors would have an advantage.

The consumer would pay more in any case, either for more expensive foreign products or for domestic products whose prices would be increased to offset the new taxes.

Under the President's plan, the first tax, a $3 levy, would bring prices up to the world level by 1980; the "user" tax — applied primarily to the petrochemical industry — would start at 90 cents a barrel in 1979 and increase to $3 by 1985.

But the petrochemical industry says the taxes, currently being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee, would increase "feedstock" costs from $3 below world price levels now to $3 above the levels by 1985. Feedstock is oil that is used as a raw material in a refinery or petrochemical plant.

"The question is: What do you do if you're non-competitive?" said Robert Mitchell, executive vice president of Celanese Corp. "The first thing is that we lose our export markets ($10 billion of the $40 billion in annual sales). Then, the foreign competitor can compete in the U.S."

"This positive impact on our nation's balance of trade would be lost over the next few years as the Carter taxes phase in," said Ronald S. Wishart, director of energy policy for Union Carbide. "... In place of oil imports, we might be importing more chemicals as well as other energy-intensive products such as steel and aluminum."

How would the dozens of U.S. petrochemical firms react?

"Given a free world for investment purposes," Mitchell said, "what will evolve is a shift of the petrochemical industry — assuming a degree of political stability — to the Mideast."

An industry spokesman said firms might simply abandon their American plants if they found that "it was not economically beneficial to run them."

But Jim Bishop, an administration spokesman, added that if Carter's conservation-designed proposals are not accepted, the industry soon will have to deal with critical shortages of raw materials — a problem every bit as serious as increased taxes.

Officials said there are no plans to protect the industry by imposing quotas on imports of petrochemical products.

Djibouti becomes nation

By ELIAS ANTAR

DJIBOUTI (AP) — The republic of Djibouti, a Massachusetts-size patch of salt and sand at the southern end of the Red Sea, became Africa's 49th independent state early today amid fireworks and 21-gun salutes.

The new nation's future is threatened by its rival Marxist-ruled neighbors, Somalia and Ethiopia, and a lack of any natural resources except salt and its strategic location. It will depend on France, its colonial ruler for 115 years, for troops to protect it and economic aid to keep it alive.

President Hassan Gouled raised the republic's flag—green and blue with a red star — at one minute after midnight to open three days of independence celebrations. French warships in the harbor of the capital fired gun salutes and blew their sirens. There were fireworks and people chanted "Long Live Independence!" But the atmosphere generally was quiet and restrained.

Djibouti is coveted by Ethiopia because its capital is Ethiopia's chief port and the terminus of the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad. Somalia wants it because more than half of its 300,000 people are ethnic Somalis and it is part of the "Greater Somalia" which the Somali government is pledged to unite.

Western Europe, the United States, the Soviet Union, Israel and the Arabs are concerned about the control of Djibouti because it is situated on the south side of the Bab el Mandeb, the strait which connects the Suez Canal and Red Sea with the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean. About 70 ships a day pass through the strait, including oil tankers and warships of many nations.

The leader of Ethiopia's military government, Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, told a rally in Addis Ababa on Saturday that Somalia has designs on Djibouti. Somali President Siad Barre has said it is Ethiopia which intends to take over Djibouti and Somalia has a duty to defend it.

Leaders of Somalia and Ethiopia were invited to the independence ceremonies but did not come. Some 15 countries, the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and the Arab League are represented.

Formerly known as French Somaliland, Djibouti in 1967 was renamed the Territory of Afars and Issas, for its two major tribes. The Afars have ties with Ethiopia while the more numerous Issas, who provide Gouled's major support, are ethnic Somalis.

Gouled said the republic will pursue a neutral foreign policy. He said it will join the Arab League but will allow Israeli ships to use the strait.

Arson charges to be brought in jailhouse fire

By ERIC NEWHOUSE

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities say they will bring arson charges against a young prison inmate suspected of setting his foam rubber-padded cell afire and unleashing toxic fumes that asphyxiated 42 persons, 34 of them inmates trapped in their locked cells.

Attempts to rescue the victims were hampered when a deputy sheriff carrying keys to the Maury County Jail's 12 cells collided with fleeing visitors Sunday afternoon. He dropped the keys on the floor and was unable to find them for about 12 minutes, officials said.

One husband and wife, who both were prisoners, died in the fire along with his visiting parents and sister. In another family tragedy, a prisoner and five relatives died.

"All the victims had got down on the floor as far as they could, laying down to get some air ... " one official said. "It seemed like most of the victims were lifeless."

Dist. Atty. Gen. Robert H. Gay said he planned to charge Andy Zinmer, 16, with arson. Gay said he would ask to have Zinmer tried as an adult.

Zinmer was taken to a Nashville hospital and reported in critical condition, suffering from burns and smoke inhalation.

Authorities in Waukesha, Wis., said records show Zinmer, formerly of Superior, Wis., was reported missing from Lad Lake Inc., a residential treatment center in Doussman, Wis., for emotionally disturbed teenagers.

Zinmer had been removed from the jail's drunk tank on Saturday and placed in the padded cell because he had stuffed up a toilet and caused a flood, authorites said. State law requires that juveniles be segregated from adult prisoners, and officials said the padded cell was the only other facility available.

Chief Deputy Bob Farmer said Zinmer was pulled from the jail's padded cell. "Me and another officer drug him out," Farmer said. "He said he set it."

The sheriff said today that while Zinmer was in the padded cell just before the fire broke out, "one of the visitors gave him a cigarette."

Eight of the 42 victims were visitors leaving at the end of Sunday's one-hour visiting period.

There were 56 inmates in the jail at the time of the fire. Of the 22 who got out alive, 19 were flown by helicopters to two hospitals in Nashville, about 60 miles north of Columbia, officials said.

Authorities said 18 other persons, including two firemen, were treated for injuries at local hospitals.

Gov. Ray Blanton, who flew over the fire in a helicopter, said, "We know it has to be one of the greatest tragedies we've ever had in Tennessee."

Blanton promised an investigation. "When you have 42 persons dead

Newton deportation sought

BRAMPTON, Canada (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, en route from Cuba to stand trial for murder in California, must remain in a Canadian jail at least until Wednesday.

Immigration authorities held a deportation hearing Sunday for Newton, whom they arrested shortly after his Havana-Toronto flight landed Saturday night.

Canadian officials said they were seeking to deport the 35-year-old co-founder of the Panthers because of previous criminal convictions. But Newton said he wanted 10 days of freedom in Canada to confer with his lawyers in preparation for his trial in the United States.

The hearing was adjourned until Wednesday when a Toronto lawyer representing Newton, Paul Copeland, asked for time to send for documents related to the California homicide case. He claimed the papers would show Newton is being held illegally.

Newton's team of lawyers produced letters from U.S. and California authorities saying they would not seek to extradite the black militant. The attorneys said the U.S. Justice Department is dropping a charge of unlawful flight, the only federal charge against Newton.

However, Newton was ordered back to jail until the hearing resumes, immigration officials said.

Newton's 27-year-old wife, Gwen, accompanied him from Havana and was allowed to enter Canada.

Critical decisions due on B1

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Congress and President Carter are preparing to make crucial decisions this week that could determine whether the controversial B1 bomber has a future.

The House is to vote Tuesday on an effort to delete all production money for the B1 bomber from a $110.6-billion defense appropriation bill.

The appropriations measure also may be used as the vehicle for amendments that would outlaw assassinations and other interference in the affairs of other nations by U.S. intelligence agencies.

President Carter's aides say he plans to decide by the end of the week whether to put the strategic bomber into production or scrap it.

The House effort to chop all B1 production money out of the $110.6-billion defense bill is being led by Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., who said Carter should oppose the B1 as he promised he would during his presidential campaign.

"President Carter announced during his campaign that the B1 was not a viable weapon," Addabbo told the House in opening debate. "That same fact is true today."

Willie Nelson gladdens thousands of hearts

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

ODESSA — Willie Nelson came to town.

And the people's hearts were gladdened.

You could tell.

They were of good cheer when he walked onto the stage and sang "Whiskey River."

And they were of equally good cheer and abundantly blessed with the bountiful singing of this good soul a score or so of songs later.

It was, at least, Nelson's second coming to this "rough 'n' tumble" oil town.

None of the thousands who came from all around to the Ector County Coliseum last Thursday night to hear Nelson and company could sanely have second thoughts about spending seven bucks a piece to enjoy this outlaw.

Certainly, he doesn't fall into the norm of Country 'n' Western music. But you could wager (and likely win) that good ol' Hank Williams, in his happier days, would applaud Nelson. Of course, his was a sad and troubled heart. Nelson has cried, too. For sure.

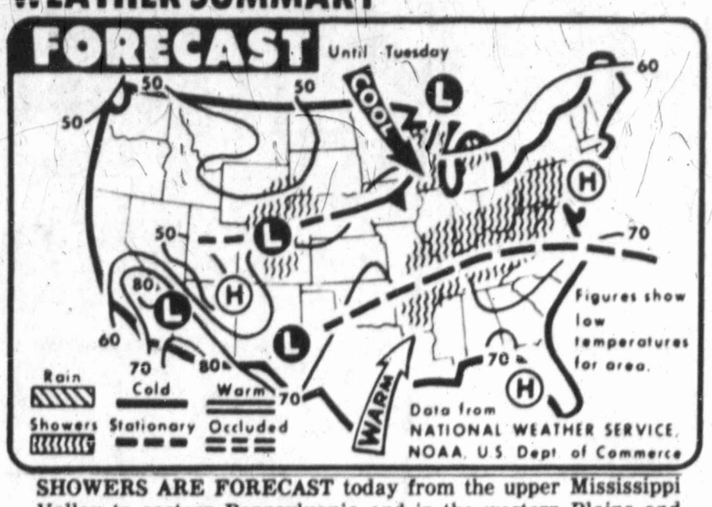

On this night, Nelson was wearing blue jeans, a T-shirt and soft footwear, when he came onto the stage with his old Martin guitar. He's played that old faithful so darn much that he's plumb worn a hole in it just below the sixth string.

He was the billboard attraction. He needed no embellishment to attract a crowd. Nelson comes and the hordes are there.

Nevertheless, two sideshows of diverse musical bands played for Nelson's fans. Remarkably enough, Willie Nelson followers are a motley lot. They may prefer pure Country 'n' Western, rock 'n' roll, classical or

Hot weather returns to sear Basin area

Hot and fair weather returned to the Permian Basin after last week's rains brought cooler temperatures and the National Weather Service at Midland Air Terminal predicts more hot temperatures at least through Tuesday.

The National Weather Service also forecasted a chance of rain this afternoon and tonight.

Midland received .08 inch of rain Sunday evening at the Midland Air Terminal, the National Weather Service said.

Lamesa was the only other area town reporting rain Sunday, but Andrews reported "a lot of thunder." The other area towns reported clear skies, warm temperatures and calm winds early today.

The forecast for the Permian Basin calls for fair skies today through Tuesday with hot afternoons and a slight chance of thunderstorms late this afternoon and tonight. High today and Tuesday will be near 102, and tonight the low 70s. Winds will be southerly at 10 to 20 mph today and tonight. Probability of rain is 20 per cent this afternoon and tonight.

Very heavy thunderstorms were reported early today along the Red River from near Childress to near Denton and other thunderstorms were reported in scattered areas of West and Southwest Texas.

The National Weather Service blamed the long-lasting thunderstorms on the very high moisture content of the air over Texas.

In West and Southwest Texas, the thunderstorms were reported over the eastern portion of the high plains and in the mountains.

In addition to the area of thunderstorms, skies were cloudy over the southeastern part of the state and clear elsewhere. Winds were light and southerly over most of the state except gusty in the area of the thunderstorms.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s although a few readings were noted in the middle 60s in the Panhandle and mountains. Some early morning readings included 70 at Amarillo, 73 at Wichita Falls, 76 at Texarkana, 78 at Dallas, 72 at Houston, 75 at Alice, 76 at Del Rio, 79 at El Paso, 73 at San Angelo, 70 at Lubbock and 66 a Dalhart, the Associated Press reported.

plane could influence Carter's decision but it cannot seal the plane's fate. Should the House delete the B1 funds, the Senate could still restore the money and the two chambers would have to reach a compromise.

In other action this week, the House is to vote Wednesday on setting up a new intelligence committee.

Carter and the intelligence agencies want one committee so they can limit the number of congressmen toqwhom they must report secret operations, thereby limiting the risk of leaks.

Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Mo., has introduced amendments to ban assassinations and foreign government interference by U.S. intelligence agents but his office said Friday he had made no final decision to press for votes on them.

The amendments would abolish the CIA's $35-million reserve fund, prohibit assassinations and outlaw U.S. intelligence operations aimed at influencing foreign elections or government actions.

Woman dies in shooting at Rankin

RANKIN — A Rankin woman was killed and a man was injured in a Sunday morning shooting incident in Rankin.

Rosa Deanda Viasana, 57, was pronounced dead at her home, the scene of the shooting, shortly after the incident at 12:50 a.m. She apparently had been shot twice in the upper torso, an Upton County spokesman said.

A man listed as Tom Washington was in fair condition this morning in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital. He was shot in the back in the same incident, the sheriff's department said.

The Rankin sheriff's department said two different weapons were used in the incident. No arrests have been made.

Odessa fire fatal to one

ODESSA — An unidentified man died this morning in a fire at 203 E. Murphy St. in Odessa, police said.

Police said a fire broke out in a duplex shortly after 4 a.m. While putting the fire out, firemen discovered the badly burned body of the man in what was supposed to be a vacant unit in the duplex, police said.

The portion of the duplex where the body was found was badly damaged, police said. The other portion, occupied by owner Morris Calicutt, was damaged by smoke.

Police said they have not been able to make a positive identification of the victim.

Infant dies of drowning

ODESSA — Eighteen-month-old Joshua Michael Gonzales died this morning in an Odessa hospital.

He was taken to the hospital Sunday night after being found floating face down in the bathtub.

According to a spokesman at the Odessa Police Department, the uncle and the man who were babysitting were fixing supper. When they went to check on the infant and his 3-year-old sister in the bathtub with him, they found the boy floating face down.

within a few minutes," he said, "you need to know why they were lost."

Authorities said the burning foam rubber in the padded cell spewed heavy smoke and toxic fumes, including carbon monoxide and possibly some cyanide gas, through an air duct system, setting off panic among the inmates and visitors.

The fleeing visitors collided with Deputy Sheriff Jerry Dickey, causing him to drop keys to the cells. Dickey had to grope on the floor through the smoke for the keys, said Deputy Sheriff Howard Blake.

Each of the one-story jail's 12 cells required a separate key. The jail has a 60-prisoner capacity.

Firemen wearing oxygen masks eventually used a second set of keys kept in the prison office to help deputies go through the smoke and open all the cells. Authorities were trying to reconstruct the sequence of events to clarify why there was so long a delay in using the second set.

The city's main fire station is about a block from the jail, which officials said did not have a fire alarm or contingency plans for evacuation in case of fire. Firemen arrived promptly but were driven back from rescue efforts by the dense, toxic smoke.

Willie Nelson gladdens thousands

whatever. (Some call Nelson's music both progressive country and redneck rock.)

First, Asleep at the Wheel played the brand of western swing music that made Bob Wills famous and, like Nelson, an outlaw among the traditional Nashville lot.

This Texas-bred band lit into "Miles and Miles of Texas," among other numbers.

Asleep went away and was following by the rock 'n' roll band, Firefall.

It seemed a bit out of place: pop rock thrown in between western swing, Willie Nelson's downhome and uptown country sounds. But Nelson fans crisscross the musical barriers, so . . . .

So, Nelson sang: "Whiskey River," "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain," "Good Hearted Woman" (without Waylon Jennings), "Shotgun Willie," "Red Headed Stranger," "Just As I Am," "Amazing Grace," . . . and on and on.

Don't cross him, don't boss him
He's wild in his sorrow
Ridin' and hiding' his pain. Don't fight him, don't spite him Just wait till tomorrow
Maybe he'll ride on again.

Nelson sang and so often reached back to sip or guzzle from can after can of Lone Star beer.

Occasionally, Nelson relented, walked into the shadows, and let his bass picker, Bee Spears, do his singing best at the microphone.

And Paul English, the Gene Krupa of country sounds, handily displayed his flair for the drums. It was exciting. Striking, too, was Nelson's sister, Bobbie, at the piano. She played rag-time.

Again and again, Nelson subtly proved himself a superb showman. His band left Nelson alone on the stage when he sang "A Song for You" . . . "now we're alone . . . .

And after the show was supposedly over, fans flocked to the stage. Nelson freely imparted kisses to the eager girls and women folks, passed out a can of Lone Star, shook many a hand and returned for an encore that was a grand show in itself.

He kicked the late-night show off with Bob Wills' "Milk Cow Blues" and sang both old and new stuff. The encore was worth another seven bucks.

It was after midnight when the encore was over. But that bled into yet a third "show": an onstage autograph party.

He signed belts, programs, red Willie Nelson bandannas, white Willie Nelson T-shirts that were selling for $5 each, much more, and at least one plaster-of-Paris leg cast.

Some showman, that Willie Nelson. He's 44, seemingly untiring, bearded and crowd-pleasing.

He shed his familiar headband and gave it to a fan. He did the same with his blue T-shirt — pulled it right off — and slipped on a Willie Nelson monogrammed T-shirt. You could tell that he was pleased to do it.

Truly, it appeared that Nelson was as appreciative of his good-hearted disciples as they were of him.

And come again, Shotgun Willie, 'cause the world hereabouts will be a'waiting and listening for your return.

Midland, area counties named for drought relief

Midland County is among 76 counties in Arkansas, Michigan, and Texas eligible to participate in a federal drought relief program, according to Robert T. Hall, assistant secretary of commerce for economic development.

Midland County agent Charlie Green added that the present drought conditions have been building up since fall. And although patches of the county have had as much as five inches of rain in recent weeks, drought conditions exist in most of the county, he said.

According to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal normal rainfall to date is 6.24 inches, but only 4.11 inches had been recorded as of Friday.

The federal drought relief program is being conducted by the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce and provides $175 million for grants and loans for water projects in drought-stricken areas.

The goal of the program under provisions of the Community Emergency Relief Act of 1977 is to help communities carry out short-term actions to insure adequate water supplies for health, safety and economic stability.

Also listed as eligible are the counties of Andrews, Borden, Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Lubbock, Martin, Tom Green, Upton and Ward.

Three Upton 4H'ers compete

RANKIN — Three 4-H members from Upton County recently competed at the 4-H Club Roundup at Texas A&M University. They were Beverly Hoelacher of Midkiff, and Lisa Steward and Cindy Watson of McCamey. Miss Watson and Miss Steward placed third in the poultry demonstration. Miss Hoelscher participated in a clothing demonstration.

fuel consumption. There are 100 million cars on the nation's highways.

Both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., respectively the largest and second-largest auto manufacturers, had urged Adams to increase fuel economy standards more gradually in the early years of the 1980s. They said reduced auto sales that could develop from higher standards would mean losses of jobs not only in the auto industry but in other sectors of the economy directly connected with production and distribution of automobiles.

American Motors Corp., smallest of the car makers, urged Adams to innovate in fuel economy standards so that each manufacturer could plan on its own.

AMC suggested that Adams permit each manufacturer to work with the government on developing its own schedule for meeting the existing 1985 standards of 27.5 miles per gallon. Alternatively, AMC proposed a two-step increase in the fuel economy standards — one in the eary 1980s to be followed by the 1985 requirement.

But Adams said yesterday that since the technology exists to meet higher standards, that is what his department will require.

Adams said manufacturers have many methods available to reach the increased standard, including cutting the size of new cars without reducing interior space, a program already undertaken by GM; a 10 per cent reduction in acceleration capability, and the use of more lightweight materials, such as aluminum, plastics and high-strength steel.

Belgrade showcase

Serving as president of the United States is a tough and demanding job at best, as Jimmy Carter undoubtedly is finding out with each passing day.

He has faced some stern tests of his human rights policies in the last five months, but the sternest is yet to come. His efforts entered the big leagues for the first time on June 15 when the 35 nations which signed the Final Act in Helsinki in 1975 convened in Belgrade to review progress.

Essentially, the Helsinki pact was a declaration of national intentions in three major areas—security, economics and human rights. The latter will gain most attention at Belgrade in the coming months because the city will be the site of the first crossing of swords by the United States and the Soviet Union over the Helsinki treaty in an international arena.

Backfires already are burning. In the United States Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has told the congressional-executive watchdog commission on the Helsinki treaty that the United States will "seek full implementation of all the commitments contained in the Helsinki Final Act." And in more recent days, President Carter has jabbed at Eastern Europe for not living up to the international agreement on human rights.

Mr. Carter's feint was skillful. He undoubtedly knew that the Soviet Union would retort angrily, as it did with a personal attack on him. The Soviet thrust hardly could deter Mr. Carter from his determination to press ahead with human rights policies. But it does serve his purpose because it keeps the issue alive, and in the headlines.

Actually, the Soviet Union has been embarked on a two-front policy in preparation for Belgrade. On the one hand it is burnishing a positive image by such things as the preparation of a new constitution and diplomatic efforts among satellites.

That's basically a covering of its tracks. On the second front Moscow is clearly taking the offensive in an effort to smear the United States and the West. We will be subject to much more abuse on such things as Watergate, the number of blacks in jails, the purported aggressiveness of NATO, poverty and unemployment in the United Statea, the McCarran Immigration Act and even Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe.

There is no doubt that the Carter administration will be successful in deflecting these charges and taking the offensive itself. Indeed, it must or the value of the Belgrade meeting will be lost.

It is doubtful that any of the Western nations which are participating have any illusion about the Soviet Union. Moscow isn't about to announce an abrupt change of its attitudes toward human rights.

For one thing it is not going to admit guilt in the full glare of an internationmal spotlight.

For another, if the Soviet Union accepted Western concepts of human rights it would have to scrap the entire edifice of its socialistic state which places the state above the person.

The value of Belgrade to those who cherish human liberties is that it allows democracies to showcase their virtues, contrasting them to dictatorships, bureaucratic or personal.

The Belgrade meeting is another drip of water on the Marxist monolith. By itself a drop does not move a mountain. If there are enough drops the mountain erodes.

This then presenta a significant challenge to President Carter and his administration. The results of the conference certainly will be of tremendous importance to the Western nations.

This is but one of the matters which make the Chief Executive's job a most demanding one.

OFFSHORE LEASES:

Coastal states want share of oil money

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

Benjamin Shore

WASHINGTON — Pressure is building on Capitol Hill for the federal government to share with affected coastal states the revenues derived from the sale of offshore oil tracts.

The Carter administration is resisting such a financial bonanza for states facing the prospect of increased oil exploration and production off their beaches.

But a quiet behind-the-scenes campaign led by the Gulf Coast states and joined by Atlantic and Pacific states about to experience offshore oil production may win the battle in Congress.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus was put on the defensive recently during a House hearing as congressmen from Louisiana, Massachusetts and New Jersey argued vigorously for a share of federal lease-sale revenues.

Rep. David Treen, R-La., reminded Andrus that Jimmy Carter, campaigning for votes in New Orleans last October, pledged his support of lease-sale revenue sharing.

And Rep. John Breaux, D-La., asked Andrus why interior states receive a flat 50 per cent of revenues derived from the sale of mineral leases on federal property within those states.

