Lawyer: Flash blinded driver

New blood test confirms Diana's driver was legally drunk

■ Attorney for Fayed family claims film seized at crash site shows Henri Paul "dazzled" by a camera flash

Associated Press

PARIS — Photos taken minutes before Princess Diana's Mercedes crashed show her driver "dazzled" by a camera flash, a lawyer said Tuesday. Judicial sources said a new blood test confirmed the driver was legally drunk.

Traces of anti-depressants also were found in the driver's blood, Europe-1 radio said. The report could not be confirmed, although investigators said they had "not ruled out" looking for substances other than alcohol.

What responsibility driver Henri Paul may have had in the Aug. 31 crash that killed him, Diana and her beau Dodi Fayed is a key question in the investigation.

Paul was a security officer at the Ritz Hotel, owned by Fayed's father, Mohamed Al Fayed. The Fayed family has defended the driver, blaming the crash on paparazzi chasing the car.

Bernard Dartevelle, a lawyer for the Fayed family in Paris, said two frames from a photographer's roll of film seized at the crash site show Paul startled by a camera flash, Diana's bodyguard pulling down the sun visor and Diana looking out the back at a motorcycle headlight.

The film is being held by police and was not made public. Darteville said he has had access to it, but could not release prints or the name of the photographer. However, its existence was also confirmed by a defense lawyer in the case, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In an interview in his Paris office, he described photos he said were "clearly" taken from in front of the Mercedes. That would buttress some witness accounts that a car or motorcycle was directly in front of Diana's car before it crashed, blocking its path.

However, it was not clear precisely where on the 1.8-mile drive the shot of the startled driver were taken. Earlier photos on the roll showed the princess and Fayed getting into the Mercedes, and a later picture showed the crash scene, he said.

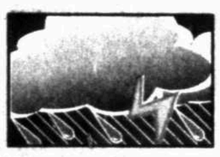

"The photo taken immediately before the first photo of the accident shows the Mercedes taken from very close," Dartevelle said.

"One sees very distinctly the driver dazzled by a flash," he said. "One sees very distinctly the bodyguard, at his side, who with a brisk gesture lowers the visor to protect himself from the flash, and one sees very dis-

Canonization

CALCUTTA, India — Mother Teresa already is considered a saint — if not a goddess — by many in Calcutta. But the Vatican said Tuesday it would take time to determine her official status in the Catholic Church. Since her death last Friday of a heart attack at age 87, the Vatican has been flooded with requests that it waive the five-year waiting period before the canonization process can begin.

Tobacco credit

WASHINGTON — In a move certain to make cigarette makers fume, the Senate prepared Tuesday to repeal a $50 billion credit for the tobacco industry that was slipped quietly into the balanced budget deal in late July. The provision allowed tobacco companies to credit $50 billion in taxes from new excise taxes on cigarettes against what they would pay in the proposed $368.5 billion settlement of anti-smoking lawsuits.

Permian Basin Fair and Exposition

Food, fun and the cowboy experience

Fun is high on agenda of fair's visitors

ODESSA — Even as the Kids Rodeo at the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition was winding down Friday night, enthusiasm ran high for the youthful contestants.

"It's pretty hard and demanding for kids of this age to sit on something that slippery." The announcer's voice cut through the conversations going on around the rodeo arena as family members and visitors waited for the next contestant in the Mutton Bustin' competition. "Tyler Taylor — 51 score, that's the man to beat."

Justin Sizemore busted out of the chute, hanging on for all he was worth. His score: 49. Next up: Dustin Huff, who also valiantly hung on as long as his limbs would allow. Still, neither youngster broke Taylor's record.

An experienced rider in his second year of rodeoing, "the man to beat" Tyler Taylor of Odessa, strolled from the arena, a smile busting across his serious expression. Dirt covered the bridge of his nose.

"He just turned 4," said his mother, Becki Taylor.

"I want to thank all the parents for this rodeo experience for youth and this cowboy experience for youth. The cowboy way of life ... always work hard, give 100 percent," the announcer said as workers began preparing for the calf riding.

City to take over 3 housing programs

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The city of Midland will be taking over, effective Oct. 1, three housing programs it had contracted out to Midland Neighborhood Housing Services and Casa de Amigos, it was announced at Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Also, council members made official their order to hold a special election Nov. 4 on whether to adopt a 1/4-cent sales and use tax to attract new businesses and expand existing businesses.

Council members were briefed on changes in the three programs — the Homeownership Incentive Program, Single Housing Rehabilitation Loan Program and Housing Emergency Repairs Program, which deal with down payment assistance, repairs for senior citizens and housing rehabilitation.

Mayor Bobby Burns explained that the changes were made to make the programs more efficient.

By streamlining the process, he said, "it will let us provide more loans and rehabilitation services and do it better. I think we can do it better and perhaps do more down the road."

Sylvester Cantu, who oversees the Community Development Block Grant program for the city, said that city officials would be attempting to handle three concerns once they take over administration of the programs.

Council OKs funding for Ritz renovations

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Arts Assembly of Midland received funding Tuesday from the City Council for a renovation project on the Ritz Theater at Main Street and Texas Avenue.

Arts Assembly Executive Director Linda Bond asked the council for funds to clean up the facility and make minor roof repairs and to pay half of the funds of a feasibility study on possibly converting the theater into a multimedia multiuse facility.

"We'd like to ask first that you don't tear it down," she said, noting that it was an early downtown building. She said that a recent tour of the facility indicated that it was still sound and had potential.

Miss Texas dives into first day of contest

By Mark Helm
Hearst News Service

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Reagan Hughes, this year's Miss Texas, plunged into the first day of competition for the Miss America title Tuesday, answering questions by judges and taking part in the pageant's swimsuit contest.

Hughes, a Midland native, said she felt "a little nervous" but was glad the competition finally had started "after preparing for the last two weeks."

Fifty-one contestants are competing in the pageant's preliminary round, which will end Thursday. They are being judged on their talent, how they appear in a swimsuit and in evening wear and how they respond to interviews.

The top 10 finalists will compete Saturday night for the 77th Miss America title, which includes a $40,000 college scholarship and a year-long speaking tour.

After her morning interview with judges, Hughes said, "I felt like I was myself and that's really my main goal." The tall, 22-year-old Baylor University senior, who has blond hair and blue eyes, said the questions touched on her interest in serving as a mentor to school children and on issues in the news, such as the proposed European Monetary Union.

"There's really no way to prepare for the interview, except to keep up on current events and above all be yourself," she said.

Pageant officials have emphasized that the contestants should be natural and have told the judges to deduct points when they believe a contestant is not answering honestly.

"We want a woman to put her best foot forward, not the best foot of someone else she thinks might win," said Leonard Horn, CEO of the Miss America Orgatinctly Princess Diana, turning to look behind the vehicle, and one sees very distinctly the yellow headlight of a motorcycle."

FATAL: Investigators walk, drive through crash site

Several witnesses have reported seeing a motorcycle with a yellow headlight following the Mercedes, he said.

The only survivor of the crash, bodyguard Trevor Rees-Jones, is in a Paris hospital recovering from surgery and so far has been unable to speak with investigators.

The French daily Le Figaro quoted French investigators Tuesday as saying the accident most probably was caused "by alcohol and excessive speed."

A third blood test confirmed two earlier tests showing the level of alcohol in Paul's bloodstream was well above France's legal limit.

A highly placed judicial source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the test showed the alcohol level at 1.75 grams per liter of blood. A police source described it only as just under 1.8 grams. Two earlier tests showed a level of 1.75 and 1.82, respectively.

An anti-alcoholism group says a level of 1.75 is the equivalent of drinking nine shots of whiskey quickly.

Michael Cole, a London spokesman for Al Fayed, said: "We have not seen the report and we will be seeking professional advice."

If the report that Paul had antidepressants in his bloodstream is confirmed, investigators could argue that the drugs intensified the effects of the alcohol.

At the crash scene Tuesday, onlookers gawked as investigators walked and drove through the tunnel where the wreck occurred, trying to reconstruct the fatal accident.

Passers-by craned their necks to peer into the tunnel as the team examined the 13th pillar, where the car crashed. The spot is still adorned with flowers.

Various reports of the crash say Paul was driving at speeds as high as 120 mph.

But Dartevelle also disputed that, saying the car's speedometer was not frozen at nearly 120 mph, as reports have said. The vehicle might have been going as fast as 90 mph, "but right now there are no objective means to establish this speed," he said.

It is known that the Diana's Mercedes was trailed by paparazzi; it is not known by how far. Some photographers have claimed they were as far behind as 500-600 yards.

The photo Dartevelle described could have been taken as far from the crash site as the Place de la Concorde, which was towards the beginning of the roughly 5-minute drive.

Dartevelle said he doubted that possibility, because if it had been on the big square, "there would have been more light in the background."

Dartevelle said witness accounts he's seen indicate that a car was working in tandem with a motorcycle — trying to slow down the Mercedes so the motorcycle could get even with it and snap photos.

"A (car) driver, who is maybe a photographer, and a motorcyclist, also perhaps a photographer, are very directly implicated in this accident," he claimed.

Nine photographers and a motorcyclist detained in the crash are under investigation for manslaughter and failing to assist accident victims, a crime in France.

Judicial and police sources have indicated recently there is little evidence on the manslaughter charge — meaning little evidence that photographers directly contributed to the crash. Instead, they appear to be focusing on the charge of failing to aid victims.

EXPO: Fair expected to draw 80,000 to 90,000 visitors

(From 1A)

Scott — have two sons in the competition. At 6 years old, James has graduated from sheep to calves and would be a contestant in the calf-riding event. Recently, both youngsters competed in Santa Fe, N.M., walking away from their rides with first and second places, their mother said.

"It's a good family sport," Mrs. Taylor said. Looking around the arena and the stands, she added, "A lot of good people out here. It's really a good thing for a family to get into."

Another mother, Odessan Jennifer Smith, agreed. Her 5-year-old son, Kasee Pate, was overcome with shyness when faced with questions from a stranger, but he did say he rode because it was "fun."

The three letter word also ranked high on the agenda of teen-agers cruising the carnival rides at the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition, which continues through Saturday at Ector County Coliseum.

"I came for the fun," said 12-year-old Ashley Gonzales.

"The girls," confided 15-year-old Buck Fields of Odessa when asked what drew him to the event.

"Girls and fun," said 14-year-old Jason Chavez.

"The guys," said 14-year-old Trista Gonzales.

Nods of agreement passed among the teen-agers, who all attend Hood Junior High School in Odessa. The vote was unanimous — girls, guys, and fun were the main attractions.

The fair features all the expected (and some unexpected) events, including farming and ranching shows and exhibits; a cowboy symposium; live music; a Wild West Show; a Family Circus; a beauty pageant; exhibitions of arts and crafts, products and foods; a talent show; carnival rides; food and beverage booths; a petting zoo; pony rides; a lion and tiger show; an aerial act; an exhibit from NASA; numerous youth activities; and horses and carriages.

The horses and carriages are tucked inside one of the barns.

"They are her horses," Shane Leverett of Gardendale pointed to his wife sitting next to him. "It's her deal."

One of the carriages is owned by Debbie Leverett and Kathy Allen, who launched their business this spring. The carriage is used for weddings and special occasions.

Attendance at this year's fair and exposition is expected to be between 80,000 and 90,000 with visitors coming to Odessa from throughout the Permian Basin and eastern New Mexico. Fair hours are 5 to 10 p.m. today and Thursday, and 10 a.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday. The carnival opens at 6 p.m. today and Thursday, 4 p.m. Friday and noon Saturday.

Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and $2 for children 12 and under. Complimentary "Park and Ride" will run Friday from 5 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. and Saturday from 3 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at Music City Mall, Sears parking lot. Those riding the bus may buy their fair admission tickets on the bus.

"We come every year," said Odessan Creshia Bailey. "It's just an every-year tradition to get to come to the fair."

Much like the teen-agers from Hood Junior High, the reasons for coming have changed for Ms. Bailey's now 14-year-old son.

"When he was smaller, we would come and see all the animals." Ms. Bailey laughed. "Now that he is a teen-ager and has discovered girls, he's a lot more interested in the carnival and the girls."

Viewing the arts and the crafts on display is among the activities Ms. Bailey most enjoys doing at the fair.

"I get lost walking around looking at the crocheting, the arts and crafts," the work "people have done," Ms. Bailey said. "I could spend hours in there looking."

Ms. Bailey's eyes surveyed the fair grounds around her. "There's always good food out here. And you can find just about anything you want."

nization.

Hughes said that her experience in competing in five Miss Texas contests had helped her avoid getting too nervous during the interview.

"The Miss Texas contests are also really large productions ... with a lot of cameras and reporters, so I knew what it's like to be going through something like this," she said. "Frankly, I'm really impressed by how the women from some of the smaller states are handling all of this."

Hughes competed in the swimsuit competition Tuesday night, wearing a black one-piece outfit. It has been the center of controversy since pageant officials announced earlier this year that contestants could wear either one-piece or two-piece bathing suits.

Critics have charged that the decision to let contestants wear two-piece swimsuits, which were last worn in 1947, was made to increase television ratings.

Horn called the charge "ridiculous." He said the decision "was never some grand plan to boost ratings. We just thought is was time to let women chose for themselves which suit they would be comfortable in.

'People wear two-piece bathing suits every day to the pool or the beach. I understand the issues around this, but it still doesn't seem like it should be this much of an issue.'

—Reagan Hughes, Miss Texas

"Besides, women are consistently our largest segment of viewers; so the implication that we're doing this to pander to men is crazy."

Hughes said she was "surprised at how big a deal" the bathing suit controversy has become. "People wear two-piece bathing suits every day to the pool or the beach," she said. "I understand the issues around this, but it still doesn't seem like it should be this much of an issue."

She said she had decided to wear a black one-piece swimsuit with mesh in the middle. "I guess the mesh gives the illusion that it's a two-piece, but believe me, it's a one-piece," she said. "I just feel more comfortable in a one-piece and, when you're on stage, being comfortable is the most important thing."

Hughes will compete in the talent portion of the pageant Wednesday night. She plans to sing "To Dream a Dream" from the musical "Les Miserables."

CITY: CDBG funds to be placed in escrow account

(From 1A)

One concern was to continue a grievance committee to moderate complaints about the program.

A second concern was speeding up payments to contractors who participate in the rehabilitation program and the third concern was expanding service for the rehabilitation program.

To address the last two concerns, Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said that CDBG funds would be placed in an escrow account to shorten the time contractors would have to wait for payment.

He explained to council members that many of the contractors participating in the program are small businesses and are frequently in need of cash. By cutting what could be a 30-day wait for payment to approximately two days, the contractors would benefit and continue participating in the program, he said. Plus, he said, this could attract additional contractors to the program, allowing for more low- to moderate-income homes to be rehabilitated.

At the present time, the three programs will be limited to homes in the CDBG target area, but Menchaca said the council may consider expanding it citywide.

Menchaca said that the city would continue contracting some services with Midland Neighborhood Housing Services.

In other business, council members:

- approved the annexation of the General Mail Facility at Midland International Airport and the proposal of a planned district for a transition district on the annexed property;
- approved requests from independent oil operator Autry C. Stephens to drill an oil and gas well north of Golf Course Road and east of Fairgrounds Road and a second well west of Loop 250 just north of Business I-20; and usable as a multimedia facility, her organization would seek grants from foundations to fund the renovations. The Arts Assembly would manage the facility, she said, but it would continue to be owned by the city of Midland.
- issued a proclamation declaring the week of Sept. 17-23 Constitution Week in honor of the 210th anniversary of the framing of the U.S. Constitution.

"We envision it being used for musical quartets, or speaker series or to contain overflow from Midland Center activities," she said.

Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said that demolition would cost approximately $35,000 or $40,000 and some debris would have to be removed before the building could be demolished.

Mayor Bobby Burns applauded the Arts Assembly's efforts, saying, "I would love to see us find a way to save the building."

City Council member Juluis Brooks agreed, saying the proposal was an excellent idea that ties into current efforts to revitalize downtown Midland.

Unwanted fame, flowers continue at Spencer home

GREAT BRINGTON, England (AP) — With hundreds of people bringing their flowers, their sympathy and their curiosity to the gates of the estate where Princess Diana was buried, the family and nearby villages are feeling the stress of unwanted fame.

The Spencer family asked Tuesday for an end to flowers. "It is turning into a problem and it is getting worse," a family spokeswoman said.

In nearby Great Brington, a village 75 miles northwest of London, there is pride and affection for Diana but concern about a rush of outsiders.

"There will be no shrine while I am priest-in-charge here," the Rev. David MacPherson said as he watched people stream through the doors of the 17th century church of St. Mary the Virgin. His church is awash with flowers, cards, kids' drawings and gifts including a well-used teddy bear.

"Life goes on with this community and we must continue to do our work," MacPherson said.

Twenty local volunteers take turns escorting visitors through the small stone church, ensuring there is no crowding outside the ornate, gloomy Spencer family vault.

Before the family's announcement Friday that Diana would be buried on a lake isle at Althorp, a mile away, she was expected to have been laid to rest in the vault among 20 generations of her ancestors.

"We are very pleased that the earl has placed Diana at Althorp," said steward Linda Shaeffer, a Newark, N.J., native guiding visitors Tuesday. "We never could have coped."

"Last week, we were absolutely beleaguered," said Ann Bellamy, a 40-year resident of Great Brington. "But people have been well-behaved. The only trouble we had was when someone parked in our driveway."

When pressed, she recalled that she often used to bump into teenage Diana buying ice cream at the village post office cum store. "She was just an ordinary teen-ager — all legs."

Other locals are also clearly tired of the attention. "Politely — no press," reads the notice outside the Fox and Hounds pub.

The church guidebook has sold out and staff have a long list of orders from Diana fans keen to get their hands on anything associated with the princess.

Dr. Stephen Mattingly, a retired consultant physician and amateur village historian, said the Spencers were sheep farmers when they moved to the area in 1486.

John Spencer, the 2nd Earl of Sunderland — a precursor to the present title — bought the 100-room Althorp House and Great Brington, a hilltop cluster of honey-stone houses, in 1508. As agriculture declined, later earls gradually sold off chunks of land.

Mattingly — who remarked that he was in his 41st interview — said although the Spencer family now only owns small pieces of Great Brington, it must still give permission for changes. Otherwise, he said, the village might "become another Graceland."

The Rev. MacPherson, who confesses to "something of a sense of humor failure" after a week of intense scrutiny, is confident the village will not be inundated.

"I think we will cope after all," he said. "Things are definitely calming down."

But outside Althorp's tall iron gates, people continued to arrive bearing flowers by the armful. A local farmer has opened his field for cars.

"I took my flowers right to the gate because I hope they will be in the next load to go inside," said Carol Tsang, from nearby Northampton. She hadn't heard the family's announcement that no more flowers would go to Diana's island.

"I don't think you can stop people bringing flowers," said Edna Henton, who came from Leicester. "People want to do it. It's not like giving money — it's something you can see."

Moscow museum reborn after years of renovations

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's State Historical Museum, a dark red castle-like structure flanking Red Square, opened late and incomplete Tuesday, even after 11 years of renovation.

In a ceremony also attended by the culture minister, city officials and Russian Orthodox Church leaders, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin promised that the government would find the money to complete the renovation in the "near future."

The 125-year-old museum was closed for general renovation in 1986. The project dragged on for lack of money until Chernomyrdin ordered the government this year to resume payments.

"I cannot say the decision was an easy one, especially taking into account the difficult situation with the federal budget," the ITAR-Tass news agency quoted him as saying.

Museum director Alexander Shkurko had announced last month that the museum would reopen in time for Moscow's 850th anniversary celebrations, held last weekend.

But with only 13 of 40-odd exhibition halls open, it illustrated the differences between the cash-strapped federal government and Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov's administration, which spent hundreds of millions of dollars on frenetic construction and cleanup work to remake the capital in time for the celebrations.

Sinn Fein enters Northern Ireland talks

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Sinn Fein, the IRA ally that once embraced both the gun and the ballot box as agents of change, formally renounced violence Tuesday and took its place in talks on Northern Ireland's future.

Five party leaders of Northern Ireland's pro-British Protestant majority stayed away, underlining their skepticism of Sinn Fein's sincerity and of a process they think will weaken Northern Ireland's union with Britain.

The chairman of the talks, former U.S. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, welcomed Sinn Fein's arrival and urged the Protestants not to boycott the negotiations.

"This is the first time in the modern history of Northern Ireland that there has been in place at the same time both negotiations and a cease-fire," Mitchell said, referring to the Irish Republican Army's decision to stop its campaign against British rule 52 days ago.

"I believe that's a significant step forward, although I acknowledge that the difficult steps remain to be taken," he said.

It is the first time since Northern Ireland was created in 1920 that the governments of Britain and the Irish Republic have jointly invited IRA supporters to join other parties to discuss the state's future. Sinn Fein was barred from talks in June 1996 because of IRA violence.

Sinn Fein's president, Gerry Adams, led his delegation into Stormont castle at midday and pledged acceptance of a six-point renunciation of violence known as the "Mitchell Principles."

Accepting those principles — among them to seek disarmament of the IRA and pro-British paramilitary groups during negotiations — was a prerequisite for all parties in the talks.

On paper, it is a fundamental shift. When Sinn Fein was about to begin contesting elections 15 years ago, spokesman Danny Morrison appealed to the IRA faithful saying: "Who here really believes we can win the war through the ballot box? But will anyone here object if, with a ballot paper in this hand, and an Armalite (assault rifle) in this hand, we take power in Ireland?"

In elections this year, the party won about 16 percent of votes in Northern Ireland and 3 percent in the Irish Republic.

Sinn Fein did reject a central premise of the negotiations, which is not one of the six points — that majority public support within Northern Ireland must be demonstrated for any new government structures.

Present for Adams' pledge were Mitchell, representatives of the British and Irish governments and four other parties: the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party, Sinn Fein's larger rival for Catholic votes; the cross-community Alliance Party; a tiny women's rights party; and an even tinier socialist party.

Northern Ireland's biggest party, the Ulster Unionists, will decide Saturday whether to take part when the negotiators are supposed to get to work Monday. Two sterner pro-British parties have already withdrawn, and the other two — both affiliated with outlawed paramilitary groups — say they will attend only if the Ulster Unionists do.

Sinn Fein leaders reaffirmed that the IRA will not discard any weapons before their party agrees to a peace settlement. Protestant demands for the IRA to start disarming deadlocked progress during a 17-month IRA cease-fire that ended in February 1996.

Sinn Fein's stance appeared to flout Mitchell's second and third principles: that parties give "total and absolute commitment ... to the total disarmament of all paramilitary organizations" and "agree that such disarmament must be verifiable to the satisfaction of an independent commission."

AP Photo

Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams, right, Martin McGuinness, Member of Parliament, center, and Irish Member of Parliament Caoimhghin O'Caolin arrive at Castle Buildings, Stormont, in Belfast, Northern Ireland, on Tuesday, to agree on the so-called "Mitchell Principles" of democracy, thus formally renouncing the use of violence for political purposes.

The British and Irish governments confirmed Tuesday they have received nominations from the U.S., Canadian and Finnish governments for members of a weapons "decommissioning" unit that would operate during the talks.

"Our commitment to the principles of democracy and peace go much further than the Mitchell principles. We want all the guns out of Irish politics," Adams told reporters, noting Sinn Fein's demand that the British army and Northern Ireland police also disarm.

Jeffrey Donaldson, negotiator for the Ulster Unionists, said: "We've heard the honeyed words of Sinn Fein before. It's not words we're interested in. It's acts we need from them to show that they are, as they now claim, exclusively committed to peaceful means."

The two main pro-British paramilitary groups have maintained a cease-fire since October 1994 and their representatives have welcomed the talks.

But dissidents have formed a new paramilitary group, the Loyalist Volunteer Force, that has been accused of killing several Catholic civilians and is threatening to stage attacks in the Irish Republic.

Machu Picchu threatened by forest fire

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Battling through heavy smoke at high altitude, firefighters on Tuesday tried to prevent a massive forest fire from reaching the Incan ruins of Machu Picchu, South America's leading archaeological treasure.

Machu Picchu, located 300 miles southeast of Lima, is Peru's top tourist destination. The stone ruins high in the Andes Mountains are perched atop a jungle-covered peak and offer a spectacular view of the gorge below.

Fires raged in the hills around Machu Picchu, destroying more than 1,500 acres of forests so far, Civil Defense Chief Gen. Homero Nurena said Tuesday.

More than 400 firefighters, soldiers and volunteers pumped water on the dense vegetation to prevent the fire from climbing the hill to the ruins. A drought has dried out vegetation in the area.

Authorities said Machu Picchu itself was probably safe from the flames because the area's dense jungle vegetation thinned out around the ruins. Still, they evacuated residents of a nearby tourist hotel and suspended tourist visits until at least Sunday.

Train service from Cuzco, the ancient capital of the Incas 45 miles to the southeast, has been halted and the Inca Trail, a favorite hiking route for backpackers, has been sealed off.

Jose Rios Trigoso, dean of forest sciences at Peru's National Agrarian University, said the fire was devastating the region's delicate ecology and called for the government to declare a state of emergency.

The fire apparently started Saturday after peasants burned weeds on the banks of the nearby Urubamba River to clear farmland.

Israel talks security, Palestinians talk land

JERUSALEM (AP) — On the eve of Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's attempt to rescue Mideast peace, Israel raised the stakes Tuesday with new security demands it says Palestinians must fulfill before they will be given any more West Bank land.

Palestinians, in turn, accused Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of trying to blackmail them. "Our only hope is that the United States will realize that this is ... an evil attempt to torpedo the peace process," said Marwan Kanafani, a spokesman for Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

The new demands were contained in a four-page list Israeli officials said would be given to Albright. In addition to crushing Islamic militant groups, Israel said the Palestinians must reduce the size of their police force, dismiss their police chief and agree to Israeli and U.S. monitoring to ensure compliance.

Netanyahu complained Tuesday that Arafat's recent efforts to fight Islamic militants — including the arrests of 35 activists on Monday — were symbolic at best and aimed at appeasing Albright.

"We demand consistency in the treatment of the terrorist infrastructure as an essential condition for the continuation of the peace process," Netanyahu told the Israeli parliament's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee.

Netanyahu blamed Arafat for not preventing suicide bombings by Islamic militants in Jerusalem on July 30 and last Thursday. The bombings killed 20 Israelis and five assailants.

In its list of demands, Israel said Arafat must reduce his police force from the 35,000 officers he recruited to the 24,000 permitted by the peace agreement, and fire officers who have been involved in attacks on Israelis.

Israel also claims the police chief, Brig. Ghazi Jabali, has incited his men to attacks against Israel and said he must be dismissed.

Israel also wants to establish a monitoring system, with U.S. participation, that would allow for inspections and spot checks to ensure Palestinian compliance.

The Palestinians, however, did not plan to let Israel dominate Albright's agenda with talk about security. They said Tuesday they would raise Israel's recent decision to freeze the scheduled handover of West Bank land, the expansion of Jewish settlements and Israel's security closures of Palestinian areas.

"I expect from Albright to deal with the reasons of the crisis, which are settlements and Judaization of Jerusalem and refusing to implement agreements," said Hanan Ashrawi, a Palestinian Cabinet minister. "Security is not a goal in itself."

Albright's three-day trip, which begins Wednesday, will be her first to the Middle East as secretary of state, and both Israelis and Palestinians anxiously watched for clues on what to expect.

Albright recently discovered her Jewish roots, and Israeli officials said they weren't sure whether this would make her more sympathetic to Israel's positions or prompt her to overcompensate by taking a tougher stance than a non-Jewish secretary might.

In addition to meetings with Netanyahu and Arafat, Albright will visit Israelis and Americans wounded in last week's bombing, speak to members of an Israeli think tank and tour a Palestinian school in the West Bank town of Ramallah.

It was not clear whether Israel would ease its tight closure of the West Bank and Gaza Strip before her arrival.

Women's Care Update

TOWARD ELIMINATING CERVICAL CANCER

Each year, about 15,000 women are diagnosed with cancer of the cervix. Risk factors include first intercourse at an early age, multiple sex partners, cigarette smoking, and infection with certain types of human papillomavirus. The term "cancer of the cervix" includes both invasive cervical cancer and in situ carcinoma, which is a precancerous condition. The distinction is important because while precancerous conditions can be treated effectively, left undetected, they can develop into invasive cancers that are harder to treat and are potentially life-threatening. The key is for women to have pelvic exams and Pap smears which, if conducted on a regular basis, would lead to the detection and treatment of most precancerous conditions before cancer develops. Women who are (or have been) sexually active or who have reached age 18 should have a Pap smear performed annually as part of a pelvic examination.

Teens under 18 may also want to be in the care of a gynecologist it they experience symptoms such as pelvic pain, discharge, menstrual difficulties, or if they plan to become sexually active and need to discuss birth control and/or sexually transmitted diseases (STDs). If you would like additional information on today's column or on the services provided by our practice, feel free to call us at 522-2222. Vatican all but rules against death penalty

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The definitive statement of Roman Catholic teaching says the death penalty is permissible only in the narrowest of circumstances, and only when there is no other way to protect the public.

