Oil will be moving soon, Alyeska says

By WARD SIMS

PUMP STATION NO. 8, Alaska (AP) — The resumption of oil movement through the trans-Alaska pipeline following a deadly explosion "will be measured in days, not weeks," Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. said Saturday.

Edward L. Patton, chief executive officer of Alyeska, said he couldn't give a precise time for start-up because several federal agencies will want to review the plan before it is implemented.

Patton, in a news conference in Anchorage, also said the explosion at Pump Station No. 8 is "probably going to come down to human error."

And he indicated that while oil resumption is possible without the pumps here, Alyeska is uncertain that it will be able to meet its short-term schedule for oil delivery. The pipeline consortium had planned to bring the line up to 1.2 million barrels a day by the year's end.

Patton said that without Pump 8, pipeline capacity volume would be considerably higher than 600,000 a day. But he couldn't say how much more. He noted that in terms of a 25-year project, the delay would be insignificant.

Patton also disclosed that the single fatality suffered in the explosion involved a worker who went into the area in an effort to help put out the fire. And he confirmed reports from workers that a faulty check valve was at least partially responsible for the incident.

Meanwhile, a state official said the pipeline could resume operation in less than a week if engineers are able to bypass the station which was demolished in the blast. He said it might be physically possible to restart in a couple of days, but Alyeska will likely move very cautiously.

In Washington, the Department of Transportation confirmed that the pipeline itself apparently was intact, despite Friday's blast which killed one workman and injured five.

It was the second major mishap forcing a pipeline shutdown in less than a week at Pump Station No. 8, about 41 miles southeast of Fairbanks at mile 488 on the 800-mile, $7.7 billion line.

Damage will exceed $5 million, a spokeswoman for Alyeska, the consortium of oil companies running the pipeline, said Saturday.

The explosion apparently was touched off when oil leaked through a malfunctioning check valve into the pump house and ignited. It reduced the building to a twisted, blackened maze of steel.

State Public Safety Commissioner Richard Burton said officials did not believe sabotage was involved. He said it "was strictly an industrial accident ... It was just one of those accidents."

Hijacked airliner leaves Kuwait

KUWAIT (AP) — A Kuwait Airlines jet left here early Sunday to take Palestinian hijackers to South Yemen under a safe conduct agreement given in exchange for the release hostages seized when the plane was commandeered Friday.

Airport sources said one of three officials who boarded the plane Saturday to take the place of the hostages left the airliner just before it departed.

They said South Yemeni Ambassador Mohammed Abdu left because his government "disagreed to his presence on board for higher political considerations."

Kuwait's security chief, Brig. Mohammed al Hamad, and deputy chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization mission in Kuwait, Awani Battash, remained on board with the hijackers for the three-hour flight to Aden, capital of South Yemen. The Kuwait Information Ministry said the hijackers promised to release the officials in Aden.

Airport sources quoted Kuwaiti officials as saying there were only six hijackers involved. There was no official confirmation of that figure and it was not immediately known if there was a change in the number of hostages freed.

Earlier, Kuwaiti officials said 28 hostages left the plane Saturday afternoon in exchange for the safe conduct agreement. They were reported unharmed as were 18 others released earlier.

The South Yemen ambassador, who negotiated with the hijackers, said their demands were connected to internal rivalries in the Palestinian guerrilla movement.

The hijackers originally demanded that 300 prisoners held in Arab jails be freed in exchange for the lives of their captives.

A Palestinian official in Kuwait said the hijackers were told their demands was unreasonable and were simply "left up in the air."

The Kuwait Airlines Boeing 707 was seized Friday night while on a flight from Beirut, Lebanon, to Kuwait. It left Beirut with 45 passengers, including the hijackers, and a crew of 10.

A spokesman for British Midland Airways, which leased the plane to Kuwait Airways end provided the crew, said a second flight crew was standing by to fly the plane to Aden.

Rent subsidy programs working in area cities

By JIM STEINBERG

A federal rent subsidy program to aid low income families is successfully operating in three West Texas cities, according to administrators of those programs.

The program—operating in Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene—has helped approximately 600 applicants get what one administrator said was a decent roof over their heads for the first time in their lives.

The rental subsidy assistance program is part of a community assistance block grant under Section 8, Title II of the Housing and Community Development Act.

That program was flatly rejected by the Midland City Council for the third straight year and has been left off a $946,000 Community Development Block Grant application for fiscal year 1978. Officials from the Department of Housing and Urban Development have indicated that without Midland's acceptance of a $66,000 rental subsidy program the entire block grant application would be in jeopardy.

In Odessa, where the rental assistance program has been operating since October 1975, approximately 375 housing contracts have been signed for the 308 rental units participating in the program. Contracts exceed the number of available units because of occupant turnover.

"We see a terrific number of elderly people who believed that Social Security would make them socially secure and nothing could be further from the truth," Jack Dillard, director of Odessa's housing and community development division, said.

"We are talking about widows trying to make it on $169 a month'" Dillard added.

From October 1975 to June 15, 1977, 950 Odessans have applied for the program, but only 712 of those completed the applications and had them processed, once they found out how little the program paid under marginal-qualification circumstances, Dillard said.

As an illustration, Dillard cited a hypothetical family of four where the main income earner made $6,000 annually. The program allows $142 for a two-bedroom apartment, and in this case the renter would pay $125 a month while the government would pick up a $17 monthly tab.

But the main concern, Dillard said, is not directed at those 6,500 Odessa residents who technically qualify for the program, but at extremely low income persons.

"There are many elderly people with excessive medical expenses that pay nothing for their rent (in this program)," Dillard said. The average government payout is $51, he added.

In Odessa and elsewhere the money is paid directly to the landlord by the housing authority which also maintains a rigorous check on people in the program, Dillard said.

"If we hear a whisper that someone is making more than they told us, we check it out," Dillard said.

The main problem with the rent subsidy program in Odessa, as Dillard sees it, is that the rental rates are set ridiculously low for an area with an extemely tight housing

Conservation decried

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors told President Carter on Saturday that the federal government is placing too much emphasis on energy conservation and not enough on developing new energy resources.

"We got good advice," Carter said after the three-hour conference.

Carter also praised Congress for its work on his energy program which is still pending in the legislative halls where it has been given a less-than-friendly reception. He said that if Congress fails to approve his plan, he will keep fighting for it.

"If we don't get 100 per cent of a program this year, we'll be back next year," Carter told reporters in a brief statement in the White House press room.

The governors were invited to Washington by the administration to review the role the states can play in implementing energy policy. Forty four governors attended the two days of meetings.

Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky, chairman of the National Governors Conference committee on natural resources and environmental management, said after the Saturday meeting with Carter that "there seems to be a criticism generally that we concentrated more on conservation than on production."

But he said no commitment was extracted from Carter or the other federal officials on giving more emphasis on production.

James Schlesinger, Carter's chief energy adviser, said some governors also felt that "undue environmental restraints" were hindering energy development.

Schlesinger would not say what changes, if any, would be made in the administration's energy proposals as a result of the conference.

He said some discussion focused on gasoline rationing to deal with any major disruption of imported oil. He said Carter "had indicated we should have a rationing scheme that would curtail energy usage by 25 per cent, at least."

Carter said he sought the governors' counsel because many of the responsibilities for implementing policies set in Washington "fall to a major degree on the shoulders of government officials at local levels."

The President said that as a result of the meeting, a second session would be organized to discuss enhanced production of energy.

Supporters of slurry pipeline still confident

By JOHN LENGEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railroads and their congressional allies have won a battle over coal slurry pipelines, but the backers of the pipelines are confident of victory.

Involved in the issue is big money — who carries coal — and strong emotions over precious water.

Five major pipeline projects are tentatively planned for carrying pulverized western coal mixed with water to power plants in Arkansas, Texas and the Northwest. But the railroads refuse to allow the pipelines to cross their track network, so Congress has before it legislation to allow the pipelines right of way.

In the nation's early days, canal and steamboat companies tried to block railroads from crossing waterways. Railroads tried to block oil and natural gas pipelines. And Congress eventually went along with the newcomer.

Pecos woman 2nd runner-up in Miss Texas

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Lori Ann Smith, Miss HaltomRichland Area, was chosen Miss Texas for 1977 Saturday night.

The 20-year-old Southern Methodist University junior from North Richland Hills won over Miss Irving, Margie Lynn Hooper, 22, who was chosen as first runner-up.

The ash blonde, brown-eyed Miss Smith won the preliminary swimsuit competition Thursday night and sang to win the preliminary talent event Wednesday evening.

The 5-8, 118-pound Miss Smith, who measures 35-23-35, was the second runner-up last year.

Miss West Texas, Kristi Lynn Kesy, 20, of Pecos, was second runner-up, Miss East Texas, Marta Christine Szaran of Center, was the third runner-up and Miss Dallas County, Holly Waynette Walker, 21, of Tyler was selected as fourth runnerup.

Fiddlin' Ricky Boen wins again at Stanton

STANTON — If you were to ask young fiddlin' dude Ricky Boen the difference between a violin and a fiddle, he'd give you a flat answer that the masters themselves probably couldn't or wouldn't gainsay.

And someone did ask, and young Boen did say.

"Nothing but the spelling . . . and the type of music," he casually answered moments after he had won his umpteenth old fiddlers contest here Saturday afternoon.

He had more to say.

"If you play classical music, it's called a violin," he said. If you play country, it's called a fiddle."

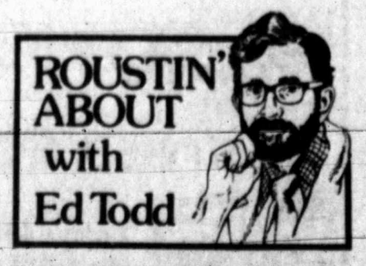

Boen calls his a fiddle, 'cause he doesn't play much of that "other stuff," though he can.

He's just a country boy from the city.

And young Boen, at age 15, bested nine of his seniors and old-time fiddlers in the hoedown contest at Saturday's Martin County Old Settlers' Reunion.

It was the community's 44th annual reunion.

Hundreds of Stanton and roundabout folks crowded into the town's community center just to hear the 10 fiddlers play waltzes and breakdowns.

It was country-and-western hour that was jazzed up with smatterings of Western swing.

"Biggest crowd we've ever had, I believe," noted Old Settlers' Reunion president Marvin Standefer.

He, in his boots, shaded glasses and all, was standing in the doorway between the fiddlin'-loving crowd and the judges.

The rules this year said the judges could only listen and not see. So, the judges stayed in the backroom, and the musicians stood and fiddled upfront.

Soviets counterattack human rights issue

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet radio listeners tuned in to an unusual 45-minute concert of protest songs by Johnny Cash, Joan Baez, Judy Collins and other American folk singers Saturday.

The program was the latest move in a mounting Soviet campaign to convince its citizens that human rights are frequently violated in the United States, a campaign evidently designed to blunt President Carter's criticism of civil rights violations in the Soviet Union.

The theme was emphasized during the program by a narrator who delivered a social commentary on American life.

"If you are poor, you have no freedom, no happiness, your spirit is broken, what then? Different people react in different ways, but many land in prison. The American prisons are packed up tightly with such people," the commentator said in introducing Johnny Cash's "San Quentin," recorded live at the California prison.

"The big criminals pay off, they hire excellent lawyers," the commentator went on. "And if they do get into jail, they land in a special prison where there are no bars on the windows, where they can play golf in the open air, or baseball."

The narrator pointed to treatment given convicted Watergate figures such as former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, who is serving a 2½-to-8 year term at the minimum-security Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., prison, an unwalled facility located across from an Air Force golf course.

By contrast, he said, San Quentin is one of the "most terrible prisons" primarily holding "people who were born with no rights." He added that "people who are fighting for human rights are also spending time in prison."

The program cited several cases which have been repeatedly mentioned in the current Soviet propaganda campaign. One was that of Joanne Chesimard, a black militant convicted in the murder of a New Jersey state trooper. Another was the Wilmington (N.C.) Ten case — nine black men and a white woman convicted in the firebombing of a white-owned store during racial unrest.

Committee planning public hearings for September

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ethics Committee's five-month-old investigation into alleged South Korean influence buying on Capitol Hill is tentatively planning to hold public hearings in September.

One congressional source, noting plans for Congress to adjourn in October, said he doubts there will be substantial new data developed and made public in the short time before the House quits for the year.

The panel is seeking to determine if South Korean agents dispensed cash and gifts to buy support in Congress for South Korean programs.

Committee chairman Rep. John J. Flynt Jr., D-Ga., says the slow and cautious pace of the committee staff is warranted.

"To conduct public hearings prematurely would result in unwarranted injury to reputations of individuals whose names have been mentioned in allegations ..." he said.

A lawyer familiar with the work of the committee says he believes the special staff hired to probe the allegations has hit a stone wall. "I think they are floundering," he said.

In a status report June 30, Flynt said, "As the committee noted in its first report, much of the investigative work remains to be done."

Meanwhile, there are impatient members of Congress who believe that until the House provides a full airing of the matter, all its members will be suspect.

The Senate has passed a bill creating a mechanism for appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate the allegations and Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., has made a similar proposal in the House.

A half dozen former or present House members have acknowledged accepting outright cash gifts or campaign contributions from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park, accused of being an agent of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

Park, who moved to London when the Justice Department began to investigate his role as a lobbyist and broker for U.S. rice sold to Korea, will apparently be unavailable as a witness for the House probe.

To prove wrongdoing, the committee must demonstrate that House members knew that the money that flowed to Capitol Hill from the late 1960s until 1974 came from an agent of a foreign government.

Thus, a key question is whether the congressmen accepted Park's gifts on the assumption that he was a private businessmen or whether they viewed him as an agent of the Korean government.

One witness, Kim Hyung Wook, the former head of the Korean intelligence agency, testified before the committee that Park was an operative of his agency. He said Park spent more than $3 million to influence U.S. officials.

But Kim provided no known evidence that House members had been aware of Park's alleged role as an agent of the Korean government.

LOOKERS OR BUYERS?

Most people enjoy watching parades and get a thrill out of the color, pageantry, floats, costumes, music, and rows of marchers.

But there's one parade that's not enjoyed very much: the parade of people that come trooping through your home if you decide to sell it yourself. Besides wasting your time (this "parade" can go on for days and days), it must be remembered these people are complete strangers who walk in off the street after seeing your sign. And don't be impressed by numbers--you want quality, not quantity when selling. Sure, they'll show a lot of interest as you take them through your home, but you have no way of knowing if they're lookers or potential buyers.

On the other hand, we carefully screen every one showing an interest in your home if you list it with us. We find out who they are, their present financial and economic situation, and most important, if they're sincerely interested in buying your type of home. When we bring them over, they're not strangers--they're good prospects!

'Pragmatic' best label for Congress thus far

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Pragmatic" is the word being used most often to describe the overwhelmingly Democratic 95th Congress.

A Chamber of Commerce analyst, when asked how business views the new Congress and Carter administration, replied: "It has been surprising in the respect that it has turned out to be much more pragmatic" than he had expected it to be.

The same theme was sounded by Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, chairman of the House Republican Conference, who said Congress has turned out to be "much more pragmatic and constituent oriented" than some had expected.

Rep. John Brademas of Indiana, assistant House Democratic leader, asked to describe Congress, said: "I don't think I'd use the word 'conservative,' I think I'd say cautious." He added: "I don't see the new members as being intensely ideological."

Most of these attempts to characterize Congress stem from the record of its first six months, a record in which business has fared far better than organized labor.

But the session is far from over and labor is gearing for a big fight on legislation to increase the minimum wage, a traditional battleground for labor and business to test their strengths on Capitol Hill. Future tests also are coming on energy and taxes.

This year, the minimum wage battle has additional significance because all sides agree the bill should establish a formula for future increases that woud take the issue out of the hands of Congress.

The big fight so far this session was on legislation to permit unions to picket entire construction sites even if their dispute is with only one subcontractor. Business lobbied hard and won a clear victory when the House rejected the so-called common situs picketing bill.

Labor has put off any fight for repeal of the federal law authorizing states to enact right-to-work laws. And there seems no chance of congressional action this year on a broad revision of labor laws sought by AFL-CIO President George Meany.

Business lobbying also appears to have succeeded in crippling prospects for early congressional action on legislation to etablish a consumer protection agency.

Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona, House Republican leader, said business interests have "done better than anyone thought they would" in the 95th Congress.

But he believes the package of energy legislation now before Congress will provide a broader test of how business will fare in this Congress.

The biggest issue in that package is whether controls should be removed from the prices of oil and natural gas. President Carter opposes deregulation. But Republicans and business are pressing for removal of all controls.

A major fight is slated for next year when Congress begins work on Carter's proposals for revision of the tax laws.

On this front, Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he believes business has done far better in its dealings with the Carter administration than with Congress.

As an example, Reuss cites the fact that the administration favors business incentives as part of its total tax package.

"Tax reform is generally used as a description for closing loopholes," said the Wisconsin congressman.

Reuss said that when most businessmen are asked how they are faring under the new administration and Congress they say, "my business is doing fine, but business in general is not."

Reuss cited the dropping of the proposed $50 tax rebate and the White House rapproachment with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns as pro-business gestures on the part of Carter.

But, he characterized the administration as "a rather forelorn suitor."

Rhodes said he believes Carter has done well so far in winning business confidence. But the Republican leader described Carter as "much more conservative in his rhetoric than in his legislative proposals."

Bert Lance, Carter's director of the Office of Management and Budget, is a favorite of businessmen and Republicans.

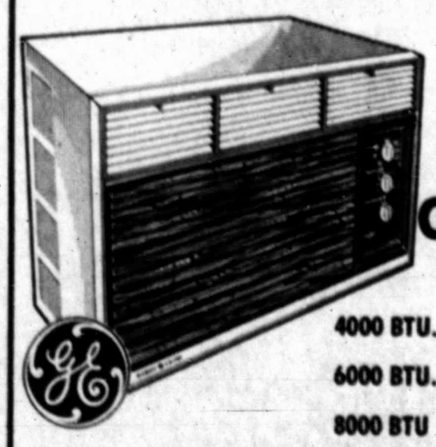

"Businessmen like him and I like him, too," Rhodes said of the former Georgia banker. "He's the best thing we have going for us down at that end of Pennsylvania Avenue."

According to Anderson, Lance "communicates a great sense of confidence to business people."

And at the Chamber of Commerce, an official called Lance "a good example of a p agmatist if ever there was one."

Cleveland motorman talks about accident

CLEVELAND (AP) — Train motorman Earnest Parker rounded the blind curve and saw another rapid transit car coming at him on the same track. He and the other motorman could see each other's faces for what seemed like the final moment.

"Oh God, I thought. God help us!" Parker recalled Saturday from his hospital bed as he recounted the final seconds before the two Cleveland rapid transit cars slammed into each other Friday, injuring 50 persons.

"I recognized the expression on his face," Parker said of the other motorman, Richard Zronek. "He was pushing down on the brake like I was, but knowing all the time we would crash. I thought it was all over for everybody. We only had about five seconds before it happened."

Parker and Zronek were on the same track because the other track was being repaired.

Parker, who was hospitalized in satisfactory condition with back injuries, recalled the moments just after the collision:

"The crash pinned me down. It was like a mad house in there. People were screaming and crying. I could feel some people stepping over me in the crush. I must have passed out for a while. I kept fighting to keep my eyes open, keep my mind together. I could hardly breathe and I kept forcing myself to stay conscious. Finally I was pulled out.

"I also remember these two boys who were sitting right behind me. I could hear them screaming because they were thrown to the front of the car and were pinned worse than I was in all that torn and ripped metal."

An investigation is being conducted by Cleveland's Regional Transit Authority, the National Transportation and Safety Board, and will be joined early next week by a panel of rapid transit experts headed by George Krambles, general manager of the Chicago Transit Authority.

Cleveland transit officials, who already have said that human error of some kind was responsible for the crash, announced new, more stringent, safety measures Saturday to avoid similar lapses.

Some of these measures call for flagmen on single-track points to carry walkie-talkies at all times, for trains traveling on single tracks to carry special yellow warning flags and for automatic signals to be installed at crossover points.

ELIDA OCHOA, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Ochoa of 601 N. Tilden, left Friday for Lima, Peru. She will be in Peru with a host family until August 20, sponsored by the East Side Lions Club. Miss Ochoa is a graduate of Lee High School. (Staff Photo)

Budget chief plays down economic coincidences

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is the nation's economy headed for another major slowdown in the second half of 1977, similar to what happened last year? Budget Director Bert Lance doesn't think so, but he admits there are similarities.

"It is a coincidence. No doubt about it," Lance said in an interview Friday.

Among the coincidences:

—Unemployment rose suddenly in June of both years after months of decline. The jobless rate was 7.1 per cent in June of this year, up from 6.9 per cent in May. In June 1976, it rose to 7.6 per cent, from May's 7.3 per cent.

—The economy grew much more rapidly in the first half of 1977 than was expected. The same thing happened in 1976. Lance said economic growth in the second quarter probably will at least equal the 6.9 per cent growth of the first three months.

—Retail sales slowed in the second quarter of this year, just as they did in 1976.

—The federal government is underspending its budget by as much as $10 billion so far this year. Government underspending of about the same amount last year was blamed by many economists as a major cause of the sharp slowdown in economic activity after mid-year.

—And finally, the government's index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to foreshadow future economic trends, declined twotenths of one per cent in May, the first decline in several months. In 1976, it declined the same amount in April, also for the first time in several months.

Computer group to meet Monday

The Midland chapter of the Permian Basin Computer Group will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the student center at Midland College.

The Odessa chapter will meet at 1 p.m. Monday in room 203 of the Electronic Technical Building on the Odessa College campus.

TWU alumnae set luncheon

A meeting of the Texas Women's University alumnae will be held at noon Friday at La Bodega Restaurant, according to Mrs. Howard Hunt, president of the Permian Basin Alumnae Association of Texas Women's University.

Purpose of the meeting will be to stimulate interest among former students in joining the organization.

Other officers of the organization include Mrs. Lottie Tunnell of Midland, vice president; and Mrs. Bill Sanders, secretary-treasurer of Odessa.

Hitchhiker thinks two men 'all right'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Hitch-hiker David Cristofferson says he thought the two men who gave him a ride across most of Oregon and shared a motel room with him were "allright dudes."

The men were later identified as prison escapees from Oklahoma. They were arrested in Portland Friday in connection with a series of killings and abductions in three states.

Cristofferson, 30, of Portland said he had agreed, without knowing who the men were, to withdraw all his money from a Portland bank to help finance an apartment for the three of them. He said that might have been the last thing he ever did.

"Man, I didn't know what I was doing," he said in an interview late Friday, after riding about 400 miles with the pair and spending Thursday night with them in a Portland motel.

Cristofferson was with the men when a squad of heavily armed FBI agents made the arrest in a scene that "was like nothing J. Edgar Hoover ever dreamed of." Cristofferson was questioned and released by the FBI.

Agents identified the men being held on $250,000 bond each as Earl Van Denton, 27, and Paul Ruiz, 29. The two were serving life sentences when they escaped from a state prison at McAlester, Okla., June 23.

Police in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana have linked Denton and Ruiz to six killings, including that of a taxi driver from Oklahoma. The FBI said the two men drove the cab, stripped of its taxi markings and bearing stolen license plates, into Portland.

Cristofferson said he was hitch-hiking from Texas to Portland. He said he was sitting along the highway east of Ontario near Oregon's eastern boundary about 10:30 a.m. Thursday when two men in a late-model car stopped and asked if he wanted a ride.

He said he was a bit nervous about the ride because "the car didn't seem to fit the guys that were driving it. They had brand-new pants and brand-new tanksirts. When they opened the trunk to put my pack in, there wasn't anything in there. There wasn't any sleeping bags. Nothing."

Cristofferson said the pair used a radio in the car to monitor state police broadcasts while Denton drove across Oregon.

At some point during the trip, Cristofferson said, Ruiz said he wanted to have a sister in New Mexico wire some money, but couldn't because neither man had identification. Cristofferson said he agreed to have the money sent in his name and the group stopped in eastern New Mexico to make the arrangements.

Pair of suspects wait in Portland for extradition

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two men who walked away from an Oklahoma prison were in a Portland jail today as prosecutors in at least two states prepared extradition papers stemming from a two-week series of killings and abductions.

FBI agents arrested Earl Van Denton, 27, and Paul Ruiz, 29, in downtown Portland shortly before noon Friday. Agents said they were arrested without incident although one man was armed with a knife and two handguns were found in the car they were driving.

In Oklahoma, meanwhile, the common-law wife of Elmer Clayton Finin, who escaped from the McAlester prison with Denton and Ruiz June 23, said she's "holding my breath that he is still alive. The officers ...say he went to Louisiana with them, but did not return."

Denton and Ruiz, who both had been serving life prison sentences, are charged in Arkansas with the deaths of a town marshal and a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers ranger.

They also have been linked to the disappearance of two fishermen in Louisiana and the abduction of an Oklahoma taxi driver whose decomposed body was found Thursday.

FBI agents said the two were arrested while getting out of a car later identified as a taxi cab owned by James M. Short, the dead taxi driver from Purcell, Okla.

Agents said equipment and signs identifying the vehicle as a cab had been removed and the Oklahoma license plates had been replaced by plates reported stolen in Wichita, Kan.

The FBI in Portland said it received information from agents in New Mexico, where Ruiz reportedly has relatives, that the pair might be in Oregon.

A Portland FBI agent recognized the suspects and called for reinforcements, said arresting agent Paul Hudson.

"After we were set, I moved forward and gave the command to them to freeze," Hudson said. "One looked like he was ready to run, but he was pretty well surrounded by then. There were guns drawn on them."

A third man, identified as David Cristofferson, 30, of Portland, was with Ruiz and Denton when they were arrested, the FBI said. A spokesman said Cristofferson was picked up by the two escapees while hitchhiking in eastern Oregon. He reportedly shared a Portland motel room with the two men, whose identity he did not know, agents said.

Cristofferson was questioned and released, the FBI said.

An FBI spokesman said Denton and Ruiz were being held on $250,000 bond each on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He said federal lawyers planned to drop those charges and let Oklahoma and Arkansas try the men.

The spokesman said an extradition hearing was scheduled in Portland Monday before a state judge, but "they indicated to us they would not waive extradition" so additional proceedings are likely.

Portland is more than 1,500 miles from where the escapees were last pinpointed in Oklahoma, the FBI said.

Agents said a file was found sewn into Denton's pants leg and a knife was sewn into the trousers worn by Ruiz. Agents said two pistols — a .357 magnum and a .38-caliber — were found in the car used by the two men.

Invasion accused

CHICAGO (AP) — Harry Aleman, reputed underworld figure who has been indicted in connection with an alleged home invasion ring, has accused the FBI of invading his suburban home and terrorizing his family.

After an appearance Friday in U.S. District Court where he pleaded innocent to the federal grand jury charges of racketeering, Aleman accused the FBI of ransacking his Melrose Park home.

Aleman, who is accused of operating a home-invasion ring in Indiana and Illinois, said FBI agents went to his house to arrest him July 1 and "went right in and terrorized my kids."

He added, "One of my kids is still in the hospital as a result of that. They went in like storm troopers. I wasn't even home."

He said one of his daughters suffered what may have been a nervous breakdown after the agents left his house. Aleman refused to tell reporters how old his daughter is, saying: "Whether she's 10 or 30 it doesn't matter. She was still terrorized." His attorney said he would charge the FBI with illegal search and seizure.

Aleman did not disclose where his daughter was hospitalized.

An FBI spokesman later denied that agents terrorized Aleman's family. He said agents went to Aleman's home with a legitimate search warrant and before leaving sat down and talked with the family.

The spokesman said Aleman's wife, Ruth, a 21-year-old daughter and a 19-year-old son seemed calm at the time.

Scientists probe thought-provoking chemicals

EDITOR'S NOTE — Your mind a bit cloudy this morning? Can't concentrate? Finding yourself uncreative? The time may come when you'll reach into your medicine cabinet for drugs that change such mental states and many others. Work on mind chemicals is going forward in many laboratories.

By RICHARD SALTUS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the words weren't flowing, Balzac drank coffee — 50 cups a day. F. Scott Fitzgerald turned to the bottle, and Coleridge woke from an opium dream to write one of his finest poems.

Better thinking through chemistry is an old idea, but scientists may be on the edge of a new era with the prospect of using drugs to improve learning, memory, attention and perhaps even creativity.

Drugs that buoy a depressed person, dampen the drastic ups and downs of manic-depressive illness, calm anxiety and keep schizophrenics anchored in reality are routinely used. Like these mind-changing drugs, the new learning and memory substances — called neuropeptides — are further evidence of the intimate link between mental states and the rise and fall of chemicals in the brain.

Dr. Arnold Mandell, a leading investigator of psychotropic drugs, suggests that psychiatrists "are all trying to get the mind and the brain back together again. The mind ran off with the analysts and the brain ran off with the biological (researchers) and what I'm seeing now is everyone trying to re-fuse them."

Although experiments with animals have shown significant improvement through the drugs in learning a certain task and retaining it, Fink says human tests have not clearly shown that the drugs are helpful.

However, an experiment with 20 retarded patients reported last year showed that an injection of a neuropeptide fragment of the hormone ACTH increased their ability to pay attention to a visual activity.

ATCH is one of the chemical messengers produced by the pituitary gland that hangs at the base of the brain. Until recently, it was thought that ACTH and other pituitary hormones had only one function — to stimulate other glands to secrete their hormones. The discovery that they alter thinking and behavior as well was unexpected.

Tests in which a single dose of a peptide chain of ACTH molecules called ACTH 4-12 was given to elderly people showed some small but not very significant changes in memory, says Fink. New studies are underway using a more potent form of the drug.

That elusive state, creativity, is being followed more quietly and less formally. With their goals so hard to describe in scientific terms and their drugs so controversial, the seekers of imagination are leery of talking too much.

One of them is Dr. Alexander T. Shulgin, a physical chemist who lives outside San Francisco. Described by a colleague as a "gentleman scientist," Shulgin is a sort of free-lance drug designer for the government and pharmaceutical companies.

He has tinkered with drugs related to mescaline and other hallucinogens from the "wild 1960s," as he calls them, until their mind-distorting effects are nearly gone. What's left is a series of compounds said to have various interesting effects. In some cases they enrich the flow of ideas.

Dr. Mandell, a longtime investigator of the biochemical nature of various mental states and disorders, described a test of a Shulgin drug done some years ago. The experiment involved college students who wrote compositions after taking a placebo (inactive pill), an amphetamine (stimulant) or a creativity drug.

"On the placebo they wrote two or three pages," said Mandell. "On the amphetamine they wrote eight or 10 pages, but it was boring and repetitive. On the Shulgin compound they wrote eight or 10 pages very rich in content."

Mandell suggests that there is a chemical system in the brain that dulls a person's reactions to signals that occur repeatedly, whether they are stimuli from outside or one's internal thoughts.

The drugs block that system, which Mandell believes is responsible for boredom and stale thinking, and makes things appear to glisten with freshness.

"You know very well that if you went into a problem that you knew like the back of your hand, you'd get bored with it; you look at it and there are no more things to think about it," he says.

"Then, if you were to come to it as though you'd never seen it before ... then new combinations start to emerge. That's what the Shulgin chemical does."

"I still don't know, frankly, if they all ought to be used just for research and then locked up," Mandell says. "There are dangers in the chemical world no less than in the atomic world."

Tinkering with the brain in this way might be dangerous in the long run, and Mandell is bothered by questions of who would get the drugs and who would administer them.

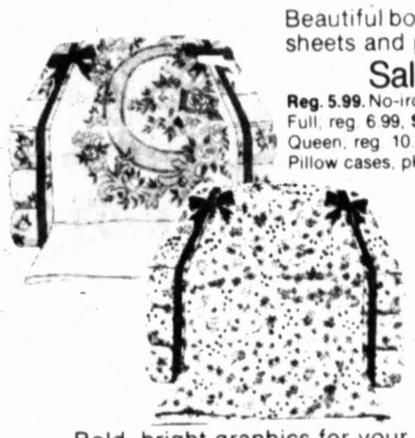

"Is lack of creativity a defect that you should treat, or are there just going to be some people who are creative and some who aren't?"

Man blends woods in utilitarian art

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Like an artist with oils or a gourmet cook, Al Greenler mixes a lot of little pieces into something lovely to behold.

His little pieces are wood. His artistry is parquetry — the inlaying of woods of different tones and shapes to achieve a blend that is pleasing to the eye.

His end product is also utilitarian in the form of table tops, cribbage boards, chess boards and pieces of furniture.

Greenler, 76, is a retired railroad and postal worker who has been at his hobby since the depression days of the early '30s when he built a power saw from dime store parts. It was a far cry from the power tools now lining his home workshop.

So is his work. His first try was an end table that won honorable mention in a hobby show. The latest efforts have earned him grand awards in four of the eight annual golden age hobby shows Greenler has entered.

"I just can't tell you how it's done," he says of his full-time pastime. "But you can watch. I'll tell anything I know if people just follow me around."

Greenler works with 56 different woods — black ebony from the Indies, gray ebony from Africa, vermilion from South America, koa from the Philippine Islands, teak from Asia, and many native American woods.

"The design grows in my mind," he said while working at an intricate inlaid corner design for a table top.

Greenler said he used no stain to alter the color of natural woods. Once a work is complete, he seals it with a clear commercial lacquer.

Bomb squad major police division

EDITOR'S NOTE — Since the mid 1970s, political violence has wracked Argentina. About 1,500 persons were killed last year, some 480 so far this year. One of the urban guerrillas' favorite weapons is the bomb. One of the most dangerous jobs is investigating them. An AP correspondent reports on one night in the life of the Buenos Aires bomb squad.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Inspector Scartascini, 27, and his colleagues on the bomb squad have a favorite joke.

Why do they wear heavy chest protectors on the job?

So there's something left to bury.

"A sense of humor, even if it's morbid, helps in this job," says Scartascini, en route in his chauffeured red squad truck to investigate a suspicious parcel.

Since the early 1970s, when political violence from both left-wing and right-wing extremists began rending Argentina the bomb squad has suffered staggering casualties.

"The operational section numbers around 40," says Capt. Hillcoat, its chief. "Since 1971, we have had 10 people killed and 20 wounded so seriously that they left on disability."

During 1976, when the military ousted President Isabel Peron in a coup and began a battle against the far-left, 1,480 persons were killed in political violence. Of these, some 1,000 were reported to be left-wing guerrillas. The death toll so far this year stands at 485.

The squad, known as "la Brigada de Explosivos," is attached to the Argentine federal police. It is divided into operations, investigations and training sections. Operations defuses bombs. Investigations does detective work and the training unit teaches brigade recruits and analyzes new devices.

The operational section is split into three-man units. Each squad truck has a driver, officer and non-commissioned officer. At any given time, there are at least four trucks on duty in Buenos Aires. In an emergency, scores of men from the other two divisions can be mustered in less than an hour.

The squad has U.S.-made helmets and chest protectors, Israeli-made detectors which electronically "smell" explosives to classify them; and British-made "mini-carriers," tiny remote-controlled tanks which can pick up suspicious packages, examine them by television and explode them with a built-in shotgun.

The problem: The left-wing urban guerrillas in Argentina are nearly as sophisticated.

Inspector Rodriguez, 26, hefted a live hand grenade that was made in a clandestine factory by the Montoneros, who like other left-wing groups have obtained millions of dollars in kidnap ransoms, bank robberies and extortion in recent years. Much of it is used to buy arms.

The guerrillas use transistorized devices powered by mercury batteries. Sometimes, they rely on chemicals which time themselves for detonation.

Bombs explode almost daily in Argentina. Most are designed to intimidate by noise. Some disperse guerrilla pamphlets. Others are meant to kill.

Last July alone, the chief of the federal police was killed by a bomb placed under his bed, and an explosion at federal police headquarters killed 20 policemen outright and left several others mortally wounded.

In 1959, the bomb squad was called out 26 times. It made 3,205 runs last year and more than 1,200 runs in the first half of this year.

The workload increases in direct proportion to the success of security forces in eliminating the guerrillas, according to Inspector Commissioner Agustin Italo Martini, over-all chief of the bomb squad. This is because the guerrillas are losing the capacity to mount large operations, and, therefore, use bombs because less effort is needed.

Bomb squad members work a 24-hour shift and then have four days off. In addition to their regular salary — about $215 monthly for an inspector — each bomb squad member receives a dangerous duty bonus of $265 a month.

Scartascini's truck pulled up behind a federal police patrol car parked in front of a row of fashionable apartment houses on Quintana Avenue, in the heart of the city's exclusive Barrio Norte.

"The police always investigate any bomb call first," says Scartascini, "to make sure that we aren't being led into an ambush. Then they clear people from the area."

Scartascini and his assistant donned helmets and chest protectors and grabbed a briefcase filled with special tools and detonators. They were to investigate a package reported on the back stairwell of the sixth floor of a building where two army colonels live.

"We try to use machines instead of men wherever we can," the inspector says, "but the guerrillas always try to keep one step ahead. They know that our mini-tanks can't get into tight places like stairwells or bathrooms."

Auto association leader skeptical of restraints

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Automobile Dealer Association Executive Director Gene Fondren expresses that same feeling of resignation and skepticism as the industry he helps represent over the Carter Administration decision to require air bags, or automatic seat belts, in all passenger cars.

Under no circumstances have the four major American auto makers, or their dealers across the nation, applauded Transportation Secretary Brock Adams' decision to require such "passive restraints" in automobiles by the 1984 model year.

"There are still many serious unanswered questions about the state of technology, economics and public acceptance of air bags vis a vis seatbelts or other (saftey) systems," Fondren wrote in a recent and timely TADA publication.

Fondren contends the efficiency and effectiveness of the airbag, as a mass-produced item of equipment, has not determined.

"Tests have been very limited, and while insurance industry films on test and accidents are spectacular, they do not provide the kind of data which would justify long range reliance on a massed-produced air bag," he said.

In support of his contentions, Fondren quotes from Col. John Paul Stapp, M.D., an air force rocket sled test driver, that airbags have five "fail dangerous" characteristics.

These include:

—It may not inflate when needed;

—It may inflate when not needed and cause an accident;

—It may inflate on first impact and provide no protection on subsequent impacts; and —It offers little or no protection against side impacts.

To Stapp's list, Fondren adds another complaint.

"People may over-rely on airbags and fail to take other reasonable precautions," Fondren believes. "For example," he says, "Since most people are not using the seatbelt and shoulder harness now, isn't it highly probable that even fewer would do so with an airbag?"

Transportation Secretary Adams' order requires air bags or automatic seat restraints in all standard and luxury automobiles by the 1982 models, and in small cars, foreign and domestic models, by 1984.

Adams said his decision could have as many as 9,000 lives a year when all cars have the device.

Unless overturned by Congress, the order will automatically go into effect in 60 days.

It is estimated by Transportation Department officials that air bags would add $100 to $300 to the price of an automobile.

The increase in price for the automatic shoulder restraints would be $25 to $100.

Additional cost of the new safety devices are also attacked by Fondren, who says the automobile industry is already facing a shakey future with President Carter's decision to tax gas-guzzling cars.

But proponents of the safety devices have argued these costs would be at least partly offset by insurance savings.

Job market improves in many Texas areas

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The job market for college graduates has suddenly spiraled in certain areas of Texas, the Bureau of Business Research reports, but other areas look bleak.

"Corporate recruiters are on campuses in greater numbers than at any time since the prerecession period," said Diana Knepper of the Center for the Study of Human Resources in a special report.

The report said that during the most painful years of the recession the Texas employment situation continued to look good in state-to-state comparisons.

"But this picture of the Texas employment situation during the recession and the increasingly optimistic job market statistics of today create an allusion that is far brighter than the realities faced by the bulk of collect graduates out looking for their first full-time jobs," said the report.

The definite upswing in private sector hiring has been as specific as it has been dramatic. The school of engineering at The University of Texas at Austin reports that more companies came to recruit their graduates during the 1976-77 term than at any time since the hiring slup of the 1970s began. One official estimated more than 90 per cent of the graduates had jobs before leaving the university.

The report said similar statistics came from placement officials at the University of Houston, Texas Tech and Texas A&M. Petroleum engineers are first, chemical engineers next and the demand for mechanical engineers also high.

"Engineers are not the only new graduates being recruited around Texas in 1977 said the bureau report. "The early spring brought hundreds of company recruiters to the state's largest business schools. At UT-Austin college of business administration there were a record 987 recruiters from 398 companies.

The report noted that many liberal arts graduates and undergraduates had been warned by the 1974 recession and changed their libreral arts majors or minors to business in order to improve their employment chances.

The report said that "for many graduate future projections of demand also look bleak. The Southern Regional Education Board projects Texas graduate areas of oversupply in teaching, communications, architecture, law, optometry and dental hygiene through 1980. They also predict a strong demand for degrees in social work, hospital and health care, hospital administration, physical therapy, library science and veterinary medicnine," the report said.

Stunt driver Vic Rivers dies in screen accident

AGOURA, Calif. (AP) — A movie stunt ended in tragedy when a pickup truck crashed upside down into a lake, trapping its driver underwater for 25 minutes.

The 29-year-old stunt driver, Vic Rivers, died 2½ hours after he was pulled from Malibu Lake on the Paramount Ranch, about 30 miles west of Los Angeles, a spokesman for Westlake Community Hospital said Friday.

"His lungs were filled with water and mud," said nursing supervisor June Green. "He wasn't breathing and had no blood pressure when paramedics brought him to the hospital."

Miss Green said teams of doctors worked for more than two hours to save Rivers, but he never regained consciousness.

Rivers was working on the final scene for "High Riders," a crash-filled movie about an automobile chase, when he drove a 16-year-old pickup off a ramp and into six feet of water at 55 miles an hour, police said.

The scene called for Rivers, a stuntman for seven years, to send the truck exploding into flames as he sailed 150 feet from the ramp to the water. However, the explosives did not ignite and the truck hit the water nose first, tumbled over and landed on its roof.

Rivers, protected by a seatbelt, crash helmet and rolls of foam padding, was to have freed himself from the truck and swim to safety after the stunt.

Miss Green said it was not known how long Rivers had been entombed in the cab of the truck, how he had gotten outside or how long he had been in the water.

Before the stunt, Rivers had said he wasn't worried.

"You do all the worrying ahead of time," he said.

Other stunts for the movie included the toppling of a stuntman from a Mulholland Highway bridge to a stream 51 feet below. Another stuntman rolled a pickup truck off the Mulholland roadway and escaped unscratched.

Midland business firm, eight others nominated

ABILENE—The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has received nine nominations of West Texas business firms, including one from Midland, for the Governor's Industrial Expansion Award for 1976, Ralph McLaughlin of Big Spring, chairman of the WTCC Private Enterprise Development Committee, announced Saturday.

The firms, with sponsors in parenthesis, are: Compressor Systems, Inc., of Midland (Midland Chamber of Commerce); Bibby's Creations of Rising Star (First State Bank of Rising Star); Mueller Supply Co. of Ballinger (Ballinger Chamber of Commerce); Swift Fresh Meats Co. of Moore County (Dumas Chamber of Commerce); MBPXL Corp., and the Hamby Co., both of Plainview (Plainview Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development);

Royal Park Fashions, Inc., of Tulia (Tulia Industrial Foundation); Iowa Beef Processors, Inc., of Amarillo (Amarillo Chamber of Commerce), and Billy the Kid, Inc., of El Paso (El Paso Chamber of Commerce).

Bruce Street of Graham, WTCC preaident, said a selection committee will judge the nominations and select a grand prize winner from the West Texas Chamber area.

Lawmakers open school finance session Monday

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas lawmakers meet again Monday to argue the nagging problem of public school financing, a critical issue that has had schools in and out of federal courts for several years.