"If these interior states can get 50 per cent without having to show any specific adverse impact from mining and other activities, why shouldn't coastal states get a percentage from the offshore leases?" Breaux asked, noting that the interior states' share was raised from 33 per cent just last year.

Offshore leases are being sold at the rate of around $4 billion a year. Advocates of sharing this revenue are setting their sights on a formula that would share between 15 and 25 per cent with the affected states.

The 1976 amendments to the Coastal Zone Management Act were supposed to provide funds to coastal states to help them plan for and deal with the offshore and onshore impact of oil development that can bring into a relatively undeveloped area large amounts of workers and industrial facilities.

But the Carter administration this year has called for huge cuts in the funds available under this program.

It is this drastic reduction in federal support, coupled with the prospect of obtaining far greater income through lease-sale revenue sharing, that has given the coastal states a rallying point this year.

The House Special Committee on Amendments to the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act will begin drafting legislation June 29, and coastal state members are confident of getting a revenue-sharing formula approved.

"The votes are there," said Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., in an interview. "And I think we can win on the floor."

Hughes and other coastal state committee members are counting on the support of such vote-heavy states as California, Texas, Louisiana, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts.

Alaska, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Delaware also are supporting the concept.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Nuclear industry hits telecasts

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The best way to manipulate public opinion, in the words of an old pop tune, is to accentuete the positive and eliminate the negative. Applying this principle, the nuclear industry has brought pressure on the TV networks to eliminate telecasts that are critical of nuclear power.

The manipulators are using methods as ultramodern as the nuclear age itself, complete with an instant telecommunications system that can mobilize the faithful to protest against undesireable TV newscasts, documentaries and even dramas.

The suppression campaign has been directed against the networks, their local affiliates and commercial sponsors. The targets have ranged from "NBC's Special Reports" to CBS's "Hawaii Five-O."

The pressure on the networks has been organized behind the scenes by the Atomic Industrial Forum and the American Nuclear Society, which promote nuclear power and profits. The Forum operates the telecommunications system, known as "Infowire," which is used to coordinate the campaign.

In late 1976, for example, the Forum learned that CBS was about to broadcast an objectionable episode of the TV series "Hawaii Five-O" dramatizing the efforts of a band of criminals to construct a crude atomic bomb. This was the sort of TV fare that might raise questions about nuclear safety. So the Forum brought heavy pressure on CBS to postpone the scheduled episode. In this case, CBS rejected the pressure.

One week later, the Forum turned its pressure on ABC to pre-empt an episode of the series "Most Wanted." The plot had plutonium hijackers threatening a large U.S. city with destruction. ABC also resisted the pressure, but according to program director Robert Fountain, several local stations took the show off the air.

NBC was next to come under nuclear attack after broadcasting an hour-long documentary, entitled "Danger: Radioactive Waste," on January 22. For the first time on network television, the potential hazards of the growing radioactive build-up were described in stark detail.

This was followed immediately by a confidential telex, flashed over the Infowire, urging the Forum's corporate subscribers to bring pressure on NBC president Herbert Schlosser and NBC News president Richard Wald. The nuclear executives were also advised to express their indignation to the Federal Communications Commission, House Communications Chairman Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., House Commerce Chairman Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., and Senate Commerce Chairman Warren Magnusen, D-Wash.

More devious, they were asked to contact the show's two sponsors, Textron, Inc., and Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. The American Nuclear Society also fired off a "Special Bulletin" to its members about the NBC documentary, with these instructions: "An effective way of expressing your displeasure at this TV show is to WRITE THE SPONSORS."

The bulletin advised nuclear advocates not to write an elaborate letter full of "inaccuracies and emotionalism" but to send a "simple one-page letter expressing your outrage at the shallow or biased treatment." They were also urged to send "as many letters as possible."

Some nuclear executives tried to recruit their employees to write letters to the network. "I intend to express my feelings to the managmement of NBC," declared Joseph C. Rengel, executive vice president of Westinghouse Nuclear Energy Systems, in a confidential memo to all employees. "I hope you will join me in this effort."

One sponsor, Northwestern Mutual, was hit by a blizzard of letters from the nuclear industry, complaining about the documentary. The president of the company, F.E. Ferguson, told our associate, Larry Kraftowitz, that his company will be "a lot more cautious" about the shows it sponsors in the future. Ferguson said he concluded the documentary was "unfair and one-sided" before the protests began to arrive.

The other sponsor, Textron, also was deluged with critical mail. The company signed an agreement, meanwhile, to invest $2.7 million in Allied Chemical, which has large nuclear holdings. This will not prevent Textron from sponsoring nuclear programs in the future, said a spokesman. But an NBC official told us that Textron "probably will be more cautious." As he put it, "They're not used to this kind of heat." NBC has provided a point-by-point refutation, incidentally, that the show was biased.

Footnote: A spokesman for the Atomic Industrial Forum told us the nuclear industry wanted to postpone the embarrassing episodes of "Hawaii Five-O" and "Most Wanted" until the recent referenda on nuclear power was concluded. The broadcasts, he said, were an "unfair intrusion on the election campaign." The industry protested the NBC documentary because it contained "15 specific" errors and misrepresentations.

Mark Russell says

President Carter is having trouble persuading Congress against approving fast breeder nuclear power plants. Such fast breeding should be met with nuclear birth control.

The plutonium produced in these plants can be used to make do-it-yourself, handy-dandy home-made atomic bombs. They'll eventually replace the chemistry set.

The thought of home-cooked mushroom clouds is terrifying. Think of the air pollution.

That's progress for you. If we can put a man on the moon, we can rearrange the earth while he's up there.

A government spokesman said, "We're abolishing Task Force 157 permanently." That's right. It will now be called Task Force 158.

INSIDE REPORT:

Sense of future tragedy hovers over South Africa

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Serious efforts by the ruling Nationalist party's more enlightened leaders to forestall disaster in South Africa are encountering intransigence from party stalwarts and disdain from Washington, building a sense of future tragedy that hovers over this land.

What is being cautiously advanced by Verligte (enlightened) Afrikaaners would have surprised and pleased the world five years ago: gradual dismantling of apartheid, the institutionalized racial discrimination established by the Nationalists when they gained power in 1948. Beyond that, the Verligtes want to give the country's non-white majority a bigger piece of the economic pie and, ultimately, a slice of political power.

But militant blacks here and the Third World-Communist coalition dominating the United Nations reject anything short of strict majority rule — an inflexible closing of the door to moderation apparently concurred in by the Carter administration. The Verkrampte (intractable) Afrikaaners cite this as proof that since only the suicide of white South Africa will satisfy the Americans, why not go into the laager (armed camp)?

Certainly, the official U.S. position here belittles the government's hesitant reduction of racial preferences. But a minority view at the American embassy, objecting to Washington's new line, believes these tentative first steps — though largely superficial — ought to be applauded, while further steps are urged.

Pervasive whites-only signs are beginning to come down, most notably in post offices. Regular black vs. white boxing and wrestling marks the beginning of interracial athletics. The country was amazed by a recent announcement that the University of Stellenbosch, intellectual bastion of Afrikaanerdom, is being opened to non-whites on a very limited basis.

Still more hesitant is relaxation of economic preferences. The old Nationalist pledge that a white man need never take orders from a Kaffir (black) is violated by a few non-whites quietly given supervisory positions. Interior minister Connie Mulder, a conservative and perhaps the next prime minister, told us racial wage discrimination must cease. More government money is planned to improve living conditions of urban blacks.

Even Verkrampte politicians grudgingly acknowledge the need for much of these social and economic changes. It is the question of political participation by non-whites that threatens 29 years of Nationalist party monolithic unity.

Dr. Piet Koornhof, the ebullient, English-educated minister of education, is the most daring of Verligte Afrikaaners. He scandalized the orthodox recently by calling for shared decision-making with not only Coloreds (mixed-blood) and Indians but also urban blacks. In a two-hour conversation with us, Koornhof admitted political change should be faster than is expected, while confessing that a formula for such change is not in sight and will be a long time coming — perhaps too long.

The major reason for delay is the dominant thinking within the government. Koornhof's suggestion for shared decision-making was repudiated by one cabinet colleague after another (including Dr. Mulder) — but not by the new foreign minister, R. F. (Pik) Botha. Although publicly silent, Botha privately supports Koornhof. Charismatic, flamboyant and probably the first South African politician to use television effectively, Botha is viewed by realistically liberal businessmen as the best hope for the future.

So, Botha's outrage over U.S. policy is not the fullminating of just another Afrikaaner. While calling for sufficient change to satisfy the more urgent needs of the black people, Botha told us that "we South Africans are profoundly concerned about the United States appearing to demand that change should be so fundamental that it must lead to our destruction as a people."

Upon returning here from his post as ambassador in Washington, Botha made headlines by declaring he was not prepared to die for whites-only signs in elevators. But, asked an opposition member in parliament the other day, what aspect of apartheid is he prepared to die for? The answer: continued white political control.

The overriding problem thus becomes how minority whites can share decision-making with majority non-whites short of political self-destruction.

Here are the makings of a tragic cycle. If American reduced foreign investment will worsen the economic condition of the nation's non-whites and reduce the confidence of its businessmen. "I am a loyal South African," one prominent financier told us, "but I will not go down on a sinking ship. If nothing changes in three or four years, I'm leaving." Such departures would signal not a victory for human rights but rather defeat for moderation and a long, bloody struggle that can only wound the West.

DAs meet to discuss alleged Yarbrough forgery

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Dist. Atty. Carol Vance of Houston met with Travis County Dist. Atty. Ronald Earle today concerning Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough's alleged part in the forgery of an automobile title.

Yarbrough, meanwhile, was taking part in the court's Monday morning case conference and could not be reached immediately for comment.

"We can't go into any of the facts . . We are up here to turn the evidence over to Ronald Earle concerning an allegation of forgery. We will offer our full co-operation," Vance told reporters jus before entering Earle's office.

Vance said the alleged forgery took place after Yarbrough was sworn in as a judge of the state's highest court for civil matters. He said the alleged forgery took place in Travis County within the past few weeks.

Vance said that a former Yarbrough associate, who was quoted by the Houston Post as saying the jurist plotted to kill a grand jury witness to block his testimony, "would be a very key witness in the forgery case. He goes into a great deal of detail in his interviews."

With Vance was Johnny Holmes of the Harris County district attorney's office.

Yarbrough denounced the alleged murder plot as a "complete and utter fantasy".

Vance said it would be up to Earle to determine how to proceed in the forgery matter.

The alleged murder plot surfaced in a Post interview with John William "Bill" Rothkopf, who told the newspaper that the intended victim was Victoria banker Bill Kemp. The newspaper said Kemp fears for his life and has been wearing a bullet proof vest.

Rothkopf told the Post that Yarbrough approached him as early as last December about "having Kemp eliminated." Rothkopf said Yarbrough told him he was willing to pay $2,500 to a Mexican national named "Pete" to kill Kemp and hide the body.

"I have nothing to say today, but I can assure you that I'll have plenty to say at the proper time," Yarbrough told The Associated Press on Saturday. "I will say that this tale is an absolute fantasy. It reads like a cheap dime novel."

Rothkopf said he talked to members of the Harris County district attorney's special crimes bureau regarding the alleged plot to kill Kemp, the newspaper said.

Vance said a state grand jury is investigating Yarbrough in connection with an allegedly forged $200,000 letter of credit Yarbrough used to obtain a loan from a Houston businessman, the Post said.

Kemp can confirm the forgery, the newspaper said, adding that he appeared before the grand jury June 1. Kemp is on vacation, his attorney said.

The alleged forgery involved Yarbrough and Rothkopf, Vance said.

"This did occur while Justice Yarbrough was a member of the state supreme court," Vance said regarding the allegations in Travis County. "I don't want to get into details of the case whether it involves a supreme court justice or just a lowly man on the street."

Rothkopf said he was in Yarbrough's Austin motel room on May 16 when the jurist supervised the forgery of a title to the automobile, the Post said.

The title initially cropped up in a Harris County civil court at law trial Jan. 26 when Yarbrough testified he deeded the car to Rothkopf in return for what he owed a Houston builder.

The car belonged to Yarbrough when the jurist was in control of the Commercial Bank of Victoria in 1974, Rothkopf said. He said Yarbrough gave him the car in return for staying out of sight when any legal actions came up involving the then Houston attorney.

The Post quoted Rothkopf as saying the complex manuever of obtaining a title in a third person's name for Rothkopf's use involved license plates from an unknown county in Alabama.

He said the alleged Austin forgery was the next step in getting a Texas title and license plates. At the Austin meeting, Rothkopf said Yarbrough told him to write the name of a third person on the title "in bad handwriting."

Rothkopf told the Post that Yarbrough used rubber gloves when he handed him the document because he did not want his latent fingerprints on it.

Rothkopf said he told Yarbrough later in May the plan would not work because he could not produce for Harris County tax authorities a sellers' affidavit saying he had bought the car in Alabama from an individual.

Yarbrough, whose election to the state's highest court was controversial, faces a disbarment trial and several civil suits.

Venezuelan president headed for Carter talks

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — President Carlos Andres Perez leaves for Washington today to talk with President Carter about Venezuelan oil sales to the United States and tariff restrictions for the oil embargo Venezuela didn't participate in.

The Venezuelan president said during his two-day stay in the U.S. capital he would seek restoration of the preferred tariff status taken away from Venezuela because it is a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The U.S. trade act of 1974 removed "most favored nation" tariff status from all OPEC members in retaliation for the 1973 Arab embargo on oil to the United States and Western Europe. But Venezuela, although a founding member of OPEC, ignored the embargo and continued to ship oil to its big northern neighbor.

The trade act has only minor impact on Venezuela's economy, Perez told a news conference Sunday. But he said it "hurts the image of the United States" and has disturbed the "good relations" between the two countries.

Venezuela has been selling a million barrels of crude oil daily to the United States. Perez said Sunday he recently ordered an increase in production to meet increased American demand due to the unusual cold last winter. However, he did not say how much production was being increased. The government limited production to about 2.2 million barrels a day after it nationalized the oil industry in 1976.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Kuwait government, Minister of State Aziz Hussein, said Kuwait's ruler, Sheik Sabah al-Salem al-Sabah, agreed to Perez' recommendation during his recent tour of the Middle East that OPEC members who planned a 5 per cent price increase on July 1 forego it.

Various sources have reported that the 11 OPEC members who agreed on a 10 per cent increase last Jan. 1 would hold the price there, and that Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, the two other members of the cartel who only raised their prices 5 per cent last Jan. 1, would raise them another 5 per cent to equal the price the others voted six months ago.

Perez said he "endorsed absolutely Carter's stand on human rights and on the control of nuclear energy in order to impede the proliferation of atomic arms."

The president said he plans to discuss those issues with Carter and "will try to contribute some initiatives." Venezuela supported the American human rights resolution adopted by the Organization of American States at its annual meeting this month in Grenada.

Yarborough thinking of challenging Tower

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Former U.S. Senator Ralph Yarborough is 74 years old and still owes $7,000 from past campaigns. But he says he's thinking about challenging U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex. in 1978.

Yarborough, an Austin lawyer, said over the weekend that he's "thinking about making the race." He said he hopes to have his decision by September.

If he decides to challenge Tower, who has no Republican opposition, the Democratic war horse would join a growing list of unannounced Democratic contenders for the Senate seat.

Tower has held his office for 15 years, and Yarborough represented Texas in the U.S. Senate for 13 years before he was unseated in 1970 by Lloyd Bentsen.

Dallas Attorney Barefoot Sanders beat Yarborough in a Democratic run-off in 1972.

Sanders, Rep. Bob Krueger, congressman from New Braunfels, and State Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie are all known to be considering the race.

Yarborough's says his philosophies haven't changed since he left office — he still likes to be thought of as a populist.

"I think Sen. Tower and Congressman Krueger are going to have enormous amounts of money put up by special interests," Yarborough said. "You don't see either one of them wasting much time on the common people.

"They serve the monied interests and naturalty the monied interests will pour money in for them."

Various activities since his 1972 defeat have kept Yarborough in a position to keep his liberal political lines out.

He chaired an uncommited bloc of Texas' pro-Carter delegates to the 1976 Democratic national convention and speaks on behalf of other crusades, such as the preservation of the Big Thicket in Southeast Texas.

"I wouldn't run against anybody," he said. "I'd be running for the Senate as a person who had a record of experience for the people."

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The toothpaste market is flooded with all kinds of exotic cavity fighters. Cameron County authorities had to remind Antonio Avalos that marijuana is not one of them.

Avalos' marijuana-stuffed toothpaste tube earned him a stay in the county jail after the 23-year-old Brownsville man allegedly tried to smuggle it to a prisoner he was visiting.

"My electric bills are going up the same as yours. Here's one thing I'm doing about it."

"At Texas Electric, where I work, our job is to provide you with the electricity you need.

But higher construction and fuel costs are making it more expensive to do.

I can tell just by looking at my electric bill.

One thing I do at home is to keep a checklist right on my air-conditioning/heating unit. I have the months listed, and every time I clean the filter I check off that month—so I make sure I check it at least once a month. I couldn't remember it otherwise, and it's important.

A dirty filter limits the air flow through there—and that uses more electricity."

Pilot says tactics led to bomber crew mutiny

By ERNEST VOLKMAN
Newsday

WASHINGTON — Most of the B-52 crews carrying out bombing raids over North Vietnam in 1972 mutinied and refused to fly any more missions because of the Strategic Air Command's refusal to change "inept" tactics, a former B-52 pilot charges in a forthcoming magazine article.

The mutiny, which led to the court-martial and discharge of one officer and the reprimanding of at least a dozen others, was hushed up by the Air Force, the former pilot says. It ended, he adds, only after the Air Force gave in and agreed to change its tactics to those suggested by the crews. The new tactics led to the devastating "Christmas bombing" of North Vietnam in December 1972, that crippled the country and led to the final peace agreement.

An Air Force spokesman said he could not comment on the alleged mutiny — which knowledgeable sources confirmed — without first reading the entire article. However, the spokesman pointed out several inaccuracies in other aspects of the former pilot's account of the 1972 bombing campaign, as the article was described to the spokesman by a reporter.

The description of the alleged mutiny, which occurred during a two-week period, is contained in a long article to be published in two parts in the next two issues of "Soldier of Fortune," a Colorado publication specializing in military affairs. A shorter version of the article will be published in the July issue of "Armed Forces Journal," an authoritative Washington magazine that specializes in in-depth analysis of defense issues and is widely circulated in the defense community.

"Armed Forces Journal" editor Benjamin Schemmer said his staff had checked out the claims in the article he will publish. "We are convinced that the material is accurate," Schemmer said. Robert Brown, editor-publisher of "Soldier of Fortune," said that while his magazine strongly supported U.S. military policy in Vietnam, "when the government messes up, the people have a right to know it."

The article is written by Dana K. Drenkowski, a former Air Force captain who served as a B-52 pilot and as a staff officer during the 1972 bombing raids. Drenkowski, an Air Force Academy graduate, left the Air Force last year after eight years of service. He currently is a free-lance writer residing in Florida, where he was reached to amplify the article. Various Air Force sources with Vietnam combat experience confirmed Drenkowski's account of the mutiny — which, under military law, is the willful refusal to carry out a mission. However, like the Air Force spokesman, they pointed out several inaccuracies in other aspects of his article.

In early 1972, President Nixon decided to unleash U.S. air power over North Vietnam to end a full-scale Communist invasion of South Vietnam. The decision included Nixon's authorization to use a limited number of B-52s over populated industrial areas of North Vietnam for the first time, the mining of Haiphong Harbor and a lifting of many restrictions on targets near population centers. The operation was called "Linebacker" and many details of it remain classified.

The B-52 was, and still is, the U.S. strategic bomber. It carries 30 tons of radar-guided bombs, and in Vietnam a flight of 30 of the planes would drop 900 tons of bombs in an area, known as a "box," half a mile wide and three miles long. Everything in the "box" would be destroyed.

Beginning in early December 1972, B-52 strikes against industrial areas were authorized, as were B-52 flights to supply transshipment points in the Red River Valley, an area that includes Hanoi and Haiphong. Flying into heavy concentrations of surface-to-air missiles and antiaircraft guns, the B-52s took heavy losses. The Air Force never has released complete, official figures on the losses, but Drenkowski says at least 27 bombers were shot down. The Air Force neither would confirm nor deny that figure.

The losses, Drenkowski says, demoralized the B-52 crews, chiefly because SAC refused to change its tactics. Over South Vietnam, where the B-52s had been used for years, the bombers would fly in freely at 35,000 feet in perfect formation to release their bombs. However, there were no enemy missiles in South Vietnam, and the same formations over North Vietnam made the B-52s "sitting ducks" for missiles, Drenkowski says.

Despite pleas by the B-52 crews to change tactics and formations to counter the North Vietnamese defense, Drenkowski says, the Air Force refused. The raids continued to be planned from SAC headquarters in Omaha, he says, and the crews on the scene were not consulted. At the B-52 bases in Utapao, Thailand, and in Guam, he says, a majority of the crews flatly refused to go on further missions, despite Air Force threats of courtmarshal.

One B-52 pilot, Capt. Michael Heck, wrote a letter to then-Sen. Harold Hughes (D-Iowa), complaining that the Air Force was concealing from Congress the heavy losses of B-52s and the high casualty rate of their crews. Heck was court-martialed for refusing to participate in further missions, and he was discharged from the service late in 1972. After his less-than-honorable discharge, Heck attributed his refusal to participate further in the bombing to disenchantment with the "evil" of the war. But the article maintains that he initially was more troubled by the tactics than by the morality of the bombing. Heck could not be reached for comment on the article.

Hughes, the recipient of his letter, helped focus congressional attention on issues related to the bombing, which provoked widespread controversy.

But the mutiny continued. Drenkowski says many crew members feigned illness to the flight surgeons to avoid further missions. Faced with a growing mutiny and continuing losses, the Air Force relented — new tactics were adopted, including employing tighter formations and having bombers attack from several different directions to confuse the defense.

The change came as the B-52s were grounded during a 24-hour "truce," then unleashed on Christmas Day in a total effort ordered by President Nixon to break North Vietnamese "intransigence" at the Paris peace talks. That time, using new tactics, the B-52s almost completely smashed North Vietnam's industrial and transportation network in a furious, around-the-clock assault that lasted 12 days until the North Vietnamese agreed to sign a peace agreement.

Women support ERA

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas Women's Meeting delegates have passed a package of nine resolutions, including measures supporting lesbian rights and national adoption of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Sunday's 740-620 vote in favor of the package came despite efforts by anti-ERA delegates who used parliamentary delaying tactics aimed at killing the resolution supporting the ERA, a proposed women's rights amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Another resolution in the package said that the civil rights of lesbians should be defended "by law and all related powers." It drew surprisingly little debate, but one Houston woman denounced lesbians as an "abomination to God."

"It's obvious that the majority here today was pro-women's rights and pro-minority rights and that's very encouraging," said Judith Guthrie, one of the organizers of the meeting.

Also included in the package were resolutions recommending that President Carter nominate a woman to the U.S. Supreme Court and urging Gov. Dolph Briscoe to appoint a special commission on the status of women and significantly increase the number of minority appointments to high level state positions.

The delegates also elected 58 Texas delegates to an upcoming National Women's Conference in Houston.