The Vatican on Tuesday released the Latin text of the revised catechism five years after the first, French version. Making slight changes in wording and content in about 100 entries, it serves as the final word on Catholic doctrine.

In other changes, the catechism eases the stricture on masturbation, slightly narrows the acceptability of animal experiments, encourages organ donation and changes wording on homosexuality to avoid taking a stand on its cause.

Early versions of the catechism, the first revision in more than four centuries, were published in modern languages starting in 1992. The version in Latin — the church's official language — incorporates suggestions, corrections and additions received since then.

The 1992 catechism said the death penalty was acceptable in cases of "extreme gravity" and only when "bloodless means" were not available.

The final, Latin version now requires the "full ascertainment of the identity and responsibility of the guilty one" and in situations where it is the "only practical way" to protect human lives.

It also says that given the means the state has to neutralize an offender, cases requiring the death penalty are "very rare, if not practically nonexistent."

That phrase comes from Pope John Paul II, who has campaigned against the death penalty. He has appealed for clemency in a half-dozen cases in the United States, most recently before the execution of Joseph O'Dell in Virginia this year.

"It is almost impossible to fulfill all the (catechism's) criteria" for a death sentence, Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger told reporters in presenting the revisions. "We don't exclude it in principle, but we insist on these criteria," he said. Ratzinger is prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, making him the church's doctrinal chief.

Homosexuality is termed "objectively disordered," which Ratzinger said was meant to avoid passing judgment on whether the sexual orientation was innate or acquired.

Unchanged is the call for compassion for homosexuals and the requirement of chastity.

More than 7 million copies of the new catechism have been published worldwide. Ratzinger said the revisions would be published as a pamphlet.

Room used by Romans found in Holy Land

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli archaeologists excavating Caesarea, the Roman seat of government in the Holy Land, have found offices probably used by the Romans' secret police, the director of the dig said Tuesday.

One recently uncovered room had a floor mosaic with the Latin inscription "Adiviorb(us) Offici Custodiar," translated as "I came to this office — I shall be secure."

The trial of the Apostle Paul by the Roman governor likely took place nearby, archaeologist Yosef Porath of the Israel Antiquities Authority said.

"St. Paul was tried at Caesarea, but Caesarea is a huge place. Now we know the location of the campus of the governor, and it is logical that he was tried on this campus," he told The Associated Press.

Excavations at the 15,000-square-yard complex near the Mediterranean resort of Caesarea began in 1974. Porath said about half the area has now been uncovered.

Vatican considers status of nun already considered saint by many CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa already is considered a saint by many in Calcutta. But the Vatican said Tuesday it would take time to determine her official status in the Catholic Church.

Since her death last Friday of a heart attack at age 87, the Vatican has been flooded with requests that it waive the five-year waiting period before the canonization process can begin.

Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, the Vatican's authority on doctrine, said Tuesday it was unlikely that unusual measures would be taken to speed things up.

But Mother Teresa had a "life so resplendent before the eyes of all, that I don't think it will be too long a process," Ratzinger said.

The Nobel peace laureate transformed a few schools and homeless shelters in Calcutta into a worldwide order, the Missionaries of Charity, that now runs 514 shelters and hospices worldwide. She dedicated her work to God, saying she saw him in every suffering human being.

To name her a saint, the Vatican must be convinced Mother Teresa has performed miracles. They can come after her death, such as curing an ill believer or answering a supplicant's prayers.

Church leaders said they were waiting for evidence of a miracle. "It is a sign from God that we wish for, we pray for that," Monsignor Francis Gomes, vicar general of the Calcutta archdiocese, told reporters.

> 'She is already a saint, we don't need the Vatican's word.'
> — Calcutta businessman Abhijit Sen

In Calcutta, however, the belief in her holiness was firm.

"She is already a saint, we don't need the Vatican's word," said businessman Abhijit Sen.

The faithful flocked to see her body lying in state Tuesday. Rain that had poured for several days let up, and the waiting crowds grew to the largest since she was brought to St. Thomas' Church on Sunday. At one point, the line stretched for three miles on the sidewalks of the upscale neighborhood where the church is located.

Sanjay Kumar, who makes 40 cents a day begging on Calcutta's streets, got to the church the only way he could — using his arms to drag his polio-crippled body to her side. He moved painstakingly along the line, to gaze up at the woman who he called a "goddess."

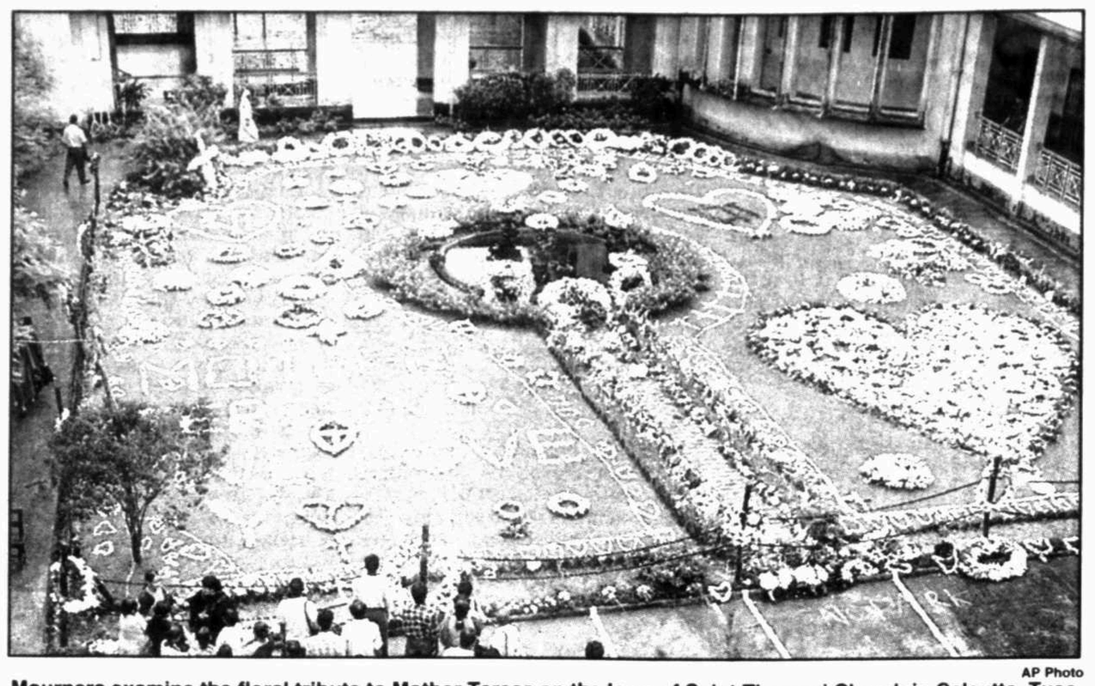

Three days after the body of the frail nun was placed in a glass case before St. Thomas' altar, there were concerns that the heat and humidity of the monsoon season may be endangering the corpse. Temperatures have been around 86 degrees with 90 percent humidity.

Technicians fitted two small fans inside her glass coffin Monday night to augment powerful air conditioners in the church chapel.

Her funeral, scheduled for Saturday, is expected to be attended by representatives of foreign governments and top Indian political, military and social leaders. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton will lead the American contingent.

The Indian government has granted Mother Teresa a state funeral, with military honors usually reserved for heads of state and government.

Saturday morning, a gun carriage will carry her body along a two-mile route to an indoor stadium for a public funeral, then retrace its journey back past the church to her former home.

Mir's crew fixes computer; systems return to normal

MOSCOW (AP) — Mir's crew brought all systems back on line after putting in a new main computer Tuesday, replacing the worn-out one after its third breakdown in three months.

The new computer allowed the Russian-American crew on the accident-prone station to restore the gyroscopes, which keep the Mir pointed toward the sun — its source of power.

Russian space officials said they knew it was only a matter of time before the computer simply gave out. The cash-strapped Russian space program prefers to keep using equipment until it dies.

Mir's crew reacted quickly when the computer failed Monday, said Vladimir Solovyov, chief of Mission Control, and those aboard never were in danger. The shutdown was less troublesome this time because the station was running closer to full power and its solar batteries were fully juiced.

The station's main computer first went down July 17, and officials said Tuesday that the flight engineer at the time — Alexander Lazutkin — has acknowledged accidentally unplugging it.

"He said he made the error," Viktor Blagov, deputy Mission Control chief said, explaining that Lazutkin unhooked a vital cable while working amid a web of wiring.

That power outage sent the orbiting station on a dark, twisting ride through space, and it took the crew and ground controllers several tense days to overcome the crisis. This time, the station remained stable.

When the computer shut itself off Monday, the crew, which includes American astronaut Michael Foale, responded by turning off systems to economize on power. Mission Control said Tuesday that no important systems, such as the Elektron oxygen-generating system, were turned off.

Also Tuesday, the business daily Kommersant reported that space officials have withheld $10,000 from both commander Vasily Tsibliyev and Lazutkin — a third of their reported pay for the mission — pending the end of an investigation into a cargo ship crash on Mir.

The Mir lost power when a remote-controlled cargo ship crashed into one of its modules in June.

NATO forces help Karadzic aide escape foes

BANJA LUKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — NATO forces ended a dangerous standoff between rival Serb camps Tuesday, disarming dozens of security men loyal to war crimes suspect Radovan Karadzic, then escorting them from a hotel surrounded by their foes.

Police loyal to Bosnian Serb President Biljana Plavsic blocked access to the Hotel Bosna in the center of Banja Luka early Tuesday, cutting telephones, power and water. Momcilo Krajisnik, Karadzic's top aide, and several of his chief aides were trapped inside.

They had arrived Monday in Banja Luka, Plavsic's stronghold, for a rally that NATO officials said was designed to mask an attempt to overthrow Plavsic by bringing in heavily armed special police and thousands of Karadzic supporters.

Only a few hundred Karadzic supporters made it into Banja Luka, due to a blockade of their buses Monday by NATO forces and Plavsic police.

However, at least five people were injured in overnight violence, including a pro-Plavsic policeman who suffered a serious gunshot wound, police said.

Trying to avoid more violence, peace force officials negotiated Tuesday with Krajisnik's security men and Plavsic's police to release him and others from the hotel.

At mid-afternoon, NATO troops escorted dozens of Krajisnik's security detail through a hostile crowd of thousands who chanted "Thieves! Thieves!" Plavsic has accused Karadzic, the Bosnian Serbs' wartime leader, of getting rich through black-market deals.

Sixty-two men were taken to a NATO base, where they were being checked to determine if they are among those indicted for war crimes by the U.N. tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, said U.S. envoy Jacques Klein.

By evening, only seven or eight were still in the hotel, and they too "will be checked against the list and everyone who is on the list will be apprehended," Klein said.

Klein said Krajisnik — who as the elected Serb representative on the joint Bosnian presidency has immunity — refused "option after option" for an escort from the hotel.

Eventually, Krajisnik and the much-hated former Serb police chief Dragan Kijac fled in a speeding car under a hail of bottles, eggs, rocks and anything else the crowd of 500 Plavsic supporters could find.

Prime Minister Gojko Klickovic did not join them, apparently reluctant to face the pelting. In the evening hours, local police towed away cars belonging to Karadzic men who had fled.

The episode was one of the few times Karadzic's top aides have been publicly jeered by the people they are supposed to lead.

Plavsic went on Banja Luka radio telling her supporters, "My people, I congratulate you. Those who thought that Republika Srpska (the Bosnian Serb republic) and its people exist only for their own selves have left."

About 120 miles southeast, in Karadzic's stronghold of Pale, leaders of his ruling party demanded postponement of this weekend's local elections because of Tuesday's standoff. They summoned party faithful to a rally Tuesday evening in the eastern town of Bijeljina.

The Karadzic camp had been threatening to boycott the local elections — already postponed three times, and now organized at enormous expense by international monitors. Tuesday's events made it even less likely they would participate.

Dragan Pecanac, a police spokesman in Banja Luka, said his force had scoured the hotel for armed men who came to the city with Krajisnik "in order to carry out terrorist activities."

There was no word on what, if anything, they found, or if any arrests were made.

Chinese party boss ousted

BEIJING (AP) — Communist Party leaders expelled a once-powerful colleague, Chen Xitong, Tuesday and handed him over to prosecutors to face charges in China's largest corruption scandal.

The decision to prosecute him came three days before a major party congress and was likely intended as a boost for President Jiang Zemin, who also serves as head of the Communist Party. Jiang engineered Chen's removal and, aware of widespread public anger over corruption, has championed the anti-graft campaign.

Chen was stripped of his seat on the Politburo, the apex of party power, in September 1995, the highest official removed in a four-year crusade against corruption. But his long service as mayor and party boss of the capital fanned speculation he was too powerful to prosecute.

State-run media have estimated as much as $2.2 billion in public funds may have been lost in the scandal.

Mir replacement need is apparent

If Hollywood were to produce a movie based on the Russian space station Mir, it would have to be called "Mir I: The Continuing Saga." Moviegoers would know there would definitely be a Mir II coming!

All kidding aside, the space station which has been aloft for 11 years is beset with problems and there seemingly is no end in sight. The crew now aboard the Mir, which includes American astronaut Michael Foale, on Tuesday overcame the Mir's latest breakdown by replacing the central block to the main computer and installing software to bring it back on line.

The computer mysteriously shut down on Monday, marking the third time it had done so in the past three months. Space agency officials said, however, that the crew was never in any danger. The computer shut itself off about 11 a.m. Monday and the crew responded by turning off most systems to economize on power until the problem could be determined and repairs made. That included the Elektron oxygen-generating system, although ample oxygen was on hand for the crew in the latest incident.

Vladimir Solovyov, chief of Russia's Mission Control, said the Russian space agency, which has been strapped for cash, simply waited on the computer to die of old age rather than replacing it when it reached the end of its life expectancy.

"We intentionally were not replacing the computer because we stick to the principle of keeping those systems ... until they fail. This allows us to test all the systems more efficiently and to significantly save funds."

There is no question that such a policy is conservative and financially prudent. But the computer problem experienced by the Mir is merely the latest in a long line of problems the space station has endured during the past eight months. It seems that the crew has only gotten past one problem when another would arise. There was an onboard fire in February, then oxygen system breakdowns, a collision with a cargo ship and repeated computer breakdowns.

Although there has been no loss of life associated with the malfunctions, the frequency and consistency with which they have occurred make us wonder whether the Mir is not on its last legs and essentially a disaster waiting to happen.

The first components of a new international space station are scheduled to be launched next year. It looks as though it will not be a moment too soon.

CIA's secrecy claims didn't aid credibility

We're a little skeptical of the Central Intelligence Agency's recent complaint that disclosure of information about the location of Iraqi stockpiles of chemical and biological weapons inflicted serious damage on the agency's sources and methods.

The information was provided by the Pentagon to Persian Gulf War vets who may have suffered health problems as a result of exposure to these weapons.

It is possible some of that information was carelessly released, as the CIA claims. Our skepticism arises, however, from the fact the CIA has too often gone way overboard in its pursuit of secrecy.

At one time, even the White House menu was classified information. Nor was the CIA's credibility enhanced when it stamped "secret" even on its claim about damage suffered to its sources and methods.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 10, the 253rd day of 1997. There are 112 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 10, 1813, Oliver H. Perry sent the message, "We have met the enemy, and they are ours," after an American naval force defeated the British in the Battle of Lake Erie in the War of 1812.

On this date:

In 1608, John Smith was elected president of the Jamestown colony council in Virginia.

In 1794, America's first nondenominational college, Blount College (later the University of Tennessee), was chartered.

In 1846, Elias Howe of Spencer, Mass., received a patent for his sewing machine.

In 1919, New York City welcomed home Gen. John J. Pershing and 25,000 soldiers who had served in the U.S. First Division during World War I.

In 1939, Canada declared war on Germany.

In 1945, Vidkun Quisling was sentenced to death in Norway for collaborating with the Nazis.

In 1948, Mildred Gillars, accused of being Nazi wartime radio broadcaster "Axis Sally," was indicted in Washington, D.C., on treason charges.

In 1955, "Gunsmoke" premiered on CBS.

One year ago: The Senate dealt a double defeat to gay-rights activists, voting to reject same-sex marriage in federal law and killing a separate bill that would have barred job discrimination against gays. Hurricane Hortense pounded Puerto Rico, causing at least 21 deaths and destroying thousands of homes. Ross Perot picked economist Pat Choate to share the Reform Party presidential ticket.

Karadzic arrest won't bring peace to Bosnia

Prodded by the Clinton team, NATO has stepped up efforts to harass, if not arrest, Bosnian Serb thug-in-chief Radovan Karadzic. Bringing Karadzic to trial for war crimes is surely the right thing to do, and I hope it happens soon.

But the recent focus on Karadzic has an air of unreality about it. To listen to Clinton officials, if only Karadzic were removed, the Dayton peace accords would fall into place. Hardly. The fact is, arresting Karadzic will solve the Karadzic problem — the problem of an evil, indicted war criminal still operating right under NATO's nose. But the Dayton problem is something else.

The Dayton problem is embedded in the Dayton accords. Let's remember there was a war in Bosnia because the Muslims wanted a single centralized state and the Serbs and Croats wanted their own independent entities.

The architects of Dayton stopped the war by promising all sides what they wanted: part one of Dayton was the de facto partition of Bosnia to create a cease-fire; part two was a promissory note to create a unified, multiethnic democracy in Bosnia sometime in the future — through elections, power-sharing and a return of refugees.

The only reason the two strong powers — Serbia and Croatia — agreed to Dayton was that it satisfied their war aims. It carved out of Bosnia semiautonomous Serbian and Croatian regions and even gave them the right to align with Serbia and Croatia proper.

The weak party, the Bosnian Muslims, got the promissory note — that if they swallowed the de facto partition, one day these regions would be knit back together under a single central government in Sarajevo, which the Muslims would dominate.

But neither Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic nor Croatian leader Franjo Tudjman ever intended to allow such a strong Muslim-dominated central government. So ever since Dayton, U.S. officials have been wrestling with this problem: Does the United States force implementation of the promissory note, as it winked to the Muslims it would do, or does it simply police the cease-fire and Bosnia's de facto partition, as NATO commanders and America's European allies prefer?

If there is a strategic reason to arrest Karadzic, it's not that it would open the way to fully implementing Dayton, but that it might make it easier to manage Dayton's likely failure. That is, what is the difference between Karadzic and the Bosnian Serb president, Biljana Plavsic, whom Karadzic is trying to oust? They have both long advocated a separate Bosnian Serb republic. They just disagree on the means to achieve it.

Karadzic thinks it can be secured by scuttling Dayton, and Mrs. Plavsic thinks it can be secured by building on the de facto partition in Dayton, and obtaining some Western aid and legitimacy along the way.

But she hasn't had therapy. She is no more prepared than he is to implement Dayton's promissory, with full integration and refugee returns. She is prepared to accept a softer partition, even take in a few Muslim refugees, but without threatening the purity and autonomy of the separate Serbian republic in Bosnia. Still, even that might prolong the cease-fire, and grow into something more stable and integrated one day.

(But forget this nonsense that the Serbian people are just confused and misled and will all want what the Muslims want if only the evil Karadzic is removed. Karadzic reflects widely held views in Serbian society.)

That's why, with or without Karadzic, America's real choices in Bosnia are still very hard:

1. The United States can forge a de jure partition, which might allow NATO forces to leave by their June 1998 deadline, but that would require redrawing some of the current dividing lines so they better reflect populations on the ground.

2. The United States can force full implementation of Dayton and impose a unified, multiethnic democracy in Bosnia, but that could only be done by NATO troops indefinitely holding such an artificial entity together.

3. The United States can settle for the de facto partition we have now, but in that case some NATO troops would probably have to remain indefinitely to police the interethnic boundary lines.

4. The United States and its allies can just quit Bosnia in June, and let events take their course.

The first option is only stable if you redo Dayton; the second option is only stable if you redo Bosnia; the third option is stable but offers no exit strategy; and the fourth option offers an exit strategy but isn't stable. So let's get Karadzic. It's the right thing to do, and once he's gone, maybe we can focus on our real choices.

Grammar cops are cruising the info highway

Good english wasn't supposed to survive the Internet, remember? Traditional grammar, spelling, and usage, the digerati sneered, are hopelessly "analog": uncool, fossilized, predigital. No, they said, the post-Gutenberg era demands a revolutionary language, one that's dynamic and rule-averse. So don't expect to find standard English in the precincts of cyberspace. Well, here's a word to the wired. The grammar police are cruising the info highway, and they're writing tickets.

In newsgroups — discussion forums devoted to just about anything, from Bible study to sleep disorders to Chia pets — bad English does not go unnoticed. Few issues, in fact, inspire more questions, comments, or complaints ("flames" in Netspeak), as I found in a recent monthlong binge of reading newsgroup postings.

"Sorry, but I can't stand it anymore," a defender of proper English cried in rec.outdoors.fishing.fly, a newsgroup for anglers. "Fly is singular, but flies is plural. There is no word in English spelled flys."

A golfer in the rough issued a cry for help in rec.sport.golf: "What is correct? A one-iron sounds right but shouldn't it be an one-iron?"

"The actual rule," said a second golfer, "is to use an when the following word begins with a vowel sound, not necessarily an actual vowel. That is why we say an hour and a one-iron." "For me," a third joked, "it's a four-iron because the Lord knows I can't hit a or an one-iron."

In an online culture that has suddenly plunked millions of nonwriters down at keyboards, grammar is often conspicuous by its absence. But lovers of good English aren't giving up without a fight. Across the Net, these keepers of the flame have newsgroupies sitting up a little straighter at their computers.

Justice was swift not too long ago in alt.prisons, a newsgroup about crime and punishment. "His constant references to anal and oral sex are juvenile," said one message. "And his spelling and grammar are atrocious!"

A questioner in alt.fan.dragonlance wondered why a knight was said to have mustaches. "What's the deal? Do these knights have special faces that allow them to have multiple mustaches?" A helpful fan suggested: "Maybe its just a grammer mistake that slipped through," inspiring another to respond: "Grammar, folks. It's spelled grammar."

Leaving aside the misuse of its, the misspelling of grammar seemed to be the most common mistake of all. "I only take grammar flames seriously when they come from people who can spell the word grammar," said a peevish posting to alt.peeves, echoing similar flames in alt.angst, soc.culture.african.american, alt.sports.baseball.stl-cardinals, and other newsgroups.

A nit-picker in alt.sports.baseball.sf-giants took umbrage at a newspaper reporter who'd mixed up his pronouns and written he instead of him: "Don't they have people who edit for grammar at this paper?"

In the more politically charged newsgroups, language sometimes overshadowed ideology. "Any high school grammar book will tell you that a dependent clause is meant to modify the subject of an independent clause," said a participant in a debate on talk.politics.guns on the Second Amendment. "Thus, the 'right of the people' is modified to mean those people in 'a well regulated militia.' "

Even God was eclipsed by grammar when feuds erupted in a couple of religion newsgroups over the functions of to versus too and the semicolon versus the colon. This three-party exchange was cross-posted to both the alt.atheism and alt.christnet.prayer newsgroups:

"Go back to school and learn grammar."

"You have no interest in prayer, your posts prove it."

"You have no interest in atheism. Your posts prove it."

"Now, why don't the two of you go learn some grammar and some manners."

Many writers tried to head off flames by apologizing beforehand. In alt.ufo.reports, someone seeking information on strange happenings over Ohio signed off with "Sorry for any misspelled word or bad grammar."

A grateful note was sounded in rec.arts.theatre.musicals. On realizing that he'd confused complement and compliment in an earlier message, an errant writer said it was "elegant and humane" of his colleagues to let the slip pass unremarked.

Other newsgroups were more contentious. "I'm getting pretty sick of the way people on newsgroups complain about spelling and grammar," said a contributor to alt.toys.transformers. "I mean, come on, this is supposed to be fun, isn't it?"

"LET IT BE!" shouted a rec.music.beatles fan after a discussion of grammatical liberties — or poetic license — in Beatles lyrics.

And a writer fumed in alt.sports.baseball.atlanta-braves: "Why don't you go post in alt.english.grammar! This is a baseball newsgroup!" The sentiment was echoed in alt.pizza.delivery.drivers: "No one is really concerned with grammar or proofreading in this newsgroup. But I apprecate you cunsern."

Appreciated or not, the guardians of English forged on, censuring poor usage in rec.arts.tv.soaps.abc ("That's imply, not infer"), subject-verb disagreement in alt.nature.mushrooms ("Mushrooms is a plural noun and grows is a singular verb") and pronoun mixups in can.military-brats ("I go more and more nuts every time I see it's and its used incorrectly").

Well, are the good guys winning? Netspeak, computerese, cyber-pidgin — whatever you call it — is probably here to stay. But so is good English. Anyone who doubts it should "lurk" awhile in a newsgroup I came across the other day: alt.possessive.its.has.no.apostrophe.

ART BUCHWALD

Martha's Vineyard would make a great national capital

Okay, it's time to get serious about Washington, D.C. We have to move the capital somewhere so it won't embarrass the entire country.

Buchwald

The final blow came when Washington couldn't even open its schools on time because so many repairs were needed. A local judge ruled that the buildings were too unsafe to allow children inside. Now some people are saying that perhaps the country doesn't need schools, but others maintain schools help the appearance of the neighborhood.

Listen, I don't want to be the one to break it to you people out in Kansas, but Washington is broke — dead broke, belly-up broke. That's a big problem if you want us to run your government from here.

How can we tell people in the Third World to shape up and fly right when their kids are in school and ours aren't?

I know what you people in Flagstaff, Ariz., are saying: "How is it possible for a city to fall apart when the president and his wife live there?"

There are several theories: One is that the president is so well protected he doesn't even know the capital is falling apart. Since Chelsea is going to Stanford, the schools in Washington are not a priority item for him. Another theory is that Mr. Clinton's main focus is on Bosnia, North Korea and Gaza, and Washington's problems don't have any effect on the national security of the United States.

So what should be done to solve the problem? One solution might be to halt all construction of the B-2 bomber. This would save the country $40 billion which we are now paying for a plane that can't fly when it rains. Someone also suggested that guests who sleep in the Lincoln Bedroom donate a surcharge of 10 percent to our city.

But the solution I liked best because it makes the most sense is to move the nation's capital to Martha's Vineyard.

This summer proved that the Vineyard can handle the nation's business. We could move Congress into the Tabernacle in Oak Bluffs and the Supreme Court could convene on the cliffs over Gay Head. There are plenty of white houses for the Clintons to chose from. But one of the biggest advantages of the Vineyard is that its schools are open.

Washington had its chance, and it blew it. The nation can still preserve the city like Pompeii, and the tourists can try to figure out what made it fall.

Democratic chairman denies contacting CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confronted with memos indicating he twice contacted the CIA on behalf of a fugitive businessman, former Democratic chairman Donald L. Fowler insisted Tuesday he had no memory of making such calls for the man, a major party donor.

Later, Democrats produced a statement from the CIA official — identified only as "Bob" — saying he had been operating under cover and Fowler may not have known he was with the spy agency.

Fowler appeared before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, knowing he would be grilled by Republicans about Democratic fund-raising abuses during last year's presidential campaign.

The Republicans questioned him closely about his intervention with officials on behalf of a number of Democratic donors — including Indian tribes opposing a rival tribe's casino — but saved their major attack for the help given businessman Roger Tamraz. He is a fugitive from a decade-old embezzlement charge in Lebanon who nonetheless was a frequent White House visitor in 1995 and 1996.

Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., the committee chairman, showed Fowler two 1995 CIA memos describing calls from Fowler on behalf of Tamraz, who wanted help in stifling opposition to a pipeline project in the Middle East. Fowler had testified he couldn't recall contacting the CIA and told Thompson just before the documents were introduced: "If somebody has some proof I would be happy to refresh my memory."

After he was shown the first CIA document, Fowler said "I understand the implications ... but it does not refresh my memory."

AP Photo

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., displays a document relating to Republican fund raising and access to officials during the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs hearing Tuesday in Washington. The committee is investigating campaign fund raising.

"If I said to you I recall making those calls, I would be perjuring myself because I simply don't," Fowler later told Sen. Thad Cochran,

Later, the Democrats produced the Senate deposition of the CIA official — who said he didn't know whether Fowler knew he was talking to a spy agency employee.

At Tamraz's suggestion, the official said, he called Fowler, who returned his messages. "I was under ... cover," said the official, identified only as Bob. "I can't say for certain he knew who he was talking to because CIA was never mentioned."

Fowler also said he did not recall receiving a memo from one of his own aides — written months before the CIA documents — warning that Tamraz's background was "full of significant financial and ethical troubles." Tamraz has denied the embezzlement charge.

While Democratic committee members did not defend their party's contacts with Tamraz, they were able to show the GOP also was interested in Tamraz as late as last February.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. both invited Tamraz, in form letters sent to potential donors, to join an elite group for Republican contributors called the Inner Circle. McConnell is chairman of the Senate Republican campaign organization.

McConnell's 1997 letter promised Tamraz access to Lott, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and other party luminaries.

Fowler, who said the White House made the major Democratic fund-raising decisions during the last campaign, defended the numerous contacts he made on behalf of donors.