The big question will be whether lawmakers can give local taxpayers property tax relief and at the same time upgrade the money-hungry poorer school districts.

"I am very pleased at the degree of agreement that exists," Gov. Dolph Briscoe told a news conference Friday after talking with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Bill Clayton and representatives of teachers, school administrators and others involved.

"They are closer and stronger than any time that I can remember," Briscoe said.

In making the formal call for the special session—limited to 30 days—Briscoe made it clear he would not open debate to any other subject until public school financing is settled.

"The entire effort of the legislature from 10 a.m. Monday will be on public education until it is completed," he said.

The governor said he had 210 requests to include other subjects in the sessin, but "I have made no final decision of what other subjects, if any, will be submitted...No other subjects will be submitted until public education is completed."

However, there will be at least one interruption. On Friday, July 15, the House has scheduled a joint session with the Senate on a resolution to remove Associate Justice Don Yarbrought, 36, from the Texas Supreme Court. Yarbrough faces disbarment proceedings over 87 alleged violations of State Bar ethics and has been indicted by the Travis County grand jury on charges or forgery and perjury.

"It seems to me that is the proper and most expeditious legislative procedure," Briscoe said of the hearing for Yarbrough.

He said if two-thirds of each house votes to instruct Briscoe to remove Yarbrough, he has no choice but to do so.

Briscoe declined to say if he throught Yarbrough should be removed.

The governor said there are "some differences" in the House and Senate bills on public school financing "but I think it will be possible to work this out."

He said he would have more definite recommendations when he addresses a joint session of the House and Senate after the opening Monday.

Briscoe was forced to call the special session because the 140-day regular session ended May 30 without either house taking a final vote on a public school financing compromise bill that was approved by a conference committee just half an hour before the midnight deadline for adjournment.

Briscoe was asked if he had second thoughts about waiting until now to call a special session instead of recalling the lawmakers immediately after the May 30 failure.

"I think, I am convinced, after the discussion today that the legislature is going to do a better job (on public school financing) this session than the conference report of May 30," he said. "In that case, I think I made the proper decision for the good of public education."

Briscoe said he would stick with his previous forecast that the legislature should be able to close out the special session in a week or 10 days. "I would hope so," he told the news conference. "No one would want to make a definite prediction but I am optimistic that will be the case."

The House Public Education Committee ended two days of public hearings Friday with detailed discussion and testimony of two proposed House bills. One, backed personally by Clayton, would spend about $920 million for public school improvements. Backers said it was a "tax relief" bill because it would keep local school districts from having to raise property taxes. The second bill, backed principally by a group of House liberals, was called the "equalization" bill because they said it would provide more for poorer school districts. It was estimated to cost $958.5 million — just about what Comptroller Bob Bullock says is available in the treasury.

Both bills would allow local districts the choice of assessing farm land on its production value instead of market value.

Clayton told the committee he would like to have a committee-approved bill ready for debate the middle of the week.

The Senate bill, still in the making, would cost $932.7 million. Backers said it generally would give more new state aid to the poorer, larger and urban districts and less to the wealthier, smaller and rural districts than Clayton's plans. The Senate is expected to consider the bill as a committee of the whole in order to speed it toward earlier debate.

Gunman terrorizes bus passengers, surrenders

ATLANTA (AP) — A gunman who told a passenger he was on his way to kill his wife and children commandeered a Continental Trailways bus and terrorized the 16 persons on board for 3½ hours before surrendering to police in rural Roberta, Ga., authorities say.

Ricky Ricardo Brown, 21, of Chester, S.C., was arrested Friday night after seizing the bus at gunpoint near Anderson, S.C., and surrendering about 170 miles away, police said.

The bus originated in New York and was en route to Montgomery, Ala., through Atlanta.

An FBI spokesman said that Brown was taken to Bibb County jail in Macon, Ga., and that he would be charged with kidnaping.

One shot was fired when the man took control of the bus, but no one was struck, said the driver, Block Bailey of suburban Atlanta.

"The man sat down beside me and told me he had a gun and said he would kill me," said Bailey, a bus driver for 30 years. "He said to keep driving. I did what he said and we wound up in Roberta."

He said Brown took command of the bus about 6 p.m. and at 9:30 told him to stop "at the next red light and call the police." The next red light was in Roberta, a rural community about 100 miles southwest of Atlanta.

Bailey said Brown gave no explanation for his decision to surrender.

Bailey and 14 passengers returned to Atlanta Saturday.

The 15th passenger, Margaret Cooper, 24, of Atlanta, was taken to a Macon hospital for treatment of what was described as "nerves."

Mrs. Cooper said Brown told her he was on his way to kill his wife and children.

Bailey said Brown had been drinking whisky before he boarded the bus, "but I didn't expect any trouble from him."

He said the gunman paced the aisles, frequently ordering passengers to move from seat to seat.

"The passengers were screaming and crying," said Bailey. "He kept holding the gun up to me — it was a nickelplated .38 — and told me to smell it."

Bailey said the bus traveled along Interstate 85 until it neared Atlanta, then detoured around the city and traveled along secondary roads at Brown's instructions.

"I just had to go the way he told me to," said Bailey.

Store finally closes

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma's oldest family-owned grocery store closed its doors to make room for a new thoroughfare, leaving behind 73 years of memories.

A lot of things have happened since John Henry Robertson opened the store in 1904 during Indian Territory days.

Board of Equalization To Be Held Tuesday, July 12, 1977

An appraisal has been completed on all property within the City for preparation of the 1977 tax roll. The tentative assessed valuation for 1977 is $677, 316, 470 as compared to a 1976 actual valuation of $399, 234, 070. This is an increase of 69%.

The city wide appraisal valuation was essential if our taxes were to be equal and uniform.

Based on the tentative valuation of $677, 316, 470, the equalized tax rate would be $0.672 as opposed to last year's $1.14.
June 20, 1977, the Tax Office will be mailing valuation notices to all property owners. Any taxpayer wanting to know his 1977 City tax can use the above figure and calculate it for comparison with his 1976 City tax.

The amount of increase or decrease in taxes will depend on how close to market value the individual taxpayer's property was in 1976.

If you so desire, you may contact the Tax Assessor-Collector at the City Hall between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily regarding this and/or appeal before the Board of Equalization at the cafeteria of Midland High School located at 800 West Illinois, Midland, Texas between the hours of 9 a.m. and 6 p.m., July 12, 1977.

YMCA effort boosted with cries for help

Stop! Help! The cries are literally stopping traffic.

Approximately 25 youths and adults gathered Saturday at the site of the proposed Alamo YMCA in an effort to raise $60,000.

They plan to stay at the site, located on Midland Drive, until July 15 or until they reach their goal of $60,000.

The funds are needed to build the facility. Without them, there may not be an Alamo YMCA.

"The kids have really been behind this from the beginning. It's a demonstration of their need and desire to see this thing built," said Carl Forest, one of the adults supervising the demonstration

Signs such as "we'll stay until you pay," and "support Alamo YMCA" were waved at passing cars and pedestrians, in an effort to stop them and solicit their support for the Alamo YMCA.

"The people who were contacted in the community felt that this figure was necessary for the community to show its desire to support the facility," said Forest.

"This is a situation that everyone has talked about and discussed. Now that it is here, it seems to be a situation that everyone seems to pass off for someone else to take care of."

Volunteers staying at the site for the demonstration will be displaying posters, signs, talking to passersby, taking contributions and accepting pledges.

situation.

The maximum allowed in the program is $106 for an efficiency, $120 for a one-bedroom, $142 for a two-bedroom, $157 for a three-bedroom and $171 for a four-bedroom residence. These rents are to include utilities, Dillard said.

Generally the housing found can only be described as "marginal," Dillard said. About 80 per cent of the people in the program have not had to move, Dillard said.

Despite the shortage of low-cost rental units, the City of Odessa has asked for 144 more units to be made available to them in their 1978 grant. This will bring the total number of rental assistance units in Odessa to 452.

Abilene has been involved with the rent subsidy program under Section 8, Title II of the Housing and Community Development Act since February 1976, with 150 subsidized units.

Housing administrator Carol Cohn said the program is providing "a decent roof" over many applicants for the first time.

"And now that they don't have to spend all their time worrying about where they are going to get that decent roof maybe they can begin to work out long-term goals to improve their lives," Cohn said of those on the rent subsidy.

Although San Angelo is having the same problem as Odessa finding enough low-rent units to qualify for the subsidy, the city has asked that its original 149 units be increased to 200, Don Hamilton, San Angelo assistant director of community development and public housing, said.

"The people with the hustle to find a low-rent dwelling in this town aren't the kind to stay on welfare for very long," Hamilton said.

Mercury resumes climb

Friday's temporarily cooling rains were just a happy memory this weekend, with the mercury beginning its climb back to usual summertime highs.

Saturday's high mark of 93 is expected to be exceeded slightly by today's maximum reading in the mid-90s. Tonight's low should be near 70 and Monday's high will again be in the mid-90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The forecast for today and Monday calls for mostly fair skies at night and during the early morning, with partial cloudiness during the afternoons and evenings. South-southwesterly winds this afternoon will be from 10 to 15 mph.

Badly needed rain showers were few and far between Saturday as Texans braced for another hot weekend across much of the state.

The only relief was in the Panhandle and Northwest Texas where a weak frontal system kept morning temperatures in the mid-70s.

That system touched off thunderstorms along and ahead of it in portions of North Texas. Rainfall amounts ranged upward to more than two inches at some points. Rotan, 40 miles northwest of Abilene, received 2.30 inches for one of the heaviest amounts.

Ingram truck driver killed

SHEFFIELD — Thomas George Dale, a 43-year-old truck driver from Ingram in the Texas hill country, was killed instantly about 6 p.m. Saturday when the pickup truck he was driving went out of control on U.S. Hwy. 290 near here and overturned.

The mishap happened 13 miles west of Sheffield in Pecos County.

A Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman said the truck turned over on its side and skidded. Dale was not thrown from the vehicle.

Dale's body was taken to Sheppard Funeral Home in Crane.

Dale was alone in the pickup truck at time of the accident, the DPS spokesman said.

Area students are graduated

AUSTIN — Students from Big Spring, Midland and Odessa were among 828 students at The University of Texas receiving bachelor of business administration degrees at conclusion of the 1977 spring semester.

Nancy Jane Caussey of Midland received her degree with honors. Other Midlanders awarded the degree were June Bateman, John Owen Cockerell and Owen Keith Rutz.

Students from Big Spring awarded business administration degrees were Thomas Augustian Cuddeback and Daniel Preston Wright. Carol Lynn Taylor Moore of Odessa also was recipient of a BBA.

Registration nears close

Tuesday is the final day to register for second summer term classes at Midland College, according to registrar Dee Windsor.

Persons interested in registering for credit courses now under way at Midland College should contact the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. or the Evening Counselor in room 130, Science/Faculty Office Building, between 5:30 and 8:30 p.m.

Both daytime and evening courses in almost all academic and vocational areas are being taught during the second summer term, Windsor pointed out.

Additional information may be obtained by phoning Midland College at 684-7851, extension 133 or 115.

To date, more than 380 students have enrolled for classes during the second summer term.

Fiddlin' Ricky Boen triumphs at Stanton

had just moseyed off of Stanton's main street, Saint Peter, where cow chips, busted eggs and other good-times litter lay under the hot sun.

The Stanton Jaycees had just put on a four-act street show to entertain the settlers and newcomers alike.

That was past, though a downtown street was still messed up, and the fiddling was going on.

George Glynn, the fiddlers' emcee, summoned another contestant and his guitar accompanist up to the corner, where all the fiddling was going on. He announced numbers, not names, so as not to throw the judging off.

The unnamed pair was young Boen and his father, Darrell Boen, of Odessa.

The youngster got with it.

His warm-up tune was the "Cotton Patch Rag," which promptly was followed by the "Festival Waltz" and then by the "Sally Goodin" breakdown.

Later, the contest was over, and Glynn announced the judges' choice for the No. 1 fiddler.

And it so happened that the same young fiddlin' chap who won the contest also was high man in the saddle at last year's old fiddlers' competition at the reunion.

He was also top fiddler at the '76 county fair and would be pleased if he could ride high again at the '77 fair next month.

"It's amazing the way this kid is coming along," said runner-up fiddler Damon Boyd of Imperial.

Boyd, at 51, has been playing the country vjolin 30 to 35 years longer than has his good friend. He's Boen's mentor.

"Damon has kind of given him pointers to go by in his fiddling," Boen's father said.

He said it was only in the last year that his son "really started getting serious about that old breakdown, Texas old-time fiddling."

He's only been rapping on the fiddle for three or four years.

And the young fiddler declared that nobody has been teaching him how to play.

"Someone taught me how to read music for orchestra," he said. "They don't have music for fiddles."

One old-time fiddler, Perry Geurin, 55, of Lenorah, lost out in the contest. But he figured that young Ricky Boen got exactly what he deserved.

"You can't beat that kid, Ricky," said farmer Geurin, who has won a contest or two himself.

His No. 2 son, Pete Geurin, dropped by and handed his fiddling pa a handful of regular cigarettes, Camels.

"The competition's a little too rough here," the son said without asking.

Yeah.

Stanton's No. 1 newspaperman, Terry Neill, passed by en route to take a photo but paused long enough to comment on young Boen, the cowboy-type with the tall, white Western hat and the pointed boots.

"I don't see anybody coming close to (beating) him anytime soon, either," said Neill, who moved on.

But Jess Miles, one of the judges and a jazz rhythm guitarist himself, reckoned that the contest was more competitive than most seemed to realize.

"It was close, though," he said. "That guy (Damon Boyd) who was second was real good."

Helping Miles out in the judging was his wife, Billie, who fiddles with the mandolin; Bill Horton, a bass player, and Bill Comeaux, a lead guitarist.

(The four judges, by the way, were to play some country, western swing and western jazz at a reunion barbecue feast Saturday night.)

Fiddlers, other than Boen and Boyd, in the contest, were Don Tolle of Big Spring, who rated third place, and Hoyt Roberts of Westbrook; Chester Derrick and Fred Ward, both of Odessa; Geurin; and A. L. Carlisle, Van Doyle Murphree and Tom Castle, all of Big Spring.

Young Boen, naturally enough on old settlers' reunion day here, wasn't the only winner.

The other champs made their marks on Saint Peter Street in Stanton.

Danny Fryar, a farmer and Stanton's mayor, and a former Stanton fellow, Bob Hamm, who now is in the feed business at Woodward, Okla., won first place in the egg-throwing contest. Thirty teams were entered in that game.

About four dozen eggs were left splattered on the street.

Mark Geurin was the men's cow-chip throwing champ. He flung a patty 250 feet down the main street.

The distaff champion thrower was Loretta Young, who cast the chip 120 feet down the street.

Fight women and 26 men competed in the chip-throwing match, said Jaycee Johnny Louder, who was in charge of the contest.

Blowing the biggest bubble with a wad of gum was 14-year-old Billy Shanks. He competed against 22 chewers.

And a 20-year-old farmer, John White, who says he wears that old black cowboy hat during most of his waking hours, swallowed seven jalapenos in one minute to win the pepper-eating contest.

"I got 'em all down," said White, who admitted he didn't chew and eat all of those hot peppers. "It was real hot." But he got 'em down.

And winners in the parade, which was hinged to the theme "And That's The Way It Was," Saturday morning were:

— Best Float: The Nelson and Clark families' float of an old jailhouse.

— Best Decorated Window: Roadrunner Chevrolet's display of a passed-out, black-hatted moonshiner (yes, a mannequin) next to a whiskey still.

And the best drink in town on the hot, Saturday afternoon was a 30-gallon whiskey-barrel of cool lemonade hauled around by Cliff Hazlewood Jr.

It was free, too. And anyone, including fiddlers, could partake with relish.

Webb trainees will gather

BIG SPRING — The 78th Flying Training Wing at Webb Air Force Base will gather Friday for what is likely to be their last formation.

All military members of the wing will have an inspection at 7:45 a.m. and a wing parade will be held at 8:15 a.m. Inspection will be on the flight line ramp south of Base Operations, and the parade center will be on the flight line in front of Base Operations.

The inspection and parade are open to the public and seating will be provided. All non-mission essential military personnel will be required to participate.

Approximately 1,100 military persons will participate in the event.

Big Brothers plan session for volunteers

A volunteer orientation meeting for persons interested in participating in the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program here will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the conference room of the Western State Bank.

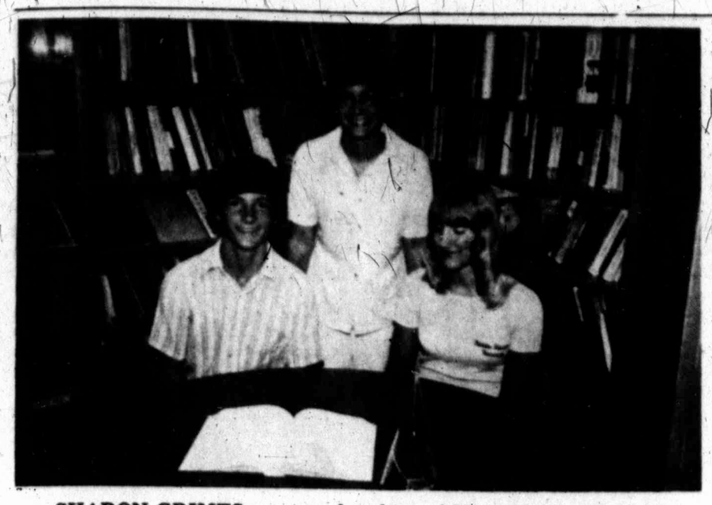

Gloria Lambert, program coordinator, said that anyone interested in experiencing the joy of sharing with others is invited to attend the orientation session. She said additional volunteers are needed to meet the increasing demand for Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

Big Brothers-Big Sisters is a program of Family Services of Midland, Inc.

Attorney Waggoner Carr to stick with Yarbrough

HOUSTON (AP) — Waggoner Carr said Saturday Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough admitted to misleading him in matters surrounding Yarbrough's recent criminal indictments for perjury and forgery.

Carr, a former Texas Attorney General, is representing Yarbrough in his legal battles.

In a statement Friday, Yarbrough said "I have apologized for misleading him and really appreciate the opportunity to work with him on the upcoming trials and hearings."

Carr said he usually drops clients who lie to him, but would make an exception in Yarbrough's case.

Carr said he has a sympathetic feeling toward anyone going through that kind of experience and added, "Everybody in the world is attacking him. He really needs help."

Carr himself was indicted and later acquitted in what has become known throughout Texas as the Sharpstown banking scandal in the early 1970s.

Yarbrough admitted lying to Carr about repeated meetings with a former business associate, John William Rothkopf, who, according to Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance, secretly taped conversations in which Yarbrough discussed killing Victoria banker Bill Kemp. The banker's testimony supposedly can link Yarbrough to an alleged forgery scheme.

Speaker Bill Clayton has scheduled a House hearing for next Friday on a resolution to remove Yarbrough from office. A similar resolution was expected to be introduced in the Senate on Monday, clearing the way for a joint session to hear the removal procedures. Carr is to represent Yarbrough in these proceedings.

Texas traffic toll increases

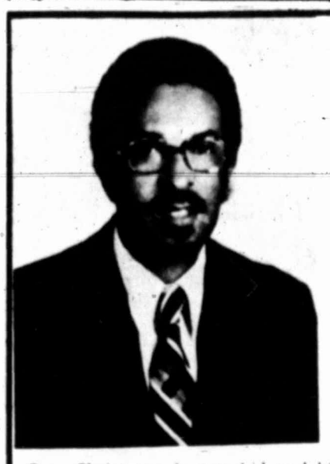

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Texas traffic deaths are up four per cent this year, the Texas Department of Public Safety reports.

So far this year there have been 1,583 deaths in accidents on streets and highways compared to 1,518 for the same time last year.

There is a six per cent increase in accidents in which deaths occurred—from 1,309 to 1,386.

U.S. Indians ask Arab help

By WILLIAM R. RITZ

DENVER (AP) — Twenty three western Indian tribes are seeking the help of oil-rich Arab and third-world nations to develop vast uranium and coal reserves beneath their reservations.

Two meetings have been held in Washington between representatives of the Council of Energy Resource Tribes and six member-nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countires, an Indian spokesman said.

A third meeting is to be held there this week, said Peter MacDonald, tribal chairman of the Navajo nation and chairman of the Council of Energy Resource Tribes.

The Indians are going outside the country for help because of what they call federal red tape and foot-dragging, MacDonald said.

"We're looking for information principally," MacDonald said. "We believe they have a certain amount of information and technology that would be most valuable to us."

MacDonald, interviewed by telephone from the Navajo reservation in Window Rock, Ariz., declined to identify the countries with which CERT met on June 28 and 29 in Washington.

He said the discussions were initiated by the Indians and that a statement would be issued after the meeting this week.

The 23 tribes represented in the discussions include the Apache, Sioux, Navajo, Crow, Blackfeet, Shoshone, Cheyenne, Utes, Pueblo, Chippewa Cree and Yakima. They represent about two-thirds of the native American population, and their reservations are spread over 10 western states from the Dakotas to Washington and south to Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

According to estimates supplied by a spokesman for the CERT, about 80 per cent of the nation's uranium reserves and about one-third of all the low sulphur strippable coal in the country lie under those reservations.

A spokesman for the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington said those estimates "aren't far off." The federal government now is working on a complete survey of resources on Indian lands, the spokesmen said — the first ever done by the federal government.

MacDonald said OPEC representatives at the meetings held in Washington were "receptive" to the Indian's proposal, but he refused to provide details of the discussion.

"We've found how (energy) companies have dealt with them in the past — bad leases and one-sided operations," MacDonald said. "We wanted to see if they could give us some technical assistance we can't get from the United States government."

The Council of Energy Resource Tribes has asked for $1 million in federal funds to develop their natural resources. The Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington last week said the figure has been cut to $200,000.

The BIA's acting deputy commissioner for Indian affairs, Ted Krenzke, said Friday that the cut in funding was primarily the result of the slowness of the government appropriation process.

"One million dollars is a considerable amount that requires time to analyze and consider," he said.

"We're not refusing that," MacDonald said of the $200,000, but he added that the funding cutback typifies the problems the Indians face in developing the resources themselves. "I think they feel uncomfortable and threatened that the Indian is going to manage his own resources."

The BIA, federal trustee of Indian lands, has left the Indians "completely void of any technical knowledge that would be needed to address the issues now facing us," MacDonald said.

As a result of this lack of expertise on the reservations, energy companies have the upper hand in dealing with Indians, MacDonald said. This, in turn, has led to a feeling that the tribes are being exploited by the energy giants, he said.

"We find that many of the third-world nations have similar backgrounds and similar problems that are facing the native Americans," he said.

MacDonald said the OPEC nations have not offered any money to aid the Indians, but that may come in the future.

Trio to attend Waco seminar

Three Midlanders will attend the fifteenth annual High School Students Citizenship Seminar to be held this week in Waco.

The Midland County Farm Bureau will send Paul Evans, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Evans; Elaine Lucas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy L. Lucas, and Clay Midkiff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Midkiff to the seminar, which is sponsored by the Texas Farm Bureau.

The 400 high school juniors and seniors from throughout the state who will participate were selected on the basis of leadership qualities and scholastic achievement.

The purpose of the seminar, which will be conducted on the Baylor University campus, is to help students understand the American competitive enterprise system and opposing ideologies, said Roy Neely Jr., president of the Midland County Farm Bureau.

Tower asking for views

WASHINGTON, D. C. — In a statewide questionnaire, U.S. Sen. John Tower will be asking Texans for their views on federal efforts to reform the financially troubled Social Security system.

Tower said the federal government must honor its commitment to generations of working Americans and the system needs to be reformed.

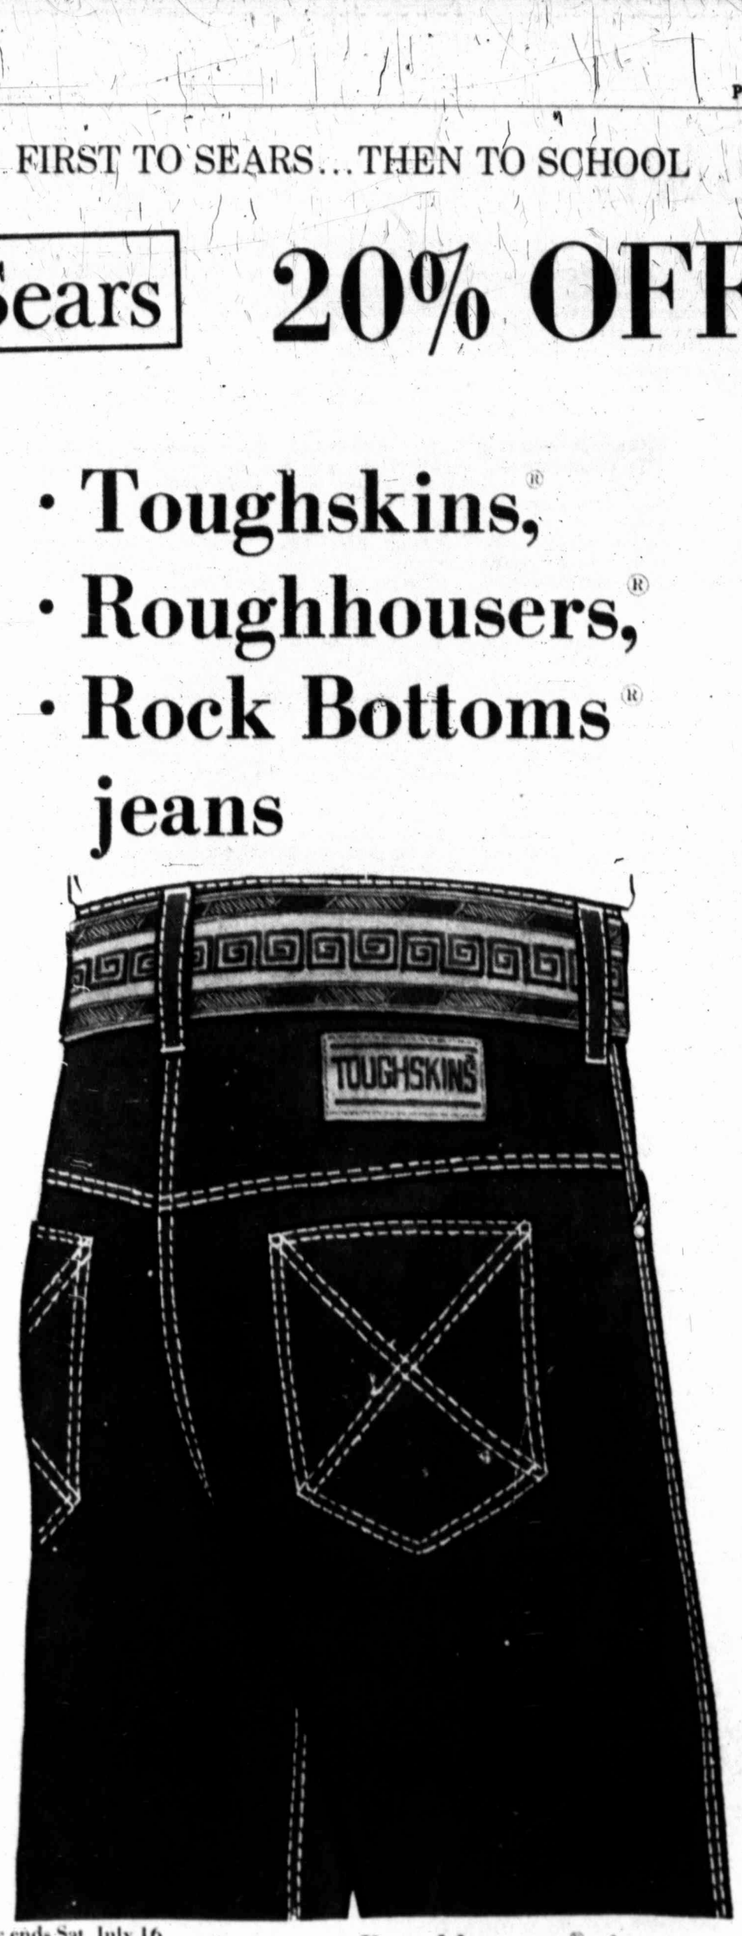

"In 1976 the Social Security system paid out an estimated $4.3 million more than it took in. A deficit is now forecast for every calendar year, and, if no remedy is enacted, reserves will be exhausted in 1984," Tower said.

Town recovering from dioxine

SEVESO, Italy (AP) — It was just after noon last July 10 when a valve burst under extreme heat and 4½ pounds of the chemical dioxine spread in a poisonous white cloud around the Swiss-owned Icmesa plant in this town just north of Milan.

The valve was shut down within 30 minutes, but in the hours that followed nearly 50 persons were hospitalized, small animals died and plants withered. The effects are still being felt.

Dozens of women had abortions, fearing malformations of their unborn babies; about 450 children have a skin disease called cloracne; 40,000 contaminated animals had to be killed and now are kept in caustic soda in containers; the economic life of the area was disrupted; 200 families evacuated from homes in Seveso are expected to return this fall; and experts say they are unsure of the long-term health effects.

Last week the home in Switzerland of an executive of the plant's parent company was bombed and a group calling itself the Commando 10th of July claimed responsibility, saying it was a warning to those it blames for the plight of Seveso. There were no casualties.

Three hundred workmen in white overalls and wearing protective masks are digging up Seveso's contaminated soil and storing it near the plant to wait for completion of an incinerator later this year to burn it, along with the slain animals and contaminated trees.

The most highly contaminated area, "Zone A," consists of about 272 acres and is completely fenced off with soldiers patrolling around the clock to make sure no one enters.

F. Hoffman-La Roche Ltd. of Switzerland, the parent firm, says many of the homes evacuated last year have been "cleaned," and about 500 persons are waiting for permission from local authorities to return.

The big concern is that of health.

"There is no reason to anticipate injury to internal organs," according to a report in May by Hoffman-La Roche. "It is possible that scars will be left on the skin of three children."

Children were most affected by cloracne, a skin disease which blotches the face and body with pimply eruptions when the body tries to eject the dioxine through the skin.

The company report also claimed that "the number of miscarriages and malformations were no higher than what is generally considered to be the normal incidence."

Authorities in Italy, however, claim that miscarriages rose from 8.9 per cent in July-September, 1976, to 15 per cent in October-November, and that the number of births in the February-April period this year totalled only 235 in contrast to 838 in 1976.

In the months after the accident, fears of malformations in unborn babies led to a liberal interpretation of Italy's antiabortion laws and the performance of 38 "therapeutic abortions." Authorities estimate clandestine abortions more than doubled that number.

"Here is a daughter of dioxine," said Pinuccia Longhi pointing to her 3-month-old baby, who appeared normal. "They wanted me to abort. When Katia is older, I will tell her I have saved her life."

"My husband and I were sure that everything should have been okay with the baby. All the tests I underwent were satisfactory," said Maria Carla Manaspa, mother of a healthy looking 4-month-old boy.

About 10 cases of malformations in births were reported in the area from the end of 1976 to May of this year, but experts said no direct link could be made to dioxine.

"We are in the dark about the effects ... on the human fetus," said Gaetano Maria Fara, chairman of the Lombardy Health Commission. "Tests carried out on animals did not prove that dioxine causes malformations as, for example, German measles and thalidomide do."

A team of West German doctors at Lubeck University examined 31 aborted fetuses and three fetuses from miscarriages but said they were unable to establish a link with dioxine.

"This negative result does not necessarily mean that (the chemical) does not bear a risk for the mother and the fetus," their report said. "But the limited number of cases, the fact that they were of different age and developmental stage and other reasons indicate a limitation on the possible conclusions."

The fear of long-term effects on health is likely to play a big role in the return of the area to normalcy.

"At first the problem was to persuade most of the families of the real danger. They wanted to remain in their houses and didn't believe there was any real danger," said Giacomo Corna, one of the first evacuees. "Now the situation has reversed."

Writers claim Americans died at Hiroshima

By A.O. SULZBERGER JR.

LONDON (AP) — A new book by two British writers says American prisoners of war, some captured less than two weeks earlier, were among 80,000 persons killed in the U.S. atomic bombing of Hiroshima in World War II and that two who survived were reported beaten to death.

"For 32 years this information has been suppressed," claimed Gordon Thomas, co-author of the book "Enola Gay," in an interview here.

The Pentagon in Washington said 10 to 20 U.S. prisoners were believed to be in Hiroshima at the time but it added it could not be adequately determined if any were victims of the bombing.

In the book, named after the B-29 bomber that carried out the world's first atomic attack on Aug. 6, 1945, Thomas and co-author Max Morgan Witts write that an estimated 23 Americans were being held in Hiroshima at the time. The authors said 10 of them had been taken prisoner in Okinawa and the rest had been shot down over Hiroshima on July 28, 1945.

"The fate of the American prisoners of war is not certain," they add in their 327-page book. "Two were reported to have been escorted, wounded but able to walk, to Ujina. one was seen under a bridge, apparently dying, wearing only a pair of red and white underpants. Two were said to have been battered to death in the castle grounds by their captors." Ujina is in the port section of Hiroshima.

Witts, also interviewed with Thomas, said: "We cannot say for certain what happened to every single person because the official records themselves are neither accurate — they're often contradictory — nor are they comprehensive."

But the authors named six U.S. Army Air Force personnel who they said were killed in the Hiroshima attack.

Thomas and Witts expressed the belief that guilt feelings were attached to the attack and because of this the American deaths were not disclosed.

"There's no doubt in our minds," said Thomas of the Hiroshima attack, "that the relatives, the wives, mothers, sweethearts of these dead men, believe their menfolk were killed by enemy action." One man, Staff Sgt. Julius Molnar of Kalamazoo, Mich, a rear turret gunner on a bomber named Taloa, one of the two B24s shot down on July 28, was reported killed in action and posthumously awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, they said.

None of the 10 men captured on Okinawa, presumably U.S. Marines, were named. But in the interview, the authors listed five other men in addition to Molnar as having died in Hiroshima on Aug. 6.

They identified them as 2nd Lt. James M. Ryan, bombardier; Sgt. Hugh Atkinson, radio operator; Sgt. Buford Ellison, flight engineer; Cpl. John Long, nose gunner, and 2nd Lt. Durden Looper, co-pilot. All were from the crew of the B24 Lonesome Lady, shot down over Hiroshima.

The Pentagon in Washington, asked about the authors' claims, said: "There were between 10 and 20 American POWs in the Horoshima area at the time of the bombing. To the extent there were casualties cannot be adequately documented."

Seoul flooded

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Torrential rains triggered floods and landslides near the South Korean capital today, killing 159 persons. Authorities said 84 others were missing and tens of thousands left homeless.

Rescue workers listed 213 persons injured in the floodstricken areas and made 76,954 persons homeless when nearly 53,500 houses were destroyed or inundated. Evacuees were sheltered in schools and churches.

Officials said they feared the number of casualties would rise. Damage estimates were not given but the figure was expected to be substantial.

Heavy rainfall, up to 16 inches, began Friday and flooded low-lying areas south of the Han River.

WASHINGTON OIL

Energy-environment conflict in evidence

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram
Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The conflict between energy and the environment is being demonstrated anew in the decision-making that is under way in Canada and the dUnited States regarding a transportation route for Alaskan North Slope natural gas.

Some environmentalists, including the U.S. Government's own Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ), question whether any line at all should be built.

Here is an excerpt from a report the CEQ recently filed with President Carter regarding the issue:

"From one perspective, the most obvious environmental choice is to build no Alaska gas transportation system whatsoever," the report states. "Alaska and Northern Canada possess unspoiled beauty, and their wilderness, wildlife and traditional native cultures cannot be lightly regarded."

CEQ said that just because a crude oil pipeline has already been built, and that the Alcan highway was constructed years ago does not mean that still more ecological damage would not result from construction of a new pipeline along these existing corridors.

This was in reference to Northwest Pipeline Corp.'s proposal to follow the crude oil pipeline and the Alcan highway routes most of the way in constructing a natural gas pipeline designed to move North Slope natural gas to market

"We cannot urge too strongly that the need for Alaskan gas, the parts of the country that would benefit, and the alternative energy supplies that they might receive now or at some later date be subjected to the most careful scrutiny before a final decision is reached," the authors of the report advised the President.

"Whether Alaska and the United States as a whole will benefit from exploitation of the state's gas reserves is a question that too few have cared to consider."

In other words, CEQ would be happy if the whole idea were dropped, or the project delayed indefinitely.

It said a "compelling" question is whether the United States should convert Alaska into an energy province or leave it pretty much like it is.

CEQ quoted an Anchorage, Alaska, resident as saying that this is the last chance for Americans to civilize a great region without disrupting its ecology and without falling victim to the "technological juggernaut" as it does so...It's either our last chance or America's final orgy.

In the end, and obviously reluctantly, CEQ said that if a pipeline must be built, the proposed Alcan route would do the least environmental damage.

(The Alcan route was the one selected last week by Canada's National Energy Board. This ruling, if it stands, would rule out a rival project by Arctic Gas which would follow a route down the Mackenzie Valley from the Mackenzie Delta. The U.S. options, in turn, would then be narrowed to a choice between the Alcan plan and the proposal by El Paso Natural Gas Co. to build a line across Alaska and then transport the gas by tanker to the West Coast.)

The CEQ atitude was also reflected in an interagency task force, headed by the Department of Interior, that also filed a report with the President, who has until Sept. 1 to send a final plan to Congress.

There were other interagency task forces covering other aspects of the gas transportation problem, but none of them emphasized the nation's need for the Alaskan gas.

Even so, it seems unlikely that the President or Congress would adopt the CEQ approach and leave the gas in the ground. Nevertheless, the reports will no doubt encourage environmentalists to step up their campaign against the project.

After all, natural gas supply is currently the most crucial aspect of the nation's energy problem.

Unlike crude oil, it is difficult to import substantial quantities of natural gas from overseas at this time. As a result, gas supply shortages are more imminent, as was demonstrated last winter when many regions of the country were hit hard by gas shortages.

Environmentalists have sought to block many other energy-related projects, such as offshore drilling in the Atlantic, construction of nuclear power plants and the mining and burning of more and more coal.

At some point there will have to be choices made between further protection of the environment and efforts to find and develop more domestic energy supplies.

Without additional domestic supplies, imports will continue to increase rapidly. That involves the use of tankers, which the environmentalists do not like, either.

President Carter's energy team at work on fuel rationing plan

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has his energy team at work on a standby program of gasoline rationing to be used in case of emergency, a coupon system like the one that drew resentment and results during World War II.

Carter wants a rationing blueprint that would cut consumption by about 25 per cent in any new energy crisis, and plans to submit a proposat to Congress soon.

So, once again, they'll be dusting off the records of wartime gasoline rationing, imposed 35 years ago after unsuccessful efforts at voluntary conservation.

The President does have limited authority to order rationing, but administration officials said he wants to outline a detailed program, so that his powers will be clear and so that the nation will know what would happen in a major energy crisis.

The government considered rationing during the Arab oil embargo of 1973-1974, and printed a three-month supply of coupons for motorists. They look something like truncated dollar bills, and they are still in storage. The embargo was lifted before they were needed.

Some of the steps taken to save fuel during World War II have a familiar ring now: reduced speed limits, lowered thermostats, Sunday gasoline station closings.

There's nothing familiar about the price of a gallon of gasoline, though. It averaged 20 cents then, and now stands at about 63 cents.

A Library of Congress study recounts the problems and woes of World War II rationing, but nonetheless pronounces the system a success.

"No one liked it," the study recalled. "There were shortcomings in the basic management... But for all its faults, it worked."

Nationwide rationing was imposed on Dec. 1, 1942, with a minimum passenger car allowance of four gallons of gasoline a week.

That was the A ratio, the lowest priority rating, which was designed to let every motorist drive 240 miles a month. Rations were calculated at 15 miles to the gallon.

There were B and C categories, which got you more gesoline, and there were special allowances for people who could demonstrate to their local rationing boards that they had to do more than the minimum amount of driving. Most people managed to talk their way into at least a few more gallons.

There also were special allowances for commercial and agricultural use of gasoline.

There were 5,525 local rationing boards, and a complex lineup of federal agencies to run the rationing system.

The problems were legion: credibility, with the public skeptical about the need for rationing; a black market, said to have diverted about 5 per cent of rationed gasoline; bureaucratic errors, with the government issuing rationing coupons for more gasoline than there was to be sold.

But it worked. Civilian consumption of gasoline went down by about one-third.

Alaska oil price asked

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — BP Pipeline Inc. has joined Mobil Alaska Pipeline Inc., both among owners of the 800-mile Trans-Alaska Pipeline System, in asking a federal court to order the Interstate Commerce Commission to set the price they ask for oil in the line.

BP, in its petition Friday, proposed a tariff of $6.35 a barrel. Mobil earlier this week asked $6.31. BP owns 15.89 per cent of the pipeline, Mobil 5 per cent.

The ICC has set a rate of $4.68 a barrel for BP and $4.84 a barrel for Mobil for at least seven more months.

Both companies contend that the ICC hasn't the authority to suspend interim tariffs and that doing so violates the Interstate Commerce Act and the constitutional right to due process.

They maintain that there would be no harm in allowing their proposed rates to go into effect, since they could make refunds and reparations if an investigation showed they had charged too much.

On the other hand, they said in their petitions, they would have no way to recoup their lost revenue if the ICC's proposed tariffs become effective.

PB Graduate Center reports two classes

The Permian Basin Graduate Center announces two classes to be held this week in the PBGC classrooms in the basement of the Metro Building in Midland.

The classes are part of the center's continuing education program.

Dr. Arthur Meyerhoff, consulting geologist and professor of Geology at Oklahoma State University, will present a nine-hour American Association of Petroleum Geologists lecture "Tests of Plate Tectonics" from 7 to 10 p. m. Wednesday and from 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7 to 10 p. m. Thursday.

The fee for the course is $75.

Dr. Meyerhoff was educated at Yale and Stanford universities. His extensive field experience includes many areas of the United States, South and Central America and Russia, where he has been a consultant to the Ministry of Geology and Ministry of Oil Industry since 1968.

Meyerhoff was publications manager of the AAPG nine years, from 1965 to 1974. He is author of many technical papers and three books.

Plate tectonics, so widely accepted by earth scientists, is of great potential importance in exploration of all types of minerals, including hydrocarbons, a Graduate Center official said.

Dr. Meyerhoff will discuss several simple methods that can be divised to utilize geologic and paleontologic and other data in a practical way to test the validity of plate tectonics.

These and other methods ultimately should resolve the major problems encountered in plate tectonics and, if the concept is valid, should be successful in establishing its validity, Dr. Meyerhoff believes.

Dr. Joseph F. Fischer, professor of Geology at The University of Texas at Arlington, will teach a course entitled "Refresher in Structural Geology," which is designed to bring the working petroleum geologist up to date as regards the latest concepts and theories in structural geology.

Classes will be conducted from 7 to 10 p. m. Fridays and from 9 a. m. to noom Saturdays July 15-16, July 29-30 and Aug. 12-13.

Fee for the course is $150.

Dr. Fischer, prior to his association with UT-Arlington, held an appointment with the University of California at Santa Barbara where he received his Ph.D. His areas of special study have been the Wichita Mountains, the Southwest Oklahoma Mountains, the Cascade Mountains of Washington and Oregon and Guatamala.

His research interests are porphyritic textures of granitic rocks and prophyritic copper deposits and basaltic origins and evolution.

Stress analysis, physical properties of rocks, rock behavior in tectonic processes, principles of folding, origin of faults, fundamentals of plate tectonics and geotectonics will be discussed.