NAACP plans to attack 'covert discrimination'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People plans to attack what its leaders call "covert discrimination" during its 68th annual convention here.

About 4,000 delegates were expected to attend the weeklong session that begins today.

On Tuesday, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will address the convention and delegates will pay special tribute to retiring executive director Roy Wilkins.

Wilkins, 75, who has served as the association's executive secretary, administrator and executive director over the last 22 years, is being succeeded by Benjamin L. Hooks.

At a news conference Sunday Wilkins said, "I don't relish getting out of harness. But I plan to continue as a consultant. I will hold Mr. Hooks' hand."

Wilkins stymied efforts to remove him from office at last year's convention in Memphis, but promised to retire this year. His activities in the past year have been confined primarily to promotion and fundraising for the 450,000-member organization.

Margaret Bush Wilson, chairman of the NAACP's board of directors, said the convention will deal with some new dimensions, emphasizing that the civil and human rights movement has shifted from attacking overt racism to dealing with covert racism.

NAACP leaders say economic disparity between whites and blacks is an example of covert racism.

One of the primary problems facing blacks today, Mrs. Wilson said, is the lack of economic parity with whites. During its history, she said, the NAACP has made far more progress in the areas of education, political action and social equality than it has in economics.

"Economics is the last frontier," she said. "With a GNP (gross national product) of 70 billion dollars, we have less than one-half of one per cent of the wealth in this country."

Mother of accused man prays son will show up

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — The mother of Gene Leroy Hart, the man charged with the slayings of three Girl Scouts, says if the evidence against him is as strong as authorities say, she'd "ask him to turn himself in" if she had any idea where he is.

"I'd even walk with him," Ella Mae Sullateskee Buckskin said Sunday.

"I just pray about it, that one of these days he might show up," Mrs. Buckskin, 51, said of the eldest of her seven sons.

"I think he's out of state. If he was around this part of Oklahoma I believe he'd come to anyone's house and ask for something to eat. He can't live off this land."

Mrs. Buckskin talked with two reporters Sunday afternoon before attending church in Tahlequah, 25 miles south of here.

Authorities have been searching a 40-square mile area of rough and low rolling hills for Hart, who was charged Thursday with the first-degree murder of the three Tulsa area Girl Scouts. The girls were beaten and sexually abused in the early hours of June 13 at summer camp here.

Meanwhile, sources close to the investigation said Sunday that at least one other possible suspect is being considered in the case. They would not elaborate.

Mrs. Buckskin said Sunday she last heard from her 33year-old son in a letter from Canada dated November 25, 1973, after he had escaped from the Mayes County Jail where he had been serving time for rape and burglary.

Saccharin ban facing year's delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee is considering a bill that would delay a government ban on the artificial sweetener saccharin while further tests are made.

The House health and environment subcommittee planned hearings today on legislation that would order a one-year federal study of a number of food additives, including saccharin, in an effort to determine which cause cancer.

The hearings follow a rash of activity in Congress, prompted by the Food and Drug Administration's ban on saccharin in foods and beverages.

The House voted last week to withhold funds during the next 15 months for the enforcement of the saccharin ban. But a Senate panel rejected this proposal after assurances were given that legislation setting an 18-month delay of any saccharin ban is being prepared.

After new evidence on saccharin came to light, the FDA promised to reopen its hearing process in order to evaluate it.

The new evidence was an unpublished Canadian epidemiologic study concluding that saccharin is a human carcinogen. Data collected during the research showed that males using saccharin have a significantly higher risk of developing bladder cancer.

Midlander jailed after leading police unit on high-speed chase

Charges of driving while intoxicated and retaliation against a police officer were filed today against Ricardo Baeza, 18, of 705 N. Lincoln St. in connection with a high speed chase on Lamesa Road Saturday night.

According to reports, a police unit was called to Hogan Park about 9 p.m. Saturday where they said they saw a man in a car forcing other cars off the road and feinting at pedestrians.

The officers said when they approached the car, it sped off on Wadley Road. At that time, another officer came on the scene and blocked Wadley Road just east of Lamesa Road with his police car.

The officers said the man then drove his car into the police car that was blocking the road and backed into a following police car, which was about 30 feet away on Wadley Road.

The man then sped south on Lamesa Road with two police units following it, police said. The man was clocked at a speed of 95 mph at one time on the busy street, police said.

The chase ended when the man and a vehicle driven by Calvin Ray Lee, 21, of 1716 E. Oak Ave., collided while Lee was attempting to back out of a driveway, police said.

The force of the impact caused the fleeing man's vehicle to slide into the path of a car driven by Julio Pere Brito, 30, of 407 E. Dormard Ave, police said.

The man was arrested and taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released from hospital care.

Bond for Baeza was set at $7,500 by Justice of the Peace John Biggs.

Attends workshop

Dr. Elizabeth Robinett, counselor at Midland College, attended a one-day workshop in Houston recently, sponsored by the Institute for Creative Family Living.

PARTS TAKEN

Burglars took $500 worth of typewriter parts from the pickup of Bill M. Turner of 3415 W. Michigan Ave. sometime between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Turner told police someone entered the back of the pickup by raising the camper door and took a tool box containing the parts.

66 Vietnamese refugees find home in Israel

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

TEL AVIV — Sixty-six Vietnamese men, women and children who had fled their own country in a fishing boat — and then found that no nation wanted to take them in — were welcomed in Israel Sunday.

Greeting them at the airport, a representative of Prime Minister Menahem Begin said that they would receive all possible aid. "Jews know very well what it feels like to be a refugee with every door being closed in one's face," he said.

The skipper of the Israeli freighter Yuvali had picked them up off the coast of Vietnam June 10 after five other ships had passed without offering them aid. The 45-foot boat was taking on water and running out of fuel, water and food.

The refugees had hoped to go to Cambodia or Malaysia and seek entry to the United States. But the United States refused to grant them visas, and no other Asian country would even let them land.

The Israeli government said two weeks ago that it would take them if no other country would. Israel, as it turned out, was the only nation that would. At the Taiwan port where the Yuvali stopped to unload phosphate fertilizer, Taiwanese authorities posted a guard to make sure that no one slipped ashore.

The 66 decided to accept Israel's offer. And Sunday the group, arriving via Bangkok, landed in Israel — a country many of them had not even heard of before the Yuvali plucked them from the sea.

A umber of the refugees were in tears as they came down the ramp of an airliner at Ben-Gurion airport, to be greeted by officials of the Immigrant Absorption Ministry, and a crowd of newsmen. Each was given $70, a quantity of canned food and a packet of tea.

The refugees, some of them Buddhist but most Roman Catholics, were taken to the immigration terminal and, after official greetings, were processed just as if they had been Jewish immigrants. They were sent later to an absorption center 50 miles south of here for the same orientation program Israel offers Jewish newcomers.

The Israeli government will house them in apartments in the absorption center, where they will live five or six months while they study Hebrew and learn about the Israeli way of life and opportunities for jobs and education.

Foreign Ministry officials said that about half the refugees still wanted to go to the United States and that they would be given help toward this. The others will remain in Israel, the officials said.

They will at first be temporary residents but presumably will be given the same citizenship options as Jewish newcomers. Israeli immigration is not closed to non-Jews but, like other countries, Israel studies what prospective residents have to offer before accepting them. In effect, nearly all immigrants here are Jewish. Except for a few Chinese, there are few Orientals in the country.

"I hope that you can feel in my voice what I feel about it," said Tran Quang Hoa, 33, a former doctor in the South Vietnamese army, "because it is difficult for me to find words to express my emotions about the kindness of the governmemt and of the people of Israel."

The doctor, who was the spokesman for the group, had been one of the leaders of the plot to defect from Communist Vietnam. He had been captured, he said, a month before the fall of the South Vietnamese government in April, 1975, and spent 16 months in "concentration camps."

"What the Viet Cong have done to Vietnam is unbelievable," he said. "The only thing the Communists wanted to do with us was get revenge."

Using faked identification papers, the members of their group made their way from Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City, to a fishing boat harbor near Phan Rang, 120 miles to the north. On June 6, they sailed.

"After four days and four nights we were running out of everything," the doctor said. "We thought we were off the coast of Cambodia, and we tried to get help from passing ships. Two passed us in the night — I don't know what country they were from — without stopping. during the daytime one from Panama, one from Japan and another from East Germany passed us and would not give us anything."

Then the Yuvali appeared. "We made flags of our shirts and waved them, and waved a Red Cross flag we made," he said. "We put the babies and the women on deck so they could feed them — they had suffered very much. There were 16 children with us, from five months to 14 years." The Yuvali stopped.

"We asked for food, water and fuel oil," the doctor said. "We said we would keep going, to Cambodia or Malaysia. But the captain could see that we had suffered too much. He decided to pick us up from the sea and bring us on the ship.

"When we got on the ship," the doctor said, his English faltering at times, "we said, 'We are in liberty country, not Communist.' We were sure no one would put us back in Vietnam."

Captain Meir Tadmore made room for the women and children in the quarters of his 30-man crew and gave the vietnamese men places to sleep on deck.

Taiwan, Hong Kong and Japan, as well as the United States, denied the refugees the right to enter. The United Nations could offer no help. Capt. Tadmore began to feel as if he had 66 permanent guests.

Then the outgoing overnment of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin broached the possibility of bringing the vietnamese to Israel. The new government of Prime Minister Menahem Begin made an official offer last week.

"I did not know where Israel was," said Duong Van Hen, 37, a baker, who was accompanied by his wife and three children. "But I wanted to get out of Vietnam.

He looked around the busy immigrant terminal and said, "I am sure I can be a baker here."

"We want to earn our livelihood," said Dr. Hoa, "not to receive free what the Israeli people give to us. The Israelis understand our problem. But we want to work ourselves to earn our living."

The Israeli public had expressed a strong interest in the vietnamese as soon as their plight became known. Israel was in part founded by refugees who came from Europe in overcrowded, leaky vessels like the Exodus, the name of which became the title of a book and film and the label for a massive population shift.

The Jerusalem Post editorialized:

"For Israelis, the refusal of South Asian countries to permit the entry of these refugees, saved from sure death at sea by the action of a humane Israeli captain, conjures up the trauma of the 1940s, when Jewish refugees seeking to escape death at the hands of Hitler were refused entry into British Palestine and other Mediterranean ports."

Did monk make same journey?

Agence France-Presse

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — A 36-foot leather boat called The Brendan arrived in the northern Newfoundland port of Musgrave Sunday night to finish a trans-Atlantic trip intended to show that the Irish monk St. Brendan could have been the first European to visit America.

The Brendan was towed the last few kilometers into port by the Canadian Coast Guard, after waiting all day for favorable winds.

The three sailors and English skipper Tim Sverin claim they have repeated, under the same conditions, a 6th-century exploit by St. Brendan, who has been said to have been the first European to set foot in the Americas.

The leather boat left Ireland in May 1976 and spent the winter in Iceland, which it left last May 11. Tired but happy, the four nevigators planned to spend the night at Gander, Newfoundland, near the international airport.

UFO believers gather

LONGMIRE, Wash. (AP) — About 40 persons who have seen, or believe in, unidentified flying objects, attended the New Age Convention over the weekend just outside the gates of Mt. Rainier National Park.

It was 30 years ago last Friday that Kenneth Arnold, a Seattle-area pilot, sighted nine pulsing objects weaving around Mt. Rainier. His description led to the term "flying saucers."

To the dismay of the convention goers, no "uninvited" guests showed up.

Graham discusses secret fund

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham said his organization has been reluctant to discuss finances, including a secret $22.9 million fund, for fear the public would think it too rich.

The Charlotte Observer reported Sunday that Graham spoke publicly about the fund for the first time last week, admitting his ministry has tried to keep it hidden from public view.

Graham said a second reason for the secrecy was to avoid being inundated with requests for help.

The fund, known as the World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund of Dallas, Tex., includes assets in land, stocks, bonds and cash that have been amassed in an apparently legal manner over the past seven years, the newspaper reported.

It supports such groups as Campus Crusade for Christ, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Baptist World Alliance and Young Life, and reportedly has given away as much as $1.2 million in a single year.

Between 80 and 90 per cent of the fund's receipts each year come from the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, the main arm of the Graham ministry. But the two million contributors a year, whose gifts to Graham's ministry average less than $10 each, have never been told of the fund, which makes the ministry far wealthier than ever reported, the newspaper said.

Among assets of the World Evangelism fund, according to the Observer, are 2,600 acres of prime undeveloped land in Buncombe County, N.C., valued at $3.6 million, and a $19.3 million portfolio of blue-chip stocks and bonds, including AT&T, Exxon, General Electric and IBM.

Graham told the newspaper last fall he thought it would be wrong for his organization to own stock because such ownership could be construed as endorsement of a corporation.

Included in the Buncombe County holdings is a 500-acre tract of mountain land about 15 miles east of Asheville, which was purchased in 1973 from the Broad River Corp. The corporation's founders include Edward Dawson Roberts, also a founder of the Bank of World Commerce in Nassau, the Bahamas, the newspaper said.

Law enforcement officials have found the bank to be involved helping organized crime figures disguise money that was illegally acquired, the Observer said. But in an interview with the newspaper, Roberts said his only involvement with the bank was to draw up the papers of incorporation.

Graham, his associates and lawyers and realtors involved in the transaction said they knew nothing of Roberts' reported connection with the Nassau bank, the newspaper said.

The land was to be used for a "laymen's training center" when it was purchased, but the Graham organization later found a more suitable piece of land for the institute on a 1,100acre site near Asheville, Wilson told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Montreat, N.C.

1981 cars must average 22 mpg, Adams announces

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams Sunday announced a rapid acceleration of federal fuel-economy standards for the automobile industry in model years 1981 through 1984.

Discounting warnings from the big-four Detroit car manufacturers that sharp increases in such standards could depress sales and lead to reductions in employment throughout the economy, Adams said an average fuel economy of 22 miles per gallon will be required for 1981 models.

He said an average manufacturer's fleet fuel economy must increase to 24 miles per gallon 1982, 26 miles per gallon in 1983 and 27 miles per gallon in 1984.

Moreover, Adams ordered his department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to review even more stringent standards for car manufacturers in 1985 and beyond, and perhaps for the 1984 models.

He claimed the new rules would mean only small changes in the price of cars. Some of the fuel-saving measures he envisions would lead to an $80 drop in 1981-model prices, and even in 1984 prices should rise by no more than $50, he said.

However, auto industry leaders have warned that the billions of dollars required to build new produciton facilities for smaller cars will inevitably lead to higher consumer prices.

Congress previously set standards of 18, 19 and 20 miles per gallon for the model years 1978, 1979 and 1980 and also established a long-range goal of 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985 models.

"These standards insure that the American public will have available in the next decade cars that have good fuel economy, improved safety and low emissions," Adams said Sunday. "Cars built in the early 1980s to meet these standards should save the new-car owner about $1,000 over the life of the vehicle compared with those being manufactured today."

The decision was required by the Motor Vehicle information and Cost Savings Act. Average fuel economy figures are computed on the basis of average consumption of all passenger automobiles in a company's line for a particular model year.

To determine minimum standards, Adams was required to consider technological feasibility, economic practicability, the effect of other automobile standards on fuel economy and the need to conserve energy.

"The standards are readily achieveable with presently known technology and the prospect of further fuel economy improvements through additional weight reduction and alternative engines supports the need for considering higher fuel economy requirements for 1985 and beyond," Adams said.

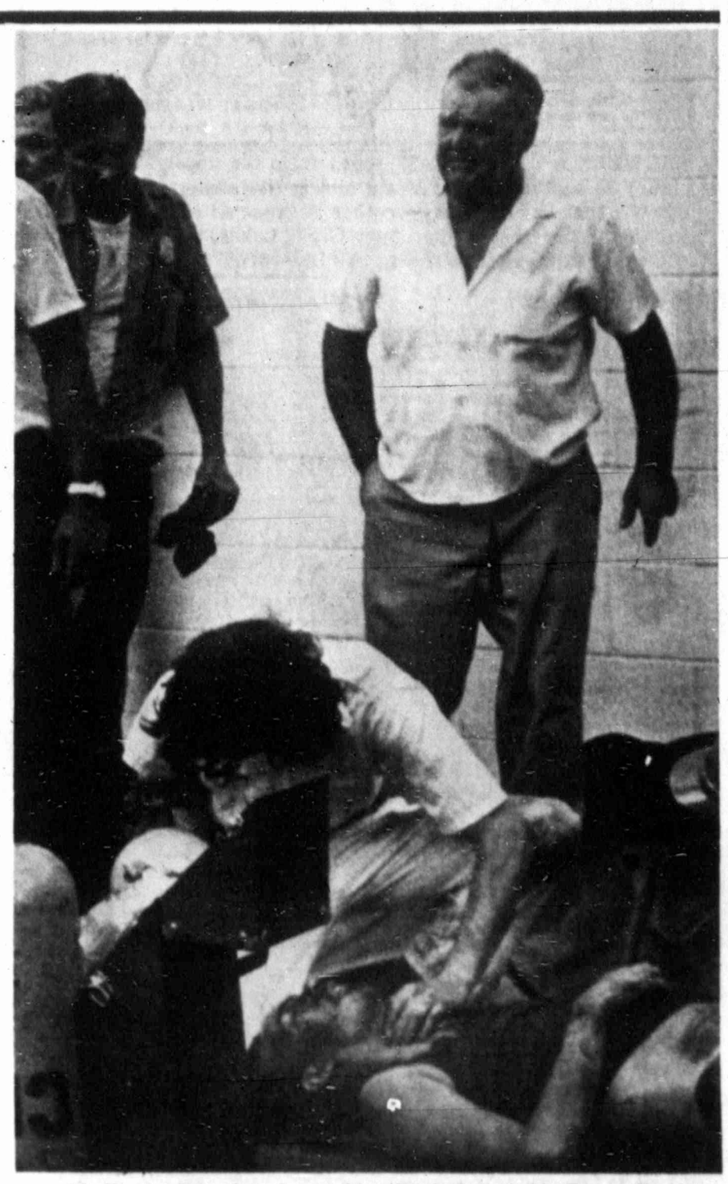

If the Department of Transportation decides on any increase beyond the 27.5 miles per gallon standard already set by Congress, it could be vetoed by Congress.

While American auto manufacturers have agreed that reaching the 27.5 miles per gallon standard in 1985 and any interim increases are technologically feasible, they have warned the government that moving too fast could jeopardize the entire economy.

Between 1974 and 1977 model years, according to Environmental Protection Agency estimates, the average fuel economy of new cars increased 34 per cent — from 13.9 miles per gallon to 18.6 miles per gallon.

According to Henry L. Duncombe Jr., chief economist for General Motors, the steps necessary to meet rapidly increasing and high average fuel economy standards could make new cars less attractive to consumers. Many may thus decide to keep their older, less energy-efficient cars, perhaps resulting in higher total

Proposed tax said potentially lethal to petrochemical industry

By MARTIN MERZER

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's energy proposal now before Congress includes a tax that would force much of the $40 billion petrochemical industry out of the country, industry spokesmen warn.

And that would mean the loss of many of the 390,000 American jobs now directly related to the industry, the spokesmen say.

Administration spokesmen refuse to comment directly on the industry threat. But they say the industry is going to be damaged anyway, if not by higher taxes — aimed at conservation — then by a scarcity of petroleum, the major raw material of petrochemicals. The policy does not "attempt to appease one interest or another," a spokesman said.

The main petrochemical-industry objections are to Carter's proposed tax on oil at the well and an additional tax on major industrial users of oil. The industry says the taxes would raise costs so much that foreign competitors would have an advantage.

The consumer would pay more in any case, either for more expensive foreign products or for domestic products whose prices would be increased to offset the new taxes.

Under the President's plan, the first tax, a $3 levy, would bring prices up to the world level by 1980; the "user" tax — applied primarily to the petrochemical industry — would start at 90 cents a barrel in 1979 and increase to $3 by 1985.

But the petrochemical industry says the taxes, currently being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee, would increase "feedstock" costs from $3 below world price levels now to $3 above the levels by 1985. Feedstock is oil that is used as a raw material in a refinery or petrochemical plant.

"The question is: What do you do if you're non-competitive?" said Robert Mitchell, executive vice president of Celanese Corp. "The first thing is that we lose our export markets ($10 billion of the $40 billion in annual sales). Then, the foreign competitor can compete in the U.S."

"This positive impact on our nation's balance of trade would be lost over the next few years as the Carter taxes phase in," said Ronald S. Wishart, director of energy policy for Union Carbide. "... In place of oil imports, we might be importing more chemicals as well as other energy-intensive products such as steel and aluminum."

How would the dozens of U.S. petrochemical firms react?

"Given a free world for investment purposes," Mitchell said, "what will evolve is a shift of the petrochemical industry — assuming a degree of political stability — to the Mideast."

An industry spokesman said firms might simply abandon their American plants if they found that "it was not economically beneficial to run them."

But Jim Bishop, an administration spokesman, added that if Carter's conservation-designed proposals are not accepted, the industry soon will have to deal with critical shortages of raw materials — a problem every bit as serious as increased taxes.

Officials said there are no plans to protect the industry by imposing quotas on imports of petrochemical products.

Djibouti becomes nation

By ELIAS ANTAR

DJIBOUTI (AP) — The republic of Djibouti, a Massachusetts-size patch of salt and sand at the southern end of the Red Sea, became Africa's 49th independent state early today amid fireworks and 21-gun salutes.

The new nation's future is threatened by its rival Marxist-ruled neighbors, Somalia and Ethiopia, and a lack of any natural resources except salt and its strategic location. It will depend on France, its colonial ruler for 115 years, for troops to protect it and economic aid to keep it alive.

President Hassan Gouled raised the republic's flag—green and blue with a red star — at one minute after midnight to open three days of independence celebrations. French warships in the harbor of the capital fired gun salutes and blew their sirens. There were fireworks and people chanted "Long Live Independence!" But the atmosphere generally was quiet and restrained.

Djibouti is coveted by Ethiopia because its capital is Ethiopia's chief port and the terminus of the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad. Somalia wants it because more than half of its 300,000 people are ethnic Somalis and it is part of the "Greater Somalia" which the Somali government is pledged to unite.

Western Europe, the United States, the Soviet Union, Israel and the Arabs are concerned about the control of Djibouti because it is situated on the south side of the Bab el Mandeb, the strait which connects the Suez Canal and Red Sea with the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean. About 70 ships a day pass through the strait, including oil tankers and warships of many nations.

The leader of Ethiopia's military government, Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, told a rally in Addis Ababa on Saturday that Somalia has designs on Djibouti. Somali President Siad Barre has said it is Ethiopia which intends to take over Djibouti and Somalia has a duty to defend it.

Leaders of Somalia and Ethiopia were invited to the independence ceremonies but did not come. Some 15 countries, the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and the Arab League are represented.

Formerly known as French Somaliland, Djibouti in 1967 was renamed the Territory of Afars and Issas, for its two major tribes. The Afars have ties with Ethiopia while the more numerous Issas, who provide Gouled's major support, are ethnic Somalis.

Gouled said the republic will pursue a neutral foreign policy. He said it will join the Arab League but will allow Israeli ships to use the strait.

Jailhouse fire leaves 42 dead

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Forty-two persons, 34 of them inmates trapped in their locked cells, were killed when a 16-year-old inmate set his foam rubber-padded cell afire, sending toxic fumes billowing through the Maury County Jail, authorities said.