"It is fully appropriate for the head of a national political party to secure a meeting for a supporter with an administration official or even to advocate a worthy cause," Fowler said.

"Members of Congress do this; staff members of Congress do it; it is their responsibility to do so," Fowler said.

Fowler also denied any wrongdoing in contacting the Interior Department on behalf of Minnesota Indian tribes who opposed a Wisconsin casino. Wisconsin tribes sought the casino, but lost their case. The Minnesota tribes were Democratic contributors.

In the Tamraz case, a CIA memorandum dated Oct. 20, 1995, by an official whose name was kept anonymous, said that on the previous day, "Don Fowler called me at the behest of Roger Tamraz."

"Fowler said he was attempting to arrange a meeting between the vice president and Tamraz concerning Tamraz's oil pipeline from Ceyhan, Turkey, to Baku, Azerbaijan, but was aware that there is opposition in the White House and from oil companies to Tamraz's involvement."

Survey shows parents still influence adolescents

CHICAGO (AP) — Parents who have just about given up when it comes to their teen-agers should know this: Adults have a powerful effect on their children's behavior right through the high school years, a study found.

"There is a perception that pretty much after early adolescence, parents surrender their influence over kids and kids become beholden to the peer group," said lead author Michael D. Resnick, a sociologist at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. "Everything in this study suggests the contrary."

The 1995 federally funded study is the most comprehensive survey ever done of American adolescents, involving more than 12,000 seventh- through 12th-graders.

The findings, published in Wednesday's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, indicate that the more teen-agers feel loved by their parents and comfortable in their schools, the less likely they are to have early sex, smoke, abuse alcohol or drugs, or commit violence or suicide.

The researchers found that if parents expected adolescents to get good grades and refrain from sex, those expectations influenced the adolescents' behavior powerfully through 12th grade, regardless of family income, race or single- or dual-parent status.

"Adolescents are often very effective at convincing us that what we say is irrelevant to their lives, and the mistake we make as adults is that we turn around and we believe it," said Resnick, a father of two.

PUBLIC NOTICE
NOTICE OF RATE CHANGE REQUEST

Texas Utilities Electric Company ("TU Electric"), in accordance with the Texas Utilities Code, hereby publishes NOTICE of its Statement of Intent filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("Commission") to implement the following optional time-of-use rates that would be applicable on a voluntary basis at the individual customer's option as follows: (1) Rate GTU - General Service Time-of-Use, which would be available to any retail customer and typically useful to commercial and industrial customers receiving firm electric service; (2) Rate RTU1 - Residential Time-of-Use Service, which would be available to residential customers; and (3) Rate GTUC - General Service Time-of-Use Voluntary Curtailable, which would be available to any retail customer and typically useful to commercial and industrial customers receiving interruptible electric service. TU Electric proposes to implement said optional rates on October 10, 1997, or as soon thereafter as permitted by law. The purpose of these optional time-of-use rates is to allow customers to manage their electric usage in a way to shift their loads from on-peak periods to off-peak periods and thereby save on their electric bills and allow TU Electric and all of its customers to benefit through a reduced need for additional resources to meet the peak load requirements of TU Electric's customers.

While these rates would be entirely voluntary at the individual customer's choice, all of TU Electric's customers and classes of customers in all territories over which the Commission exercises original jurisdiction would be affected by the proposed rates.

Since these proposed rate options are entirely voluntary, TU Electric is unable to estimate their effect on its revenues, although these optional time-of-use rates are designed to be revenue neutral to TU Electric.

Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. A request to intervene or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, P.O. Box 13326, Austin, Texas 78711-3326. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Office of Consumer Affairs at (512) 936-7120. Hearing- and speech-impaired individuals with text telephones (TTY) may contact the Commission at (512) 936-7136. The deadline for intervention in the proceeding is 45 days after the date the application was filed with the Commission. Since the Application was filed on September 5, 1997, the deadline for intervention is October 20, 1997.

Federal agencies not checking up on doctors' child support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal department responsible for enforcing child support laws continues to write checks to nearly 1,200 Medicare doctors and medical researchers who owe $21.5 million in unpaid child support, an internal report finds.

Officials say it may be more trouble than it's worth to go after so few delinquents. But the report argues that the Department of Health and Human Services should try harder to set a good example.

"It is untenable for this department to pay what amounts to income to individuals who it knows are out of compliance with child support obligations," wrote HHS Inspector General June Gibbs Brown.

In 1995, President Clinton made the same argument as he ordered a crackdown designed to make the federal government "a model employer" regarding child support.

"We will find you. We will catch you. We will make you pay," Clinton warned then, as he signed an executive order requiring agencies to withhold past-due child support from payments to federal employees and contractors.

But that order, signed in February 1995, has not been uniformly enforced, said Michael Kharfen, spokesman for the HHS agency that handles child support. Some agencies have been more willing than others to garnishee wages and payments, he said.

HHS Secretary Donna Shalala, who supervises all of the agencies involved, could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Nationwide, parents owe $34.5 billion in overdue child support. Just 20 percent of families who are owed child support receive payments.

The inspector general's report focused on a set of doctors and found 1,184 deadbeats who owed $21.5 million. That was less than 1 percent of the 422,643 cases examined.

Using databases, the report matched child support delinquents with doctors who treat Medicare patients, researchers with grants from the National Institutes of Health and health care professionals who received loans or grants for school through the National Health Service Corps.

Most of the delinquent parents — 1,105 of them — were doctors serving in the Medicare program for the nation's elderly.

But the inspector general was only able to examine the records of 55 percent of Medicare doctors, so the actual number who owe child support could be much higher.

The report recommends that HHS start enforcing Clinton's executive order, saying it can start by doing the same computer matches that investigators did.

Beyond that, it suggests that agencies require doctors to sign statements swearing they aren't delinquent in child support before they can receive Medicare payments or grants. That would require new legislation punishing doctors if they lied.

Finally, it recommends that HHS cross-check applicants for federal money with a new database of all delinquents that is being created. The department should then deny payments to those not paying child support, it said.

A spokesman for the HHS agency that administers Medicare, Chris Peacock, said the agency "absolutely believes that doctors who are delinquent in child support payments shouldn't be getting Medicare money."

Peacock said Medicare is working to find a solution. But in written comments, the agency objected to every suggestion by the inspector general.

It argued that a doctor caught through a computer match could simply reapply as a corporation and that even if a new computer system worked it would "disrupt patient service" if doctors were kicked out of the program.

The agency also complained that requiring doctors to sign a statement would be an "administrative burden" for doctors when very few are in violation. Plus, it said, doctors might easily lie, and investigations would be expensive.

The National Institutes of Health also argued it is not worth denying grants to a few researchers when 99.72 percent owe no child support.

"This is an extremely high compliance rate, one which we would be pleased to achieve in other areas," said Anthony L. Itteilag, NIH deputy director for management.

But $21.5 million means a lot to the families who have it coming, said Debbie Kline of the Association for the Enforcement of Child Support.

"There isn't really an amount that is too small to overlook," she said. "The federal government should not be paying money to criminals who are neglecting their children."

Smokers use Zyban to help kick the habit

New York Times Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — If there was a pill to help you quit smoking, would you take it?

Zyban, the first nonnicotine prescription pill to help people give up cigarettes, now is being heavily marketed by pharmaceutical company Glaxo Wellcome.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration in May approved the marketing of Zyban, although the drug, bupropion hydrochloride, has been on the market since the late 1980s as the antidepressant Wellbutrin and Wellbutrin-SR.

Its new use required clinical trials and FDA approval, said Glaxo Wellcome spokesman Bill Chapman. The new name and labeling purposely distinguish Zyban from its antidepressant predecessor, Chapman said.

"That was one of the reasons why we asked the FDA for a separate name, to make a distinction," he said. New labeling will make it clear to patients, doctors and pharmacists that Zyban should not be taken by people using Wellbutrin.

How Zyban helps people quit smoking is unknown, though the presumption is the drug affects two brain chemicals, dopamine and norepinephrine, linked to nicotine addiction.

That discovery came when a scientist monitoring depressed patients taking Wellbutrin noted that some also quit smoking.

Two subsequent studies of 1,500 people who smoked at least 15 cigarettes daily found that nearly half were able to abstain from smoking during the last four weeks of the seven-week treatment with 300 milligrams of Zyban daily; when treatment included Zyban combined with a nicotine patch, the number of people who quit grew to 58 percent. Also, 23 percent of participants quit using only a placebo, an unmedicated preparation.

Zyban does come with some cautions.

First, Zyban is associated with the risk of seizure: People with seizure or eating disorders should not take it. The most common side effects are dry mouth and insomnia — sleeplessness was severe enough for 0.8 percent of the study's patients to stop taking the drug.

Glaxo Wellcome, however, said the side effects are mild and often disappear in a few weeks.

Zyban wholesales for $63.88 for a bottle of 60 pills, but Chapman could not estimate retail prices, saying it would depend on store and region.

While Zyban or nicotine substitutes may have a place in helping people quit smoking, the American Lung Association does not endorse specific products, said Kathleen McAllister, program director of the association's Northeastern New York chapter.

People smoke for different reasons. Several methods, including nicotine gum or patches, therapy, acupuncture or even live-in treatment, can help smokers quit, McAllister said.

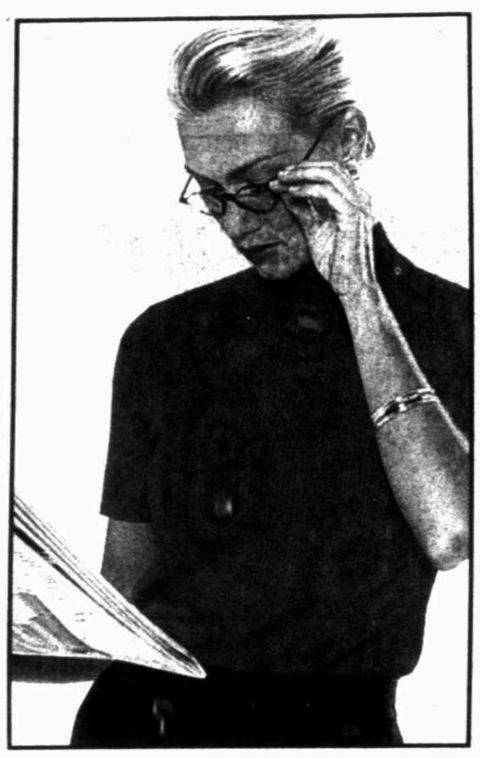

"We really feel that if you're going to have long-term results, we recommend a program that stresses behavioral changes," she said.

Al Steinmann, a doctor of internal medicine at Albany Medical College who has treated people trying to quit smoking, said Zyban is "by and large a very safe drug; I would not have any real hesitancy in prescribing it," beyond the usual cautions.

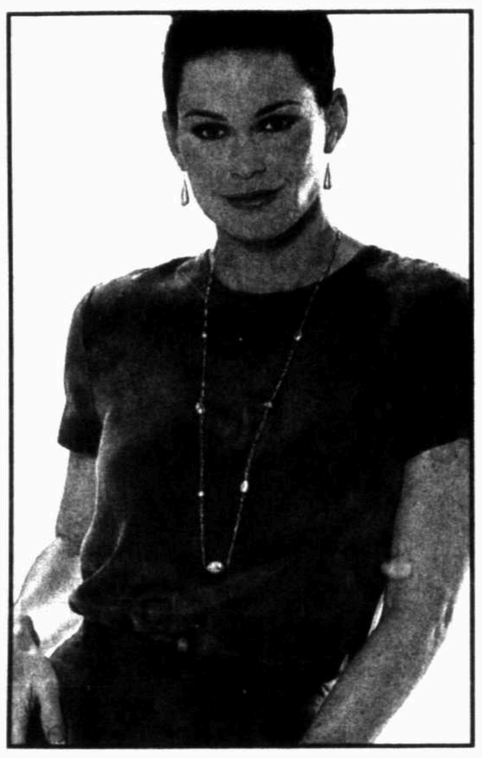

However, "People do have to remember that neither this, nor nicotine replacement, is any kind of magic bullet," Steinmann said.

Addiction to smoking is complex: nicotine is physically addicting, but the act of smoking fosters psychological and behavioral dependencies, Steinmann said.

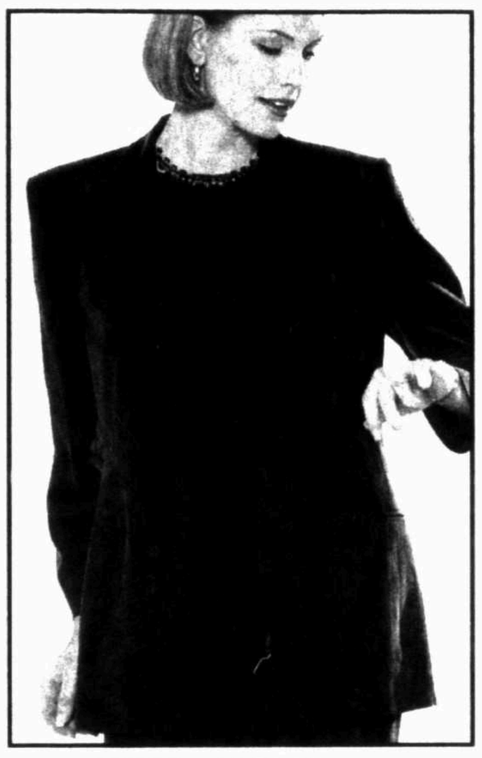

"If we can help put the brakes on the physical addiction, that's great, but that's not the only piece to the puzzle," which must include changing behaviors, he said.

Group: MHS violates equity law

Midlanders at board meeting say MHS girls' softball facilities violate Title IX

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

A group of Midlanders believe that Midland High School girls' softball doesn't have a home field advantage. In fact they don't have a home field at all.

MISD school board members on Tuesday listened to the group's representative argue that the MHS softball facilities violate federal gender equity laws.

The MHS girls softball teams currently play games at the city of Midland's Bill Williams field, which they share with Midland United Girls Softball. They practice on campus or at MUGS' practice facility near Wall Street.

Jacqueline Allen, parent of a former MHS softball player, told school officials that softball players travel about 12 minutes away to play games on a field they must share with MUGS, while the boys play only about three minutes away at the school's Zachery Field.

"We have what I believe to be a flagrant but unintentional violation of Title IX," Ms. Allen said.

In part, Title IX requires that any education or athletic program receiving federal funds provide equal opportunities for male and female athletes. The law was passed 25 years ago.

Ms. Allen said she wants the district to find some way to build two softball fields for the girls, possibly by buying property near MHS.

Board member Martha Manulik said there's no easy solution to the problem, which she said has more to do with differences in facilities between downtown MHS and outlying Lee High School.

"We're looking at some options," Mrs. Manulik said. "We do not have any land at Midland High School. There are very few sports at Midland High that (students) can walk out the door and practice."

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said it's problematic to acquire land for the fields, because many adjacent properties are too small for the teams.

Tim Whalen, Midland Independent School District athletic director, said after the meeting that the situation is tough for both girls and boys at MHS. Both must share a small practice field with the football team.

"Midland High is landlocked. They have nowhere to expand," Whalen said. "The only thing they can do is piecemeal things together."

Lee High School has about 40 acres of land for expansion, Whalen said.

In other business, board members listened to a parent concerned about the district providing a bus route for her San Jacinto Junior High School student.

Susan Dunn said the district should provide a bus route to her Fannin Elementary neighborhood because of dangerous major streets.

"The main thing is children needing to cross Garfield, Neely and Golf Course," Ms. Dunn said. "The traffic is

McAdams: Child asked me to perform sex acts

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

Testimony continued Tuesday in the aggravated sexual assault trial of Danny Howard McAdams, who stands accused of sexually assaulting his stepdaughter in July 1994. The girl was 6 years old at the time of the alleged assault.

The mother of the girl, Grace Moody, took the stand during Tuesday's trial, and at times, appeared visibly shaken by the proceedings.

She described her turbulent relationship with McAdams as "off and on" and characterized by "blow-ups."

"He was very strict with all of us," she said. "I was only supposed to go to the store once a week. He checked the mileage on the car to make sure I was not seeing someone."

The couple separated twice before finally divorcing in 1995. Mrs. Moody has since remarried.

"We separated in 1992 because of physical and mental abuse," Mrs. Moody testified. "Danny was in control of everything."

"He always told me I was too fat, that I should look like the other women he looked at."

She said they reconciled, and then separated again in 1993 before divorcing.

Mrs. Moody said she continued to see her husband even after their divorce. "It was kind of like he still had control over me."

She testified that her husband was working "graveyard" shift

Local man found guilty of aggravated robbery

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

After approximately two hours of deliberation Tuesday afternoon, a 10-man, two-woman jury found a Midland man guilty of aggravated robbery stemming from a hold-up at a convenience store last year.

Casarez

At about 1:30 p.m. Monday, the jury began to hear testimony in the trial of Alberto Simon Casarez, 27, who was arrested Aug. 22, 1996 — a few minutes after the robbery at the 7-Eleven at 1112 S. Midland Drive.

The defendant was found guilty of holding a convenience store clerk and a shopper at gunpoint before leaving the store with $25. The trial took place at the 348th District Court with Judge Willie DuBose presiding.

Before entering their chamber for deliberation, the jury was presented with more testimony from state witnesses, including 7-Eleven clerk Beverly Nichols, former Midland Police Officer Paul Schuletze, and Midland County Sheriff's Office investigator J. P. Stewart. MCSO Records Clerk Dorothy Smith was called by defense attorney Brian Martin.

During closing arguments, Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams told the jury that evidence and testimony presented dur-

Big Spring police chief, 48, dies

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Police Chief Jerry Edwards, 48, died Monday in Lubbock's University Medical Center where he was to undergo treatment for a heart ailment, according to Police Sgt. Roger Sweatt.

"We had thought this was a minor heart problem," Sweatt said Tuesday.

Edwards, who joined the Big Spring Police Department in 1975 as a patrolman, was promoted to sergeant and then lieutenant before he was appointed chief of the 65-member force in 1994.

"He was a good guy," Sweatt said of Edwards. "If anyone wasn't faring too well and Edwards became aware of it, he would call the person into his office and say: 'Can I help you? What can I do for you?'"

Edwards, who had been in law-enforcement for almost 30 years, worked as a jailer, dispatcher, police officer and then chief. Before he joined the Big Spring Police Department, he had worked for the Lubbock and the Slaton police departments.

Services are set for 2 p.m. Thursday at Trinity Baptist Church in Big Spring with burial to follow at Trinity Memorial Park.

He is survived by his wife, Janie; a son, Christopher; two daughters, Randi and Jackie; two grandchildren, and by his parents, Glynn and Dorothy Edwards.

"If anyone wasn't faring too well ... he would call the person into his office and say, "Can I help you? What can I do for you?" '

Dallas Lawyer Tom Pauken, 53, who is seeking the Republican Party's nomination for Texas attorney general, campaigned Tuesday in Midland.

Pauken says he can solve state's problems

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Touting his Ronald Reagan-brand of conservatism, Tom Pauken, who is seeking the Republican Party's nomination for Texas attorney general, proclaimed that "new leadership" is needed in the office.

Pauken, a 53-year-old Dallas lawyer and former chairman of the Texas Republican State Executive Committee, said that he has the management ability, clout, and thrift needed to solve many of the state's problems. According to Pauken, these range from inefficiencies in the child-support system and the Texas drug explosion to prison overcrowding and lawyers getting richer off the tobacco litigation.

"I wonder what, if anything, he can point to as his achievements in this office," Pauken said of Democrat Dan Morales, who has held the post for two terms.

Pauken is contesting Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson for the Republican nomination in 1998.

"Barry is a nice fellow," Pauken said of the former Midlander. "He'll have lots of money (for his campaign), and if money wins this race, Barry Williamson will be the nominee."

But in a brief Tuesday noon press conference at Midland International Airport, Pauken focused on what he deemed Morales' liabilities.

For starters, Pauken charged that the attorney general's Child-Support Division is in "absolute disarray" and that the division's $10 million computer system is now at $60 million in cost overruns and still "doesn't work."

Under President Reagan's administration, Pauken directed a federal agency, ACTION, in charge of volunteer initiatives.

ing the trial linked the defendant to the robbery.

Witnesses testified that Casarez, who disguised his face with a stocking cap and a soiled white handkerchief, entered the store during predawn hours, and placed a rifle on the payment counter. The weapon, Ms. Nichols testified, was pointed in her direction.

The suspect, Ms. Nichols testified, told a male customer to lie on the floor, and demanded that the clerk surrender all dollar bills kept in the cash register. The clerk also handed the suspect "bait money," a $2 bill stashed under a stack of $1 bills. This is for law enforcement to identify money taken during the course of a robbery or theft, Ms. Nichols explained.

Casarez, before leaving the crime scene, allegedly snatched a handful of cigarette packs from the counter and instructed the victims to lock themselves in a back room, Ms. Nichols said. The suspect had entered and left the store three times before leaving for good.

Stewart testified that he heard a transmission over the police scanner from a dispatcher who announced the robbery and gave a description of the suspect — a stocky, Hispanic male with a white T-shirt and denim shorts. Stewart said that he left the Sheriff's Office and drove down Industrial Avenue to see if the suspect was heading east.

Spotting an older-model sedan driven by a man matching the description, the deputy activated his siren and alert signals, but the driver eluded him for several blocks before crashing into a utility post. The suspect ran into a brushy area behind an abandoned building and hid there until backup officers located the man and arrested him. The suspect, authorities said, had fired several shots during his escape, and when detained, was combative and spit blood at officers.

The man in custody was identified as Casarez, Stewart testified. The vehicle was registered to the defendant, and video taken from a surveillance camera indicates that Casarez, at the time of his arrest, appeared to be wearing the same clothes as the suspect in the robbery.

Ms. Sams made note that the pants Casarez was wearing at the time of his arrest had a hole in the left leg. The video recovered from the store revealed that the suspect's denim shorts had a hole in the same area.

The suspect, Ms. Nichols testified, told a male customer to lie on the floor, and demanded that the clerk surrender all dollar bills kept in the cash register. The clerk also handed the suspect 'bait money,' a $2 bill stashed under a stack of $1 bills. This is ... to identify money taken during the course of a robbery or theft, Ms. Nichols explained.

Ms. Smith testified as to how the arrest information is obtained by jailers. She told the jury that the information on the arrest sheet, including height and weight, is information the suspect relays to jailers. The jail does not actually weigh or measure the defendants, she said.

Defense attorney Brian Martin called Ms. Smith to the stand after he questioned the defendant's actual height and weight measurement, comparing it to the description Ms. Nichols gave officers the night of the robbery. Ms. Smith read the jail records to the jury, which quote the suspect as saying that his dimensions were 5-feet, 10-inches, and 175 pounds.

Ms. Sams told the jury that Ms. Nichols told officers at the scene that the man seemed to be 5-feet, 11-inches, and 170 pounds.

Court officials said Tuesday that a sentencing hearing is scheduled for 9 a.m. today.

According to the 1996 Crime in Texas Report, a robbery is reported to state law enforcement every 16 minutes. Thirty percent of robberies that occurred in Texas that year were cleared by arrest. According to DPS reports, 84 robberies were reported in Midland County last year. Twenty-five arrests were made in connection with those cases.

DEATH NOTICES

Jerry Edwards

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Police Department Chief Jerry G. Edwards, 48, died Monday, Sept. 8, at a Lubbock hospital.

Services are to be 2 p.m. Thursday, Sept 11, at Trinity Baptist Church in Big Spring with the Rev. Randy Cotton officiating. Burial is to follow at Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home in Big Spring.

He was born Aug. 27, 1949, in Lubbock.

Before joining the Big Spring Police Department in July 1975, he served with the Department of Public Safety, Lubbock Police Department and Slaton Police Department. He was named chief on March 14, 1993. He was a member of Trinity Baptist Church in Big Spring, Permian Basin Drug Task Force, Permian Basin Police Chief's Association and served on the boards of the Salvation Army and Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center.

OBITUARIES

Willie Washington

Willie B. Washington was born August 20, 1907, to Will and Annie Parker in Burleson County, Texas. She was born into a family of 19 children. Her parents and all of her sisters and brothers have preceded her in death. She met and married C.D. Washington. In 1951, Willie B., C.D. and their family moved to Midland, where Mrs. Washington gave her heart to Jesus and became a dedicated member of the Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church. She worked diligently in the church serving as a stewardess, a choir member and in any and every capacity for which her services were needed. Willie B. was a very independent person and worked tirelessly to help support her family. She was very faithful to the upbringing of her two sons, Earnest and Carl and served as a den mother for the Boy Scouts. She was also instrumental in rearing her niece, Geneva Dobbins, along with her two boys. In later years, she reared Aretha and Evelyn Hyman, her great-nieces.

Willie B., also known as Will, was preceded in death by her husband, C.D. Washington.

She leaves to cherish her memory: two sons, Earnest Washington of Dallas, Texas, and Carl Douglas Washington of Odessa, Texas; two daughters-in-law, Joan Washington of Dallas and Novetta Washington of Odessa; three grandchildren, Yolanda M. Thursby of San Antonio, Texas, Mishun E. Washington of Greenville, South Carolina, and Earnest "Trey" Washington of Dallas, Texas; a grandson-in-law, Garron Thursby; a great-granddaughter, Briana Jenay Thursby, both of San Antonio, Texas; two special nieces, Geneva Dobbins of Carson, California, and Annie Hickey of Dallas, Texas; and a host of nieces, nephews, relatives, friends and the cherished members of the Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church.

Mrs. Washington died at 9:05 a.m. Sunday morning at Memorial Hospital in Midland, Texas.

Funeral services have been set for 11 a.m. Wednesday, September 10, 1997, at Greater St. Luke's A.M.E. Church with Pastor I.C. Cooper officiating. Interment will be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Agnes Schigut

Agnes Schigut was born November 10, 1911, to William R. and Willie Kate Long in Cason, Texas. She was reared and educated in Clarksville and San Antonio. She met Mike Schigut in Corpus Christi and they were married February 21, 1938, in Corpus Christi. Mrs. Schigut owned and operated Janie's Dress Shop. She was a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church, where she was a member of St. Ann's Mothers Club, serving as the club treasurer.

Mr. Schigut preceded her in death in January 1990.

She is survived by two sons, Michael Schigut of Midland and Mark Schigut of Grand Prairie, Texas; a sister, Mary McBride of San Antonio, Texas; five grandchildren, Angie Blackwood of Midland, Micha Schigut of Midland, Emily Schigut of Midland, Cody Schigut of Grand Prairie and Jamie Schigut of Grand Prairie; two great-grandchildren, Megan and David Blackwood; and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702.

Mrs. Schigut died Saturday afternoon at a hospital in Grand Prairie, Texas.

Pallbearers will be Cody Schigut, Micha Schigut, Brack Blackwood, Wayne H. Johnson, James R. Johnson and Mike Hale.

Funeral services have been set for 3 p.m. Wednesday, September 10, 1997, at St. Ann's Catholic Church with Monsignor T.J. Murphy officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Cathryn Jackson

Cathryn Ellen (Caldwell) Jackson, 29, passed away recently.

Cathy was born in Kiowa, Kansas, on November 16, 1967. She graduated from high school in Hobbs, New Mexico, and attended New Mexico State University in Las Cruces.

Cathryn was dearly loved and will be missed by those who knew her.

Miss Jackson was abducted on September 1, from Wal-Mart in Oklahoma City and was found murdered Sunday, September 7, by Oklahoma City authorities.

Before she dissappeared, she was planning on moving to Midland to be with her family.

She was suffering from cancer and recently had chemotherapy treatments.

She is survived by her son, Zachary Christopher Jackson, 6, and daughter, Camille Nicole Jackson, 4, of Oklahoma City; parents, Mark and Bonnie Caldwell of Midland, Texas; Terry and Lorraine Heaton of Riyadh, Saudi Arabia; a brother, Chris Heaton and Janna Van Meter of Oklahoma City; father and mother-in-law, Don and Deanie Jackson of Oklahoma City; grandparents, Cliff and Leona Owens of Mooreland, Oklahoma; Roy and Lyda Patton of Woodward, Oklahoma; Oval Caldwell of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Floyd and Claudia Moss of Christoval, Texas; and several wonderful aunts, uncles, cousins and a host of friends.

She was preceded in death by her grandparents, Floyd and Margaret Heaton.

Services will be held at 2 p.m. September 12, 1997, at the First Baptist Church of Mooreland, Oklahoma, with Jim Caldwell of Tulsa, Oklahoma, officiating. Cathryn will be laid to rest at Mooreland Cemetery.

A memorial fund has been established in the "Memory of Cathryn" for her two children, Zach and Cami, at Magpegasus Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 91, Midland, Texas 79702.

Arrangements are under the direction of Billings Funeral Home in Woodward, Oklahoma.