R. G. Davidson

Davidson joins firm

R. G. "Hawk" Davidson of Midland has joined Marshall R. Young Oil Co. in Midland as West Texas-New Mexico District landman.

Davidson recently retired from Amoco after 25 years. He joined that concern in Odessa in 1951 as a member of a seimic crew.

He was transferred to the land department in Midland in 1961. All his tenure with the company since that time was in Midland except two years in the Fort Worth office. He was a staff landman at the time of his retirement.

Arco reports long tours

Midlanders Robert F. Baker and Jerry W. Schmidt have completed 20-year service tours with Atlantic Richfield Co.

Baker, senior operations engineer in the South Area, Permian District, marked his 20th year with the company in June.

He is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy with a B.S. degree in general engineering. He received an M.S. degree in Petroleum Engineering from the University of Oklahoma.

He has worked for Atlantic Richfield in Dallas, Roswell, N.M., and Midland.

His positions with the company have been reservoir engineer, operatioms engineer, analytical engineer, district gas coordinator and senior operations engineer.

Baker has been in Midland since 1970. He joined the company June 24, 1957 in Dallas.

Schmidt, senior drilling engineer in South Area, Permian District, joined the company in June 1957.

He earned a B.S. degree in Petroleum Engineering from Texas Tech University. He joined Atlantic Richfield in the Dallas Research Department.

Schmidt became an engineering trainee in Greggton and Odessa.

He has worked on assignments as drilling engineer and production and drilling foreman in Odessa, Arkansas and Oklahoma. He was transferred to Anchorage, Alaska, in 1969 as a drilling engineer and was promoted to senior drilling engineer in 1972.

He moved to Midland in 1976.

Gulf hands get awards

B. G. Middlebrooks of Monahans has completed 30 years of service with Gulf Energy and Minerals Co.-U.S., and J. H. Jones of Odessa has completed 25 years with the company.

Middlebrooks is a lease operator in the Monahans Area of the Southwest Division Production Department.

He joined the company in 1947 as a connection man. He also has served as a roustabout and well tester.

Jones, production supervisor in the Odessa Area of the Production Department, started work with Gulf as a roustabout in 1952. He also has served as a maintenance foreman and production foreman.

WT gas unit approved

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission of Texas has approved the request of American Quasar Petroleum Co. and other interest owners to operate the Netterville (Devonian) field of Pecos and Ward Counties as a pooled proration gas unit.

Under the unit agreement, American Quasar, a Fort Worth-based firm, will be the operator.

Approval of the request was recommended by George F. Singletary Jr., senior engineer for the commission's Oil and Gas Division.

More than 50 companies, individuals and the State of Texas own interests in the field.

The new proration unit encompasses 643.1 acres in Pecos and Ward counties and is composed of 560 acres out of section 59, block 8, H&GN survey, Pecos Coumty; 80 acres of land being the east ½ of the south ¼ of section 15, block 32, H&TC survey, Ward County; 3.1 acres more or less in Pecos and Ward counties, being that part of the Pecos River adjacent to and south of the south line of section 15, block 32, H&TC survey, Ward County, and adjacent to and north of the north line of Section 59, block 8, H&GN survey, Pecos County.

Dan Noles joins CRA

Dan Noles, formerly with Northern Natural Gas Co. in Midland, has joined CRA, Inc., a subsidiary company of Farmland Industries, Inc.

He is associated with the firm as a natural gas buyer and will be responsible for handling CRA's gas purchase and sales activities, primarily in the Oklahoma and Rocky Mountain regions.

He will be based in Oklahoma City.

First phase completed

MONUMENT, N.M. — Climax Chemical Co. has completed the first phase of an expansion which increases its Monument plant capacity of hydrocholoric acid from 150 tons per day to 200 tons, reports Jerry C. Walker of Midland, Tex., vice president of marketing.

Scheduled for completion by December is an additional capacity of hydrocholoric acid raising the output to 275 tons per day, Walker said.

The company also has received a fleet of 11 tractors and in August will take delivery of two additional 5,000-gallon tankers for hydrocholoric acid.

H. A. Proctor to head group

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Harvey A. Proctor, chairman, Southern California Gas Co., Los Angeles, has been nominated as chairman of the board of the American Gas Association for 1977-79.

Proctor, a 38-year veteran of the natural gas industry, heads the roster of gas industry executives nominated to serve AGA officers and directors for the coming year.

Other officers nominated are John Kean, Elizabeth, N.M., first vice chairman, and C. C. Ingram, Tulsa, Okla., second vice chairman.

Weekly survey shows drop in active rotaries

A decline of 13 rotaries last Friday, in the weekly survey conducted by Reed Drilling Equipment, brought the Permian Basin rig count to 277 units.

This is an increase, however, of 47 units over the 230 rigs reported one year ago.

Eddy County, N. M., tallied 26 units making hole followed by Pecos County with 23 and Lea County, N. M., reporting 18.

Reeves County counted 16 rotaries working and Ward County showed 13.

Early bird John Hayes, owner of Hayes Cafeteria 300 W. Wall, is ready to serve you breakfast beginning at 6 A.M. every day except Saturday, Sunday and holidays. On those days he sleeps late.

John Hayes rises early to serve breakfast

For four years it has been the same thing...John Hayes' day begins at 4:15 A.M. when his alarm clock wakes him. He's on the job at 5:30 getting everything ready for you to enjoy your breakfast time. At 6 A.M. he's ready for you with a complete breakfast, cafeteria style or special order. Take plenty of time to wake up over your coffee for there's no charge for refills, but as everything has an ending, breakfast stops at 10 A.M. and lunch takes over at 11 A.M. until 1:30 P.M.

There are eight entrees and fifteen different vegetables on the lunch menu daily, so you've got plenty to select from in good food, meticulously prepared by chefs who are experts.

John and Jean Hayes, owners, appreciate their regular customers who have contributed to the success of the Hayes Cafeteria and they also welcome newcomers. Although Hayes Cafeteria has been operating for four years, John Hayes has 34 years experience in the food business and pledges to continue to serve quality food with quality service. For clubs or groups of as many as 30 people, Hayes will be glad to reserve space. Two hundred and twenty can be served at one time, quickly and efficiently.

Hayes is open on Monday through Friday and closed on all holidays.

Enjoy breakfast, lunch or coffe in a relaxing, friendly atmosphere at Hayes Cafeteria, located at 300 W. Wall, downtown Midland.

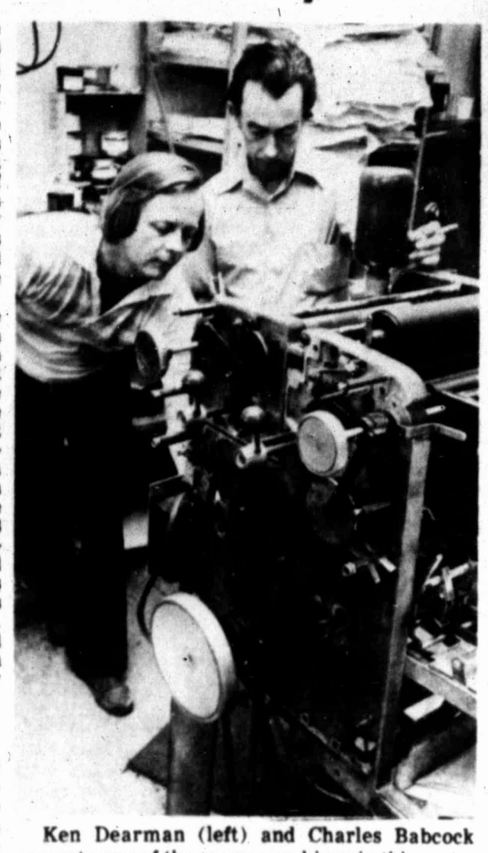

Aftah named after entire Hall family

You may think the name of Aftah Printing is kinda funny, but there's a story behind the name just as there's a story behind the service. The story behind the name is that AFTAH is the first letter of the first name of the Hall family. There's A. D. (Skeet) Hall, Fay Hall and daughters Terry, Aliana and Holly...making the AFTAH.

The story behind the service that Aftah Printing gives you lies in the 42 years that Skeet Hall has been in the printing business. Take this experience and add it to the up-to-date equipment and you have a printing shop that can give you everything in the business including 2 and 3 color, brochures, snap-out forms, offset and letterpress printing plus the many other forms that businesses are using. Aftah Printing is located at 313 W. Indiana and you can place your orders by phoning 684-9601.

Sweet power

The sweeter the grapes, the higher the alcoholic content of the wine. Wine-making is also complicated because it depends not only on the fermentation chemistry, but also the kind of grapes used.

Oldest man marks 135th birthday

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Smith, a former slave who once told an interviewer that "I'm a United States man," celebrated his 135th birthday as the nation marked its 201st.

Smith, the oldest person on Social Security rolls and the oldest known resident of the nation, was host at a party in his honor Monday at the Bartow Convalescent Center here.

"He had quite a celebration," a nurse said later. "He was on the news tonight at 6 o'clock. And his son, Chester, was here; the one who couldn't make it on Father's Day." Chester is 70.

"His health has been fairly good lately — better than anyone could expect," she said.

Smith doesn't know when he was born. He says he was sold as a slave on July 4, 1842, in New Orleans after being kidnaped from his native Liberia. He uses that date to mark his birthday.

Equipment sale lull in China market ends

The Washington Post

HONG KONG — A California firm has resumed selling drilling equipment to China, ending a year's lull in Peking purchases of U.S. oil equipment and stimulating hopes of a surge in sales to the booming Chinese petroleum industry.

Robert Hughes, an executive of Smith International, Inc. who returned from a trip to Peking and the huge Chinese oil field at Taching last week said the Chinese have again begun to buy from the company. Other industry sources say the ice-breaking deal involves $2 million in equipment, principally drill bits, but Hughes declined to discuss specifics.

"People in the past who bragged or published the deals they made with the Chinese found themselves cut off," Hughes said in a telephone interview from the company headquarters in Newport Beach, Calif. The American oil industry has welcomed with keen anticipation a tour of petroleum centers by a Chinese oil industry team now in the United States.

"They requested we arrange the visit on an urgent basis," said Ray Page, president of the Baker Trading Co. of Houston, who helped the National Council for U.S.-China trade set up the tour.

Hughes, who said he also plans to see the Chinese team during its visit, said he and other Smith International executives had discussed sales of more equipment during their trip to China. They briefed Chinese officials on new U.S. drilling technology, touring Taching for four days and also discussed buying more Chinese ore for manufacture of some of the company's mining tools.

Hughes said page said U.S. oilmen hope the tour by the Chinese team would lead to resumption of major U.S. oil equipment sales to China. The Chinese had bought an estimated total of $80 million to $90 million in U.S. equipment before political struggles over the succession to Mao Tse-Tung and foreign exchange problems cut off such sales last year.

Communist Party chairman Hua Kuo-Feng announced two months ago a crash program to build 10 more oilfields as big as Taching." He said he wanted to fuel an economic program to make China a major industrial power by the year 2000.

Last year's interruption in oil equipment purchases has been blamed in part on a faction of dogmatic Maoists in Peking, including Mao Tse-Tung's wife, Chiang Ching. They labelled equipment imports as "worshipping foreign things" during their campaign to seize power from more pragmatic Communist party veterans.

Hua arrested Chiang and the other dogmatists in October. Since then the Chinese media have argued that purchase of foreign equipment and technology was sanctioned by Mao before his death in September.

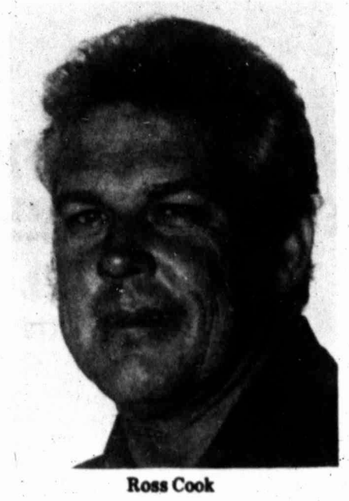

American businessmen were encouraged by a big jump in Chinese purchases of U.S. goods other than petroleum equipment at this spring's Canton trade fair.

Holloman adds facility

ODESSA — Holloman Construction, a Permian Basin-based oil field roustabout, pipeline and construction company, has acquired the Breckenridge facilities of R and H. Construction.

R and H previously provided roustabout services only, but according to Sam Holloman, Holloman Construction president, "we plan to add pipeline and plant construction to our capabilities in Breckenridge."

Ross Cook will move to Breckenridge from Odessa and assume the responsibilities of superintendent of pipeline and plant construction.

Robert V. Lockhart

R. Lockhart promoted

Robert V. Lockhart has been promoted to manager of the Midland Land District for Union Oil Co. of California. He will supervise all land activities in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

Lockhart joined the company in 1961 in Midland as a junior accountant. Prior to going with Union he worked four years with Chevron at Snyder as an accountant.

He is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a B.B.A. degree in Finance.

He was promoted to leases analyst by Union in 1964 and in 1969 became a landman trainee. He was promoted to landman here in 1971.

Lockhart is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen, the Permian Basin Landmen's Association and the New Mexico Landmen's Association.

New field producing

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — A new Indonesian oil field, developed by a group of American firms under a government production sharing contract is in production.

It is the Sembakung field in Northeast Kalimantan on what formerly was known as the Island of Borneo.

Phillips Petroleum Co. owns 50 per cent of the contractors' interest. Other participants are Atlantic Richfield Indonesia, Inc., operator of the field; California Asiatic Oil Co., and Texaco Overseas Petroleum Co.

They hold a production sharing contract with Pertamina, the Indonesian state-owned oil company.

Production at the rate of 2,000 barrels a day started June 17 from the field discovery well. As additional wells are brought into operation, production is expected to reach 14,000 barrels per day.

West Texan in AOSC post

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Paul N. Cordary, with G&O Holding Co. in Long Beach, was elected president of the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors at the organization's recent national convention in Snowmass, Colo.

Other new officers are Frank Sandel, with Globe Well Service, Inc., in Big Lake, Tex., first vice president; John Copeland, Copeland Well Service, Palestine, Tex., second vice president; J. C. Levell Jr., KMA Well Service Inc., Wichita Falls, Tex., treasurer.

Frank W. Warner

F. W. Warner now in Midland

Frank W. Warner has moved to Midland from Santa Fe Springs, Calif., to serve the West Texas area as sales engineer for Special Products Division of Halliburton Co.

Warner previously served as sales engineer at Santa Fe Springs.

Midland firm ranked 52nd

The Ortloff Corp., an international engineering-construction firm headquartered in Midland, recently was listed as one of the nation's largest design-constructors by Engineering-News Record Magazine.

Ortloff is ranked 52nd based on 1976 volume of contracts valued at the estimated installed cost of projects.

Diesel-powered automobiles gaining in popularity in U.S.

The Los Angeles Times

A Los Angeles dentist pays more than $11,000 for a Mercedes-Benz sedan with a diesel engine because he wants to save some money. Diesel fuel, he reasons, is 2 to 8 cents less a gallon than gasoline. "Quite a savings," he says.

A Volkswagen Rabbit sits next to a Mack truck at a truckstop. Both are having their fuel tanks filled with diesel. "Nobody is going to believe this," mumbles the attendant.

Both examples illustrate a new automotive phenomenon — a rebirth of interest in the diesel engine for passenger cars. Although the diesel has been around for at least 85 years, its primary use for decades has been confined to heavy trucks, machinery and farm equipment.

Until now, diesel cars have been a novelty that attracted a small — but very devoted — following. Fewer than 100,000 diesel passenger cars are now on U.S. roads. But if current predictions hold up, that figure could increase a dozenfold in the next 10 years.

For years, the German-built Mercedes and the French Peugeot were the only diesel cars sold in the United States. Then last April, Volkswagen brought out a diesel version of its Rabbit minicar. And this fall, U.S. auto makers will join in. The Oldsmobile division of General Motors Corp. will unveil a diesel version of its Delta 88 sedan.

Almost all the other big auto companies also have diesels in various stages of development.

Why all the interest now? It is mainly because of the diesel's significant fuel economy advantage over comparable gasoline engines. Engineers estimate that diesel engines may get 25 per cent to 50 per cent better mileage than gasoline engines.

The diesel Rabbit, for instance, is rated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency at 52 m.p.g. on the highway while its gasoline-powered counterpart is rated at 38 m.p.g.

In addition, diesel engines are known for their long life. It is not unusual for a diesel to go several hundred thousand miles, if properly maintained, because it is a heavier, more durable engine than most gasoline powerplants.

But the diesel has its drawbacks. Like its larger cousins in trucks and bulldozers, the passenger car diesel engine tends to be smoky, noisy and sluggish.

The effect on human health of its black smoke, which contains an unburned-substance known as particulate matter, is not fully understood, but some environmental groups already are worried about the increased use of diesel engines in cars.

Ironically, the diesel is considered to be among the "cleanest" engines in its emissions of the three major types of automotive pollutants — carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides. Because they operate at higher temperatures and burn the fuel more completely, diesel engines can meet existing limits for those emissions without special pollution control equipment such as the catalytic converters used on many gasoline engines.

But stricter standards in the future, particularly for nitrogen oxides, could seriously erode the diesel's fuel economy advantage, according to a number of automotive engineers.

Spokesmen in the petroleum industry contend that if diesel engines become widely popular in cars, the fuel's current price advantage over gasoline — which varies from 5 per cent to 15 per cent — might disappear.

Also, refineries could be forced to make huge new investments to accommodate a massive switch to diesel fuel production. Diesel currently represents about 22 per cent of the average refinery's output.

In fact, some of the spokesmen said, increased production of diesel could produce shortages of other fuels — notably aviation fuel and home heating oil — made from the same segment of a barrel of crud oil.

Despite the real theoretical disadvantages, however, many auto industry planners are being drawn to the diesel engine because it offers a way to meet increasingly strict federal fuel economy requirements for new cars between now and 1985 without eliminating all larger cars. All 1985-model cars must average 27.5 m.p.g. under current government rules.

GM President Elliott M. Estes recently said the company may use diesel engines in up to 25 per cent of its 1985 cars to meet the fuel economy standard.

According to marketing specialists, the current consumer interest in diesel-powered cars is coming from all types of auto buyers. Many persons who have no knowledge of the differences between diesel and gasoline engines are attracted simply because of the diesel's reputation for fuel economy.

The diesel engine was named for German inventor Rudolf Diesel, who patented the design in 1892. Perhaps its most striking difference from other internal combustion engines is that the diesel has no spark plugs. It uses intense heat caused by extreme compression of air inside the engine to power the car.

Because the diesel engine requires much more compression than a spark-ignited engine, it must be heavier to withstand the pressure — usually by at least several hundred pounds. Its valves to let the air into the combustion chamber must be stronger, and the fuel pump and "mister" must also be capable of withstanding great pressure.

Since its a heavier, stronger engine, it costs more — ranging from $170 more in the Volkswagen Rabbit to $1,500 or more in luxury cars. (GM has not yet announced the price of its diesel Oldsmobile.)

But because it has no spark plugs, it generally requires less maintenance than a gasoline engine. It has one unique problem, however: Soot from the heavy diesel fuel collects in the crankcase oil, which usually means more frequent oil changes.

Auto industry experts who have examined the potential sales of diesels have concluded that greater public acceptance can be won if the auto makers can reduce the smoke and noise that offend many buyers.

Wildcats, field work set in Basin

Wildcat operations have been staked in Crockett, Irion and Coke counties; field area work has been announced in Crockett and Irion, and New Mexico has gained five new tests, one in Eddy and four in Lea County.

COKE TEST

Kendrick & Mulligan Oil, Inc., of Abilene will dig No. 1 M. C. Hendry as a 6,900-foot wildcat in Coke County, 2½ miles west of Silver.

It is 567 feet from north and 1,432.5 feet from east lines of C. J. Norris survey No. 1, abstract 1080.

The location is 2,800 feet southwest of the Jameson (Strawn) field.

IRION WILDCAT

James P. Dunigan, Inc., of Abilene announced site for a 7,250-foot wildcat in Irion County, 12 miles north of Mertzon.

It is No. 1-1129 Field, 1,500 feet from north and 1,700 feet from east lines of section 1129, TCRR survey and ⅝ mile southwest of Canyon production in the Arden, South field. The deepest Canyon production in the field comes in at about 6,500 6,450 feet.

CROCKETT TRY

Surburban Propane Gas Corp. of Ozona spotted location for a 9,500-foot wildcat in Crockett County, 10 miles southwest of Ozona.

Drillsite is 660 feet from north and 2,433 feet from west lines of section 10, block I, GC&SF survey.

The project is ½ mile southwest of Canyon gas production in the Ozona multipay field and 2½ miles northwest of the Hunt-Baggett (Strawn gas) area.

LONG OUTPOST

Dan J. Harrison Jr. of Houston plans to drill a one-mile east and slightly south outpost to the Live Oak Draw (Strawn gas) field of Crockett. It is No. 3 Joe Wylie McMullan.

Scheduled for a 9,800-foot bottom, it is 660 feet from north and 1,620 feet from west lines of section 16, block F, GC&SF survey.

The project is a southeast offset to the Davidson Ranch (Pennsylvanian gas) field.

CANYON TRY

Fortune Drilling Co., Inc., of San Angelo staked location for No. 3-7 Murphy in the Mertzon multipay area.

The project, one location east of Canyon oil production, is 2,173 feet from north and 2,055 feet from east lines of section 7, San Antonio Ditch Co. survey. It is to drill to 7,200 feet. The ground elevation is 2,511 feet.

EDDY TEST

Husky Oil Co. of Denver, Colo., staked location for a 4,000-foot operation in the Forehand Ranch (Delaware oil) field of Eddy County, N. M., 5½ miles southeast of Carlsbad.

Slated as No. 3 Forehand, it is one location east of the field discovery and only producer in the field.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 15-23s-27e

LEA TESTS

Wallen Production Co. of Midland staked three projects in the Tonto, South (Yates) field of Lea County, NM., 5½ miles north of Halfway.

No. 3 Wallen-Tonto is one location east of production and 1,650 feet from south and west lines of section 30-19s-33e. It is to drill to 3,085 feet.

Wallen No. 4 Wallen-Tonto is one location south and west of Wellsand 990 feet from south and west lines of section 30-19s-33e. It also is scheduled for a 3,085-foot bottom.

Another 3,085-foot project is No. 6 Wallen-Tonto, one location east of production and 990 feet from south and east lines of section 30-19s-33e.

CLEARY TEST

Cleary Petroleum Corp. of Midland No. 1-F New Mexico-Federal is to be dug as a 14,000-foot operation one-half mile west of the same operatior's No. 1-E New Mexico Communitized, active project making hole below 13,672 feet.

The new test will be drilled 3,300 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 5-21s-32e and 1½ miles southwest of the Salt Lake (Morrow gas) field. Site is 3½ miles southeast of Halfway.

Union leader urges nationalization of railroads

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Leaders of America's largest railroad union Friday urged Congress to study possible nationalization of their industry, in a bitter response to rail management proposals that freight train crew sizes should be reduced.

United Transportation Union president Al H. Chesser characterized the decision by most railroads, to seek an overhaul of work rules in negotiations for new union contracts, as evidence "regressive and unenlightened ... management, that only a few years ago guided this industry to the very brink of self-destruction, is apparently once again in control."

Chesser told reporters at a news conference that the railroads' action amounted to a "big double cross," included the "most inept, antiquated, asinine" demands he ever had seen, represented "stupid management practices" and added up to "inciting our people to strike even before negotiations get under way."

The union leader also asserted the railroads were acting illegally in seeking to negotiate the size of freight train crews on a national basis. He said such bargaining may only be conducted on a company-by-company basis, citing a 1967 court decision on the issue that found that national bargaining on crews was not required.

He asserted flatly the UTU would not bargain on the crew issue.

A spokesman for the rail industry, Dan Lang of the railway labor conference, said he did not know "what will happen next" but that the railroads believe proposals sent to the unions "are legal."

During the news conference, so angry was Chesser that he twice knocked down a microphone while delivering his verbal assault on the industry, less than 24 hours after initial bargaining for new contracts began in Chicago. Negotiations between 21 unions and 58 rail firms are scheduled to resume here Monday on contracts to replace those that expire at the end of 1977.

Focusing on three key areas, the industry proposed elimination of work rules that require four crew members on most trains (engineer, conductor, two brakemen), an end to 19th-century rules establishing 100 miles of travel or eight hours of work as being a full day, and company flexibility in assigning some train crews to do yard work.

William H. Dempsey, current president of the Association of American Railroads and previously head of the industry's rail labor conference, told a recent rail conference the work rules at issue are "mired in the last century." Elimination of the rules could save rail firms $1 billion a year in payroll costs, he estimated.

Billy leaves dinner

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Billy Carter, the President's brother, said the fund raising affair got too political for him. His sister said he "just had one beer too many."

The result Friday night was that Carter stalked out of a fund raising dinner, leaving behind persons who said they came to the dinner and auction that was to follow just to see Carter.

"He just had one beer too many," said Ruth Carter Stapleton, the Carters' sister, who also attended the event along with about 400 other persons.

"I'm leaving. It is set up as a Democratic rally and I'm leaving," Carter told several persons at the $25 per plate dinner of peanuts, chicken and beer.

"What I do is non-political," Carter said.

A sign inside the banquet room at a local motel announced the band for the event was Tarrant County Commissioner B. D. Griffin and his "Democats."

Carter said he objected to the commissioner's name being included on the sign and not the word "Democats."

Sponsors said the event was an art auction designed to raise funds for the "Miss Lillian Scholarship Fund." Lillian Carter is the mother of the President.

Mrs. Stapleton finished the auction after her brother left, but would not comment about the incident.

As he walked from the room, a woman grabbed him by the elbow, saying she made the trip here from Houston "just to see you, Billy."

"I ain't staying," Carter said as he walked to a limousine. He reportedly left later in the evening on a commercial flight to Atlanta.

A Dallas television station, KDFW, quoted Carter as saying, "I'm not really a Democrat and I don't always support the Democrats," television station KDFW quoted Carter as saying.

Aides traveling with the President's brother asked it not to use the story because of possible embarrassment to the Carter family, the station said.

Two U.S. attorneys appointed

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Hannah Jr. of Lufkin and Jose A. Canales of Corpus Christi have both been appointed as U.S. attorneys in Texas.

President Jimmy Carter announced the appointment of Canales Friday as U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Texas and Hannah as the U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of the state.

Canales, 33, was one of six Lloyd Bentsen delegates elected in the Texas primary for the 1976 Democratic Presidential convention.

Hannah, 38, is former three-term Texas legislator who served as Angelina County district attorney until he resigned to become the Texas counsel for Common Cause, a national consumer group. A native of Diboll, Hannah attended the University of Houston and South Texas College of Law. He has practiced law in Lufkin for the past six years.

Canales was raised in Mercedes. He later moved to Corpus Christi and attended the University of Texas.

Lance's money troubles start rumors flying

BY JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance has been keeping President Carter informed about the misfortunes of the Atlanta bank he once headed, but has never made an explicit offer to resign, Lance's chief spokesman says.

But Robert Deitch, the Lance aide, and Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, both said Lance recently reminded Carter of a longstanding agreement that if any of Lance's activities embarrass Carter, the President should let him know.

That reminder brought an immediate admonition from the President to "forget it," Powell said Friday night.

Both said the reminder was not an offer to resign.

Lance, who owns 21 per cent of the stock in the National Bank of Georgia, headed the bank when Carter, in one of his first personnel decisions, asked him to become the director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Their friendship dates back many years and grew while Carter was governor of Georgia and Lance directed his highway department.

Deitch said Lance spoke with Carter about the bank's problems about 10 days ago. The meeting preceded the release last Sunday night by the bank of an unfavorable earnings report.

The President's chief spokesman said Lance, in detailing the situation, said to Carter, 'Look, I don't want to be an embarrassment. I don't want to cause any problems. If you feel like I'm a burden, you just tell me."

"The President never considered for one moment the idea of his (Lance's) resigning and told him to forget it," Powell said.

Deitch agreed, saying Lance, who was spending the weekend at his home at Sea Island, a Georgia resort, "didn't go in (to the meeting with the President) with the idea of resigning."

In its most recent report on financial setbacks, the National Bank of Georgia said a net loss for the first half of the year would force it to reduce or to end its dividends. After the report was issued, the bank's stock dropped about $3 a share.

In an interview with Cox Newspapers' Washington bureau on Friday, Lance said he told the President: "If this embarrasses you, if you think it would result in a loss of effectiveness, if it reflects badly on you or on the administration, all you have to do is tell me."

The Cox story said Lance attributed the losses to problems with real estate loans facing the National Bank and other Atlanta banks.

When the Senate held confirmation hearings for Lance's nomination to the $57,500-a-year job as budget director, Lance said he would sell his bank stock by the end of the year. But he has also said that to prevent an unnecessary loss, he would ask Carter for an extension of that deadline.

Lance's 190,867 shares of the bank's stock, a controlling 21 per cent interest, are being held in trust. He went deeply into debt to purchase his stock at twice the current price.

Lance's trustee, Thomas Mitchell of Dalton, Ga., has refused to dispose of the stock at the current depressed value, the Cox story said.

Five suits name power company

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A northern Kentucky power company has been named a defendant in five suits totaling $77 million and charging negligence in the May 28 fire that claimed 164 lives at the Beverly Hills Supper Club.

The suit filed on Friday said Union Light, Heat & Power Co. (ULH&P) "carelessly, negligently continued to energize electrical apparatus ... when it knew or should have known that it was in defective or dangerous condition."

It brought the number of suits filed to 15, with nearly $400 million being sought in damages.

ULH&P was named a defendant for the first time in four suits filed in U.S. District Court here. A fifth suit was filed in Campbell Circuit Court.

The suits were filed by an attorney representing families of five victims and an unborn child. Four of the victims and the unborn infant were related by blood or marriage.

There was no immediate comment from ULH&P or its parent company, Cincinnati Gas & Electric.

The suit stated that the "dangerous and defective condition" was the "proximate cause of the ignition and spread of the fire."

Mystery disease bacterium active

ATLANTA (AP) — The bacterium responsible for "Legionnaires' disease" apparently has caused 19 cases of pneumonia since last August, the national Center for Disease Control says.

The disease killed 29 persons at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia last year.

Six of the cases of sporadic pneumonia identified since August were fatal, the CDC said Friday.

Sixteen of the 19 pneumonia cases in 11 states since Aug. 1, 1976, were men aged 31 to 67 years old, the CDC said.

Researchers at the CDC and elsewhere still have not found the source of the bacterium.

But, according to the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, "the wide distribution of sporadic cases of illness apparently due to the bacterium that caused 'Legionnaires' disease' and the occurrence of outbreaks as early as 1965 suggest that the disease is neither new nor localized."

Health group plans session for July 18

The governing body of the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, July 18, in the conference room of the new West Texas Education Building located across the street from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

In addition to the regular business of the agency, the governing body will set the policy for establishing special planning advisory committees to be assigned to one of the areas of health concern that were outlined for inclusion in the health system plan for the region. These committees will be made up of professional and lay persons who have a special interest in the improvement of the health care delivery system in the Permian Basin.

The meeting will be open to the public.

65th Legislature did little for business

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Looking at the record of the 65th Legislature, it appears lawmakers did nothing much for, or to, businessmen.

There were some measures passed, however, which probably should get a mention or two as affecting Texas business.

Rep. Tom Craddick, Midland, succeeded in getting approval of his HB 1990, allowing for use of industrial revenue bonds by cities and counties.

However, that measure isn't likely to see any use — since Craddick's proposed constitutional amendment allowing for issuance of such bonds died, so Texas will remain one of the four states in the nation which doesn't allow industrial revenue bonds.

HB 300 by Rep. Kenneth Vaughn, Garland, creating a Metric System Advisory Commission to aid small businesses in switching over from the English to the metric system, becomes effective Aug. 29.

Vaughn also won approval of his bill (HB 1168) defining "rural area" for purposes of the Industrial Development Act.

Dallas Rep. Paul Ragsdale sponsored HB 1226, giving permanent status and official legislative approval to the Minority Business Enterprise Division of the Texas Industrial Commission.

Another Dallas House member, Eddice Bernice Johnson, passed HB 178, a housing rehabilitation measure.

Probably the biggest battle of the session came on Wichita Falls Sen. Ray Farabee's SB 1275, the measure which, among other things, closes the files of the Industrial Accident Board to employers (and others) seeking information on injuries of prospective employes.

That measure, despite opposition from employers' groups, won approval — despite a record-breaking filibuster by Sen. Bill Meier, Euless.

There were — as there usually are — a number of changes in the Texas workmen's compensation statutes — including Marshall Rep. Ben Z. Grant's bill changing the name to "worker's compensation."

In fact, 19 measures dealing with worker's compensation were approved by the session.

There were lots of insurance measures, of course, with the medical malpractice bill (HB 1048 by Reps. Tom Uher, Bay City, and Don Henderson, Houston) getting the most attention.

Other measures in the insurance field ran from increasing fees for (and the terms of) agents' licenses, policy forms for aircraft insurance, letting banks self-insure for fidelity and robbery coverage, amending the insurance holding company act, allowing "consent to rate" for use of higher rates than those set by the State Board of Insurance for casualty and auto policies (under some circumstances), letting the State Fire Marshal hold hearings for the SBI, and on and on.

Other bills which were approved include the following:

— HB 633, Rep. Jimmy Mankins, Kilgore, exempting charter air carriers from Aeronautics Commission regulation.

— HB 939, Rep. Jim Kaster, El Paso, validating actions of the Aeronautics Commission regarding routes approved for Southwest Airlines.

— SB 868, Sen. John Traeger, Seguin, delivery of mixed beverages to hotel rooms.

— SB 38, Sen. Bill Moore, Bryan, air carrier's liability for damage to freight or baggage.

— SB 475, Sen. Ike Harris, Dallas, interest charges by registered securities brokers or dealers.

— HB 785, Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, Goliad, sale of stock by bank officers and employes.

— HB 991, Rep. Jerry Donaldson, Gatesville, regulating bank takeovers.

— HB 1S83, Rep. Tom Schieffer, Fort Worth, interest rates on oil and gas loans.

There were also lots of measures on various regulated occupations — of which there seem to be more and more.

Those measures included such items as posting notices on private parking lots — and the manner of removing unauthorized cars; fees for veterinarians, pharmacists and hearing aid dispensers; regulation of auctions and auto salvage years; and Traeger's delightfully captioned SB 147, "regulating to activities which are permitted without a plumbing license."

But probably the best thing for business that lawmakers did — or didn't do — was not passing any new taxes.

Consumer purchasing due to record decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer buying, which helped fuel the economy to better-than-expected growth so far this year, is likely to slacken substantially in the months ahead, economists say.

Although recent surveys indicate large numbers of consumers plan to buy automobiles or make other major purchases, even the pollsters doubt consumer buying will maintain its recent pace.

"While consumer sentiment has been reassuringly good for several months, it is still not entirely convincing," said a Conference Board survey this past week.

Major retail chain stores reported their sales gains were generally lower in June than in May.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, said its sales increased 14 per cent last month over June 1976, compared with a 17 per cent jump the previous month.

In other business developments this past week:

—Wholesale prices dropped six-tenths of a per cent in June, the largest decline in nearly four years, the Labor Department said. A sharp drop of 6.3 per cent in farm prices was credited for most of the decline.

But along with that good news for consumers was an unfavorable report on employment. The government said unemployment increased to 7.1 per cent in June from May's 6.9 per cent rate.

—Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar proposed a general rise in postal rates which included raising the rate for a first class business letter to 16 cents while leaving first class personal rates at 13 cents.

The higher rates, if approved, would go into effect next May, and are designed to cut the Postal Service's $2.4 billion annual deficit.

Other rate change proposals covered just about all types of mail, including post cards, which would rise a penny to 10 cents.

—Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal indicated that tax cuts for some individuals will be part of the Carter administration's tax revision proposals. He also hinted that a "negative income tax," in effect a direct government subsidy to low-income individuals, might also be a feature.

—Ford Motor Co. announced it was recalling some 295,000 Ford Econoline vans and club wagons to pad the instrument panels. Three persons had been injured when the panels shattered on impact.

—Reflecting the rising value of the Japanese yen against the U.S. dollar, Nissan Motor Co. boosted export prices of its Datsun cars by 3.8 per cent. The company's U.S. distributor said it had not yet decided how much of the rise to pass along to U.S. customers.

—In the biggest federal challenge in years to a corporate takeover attempt, the Justice Department filed an antitrust suit seeking to bar United Technologies Corp.'s $512 million bid to acquire Babcock & Wilcox Co., a large producer of electrical generating equipment.

BUSINESS

Seminar scheduled

ODESSA — A time management seminar will be conducted for Perry Gas Companies of Odessa July 11 and Aug. 8 by Dr. John Richardson, coordinator of aviation management and chairman of the management faculty at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The seminar will be from 4 to 9 p.m. both days. Subjects to be included are better time management of paperwork, conducting more effective meetings and the delegation of responsibility and basic management concepts.

The sessions will take place at the Holiday Inn on Highway 80.

TAB slates meeting

Midland will be the site of the Texas Association of Business statewide board of directors meeting July 28 and 29. It will be the first time the board has met in Midland.

The meeting will begin with a reception in the First National Room of the First National Bank from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The board members and their guests are scheduled to attend the Summer Mummers performance Thursday night.

Friday, the board meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Yates Room of the Midland Hilton. A luncheon will close the meeting.

Board members' wives are scheduled to visit the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Nonsmokers, airlines don't see eye-to-eye

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Can it be that nonsmokers irritated by their puffing neighbors in a jetliner are sometimes reacting to nothing more than the sight of the smoke?

It's possible, say airline engineers who've researched the best way to keep smoking and nonsmoking passengers satisfied.

Officials of anti-smoking organizations cite thousands of complaints from their members and instances of people who became sick or fainted from smoke in airline cabins.

But a spokesmen for Western Airlines, which is conducting the research, and Boeing, which makes many of the commercial jetliners in use today, say cabin air is recycled continually.

A Boeing official said all of the air in the cabins of the giant 747s is changed every three minutes.

And Forrest Mulvane of Western said that, in 727s flying at 30,000 feet, cabin air is changed 4.4 times a minute. In the larger 707 it is changed 3.2 times a minute at 30,000 feet, he said.

John Banzhaf of Action on Smoking and Health, a nonsmokers rights group, said the air is merely run through a small filter and then fed back into the cabin, still containing some smoke.

"Baloney, pure baloney," responded an industry spokesman. "That's just not the way these machines are built to operate," he added.

He said the stale air is completely sucked from the cabin and replaced by fresh outside air.

Mulvane said the system used by Western, which is similar to others in the industry, uses totally fresh air for each change.

By contrast, Mulvane said, the usual standard for a residential room air conditioner calls for only 20 per cent fresh air on each recycling.

Mulvane said both Boeing and Western have done tests to determine the best way to seat smoking and nonsmoking passengers.

The best, according to airflow, is to set smokers on one side of the cabin and nonsmokers across from them.

He said this is because airflow in a cabin is normally down the middle, back along the aisles and out through vents in the floor.

This would give the smokers and nonsmokers their own air supplies, Mulvane said.

But a trial of that method produced a torrent of complaints.

Engineers for Western said the psychological effect on nonsmokers of seeing the smokers may have been at play, rather than the nonsmokers' actually smelling any smoke.

They said more complaints were received when smokers were put in the front than when they were in the rear, although the air conditioning was arranged to remove the smoke with the same efficiency in each case.

Banzhaf, however, said that seating smokers and nonsmokers across the aisle from each other is the worst possible configuration. He said the smoke drifts across the aisle and cannot be stopped.

Hugh B. Gilmour

Gilmour honored

Hugh B. Gilmour of Midland has been chosen as 1977 Honor Agent of The Equitable Life Assurance Society's West Central Division.

The honor is bestowed annually by The Old Guard, The Equitable's nationwide association of agency managers, to one agent in each of seven divisions who best exemplifies overall excellence in community service and professional achievement.

Gilmour has been with the company since 1954.

Shelly Shelton

Manager announced

Shelly Shelton has been named managing partner of The Best Western of Midland.

The moter hotel, formerly the Rodeway Inn, is located on Interstate 20 off the Rankin Highway and near the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

Ms. Shelton came to Midland from the Rodeway Inn at Love Field in Dallas. She is a graduate of Trinity University in San Antonio with a degree in nutrition.

She was manager of Taffy Jones Restaurant in El Paso.

The Best Western is a 95-unit property with four parlor-type suites with a full service bar and restaurant. The new Best Western sign will replace the Rodeway Inn sign Friday.

Ms. Shelton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted W. Blue and the late Bill A. Shelton of Roswell, N. M. Mr. and Mrs. Blue are residents of Las Cruces, N. M.

Cattle producers trying to decide on program

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle producers are in the midst of a nationwide referendum to decide whether to support a research and information program aimed at getting consumers to eat more beef.

The voting began July 5 and will continue through July 15 at local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), an agency of the Agriculture Department.

If at least two-thirds of those voting approve, the plan will raise $30 million to $40 million a year. The money will be administered by a 68-member Beef Board comprised of cattle producers nominated by cattlemen's organizations.

According to O. J. Barron Jr., chairman of a National Beef Development Task Force, the board will invest the money in various projects.

Among the programs, he said, will be human nutrition research; consumer education on nutrition and how to select and prepare beef cuts; new product research and development; production research to lower the cost of producing beef or to increase profits; better market information for cattlemen; and foreign market development.

Barron, a cattleman from Spur, Tex., describes the plan as "the most bold, most farreaching self-help program in the history of our industry." He said it will benefit consumers as well as producers.

The fund-raising will involve a checkoff equal to three-tenths of 1 per cent of the sales value (30 cents per $100 of value) on each animal sold. However, the program would be voluntary and any producer not wanting to participate can get a refund.

The task force, which has pushed for the program and has publicized the referendum extensively, says that "any person who owns cattle is eligible to vote" but they must have registered at local ASCS offices by June 17.

The program was authorized by Congress and is under the general supervision of USDA, which set up the rules for the referendum.

Each cattle enterprise has one vote. Individual owners include FFA and 4-H members. At least one-half of those registered by June 17 must vote in the referendum for it to be valid. And at least two-thirds of those voting must approve for the plan to be put into effect.

Officially, USDA has not taken sides on the referendum question, although Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has expressed private reservations about some facets of agricultural promotion campaigns.

"I'm very much opposed to using producers' monies to finance consumer advertising," Bergland told reporters two months ago in response to questions about the beef referendum. "I've never been for that."

Bergland said that he objected to what he called consumer advertising on grounds that it "becomes an advertising bonanza" paid for by famrers.

Although the Beef Development Task Force's referendum publicity has focused hard on the research and marketing aspects of the plan, it also has noted what it considers the importance of consumer advertising.

In a news release the task force said that cattle producers "need to promote their product to increase demand and keep markets firm."

It cited slogans such as "Make Mine Milk," "The Florida Sunshine Tree," and "Natural Blend Shirts" as examples of farm-related promotion for dairy, orange and cotton products.

The same task force information included a statement attributed to Bob Carter, Plainview, Tex., cattle feeder, which said that "promotion just may be the most important part" of the program.

"That's what we're lacking, and that's where we'll get the most important benefit," Carter said. "And when I talk about promotion I'm talking about advertising, public relations, sales promotion ...the whole effort."

French drawings returned, on exhibit in Chicago

By C.G. McDANIEL

CHICAGO (AP) — The homecoming of a selection of French drawings from the collection of the Art Institute of Chicago is the occasion for an exhibition of the pictures in the institute's galleries here.