Rescue of the victims was hampered when a deputy sheriff carrying keys to the jail's 12 cells collided with fleeing visitors and dropped the keys on the floor. It took him about 12 minutes to find the keys, officials said.

Dist. Atty. Gen. Robert H. Gay said following the fire that started about 2 p.m. Sunday that he planned to charge Andy Zinmer, 16, with arson. Gay said he would ask to have Zinmer tried as an adult.

Zinmer was taken to a Nashville hospital and reported in critical condition, suffering from burns and smoke inhalation.

Authorities in Waukesha, Wis., said records show Zinmer, formely of Superior, Wis., was reported missing from Lad Lake Inc., Doussman, Wis., a residential treatment center for emotionally disturbed teenagers.

Zinmer was removed from the jail's drunk tank on Saturday and placed in the padded cell because he had stuffed up a toilet and caused a flood, authorites said. State law requires that juveniles be segregated from adult prisoners and officials said the padded cell was the only other facility available.

Chief Deputy Bob Farme said Zinmer was pulled from the jail's padded cell. "Me and another officer drug him out," Farmer said. "He said he set it."

Eight of the 42 victims were visitors leaving at the end of Sunday's one-hour visiting period. Six of the visitors were women.

There were 56 inmates in the jail at the time of the fire. Of the 22 who escaped, 19 were flown by helicopters to two hospitals in Nashville, about 60 miles north of Columbia, officials said.

Authorities said 18 other persons, including two firemen, were treated for injuries at local hospitals.

Gov. Ray Blanton, who flew over the fire in a helicopter, said, "We know it has to be one of the greatest tragedies we've ever had in Tennessee."

Blanton promised an investigation. "When you have 42 persons dead within a few minutes," he said, "you need to know why they were lost."

Authorities said the burning foam rubber in the padded cell spewed heavy smoke and toxic fumes, including carbon monoxide and possibly some cyanide gas, through an air duct system, setting off panic among the inmates and visitors.

The city's main fire station is about a block from the jail, which officials said did not have a fire alarm or contingency plans for evacuation in case of fire. Firemen arrived promptly but were driven back from rescue efforts by the dense, toxic smoke.

Rescuers seeking to get to the trapped inmates and prisoners used sledgehammers to punch holes in the concrete building. A tow truck arrived at the jail about 10 minutes after the fire was reported and was used to knock down one of the jail's walls in an effort to reach the trapped victims.

Newton deportation sought

BRAMPTON, Canada (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton, en route from Cuba to stand trial for murder in California, must remain in a Canadian jail at least until Wednesday.

Immigration authorities held a deportation hearing Sunday for Newton, whom they arrested shortly after his Havana-Toronto flight landed Saturday night.

Canadian officials said they were seeking to deport the 35-year-old co-founder of the Panthers because of previous criminal convictions. But Newton said he wanted 10 days of freedom in Canada to confer with his lawyers in preparation for his trial in the United States.

The hearing was adjourned until Wednesday when a Toronto lawyer representing Newton, Paul Copeland, asked for time to send for documents related to the California homicide case. He claimed the papers would show Newton is being held illegally.

Newton's team of lawyers produced letters from U.S. and California authorities saying they would not seek to extradite the black militant. The attorneys said the U.S. Justice Department is dropping a charge of unlawful flight, the only federal charge against Newton.

However, Newton was ordered back to jail until the hearing resumes, immigration officials said.

Newton's 27-year-old wife, Gwen, accompanied him from Havana and was allowed to enter Canada.

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Congress and President Carter are preparing to make crucial decisions this week that could determine whether the controversial B1 bomber has a future.

The House is to vote Tuesday on an effort to delete all production money for the B1 bomber from a $110.6-billion defense appropriation bill.

The appropriations measure also may be used as the vehicle for amendments that would outlaw assassinations and other interference in the affairs of other nations by U.S. intelligence agencies.

President Carter's aides say he plans to decide by the end of the week whether to put the strategic bomber into production or scrap it.

The House effort to chop all B1 production money out of the $110.6-billion defense bill is being led by Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., who said Carter should oppose the B1 as he promised he would during his presidential campaign.

"President Carter announced during his campaign that the B1 was not a viable weapon," Addabbo told the House in opening debate. "That same fact is true today."

Willie Nelson gladdens thousands of hearts

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

ODESSA — Willie Nelson came to town.

And the people's hearts were gladdened.

You could tell.

They were of good cheer when he walked onto the stage and sang "Whiskey River."

And they were of equally good cheer and abundantly blessed with the bountiful singing of this good soul a score or so of songs later.

It was, at least, Nelson's second coming to this "rough 'n' tumble" oil town.

None of the thousands who came from all around to the Ector County Coliseum last Thursday night to hear Nelson and company could sanely have second thoughts about spending seven bucks a piece to enjoy this outlaw.

Certainly, he doesn't fall into the norm of Country 'n' Western music. But you could wager (and likely win) that good ol' Hank Williams, in his happier days, would applaud Nelson. Of course, his was a sad and troubled heart. Nelson has cried, too. For sure.

On this night, Nelson was wearing blue jeans, a T-shirt and soft footwear, when he came onto the stage with his old Martin guitar. He's played that old faithful so darn much that he's plumb worn a hole in it just below the sixth string.

He was the billboard attraction. He needed no embellishment to attract a crowd. Nelson comes and the hordes are there.

Nevertheless, two sideshows of diverse musical bands played for Nelson's fans. Remarkably enough, Willie Nelson followers are a motley lot. They may prefer pure Country 'n' Western, rock 'n' roll, classical or

Hot weather returns to sear Basin area

Hot and fair weather returned to the Permian Basin after last week's rains brought cooler temperatures and the National Weather Service at Midland Air Terminal predicts more hot temperatures at least through Tuesday.

The National Weather Service also forecasted a chance of rain this afternoon and tonight.

Midland received .08 inch of rain Sunday evening at the Midland Air Terminal, the National Weather Service said.

Lamesa was the only other area town reporting rain Sunday, but Andrews reported "a lot of thunder." The other area towns reported clear skies, warm temperatures and calm winds early today.

The forecast for the Permian Basin calls for fair skies today through Tuesday with hot afternoons and a slight chance of thunderstorms late this afternoon and tonight. High today and Tuesday will be near 102, and tonight the low 70s. Winds will be southerly at 10 to 20 mph today and tonight. Probability of rain is 20 per cent this afternoon and tonight.

Very heavy thunderstorms were reported early today along the Red River from near Childress to near Denton and other thunderstorms were reported in scattered areas of West and Southwest Texas.

The National Weather Service blamed the long-lasting thunderstorms on the very high moisture content of the air over Texas.

In West and Southwest Texas, the thunderstorms were reported over the eastern portion of the high plains and in the mountains.

In addition to the area of thunderstorms, skies were cloudy over the southeastern part of the state and clear elsewhere. Winds were light and southerly over most of the state except gusty in the area of the thunderstorms.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s although a few readings were noted in the middle 60s in the Panhandle and mountains. Some early morning readings included 70 at Amarillo, 73 at Wichita Falls, 76 at Texarkana, 78 at Dallas, 72 at Houston, 75 at Alice, 76 at Del Rio, 79 at El Paso, 73 at San Angelo, 70 at Lubbock and 66 a Dalhart, the Associated Press reported.

plane could influence Carter's decision but it cannot seal the plane's fate. Should the House delete the B1 funds, the Senate could still restore the money and the two chambers would have to reach a compromise.

In other action this week, the House is to vote Wednesday on setting up a new intelligence committee.

Carter and the intelligence agencies want one committee so they can limit the number of congressmen toqwhom they must report secret operations, thereby limiting the risk of leaks.

Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Mo., has introduced amendments to ban assassinations and foreign government interference by U.S. intelligence agents but his office said Friday he had made no final decision to press for votes on them.

The amendments would abolish the CIA's $35-million reserve fund, prohibit assassinations and outlaw U.S. intelligence operations aimed at influencing foreign elections or government actions.

whatever. (Some call Nelson's music both progressive country and redneck rock.)

First, Asleep at the Wheel played the brand of western swing music that made Bob Wills famous and, like Nelson, an outlaw among the traditional Nashville lot.

This Texas-bred band lit into "Miles and Miles of Texas," among other numbers.

Asleep went away and was following by the rock 'n' roll band, Firefall.

It seemed a bit out of place: pop rock thrown in between western swing, Willie Nelson's downhome and uptown country sounds. But Nelson fans crisscross the musical barriers, so . . .

So, Nelson sang: "Whiskey River," "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain," "Good Hearted Woman" (without Waylon Jennings), "Shotgun Willie," "Red Headed Stranger," "Just As I Am," "Amazing Grace," . . . and on and on.

Don't cross him, don't boss him
He's wild in his sorrow
Ridin' and hiding' his pain. Don't fight him, don't spite him Just wait till tomorrow
Maybe he'll ride on again.

Nelson sang and so often reached back to sip or guzzle from can after can of Lone Star beer.

Occasionally, Nelson relented, walked into the shadows, and let his bass picker, Bee Spears, do his singing best at the microphone.

And Paul English, the Gene Krupa of country sounds, handily displayed his flair for the drums. It was exciting. Striking, too, was Nelson's sister, Bobbie, at the piano. She played rag-time.

Again and again, Nelson subtly proved himself a superb showman. His band left Nelson alone on the stage when he sang "A Song for You" . . . "now we're alone . . . .

And after the show was supposedly over, fans flocked to the stage. Nelson freely imparted kisses to the eager girls and women folks, passed out a can of Lone Star, shook many a hand and returned for an encore that was a grand show in itself.

He kicked the late-night show off with Bob Wills' "Milk Cow Blues" and sang both old and new stuff. The encore was worth another seven bucks.

It was after midnight when the encore was over. But that bled into yet a third "show": an onstage autograph party.

He signed belts, programs, red Willie Nelson bandannas, white Willie Nelson T-shirts that were selling for $5 each, much more, and at least one plaster-of-Paris leg cast.

Some showman, that Willie Nelson. He's 44, seemingly untiring, bearded and crowd-pleasing.

He shed his familiar headband and gave it to a fan. He did the same with his blue T-shirt — pulled it right off — and slipped on a Willie Nelson monogrammed T-shirt. You could tell that he was pleased to do it.

Truly, it appeared that Nelson was as appreciative of his good-hearted disciples as they were of him.

And come again, Shotgun Willie, 'cause the world hereabouts will be a'waiting and listening for your return.

Midland, area counties named for drought relief

Midland County is among 76 counties in Arkansas, Michigan, and Texas eligible to participate in a federal drought relief program, according to Robert T. Hall, assistant secretary of commerce for economic development.

Midland County agent Charlie Green added that the present drought conditions have been building up since fall. And although patches of the county have had as much as five inches of rain in recent weeks, drought conditions exist in most of the county, he said.

According to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal normal rainfall to date is 6.24 inches, but only 4.11 inches had been recorded as of Friday.

The federal drought relief program is being conducted by the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce and provides $175 million for grants and loans for water projects in drought-stricken areas.

The goal of the program under provisions of the Community Emergency Relief Act of 1977 is to help communities carry out short-term actions to insure adequate water supplies for health, safety and economic stability.

Also listed as eligible are the counties of Andrews, Borden, Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Lubbock, Martin, Tom Green, Upton and Ward.

fuel consumption. There are 100 million cars on the nation's highways.

Both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., respectively the largest and second-largest auto manufacturers, had urged Adams to increase fuel economy standards more gradually in the early years of the 1980s. They said reduced auto sales that could develop from higher standards would mean losses of jobs not only in the auto industry but in other sectors of the economy directly connected with production and distribution of automobiles.

American Motors Corp., smallest of the car makers, urged Adams to innovate in fuel economy standards so that each manufacturer could plan on its own.

AMC suggested that Adams permit each manufacturer to work with the government on developing its own schedule for meeting the existing 1985 standards of 27.5 miles per gallon. Alternatively, AMC proposed a two-step increase in the fuel economy standards — one in the eary 1980s to be followed by the 1985 requirement.

But Adams said yesterday that since the technology exists to meet higher standards, that is what his department will require.

Adams said manufacturers have many methods available to reach the increased standard, including cutting the size of new cars without reducing interior space, a program already undertaken by GM; a 10 per cent reduction in acceleration capability, and the use of more lightweight materials, such as aluminum, plastics and high-strength steel.

66 Vietnamese refugees find home in Israel

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

TEL AVIV — Sixty-six Vietnamese men, women and children who had fled their own country in a fishing boat — and then found that no nation wanted to take them in — were welcomed in Israel Sunday.

Greeting them at the airport, a representative of Prime Minister Menahem Begin said that they would receive all possible aid. "Jews know very well what it feels like to be a refugee with every door being closed in one's face," he said.

The skipper of the Israeli freighter Yuvali had picked them up off the coast of Vietnam June 10 after five other ships had passed without offering them aid. The 45-foot boat was taking on water and running out of fuel, water and food.

The refugees had hoped to go to Cambodia or Malaysia and seek entry to the United States. But the United States refused to grant them visas, and no other Asian country would even let them land.

The Israeli government said two weeks ago that it would take them if no other country would. Israel, as it turned out, was the only nation that would. At the Taiwan port where the Yuvali stopped to unload phosphate fertilizer, Taiwanese authorities posted a guard to make sure that no one slipped ashore.

The 66 decided to accept Israel's offer. And Sunday the group, arriving via Bangkok, landed in Israel — a country many of them had not even heard of before the Yuvali plucked them from the sea.

A umber of the refugees were in tears as they came down the ramp of an airliner at Ben-Gurion airport, to be greeted by officials of the Immigrant Absorption Ministry, and a crowd of newsmen. Each was given $70, a quantity of canned food and a packet of tea.

The refugees, some of them Buddhist but most Roman Catholics, were taken to the immigration terminal and, after official greetings, were processed just as if they had been Jewish immigrants. They were sent later to an absorption center 50 miles south of here for the same orientation program Israel offers Jewish newcomers.

The Israeli government will house them in apartments in the absorption center, where they will live five or six months while they study Hebrew and learn about the Israeli way of life and opportunities for jobs and education.

Foreign Ministry officials said that about half the refugees still wanted to go to the United States and that they would be given help toward this. The others will remain in Israel, the officials said.

They will at first be temporary residents but presumably will be given the same citizenship options as Jewish newcomers. Israeli immigration is not closed to non-Jews but, like other countries, Israel studies what prospective residents have to offer before accepting them. In effect, nearly all immigrants here are Jewish. Except for a few Chinese, there are few Orientals in the country.

"I hope that you can feel in my voice what I feel about it," said Tran Quang Hoa, 33, a former doctor in the South Vietnamese army, "because it is difficult for me to find words to express my emotions about the kindness of the governmemt and of the people of Israel."

The doctor, who was the spokesman for the group, had been one of the leaders of the plot to defect from Communist Vietnam. He had been captured, he said, a month before the fall of the South Vietnamese government in April, 1975, and spent 16 months in "concentration camps."

"What the Viet Cong have done to Vietnam is unbelievable," he said. "The only thing the Communists wanted to do with us was get revenge."

Using faked identification papers, the members of their group made their way from Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City, to a fishing boat harbor near Phan Rang, 120 miles to the north. On June 6, they sailed.

"After four days and four nights we were running out of everything," the doctor said. "We thought we were off the coast of Cambodia, and we tried to get help from passing ships. Two passed us in the night — I don't know what country they were from — without stopping. during the daytime one from Panama, one from Japan and another from East Germany passed us and would not give us anything."

Then the Yuvali appeared. "We made flags of our shirts and waved them, and waved a Red Cross flag we made," he said. "We put the babies and the women on deck so they could feed them — they had suffered very much. There were 16 children with us, from five months to 14 years." The Yuvali stopped.

"We asked for food, water and fuel oil," the doctor said. "We said we would keep going, to Cambodia or Malaysia. But the captain could see that we had suffered too much. He decided to pick us up from the sea and bring us on the ship.

"When we got on the ship," the doctor said, his English faltering at times, "we said, 'We are in liberty country, not Communist.' We were sure no one would put us back in Vietnam."

Captain Meir Tadmore made room for the women and children in the quarters of his 30-man crew and gave the vietnamese men places to sleep on deck.

Taiwan, Hong Kong and Japan, as well as the United States, denied the refugees the right to enter. The United Nations could offer no help. Capt. Tadmore began to feel as if he had 66 permanent guests.

Then the outgoing overnment of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin broached the possibility of bringing the vietnamese to Israel. The new government of Prime Minister Menahem Begin made an official offer last week.

"I did not know where Israel was," said Duong Van Hen, 37, a baker, who was accompanied by his wife and three children. "But I wanted to get out of Vietnam.

He looked around the busy immigrant terminal and said, "I am sure I can be a baker here."

"We want to earn our livelihood," said Dr. Hoa, "not to receive free what the Israeli people give to us. The Israelis understand our problem. But we want to work ourselves to earn our living."

The Israeli public had expressed a strong interest in the vietnamese as soon as their plight became known. Israel was in part founded by refugees who came from Europe in overcrowded, leaky vessels like the Exodus, the name of which became the title of a book and film and the label for a massive population shift.

The Jerusalem Post editorialized: "For Israelis, the refusal of South Asian countries to permit the entry of these refugees, saved from sure death at sea by the action of a humane Israeli captain, conjures up the trauma of the 1940s, when Jewish refugees seeking to escape death at the hands of Hitler were refused entry into British Palestine and other Mediterranean ports."

Did monk make same journey?

Agence France-Presse

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — A 36-foot leather boat called The Brendan arrived in the northern Newfoundland port of Musgrave Sunday night to finish a trans-Atlantic trip intended to show that the Irish monk St. Brendan could have been the first European to visit America.

The Brendan was towed the last few kilometers into port by the Canadian Coast Guard, after waiting all day for favorable winds.

The three sailors and English skipper Tim Sverin claim they have repeated, under the same conditions, a 6th-century exploit by St. Brendan, who has been said to have been the first European to set foot in the Americas.

The leather boat left Ireland in May 1976 and spent the winter in Iceland, which it left last May 11. Tired but happy, the four nevigators planned to spend the night at Gander, Newfoundland, near the international airport.

UFO believers gather

LONGMIRE, Wash. (AP) — About 40 persons who have seen, or believe in, unidentified flying objects, attended the New Age Convention over the weekend just outside the gates of Mt. Rainier National Park.

It was 30 years ago last Friday that Kenneth Arnold, a Seattle-area pilot, sighted nine pulsing objects weaving around Mt. Rainier. His description led to the term "flying saucers."

To the dismay of the convention goers, no "uninvited" guests showed up.

Graham discusses secret fund

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham said his organization has been reluctant to discuss finances, including a secret $22.9 million fund, for fear the public would think it too rich.

The Charlotte Observer reported Sunday that Graham spoke publicly about the fund for the first time last week, admitting his ministry has tried to keep it hidden from public view.

Graham said a second reason for the secrecy was to avoid being inundated with requests for help.

The fund, known as the World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund of Dallas, Tex., includes assets in land, stocks, bonds and cash that have been amassed in an apparently legal manner over the past seven years, the newspaper reported.

It supports such groups as Campus Crusade for Christ, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Baptist World Alliance and Young Life, and reportedly has given away as much as $1.2 million in a single year.

Between 80 and 90 per cent of the fund's receipts each year come from the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, the main arm of the Graham ministry. But the two million contributors a year, whose gifts to Graham's ministry average less than $10 each, have never been told of the fund, which makes the ministry far wealthier than ever reported, the newspaper said.

Among assets of the World Evangelism fund, according to the Observer, are 2,600 acres of prime undeveloped land in Buncombe County, N.C., valued at $3.6 million, and a $19.3 million portfolio of blue-chip stocks and bonds, including AT&T, Exxon, General Electric and IBM.

Graham told the newspaper last fall he thought it would be wrong for his organization to own stock because such ownership could be construed as endorsement of a corporation.

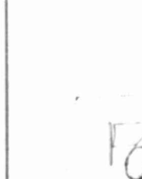

Included in the Buncombe County holdings is a 500-acre tract of mountain land about 15 miles east of Asheville, which was purchased in 1973 from the Broad River Corp. The corporation's founders include Edward Dawson Roberts, also a founder of the Bank of World Commerce in Nassau, the Bahamas, the newspaper said.

Law enforcement officials have found the bank to be involved helping organized crime figures disguise money that was illegally acquired, the Observer said. But in an interview with the newspaper, Roberts said his only involvement with the bank was to draw up the papers of incorporation.

Graham, his associates and lawyers and realtors involved in the transaction said they knew nothing of Roberts' reported connection with the Nassau bank, the newspaper said.

The land was to be used for a "laymen's training center" when it was purchased, but the Graham organization later found a more suitable piece of land for the institute on a 1,100acre site near Asheville, Wilson told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Montreat, N.C.

Saccharin ban facing year's delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee is considering a bill that would delay a government ban on the artificial sweetener saccharin while further tests are made.

The House health and environment subcommittee planned hearings today on legislation that would order a one-year federal study of a number of food additives, including saccharin, in an effort to determine which cause cancer.

The hearings follow a rash of activity in Congress, prompted by the Food and Drug Administration's ban on saccharin in foods and beverages.

The House voted last week to withhold funds during the next 15 months for the enforcement of the saccharin ban. But a Senate panel rejected this proposal after assurances were given that legislation setting an 18-month delay of any saccharin ban is being prepared.

After new evidence on saccharin came to light, the FDA promised to reopen its hearing process in order to evaluate it.

The new evidence was an unpublished Canadian epidemiologic study concluding that saccharin is a human carcinogen. Data collected during the research showed that males using saccharin have a significantly higher risk of developing bladder cancer.

Midlander jailed after leading police unit on high-speed chase

A Midland man is in city jail today after he was arrested Saturday night in connection with a high speed chase on Lamesa Road.

According to reports, a police unit was called to Hogan Park about 9 p.m. Saturday where they said they saw a man in a car forcing other cars off the road and feinting at pedestrians.

The officers said when they approached the car, when it sped off on Wadley Road. At that time, another officer came on the scene and blocked Wadley Road just east of Lamesa Road with his police car.

The officers said the man then drove his car into the police car that was blocking the road and backed into a following police car, which was about 30 feet away on Wadley Road.

The man then sped south on Lamesa Road with two police units following it, police said. The man was clocked at a speed of 95 mph at one time on the busy street, police said.

The chase ended when the man and a vehicle driven by Calvin Ray Lee, 21, of 1716 E. Oak Ave., collided while Lee was attempting to back out of a driveway, police said.

The force of the impact caused the fleeing man's vehicle to slide into the path of a car driven by Julio Pere Brito, 30, of 407 E. Dormard Ave, police said.

The man was arrested and taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released from hospital care.

Charges of driving while intoxicated, disorderly conduct and criminal mischief over $200 are expected to be filed against the man today.

Burglars took $500 worth of typewriter parts from the pickup of Bill M. Turner of 3415 W. Michigan Ave. sometime between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Turner told police someone entered the back of the pickup by raising the camper door and took a tool box containing the parts.

Environmentalists say game slick propaganda

NEW YORK (AP) — High school students who are playing an "energy environment game" distributed nationwide by the Edison Electric Institute as an educational aid are really being exposed to a "slick propaganda package promoting nuclear power," the National Audubon Society says.