Ida Manuel

Mrs. Winston (Ida) Manuel was born May 11, 1916, in Mansfield, Texas, to Charles and Bessie Warner Morton. As a child, she traveled throughout Texas with her father, who was a minister. On September 6, 1936, she married Winston Manuel in Oglesby, Texas. He was in the armed services and they traveled extensively throughout the U.S., including California, Missouri, and Texas. In 1950, they moved to Midland. She and her husband owned and operated the Western Appliance Store in Midland during the 1960s and 1970s. Mrs. Manuel worked as the business bookkeeper. She was a member of First United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Manuel was preceded in death by her husband on July 25, 1985.

She is survived by her sisters, Mrs. J.D. Jenkins of Kingsland, Texas, Mrs. R.M. Wells of Pampa, Texas, and Miss Malvin Morton of Chicago, Illinois; two nieces and two nephews.

She died Tuesday morning at her residence.

Graveside services have been scheduled for 3 p.m. Wednesday at Trinity Memorial Park Cemetery in Big Spring, Texas, with the Rev. Bob Porterfield of West Kentucky Baptist Church officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home in Midland.

Honorary pallbearers are Tom Nix, Dr. H.B. Mills and Wes Graham.

Memorials may be sent to the Hospice of Midland.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 4:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

ASSAULT: McAdams currently serving 99-year sentence for a similar charge and would usually care for the girl and her older brother while she was at work. This arrangement continued even after the divorce, she said.

"How many hours a day were you at work," Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman asked. "Nine or 10 hours," Mrs. Moody said.

She said she heard of the alleged assault after her daughter told a friend, and the friend told her mother. The friend's mother then alerted Mrs. Moody.

"I was shocked. I cannot imagine anyone doing this to a child."

Mrs. Moody said she confronted her husband about the allegations and he told her they were true. She testified her husband told her he was stressed at the time. "He said he needed love, a different kind of love, that I wouldn't understand."

Mrs. Moody said she had previously noticed her daughter behaving oddly and asked her husband about it. "She acts like a jealous girlfriend. What is the problem," she testified she asked her husband. "He told me it was my jealousy and insecurity."

The girl had testified Monday that McAdams would molest her while in the shower. "Did you know that Danny McAdams was showering naked with your daughter?" Ms. Clingman asked. "No," Mrs. Moody replied.

Recorded statements that McAdams made to the Upton County Sheriff's Department, the Midland Police Department, and to Child Protective Services after the alleged assault in July 1994 were all entered into evidence Tuesday by the prosecution.

In those statements, McAdams admitted to having oral sex with his stepdaughter as well as rubbing her genital area with his hands and penis.

Kim Parrott, a Child Protective Services caseworker, testified the alleged assault was a "priority one sexual abuse intake."

"Priority one we consider to be severe," Ms. Parrott said. "It has to be addressed within 24 hours."

She testified that during the interview, the defendant was "very cooperative."

"He kept saying that he was the one who called and wanted to do this (interview)," Ms. Parrott said. "He said he wanted to stop and try to make things right."

He told Ms. Parrott in his statement that he showered nude with his daughter because he did not want her to feel that nudity was dirty. "I never felt it would do any harm."

McAdams said in his recorded statement to Ms. Parrott, "She started asking me to do those things with her. I don't know how to tell my daughter no.

"I would not do anything to hurt my daughter," McAdams continued in the statement. "I love her more than anything."

He stated to Ms. Parrott, "She was really a troubled child before any of this started."

The statement also reflected that McAdams was worried about others molesting his daughter. "I was worried about that," he said in his statement to Ms. Parrott.

He said he often checked his stepdaughter to see if anyone had been "messing with her."

"I didn't understand. I didn't realize what I was doing was so wrong," McAdams said in the statement. He said he felt there had been "no harm since there was never any hurt."

Testimony resumes today in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

McAdams was convicted in Upton County in September 1995 on a similar charge involving the same child. He is currently serving a 99- year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections.

WANTED: Fugitive arrested

pect was en route to a drilling assignment and would be passing through Andrews. Officers identified the vehicle Sanford was in and arrested him at the scene.

Susan Rogers, administrator of Odessa Crime Stoppers, said the most-wanted list is issued four times a year by the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Ms. Rogers said Sanford was recently released from a Huntsville correctional facility, where he served time on charges of aggravated assault on a peace officer and burglary of a habitation. The charges were filed in both Ector and Winkler counties. He also was wanted by Ector County authorities on a warrant charging him with assault.

Sanford allegedly violated the conditions of his parole release and was sought by state authorities.

Ms. Rogers added that he was extradited to the Ector County Detention Center a few hours after his arrest. He will be remanded to the correctional facility in Huntsville, where he faces more incarceration.

A hearing or trial is not necessary for parole violators, she said.

BOARD: Parent seeks courtesy bus for junior high student horrendous."

Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services, told the board that 139 students live in the Fannin area. Heidelberg was unsure if enough buses would be available to add an extra courtesy route.

"The other concern I would have is that if we did this you would have 138 students to be fair to," Heidelberg said. "I think what we would be asking for is a courtesy bus here."

Mrs. Manulik had some reservations about increasing bus routes inside the district.

"I think you've got to be real careful with this — once you start it ... you're going to be buying school buses," Mrs. Manulik said.

Jackie Hamilton, board president, urged Ms. Dunn to contact the Midland Police Department's traffic division to get a school crossing guard posted at the streets. She also said she should contact the Midland City Council.

The board took no action on the matter. "I guess at this point we don't have an answer for you," Mrs. Hamilton said.

Among other items, the board held its public input tax hearing for its proposed 6 1/2 cent per $100 valuation debt service property tax increase.

The tax increase will be used to pay for $39.5 million in bonds that voters approved in March for elementary school renovations.

The tax increase faced little opposition. One person spoke at the hearing.

Richard Bowdon, chairman of Citizens for Fiscal Responsibility, told the board he's concerned that the MISD debt will soon reach record levels.

On the maintenance and operations sub-budget, Bowdon said, revenue is increasing by $4 million even though the budget's tax rate is staying the same for the 1996-97 fiscal year.

"Spending per student will reach a record of $4,985 — an increase of $153 per student even after adjusting for inflation," Bowdon said. "This is the largest jump in real spending per student in five years.

"For these reasons, CFR believes that this is not a budget that can be accurately described as 'lean.'" Bowdon said. "We ask the board to set a reasonable goal of increasing per-student no faster than inflation next year."

The board will meet again on Sept. 23 to consider adopting the debt service tax rate.

PAUKEN: Candidate says barracks should be used for prisoners

(From 1B)

"The buck stops there when you're running an agency," said Pauken, who noted that the agency "cut spending" under his directorship.

"Yet we did more with less," he said. "And we've got to do the same with the Texas Attorney General's Office."

Pauken said that as attorney general he would represent "the interests of taxpayers and families in the state of Texas."

During Morales' tenure, the "budget for the Attorney General's Office has tripled," Pauken alleged. "And yet we have less to show for it."

Of the overcrowded Texas prison system, Pauken said that there was blame enough for federal Judge William Wayne Justice, who, Pauken said, is running the Texas prison system, and Morales, who is letting Justice get away with it.

By an uncontested settlement agreement, "which Dan Morales entered into," control of the prison system was stripped from "elected and appointed officials" and placed in control of a "court-appointed master," Pauken said.

Abandoned military barracks ought to be reserved for prisoners, said Pauken, who is a Vietnam War veteran.

"Military barracks ... were good enough for us in the military, and, yet, they are not good enough to relieve prison overcrowding in Texas because of this silly (federal) court order."

Should he be elected attorney general, Pauken said that he would "move quickly and immediately to take back control of our Texas prisons by appealing the decisions to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals."

"It's about time we returned to the Tenth Amendment," which ensures states' rights" by reserving "those powers not delegated to the federal government" to the "states and to the people and to the people of Texas," Pauken said.

He lauded Allan Shivers, who was Texas' Democratic governor in the late 1940s and most of the 1950s, for contesting the federal government in order to preserve the state's off-shore oil rights called The Tidelands.

"I move to take on this irresponsible federal judge as the next Texas attorney general," Pauken said.

He said that he would also "stand up for parental rights. I don't know whose side Dan Morales is on in the parental rights case."

Of the "explosion of drugs" in Texas, Pauken said that he would implement Nancy Reagan's "Just Say 'No' To Drugs" program.

"We've got ranches in West Texas and in South Texas that have been overrun by the drug lords from south of our border," said Pauken, who allowed that he "helped lead the (anti-drug) effort with Nancy Reagan taking the lead."

Pauken pledged that he would "not enter into any sweetheart deals with favored multi-millionaire insider lawyers" in the tobacco litigation. Texas will be getting $4.7 billion from the tobacco industry to care for people whose health was damaged by tobacco use.

"Dan Morales has agreed, by written contract, to give 15 percent (or $700 million) of the total recovery in the tobacco litigation ... to multi-millionaire lawyers," he noted.

In turn, said Pauken, "these lawyers have turned around and given large contributions to Dan Morales. It doesn't pass the smell test. And I've called on these lawyers either to go forward on a pro-bono (for free for the public good) basis on behalf of the taxpayers of Texas or agree to a reasonable and modest hourly fee basis.

"And let's give that 15 percent to the needy children of Texas" by way of a "health care fund," Pauken proposed. "All of these are multi- millionaire lawyers. How much is too much? They are greedy as far as I am concerned. And it's not proper what Dan Morales has done in this instance."

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 10, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Sept. 10, 1997:
You might make a major investment in a real-estate venture. You gain a lot of pleasure adding to your financial security in this manner. A partner could be tense about an expenditure, though in the long run it will work out. You are more indulgent than in previous years. Loved ones see how much you care. If you are single, a relationship becomes more important to you in 1998. This person could be the right one. If attached, good feelings flourish, and even more so next year. This warmth is the result of your positive attitude. You might decide to make an additional commitment. CAPRICORN likes you a lot.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Be innovative when formulating ideas. With this in mind, you view a situation differently. Be direct with loved ones about expectations. A trip could be involved. Avoid office gossip, stay secure and steer the appropriate course. Tonight: Attend a "must" meeting.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You are determined to increase your financial status. Another might not view a change in the same way. Be direct with a partner. Your easy ways help another open up. Instincts are right on. Consider a class to increase expertise in your field. Tonight: Have a good time.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You get what you want because of dogged determination and the endurance to keep pushing. Associates accede to your requests; you come out on top. Listen carefully when discussing finances with a partner. Creativity surges to the forefront. Tonight: Be naughty!
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Work needs to be your highest priority. You might feel a boss is being a bit hard on you. He is! Nevertheless, operate within the current parameters. Coming from a gentle space allows resistance to break down. Tonight: Dine out.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Let go, and let your creativity flourish. There are many different points of view, but you can zero in on the right one. Your charming ways win the day! Spread ideas, get feedback and think through a decision. Tonight: Stop burning the candle at both ends!
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Continue to make your needs high priority. No one is better than you at choosing for yourself. Give yourself more leeway. Heed instincts. A partner grudgingly supports you. Finances will flow if you allow yourself to give more. Tonight: The naughtiness begins at home.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ You are an energizer. Take action, and reach out for others. A partner who stands on ceremony loosens up considerably. Don't question while your charm is at work. Efficiency and charisma are a winning combination. Tonight: Buy flowers on the way home.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Finances are a major preoccupation as you try to get key matters in hand. Listen carefully to another's suggestions. He has a rigid style of talking, but he has valid ideas. Instincts are right with money and a key love gesture. Tonight: Join favorite people at a favorite spot.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ You are a powerhouse with strong ideas and a charming manner. Use this to your benefit, in whatever realm of your life that you want to recharge. Emphasize success, and get what you want. Keep your eye on your financial structure. Tonight: Balance your checkbook.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Go within, to seek solutions. A boss is positively disposed toward you. Heed instincts about work. You easily handle important matters. A family member is disgruntled over not getting the time he wants. Explain what is going on. Tonight: Finish work, then have fun.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Stay in control. You know what you want, and can have it. Your willingness to look at the big picture helps others understand your serious intent. Good news comes from a distance. Listen more. Consider a trip in the near future. Tonight: Take time for yourself!
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You are in the limelight. A partner gives you his support and financial backing. You feel you're in a money squeeze. Think through a decision with care. Gracefully accept responsibilities. Your goals are right around the corner. Tonight: The party goes on!

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♡	Pass	2NT	Pass
4♡	Pass	6♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♡ Study this diagram carefully. In percentage terms, how would you rate your chances of raking in 12 tricks with hearts as trumps after both defenders follow to one round of trumps?

The bidding is typical of the modern style. North's jump to two no trump was a forcing raise in the major suit (a jump to three hearts would have been a limit raise) and South showed a minimum, balanced opening bid by leaping to game — the Principle of Fast Arrival. North simply bid what seemed to be the potential of the combined hands. The slam could not be worse than on a finesse.

Congratulations if you decided that a small slam in hearts is a sure thing, regardless of the spade distribution, and there is nothing the defenders can do about it. Declarer wins the first heart, draws the remaining trumps, then cashes the king and ace of clubs and ruffs a club to eliminate that suit. Next, declarer cashes the aces of spades and diamonds, then exits with a diamond.

The best the defenders can do is to allow the player with four spades to win the second diamond. Since a minor-suit return would allow declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a spade from the other, the defender must return a spade, and should try a deceptive ten. South simply plays low from second hand. If third hand follows, the suit is breaking 3-2. If third hand shows out, declarer takes the marked finesse for the jack of spades and loses no more than one diamond.

Special version of 'Candle in the Wind' was re-recorded after Diana's funeral

NEW YORK — Elton John's special version of "Candle in the Wind" for Princess Diana will survive well beyond the princess' funeral.

The new version of the song was quickly re-recorded after Saturday's service and will be available as a charity single on Sept. 16. Experts say it could rival some of the biggest-selling songs of all time.

Even Diana's sons, William and Harry, reportedly got choked up when John performed the song, which was rewritten 20 years after it was first created as a tribute to Marilyn Monroe. The new version included new lyrics describes Diana as "England's rose."

After the funeral, John recorded the song later that day in London with George Martin, the Beatles' former producer. Martin said it was captured with "a gentle addition of a string quartet and woodwind."

John said he didn't intend to perform the song again live and that there are no plans to include it on any album. Profits will go to the Diana, Princess of Wales, Memorial Fund.

LOS ANGELES — As a heterosexual, Betty DeGeneres may seem an unlikely spokeswoman for the Human Rights Campaign's National Coming Out Project. But as the mother of Ellen DeGeneres, she knows a few things about the topic.

The elder DeGeneres, 67, will make personal appearances and appear in TV and print ads to encourage gay people to come out and be honest about their sexuality.

It's the first time the Human Rights Campaign, the largest national gay rights political organization, has named a heterosexual to serve as National Coming Out Project spokeswoman. Chastity Bono, Amanda Bearse and Candace Gingrich served in the past.

LOS ANGELES — The wife of "America's Funniest Home Videos" host Bob Saget has filed for divorce.

Sherri Saget cited irreconcilable differences in court papers filed in Superior Court on Monday.

The couple have been married 15 years and have three daughters.

Saget also starred in ABC's "Full House" as the widowed head of an extended family.

In June, the comedian said he wouldn't return as host of "America's Funniest Home Videos." He is being replaced by Daisy Fuentes.

NEW YORK — The memoirs of late Sir Georg Solti will be out next month — in time for what would have been the world-renowned conductor's 85th birthday.

The book, called "Memoirs," was completed last year shortly before Solti, 84, died in his sleep while on vacation in the south of France.

The memoirs of late Sir Georg Solti will be out next month.

Solti, born in Hungary and considered one of the most dynamic conductors, turned the Chicago Symphony into one of the world's foremost orchestras. He was also music director of the Royal Opera at Covent Garden in England, chief conductor of the Orchestre de Paris, principal conductor of the London Philharmonic and director of the Salzburg Easter Festival.

In his memoirs, he recalls his encounters with Bela Bartok, Richard Strauss, Arturo Toscanini and Placido Domingo. He also writes about the art of conducting, including his interpretations of Wagner's "Ring" cycle, operas by Mozart and Verdi and symphonies by Mahler and Bruckner.

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Robbie Knievel may have followed in his daredevil father's footsteps, but he hopes his own daughter doesn't.

"It's just too dangerous," he said of his 11-year-old. "I wouldn't let her do it."

But the 35-year-old Knievel admits he didn't listen when his father, Evel Knievel, tried to tell him the same thing after he made unsuccessful jumps.

Robbie Knievel hopes his daughter doesn't follow in his footsteps.

"I used to sit in the ambulance and look at him, and he'd say, 'I don't want you to do this,'" he said.

The younger Knievel was in Hutchinson on Tuesday to jump 20 trucks on his motorcycle — about 150 feet — at the Kansas State Fair, about half as many as Evel did when he was here in the 1970s.

Robbie, known as Kaptain Knievel, has chronic back pain from crashes and has missed about six of his last 15 jumps.

"Every time I look at that ramp I say to myself, 'You idiot, what are you doing this for?'" he said "But then the crowd gets you going."

Joint chiefs chairman nominee suggests pursuing war criminals

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's choice to head the Joint Chiefs of Staff said at his confirmation hearing Tuesday he would consider using specially trained police or elite commando forces to arrest indicted war criminals in Bosnia.

"I think we all agree that these individuals need to be brought to justice," said Gen. Henry H. Shelton. He said he would recommend that NATO employ "either specially trained police or Special Operations-type forces" for the job.

Shelton also said he wanted U.S. Army troops out of the Balkan nation by next June, but conceded he was unsure about the U.S. exit strategy from Bosnia and said NATO may need to consider a follow-on force.

With no opposition to his selection, questioning of Shelton by Senate Armed Services Committee members focused on military policy issues.

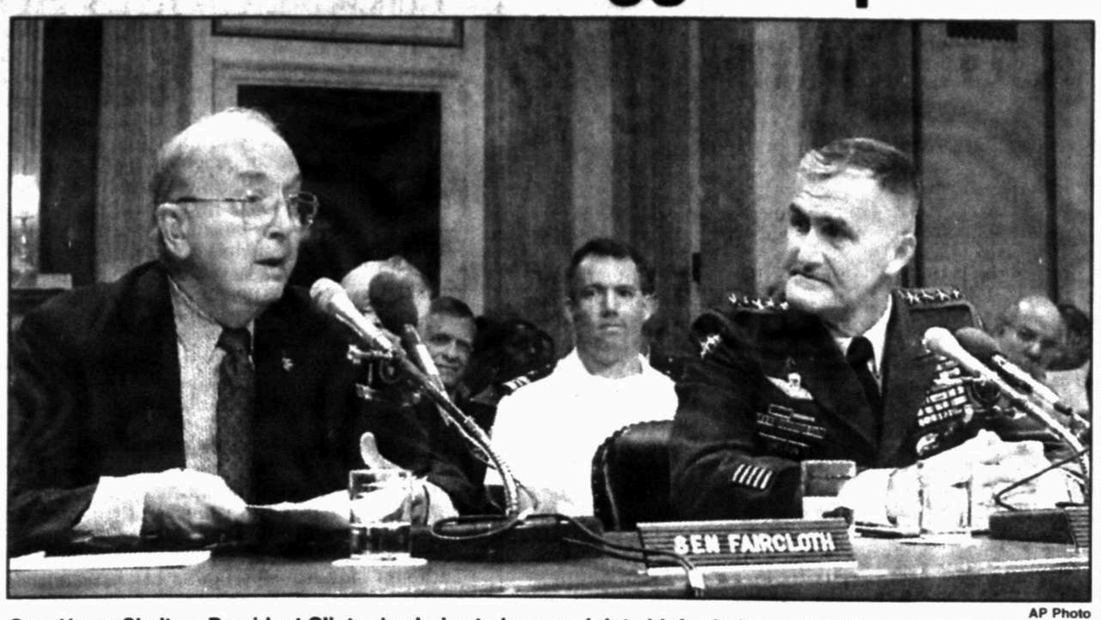

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., had sharp questions on the U.S. strategy in Bosnia, and particularly on plans to withdraw nearly 10,000 U.S. troops by next June.

Saying he supported the withdrawal of U.S. forces by mid-1998, Shelton said, "I am not aware of exactly what our exit strategy is right now."

"Does that concern you?" McCain said. "Usually we don't go into things without an exit strategy, as you know general."

Shelton replied that the Clinton administration still had nine or 10 months to plan the withdrawal and that policy-makers should focus on strengthening the lagging civil and economic reforms needed to sustain peace in Bosnia.

"I am not concerned as of right now in terms of what our mission is," Shelton said. "At this point our mission is well spelled-out."

AP Photo

Gen. Henry Shelton, President Clinton's choice to become joint chiefs chairman, right, looks on as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. introduces Shelton to the Senate Armed Services Committee hearing on Shelton's nomination, Tuesday on Capitol Hill.

That sanguine view contrasted sharply with comments by lawmakers from both parties who are worried the U.S. troop commitment to Bosnia may become open-ended and that NATO may be unable to establish a permanent peace.

"The NATO-led force in Bosnia is at a critical juncture," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., who wants the current peacekeeping force replaced next year by an all-European force.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., the committee's second-ranking Republican, said although he opposed the Bosnia deployment, Congress must now give Clinton "maximum flexibility" to extend the mission.

"I think we're on the brink of disaster," Warner said, noting "conflicting statements about apprehending the war criminals."

McCain pointed to the "haunting familiarity" between the Bosnia mission, with its war criminals component, and the failed U.S. effort in Somalia, which ended when 18 U.S. Army soldiers died in a firefight while seeking to arrest a clan leader.

"I would have to tell you, general, in the mind of this senator, and I think most of my constituents, it is unclear exactly what our mission is there," McCain added.

Shelton stuck close to the Clinton administration line on Bosnia, conceding that policy-makers may need to consider a successor to the current Stabilization Force, or SFOR.

"There may be a requirement for some international effort in order to maintain the stability of the area," said Shelton, who visited U.S. and allied commanders in Bosnia last month and plans two more visits this fall.

The 55-year-old Green Beret, a veteran of Vietnam and the Persian Gulf, would be the third consecutive Army general to rise to the top military post, succeeding the retiring Gen. John Shalikashvili and his predecessor Gen. Colin Powell. Shelton now heads the U.S. Special Operations Command, also a four-star post.

Shelton said he supported Shalikashvili's target of a weapons procurement budget of $60 billion by the end of the century, favored further military base closings and opposed buying any more B-2 bombers. He also opposes the Senate initiative to elevate the head of the National Guard to four-star rank and a seat on the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Senate prepares to repeal $50 billion tax credit for tobacco industry

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — In a move certain to make cigarette makers fume, the Senate prepared Tuesday to repeal a $50 billion credit for the tobacco industry that was slipped quietly into the balanced budget deal in late July.

Sen. Richard J. Durbin, D-Ill., who led the move to repeal the provision, called the tax credit a "sweetheart deal" — 46 words of legislation inserted into the tax bill at the last minute at the behest of tobacco industry lobbyists.

'It wasn't until the final hours before the vote that someone discovered the provision buried deep in the amendment. It was added in the dark of the night.'

— Sen. Richard J. Durbin

The provision allowed tobacco companies to credit $50 billion in taxes from new excise taxes on cigarettes against what they would pay in the proposed $368.5 billion settlement of anti-smoking lawsuits. That settlement is now pending in Congress, which would have to enact legislation to enforce it.

"It wasn't until the final hours before the vote that someone discovered the provision buried deep in the amendment," Durbin said on the Senate floor. "It was added in the dark of night."

The provision was part of a bill that raises the federal tax on cigarettes by 15 cents a pack.

Sen. Susan M. Collins, R-Maine, who co-sponsored the Durbin amendment, said it "never should have been written into law in the first place." She said it "magically appeared" and is a legislative "orphan" that no lawmaker wanted to acknowledge sponsoring.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and House Speaker Newt Gingrich later conceded that they allowed a staff member to insert the provision into the budget bill.

The White House indicated this week that President Clinton wants to ax the $50 billion windfall.

In the House, Rep. Nita M. Lowey, D-N.Y., has introduced a matching bill, but it has not been scheduled for a vote.

The Senate also approved a nonbinding recommendation offered by Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., and senators from other tobacco-producing states that growers be compensated as part of any tobacco legislation.

Ford says it's unfair that tobacco growers were excluded from the negotiations that produced the settlement.

"No other group has their livelihoods affected by the national tobacco settlement as adversely as tobacco growers," Ford said in his resolution, adding that tobacco-growing communities need help to weather changes brought on by the proposed settlement.

Administration stops deportation proceedings

■ Deportation proceedings were stopped against six Irish nationalists in an attempt to further the peace process.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration stopped deportation proceedings Tuesday against six Irish nationals who served time in Britain for committing terrorist acts for the Irish Republican Army.

Attorney General Janet Reno acted at the request of Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, who said suspension of the proceedings could advance the peace process in Northern Ireland.

"We do not approve or condone any past acts of terrorism in which they may have been involved," Albright said in a letter sent Tuesday to Reno.

"Nor do we accept the legal arguments against deportation that have been advanced in some of their cases. But, in light of our interest in achieving a lasting, overall settlement in Northern Ireland, we request that as a matter of discretion and without prejudice to the administration's legal position, you take action ... to ensure that these individuals will not be deported from the United States at this time," Albright's letter said.

The six who had been in danger of expulsion from the United States were Robert McErlean, Matthew Morrison, Gabriel Megahey, Brian Pearson, Noel Gaynor and Gerald McDade, the Justice Department said.

They had been convicted of a range of crimes, including murder, attempted murder, car theft, weapons and bombing violations and membership in a proscribed organization, Justice officials said.

None currently is wanted on any charge, and all have work permits. Several have married American woman and have children who are U.S. citizens, the department said.

Five were convicted in Northern Ireland and served their sentences in Britain. The sixth, Megahey, was convicted in the United States of several counts, including the interstate transportation and exportation of explosives and firearms. He served five years in this country for attempting to provide weapons to the IRA.

The decision brought praise from several members of Congress, including Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., who called it an act of fundamental fairness and humanitarian kindness.

"I thank President Clinton for this wise, fair, courageous and timely action," Gilman said. "Moreover it is a gesture of reconciliation that is sorely needed at this critical point in the Irish peace process."

Rep. Pete King, R-N.Y., describe the action as a dramatic confidence-building measure that "will have enormous impact not just on the deportees and their families, but on the peace process in Ireland."

"We're finally seeing a fundamental change in the way this country's foreign policy is meted out when it comes to Ireland," said Rep. Joe Kennedy, D-Mass.

One of the men, Pearson, served 12 years in prison for a 1975 bombing of the Royal Ulster Constabulary barracks in Northern Ireland. He argued that his was "a political act" under U.S. immigration law, not terrorism.

Pearson, 45, legally entered this country in 1988, overstayed his visa and applied for asylum last year when U.S. officials moved to deport him.

AOL deal to face review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is reviewing America Online's plan to acquire the customers of its closest competitor, CompuServe Corp., antitrust spokeswoman Gina Talamona said Tuesday.

Under the three-way deal announced Monday, WorldCom Inc., the nation's fourth-largest long-distance phone company, will pay $1.2 billion for CompuServe and sell its online consumer business to AOL. WorldCom will keep CompuServe's 1,200 corporate customers.

America Online would acquire 2.6 million subscribers through the transaction, which would erase its biggest competitor. AOL now has about 9 million subscribers.

Spinal Surgery – for Our Patients with Back and Neck Problems.

Dr. Jeffrey S. Smith
Orthopaedic Surgery

After receiving his Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from Brigham Young University, Dr. Smith went on to earn his Medical Degree in Orthopaedic Surgery from UCLA. He served his residency at the UCLA Medical Center where he also received a fellowship in spinal care. His focus on neck and back problems was the result of "the tremendous need for the care and treatment of these very critical areas.," says Smith. "Back surgical techniques have advanced dramatically, allowing the successful elimination of pain in many cases. It is very satisfying to see patients who thought that they had to live with back pain smile with pleasure when they experience the results of successful back surgery," he adds. A member of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgery, Dr. Smith is excited with his recent move to Midland. "The people in West Texas are great – so different from Southern California. There's a down-home, value-oriented family feel to Midland that you don't find in many other areas. My family and I are looking forward to becoming involved in community activities and enjoying life in West Texas," he adds. Dr. Smith and his wife, Sheila, have four children – Jeffrey Jr., Karlene, Zachary, and Noah – and enjoy outdoor activities such as snow skiing, fishing, and water skiing.

Prisoner of war to use stress disorder as reason to murder

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Richard Keech shot his son-in-law once, then chased him down the street and finished him off with four bullets in the back as he lay face-down on a neighbor's lawn.

Two of his neighbors saw it happen, and Keech isn't denying he did it.

Instead, he claims he "snapped" and went for his gun after flashing back more than 50 years to the Philippines, where he was a Marine in brutal Japanese POW camps and saw hundreds die.

During pretrial proceedings this week, his lawyers sought to introduce evidence that the 77-year-old Keech suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder.

Prosecutors say PTSD is a lame excuse in this case.

"It is a way to attempt to excuse responsibility for this deadly and extreme act," said Deputy District Attorney Ronald Geltz.

Keech is accused of first-degree murder in the May 21, 1996, shooting of Nicholas Candy, 47, estranged husband of his daughter Nancy, 38. The couple were in the middle of a bitter divorce and custody battle.

Candy was gunned down when he arrived at Keech's Long Beach home to pick up his son Martin, then 14 months old.