Eighty-two pictures from the collection, one of the major ones of the world, have just returned from a tour to Paris and Frankfurt and are being shown through Aug. 28.

The exhibition, entitled "French Drawings from the Art Institute of Chicago: From Watteau to Picasso," was loaned initially to the Louvre museum in Paris. In exchange, the Art Institute will receive in 1979 a collection of 18th-century Italian drawings from the Louvre.

Maurice Serullaz, chief curator of drawings at the Louvre, selected works of 47 French artists from the Chicago museum to form the loan exhibit.

The works range from Antoine Watteau's red and black chalk drawing of "The Old Savoyard," done about 175, to Pablo Picasso's black ink and wash drawing of "The Minotaur" done in 1933.

The exhibition is fascinating not only for its range of styles and media but also for the subject matter represented by these representational pictures.

One of the most appealing pictures is a simple pencil portrait of the composer Charles Gounod by Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres, done in 1841. The composer is depicted seated at a piano. Ingres did an equally appealing pencil portrait of Gounod's wife sitting in a chair.

Some of the drawings are of special interest because they are studies which preceded paintings that have become well known. One of these is trees drawn with fine-tipped black crayon by Georges Seurat in the mid-1880s as a preliminary study for his large, famous pointilist painting, "La Grande Jatte," which is in the permanent collection of the Art Institute.

Another such study is a nude by Auguste Renoir, also from the 1880s, for his painting "The Bathers." The flesh tones in this chalk study are even more alive than they are in the painting.

Jacques-Louis David's study for his famous "Oath of the Tennis Court" is a more cramped picture, but it is nevertheless of interest because of its role in the development of the lager work.

Among other well known artists whose work is included are: Francois Boucher, JeanHonore Fragonard, Camille Corot, Honore Daumier, JeanFrancois Millet, Gustave Courbet, Edouard Manet, Gustave Dore, Edgar Degas, Henri Fantin-Latour, Paul Cezanne, Odilon Redon, Paul Gauguin, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, Pierre Bonnard, and Henri Matisse.

Watson edges Nicklaus for British Open crown

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Just as he did at the Masters, Tom Watson absorbed the best that Jack Nicklaus could offer, responded with a courageous, five-under-par 65 and won the British Open Saturday in one of golf's greatest duels.

Watson, now offering the greatest challenge ever to Nicklaus' long-time role as the world's premier performer, acquired his second British Open title and his second major tournament victory of the year with a record 268 total.

That's 12 below par on Turnberry's Ailsa course, stretching 6,875 yards by the Irish Sea and and an incredible eight strokes better than the 276 that ranked as the best previous total in the 106-year history of golf's oldest tournament.

NICKLAUS, NOW a six-time British Open runnerup, went down fighting. He holed an across-the-green birdie putt of 60 feet on the final hole. But it wasn't good enough.

Watson had thrown his approach to within 2½ feet. He boldly rammed it home for a one-stroke decision. It was his third consecutive victory and sixth of the season.

Nicklaus, who played the last two rounds head-to-head with Watson, didn't make a bogey in his round of 66. He finished perhaps the greatest confrontation the game has ever seen with a 269 total.

It was simply magnificent.

For 36 holes, for two rounds in rain and wind, storm and sunshine, Nicklaus, the finest player the world has seen, and Watson, the man who would supplant him, fought each other with some of the finest golf ever played.

They'd gone through the first two rounds with matching scores of 68 and 70. Playing in the same twosome in Friday's storm-interrupted round, they matched 65s—until this year the tournament record score.

And then Saturday they kept up a pace that seemed impossible. Watson played his last 36 holes in 130, Nicklaus in 131— unbelievable scores.

IN THE END, Watson's little putt on the 18th decided it.

Nicklaus, trailing by one after Watson had birdied the 17th, missed the fairway badly and was lucky to get his second shot on the green. Watson, who ripped a roaring salute from the throats of the golf-mad Scots with his brilliant approach, had only 30 inches left for birdie.

"As we came down the 18th fairway, I said to my caddie, 'Alfie, Nicklaus is going to make that long putt. I know him too well. I've just got to get that little one,'" Watson said later.

He was right. Nicklaus holed the long one, and Watson needed his to win.

It was an appropriate finish to an incredible struggle that may have signaled a turning point in the game.

U.S. OPEN champion Hubert Green was the only other man in subpar figures for four rounds. He finished with a 67 and a 279 total, 10 shots back of Watson and nine behind Nicklaus.

Lee Trevino, with a 70, was at 280.

American tour players captured the first eight positions, but no one got into the battle between Nicklaus and Watson.

Ben Crenshaw, with a 75, and George Burns, with 69, were at 281. Arnold Palmer, twice a winner of this title in the early 60s, was at 69-282. Ray Floyd was next at 72-283.

The group at 284 was composed of defending champion Johnny Miller, 74; John Schroeder, 71; Mark Hayes, 73; and the only non-American to crack the top 12, England's Tommy Horton with a 75.

Other American scores included Jerry Pate, 73-287; Tom Weiskopf, 72-288; Rik Massengale, 76-289; Roger Maltbie, 80-289, and Hale Irwin, 80-294.

But it was a two-man battle. The others ducked out of the way like prelim boys at a heavyweight championship. It was the old master Nicklaus, 37, against the younger challenger Watson, 27.

Watson, who beat Nicklaus in the Masters, trailed by three strokes after the first four holes of the final round and was two behind with six holes to go after Nicklaus dropped an 18- foot birdie putt on the 12th hole.

"The last chapter started when Nicklaus sank that putt," Tom said. "I told myself I just had to make some birdies on the next few holes."

He made a 12-15 foot birdie putt on the 13th and closed to one.

He had a chance on the next one. With a scurrying gallery of thousands out of control and thundering down the fairways behind them, Watson missed on a 6-8 foot effort that would have tied him with Nicklaus.

THE NEXT HOLE, the 209-yard 15th, may have been the key.

Watson missed the green short. Nicklaus was on with a putt in the 18-20 foot range, very possible to one of the game's great putters.

But it was Watson who made birdie. Using a putter, he holed it from the fringe, some 60 feet away. And Nicklaus missed. Now they were tied.

"It looked like I had a good chance to pick up one, maybe two strokes there," Nicklaus said, "and he holes it for two."

The key, however, was the 17th, Nicklaus said.

Both drove the fairway on the 500-yard par-five hole. With the wind behind them, they needed only short irons to the green.

Watson put his some 15 feet behind the hole. Nicklaus pushed his to the right and had a difficult chip from the rough. He ran it up to six feet, about as well as he could have done from that lie.

WATSON MISSED his eagle putt but tapped in for birdie.

Nicklaus then was faced with the six-footer to remain in a tie.

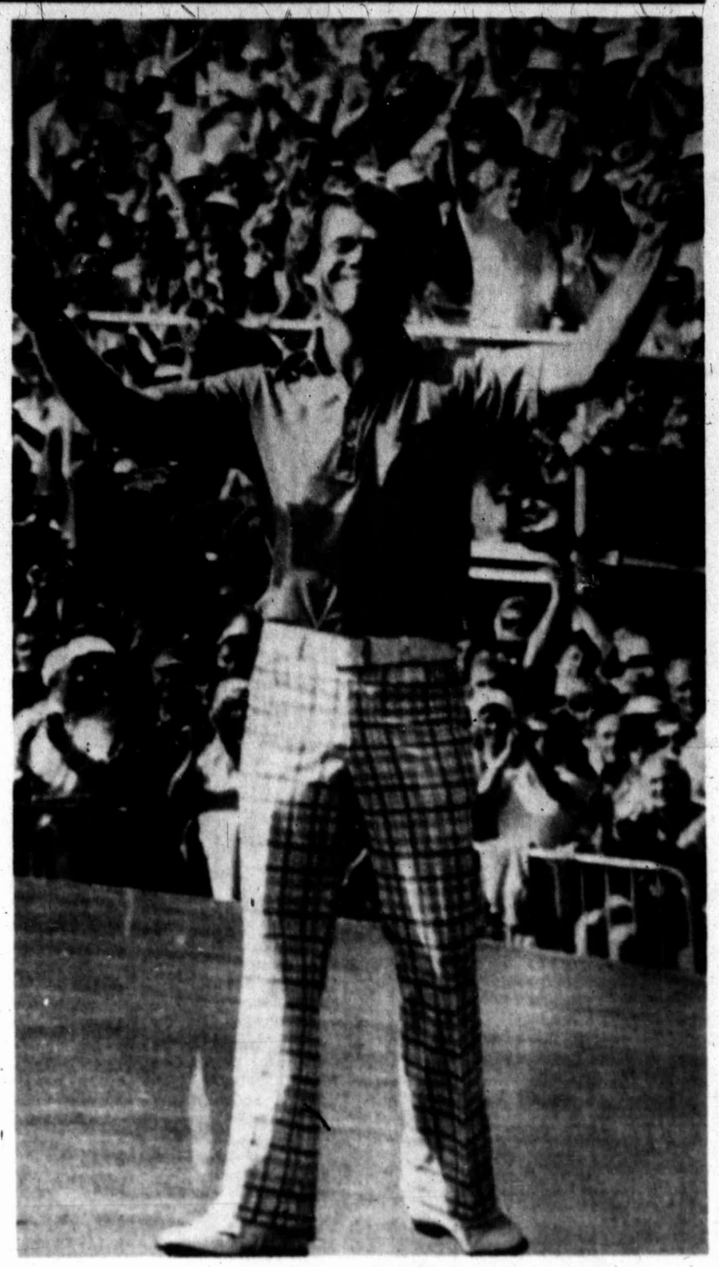

"There was a little break to the left in it," he said. "But the ball went dead straight." He missed it and—for the first time in their 36 hole struggle—Watson had the lead alone.

"Just one of those things," shrugged Nicklaus.

Both birdied the 18th, Nicklaus with his fantastic effort and Watson with the little putt he had to have.

HE SALUTED the gallery with raised, clenched fists, a broad smile on his boyish face.

The victory was worth $17,000 to Watson from the total purse of $170,000, but his winnings do not count on his leading official money-winnings of $269,000 for the seasor.

Cards defeat Chicubs, 4-3

CHICAGO (AP) — Keith Hernandez smashed three hits and scored two runs and Tony Scott drove two runs in the first inning Saturday to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to 4-3 victory over the Chicgo Cubs in a nationally televised game.

Tom Underwood, 5-4, picked up the victory and Clay Carroll, who balked in the tying run in Friday's loss to the Cubs, gained his third save of the season with 3 2-3 innings of relief.

The Cardinals scored three times in the first inning off loser Steve Renko, 0-1. With two out, Hernandez doubled and Hector Cruz and Ted Simmons walked to load the bases. Scott followed his run-scoring single and then stole second. On the steal, catcher Steve Swisher threw the ball into centerfield allowing Simmons to score.

St. Louis scored what proved to be the game-winner in in the third on a single by Hernandez, a pair of walks and a run-scoring single by Ken Reitz.

The Cubs loaded the bases in the fourth with none out on singles by Larry Biittner and Jerry Morales sandwiched around a walk to Bobby Murcer.

Three share LPGA lead with 142s

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young, the first-stround leader, faltered on the final hole Saturday and settled for a tie with Carol Mann and Jo Ann Washam for the lead after 36 holes in the 54-hole Ladies' Professional Golf Association tournament.

Mrs. Young, as did Misses Mann and Washam, bogied the par-four 18th and all three finished with 36-hole totals of 142.

On Thursday, Mrs. Young fired a five-under-par 68. She had a 74 in the second round, while Miss Mann and Miss Washam each shot 71.

Miss Mann, playing ahead of her co-leaders, blew a four-foot putt on the 18th a split second after a public address announcement that the clubhouse bar would close at 6 p.m.

"That was a little distracting," she said after she had cooled down. "As far as I'm concerned they can blow it (the bar) up."

Her putt rimmed the cup.

Mrs. Young, in the final threesome with Miss Washam, drove into the rough on her final tee shot and nicked a tree with her second. Her sand wedge shot dropped within six feet of the cup but the putt went astray.

Miss Washam's second shot settled in the fringe and from there she chipped to eight feet from the hole. She needed two putts to end the round.

Next at 144 were Laura Baugh, who shot a 69; Jane Blalock and JoAnne Carner with 71s and Judy Rankin with a 72.

The 145s included Jerilyn Britz (71), Sally Little (74), Mary Bea Porter (72) and Kathy Whitworth (72).

Clarke ready for challenge

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

The combatants got their first look at the enemy Saturday, as most of the 277 golfers entered in this week's Trans-Miss Amateur Golf Tournament got in a round of practice on the Midland Country Club course.

The enemy is naturally the par-72 MCC layout, which will play 7,400 yards long and make or break these competitors once the prestigeous 74th annual event gets underway Monday morning with the first of two qualifying rounds. Everyone in the field — with the exception of defending champion, Doug Clarke, will have to go through the torturous grind of qualifying play at MCC and Hogan Park Golf Course Monday and Tuesday, before the field is cut to 64 for match play at Midland beginning Wednesday.

THE GOLFERS had the option of playing Hogan or MCC Saturday, but most of them, including Clarke, chose the latter.

Clarke, the 18-year-old from La Jolla, Calif., who won the 1976 Trans-Miss at Spyglass Hill in Pebble Beach, shot a 76 Saturday as he tried to get the feel of the huge course where he will defend his title this week. Afterwards, he was very complimentary of the layout.

"I think it's a really good course to have this kind of a tournament on," he said, "and it's kind of suited for my game because it (the course) is so long and wide-open.

"They haven't cut the greens real low yet, so they won't burn them out," he added. "But I can see that they're gonna play nice and fast."

TED FERGESON, the co-director of the tournament and one of the many who will be trying for one of the 64 spots in Wednesday's championship flight, has said repeatedly that MCC will be "U.S. Open-tough" with long roughs and extremely thick frog hair grass around the greens, and he wasn't exagerrating.

Clarke will get another look at MCC today, since his qualifying exemption gives him no reason to get the feel of Hogan Park's par-70 course.

"Being exempt is really a benefit to me because I won't even have to worry about qualifying like everybody else," the teenager explained. "I can concentrate on getting ready for the match play."

WHEN MATCH play finally comes around Wednesday, Clarke is expected to get a strong challenge from a number of other top amateur golfers, including NCAA champion Scott Simpson of USC, NCAA runnerup Lee Mikles of Arizona State, and Oklahoma State's Lindy Miller who was the low amateur in the U.S. Open last month.

Slow pitch deadline

Deadline for entry in the district Slow Pitch qualifying tournament is 6 p.m. Monday, tournament director Freddie Ezell warns.

Teams will qualify into the Open, scheduled for Midland July 29-31, or Class A, at Victoria July 29-31, state tournaments.

Entry fee is $46 and one playable ball per game. Entries may be made by calling Ezell (694-5508) or mailing an entry blank to him at 3306 West Ohio, Midland.

Monday's Trans-Miss pairings

Monday's pairings for the first round of qualifying in the 74th Trans-Miss Amateur Golf Tournament:

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe DiMaggio and Willie Mays, two of baseball's all-time top centerfielders, will serve as honorary captains for the 48th All-Star Game at Yankee Stadium July 19. Baseball Commissoner Bowie Kuhn announced Saturday.

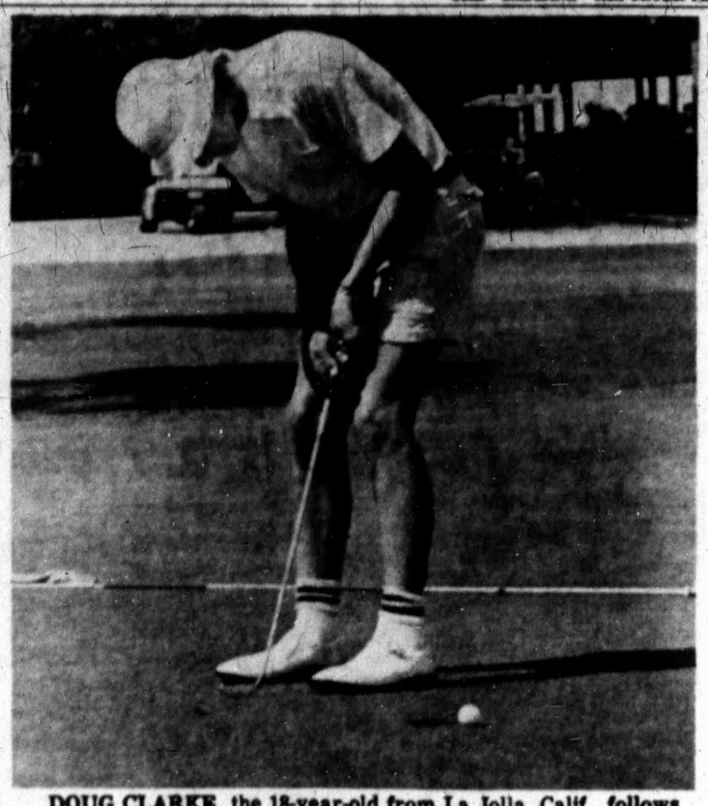

As honorary captains they wil accompany the All-Star managers to the pre-game conference at home plate and will remain in uniform throughout the game.

DiMaggio played in 11 Al-Star games and Mays appeared in 24.

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (AP) — The 19th Maurice Stokes benefit basketball game has been scheduled for Aug. 9 at Kutsher's Country Club between two all-star teams from the National Basketball Association, it was announced Saturday.

Red Auerbach, general manager of the Boston Celtics, will coach one squad and Kevin Loughery of the New York Nets the other.

DENVER (AP) — The National Football League Denver Broncos have signed starting receiver Rick Upchurch and middle line backer Richard Baska to new contracts, reducing the number of Broncos veterans who have not signed to seven.

Nation's best swimmers coming to Tall City meet

Many of the top-ranked age group swimmers and teams from across the country will gather in Midland Friday through Sunday for the prestigious Allison West Texas National Champions Invitational Swimming and Diving Meet in what will be the most contested event in the long history of the meet.

The 1977 Invitational will be the 30th annual meet, but the new format put together by City of Midland Swim Team coach Doug Ingram will make it the most competitive.

For the last three years, many of the top age group teams in the nation have competed in the event, but this year the event will be even nore competitive since over 40 of the top-ranked individuals in the nation have also been invited for the three-day affair.

ALMOST EVERY event will have a nationally ranked individual in the race at Alamo Pool's 50-meter outdoor course. The team competition will again feature some of the nation's top teams, and the individuals will add class to what has already become one of the nation's most respected age group meets during the summer.

The expanded format was made possible by Fred and Sharon Allison of Midland, who donated $40,000 to the event. The donation earmarks $10,000 a year through the 1980 Olympics.

The money will help in transportation and housing costs for the ranked individuals invited to the meet. Individuals invited had to be ranked in the Top 10 of their particular event, and they will come from all over the country.

OVER 400 swimmers and 30 teams will be in the three-day competition according to Ingram.

The favorite in the team competition will be the Pleasant Hills Swim Club of northern California. This club is the second ranked age group team in the country. Mission Viejo, the top ranked team, was invited, but is unable to attend since they have their own meet this week. Mission Viejo has been in the Midland meet before.

Also in the field is the El Monte Swim Club of southern California, the third ranked team in the country. The DADS Club of Houston will also make its first full team appearance in the meet, and really want to make a strong run at the title.

ROB ORR, who swam at USC and for El Monte coach Don Lamont in AAU competition, is the coach of the DADS Club. He would like for his team to defeat his former coach.

Two teams from Colorado are paying their own expenses to the meet as well as a team from Alabama and one from Ohio. Other teams will come from the Southwest and West Texas as usual. COM swimmers will probably have to put forth their best effort of their young careers to stay afloat with the super star format.

The meet will kickoff Friday at 8 a.m. with swimming trials and finals will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday's and Sunday's format will be the same. The public is invited to attend and viewing bleachers at poolside will be available.

THERE WILL be 110 events run during the three days for both boy and girl competitors.

Each individual will be limited to three individual events plus one relay per day. All swimmers must have 1977 AAU registration numbers.

The Alamo Pool will be available for training Thursday from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m., so the public is asked not to use the pool at that time.

Other sponsors helping with the meet include the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Jaycees and Jayceettes and the Midland Parks and Recreation Department.

The meet is held under the sanction of the West Texas Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States. 1977 AAU rules will govern the meet.

Two sharing lead in Quad Cities golf

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Don Pooley sank a 35-foot birdie putt to pull into a tie with Victor Regalado after three rounds in the $125,000 Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Regalado, one of the halfway leaders, and Pooley went to 13-under par over the 6,620-yard, par-71 Oakwood Country Club course. Four players were one stroke back at 201 and 11 others were within five shots of the leaders.

Pooley ran in four birdie putts on the back nine as he carded a five-under-par 66. Regalsdo, former Mexican Amateur, PGA and Masters champion, continued as one of the tournament's steadiest players with rounds of 67-66-67.

Second-round co-leader Sam Adams, who tied the course record with a second-round 63, had a 68 Saturday to stay within a stroke of the leaders. Tied with Adams at 201 were Mike Morley, Barney Thompson and Bob Zender.

Zender has been an ironman, too, with three straight 67s.

Morley and Thompson each started the day five under par and played in the same threesome. Each fired a 64 in a head-to-head duel and for a time were the leaders on the course.

Two strokes back at 202 was Craig Stadler, who went into the third round ties with Pooley and Zender.

Ed Sabo's six-under-par 65 pulled him into a four-way tie at 203 along with Bob Murphy, Rod Curl and Keith Fergus. George Archer had a 66 to go into today's final round four strokes behind the leaders at 204.

"You have to make a lot of birdies here to win this tournament," said Regalado. "I like to play this kind of course because I like to make a lot of birdies."

Pooley had been on the course at 7 a.m. to finish his rain-delayed second round. Some 12 hours later he came into the clubhouse with a share of the lead.

"With so many people bunched, you just have to keep making birdies," he said. "There are a lot of birdie holes here if you're patient and wait for them to come."

Morley had five birdies in six holes in one stretch.

Boggs posts win

VIENNA (AP) — American Olympic champion Phil Boggs Saturday won the three-meter springboard event in an international diving tournament with 589.92 points, a 13.81 point lead over runner-up Carlos Giron of Mexico.

Italy's Franco Cagnotto, who was second in the 1976 Olympics, finished third

BOWLING BEAT

234s top keg play

By RANDY ISENBERG

Bob Paul, George Ashland and Leldon Brown shared the spotlight this week on the bowling lanes in Midland. Paul and Ashland each turned in 234 totals while Brown came up with a 231.

Howard Shelton's term as Men's City Bowling Association secretary began July 1. League officers should contact Howard for league supplies and any answers to questions you may have concerning your leagues.

Bonnie Brotherton is the new Junior City Bowling Association director. Her duties will include coordinating the Junior Travel League program throughout the Permian Basin.

If your league scores are not being reported, ask your league secretary to call them into me at 683-4683. The person answering the phone will take your league scores. To insure best results, however, scores should be submitted in writing. You may mail or bring scores to 413 Air Park Drive, Midland, Texas, 79701.

ON THE LEAGUE FRONT:

Lightning Mixed: Sherry Evans converted the 3-9-10 split. Mike Evans converted the 5-10 split.

Air Park Mixed: Roy Nam, 216; Butch Hall, 212; Leldon Brown, 231; Judy Makowsky, 193-513, her first 500 series.

Hustlers Men: Jim Reeves, 214; Kerry Thompson bowled his first 200 game. Mark Land, 207; Guy Galindo, 502; Brent Gallagher, 203.

Happy Bowlers: Bob Paul, 234-540; George Ashland, 234; Carol Jordan, 503; Deannie Lawson, 181-180-520; Joe Morici, 203; Paul Drummond converted the 5-7-9 split.

TPEA: Beth McAdams, 201-525; John Rutherford, 203-509.

City Mixed: Robert Smith, 206; Tim Carlisle, 215; Jerry Hertel, 513.

Adobe Oil: Jim Deffenbaugh, 213; Joe Hembree, 204; Jerry Watson, 196; Jan Watson, 197; Susan Abernathy, 190.

Morning Glorys: Gloria Shaw, 541; Colleen Timmons converted the 5-8-10 split; Helga Kelly converted the 4-5-7 and 3-10 splits.

Cunningham UCLA coach

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Cunningham was appointed head basketball coach at UCLA Saturday, Athletic Director J.D. Morgan announced.

Cunningham, 37, succeeds Gene Bartow, who resigned from the position last month to become athletic director and head basketball coach at Alabama-Birmingham.

Cunningham is a former UCLA basketball player and assistant coach. He played for the Bruins under legendary coach John Wooden from 1960-62 and was an assistant coach to Wooden from 1965-75.

Wooden stepped down as head coach following the 1974-75 season. Bartow coached the Bruins for the two seasons since then. His teams recorded a 52-9 record and won a pair of Pacific Eight Conference championships.

Bartow was heavily criticized by UCLA fans and members of the media. It is believed that had much to do with his resignation.

Gullikson gains net meet final

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Hank Pfister and Tim Gullikson moved ahead Saturday with their summer of surprises on the Grand Prix circuit by advancing to the finals of the $50,000 Hall of Fame tennis championships.

Pfister, the tournament's third seed, downed Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia in the first semifinal 6-3, 1-6, 6-4 and No. 8seeded Gullikson took out Ismail el Shafei of Egypt 6-2, 7-6 after being down 5-2 in the second set.

In earlier matches Saturday, Gullikson earned his semifinal berth by defeating Australia's John James 6-1, 6-1 and el Shafei got there by taking out 1977 NCAA singles champion Matt Mitchell of Stanford University 6-4, 6-7, 6-3.

"Andrew did not play well," Pfister said after his match. "He missed a lot of volleys in the first set. But he played better in the second and broke right off. So I decided not to kill myself after I got two service breaks in the hole.

"So I cruised through the second set. The lob was what won the match for me. In the third set, I hit two lobs that won the match."

Pfister, a lanky right-hander who stands 6-foot-4, gained a 53 lead in the deciding set but let seven match points go in the last two games before finally putting away the match with one of his powerful serves.

Gullikson, on the other hand, had things mostly his way until the middle of the second set when el Shafei took a 5-2 lead. The Onalaska, Wis., pro broke el Shafei on his next serve and managed to tie the set at five games apiece.

In the tiebreaker, Gullikson and the Egyptian lefthander were tied at six points when Gullikson hit a winner off el Shafei's serve, and on the next point watched a lob land outside the line.

Gullikson, who beat Bob Lutz and Roscoe Tanner in getting to the finals at Nottingham, said he had been playing the same caliber of tennis this week on the grass courts of Newport Casino.

"I can't believe I've been winning every match in straight sets," he said. "I just feel so fresh and invigorated that I don't even have to pace myself."

For Pfister, who reached the semifinals at the Queen's Club tournament by beating Stan Smith and Ilie Nastase, the 1 p.m match with Gullikson Sunday will mark the first time he has reached a final on the Grand Prix circuit.

"I've been in three semifinals," said Pfister, who turned pro eight months ago, "but this is my first final."

Asked if he would have preferred playing el Shafei or Gullikson in the final, Pfister said he would rather take on Gullikson, whose 25-year-old twin brother Tom was seeded sixth in the tournament.

Pfister nabs tennis win

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Third-seeded Hank Pfister of Bakersfield, Calif., earned a berth in the finals of the $50,000 Hall of Fame tennis championships by beating Rhodesia's Andrew Pattison 6-3, 1-6, 6-4 Saturday.

The other final berth will go to the winner of the match between eighth-seeded Tim Gullikson of Onalaska, Wis., or unseeded Ismail El Shafei of Egypt, who both advanced to the semifinals earlier Saturday.

San Antonio topples M-Cubs by 3-2

SAN ANTONIO—San Antonio's Cleo Smith is getting to be a real pain in the neck for the Midland Cubs.

Smith blasted his third home run in the last two days to provide the margin of victory over the Cubs, 3-2, here Saturday night. Smith hit two homers Friday to beat the Bruins.

Midland now trails the series with San Antonio, 2-1, going into the fourth game of the series tonight.

Smith's game winner came in the San Antonio fourth inning after the Dodgers had tied the Texas League contest at 2-2 on a double by Tim Roche and a run scoring single by Bobby Brown. Fortunately, Brown was erased from the base paths before Smith homered.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Jeff Leonard poled his ninth homer of the year, but he had to leave the game when he pulled a hamstring muscle while running around the bases.

Midland tied the game in the second inning when Tony Pepper doubled to left field, moved to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a short sacrifice fly to right field by Steve Haug. Pepper was almost nailed at the plate.

Jeff Albert, 4-9, absorbed the loss while Mike Welch won his first game of the year for the Dodgers.

Midland out hit San Antonio by a 7-6 margin, but stranded seven men. Pepper had three of the Midland hits.

Barazzutti nabs Swedish

BAASTAD, Sweden (AP) — Corrado Barazzutti won his semifinal easily Saturday but Balasz Taroczy struggled past Antonio Zugarelli in a decisive tiebreaker to prevent another all-Italian final of the $75,000 Swedish Open Tennis Championships.

Second-seeded Barazzutti, who lost last year's final here to Zugarelli, was never in trouble against Kim Warwick, whipping the ninth-seeded Australian 6-3, 6-0. It was Barazzutti's first straight set victory in the tournament.

Taroczy, 23, a clay court specialist from Hungary and seeded seventh, beat No. 4 seed Zugarelli 7-5, 2-6, 7-6 in a 3½hour match in which the Italian fooght off two match points before the tiebreakers.

After finishing off top-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-2, 2-6, 6-4 in a quarter-final halted by darkness Friday, Taroczy returned to the center court to nip Zugarelli and later win a doubles match.

Taroczy, always ahead in the semifinal match, won the tiebreaker 7-4 with a strong serve which Zugarelli returned into the net for his first Grand Prix final of the year.

Top-seeded Florenta Mihai of Romania and fourth-seeded Mary Struthers, of La Jolla, Calif., will meet in the women's singles final Sunday. Each lost first set tiebreakers but came back to win.

Miss Mihai struggled to a 6-7, 6-4, 6-4 triumph over fifth-seeded Glynis Coles of Britain and Miss Struthers overcame second-seeded Cynthia Doerner of Fresno, Calif., 6-7, 6-0, 6-2.

Another dull week coming up

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

If they were living in Chicago, Los Angeles or Boston, they'd probably be complaining, too, but you've heard the tired old gripe. Hardly a day goes by without someone you know, moaning in despair, "There's nothing to do in Midland."

And, you know, I'm beginning to think it's true. There really isn't anything to do here.

Take this week. I suppose it's typical enough, but what's there to do? A guy could go stir crazy.

Sure, the nation's top amateur golfers are taking their practice rounds at Midland Country Club and Hogan Park today, but they don't begin qualifying until Monday and the tournament doesn't begin until Wednesday. And then it only runs through Sunday.

OKAY, SO there's something cooking...which may prove more literal than figurative to golfers from outside the southwest, unless the rain hangs around and keeps things cool for a few days....during the day, but you can't play golf at night.

The Midland Cubs do open a 10-game homestand Wednesday, but what's so special about that? Come to think of it, Midland will get a shot at Ernie Banks even before Cooperstown, where he will be officially inducted into Baseball's Hall of Fame later this summer.

That will be Wednesday night when the Cubs play Tulsa and the Downtown Lions and City of Midland will pay tribute to the frequent Midland visitor.

Ernie was elected to the fame hall last winter after an outstanding career with the Chicago Cubs. Well, that's the understatement of the decade. Ernie has been retired since the early 1970s, yet he's still the one and only "Mr. Cub."

Ernie was one of the rare ones who made it the first time his name became eligible for vote into the Hall.

Okay, so the Cubs will be in town, but what are you going to do at night for a change of pace? Well, there's always swimming...

LATER IN the week, some of the nation's top young swimmers will join the nation's top amateur golfers in the Tall City.

Under a new format and renamed the Allison West Texas Invitational, the splash meet which got its start back in the 1940s, may not be bigger than ever, but there is no question that it will be better than ever.

With a financial assist from a Tall City beneficiary, some of the nation's top swim teams and individuals will be coming to Midland for the three-day competition that runs Friday through Sunday.

"The ($40,000) donation of Fred and Sharon Allison makes it possible for Midland to have one of the best age group meets in the country," contends Doug Ingram, City of Midland swimming coach.

Among the team entries are Pleasant Hills Swim Club of northern California and the El Monte Swim Club of southern California, ranked second and third, respectively, in age group swimming.

Adding a little spice to the agenda, the Dad's Club of Houston also will be making it's first full scale Midland invasion and their objective is for something a little stronger than a token appearance.

Rob Orr, who swam at USC for El Monte, now coaches the Houston team and you can bet would like to upset his old coach, Don Lamont of El Monte.

But the swimming doesn't get started until 9 a.m. or so and will end before midnight each day, so what else is there to do?

Yup, the chronic complainers have a point. It's shaping up as another dull week in Midland. Anybody know what's going on this week in Styles?

Ashe finds comeback road hard

MIAMI (AP) — Tennis star Arthur Ashe, who has been hobbled by a foot injury most of the year, says he's finding the comeback road isn't easy.

At Wimbledon, Ashe learned that memory is pretty short. Ashe, who won the men's singles title in 1975, was attending as a spectator and headed toward the players' box to watch one of the top matches.

"I couldn't get in there," reaclled Ashe of Miami. "This guy says, 'Where's your player's badge? I told him, 'I'm a player but I'm not a player.

"What can you say? Rules are rules. Fortunately, a guy next to him knew who I was. That was the irony of the two weeks."

Ashe underwent surgery in February on a bone spur in his foot. He has been working with weights and on an exercise cycle to get him ready to return to play, and plans to do so in two weeks at a Washington, D.C., tournament.

He played an exhibition match with Brian Gottfried Friday night in Fort Lauderdale. It was Ashe's first competitive tennis since the Australian Open in January. Ashe lost 6-3, 6-4.

"You're at the mercy of the recovery of the injury," Ashe said. "I may not play again if it doesn't completely heal. But it is healing, and I expect to play three or four more years. As far as the operation goes, I had no choice."

During the match with Gottfried, Ashe looked rusty.

"When you don't play for six months, the timing goes," Gottfried said. "You usually hit with somebody not quite as hard. He was hitting better at the end."

Ashe said the layoff may have been a blessing in disguise for himself and Jeanne Marie Moutoussamy, his bride of five months. "You get to know your wife real well when you're with her 24 hours a day for that long," he said.

Unser seeks victory

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Once he was able to attain full power, Bobby Unser had little trouble winning the pole position Saturday for today's 200 mile U.S. Auto Club stock car race.

Unser, from Albuquerque, N.M., was bothered during practice by a bad throttle cable, which cut the power in 1977 Chevrolet Camero by one third.

"We found that the throttle cable was slipping," he said. "That meant the throttle was only opening two-thirds of the way. But we fixed it just before we went out to qualify, and everything went fine."

Unser drove his car around the one-mile Wisconsin State Fair Park oval in just 33.16 seconds for a speed of 108.565 miles per hour. Ramo Stott of Keokuk, Iowa, driving a 1977 Plymouth Volare, was second at 33.53 seconds and 107.367 m.p.h.

Ron Hutcherson, also of Keokuk, qualified his Volare at 33.55, good for third place. Dave Watson of Milton, Wis., was just as quick but because Hutcherson had qualified his car first, Watson had to settle for the No. 4 spot.

Sharing the third row were Don White of Keokuk and Bay Darnell of Deerfield, Ill. White qualified his 1977 Dodge Aspen at 33.72 seconds and Darnell his 1974 Dodge Charger at 33.75.

Bobby Allison, the Hueytown, Ala., driver who usually competes on the NASCAR circuit, qualified seventh in his 1977 AMC Hornet, even though his car arrived late and he got no practice. He drove his car at 34.05 seconds and 105.727 m.p.h., to share the fourth row with Jack Bowsher of Springfield, Ohio, who qualified his 1976 Ford Torino in 33.93.

Ickx wins Six-Hour race

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — The top three cars all faltered in the final five minutes, but the turbocharged Porsche 935 of four-time LeMans winner Jacky Ickx and sidekick Jochen Mass kept up enough power to win Saturday's six-hour World Championship of Makes endurance race.

Porsches swept the top 12 places in the 45-car field, building up their huge lead over BMW even more in the international series.

A leaking valve cover and a broken fan belt caused costly delays that dropped the Ickx-Mass entry out of the lead for more than two hours, but then long distance driving veterans moved back ahead with one hour, 12 minutes remaining.

They overtook the Porsche 934 turbo of Hurley Haywood of Jacksonville, Fla., and Bob Hagestad of Denver which performed flawlessly until the last few minutes. A flat tire cost them second place, as the 935 turbo of George Follmer, Huntington Beach, Calif., and Brett Lunger, Wilmington, Del., passed them.

Ickx, the Belgian who won his third six-hour race here, and German grand prix regular Mass., who was at the wheel when the checkered flag fell, covered 584 miles or 173 laps around the 3.377-mile Watkins Glen Grand Prix course at an average speed of 96.847 miles per hour. That was not a record, but Mass' fastest lap of the race, 107.32 m.p.h., was.

The Follmer-Lunger Porsche, which ran out of gas at one minute before 6 p.m. but managed to coast into the pits for a quick refill, had a chance to win but lost a wheel two hours into the race and then lost plenty of time waiting for a replacement wheel hub.

Porsche's strongest challenger in the series, BMW, was out of competition barely an hour into the race.

Ronnie Peterson of Sweden crashed his turbo BMW, which he was to co-drive with Britain's David Hobbs, only 37 minutes into the race. Brake failure was blamed. The car struggled around for another half hour before it was retired with bent steering.

At 2:09, the Ickx-Mass Porsche made a two-minute stop to repair minor body damage, then 23 minutes later it was back in to repair the oil leak in the valve cover. They lost five laps and the lead to Maywood and Magestad.

They lost another lap at 3:24 while the broken pulley was fixed.

At 4:24, they had to make a routine pit stop, just as they had pulled within three seconds of Haywood and Hagestad. But with the superior speed of the factory Porsche entry, over 10 m.p.h. on the straightaway, it seemed just a matter of time. It was, just 20 minutes, and Mass blazed into the No. 2 spot.

Haywood, who was the top finisher in the Trans-Am class in the race, said he wasn't too disappointed because, "we were running with a broken axle the last 45 minutes anyway."

Two-time Indianapolis 500 winner Johnny Rutherford and Californian Dick Barbour took a fine fourth place in their privately entered Porsche 934. Danny Ongais and Ted Fields, both of the Newport Beach, Calif., area, finished fifth in another 934.

Janet Guthrie, Miami Beach, Fla., and Randy Lewis, Los Altos, Calif., came home 10th in a non-turbocharged 934.

Rutherford, driving in his first endurance race since 1974, said, "the track was like an obstacle course. There were exhaust pipes, waste gates and chunks of rubber the size you wouldn't believe all over the track."

Cleveland prevails

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pinchhitter Andre Thornton drilled a two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning Saturday, giving the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Thornton, batting for catcher Fred Kendall, hit his 10th homer of the season off loser Jerry Garvin, 7-8. Bill Melton had drawn a one-out walk and John Lowenstein ran for him before Thornton's home run.

Wayne Garland went the distance for the Indians, raising record to 6-9.

Doug Rader's leadoff homer in the eighth inning had put the Blue Jays ahead 2-1.

After Cleveland grabbed an early 1-0 lead on Larvell Blanks' RBI single, Toronto tied the score in the seventh.

With one out, Bob Bailor smashed a single, his fourth hit of the game, and Ron Fairly doubled him home.

Rader's homer, which carried deep into the left field stands, was his sixth of the season.

Mets post win

NEW YORK (AP) — Lenny Randle blasted a two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the 17th inning to give the New York Mets a 7-5 victory over the Montreal Expos, snapping the Mets' nine-game losing streak.

Lee Mazzilli led off the New York 17th with a single to left. After both Doug Flynn and winning pitcher Paul Siebert hit into force plays, Randle hit a 11 pitch from loser Will McEnaney, 2-3, into the Expos' bullpen in left field.

The Expos had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the 11th inning on an RBI single by Gary Carter, but Steve Henderson's leadoff homer in the bottom of the inning tied the game.

Bucs top Phillies in 12th

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lighthitting Mario Mendoza broke a 12th-inning tie with an RBI single to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 9-8 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

Mendoza bounced his two-out single up the middle off loser Gene Garber, 4-5, to score Jim Fregosi, who walked and took third on Ed Ott's double.

Mendoza had just four hits in his last 22 at bats and it was his first RBI of the season.

Terry Forster, 2-2, pitched two scoreless innings to earn the victory.

Cincy wins, 3-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Johnny Bench clubbed a two-run home run and Joe Morgan hit a run-scoring single to support Tom Seaver's seven-hitter and lead Cincinnati to a 3-1 victory over Houston Saturday night.

Seaver, 9-5, who had won only one of four starts since joining the Reds from the New York Mets, struck out eight and retired 16 of 17 Astros batters until Jose Cruz led off the ninth with a walk.

Goerge Foster led off the second against Houston starter Joaquin Andujar with a single and scored on Bench's 20th home run of the season, a 390-foot shot over the left field fence.

Ken Griffey doubled and scored on Morgan's single to right field.

Exotic deer have higher survival rate

When native white-tailed deer were placed in direct competition with two species of exotic deer, the exotic deer had a much higher survival rate. This was the result of a Hill County study carried out by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The study, began in 1970, involved three 96-acre enclosures on the Kerr Wildlife Management Area. One enclosure, a control, contained a brood herd (two adult males and four adult females) of white tailed deer. A second enclosure contained a similar brood herd of white-tailed deer plus a brood herd of axis deer, an import from India.

A third enclosure also contained a brood herd of white-tailed deer plus a brood herd of sika deer, an import from Eastern Asia.

Axis and sika deer have been introduced into Texas by private landowners. Both exotic have become common on some ranches, and the species have food habits overlapping those of whitetail. The purpose of the study was to determine the influence of these deer on white-tailed deer survival and reproduction.

By the beginning of 1976 the whitetails in the control enclosure had inclresed to 11; by the end of the year they numbered 14.

The whitetail/axis pen, at the beginning of 1976, contained 11 whitetails and 19 axis. At the end of the year it had six whitetails and 14 axis.

The whitetail/sika pen at the beginning of 1976 contained seven whitetails and 27 sika. At the end of the year six whitetails and 31 sika survived.

Harold Solomon posts win

Solomon takes win in Austin

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Harold Solomon volleyed his way to a 4-6, 6-0, 6-2 victory over Australian Phil Dent in the Tournament of Champions Saturday at nearby Lakeway.

Solomon plays Dick Stockton today in the finals of this division of the tournament. The winner of that match goes to New York in September for the over-all final of this unique event against Ken Rosewall. Rosewall won the first section of the tournament last March.

Stockton got a free pass to today's match when Jimmy Connors withdrew Friday, saying he aggravated an injury to his right thumb in a practice session with Cliff Richey that morning.

According to one report, Connors broke the thumb before losing at Wimbledon in five sets to Bjorn Borg a week ago. His doctor reportedly said the thumb would have to be rebroken and set, sidelining Connors for six weeks.

The 5-foot-6, 130-pound Solomon, a Southwest Conference champion from Rice in 1971, and Dent, a quarterfinalist at Wimbledon, slapped long volleys to the baseline on the scorching-hot clay court.

Solomon broke Dent's serve eight out of 12 times. Dent held his serve only once in each of the last two sets.

After dropping the first set, Solomon, who says he would prefer to have the other player serve all the time, overpowered Dent, polishing off the set with a love game.

Dent opened the final set with a love game with his serve, then lost a love game, and Solomon followed that by breaking Dent's next serve with a love game.

The first set had five deuce games, with Dent winning three of them. There were no more deuce games in the match until the final game of the third set.