In the July issue of Audubon, the society's bi-monthly magazine, environmental writer Marvin Zeldin says the game portrays environmentalists as "unthinking fools who oppose all proposals for new power plants."

Utility executives, on the other hand, are portrayed in the game as reasonable people equally concerned about environmental and energy problems, he said.

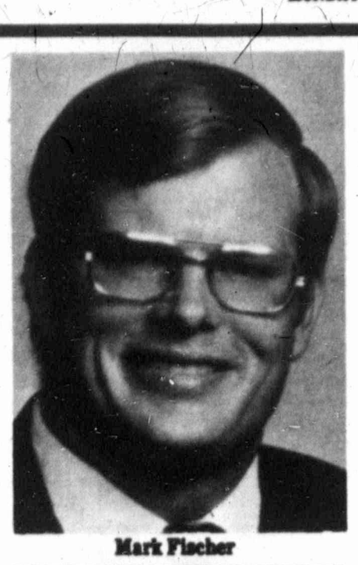

"We think it's a sound educational tool," said Dr. Richard Scheetz, coordinator of educational services for Edison, a trade association of investorowned power companies.

"It's a instructional simulation that presents a complete diversity of points of view so students can decide for themselves," Scheetz said in a telephone interview when asked about the Audubon charges. "There are no predetermined answers."

The game was developed by Creative Studies, a Boston firm that designs educational simulations, and first distributed in 1974. Edison sells the games to utilities for free distribution to schools, or directly to the schools themselves. More than 5,000 of the kits have been distributed nationwide, the institute said.

In the game, students adopt the roles of environmentalists, utility executives, interest groups and residents who must determine the need for a power plant in a fictional area. Each group's recommendation is then considered by a commission, which rules on the need for a plant, what type of plant should be built, and which of three sites should be used.

Thirty-two roles are assigned to students. Zeldin charges that the role cards include biased descriptions of anti-utility groups. For instance, a student radical is said to be "known as an oddball in this area."

Saudi Arabia failing on production goals

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Last December at a summit meeting of the oil producing states Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Zaki Yamani promised that his country would increase oil production in the ensuing months to 10 million barrels a day. The industrialized countries breathed a world-wide sigh of relief.

The Saudi boost in production, it was generally reasoned, would put a downward pressure on world oil prices.

But the sigh of relief was premature.

Saudi production has hit 10 million barrels a day only one month since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Qatar, in April.

The Saudis claimed their failure to achieve the production goal was caused by bad weather during January and February in the Persian Gulf. But knowledgeable sources in the corporate and intelligence communities believe there are other reasons as well.

The evidence, some specialists are now saying, is that the Saudis have no intention of meeting the 10 million-barrel goal.

One hint was that within a month of Yamani's promise to boost production to the new level the Saudi Foreigh Minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, one of the most influential members of the Saudi governing hierarchy said, "We still have not taken a decision about increasing our production."

A major reason that the Saudis now seem to be reneging on their production commitment is what one analyst described as "extraordinary pressure" from the Shah of Iran against such a move.

Enmity between the shah and the Saudis on pricing and production policy in the 13-member OPEC is a long-standing reality. Both are Persian Gulf neighbors with conservative, pro-American governments.

The Saudis, however, have regularly opted for moderate price increases while the shah has followed a far more aggressive price policy intended to underwrite his massive industrialization plans.

In addition the Iranians, whose oil revenues this year will be about $21 billion, need the infusion of petrodollars to pay for massive arms purchases.

In January the Shah's National Iranian Oil Co. announced that the Saudi decision to restrain price increases and boost production was costing Iran $6 million a day in revenues. Sources say that also in January the shah dispatched a high-ranking national security official as a special emissary to Saudi Arabia to pressure the Saudi government to reverse its policies.

That same month Iran's oil exports declined from 6.1 million barrels a day, the December level, to 5 million; Some of this was due to lagging world demand resulting from bloated oil stocks in the consuming countries built up before the December OPEC Meeting. Most of it was due, however, to the availability of lower-cost Saudi oil.

The Iranian press savaged Yamani and the Shah went on French television to decry any increase in Saudi production at Iran's expense as "an act of aggression."

Iraq, whose socialist pro-Soviet revolutionary council government is anathema to the Saudis, also put pressure on the Saudi government, according to State Department officials.

In explaining their failure to meet the expanded production figures promised last December, Saudi officials have argued they lack sufficient oil field development and administration to carry out a sharp increase in export shipments.

These claims, too, are being regarded with growing skepticism among experts.

For one thing Aramco, world's single largest producer, has the biggest aggregation of petroleum engineering expertise and muscle anywhere. Aramco, a consortium of four of the largest major international oil companies, has discovered more oil than it has produced each year since the 1930s, when it began operations.

Saudi reserves, set officially by Aramco and the Saudi Ministry of Petroleum and Minerals, are said to be 175 billion barrels. U.S. and Aramco officials privately say the true proven reserve figure in Saudi Arabia is probably beyond 200 billion barrels.

There is also an internal debate in progress in the Saudi leadership elite between the hawks and moderates on oil pricing and production issues.

Competition between the contending groups is intense. Internally the debate is between those who want to conserve the kingdom's one major resource — oil — for future generations and those who want to use it to achieve foreign policy, economic and political goals now. Dominating the latter group are those most concerned about preserving the role of the conservative theocratic monarchy which rules Saudi Arabia.

Carter program may put cities in business

WASHINGTON (AP) — A portion of President Carter's energy program that is moving through Congress may push a number of Texas cities into the home insulation business.

Cities such as San Antonio and Austin, which own and operate their own utilities, would be forced to inspect homes for energy efficiency and might be required to install insulation, which the homeowner would pay for.

Some cities may have also have to draw up master plans for insulating all of the buildings within their limits and submit the plans to the Federal Energy Administration.

All of these new municipal functions would arise from sections of the energy program that, compared to the major tax provisions, have attracted little notice or opposition.

The House Banking Committee already has approved the portion of the package that would require utilities to provide inspection service. The vote was 38 to 1, and the measure seems likely to pass the full House with little difficulty.

The committee decided against a provision in the original Carter proposal that would have required utilities to do the insulation installation for their customers.

As now written, the bill tries to make sure that this work will be done by small contractors. Homeowners will get some tax credits and the poor will get outright grants to help pay for the work.

The provision has peculiar applications in Texas, where many cities own their own utilities and the state Public Utilities Commission does not have original jurisdiction over most consumers' electric rates.

If the bill passes as now written, someone will have to determine whether the Texas PUC will draw a statewide plan for insulation or whether each city that owns or regulates a utility will have to draw one up.

Almost certainly, cities like Austin which own utilities not under the PUC's control will have to formulate plans for submission to Washington.

The Outstanding Engineer Award was established to recognize the professional engineer in Texas who has made sustained and distinguished contributions to the public welfare and advancement of his profession.

TSPE also named H. Mark Foerster of Odessa as a national director, Place 1. He was installed to his two-year term Saturday at the organization's 41st annual meeting in Abilene.

He is vice president of engineering for The Ortloff Corp. of Midland.

A&M Team studying German coal method

By STEVE MOTT
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — A team of Texas A&M researchers is taking several pages from the book written by the German military machine of World War II in an effort to help solve modern America's pressing energy problems.

Specifically, the university's German Document Retrieval Project is looking into the Gerrmula for converting coal into synthetic petroleum and gas.

In the later years of the war, after Allied blockades shut Germany off from petroleum supplies, the economy of the Third Reich was fueled almost entirely by coal by-products.

The research team expects their work to reveal German mistakes and possibly to discover cost-saving schemes for development of America's abundant coal reserves and easing the current concern over potential energy shortages.

Their research also has great economic potential for Texas, since the state's 5 billion to 10 billion tons of conventionally minable lignite is similar to the coal Germany used for its own industrial development.

"Lignite in Texas is virtually identical to the soft coal in Germany," said Richard Wainerdi, director of the university's Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, and project coordinator.

Heretofore most research on conversion of coal for use other than as boiler fuel has involved gasification, in which synthetic gas is tapped for use like natural gas.

But the Germans had advanced the science to a finer art, converting coal to fluids that could be used in motor and armored vehicles. Their successes were not limited just to coal.

"The German developed engines that could run on coal dust," Wainerdi says. "Also on shale oil, turf, wood chips and sawdust.

"Their war plan was a total, national independence plan for petrochemicals, drugs and the rest. Eventually, they hoped to capture oil fields in the Urals from Russia and Romanian fields, but they knew they had a problem right away."

The problem got worse as the Allies began to contain the German thrusts through Europe. Then Allied bombing of Germany itself forced the Nazis to build their coal conversion plants underground. By the war's end the efficiencies of these plants were said to be remarkable.

"We didn't bring home the treasures this time," Wainerdi says. "We wanted to have the technology of a country as the spoils and booty of war."

This technology lay dormant, however, because no one cared about making cheap gas. It already was cheap. Until the 1973 oil embargo, that is.

Wainerdi finds in the embargo much the similar situation facing Germany in World War II. Now, with petroleumproduct prices soaring, technological development of alternative fuels is vital.

Knowing how to make the fuels is one thing. Knowing how best to construct a plant to make it optimally efficient, and how to recover plluting sulfur dioxide from the burning coal to make into saleable by-products are even better.

The project has received financial and scientific support from three major industrial firms: Dow Chemical, Diamond Shamrock and Union Carbide.

Wainerdi says funding support from these firms about matches that of the university, for a current budget of about $250,000 a year. Before the project is over, he says, the funding level could reach $600,000 or $700,000 annually.

Private-industry assistance was needed, he says, because "they have experts who are very knowledgeable about the practical processes of chemical processing procedures." Company scientists meet once a month with the research team to give a practical direction to the project.

Yet these companies don't have a proprietary interest in the Texas A&M work, Wainerdi insists. "The rights to the processes will be completely open to everyone," he says.

There is some precedent for this kind of project. American takeover of the German rocket program following the war, and the absorption of German scientists sch as the later Werner von Braun into the space program, were catalysts to the development of space technology.

As Germans was crumbling, the Allied powers were aware of the high state of its work in organic chemistry, and the importance that work in organic chemistry, and the importance that work would have in the post-war world.

Arnold Krammer, a history professor at Texas A&M and a major figure in the project, says teams of scientists were sent into the demolished cities, factories and schools to recover documents, manuals, blueprints and research materials.

"When the allies invaded, teams of experts entered with them," he says. "Their responsibility was to vacuum up every document."

These chemists and chemical engineers also interrogated people where the documents were found, making these interviews a part of the record.

"The situation was that the Germans had lost," Wainerdi adds. "Their cooperative spirit was high. So our chances of getting good information was very high."

However, the documents about fuel technology were shipped to 22 different locations in several countries. Since the project took shape more than 18 months ago, Krammer has been traveling around the world examining or microfilming some 175 tons of these documents.

Once the documents are read and translated, another Texas A&M history professor, Robert Calvert, picks out key names of the documents' procurers and people associated with the German projects. Painstakingly, from California to West Virginia, to Germany, Calvert is locating and interviewing these people.

Meanwhile, graduate students at Texas A&M are getting involved in the project, trying to piece together a complete picture of the processes and purposes involved.

"For example, the Germans had a national energy plan 6,000 pages long," Wainerdi explains. "President Carter's was only 103 pages. Looking at that plan, its no wonder why the Germans found it necessary to make theirs 6,000 pages long."

Old Sol may warm university fieldhouse

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — By next winter, Old Sol instead of Old Fossils may keep the Louisiana State University Field House warm on blustry days.

That's because the field house is one of 32 sites chosen by the U.S. Energy Research and Development (ERDA) for a demonstration model solar-powered heating system.

Bids are out now on the system and officials say they hope to begin construction with a month on the south roof of the two-year-old building. When the six-month construction is finished, they say an average of 28 per cent of the energy needed to heat the structure and supply hot water will come from the sun instead of the current source — fossil-fueled boilers run on natural gas.

"Ours was one of 300 projects submitted to ERDA and only one of 32 approved," said field house and system architect W.J. Evans of Baton Rouge. "It is the only one in the Gulf Coast region."

More than 90 per cent of the quarter million dollar project will come from the federal government, with LSU now looking for another $75,000 from ERDA to increase proposed water tanks from 7,000 to 10,000 gallons.

The system will gather heat from the sun in a series of collectors and then circulate water through the collectors, heating it to 200 degrees. It will then go to the tanks for storage.

Evans said depending on the outside temperature, the tanks can keep enough hot water from two sunny days to heat the building and the showers for two cloudy ones. On a third straight cloudy day, the boilers will have to take over.

Evans said the building was chosen for the project because it does not require a great deal of heat for its size and is in a readily accessible area at a public institution.

"The purpose here is not to invent the process but to develop it into a practical demonstration of its operation," Evans said. "The whole system will be highly visible and students will able to watch it work."

The field house is used for physical education classes, intramural sports and intercollegiate tennis, wrestling and track.

Evans said it is not known exactly how much money the system will save the state in gas bills, but he said based on current energy prices it will take 34 years to pay it off in energy savings. He said that time span will likely go down as energy prices go up.

The system, like those in other states, will be monitored by the National Aeronatutics and Space Administration center in Huntsville, Ala., to measure its efficiency and feasibility elsewhere.

Researcher checks sludge destination

Newsday

ABOARD THE RESEARCHER — Dr. John Proni peered over the side to watch his electronic measuring instrument trailing in the water as his ship closed astern of a squat, barge-like vessel dead ahead.

"We're about to cross it," he said as the Researcher cut diagonally across a large, oily slick pouring from the bottom of the other ship. "It was several thousand gallons of sewage sludge that the New York City ship Northern Star was dumping into the Atlantic Ocean on its regular run about 15 miles south of Long Island.

Despite warnings from the Proni that the smell might be rank, 55 delegates from the United Nations Law of the Sea Conference crowded along the rails to watch. Then they followed Proni below decks of the 278-foot long Researcher, where they watched a series of scientific instruments that measured where the sludge was falling and how far it was spreading from the dump site. As Proni, a scientist with the Atlantic Oceanographic and Meterological Laboratory, and other scientists aboard carefully noted several times, the instruments were useful only for measuring sludge.

Proni's monitoring of what happens to sewage sludge after being dumped into the Atlantic Ocean and his casual references to "open science" might seem unrelated to the deliberations of the Law of the Sea Conference, which have droned on for nearly three years. But Proni — and the rest of the scientific staff and crew members aboard the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration research vessel Researcher — were right in the middle of one of the conference's most difficult problems.

The occasion was a day aboard the Researcher for delegates from 55 nations to witness exactly what the Researcher does on its voyages throughout the Atlantic. The delegates, involted aboard by the U.S. ambassador to the conference, Elliot Richardson, watched as the ship performed a variety of scientific studies in one of its key targets, the "New York Bight," an area that has been used for years as a dumping ground for seage, garbage, industrial waste and the pollution moving down from the Hudson River. Simply put, the Researcher is trying to find out, among other scientific projects, whether the dumping is having any verifiable impact on the ecosystems of the eastern coast.

But the purpose of the invitation to the delegates was not purely scientific. As Richardson acknowledged, many delegates from coastal nations throughout the Third World are supicious that the voyages of such vessels like the Researcher are covers for espionage activities or are missions to gather scientific data aimed at military purposes. These suspicions have snarled the question of how to handle international rules governing such research.

At the moment, the Law of the Sea Conference is deadlocked on draft treaty language: Many Third World nations want language allowing them unilaterally to bar such vessles from their waters, while the United States and other nations want free access for scientific research vessels.

The idea of having the delegates aboard the Researcher was to demonstrate that the ships have no purpose other than pure scientific research. The ship was opened completely to the delegates, with no restrictions, and all scientific instruments aboard were demonstrated.

Long tour completed

Jimmy J. McCrary of Crane, a gas tester for Atlantic Richfield Co., has completed 20 years of service with the company.

He recently was presented his service awards by L. C. King, plant supervisor of the Crane Gas Plant.

McCrary joined the company's geophysical department in Lovington, N. M., in 1956 and later transferred into the Block 31 Production Department in Crane where he worked as a roustabout and pumper.

He transferred to the Block 31 Gasoline Plant in 1958 and worked as a maintenance man, plant operator, shift foreman and instrument man.

He was named to his current position in 1970. He is a tester for the Crane, Block 31 and Midland plants.

Germany's bunker designed for storage

By ROBERT GILLETTE
The Los Angeles Times

WOLFGANG, West Germany — Ringed by a double line of barbed wire fence and coils of razor-sharp concertina wire, a squat, concrete building in this industrial suburb of Frankfurt offers a grim vision of a nuclear future.

"We call it The Bunker," explained Wolfgang Stoll, the managing director of ALKEM, a German nuclear fuels firm. "It is our Ft. Knox for plutonium."

A marvel of security engineering, The Bunker seems aptly named. Its concrete walls and floor, 6 feet thick, are packed with so many hundreds of tons of steel reinforcement that the building will deflect the needle of a nearby compass.

Company officials claim the two-story windowless structure could resist an airplane crash and withstand attack by any non-nuclear weapons for at least 20 minutes.

"We have a hot line to a police station just down the road," Stoll said. "We can have 300 people here within 10 or 15 minutes. If we have any political or union troubles, we can just seal the place up."

When construction is completed in October, the $8 million bunker will have a storage capacity of 5 metric tons or 11,000 pounds of plutonium oxide, enough to make more than 500 atomic weapons. (Present plans, however, are to store only about one ton at a time.)

The plutonium, of course, is destined not for weapons but for fuel in German nuclear power plants. Looking to a time, perhaps a decade ahead, when the imported uranium it depends upon may become scarce, West Germany is already separating small amounts of plutonium from spent reactor fuel and recycling it experimentally in fresh fuel rods as a partial substitute for uranium.

Over the last 13 years, officials say, the ALKEM fuel fabrication plant here has recycled about 600 kilograms or 1,300 pounds of plutonium into fresh fuel, which has been burned in German reactors.

This is not enough to make any difference in uranium needs but it is enough, Stoll and others contend, to prove the technical feasibility of recycling plutonium as a peaceful atomic fuel.

Although France and Britain are storing their plutonium for use in breeder reactors, at least four other nations besides Germany — Japan, Sweden, Spain, and Belgium — are planning to recycle it in existing reactors as a uranium substitute.

To many American arms control authorities, however, this kind of emerging commerce in plutonium raises grave questions of international security.

In a world where obscure South Moluccan terrorists can capture and hold hostage in a train and a school for days on end, for example, how can the security of commercial plutonium shipments be ensured?

And even if shipments, storage depots and fabrication plants can be made impregnable to frontal assault, is it possible to prevent embezzlement of weapons-grade nuclear fuels from within?

Virtually all civilian nuclear facilities, such as ALKEM's storage bunker, are under safeguards supervised by the International Atomic Energy Agnecy (IAEA) in Vienna. Critics, however, note that these safeguards empower the IAEA's inspectors only to audit the inventory books each facility keeps as a means of detecting thefts and, it is hoped, of deterring them.

But international agencies have no power to enforce minimum standards of physical security. This, like the security of airports and trains, remains the province of each national government.

Although Germany's plutonium bunker may be as assault-proof as modern technology can make it, there is at present no way of ensuring that similar repositories in France, Britain, Spain, Argentina or any other country with a plutonium stockpile will be equally secure.

With this important limitation in mind, one senior American nuclear official described present international nuclear safeguards as no more effective than a "fig leaf."

A former director of nuclear safeguards for the Common Market, Enrico Jacchia, is equally blunt. For all practical purposes, Jacchia said in a commentary in the International Herald Tribune recently, a strict nuclear security system "does not exist."

"The ways to cheat international safeguards are innumerable, like the ways of the Lord," he said. "They can be devised in the manner which is most appropriate for each particular situation."

Such questions and criticisms are familiar to German government and industrial authorities who, nevertheless, express a high degree of confidence that their bunker will meet any test.

Perhaps as a measure of this confidence, ALKEM officials described their security precautions in considerable detail to a group of visitors. They asked only that certain details not be photographed, such as the pair of 9-ton doors made of steel, ceramic and vulcanized rubber that guard the only entrance to the inner vault.

Adjacent to the bunker is a small, hermetically sealed fuel fabrication plant. Inside about 150 workers mix powdered uranium and plutonium oxide, press and bake the mixture to form cylinders of fuel that look like slate-gray rabbit pellets and load the pellets into long metal tubes for shipment to reactors.

Asked how workers would be prevented from walking out with small quantities of plutonium, Stoll pointed to a device at the plant's entrance called a gamma lock. The lock is painted yellow and looks like a telephone booth, but with two sets of doors.

Workers leaving the plant must step through the booth one by one, Stoll explained. If radiation detectors pick up gamma rays emitted by plutonium, the doors lock automatically, trapping the worker until security guards arrive.

The gamma lock is said to be capable of detecting as little as 0.3 grams of plutonium in someone's pocket. If a would-be thief were to shield stolen plutonium in several pounds of lead, Stoll said, he might escape with as much as 3 grams, providing that metal detectors (which have not yet been installed) did not reveal the lead shielding.

Three grams of plutonium is less than one-thousandth the amount needed to make a bomb. It could, however, be used to lend credibility to a nuclear blackmail hoax.

When the plant and its storage bunker are in full operation, ALKEM officials noted, a resident inspector from Euratom, the Common Market's nuclear agency, will be checking the plutonium accounting ledgers against actual inventories. And the IAEA in Vienna will in turn monitor Euratom's audit.

Even so, room for uncertainty remains.

According to a paper on safeguard problems that two German government researchers presented at an international nuclear fuel cycle meeting at Salzburg, Austria, last month, the only certain way at present to verify a nuclear theft is a complete inventory of all nuclear materials at a facility.

This requires not only weighing the plutonium or uranium on hand, but also taking random samples of stored fuel to determine their fissionable content by laboratory analysis.

This, the researchers said, is time-consuming, expensive, intrusive and hampers normal plant operations. "All these difficulties have automatically led to a strong reservation on the part of facility operators and to a reduction in the frequency of physical inventory taking."

Nuclear facilities were said typically to permit no more than one or two complete inventories a year. But according to a training manual the IAEA has prepared for its safeguards inspectors, diverted plutonium or weapons-grade uranium can be converted to weapons in a matter of days, thus raising a question as to whether safeguard accounting procedures can provide timely warning of nuclear theft.

In many respects, ALKEM's fuel fabrication plant and storage bunker are typical of industrial plutonium plants that international inspectors will be monitoring in the future. One important difference, though, is that the volume of plutonium it handles is much smaller than that of plants now on the drawing boards in several European countries.

ALKEM officials said the company expects to be able to account for at least 99 per cent to 99.5 per cent of the 400 kilograms of plutonium expected to pass through the plant each year. This, they acknowledged, means that the amount of "material unaccounted for," of MUF in nuclear jargon, could be as large as 4 kilograms in a year.

When a visitor noted that this was close to the amount needed for an atomic bomb, Stoll, the managing director, said he was convinced that the combined effect of security measures — such as the gamma locks at the entrance and statistical analyses of trends in the MUF — would make it possible to tell the difference between accounting errors, accidental losses and a theft before the missing amount added up to a bomb.

"What if? What if?" Stoll said with a dismissive gesture. "One can play this game endlessly."