The shooting occurred after what Keech and his lawyers described as months of threatening family confrontations with Candy, a rugby-playing Englishman who worked as a contract manager at Universal Studios.

Before a gag order was issued in the case Monday, Keech told The New York Times: "I snapped."

"I was afraid for my life. I thought I was back in the prison camp and I was about to be beaten to death," he said.

Keech said he doesn't know whether he has had any previous episodes of post-traumatic stress stemming from his 3 1/2 years in prison camps. He said the horrors he experienced flared the day he killed Candy because he feared for his daughter's life.

Some experts said it's unlikely Keech could have kept his PTSD dormant for so long without showing any symptoms. But they said anything is possible.

"We have World War II veterans who have not had any symptoms previously because they held two jobs or were doing other things to occupy their minds," said Robert Nicholson, psychology professor at the University of Tulsa in Oklahoma. "But when they retired and had more time on their hands, they began experiencing symptoms."

Keech was a purchasing agent at Rockwell until he retired about 15 years ago.

Post-traumatic stress disorder became an official diagnosis by the American Psychiatric Association in 1980. It has generally been associated with Vietnam War veterans, but there have been cases involving Korean War and WWII veterans.

PTSD can also affect victims of rape or natural disaster, or those who believe their lives are in danger, said Terri Weaver, a clinical psychologist at the Center for Trauma Recovery at the University of Missouri, St. Louis.

Symptoms include flashbacks, a numbing of the senses, angry outbursts, and sleep and concentration problems, she said.

When used as a trial defense, it generally works hand-in-hand with an insanity plea. But Keech is not claiming insanity.

A PTSD defense is seldom successful, experts say, but it did work in 1981 when a jury in Shreveport, La., found Charles Heads, a Vietnam veteran, innocent by reason of insanity in the killing of his brother-in-law.

Candy's sister doesn't believe Keech suffers from PTSD.

Tuberculosis spreads to 42 states

CHICAGO (AP) — A highly drug-resistant tuberculosis found in only 13 states six years ago has spread to 42 states, although the total number of the hard-to-treat TB cases nationwide has declined, federal researchers say.

More than 21,000 people got some type of TB last year in the United States and more than 1,400 died of it in 1994, the latest year for which mortality figures are available, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

But in the past few years, a form of TB that resists the two drugs normally used to cure the bacterial infection has spread throughout the country.

From 1993 through 1996, a total of 1,457 multi-drug resistant TB cases were recorded, which is about 2.2 percent of the roughly 66,000 TB cases that appeared in the United States during the same period.

However, the number is on the decline: There were 488 cases of multi-drug resistant TB in 1993, but only 237 cases in 1996. Still, the numbers could climb back up, warn researchers.

"All states must be prepared to deal with drug-resistant TB," said Dr: Marisa Moore, lead author of the CDC report published in Wednesday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Tuberculosis, which often strikes the lungs and is curable, experienced a resurgence 12 years ago after the United States relaxed its TB prevention efforts. Although TB has since fallen off, slowing efforts to stamp it out would be a mistake, say researchers.

"This is really a war we're in ... and now is not the time to abandon the battle," said Dr. Lee B. Reichman, executive director of the New Jersey Medical School National Tuberculosis Center.

Reichman did not participate in the CDC study, but did write an editorial accompanying it.

Because TB is curable, many doctors support forcing treatment on people who resist help and are considered public health threats. Most of the uncooperative TB patients in the United States are among the homeless and mentally ill, and two-thirds are said to be past or present abusers of alcohol or drugs.

Wednesday's edition of the Journal also included the results of two state efforts at treating uncooperative TB patients.

California found that jailing uncooperative TB patients to ensure they finish therapy resulted in 84 percent of them completing treatment.

However, Massachusetts reported it was able to get 98 percent of such patients to complete treatment through a special program of voluntary as well as involuntary hospitalization.

Forced treatment might be unnecessary if sufficient community services were available for substance abusers, the homeless and the mentally ill, suggested Reichman, who is based at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark.

Farmers want minimum milk price increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — For dairy farmer Jackie Clossen, this year's depressed milk prices mean no family health insurance and a lot of headaches with bill collectors.

"There's no more margin to cut," said Mrs. Clossen, who lives on a small dairy farm in Cortland County, N.Y., with her husband and four children. "We need a minimum wage for dairy farmers."

The Clossens and thousands of other dairy producers have been hit hard by low prices and are pleading with the federal government to set a temporary minimum milk price at $14.50 per 100 pounds.

"This could keep a family farm going," Mrs. Clossen said during a rally Tuesday of about 150 dairy farmers outside the Capitol.

The farmers came to deliver petitions signed by 9,000 producers around the country in support of the temporary minimum price, which Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman has said would require action by Congress and is inconsistent with the more market-oriented 1996 farm law.

That law sets a minimum price of $10.20 per hundred pounds of milk for this year and phases out the price support by 2000. The price of milk last week was $12.07 per 100 pounds, but it has been dropped to $10.70 this year — the lowest price in six years and a free fall from $16.50 a year ago.

The volatility has led some dairy farmers to slaughter their cows instead of milking them, is putting many more deep in debt and could harm small-town businesses such as feed suppliers and banks.

A sign at Tuesday's rally said, "Why Own the Cows When You Sell the Milk for Nothing?"

Members of Congress from key dairy states, including Democratic Sens. Russell Feingold and Herbert Kohl of Wisconsin and Republican Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, introduced a non-binding resolution Tuesday calling on Glickman to set an emergency higher minimum milk price.

"If ever there was a time for the federal government to step in and help dairy farmers, this is it," Feingold said.

Sponsors say the higher price would have little impact on consumers but would enable farmers to get a little higher return for their work. Typically, farmers get between 55 and 65 cents for every $1.89 retail half-gallon of milk.

The higher price would cut into the profits of milk processors, the companies that make butter, cheese and other products from milk. But a spokeswoman for the International Dairy Foods Association, which represents the processors, said the issue is not so much profit but allowing the free market to work its will.

"We're in a transition period where we're moving toward a more market-oriented system," said Connie Tipton, senior vice president of the association. "I know it's hard for people to go from a very high price to a very low price, but these are the fluctuations you get on the open market."

MIDLAND HISPANIC CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

From The Director

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce International Department recently assisted Mayor Bobby Burns and theCity of Midland in hosting a delegation of civic leaders from the city of Chihuahua. The group was led by the Mayor of Chihuahua, Dr. Gustavo Ramos Becerra. The main focus of the visit was to have both Mayors sign formal proclamations to begin the process of developing a sister city relation between Midland and Chihuahua, Chihuahua.

Representatives from Motran also made a presentation to the Chihuahua delegation to report the progress on the trade corridor, La Entrada Al Pacifico. During this presentation Mayor Ramos was informed that Governor Bush had recently signed legislation to have the trade corridor properly designated with highway signs along the trade route in Texas. Mayor Ramos commended Midland-Odessa and all the efforts of the organizations involved who have supported Mortran in the development of the La Entrada. Mayor Ramos further stated he would initiate the posting of highway signs on the Mexican side of the border to designate the trade route.

Bobby Burns (Mayor of Midland) & Dr. Gustavo Ramos Becerra (Mayor of Chihuahua). Both Mayors sign formal proclamations to begin the process of developing a sister city relation between Midland and Chihuahua, Chihuahua.

During their stay in Midland the delegation also toured the Petroleum and CAF Museums.

Mayor Ramos and the Chihuahua city officials stated that the wealth of common interest between the two cities would lead to the development and the sharing of information in the areas of business, tourism, transportation, education, and the arts.

MHCC AWARD RECIPIENTS TAKE HONORS AT STATE NATIONAL CONVENTION

Earlier in the year, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce recognized and bestowed honors upon several chamber members for their contributions to the community, for the role that they have played in promoting area business, and for helping to improve the quality of life in Midland. These local award recipients were automatically forwarded to the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce, (TAMACC), for consideration at the state level.

Recently TAMACC held their 22nd Annual Convention in Corpus Christi, TX. and announced the names of those selected from a pool of nominations received from twenty seven Hispanic Chambers from throughout the state. Vying for top honors in six possible categories, two of the MHCC's submittals were ultimately selected.

TAMACC's 1997 Business Woman of the Year Award was presented to MHCC Business Member Dr. Maria G. Ceballos, sole proprietor of Master Eye Associates in Midland. Of the twenty eye clinics in the immediate area, Master Eye Associates stands alone as the only Hispanic owned and operated eye clinic. Dr. Ceballos practices full scope optometry and brings hospital based residency experience dealing with ocular pathologies and treatment with therapeutic agents. Although Dr. Ceballos' success is the result of a long and intense work week, she somehow finds the time to serve on various committees and organizations including the MHCC Women's Department, and the MHCC Scholarship selection committee. TAMACC has forwarded Dr. Ceballos' nomination to the United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, (USHCC), for consideration at the regional and national level.

The TAMACC 1997 Corporation of the Year Award was presented to MHCC Corporate Member TU Electric. A longtime friend and supporter of the Chamber, TU Electric is considered a leader in the industry's diversity issues and has implemented a corporate policy that helps to promote the development and utilization of businesses owned by women and minorities. TU has determined that a strong Minority Business Development Program can broaden the economic vitality and prosperity of the communities they serve. These programs provide access to qualified, competent and competitive underutilized businesses where historically, access has been limited at best. TU wisely points out that affording all citizens an equal opportunity to participate in the procurement process makes good business sense as it enhances our ability to call upon the resources of the entire community.

TU Electric District Manager LuAnn Morgan presently serves as the MHCC Vice Chair of Networking. Conrad Quiroz and Ramon Carrasco, also employed by TU, serve as Chairman of the MHCC Ambassadors and Ambassador, respectively.

The MHCC and the community at large are certainly the beneficiaries of the spirit that these individuals continue to perpetuate.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Membership would like to thank, congratulate and wish Dr. Ceballos and TU Electric continued success in the future.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCE

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Women's Department held their Seventh Annual Women's Conference August 23, 1997 at the Holiday Inn Hotel and Suites. This years theme was MAKING THE DIFFERENCE...PREPARING WOMEN FOR THE MILLENNIUM. A total of fifty attendees were present for the day's activities beginning with an eight o'clock continental breakfast. MC for the event was Courtney Zavala of KMID Big 2 News. Two alternating sessions were conveniently provided to ensure that all had ample opportunity to hear the exceptional guest speakers; Vonda Scott of West Texas Financial Services , Gayla Maloney of Prudential Insurance Co. and Jeaneene McMaster with the Office of the Attorney General Dan Morales. Award presentations were made at the conference luncheon and among the recipients was Virginia Conners , Chair of the National Hispanic Institute and head of the West Texas Debate Team which placed first at the institute competition. The Team was made up of three Midland students: Jennifer Conners, Yvonne Rayos and Venessa Carrasco; seven Odessa students and three Ft. Stockton students. Linda Ramos was recognized for chairing the coke booth at the Mex-Tex Menudo Cook Off. Also recognized was Rosie Garcia, Sonya Marin, and Dolores Higginbotham for their exceptional work with the Outstanding student/Teacher Recognition Award Committee. Following the luncheon, Pat Garcia headed a moderated discussion forum with a panel consisting of the days speakers answering questions from the group and further elaborating on the sessions topics. The Women's Department reports that the event was a huge success and all in attendance are much better informed as a direct result of the conference.

The Women's Department wishes to thank all who participated and a special thanks to the event sponsors, Permian Distributing Inc., Holiday Inn Hotel and Suites and Standard Sales for their support.

Brown questionable

AUSTIN — Texas quarterback James Brown's left ankle was better Tuesday, but his playing status remains questionable for the Longhorns' game against UCLA on Saturday, coach John Mackovic said.

"At this point we still have to wait until (Wednesday)," Mackovic said.

Brown watched practice with his ankle in a splint and declined to talk with reporters.

Brown twisted his ankle late in the second quarter of Texas' 48-14 victory over Rutgers Saturday when he was sacked for a 24-yard loss. It's the same ankle he sprained in late 1995, when he was forced to sit out a game.

Mackovic has said if Brown misses significant practice time this week, the likely starter will be Richard Walton, who subbed well for Brown against Rutgers.

'Cane loses appeal

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Jammi German's troubled collegiate career as a Miami Hurricane officially came to a close Tuesday when the NCAA refused his appeal to play his senior season.

German, one of the Hurricanes' most explosive offensive threats, was declared ineligible last week because he initially lied about a limousine ride he took in Nov. 30, 1995, that was paid for by a sports agent.

The decision Tuesday came after an hour-long conference call between university officials and the NCAA Student Athlete Eligibility Committee.

German, a wide receiver who missed all of last season after having reconstructive surgery on his right knee, was suspended from the team twice in 1996 because of the limo incident and for a fight with a former member of the school's track team. He led the Hurricanes in receptions in 1995.

"I'm playing on Sundays regardless. I'm going to fulfill my dreams that way," German said, referring to an NFL career. "They can take my eligibility away, but they can't take my talent away."

Jordan business

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan plans to keep a fresh imprint on basketball after his playing days are over by overseeing a line of sneakers and apparel bearing his name for his longtime sponsor Nike Inc.

The Chicago Bulls superstar has already added millions of dollars to Nike's bottom line as well as his own bank account with sales over the past 13 years of his signature Air Jordan shoes and clothing.

But with the end of Jordan's career possibly only a few years away, the nation's biggest athletic shoe marketer has come up with a way for Jordan to keep his hand in the game and his image on the shoes worn on court.

Jordan will run a broadened Jordan brand of basketball shoes and clothing that will not only include the Air Jordan line but other models that will be designed especially for other pro players picked by Jordan.

"I have been involved in the design of everything I have worn from Nike since we began our relationship in 1984," Jordan said Tuesday. "The launch of the Jordan brand is simply an extension of that process."

The first Jordan brand collection debuts in November, and Jordan said introductions will be timed for a Saturday so children won't miss school to get them. He said shoes in the Jordan line will be priced as low as $90 to make them more affordable.

The most expensive shoe sold by the new Nike division will be the $150 Air Jordan, which has a 3-D hologram on the heel and quilting on the sides.

Switzer talking about 'must win' game

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Most coaches don't talk about the third game of the season being a "must" win. But that's what Barry Switzer is calling Monday night's game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Dallas coach, mindful of last season's sorry September that put the Cowboys in a deep 1-3 hole, said Tuesday, "We've got to have this one."

Switzer's observation came after his team blew a 15-point lead Sunday night to lose 25-22 in overtime to the Arizona Cardinals, leveling the Cowboys record at 1-1.

"Our goal is the home-field advantage," he said. "This is a must win. Our (home-field) fate was determined in September last year."

Dallas finished 10-6 in 1996, winning a fifth consecutive NFC East title, but having to play in a wild-card game. The Cowboys beat Minnesota 40-15 at home in the first game, then tumbled 26-17 at Carolina.

Puzzling Switzer is the Cowboys' complete turnaround from two weeks ago, when they opened with a 37-7 thumping of Pittsburgh.

"We went from the castle to the privy," Switzer said. "This is an important game for us, and they (the Eagles) are a dangerous opponent."

The teams traded road wins in their divisional series last year, with Dallas winning 23-19 at Philadelphia and the Eagles victorious 31-21 at Texas Stadium.

Switzer said also underlining the importance of the Eagles visit is the division standings.

"It's our first home game and a division game," he said. "Our opponent is one who has a chance to win the division, along with the Washington Redskins. Anyone can beat anyone. "

The Cowboys were early 8-point favorites over the Eagles, who have lost nine of their last 11 games to Dallas.

The Dallas offense collapsed in the second half against the Cardinals. Sorely missed was wide receiver Anthony Miller, who played only two downs before he was alarmed by a tight hamstring.

Miller was working out in sweats Tuesday, even though the Cowboys had the day off.

"It's going to be a day-to-day thing with him," Switzer said. "If he had a true pulled hamstring, I could tell you when he might play. But this thing just tightens up on him. He's a Pro Bowl player and has been playing in this league for years, so he knows his body better than anybody."

Miller, who caught a touchdown pass against Pittsburgh in the opener, helps stretch the defense and take the heat off Michael Irvin.

If Miller can't play, Billy Davis will.

"Billy is the third receiver and didn't get that much practice time last week," Switzer said. "He will this week."

Sweep by MHS girls leads win against Rebels

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The 15-3 win that Midland High posted over Midland Lee Tuesday in District 4-5A team tennis competition is not indicative of how close some of these matches really were.

Lee had some strong performances, most notably from the boys singles players, but it was the MHS girls that stole the show on this day, sweeping the singles and doubles matches.

"If anyone has to take the credit for this win today, it was the girls," said MHS coach Tom Heiting. "Our girls are real strong and they look like they will win a lot of matches this year."

"We've got some really good depth on this team," said MHS junior Toffee Wilson, who not only won her singles match against Lee's Lili Vo, 6-3, 6-3, but also teamed with Meryl McClung to defeat the team of Marissa Lannom and Megan Hand, 6-3, 6-1.

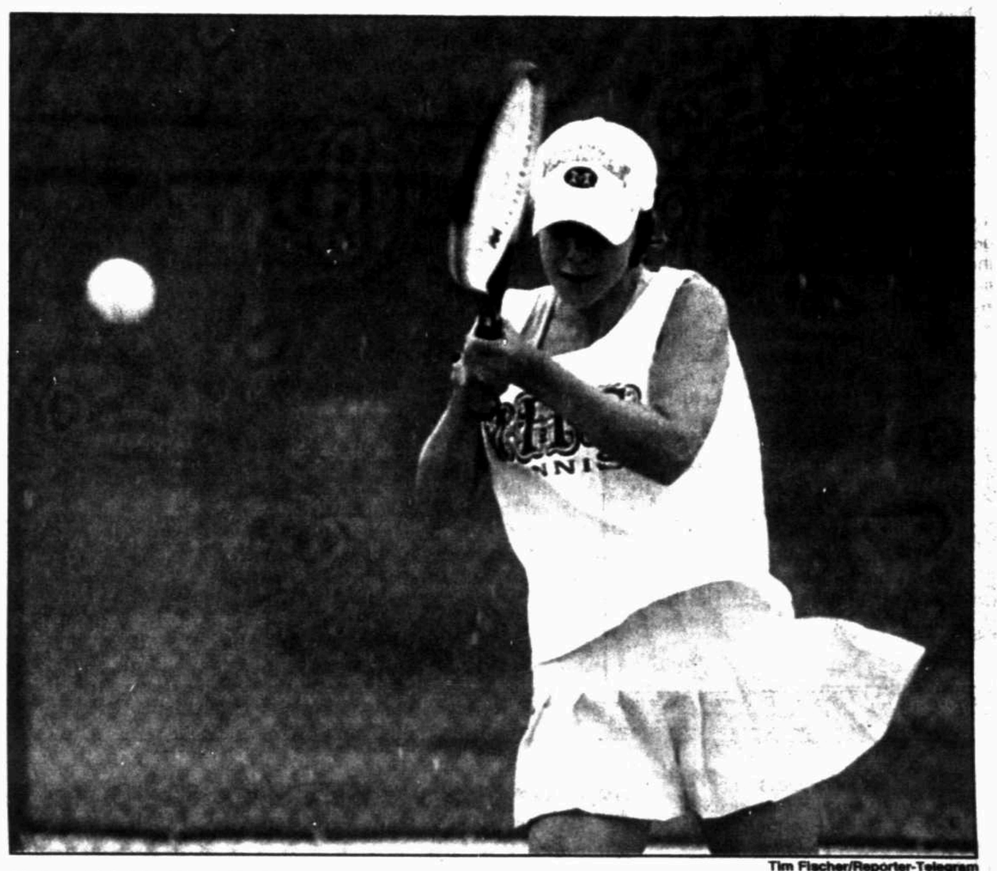

"We were a little rusty since we didn't play over the summer, but I think the chemistry of plying together all last spring helped," said Wilson on her doubles' match.

McClung, who defeated Emily Oekerman, 6-1, 6-1, was also satisfied with her performance on the day.

"I thought I played pretty good today, although, I thought I played better in singles than I did in doubles," McClung said.

With the opening district win, MHS solidified its Top 20 ranking.

Abilene teams come up with big victories

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

After the first weekend of high school football, it is hard to deny that any 4-5A schools held their own like the two Abilene schools.

Abilene Cooper and Abilene High came up with big wins in different ways over the weekend.

Cooper, then ranked No. 6 in the Class 5A, won the state's lone battle of top 10 schools in its 15-10 win over No. 7 Garland. It was a 180-degree turn from 1996 when Cooper traveled to Garland only to fall in that season opener, 15-5.

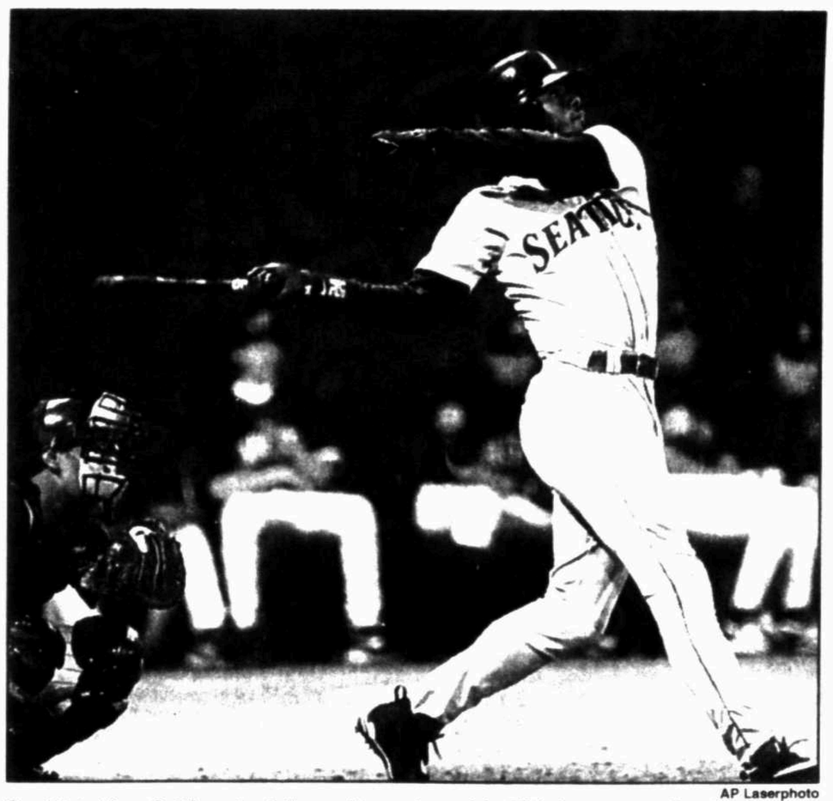

"It was big," said Cooper coach Randy Allen, whose team moved up to the No. 5 spot in the Class 5A poll. "(Garland) started the season ranked and had a lot of starters back. It gave us a good idea of where we are as a team.

"We are further along as far as leadership and experience go. By winning the first game, we gained maturity. There are not as many doubts."

The Coogs also got a good look at a group of inexperienced skill position players. Coming into this season, head coach Randy Allen had to replace the district's best offensive trio in 1996 (all-state

CHASING MARIS

Seattle's Ken Griffey, Jr. follows through on his 50th home run Sunday in Minneapolis, as Twins catcher Terry Steinbach watches. Griffey may not see enough good pitches to hit the 12 homers he needs to break Roger Maris' 36-year-old record.

Griffey can't hit what he can't reach

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

A day before the All-Star game, Ken Griffey Jr. was talking about why Roger Maris' home run record will be so hard to break.

"If they don't pitch to you, you can't do it," he said back in July at Jacobs Field.

Boy, did he hit that one right on the nose.

Case in point: On Monday night, in his first game after reaching 50 home runs, Griffey drew a not-even-close, four-pitch walk in the first inning at Kansas City, drawing boos from the crowd at Kauffman Stadium.

Not that the Seattle star was complaining.

"You know, we do the same to their players as they do to me," he said. "With first base open, the big RBI guy comes up, he's going to first base.

Lee's Norman, Abilene High impress in first week

Some impressions from the first week around District 4-5A football.

Most Stunning: Abilene High's 45 points against Lubbock Monterey. The War Birds scored a record 64-0 win against Wichita Falls Hirschi in 1995 as a 2-8 team that year, but you have to go way back to 1971 when AHS beat Odessa High 47-28 to find another game where AHS scored more than 45 points in a single game.

Williamson

Most Impressive: It is well documented that Josh Norman's 197 yards rushing moved him into second place on Lee's all-time rushing list, but he also had 78 yards receiving and another 49 yards on punt returns.

Nearing Another Record: Norman again. His four touchdowns against El Paso Coronado gives him a career total of 42 just five from the Lee record of 47 set by Farris Strambler (1987-89).

First Overtime: This is probably not a starting note the Odessa Permian Panthers want against a team like El Paso Irvin, but Mojo's 20-14 win over the Rockets Friday in El Paso was the first overtime game by a team from District 4-5A. This would not have happened if the UIL hadn't changed the rule this year. Last year, all non-conference games were to end in a tie. The overtime was for only district and playoff play. Now, all games will be decided via overtime. No ties allowed.

"Passing" Marks: Midland High quarterback Camar Jackson threw for 119 yards (75 coming on one play on a touchdown to Lance King). Jackson has already matched 32 percent of his passing total (377 yards) of a year ago.

Good Debut: Midland High running back Shemond Davis made his varsity debut with 92 yards rushing.

Wish It Wasn't So Close: The best first week matchup seems to be the Frenship-MHS series. Frenship leads the series by a 3-1 margin, but all five games have been decided by a touchdown or less.

Most Disappointing: The rushing game of Odessa High produced only 43 yards against Killeen while the OHS defense gave up over 100 yards rushing to two Killeen running backs. Still, the Bronchos lost by only four points, 27-23.

Oh My, For Real: Abilene Cooper's major question for the season was in the skill positions where there was little experience, but running back Richard Rodriguez had 200 yards rushing on 19 carries in his debut against Garland, a 15-10 win by the Cougars.

Maybe Not So Good: The Bobkitties of San Angelo lost 27-7 to Temple at home. Temple isn't supposed to be the power it once was, yet San Angelo fell hard after leading 7-0 at the half. Depth is an obvious problem here.

Best Defensive Showing: I didn't see the game, but I'm told that MHS linebacker Erik McCright was all over the field against Frenship in his move from a down lineman to the linebacker post.

Another Debut: Lee quarterback Jeremy Deramus threw for 104 yards in his varsity debut, completing six of 10 passes with an interception. Deramus made only three mistakes in the game. The interception was one. A fumble that turned into Coronado's only touchdown (not his fault since he was going back to pass and a T-Bird linebacker was not picked up) was another. And the third was a bad pitch on a sweep for a 14-yard loss. Still, it was a solid performance overall.

Stock Advances & Losses: Abilene High, Midland Lee and Cooper all counted gains in the first market test. Losers were Odessa High, Odessa Permian, San Angelo and Midland High. MHS lost to a 4A school. Angelo didn't perform well. Odessa High shows a major lack of speed. Permian was in the win column, but was unimpressive.

MHS sweeps dual matches

GREENWOOD — The Midland High volleyball team defeated Greenwood 15-6, 15-10 Tuesday in dual match action Tuesday to complete the day's sweep of the Rangerettes and Sweetwater.

Midland High was the aggressor in winning the first game with the Rangerettes, but in the second, Greenwood battled the Lady Bulldogs, leading 8-4 and 10-9 at one point. But Terri McColloch's MHS squad pulled through with a win in the finale, winning the last six points.

MHS was led by Kyleigh Griffin, who had nine kills in the Greenwood match and 19 for the day. Niki Green led the team in assists with 13 while Heidi Lange had the most blocks (12).

Greenwood (9-6 for the season) had 12 kills from Karen Gasch in the match with MHS. She had 18 for the day. Shiloh O'Donnell had 20 assists in the two matches.

Both teams defeated Sweetwater. MHS won by 15-10, 15-4 scores and Greenwood was victorious 15-4, 15-8.

Statistics for the Midland High and Greenwood teams from their dual matches Tuesday.

Midland High: Kills: Kyleigh Griffin 19, Alicia Kirk 10, Heidi Lange 8; Blocks: Lange 12, Kirk 6; Assists: Niki Green 13, Kirsten Donnelly 12. Digs: Green 24; Service Points: (against Sweetwater): Lange 11, Griffin 7; (against Greenwood) Kirk 10, Marissa Hernandez 10.

Greenwood: Kills: Gasch 18. Assists: Shiloh O'Donnell 20, Lisa Wood 6 (against MHS), Heather Hemphill 7 (against Sweetwater). Service Points: (against Sweetwater) Womack 9, Willis 7, Gasch 5.

Lee falls at Seminole

SEMINOLE — The Midland Lee volleyball team fell to Seminole and Lubbock Monterey in dual match action Tuesday.

Lee lost to Seminole 8-15, 15-9, 15-9, and then fell to Lubbock Monterey 15-9, 15-13.

In the Seminole match, Lee got 11 kills and 13 assists from Cecilia Ibarra and 18 assists, 12 service points, and eight kills from sophomore Marlo Nordt.