White Sox top Detroit by 5-2

DETROIT (AP) — Eric Soderholm's two-run homer in the sixth inning paced White Sox to a 5-2 victory over Detroit Saturday night as Chicago won its ninth consecutive victory and the Tigers dropped their sixth consecutive game.

Soderholm's homer brought the Sox back from a 2-1 defecit. Jim Spencer, who was safe on a fielder's choice, scored as Soderholm hit his eighth homer of the season.

Ken Kravec, who worked the first 6 1-3 innings, picked up his fifth win against two losses. Tigers' starter Fernando Arroyo fell to 5-7.

Lerrin LaGrow earned his 14th save for Chicago by pitching the last 22-3 innings. He relieved Kravec with two men on and one out in the seventh and struck out pinch-hitter Ben Oglivie. Ron LeFlore then drew a walk to load the bases but Tito Fuentes popped out to shortstop to end the threat.

Jorge Orta doubled home a pair of runs off reliever John Hiller in the ninth inning.

Moore homers, leads Brewers over Bosox

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Charlie Moore hit a solo home run in the third inning, then scored the winning run in the eighth on Steve Dillard's error as the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Boston Red Sox 3-2 Saturday.

Moore, who began the day in an 8-for-57 slump, led off the eighth with a single off loser Ferguson Jenkins, 7-6 and was sacrificed to second by Bob Sheldon. He went to third on a bloop single by Robin Yount and scored when second baseman Dillard bobbled Cecil Cooper's grounder.

The Red Sox had tied the game in the eighth inning against winner Jerry Augustine, 10-9, when Dillard singled and scored from first on a double to left by Rick Burleson.

The Brewers took a 2-1 lead with a sixth-inning run on a single by Sheldon, a sacrifice and an RBI single by Cooper.

Moore's second homer of the year staked the Brewers to a 10 lead in the third. Augustine held the Red Sox hitless for the first 4 2-3 innings and faced the minimum 14 batters in that span.

However, George Scott walked with two out in the fifth and scored on a long double by Butch Hobson. Bill Castro relieved Augustine in the ninth and retired the side in order for his 10th save.

Orioles over NY

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rookie Dave Skaggs' single capped a three-run Baltimore rally in the eighth inning as the Orioles scored three unearned runs and defeated the New York Yankees 6-5 Saturday night.

The victory moved the Orioles into a virtual tie for second place with Boston, one game behind first-place New York, in the American League East.

An error by New York second baseman Willie Randolph on a grounder by Eddie Murray, following a single by Lee May, opened the way for the Orioles in the eighth.

A wild pitch by reliever Sparky Lyle moved the runners into scoring position and May scored when Doug DeCinces singled off Lyle's glove.

Giants take victory over Braves by 5-4

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gary Alexander's pinch-hit, ground rule double scored pinch-runner Rob Andrews in the 11th inning Saturday to give the San Francisco Giants a 5-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Marc Hill led off the 11th with a walk off loser Jamie Easterly, 2-4, and was sacrificed to second by Johnnie LeMaster. Andrews ran for Hill and Alexander pinch-hit an opposite-field double for the game winner.

Randy Moffitt, 3-5, worked the final two innings to pick up the victory.

The Braves tied the game in the ninth off Giants' ace reliever Gary Lavelle on a pinchdouble by Vic Correll, an infield single by Gary Matthews and a line single by Willie Montanez. Jeff Burroughs then singled but right fielder Jack Clark, who started the Giants scoring with a three-run double in the first, threw out Matthews at the plate.

Rare desert bighorns fight for existence near LA

The Los Angeles Times

On the rocky slopes of the San Gabriel Mountains just 40 miles east of Los Angeles, a small band of rare desert bighorns survives.

It's a rather special flock as it has endured on the edge of the metropolis. The bighorn does not easily share its habitat with people, and only about 425 of the animals remain throughout the San Gabriels.

For the past two years, James DeForge, a Cal Poly Pomona graduate student first beguiled by the beautiful wild creatures when he photographed them on hiking trips, has been watching this flock of about 30 lambs and ewes. He is writing his master's thesis on the impact of human encroachment on the bighorn.

He has learned a lot of things about the habits and movements of the sheep through observation. He hoped to learn more after equipping the leader of the flock — a ewe he named Petunia — with a radio collar last July.

But on the 17th of September, when he went up the mountain to locate the animal, for the first time he could not find her. A few days later another bighorn benefactor found her dead. Evidence suggests that Petunia was shot by a poacher.

The California Department of Fish and Game is investigating the killing. Bighorns have been fully protected by law since the 19th century and the poacher, if caught, faces a maximum six-month jail sentence and-or $1,000 fine.

Desert bighorns once numbered in the millions in the Southwest, but in the last century most were slaughtered by settlers. Now they exist in scattered herds in remote desert and mountain regions.

Now, DeForge is no longer chronicling the orderly migration of a band of sheep. He is observing a case study in chaos. "Petunia called all the shots," says he. Without her, the sheep have scattered.

DeForge spent several days just trying to locate the leaderless band. Shunning their normal grazing country — a two-mile stretch of steep, relatively open, mountain terrain above the south fork of Lytle Creek — the ewes are hiding in the underbrush.

The flock appears to have no strong second-in-command. "No one has reorganized these animals," says DeForge. "If an animal other than the leader had been killed, we would see the bighorns in their customary grazing territory today."

Meanwhile, the breeding season is here. Bighorn rams — who spend the rest of the year about 15 miles east — have come looking for the ewes. So far, they have not located them, says DeForge. If they fail, no breeding will take place this year.

DeForge continues to go up the mountain, about every other day, to observe the sheeps' behavior. He plans to collar another animal when the breeding season has ended and the bighorns are calm. The information he is gaining, he hopes, will be used to make land-management decisions about areas containing bighorns.

"There is a stress level," says DeForge. "We are trying to understand what impact the sheep can take. We are trying to understand what will happen if we build a road where there are sheep. We are trying to understand their decline.

"If we can't understand the problem, we can't make decisions about future land use."

His opinion, at this stage of his research, is that bighorns need to be left alone to survive. "If people want bighorn sheep," he says, "they will have to give them solitude."

He examines all dead animals found in the area and has found that the sheep are prey to many previously undiscovered diseases and parasites. In particular, the bighorns are plagued by diseases introduced by domestic sheep.

The animals, DeForge believes, are losing the ability to disperse to new grazing areas as humans enter their habitat. Greater numbers of bighorns are concentrated in smaller areas. Says DeForge, "Disease is a secondary cause of death. The problem is overpopulation."

DeForge had hoped to confirm many of his preliminary findings by charting Petunia's movements, using her radio collar. The bighorn's protected status, he thinks, has inhibited research on the animal. "Our knowledge is so limited," he says. "You think you have a handle on it and then you realize you know nothing."

It took two years to win permission to collar one of the sheep. He received financial help from both Los Angeles and San Bernardino Counties, the Society for the Preservation of Bighorn Sheep and individual donations. More work went into designing the collar and perfecting a safe way to catch the sheep.

In July, DeForge and other sheep enthusiasts placed a leg snare on a path. Petunia was trapped. Working quickly, they dragged the 110-pound animal up the hill, took blood to test for disease (Petunia was in perfect health) and collared her. Her band waited a few hundred yards down the mountain.

Though the researchers handled the animal, she did not seem badly traumatized. She led her band down the mountain to the far extremes of its normal grazing area, but within three days the band returned, and even continued to use the path where she was captured.

DeForge found that the band did most of its grazing high on a steep, rocky area. Bighorn favor such terrain because their incredible sense of balance allows them to flee down the mountain faster than any predator. The flock journeyed down the mountain every two days to water.

"We got the patterns down so that we knew where the animals should be — and usually were — on any given day," says DeForge. "They seemed to be accepting our presence."

That all changed when Petunia was shot. Glen Sudmeier of the Society for the Conservation of Bighorn Sheep discovered the carcass. The animal's location and position convinced him she was shot. He notified the Department of Fish and Game who began inquiries. When they returned to pick up Petunia, they found that her rib cage had been removed.

Fish and Game authorities, who are investigating the case, believe that the poacher returned to the site and removed the rib cage. They theorize that the animal was shot in that part of her body and that the poacher wished to destroy the evidence. Fish and Game ballistics experts can match a spent bullet to a hunter's rifle.

Certain information about the shooting is being withheld in hopes of trapping the poacher.

Jack Traub of the Department of Fish and Game, the chief inspector for Southern California, says they have some leads. "Because of the relatively rare nature of this animal, we are giving this investigation a high priority." He adds that sometimes cases are solved as long as one year after the killing occurs.

A small band of rare desert bighorns survives in the San Gabriel Mountains east of Los Angeles and they are being studied by a Cal Poly-Pomona graduate student.

WEEKLY FISHING REPORT

Spence may swap in name for Lake Striper

Fishermen may be considering calling it Lake Striper instead of Lake E.V. Spence. Reports from the lake during the week showed every reporting fisherman caught striped bass.

There were a few channel catfish and yellows, but not one string was without striped bass from 2 to 8 ¾ pounds.

The lake also has become one of the best sources of supply for striped bass fries in the southwest, some 7 ½ million being hatched there this year. Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission biologists returned 30,000 fingerling striped bass to the lake just to make sure the fishing stays good.

Reports of catches from the lake include an 8 ¾ pound striper by David Burson, Haskell; Roger and Pat Moore and Cathy Murphy, Odessa, five stripers to 3 ½ pounds; Orville Smith, Pecos, a seven-pounder; Charles Travis, Lake Spence, five to 6 ¾; Don Douglas, Sand Springs, 2, 6 and 7; Henry Howell, Abilene, six-pounder; and Bonnie Bates, Odessa, two to 3 ½ and a 1 ¾ pound channel cat.

GOING TO the coast? Be advised that by July 15 most brown shrimp will have left Texas bays for the Gulf of Mexico in time for reopening of the Gulf shrimping season. The season has been closed since June 1 to give larval brown shrimp time to mature in bays and reach catchable size...

Some alert coastal fishermen may find that along with landing a good catch, they've hooked themselves an extra bonus. There are fish out there in the bays that carry tags worth up to $25.

To study migration patterns, TPWD biologists are tagging five game species: red drum, black drum, speckled trout, sheepshead and flounder. Important information can be gained as to growth and movement of fish if the tags are returned.

There are two kinds of tags in use. One, which is simpler but more likely to be lost, is pushed into the muscles and has a hanging red streamer. The method used most often is with an internal anchor. A disc is inserted through a slight incision in the center part of the abdomen and there is a visible yellow streamer.

MOST FISHERMEN keep up their hopes of one day landing a record-breaking fish. But although catches of that caliber are few and far between, the TPWD points out that there are other categories for which fishermen may receive recognition.

A fish big enough to be trophy size may not top the record, but still may earn a special certificate of Fishing Merit. If a sportsman catches a specimen that meets the minimum poundage requirement in any of 16 freshwater or saltwater categories, he may qualify.

All fish entered must have been taken by hook and line from Texas waters after Jan. 1, 1974. All fish must be measured for total length and weighed on inspected scale with a statememt of weight signed by a witness. The entrant must have hooked, fought and landed the fish.

Eligible categories and minimum weights include: spotted seatrout, 7 pounds; redfish from Gulf, 25; redfish from bays, 10; black drum 15; Southern flounder, 6; largemouth bass, 7; crappie, 3; white bass, 3; striped bass, 15; white hybrid bass, 6; channel cat, 12; blue cat 35; flathead cat, 50; walleye, 6; rainbow and brown trout, 2.

THE BIG bass of the Month Open tournament will be headquartered at Red Ackera Westside Bay on Farm Road 315 at Lake Palestine and will be held July 23-24.

The Open will see some lucky fisherman collect $1,000 for the heaviest two-day total of four bass over 14 inches in length. The total purse will include more than $3,000.

Entry fee is $7.50 per day for Big Bass of the Month members and $15 per day for none members. Entry forms are available at Big Bass, P.O. Box 125, Fort Worth, 76101.

Deep Sea Roundup scheduled

CORPUS CHRISTI — The season has arrived for fishing tournaments all along the South Texas coast, and the biggest of all in the Port Aransas Deep Sea Roundup Monday through Thursday.

More than 500 participants are expected at the seaside resort at the tip of Mustang Island, just 25 miles northeast of here.

Though the Deep Sea Roundup has a bay-surf division and a trophy for almost every kind of fish that swims in the Port Aransas waters, the winner almost always piles up points by catching marlin and sailfish.

The list of contestants includes anglers from bay, surf, piers and jetties who seek prizes for speckled trout, redfish, flounder and others.

Comcentration on the larger offshore fish, tuna, mako sharks, wahoo and billfish, has resulted in a 20-fathom line designated as the outside boundary for inshore competitors. Tackle counts, too. A fish caught on a line testing 12 pounds or less gets four times as many points as one testing 50 pounds or over.

Also scheduled for Port Aransas this summer are the Outboard Tournament July 22-24 and the Dean Hawn Memorial Marlin Tournament Aug. 11-13.

Spinnerbait's lure, bass just love it

Copley News Service

There's a case to be made these days for the spinnerbait, a relatively new weapon in the bass fisherman's arsenal.

It casts like an arrow. It sinks like a stone. It is virtually snag-proof. And it has a flash, a movement and an exaggerated size which tantalize and exhilarate bass.

Bass pros feel it is especially effective in drawing strikes in the spring and the fall when bass are most often in the shallows. But some use it as well in summer and winter.

IT IS at its zenith of popularity and efficiency in waters when the larger bass are roving the near waters and fanning nests for spawning.

A bass sees something with the movement and speed of a spinnerbait, and it attacks ferociously, jaws unhinged, like a pugnacious bulldog. The spinnerbait is seen as an intruder, something which must be destroyed.

The spinnerbait looks like an open safety pin with Colorado spinner blades flashing and chattering on the top arm and a large turned-up hook, usually hidden in a rubber hula skirt, riding on the bottom. Often a plastic worm hangs from the hook for more size and movement.

Usually the spinnerbait is around three-eighths of an ounce in weight and is thrown off 14- to 20-pound test monofilament with a conventional bait-casting reel.

IT CAN, however, be worked off spinning and spincast reels, though not with the hook-setting efficiency of a short, stiff, pistol-grip bait rod.

Here are some testimonials to spinnerbaits:

Dave Hawk, Texas fishing guide and author — — "Spinnerbaits, when allowed to sink to the depth desired and worked 'in' with a steady, constant, slow retrieve will entice many a love-smitten bass to commit suicide during the spawning season.

Al Lindner, Minnesota guide and pro fisherman — "I regard the spinnerbait mainly as a spring or fall lure, but it's effective, at times, in the summertime shallows. My belief is that the single-spin works better than the tandem in the summer. The spinnerbait is used mainly when the crank bait is too fast for fish and the plastic worm is too slow.

"I recommend yellow, chartreuse and white for most conditions in most places most of the time."

Roland Martin, Oklahoma pro basser — "I have five basic lure types and use them over and over because I know they work, provided the bass are there. Incidentally, I use smaller lures in winter than in summer ... In spring and fall I like a spinnerbait, fished one to five feet deep."

Boundary is confusing

DALLAS -- The safest thing a fisherman on Lake Texoma could do is buy both Texas and Oklahoma fishing licenses.

The two states lack reciprocal fishing license agreements and state boundaries on the big lake could be confusing to anglers.

A majority of Lake Texoma is in Oklahoma although a portion of the lake lies in Texas. The area immediately below Denison Dam especially is confusing, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department law enforcement officials.

A Texas fishing license is valid on the south side of the river below the dam from the power plant east to Shawnee Creek. But an Oklahoma license is required to fish east of Shawnee Creek.

Striped bass and hybrid white-striped bass bag and possession limits are the same between the two states, however. Currently the limit is three per day and six in possession on Lake Texoma.

Caujolle wins tennis title

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) — Jean-Francois Caujolle of France defeated Frank Gebert of West Germany 6-3, 6-3 Saturday to reach the finals of the $75,000 Swiss Open tennis championships.

The match was threatened by a rain storm that stopped the other semifinal between Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., and Thomas Smid of Czechoslovakia.

The women's final will be an all-Australian affair after Helen Cawley eliminated Mary Carillo of New York 4-6, 6-3, 6-0 and Lesley Hunt defeated Sabina Simmons, Italy, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 in Saturday's semifinals.

Danbury blaze speeds up probe of prison hazards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials are stepping up their investigation of fire hazards in the 37 U.S. prisons.

The investigation was launched after a Tennessee jail fire killed 34 inmates, but not in time to prevent the worst fire in federal prison history.

Director Norman A. Carlson of the Federal Bureau of Prisons ordered the nationwide study after the Maury County, Tenn., fire on June 26 but before the Thursday blaze at the Danbury, Conn., prison that killed five prisoners.

"After the fire in Tennessee, he (Carlson) was very concerned that we were doing everything we could to prevent any kind of tragedy," a bureau official said in an interview Friday.

Carlson ordered wardens of the 37 federal institutions to submit detailed reports about fire hazards in each facility.

He called the Thursday blaze the worst fire in federal prison history.

The five were inmates at a minimum-security institution. Eighty were injured as the flames spewed toxic fumes through a two-story dormitory. Two guards and four fire fighters also were hurt.

But that blaze was far from being the first. Three minor fires broke out in federal prisons in Morgantown, W. Va.; Petersburg, Va., and Terminal Island, Calif., last year. No one was injured in any of those fires and there was only limited damage.

The bureau official said investigations concluded that all three were set by inmates. Other small fires have occurred periodically in federal prisons over the years.

After the Danbury fire broke out, Carlson ordered the wardens of all other federal prisons to act "immediately to do whatever they can" to improve fire prevention and evacuation techniques, the official said.

He asked for the detailed reports by July 17, when top bureau officials and regional directors will discuss safety improvements at a conference in Denver.

The reports must include descriptions of plans for evacuating inmates, placement of fire extinguishers and the kind of fire fighting instructions given inmates and guards, the official said.

The reports also must include information on what if any toxic substances are used in the prisons, the official added.

Salute to Rep. Mahon

Persons sometimes are inclined to refer casually to this, that or the other thing as the end of an era — — but when Rep. George Mahon retires from the Congress of the United States at the end of next year, it truly will mark the end of an era.

The era will have extended back over a 44-year period — a period which has seen more changes, more progress, more discoveries, more advancements of all kinds than any similar or much longer period in history.

And George Mahon not only has witnessed these dynamic, dramatic events from his vantage point in Congress, he has had a hand in many of them, either directly or indirectly.

The West Texas congressman has served with eight Presidents, beginning with Franklin D. Roosevelt, and he has been a confidant to most of them, particularly in matters pertaining to finances, petroleum and agriculture.

And during this period, George Mahon, himself, has advanced from a freshman congressman from a newly created West Texas district to become one of the most popular, most highly respected, most powerful men in Congress, serving on and as chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations for many years. His tenure as chairman has been longer continuously than any other member in history.

Despite his high-ranking postion as dean of the Congress and as chairman of one of its most important committees, George Mahon remains the same kind, considerate, thoughtful, cooperative, friendly and modest person that he was when he went to Washington more than 40 years ago.

Unquestioned personal honesty and integrity, along with sincerity of purpose and an unswerving dedication to duty, mark George Mahon as a great American patriot.

He truly is an amazing person, one who has used his many talents in dedicated, distinguished service to his district and his nation. As someone has said, George Mahon is a "West Texaa legend."

It is no wonder then that so many persons here and elsewhere expressed sincere regret when, a few days ago, Chairman Mahon announced publicly that he would not be a candidate for re-election to the House of Representatives from the 19th Congressional District of Texas, which includes Midland, in 1978. He is, incidentally, the only representative the district has ever had.

Bill Clayton, speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, spoke for a lot of people when he said that Mahon's retirement announcement is "a sad occasion for West Texas."

Yet one certainly cannot blame the distinguished statesman for his decision to step down at the end of his present term after having served more than half a century in public office.

But neither can the people whom he has served so faithfully and well be blamed for expressing regret at his retirement. Having one of Congress' most influential members as one's representative is inclined to spoil one to a marked degree.

Think of the many facilities, agencies and what-have-you that Midland and other cities of the 19th District have as a result of Mr. Mahon's interest and untiring effort. The U.S. Courthouse-Post Office complex in Downtown Midland is an excellent example of what we are talking about. He also was instrumental in getting President Ford to come to Midland to dedicate the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame. Mr. Mahon never is too busy to see or to serve a caller from his district.

When asked what he planned to do after retirement, Mahon said he doesn't have time to think about that now. "For the next 18 months," he said, "I shall continue to give my full energy and devotion to the people of the 19th District and the nation."

His constituents here and elsewhere should get busy NOW in planning a meaningful round of appreciation events honoring George and Helen Mahon as THEY retire from active duty on Capitol Hill.

And that truly will be the end of an era.

BREAKTHROUGHS CITED:

Red China: A growing industrial power

By JAMES CARY
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite massive problems and intermittent power struggles, Communist China has laid the foundation for becoming a modern industrial power in the next two decades.

That is the view of Jan S. Prybyla, professor of economics at Pennsylvania State University.

He told the sixth Sino-American Conference on Mainland China here recently that China may have made a breakthrough in agriculture, has maintained an 11 per cent annual growth rate in industry and has great potential in oil production.

It is the surge in oil output — up from 1.5 million metric tons in 1957 to an estimated 75 million metric tons in 1975 — that many China specialists believe is the key to Peking's future needs.

In another conference address, Prof. Donald S. Zagoria of Hunter College said China might be able to earn $5 billion annually in oil exports by 1980 and perhaps $10 billion annually by 1985.

This would permit China to purchase the industrial equipment and technology abroad that it will need to become a modern industrial power. Present estimates are that oil production will rise to somewhere in the range of 150 million to 300 million metric tons annually by 1980.

This favorable potential, Prybyla acknowledges, is offset by ample indications of unrest and discontent on the mainland.

He cited reports of a rise in lawlessness, including bank robberies, and the brutal crackdown on such offenders by the post-Mao Tse-tung regime of Chairman Hua Kuo-feng.

Wall posters have reported some executions.

Then there is the repeated spectacle paraded before the Chinese people in recent years of yesterday's heroes becoming today's villains.

"This, plus the bickering and the lying and the fooling of the masses has become so gross and transparent as to raise serious questions about the amount of credibility left to the regime among the people," Prybyla said.

"By now cynicism, skepticism and disbelief must be rampant in the ranks of the masses despite dialectical conditioning."

Despite all this, however, he maintains "the possibility is real of the People's Republic of China becoming a modern industrial power in the next two decades."

His reasons are rooted in what he acknowledges is the murky area of attempting to make estimates of Communist Chinese production statistics. No figures believed to be authentic have been released by the PRC in 20 years.

Still the best information available — taken from U.S. government estimates — does present a picture of continuing growth.

In real terms China's gross national product — the sum of all goods and services produced — increased at an average annual rate of between 5 and 6 per cent annually from 1953 through 1976.

In U.S. dollars this totals about $250 billion to $300 billion annually or about $330 per capita, up from $90 per capita in 1950. The per-person measurement assumes the population is now 900 million.

The Republic of (Nationalist) China and South Korea have had higher growth rates but the mainland performance is better than some nations in Europe and by far better than most in Asia, including India and Burma.

Agriculture, although the weakest link in the economy, maintained a 2 to 3 per cent annual increase in production between 1953 and 1974 — with a surge up to a 4 per cent annual gain in the years 1971 to 1974.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Those white-hot red tape blues

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Each generation has its King George III — a home-grown demagogue if not a foreign despot; a corporate or union monopolist if not a slave holder. All have taken their turns at clipping the wings of freedom.

The ascendant danger of our day is the government bureaucrat. Because his services are many and indispensable, his threat to free choice is unique. His penetration of the control towers of our society is the deeper because it comes by lawful invitation; the more insidious because its aim is often benevolent; the more disarming because its weapons are paper clips; its fortresses are often unpretentious and its bully boys unmenacing, even friendly.

Yet King George III, in all his arrogance and panoply, never dared aspire to the power over us that has been quietly accumulated by the tyrant in the cubicle.

Not too long ago, we Americans were distinctive throughout the world as a breed of self-starters, innovators, doers. Now, bound up in red tape, we are being reduced to a nation of paper-shuffling petitioners, forever waiting for permission from some government office for our next step, continually putting aside the work of the world in order to fill out forms.

The complaints we receive paint a disturbing composite picture of an America increasingly immobilized by bureaucracy. A farmer's tractor stands idle in the corn fields while he struggles with crop reports for the Dept. of Agriculture. A would-be educator is bureaucratized, trying to master a 17-page instruction manual from the Office of Education on how to fill out 15-page applications for aid to needy students.

A plant manager is in a dither over safety regulations. The white lines he had painted on the shop floor to mark off aisles must be repainted yellow. The fire extinguishers fastened on the walls at a height of five feet must be lowered to four feet. In the lavatory, the old-style toilet seats must be replaced with the "split" model, and coat hangers must be put on the doors of the stalls. Meanwhile, the production line languishes.

A citizen who is no longer sure of his rights is on the way to the Internal Revenue office for an audit after wasting days of preparation and losing sleepless nights of worry. He is one of two million to be audited this year; two million Americans must explain and defend the trivia of their lives to the government.

Some of the cost of regulations can be measured in dollars, although with only rough accuracy. The cost of merely filling out government forms has been calculated at $40 billion a year. The direct and indirect cost of complying with projected regulations has been placed variously at between $120 billion and $180 billion.

General Motors claims that the documents it files in a typical year, in connection with the certification of its cars for sale, would make a stack 15 stories high. Well, General Motors has much to account for; but, on the other hand, the pioneer like old Henry Ford could not even dream of going into the car business today in a small garage without even a Xerox machine.

Many governnent regulations are necessary; many bureaucrats are effective public servants; few question that. But the aggregate picture produced by regulations-run-wild is whose substance is wasted and whose progress is dribbling to a halt.

What is needed is a national Declaration of Independence from the bureaucracy. We recommend consideration of the following general planks, fully realizing that some of them, after study, may prove insupportable:

First, the rampaging growth of regulation must be slowed. Politicians used to build reputations by getting laws passed; we must begin to judge them by the regulations they repeal and the agencies they liquidate.

— Sunset laws, by which each government agency is automatically terminated after five or 10 years unless it proves the case for its re-establishment, ought to be given tryouts.

— Before enacting a new law, Congress should require a harassment impact statement, which would seek to envision all the ways the laws could be administered that would plague the citizen. The ruling axiom should be that what is possible will, in fact, occur.

— To combat the time-honored practice by which money appropriated to aid the poor is diverted to the payrolls and perquisites of the bureaucracy, each new program should mandate a limit on the percentage that can go to administration.

Second, we must consider ways of emphasizing that the American citizen is a sovereign to be respected, and not a mere subject to be shunted around.

— Consideration should be given to government compensation of individuals and businesses of the cost of carrying out some, although not all, regulations.

— Certainly, the cost of complying should be estimated on all regulations and made public. All compensation in such cases should come out of the budget of the agency involved.

— Finally, measures must be taken to reduce the bureaucrat's feeling of splendid insulation from the people.

— Pay raises should no longer be automatic, according to an immutable public formula, free of public control.

— Dismissal fron the government payroll for poor performance should not be as difficult as it now is.

Mark Russell says

President Carter made good on a campaign promise and turned thumbs down on the B-1 bomber. A kept promise is such a rarity in Washington, they ought to declare it a national holiday.

Carter kept his word — a chicken in every pot and a B-1 bomber in every fantasy.

If anyone gets tough with us, we can always drop pictures of B-1 bombers on them.

The last time a President cut back on a weapons system was when Ulysses S. Grant told General Custer "That ought to be enough ammo to hold you for awhile."

Carter favors admission of Indochinese refugees

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — President Carter and the State Department want the United States to bring in more Indochinese refugees, especially the "boat people," stranded after escaping their homelands which have become Communist.

Oppression by Communist regimes in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, plus the hope of a better economic life, moved scores of thousands of people to flee to Thailand or put to sea in pitifully small boats, hoping that a ship would take them aboard.

The plight of the "boat people" is particularly sad because many ship captains, wanting to avoid inconvenience or even trouble back in home port, ignore the traditional law of the sea, and don't pick up the refugees.

Since the U.S. leadership in dealing with the problem (which largely belongs to us) has lagged, other nations which might be receptive have also turned the Indochinese away. Hence, the Carter Administration's tentative move to act out of a sense of duty and commitment to human rights.

But there is strong opposition in the Congress to increasing the number of Indochinese allowed to enter the United States above the present figure of 100 per month. Some 145,000 have come here since the fall of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia in 1975.

The most negative reaction to any proposal to admit more refugees comes from Rep. Joshua Eilberg, (D-Pa.), Chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration. He is dead set against allowing any more Indochinese refugees, without special legislation, something he knows Congress probably won't pass.

"It is one thing for the Justice Department to allow these people to come in on an individual basis," Eilberg says, "but large groups, say 400 or 500 a month, or the 15,000 mentioned, are something else. We have unemployment in the U.S. and a problem with illegal aliens. Additional Indochinese refugees would impact on our welfare system, health services and schools."

Now, Joshua Eilberg is a practicing Jew. He is sensitive to what happened to Jewish refugees from Hitler's Europe and from concentration camps, who also set out in ships to find sanctuaries somewhere. One such ship, later called "The Ship of the Damned," actually roamed the high seas just as World War II broke out, and was turned away by the U.S. government of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, no less. The ship wound up in Holland, and a third of its passengers eventually perished in concentration camps. In 1947, another ship loaded with Jewish refugees sailed into Tel Aviv, was turned back by the British and had to dock at Cyprus. That incident became the "Exodus" story.

"There is a rough parallel between the Jewish refugees and these people," admits Congressman Eilberg, who might still change his mind.

Recently, an Israeli freighter rescued 66 Vietnamese refugees floundering around the Pacific in a leaky fishing boat. They had been turned away by several Asian nations, but the Israelis accepted them. Ironically, it was a German Lufthansa plane which eventually landed with the 66 people in Tel Aviv.

"Jews know what it is to be a refugee, with every door being closed in one's face," said Prime Minister Menahem Begin. The Israelis deserve a salute for this one.

So here we are, big, fat, U.S.A., with a Congress ready to turn away suffering people who are refugees because of our actions in Indochina. The war had scarcely ended there, when all manner of selfish people here began protesting any plans to bring refugees to the United States.

The Seattle City Council even passed a resolution against admitting Indochinese refugees. Cartoonist Pat Oliphant, himself an Australian emigrant, drew scathing cartoons depicting the Vietnamese as a collection of pimps, prostitutes and gangsters. Somehow, the brown of Indochina suddenly became very unpopular.

Well, they are not low-life people. They are people who went through years of bloody war, saw many members of their own families killed, and feared the tyranny that moves in with communism. Like all people in such a fix, they fled.

They die on the high seas, and they die in refugee camps. When they do manage to get to the United States or France (which is generous), they live. It takes a while to adjust but the Indochinese actually have made a fairly good record here. Some 86 per cent of the breadwinners in Indochinese refugee families in the United States are working, full or part-time. They organized 139 Indochinese associations, try to help each other find jobs and maintain their culture.

The United States should guarantee the admission of 15,000 of the 80,000 refugees living in poor conditions in Thailand's camps. If we did that more of these refugees would be welcome in other countries. So far, the governments of Japan, Singapore and Malasia have turned the "boat people" away.

Bringing 15,000 Indochinese refugees to our country will not break us. It will make us stronger in the long run. It will demonstrate our integrity. Are we a nation of people who sit up late watching refugee ships being turned away in World War II movies, and remarking how awful that was? How about that, Congressman Eilberg?

ART BUCHWALD

Pollution runs its murky way

WASHINGTON — If a neighbor came into your house and started to poison your water you would immediately call the police, have the person arrested, press charges of attempted murder and do everything to see that he got sent away to the slammer for a long time.

But if a company poisons your water and also the fish and wildlife in your rivers and lakes there really isn't much you can do.

You could show up at the company office and say "I want to see the man in charge of poisoning the lake water in this community."

"We have no such person," the receptionist will reply.

"Then I want to see the guy in charge of this factory."

If you're lucky you may get in to see the junior vice-president, in charge of cranks.

"Why are you poisoning my water and making my family sick?" you might ask.

"I'm sorry. We have no idea what you're talking about."

"Loook out there. You see all that sludge pouring into the lake. Where the hell do you think it's going?"

"That's just a by-product of what we make here. We have to dispose of it some way."

"Why in the lake? Why can't you dispose of it some other way?"

"If we did it any other way we would have to charge more for the product and pass the cost on to the consumer. You wouldn't want us to do that would you?"

"I don't care what it costs the consumer. Why should I be poisoned because you can't figure out what to do with your sludge?"

"Our laboratory technicians have measured the waste from our plant and have assured us that there is no danger to anyone's health."

"Big deal. Suppose they came in with a report that it did endanger our health."

"Our technicians would never do that. They're scientists."

"Well, I'm going to go to the government and tell them you're poisoning the water."

"I wouldn't do it if I were you. If we had to close this plant we'd put 500 people out of work. You wouldn't want to be responsible for putting 500 people out of work, would you?"

"You mean my choice is drinking poisoned water or putting people on the unemployment rolls?"

"It will be on your conscience — not mine."

Let's suppose that you did go to the government and complain.

"Do you know that the Polluted Corporation is spewing millions of gallons of water into the lake?" you ask the government official.

"We're aware of it. We have a citation against them now."

"What does that mean?"

"It means they have to show cause as to what they're doing to stop polluting the lake."

"So?"

"They've taken it to court. As a matter of fact it's been in the courts for two years. They have very good lawyers."

"Why don't you arrest them and throw the whole gang in jail?"

"We can't do that. If they plead 'no contest' and promise to stop doing it we would accept it as a pledge of good faith. But if they fight it and then appeal, we have to let justice take its course."

"What does that mean?"

"They could be fined as much as $50,000."

"What's $50,000 to that corproation?"

"I know it's not much, but you can't send men to jail just for poisoning a lake."

"They're poisoning my family and everyone else around here. Isn't that a form of murder?"

"The courts don't consider it a crime. The only way the managers of the factory could be sent to jail is if the judge told them to stop it and they didn't. Then they could be held in contempt of court."

"And what do I do till then?"

"I would go and see the company and formally complain.

Full employment answer to crime?

(Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., is chairman of the House subcommittee on crime.)

By JOHN CONYERS JR.
Special to The Los Angeles Times

America's entire crime-fighting establishment is in near ruin, as are the premises about the nature of crime which underpin it. For years no one has had an original analysis of the problem, nor has anyone proposed an innovative solution.

And so, despite grand schemes and ever grander federal budgets to aid local police, such as those recommended by the last three chief executives, crime has gone ever upward.

Even though official statistics underreport crime (and ignore altogether crimes not committed in the streets), they do indicate the awesome trends. From 1965 to 1975, the murder rate with handguns increased 165 per cent; aggravated assault with handguns rose 195 per cent. During this same period, combined state and federal spending to fight crime shot up from $4.2 billion per year to more than $17.2 billion in 1975. Yet fear of crime is as great as ever.

Why must this be — in the most affluent society the world has known?

IF YOU TAKE a long look (and, for a moment, set aside morality), you quickly find one answer: Stealing has always been a means of redistributing the wealth. I'll grant you it has been a risky and inefficient technique, but who can deny that it has paid off for some practitioners?

The main difference between crime of the past and of the present is that more of it is going on now. Given this epidemic, our means of combatting crime makes little sense. Instead of taking the initiative and redistributing wealth in a fairer fashion, we arrest those who make the effort on their own and put them in prison — even though our experience of the past decade indicates that stricter law enforcement has little effect on the crime rate. (Capital punishment, mandatory and minimum sentencing satisfy the appetite of some for revenge, but do little else.)

This, of course, is just another way of saying that our society is reaping the bitter harvest of chronic unemployment and massive poverty in the cities. A young man in the ghetto quickly becomes aware that no one wants his talents. His immediate challenge is, then, to escape a life devoid of decent purpose and productiveness. Any means will do.

In central Detroit, where I grew up in the 1940s, 45 per cent of the students entering 10th grade graduated from high school. Today 44 per cent graduate. Fewer than half the black teen-agers looking for jobs in Detroit find one, so they turn to other means of support: taking numbers bets, pushing dope and trading in stolen property. These youngsters are pushed into a culture in which the criminal is someone to imitate — a cool, laid-back dude with an Eldorado, that visible sign of success and power in an otherwise barren world.

I SUBMIT THAT the question of crime is not, How do we reduce the crime rate in our cities? It is rather, How shall we reorder our cities so that crime is not a built-in part of the system?

After all, crime is not primarily caused by criminals, outlandish though that may sound. Crime in the aggregate is more fundamentally the product of desperation brought on by joblessness, poverty and community disintegration. Criminal acts multiply when a neighborhood or a city — even a nation — has so degenerated in its ability to provide for the well-being of people that individuals feel that stealing, mugging or selling dope is an acceptable means of survival. In short, crime is the economic and political consequence of a system rooted in indifference toward, an exploitation of, marginal and disadvantaged people.

When a community begins to be starved of the jobs, public institutions and social services it needs to survive (once a neighborhood is defined as a high-crime area, services disappear at an alarming rate), and when its members are so desperate they must fend for themselves — that's when a community loses the chance to flex enough political muscle to fight for the larger social goals necessary to effect a turnabout.

Meanwhile, law-abiding citizens become victims of criminals as well as crime-fighters:

—Victims of the numbers racketeers, loan sharks and dope pushers who prey on the despair and dreams of people without hope.

—Victims also of the massive and heavily armed police forces which every year suck up billions of dollars from the public purse, grow more and more to resemble occupying forces, and are increasingly used to destroy any indigenous political movements by which citizens might really attack the problems of crime in their neighborhoods.

FORTUNATELY, HOWEVER, citizen and neighborhood action groups across the country, struggling against great odds, have begun to make some headway.

However, these do not address the fundamental economic causes of crime in America. Depressions, high interest charges and scandalously high unemployment rates are not matters that city hails or neighborhood organizations can begin to tackle.

Therein lies the challenge to the incoming Administration. If this country is to eliminate the great bulk of its crime problem, President Carter must begin a thorough economic reorganization that ceases to waste human resources. The young and old, who are eager to work and produce, must be helped to find jobs paying livable wages. Without this minimum commitment, we have no prospect of solving America's crime problem and of restoring the community bonds that can reduce crime.

Full employment — I offer that as my idea for fighting crime. It is not exactly a grand scheme, but it certainly is better than spending ever more money on ever more ineffective police organizations.

POSITIVE THINKING

People can generate own happiness

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Do you want to be happy? Of course you do. Who doesn't? Here then is one important thing to know: Happiness depends mainly on the kind of thoughts we think.

All of us have the capacity to be happy, but we must discipline our thinking to attain it. We have to lift our own spirits. Once we realize this fact, and put it to work, we can have much more happiness.

Some people actually spend whole days brooding over disappointments, supposed disadvantages and grievances; pitying themselves; thinking how tough life is. This dismal thinking, of course, establishes more deeply the feeling of unhappiness.

On the other hand, there are people who have plenty of problems and yet by the attitude of their mind positively generate happiness.

Recently I stayed overnight in the home of an old friend in the Midwest. Before going to bed he asked me when I wanted to be up the next morning. "Well, I have to catch a nine o'clock plane," I replied, "so I'd better be up at seven. That's my usual rising hour anyway."

"I always get going at six-thirty," he declared. "How come you're so lazy?"

"All right, I'd just as soon get up at six-thirty, too. But I haven't an alarm clock. Will you wake me?"

"Don't worry," he assured me. "I will be up and I'll wake you. Go to sleep in confidence."

So I went to sleep in confidence. Next thing I knew I was roused from blissful slumber by the noise of my friend's voice outside my door. (That is just what is was: noise — although afterwards he insisted it was singing.) And the words he was shouting were, "Oh, what a beautiful morning . . ."

"Okay, okay," I implored him. "I'm awake. Quiet down!"

"It's a great day," he said. "Get up and get at it. God's in His heaven — All's right with the world." And off he went down the hall, still singing "Oh, what a beautiful morning . . ."

Sleepily I looked out the window. It was raining pitchforks.

In a few minutes I heard my friend calling from downstairs. "Hurry up and get down here. We have a wonderful breakfast for you." So I hurried and we sat down to breakfast. There were six of us. From the head of the table my host beamed at me and asked, "How are you, old boy?"

"Oh, I'm fine," I said. "How could I be otherwise around you?"

He then proceeded to ask each of us in turn, "What do you have to thank God for this morning?" When he asked his wife this question she looked tenderly at him and answered, "I thank God for you." Thereupon he rose and went around the table to her and gave her a big kiss on the cheek. By this time his enthusiasm had so transmitted itself to me that I too got up and kissed the lady on the cheek.

My friend then quoted some inspiring passages from the Bible and ended with an impromptu discourse on the wonders and opportunities of a new day. I looked out the window at the raindrops lying heavy on the shrubs, and the atmosphere was so happy in that house it seemed to me every raindrop reflected the glory of God.

I have known this man for years. He has had plenty of problems and trouble in his life. But even so, somewhere along the line he learned how to have happiness. He says his mother used to tell him, "You will never be any happier than you let God make you." He adds that he was a long time coming to the realization that he could take his own life in hand and make himself a happy man.

Aeschylus, first of the great ancient Greek dramatists whose plays are still performed today, declares, "Happiness comes from the health of the soul." What does that mean? Well, soul health involves goodwill instead of hate, outgoingness instead of selfishness and faith instead of doubt. To be happy it is quite important to get the soul in healthy condition.

To have health of soul the practice of joyous daily thanksgiving is most effective, as was demonstrated by my friend on that rainy morning. God can make you happy. Learn really to appreciate God's world and give thanks daily for your personal blessings. Think happy thoughts and do things that make other people happy. This is a great formula for real happiness, as you will discover by trying it.

'Outrageous rip-off'

To The Editor:

I write to ask what your paper's opinion is regarding Texas Electric Service Company's proposed rate increase formula of 23 per cent, and the effect this will have on the residents of this city.

Many people existing on Social Security can't afford any increases in any utilities due to the increasing costs of everything. Our good mayor apparently has not clarified his stand on this issue. I mean he has not, to my knowledge, said he will endorse the increase or say he is against an increase.

I think the newly established Public Utilities Commission should jump on this issue and get really involved. Personally, I can think of enough alternatives to reduce my electric bill by 23 per cent to offset any increase.

If all our energy conscious citizens felt the same, we could, as a group, negate any revenue to Texas Electric and stop this outrageous rip-off of the "poor" consumer caught in the squeeze of a fixed income and the ever increasing cost of living.

For 'free' restrooms

To The Editor:

Just having returned from a vacation trip to another part of the country and being in and out of several air terminals, I would like to propose that we remove the coin slots from the toilets in our restrooms at Midland Air Terminal. If anyone has ever observed a young mother searching around in her purse for a dime while holding one child in her arms and another by the hand, I don't believe they would feel the inconvenience and charge is justified.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth terminal, I observed a line of four people waiting for the "free" accommodation while three toilets went unused. If such is true in our air terminal, it would appear that this probably isn't a money-making project.

I feel that I pay a lot of taxes and much of my tax money is spent on many things I do not advocate; however, "free" restrooms is an item for which I would like to see my tax money spent.

TV, violence and the FCC

Editor's Note: The following article is an interview with Nicholas Johnson, former federal communications commissioner and now head of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, who says the television industry, parents and TV advertisers must share responsibility when it comes to regulating violence on TV.

Copley News Service

Nicholas Johnson

Question: We have heard a great deal about the violence in television. Isn't the solution really in the home?