In Bonn, an official of the Ministry of Research and Technology, wolfgang Schmidt-Kuster, summed up a view widely shared by the European and American nuclear industries:

"Recycling plutonium back into the reactor is the safest way of storing and disposing of plutonium."

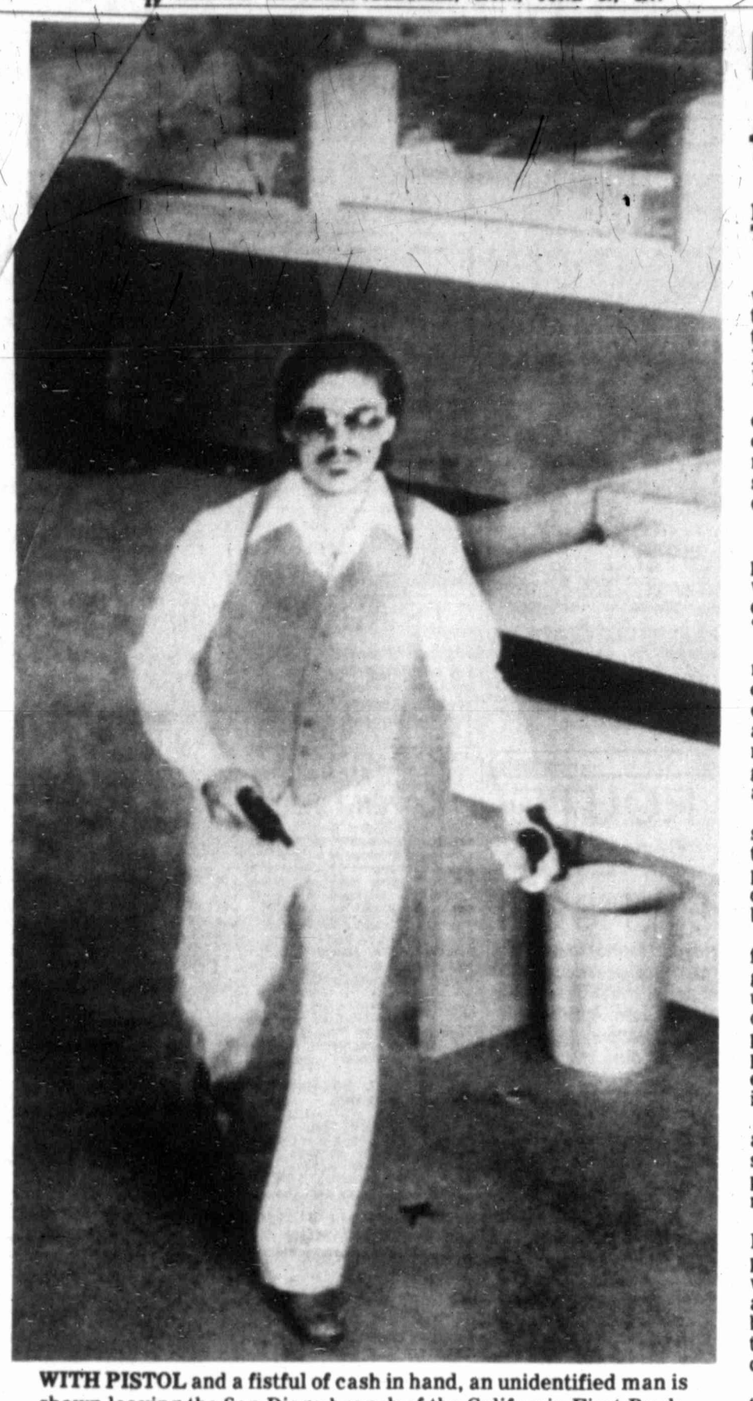

American and some European arms control authorities strongly disagree. They would prefer that plutonium be left in the protection of intensely radioactive fuel rods and not separated out in pure form — at least not until international safeguards can be strengthened.

In marked contrast with German authorities, French and British officials refuse to discuss any details of plutonium security.

The subject, nevertheless, is becoming a topic of lively discussion in Britain, where critics have focused on two concerns: the difficulties of keeping plutonium out of the wrong hands and the possibility that doing so may require increasing government infringement of personal freedom.

A year ago Britain's royal commission expressed concern:

"What is most to be feared," its report said in discussing nuclear security and civil liberties, "is an insidious growth in surveillance in response to a growing threat as the amount of plutonium in existence, and familiarity with its properties, increases."

WITH PISTOL and a fistful of cash in hand, an unidentified man is shown leaving the San Diego branch of the California First Bank. The photo, taken by a hidden camera, was released by the FBI, who are seeking the man for questioning in connection with this and a holdup earlier Friday in another branch of the same bank. Claims against Cuba may influence detente

By ROBERT RENO
Newsday

NEW YORK — More than 5,900 individuals and corporations in the United States that kissed $1.8 billion in Cuban property goodbye 15 years ago suddenly are getting their hopes up they may yet get paid.

And there are delicate questions of who will pay them, how much they will get and when they will get it.

Those questions may turn out to be as important a factor in whether or not there is a Cuban-American detente as any mutual inclination by President Carter and Prime Minister Fidel Castro to get along.

For one thing Cuba, barely getting by on a $1-billion-a-year subsidy from the Soviet Union, has no cash. And those with claims against Cuba include some of the nation's biggest corporations, with powerful friends in Congress.

They are led off by Boise Cascade, which is looking for $547 million from Cuba, and ITT, which wants $256 million. The claims also include $233 million filed by individuals and $13 million filed by churches and educational institutions.

Castro's seizure of all American-owned property in 1960 was the largest foreign expropriation ever of U.S. assets. The U.S. Foreign Claims Settlement Commission certified $1.7 billion in claims as valid in 1964. Figuring 6 per cent annual interest since the seizure, the commission says the total claims stand at $3.5 billion.

So far the claims have remained in the files of the State Department. And the Cubans have made no move to recognize them.

Because the claims are a negotiating tool, none of the parties involved, including the claimants and the State Department, will say what anybody is likely to settle for.

The bigger corporate claimants have formed the Joint Corporate Committee on Cuban Claims, headed by Robert W. Hutton, president of Lone Star Industries — which owned a cement plant expropriated by Castro.

Hutton takes the view that settlement must come before any relaxation of the trade embargo with Cuba — not the other way around, as has happened with many nations, including mainland China. China is trading with the United States but has not settled claims for American-owned property seized in China in 1950.

However, Hutton said: "It has never been the position of the joint committee that trade with Cuba should not be normalized at some future date."

Most of the claimants concede privately they are among the nation's biggest fans of detente with Cuba, because it is about the only practical hope of ever getting any compensation. They also voice fears, however, they could end up being left out of any agreement between Cuba and the United States to normalize relations.

This month, Eugene R. Black, former president of the World Bank and now a consultant to the American Express Co., said publicly, "The Carter administration seems uninterested in making the acknowledgement and settlement of U.S. claims a precondition of closer diplomatic relations."

Some proponents of better relations with Cuba, including Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) and Rep. Jonathan Bingham (D-N.Y.), said putting the private claims ahead of all other public considerations could endanger immediate hopes of improved relations and more distant hopes of separating Cuba from the Communist bloc.

Roger Majak, staff director of the House International Economic Policy and Trade subcommittee, headed by Bingham, says he sees a danger Congress might tie the State Department's hands in the matter — especially if it insisted that all the U.S. claimants receive 100 cents on the dollar.

"We can't expect the Cubans to discuss normal relations while they are still subject to a trade emgargo," Majak says. "That's not the way it has been done with other countries."

Moreover, he says, the claimants are being unrealistic if they expect to get 100 cents on the dollar. In the case of Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Poland, all of which seized American-owned property after World War II, U.S. claims were settled at from 39 to 50 cents on the dollar and at terms that allowed several years to pay.

Printing industry still finding office markets

By ALEXANDER AUERBACH
The Los Angeles Times

If you are old enough to remember when carbon paper was the only way to make a copy, you probably recall the excitement created by the first Xerox Corp. photocopy machine, the Model 914 introduced in 1959.

It took a few years, but the copier eventually made the transition from office novelty to part of the everyday routine — like the telephone, something to be taken for granted except when it happened to malfunction.

It's time for another look.

Xerox and the horde of other companies that have rushed to compete with it have created an entire new industry, which has been dubbed the "in-plant printing" market.

Worldwide, that market amounts to more than $10 billion a year, with half of those sales in the United States, according to Dataquest Inc., an authoritative Menlo Park, Calif., research firm. And those sales are growing by a staggering 20 per cent annually.

The dollars are only part of the story. Thanks to changes in technology, the way information on paper is generated and distributed today may soon be as obsolete as carbon paper.

In another decade or so you may find yourself reminiscing about the good old days, when typewriters were used to produce written material, computers spewed out oversized pages full of numbers, and photocopiers cranked out copies for everyone, including one copy to stick in the filing cabinet.

Equipment already available can alter or eliminate many of these steps. If their prices fall as some experts believe they will, the office may never be the same.

Both Xerox and International Business Machines Corp., for example, now offer computer printers which are designed to put more speed and flexibility into data processing but which really are a combination of typesetter, printing press and duplicator.

Using information fed to them by the computers they serve, these output devices create letters, numbers and graphic arts forms, such as a trademark, in virtually any type size and style.

Using technology much like that found in most office copiers, the printers transfer the images to paper. They can also create the other parts of a page or document, such as the ruled lines on an expense account form or inventory control sheet.

The quality of both the Xerox and IBM output devices compares favorably with that of offset printing, say those who have worked with them.

They are also extraordinarily fast. The IBM 3800 printer, for example, operates at up to 45,000 characters per second, nearly six times as fast as any other IBM printer. It could print an average-size novel in about five seconds.

At that speed, it will often be faster and perhaps cheaper to have the computer generate a number of originals of a document rather than bothering to carry the output to a photocopy machine.

Meanwhile, the typewriter is changing, evolving into a "word processor" linked to a minicomputer. Documents typed on these machines are stored on magnetic tapes or cards in addition to being printed on paper. If changes are needed, the operator need only instruct the machine to change the appropriate words, and the word processor will automatically type out a corrected version of the entire document.

In a law office, for example, a word processing machine can take a standard contract, insert the names and addresses of the parties, alter clauses as needed and turn out a custom-typed contract for the client.

"Once you tie together the word processor and the data processing computer with sophisticated printers, a lot of things become possible," says an executive in the data processing field.

"For example, why have filing cabinets? It would be easier, faster and more efficient — and cheaper in terms of labor costs — to leave information in the form of electronic memory and call up a hard copy when you need to have a piece of paper in your hand.

"The only problem is the cost of electronic memory and that keeps falling."

We may never get around to scrapping all our file cabinets in favor of computer storage (after all, similar predictions were made when microfilm first hit the market) but there's plenty going on right now with in-plant printing to keep vendors happy.

Edward J. Poshkus, who researches the copying and duplicating industry for Dataquest, says "the numbers are extremely large, and growing at almost a ridiculous rate."

Right now the market for plain paper copiers is about $2.9 billion in the United States, with machine rentals anounting to $2.4 billion, and paper, toner and other equipment about $500 million.

Copiers using coated paper, which have fallen out of fashion except for low-budget or specialized uses, account for another $675 million in all. Older thermal paper copiers add $150 million more.

Offset printers, used in larger corporations for turning out documents by the thousands, generate about $1 billion a year in sales of machinery, supplies, paper, printing plates and so on.

The venerable mimeograph and stencil duplicators toss in another $250 million a year.

That comes up to about $5 billion for the U.S. market. Europe, Japan and the rest of the world just about match that.

"The market in Europe is actually growing at a slightly faster rate than here," Poshkus says. "They are leapfrogging our experience, and not making the transition from coated paper. They're imitating our use of the latest technology."

Curiously, the sales of conventional printing firms are still growing, despite the boom in in-plant printing. "The market is shifting," Poshkus explains. "Shorter runs are done in-house, but longer runs, or more sophisticated work involving color of binding is still going to specialists."

New democracies seek Common Market places

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
The Washington Post

BRUSSELS — The nine European Common Market nations, who persistently deplore their collective inability to impose political weight on a world scale, now confront a sparkling opportunity.

Greece, Portugal and Spain — Western Europe's newest and shakiest democracies — are knocking at the community's door, convinced that market membership will serve as a barrier to home-grown totalitarians.

For years, the nine members have been saying that the Mediterranean three would be welcome as soon as they deposed their dictators. But now that they have done just that, the nine have suddenly discovered a multitude of problems.

The French and Italians are fretting over new competition to their producers of tomatoes, wine, peaches, olives, oranges and lemons. The Irish are unhappy about sharing limited funds for poor regions with the even poorer Portuguese and others. The West Germans, who pay most of cost of elaborate subsidies to farmers and others, are groaning over the prospect of a bigger burden.

The three Benelux countries —Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg — fear that enlarging the community from nine to 12 would make it harder to make decisions. They are frightened by their perennial nightmare: that a directorate of Britain, West Germany and France would run things without them.

Even the Common Market bureaucrats are uneasy. They would not like dividing their plush jobs up among three more countries.

During the winter and spring, the grumbling from all these quarters became so loud it appeared to threaten the community's great political opportunity. But in recent days, the market members have begun to focus on the damage they could do to Western democracy and defense if they kept the three out. It now seems clear that — after some tortuous bargaining — the door will be opened to the Mediterranean trio.

There is unusual agreement in Brussels, among the applicants and the member states alike, on how entry will strengthen democratic forces in Portugal, Greece and Spain. The community's rules — at least on paper — call for the free movement of workers and capital among members and, in some cases, reliance on market forces to determine output and price.

A totalitarian state has trouble operating such a system, as Chile is now demonstrating. Authoritarians demand much tighter control.

The Common Market describes itself as a grouping of democratic states, so a member that turned totalitarian would risk isolation from the markets and money that membership brings.

The trading system of the community carries not only the goods but also the ideas of members from one to another. And finally, an economic crisis that might encourage a coup could be alleviated by aid from West Germany and other alarmed community partners.

A West German diplomat here brushed aside the possible financial burden. Recalling recent fears that an anarchic Portugal would be taken over by leftist extremists, he said: "Think what we would have paid two years ago to have the Portugal that we have today."

In some ways the Italians and French, who have most to fear from the competition of Mediterranean farmers, also have the greatest political stake in the membership of the three. Rightist terrorists in both countries were often supported in the past by extremists in power or close to it in Spain, Portugal and Greece.

There is a common view in Brussels that the United States and other NATO countries have a strong interest in seeing that the three join the nine and are not kept isolated. There have even been hints from Madrid that Spain's enthusiasm for joining NATO might be sharply diminished if Madrid were kept out of the Market. The Spanish have suggested that the defense costs imposed by NATO must be balanced by community membership.

'Frigid dears' could be emasculating women

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Don't tell me you've been a closet sexist all these years. How can you say flatly, "There is no such thing as a 'frigid dear'—only clumsy men?"

I thought that satisfying sex was achieved through the loving cooperation of both partners, and not dependent on the male's aggressiveness or degree of expertness.

Or maybe you will agree to another sexist corollary: "There are no impotent men, only emasculating women." That way you can offend BOTH sexes.—EQUAL PARTNER

DEAR PARTNER: Generalizations are dangerous, but you may have stumbled on a truism. I wouldn't be surprised if more than half the cases of male impotency were due to "emasculating women." Witness the number of men who can't perform at home but are tigers with their mistresses.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for four months to a man who was married and divorced twice, and unless his terrible table manners improve, he is going to be a three-time loser.

I saw him eat a few times before we were married and was appalled at his table manners, but I thought I could change him after we were married.

Maybe it's a case of not being able to teach an old dog new tricks, but every time I mention the way he eats he becomes irritated and the battle is on.

When he starts to eat, he puts his face right down into the plate like a dog, and he doesn't speak or look up until he's cleaned his plate.

He is a good man, a good provider, and believe it or not, he's well-educated. How he escaped learning table manners is a mystery to me.

I love him and don't want to divorce him, but he's repulsive at mealtime. Any suggestions on how to save an otherwise good marriage?—NEAR ATLANTA

DEAR NEAR: Yes. Don't bring it up when he's eating, but catch him when he is in a good mood and tell him how important it is to you that he improve his table manners. If he's as wonderful as you say he is in all other respects, you may have to be a little more tolerant. Divorcing a man because he lacks table manners is like chopping off a man's head to get rid of the dandruff.

Mussels cheaper than clams

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Anyone who is fond of clams should also incline toward the mussel, a fellow mollusk which is about the best buy on today's soaring seafood market.

Mussels share many of the characteristics of clams and can be prepared in much the same way, although they are rarely eaten raw; at least not in this country.

The blue mussel abounds along the Atlantic Coast from the Arctic to Cape Hatteras. The mollusk is also available in certain seasons on the West Coast.

Like its cousin the clam, the mussel may gape open before it is cooked but unlike the clam, it usually doesn't close its shell when handled. There is a test, however, to see whether a mussel is fresh and alive. Run cold water over the shell for a minute or so. If it still does not close throw the mussel away.

In case you decide to go hunting for mussels by the seaside on your own, there are also a few words of caution. For one thing, make sure the mollusks dwell in government-certified unpolluted waters. Also make certain that wherever you find mussels clustered, they are submerged and exposed with the rise and fall of the tide.

Mussels are usually heavily encrusted with hardened sand, mud and barnacles so that scrubbing them clean can be quite a job. But it is worth the effort, if you like the plump flesh inside.

The blue mussel has until recent years been largely unappreciated in this country. Yet this is the same species prized as moules by French gourmets and as cozze by the Italians.

The French have glorified the mussel in moules mariniere, similar to the dish called cozze alla marinara which is popular in Italy. It consists of mussels steamed with thyme, celery tops, bay leaf, shallots, sweet butter and white wine.

Fay Burton's True Story

When people I'd worked with for 23 years started calling me Fat Fay, I just laughed it off. After all, they were right—I weighed 166 pounds, and my size 16 clothes were getting a little tight.

This is mother and me in 1975, before Pat Walker's.

My doctor didn't think my weight was funny. He said the problems I was having—tension headaches and back pains—wouldn't get better till I got thinner. His recommendation: go to Pat Walker's.

I took his advice and, using money from my grocery budget, began treatments on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit. It was easier than I thought it could be. I didn't have to change clothes or ruin my makeup or hairdo. And I didn't have to share a treatment room with anyone.

The change that came over me was fantastic. Not only did my weight start going down, but my whole mental attitude improved. If I sometimes felt tense or anxious, I knew all I had to do was go to Pat Walker's to feel relaxed again.

The counselors at the salon were so encouraging. They made sure I stayed on schedule to reach the proper weight for my bone structure.

I'm happy to report that I've reached that goal—I now weigh 125 pounds! When I go shopping, it's for size 7's. I'm such a champion of the Pat Walker's program that six of my friends have started going there, too.

I can't imagine what shape I'd be in today if I hadn't taken my doctor's advice. I do know that, at 41, I have a new lease on life...and now, instead of that nickname, I get whistles and compliments.

Call for your free figure analysis and sample treatment. You'll be so glad you did!

At the first trick you play dummy's queen of hearts. No use; East covers with the king. Naturally you hold up the ace of hearts as long as you can. Finally, you take the third heart.

You can expect to win five clubs and three side aces. You'll need a second spade trick to make your contract.

You run four clubs but then lead the ace of spades and a low spade toward dummy. West plays low, and you must guess whether to play dummy's ten or queen.

How should you guess and why?

ONLY ONE ANSWER

Only one answer is possible. You must play the ten of spades.

You cannot be sure who has the jack of spades, but you are quite certain that East has the king. If West had the king of spades, he would step right up with it to cash the rest of his hearts.

Once you have worked it out that East has the king of spades you know that your only chance is to finesse with dummy's ten.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: SJ854, H108742, DK54, C5. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. You are tempted to jump to four hearts, showing trump length and a side singleton, but the hand is not really strong enough for so high a bid. The jump to game should promise reasonable playing strength.

FBI lawfulness not assured

By MARGARET GENTRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're looking for an ironclad assurance that the FBI is obeying the law these days, don't go to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell. And don't try FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley.

As remarkable as this may seem, neither is willing to vouch for the bureau's lawfulness.

Both say they believe and hope no wrongdoing is occurring and they're taking steps to prevent it. But they leave the public with lingering doubt, perhaps because they have some doubts of their own.

At a House subcommittee hearing recently, Bell showed signs of the frustration he feels at trying to come to grips with the traditionally secret society of the FBI.

Are you convinced, he was asked, that the FBI no longer burglarizes homes and offices, opens private mail, illegally taps telephones and plots dirty tricks against political activists?

"I don't want to say whether anything is going on or is not going on. There are 20,000 people in the FBI. It's too big. I wouldn't know that," he confessed.

With the optimism of a new man on the job, Bell said the continuing Justice Department investigation of FBI misdeeds should settle the question, and "I think I will reach the point" of certainty that no wrongdoing is occurring.

Kelley may not share Bell's optimism because he knows from his own sad experience that a man takes risks if he swears to the FBI's good behavior.

Two years ago, he confidently asserted that there were no FBI burglaries against domestic targets after 1966. He trusted the FBI men who had told him that.

As it turned out, there were numerous FBI burglaries after 1966, many of them carried out in New York in the bureau's frantic search for Weather Underground fugitives.

Department investigators have spent more than a year probing evidence about the burglaries and illegal mail-opening and wiretap operations. As a result, one FBI man faces serious criminal charges and Bell is considering whether to authorize additional indictments.

In a nationally televised interview last August, Kelley uncomfortably admitted, "I know that I was deceived. I think they should have told me, at least not make me stand out on a limb with this knowledge they had and should have imparted to me."

Facing reporters at a news conference two days later, he was asked for assurance that burglaries were finally a thing of the past.

"I wish I could say categorically, unquestionably, that this is not going on." But he could not. He had been deceived and from that, he had learned he "can no longer make categorical, sweeping statements."

And he's sticking with that position even today.

Bell touched on one of the barriers for anyone trying to find out what goes on in the bureau. As he put it, the "internal operating controls" aren't very good.

Or as other department officials repeatedly complain, "They tell you what you ask and no more. You have to know exactly how to phrase the question."

The key is understanding the FBI's language, an idiom far different from ordinary English and even more obscure than the jargon of other government agencies. The purpose often is to communicate the key information only to the few who understand the code and to conceal it from all others.

For example, FBI files often refer to information obtained from "contact with highly confidential sources." That has turned out to be a frequent code phrase for an FBI burglary.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Acne should be treated

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have an awful lot of trouble with acne. I've tried different soaps and lotions, but nothing really seems to help. Just last week, though, my roomate heard something about zinc being helpful — she has acne, too. Do you know anything about this? I'd try it in a minute if you thought it would do any good. — Amy R.

Dear Amy: Zinc sulphate applied externally is one of the perparations that have been used for acne for some time. However, certain leading dermatologists, such as Dr. Albert Kligman of Pennsylvania University, consider it worthless.

Zinc taken internally may be another story. A report from Swedish researchers says that zinc sulphate tablets are effective in acne control. Dr. Gerd Michaelsson and colleagues at Uppsala University described their tests recently in the Archives of Dermatology.

Sixty-four patients took three effervescent zinc tablets regularly after meals for a period of three months. After four weeks, Dr. Michaelsson said, there was a noticeable decrease in the number of whiteheads, blackheads and pustules. And after 12 weeks, the acne had been reduced by an average of about 85 per cent ranged in age from 13 to 25 years old. More than half of them had had acne for at least two years, and many of them for more than five.