The Lee JV defeated Seminole 1-15, 15-6, 15-5, and beat Lubbock Monterey 15-3, 15-10 to move to 12-1 for the season.

The Lee sophomores defeated Seminole two times by scores of 15-8, 15-3 and 15-8, 15-7.

Statistics from Midland Lee dual matches at Seminole.

Kills: Marlo Nordt 10, Cecilia Ibarra 11, Kiki Strambler 9, Tiffani Strambler 5. Assists: Marlo Nordt 24, Ibarra 17.

Lady Mustangs defeat Trinity

The Midland Christian volleyball team defeated Midland Trinity, 15-0, 15-5 on Tuesday.

For the Lady Mustangs, Cathy McCrary had 16 sets, 17 assists, 16 service points and eight aces; Sarah Koss had nine hits, four kills and four blocks; Dana Youngs added six hits, four kills, four service points and two aces; Amanda Urquidez chipped in with two hits, one kill, five service points and an ace; and Mindi Sheppard had three service points and an ace.

The Midland Christian junior varsity also beat Trinity, 15-9, 15-13.

Midland Christian next plays at the Andrews Tournament, beginning with a match against Snyder at 12:30 p.m. Friday.

UTPB volleyball to play home match

ODESSA — The UTPB women's volleyball team will play its first home match of the 1997 season at 7 p.m. today against McMurry University in the UTPB Gymnasium.

The Lady Falcons, who also play Thursday at 1 p.m. against Wayland Baptist, will have two Midlanders on the 1997 roster. Former Midland Lee standouts Casey Wolters and Allison Bradshaw are playing with UTPB and are the team's captains.

Sharp wins 10 K at Septemberfest

Newton Sharp finished with the top time in the 10K run at Septemberfest on Saturday. Sharp finished the run in 38 minutes and 58 seconds almost two minutes ahead of the next highest finisher, Victor Martinez, who had a 40:48. Mike Kelly was third in 41:24.

Kathleen Liebert had the best time for the women, running a 41:52, well ahead of second-place Regea Fricker at 49:06. Rhonda Eimers was third in 50:40.

In the 5K run, Ken Woody was the winner with a 19:17. Jose Escalante was second in 20:16 followed by Kelly Mortensen at 23:12. Tina Corbett had the top time for the women at 24:03, edging out Peg McKallip in 24:35. Julie Bootman was third in 25:53.

Philadelphia sports treasure Ashburn dies of heart attack

By John F. Bonfatti
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Richie Ashburn's power wasn't evident in his bat, nor in his arm. Instead, he captured hearts with his hustle and, as one of its beloved Whiz Kids, was forever part of the city's sports lore.

The Hall of Famer, whose association with the Phillies spanned nearly five decades, died of a heart attack Tuesday in the New York hotel where the team was staying. He was 70.

His longtime friend and broadcast partner, Harry Kalas, said Ashburn looked fine after working Monday night's 13-4 victory over the Mets, but called a team official from his room and said he was in pain.

Kalas said trainer Jeff Cooper and paramedics rushed to the room, only to find Ashburn dead.

"He must have gone quickly," said Kalas, his trademark baritone choked with emotion. "He was as good a friend as a man could have."

Ashburn, a two-time NL batting champion and the center fielder on the 1950 Whiz Kids, spent 12 years on the field and 35 years in the broadcast booth for the Phils.

"We have lost a cherished friend," said Mike Schmidt, the Phillies third baseman who was inducted into the Hall of Fame with Ashburn in 1995. "You didn't have to know him personally to consider him a friend."

In Cooperstown, N.Y., the flag at the Hall of Fame flew at half-staff, and a wreath was placed next to his plaque.

Ashburn and Schmidt's induction drew the largest crowd ever, an estimated 25,000 to 28,000, with 200 buses coming from Philadelphia.

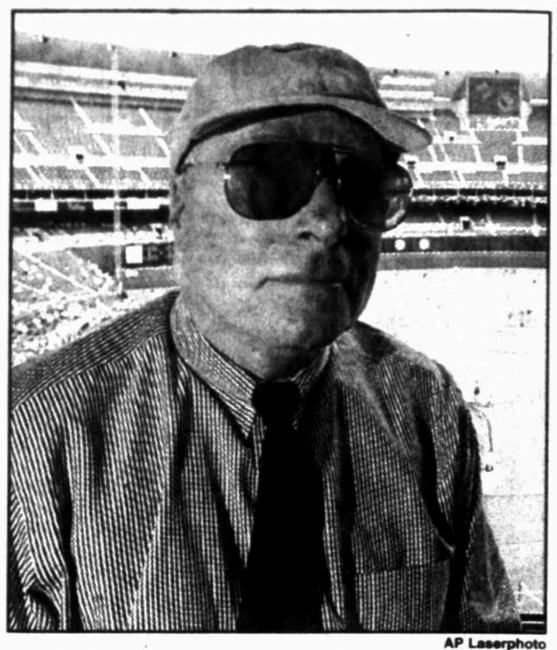

The Phillies announced they will wear a black armband with Ashburn's No. 1 for the rest of the season, and the disk bearing that retired number at Veterans Stadium will be draped in black.

"He loved people, he loved the game of baseball and he loved his Phillies," team chairman Bill Giles said.

And he was never very far from the field.

"I'm not only going to miss him as a person, but as someone I could talk to about the game," Phillies second baseman Mickey Morandini said. "It's going to be hard to look up at the booth and not see him."

Ashburn's baseball talent became so apparent early in his hometown of Tilden, Neb., that at least three teams tried to hire him before he signed with the Phillies in 1944.

AP Laserphoto

Converted from catcher to outfield, Ashburn earned a place on the Phillies' roster during spring training in 1948. An injury to defending NL batting champion Harry Walker gave him the center field job.

Ashburn was a classic singles hitter who used his speed to beat out bunts. He placed hits between fielders and sliced balls down the line.

The sight of Ashburn's churning legs on the basepaths prompted Ted Williams to give him the nickname of "Putt-Putt." His speed was also his biggest asset as a fielder. He led NL outfielders in putouts nine times, tying a major league record.

He was the only Phillies rookie to start an All-Star game, the first of his five. With a league-leading 32 stolen bases and a .333 average, Ashburn was the Sporting News' Rookie of the Year in 1948.

Spiers, Bell power Astros

Associated Press

DENVER — Bill Spiers hit a three-run homer and Derek Bell added a two-run shot Tuesday night, leading the Houston Astros to just their third win in 12 games, a 7-4 victory over the Colorado Rockies.

Bell drove in three runs as the Astros increased their lead in the NL Central to 3 1/2 games over second-place Pittsburgh. The Pirates lost 5-4 in 10 innings at Montreal.

Mike Hampton (13-9) allowed eight hits in 7 2-3 innings and won for the 10th time in 12 decisions.

Russ Springer got two outs for his third save.

Andres Galarraga went 4-for-4 for Colorado, which lost for the second time in 13 games. Dante Bichette added a two-run homer and sacrifice fly for the Rockies.

Colorado starter Jamey Wright (6-11) gave up six runs and nine hits in seven innings. The right-hander lost his fourth straight decision.

Wright's wildness and Spiers' third homer gave the Astros a 3-0 lead in the first. Wright hit Craig Biggio and Jeff Bagwell before Biggio was thrown out attempting to steal third. After Bell walked, Spiers hit a drive to center that deflected off Ellis Burks' glove and went over the wall.

Bell's one-out RBI single gave the Astros a 4-0 lead in the third.

Vinny Castilla's sacrifice fly in the fourth brought the Rockies within 4-1, and Colorado closed to 4-2 in the sixth on Bichette's sac fly.

■ NL Roundup

With Chuck Carr aboard in the seventh, Bell hit his 13th homer to make it 6-2.

Bichette's two-run homer in the eighth made it 6-4.

Bagwell closed the scoring in the ninth with a sac fly.

Reds 5, Cubs 2

CINCINNATI — Jon Nunnally singled home a run and Chris Stynes hit a three-run homer as the Cincinnati Reds scored four times in the second inning and held on for a 5-2 victory Tuesday over the Chicago Cubs.

Nunnally and Stynes, the Reds' most impressive newcomers over the last month, combined for four of the Reds' seven hits off Jeremi Gonzalez (11-7), who couldn't overcome the one bad inning.

Mike Morgan (7-11) allowed a pair of runs on six hits as he led the Reds to their sixth victory in eight games. Jeff Shaw pitched the ninth for his 34th save.

Cincinnati is 22-22 under manager Jack McKeon, who took over for Ray Knight on July 25. The Reds were 43-56 when Knight was fired.

Phillies 1, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Rico Brogna sent the New York Mets a little closer toward elimination from postseason contention, hitting an eighth-inning homer against his former team.

On a sad night for the Phillies following the death of Hall of Famer and longtime broadcaster Richie Ashburn, Brogna connected off Dave Mlicki (7-11) for his 19th homer and raised his RBIs total to 77, one more than he had for New York in 1995.

It was just the third hit of the night for Philadelphia, which has won four straight and eight of nine, improving to 28-11 since July 28. The Phillies finished with four hits overall.

New York began the night seven games behind Florida in the wild-card race.

Expos 5, Pirates 4, 10 innings

MONTREAL — Henry Rodriguez hit a two-out RBI single to cap Montreal's two-run 10th.

After the Pirates had taken a 4-3 lead in the top of the inning, Mark Grudzielanek started Montreal's rally with a one-out bloop double — his major league-leading 50th — off Rich Loiselle (1-4).

Grudzielanek moved up on a groundout and rookie pinch-hitter Jose Bidro hit an RBI single. Bidro went to third on David Segui's bloop single to center and Rodriguez followed with his game-winning hit.

Montreal has won seven of 11 while the Pirates lost for the fifth time in six games. Pittsburgh began the night trailing first-place Houston by 2 1/2 games in the NL Central.

Ugueth Urbina (5-8), who gave up Jose Guillen's RBI single in the top of the 10th, got the win.

Tigers' Sanders stops Rangers

Associated Press

DETROIT — Scott Sanders pitched a one-hitter, allowing only a fifth-inning single to Domingo Cedeno, for his first career shutout as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Texas Rangers 4-0 Tuesday.

Sanders (5-12), just 1-6 with a 6.04 ERA in 10 previous starts with Detroit, struck out a season-high eight and walked one.

Sanders retired the first 14 batters before Cedeno singled cleanly to left-center field with two outs in the fifth. Sanders set down the next 12 hitters before walking Tom Goodwin with two outs in the ninth.

The right-hander's other win since the Tigers obtained him July 18 in a trade with Seattle was Aug. 9 at Toronto. His only other win as a starter this year was May 26 at Minnesota in his final start for the Mariners.

Athletics 5, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Jimmy Haynes struck out a season-high nine batters and Dave Magadan and Ben Grieve each had a pair of RBI singles to lead the Oakland Athletics over the Minnesota Twins.

Haynes (3-3) allowed one run on four hits and two walks in eight innings and beat the Twins for the first time in four career starts. Haynes was 0-3 against Minnesota with a 10.69 ERA while pitching for Baltimore in 1996.

Yankees 8, Red Sox 6

■ AL Roundup

BOSTON — Wade Boggs and Steve Avery reprised their World Series showdown and Boggs won again, doubling to start a five-run sixth inning that rallied the New York Yankees past Boston.

Avery, just demoted to the bullpen, failed to get an out while squandering a 6-2 lead. Avery, who left Atlanta to sign with Boston during the offseason, was making his first relief appearance since Game 4 of last year's Series when he walked Boggs in the 10th inning to force in the winning run.

Boggs went 3-for-4 with an RBI and two runs scored.

Blue Jays 2, Angels 0

TORONTO — Rookie Chris Carpenter pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout as Toronto won its fifth straight.

Carpenter (2-7) allowed only one runner to reach second, struck out four and walked three while facing just 28 batters. The right-hander retired the final 11 in a row for his first complete game in 10 starts.

Orioles 9, Indians 3, 8 innings, rain

CLEVELAND — Geronimo Berroa led off a six-run sixth with his 25th homer as Baltimore stopped Cleveland's five-game winning streak in a game called after eight innings due to rain.

Roberto Alomar was 3-for-3 in his second straight start before leaving in the fifth. The Orioles are trying to ease their All-Star second baseman back in to the lineup after he missed more than a month with a strained groin.

Brady Anderson added to a big lead in the eighth with his 17th homer, a 406-foot blast into the second deck in right field. Aaron Ledesma was 2-for-2 after replacing Alomar, making the No. 2 spot in the order 5-for-5.

White Sox 4, Brewers 1

CHICAGO — Scott Eyre, one of several young pitchers trying to earn a job for the new-look White Sox next season, allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings as Chicago defeated Milwaukee.

Dave Martinez and Mike Cameron homered for Chicago, which snapped a six-game losing streak.

Eyre (3-3) walked two and struck out six in his longest stint since getting called up from Double-A Birmingham on July 31.

Mariners 4, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ken Griffey Jr. failed to get closer to Roger Maris' record, but teammate Rob Ducey hit a leadoff homer in the ninth to lift Seattle over Kansas City.

Griffey failed to hit a home run for the second straight night against Kansas City, so he remained 11 short of Maris' record of 61. He went 0-for-3 with two walks.

CHASE: Griffey needs 11 to match Maris

(From 1C)

Those things happen."

But what about breaking Maris' mark of 61 set in 1961? Will that happen this year?

Both Griffey, who had 18 games left going into Tuesday night's date in Kansas City, and Mark McGwire, who had 48 home runs and 19 games left for St. Louis, face tough tasks.

For Griffey, who has already homered six times this month, it would take a total of 18 home runs in September to pass Maris. Only once in baseball history has a player hit 18 homers in any month — Rudy York did it for Detroit in August 1937.

Griffey's job isn't getting any easier, either.

On Wednesday night at the Kingdome, he will face Tigers left-hander Justin Thompson, who has faced Griffey six times this season and struck him out in every at-bat.

"If I go in there looking just to do that, I'm going to get beat," Thompson said. "Even if I accomplish what everybody wants me to do, then I still have to focus on the other eight hitters."

Pitching to Junior, however, gets him juiced up.

"I can feel more adrenaline rushing through my body," Thompson said. "It is big to get a guy like that out, especially when you have men on base."

On Friday night, the Mariners take on Roger Clemens, who is 21-5 for Toronto and has not allowed a home run in 56 1-3 innings. But Griffey has done quite well against the Rocket, going 22-for-53 (.415) lifetime with five homers and 12 RBIs.

Griffey gets to play 11 more games at the Kingdome, a good park for hitters but not necessarily a big advantage to Junior. Of his career-high 50 home runs this season, 26 have come on the road.

Whether Griffey thinks he can reach Maris, though, is a mystery. He ducks, as best as he can, all questions pertaining to the home run chase, and instead prefers to focus on the Mariners' pursuit of the AL West title and their first World Series appearance.

Last week, in the midst of a four-game series at the Metrodome in which he hit four home runs against Minnesota, he kidded that he should wear a T-shirt that would list his most-used answers on the back.

Those answers included "having fun," "enjoying myself," "whatever happens, happens" and "be consistent."

Note that there was nothing about topping Maris.

"The only thing I want is to be holding that World Series trophy," he said.

No matter what occurs in October, Griffey may well be holding his first MVP award. He is batting .307 with an AL-leading 134 RBIs going into Tuesday night's game for the first-place Mariners.

Griffey is the 15th different major leaguer to hit 50 home runs in a season, a feat that has been accomplished 22 times overall. It has been done three years in a row — McGwire and Brady Anderson did it in 1996 and Albert Belle did it in 1995 — for the first time in history.

Griffey hit No. 50 on Sunday, making him the fastest to reach the mark since Maris and Mickey Mantle did it in 1961.

McGwire, meanwhile, is on deck to hit 50 again this season. He had 34 for Oakland before being traded to St. Louis on July 31, and has since hit 14 more. At the time of the deal, the Cardinals had three more games left than the Athletics, giving McGwire a few more swings at Maris.

But to hit 61 or more will take a lot of good pitches. Which Griffey did not see Monday night, much to the detriment of the Kansas City fans, who cheered for him rather than the Royals.

"Under the circumstances, I can see it," Griffey said. "Everybody wants to see the home run. You know it's a big thing for baseball. You've got a couple of guys going for something that's been standing for a while."

49ers' Young gets cleared to play

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Steve Young, sidelined the past week by a concussion, received medical clearance Tuesday to resume playing.

The 49ers said in a statement that the 35-year-old Young, who has had three concussions in the last 10 months, got the go-ahead to play following a consultation Monday with his neurologist, Dr. Joseph Lacy. A brain scan taken last Thursday showed no abnormalities.

There was no word whether Young would start Sunday's home opener against the New Orleans Saints.

Coach Steve Mariucci was in the midst of installing the game plan and unavailable for comment Tuesday.

However, Mariucci said Monday he would consider starting rookie Jim Druckenmiller for a second straight week on the theory additional time off for Young might reduce the possibility of another concussion.

Young, who turns 36 next month, has acknowledged he can't keep taking damaging shots to the head and continue his football career. His agent, Leigh Steinberg, said another concussion would force Young to seriously consider retirement, something which members of his family have already urged him to do.

So far, Young has resisted those suggestions.

A second expert also reviewed the case and concurred with Lacy's conclusion that Young could return to the field, the team said Tuesday.

"By cleared, it's medically safe for him to play in the game, but he still needs to be closely monitored," Steinberg said. "But he's game and ready and frankly, rearing to play. If it's his decision, he'll play Sunday."

Young suffered the latest concussion when he was kneed in the head by linebacker Hardy Nickerson during San Francisco's season-opening 13-6 loss at Tampa Bay. The force of the blow knocked the helmet off Young's head.

In his absence last week, the 49ers beat the St. Louis Rams 15-12 with Druckenmiller making his first NFL start.

"We're taking every step that we can to be precautionary and do the right thing," Mariucci said at his Monday briefing, adding he may require Young to wear a protective mouthpiece while playing in hopes it would cushion the impact from a head-jarring hit.

"He loves to play the game. He's been to the top," Mariucci said. "He's been so good for so long. He wants to keep playing and keep playing well. How long can that last, who knows? But we're doing everything that we can and he's doing everything that he can to make sure that his health is not being put in jeopardy."

Brunell could come back to face Steelers

By Doug Ferguson
AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Mark Brunell walked in the room, his pace brisk, mood upbeat. Suddenly, Jacksonville's quarterback saga took on new meaning.

The Jaguars aren't complaining about such an early open date now. An extra week, they reason, should give Rob Johnson time to heal his sprained left ankle. And, who knows, maybe even No. 1 quarterback Brunell could be ready when they returned to the field.

Could Brunell, initially feared lost for the season when he tore knee ligaments Aug. 9, be back in time for a Monday night game in two weeks against the Pittsburgh Steelers?

"I am ahead of schedule, but not at a place where I can make a prediction," Brunell said. "I'm going to take it one day at a time. Each day, I'm getting a little stronger and a little better."

Brunell, who led the NFL in yards passing and led the Jaguars to the AFC championship game last year, hurt his knee in the second quarter of a preseason game against the New York Giants.

He had partial tears of the posterior cruciate ligament and the anterior cruciate ligament. The medial collateral ligament was torn off the lower bone. The initial prognosis was he would be out for eight weeks, putting him back around the sixth game of the season.

Now, no one is sure.

"We'll see what happens," coach Tom Coughlin said Monday. "We have a little extra time to look at that."

Brunell was on the stationary bike the week before the Jaguars opened the season behind Johnson with a 28-27 victory at Baltimore.

He was taking snaps — only dropping back to pass — last week, when Steve Matthews was preparing for his first NFL start, a 40-13 win over the Giants.

He is running now, and says his knee feels good.

"I don't have any pain, no swelling," he said. "But you don't gauge this thing on pain, you gauge it on strength, the ability to move around. Pain hasn't been a factor the whole time."

Brunell has a strong arm, but it's his legs that make him such a threat. Last year he became the first player since Johnny Unitas in 1963 to lead the league in yards passing and rushing among quarterbacks.

A knee brace and some tape help him plant and throw, and he reports no problems moving laterally, "but I'm not out where I'm going to be."

In the weight room, he is doing leg extensions, curls and squats, his work load increasing each week.

"The numbers don't lie," he said.

Neither does the Jaguars' record — 2-0 behind two quarterbacks making their first NFL start. Matthews knew only about half of the plays and the Jaguars set a team record for most points in a game.

"When Mark comes back, who knows how good we will be?" said receiver Jimmy Smith.

Still, Smith would rather not see Brunell rush his return. While the open date gives the Jaguars time to heal their quarterbacks, they won't catch a break in the middle of the year.

"We're going to need him later on in the season," Smith said. "I'd like to see him come back 100 percent than for him to come back and reinjure it. It's better for him to play it safe."

Johnson, who was 20-for-24 for 294 yards against the Ravens, was close to playing on Sunday. He practiced lightly on Saturday and Coughlin waited until an hour before kickoff before deciding to make him the emergency No. 3 quarterback for the Giants game.

"If we had to have him, he might have been able to play," Coughlin said. "That's not something I wanted to do. Hopefully, this will be a weekend where we see great progress with Rob."

He might also see great progress with Brunell. He was the only quarterback to take every snap last year, and sitting out for four weeks and counting has not been easy.

"I set the Baltimore game as a target, I set last week as a target," Brunell said. "Each time I'm trying to do whatever I can to play in that game."

KC finally getting yardage in chunks

By Doug Tucker
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — In homes and offices all over Kansas City, chores went undone and errands weren't run.

Things will be taken care of whenever everyone gets back to normal following the Chiefs' final-seconds 28-27 conquest of the hated Oakland Raiders on Monday night. It was a win that every fan worth his red sweater figures will signal a brand new era of prosperity for the Kansas City Chiefs.

"I was so excited, I couldn't sleep all night,' said Don Gatling of suburban Olathe, Kan., grabbing a quick lunch on the busy Country Club Plaza. "I wanted to call people and talk about the game. Then the phone rang and it was my brother. He couldn't sleep and wanted to talk to me."

"I'm so mad at myself I could scream," said Lisa Holland of Kansas City. "I set my VCR to record the game. But I hadn't rerun the tape all the way and I missed the last 3 1/2 minutes. The last 3 1/2 minutes! I've been calling all my friends who usually tape the Chiefs games. I've got to see that last play again."

Indeed, Elvis Grbac's 33-yard touchdown pass to Andre Rison with three seconds left will be rerun on VCRs and in conversations for years to come.

Many Chiefs fans are saying Monday night's come-from-behind victory in Oakland is the sweetest since Joe Montana hit Willie Davis with a touchdown pass in the final seconds of a Monday night game in 1994 to beat the Broncos 31-28 in Denver.4

Even coach Marty Schottenheimer, doing his dour best to keep everything in the proper "it's-only-one-game" perspective, had to admit this one felt special.

"Well, it's a big win because we came from way back," Schottenheimer said in an abbreviated Tuesday news conference. "There's any number of teams who get down 27-13 who would have said, 'Let's get ready for next week.'

"That never happened. You looked on our side, and I don't think I ever saw a guy with his head down."

But why not? After all, the Chiefs had not played well the week before in a season-opening 19-3 loss to Denver. And this is a team with 11 new starters, a team that's hardly had time to find its footing.

"I think they understand, or are beginning to understand, that if you keep working hard and keep dealing with the one play you've got an opportunity to do something about, which is the next one, that maybe good things will happen," Schottenheimer said.

On the down side, Schottenheimer said pass-rush specialist Derrick Thomas' injured left arm did not feel very good. Thomas missed almost the entire exhibition season with injured triceps in his left arm. He's been playing with a brace.

"It's very sore today. Very sore," he said. "It's not in the area where the injury occurred. But the brace he wears tends to cause the fluid to build up in there, and he's very sore. He'll be limited throughout the week again. Hopefully, he'll feel as well before Sunday's game as he did before last night's game."

Zimmerman comes back for Broncos

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos ended offensive tackle Gary Zimmerman's short retirement Tuesday, adding him to the roster and saying he might be able to play half of this weekend's game against St. Louis.

Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said he had maintained contact with the 35-year-old Zimmerman, who had said he would retire following last season, although he did leave some room for a comeback.

"I talked to Gary after the Seattle game (a 35-14 win on Sunday)," Shanahan said. "He told me he feels much better. He feels like he could go. ..."

However, Shanahan said the Broncos won't toss Zimmerman back into the fray without a little preparation.

"It's going to take him a while to get back ... into football shape," Shanahan said.

Details of the contract were not released, but reports said it was a multiyear pact.

Zimmerman started 13 games at left tackle last season to run his consecutive games streak to 169 before missing a game against Green Bay following surgery on his left shoulder.

Before that, he was the only current NFL player to have played in every game since the beginning of the 1986 season. He missed two games and returned to the starting lineup in the season finale.

Norman could be most resilient athlete in sports

By Ron Sirak
AP Golf Writer

Next to the word "resilient" the dictionary says: "tending to recover from or adjust easily to misfortune or change." It should simply say: "Greg Norman."

There may be no more resilient athlete in all of sports.

After so many setbacks that would have ruined most careers, there was Norman at the Canadian Open, bouncing back once again, finishing second once again.

"That's what it's all about, isn't it?" Norman said. "You put yourself in position to have a chance and then just try to hit the best shots you can."

While the ultimate evaluation of Norman's career will focus on what he nearly won rather than what he won, it would be a huge disservice to overlook the determination and talent that put him in the middle of the fray so many times.

His second-place finish in Montreal was the 31st time Norman was runner-up on the PGA Tour. And so many of those near misses were much like the ones Sunday when a mere par would have put him in a playoff with Steve Jones.

But hitting first with a chance to pressure Jones, Norman — one of the best drivers in the history of the game — knocked it into the right rough.

After Jones could move his ball only 50 yards in the thick rough, Norman not only missed the green but missed it on the short side, leaving a very difficult chip over a mound to a pin cut close behind the hump.

The best he could do was get the ball to 18 feet, missing the putt and enabling Jones to win with a bogey.

In fact, the Canadian Open was a quicky primer on Norman's career.

He fought back, making three birdies after falling four strokes behind with a double bogey on No. 11. And he made a great shot when it was absolutely necessary, rolling in a 45-foot putt on No. 16 to pull within a stroke.

All he needed was one good shot on the final hole — either off the tee, with the approach shot or with the chip. Yet, Norman was unable to find one good shot anywhere in his considerable arsenal of talent.

This latest episode came with another plausible yet unsatisfying explanation.

"The wind came from an entirely different direction," Norman said of his errant drive on No. 18. "It went where I wanted it to go. I just picked the wrong line."

It sounded like the "between clubs" explanation at the Masters in 1986 and '95, or the "too much sand in the bunker" insight at Shinnecock in '95.

Norman can be exasperating at times like that. But, if anything, that exasperation comes from the burden of expectation. Norman has delivered so much it seems as if he should deliver all of the time.

By the numbers, Norman's career is astounding.

He has won $1.25 million on the PGA Tour this year — third on the money list despite playing only 14 tournaments — and his average check of $88,872 per tournament is second only to the $108,328 by Tiger Woods.

Since coming on tour nearly two decades ago, Norman has won a record $11.8 million — an average of more than $47,000 per event — and has made the cut 91 percent of the time. He has finished in the top three in nearly one out of every four tournaments.

Yet, his two British Open victories are overshadowed by the eight times he was second in the four major championships.

And there are memories of Norman hitting a 6-iron into the water on the final hole to lose at Doral in 1995 and now the bogey that came up short at the Canadian Open.

But how many people would have bounced back from his crushing collapse at the Masters last year? How many players after missing the cut in the Masters and the U.S. Open this year at age 42 would get two firsts and a second in their next six events?

Norman is a man of emotion who lives for the moment. He is truly in this for the thrill of the hunt.

On Saturday at the Canadian Open he wore all black in honor of Princess Diana and said images of her funeral came back to him while he was on the course.

"What her brother said at the funeral should make us all think that we are not alone in the world," Norman said.

And golf fans should appreciate that they've been fortunate enough to watch the singular struggle of Greg Norman through a truly amazing career.

Redmon's move helps Heritage into win column

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Tellis Redmon showed last weekend what a difference one player can make.

His new school, which went 0-10 last year, is 1-0.

His old school, which went 15-0 last year, is 0-1.

Coincidence? Probably not.

Redmon helped Grapevine win the Class 4A Division I title last year, then transferred to Colleyville Heritage, where many of his friends went when it opened last fall.

Last Friday, Redmon had 223 all-purpose yards and a touchdown as Heritage beat Azle 21-0 for the first victory in school history. At the same time, Grapevine lost for the first time since 1995, falling 40-36 to Denton Ryan, which won just one game last year.

Redmon's impact on both programs earned him top billing on the season's first Associated Press honor roll.

He got the nod over Spring's Ben Gay, who had one of the best on-field performances of the opening weekend with 307 yards and five touchdowns on 30 carries in a 55-14 victory over Pasadena.

It's no coincidence that Texas Football magazine made Gay and Redmon the first-team running backs on its all-class Super Team.

Special honor roll recognition goes to Matt Kitchens, who scored three touchdowns and kicked a field goal as tornado-ravaged Jarrell overcame an 18-0 deficit to beat Bruceville-Eddy 27-24 in a very emotional opener.