Answer: When you have an industry like broadcasting with an impact on 100 million Americans a night, as President John F. Kennedy used to say, such great power carries great responsibility. Sure, one can say that people ought to turn it off, there is always the on and off switch and it is the parents' responsibility for what their children watch. But I think the broadcasting industry, like the newspaper industry, carries an enormous burden of political and social humanistic responsibility.

Q. What is your solution?

A. My solution has been private action because I prefer that to government action. I would always prefer a marketplace solution when that can be worked out. Business in general, big business in particular, opposes the free private enterprise system with more vigor than any other institutional group in our society.

It is very difficult to create a free enterprise system that will work when business comes to Washington in search of subsidies and bail-outs and participation. Business comes to Washington asking for business, not for less regulation.

Q. Are you saying business wants a strong FCC (Federal Communications Commission)?

A. The FCC was created because the broadcasting industry asked for it in 1920, and that great leader of the new left at the time, Herbert Hoover, let them have it. The reason is because the airlines wanted it. The reason that the Post Office has anything to do with the newspaper industry is because you want a second-class mailing privilege; you do not want to pay full postal rates.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Third proposal may add to quality of 'no-show'

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — As a matter of interest to the 30 or 40 per cent of the folks who'll turn out for it, there will be a special constitutional amendments election on Nov. 8.

Normally, such affairs attract slightly more interest than the reruns of "The Untouchables," but somewhat less than a neighborhood cat fight.

The patchwork nature of Texas' 101-year-old constitution is a matter of common knowledge (and has been deplored often enough by various groups).

Suffice it to say that up through 1976, 356 amendments had been proposed to the constitution — and 221 had been adopted.

Now there will be an opportunity to increase that number to 228, with seven proposals up for action.

Of those seven, only one seems likely to attract any great public interest — and that is the third proposal — which, coincidentally, was passed as SJR 3 by Sen. Jack Ogg, Houston.

That proposal is described as "relating to denial of bail to a person accused of a felony in certain circumstances."

Section 11 of the constitution now provides that "all prisoners shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses, when the proof is evident; but this provision shall not be so construed as to prevent bail after indictment . . ."

Another section (11a) provides for denial of bail in cases where a person has been convicted of multiple felonies.

Ogg's proposal would add cases where the felony involves "the use of a deadly weapon after being convicted of a prior felony" — retaining the present requirement that a person denied bail should be accorded a trial within 60 days.

Also added to the constitution would be a provision that appeals from such denials of bail would be given preferential hearings by the Court of Criminal Appeals.

First up on the Nov. 8 ballot will be SJR 18 by Sen. Bill Meier of Euless, to expand the present five-judge Court of Criminal Appeals to nine judges, who would be allowed to sit in panels of three to hear cases.

Second on the ballot will be SJR 13 by Sen. Lindon Williams, Houston, providing for an additional $200,000,000 for the Veterans Land Fund.

That will bring the total authorized under the Fund to $700,000,000. The program has been at a standstill for several years due to lack of money to make loans for land purchases.

Third, as mentioned earlier, is the denial-of-bail proposal, and fourth is SJR 5 by Sen. Lloyd Doggett, Austin, proposing tax relief for "cultural, historical, or natural history resources."

The amendment would allow the Legislature to provide for such property tax relief by law, or by authorizing political subdivisions to grant exemptions to "appropriate property."

Fifth up will be old SJR 19 by Sen. Bill Patman, Ganado.

That proposal would provide for formation of associations by producers of agricultural products.

Its main provisions are that the Legislature may authorize "formation of associations by producers of poultry, livestock, and other raw agricultural or marine commodities for the collection of assessments on their product sales voted by the producers."

Sixth is Dallas Sen. Ike Harris' SJR 49, allowing lawmakers to provide for state and national banks to use "electronic devices" for "banking and discounting privileges, and other privileges which are incidental to banking."

Since Texas is a "unit banking" rather than a "branch banking" state, that amendment is needed to allow the use of the electronic funds transfer system devices, which are expected to be increasingly common throughout the nation soon.

And last, and perhaps least, to most folks, is SJR 30 by Ogg, changing the name of the State Judicial Qualifications Commission to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, and adding members.

So there's the preview — the show (or no-show) will be in four months.

Ruta Lee plays Annie Oakley and Scot Stewart has the role of Frank Butler in Casa Manana's new production of "Annie Get Your Gun," opening Monday night at Fort Worth's famed theater-in-the-round. Performances will continue through July 23.

Casa Manana welcomes return of actress Ruta Lee

FORT WORTH — Actress Ruta Lee, a longtime favorite with Casa Manana audiences, this week returns to the stage of Fort Worth's theater-in-the-round as Annie Oakley, the famous shootin' gal who could hit two-inch flying spheres by taking aim at their reflection in a Bowie knife blade.

Along with the razzle-dazzle of Irving Berlin's most successful musical, Casa Manana will shine even brighter with the sparkle of a talented supporting cast, including Scot Stewart in the role of Frank Butler, the man whom Annie loves but nearly loses because she surpasses him at marksmanship.

Annie's and Frank's rivalry is celebrated in one of Irving Berlin's wittiest songs, "Anything You Can Do, I Can Do Better," a duet in which they not only boast of outdoing each other at precision in riflery, but also in talking faster, singing sweeter and louder, and buying things cheaper. Their reconciliation is signaled in still another famous Berlin song, Annie's "You Can't Get a Man With a Gun."

Also featured in Casa's new production of "Annie" are Rose-Mary Rumbley as Dolly Tate and Kenny Adams as Charlie Davenport.

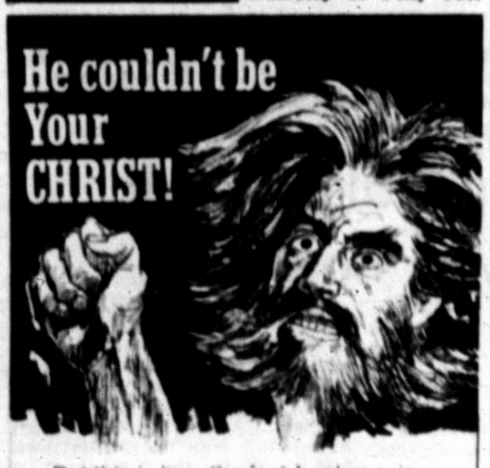

Others in the current cast of "Annie" are Gene Ross as Chief Sitting Bull, Aian Klem as Pawnee Bill, George Stephens as Col. William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody. Joining them in supporting parts are Craig Dickerson, Leslie Rosen, Angie Kuhn, David James, Richard Showmaker, Jennifer Kangenstein, Phil Pattinson, Missy Johnson, Roseanne Gunn, Darla Robertson, Veronica Qualls, Gail Pennington, Randy Salavar and Kenneth Slaughter.

Florine "Cissy" Pulley has stepped up to the director's role for this production. Now in her 16th summer season at Casa Manana, she has been production stage manager for the theater for the past several years. Co-producers of "Annie" are Bud Franks and Jack Bunch. Joseph Stecko is musical director and conductor. Ed Karrigan of Los Angeles has provided the choreography. Scenic design is by Charles Kading.

"Annie Get You Gun" will open at 8:15 p.m. Monday, to run through July 23. Performances are at 8:15 daily except Sunday, with Saturday matinees at 2:30. All seats are reserved, and tickets may be ordered through the Casa Manana box office, 817-332-6221.

Players plan entertaining history lesson

A new play recounting the fun-filled adventures of Pecos Bill, a true West Texas hero, comes to the Theatre Centre stage this week as the Pickwick Players' second production of the current summer season.

The Pickwick Players, the young people's performing company at Midland Community Theatre, will present "Pecos Bill" in performances at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Reserved seat tickets for all performances will go on sale at Theatre Centre Monday morning.

"Pecos Bill" was written by Deanna Dunigan of Monahans, an actress, singer and former teacher in the Midland public schools. She has performed in Midland Community Theatre and Globe Theatre productions.

Legendary Pecos Bill was raised by coyotes, and they taught him how to be tough. The fun in the play begins when the other cowboys teach Bill how to be human and not a coyote. Then, figuring that Bill is unaware of human ways, they attempt to trick him, but the joke turns out to be on them. Because Pecos Bill turns out to be a true Texas hero, showing the other wranglers beyond a doubt there is nothing he can't do better than anyone else around.

"Pecos Bill" is directed by Randy Bonifay, MCT's new technical director. Karen Holmen is stage-managing the production. Scott Morris and Rhonda Huxman are in charge of sound effects, Mark Gillaspia is handling lighting and projections are handled by Barry Fleming.

Heading the cast is Jody Youngblood as Pecos Bill himself, with Greg Hancock as Texas Tom, Mike Harrell as Curly, Lee Mason as Gun Smith, Kelly Patterson as Big Foot Wallace, Mark Andrade as Jalapeno Pete, Murlin Whitten as Mushmouth Mike, Chris Sullivan as Eye-Glass Englishman. Still other cast members are Brenda Woods as Betsy, Beverly Mitchell as Jenny, Marian Olson as Juanita, Judy McDuffy as Clementine, Mary Christensen as Slue-Foot Sue and Melinda McLain as Lady Faintly.

Frampton group schedules visit

LUBBOCK — The Mac Frampton Triumvirate, an instrumental trio, will perform at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the University Center theater on the Texas Tech campus.

The concert is presented under auspices of the University Center, with tickets priced at $4 for the public, $3 for Tech students. They will be available at the doors Thursday night.

Mac Frampton is described as a "unique musical experience." Supported by bass and drums, he brings to the piano keyboard the restless versatility of a searching, dynamic talent that refuses to be pinned down by a label. Rock, pop, jass and classical music — his music has elements of all these plus an exuberant style and energy that is uniquely his.

Frampton's musical studies were at Erskine College and the Cincinnati Conservatory. He gained national prominence as a Bronze Medal winner in the 1969 Van Cliburn International Piano Competition. He has been performing professionally since age 7 and has appeared with several of the nation's leading symphonies.

Santa Fe plans Debussy opera

SANTA FE, N. M. — "Pelleas and Melisande," Claude Debussy's only opera, will be presented in six performances during the current season of the Santa Fe Opera.

The first performance will be at 9 p.m. (MDT) Saturday, with repeat presentations on July 20 and Aug. 2, 11, 19 and 24.

"Pelleas and Melisande" was first presented at Santa Fe in 1972, with tremendous success. The production had high critical acclaim and it was well received by the public as well, with all performances sold out.

The 1977 production features an entirely new cast, headed by lovely Evelyn Mandac in the role of Melisande. "This is my second Melisande," Miss Mandac said here recently. "I sang my first one in Rome and the director was delighted with my long black hair — he had always wanted to have a black-haired Melisande. But during the dress rehearsal we found it didn't work; my hair faded into the background and I looked bald. So I became a blonde Melisande which I will be here also. The Philippine-born Miss Mandac went on to say that "we are going to capitalize on my Oriental eyes. After all, no one knows where Melisande comes from; she is mysterious, exotic and very frightened when she is found by Golaud in the very beginning of the opera."

Stage director Bliss Hebert describes the opera as "a fairytale," explaining "there is a lost princess who marries a much older prince and then falls in love with a younger prince." Hebert and Robert Baustian, who will conduct all "Pelleas and Melisande" performances, agree that this opera goes back to what opera was intended to be in the days of Monteverdi: "It's heightened speech with music, closely following the drama, with the orchestra providing the musical continuity."

Joining Miss Mandoc in pivotal roles in the opera are baritone Leunus Carlson as Golaud and bass Ara Berberian as Arkel, the king. Jean Kraft will sing Genevieve and William Dasby has the part of the Doctor. Young Adam Guettel, grandson of Broadway's eminent composer Richard Rodgers, will be in the role of the boy Yniold. Guettel has sung the role in a New York City Opera production of "Pelleas" and will next sing it at the Metropolitan Opera.

Information on availability of seating for specific performances of "Pelleas and Melisande" may be obtained from the Santa Fe Opera box office, 505-982-3851.

Midland artist opens Roswell exhibition

ROSWELL, N. M. — Midland artist Dorothy Peterson is opening a new show at Roswell's Territorial Gallery, 214 E. 5th St.

The exhibition of approximately 40 new works includes graphics and oil and watercolor paintings. The collection will be on view here through Aug. 5.

A public preview and reception will be held between 2 and 4 p.m. (MDT) today at the gallery to open the show.

Mrs. Peterson, a native of New Mexico and graduate of the University of New Mexico, has had several previous shows at the Territorial Gallery. She has exhibited in numerous juried exhibitions in the Southwest and elsewhere and has had solo shows in West Texas, New Mexico and in other areas. She is active in Midland Arts Association and has taught painting courses at Midland College. She is completing work on a master's degree at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Old methods

Centuries-old techniques still prevail in some wine making areas. One is the testing of the color and clarity of wine by placing a glass of wine before a candle's flame. In times past, the candle was housed in a wooden box resembling a birdhouse, but that is no longer used.

Globe to open Goldsmith farce

ODESSA — "She Stoops to Conquer," a frisky and hilarious farce by Oliver Goldsmith, opens at the Globe of the Great Southwest late this week.

The comedy, which will have its initial performance here Saturday night, will join two Shakespearean productions, "Measure for Measure" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona," in performances through Aug. 21 during the Globe's ninth annual Summer Festival.

Saturday's opening performance will be preceded by festive activities in the Globe courtyard. Theatergoers will be served "Tidbits from the Earl of Sandwich," including roast beef sandwiches and enticing English tidbits with such intriguing names as "toads-in-the-hole" and shaking pudding. The mini-meal is being provided through the courtesy of the five banks of Odessa.

"She Stoops to Conquer," guest-directed by Durward Jacobs, is a classic mixture of low comedy and high farce — a cheerfully absurd lark involving mistaken identities, missing jewels and unsympathetic guardians.

Heading the cast is Bob Gibson as the brattish Tony Lumpkin who sets the action in motion by misdirecting a couple of young men to a private home with the impression that it is a public inn. Lissa LeGrand will portray the refined Kate Hardcastle, who stoops to posing as a menial in order to conquer the heart of the young man she loves. Ken Stacker will play the alternately arrogant and reticent young man, Marlow, and Billy Nelson has the role of his friend Hastings.

Other players include Vincent Niemann as Squire Hardcastle, Eloise Bruce as Mrs. Hardcastle, Janet Stanford as Constance Neville and Rodney Clark as Sir Charles Marlow. Still others in the large cast are John Amedro, James Bottom, Rhonda Clark, Peter Nichols, Patrick Rowan, Russ Odom and John Cranford.

Until Saturday's opening of "She Stoops to Conquer," the Globe will be offering alternating performances of "Measure for Measure" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

A matinee at 2:30 p.m. today offer a performance of "Gentlemen." The theater is dark on Monday and Tuesday nights, and on Wednesday night, "Measure" will be presented. Thursday's attraction will be "Gentlemen," and the Friday night presentation will be "Measure." All weeknight performances begin at 8. Tickets are on sale at the box office in advance of each performance, priced $4 for adults, $2 for students. The Globe offers a 25 per cent discount to groups of 20 or more persons.

Network asks news review of new Kennedy docu-drama

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Docu-dramas on TV claim to re-create actual events. But they occasionally are accused of distorting history to heighten drama, of offering surmise as 100-proof fact.

Worried about this and the growth of docu-drama as a form of evening entertainment programming, CBS-TV chief Robert Wussler has taken an unusual step with a planned TV movie, "Four Days in Dallas."

He says CBS News will review it for accuracy.

"Dallas," about the 1963 slaying of President John F. Kennedy, traces the last days of accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald and of club owner Jack Ruby, who fatally shot Oswald after JFK's death.

Wussler, who during a 15-year stint as a CBS News producer helped prepare reports on Kennedy's assassination, says CBS News won't be asked to say if the show should or shouldn't air.

But he says if there's any doubt about the film's accuracy, its broadcast — scheduled for next spring — will be delayed and corrections made, or it will be postponed indefinitely.

He said "Dallas" is based in large part on the Warren Report, which found that Oswald acted alone in killing Kennedy.

But he said involving CBS News in a review of this basically entertainment project wasn't prompted by fears of "fairness time" demands from critics who dispute the report's findings.

"No, it was not," he said by phone from New York. "It was prompted by our viewing of docu-dramas of other networks that we felt were major steps toward a revisionist theory of history."

He also said he didn't want children who watch docu-dramas to grow up with an erroneous view of history, noting that when kids see things on the tube "they think that's the real world.

"If we start doing historical things and we're loose with the facts, I think it's going to come back and haunt us, both from TV critics and people in the government."

Wussler, the only current network head with a news background, was asked if a CBS News review of docu-dramas will become the network's standard operating procedure for such programs.

"No," he said. It'll happen only "when we decide to go forward with a sensitive subject, a subject of public concern which still may be ... an open matter or open controversy.

"Then we'll ask the president of our news division (Richard S. Salant) or other experts there about it. We don't want to put them in the position of making final judgments...

"But we certainly will seek out their thoughts on the subject matter and, having spent 15 years at CBS News, I think it'd be a very good idea to see how they felt.

"The most important thing is, I don't want to be responsible for rewriting history."

Film editor takes stand against summer TV reruns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reruns bug many viewers. But in May 1972, Bernard Balmuth, a film editor here, did more than gripe about them.

He petitioned the Federal Communications Commission to limit network repeats to a "maximum of 25 per cent of the allotted prime evening time during a specified television year."

"At the time I filed it, we had figured more than 42 per cent of the network prime-time programming was reruns," he said. "I did it mainly because I was getting irritated as a viewer.

"But I also felt that all those reruns were hurting employment here and more than that, hurting creativity."

Alas, for Balmuth, 59, of North Hollywood, he lost the Great Rerun War last July. The FCC refused to act, calling the dispute a matter that should be settled on the open market, not by government.

It didn't please him, naturally. But he says he's heartened that this season, particularly in what used to be the old March-June rerun doldrums, he saw more new shows and miniseries on the air at night.

"I believe that if anybody took a survey they'd find that reruns have greatly diminished because of the miniseries," he said. "Now whether the networks will continue this remains to be seen.

"They could simply go back to their old habits of a lot of reruns because they don't want to give up their profits. But I think they've gotten a bit of public reaction to so many reruns ...

"Maybe they've realized that audiences aren't staying with them in the rerun period as much as before. It takes an audience a long time to show a reaction."

Balmuth's 1972 petition contended that reruns deprived those in TV production here of work for up to six months a year. But with fewer reruns now, he said, the viewing isn't the only thing that's improved.

"All one has to do is look at the employment picture here as an indication of the amount of new programs being shot," he said. "It's the best it's been in 10 or 15 years."

Circus tickets on sale

LUBBOCK — The 106th edition of "The Greatest Show on Earth," Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, comes to Lubbock for a series of performances in early August.

The circus' opening performance in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum will be at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 5. Repeats are scheduled for 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 6, and 1:30 and 5:30 p.m. on Sunday, the 7th.

Tickets for all performances are now on sale by mail from P. O. Box 5486, Lubbock 79417, and also are available at several outlets in Lubbock, including the coliseum box office and Furr's Family Center. Ticket prices are $4, $5 and $6. The 11 a.m. performance on Saturday, Aug. 6 will offer a $1 discount on tickets for children under age 12. Additional information is obtainable by telephoning 806-762-4616.

BOLEY, Okla. — Miss Black Oklahoma—Miss Black Texas and Miss Black New Mexico all were in attendance at the National Convention of the NAACP in St. Louis the past week. This is the first in a series describing in part their lives and personalities as told to this correspondent.

Representing the largest all-black town in Oklahoma and perhaps in the nation, Pinkie Alexander was recently crowned Miss Black Oklahoma in the Myriad Convention Center in Oklahoma City out of a field of fourteen contestants from over the state. The National Miss Black America Pageant will be held in Hollywood, Calif., Sept., 9. Thirty girls from over the nation will be competing in the event.

In addition to receiving an all expense trip to the National NAACP Convention, Miss Alexander was awarded a $500.00 scholarship, $400.00 in expense money and other valuable gifts. Pinkie is the daughter of Mr. Mrs. Marvin Alexander of Boley and a 1973 graduate of Boley High School. She graduated from Langston University in the spring of 1977. She was active in all phases of campus activity.

U.S. Rep. Ted Risenhoover recently announced a grant of $365,000 to the City of Boley. The EDA announced the grant for redeveloping the downtown area, to renovate three of the town's most historic building sites, an enlarged water reservoir and street resurfacing. Official word received by this correspondent is that it will cost at least $10 million dollars to restore Boley as it was in early days and perhaps more to make it an Official National Afro-American Park.

Where to go after Roots? that is the question that George Stanford Brown is asking after his portrayal of Tom, the blacksmith descendant of Kunta Kinte which won for him an Emmy nomination. Brown, who also starred in the four-year-long police series, The Rookies, says TV has few dramatic roles for blacks.

"We have no place to go as black performers. It's not that we don't have the feelings or don't have the training or that we can't. Roots proved that. Brown is 34 and was in New York recently to see his mother and friends. He lives in Benedict Canyon, Los Angeles, with his wife, actress Tyne Daly, and their two daughters.

"I want to do Restoration. I want to do more shakespeare. I would like to play Hamlet. Because I'm a person of color and because I'm an actor. I must do it." Born in Cuba and raised in Spanish Harlem, he was a high school dropout at 16.

Brown, like many others, feels that Roots is the most important thing that has happened to commercial television and may signal a new openness in network dramas.

Too Much Wheat: Two key Oklahoma wheat leaders recently urged the Carter administration to require wheat farmers to take at least 20 per cent of their land out of production next year to help combat a crippling surpus. "We may need to talk about 40 or 50 per cent because there's no need to talk about producing at a loss," Don Dudley, executive director of the Oklahoma Wheat Commission. And now we crank up the old Dodge and head from Oklahoma to our beloved adopted homeland of West Texas and Southern New Mexico before heading back to Dallas to resume our vacation.

Peace, Bellringers.

Lock, stock and barrel

SPRAGUE RIVER, Ore. (AP) — Donald and Alice Humphrey of Richmond, Calif., reported "stolen properties" this week to the Klamath County sheriff.

The Humphreys, who returned to their vacation home site near Sprague River after a two-year absence, found that thieves had made off with the entire house, an outhouse, a deck for tents and an animal pen.

The couple said the 12-by-16foot vacation home had an upstairs sleeping loft, gas refrigerator, bathtub, table and two benches plus the 12-by-12-foot tent deck and a calf pen.

Dallas developers reveal plans for medical complex in Midland

Plans for a "medical office condominium" to serve Midland were announced Friday by Eddie Clark of Clark Brothers of Dallas, developers of the project.

According to Clark, the 47,000 square foot complex will be located South of Wadley Road on Garfield, and construction should begin around the first of November.

Clark said the three story building, called Woodhill Medical Park of Midland, will be constructed of steel, concrete and masonry and will provide parking for 208 cars with 62 underground parking spaces for doctors and staff.

The condominium type complex will allow doctors to purchase office space as small as 700 square feet, and will offer such amenities as underground parking for doctors and staff and a fully equipped health club with sauna, showers, gym, racquetball court and whirlpool.

The condiminium type complex offers doctors such advantages as owning their own office space that they can sell at a later date, tax advamtages from owning property and having the building's owners take care of maintenance, Clark said.

"Most doctors prefer to own offices, but they don't have the time to look for or plan a building. That is not his business," Clark said.

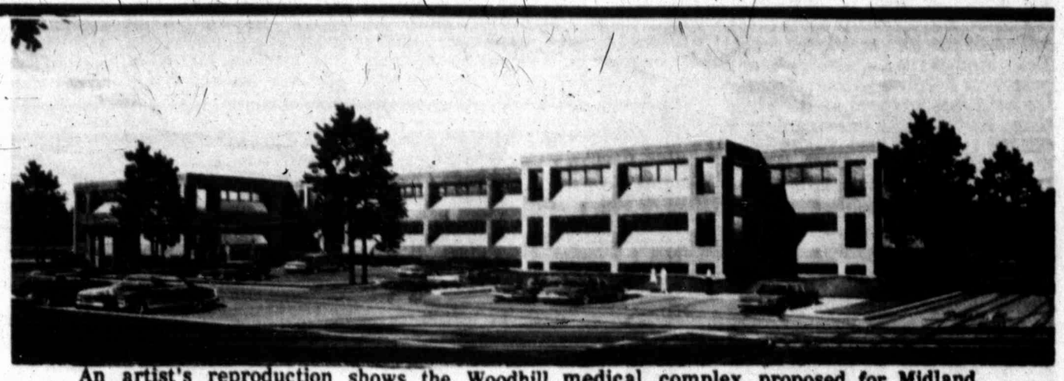

Clark added that his company will assist doctors in making sure the office is built to his specifications and will also help to secure financing if it is desired.

Midland was picked as a site for the project because the city lacks quality office space, Clark said.

Clark Brothers has developed a similar project in Dallas, which was at one time the largest medical condiminium in the U.S. and is still the largest in the Southwest, he added.

The company purchased the land from Mrs. Dee Jones of Midland after they were encouraged to build a Woodhill complex when Mrs. Jones and several Midland doctors visited the complex in Dallas.

Architects for the Midland project are Thompson-Parkey Associates, Inc. of Dallas, and construction will be by Stewart Clark Construction Company, Inc.

An artist's reproduction shows the Woodhill medical complex proposed for Midland.

Bank, savings accounts affect SSI eligibility

ODESSA — It is very important that people tell Social Security how much cash they have in checking or savings accounts when they apply for supplemental security income (SSI) payments, according to Erven L. Fisher Jr., social security district manager here.

"Many people have been found ineligible for SSI checks because of money in their checking or savings accounts and have had to pay back the SSI payments they received," Fisher said.

The SSI program, administered by the Social Security Administration, makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or over or blind or disabled. To be eligible, people generally can have resources of $1,500 or less for one person and $2,250 for a couple, including cash in checking or savings accounts.

Failure to report resources in checking or savings accounts is one of the most common causes of SSI payment error, according to Fisher.

"If we don't know about people's resources over the limit," he said, "we may incorrectly find them eligible for SSI checks. Later, when we learn of cash over the limit in their accounts, they have to pay back the SSI payments, which can be a problem."

'Ring My Love With Diamonds,' Part 1

'Not Too Hot to Handle'

A cache of 32 diamonds worth half a million dollars isn't exactly ice cubes. Yet mod-maned jewelry-store proprietor J. Trevor Laneer, victim of the heist, has wrapped up the whole thing. He figures he was rooked by a trusted employe, Anne Farley, who disappeared with her loot into thin air . . . the insurance company anted up — albeit too little and very late . . . and that closes the case. Or does it?

In this first of a four-part mystery, storyteller John D. MacDonald, creator of the Travis McGee series, weaves a tale of ingenious crime — filled with the special insights into human fear, greed and passion that are his hallmark. He introduces his latest character, cocky private-eye "Duke" Rhoades, who as you will see has a sense of humor when it comes to cool-blonds . . . except when they're mixed up with hot ice.

I am not an expert on diamonds. I am pretty good at recovering stolen goods. I have had a lot of luck. Equity used to loan me out all over hell and gone until I got smart and set myself up as a consultant. A piece of the action is always better.

This time, Equity was paying for my services. First time for them. I thought they were going to stay mad forever.

They briefed me and I left with the 32 big color prints of the 32 missing items. They had them made from the color slides the jeweler took of his merchandise, everything worth over $300. For insurance purposes. A neat and orderly man, and a camera buff. Nice pictures. With a scale next to the item, and technical data on a separate sheet.

Equity is at Park and 55th. I walked down to 48th, four doors west of Fifth Avenue, and waited until Wally Marks got through talking to some fat men from Amsterdam.

He is a totally hairless man. No eyebrows, eyelashes or hair on the knuckles, even. I think it was a disease he once had. He told me I looked bigger than he remembered; and I said I was actually smaller because, lately, I had more chances to work out. The idea of working out pained him.

STAKES ARE HIGH

I sat across the desk as he went through the 32 pictures and 32 sets of technical information. I tried to read him as he studied them. No way. A man who makes his living buying and selling diamonds is in a poker game every day. If you can read him, he goes broke.

"Flawless stuff," I said.

He shrugged. "No such thing exists. All flawless means, according to FTC regulations, is that you can't see any flaws with a 10-power glass. But, at 40 diopters, you'll see flaws. If I believe what it says here about cut and color and mounting, what you have here, Duke, is maybe $600,000 wholesale."

"You are $20,000 higher than the insurance payoff."

"Payoff?" He was startled.

"After six months of delays and some threats of legal action, good old Equity paid off."

"Who got ripped?"

"Wescott and Sons. In Atlanta."

He nodded. "Fancy place. Big stock. Hell, Duke, it would have to be a big stock." He stared at his low ceiling for a few moments, fingers laced across his belly. "What somebody did," he said at last, "they winnowed out the top standard items. Blue whites and whites. Your classic, standard cuts. The biggest you've got here is 4.19 carats. Quality, but anonymous quality. Some you could leave right in the settings.

"This one, for example. What you've got here is an eight-millimeter-round brilliant cut, two and a half carat, blue-white, hand-crafted platinum setting, with two fair size baguettes. I could move that tomorrow, as is, for 16 thousand five without a fear in the world. But a lot of them would have to come out of the settings. Nobody took this stuff with the idea of selling it back to Equity."

"So they finally decided."

"Somebody has a channel to feed this stuff right back into the industry. Somebody had a lot of time in the vault to select these items and leave the fancy cuts behind. There's no junk here. All these stones are saleable and probably already sold."

"Somebody had a couple months in the vault."

For an instant, he looked startled and then said, "One of those, huh? Made substitutions?"

I took out my pocket notebook to make sure of the name. "Anne Farley. Trusted employe. Apparently, she sneaked the photos and descriptions out, one at a time, and had pretty fair dupes made — good enough to fool the ignorant eye — saved them until the manager was away from the shop, switched the 32 items and took off."

I had one of the substitute items given me by Equity and I put it in front of him. A solitaire. He pushed at it with a thick white finger and said, "Garbage."

"Workmanship?"

He picked it up. "Pretty good. Not bad."

"Can it be traced by the workmanship?"

"Sure. Maybe 15,000 guys could do this, in THIS country. Ask them all. Has to be one of them."

"Very funny."

"Duke, somebody is laughing. Somebody made off with a half million in diamonds. Nice thing about them is there is hardly any bulk at all. All the great diamonds of the world would fit in one suitcase, and you could walk away with it. But it is an artificial market. Don't invest for investment. Buy for pretty."

"What's wrong with investment?"

"Where they mine them, the countries are unstable. If they decide not to deal with the cartel, they could bust the price down to maybe 10 per cent of where it is. Fake scarcity keeps the price up."

"Wally, what do I owe you for your time and advice?"

"Owe? Don't talk about owe. Just tell me how you make out. On this one, you are going to swing and miss."

"That's what Equity hopes. Then again, maybe they don't. It's their money."

FUTURISTIC SETTING

Wescott and Sons was in a new hotel, bank, office building, shopping plaza and park complex — one of those places that look as if it had been designed for the elegant people of some remote time in the future. But until the future arrives, they will let us barbarians blunder around, hawking and spitting, gawping and exclaiming, spending all our money and forgetting where we left our car.

The jewelry store had two entrances, one onto an exclusive little mall, the other opening into a corner of the lobby of a luxury hotel. The display windows, both in the lobby and on the mall, were little niches set behind a reflectionless curve of armored glass, where single items of great value rested on velvet, illuminated by the narrow beams from concealed spotlights.

The interior was deeply carpeted in a tufted blue. Ceiling spots shone down on glass cases, on the twinkle of gold watches, bracelets, chains and charms, on the polished silver of cigaret cases, wedding gifts and baby presents. There were other customers. The clerks were slender, pretty women, all dressed in gray skirts and white shirtwaist blouses with gold cuff links.

A young one came to me and murmured shyly of her great wish to help me in any possible way. I said I would like to see the manager, Trevor Laneer, and she asked what about, and I said that it concerned Equity Protection and the recent settlement.

She went away with my business card and came back in three minutes and begged me to please follow her.

Laneer stood up from his leather furniture and shook my hand. He was 50 trying to look 30. Mod clothes, bright blue contact lenses, $40 hair-styling and a bandito mustache. But the pouches under the eyes, the turkey neck and the brown spots on the backs of his hands gave him away. His office was like an alcove in a club lounge. No desk. Clever diorama of an English countryside. He waved me down into a deep leather chair and smiled and said, "Now then! How may I help you, Mr. Rhoades?"

"I'd like to ask you some questions about the robbery last year."

TALE OF WOE

His smile faded but slightly. He shook his head from side to side, almost regretfully. "Oh, I am sorry, Mr. Rhoades, but that is impossible. It really is. Five different people — two of them from Equity Protection — questioned me at great length over a period of many weeks, you know. They extracted every scrap of information from me. Surely all that material is on record; and, if you have a legitimate purpose in all this, surely it will be available to you.

"Frankly, I am sick unto death of it. I was deceived by a person I trusted. It took FAR too long to get the insurance settlement. I feel I was treated badly. I needed money to replace stock. I deal with some very affluent people, and I cannot afford to have a stock so skimpy they get in the habit of going elsewhere. No, Mr. Rhoades. To me, it is a closed book. And don't quote the policy to me, the part about reasonable cooperation. I HAVE cooperated. All I am going to. It is over. It cost the business $12,000 in interest on borrowed money to replenish my stock. I had to borrow against the settlement. I do not feel kindly toward Equity. Good day, sir." He stood up and motioned toward the door.

I walked out of his office but not out of the store. I shopped the cases, looking at golden goodies, waving away the shirtwaisted clerks until the one who had caught my eye drifted close enough for me to beckon her over.

"Would you take that bracelet out of there for me?"

"Here you are. Lovely, isn't it? Fourteen karat."

"Now, let's pretend to be talking about the bracelet."

"Sir?"

"I investigate insurance claims. There was a big one from here, settled in full. Now Laneer won't talk to me."

"The bracelet is $400, plus tax."

"You don't look as demure and bloodless as the rest of the sales staff. I hope Laneer isn't one of your favorite people."

"Hey. Hold it down. Why?"

"What's the office gossip, or store gossip, about where Farley is right now?"

"I can't talk here!"

"I'm in the hotel. I saw a little lounge over on that balcony thing. Named after an animal."

"The Blue Raccoon."

"Five-thirty? Six?"

"Like ten past six."

COOL CONNECTION

The Raccoon got a good after-work play, and they were jammed up close and deep at the bar. I had a fine little leather corner with the lady. She said her name was Libby Franklin, a married name, but she was not working at it lately, and she thought all guys named Rhoades were called Dusty, and I told her that for the first terrible 25 years of my life, I had been called that, and that my real name was Oliver. But, in my 26th year, I had begun to look remotely like John Wayne. She tipped her head and squinted at me and pursed her lips and finally said, "Faintly." So I told her I was a sort of sawed-off version of the real Duke, and then did my imitation, which knocked her out.

She told me I certainly was no great judge of womankind if I thought the other girls at Wescott and Sons looked demure and bloodless. She said they were about as sweet and demure as a pool full of barracuda. She said Wescott and Sons had always hired better-than-average-looking women — made them dress alike, paid them well, and gave them a commission on sales over a certain figure each week. She said she had been there a little over two years, and J. Trevor Laneer was not, repeat, not one of her favorite people.

When I asked her why not, she explained that she was not a very autocratic person. "He expects and gets total obedience. The girls who can't take that, who give him an argument, last about two weeks. 'Clean the fingerprints off that case, Laura.' 'I don't like that hairstyle, Wendy . . . change back to the way it was before, please.' 'Print the sales slips, everyone . . . do not use script. Is that clear?' 'Bring me my tea at 11, Miss Farley.'

"And Anne Farley didn't resent it?"

"Resent it? She ADORED it! She worked for him for 12 years. Of course, most of that time was at the old store on Piedmont, before he moved the business here."

"He owns it?"

"Well, for all practical purposes. His wife, Betty, is a Wescott, the last of the clan. Poor old thing is an invalid."

"And Farley had something going with J. Trevor?"

"What a truly gross idea! She was sort of the head vestal virgin. She thought is was something very special to sell gems to people who got their name in the papers. Laneer was cruel and mean to her and she passed it along to us peasants."

"So why would she steal?"

She looked at me in a measuring way, head atilt, bright blond hair hanging to her shoulder. "Fido will be howling his poor head off. Want to eat Chinese?"

Court clerk keeps crew in shape with dance class

SEATTLE (AP) — At 4:30 p.m. each day the large glass doors of the King County Superior Court clerk's office are locked shut.

Take a peek inside a few minutes later on Thursdays, however, and you'll see about a dozen of the female employes tapping their toes and clicking their heels, led by a 55-year-old executive secretary.

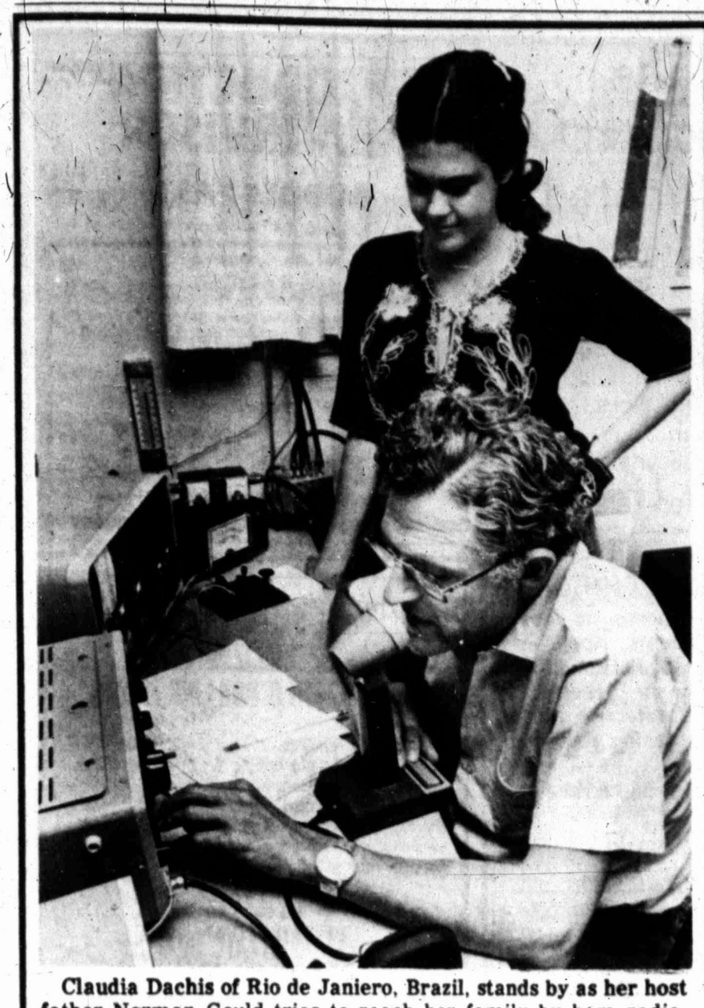

Ellen Matson said she started tap-dancing lessons because "these girls need the exercise."

Her students are aged 23 to 60. None of the male workers has been invited to the informal classes, and none has asked to join.

Ms. Matson says she plans to continue the lessons "long enough to put on some kind of a review. We thought we'd call ourselves the 'Judicial Dollies.'"

Claudia Dachis of Rio de Janiero, Brazil, stands by as her host father Norman Gould tries to reach her family by ham radio. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

'Ham' comes in handy for Brazilian visitor

Radios can come in very handy, especially when it is a ham radio, your family is in Rio de Janiero, Brazil, and you are in Midland.

Claudia Dachis has found herself in this position for the past six months. She has been staying with the Norman Gould family as part of the Youth for Understanding program.

Fortunately for Miss Dachis, Norman Gould is a ham radio operator. They have tried several times to reach Miss Dachis' family in Rio de Janiero, and succeeded once, shortly after Miss Dachis arrived in Midland. The procedure includes contacting any radio operator in Rio de Janiero and having the Brazilian operator contact the family by telephone. The telephone can then be plugged into the radio.

"When I was first told that I was going to Midland, I looked it up in the English Encyclopedia, and it was there. Midland is very famous because of the oil," said Miss Dachis.

"Midland is a good place to work. It's a smaller city (than Rio de Janiero), with not many things to do," she said. She has found, however, time to go water skiing for the first time and horseback riding for the first time in many years.

She attended Lee High School during the school year, was taking ballet lessons and has been learning jazz for five months. Miss Dachis is also learning to country and Western dance to show to her country.

"I have been dancing for three years before in my country," she said. "I performed twice in Rio in the Municipal Theatre in Rio."

Miss Dachis will leave to return to Rio July 18.

"I intend to come back (to the United States)," she said, "after finishing my university education in Brazil. I want to do postgraduate work in computer science in the United States."

Mother says son innocent

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Like all mothers, Edna Hill of Lubbock worries about her third son and maintains he could do no wrong.

Her son, David Douglas Hill, 34, is in a Riverside County jail in California, accused of slaying two young men in a case that police have titled the "trash bag murders."

Authorities say the death toll in the brutal killings may reach 28.

"My David wouldn't do anything like that," a disraught Mrs. Hill, 68, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, which printed portions of the interview in a copyright story in its Sunday editions.

"I know the Lord's going to help," she added, her voice wavering and her hands trembling. "He'll take nare of him."

Hill and Partick Kearney, 37, former roommates from Redondo Beach, Calif., and both admitted homosexuals, were charged with two slayings after Kearney led authorities to locations where bodies were found one and four years ago. The men surrendered last week.

Scout troop wins awards

Midland's Boy Scout Troop 233, sponsored by Memorial Christian Church, won four camp awards while attending the Yucca Council's Dale Realer Mountain Man Camp at Cloudcroft, N.M.

Twelve troops competed in the contest, and Troop 233 won first in hiking techniques, second in marksmanship and campsite inspection, and earned an Honor Troop Citation.

All Troop 233 scouts earned or worked toward special badges that can only be earned at Dale Resler Camp. At least two campouts are necessary to complete all four of the awards. The awards are the Paul Bunyan, Mountain Man, Woodsman and Trail Blazer.

Attending the camp from Midland were Kenneth Bartow, Robert Bartow, Richard Bartow, Michael Jordan, Craig Jordan, Kendall Skinner, Dennis Hendon, Roger Larsen and Kevin Larsen. Adult leaders attending were Doug Stephenson, scout master, and Coyle Singletory and Bill Larsen, assistant scout masters.

Fort Stockton Water Carnival to begin soon

FORT STOCKTON — Fort Stockton's annual Water Carnival, Saturday, to take place Thursday through Saturday, will feature a show titled "Escape to Paradise Isle" and five beauty revues.

The annual production, being held for the forty-first time, will be centered around Comanche Springs Swimming Pool in Rooney Park, a few blocks east of downtown Fort Stockton.

The show will begin each evening at 8 p.m. with a different beauty revue each night. Wee Miss and Sub-Teen Thursday girls will compete Thursday night, Junior Miss and Miss Teen divisions on Friday night and Miss Fort Stockton contestants on Saturday night.

The water show will feature swimming, dancing and musical acts with elaborate South Sea island scenery.

Gates open at 7 p.m. each night. Tickets are available at both Fort Stockton banks and the chamber of commerce and at the gate.

4 Midlanders go to meeting

DALLAS — Four Midlanders were among those attending the annual convention of Kiwanis International in Dallas recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Gillespie Jr. of 2505 Harvard Ave., Jim Acree of 3527 Imperial St. and Bill Cormack of 2825 Maxwell St. attended the convention. Gillespie is governor-elect of the Texas-Oklahoma District.

More agencies use 'flextime'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An increasing number of government agencies and private industries are allowing their employes to work when they want to, National Geographic says.