The Swedish dermatologists say they don't know why the zinc treatment was effective. Zinc in very small amounts is an essential part of one's diet. And we know that, among other things, it plays a role in the healing of wounds.

Since your acne has been bothering you so much, I think it would be a good idea to see a dermatologist. Ask your doctor to recommend one to you and when you see him, ask if the zinc tablets might be worth a try — he should really be the person to decide this. There are, in any case, a number of effective ways of controlling acne, including external medications, minute local injections, low-level antibiotic drugs, and the careful removal of blackheads so that scarring is avoided.

I would not fool around with self treatment as acne can be very distressing and does need expert professional care when it is persistent — as you say yours is. According to a new report issued by the National Center for Health Statistics, only about one American girl or boy out of every four has essentially normal skin without significant lesions of scars between the ages of 12 and 17. And although most of these young people are using some treatment or other, only one out of nine has ever seen a doctor about the problem.

Hot air gaining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although not many are planning to go around the world in 80 days, hot air balloonists are growing in number. There are more than 1,500 licensed balloonists in some 40 countries, says National Geographic.

Although Roger Bacon theorized the possibility of using balloons for flight and although balloons have been used to carry mail, military observers and even fire bombs, ballooning has only become popular in the last 20 years.

Prolific well potentials in Pecos; tests slated

A prolific gas extender finaled in Pecos County and two outpost sites were staked in another Pecos field. Confirmers finaled in Ward and Sterling County field pays, a Cottle field gained an extension and Gaines drew a wildcat reentry and site for an outpost.

PECOS GASSER

Gulf Oil Corp. has completed its No. 1 Zauk Gas Unit, a prolific one-mile west extension to Devonian production and third well from that pay zone, in the Rojo Caballos, South field of Pecos County.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 148 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 18,055-18,172 feet, following treatment with 12,000 gallons of acid and 68,000 gallons of fracture fluid, plus an unreported amount of pounds of sand.

Drilled to 21,850 feet, it has 5½-inch liner hung to bottom, and it is plugged back to 18,680 feet. Unsuccessful tests were made through Ellenburger perforations at 21,376-21,690 feet.

Wellsite is 990 feet from north and east lines of section 35, block 49, T-8, T&P survey, 11 miles south of Coyanosa.

PECOS SITES

Two outpost sites have been staked in the Puckett, East (Strawn) field of Pecos County, 35 miles west and slightly south of Sheffield.

Contract depth for both tests is 12,000 feet.

No. 1-L Mitchell, a 1¾-mile southeast outpost, spots 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 8, block 102, J. H. Gibson survey.

No. 1-K Mitchell, one mile east of production, is 1,570 feet from south and 1,220 feet from east lines of section 31, block 127, T&StL survey.

WARD CONFIRMER

Shell Oil Co. No. 3 Sealy-Smith Foundation has been recompleted as a second current Devonian well and 1½-mile northwest extension to that pay in the Monahans field of Ward.

It completed on 24-hour potential test for 29 barrels of 36.3-gravity oil and 36 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 3,793-1. It finaled through perforations at 7,853-7,935 feet. The pay section had been acidized with 5,000 gallons and fractured with 25,000 gallons and 125,000 pounds of sand.

A reentry operation, it spots 2,310 feet from north and west lines of section 38, block A, G&MMB&A survey, two miles northeast of Monahans townsite.

STERLING CONFIRMATION

Texaco Inc. No. 4-E Sterling Fee, has been dually completed as a second Leonard "A" well and location southeast extension to that pay in the Big Salute field of Sterling County.

The 24-hour pumping potential was for 130 barrels of 32.6-gravity oil and three barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 354-1. The well finaled through perforations at 5,052-5,074 feet, following 1,000 gallons of acid on the pay zone.

Completion from the Leonard zone was effected last week for 167 barrels of 33.8-gravity oil and 33 barrels of water daily, through perforations at 5,191-5,246 feet.

Location is 1,340 feet from south and 1,434 feet from east lines of section 13, block 31, T-5-S, T&P survey, 15 miles southwest of Sterling City.

COTTLE EXTENDER

Perkins Prothro Co. of Wichita Falls finaled No. 8 Carroll as a fifth well and location southeast extension in the Cee Vee (Pennsylvanian reef) pool of Northwest Cottle.

Operator reported a 24-hour potential of 102 barrels of 41-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 196-1. Completion was effected through perforations at 4,642-4,646 feet. Total depth is 4,735 feet.

The well is 50 feet from north and 1,500 feet from west lines of section 2, F. P. Knott survey, 10 miles northwest of Paducah.

GAINES ACTIVITY

Shell Oil Co. will attempt to reopen Clear Fork oil production in the Flanagan field of Gaines County with the reentry and plugging back to 6,390 feet at No. 1 Hollingsworth, a 6,502-foot failure, 12 miles southwest of Seminole.

It originally was drilled by O. R. Prather.

Location, one mile southwest of the depleted Clear Fork pay opener, is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 11, block A-23, PSL survey.

Clear Fork pay was opened in the field in 1949.

Wood, McShane & Thams, Monahans, will attempt to extend Yates gas pay in the Block 34 field 1¼ mile north and into Gaines County with the scheduling of No. 1 Simpson, 13 miles north of Andrews.

Site for the new test is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 23, block A-22, PSL survey. Planned depth is 3,100 feet.

The main portion of the Yates area is in Andrews County.

Hockley probe set

Texas American Oil Corp., Midland, filed application to drill No. 1 Davis, a 6,350-foot wildcat in Hockley County, five miles west of Smyer.

Location is 467 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of labor 1, lsague 17, Wichita CSL survey, a northwest offset to a deep failure.

By STEVE MOTT
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — A team of Texas A&M researchers is taking several pages from the book written by the German military machine of World War II in an effort to help solve modern America's pressing energy problems.

Specifically, the university's German Document Retrieval Project is looking into the Gerrmula for converting coal into synthetic petroleum and gas.

In the later years of the war, after Allied blockades shut Germany off from petroleum supplies, the economy of the Third Reich was fueled almost entirely by coal by-products.

The research team expects their work to reveal German mistakes and possibly to discover cost-saving schemes for development of America's abundant coal reserves and easing the current concern over potential energy shortages.

Their research also has great economic potential for Texas, since the state's 5 billion to 10 billion tons of conventionally minable lignite is similar to the coal Germany used for its own industrial development.

"Lignite in Texas is virtually identical to the soft coal in Germany," said Richard Wainerdi, director of the university's Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, and project coordinator.

Heretofore most research on conversion of coal for use other than as boiler fuel has involved gasification, in which synthetic gas is tapped for use like natural gas.

But the Germans had advanced the science to a finer art, converting coal to fluids that could be used in motor and armored vehicles. Their successes were not limited just to coal.

"The German developed engines that could run on coal dust," Wainerdi says. "Also on shale oil, turf, wood chips and sawdust.

"Their war plan was a total, national independence plan for petrochemicals, drugs and the rest. Eventually, they hoped to capture oil fields in the Urals from Russia and Romanian fields, but they knew they had a problem right away."

Eddy area gains site

A wildcat site has been staked in Eddy County, N.M., and a wildcat flowed gas on production test.

C. W. Trainor, operating from Austin, Tex., filed application to drill No. 1 Box, a 7,500-foot wildcat, three miles southwest of the Little Box Canyon (Morrow) gas field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 27-21s-21e, 35 miles west and slightly north of Carlsbad.

Southern Union Supply Co., Dallas, No. 1 Exxon-Federal, Eddy wildcat, 18 miles northwest of Carlsbad and 1⅜ miles southwest of the one-well Bubbling Spring, West (Morrow) gas field, flowed gas at the rate of 1,730 million cubic feet per day, for an unreported time.

The flow was through Morrow perforations at 10,100-10,110 feet, following treatment with 2,000 gallons of acid. Testing continued.

Drilled to 10,450 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set on bottom.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of section 26-20s-25e.

Old Sol may warm university fieldhouse

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — By next winter, Old Sol instead of Old Fossils may keep the Louisiana State University Field House warm on blustry days.

That's because the field house is one of 32 sites chosen by the U.S. Energy Research and Development (ERDA) for a demonstration model solar-powered heating system.

Bids are out now on the system and officials say they hope to begin construction with a month on the south roof of the two-year-old building. When the six-month construction is finished, they say an average of 28 per cent of the energy needed to heat the structure and supply hot water will come from the sun instead of the current source — fossil-fueled boilers run on natural gas.

"Ours was one of 300 projects submitted to ERDA and only one of 32 approved," said field house and system architect W.J. Evans of Baton Rouge. "It is the only one in the Gulf Coast region."

More than 90 per cent of the quarter million dollar project will come from the federal government, with LSU now looking for another $75,000 from ERDA to increase proposed water tanks from 7,000 to 10,000 gallons.

The system will gather heat from the sun in a series of collectors and then circulate water through the collectors, heating it to 200 degrees. It will then go to the tanks for storage.

Evans said depending on the outside temperature, the tanks can keep enough hot water from two sunny days to heat the building and the showers for two cloudy ones. On a third straight cloudy day, the boilers will have to take over.

Evans said the building was chosen for the project because it does not require a great deal of heat for its size and is in a readily accessible area at a public institution.

"The purpose here is not to invent the process but to develop it into a practical demonstration of its operation," Evans said. "The whole system will be highly visible and students will able to watch it work."

The field house is used for physical education classes, intramural sports and intercollegiate tennis, wrestling and track.

Evans said it is not known exactly how much money the system will save the state in gas bills, but he said based on current energy prices it will take 34 years to pay it off in energy savings. He said that time span will likely go down as energy prices go up.

The system, like those in other states, will be monitored by the National Aeronatutics and Space Administration center in Huntsville, Ala., to measure its efficiency and feasibility elsewhere.

Saudi Arabia failing on production goals

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Last December at a summit meeting of the oil producing states Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Zaki Yamani promised that his country would increase oil production in the ensuing months to 10 million barrels a day. The industrialized countries breathed a world-wide sigh of relief.

The Saudi boost in production, it was generally reasoned, would put a downward pressure on world oil prices.

But the sigh of relief was premature.

Saudi production has hit 10 million barrels a day only one month since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Qatar, in April.

The Saudis claimed their failure to achieve the production goal was caused by bad weather during January and February in the Persian Gulf. But knowledgeable sources in the corporate and intelligence communities believe there are other reasons as well.

The evidence, some specialists are now saying, is that the Saudis have no intention of meeting the 10 million-barrel goal.

One hint was that within a month of Yamani's promise to boost production to the new level the Saudi Foreigh Minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, one of the most influential members of the Saudi governing hierarchy said, "We still have not taken a decision about increasing our production."

A major reason that the Saudis now seem to be reneging on their production commitment is what one analyst described as "extraordinary pressure" from the Shah of Iran against such a move.

Enmity between the shah and the Saudis on pricing and production policy in the 13-member OPEC is a long-standing reality. Both are Persian Gulf neighbors with conservative, pro-American governments.

The Saudis, however, have regularly opted for moderate price increases while the shah has followed a far more aggressive price policy intended to underwrite his massive industrialization plans.

In addition the Iranians, whose oil revenues this year will be about $21 billion, need the infusion of petrodollars to pay for massive arms purchases.

In January the Shah's National Iranian Oil Co. announced that the Saudi decision to restrain price increases and boost production was costing Iran $6 million a day in revenues. Sources say that also in January the Shah dispatched a high-ranking national security official as a special emissary to Saudi Arabia to pressure the Saudi government to reverse its policies.

That same month Iran's oil exports declined from 6.1 million barrels a day, the December level, to 5 million; Some of this was due to lagging world demand resulting from bloated oil stocks in the consuming countries built up before the December OPEC Meeting. Most of it was due, however, to the availability of lower-cost Saudi oil.

The Iranian press savaged Yamani and the Shah went on French television to decry any increase in Saudi production at Iran's expense as "an act of aggression."

Iraq, whose socialist pro-Soviet revolutionary council government is anathema to the Saudis, also put pressure on the Saudi government, according to State Department officials.

In explaining their failure to meet the expanded production figures promised last December, Saudi officials have argued they lack sufficient oil field development and administration to carry out a sharp increase in export shipments.

These claims, too, are being regarded with growing skepticism among experts.

For one thing Aramco, world's single largest producer, has the biggest aggregation of petroleum engineering expertise and muscle anywhere. Aramco, a consortium of four of the largest major international oil companies, has discovered more oil than it has produced each year since the 1930s, when it began operations.

Saudi reserves, set officially by Aramco and the Saudi Ministry of Petroleum and Minerals, are said to be 175 billion barrels. U.S. and Aramco officials privately say the true proven reserve figure in Saudi Arabia is probably beyond 200 billion barrels.

There is also an internal debate in progress in the Saudi leadership elite between the hawks and moderates on oil pricing and production issues.

Competition between the contending groups is intense. Internally the debate is between those who want to conserve the kingdom's one major resource — oil — for future generations and those who want to use it to achieve foreign policy, economic and political goals now. Dominating the latter group are those most concerned about preserving the role of the conservative theocratic monarchy which rules Saudi Arabia.

Carter program may put cities in business

WASHINGTON (AP) — A portion of President Carter's energy program that is moving through Congress may push a number of Texas cities into the home insulation business.

Cities such as San Antonio and Austin, which own and operate their own utilities, would be forced to inspect homes for energy efficiency and might be required to install insulation, which the homeowner would pay for.

Some cities may have also have to draw up master plans for insulating all of the buildings within their limits and submit the plans to the Federal Energy Administration.

All of these new municipal functions would arise from sections of the energy program that, compared to the major tax provisions, have attracted little notice or opposition.

The House Banking Committee already has approved the portion of the package that would require utilities to provide inspection service. The vote was 38 to 1, and the measure seems likely to pass the full House with little difficulty.

The committee decided against a provision in the original Carter proposal that would have required utilities to do the insulation installation for their customers.

As now written, the bill tries to make sure that this work will be done by small contractors. Homeowners will get some tax credits and the poor will get outright grants to help pay for the work.

The provision has peculiar applications in Texas, where many cities own their own utilities and the state Public Utilities Commission does not have original jurisdiction over most consumers' electric rates.

If the bill passes as now written, someone will have to determine whether the Texas PUC will draw a statewide plan for insulation or whether each city that owns or regulates a utility will have to draw one up.

Almost certainly, cities like Austin which own utilities not under the PUC's control will have to formulate plans for submission to Washington.

Dr. McKetta gets award

AUSTIN — Dr. John J. McKetta has been selected as the 1977 Oustanding Engineer of Texas by the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

McKetta is the E.P. Schoch Professor of Chemical Engineering at The University of Texas in Austin.

The Outstanding Engineer Award was established to recognize the professional engineer in Texas who has made sustained and distinguished contributions to the public welfare and advancement of his profession.

TSPE also named H. Mark Foerster of Odessa as a national director, Place 1. He was installed to his two-year term Saturday at the organization's 41st annual meeting in Abilene.

He is vice president of engineering for The Ortloff Corp. of Midland.

Market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's recent advance faltered today with blue chip issues leading the retreat.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 5.34 at 924.36 after a rise of nearly 19 points in the past two weeks.

Gainers and losers stood about even in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchangelisted issues.

The big-name stocks which make up the Dow have been among the weakest sectors of the market for the past several months.

Analysts have noted a flow of money out of those stocks as investing institutions seek to spread out their holdings, in some cases aligning them to match the makeup of a broad market index.

"Investor preference currently appears to be away from the blue chip type of stock and toward those secondary stocks that have low price-earnings ratios and high dividend yields," said William M. LeFevre at Granger & Co.

Buffalo Forge climbed a point to 36½ on the strength of sharply higher six-months earnings.

The NYSE's comp site index of all its listed common stocks slipped .09 to 55.33. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .20 at 119.99.

Volume on the Big Board slowed considerably, totalling 8.89 million shares by noontime against 12.83 million at the same point Friday.

Delay seen for hearing

A hearing to determine whether a youth apprehended in the reported rape of a north Midland woman should be tried as an adult probably will be postponed from its scheduled time Friday, County Attorney Leslie Acker said today.

Acker has filed a motion asking for either transfer of the case to district court or adjudication that the youth is a juvenile delinquent.

Acker has not made a recommendation on the action he thinks is best. Acker said he has been notified by the youth's attorney that he needs a postponement. A new date probably will be set this week.

The youth was ordered detained in county jail last week.

Sentences pronounced

Sentences were handed down Friday to several persons who pleaded guilty in 238th District Court to charges against them.

Wesley Dewitt Jr. of the 300 block of East Pine Street was sentenced to five years probation after he pleaded guilty to forgery.

Wahtayse Young was put on probation for 10 years and fined $500 after he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. Daiahe Young was put on probation for five years after she pleaded guilty to the same charge. Both live in the 1300 block of East Pennsylvania Avenue.

Sherilyn Clifton, no address listed, received two 10-year prison sentences, to run concurrently, after she pleaded guilty to two counts of forgery.

After pleading guilty to burglary of a vehicle, Manuel Maldonado of the 800 block of North Dallas Street, was sentenced to five years in prison.

Among those called for jury duty this morning in 238th District Court was Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr.

Angelo said he did not ask to be excused from the duty. Jury selection was still in progress this morning for the trial of Carl Dean Hubbard on a charge of improper solicitation and sale of securities.

School board to review achievement test results

The Midland School Board will review the standardized achievement test results in reading and mathematics during its meeting at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday.

The board will be comparing the results of tests taken in grades three through nine last fall with those taken in the spring, according to Dr. Douglas Brown, assistant superintendent.

"The schools set reading and mathematics goals, and they wanted to measure them. The achievement tests are normally given only in the fall, but we wanted to give the schools the information with which to measure their programs," said Brown.

"Most of the comparisons look like they have really improved," he said.

In other action, the board will consider: increasing the amount of homestead exemption for senior citizens, progress of program development for Carver Center, proposed building modifications by the YMCA in the Carver gymnasium and the fine arts program.

The board will also discuss placement of Workman's Compensation Insurance, plans for in-service education, recommended changes in attendance policy, survey of teacher attitudes towards supplementary school programs, summer school enrollments and approval of commitment for data processing and media services.

Also to be discussed are consideration of communications guidelines for public information, consideration of real estate transaction, rescheduling board meetings in July, tax roll correction, tax collections, release of pledged securities, bids for replacement of thermostat system at San Jacinto, language laboratory for Midland High School, right to broadcast athletic contests, restroom alterations for Bonham TMR units and the budget study.

Court rules lawyers may advertise some services

By MARGARET GENTRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharply divided Supreme Court today gave lawyers the right to advertise their fees for routine services such as drawing up wills and handling uncontested divorces.

The court ruled 5 to 4 that state rules prohibiting lawyers from advertising such fees violate the First Amendment's guarantee of free speech.

The decision overturned one of the legal profession's most cherished traditions, that lawyers do not commercialize their work by advertising in newspapers and elsewhere.

In other action, with the court moving toward the close of its current term, the justices:

—Turned down John Mitchell and H.R. Haldeman's appeal for the court to hear arguments aimed at overturning their Watergate cover-up convictions. Mitchell and Haldeman began serving their prison terms last week.

—Upheld a ruling which said a white employe can sue an employer for discrimination against blacks and other racial minorities because the bias deprives the white worker of interracial associations.

—Gave federal judges broad powers to impose educational programs on a school district as part of a school desegregation plan. In a unanimous ruling, the court upheld an order imposed by U.S. District Judge Robert DeMascio on the Detroit school system — an educational enrichment program for which he ordered Michigan to pay half the costs.

—Agreed to review the constitutionality of death penalty laws in Ohio, where 70 persons are on death row.

—Ruled that lower courts went too far in ordering a school desegregation plan which required forced busing of 18,000 pupils in Dayton, Ohio. Voting 8-0, the justices sent the case back to lower courts for a new remedy, but ordered that the current desegregation plan remain in force for another school year while a more limited plan is worked out.

—Struck down Alabama regulations imposing height and weight standards for prison guards as violating federal laws that prohibit sex discrimination in hiring. At the same time, the court upheld an Alabama regulation effectively prohibiting women from serving in "contact" jobs at the state's maximum security prisons.

"Today's decision will effect profound changes in the practice of law," Justice Lewis F. Powell wrote in a dissenting opinion.

But Justice Harry A. Blackmun, writing for the majority, stressed that the ruling allows lawyers to advertise only in a narrow area and that the court would wait until another day to decide whether a broader range of legal ads also would have First Amendment protection.

The majority described its decision as a boon for consumers, arguing that it serves no purpose to deny individuals the information they might gain from lawyers' ads.

Oklahoman top fiddler

WEISER, Idaho (AP)—With renditions of "Billy in Lowground," "Dreamers Waltz," and Cottonpatch Rag," Herman Johnson of Shawnee, Okla., won the grand national championship at the 15th annual National Oldtime Fiddlers' Contest Saturday night.

It was his fourth national title. He replaced defending champion Dick Barrett, of Pottsboro, Tex., who finished second.

Johnson, 57, received a trophy and certificate, in addition to $650.

He previously won grand national titles in 1968-69, and 1973. Barrett, who also has won the national title four times, collected a trophy and $420 for second place.

The other top eight finishers included John Francis, Spokane, Wash., Jeff Pritchard, Valley Center, Kan., Junior Daugherty, Mesilla Park, N.M., Dwayne Youngblood, Visalia, Calif., Sam Sloan, Kennewick, Wash., and Mickey Davis, Clinton, Miss.

The grand national competition Saturday night culminated a week-long festival that drew thousands of fiddlers, guitar players and banjo pickers from throughout the nation.

Fort Stockton voters approve charter panel

FORT STOCKTON — A 15-member charter commission with the responsibility of formulating a home-rule charter to be voted on later this year was approved by Fort Stockton citizens in a light turnout Saturday.

The second portion of the ballot elected the 15 members.

Drop in imports reduces deficit

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A big drop in imports of foreign oil and coffee helped cut the U.S. trade deficit in May to $1.2 billion, the lowest monthly deficit so far this year, the Commerce Department reported today.

But even though the May figure was less than half the record monthly deficit of $2.6 billion in April, the nation's over-all trade deficit for the first five months of 1977 was still at a record of nearly $9.8 billion.

The deficit also marked the 12th consecutive month in which imports exceeded exports.

The improvement in the May trade report resulted from a 4 per cent increase in exports to a 1977 high of nearly $10.4 billion, while imports declined 8 per cent to just over $11.6 billion.

The Commerce Department said the drop in imports was due largely to a $625 million decline in foreign oil imports and a $144 million drop in coffee from abroad.

The total cost of oil imports in May was $3.1 billion, the lowest monthly total this year.

Although the May report on oil imports was encouraging, the total value of imports of $17.8 billion so far this year represents a $5.5 billion increase over the value of imports during the same five months of 1976.

On the export side, the Commerce Department said there were increases in foreign sales of machinery and transportation equipment, crude materials, chemicals, beverages, tobacco and manufactured goods.

Total exports in the first five months of the year were valued at $49.8 billion, while imports were at a record level of $59.6 billion.

If the January-May pace of imports continues for the entire year, total imports would be $143 billion for the 12-month period, a 19 per cent increase over 1976.

Francisco Moreno, 38, was out on bond this morning, after being charged with aggravated assault in connection with the incident.