One of the major dramas of this season was supposed to be whether Redmon would be able to kick-start the young Heritage program.

But his new teammates, both encouraged by his arrival and motivated to avoid a repeat of their disastrous 1996 season, made sure he didn't have to do it all himself.

■ Prep honor roll

"I think he makes a difference, no doubt, but for someone to say he is the reason for the turnaround would not be accurate at all," said Chris Carmichael, an assistant coach at Grapevine for 11 years before becoming Hertiage's first coach last year. "Our kids have put in countless hours training in the offseason, and I think that's the reason for the turnaround."

Azle, though, went into the opener keying only on Redmon. For much of the game, nine Azle defenders were committed to stopping him.

The strategy backfired as Heritage threw for two touchdowns against the two-man secondary. Consider wider passing lanes another benefit that comes with having someone like Redmon.

The 6-foot, 175-pound senior still had his moments, such as carrying the ball on all five plays of a 43-yard scoring drive, capping it with an 18-yard touchdown run.

He finished with 139 yards rushing (the first 100-yard game in school history), 47 yards receiving and 37 return yards, most of it on a blocked field goal that nearly set up another score.

"He was able to find the holes that the offensive line made," Carmichael said. "With our scheme, if we can get our bodies on their bodies, he can make things happen."

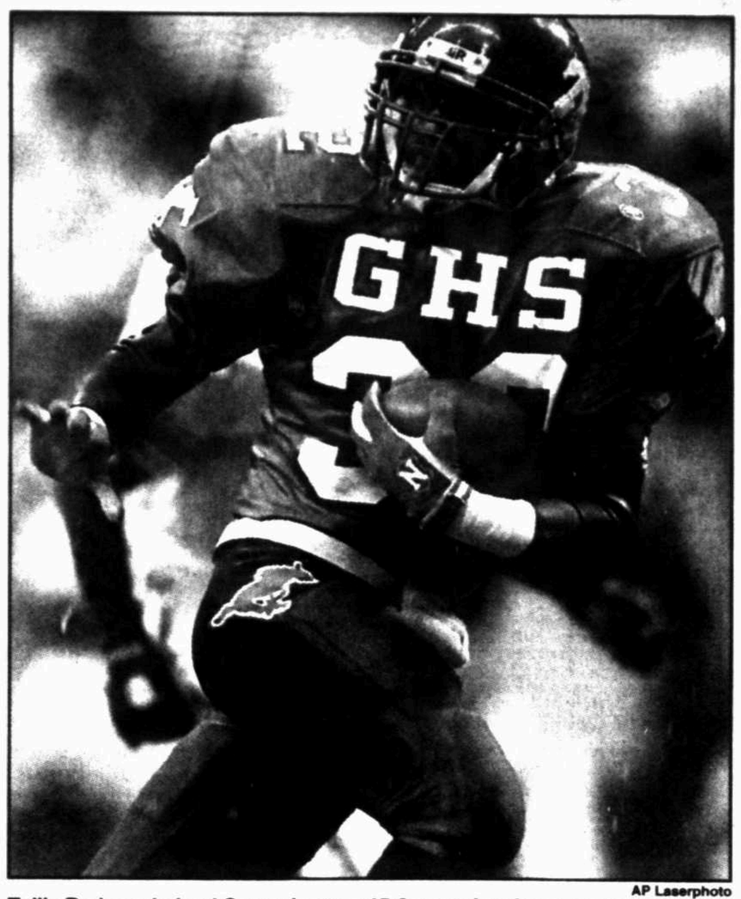

Redmon made a lot happen for Grapevine last year, rushing for 941 yards and gaining another 490 on receptions in seven regular-season games. He then had another 962 yards and 11 touchdowns in five playoff games, including 239 yards and two scores in the 34-19 championship victory over Hays Consolidated.

After Redmon's transfer, it would've been easy for him to walk into Carmichael's office expecting the coach to kiss his cleats. Instead, he has been nothing but humble.

"He's really special in that regard," Carmichael said. "He never gave off the attitude he was going to be our savior and turn our program around. He's basically blended in. He has really become a part of what we're doing here."

Even though they suffered through defeat after defeat while Redmon celebrated win after win last fall, the Heritage players also have accepted him as one of their own, voting him one of their four team captains.

"I thought that was pretty special because the other three were boys who went through last season, took the beatings and persevered," Carmichael said. "I think that says a lot about how they've accepted him and what he has to offer."

Tellis Redmon helped Gravevine to a 15-0 record and a state championship last year. He transferred to Colleyville Heritage for this season and helped the school get its first-ever victory Friday.

Over at Grapevine, where fans are already looking forward to hosting Heritage on Halloween, the offense didn't exactly sputter without Redmon.

Jason Schindler ran for 207 yards and the Mustangs, who have replaced several other key offensive contributors from last year, threw for more than 300 yards.

But their inexperience haunted them. Quarterback Jordan Wilson, making his first varsity start, was intercepted at the goal line with about a minute to play.

If only they had had a certain senior running back, things might have been different.

Other notable performances included:

ON THE GROUND

—Speedy sophomore Olan Coleman gained 309 yards on 31 carries and scored four touchdowns in Waco University's 31-28 victory over Austin LBJ. In defeat, Willie Simpson had 249 yards on 19 carries and touchdowns runs of 56, 80 and 13 yards.

—J.J. Finch ran 25 times for 284 yards and five touchdowns in Hart's 36-13 victory over Morton.

—Mohammed Shittu ran 24 times for 261 yards and a touchdown in Arlington Martin's 21-18 victory over Dallas Kimball.

—Reagan Kelley ran 23 times for 251 yards and two touchdowns as Graham beat Bowie 29-14.

—Victor Ike ran 20 times for 248 yards and touchdowns of 70, 5, 64, and 29 yards in Austin Bowie's 41-38 loss to Round Rock.

—Donnie Pinkerton, whose gained about 400 yards as a sophomore while battling a hip flexor and asthma, ran 19 times for 241 yards as Schertz Clemens beat 4A Division I runner-up Hays Consolidated 28-21.

—Astolfo Venzor, making his first varsity start, rushed 28 times for 220 yards and four touchdowns, plus scored a fifth time on a 75-yard kickoff return in Dumas' 41-13 victory over Dalhart.

—Jonathan Reagins returned two kickoffs for touchdowns, had a 40-yard touchdown run and came within a shoestring tackle of scoring again in Munday's 31-21 loss to Haskell.

—Steven Marek ran 14 times for 237 yards and two touchdowns in Rosebud-Lott's 28-0 victory over McGregor.

—Anthony Harrell ran 28 times for 206 yards and five touchdowns as Corrigan-Camden upset 2A's then-No. 1 Groveton 39-14. It was the third time in Harrell's last four regular-season games that he went over 200 yards.

THROUGH THE AIR

—Jordan Wilson, making his first varsity start, was 20-of-33 for 335 yards and four touchdowns and Tyson Olivo caught 12 passes for 235 and three touchdowns, but Grapevine lost 40-36 to Denton Ryan.

—Kelan Luker, making his first varsity start, was 17-of-26 passing for 320 yards and four touchdowns in Stephenville's 36-21 victory over Denton.

—Richard Bridges completed 17 straight passes to go 17-of-20 for 307 yards and four touchdowns in Grand Prairie's 39-21 victory over Mesquite.

—Spencer Stack was 17-of-30 for 280 yards and two touchdowns, and Kerry Davis caught nine passes for 209 yards and three touchdowns, but Flower Mound Marcus still fell 22-21 to Arlington Sam Houston.

—Chris Lowe was 12-of-18 for 250 yards and three touchdowns in Keller's 26-23 victory over Irving.

—Therence Briscoe had seven catches for 190 yards and three touchdowns as Mart defeated Groesbeck 43-26 to go from No. 5 to No. 1 in 2A.

—Courtnee Garcia, in his first start at quarterback after leading the team in receiving last year, completed 8-of-10 passes with four of them going for touchdowns as Lufkin defeated Beaumont Central 42-13.

DEFENSE

—Joe Manchalar had six solo tackles and 15 assists, caused two fumbles and had a sack as Edcouch-Elsa held Port Isabel to just 73 yards in a 16-0 victory. It was the first time Port Isabel was shut out in the regular season since 1990, a span of 61 games.

—Skipper Roberson had 13 solo tackles, 10 assists, caused a fumble, recovered a fumble and returned it for a touchdown and intercepted a pass in Breckenridge's 53-18 victory over Seymour.

—Clay Sandlin intercepted three passes, returned one for a touchdown, recovered a fumble, had six solo tackles and three assists in Gorman's 38-12 win over Water Valley.

—Eddie Trejo forced two fumbles, had two second-half interceptions and was part of nine tackles as San Antonio Kennedy defeated South San Antonio 13-12.

running back Dominic Rhodes, quarterback Michael Anderson and wide receiver Miles Durham). Allen may have done so.

Running back Richard Rodriguez had 200 yards and one TD on 19 carries. Quarterback Brandon Stover threw for 133 yards and one TD on 11-of-20 passing. Wide receivers Mark Rau and Jesse Sharp combined for nine catches and 118 yards and one score.

"We may not be as potent as we were last year," Allen said. "We miss the great speed at the skilled positions. That is irreplaceable. We will have to balance it out and the defense has to take up the slack. At wide receiver, we will have to spread it out more."

The defense, which returns eight starters from the unit that went to the Class 5A title game, showed its experience, allowing no touchdowns and just 132 total yards and seven first downs. This week, the Coogs will battle Wichita Falls Rider, a team Cooper defeated 55-14 in 1996.

Abilene High's 45-7 thrashing of Lubbock Monterey was surprising. Not that AHS won — that happened last year. It was surprising by the point total. AHS won by a last-minute field goal at home in 1996, but took it to the Plainsmen with some huge numbers last Thursday in Lubbock.

The Eagles had 416 total yards.

AHS' 362 rushing yards came on 31 carries, which translates to 11.67 yards per carry.

All of the Eagles' seven touchdowns were plays of 22 yards or more. All but two were of 42 yards or more.

Three players (Chuck Newman, Arturo Beltran and Ahmad Brooks) had multiple scores. Brooks factored in on three — one rushing, one passing and one on an 82-yard punt return. Newman added 174 yards rushing to go with his TD reception of 44 yards.

The offense was definitely going for Steve Warren's team.

"I was a little bit surprised (by the Thursday night rout)," said the second-year coach, who returned six starters on offense and four on defense. "Monterey scored first on a trick play at the beginning, and I was anxious to see how we would respond. They buckled down and the offense exploded.

"We think our offense is more explosive than it has been in a long time. We haven't done that in several years."

The Eagles, who surprised some people in 1996 by producing its first winning season in 10 years, are expecting to be there when the three playoff spots are handed out.

"Last year helped our football team a bunch," Warren said. "Now, they have an air of confidence that would not have been there if they not done so well. Now our expectations are to win, but this is a new season. Getting this start helps turn the corner."

Waiting around the corner — at least this Friday — Class 4A power Stephenville, the No. 4 team in the state. Abilene High won the 1996 matchup between the two teams, 17-10.

OVERTIME: Odessa Permian defeated El Paso Irvin 20-14 in the first overtime game involving a 4-5A team.

It was a far cry from the year before when Permian defeated Irvin 36-7, but a win is a win for Panther head coach Randy Mayes, who credited the experience of practicing for overtime situations in their scrimmage versus El Paso Hanks.

"Fortunately, we had been over it as a team," Mayes said. "In a scrimmage, we played two overtime situations. We knew what we wanted to do."

Mayes, who said his team's conditioning was the key in winning in the overtime, said that he was indifferent about overtime going in.

"I think it is six one way and half-a-dozen the other," Mayes said. "The kids work for 48 minutes and there is some danger of getting hurt. Overtime is part of the game now, so you have to be ready to do it. It is an advantage to the team that is in better shape. That was our advantage."

District 4-5A A-List

Player	Team	Performance
Rushing (100 yards or multiple touchdowns)
Josh Norman	Lee	197 yards, four TDs vs. El Paso Coronado
Richard Rodriguez	Cooper	200 yards, one TD vs. Garland High
Chuck Newman	AHS	174 yards, one TD vs. Lub. Monterey
Arturo Beltran	AHS	96 yards and two TDs vs. Lub. Monterey
Chris Murry	Permian	79 yards and two TDs vs. El Paso Irvin
Koefie Powell	Permian	126 yards vs. El Paso Irvin
Defense and Special teams
Eric McCright	Midland High	Recorded safety vs. Wolfforth Frenship
Augie Ortiz	Odessa High	35 fumble return for a TD vs. Killeen
Ahmad Brooks	Abilene High	81-yard punt return vs. Monterey, also had TD pass for 44 yards and TD run of 22 yards

TENNIS: MHS girls lead landslide victory

(From 1C)

For Lee, it's back to the drawing board.

"I think they were very disappointed in how they played today," said Lee coach Steve Buck about his players. "I look for us to improve a lot in the next few weeks. I think they can play better, and they'll be back to try again and again."

Heiting, for one, knew that his team had some tough battles on the day, especially on the boys singles' side where Wes Hunt, Trent Broach and Rafael Fuentes posted the only wins for the Rebels.

"I expected that the boys would have a difficult time," Heiting said. "I've seen their top two players take district champions, regional champions and state champions to the limit. I hope nobody went into those matches thinking it was going to be easy.

"I think Lee has a good team, now that I've seen them."

One of the most surprising outcomes of the day was the way Hunt beat MHS' Matthew Gray, 6-2, 6-1.

"I think I played pretty good," said Hunt. "It just seemed like he was having a bad day, and I just took advantage of his frustrations on the court."

"It seemed the whole team played good except for me. I just thank the team for helping me through," Gray said. "I have to give Wes a lot of credit, he played a scrappy match."

Earlier in the day, Gray teamed up with Doug Prieto to defeat Hunt and Brian Breithaupt, 7-5, 4-6, 6-1, in one of the most exciting matches of the day.

"Doug played great in that match. We ought to do pretty well in district together," Gray said.

"We had a lead on them, but they just seemed to pull it through," said Hunt about the doubles' match. "I think we're playing better, team-wise, and I think we'll make a lot of improvement as the season goes on."

District competition continues at 11 a.m. Saturday when Midland High travels to play Odessa Permian and Lee hosts Odessa High.

Here are Tuesday's results from the District 4-5A team tennis match between Midland High and Midland Lee played at the Midland High Tennis Center.

Ballroom dancing, rugby, surfing recognized by IOC

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

LONDON — Ballroom dancing, rugby and surfing moved another step closer to becoming Olympic sports.

Another two dozen sports also want into the games.

The federations representing ballroom dancing, rugby and surfing received formal recognition from the International Olympic Committee, IOC sports director Gilbert Felli said Tuesday.

The International Dance Sport Federation, the International Rugby Football Board and the International Surfing Association had received provisional recognition two years ago.

The recognition was upgraded to permanent status during the IOC session last weekend in Lausanne, Switzerland, Felli said.

Felli stressed the recognition does not guarantee the sports will be included on the Olympic program. Dancing, rugby and surfing join a list of two dozen other sports that have already received IOC recognition.

"The recognition gives them a label but it has nothing to do with the program," Felli said by telephone from Lausanne. "We believe the federations are doing something for the sport and deserve to be recognized. To be on the Olympic program is another story."

Other recognized sports include acrobatics, mountain climbing, billiards, golf, karate, korfball, netball, orienteering, roller skating, basque pelota, polo, bowling, racquetball, water skiing and squash.

Felli said 11 other sports federations have applied for IOC recognition and 18 others have made initial approaches.

Some of the sports could possibly be included in the World Games, a multi-sport competition featuring sports that are not on the Olympic program. The latest World Games were held this summer in Lahti, Finland.

The idea of ballroom dancing in the Olympics has been sneered at by some purists. But it has a large following and the IOC considers it a legitimate sport, comparable to ice dancing in the winter games.

"We know that it involves a lot of physical activity," Felli said.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch has called a meeting with all the recognized federations in Lausanne in November to discuss their prospects for inclusion in the Olympics, Felli said.

"All these federations would like to be part of the Olympic family and bring something to the Olympic movement," he said. "We will discuss what's next and whether they expect one day to be on the program."

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

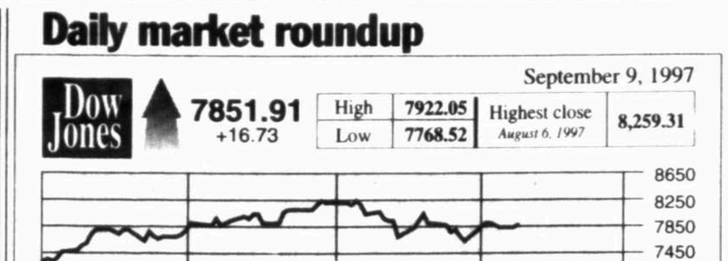

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE exceeds 99. dd – Loss in last 12 months. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. q – Closed end mutual fund; no PE calculated. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Energy prices were little changed Tuesday ahead of a weekly inventory report that would give traders some indication of supply levels after the busy summer driving season.

Crude oil for delivery in October settled at $19.42 per barrel, down 3 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The American Petroleum Institute reported after the market closed Tuesday that crude oil stocks fell by 7.9 million barrels to 297.8 million barrels last week.

Gasoline supplies rose by 0.75 million barrels to 188.3 million barrels, while stocks of distillates, including heating oil, rose by 5.56 million barrels to 132.5 million barrels.

With the inventory figures due out after the market closed, energy futures barely reacted to news that the United States agreed to support a British resolution to let Iraq sell more oil to raise all the $2.14 billion authorized under an oil-for-food agreement.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in October settling at $2.699 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.1 cents.

Business workshop

The Small Business Development Center of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will sponsor "Start Your Own Business" workshop Thursday at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar suffered its worst one-day drop against the yen in a month on Tuesday after a Treasury Department official raised trade tensions with Japan, but gained against the mark as prospects for higher German interest rates dimmed.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 118.93 yen, down 2 percent from 121.17 late Monday.

Also in New York, the dollar settled at 1.8135 marks, up from 1.8068.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.4885 Swiss francs, up from 1.4840; 6.0965 French francs, up from 6.0760; 1,766.00 Italian lire, up from 1,759.00; and 1.3839 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3827.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5881, up from $1.5820.

Markets rise

NEW YORK — Smaller-company stocks coasted to another record high on Tuesday, but efforts to revive the blue-chip sector fizzled again amid nagging worries about company profits and inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up nearly 64 points about an hour before the close, but rose just 16.73 to 7,851.91.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a 9-to-7 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 502.10 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list rose 2.42 to 933.62, and the NYSE composite index rose 0.91 to 486.69.

The American Stock Exchange composite index, which is dominated by smaller companies, rose 0.76 to 671.43.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 10.86 to 1,652.21.

Productivity shows strong advance

■ Advance is best in 3-1/2 years, supports idea short-term interest rates can be left untouched.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The best productivity advance in 3 1/2 years is helping support the idea that the Federal Reserve can leave short-term interest rates untouched without worrying about an increase in inflation.

Non-farm business productivity — output per hour worked — grew at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.7 percent, nearly double the 1.4 percent rate of the first quarter, the Labor Department said Tuesday.

That was much faster than last month's initial second-quarter estimate of 0.6 percent and even better than the 2 percent revised rate forecast by economists.

Meanwhile, labor costs per unit of output — a key ingredient in price pressures — slowed to a crawl. They rose at an annual rate of just 0.5 percent in the second quarter, compared to a rate of 3.1 percent in the first three months of the year.

It was the slowest increase in three years and should help reassure the Federal Reserve that wage pressures aren't building even though the nation's unemployment rate, at 4.9 percent, is hovering just above a 24-year low.

"There's no sign of any intensification of labor cost pressures," said economist Stuart G. Hoffman of PNC Bank Corp. of Pittsburgh. "That's considerably better than in the prior two quarters."

On Friday, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan warned that the central bank must "remain on alert" to the possibility that tight labor markets will ripple into higher product prices.

But he also said it is "difficult to avoid the conclusion" that productivity has been advancing at a much healthier rate than shown by government statistics.

If that's true, it means corporations can pay higher wages and earn strong profits without increasing their prices. And it implies the central bank doesn't have to cool the economy with higher interest rates in order to contain inflation.

"The Fed has got to be happy with the numbers. They help explain why inflation has been benign and give it something to justify leaving interest rates unchanged," said economist Hugh A. Johnson of First Albany Corp.

Nevertheless, Wall Street showed only a modest reaction. The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks, which had declined in early trading, jumped nearly 30 points after the report's release. It closed up 16.73 points at 7,851.91. Traders are looking ahead to reports Friday on prices paid to producers in August and retail sales.

Rapid productivity advances — in excess of 3 percent a year — supported the economic boom and low inflation of the 1960s. But since the early 1970s, productivity growth has averaged only about 1 percent a year. It was 1.3 percent last year.

However, many economists say actual productivity in recent years is much better than reported. They say it's difficult to measure productivity gains in services such as banking, which has been revolutionized by technology improvements in computers and communications.

Air fares up, likely to stay there

■ Just a day after major carriers raised, then lowered, fares, ticket prices were raised again, this time to stay awhile.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The up-and-down air fares went back up Tuesday — this time, likely to stay up for awhile.

"The demand for that type of fare, which is basically a business-type fare, is extremely heavy," said Bill Berry, a spokesman for Delta Air Lines, which along with other major carriers Tuesday reinstated 5 percent fare increases.

Delta and some other carriers had dropped the 5 percent increases Monday morning during competitive jockeying aggravated by an apparent mistake after prices were boosted late last week.

"We've had yo-yos before, but this one was a snafu," said Tom Parsons, editor of Best Fares Discount Travel Magazine, which tracks airline fares daily.

"It's not supposed to be like this," said Jon Austin, spokesman for Northwest Airlines, which started the price scramble last week by jumping its unrestricted walkup fares by 5 percent.

Other major carriers followed suit, and added the 5 percent increase to other fares.

Over the weekend, United Airlines, wary because Southwest Airlines declined to raise prices, decided to reduce fares on routes in competition with Southwest. By mistake, United spokesman Joe Hopkins said, an industry clearinghouse sent out United's fares as cut across the board, instead of in selected markets.

"United is a major Delta competitor," said Berry. "We saw over the weekend United withdrew its increase. Airline pricing is extremely competitive, and you can't allow yourself to be at a disadvantage."

So, Delta, American Airlines and others reduced their fares Monday morning. United, meanwhile, returned to higher fares in some markets Monday afternoon, while remaining "competitive with Southwest."

Continental Airlines held fast to its 5 percent increase from last week, while Northwest matched competitors by extending the 5 percent increase to some other fares besides the walk-up tickets. And at mid-morning Tuesday, TWA followed the other major carriers and reinstated the increase.

The increases boosted an unrestricted coach roundtrip between Dallas-New York from $1,508 to $1,584; Washington-Minneapolis from $1,016 to $1,066 and Chicago-Los Angeles from $1,768 to $1,856.

Analysts attributed the fare increases to the continued strong national economy, solid booking levels, and the expected rise in post-summer business traffic. Business travelers on tight schedules often have little alternative but to pay the full unrestricted fares.

Parsons predicted the carriers will soon come back with sales, at least on leisure fares.

7-Up maker reworking soft drink's recipe

DALLAS (AP) — The maker of 7-Up is changing its flavor to make it crisper and less sweet — that is, more like market leader Sprite.

Marketed in the late '60s as "the Uncola," 7-Up rocketed in sales. But in the past decade, 7-Up has been losing market share to Coca-Cola Co.-owned Sprite and now holds only 30 to 40 percent of the lemon-lime drink category.

Dr Pepper/Seven Up will announce the flavor change next Monday at a meeting of its bottlers in San Antonio, a source close the company said Tuesday. The plans were first reported by The Wall Street Journal on Tuesday.

Mike Martin, a spokesman for Dr Pepper/Seven Up in Dallas, said the company had no comment.

Reformulating soft drinks can be risky. Coca-Cola fooled with Coke in 1985 and protests quickly forced it to bring back the old flavor under the name Coca-Coca Classic.

7-Up has been around for nearly 70 years, starting out in 1929 in St. Louis as the Bib-Label Lithiated Lemon-Lime Soda. Its maker, the Howdy Corp., soon shortened the name to 7UP Lithiated Lemon Soda.

Howdy changed its name to The Seven-Up Co. in 1936, and by the late 1940s 7-Up had become the world's third best-selling soft drink.

Campbell Soup to spin off Vlasic, Swanson

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Campbell Soup Co. plans to create a new company featuring its Vlasic pickles and Swanson frozen dinners and spin it off to shareholders.

Campbell said Tuesday the spinoff would allow it to concentrate on expanding its core, or main, businesses, which include its signature Campbell's soup line and Pepperidge Farm baked goods, and to reduce costs.

In all, seven non-core businesses with revenues of $1.4 billion would be included in the yet-to-be-named company. It would rank 21st of the 32 publicly held food companies, Campbell said.

Campbell said the spinoff is expected to be in the form of a distribution of shares of the new company. It hopes to complete the move by the end of next February.

Campbell chief executive officer Dale F. Morrison said the move would allow Campbell "to focus on our most profitable businesses with the highest growth potential."

While noting that the move reflects management's commitment to improving the value of Campbell stock, analysts were skeptical about the new company's prospects.

Prudential Securities analyst John McMillin characterized it as "Campbell playing a game of gin rummy — getting rid of their losers."

New store sells plaques, sports cards on Saturdays

By Mella McEwen

Jeffrey Jordan has opened JEFFREY'S FANTASTIC PLAQUES & SPORTS CARDS inside Basin Hobbies at 700 Andrews Highway.

McEwen

In addition to sports cards from baseball, the National Football League, National Basketball Association, National Hockey League, NASCAR and other sports, he will offer non-sports cards such as Star Trek.

He also sells plaques that he crafts himself and autographed photos.

The store is open Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. because, he explained, parents and children are busy with school and other activities during the week.

Odessa-based SOUTHWEST CONVENIENCE STORES LLC, which owns 149 7-Eleven locations in West Texas and New Mexico, has purchased 14 Eagle Mart convenience stores in the Wichita Falls area.

Company President Don Wood said that the company plans to maintain the existing employee base at the Eagle Marts and to introduce 7-Eleven's proprietary products into the stores.

"We anticipate there will be significant upgrades in equipment in order to maintain and serve 7-Eleven's proprietary Slurpee, fountain and coffee products," he said.

He added that "We currently operate 7-Eleven stores in Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Lubbock, El Paso and Albuquerque and we look forward to adding Wichita Falls to our family of convenience stores."

Opening celebrations are set for today through Wednesday at the new Tanglewood Service Center of ODESSA 66, a Southwest 66 Credit Union. The service center is located at Tanglewood and 52nd Street in Odessa.

From 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. all three days, there will be live broadcasts by KKJW, KCDQ and KNFM radio stations and tote bags, frisbees, yo-yos, balloons and other promotional items will be given away. Grand prize drawings will be held 4 p.m. Sept. 30 to give away a grandfather clock, color television and videocassette recorder. Appearances will be made by Joe Clark, coach of the Odessa Jackalopes hockey team, Juice the Moose and clowns Klinky and Jitterbug.

The new service center will offer a full line of products and services.

Permian Basin residents can win a chance to fly free on Southwest Airlines.

Until Nov. 16, Southwest Airlines customers using a Visa card to purchase an airline ticket are entered in the Personal Party Sweepstakes. The winner will get to invite 100 family members and friends to fly with him to a Sea World Park as part of a three-day vacation.

The sweepstakes is a joint effort between the Dallas-based airline and Visa U.S.A.

A random drawing will be held Dec. 6 and the grand prize winner will get to choose which Sea World park to visit and receive round trip travel on Southwest from any airport served by the airline and three days and two nights hotel accommodations for 101 people (double occupancy); $100 spending money for each person, one-day admission to Sea World for each person and ground transportation between the park, airport and hotel.

Unholey bagel, heavenly cream cheese

By Linda Anderson

As a native of Texas who spent most of her growing-up years in southeastern New Mexico, my knowledge of bagels is, shall we say, somewhat limited. "Lox and bagels" was something they had back East that was referred to on television and in the movies, but until I was well up into my teens, I had no idea what that meant.

Anderson

I'm still not an expert on bagels by any means — they are still kind of exotic in the Permian Basin, even though they are not uncommon — but when I found a box of The UnHoley Bagel filled with Cream Cheese (kind of a long name, but that's what it is), I had to try them; you know, to kind of increase my education about bagels.

I'm sure you know by now that bagels are a doughnut-looking pastries that come in all kinds of flavors, including regular (kind of like bread), onion, cheese, blueberry, strawberry and even jalapeno.

The UnHoley Bagel, however, is supposed to be a bagel without the hole. It comes in three flavors; the one we tried was cinnamon raisin. (I really can't remember the other two, but I think they were regular and onion. But don't quote me on that.) All are filled with cream cheese, the way a jelly doughnut is filled with jelly.

Label advertising on the back of the box — in the form of a letter from Larry Baras, president of the company — explains the idea this way: "I have often been asked how The UnHoley Bagel was born.