The new system, called "flexitime," doesn't cut back the number of hours a person spends on the job. It just lets people decide, within limits, when to start and stop. Those that come in early quit early, and employes can chose to work more than eight hours a day in order to have a threeday weekend.

Study rejects power shift claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Carter administration study rejects as "largely unfounded" the assumption by some Ford administration officials that the global power balance is shifting in favor of the Soviet Union, sources say.

The finding is contained in an exhaustive five-month interagency study which will be reviewed by President Carter in the coming weeks. It was discussed at a Cabinet-level meeting Thursday chaired by Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser.

The study holds that the two superpowers are "roughly even" in strategic capability and that the United States should be able to keep pace with the Soviet Union, assuming present U.S. weapons systems are continued, according to the sources.

Among the reasons for the optimistic forecasts, the sources said, are the basic strength of the American economy and a perceived inability of the Soviet Union to compete with the United States in the area of technological innovation.

A few days before leaving office last January, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said the power balance trends of the last 10 to 15 years have been "decidedly adverse" to the United States.

Rumsfeld said expanded Soviet nuclear and conventional force strength has increased Soviet options. He suggested that continuation of these trends could tempt the Soviets to challenge the United States in an area of American national interest.

Intelligence reports made public at that time said that though the Soviet military budget had grown by a third between 1965 and 1975, U.S. arms spending had dropped by a similar amount from the 1968 wartime high.

Officials said that initially they expected the Carter administration study to yield the same pessimistic conclusions Rumsfeld had reached.

This impression was reinforced when Harvard University Professor Samuel Huntington, known as an anti-Soviet hardliner, was designated by Brzezinski to oversee the study, known as Presidential Review Memorandum 10.

One official said that past assessments focused too heavily on the Soviet military posture and did not take into sufficient account Soviet weaknesses of a nonmilitary nature. These include labor shortages and the Soviets' chronic agricuttural problems, he said.

One source of concern to both Rumsfeld and former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was the Soviet buildup in conventional forces. Rumsfeld said in January that the Soviets had 4.4 million men under arms compared with 2.1 million for the United States.

Credit earned

PLAINVIEW — Henry Urban of 3306 W. Shandon St. in Midland has completed six hours of college credit at Wayland Baptist College to count towards his permanent vocational teaching certificate.

Urban took the courses in a six-week summer session this year. He will be a Coordinated Vocational and Academic Education (CVAE) instructor at Midland High School next year.

Industry building approved

BIG SPRING — Property at Webb Air Force Base will be opened for immediate industrial development as the result of a right-of-entry permit being obtained from the Pentagon.

Col. Harry Spannaus, 78th Flight Training Wing commander, said the permit removed a block on leasing property at the air base and will allow industrial prospects to lease the land and buildings they are interested in directly from the Air Force.

The permit applies, however, only to certain buildings at Webb.

Classes to start

ODESSA — Classes begin Monday for the second summer seasion at Odessa College.

Late registration for the summer term also begins Monday in room 102 of Baskin Hall. Students can sign up late from 8 to 11 a.m., 1 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Classes to be offered this second session include allied health, art, automotive mechanics, business administration, diesel mechanics, drama, emergency medical technology, English, machine shop, mathematics, nursing, office education, photography, physical education, psychology and sociology, radio and TV, reading, refrigeration and air conditioning, science, social science, Spanish, speech and welding. Noncredit clerical training will also be offered.

Classes will meet on Mondays through Thursdays only. The college is closed on Fridays through Aug. 12 in an effort to cut utility bills and conserve energy.

COM-MOMS:

Their lives are hectic, hurried but they can't seem to stop

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Their lives are regulated by a clock and a calendar.

They are some of the best and fastest cooks, fixing not only quick meals but also nutritious ones.

Their lives are hectic and hurried in comparison with other women's lives.

And if it were not for their children, they wouldn't be doing it.

They are the mothers of the City of Midland swimmers, also called COM-MOMS.

When the first gun goes off at the Allison West Texas National Champion Invitational swim meet on Friday, these women will be ready. Life will speed up somewhat for them then, but these women will be ready for it as they have worked months preparing for the meet. They also will be volunteering their time to work at the meet timing events, keeping score and working in the concession stand, in addition to being available for any odd job.

COM-MOMS live a different sort of life—one which they all describe in one word and that is hectic. They may have come from various backgrounds but they all have one thing in common. They all have a child who is a member of the City of Midland swim team.

Each child had his or her reasons for trying swimming. Judy Dunbar became a COM-MOM eight years ago when her doctor recommended swimming to improve her children's respiratory problems. As the problems disappeared, the children's interest in swimming increased and Mrs. Dunbar was hooked.

"A swimmer is in better physical condition than any other athlete," she said. "This is a year round sport with the physical and development program continuing all year."

After trying all other sports Brad Swendig at age 14 was looking for the one that he felt was "his thing." He joined the COM swim team, liked it and has excelled, having represented the COM in the Senior Nationals last summer in Philadelphia to add to his list of awards.

Shirley Hull's son became interested when the boy next door got involved on the swim team. Her son joined, and he now swims for Texas Tech University. "I'm glad now. It's fantastic for kids. It's an education for them," Mrs. Hull, a COM-MOM for six years, said enthusiastically.

No matter how their children started on the swim team the lives of everyone in the family have changed, especially those of the COM-MOMS. It will stay that way until the swimmer graduates from high school and goes on to college elsewhere.

Mrs. Dunbar's children started before the current indoor pool was built and her four children kept her busy with their swimming schedules.

"We actually needed a clock and calendar in the car to keep track of where to go," she recalled with a laugh. "It was hard to remember which child went to which pool at what time."

But, there are still some problems even after the indoor pool had been built.

"The most shocking thing is to have an advance swimmer to start early morning workouts," Mrs. Dunbar said. These sessions start at 5:30 a.m. and end at 7:30 a.m. each day. "There was one time it snowed between the time I took the child to the pool and the time I went to pick him up."

But, the mothers say they have learned to adjust their lives to the schedule. Several talked their husbands into taking the swimmer to those early practices. Other parents have combined their kids to form a car pool which cuts down on the number of the early mornings.

Even so, each parent anxiously awaits the day when the swimmer could get his or her drivers license. "You pray for the day they get their driver's license, so they can go to early practice," Shirley Hull said.

With the swimmers' schedules, meals become a problem and it is almost impossible when there is more than one swimmer in the house, the women said.

"Families with multiple kids on the team have different times to eat," explained Josie Birdwell, a COM-MOM.

The microwave oven has helped the Dunbar family and Ginny Glenn said she has learned to fix foods, such as stews and spaghetti, that can be reheated as each one finds time to eat.

Finding time to eat is not the only problem. The swimmers need food with high protein, not junk food, according to the women.

"They can't consume junk food or they sink," Mrs. Glenn said. "I think these mothers are the best short order cooks in the whole wide world."

Dorothy Buthman displays the trophies that she will award as trophy chairman for the event.

While Mrs. Hull is accustomed to the family seldom having a meal at the same time, Mrs. Swendig tries to figure out some way the whole family can be there at one time for a meal.

"We try very hard to have dinner together, but sometimes it's at 7 or 8 or 9 p.m." she said.

When the West Texas meet begins, things get even more hectic for these women as they house several out-of-town swimmers. Mrs. Glenn has been preparing and freezing food for several weeks.

The youths have to be fed at the right time, and not immediately before an event. "You can't feed them right before they swim. We like to beat them, but that's a dirty way to do it," Mrs. Hull explained.

Most COM-MOMS knew nothing about working at a meet or how to yell for their children, but they learned.

Mrs. Swendig explained how long it took her to learn what to do. She and a neighbor went to Brad's first meet held at Texas Tech University. They sat in the balcony watching women running up and down and yelling "and we sat there and laughed at them. Then the other woman said, 'I think that's what we're supposed to do.' So we stood up and started yelling."

The parents had no conception how important timing is during a meet, but they learned when their child didn't place by a tenth or a hundreth of a second. And when the child lost, the parents had to learn how to cope with their children.

"A second is an eternity to these kids," Mrs. Birdwell explained. "It means the difference between winning and losing."

When a swimmer loses a meet by a fraction of a second, he or she may not be the easiest person to live with for some time, and the mothers learn how to deal with them.

"You can tell when they are upset by the way they rip off their caps or hit the water with their hands," Mrs. Birdwell said.

Living can be especially rough when the swimmer did not turn in as good a time as he or she knew was possible.

"The kids develop goals that winning is not so much coming in first place as it is self-improvement. They are more interested in bettering their time than in coming in a certain place," Mrs. Birdwell said.

When a child does badly, he or she knows the blame can not be put on someone else, which is often done in a team sport such as basketball or football. "When you're talking about swimming or track, it all comes back to the kids," Mrs. Swendig explained. "They can't blame it on anyone else."

The COM-MOMS, who knew nothing about swimming at first, enthusiastically support the sport now. The major reason, they agreed, is the involved in other organizations, they develop close relationships that they do not have in other groups. "Most of my close friends are among the other mothers," Mrs. Snook admitted.

Because of the total involvement of the family, swimming and COM-MOMS can become the whole social life, according to Mrs. Hull. "The kids' friends are members on the team and parents become almost the same because of the wierd hours," she said. "You also lose a few along the line because not everyone gets discipline their children learn, not only in attending practices, but the discipline they have in their lives.

There are times, especially when the children are young, when the parents have to spur their interest, said Margaret Hartman, but the children continue it only if they have a strong interest in swimming and want to stay in it.

According to Mrs. Dunbar, swimmers seem to make better grades in school "because they learn to budget their time."

But, Mrs. Glenn quipped there could be another reason there are no discipline problems with swimmers. "Maybe it makes them so tired they can't fuss back at you."

Pat Snook noticed a difference in her daughter, Lorrie, after she began swimming. "We were quite surprised to see how competitive she became. We never pushed it."

But, there is another reason the mothers favor swimming. "We know where the kids are a lot of the time," Mrs. Snook said.

Although many COM-MOMS are this involved."

Age makes no difference among the swimmers. They are protective of each other, no matter what age, the mothers said.

Despite the busy schedules and filled days, the mothers say they enjoy the close relationships they have developed with parents of swimmer throughout the state. These friendships pay off at the top meets, according to Mrs. Dunbar.

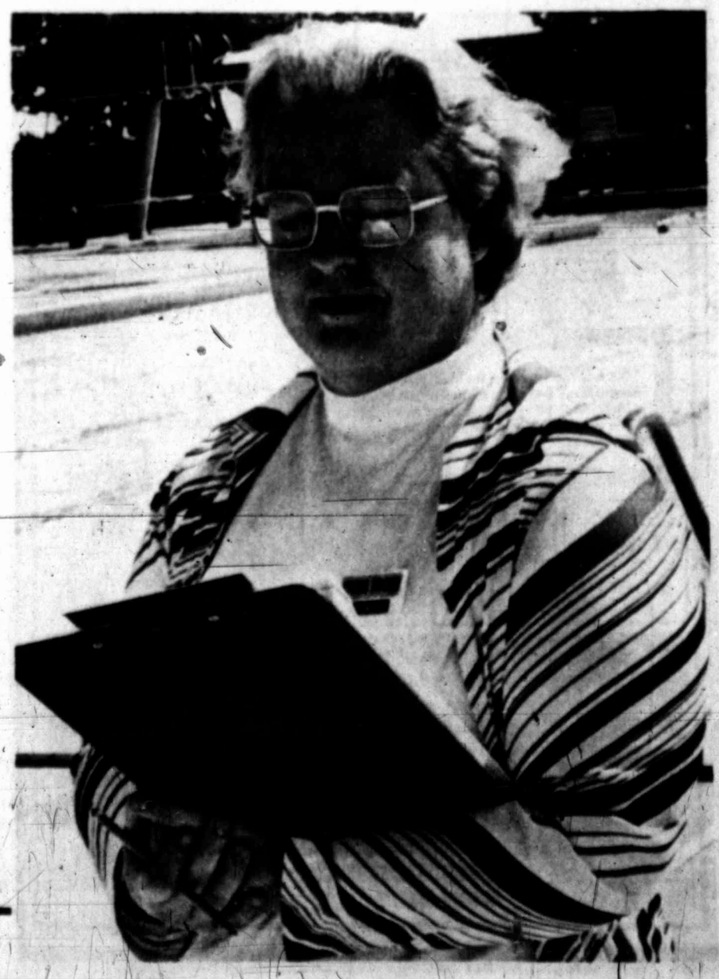

"It's exciting when they go to a meet like the junior national and all the Texas parents will pull for that kid from Texas, even though their kid competes against him on a local level," she said.

But, the children do grow up and leave home for college or other reasons. How will these COM-MOMS react when they no longer are a member of the group?

They still will help out for meets, especially the West Texas meet, they said.

But, Pat Snook said, there will be withdrawal pains. "You won't get out of it all at once."

Kimberlee Sue Shive of Midland and Jackie Monroe Whitsitt of Archer City were married in a double ring ceremony at 3 p.m. Saturday with Rev. Ted Brian officiating the rites in the First Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Judy Meisenheimer of 3212 Travis St. and Charles E. Shive of Kingsville. Mrs. Floyd Holland of Archer City is the bridegroom's mother.

Mrs. Jackie Monroe Whitsitt

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of silk chiffon and Venise lace designed with an A-line silhouette. The fitted bodice with a Queen Anne's neckline was overlayed with Venise lace and bridal pearls.

A cumberbund traced the waistline and was attached with lace appliques. The sleeves were a double layer of sheer chiffon. The double layer A-line skirt flowed into a chapel-length train.

Her three-tiered veil of French illusion was edged in lace and gathered onto a matching lace and pearl Camelot headpiece.

The bride's attendants were Chris Johnson and Loyce Keen of Midland and Janna Travis of Gardendale. Sherri McVay of Kingsville was flower girl.

Attendants to the bridegroom were Mike Adams and Richard Hill of Archer City and Ronnie Maxwell, the bridegroom's brother of Crane. Ushers were Gus Travis of Gardendale and Bill Crow of Archer City. David McVay of Kingsville was ringbearer.

Music was provided by Connie Stroud, organist, and Subrina Huse, soloist.

After a reception in the church parlor, the couple went on a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M. The couple plans to reside in Archer City.

The bridegroom is co-owner of Archer Plumbing Co.

Mrs. Vincent Lee Johnson

Nancy Potter, Vincent Johnson marry in double ring ceremony

LONGVIEW — Nancy Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wendall Potter of Longview, and Vincent Lee Johnson, son of Mrs. Robert Joseph Johnston of Sheffield and Bob L. Johnson of 1412 W. Pine St., Midland, were married at 7 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church here.

Dr. Bob Parrott performed the double ring ceremony.

Cynthia Potter, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Sally Potter, sister of the bride, Teresa Taylor, Paula Williams and Lynne Joyner of Longview, Linda Beth Huddleston of Houston. The father of the bridegroom was best man. The groomsmen were Bert Johnson and Bobby Gotovac of Midland, Syd Johnson and Blake Johnson of Dallas and Steve Wilkins of Ozona.

The ushers were Cary Dukes of Longview, Jack Sanders of Marshall and Fred Ondracek of Tulsa, Okla.

Kurt Potter, brother of the bride, was candlelighter. The ring bearer was Mark Potter, also a brother of the bride.

The reception was held in Pinecrest Country Club.

The bride wore a formal ivory gown of chiffon and re-embroidered Alencon lace. Tiers of chiffon formed the angel sleeves. Her double tiered chiffon skirt flowed into a chapel train. A chapel veil fell beneath a chapel cap mantilla edged in re-embroidered Alencon lace. She carried a bouquet of Phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath.

The bride has a bachelor of science degree in special eduation from The University of Texas-Austin. She was a member of Chi Omega sorority. The bridegroom was graduated from Southern Methodist University with a bachelor of business administration degree. He was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity and Beta Alpha Psi, accounting honorary society. He also did graduate study at UT, and is employed with Tesoro Petroleum Corp. in San Antonio.

After a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico, the the couple will reside at 3819 Harry Wurzbach in San Antonio.

Expert sees herself as quiet researcher

By KENNETH TURAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "Sometimes," says Shere Hite, a bit archly, "I feel like hitting reporters over the head with my master's thesis."

Never mind that close to 2 million copies of her study of female sexuality, "The Hite Report," are in print. Never mind that it has been written about in every magazine from the New Statesman and Paris Match to Modern Romance, that it's being translated into 10 languages, including Portuguese, Hebrew, Dutch and Japanese. Never mind even that it received perhaps the ultimate in acceptance when "Otto Preminger told Arthur Godfrey on 'The Merv Griffin Show' that he ought to read it." Shere Hite is still concerned, still very concerned in fact, that she be taken seriously.

Sitting in her Watergate Hotel room the day before appearing at the National Town Meeting, Shere Hite suddenly pauses in midthought and tells a photographer "Please don't wait until I smile to take a picture. My work is very serious. I don't want some silly looking picture." The photographer attempts to reassure her, mentioning other people he's photographed in amiable poses. "They're men," she replies, half-amused. "They can smile."

It is possible to be very wrong about Shere Hite, to see her on TV with the little words "Sex Expert" under her name and think of her as unbending, humorless. She is neither, but getting where she is — at 34 — has been a struggle, not to say a strain, and the marks of it are definitely there.

She is established now in the way she prefers to see herself, as "a quiet researcher." She has a contract for a book on male sexuality, due out soon for which has already received 2,500 questionnaire replies form men age 13 to 92. After that comes a book on love, on what love is, to put it simple," all of which should occupy her for the next 10 years of her life, which is as far ahead as she cares to look at the moment.

Yet when she talks about what her success has meant, she talks with surprising feeling about how "now I can eat regularly and I know I'll be able to eat regularly for a number of years. And I don't have that horrible lurking feeling whenever I go out of my apartment, that fear that I'll run into my landlord."

It all started, quirkily enough, as a result of some modeling Hite did in 1971, after temporarily abandoning both Columbia University and her doctorate program in the history of ideas.

"I was in a commercial — I did it while throwing up — about 'The Olivetti Woman,' which was about how this typewriter was so smart the girl who used it didn't have to be smart at all. I'd been interested in the woman's movement before, but I thought as a model they'd scoff at me. But when NOW picketed that commercial, I went to see them."

Discussions with her women's group about how nothing they had read about female sexuality made them say "Yes, that's us" led to a preliminary questionnaire which led to responses that were so "electrifying" that she persevered until "The Hite Report," with its from-the-heart replies from 3,000 women, became a reality. And once everyone found out how terribly frank these replies were, dealing with the whole gamut from sexual ecstasy to despair, a best-selling reality as well.

Except it wasn't that easy. Money became an enormous problem and Hite was $35,000 in debt with no assurance she would ever be able to pay it off. "Going three or four years with that kind of debt makes you nervous," she says, still nervous thinking about it. She at some point posed for photographs that were recently resuscitated by Playboy and Hustler and about which she refuses to comment. She borrowed money on her credit card and from banks. A doorman of a neighborhood building she'd talked to at night while walking her dog ended up giving her a good chunk of his life savings, and one friend even "put on his best suit, went down to the bank to ask for money, and when they seemed a little reluctant, said, 'I'm getting married, you have to give me this loan.'" They did.

So it turns out that the best way to look at Shere Hite has not that much to do with clinical types like Masters and Johnson. Think of lonely garrets, of people out to change the world, of Karl Marx, even. Think of Shere Hite as a searcher after perfection.

Dieters turn to protein plan

By JODY JACOBS
The Los Angeles Times

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — It's another one of those quiet, mini-social revolutions that sneaks up on unsuspecting hostesses occasionally. It comes after a long string of other social changes, all concerned with the Beautiful People. And those who aspire to be like them — super thin.

In recent memory we've had social fad diets, such as guests who had to be provided with half a fresh grapefruit instead of the Pears Helene everyone else was having for dessert, or sometimes it was the glass of freshly squeezed grapefruit juice before the double consomme or the salmon mousse. If forewarned, there were no problems. At the last minute a busy kitchen and a frantic staff could solve the problem.

The protein diet a la Dr. Atkins was simpler to handle. A hostess could easily let her dieting guests fend for themselves, forking their way past unacceptable carbohydrates to find the protein that's invariably part of any well-balanced (and especially if it's expensive) menu.

There were — and still are — the special taboos of the religious or the allergic. If you entertain the diplomatic corps often you memorize national eating "quirks" at the time you bone up on social protocol and where the sale goes on the table.

And there are always some isolated and intriguing guests who follow special dietary idiosyncracies no matter where or with whom they're dining. Carol Channing comes to mind. So does Gloria Swanson. They're superstars, of course. No one minds when Carol pulls out her special Mark Cross satchel, opens a jar and starts to munch her boiled caribou. Besides, someone has always made it a point to alert the hostess beforehand. We've been to parties where la Swanson arrived after dinner bearing her own thermos with her specially brewed herbal drink.

But now, mainly due to Dr. Robert Linn who specializes in preventive medicine and the obese, there's a new social wrinkle. It's the guest who's on the protein sparing diet. This means he or she drinks a specified number of ounces (preferably determined by a doctor) of a sticky substance that's described as predigested protein. And that's it. All you can offer this dieter is — water, black coffee, tea, no calorie drinks, club soda or mineral water. Not a bit more.

But first a little background on how this latest fad happened.

An expatriate American returning to California after some 20 years in Europe first made us aware. "My God," he said one night over some succulent Chinese food, "at every dinner party I've been to since I came back, three out of five women are drinking this liquid." As a man trained at Parisian tables where eating is a social ritual he was not amused.

"I didn't invent the wheel," Dr. Linn says modestly when confronted with what's going on. He gives credit where it's due. "The underlying concept of this type of fast began to be developed in 1967 by George Cahill Jr., MD, a professor of medicine at Harvard University and head of the Joslin Diabetes Foundation," he writes in the preface of his book, "The Last Chance Diet," written with Sandra Lee Stuart and published last year by Lyle Stuart who lost 83 pounds on the diet. (Bantam published it in soft cover this spring and to date has printed 1,960,000 copies.) "It was George Blackburn, MD, director of Nutritional Support Services at the New england Deaconess Hospital and an assistant professor of surgery at the Harvard medical school, who earned his Ph.D. from M.I.T. developing the concept of the protein-sparing fast itself."

But it did take Dr. Linn to intrigue Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis to phone his Washington, D.C., office for information. And to lure television's Rhoda, Valerie Harper, to his New York clinic.

Dr. Linn, an osteophatic doctor and a former fatty who grew tin on the protein-sparing diet, began to apply experiences to his practice in Broomall, Pa. Just a couple of lines in Vogue magazine in January of 1967 made it faddish. "In medicine it usually goes from research to the doctor to the patient." In this case the patient read Vogue and demanded more information from her (or his) doctor. The demand forced Dr. Linn to open his first branch office in Washington, D.C., where he deals with socialites as well as "congressmen and senators — especially during an election year." A clinic in New York — where "you can't be too thin or too rich" adorns pillows in many chic homes — followed. And naturally one in Beverly Hills was next.

Here, Dr. Linn was associated with Dr. Paul Lessler, who still continues the practice. Dr. Linn no longer has anything to do with the Beverly Hills office, but says he probably will open another clinic here in the fall.

"The Last Chance Diet" has been translated into Spanish, German, Dutch and soon into Arabic. As a result of the book he's also been appointed a visiting lecturer in preventive medicine at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia.

Women's bank gets approval

By JAMES L. ROWE JR.
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Robert Bloom, acting U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, has approved a Washington group's application to establish what may become the first federally chartered women's bank in the country.

In approving the application Wednesday, Bloom reversed a decision made by his office last January. An official in Bloom's office said the women's group had substantially strengthened its case since then, in part by adding persons with banking and financial expertise to its board of organizing directors. All of the new directors are men, replacing six women and one man who were among the original directors.

The comptroller's office — which regulates the nation's 4,700 banks operating under federal charter — also approved an application by a Colorado group to establish a women's bank in Denver. The two applications are not related. The Washington women's bank is expected to open months before the Denver bank.

When the comptroller's office rejected the Washington bank's original application six months ago, officials cited the organizing group's lack of qualifications to run a bank, its failure to show that the bank could provide unique services and the proposed bank's desire to locate in downtown Washington, an area that already has numerous banking offices.

Emily H. Womach, who will become president of the Women's National Bank here when it is formally organized, said Wednesday the bank will probably open by fall.

Womach, who has been chairman of the organizing committee since last July, has been a vice president of the Farmers Bank of Delaware and was also Delaware state treasurer.

Before the bank can open, it must, among other things, incorporate, sell stock, get the stockholders approved by the government, hold meetings, appoint officers and ready the office facilities. The process can take anywhere from six to 18 months, an official of the comptroller's office said.

Seven travel to celebrate their 70th class reunion

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass. (AP) — Traveling from as far as Florida, Michigan and Tennessee, seven members of the Class of 1907 returned to their alma mater, Mount Holyoke College, here for their 70th reunion.

The biggest surprise "is our being here at all — and no one is more surprised at that than we are," Susan Reed Stifler of Pleasant Hill, Tenn., commented.

Classmate Julia Adams Davis of Lansdowne, Pa., added, "Don't call us relics. I still live in my own apartment and do my own cooking."

The women received rousing ovations from nearly 10,000 alumnae, on campus for the weekend reunion celebration, and some 500 members of the college's 140th graduating class, when they took their place at the head of the reunion parade for a march around campus.

Later they shared memories of 1907 college days — "lights out" at 10 every night and dances in the gym with "young Amherst swains," even though there was "promenading" instead of dancing. They agreed that their class's most memorable contribution was finally introducing dancing to the Mount Holyoke social scene.

They also reported on their post-graduation accomplishments, which included a Ph.D. in history, college teaching, several master's degrees, a 13-year career — between ages 67 and 80 — with a New York fashion magazine, a World War I tour in France.

Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Sutton will be honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday in the parlor of the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Sutton, retired optometrist, and Mrs. Sutton were married July 14, 1927, in San Angelo. He practiced in San Angelo from 1924 to 1935.

The three sons of the couple, Walter L. Sutton Jr. of Midland, Robert E. Sutton of Odessa and Charles W. Sutton of Oklahoma City, Okla., will be hosts to the open house. Dr. and Mrs. Sutton have seven grandchildren.

Moving program reduces costs

COLLEGE STATION— A six-point "moving plan" can help the do-it-yourselfer cut costs and protect belongings, says Pat Seaman, a housing and home furnishings specialist, who designed it.

Mrs. Seaman is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System—and her plan is this:

1. Plan the move well in advance.

Obtain information about packing and unpacking, the travel route, facilities and costs.

Then plan a timetable that allows ample time for packing, loading, rest, traveling and unloading.

2. Schedule the required vehicle ahead of time. Make sure it is properly licensed—and in working order just before the trip.

Practice driving it-know how to make corners, handle the vehicle in tight traffic, back it, and generally how it handles.

3. Obtain heavy-duty packing boxes and perhaps rent pads for furniture protection.

Moving companies sell boxes, and wax-coated boxes used for transporting poultry to grocery markets and fast food chain restaurants are good, too.

4. Line up necessary assistance for the day of the move.

5. Buy adequate insurance for protection of household goods and the vehicle.

6. Keep flexible for changes in the weather and other surprises.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's kindness makes her true 'lady'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Something touched me deeply this morning, and I hope you will find this worthy of publishing. I am a hairdresser. For more than a year, a little lady has had a standing appointment with me at 3 p.m. every Saturday.

Today (at 9 a.m.) this lady telephoned the shop and said, "My husband's brother passed away very suddenly last night, and I won't be able to come in today. Knowing that appointments are at a premium on a Saturday afternoon, please fill in my time."

Abby, if this lady could find the time under those circumstances to cancel her appointment, why can't women who know weeks ahead of time that they are going to be out of town do the same?—ROSE

DEAR ROSE: Because they lack the qualities of thoughtfulness, consideration and kindness that make this "lady" a lady.

DEAR ABBY: There is an old guy in our town who is driving everybody nuts. He's about 75 years old, and he can't keep his paws off women. No waitress will get within six feet of him. When he comes into the restaurant, the cashier has to take his order, and the cook comes out of the kitchen to serve it to him!

This guy went to a doctor for a checkup, and the nurse told me that if he ever came back, she was going to have a pair of handcuffs ready. Everybody in town knows about him. I can't understand why they let a man like that run loose. Isn't he dangerous?—PASO ROBLES

DEAR PASO: Probably not. If everybody in town knows about him, they're safe. It's the ones they DON'T know about who are dangerous.

DEAR ABBY: We have one child, 17, I'll call "Brenda." She is a normal, average child, and a little spoiled, but she's never given us any trouble.

Brenda has never washed a pair of hosiery or ironed a blouse because her mother wouldn't let her. She's never even made her own bed. My wife was a personal maid for this child. Brenda was never allowed to spend a night at a girlfriend's house or a week at summer camp.

Now the subject of college is at hand, and Brenda has applied to several.

My wife says, "Brenda doesn't have to go out of town. The local college is good enough." Brenda wants to go away to college, and I think she should, but her mother can't hear of it without bursting into tears. What should be done?—BRENDA'S DAD

DEAR DAD: You appear to have one neurotic female on your hands. Do you want to try for two? Ask your clergyman, family doctor or someone whose opinion your wife values to speak to her.

Foreclosures up

Utility costs may cause mortgage foreclosures to increase by 50 per cent, according to Mrs. Sue Young, housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Mollye Rowan weds Lynn Morris

Mollye Elizabeth Rowan of Midland became the bride of Lynn Keith Morris in a double ring ceremony at 3 p.m. Saturday in the First Presbyterian Church here. Officiating was Dr. Robert Boynton Smith.

The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. Richard Rowan of 3200 Apperson Drive and Mrs. Jean B. Morris and the late Dr. L. K. Morris of Tyler.

The bride, presented in marriage by her father, wore a formal traditional gown of white silk organza and Venise lace. The yoke of sheer silk illusion was edged with rows of Venise lace which also highlighted the mandarin collar. Tiny rows of lace extended from the shoulders down the sheer sleeves to the lace encircled cuffs. The bodice was trimmed with rows of floral clusters ending at the waistline. The clusters also encircled the waistline. The full circle skirt, edged with a single row of lace, fell into a chapel-length train.

The bride wore a chapel-length veil of sheer illusion. It was edged in Venise lace and attached to a seed pearl covered Camelot headpiece, which also was covered in Venise lace.

She carried a bouquet of white carnations, yellow roses and Stephanotis accented with baby's breath and satin streamers.

Martha Krenz, the bride's sister, was matron of honor, and Gayle Rowan, also a sister, was bridesmaid. Flower girls were Kristen Morris and Kerry Morris of Richardson.

Attendants to the bridegroom were Royce E. Jackson of Tyler and J. Hugh Harris Jr. of Houston, the bridegroom's uncle. Ringbearer was Kevin Morris of Richardson. Ushers were Paul Friemel Jr., the bridegroom's cousin of Midland, and John Echols, the bride's cousin of Coahoma.

Wedding music was presented by Stephen Sprain, organist, and James C. Bates, soloist.

A reception was held in the church parlor. After a wedding trip to New Mexico and Arizona, the couple will reside in Richardson.

Special guests at the wedding included the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. J. H. Harris of Rogers, and the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Darnell of Midland.

Pre-nuptial courtesies included a kitchen shower held in the home of Mrs. Jack L. Russell with Mrs. John P. Bates, Mrs. Norbert McIntyre, Mrs. R. C. Bennett, Mrs. Richard S. Gaddy, Mrs. Charles L. Corbett and Mrs. R. C. Roberts as hostesses. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's mother in the Sheraton Inn.

Peppers make up relish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

JELLIED PEPPER RELISH

1 small tomato
1 very small onion, peeled
4 or 5 large sweet green peppers, seeds removed
7 cups (3 pounds) sugar
1½ cups cider vinegar
1 bottle (6 fluid ounces) liquid fruit pectin
10 drops green food coloring, if desired

Cut tomato in half crosswise; squeeze out seeds and discard. Using the finest blade of a food grinder, grind the tomato and onion and turn into a 2-cup measure. Grind the peppers and turn into a strainer to drain; with a spoon, press out liquid; add enough of the prepared pepper to the tomato and onion to make 2 cups. Turn into a 4 or 5-quart saucepot. Stir in the sugar and vinegar. Over high heat bring to a full rolling boil and, stirring constantly, cook at this rolling boil for 1 minute. Remove from heat and at once stir in the pectin. With a large metal spoon, skim off the foam; stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly and thus help prevent floating vegetables. If used, stir in the green food coloring. Ladle quickly into hot sterilized glasses or wide-mouth fruit jars. Use melted hot paraffin to seal the glasses or adjust lids and screwbands on the fruit jars according to manufacturer's directions. Makes about 8 cups of relish.

Yardley, Osborn wed in Midland

David Brent Osborn married Pamela Jean Yardley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James David Yardley of Odessa, at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Midessa Heights Baptist Church. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Earl Osborn of Odessa.

The Rev. James H. Sellers performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Rosalie Brown was the organist, and Sherry Brown was soloist.

The maid of honor was Diana Smith. Geri Yardley of Odessa, sister of the bride, and Debbie Strickland, cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids, and Mrs. Susan Prince of Odessa, sister of the bride, was bridesmatron. Beckey Baker of Odessa, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

Monty Roark of Monahans attended as best man. The groomsmen were Tommy Yardley of Odessa and David Pierce of Tulsa, Okla., brothers of the bride, and Lee McCall of Odessa. Ushers and candle lighers were M. L. Prince Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, and Glynn Jones of Odessa. The ring bearer was Gerald Osborn of Odessa, brother of the bridegroom.

When presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a sheer and Venise lace gown. The fitted bodice was overlaid with lace appliques which bordered a sheer double pearl yoke, forming scallops over the shoulders and around the back. A ribbon bow marked the waist above a deep chapel train. The A-line skirt was sprinkled with appliques and edged along the hemline and train with a Cluny lace ruffle. Her mantilla veil of French illusion was trimmed in Cluny lace and was caught to a lace and pearl Camelot headpiece. She carried a cascade of yellow and apricot roses, white daisies and baby's breath.

The reception was held in the church's Fellowship Hall before the couple left on a trip to Six Flags over Texas. They will reside at 2828 E. 11th St., No. 86 Odessa.

The bride is a graduate of Permian High School in Odessa and is a past worthy advisor of the Order of the Rainbow for Girls Assembly No. 259, Odessa. She is employed by Wendys in Odessa. The bridegroom is employed by Bond-Coat, Midland.

Out-of-city guests attending the wedding included the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Martin of Roaring Springs.

Fluorescent lighting could cut fuel demand

Use of electrodeless fluorescent bulbs in homes and businesses could reduce fuel demand for lighting by the equivalent of up to 500,000 barrels of oil a day. These new bulbs will cost about $7 but produce three times as much light per unit of electricity as an incandescent bulb.

Manufacturers estimate that a 100-watt bulb used eight hours a day will pay for itself within a year, and the new bulbs will last over two and a half times as long as conventional bulbs, says Lynn Bourland, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Kids go all the way in conserving energy

By ERMA BOMBECK

I tell you, you wouldn't believe the way my children have really pitched in and tried to conserve energy during this nationwide crisis.

They've kicked all their dirty clothes under the bed to save on the gallons of water it takes to wash them.

They've called a moratorium on cutting and watering the grass until President Carter gives the nod.

They've insisted that the stove or oven not be turned on and that we all go out and eat in a modest but exhorbitantly-priced restaurant.

They gave up showers before bed without even being asked.

The other afternoon when we got into the car, my son said, "We've got to pick up Todd, Mike, Wendell, Tony and Steve."

When I slumped over the wheel in anticipation of an extra 45 minutes of drjving, he said, "After all, Mom, it's un-American not to car-pool."

They cut back on going to the dentist to once a year to save gas.

They put a brick in the commode. (I wish someone had told them it goes in the BACK of the commode.)

They're maintaining their policy of "Never flushing unless she can hear you."

They let the garbage stack up for three days by the sink to keep from opening the door and losing precious air-conditioning.

They play their stereos at 1:00 in the morning to take the load off of peak time.

They leave the ice cube trays empty to reduce the wear and tear on the refrigeration.

The other morning as I counted 63 glasses by the sink, I said, "Boys, you really amaze me at how you picked up on President Carter's plan to conserve energy."

They smiled, "When we get to 85 glasses, then we can start the dishwasher."

"In fact, I'm so proud of you, I think I'll do a column on it and tell my readers of your heroic efforts."

"That's not necessary, Mom," said a son leaning over to unplug my IBM. Just look upon this as a blow for democ

WINE DRINKER

Mosel wines gain competitiveness

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

If not for the complicated, type-laden labels with names that are generally incomprehensible to most Americans, the wines of the Mosel area of Germany would undoubtedly be favorites here.

First, they are white, which is today's "in" color. Second, they can be incredibly rich and flavorful in good years. They have the "off-dry" taste that is also popular. And, last, they are gaining some price competitiveness as zealous American wine marketeers keep raising their own prices to take advantage of what is perceived to be a great boom in white wine consumption.

Mosel wines are made from the Johannisberg (White) Riesling grape, one of the four noble wine grapes of the world (Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay and Pinot Noir are the other three). The grape does well in California and other parts of the world where it generally produces wines with a good depth of fruit and strong varietal characteristics.

In Germany, the Johannisberg Riesling wines struggle on awkward slopes and hillsides above the Mosel, a serpentine-like, narrow river that empties into the Rhine at Koblenz.

The river has cut its way through slate and rock, and because of the steepness of the slopes, the vines must be individually staked and the grapes picked by hand.

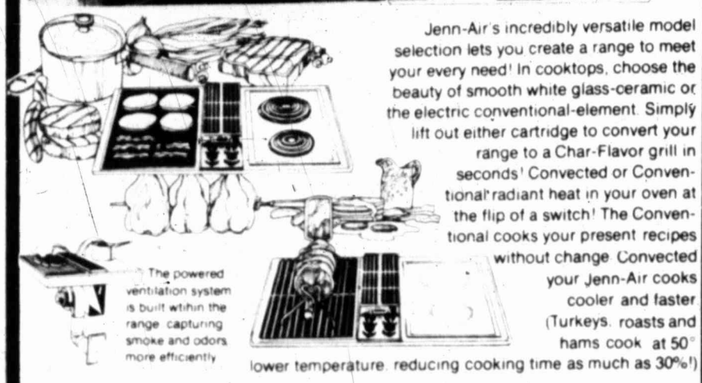

Winters are often inhospitable along the Mosel and the sun doesn't always shine as much as it should, even in summer. So the vines and grapes must struggle here more than in other wine areas, which can give the wine depth and character but often limits the alcoholic content.

If trying a Mosel strikes your fancy, the first thing to look for is the tall, graceful, tapered green bottle with the German label that says "Mosel-Saar-Ruwer."

Versatile split stitch gives effect of shading

By ERICA WILSON

The split stitch is exactly like it sounds: you take a straight stitch and then bring the needle up through the middle of it, splitting it as you take another straight stitch. (See diagram.) In spite of this rather simple, unpromising beginning, the split stitch is one of the most versatile and beautiful of all stitches.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt saw its possibilities in her own work long ago, when she made a large panel for her dining room at Sagamore Hill. The design, which she took from a small Russian children's book, illustrates a scene from the Golden Cockerel. The magician has just unveiled the magnificent bird from a sack over his shoulder, and the king on his throne and his courtiers are looking in amazement at the bird, all shimmering with gold threads. Beyond the palace in the distance is a little Russian town with colored domes and spires all worked in soft wools. The whole picture is five feet by four feet.

When you walked into the dining room, the colors of the panel absolutely glowed—partly because the gold threads, jewels and silks contrasted beautifully with the wool thread, and partly because a spotlight was cleverly concealed on the opposite wall.

Mrs. Roosevelt stitched all the clothing and the faces in split stitch, simply allowing the contours of the stitch to give the effect of shadings and tone. The split stitch has the amazing capability of changing color as it changes direction.

Keep this in mind when beginning your next crewel project, for the split stitch is absolutely delightful on crewel flowers. On a petal, for instance, just start by working a line around the outer edge. Then work a second line inside the first, but touching it. Continue to fill the shape with rows which run smoothly side by side following the curve of the petal. If you like, you can make a crisp edge for your flowers by outlining them with a contrasting color in stem stitch.

Split stitch is good to keep in mind for your next needlepoint project, too, for it adapts beautifully to canvas. Just work it across the canvas, row by row, to make solid fillings. You don't have to split your stitches with any regularity.

When you're working a sky, either on linen or even on needlepoint canvas, be sure to take advantage of the very flat, textured effect that the split stitch gives. You can "needlepaint" by taking fairly long split end continuing on. You'll stitches horizontally feel just like an artist, across, and splitting back taking long brush into the end of each stitch strokes.

Make brown bread

Add a loaf of New England Brown Bread to the breakfast grill on your next camping trip. A blend of whole wheat and rye flours with molasses gives it a moist, rich flavor. Start with 1 can (16 ounces) brown bread with raisins. Remove from can and cut into 12 slices. Spread slices with a mixture of ¼ cup softened butter, ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon and ⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg. Reassemble loaf and wrap in foil sealing ends tightly. Cook over medium coals for 20 minutes turning often.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Skirts recycle into comforter

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Dear Betty: How I enjoy your column! Wish I could think of something "catchy" to write to our paper to encourage more than one column per week. I have quite a few wool skirts. Little girls just don't wear these skirts anymore (you know the kind girls wore with sweaters years ago?). Do you have any ideas at all for using these skirts? The best to you, Betty. You are my girl!! — J.K.

What can I say...thank you, thank you, thank you. It's nice to be liked. The first thing that popped into my mind for your skirts was a toasty warm comforter. Cut large 12.5x12.5-inch squares from your skirts.

Using narrow seams, stitch enough squares together to make a quilt top. Alternate plaids and solids; darks and lights. Cut the remaining scraps into smaller squares (about 4.5x4.5 inches). Stitch these squares together with narrow seams to make a border. Join border to quilt top. Use a soft sheet-blanket for the lining. You may either turn the raw edges in, or bind the comforter with a wide, fold-over bias trim. Tack with yarn where the large squares meet. Tack through the center of each border square.

Dear Betty: I have blocks cut for a puff quilt. Is it all right to use both woven polyester and knit polyester blocks? I've been told it doesn't work. — M.S., Polson, Mont.

It is best to use all the same type fabric when making a quilt.

However, with the individual "puffs," you can be a little flexible. If your woven polyester and your knit polyester are similar in weight, I say go ahead and use both. In fact, alternating the knits and wovens could create a very attractive quilt.

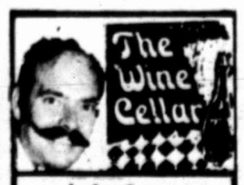

Dear Betty: Can you tell me why, when sewing with horizontal stripes, all the seams match, but when the hem is turned up, the stripe is not straight? — Jo Ann Hrabak

Two things, Jo Ann — is your stripe exactly "on grain" with the thread grain of your fabric? The horizontal stripe should be at a perfect right angle to the selvage, and to the straight-of-the-grain of your pattern. Does the hemline of your pattern have a slight curve to it? For the garment to turn up on a stripe, it must have a straight hemline. Some hem curves are not even noticeable until we try to put them on a stripe.

Few of us have the space for a full-sized cutting table. We use the dining table, the bed or the floor — none of which is perfect. But, your ironing board is — almost. Place your cutting board on your ironing board and then adjust the height to a comfortable "cutting" position. Works great, and saves the back.