Kennedy dead at 64

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Former National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy has left a legacy of change that resulted in the betterment of basketball.

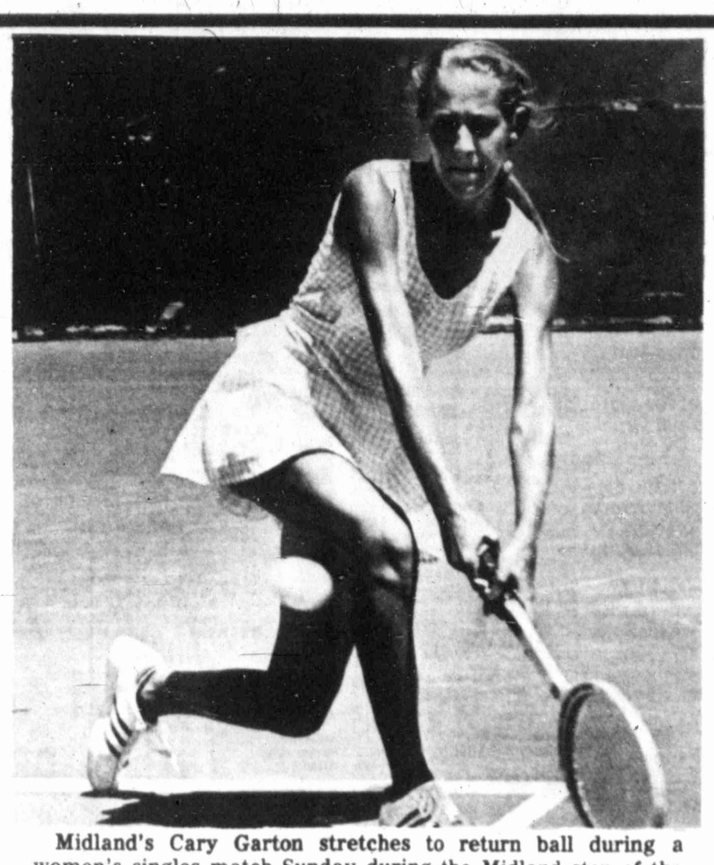

The professional basketball world, which grew up under the firm but gentle guidance, reacted with deep regret to his death Sunday night.

Kennedy, who was 64, died of cancer at St. Joseph's Hospital in Stamford, Conn.

NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien, who succeeded Kennedy in 1975, said: "Speaking from my heart, I have admired Walter Kennedy for the last two decades, first from his reputation, then from our personal acquaintance.

"No one has made more of a contribution to sports and basketball in particular than he did. It was a challenge for me to succeed him and I know that he will be sorely missed by the NBA staff and all our members across the country."

Kennedy was the 49-year-old mayor of Stamford, Conn., when he was chosen to replace 73-year-old Marice Podoloff, who retired Sept. 1, 1963.

Pepper salts Amarillo

BY TED BATTLES

"I was being overly aggressive and getting out in front of the ball, so now I'm trying to be a little more patient and I'm laying back on the pitch," Tony Pepper said in explaining his 0-for-27 ordeal last week.

"I can't afford stretches like that."

Whatever had been bothering Tony wasn't evident Sunday night when he smashed an awesome three-run homer over the centerfield fence in the first inning.

That was almost all the encouragement Jack Ledbetter, 6-4, needed in turning back Amarillo's Gold Sox, 3-1, as the Texas League opened its second half race at Cubs Stadium Sunday night.

LEDBETTER SURVIVED a shaky start when teammates came up with the big plays in the early innings, "and I knew I was within reach of the shutout and I wanted it. I was tired, but I thought I was getting stronger as the game progressed."

When a double by Ivan Murrell and a one-out single by Craig Stimac robbed Ledbetter of what would have been the first whitewash job by a Cubs pitcher this season, Manager Jim Saul went to the bullpen to bring in Byron Wilkerson.

The lanky righthander yielded a single to Paul O'Neill, but got Bobby Mitchell on a double play bouncer to Kurt Seibert.

Two were out in the first when Midland launched its winning rally against Rusty Gerhardt, who must be the best 0-3 pitcher in AA ball, if the way he pitched Sunday is any indication.

AARON RANDALL walked, Karl Pagel singled to left and Pepper boomed his seventh homer over the center field fence, just to the right of the double deck.

To keep Ledbetter out of trouble, shortstop Steve Davis turned Murrell's first-inning grounder into a double play, catcher Duane Gustavson caught Broderick Perkins trying to steal third in the second and centerfielder Carlos Lezcano gunned down Tony Castillo trying to score from second on a single with a bullseye throw in the third.

After the first inning, Gerhardt was just as tough in the clutches as Ledbetter. When Scott Boras and Lezcano singled and doubled to lead off the seventh, he retired the next three batters to emerge unscathed.

He finally needed help in the eighth when singles by Pagel, Pepper and Gustavson loaded the bases with none out and Marty French came in to get Davis on a pitcher-catcher-first double play.

CUBPRINTS — Darrell Turner, 6-3, will go for the Cubs in tonight's 7:30 game against Amarillo's Randy Fierbaugh, 1-7, acquired from the Mets' organization...Pepper's homer in the first came off a change up and in the third he chased Gene Quirk to the warning track in center for his long fly....Ledbetter relied on a fast ball and change ups to get his win...Jimmy Buckner made a one handed going away stab of Mitchell's long drive in the fifth on the warning track. .. In the fifth Gustavson fouled out 3-4-3 as Perkins raced back along the foul line for the pop, grabbed it,juggled it and as Bill Hallstrom crossed in front he kept it alive and Perkins finally squeezed it...

Stroke of luck brings Watson Western title

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — With a stroke of luck, Tom Watson overcame his own blundering and putting problems to win his fourth tournament of the 1977 pro golf tour.

He admitted he played poorly on the hole that clinched his one-stroke victory Sunday in the Western Open.

Heading into the 17th hole, the Masters king held a one-shot lead over Johnny Miller and Wally Armstrong. Ahead of him was a tough, par-four hole with a pair of sand traps and trees on the left side of the fairway.

He aimed for the bunkers, intending the ball to fade to the right and the middle of the fairway. It didn't. Playing his second shot from a hard dirt lie in the rough, he made a fine recovery as the ball landed on the rear fringe of the green, leaving a 16-foot putt. "It was entirely too hard. But it hit the back of the cup and went in," said Watson. "If it missed the hole, it's five or six feet past the hole."

Watson's birdie gave him a two-stroke margin and provided the cushion that enabled him to three-putt from 20 feet for a bogey on the 18th hole and still take his second Western Open crown in four years.

Watson said his performance at 17 was "at the least, very fortunate. At the most, the luckiest hole in my career...the whole key to my round was the lucky hole 17."

His putting Sunday was "not great," he conceded, but he added that he was hitting the ball close to the hole on his approach shots, which reduced the harm done by his putting.

Watson, who earned $40,000 for the victory to push his tour-leading earnings to $269,115, won with a five-under-par 283, a stroke ahead of Miller and Armstrong, who shot 69 and 70, respectively on Sunday. Tom Weiskopf, with three double bogeys and two eagles in an erratic round of 71, was one stroke back at 285.

Watson rebounded from a 75 Saturday to fire a three-under-par 69 Sunday.

The difference between the rounds, he said, was "stupidity. Yesterday I played one shot I wasn't ready for and on one shot I used the wrong club."

Chris Evert rips King

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert, the defending Wimbledon champion, routed Billie Jean King 6-1, 6-2 today to reach the semifinals of the 100th All-England tennis championships.

A crowd of 15,000 on the center court saw the 33-year-old Ms. King, a six-time Wimbledon singles champion, fail in her comeback bid.

Manning learns quick

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

When Vann Manning finally decided to come up from his home in the Houston suburb of Brazoria and give the Highway 80 Summer Tennis Circuit a whirl last week, his goals were plain and simple.

"I really didn't expect to beat many of these guys," explained the 19-year-old youngster who will be a sophomore at Sam Houston State this fall, "but I figured the competition would be good experience just the same; and I'd learn a lot."

Well, he's either the quickest learner since Einstein, or the reigning king of athletic modesty. Because it's been Manning that's been giving the tennis lessons on the first two stops of the Highway 80 tour.

A runnerup to Stacey Foster of Plainview in Odessa just five days ago, Manning settled for nothing less than the best in the men's singles division Sunday afternoon, as the West Texas traveling tennis show closed out it's three day run in the Tall City and headed for Andrews, where play began again this morning.

Seeded second behind former Midland College netter Derek Edmonds, Manning overcame a 5-0 first set deficit with a blazing serve to beat Edmonds in the finals, 7-5, 7-5.

"I can't really explain it," said a very pleased Manning, who was born and raised in Virginia before moving to Brazoria with his family about 10 years ago. "I guess a lot of the answer though might be that I'm playing real loose against these guys because I've never played them before and don't know too much about their reputations.

"I mean, when I was in high school (he was the AAA state champ in 1976 at West Columbia), I used to get kicked around bad by guys like (David) Zimmerman, and when I play people like that, I'm already going in with a disadvantage because I know they can beat me."

Manning didn't have to worry about Zimmerman Sunday however, because Edmonds eliminated the TCU-bound lefty in the morning semifinals, 7-6, 3-6, 6-2.

There were a host of champions crowned Sunday, as the tournament finally came to a close.

In the boys 18 singles division, unseeded Todd Kent of Canyon played top-seeded Wayne Oppenheim of El Paso like he owned him, and won the title with a 6-2, 6-0 straight sets victory in the finals.

Jim Cannon of Amarillo, who drove down here with Kent, continued the rash of Sunday surprises when he won the boys 16 singles division with a 6-1, 6-1 win over that event's top seed, Chris Holder of Harlingen.

That was Holder's second consecutive final round defeat in two tournaments. He was beaten Thursday in Odessa by Midland High's Jeff Bramlett, but Bramlett bypassed the 16-year-old competition here in favor of 18s and the men's divisions. He was elimimated early in the men's play, but made it to the semifinals of 18 before being beaten in three sets by Oppenheim, 6-3, 2-6, 6-1.

Another semifinal loser in that division was Kirk Farquhar, Bramlett's MHS teammate, but the two later teamed up to win the 18 doubles title, besting future Midland College player Steve Wyett of Lubbock and his partner, Oscar Ontiveros of El Paso, 3-6, 7-6, 6-1.

Cary Garton won the girls 18 singles title with a 7-6, 6-3 win over Beth Nickels of Lubbock in the finals. Liz Ruwwe and Sue Ann Clark, who graduated from MHS just three weeks ago, took the girls 18 doubles title with a 0-6, 6-4, 6-2 win over Garton and her partner, Sherry Armstrong.

And Sherry's little brother Lance, won the boys 14 singles title, beating Richey Houdek in a hardfought final, 6-7, 7-5, 6-4. Houdek and Armstrong also teamed up to capture the boys 14 doubles crown, beating Allen Smith and Guy Coughran of Abilene in the finals, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4. Both Armstrong and Houdek will be playing their high school tennis in two years for Coach Larry Burgin at Midland.

In a losing effort that deserves credit for human endurance, Judy Kniffen of Andrews lost to Liz Alvarado of Odessa in a three and a half hour marathon match in the girls 14 finals, and minutes later, went out on the court again — this time with her sister Kelly in the girls 14 doubles final. The two were beaten by Kelly Smith and Andrea Karr of El Paso in that one, 6-4, 6-1.

In other championship round matches Sunday, Barbara Starnem of Odessa defeated Karen Broe of Midland, 6-0, 6-0 to capture the women's singles crown; Kathy Lawson of El Paso tripped up Angie Shoemaker of Pecos in the girls 16 singles final, 6-1, 6-0; Odessa's Kelly McAfee took the girls 12 singles title with a 7-6, 6-1 win over Christy Berry of El Paso; and Barry Richards of Arlington was a 6-1, 6-2 victor over Brownwood's Paul Pearce in the boys 12 singles final.

In other doubles finals, Scott Maling and Eric Larson defeated Peter Leede and Fuller French of Midland, 6-2, 6-1 for the boys 12 doubles title; Cari Groce and Kelly McAfee took the girls 12 doubles crown by besting Betsy Hopper and Stacey McAfee, 6-4, 6-1; former Midland College coach Neill McClung and Derek Edmonds took the men's doubles title with a default win over Don Mordecai and Arthur Lopez of El Paso; Barbara Starnes and Cindy Menna won the womem's doubles title with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Pam Diephraan and Barbara Layne; Moore and Vickers downed Midland's Arthur Yeager and Steve Rea in the boys 16 final, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4; and Kathy Lawson and Karen Wilson won the girls 16 doubles title with a 6-4, 6-4 conquest of Sharon and Teresa Landry of Plainview.

Debbie Austin captures title

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Debbie Austin gave a lot of thought to quitting the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour last month.

After her performance at the Plymouth Country Club here Sunday, a lot of her colleagues may wish she had.

Miss Austin, 29, from West Palm Beach, Fla., won the $50,000 Hoosier Classic with a course record three-day total of 207. Her final round was a sizzling five-under 67.

"I honestly thought I'd be giving it up in a few months," Miss Austin said after collecting $7,500 in first-place money. "A lot of people told me I could win, but I was beginning to wonder. I'm much more persistent now and it's so much fun to play again."

She broke into the winner's circle for the first time in her career last month at Birmingham, Ala.

Sunday, she won by two strokes over Judy Rankin and Australian Jan Stephenson on the 6,225-yard, par-72 course in 85-degree weather.

Mrs. Rankin, who won the LPGA tournament at Noblesville, Ind., last week, moved into the top spot on the all-time money-winning list with more than $70,000 in earnings.

"I'm afraid I lost the tournament on the front nine," said Mrs. Rankin. "I didn't hit that many good shots and my putting was killing me. I have been having a lot of trouble with my short putts lately."

Chako Higuchi ended three strokes back of Miss Austin, and second round leaders JoAnn Carner and Mickey Wright finished at 211 with final rounds of 73 each.

"I hit some of the best shots here that I have all year," Miss Austin said. "To play well, you have to hit the good shots, sure, but you also have to have an awful lot of luck."

Miss Eustin birdied the second, third, eighth, 10th and 17th holes. She said it was the 17th hole which gave her trouble the last two years. Miss Austin finished second here last year and third the year before.

M.J. Smith fired a six-under 66 on Sunday to break the best round record of 68 set by three other golfers.

Twins explode in slugfest

By The Associated Press

Glenn Adams and Rod Carew combined to knock in 14 runs and lead the Minnesota Twins to a 19-12 slugfest over the Chicago White Sox Sunday.

Adams lined a grand slam homer, doubled in two runs and chased home single runs with a single and sacrifice fly to set a club single-game RBI record. Carew, who hiked his batting average to .403 with four hits, knocked in six runs and scored five as the Twins set a club record with the 19 runs.

Paul Blair's ninth-inning single scored Roy White from third base and gave the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox. The victory, New York's third straight over the Red Sox, trimmed Boston's AL East lead to two games.

The Milwaukee Brewers came from behind to defeat the Seattle Mariners 8-6 on Cecil Cooper's two-out grand slam home run in the bottom of the ninth inning. Pete Vuckovich scattered six hits and struck out 12 to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 2-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Ben Oglivie and Milt May drove in runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Detroit a 3-2 victory and a split of their twinbill with the Cleveland Indians. Buddy Bell and Paul Dade homered in Cleveland's 5-2 first-game victory.

Catcher Jeff Newman drove in three runs with four hits as the Oakland A's downed the Kansas City Royals 7-3 in the opener, while Kansas City took the nightcap 9-3 as Hal McRae singled home two runs in a six-run fifth-inning rally.

The California Angels downed the Texas Rangers by identical 4-3 scores in both ends of their twinbill. Pinch-hitter Ron Jackson singled with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to give the Angels the first-game victory and Don Baylor slammed a home run and two singles to pace California's victory in the nightcap.

Home runs by Bobby Murcer and Steve Ontiveros powered the Chicago Cubs by the New York Mets 5-2. Ed Halicki tossed a six hitter and doubled in a run as the San Francisco Giants downed the Houston Astros 2-0.

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt slammed his 20th homer of the season and his 13th in the last 19 games to lead the Phillies over the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0. Home runs by Willie Montanez, Darrel Chaney and Jeff Burroughs led the Atlanta Braves to an 8-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Steve Garvey smashed two homers, one in a six-run first inning, to give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 9-3 victory and a split of their doubleheader with Cincinnati. The Reds won the opener 5-4 behind Dan Driessen's three hits, including a home run.

Diablos fall in 17

By The Associated Press

Ted Farr beat a high throw to the plate in the bottom of the 17th inning early today to end a marathon game and give San Antonio a hard-fought 9-8 Texas League baseball victory.

Farr opened the bottom of the 17th with a triple, the next man popped out and the next was intentionally walked before Mike Rushde slammed a pitch back to El Paso pitcher John Roslund. Roslund's throw to the plate was too high and Farr scored the winning run.

San Antonio went into the bottom of the ninth trailing, 8-1, but aided by two El Paso errors, they exploded for seven runs to tie the game. El Paso narrowly missed going ahead in the top of the 17th inning when two runners were thrown out at the plate in close plays.

Jackson scored twice in the sixth inning to take a 2-1 victory over Arkansas. Ed Cipot walked, Terry Ervins doubled him to third and Cipot scored on an error by second baseman Manny Castillo and Ervin scored on a force-out by Felix Minaya.

Former TCU athlete hopes for Russian treatment

FORT WORTH (AP) — Former Texas Christian University running back Kent Waldrep, paralyzed since a 1974 football injury, hopes there is more freedom of movement behind the Iron Curtain — for his withered legs.

Waldrep, who suffered the spinal cord injury in a game against Alabama, has a chance to walk again if he can get to Lenningrad, Russia, where Soviet scientists are using experimental techniques on such injuries.

It means six to eight weeks in Russia. It takes a recommendation from Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., and permission from President Carter. It also requires permission from the Soviet Union.

Even then, it's only a slight chance.

"It's not a good chance," said Dr. Archie Tunturi of Portland, Ore., a neuroanatomist who has studied Waldrep's case. "It is simply the only chance there is."

"I want to do it. I'm anxious to try it," said Waldrep, who has continued his business studies at TCU after extensive therapy. He also works parttime in the TCU sports information office.

Even though doctors say his spinal cord is not severed, Waldrep cannot move his legs. Movement in his arms and legs is also limited.

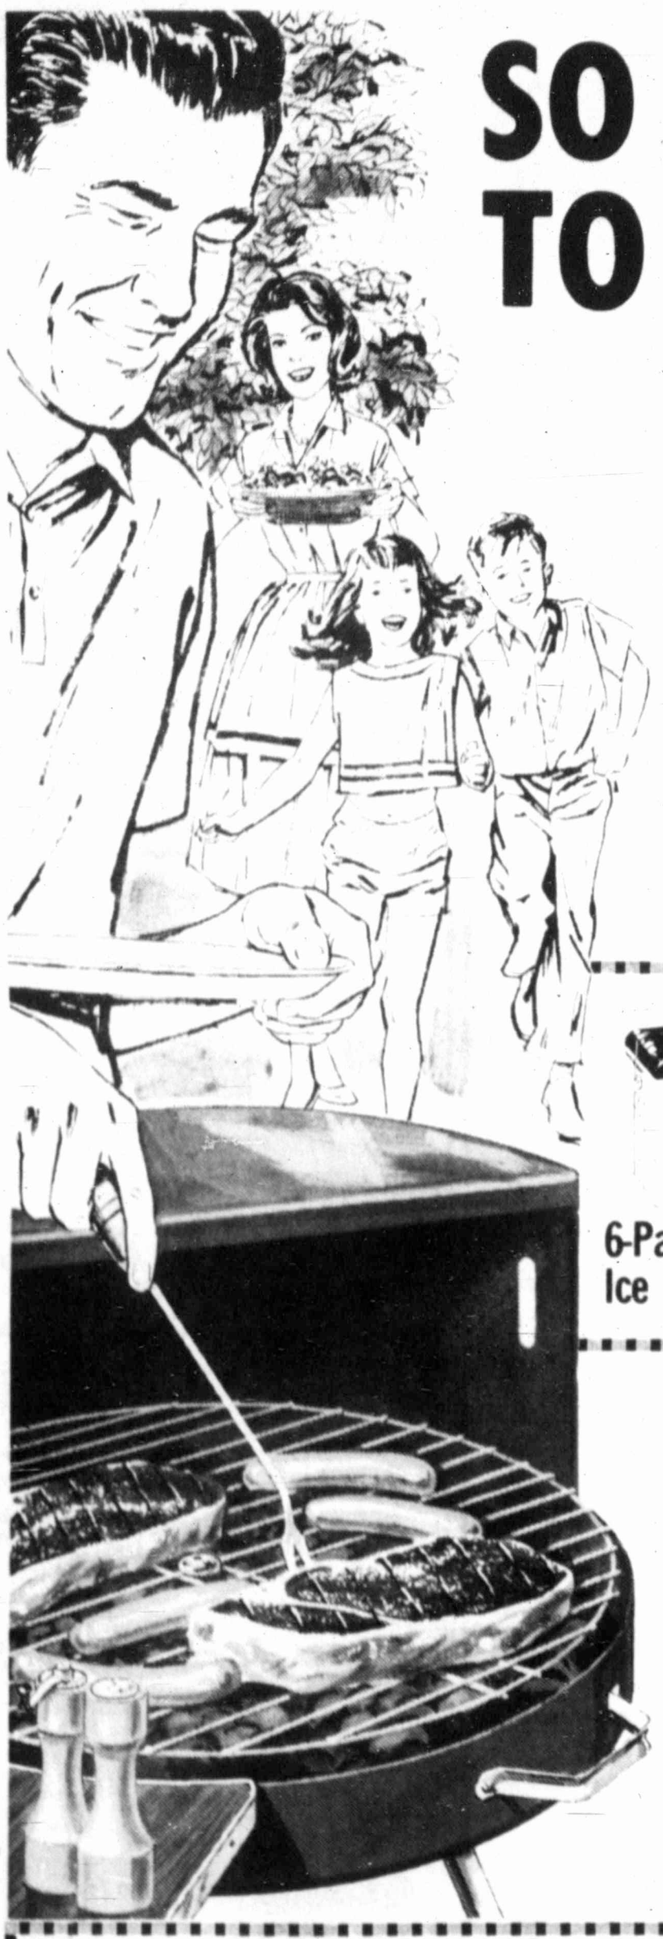

"Some of our information on what they are doing is somewhat hearsay, but we have been able to piece together accounts from visits the Russians have made to this country and our visits there," said the University of Oregon physician, who is conducting similar research.

The Russian treatments, he said, involve injecting two enzymes, hyaluronidase and trypsin, into the spinal fluid to dissolve scar tissue and improve recovery in spinal cord injuries.

Such experimentation on humans is barred in the United States and still limited in the Soviet Union, so results are non-conclusive, Tunturi said. The Soviets feel, however, that they are getting some positive results, particularly in acute (recently occurred) cases.

The Soviets are also treating cases with hyperbaric oxygen, a system of increasing the atmospheric pressure around the body and literally forcing oxygen into the system. Often unpredictable, the technique is held in disrepute in the United States.

The Federal Drug Administration must approve any enzyme tests on humans. Tunturi has applied for FDA permission, but he acknowledged it may be a long time coming.