"Having ordered a bagel and cream cheese from the drive-through window of a fast food establishment, I was given a bag in which I found a bagel, a flimsy plastic knife, a tube of cream cheese and five napkins. I should have known from the five napkins that I was in trouble. A couple of miles and a couple of minutes later, there I was, cream cheese on my lap, cream cheese on my car's upholstery. And I thought a bagel and cream cheese was supposed to be a convenient food to eat!

"Well, now it is! Out of that fiasco, I went to work. First, we had to figure out how to get cream cheese inside the bagel. No small task.

"Next, we spent months on perfecting a bagel recipe (coming from New York, I know what a good bagel is supposed to taste like).

"We looked all over for farm fresh cream cheese of superior quality. We now fill our bagels with cream cheese direct from a dairy in Minnesota. We use only unbleached flour, enriched with a variety of vitamins and minerals. We use no artificial preservatives." (They all say that, don't they.)

"Finally, you can enjoy a bagel and cream cheese without the fuss. Whether for meals on the run, a nutritious treat for your children's lunch box or for any occasion where delicious taste and convenience are important, reach for The UnHoley Bagel, already filled with cream cheese. It's easy to recognize. It's the bagel without the hole."

A 12-ounce box containing four hole-less bagels cost $2.69, or about 70 or so cents each. Not too bad.

According to the nutrition label, each bagel contains 230 calories, with 60 of them from fat. That's not too bad either.

In the taste-test, my co-workers' (my children don't like bagels of any flavor) opinions went from "They live up to their billing, but they don't seem to be real bagels," to "These are wonderful!"

Opinions were generally favorable; just some were more favorable than others. Take your pick.

Serving sizes wouldn't hold up in court

By John Owen
N.Y. Times News Service

"The prosecutor may resume his interrogation of the witness."

"Thank you, your honor. Now Mrs. Owen, are you known by any other name? In other words, do you have an alias?"

"I don't think so."

"Oh? Isn't it true that your husband sometimes refers to you as 'Alice the Artist'."

"Over my loud protests."

"Be that as it may, you are obviously a partner in the research and publication of his food column, which prompts me to ask this question. Does the Tukwila Tuna Casserole actually serve six to eight, as claimed in a recent Intermediate Eater column?"

"Well, uh ..."

"Let me rephrase the question. You stated in a deposition that all the recipes appearing in the column are kitchen- and taste-tested by the two of you. How many people were served by the Tukwila Tuna Casserole?"

"Well, we ate it at two meals."

"Two people times two meals would indicate this recipe actually served four, at your own dining room table."

"Well, he ate most of it."

"Isn't it true that many of your recipes actually provide fewer servings than listed in the column?"

"I've asked John that question and he explained to me that it's a 'variable.' For example, he'd reply that the Tukwila Tuna Casserole might serve 14 guests at a Women's University Club luncheon, while an offensive lineman for the Seahawks might eat the whole thing himself ... as an appetizer. As a food writer, who is he supposed to serve? That's what he asks when I raise the question."

"Well, aren't the two of you normal eaters?"

"I think I am. OK, I might eat two modest portions of a pasta dish if it happens to contain artichokes. But there is no telling about John. Personally, I think he spent too much of his life around Seahawk offensive linemen, not to mention power forwards for the Sonics."

"What recipe will be featured in your husband's column this week?"

"I think it's a chicken and tortilla casserole, but I hate to guess what he'll end up calling it."

"How many does it serve?"

"I think I'd better hide behind the Fifth Amendment."

FIFTH AMENDMENT CASSEROLE

1 chicken or equivalent in pieces
2 tablespoons canola oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 (15-ounce) can chopped tomatoes
1 (4-ounce) can diced green chilies
1 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 teaspoon oregano
1 (12-ounce) package corn tortillas
Grated Cheddar cheese (6 to 8 ounces)

As listed in the ingredients, you can use a whole chicken or chicken parts. When we last cooked this recipe, we tossed 1 whole chicken breast (skinned) and 4 skinned thighs into a pot, brought the water to a boil, turned off the heat and let the chicken sit in the hot water for about 45 minutes. Remove chicken, cool and cut into bite-size pieces.

Cut the tortillas into 1-inch squares.

Saute the onion in the hot oil until soft, then add the undiluted soups, the tomatoes, chilies, broth, chili powder and oregano. Let simmer 5 minutes.

Grease an oven casserole dish. Cover bottom with half the chicken pieces. Top with half the tortilla squares, half the sauce and half the cheese. Repeat those layers, then cook the casserole for 1 hour at 325 degrees.

Serves 45 teething infants, one sumo wrestler or six fairly normal newspaper readers.

Of course, that depends upon how much salad everybody eats.

HOWMUCH SPINACH SALAD

2 bunches spinach, washed and stemmed
1/2 pound Chinese pea pods
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons sesame oil
2 tablespoons rice vinegar
1/4 cup salad oil
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon minced ginger root
3 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
1/2 pound small shrimp

Dump the washed and dried spinach into a salad bowl.

Stem the pea pods and blanch in boiling water for 20 seconds. Immerse in cold water, drain, pat dry and add to the spinach.

Combine in a blender the soy sauce, oils, vinegar, mustard, sugar and ginger root. Blend 20 seconds.

Add the cilantro and hit the button with one more burst.

Add the shrimp to the salad bowl and add as much dressing as needed.

Toss and serve to eight or more guests as a side dish. (But that's off the record.)

DEAR ABBY

Not all stadium action takes place on field

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I work for a sports arena, but please don't reveal in which state. Several times a year, people are "caught" having sex in the upper decks of the empty stands.

Van Buren

They are caught because television cameras are very powerful and can zoom in for a close-up of the subject from several hundred feet away.

Of course, these images never make it on the air. However, they usually do end up on videotape — and through the miracle of satellite technology could end up in every TV sports department in the country! Abby, this is just a warning to those couples who think they are getting away with something. — IT AIN'T A SECRET AT THE GAME

DEAR AIN'T A SECRET: Thank you, dear reader. You have just performed a public service. Amorous readers who are tempted to wink at convention should bear in mind that the lens of a camera never blinks.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had different reactions to a couple we know. I'll call them "Jack and Jill." My husband considers Jack to be one of his best friends, so he asked him to be his best man in our wedding.

Shortly after we announced our engagement, my parents threw a party for us, inviting only family and those in our wedding party. It was such a special event that my husband's parents flew across the country to be there. Much to my husband's dismay, Jack and Jill never showed up. When we saw them a few days later, they explained that they had made other plans.

A few months before the wedding, my sister planned a bridal shower for me. Jill was invited. She never came.

I saw her that evening and she said that she forgot. This really hurt my feelings.

About a month before the wedding, a couple of the groomsmen called me to find out about the bachelor party. I called Jack, and he said he had not made any plans yet. It got closer to the wedding (a week away) and a groomsman, one of my bridesmaids and I were working frantically to give my husband a bachelor party. We asked Jack to take care of the transportation deposit. The night before the bachelor party, the bus driver called my bridesmaid and told her that he never received his deposit (which had been given to Jack). We then had to track Jack down and get the deposit to the bus company. Luckily, the party went well. The same evening, we had my bachelorette party. Jill never showed up.

The rehearsal evening finally came. Jack and Jill showed up at the church 30 minutes late, with no explanation. Luckily, my husband asked Jack to come to our house to get ready for the wedding so he would be there on time.

Last week we got our wedding album back. We decided to have a barbecue and invite everyone in the wedding party. Jack and Jill accepted. Two hours after the barbecue started, they called to say they weren't coming.

My dilemma: I do not want to make any more plans with this couple because they make no effort to see us. My husband thinks I am being mean when I tell him not to invite them to any of our functions. What do you think? — FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I think you have been incredibly tolerant. After Jack dropped the ball so many times, I'm puzzled why your husband continued to want him in your wedding party.

From their track record, I see no harm in continuing to invite Jack and Jill to your functions, because the odds are, even if they do accept, they will not show up.

New Yorkers embrace Japanese cooking

By Amanda Hesser
N.Y. Times News Service

New Yorkers have embraced the corner sushi bar — as well as the loftier Japanese restaurants — so vigorously that you'd think few big mysteries about Japanese cuisine could remain. But many Westerners seem to know almost nothing about miso, a fermented soybean paste as ubiquitous in Japan as olive oil is in the Mediterranean.

Now, with the miso market showing signs of growth in the United States, an increasing number of chefs and food-store owners are making miso better known in all its guises.

It's true that miso-shiru, a soup that is drunk for breakfast, lunch or dinner in Japan, is the most common use of miso. But as Nora Pouillon, the chef and owner of Asia Nora, an organic Asian restaurant in Washington, explains, it can also be used as a flavoring, like mustard.

"We always add it," Ms. Pouillon said, "a touch here, a touch there. I don't even think about it."

Edwyn Ferrari, the kitchen manager at Nobu, the Japanese restaurant in TriBeCa, also emphasized miso's importance. "It's in everything we do," he said. "We use it as a marinade, as a condiment, in our soups. We use it as a sauce, too."

In the restaurant, miso tends to be treated more as a food than as a seasoning like soy sauce. Yet, because misos vary so greatly in flavor and intensity, Ferrari said, the kitchen at Nobu likes to take advantage of this variety to control the taste of a dish.

UNLIKE ITS SOY relative tofu, miso alone leaves a rather distinct imprint on the taste memory: this is intense, salty stuff. Its flavor can range from light and nutty to winy, beefy and robust, but invariably it has a sweet, salty base. In cooking, miso is used in small quantities so as not to overwhelm a dish. Although it is salty, it diminishes, or eliminates, the need to add salt alone, while adding a complex, rich flavor to an array of dishes.

In Japan, said Elizabeth Andoh, a cookbook author and cooking teacher based in Tokyo, miso is used primarily as a thickener for soups and stews; a seasoning for sauces, meats and fish pastes, and a marinade for fish and vegetables. It is an essential part of the dish dengaku, in which skewered vegetables or tofu are grilled and then spread with a miso sauce. Miso is sometimes used for pickling, as well, its salt working as a powerful preservative.

In the United States, miso is found in pure Japanese dishes and more loosely in fusion cooking, as East meets West. It finds its way into salad dressings, dipping sauces, mashed potatoes, even mayonnaise.

At Nobu, black cod is rubbed with miso and marinated for several days to draw out the oils and lightly preserve the fish before it is broiled, forming a dark caramelized crust on the fish. Miso is also added to the restaurant's tempura sauce, along with sugar, yuzu citron juice and the Japanese wines mirin and sake, and it is thickened with egg yolks for a sauce called tama miso, for broiled fish.

Nina Simonds, an author of several books on Chinese cooking, believes that miso is not as exotic a food as it once was. "Now, it's mainstream, really," she said. And because it is more readily available in supermarkets, she added, "people are trying to figure out what to do with it."

Annemarie Colbin, the founder of the Natural Gourmet Cookery School in Chelsea, says she likes to use miso as a spread for crackers. And she takes it along when she travels. "Instead of coffee, you just bring miso and mix it with hot water in the morning," she said. "It's a real pick-me-up."

When macrobiotics gained popularity in the 1960s, miso found a following among members of the vegetarian crowd, who savor it not only for its taste, but also for its protein value. Miso can have as much as twice the protein of tofu.

"It brings a savory flavor to vegetarian meals that is very hard to find," said William Shurtleff, the co-author with Akiko Aoyagi of "The Book of Miso" (Ten Speed Press, 1983). "Miso provides a bridge between a steak and a vegetarian diet."

It is often said that miso is to soybeans what cheese is to milk. Fermenting soybeans to make miso is as subtle a process as making cheese. But when it is made the traditional way, miso begins not with soybeans (which come later in the process) but grains, usually rice or barley, which are inoculated with the mold spore Aspergillus oryzae. These molded grains, or koji, are combined with cooked soybeans and sea salt and packed into wooden barrels, the lids weighted with rocks, and then allowed to ferment and age for 3 to 36 months, depending on the type of miso.

The length of time and temperature at which miso is aged, the proportion of soybeans to koji and the type of grain used all have a striking effect on the resulting miso. As with cheese making, these small differences produce myriad varieties. A miso made with minimal salt, for example, and aged for just a few months will be sweet and light in color, whereas a miso made with a high proportion of salt and aged for as long as two years will be darker and richer in flavor.

A trip to the miso section of a Japanese market can be dizzying, given the broad spectrum of choices. At Katagiri & Co., on the Upper East Side, there are more than 20.

Misos may range from a lovely cream-colored sauce the consistency of beurre blanc to deep cocoa paste as thick as wet soil. It can be chunky or smooth, like peanut butter, and preferences among miso consumers are generally just as polar.

There are three basic varieties of miso: rice, barley and pure soybean.

Within each of these varieties are several types labeled according to flavor and color. As a general rule, lighter misos are sweeter and younger and contain less salt; darker misos are thicker and saltier and have been aged longer. Rice miso, or kome miso, begins with sweet white (shiro miso) and progresses along the color-age spectrum to mellow white (shiro koji miso) to light yellow (shinshu miso) to sweet red (edo miso) to red (aka miso).

Barley miso, or mugi miso, is aged longer than most rice misos and has just two varieties, mellow barley and regular barley. Pure soybean miso is most commonly found in the form of the highly esteemed hatcho miso, which is aged for two to three years to develop its distinctively deep sweetness and sharp flavor. Other special varieties are available, including chickpea miso, lentil miso and a category called finger-lickin' misos.

Recipes for miso evolved from a Chinese soy product called chiang, which was introduced to Japan during the seventh century. Miso was made at home and in small workshops run by miso masters, who spent a lifetime perfecting their craft. The soybeans were cooked in large iron cauldrons heated with wood and then crushed underfoot as grapes once were for wine. Until recently, miso recipes varied from region to region, as well as between families and social classes. Once a young woman was married, she was supposed to preserve her family's recipe by making it at home.

Large-scale production of miso in Japan has all but wiped out the traditional producers.

In fact, you are more likely to find artisanal versions from producers in the United States, a few of whom over recent years have made serious efforts to preserve the miso tradition.

Among them is the American Miso Co. of Rutherfordton, N.C., a company that has grown 15 percent a year over the last 10 years, said Barry Evans, its president. Emulating its commercial forebears, the company's Miso Master brand uses organic soybeans and grains and sea salt (from the Bay of Biscay off the coast of France) and ages its long-term misos in cypress and redwood barrels.

Evans believes that despite its saltiness, organic miso is a very healthful food. He said that miso "is regarded by most people in the health food industry to be the most supremely healthy product."

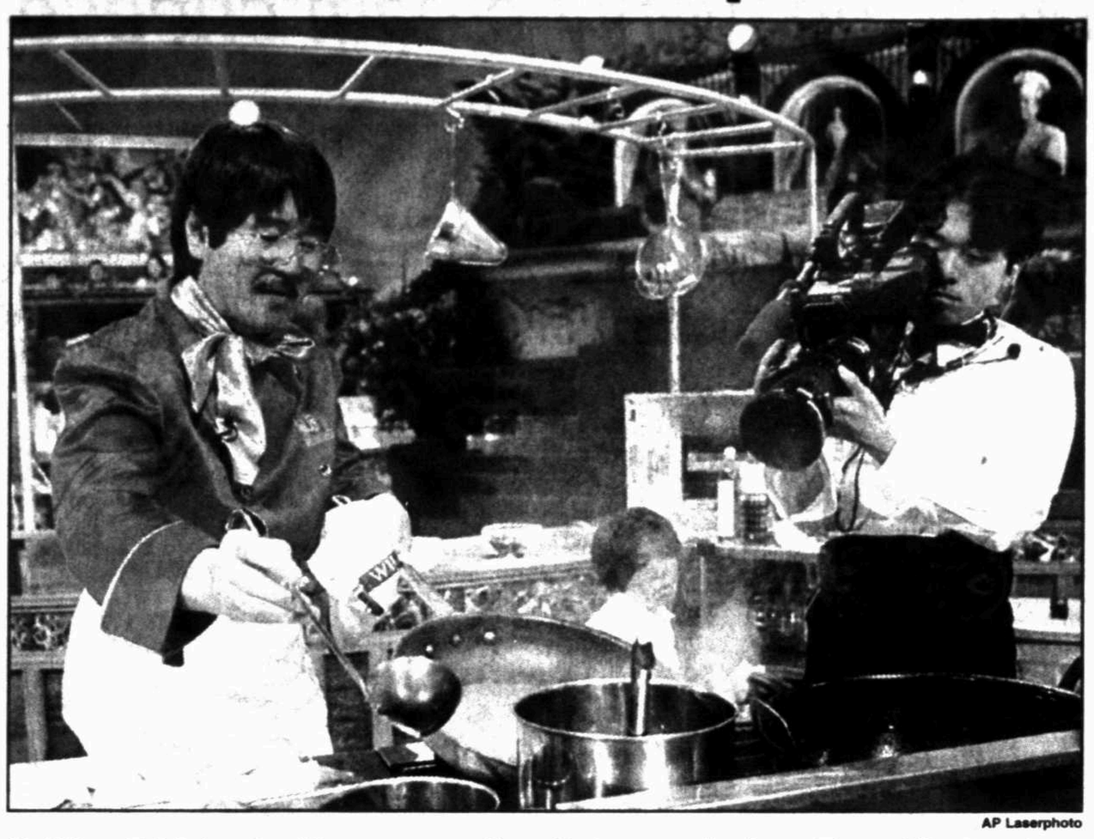

Most people in Japan believe that, too. There, miso soup maintains a reputation as a cure-all, much like chicken soup is to Westerners.

Soy products are generally said to contain chemicals that inhibit cancer growth, lower the risk of heart disease and reduce menopausal symptoms. Dr. Mark Messina, a nutritionist and a former program director at the National Cancer Institute, said, "They're a high-quality protein, they're low in saturated fat, they're cholesterol free." He also said they were one of the few good plant sources of linolenic acid, an omega-3 fatty acid that is believed to lower the risk of heart disease and to strengthen the immune system.

Miso is also writhing with good microorganisms that aid digestion and the assimilation of other foods in the body.

Unfortunately, the pasteurization that most commercial miso undergoes destroys many of the beneficial bacteria and enzymes. Organic and traditional miso is not pasteurized.

Dana Jacobi, the author of "Soy!" (Prima, 1996), advised that when unpasteurized miso is used in cooking, "it should be stirred in at the end: heat it but don't let it boil."

Chef Hiroyuki Sakai cooks while a cameraman films the cooking show "Battle of the Iron Chef" at Fuji television headquarters in Tokyo. The show is wild and campy, but immensely popular in Japan. Now New Yorkers are going beyond the sushi bar to embrace other traditional Japanese foods, including the soup known as miso, made from a fermented soy bean paste, and sometimes served for breakfast.

NASU MISO
(Eggplant With Miso)
Adapted from Nobu restaurant

FOR DEN MISO:
3/8 cup sweet white miso
1/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons sake
3 tablespoons mirin.

FOR THE EGGPLANT:
6 tablespoons vegetable oil
4 medium Japanese eggplants, halved lengthwise
Toasted sesame seeds.

Heat miso, sugar, sake and mirin in small saucepan over moderate heat. Simmer 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

In large skillet, heat 3 tablespoons oil over medium-high heat. Add half the eggplant, and saute on both sides for 8 to 10 minutes, until tender and brown. Remove to plate. Repeat with rest of oil and eggplant.

Lay eggplants, cut side up, on a serving plate. Spoon over den miso, and sprinkle with sesame seeds.

Yield: 4 servings.

MISO GLAZED CARROTS
Adapted from "Soy!" (Prima, 1996), by Dana Jacobi

1 tablespoon cold-pressed sesame oil
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
3 cups carrots, in 1/2-inch slices
1 tablespoon red miso
3/4 cup vegetable broth or water
2 teaspoons grated orange zest
1 teaspoon grated ginger root
1/4 teaspoon roasted sesame oil

Salt and ground pepper to taste.

In medium, heavy skillet, heat sesame oil over medium-high heat. Add onion and carrots. Cook, stirring occasionally, about 6 minutes, until soft on edges but not brown.

In small bowl, cream miso with 1/4 cup broth. Stir this mixture, remaining broth, orange zest and ginger into carrots and onions. Reduce heat, and simmer for 12 to 15 minutes, until liquid is reduced to a glaze and carrots are crisp-tender.

Stir in roasted sesame oil. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

NINA SIMONDS'S BROILED HALIBUT WITH MISO GLAZE

1 teaspoon grated ginger
2 tablespoons mirin
3 tablespoons mellow white miso
Vegetable oil for brushing pan
1 3/4-pound halibut fillet, cut into four pieces.

In small bowl, combine ginger, mirin and miso, and mix until smooth.

Rub on flesh side of fish pieces. Marinate 30 minutes.

Heat broiler. Brush broiling pan with oil. Lay fish in pan, skin side down, and broil for 7 to 9 minutes, until flesh flakes and glaze bubbles and browns.

Yield: 4 servings.

Celebrating with rich traditional Mexican foods doesn't mean you can't cut fat. Turkey al Cabon, served on a skewer, makes a nice compliment to Fiesta Frittata, a vegetable-loaded quiche made with egg whites. Spicy Mexican Shrimp can be served with warmed tortillas and salsa.

Open the window, pull out the patio chairs and bring on the platters of fiery foods for Mexican Independence Day, Sept. 16. (known as Diez y Seis).

Hispanic Heritage Month is also coming up — Sept. 15 through Oct. 15. Many Texans, however, don't need a reason to celebrate when it comes to eating Mexican food.

And for those watching calories and fat intake, there is no reason to toss in the sombrero.

Some traditional Mexican foods can be heavy when it comes to fat content. For example, a meal of chips, guacamole, cheese nachos, cheese enchiladas could contain more than 1,116 calories from fat, according to nutritionists from Mrs Baird's Bakeries. Cheese is one of the major culprits of hidden fat. Cheddar and Monterey Jack cheeses are usually 80 percent fat, which means that for every one ounce of cheese, there are 8 grams of fat.

One way to rein in the fat without sacrificing flavor is with brunch suggestions including Turkey al Carbon and Fiesta Frittata, brimming with seasonal vegetables like fresh zucchini and sweet red bell pepper. The frittata, similar to an omelette or quiche, is made lighter by combining whole eggs with egg whites and using butter-flavored granules.

Turkey al Carbon features cubes of lean turkey marinated in a blend of spices and citrus juices. The turkey is wrapped in warm tortillas and served with salsa. Another flavorful south-of-the-border meal is Spicy Mexican Shrimp, livened up with Worcestershire sauce and cilantro.

Another way to cut fat is to use only half the avocado in guacamole and replace the other half with frozen green peas to cut fat by 50 percent. (Even though avocados are considered "good" fat, it doesn't hurt to cut some of it.)

TIPS FOR CUTTING THE FAT

■ Dip warmed tortillas into salsas and guacamole, instead of fried chips.

■ Delete cheese unless you opt for reduced fat cheeses. Mixing 3/4 cup of fat-free Monterey Jack or Mozzarella with 1/4 cup Asardo (Mexican cheese) will also result in a sharp cheese flavor with 75 percent less fat.

Fiesta recipes — good for lunch, dinner or brunch — follow:

TURKEY AL CARBON
(Marinated Turkey Kabobs)

3 medium tomatoes, coarsely chopped
3 green onions, thinly sliced
1 jalapeno pepper, seeded and chopped
2 tablespoons minced garlic, divided
2 tablespoons chopped cilantro
4 tablespoons lime juice, divided
Salt to taste
1/2 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons grated onion
2 teaspoons Butter Buds
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
1-1/2 pounds boneless turkey breast, cut into 1-inch cubes
6 8-inch tortillas, warmed

In a medium bowl, stir together tomatoes, green onions, jalapeno, cilantro and 1 teaspoon minced garlic. Stir in 2 tablespoons lime juice and salt to taste.

Set aside.

In another medium bowl, combine the orange juice, remaining 2 tablespoons lime juice, lemon juice, grated onion, remaining 2 teaspoons garlic, butter sprinkles, chili powder, cinnamon and cloves. Add the turkey and stir to mix.

Refrigerate, covered, at least one hour.

Preheat broiler.

Thread turkey on wooden or metal skewers. Broil, 4 inches from the heat, 5 minutes.

Turn skewers and broil 5 minutes longer until cooked through. (Turkey skewers may be grilled over hot coals, if desired.)

Serve turkey skewers with salsa and warm tortillas.

SPICY MEXICAN SHRIMP

1 pound large shrimp
1/2 cup white wine
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon Cajun spice mix, or to taste
1 packet Butter Buds mix
1/4 cup minced fresh cilantro, basil or parsley

Shell and clean shrimp, leaving tails intact.

In a medium saucepan, combine shrimp, wine, Worcestershire sauce and Cajun spice mix; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until shrimp turn pink, 3 to 4 minutes.

Stir in Butter Buds until dissolved; add cilantro. Cool and refrigerate until well chilled.

Drain and serve shrimp garnished with additional fresh herbs, if desired.

"MOCK GUAC"

1/3 cup drained green peas
2 tablespoons fat-free mayonnaise (since there is some fat in the avocados, a reduced fat or fat-free product won't impair texture)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup mashed avocado
1/2 cup tomatoes, chopped
1/4 cup onions, finely chopped
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
1/4 teaspoon chili powder

Combine all ingredients. Store overnight in refrigerator for optimum flavor.

FIESTA FRITTATA

1 medium zucchini, diced
1 medium red bell pepper, diced
1/2 cup diced red onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 packet Butter Buds mix, liquefied, divided
2 large eggs
6 large egg whites
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or parsley
1 teaspoon dried thyme, crumbled
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a 10-inch nonstick skillet combine zucchini, red pepper, onion, garlic and 1/4 cup Butter Buds. Cook, covered, over medium heat 2 minutes.

Uncover; reduce heat to medium-low. In a small bowl whisk together the remaining Butter Buds, eggs, egg whites and Worcestershire sauce. Stir in the Parmesan cheese, basil, thyme and pepper. Pour over the vegetables, spreading evenly in the skillet.

Cook 1 minute. Transfer skillet to oven and bake 12 to 15 minutes until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cut into wedges to serve. The frittata may be served warm, at room temperature or cold.

Here's How you can help...

You can do one of the following:

1. Send a donation to: A STORYBOOK CHRISTMAS, P.O. Box 8769, Midland, TX 79708. Zeta Xi will buy books for distribution to the first graders.
2. Select the books personally.
3. Sponsor a class of 24 students.

Read The Midland Reporter-Telegram For More Details Or Call 694-8276 Or 694-7645

Attorney for Co-Independent Executors

NOTICE OF APPLICATION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Applicant, AUTRY C. STEPHENS, 110 N. MARIENFELD, STE. 200, MIDLAND, TX 79701, has made application for a spacing exception permit under the provisions of Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 37 (16 Tex. Admin. Code Section 3.37). Applicant seeks exception to the lease line requirement to amend drill well No. 1, Olga Banks Lease, 160 Acres, Sec. 1, Blk. 40, T-2-S, T & P RR CO Survey, A-263, Midwest (Spraberry Dean) and Wildcat Field(s), Midland County, being .5 miles in an east direction from Midland, Texas. The location of this well is as follows:

330' from the north line and 400' from the east line of lease.
2,220' from the north line and 400' from the east line of survey.

Field rules for the Wildcat and Midwest (Spraberry) field are 467/1200, 40 acres.

This well is to be drilled to an approximate depth of 11,000 feet.

PURSUANT TO THE TERMS of Rule 37(h) (20 (A), this application may be granted administratively if no protest to the application is received. An affected person is entitled to protest this application. Affected persons include owners of record and the operator or lessees of record of adjacent tracts and tracts nearer to the proposed well than the minimum lease line spacing distance. If a hearing is called, the applicant has the burden to prove the need for an exception. A protestant should be prepared to establish standing as an affected person, and to appear at the hearing either in person or by qualified representative and protest the application with cross-examination or presentation of a direct case. The rules of evidence are applicable in the hearing. If you have questions regarding this application, please contact the Applicant's representative, Hollye J. Laney, Prod. Asst., at (915) 687-1575. If you have any questions regarding the hearing procedure, please contact the Commission at (512) 463-6748.

IF YOU WISH TO REQUEST A HEARING ON THIS APPLICATION, YOU MUST FILL OUT, SIGN AND MAIL OR DELIVER TO THE AUSTIN OFFICE OF THE RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS THE ENCLOSED NOTICE OF INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST. A COPY OF THE INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST MUST ALSO BE MAILED OR DELIVERED ON THE SAME DATE TO APPLICANT AT THE ADDRESS SHOWN ABOVE. THIS INTENT TO APPEAR IN PROTEST MUST BE RECEIVED IN THE RAILROAD COMMISSION'S AUSTIN OFFICE WITHIN THREE WEEKS OF THE DATE OF ISSUANCE OF THIS NOTICE OF APPLICATION. IF NO PROTEST IS RECEIVED WITHIN SUCH TIME, THE REQUESTED PERMIT WILL BE GRANTED ADMINISTRATIVELY. TO BE EFFECTIVE THE DAY FOLLOWING THE TERMINATION OF SUCH THREE-WEEK PERIOD.