QUICK STITCH: Order any three leaflets and I will send you a fourth leaflet (of your choice) free. You need send only one stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

by Sam Day

Sauternes are sometimes a problem at a meal. The Victorians used to serve Sauternes with the fish course, but they eventually found that this full-bodied, rich tasting wine overwhelmed the taste of the light red wines that usually paved the way to the red robust wines that were often served with the main meat course. Sauternes should come at the end of the meal, or you are liable to have a half of a bottle left over at the end of a meal. After the rich red wine served with the main course, your guests will most likely prefer coffee and liquor to a sweet Sauterne. So, if you are serving Sauterne with your meal, your best bet would be to buy half bottles or have two dinner parties.

Be sure to make IMPERIAL LIQUORS, 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4256 your headquarters for all your party needs, from champagnes to whiskeys. This sleeper couch can accommodate guests in the living room of a young couple's first home, then be relegated to a family room when they move to larger quarters. Dark wood floors and dark stained shutters complement white stucco-treated walls and area rug.

Home fixes up cheaply

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have a small, two-bedroom bungalow, a wedding gift from my parents. My husband and I are finishing college and plan to go to graduate school so our budget to fix up the house is rather limited.

The living room walls in particular are in bad shape with many patch jobs showing. Also the wood floor is badly worn.

Please make some suggestions on how best to fix up this home so it will be attractive. What should we spend our money on and where can we save? —T.W.

A. What a marvelous wedding gift. And you can have lots of fun fixing up such a house and making it your first home.

Initially, why don't you give some attention to the walls. I have seen badly marred walls given a new lease on life when treated with a mixture of paint and sand. This gives a rough texture to the walls simulating stucco. Or if you want an even rougher texture, I've known of people adding crushed walnut shells.

We once added spackle to rubber-base paint and covered wood shelves to give a very unique and heavily textured look to bookcases. You might experiment with different materials. It would be a lot more effective and easier than going to the expense of resurfacing the walls professionally.

For the floor why not simply clean it and fill the major damage with wood putty? Then give the floors a deep, dark coat of stain — perhaps a black or a dark brown. This can give you a beautiful background for either traditional or modern furnishings.

You might add a soft area rug later when your budget allows. If you like straw or woven matting, it is an inexpensive way to create an area rug. Also it is possible to find relatively inexpensive cotton copies of Oriental rugs if you like that look.

For the windows why not think about woven blinds or wood shutters which you might stain to match your floor and hang yourself.

My advice on buying furniture would be to save your money for a good sofa which will last you.

Couple with Russian connection join talents in successful design studio

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Catherine the Great, exuberantly affectionate Empress of Russia from 1762 to 1796, might have relished a love drama played out by her fifth generation grandson, Count Nicholas Bobrinskoy, who produces beautiful hand-screened fabrics and wall coverings in his art and design studio at Port Chester, N.Y.

It began when Nicholas and Tania, now his wife, met over a picket fence in New York backyards. She was "washing her dogs," and he was "advising a friend about flowers." It was love at first syllable.

When they sorted the dog biscuits from the dandelions, they found they had a real Russian connection, they explained recently in an interview at Madison Square Garden, where they had decorated the portals of the National Arts and Antiques Show.

As it turned out, Nicholas' father and Tania's grandfather had been friends — both had been ministers in the Russian government. In addition, Nicholas and Tania had Scottish ancestry.

"It was amazing that we found each other and had so much in common," Tania remarked. "After the revolution, families were dispersed. We did not know who might be among the living."

That was two decades ago.

Tania, now 53, had arrived in the United States in 1936. Nicholas, 56, who had been liberated from a German labor camp by the American army came in 1954.

"I joined Madame Zina, a friend of my mother's, and her husband, Colonel Vladimir Akentievsky, and became a junior partner in their design studios in 1961," Nicholas explained. "In six months I had learned the business and when Madame Zina retired, I became sole proprietor."

A handwork operation, Zina studios produces special designs for museums, restorations, preservations and individuals. At present they are at work on a preservation at Newport.

Although he lost his 75-year-old father, Alexis, when he was 6, Nicholas likes to feel he inherited his father's love for art. In addition to being Minister of Agriculture, Alexis also had been president of the Imperial Archaeological Commission and vice president of the Russian Fine Arts Academy. It was he, Nicholas said, who found, near Kiev, the Scythian gold comb (500 B.C.) that was exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art two years ago.

The Bobrinskoy designs, more than 200, are elegant examples of past cultures, such as one 13th-century church mosaic. In recoloring them they achieve some exquisite effects. Nicholas also does free-hand work in modern designs. Tania takes care of the books.

"Classical design gives a fresh alternative to fleeting fads," he explained. "Custom prints can provide individual expression by using colors that are selected to please individual tastes."

Their output is large even though only a yard of fabric can be hand-printed at one time. They have used Russian Orthodox seminarians as studio helpers, and now use students of the State University of New York. Showrooms in 10 cities are run by young people.

Having fled Russia hastily, their families had little more than their bibles — Nicholas' father's two Rembrandts are at The Hermitage in Leningrad. Now they have recently acquired a large painting of Catherine at a good price.

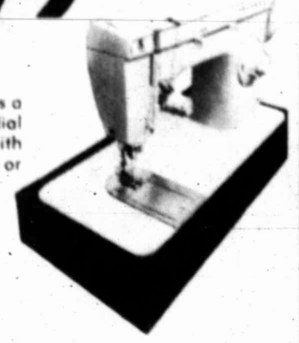

"It may be little known that Catherine was descended from the Scottish clan, Kenneth," Nicholas said. "Tania's mother was descended from the well known Russian poet, Michael Mermontoff through the Scot, Thomas the Rhymer, and the 16th-century Scottish soldier, Laird Mont."

"We have never had a feeling of belonging anywhere as we have had in America," Tania maintains. "When my father went to France, they wanted him to take an examination before he could teach history. At Harvard no one questioned him.

Midge Costanza works with White House, public

EDITOR'S NOTE — Midge Costanza is the only woman, the only ethnic, the only Catholic, among President Carter's closest aides. She's also the only person who stands between the President and those among his 220 million constituents who want his time. She's Carter's assistant for public liaison

BY JURATE KAZICKAS
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Midge Costanza, the only woman in the upper echelons of the White House, was addressing a Kiwanis banquet in her native Rochester, N.Y., when a fire bell interrupted her oratory.

"It's God calling," cracked Midge. "That's the next job I'm looking for. Only as an assistant, of course."

Midge Costanza already has a fairly important job as an assistant — for public liaison — to President Carter. The trim, 5-foot-1 Midge — the real name she never uses is Margaret — has the power to decide who, among thousands of groups and individuals wanting to see the President, gets past the White House portals.

The job keeps her telephone ringing 200 times a day while hundreds of letters pleading for a hearing in the White House pile up. They come from a diverse lot: Shoe industry representatives. Montana Indians. Practical nurses. Interpreters for the deaf. Activist Hawaiians.

Midge let the gays into the White House, and dissenting mail promptly followed.

Midge, 44 and single, is a former vice-mayor of Rochester, and the daughter of a Sicilian sausage company owner.

"I love being the only woman in the White House," she says. But she wishes there were others. "I can't represent every woman in the nation."

She's also the only ethnic, the only Catholic, the only Northeasterner, and the only former elected public official on the White House staff.

Striding in her pantsuit and three-inch heels into the White House, she calls out occasionally, "Tell the President I'm back so he can feel secure again."

One time, hand on hip, playing the vamp, she sashayed past a group of startled White House visitors and murmured huskily, "When you see me, you know what the President meant when he talked about lust in his heart."

Midge clearly admires the President as much as Carter appears to enjoy her style. He calls her "Midgie" and often, when they meet publicly they hug each other. "I'm a toucher, he's a toucher," she says.

Her dark eyes light up behind octagonal-shaped thick glasses when she says of her mission: "This is one of the greatest opportunities in my life. To serve 220 million people. To be part of history. And in a position to effect change."

Midge and Carter met in 1974 when she was running for Congress in Rochester and he was National Democratic Committee chairman.

She lost her election but helped Carter win his when she co-chaired his New York campaign. After the election, she called and said, "I'm going to advise you from Rochester," and he replied, "Would you like to do it from the White House?"

She started in a cluttered room just a few doors from the Oval Office. Much of the work for her and a staff of 10 involves referring petitioning groups to different agencies.

Sometimes there are tangible results. Thanks to Midge's office, a Jewish cemetery in Russia was saved from being bulldozed. And organizers of Food Day got to cater a meatless meal in the White House, despite the protests of the cattle industry.

"I will never apologize for allowing any organization to participate in the government it helped elect," Midge says.

She was serious, but most often her seriousness is concealed behind an uninhibited display of irreverence.

"You know when the President kept talking about spending more time with your families?" Midge asked a group of federal executives. "Well, I don't have one, so just when I decided to start a family, he told me I couldn't sin.

"So I asked him what was the difference between sinning and funning. 'It's sinning when I catch you,' he said."

Midge's raucous humor, her uninhibited style "is refreshing," says Stuart Eizenstat, assistant to the President for domestic policy. "It's much needed here. I don't normally kid around with anybody, but she is one of the few people who can get a laugh out of me."

Midge displays confidence in her assignment.

"I'm not in the position where I need permission to do something," she says. "I feel the confidence of the President, and he has never criticized me."

But she is sensitive to critics who say that she lacks real clout in the White House.

"I have the opportunity to affect policy as well as anybody else," she says. "If I see issues we're not addressing, nothing stops me from pointing them out — as I have done."

Use cherries in filling meringues

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Fresh sweet cherries make market stalls colorful right now, but hurry, hurry. Gather the tempting fruit while you may. The fresh sweet cherry season is short — from mid June to August.

For a luscious company dessert you might like to use some of the cherries to fill meringues. The meringues are inexpensive: they use leftover egg whites that may be stored in the freezer until you are ready to thaw them and put them to work in this sweet.

CHERRY MERINGUES

3 cups fresh sweet cherries
3 large egg whites, at room temperature
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar

Coconut Topping, see below

Halve and pit the cherries, reserving 8 whole ones for a garnish; chill. Beat together until frothy the egg whites, cream of tartar, salt and vanilla; gradually beat in the sugar, a tablespoon at a time, until very stiff peaks form and the sugar is dissolved. Cover a cookie sheet with plain ungreased paper; mark off eight 3½-inch circles; spread each circle with 1-3rd cup of the meringue; with the back of a tablespoon shape each portion of meringue to make a shell. Bake in a preheated 275-degree oven for 1 hour; turn off heat; let meringues dry in the oven with the door closed for 1½ hours. Run a spatula under each meringue to loosen and remove from paper. Store in an airtight container in a cool dry place. At serving time, fill the meringue shells with the halved cherries; add the Coconut Topping; garnish with the whole cherries. Makes 8 servings.

Coconut Topping: Beat together until thick 1 cup heavy cream, ¼ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Fold in ¼ to ½ cup flaked coconut.

Prostitutes fight for their rights

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

A politician in Utah was arrested by an undercover policewoman for soliciting for prostitution. In the Midwest a clergyman was arrested for the same reason.

The politician denied the charges but lost his battle in court. The minister confessed his sins the next Sunday before his congregation.

These and similar stories are hitting the headlines more frequently now that some cities are deciding that prostitutes shouldn't bear the full burden for the continuation of their profession.

It's strange how such a role reversal, a slight switch of perspective, can focus the public eye on a profession as old as Aristotle himself. The only difference is that Aristotle and his fellow Greeks did not consider prostitution a problem. It was simply a part of life.

If you think entrapment is new, you're mistaken. It has been a part of life for prostitutes for quite some time now. While this crackdown on vice may seem commendable at first glance, it does little to curb the practice. Entrapment focuses on the most vulnerable hooker of all, the plain streetwalker. Those who work in brothels, massage parlors or expensive prostitution rings represent less than 5 per cent of those who are jailed.

But now, the prostitutes are fighting back. They are organizing. In San Francisco, there is Coyote; New York has Pony; Honolulu, Dolphin. A primary aim of these groups is to push for the decriminalization of prostitution. Not the legalization, which brings about other sorts of controls, but decriminalization, which puts prostitution outside the realm of the law all together, like cigarette smoking or gun ownership.

Though the idea is frightening at first thought, these women make strong points in its favor. Prostitution laws are extremely costly to enforce, and certainly detract from the time and attention that can be paid to victim-oriented and violent crimes. In the city of Seattle, for one year only, enforcement cost $1 million.

Just to arrest one prostitute in Seattle, according to Prof. Jennifer James, cost $1,560. The bill to the taxpayers for arresting, processing, and imprisoning 2,116 prostitutes totaled $375,000 in 1971 in San Francisco.

The high price of prosecution and the doubtful benefits derived were discussed in the Proceedings of the National Conference of Women in Crime, sponsored by the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

According to the panelists, there are three major myths surrounding prostitution.

The first is that prostitution causes widespread venereal disease. The U.S. Public Health Service claims that hookers represent less than 3 per cent of the national incidence of VD.

The second myth of prostitution is that the activity is so involved with organized crime that to decriminalize it would increase racketeering. This seems unfounded, since if prostitution weren't a criminal offense, there would be little need for protection and police graft.

The third myth is that prostitution involves the ancillary crimes of robbery, assault, and drug offenses, and in order to control these, prostitution must be curbed.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Sun., July 10)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The goodwill of an influential person is extended to you and through your own activity you are able to make considerable progress. Use common sense in dealing with others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Don't neglect meditative exercises early in the day. Handle home affairs efficiently. Express love and devotion to close ties.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Make sensible plans to attain personal aims. Contact an associate who can give you the data you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Meditation early in the day will reveal how to get ahead faster. Be optimistic and forget any limitations you may have.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may find delays in the path of progress, but you can make up for lost time later. Express goodwill to others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Try to be more helpful to others and gain more respect in your community. Plan how to have more abundance in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Attend services of you choice early in the day. Later visit friends who are calm and peaceful. Express happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't take loved one so much for granted, but show your true devotion for best results. Make plans for the days ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Be sure to take time for philosophical study early in the day. Attend a group affair and improve your public standing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Spend more time on a creative outlet that could give you more abundance in the future. Use your energies wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Engage in activities where you can express your finest abilities. Evening is best spend at home with close ties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take time for meditation early in the day. Be sensible in going after your personal aims. Take no risks in motion.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Taking risks of any sort could prove troublesome; so follow rules and regulations that apply to you. Maintain poise at all times.

(Mon., July 11)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Morning is a good time to be practical about deciding material and factual issues. But as the day progresses you are better able to understand where you are headed. Not a good time to make any commitments or stir up any points of contention with others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Make the right decision where some monetary affair is concerned. Get the data you need regarding several projects on hand.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Handle personal affairs early and then you do very well where the practical side of life is concerned. Listen carefully to what a monetary expert has to suggest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Make some plan early that can be put in operation at a later date. Then relax and rebuild your energy. Show more devotion to kin.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Plan how to have more harmony with friends now and later get down to all that work ahead of you. Gain a personal aim. Please mate or loved one more.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): First take care of a civic duty before joining pals for a good time. Handle credit affairs well, also. Much happiness is yours later.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You have a fine inspirational idea now that you can discuss with a bigwig and get backing you need. Be more broad-minded if you want to advance more quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Handle your obligations yourself instead of relegating them to others for best results. A different attitude toward others gains goodwill.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Try to please partners more and be more conscientious in keeping promises. Handle a civic matter intelligently and safeguard your position in the community.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Take care of lesser chores and then look into new projects that will bring you more success. Make good impression on others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Give special attention to details and avoid repercussions. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets. Improve budget and don't be extravagant.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take care of home affairs wisely before meeting with congenials. Study a new project thoroughly before committing yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): You can expand routine affairs now so that you can soon command a greater income. Unexpected and delightful invitations possible.

Zucchini cake wakes up day

By Cecily Brownstone

MARY R. GREENE'S ZUCCHINI CAKE

3 large eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup corn oil
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups flour
2 cups coarsely shredded loosely packed unpared zucchini
½ cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts
½ cup dried currants

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at low speed and constantly scraping side of bowl, beat together for ½ minute the eggs, sugar, oil, baking powder, soda, salt, cinnamon and vanilla. At medium speed and constantly scraping side of bowl, beat 1 minute longer; mixture should be smooth. With a wooden spoon, gradually stir in the flour, keeping smooth, then the zucchini, nuts and currants. Pour into a greased and floured 10-inch angelcake pan. Bake until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 70 minutes. Let stand on rack for 15 minutes, then loosen edges and around tube and turn out on a wire rack. Cool completely.

Motherhood program reverses birth trend

ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
By The Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — In an economy where both husbands and wives work, Czechoslovak women are encouraged to leave their jobs to become government-paid mothers. The program has helped reverse a decline in Czechoslovakia's birth rate which had officials worried.

Under the government program, in force since 1973, a couple receives a bonus the equivalent of $200 at the birth of each child, $50 a month for the woman on maternity leave and monthly allowances ranging from $9 for one child to $128 for four, among other payments.

There also are favorable loans and mortgages, preferential housing, retirement benefits, low-cost day care and cheaper baby food and clothes.

"In 1976 we had 380,000 women on maternity leave" said an official in the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare.

Developing nations still have to cope with a population boom, but the birth rate in the United States and other industrial countries is on the decline.

For Europe, the trend has gone so far that populations are in danger of shrinking. Experts say this would decrease demand for teachers and create unemployment in other areas in the near future. Later this smaller younger generation would have the burden of supporting a larger older generation in retirement, they add.

In 1968 Czechoslovakia's birth rate had dropped to a low of 14.9 babies per 1,000 people, slipping ever closer to the death rate, and experts predicted the population would be dwindling by 1980.

The Communist Government here started pushing for ways to "improve the fertility of our women," said Dr. Vladimir Salda of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare. "People must have the will to populate."

The plan is designed to entice women, who are used to getting their own income, to stay at home.

Meat import estimates won't trigger quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imports of meat subject to a 1964 quota law continue to run below a year ago and so far show no sign of triggering stiff restrictions on the amount that can enter the U.S. market.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, as required by the law, announced this week a new estimate of 1977 meat imports. He said that as of July 1 the amount of meat expected to enter the U.S. this calendar year is not enough to trigger quotas.

The imports are being controlled by so-called "voluntary restraint" agreements negotiated with the meat-producing countries. Under these, the countries agree to hold down meat shipments so that strict quotas can be avoided.

Under the 1977 agreements, a total of 1.272 billion pounds of quota-type meat can be shipped to the United States by 15 eligible countries. The meat covered by the law is mostly beef, but includes fresh, chilled or frozen veal, mutton and goat meat.

A formula in the law permits up to about 1.282 billion pounds to be imported this year. If at any time in his quarterly estimates Bergland determines that 1977 imports will exceed that amount, the law provides that strict quotas be imposed for the remainder of the year.

Through May, the most recent month tabulated, about 503.7 million pounds of quota type meat was imported, down 9.5 per cent from more than 556.4 million pounds in the first five months of 1976.

Australia, the largest supplier, shipped 220.7 million pounds during January-May, a drop of 20 per cent from 276 million pounds in the same five months of last year.

New Zealand, with shipments of 102.4 million pounds, was down 10 per cent from 114.7 million a year earlier.

Meat imports from Canada, however, rose to 46.6 million pounds, a gain of almost 39 per cent from 33.6 million pounds in the first five months of 1976, according to government inspection reports.

Costa Rica showed an increase to 43.1 million pounds, a gain of nearly 17 per cent from 36.9 million pounds a year ago.

Breastfeeding continued concern of new mothers

By BOB LEVEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Christina Hammond is at that point. By her own admission, she no longer walks, she "waddles." Her first child is due in a week. It is a time of exhilaration and expectation at the Hammonds' home — but it is also a time for decision.

Mother's milk or formula? The time-honored way or the newfangled way? To breastfeed or not to breastfeed?

These days, the decision is fraught with irony and danger.

Irony because options are only a few decades old, and lots of humans survived lots of babyhoods before Similac got into the act. But danger because mothers' milk has been found in some cases to contain dangerous chemicals.

Mothers' milk dangerous? In a world of Red Dye No. 2 and cyclamates, is nothing safe or sacred any more? Evidently not. According to testimony at a Senate hearing last month, and according to independent research at Harvard University, mothers' milk has at times and in some areas of the country been found to contain toxic herbicides and pesticides.

There is also growing concern — and some evidence to support it — that some breastfed babies do not gain weight as rapidly as bottlefed babies. Meanwhile, there has been a resurgence of the argument that breastfeeding a child monopolizes its mother's life. That has been an especially tough one for some women in this age of female careerism.

All this leaves Christina Hammond concerned and a little confused.

As of 10 days ago, she had made the decision to breastfeed her child, despite any dangers. "It's no more of a risk than cow's milk," she said. "There are far more dangerous things. Tap water sure of any of the foods you're eating.

"If breastfeeding makes my child more comfortable," said Christina Hammond, "that outweighs the risk."

And yet ...

Just the week before, Hammond's mother had seen a TV program. Experts were warning of toxins in mothers' milk. She called her daughter to warn her. That got Hammond's mind churning on the question all over again.

Just two weeks before, Hammond had gone for a prenatal chat with a pediatrician. Another pregnant woman was there. She planned to bottlefeed. "The doctor was more supportive of her," said Hammond, a little bitter at having her confidence shaken.

Some months ago, in another discussion with her mother, Hammond had been warned that breastfeeding might "tie her down." That cut some ice — Hammond has decided not to nurse her child beyond the age of eight months, although many mothers and authorities urge breastfeeding for as long as three years.

And although her husband supports her decision to breastfeed, Hammond has heard the whispers — that breastfeeding mothers run the risk of appearing unattractive, or of damaging their figures.

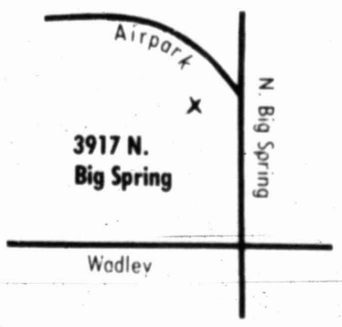

But Hammond, who lives in Potomac, Md., did not make her decision on the basis of whimsy or wives' tales. She sought advice from an organization that specializes in the breastfeeding question. It is called La Leche League ("leche" means milk in Spanish), and it is dedicated to the proposition that breastfeeding produces healthier kids and happier mothers.

The league has about 45 chapters in the Washington area.

Here's the answer to those problems

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — A few years ago I painted the galvanized gutters around our house. They have been peeling for some time, but I neglected them until now. Will I have to remove all the old paint before repainting and is there any particular kind of paint to use to prevent them from peeling again?

A. — Remove as much of the old paint as possible with a hand wire brush or, if you are very careful, a rotary wire brush on your portable electric drill. Wear goggles to protect your eyes from flying chips of paint. One of the ways to prevent peeling in the future is to apply a coat of acrylic latex primer and then a coat of acrylic latex paint designed for metal, although once the primer is on, you might even use the same type of house paint.

Q. — I have sometimes seen a wood grain effect on a surface that has been painted. How is this obtained? I would like to try it soon.

A. — For many years, wood graining was achieved with the use of such things as sponges and special cloths. Today, your best bet is to purchase one of the wood graining kits, which include everything necessary to get the proper result. Be alerted, however, to the voice of experience. Don't try graining on anything important until you have practiced considerably on scrap wood.

Q. — Somebody asked this question of you about a year ago, but at that time I had no need to pay attention to the reply. Now I have. How do you prevent a toilet tank from sweating so much that puddles of water form on the floor under it?

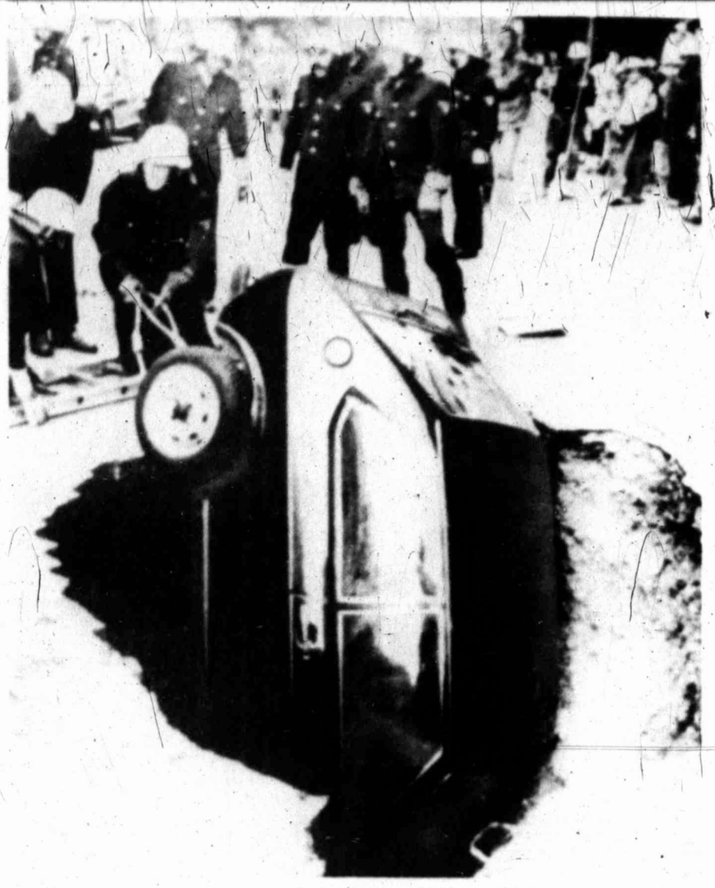

A. — Sweating is caused by condensation, which occurs when warm, moist air settles on a cold surface. The surface of the tank naturally is cold because of the cold water inside it. There are various solutions to this problem. The simplest is to cover the tank with one of those fabric-type coverings that also serve the purpose of being decorative. Another is to line the inside of the tank with rubber pads or other materials sold especially for that purpose. The lining comes between the water and the tank and thus keeps the outside of the tank from getting cold. It is installed with a special glue after the tank has been emptied. This is done by shutting off the water to the tank, flushing and then using a sponge to remove the water at the bottom that does not flush out. The glue will hold only if the inside of the tank is completely dry.

Q. — I have some lacquer thinner left over from a job I did a couple of years ago. Can I use it as a thinner for an oil paint?

A. — Absolutely no!

MINI RECIPES

Mix together in a bowl, 1 can (4-¾ ounces) roast beef spread, 2 tablespoons onion, 1 tablespoon pimiento, ¼ teaspoon prepared horseradish and ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Unroll dough from 1 package (8 ounces) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls and separate into 4 squares. Seal dough along perforations and roll each into a 5-inch square. Spoon beef filling onto center of each square. Moisten edges of dough with water and draw opposite edges up over filling to form a triangle; seal with fork. Bake in a 375 degree oven 10 to 15 minutes until golden brown. Makes 4 turnovers.

Pigeon racing new, very popular sport

SEATTLE (AP) — If horse racing is the "sport of kings," what does that make pigeon racing?

It makes pigeon racing the sport of the people — about 18,000 American people.

"I used to raise pigeons when I was a kid," says Jack Chavis, of the East Hill Invitational Pigeon Racing Club. "Then when I was about 18, I got rid of them and started chasing girls. I got back into pigeons after I got married."

Successful racing pigeons fetch high prices when sold for breeding. One retired European pigeon was sold last year for $23,000.

Devotees say one way pigeon racing is unlike horse racing is that no one knows what pigeon won until hours after the race is over.

In a race, the entries are released from a single location and the birds then fly home. Since "home" can be one of several thousand lofts, the winner is the one to fly over the most yards per second.

It takes time and extensive calculation to decide the victor in a pigeon race.

Puget Sound Concourse members can participate in 16 races this season. Any Saturday afternoon you can find those improving the pigeon breed looking skyward, calculating winnings and losings.

The race from Battle Ground, near the Oregon border, 104 air miles away, to the Puget Sound area is the shortest, and the race from Burney, Calif., is the longest at 442 miles.

No one knows exactly how a pigeon finds its way home. One theory is that the pigeon can sense magnetic fields, which vary at locations other than the bird's home.

The races tell each handler and breeder how successful he has been in his training techniques.

Racers like to talk about how a New York City pigeon racer won $43,000 in a club pool two years ago.

But most aren't that lucky.

Jack Cataline, another member of the East Hill Invitational Club, had a pigeon that became so exhausted it decided to walk home. Someone in Oregon spotted it heading north on the freeway.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cigarettes real threat

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am one of those reformed smokers whom smokers always complain about. I saw recently on television that while cigarette smoking is on the decline, it is not decreasing enough, especially among women. What disturbs me the most is that every time I shop at my local food chain, I see a group of young teenagers, both boys and girls, just puffing away on cigarettes. They seem to be really hooked. With all the bad publicity about the ills of cigarette smoking, kids still seem to be trying them. I know some of these children and they come from good families who care about them. What can be done about this terrible problem?—Beatrice V.

Dear Beatrice: I share your concern about cigarette smoking, especially among young people, not only because of the obvious dangers of smoking, but also because, in not too many years, many of the young girls will be in their child-bearing years and we are just beginning to learn of the harmful effects of smoking on the unborn child.

Dr. Benjamin Bobxbyrd, Jr. president of the American Cancer Society, blames some of the problem on the printed media, which still carry cigarette advertising, even though such ads have been banned from the broadcast media. Dr. Byrd has suggested four immediate steps to reduce incidence of lung cancer and other diseases caused by cigarette smoking:

1—The number of anti-smoking TV spots should be increased four times. Young people, especially, have to see that society does not approve of cigarette smoking. (Incidentally, these ads could emphasize the growing concern of non-smokers over the effect of the smoker's habit on the non-smokers. The work of newly formed anti-smoking groups like CASP and ASK could be highlighted.)

2—Ads showing young, healthy, and sexy models— cowboys, sportsmen and women and other glamorous types— help to advance the impression that smoking is attractive, desirable and healthy. This type of ad should be banned entirely, the ultimate goal being the elimination of all cigarette advertising.

3—More information needs to be made available to all doctors, especially gynecologists and obstetricians and others dealing with women and children, so they can more simply and intelligently inform their parents of the hazardous effects on them and their children of cigarette smoking.

Many young children begin smoking before the age of 13, so it is not enough to approach them in the junior high schools, when it is often too late. We need to reach children in the elementary grades with anti-smoking educational programs such as that developed by the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Byrd is right. We cannot just hope that most people will give up smoking of their own accord.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Maryland 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Schweitzer-like effort for hospital continues

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
By The Associated Press

LAMBARENE, Gabon (AP) — A new $6 million Albert Schweitzer hospital complex is rising on the banks of the Ogooue River here to replace the termite-ridden collection of huts the late medical missionary built after coming to Africa 64 years ago.

Administering the project is a former French army commando sergeant who came to the hospital after reading a small advertisement in a church magazine.

Max Caulet, 56-year-old veteran of World War II, the French-Indochina war and the Algerian war of independence, says he dislikes being called "the new Schweitzer."

"What matters here is not this or that individual but the Schweitzer spirit that animates all of us who work to preserve this unique institution," he said in his office hut overlooking the steamy Ogooue.

A few yards away, the workers of what Caulet proudly calls "the Albert Schweitzer construction company" were busy erecting the new complex begun on Jan. 1.

Like the 10-member expatriate medical staff of mainly Swiss doctors and nurses, the architects and builders are semi-volunteers who came to this remote spot in Gabon's equatorial rain forest on 18month contracts earning a mere fraction of what they could earn at home.

Schweitzer established his jungle hospital here in 1913 and was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1952 for his life's work. His worldwide renown kept charitable funds flowing in during his lifetime, but after he died in 1965 at the age of 90 the flow became a trickle and the long-outmoded hospital seemed doomed.

Caulet, then working as administrator of vineyard and forest estates in southern France, was recruited through the ad in a Protestant magazine in 1971 to try to put the financial situation in order.

He said he found the hospital equipment worn out, the wooden buildings in danger of collapse and the staff demoralized. Albert Schweitzer committees in the United States and many European countries were still collecting funds, but organizational difficulties and a lack of whole-hearted response brought minimal returns.

The United States offered $1 million toward a reconstruction project, but more more was needed for the plan and to meet the hospital's $2,500-a-day running costs. To make matters worse, the Gabon government of President Albert-Bernard Bongo, cool toward what it regarded as the hospital's paternalistic traditions, was threatening to take it over and turn it into a state institution.

Although Schweitzer was admired by the African population for hundreds of miles around his hospital, some government officials in distant Libreville, the capital, considered him a white supremacist at heart.

No black physician ever worked in the Schweitzer hospital as a permanent member of the medical staff, but now there are 50 black nurses, many of them being trained by the hospital.

Opposition to the hospital also came from outside Africa, where some governments and private donors questioned the need for a charity institution in oil-rich Gabon, one of 1975 Caulet was ready to give up. He told the leaders of the various Schweitzer committees that the hospital would have to close down unless they agreed to a complete reorganization.

Caulet said Schweitzer supporters in America and Western Europe then gave him full powers to rescue the hospital and appointed him president of a new international foundation based in Lambarene. For the first time since Schweitzer's death, a single individual was in charge.

Caulet established a personal relationship with President Bongo. Within a few weeks, Bongo had not only prolmised a $2 million contribution to the building project, but gave a formal guarantee to let the hospital continue operating under its expatriate administration and medical staff.

Caulet collected another million dollars from governments and private donors in the United States, Britain, West Germany, Holland, Switzerland and France. A Protestant lay preacher, Caulet said he is particularly proud of a $5,000 contribution he received from Pope Paul VI. Communist East Germany sent a contribution in the form of several tons of medicines and equipment.

With his operating budget assured through 1980 and twothirds of the building costs collected or promised, Caulet said he still needs about $2 million for the ambitious three-stage project which he hopes will be inaugurated on Jan. 14, 1980, the 105th anniversary of Schweitzer's birth.

The new hospital will have beds for 180 patients and their immediate families. The families are an essential ingredient of Schweitzer's method of treating African patients. Only the pigs, goats and chickens they used to bring with them have been banished from the hospital grounds since Caulet took charge.

Lancaster teens begin Monopoly-style firm

By JIM RUTH
Lancaster Sunday News

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A lot of teen-agers still pass time occasionally by playing Monopoly: buying property, acquiring houses and hotels and buying into utilities.

But for T. Winfield Hauck and Gregg A. Weaver, who have just graduated from Manheim Township High School, the "game" is for real.

Hauck, 19, and Weaver, 18, are partners in a new but booming company, Amalgamated Rentals Co. Their holdings today number 13 rental properties to which they hold title, under mortgage, of course.

Hauck and Weaver insist they have only just begun their own private and serious version of Monopoly. Now they expect to channel their property acquisition in the direction of "large apartment houses."

From there the next move is, as any Monopoly buff might guess, to hotels, preferably in Atlantic City. And, one day, if all goes according to the plan which thus far has served them so well, Amalgamated Rentals will move into railroading, which Hauck sees as the future transportation hope of this country.

Hauck was the originating force behind this ambitious thrust. Ever since he was old enough to earn money doing odd jobs, he has managed his money sufficiently well to nurture a savings account.

"Then one day when I was about 16," he said, "I was riding down the street and I saw this stock brokerage and decided to look into buying stocks."

He made his first investment a $92 purchase. The stock purchases increased with young Hauck's purchasing power until about a year and a half later when the then 17-year-old decided there must be more action for his hard-earned cash.

"Stocks had paid off pretty good," he said, "but my goal was to someday own a resort hotel in Atlantic City so I thought why not go from stocks into real estate, to start with property, then houses and on up to hotels, just like in Monopoly."

He found willing and helpful realtors and friends n Enid and Bob Niquette of a local real estate firm.

"I was impressed right off with his interest," Niquette said. "I explained the investment return potentials and the pitfalls as well. By the time he was 17½, we had his first property under agreement. We settled on his 18th birthday so he could have the property entirely in his own name."

One major reason the Hauck master plan has proceded so well is the businesslike influence brought into the venture by Hauck's partner. Hauck, who had already acquired and rented out other properties, admits the business at that point still had some rough edges despite professional guidance from lawyers and accountants. With Weaver's emergence as a partner the venture took on new organizational strength.

Separate bank accounts established as kitties for taxes, maintenance and other needs were consolidated. Detailed ledgers were initiated and checking accounts replaced complicated banking procedures.

Being so heavily mortgaged doesn't bother them. "It's smarter to borrow for a profit than to buy outright," Hauck said, citing tax advantages.

Of the properties they now hold, nine are at present operable and four in the process of rehabilitation. The latter four were purchased recently, three attached row houses from the Lancaster Redevelopment Authority for $500 each and one from a local bank for $400 in the same neighborhood, a marginal ghetto.

They now have a fulltime staff of five, each working in some renovation or maintenance specialty.

"We plan to start moving more into sales instead of rentals and to reinvest proceeds from sales in the acquisition of properties in higher market areas," Hauck said.

"We try to keep our properties in liveable condition and we've had to do a lot of work on some of them," he said. "The whole thing has meant a lot of work and sacrifice, especially social life, of which we have practically none."

As for the loss of social life, Hauck and Weaver, who now devote full time to their business, which is in the process of incorporation, rationalize that this aspect of their lives is merely being postponed, not forsaken.

"By the time we're 25, we hope to have made our fortune and then we can get marridd like everyone else," Hauck said without a trace of jest.

Crew wrecks wrong mansion

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It might be called the Case of the Mistaken Mansion.

But it wasn't billed that way when the City of Sacramento went to court Tuesday to file a $150,000 civil complaint against the people it claims tore apart the home of California's first governor.

The city-owned structure, built by Peter Burnett, was gutted a few months ago by a work crew which said it accidentally did its job on the wrong house.

Accused blames twin

Agence France-Presse

BOVALINO, Southern Italy — If identical twins each accuse the other of being guilty of a crime which only one of them committed, who is the real culprit?

The is the Hercule Poirot-sized brain-twister that may be facing the police at Bovalino, where they arrested a local man for fraudulent bankruptcy.

He is one of identical twins. Even their mother cannot tell one from the other — and she refused to put the finger on her son when the lawmen asked her to identify him.

The arrested man blamed his brother. The fact that he was carrying papers belonging to the wanted man was an accident, he declared.

'Good life' too much

VIENNA (AP) — A leading physician here recently warned that the good life can reduce the life expectancy of Austrians.

Hermann Neugebauer, president of the Viennese Medical Association, said recent reports showed women no longer live an average of 75 years and many men die before they reach 68. For a number of years, those had been the average life spans of Austrians.

Life expectancy had slowly declined, the doctor said, because traffic accidents, illnesses caused by environmental problems and too much good living had taken their tolls.

Neugebauer said Austrians drank, smoked and ate too much. In Vienna, he said, more than half of the female population was shown to be overweight.

City of Houston faces damage suit

HOUSTON (AP) — An Arkansas man who claimed he was beaten by Houston police filed a $200,000 damage suit Friday in federal court against the City of Houston.

Willie S. Dobson of North Little Rock, Ark., said in the suit he was picked up last January at a local restaurant and beaten on the way to a police substation. He said he was beaten so severely he had to be hospitalized.

He claimed in his suit tht he was released the next day and checked into a hospital where he stayed one week for treatment of injuries. He said he left the hospital on crutches and wearing a cast.

The suit did not state the reason for Dobson's arrest. It said he was in Houston with fellow employes for a company meeting.

Police officials could not be reached for comment on the suit.

Major lawn pest arriving in area

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

Cotten across the area is making good growth and for the most part, fruiting well. The hot days and warm nights have been ideal cotton weather. Generally, insect problems have been minimal. The cotton fleahopper is causing some square loss but percent square set has been above 70 percent in most fields which is considered acceptable.

The weather, although still hot and dry, has not been quite as stressful as in early June, with temperatures down a little and drying winds eased off somewhat. A good July rain would certainly be welcomed by farmers, ranchers and home gardeners alike.

A slow, steady increase in retail beef prices may soon be giving cattle producers a slightly bigger piece of the beef profit pie, notes Dr. Ded Uvacek, a livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cattlemen have been suffering from an extended period of low prices, but retail beef prices have increased about 5 percent in recent weeks. The national average composite retail price for beef was $1.41 per pound the third week of May, notes Uvacek. Choice fed steers in that same week averaged $40.86 per hundredweight, up 11 percent over the March average price.

Consumers have been paying more for their beef mainly due to both the higher cattle prices and an increase in the cost of marketing. This latter cost, of course, does not benefit cattle producers, says the Texas A&M specialist. The marketing part of the beef industry has accounted for a larger and larger portion of the consumer's dollar spent on beef. More money was paid into higher labor rates, transportation costs and packaging. This left the producer with a smaller piece of the beef profit pie.

While the farm-to-retail spread dropped substantially in April and early May it has jumped back up again during recent weeks. The only hope for cattlemen, therefore, is higher retail prices to the comsumer.

It appears that the major flight of the May or June beetle, the adult stage of the white grubworm, is now occuring in the Midland area. The females are laying eggs and the grubworms that hatch will soon be feeding on the roots of bermuda grass and St. Augustine grass in home lawns. Treatment time varies with the particular area of the state and ranges from early July in south Texas to Mid-August in the Panhandle.

Homeowners in Midland County will need to treat about the second week in August this year, it appears. It is important to treat during the end of the egg hatch and before the larvae has completed the first larval stage known as the first instar. Once grub worms are mature control is very difficult with chemicals since they have developed resistance to many insecticides. White grubs in excessive numbers can heavily damage lawns.

Check for white grubs by cutting a square foot section of sod with a shovel and examining all of the roots and soil to a depth of 4 inches. Examine at least one square foot of sod for each 1,000 square feet of lawn area. Chemical treatment is needed if there are more than four grubs per square foot of sod.

Diazinon provides adequate control and should be used at the recommended rates given on the chemical container label. The granular form is easier to apply and easier to wash into the soil than the liquid or spray formulations. After using granules, drag the grass with a tow sack or water hose to knock the granules down to the soil. Then apply enough water ½ to 1 inch to soak the granules into the soil. The key to white grub control in home lawns is proper timing of chemical applications and getting the insecticide through the grass to the root zone where the grubs are feeding.

Do not use chlordane, heptachler or dieldrin as the species has developed high levels of tolerance to the chlorinated hydrocarbons. Further information is provided in the publication, "White Grubs in Texas Turfgrass" which is available at the county extension office.

Note of courage

LOS ANGELES (AP) —At the Sebulvida Veterans Administration Hospital, the sound of courage is the smooth, mellow tone of Otto Hayek's trombone. Hayek is a quadriplegic.

A patient there until 1951, Hayek has been working four or five days a week as a volunteer at the big facility for nearly 15 years. He puts in four of five hours each day as a courier for the spinal out-patient department, zipping through the miles of corridors on his electric chair.

As if that weren't enough, he took up the trombone a few years age.

Shortage of space delays meaures

WASHINGTON (AP) — For want of a room a new government department was delayed. Or so it is claimed in Congress.

It took about a month for a House-Senate conference committee to hold its first meeting on legislation to create a Department of Energy, a major element of President Carter's legislative package for dealing with the nation's energy needs.

Why did the committee, which must work out differences in energy department bills passed by the House and Senate, wait so long?

"Actually, we've been unable to find a room," said Senate staff aide Ellen Miller.

The room finally found was one of the smallest in the Capitol complex. But that's typical of conference committees.

The trouble stems from the long-standing reluctance of senators and House members to yield a symbolic inch to each other. As a result, conference committees almost always meet in the Capitol building rather than in one of the two Senate or three House office buildings nearby which have scores of spacious rooms.

The Capitol is considered neutral ground, but the rooms tend to be tiny.

Once the committee members take their seats, there's a mad scramble among staff members, lobbyists and others for the remaining places.

When the committee began meeting on the energy department bill, Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said everyone who wanted to be present should be allowed in the room.

The room began looking like a crowded elevator. "Keep letting them in," Udall told a policeman.
